to me, this sixth sense; so I asked him what he meant by his sixth sense. His reply was that it was the sense of perception, the sense to see and feel, beyond what might be made known by merely the outward senses common to all men. And this accrues through the ministration of the Spirit of God to the individual that is seeking to come to the Father by Christ. It is well that the Savior could use this expression, and it is precisely as if he said:—

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

"Why," says one, "these people say there cannot anybody but themselves be saved, there is only that church to be saved." Let me disabuse your minds—some of you—of that idea. Last Sunday we attended upon the obsequies of one of the best men—so far as citizenship is concerned—one of the best citizens of Lamoni. Who shall say that that man is damned, using the term in the sense that the preachers use it? I would not do it for the world. Why? Because I am told in the New Testament Scriptures:—

In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

And the apostle has said that every man shall come forth in his own order, and there is an order which includes worthy men who live, die, and are saved independently of Jesus Christ, so far as a belief in his philosophy is concerned; and there is a salvation through the mediation of Jesus Christ for every man in the wide world, whether he be heathen or Christian. There is something for a man who is not a disciple of Christ; there is something for the man who does so far as he can that which he conceives is right, and it will be well with him hereafter in the great salvation. I am not going to say that they will be where God and Christ are, and enjoy all the glory properly attaching to those who obey the gospel of Jesus Christ; but they will be rewarded according as they while living used the power for doing good that was in them.

We are sometimes misunderstood by the people when we go among them to tell them just how we believe it is with such individuals. You can easily see when I speak of Uncle

Ephraim Ferguson, that I speak of him as a man, as a citizen. The redemption wrought out for all men will bring him forth in the resurrection. I do not believe that any of you want to say that that individual, because he has not accepted of Christ as you believe in him will necessarily go down to hell, and there suffer the tortures of the damned. Let me assure you that Christ has wrought out a salvation for the honorable men of the earth, and in the future they will have a chance to hear the gospel and obey it. What is it that is affirmed by Christ in, "My mother and my brethren are these who hear the word of God and do it"? There is an exclusion inferred; because the opposite is true, that they who do not hear the word of God, and do not obey it, they are neither his mother nor his brethren. How close do you make that? I have heard some make it so close that no human being could walk the line, though Jesus makes the statement, Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

And they that do find it and walk therein will stand well with God, and with Christ. And if by any possibility men are so unfortunately conditioned that they cannot understand what is required of them to obtain the glory of God, he will reach them as far as he can, and will give them all that they are entitled worthily to receive.

Let me recite an instance. I knew a young woman, some years ago, who had the misfortune of becoming partially a paralytic, and the result was that her brain was affected. That young woman frequently, in the prayer meeting gave some of the grandest testimonies that I have ever heard. Her experience was that the Spirit of God had been with her, and that she was one who had been favored of the Savior? Why? Because of her want of intellect, because of the misfortune that had happened to her by which her intellect had been clouded; and for that reason God had thought to take pity on her in this life, and after awhile, when the resurrection should come, this cloud should be removed, and she should stand as favored and happy as any that had been favored with their intellect unclouded in this life. It gives me comfort to think that my unfortunate brother, wherever he may be, that has not been born in as fortunate a period, under as favorable conditions as myself, when the time and opportunity shall come, will stand as fair before God as I, who have been favored more highly. I believe that the great heart of Jesus Christ took in all the wide world, and in his wondrous charity grasped in the provisions of his love all those who have failed in this life on account of clouded intellects or enfeebled frames, and they will develop, in the future life, by obedience to his words. I believe that is what he means when he stated that,

My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God and do it.

That is what it is to be found in Christ.

I believe that it is given to us here that we may become the Israel of God—though in fact it might be possible for some of us to have descended from Abraham naturally if we could trace it back—yet God has made it so that we can all become of Abraham's seed, and being heirs according to the covenant of promise, become heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. When we shall have done that we shall be heirs to all things, for all the wide world belongs to God. The Saints have been charged with saying that the whole earth has been given them, and they have the right to occupy and enjoy it. You remember that I once defended this people against one who accused them of saying that the whole earth belonged to the Lord, and that they, being his people, would occupy it, hence whatever they wanted they had the right to take it now, and he claimed that our revelation so stated. I would defend them again against such a charge for it is not true. The earth shall belong to the people of God when the proper time to inherit it arrives. But at present and until then, unless it can be shown that it is God's will that men should steal, they had not then and have not now a right to take anything from their neighbors, either saint or Gentile, without giving an equivalent for what they get, with knowledge and consent of the owner. The man did not dare to say that stealing was in accordance with the will of God, and my defense against him was held good.

I hold then that the position I occupy in the sight of God, gives me an opportunity to become one of his children, and it puts me in relationship with God, and with Jesus Christ; with God the Father, and with Christ the Son; with God my heavenly Father, and with Christ my heavenly Brother; and I must so live and so school myself that in my mental advancement and by due development, I shall stand in my thought and in my comprehension and conception of life, and so work in that way and so live in that way, as if I knew he was my brother and stood by me in the flesh. I confess that when I have been allowed to see such things as have and do pass through men's brains on account of their education, I have shrunk when I thought should Christ stand by their side, and knowing what was passing through their brains as he did when he was upon the earth, I have wondered what effect it would have. Christ is our brother by virtue of his humanity, and stands ready to help us in the things of this life, to do that which is right in his sight; and we ought to do that only which we would not be ashamed to do if our elder brother Christ was standing by our side, in fact as he is in spirit. And if we will only do that there is nothing in this life that will hinder us from enjoying all that God has designed for us to have in Christ.

Those people in the West, who claim to be Latter Day Saints, have said, "Don't discuss with those Josephites, let them severely alone, whether they challenge you, or not, the things of God are not to be discussed by earthly tribunals." That is an astonishing thing for people to claim now. When the elders were sent out first to preach, they were commanded to challenge the people to discussion. And now we say to those people out West, Come right to the front, and let people see what you have got. Are you afraid of these Josephites, whom you say have no Spirit, whose organization you say has no legal existence? Are you afraid to put these historical matters to the test? How then have you not heretofore been afraid to meet those who differed from you in belief? That is a matter of history and can be traced. So is that a matter of history wherein we differ, and so can be traced; it is a matter within the human sphere; it is within the human province, and human minds can trace it. That which human minds have written, that which human hands have done, can be investigated by human minds, if the proper steps are taken. Some will say, Brother Smith, you are very brave, now that you know that these people are not here, to hear you. I told them the same when I was out in Utah in 1885. There are important and vital differences existing between us. The fault is either with them, or with us; some one is responsible for it and will have to answer before the judgment bar of God; and if there is with us as an organization anything contrary to that form of the gospel that was given to the church by direct revelation, through the angel's message, they have had, and still have ample opportunity to show us our error.

Another thought in conclusion, and that is this, Remember what the Savior says, that they are his mother and his brethren who hear the word of God and do it; who do not let it pass unheeded, but do it. This is in the first place a good deal to do, and perhaps the principal thought that may be drawn from it is this, that when you follow the golden rule, you will do unto other men as you would have them do to you, and when you have received a knowledge by the Spirit which has taught you what you should do to your fellows.

The other night, you remember that some of you gathered here to hear a colored man. Some of you came prejudiced against the race. I did not. My education had been of that character that my prejudices had been favorable to them. But when the man came, a stranger, I did not know anything about him; but I learned that his father and mother were slaves; that he was born down in Alabama; that just as soon after the Emancipation Proclamation was issued as his people could gather to the North they did so, and he was raised and educated in Cincinnati, Ohio. When I thought of what the New Testament taught that God had made of one blood all nations to dwell on all the face of the earth, and when I thought that he was a man I went forward and as requested by himself and the president of the branch took charge of the meeting; I asked him if he would like to have a prayer offered, and he said he would. I prayed for him; and from that prayer I was led to think that he would give us something more than ordinary, and you that heard him know whether he did or not. I have an idea that when the time shall come to see things as they are, we shall see that there have been down in the heart of this man, and hundreds and thousands of the race, noble impulses for good, looking to the elevation and salvation of their down-trodden brethren. There has been a tendency that has been thrown out by the strong hand and arm of prejudice, in what is called the dominant race, to look upon the colored people, as an inferior race, not capable of intellectual development, and only fit to be slaves to them. I thank God that this angel message told us that the nation who dwelt upon this land that would not serve the God of the land, should be punished with a sore punishment; and the prophet of the 19th century told us when it should be. He said that the slaves should be marshalled in war against those who had enslaved them. It cost billions of treasure, and more than four hundred and fifty thousand lives before the curse of slavery was removed from the nation. We see what great good has come to the race, from the lecture of this colored man that has been before us. The question is, Will he not be entitled to a reward for the good he has done here? I say yes, and though his skin be black as was the beautiful one that Solomon sang about, when he said:—

I am black, but comely.

Do you remember the song of Solomon?

There is then a possibility that all men may be made alive in Christ. Let us see to it that it may be so with us; not merely to be content that we have been honorable men of the earth; and entitled to an honorable man's reward, but that the Lord may say of us, by and by, "These are my mother, and my brethren;" they did "hear the word of God," and they did "do it."

A PLEA FOR THE NEEDY.

FROM the best estimates attainable it costs for the making alone of a silk, satin, or dress of other costly material, from five to eight, or perhaps ten dollars. It is to be presumed that the material will cost as much as the making; doubtless as much more. One indulging in such luxuries would not be satisfied with one such dress, but if the means were to be had, would hardly stop at two or three; as a matter grows by what it feeds upon. Then there would be jewelry and other outside adornments, as well as fine trimmings and millinerys, etc.

Deduct the cost of plain apparel, such as the Lord has directed his Saints to wear, not one only, but all of them, from the aggregate expenditure in this unnecessary cost of material and making, and the balance would constitute a fund sufficient to supply the proper wants of the needy; so that there would be no poor or needy among you; and this too without trenching upon the tithe and offering fund; and in consequence of which more elders could be put into the field to supply the wants of those starving for the "bread of life," with an increase of souls to the fold thereby.

Think of it! those of you who say you love the cause of Christ. Read also in this connection the second chapter of Alma, Book of Mormon.

Furthermore, if you would know the true condition of the many needy in this place, visit them in their homes, note well their condition; listen attentively to their statements, and care for them as God has given you ability; and remember that "God loveth a cheerful giver."

Cochran, aged about two weeks. The little form was laid to rest in Rose Hill cemetery Lamoni. A brief service was conducted at the home and at the grave by Elder R. S. Salyards.

RICHARDSON.—Sr. Eliza Wood Richardson, after a very brief illness passed away on the morning of June 9, 1896. She was born February 15, 1869; baptized September 26, 1881. She had striven for some years past to honor God. She was instrumental in bringing her husband into the church, who is now left to mourn her loss with four small children. Funeral services at Saints' chapel, Magnolia, Thursday, June 11; sermon by Elder A. M. Fyrando, assisted by Elder D. R. Chambers.

 Bro. Ordway wishes us to say that for a time he will send one box for 75 cts. or three boxes for $1.50 with guarantee, postpaid to any place where he has no agent to anyone who if cured will agree to act as agent or try and get an agent.
 Bro. H. C. Tharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes
 April 23, 1896:—
 "Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco.
 It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured.
 . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE
USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.
 From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—
 Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.
 Eureka Chemical & Mfg., Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.
 Yours respectfully,
 P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR
WEEKLY REST DAY.
 By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day,"
 "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. L. Derer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

FREE . . .

TO MINISTERS

AND

Students for the Ministry

Under the will of the late L. C. Fungich, of Philadelphia, a large fund was provided for the free distribution to ministers of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, entitled "The True Christian Religion" and "The Apocalypse Revealed." To these, other donors have added "Heaven and its Wonders, and Hell," and "Life of Emanuel Swedenborg." All of these are handsome volumes, substantially bound in cloth. They are now offered FREE OF COST, except for postage, to the Clergy of America and Theological Students who are studying for the ministry.

It is because the donors of these books believe that there will be found in them a clear solution of all the difficult points of doctrine that disturb, perplex, and separate Christians from each other, keeping so many honest and sincere people out of the churches, and strengthening infidel sentiments, that they are so desirous of placing them in the hands of clergymen, whose office it is to teach spiritual truths and lead souls heavenward.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these volumes through the large and well-known publishing house of

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY,
715 and 717 Market St., Philadelphia

To whom all orders for the books must be sent, accompanied by the postage, and a statement that the applicant is a minister, or student for the ministry, as follows:

DROPS OUT OF THEOSOPHY.

THERE is trouble among the Theosophists in Chicago. R. D. Wade, who has been president of the local branch of the society, formally severed his connection with the organization yesterday.

"My reasons for resigning," said Mr. Wade, "are that I cannot accept the antics of a 'veiled prophet' as the inspiring presence of a wise adept, nor can I believe any circumstances would induce or compel a mahatma to hide his face behind a cotton sheet. I believe credulity is taking the place of reason in the society, and that the new occult leader must be suffering from like degeneracy, since he is, we are told, being handled with care in order to save him from the thought waves of the world.

"The sugar plum called an 'occult college' is being held out to the faithful who will donate the requisite cash to pay for the establishment of the same, and then support its founders and teachers. This is applying commercial principles with a vengeance to occultism, and seems to be somewhat more like an adept factory than the establishment 'of a nucleus of universal brotherhood.'

"But, the order being brought from the metaphysical to the physical planes, Chicago has offset the victory of New York in capturing the 'Great Unknown' by securing the contract for wiring the Western Occult Kindergarten for electric lights.

"The object of inculcating credulity and selfishness is now, and is always, for the purpose of benefiting a certain few. Who can that few be in this case? Are they the 'crusaders' who wish a foreign tour at the society's expense ostensibly for the purpose of collecting material for a 'School for the Revival of the Lost Mysticism of Antiquity?'"

"Perhaps the New York headquarters can give enlightenment, but to me the whole thing savors too much of the plan 'drop a dollar in the slot and get a degree of occultism.'

"I desire that this action of mine shall in no way be considered a renunciation of the philosophy which was once known as Theosophy, but it is simply because I can no longer in good conscience give my support to what I consider an unworthy vehicle."

Cincinnati, O., May 18.—Dr. Buck, the Theosophist, says the story from New York to the effect that a mahatma has been discovered in the person of Mrs. Katherine Alice Tingley, who lives in that city, is untrue.

"Mrs. Katherine Tingley is no more a mahatma than I am," said Dr. Buck to-day. "She may have some characteristics that would qualify her, but she has others that do not.

"A mahatma is a perfect man or woman, a person all wise, whose learning and correct life make him so. There are perfect men and women in New York that are not mahatmas. A mahatma would not attract your particular attention further than that you would say he or she was a nice person. I myself might have as much qualification in one direction as Mrs. Tingley would in another to make me a mahatma.

"I met Mrs. Tingley when I was in New York recently attending the Theosophical convention. She is a bright, good-looking woman between thirty-five and forty. She is an educated woman, has wonderful powers of second sight, and has told people some wonderful things she has been able to see through her exceptional power. She is an adept; that is, an order of less power than a mahatma. She is what I would call a seer. She has marked clairvoyant and clairaudient powers.

"There are several mahatmas in the United States, but none that I know of in New York."—Tribune.

VALUE OF EDUCATED MEN.

THE annual baccalaureate address before the graduating class of Northwestern University was delivered by President Henry Wade Rogers in the First Methodist Church, Evanston. Dr. Rogers said:—

"The educated man ought to be of more value to the community than those to whom the opportunities of a higher education have been denied. The community has a right to expect more from him—in those higher things which we call culture, character, and progress.

"He owes it to the world to maintain finer ideals of conduct and to set a higher standard of culture. He has learned the great fact of the solidarity of the race, and that individual lives are to come to their highest and best development through this principle which makes human brotherhood a fact as well as an ideal.

"The scholar should go out from the inner and simpler world of the university realizing that through social relations, through the touching of his life with other lives, directly or remotely, the spiritual wealth of all humanity is within reach of his spirit, and the capacities of his being are to be the servants of the race. He should stand, above all, for truth, and in his supreme loyalty to truth he will be following the example of Jesus Christ. This devotion to truth is regarded as the very essence and being of character. Indeed, is it pronounced to be character. We expect this loyalty to truth from the scholar.

"We are fortunate to live in an era of the revival of truth, of a new and dominant aspiration toward the verities, temporal and eternal. No age has sought so urgently as our own to find out the true God behind the creeds, and dogmas, and forms that have hidden him from many souls. No time has so marvelously searched out nature and stolen from her bosom the secret of her unity with God and man. The deeper meaning of the realism in modern art and literature is the insatiate desire of men to know the truth about man, and nature, and society.

"Individuality, sincerity, truth are the high demand of the hour. Begin to be yourself if you have not already begun—see for yourself—think for yourself, and trust your own vision and thought. God gives a measure of the Spirit of truth to every soul, which, like the talents, can be multiplied by the receptivity of our souls or be buried in a napkin."

POWER OF PERSONALITY.

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 7.—Baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. Theodore N. Morrison. The theme was: "Hereditry and Environment versus Christian Character." In part he said:—

"Facts of science once established are not to be gainsaid, and the law of heredity and the influence of environment are well-established facts. Thousands, however, have been taken captive by this scientific theory, and they acquiesce in hereditary weaknesses, excuse vices, get rid of personal responsibility, and protest against man or God. The circumstances are no longer the law of man's development. The evolution of man is now the question and the law is reversed. Man makes progress by battling against evil desires and environments, by choosing good. Manhood is won by struggle. Cultivate your personality. There is something of God in every man. To correct depressing heredity cultivate the ego—that royal I which means truth, righteousness, and success will be respected and trusted by men.

"To have good environments cultivate a healthy mental and moral atmosphere by the contemplation of sublime truths, by the assimilation of just and wholesome thought.

"Go, by God's grace, victorious through the coming years. Leave some little spot cleaner and sweeter because you have lived there, some good cause stronger because you have labored for it, the kingdom of heaven more evidently at hand because you have preached and lived the life of love and justice, of mercy and truth."

An appropriate song for Fourth of July celebrations appears in the July Review of Reviews under the caption, "Stand by the Flag!" The story of the song is told in the Review by Major Marshal H. Bright, of Christian Work, who is entitled to credit for its preservation and revival. It seems that the words were written by Mr. John N. Wilder and recited at a patriotic meeting held in Albany, New York, July 4, 1858. During the Civil War the song was repeatedly sung to the familiar English air, "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," but Major Bright has since composed music especially for the ode, and and this music is published, with the words, in the Review. The author of the song, Mr. Wilder, died in Albany just eleven days after the recital of his poem. His cameo portrait is reproduced by the Review, through the kindness of his daughter, Mrs. Maud Wilder Goodwin, author of "The Colonial Cavalier," "Dollie Madison," and other works of historical interest. The first lines of the song run as follows:—

Stand by the flag! Its stars, like meteors gleaming,
Have lighted Arctic icebergs, Southern seas,
And shone responsive to the stormy beaming
Of old Arcturus and the Pleiades.

IS THIS MORMONISM?

BRO. I. N. WHITE sends us the following clipping from the Baptist News, a religious journal for the Baptist Church, published at Du Quoin, Illinois, taken from the issue of June 13, 1896; with a reply, which he desires us to insert in Herald, for obvious reasons:—

IS THIS MORMONISM?

Not long ago I had an invitation to preach at a country church, which with pleasure I accepted. After preaching on Saturday afternoon, the business meeting came up. In this meeting a committee that had been appointed by the church to investigate a charge which had been preferred against a young lady for unchristian conduct, made a report. The report clearly showed that the young lady had been participating to some extent in the dance. She said she saw no harm in dancing, her reason being that she was advised to do so by a preacher—a Mormon preacher; that he opened the dance with prayer, (she danced with the preacher,) and that he closed the dance with prayer. She said he showed her the scripture for it!

This was a "parlor dance" at a family residence. This preacher made his brags that he was going to make a Mormon out of her, and this is the way he proceeds! And this is the church of the "Latter Day Saints!" Shades of Campbell and Rome! I have read a little of Mormonism, but this is my first practical experience with it. And may the good Lord deliver me from such soul-destroying doctrine. Yes; "make dancing honorable." Open and close the dance with prayer, and not only that, give the chapter and verse for it! So did the Devil to Jesus. (Luke 4: 10.)

Here is the scripture given to the lady by the Mormon preacher to show that it is proper and right to engage in a social dance such as they engaged in: "Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together." But does this scripture justify dancing in the sense in which the Mormon preacher and this young lady danced? In the first place the above scripture is not applicable to the Gentile at all. It has reference to the "restoration of Israel." Please read the whole chapter. This dancing is to take place "in the height of Zion," after the "remnant"—the Jews—are "gathered out of all countries" and have "returned" "to Jerusalem." "Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together." Again, this scripture does not say "the virgin shall rejoice with the men," nor does it say, "the virgin shall rejoice in the dance with the Mormon preachers." It does not sustain Mormonism. "But the dance was opened with prayer." Yes; and "the prayers of the wicked availeth nothing." So may a game of cards, a horse race, a seduction, and all other vices, be "opened with prayer." You may whitewash iniquity with a "form of Godliness," but it is sin still. This an awful bad religion to have our boys and girls converted to. We have it in Johnson County, Illinois. What shall we do with it? It is here and among us. May God help us to meet the storm of sin and error bravely. Let us have an exposition of Mormonism in the Baptist News. Who will give it to us? W. M. RUDOLPH.

VIENNA, ILLINOIS.

[The man to expose Mormonism is Elder W. J. Moore, of Galatia, Illinois. We hereby invite him to give us a few one or two column articles on the subject.—ED.]

MORMONISM.

Editor of News:—In your issue for 13th inst. appears an article from the pen of W. M. Rudolph in regard to some lady (?) dancing with a Mormon preacher, and that he (the preacher) had so "advised" in order to make a Mormon out of her! Mr. R. asks: "Is this Mormonism?" I think I am qualified to answer for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and say: It is not the Mormonism of the Reorganization. Mr. R. finds these sinful Latter Day Saints "here among us" in Johnson County, Illinois, and asks to have an "exposition of Mormonism in the Baptist News."

It may be a relief to some, at least, to have some party handy by, so as to saddle onto them all the evils that come from card playing, horse racing, dancing, seduction, etc., etc. The Younger brothers, James boys, Dalton gang, et al., generally carry all the other crimes of society known to our nation; and why not the Mormons be made the scapegoats to carry the remainder, and thus save the fair name of some more popular church? WHY NOT?

In vindication of the "Reorganized Church" upon the mooted question of "dancing and card playing," I herewith submit the following resolutions that were passed by that body of people while assembled in General Conference capacity, to wit:—

"Resolved, that the practice of dancing should be discouraged, and that members of the church should be urged to avoid the practice, as one likely to lead their minds from Christ and his gospel."—General Conference Minutes, page 265, for April, 1886.

"Resolved, that we consider the practice of dancing and card playing as unbecoming true Christians, and should be avoided by all Saints."—General Conference Minutes, page 69, for April, 1893.

I am a subscriber to the News, and believe you will agree with me, that Christian charity, truth, and justice require imperatively that no one should be condemned without a hearing, or charged with holding sentiments which he disavows, and therefore I ask that this short article may find a place in the News.

Fraternally yours,

I. N. WHITE.

It is not out of the possible that Mr. Rudolph may have met with just such a young woman, who had danced with a "Mormon elder," and at his advice too. Bro. White may, or may not know that with the "Mormon" Church in Utah dancing is not a sin; but is permitted as a healthful and pleasant recreation; that every one dances, who feels like it, from the gray-haired patriarch, to the golden-haired midget of a girl, hardly able to lisp her prayers; that dancing parties are as common as prayer meetings, and are often held in the same houses, the prayer meeting first, the dance afterward; that frequently the children of the schools are gathered at the schoolhouse in an afternoon, watched over by a few elder persons in charge to keep order, and spend the afternoon in the merry mazes of the dance. If this young woman met one of the elders of that body of Mormons it would not be out of character with their customs as a people, if he did dance with her at a "parlor dance," and advise her so to dance. The possible mischief attempted by the Baptist News, either ignorantly or willfully, was in trying to fasten such action upon the eldership of the Reorganized Church, which mischief Bro. White so promptly corrects.

But the Baptists may not be too scarified in sentiment about the horrors of the dance, until they unchurch their Episcopalian and Catholic neighbors, with the Lutherans, and some bodies of Presbyterians. We once knew a Rev. father in the Presbyterian Church, who after trying for three or four years to make headway against the "husking bees," "appleparings," and "harvest gatherings," including the dance, among his younger members, who professed every winter, and backslid every summer and fall, finally gave liberty to his flock to dance, and all went merrily, and he kept his flock.

We came down the Mississippi River from St. Paul, Minnesota, to Burlington, Iowa, on the steamer Mary Morton, in July, 1891, and heard a Church of England minister preach on Sunday morning, at eleven, and saw the same man engaged in the dance the next evening, in all probability doing both things without a thought of its apparent incongruity. We do not defend such actions, but one orthodox church, so-called, ought to be careful how it condemns in a supposed unevangelical church, what it fails to disapprove in a sister orthodox one.

THAT MANIFESTO.

BELIEVING that our readers are interested in Utah affairs, not because of any political significance that may attach to this controversy, but because of the attitude of the church on the issue, we produce some further extracts from the Salt Lake Tribune, of June 5:—

THE FIGHT ON THATCHER.

EFFORTS TO DEFEAT OR MODIFY THE INDORSEMENT.

But the Party Leaders Stand Firm and Though Churchmen Protested Inconsistency, They Had to Take It.

[Correspondence Tribune.]

Logan, June 3.—To say that the Democratic convention on Monday was "a hot number," is not in the least an exaggeration. It was a love feast, it is true, in the unanimity with which all resolutions but the one indorsing Moses Thatcher were passed; but there was enough contention over that to show that the best of friends may "fall out." It was considered fitting by the fighting men, the backbone and sinew of the party, that Moses Thatcher should receive here, in his own county, among his lifelong neighbors, such a ringing indorsement as would leave no doubt of their opinion of him as a man, a patriot and a Democrat after their own hearts. The first inkling of prospective opposition was made visible in the committee-room, when the resolutions were being considered. But here, the extensive vocabulary and characteristic adroitness of Prof. J. H. Paul saved nearly all of the features that might be considered as against church interests, and the objectors, if not convinced, were at least silenced. Not so, however, in the convention. The word "indorse," following immediately after the reaffirmation of the "doctrines of personal liberty," set forth by the reconvened convention, when applied to "the course of our own esteemed fellow citizen, Moses Thatcher, in maintaining his stand upon those principles of truth and justice," looked a little too much like flying in the face of the priesthood to some of the brethren. Mr. Samuel Oldham, Superintendent of County Schools, and Bishop of Paradise, voiced the views of the objectors by asking how he could sustain Moses Thatcher's course, which meant his repudiation of the manifesto, when he, himself, and doubtless the majority of those present, had voted freely to sustain it. William Murray of Wellsville also took the same stand, and with great vehemence and a pronounced nasal twang, held forth in a good gospel sermon for about a half hour. He asked, among other things, how Moses Thatcher had acquired the love and esteem of the people of Cache Valley. Was it by his course as a politician? No! but by his course as a Latter Day Saint and leader of the people in the paths of righteousness. "Seek first the kingdom of God," had been the talisman that won that love and esteem. The speaker felt that while he was willing to express his friendship for Moses in as warm terms as they could be expressed, he agreed with Mr. Oldham that indorsement of Moses meant stultification of themselves.

Joseph Kimball also spoke in the same strain, and a few of the delegates who had been vociferous in favor of the indorsement, began to feel that the fate of "the wicked who fight against Zion" would surely be theirs if they fought it out on that line, and they were perfectly willing to crawfish a little and accept one or another of the numerous emasculated substitutes offered. Joseph Monson, S. J. Rich, I. C. Thoresen and a number of others supported the original resolution, and, as already detailed in the Tribune's special, it passed by an overwhelming majority, and Moses Thatcher's course was vindicated in his own home by his co-religionists as party members.

Democrats are not alone in their fight against church domination.

The Tribune, the leading Republican paper of the State, has this to say editorially of the Cache County resolutions:—

THE CHURCH AND STATE CONTROVERSY.

The Democrats of Cache County have adopted a very strong series of resolutions and defined the dividing line between church and state in such a way that we believe every man who is not a religious fanatic will indorse it. It is true that for a quarter of a century here the Territory of Utah was churned into perpetual apprehension, heartburnings, and unrest by the assumption of the controlling church leaders here to rule in political matters. At last there came a day when all hands being tired, it was fairly agreed that the business should cease; that the State should not interfere with the church—the church should not interfere with the State. Hardly had Statehood been made sure, when an old rule which had lain obsolete for a long time was revived, which in effect declares that certain members of a certain church shall not take part in political affairs without the consent of the church authorities. The Cache County democracy resist this rule, and insist that it is an interference with the free exercise of the elective franchise and should not be tolerated or condoned. In other churches men are appointed to certain offices and the rules of the church prescribe that while holding those offices, they shall not hold political offices. If the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints should adopt the same rule, designating which officers were not to hold political office while assuming the responsibilities of the church office, that, the community would accept as entirely proper. In other churches where that rule is prescribed, it goes no further. It does not seek in the least to interfere with a man's political rights. It simply prescribes that when certain officers have accepted positions of trust, they shall not engage in the strife of office while they hold those trusts.

The dominant church here can, of course, insist upon its own rules, but the men who are engaged in that business ought, by this time, to see that it is not going to be acceptable to this people to leave things in a position so that in fact the men making up the heads of the church can control the politics of the State. And we say with perfect frankness that, according to all the rules that govern honorable men, they are estopped from trying to do that. They have pledged themselves most solemnly that they will not attempt any such thing. The people have taken their words as a release from obligations which they faithfully obeyed here for twenty-five years, and by which they were led through such a Red Sea of suffering as makes any one's heart ache to contemplate now. The attempt to revive it puts the heads of the church in the position of men who seem not to have acted in absolute good faith, and they ought to abandon the attempt to thus control their people. It may be said it is a fight in which we have no concern. On the other hand, it is a fight in which every American citizen has an interest; in which every well-wisher for the future prosperity and peace of this State has an interest, and it ought to be stopped in its inception.

It is refreshing in these days of extreme partisanship to see a paper stand for the right, notwithstanding in doing so they are under the necessity of indorsing the action of political rivals. We congratulate the Tribune on this example of courage and fairness.

We learn from the Tribune of the 9th inst. that at the late Democratic State convention held in Salt Lake City, Moses Thatcher was elected a delegate to the Chicago convention, by acclamation, amid great enthusiasm; while B. H. Roberts, who has submitted under the church lash, was defeated for the same honor.

BLESSING OF CHILDREN.

THE Book of Mormon teaches that children, little children, are not proper subjects for baptism; the principle as expressed being that baptism is for the believer, and does not attach as a command until such time in the life of the individual as he becomes responsible for his own acts, or in other words "arrives at the age of accountability." This age is fixed for the church, by revelation, at eight years, no other criterion obtaining. It is understood that unto that age as a rule, the child is free from sin, and not required to believe, or to obey the command to repent and be baptized. Until this age is reached all children of the Saints are understood to be free from condemnation for sin.

It is, however, incumbent on parents having children to have them properly instructed in the principles of the gospel that they may be prepared to answer at eight years, so far as they may have understanding, for the responsibility then beginning to attach to them. It is also a belief and practice of the church that children under eight years of age shall be received by the elders of the church unto the receiving of blessings through the laying on of hands. This is done upon the authority of the Lord's command and example:—

And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. . . . Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 18: 2, 3, 10.

Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.—Matt. 19:13-15. (See also Mark 10:13, and Luke 18:15.)

These texts taken with the command to the church found in Doctrine and Covenants 17:19 have justified the belief and the practice.

Questions arise as to the time, place, manner, and occasion when this blessing of children should or may be properly attended to. The general rule is that the parents should bring their children and present them to the elders for the administration of the rite of laying on of hands, in a meeting of the church. The better and most proper time is the weekly prayer and testimony meeting, held usually on Sunday afternoon, where such is the case. In the branches where it is not the case, then the semi-weekly prayer meeting. This is the general rule. But instances sometimes occur when it is not convenient or practicable for mothers to attend the services on the occasions named, from considerations of sickness, inauspicious weather, distance from meeting place, and other conditions. When such instances occur it is lawful, and proper that such blessing of children may be attended to at any public service, or even in the home of the parents, by the bedside of the sick mother, the sole object of the rite being to offer the little one to the Master in solemn prayer and the laying on of the hands to the intent and purpose that the powers of good and the Spirit of the Master may be invoked to aid, bless, comfort, and sustain the child, keeping it in health and in the ways of virtue and truth until the years of accountability are reached. It is not intended simply as a showy rite to be observed before spectators; hence, where it is not at the time convenient or practicable for the mother to attend the meeting, the rite may be lawfully attended by the elders elsewhere. It must be understood however that when practicable the prayer and testimony or special meeting appointed for the purpose is the one meant in the revelation referred to. The Master blessed the little ones when they were brought to him—so the elders should do.

As a rule, the blessing of the children should be attended to soon after opening of the meeting, before the little ones are heated, weary, or worn, and fretful. To wait until the close is to find, too frequently, neither elders nor children in a good mood and condition to engage in the rite. The child if not too large may be taken in the arms of one of the elders officiating, and the other, or others if more than one is administering, should lay on hands; one should offer the prayer of blessing, doing it in such way as not to fret or frighten the child by too loud or harsh tones of voice; as neither elders nor congregation are edified by a loud-voiced elder blessing a fretful, crying, or screaming child. The child, if larger, may be seated on the lap of father or mother, where the elders can lay on hands in a pleasant and proper way. It is proper, if the child has been named, to ask the blessing for the child so identified by name, to be so recorded on the branch record. If no name has been before given to the child, it is proper that one should be agreed upon then, and the elders authorized to pronounce it upon the child. The rite is solemn, beautiful, and impressive, and the strictest effort should be made to secure the administration of it in the quietest, pleasantest, and most impressive way; and to avoid everything that could annoy, disturb, or hurt the enjoyment of the occasion in its intended purport and spirit.

As a matter of due propriety and courtesy, the parents should be permitted to name the ones who should administer the rite, preference being given to the choice of the mother. Where no choice is made, if left to the presiding officer of the meeting, he should choose those least objectionable, those best qualified for the ceremony, the elderly ones being preferred. No officer, be he high, or low, should take offense at not being asked to administer in this rite, whether selected by the officer, or the parents. "In honor preferring one another," should be the spirit prevailing in the hearts of all, on such, and all similar occasions.

The foregoing are not intended to be as ironclad rules, but are the suggestions of the spirit of propriety, prudence, and peace in the Lord.

"OVER THIRTY THOUSAND VICTIMS."

THE following is the latest news of the recent Japanese earthquake and tidal wave.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 22.—The first official report that has reached Washington of the great Japanese earthquake and tidal wave came to-day to the State Department from Herod, Secretary of the United States Legation at Tokio, in the following brief cablegram, which, however, makes the calamity out to be much worse than heretofore reported:—

"Deaths caused by tidal wave estimated at over 30,000 in reports up to date.

"No mortality among Americans."

BRO. R. ETZENHOUSER writes from Sharon, Pennsylvania, June 22, sending clippings from local newspapers. It appears that Bro. E. dropped down on an old mining town called Neshannock, in the big State of Pennsylvania, and began his work; got a stir started in the old town, and the newspapers gathered him up in several ways.

BELIEVE IN THE MORMONS.

The village of Neshannock, in Hickory Township, is all stirred up over the preachings of Elder R. Etzenhouser, a Mormon, who is now holding forth in the only church in the village. He has secured a number of converts, and farmers and their families for miles have driven in to hear him preach. The only church the village possesses is owned by individuals, who rent it to any expounder of the gospel. Just how many converts the elder will secure is not known, but at the rate they are now flocking in he will secure fifty by the end of the week. Some of the citizens are indignant and threaten to run him out of town, but he pays for everything and says he will stay.

He refuses to meet in public debate several of the pastors in this vicinity. His doctrines are queer, but the poor people of the town put all their faith in the elder.

We do not credit the statement that Bro. E. refused to defend his faith. It is not like him.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

NOTE from Bro. J. M. Terry, St. Joseph, Missouri, June 22:—

Our branch is doing quite well. The reports at conference indicate more work done in St. Joseph than all the remainder of the district. . . . Bro. Lewis did well in presiding. After a little practice in parliamentary ruling he will be quite efficient.

Bro. Thomas Daley, Lakeport, California, June 15:—

I have just closed my labors here. I spoke nine times in a hall and twice in a private house; baptized three here, making twenty since conference. I start for Lower Lake to-morrow if it be God's will.

Bro. O. E. Cleveland, Annex, Virginia, June 16:—

I want to thank a kind brother of Reno, Nevada, for sending me two dollars to pay my Herald subscription another year. May the good Father's blessing rest on him and his. Bro. Francis Ebeling is with us working for the Master's cause, and most of the Saints here seem alive to the good work. Had a friendly interview with a member recently united to the Utah Mormon Church in an adjoining neighborhood. May get an opening soon for our elders.

Bro. Cleveland has been likewise remembered by two other brethren, so that his subscription is paid well in advance.

Bro. David Chambers, Whiting, Iowa, June 23:—

We have got the gospel tent pitched here, in the park, beautiful with trees and grass. Fair turnouts so far. This is a new thing here—a Mormon tent. Bro. Crabb and I are trying to feel contented under warm and rainy weather, trying our strength of endurance. If Bro. Wight comes we intend to let him try his luck in tent work, with Bro. D. Hutchings assisting, and Bro. Crabb and I will push ahead to Sioux City and other towns and prepare the way if possible for tent or other work.

Bro. James McKiernan, Farmington, Illinois, June 25:—

Bro. T. J. Sheldon and I are here with the Kewanee district tent. Having only a limited interest so far. Bro. J. A. Robinson was with us over last Sunday and gave us two rousing sermons.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, Fairfield, Nebraska, June 25:—

Our conference held here was a success; a good, kind, and spiritual feeling throughout. Bro. Forscutt was with us and his service was duly appreciated I think by all, I know that they were by me. I have every reason to believe that our meetings had a telling effect upon the good people of Fairfield. Bro. Blodgett and I go Saturday to Hebron, from there to Fairbury, thence to Western, to hold a grove meeting eight miles north of Western in Saline County about twelve miles west of Wilber. All is well here.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. F. A. SMITH reports an excellent two days' meeting at Valley, Nebraska, June 13 and 14.

Bro. H. T. McClain, of Coalgate, Arkansas, would like to receive a missionary visit from Bro. T. J. Shepard or S. W. Simmons, of Maysville, Arkansas.

Bro. Thomas Ferrell writes in approval of the labors of Brn. D. L. Shinn and J. L. Goodrich, at and near Big Bend, Calhoun County, West Virginia. The people desire the return of those brethren, also a visit from Bro. G. H. Godby.

Sr. Mary M. Green, of Appledore, Ontario, reports a good conference of the Chatham district, lately held; six baptisms and many other good results. She writes otherwise encouragingly.

Bro. Joseph Ward was at Otto, Arkansas, June 19, "preaching every night to large crowds." Two had asked for baptism. He was to hold a discussion near that point beginning on the 27th.

Elder I. N. W. Cooper requests elders to call on his brother, J. B. Cooper, East Miller Avenue, South Akron, Ohio; also Rev. J. W. Cooper, Temperance, Michigan, near Toledo, Ohio.

"Yokohama, Japan, June 25.—It is now stated that 27,000 persons were drowned and 8,000 were injured during the recent tidal wave and earthquakes in the northern provinces of Japan."

Bro. E. A. Erwin reports unity and growth in the Manchester, Texas, branch. Bro. I. P. Baggerly had done good work there and near by.

Bishop E. L. Kelley returned on the 25th ult. from the Minnesota reunion, which he pronounces a success. The Fergus Falls Journal of the 22d also comments favorably on the reunion.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins returned to Lamoni on the 22d from Allendale and Grant City, Missouri, where he had been engaged in ministerial duty. He was accompanied by Sr. Stebbins.

Bro. J. W. Wight returned to the Little Sioux district, resuming labor in that field after some absence occasioned by work in other duties.

Bro. Heman C. Smith returned on the 26th ult. from a visit to Richmond, Missouri, and vicinity, where he had been endeavoring to look up items connected with the history of the church.

Republican City, Nebraska, reports death and great destruction to property in that region from a windstorm on June 20. Mason City, Iowa, reports great destruction to crops by wind and excessive rain in a section of country twenty miles long by two miles wide, the same date. Omaha, Nebraska, and Dubuque, Iowa, were damaged by the same storm. Lightning and wind and rainstorms with the usual destructive results are reported from Omaha, Nebraska, Atlantic, Iowa, Brazil, and Ridgeville, Indiana, and Carlyle, Illinois, June 22.

Bro. S. B. Gowell, of 305 Independence Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, a medical practitioner, after considerable study and thought upon the subject and propriety of the project, has written a work called the "Philosophy of Eating, Or, How Not to be Sick," which we find by examination to contain much that is valuable, concerning foods and how to eat them. It is a small and compact compendium of knowledge presented in a good way and worthy of attention. It is sold for fifty cents per copy, and is quite well worth the money, if anyone is disposed to use good advice when it is made known.

Original Poetry.

THE GOSPEL.

BY W. D. M'KNIGHT.

In Lamoni one bright wintry morning
As I passed through the town to my labor,
I saw (and it seemed like a warning)
He that's warned should be warning his neighbor.

'Twas a long smoke-cloud from the city
Extending outward for miles in array,
Suggesting a motto so fitly—
"Faith and works"—as it floated away.

'Twas smoke from the Saints' Herald office,
Floating out and afar on the sky,
To the world as a message of warning:—
"Heed the gospel restored from on high."

'Tis the day of God's judgment upon us;
O how faithful and true we should be!
If obedient we have a sure promise,
Christ's reign in his kingdom we'll see.

We read the good news in the Herald—
Words of cheer from many blest lands,
How the Master is blessing the world
Through his servants who preach unto men.

Apostles he set in his kingdom
To sow good seed, to free men from sin;
Then elders, priests, teachers, and deacons,
To guide the flock safely therein.

They teach faith, repentance, baptism;
To hold fast to the true iron rod;
To be one, that there be no more schism;
To abide in the pure love of God.

The lives of those trained to the plummet
Should give courage to do and to try;
If others have climbed to the summit,
So can you, if but single thine eye.

Say, then, will you follow the Savior,
Like him keep the truth and the way?
Travel on to the end, never waver,
And obtain the reward—life alway?

EDITED BY FRANCES.

The soul, secured in her existence, smiles
At the drawn dagger and defies its point.
The stars shall fade away, the sun himself
Grow dim with age, and nature sink in years;
But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wreck of matter and the crash of worlds.

LOVE MUCH.

"Love much. Earth has enough of bitter in it.
Cast sweets into its cup when'er you can.

No heart so hard but love at last may win it.
All hate is foreign to the first great plan.

"Love much. Your heart will be led out to slaughter,

On altars build of envy and deceit.
Love on, love on! 'tis bread upon the water;
It shall be cast in loaves yet at your feet,
Unleavened manna, most divinely sweet.

"Love much. Your faith will be dethroned and shaken,
Your trust betrayed by many a fair, false lure.

Remount your faith, and let new trusts awaken.

Though clouds obscure them, yet the stars are pure;

Love is a vital force and must endure.

"Love much. Men's soul's contract with cold suspicion:

Shine on them with warm love and they expand,

'Tis love, not creeds, that from a low condition

Leads mankind up to heights supreme and grand;

O that the world could see and understand!"

AN OBJECT LESSON.

"If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater."—1 John 5: 9.

A picture of "Paradise Lost,"
Then rousing his hero, he made him again
"Regain Paradise" at great cost.

He studied for years on his beautiful rhyme,
And more than two centuries passed;
He sent it abroad, clothed in language sublime.

Unsolved still its mysteries vast!

To day, drinking deep of the great poet's theme,

I see him sit silent and blind;
Approaching his side, I partake of his dream,
And light flashes into my mind.

Beside his pen sketch, set in framing of gold,
And painted by talent most rare,
Hangs a portrait lifelike, and lo! I behold
Our dearly loved President Blair.

The same beaming eyes, and the same genial smile,

The same form with dignified mien;
The same lips that parted so sweetly, meanwhile

Flowed kindly words, accented, keen.

O the rapturous joy on his glorified face!
His faculties all seemed retained.

Thank God! He has shown me a literal case
Of paradise truly regained!

Unsatisfied still, my eager soul yearned
To further consult the old bard;

One part of his story was true, I had learned,
And faith in the rest seemed less hard.

So back to his musty old poem I go,
And its dreamy author accost,
Entreating him boldly, more plainly to show
The meaning of "Paradise Lost."

Such problems to reason will never succumb;

Solutions mean only surmise.

Events of the past and of those still to come,
He saw with his poor, sightless eyes.

O, why may not others less gifted discern
A glimpse of his word-pictured view?
Why may not even I be assisted to learn
That his cherished vision was true?

Forgetting poor Milton I looked to the Lord,
And quickly the keynote was found;
Divine inspiration soon severed the chord
By which spirit senses were bound.

Again came the vision. With features aglow,
Red lipped and bright-eyed, by his chair,
With the sweet smile of welcome that all of us know,
Stood dear, gloried Brother Blair.

Our greeting was brief, no instructions secured;

My heart by his silence was pained;
But now, as before, I was fully assured
That he paradise had regained.

Regained! How correctly the old poet guessed

What he very stoutly maintained,
That things to be lost must have first been possessed;

Things not lost could not be regained.

Beholding one man in a glorified sphere
When his right to that place is explained, Shows that he had been there before he came here,

Else "re" has no place with the "gained."

By means of such logic I see our dear friend
Restored to his former estate.

Paradise was his home. Earth life at an end,
He reentered its wide-open gate.

He dwelt there in glory long ages before
The earth had her foundation laid;
Distinguished for valor, a lover of lore,
A spirit of high mental grade.

He heard the discussion and witnessed the war,

He saw Milton's "Lucifer" fall;
He knew what that terrible battle was for,
And weeping he fought through it all.

As some flowers rally, though bitten by frost,
So spirits, earth-bound, are sustained,
Accounting their first home as "Paradise Lost,"

Reviving when it is regained.

Our dear brother entered a frail, fleshly mould;

Was trammelled by burdens and wrongs;
Now he has been summoned back into the fold

Of bright angels where he belongs.

Unlike Milton's hero, mine left the fair realm
Of his God with a sense of delight,
And gallantly taking his place at the helm,
He steadfastly stood for the right.

God grant that the dear man remembered to spread

His mantle o'er those who remain,
That we may prove true to both living and dead,
And paradise also regain.

FOR BOYS TO LEARN.

TEACH your boy early that there should be a place for everything and that everything should be in its place. Give him a cupboard or a closet or a big drawer of his own where he can keep his toys. Have nails in the closet low enough for him to hang his clothes on, and oblige him to put away his wrappings when he comes in from his walk or play.

When he undresses at night let him shake out each garment as he removes it, and hang it on his own little chair, ready to put on in the morning.

As he grows older, let him, as far as possible, replace the buttons on his own clothes and shoes, and even darn his hose and repair his clothing, under your personal supervision. He will receive no harm from having a share in the training which the daughters of the house take as a matter of course.

He may thank you some day if you initiate him into the mysteries of bread-making and the cooking of meats, the mixing of salads, and familiarize him with bed making and dish-washing. Such homely knowledge has more than once helped a man when more ornamental accomplishments failed to do him service.—Sel.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR JULY.

"The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 30.

Thursday, July 2.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—1 Peter 4: 7-11.

Thursday, July 9.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Prov. 23: 12-26.

Thursday, July 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—James 5: 8-16.

Thursday, July 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Jeremiah 23: 3-8.

Thursday, July 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

CROSWELL, Mich., June 16.

Editors Herald:—The conference and Sunday school convention of the Eastern Michigan district which convened at Cash, June 12-14, was considered by those present the most spiritual and soul-reviving ever held in the district. The business passed off without a jar or a harsh word. The social and preaching services were spiritual and grand throughout. The song service was good, conducted by W. J. Smith; Srs. Stevens and Plato organists. It was the best representation ever had in the district. We were informed that on Sunday there were two hundred and thirty-seven rigs on the grounds, and there must have been about a thousand people.

The Spirit of the Master seemed to burn upon the altar of every heart and inspire new spiritual life so all could join in one grand, harmonious strain and sing,

"'Tis good to be a Saint in latter days."

Truly it was a foretaste of the coming time.

The brethren and sisters all left the conference with their spiritual strength renewed, and the calls for two days' meetings from the various parts of the district were indicative of their desire for others to know the way of life. The Bishop's agent was kept busy most of the time, and we hope the Saints may continue to respond to the call of the Bishop, that the work of the Master be not hindered; for prospects never looked brighter from a spiritual standpoint. But finances are at a low ebb.

Elder Davis baptized three on Sunday and the writer one on Monday, and so the good work goes on. In bonds,

J. A. GRANT.

WHITESTOWN, Ind., June 15.

Editors Herald:—I am still at work, trying to get the latter-day message before the people; but it seems that but few pay heed or even stop to give it a passing thought. But Christ understood the work better than anyone else; and I am satisfied. He said that as it was in the days of Noah so should it be in the day of the coming of the Son of man. The condition of the people is the same; the indifference manifested now as then, which proves the saying to be divine; so we are confirmed, and still in the faith.

We arrived in our field proper May 28, and have presented the message to the few that will hear. Bro. L. F. Daniel has lived to gain the confidence of a great many in this town and vicinity, for which we feel to rejoice. Bro. D. O. Trout and wife, veterans in the work in this State, are still firm in the faith, and have faith in its ultimate triumph. Everyone knows what their faith is. Such men and women will do the work good wherever they live. Would God that all were like them,

We have visited some in this part who were in the faith, but joined themselves to the Christian Church, which will make it hard to get a foothold here; but we will try and see what can be done. The work was introduced into this county by Brn. James Blakeslee, and Powers, in 1860, and was followed by our beloved brother, W. W. Blair, and Bro. W. H. Kelley; also by Bro. B. V. Springer of early date; so this is historical ground. But the work was left to linger too long between times and not work enough was done in the vicinities round about; but we have some good friends here yet, and there are some inquiring for the old paths.

We have held nine meetings about five miles distant, where Bro. L. F. has been holding meetings with good crowds, with some inquiring minds; also in this place. But few were out at this town. Will move on to friend Beeman's to-morrow, about eight miles north, and try and see what can be done for the work at that point. None of our faith are there. We will try to build up the work in accordance with God's word, believing that he will bless all that obey him. Before coming to Northern Indiana we labored in Southern Indiana, in the months of April and May with good crowds and good liberty.

I will say to all Saints who are scattered in Northern Indiana that if they will write me at Whitestown and make arrangements, I will respond to them. I believe Bro. S. W. L. Scott is president of the Northern Indiana, and Southern Michigan district; and as Whitestown is in his jurisdiction, he could do a good work here.

I desire the prayers of the brethren and sisters for God's blessing on my labor, and on me and mine. My address will be Whitestown, Indiana, till August 1. Permanent address, Derby Indiana.

Yours in bonds,

V. D. BAGGERLY.

HIGBEE, Mo., June 23.

Editors Herald:—I left home on May 9 with the intention of doing some ministerial work near Lineville, Iowa (but actually in Mercer County, Missouri), Glenwood, Missouri, and then proceeding to St. Louis.

I remained in Mercer County until the 19th, being kindly cared for by Bro. Robert Moore and family. Only preached three times, on account of excessive and almost continuous rains. Not only did the rain and mud work against me, but the measles were in that region of country, and kept many from attending our meetings. However, I felt well in preaching and I think good was done.

On account of ill health it became necessary for me to recall my appointments and return home. I remained home till the 29th, but was not idle when at all able to work, during which time I preached but once.

On the 29th I left home for Glenwood, Schuyler County, Missouri, reaching my destination the same evening. I stopped off at the Wabash crossing, near the Holiness church, which is located about three miles from Glenwood, in the country. After a walk of about one half mile with luggage in hand, I found the residence of Mr. John Hombs with whom I was to stay. He and his wife received and treated me very kindly, but I soon discovered that my recovery was very slight, and that I should have to return home again in a few days or have a terrible struggle.

I preached in the Holiness church, of which society Mr. Hombs is a leading member, on the evenings of Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, and was blessed with the kind of liberty which the Spirit alone can give. The attendance was excellent for such rainy weather, and the interest was very fair. This is entirely new ground; and from what I was able to learn, there is territory all about this nucleus which needs to be worked by the fishers and hunters. We will watch it, and with our scanty force, do what we can. The latter half of my time I stayed with Mr. Kimbrell and family, who cared for me kindly. Credit is due to Bro. T. A. Westwood, of Bloomfield, Iowa, for our privilege of occupying in the above-named church. Bro. Westwood received the gospel when young, in Carroll County, Missouri, and had become somewhat cold—so he told me—not even claiming to be a member of the church. But he has and does defend the work before his friends, and his acquaintance and influence with Mr. Hombs secured for us the church. He thoughtfully paid my ticket fare from Lamoni to Glenwood, which is more than some would do who are far more pretentious than he.

On June 3 I went to Independence, Missouri. The Sunday school convention convened on the 5th and the conference on the 6th. I attended two sessions of the convention and was much pleased in many respects; but you will allow me to express my opinion by saying, for the benefit of all Sunday school workers, that the moral part should receive a very prominent place. This is the great demand of the age.

The conference passed off pleasantly and a good time was had. By request, I presided over one priesthood meeting, Saturday evening, which meeting, I believe, was profitable to us all. Bro. I. N. White and the writer did the preaching.

After the conference closed I spoke in the Saints' church on Monday and Tuesday evenings, also assisted Brn. Luff, May, and Garrett in the ordination of Bro. Geo. Harrington to the office of high priest, as provided for by the General Conference.

Wednesday evening, I spoke in the First Kansas City branch, in their plain but neat little church. Was greeted with a fair-sized and attentive congregation. Was kindly cared for by Brn. Scott and Allen. Thursday evening I preached in the Second Kansas City branch, in a hall. Good attendance, good interest, good meeting. Bro. and Sr. Kaler lodged and breakfasted me.

On Friday, I went to the pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. James Anderson, where I remained till Monday, with the exception of Sunday, which was spent in Armstrong, where I spoke twice. Had unusually good liberty at night, but O my, how hot! I have forgotten the name of the brother-in-law and sister who so kindly cared for me at dinner and supper. The Armstrong Saints manifested a love for the truth, and Bro. and Sr. Anderson did all that could be desired to make my stay pleasant.

I returned to Independence and remained there till Thursday, my health being poor, part of the time very poor, at which date I came here and preached at night with excellent liberty, to a fair-sized congregation.

On Friday I went to the tent which was pitched between Moberly and Huntsville. Spoke to the Sunday school association at night. Conference of the Northeast Missouri district in the tent on Saturday, at ten a. m. The representation from the district was very fair, and at preaching meetings the outside attendance good. Brn. Turpen, Tanner, Chatburn, and the writer were the preachers. By request of the district president and others, I spoke Saturday afternoon, at the close of our business session, addressing the priesthood.

Bro. Vaughan, at whose place the tent was pitched, conveyed the conference people to and from Moberly, and bore the burden of feeding them, which was no small thing, I assure you. He was also assisted by some of his hospitable neighbors, which speaks well for both him and them, as they are not members of the church. Am to speak here tonight and to-morrow night, if the Lord will. On Thursday expect to go to El Dorado Springs, Missouri; that is, if I do not have to return home.

I am more and more convinced that the Sunday school is doing an important and necessary work and should be encouraged by all.

While at Independence I was so fortunate as to have a pleasant and quiet home with Bro. and Sr. Torrance. Bro. May and family were very kind to me—and so were all for that matter—but Bro. May, who is president of the district, did all within his power to help me in my work in Independence and Kansas City. Your brother,

J. R. LAMBERT.

FARMINGTON, Iowa, June 22.

Editors Herald:—Presuming some members of the district are wondering where the missionaries are and what they have been doing, I undertake to inform them. May 6 I left home for my field of labor. I called on Bro. J. R. Evans, my associate, at Lucas, Iowa, to talk over plans for labor; then came on to Keb, Iowa, where Bro. Evans joined me the next Monday, having spoken in Ottumwa the day before while the writer held forth at Keb. The weather being fine the Keb branch thought it would be profitable to put up the tent over the following Sunday, before starting out on our tent work proper; and by the kindness of the members, especially the sisters, we were furnished material and help to make the necessary repairs on the tent in short order, and on Friday, the 15th, set up the tent on the Whitebreast Coal Co's land, the use of which was kindly offered us free of charge by the superintendent of the works, Mr. Williams, also all necessary material we needed that they had, as lumber for stand, etc.

As soon as we had our tent up and meetings announced the wet weather set in, which compelled us to keep the tent up the next ten days before we could get it dry enough to box; only being able to hold six preaching meetings during the time, and part of them in the church building.

While at Keb Bro. Evans and I both being impressed with the calling of Bro. John Jervis, recommended to the branch at their regular business meeting that he be ordained to the office of priest, and by unanimous vote they ordered his ordination, which took place Wednesday, May 13. Bro. Jervis is the making of a useful man if he continues faithful. He will accompany the district tent, self-sustaining, during the tent season, thus releasing one of the regular appointed missionaries from accompanying the tent, to look after the work at other points, which is highly necessary, as we have about twenty counties in this district and only two conference appointees.

Brethren, who else will volunteer to spend some time? If you can't leave home, will you volunteer to keep up regular appointments in your home vicinities? Calls for preaching are many; from every direction the cry comes, "Come over and preach for us, or send some one!" Brethren of the priesthood of the Nauvoo district, are you aware of the magnitude of the work that is before us? This is an important district of the church, at one time in activity and numbers, ranked with any, and perhaps has turned out as many or more good solid men, who have become pillars in the church, than any other district. Now, shall we allow the work to lag on account of our negligence to duty? Has God placed the priesthood upon us as an ornament or to show us honor? Or, was it to labor diligently in his vineyard within the scope of the office to which we may have been called? If I am any judge of the work in the district it is picking up again, and if we will all unite and put our shoulders to the wheel and work the best we can under our existing circumstances, God will bless our labors, and many good honest souls will be gathered in that will be a blessing to the work and themselves. Not to the priesthood alone is this request made, but to the membership as well. "In unity there is strength." A house divided against itself cannot stand, we are told; a good, faithful, and consistent life is the best possible sermon one can preach.

I will expect a report of work done from every officer in the district at our next district conference, which will be held at Montrose, Iowa, August 21. (See notice later.) If you are a branch officer, report to your president and he will report to the district, and if not a branch officer report direct to district secretary. All reports should be in the hands of the district secretary, Bro. Robert Warnock, at Farmington, Iowa, before the 20th of August.

Tuesday, May 26, Bro. Evans went to Peckay to call on his eldest son whom he had not seen for some time and was to meet me on the following Friday at Burlington on our way to New Canton, Illinois, where we were to go by request of missionary in charge to organize a branch. I left Keb for Burlington the same date via Farmington, Vincennes, Keokuk, and Montrose, to make arrangements for future work; found all anxious for preaching.

Saturday, May 30. At 7:30 a. m. we took train for New Canton. After a lay-over of five hours at Quincy we reached there in the evening. Bro. Van Minton met us, took us to his home, where we domiciled most of the time during our stay at New Canton. Here we found a noble band of Saints, nearly all young in the faith, but firm. We labored among them the best we could until June 17, baptizing six and organizing a branch with thirty-seven members, thirty-three of whom Bro. Evans baptized last April. The following brethren were chosen and ordained officers: Orson Huddleson priest, Noah Kelso teacher, and A. V. Minton deacon. We have some noble young men here and if they will continue faithful and seek to qualify themselves, will become useful men in the church. As a sample of their integrity, when we read to them the revelations on duties of Saints, etc., and regarding the use of tobacco, quite a number of them immediately quit its use, and others are trying, men who had used the weed for twenty-five years or more, threw it aside. In that locality tobacco using is universal among men and many women use it, I am sorry to say.

On Wednesday, the 17th, after a tiresome lay-over in the dingy old depot at Quincy of over eight hours, we arrived at Keokuk too late to get train out. We went up to Bro. J. H. Jacobs', who kindly cared for us that night. Next morning Bro. Evans took train for Keb, via Ottumwa, to assist Bro. John Jervis with the district tent. Their first point will probably be Kirksville. The writer took the same train to Vincennes; found the Saints feeling sad—Sr. Jessie Burnett was lying at point of death, the doctors having given her up. After being administered to she brightened up, but the following night had a very bad spell, and as we took the morning train for Farmington, she was no better. The family are resigned and feel to say, "Father, thy will be done."

Landed in Farmington ten a. m., on Friday, found Elder James McKiernan, who had been caring for his brother-in-law, Bro. Geo. Cammeron, during his serious affliction, getting ready to leave on the evening train for his field of labor to engage in tent work. After dinner walked out to Dry Ridge, where we baptized a number last March. Found them all well, happy, and satisfied with the work; spoke in the schoolhouse Saturday night, Sunday morning and at night. During the afternoon baptized five more, and in company with R. Warnock, who has been holding regular weekly appointments in the schoolhouse to good effect, confirmed them and blessed five children. We witnessed a very peaceful time at both the baptism and confirmation. A large crowd gathered, and thank God he gave us light and liberty in performing our duties. God is truly moving upon this people; others have given their names for baptism on next Sunday, and good prospects of a number more. It seems like the people are famishing for the gospel. Prejudice is being removed at a wonderful rate. O, if we only had men enough to fill the demands for preaching!

Parties desiring tent work or preaching in their vicinities, if living in the Nauvoo district, let me hear from you and we will do the best we can for you with our limited force. Letters addressed to me at my home address, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, will always reach me.

Yours in bonds,

F. M. WELD,

District President.

STONE CITY, Texas, June 6.

Editors Herald:—I have arrived at home from Grimes County, where I met large congregations. They were very much interested in the gospel that I preached to them. The people invited me to come again and preach for them at two places in said county. There was one Baptist preacher in attendance that kicked some, but it was very weak; he caused the people to laugh at him. The last time I preached he went away about the time I was half through. I guess he was full; yes, full of prejudice. These little preachers keep many good people from hearing the gospel in these days and parts.

I have more calls to preach than I can fill. One reason is, they are so far away and money is so scarce; but I will do the best I can.

Yours in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 16.

Editors Herald:—Our conference in this city proved to be a war of conquest. The Devil raged until near the close, but glory be to God, we gained the victory! We had some peaceful and spiritual meetings, but the grandest of all was our memorial service held in memory of our beloved brother, Bro. Blair. Bro. Curtis was the speaker. I feel quite sure that not many in that large audience will soon forget what they heard that day.

Since conference Bro. Curtis and I have concluded to change the base of operations in the city, but cannot tell if it will work for good until we give it a fair trial. We will go from house to house in other parts of the city, aside from where we have formerly labored, and preach where we can effect an opening. However, I will be under the necessity of leaving Bro. Curtis about the 21st, to attend the debate in Wilson County. After the debate I will return and assist Bro. Curtis a few days, and take up the line of march westward. Bro. Curtis will also in a few weeks move southwest.

Brn. O. D. Johnson, W. H. Davenport, and Father Currie departed yesterday for the mountains; the two former to their homes, the latter as a wanderer in the camps of modern Israel, striving with the Saints for their spiritual welfare. Beloved brethren, Bro. Currie has been a faithful servant of God and his people for many years, and I earnestly commend him to the hospitality and temporal care of the brethren. And while he administers food to your souls, administer care to his wornout body. When I parted with Bro. Currie yesterday he seemed worn and despondent, and when I turned from him I could but offer a silent prayer to heaven in his behalf. The conference made some changes in the organization to the pleasure of every one, which the clerk will report.

We are in the midst of another drouth, which is bringing about hardships in this country. However, destruction must come, and as day after day we see the work of destruction, let us remember that God's hand is seen beneath the dark cloud, and put our trust in him who is able to save the soul.

Yours in Christ,

L. L. WIGHT.

BLAIRSTOWN, Mo., June 18.

Editors Herald:—On the 14th of June Elder A. White and myself held a grove meeting in Hout's Grove, north of Calhoun about five miles. Five were baptized. We return there on the 12th of July and hold another grove meeting. We preached at Lingo on the night of the 14th inst. We are trying to arrange to hold a tent meeting there sometime in the latter part of July.

Yesterday I confirmed Bro. Eugene Murray, who was baptized on the 7th of May by Philemon Pement. Bro. Murray walked twenty miles to have the confirmation attended to, not wanting to wait longer. He has belonged to the Catholic Church a good part of his life and his wife is still a member. The glorious gospel has made its way to their house and in time we hope to hear of them all coming into the work.

Bro. I. N. White came in this evening on his way to the Clinton district conference, at Lowry City, June 20.

Your brother,

HEPPNER, Oreg., June 23.

Editors Herald:—The long talked of debate between Elder Sherrill and myself came off at last, and left us master of the field. The discussion lasted six days and I think I can say that I never before saw such a spirit of bombast and egotism manifest by a professed minister of the gospel. Sherrill is like Braden, only he has not as much sense. The universal decision is (except by a half dozen of his dupes) that Sherrill never made a point. He now stands convicted of wilful lying before this community and the people do not hesitate to speak of it boldly.

His manner of warfare from the beginning was abuse and falsehood. He read Ecclesiastes 3:21, "Who knoweth that the spirit of man goeth upward." He read it three times in one speech and then insultingly asked, "Do you know it? Do you know it?" I called upon him three times to appologize to the audience for so perverting the word of God, but he was as stiff as a telegraph pole.

While it is very humiliating to descend to the level of such characters to debate with them, there is yet a crumb of comfort in being able to tear off the mask from their frauds and expose their wickedness and to lead some into the light of truth, which has been done here.

I was compelled to leave the scene of conflict for other parts of my field, but I have left a soldier in the breach in the person of Bro. W. A. Goodwin, who is fully able to defend the flock against those wolves that masquerade in sheep's clothing. Long may the standard of truth wave over the pure in heart.

J. C. CLAPP.

POMONA, Mo., June 22.

Editors Herald:—I am doing the best I can for the work in the Southern Missouri district. We think we are progressing some, but we know we are not moving along as fast as we might, or would even like to. I am truly glad to see the encouraging reports through the Herald. It is a great comfort to me to know that there are so many noble souls at work in this marvelous gospel labor. We need them! The zeal and wisdom used and exhibited in the church can only be obtained by great faithfulness to God in the performance of duty. May God forbid any being overcome, and may all learn to be zealous and wise in so great a cause. All Saints must learn that idleness and sllothfulness will not win the crown. They must study and be taught and then be sure to live up to the gospel plan, or be overcome by the Devil or captured by some of his doctrines.

LUDINGTON, Mich., June 24.

Editors Herald:—Our Northern Michigan district conference is over; we had a grand good time. There must have been about three hundred Saints gathered. We had the district tent erected near the church, which proved a great help in accommodating the people. We had with us Brn. F. M. Cooper, R. E. Grant, G. H. Hilliard, and J. S. Kier, besides the men of our own district. These brethren rendered us much assistance, especially Bro. Hilliard. We had a grand good meeting on Monday morning, and received good instruction from Bro. Hilliard; he gave us much wise counsel. The officials all seem to go away from the conference having a more perfect understanding of the law and order. We indeed all feel as one. The Saints were built up, and we all rejoice and wish to toil on. I go now to Onekama to spend about two weeks, after which I purpose to erect the tent in Reed City and open up the work there. I am ashamed to live live there any longer and not open up the work at home. We need help in this district. It is hard for one to run the tent alone.

Kind love to all,

J. J. CORNISH.

OAKLAND, Cal., June 16.

Editors Herald:—I am at home, not from choice, but for the purpose of recruiting as I have been gradually going down in health ever since last March, when I took a very bad cold at Vale's Mills, and renewed it at Radcliffe, while in Ohio, and I must now rest awhile from active labor, when, the Lord so willing, I enter the field again. I want the prayers of all that my health may be renewed.

I visited my sons at Tuscarora, Nevada; they got a church and I preached seven times and had a good attendance, good interest, good liberty, and left a good opening, to which I call the special attention of Bro. J. Arthur Davis, the Nevada missionary. You will find friends there, not only in two of my sons, Charles M. and F. M. Haws, but in several others, who will feed you and care for you; so go there if possible. You will also find an old friend of mine at Elko—Mr. Joseph Triplett. He will care for you and assist you in getting a place to preach. So be sure to call on them. I write through the Herald because I do not know the addresses of the brethren in Nevada.

Since I returned home I have preached in Oakland, San Francisco, and have visited two places in my field—San Jose and Santa Cruz, and done what my health would permit under the circumstances.

Your brother,

A. HAWS.

LIBERTY CENTER, Iowa, June 22.

Editors Herald:—While on my return from conference at Boone I stopped at Des Moines and assisted Bro. William Thompson for a few days in tent work; and while there, had the pleasure of baptizing an old comrade at arms. On my return to my labor in Warren County I found large congregations anxious to hear the story of the restored gospel. Yesterday I led four into the water and buried them with Christ in baptism. They were all heads of families. Surely the Lord is leading his servants in this part of his vineyard.

Yours in bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

COALGATE, I. T., June 14.

Editors Herald:—Dear Saints; Greeting to all those that know me and to those whom I have never seen. I am thankful to God that I have been permitted to live in this day and to obey the gospel. We know that if we hold out faithful and keep the law to the end and be doers of the law, that we have promise of right to the tree of life. But let us see if we are keeping the law. Have we all complied with the law of tithing, whereof God says to try and prove him if he will not open the windows of heaven and pour out blessings that there will not be room enough to contain?

Brethren, I speak from experience; I find that God will comply with his word if we will only do our part. I have tried to keep the whole law by being humble and subject to that loving Spirit that will lead us into all truth; and I must say that God has blessed me in my efforts beyond my expectations; and I cannot express my thankfulness for his goodness to me.

Brethren, pay your tithing, every dollar of it. Don't wait for a better time; now is the time to be doers of the law, not hearers only. Naaman was not cleansed of his leprosy until he had complied with the whole requirement and had dipped himself seven times; then he was cleansed. So we need not expect to receive the reward until we comply with the whole law. Then God will bless us, and we know not how great those blessings will be. Then we have the promise that we shall not be burned at his coming. If we make a sacrifice we shall be gathered, and preserved from destruction.

"God is marshaling his army
For the rescue of his truth."

Let us all work while it is called to-day, for the night cometh.

HENRY T. MCCLAIN.

CONDON, Oregon, June 16.

Editors Herald:—The glorious gospel of the Son of God has again been brought to battle against the errors of men in a discussion in which one Elder R. H. Sherrill, of the Church of God, challenged anyone from the Pope down. The writer accepted in behalf of Elder J. C. Clapp, arrangements were perfected, and the following propositions were signed:—

Resolved, that the seventh day, sanctified and blessed of God at creation (Genesis 2: 2, 3), given to Moses on tables of stone (Exodus 20: 8-11), is the Sabbath of the Lord God, and as such binding upon Christians in this dispensation.—Sherrill affirms.

Resolved, that man exists as a conscious being, independent of physical organism.—J. C. Clapp affirms.

Two more propositions were discussed in which each affirmed his church to be identical in faith and doctrine with the church established in the first century. Two days each were devoted to the first and second propositions and one day each on the last two; two two-hour sessions each day; King James' Translation together with the original Greek to be the only evidence used. Bro. Clapp insisted on history being used for what it was worth, but it was barred out.

On the first proposition Bro. Clapp repeatedly told him if he would produce one quotation showing the Sabbath binding upon Christians in this dispensation he would yield the entire discussion. This he could not do and used his time in boisterous and false assertions, quoting numerous passages of Scripture which had no bearing on the question and demanding Bro. Clapp to answer them. Elder Sherrill made a dismal failure, not even attempting to show it binding now, and in his third speech began quoting history, which gave Bro. Clapp a chance, and he did it most effectually. His original Greek was nipped in the bud by Bro. Clapp telling him if he would repeat the Greek alphabet or read one paragraph in the Greek he would yield the entire discussion, thus proving him to be an impostor by posing himself as a Greek scholar.

On the second proposition Bro. Clapp opened with clear-cut statements and scriptural quotations so well linked together that all the honest in heart could and did see that the sleep of the soul was a doctrine dictated by the enemy of mankind. Elder Sherrill was so far outdone that he misquoted Ecclesiastes 3: 21 and read it, "who knoweth that the spirit of man goeth upward?" and read it three times that way in succession, thus showing the perversion to be a willful act. Bro. Clapp showed it to the people and repeatedly called upon Elder Sherrill to apologize for having perverted the word of God, which he would not do.

On the last propositions Bro. Clapp showed the identity of the Latter Day Saint Church in a beautiful light, considering the short time devoted to it, and on these propositions is where Elder Sherrill showed plainly the spirit that actuated him. He began his negative by using the vilest language and repeating the most absurd falsehoods possible for a man to utter. He demanded a sign after calling Joseph Smith all the hard names that he could think of, saying that if Bro. Clapp would show him a sign he would join our church and preach the gospel. Bro. Clapp told him he would hardly stand muster as a Latter Day Saint elder. He tried to shoot Clark Braden's bullets out of his gun, but the caliber was too small. The day following the close of the debate Bro. Clapp baptized two heads of families, one brother being one of Elder Sherrill's staunch Sabbatarians. Three others gave their names for baptism when Bro. Clapp came back. While the writer and Bro. Clapp were driving to Heppner, the home of Srs. Rush and Miner, the Spirit said to Bro. Clapp, "Return, for the Lord has other people here;" which he will do on the 20th.

Brethren and sisters, let us hold fast to the rod of iron, ever holding aloft the banner of truth until all the honest in heart may be led to obey this glorious gospel that has gained another victory over the arch enemy of mankind.

Your brother in Christ,

W. A. GOODWIN.

WAREHAM, Mass., June 22.

Editors Herald:—Sometime last December I addressed you from Nova Scotia, but that is so long ago it would not pay to tell all that has happened since then, so I will not try. Since leaving General Conference I have been trying in my way to do what I could for the work. On May 3 I preached for the Adventists in Providence, by invitation, and they seemed to enjoy the sermon and invited me to come again. In the evening I discoursed to the Saints. I labored in Providence and vicinity until May 9, then went to Sunday school convention at Brockton. From Brockton I went to Boston and enjoyed a few days with old gospel friends in sightseeing. While in Boston I listened to quite a debate in the legislature on the B. F. Butler monument bill, that is, whether or not they would erect a monument to the memory of the departed general. It was so ordered.

Wednesday evening I attended the prayer meeting and all present seemed to feel the blessed Spirit. Next evening we met at Bro. Sheehy's where the Mite Society gave a supper, proceeds to be used for the benefit of the church. They would not allow the writer to pay for his supper; too bad! An entertainment followed. Friday the 15th found me at Haverhill, where I found a home at Bro. Frost's. Sunday we met in prayer meeting and enjoyed the hour. I preached in the afternoon and evening in the schoolhouse. Two gave their names for baptism, which I attended to on Tuesday evening, then preached for the Saints. Wednesday I spoke in a union mission by request. Next day left for Boston and Providence. May 24 preached in Fiskville and Providence. While in Providence Bro. George Smith was ordained to the office of elder, under the hands of Bro. George Gates and the writer. The Spirit was present to a marked degree.

On May 30 I attended the memorial services at Fall River and felt glad to be there. Friday, June 5, found me in Dennisport. Began preaching services at once and on Sunday baptized two. Preached on Monday evening and next day went to East Dennis, bidding the saints good-bye at Dennisport. As the shades of a tranquil night slowly settled down over the little town of East Dennis the writer just stepped out of doors for a breath of air, and a peculiar sight met his vision and on the still night air came the sound of human voices in song. "Surely that song sounds familiar; yes, it is one of the songs of Zion," and those who sing are Saints. They have come from Dennisport a happy lot, two wagon loads of them, and we had a good meeting? Of course we did. Next day came to Providence to make arrangements for shipping the tent, a lot having been secured at Wareham by Bro. Sheehy, as he thought, but the man who owned the place for some reason not stated decided not to let us have the lot. I believe he was only part owner, and the other part said no. Well, here we are, but I have searched quite diligently for a place but have not obtained one as yet. We shall not tarry long, however, if we do not succeed, for the world is big and there are plenty of places where the people will be glad to have us.

Yours in hope,

G. W. ROBLEY.

MOUNTAIN GROVE, Mo., May 12.

Editors Herald:—I am forty-six years old. I went into the church two years ago. For three years before I was baptized I was very unhealthy; was not able to do my work and do myself justice, and when I was baptized I was very weak and was having smothering spells; so it seemed that I could not live. But I thank my heavenly Father for sending me relief in a time when it was so much needed.

I was raised to believe in the Baptist Church, so I wanted to be baptized by immersion; and my husband was also, or thought he was, a regular or Hardshell Baptist, for he was raised in that doctrine; but he had heard many different denominations preach, and when he would measure them by the Bible he would find they all fell short of the stature, so he had very nearly lost faith in all and said that if that was the way they all did he thought we could serve God as well if not better out of the church. But I insisted on being baptized. There were no Baptist preachers near us, but he said if I would wait until spring he would go and see if he could find a preacher that believed and taught the whole Bible and followed all the commandments, and if he could find the right man in the right place, or one that would come up to the standard, he would have him come and baptize all his household. But before he went to get his preacher, or while I was waiting for him to find one, I went to God in prayer and asked him to send us a preacher that would preach the true gospel and my husband might also hear it, and know it was the true gospel, and obey it; for I was getting afraid he would not find any church he would believe in.

Now I know my prayer was answered, for in January, 1894, Bro. Ward came and preached at our schoolhouse, and my husband went to hear him, and when he came home I asked him what he thought of the new preacher, and he said he preached the Bible. Then they wanted me to go and hear him, but I said I did not want to hear that old Mormon, and I was in such poor health I did not think I was able to go; but finally I thought I would, and when I got to the schoolhouse and saw Bro. Ward he was quite a different looking man from what I expected to see; for he had a mild and pleasing look and was a very nice looking man; and when he began to preach it was so plain that it appeared to me like something said, "This is the true gospel," and I was so surprised, or it appeared so strange to me, that I asked myself, "Can this be possible that this Mormon has brought the true gospel here to us?" And as we came home I said I liked his preaching much; that it sounded the best I had ever heard; and my husband said he surely preached the truth "if he is a Mormon;" "He is preaching the Bible." and then I knew my prayer was answered and I felt that I wanted to drop on my knees right there and thank God for the great blessings he had blessed me with. And I said I would go and hear him the next night if God would give me strength.

I went the next night and two girls demanded baptism, and it was hard work for me to keep my seat, for I wanted to join so badly, and I was thoroughly convinced that it was the true gospel. But I wanted to talk to the rest of the family, so I waited, and as we came home that night I told my husband I wanted to join and he said I had better wait and know what I was doing. I said I did know; that I would join for I was a Latter Day Saint. I waited, and in May Bro. Ward came back again, and when I heard he was in the neighborhood I could not eat my supper, I was so glad. But I felt so bad that I did not go that night, but went Sunday night and heard another good sermon, and on Monday night I and some of the family went, but my husband did not go, and when I came home I could not go to sleep until I told him I was going to join the church. That struck him very hard, for he was still investigating the work and was not thoroughly convinced, and he said I had better wait and be sure I was right and the church right. But I told him I could not wait; that I did not want to do anything that did not suit him; that I never had; but that this was one thing I must do. He said he was afraid I was in too big a hurry and did not understand the doctrine as I ought; but I told him I knew just what I was doing, so he never said any more or tried in any way to keep me from going ahead; so I demanded baptism the next night, and was baptized.

My husband and seven more of the family have followed me. I am happy to say that my health commenced to get better as soon as I was baptized, and I was administered to in December, 1894, and have been able to do housework ever since; and I have done lots of work in the garden, and I know that God the Father of all good deserves all the praise. I ask all the Saints to help me praise him for the restored gospel and my restored health.

A humble sister,

CHARLOTTE C. EDWARDS.

THOUGHTS ON CAMPBELLISM.

ELDER G. W. VARNER, in a controversy with his own "brethren," writes thus:—

The man who undertakes to organize the Church of Christ undertakes a big job. He might as well undertake to organize a man. If the church has ever been disorganized the Mormons are right. Then, when we lay on hands let us be consistent, and claim that we have the power to impart spiritual gifts, and let us swallow the dogma of Joe Smith.

Admitting that they have not the power, but for the sake of consistency he proposes to claim it. It would be more consistent, inasmuch as they "claim" the authority to teach and baptize, to swallow that part of the work of the Lord, even though it be "the dogma of Joe Smith," which requires the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. They should improve, and add to the former conclusion, "If we have the authority to preach, we have authority to baptize, and if we have authority to preach and baptize (as given in Matthew 28: 19, 20), we should be 'consistent' and 'claim' authority also to lay on hands to impart spiritual gifts." Why not? Can they not as reasonably "claim" one function of the apostolic office in Christ as another? Are they not true successors to the apostles? Are they not every one apostles, kings, and priests unto God, both men and women? What does their commission say? It says to the apostles and to no others, Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

Does this authority institute, and constitute any other office than apostles? Then it is clear that "Bro."

Varner is right. If they claim the apostolic office, why not claim the whole authority and power, being consistent of course? Indeed, Mr. Editor, I was impressed favorably with "Elder" Varner's sensible views, and deep thought on his subject,

If the church has ever been disorganized the Mormons are right.

This would form for us the major premise of a conditional and disjunctive syllogism, consisting of two entire propositions which make an enthymeme. The first part of the major would contain the condition called the antecedent, and the last which contains the conclusion, the consequent. Now, Mr. V., if the antecedent be admitted in the minor premise, the consequent must be admitted in the conclusion. But the church was disorganized. This is admitted repeatedly in the "Christian System" by Alexander Campbell and also by B. W. Stone, and various others of the Campbellite fraternity. Therefore "the Mormons are right."

The organization of the church consisted in apostles and prophets; "first apostles," then other ministers were ordained, and as every one was called "as was Aaron," prophets were second after the apostles. But what became of all these? Campbell says:—

The apostles indeed are yet upon the earth in their writings. Though dead, they still are preaching.—Book of Lectures.

How many of the apostles are "yet upon the earth in their writings"? And how many are "still preaching"? Paul is writing to the church, but both Paul and the congregations he is writing to are in their graves.

If the church has never been disorganized why are there no living apostles and prophets in "the Church of Christ" which was the result of Campbell's labors? And what office in the organization does Campbell hold? If the Campbellite Church officials have not power to impart spiritual gifts by the laying on of hands, why do they try to follow the example of the church at Jerusalem in ordaining elders and deacons?

Mr. W. W. Roberts in a card which he calls "Our position," says:—

Each congregation should be served by a plurality of elders and deacons selected from their number, and ordained or appointed as the New Testament directs; please read Acts 6th, 13th, and 14th chapters.

That was while the church was organized. In the sixth chapter we see that the twelve were in charge and governed the church:—

Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

Then, after "the multitude" had made the selections they "set" them "before the apostles; and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them"—presumably to ordain, or set them apart. The apostles directed all this.

The Campbellites cannot possibly do this. This case was not intended as an example to be followed by men, any more than the raising from the dead of Lazarus or the blessing that proceeded from the Lord's garment to heal the afflicted woman. Roberts says elders and deacons are called and ordained as "the New Testament directs." Did the New Testament direct them to be "set before the apostles"? Did the New Testament direct the apostles to lay hands on them? Did the New Testament give any directions or examples for the ministers of the Campbellite Church to lay on hands and ordain elders and deacons?

Can they present their selections, after they have made them, to the apostles which Campbell says are still on the earth preaching?

"Bro." Varner exhorts them to be consistent and if they have not this power, to "claim" it, etc. Roberts also refers us to the thirteenth chapter of Acts to show that the church is supplied with a "plurality" of elders and deacons. But how can the Campbellites follow directions like these? Were Bro. Roberts and Bro. Varner and the other Campbellite apostles sent out by special revelation of the Holy Ghost, at Antioch, or at some other place?

"There were . . . certain prophets . . . at Antioch," but there were no prophets at Bethany, Virginia. While these prophets and teachers at Antioch "Ministered to the Lord, and fasted" they received a revelation: "The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." Such was the revelation they received. How did they separate them? Just as the apostles did at Jerusalem: "When they had fasted and prayed" they "laid their hands on them," and "sent them away." They were "sent forth by" the church? No. "By the Holy Ghost." Why do not these Campbellites be consistent and send them away by revelation, or else not cite these scriptures as their authority for the vain mummery they practice?

The fourteenth chapter of Acts is also cited by Roberts as an example for ordaining elders, etc. But how can they follow, seeing they have no apostles to ordain and impart spiritual gifts? Certainly they should be consistent.

DID CHRIST WORK BY FAITH?

AND it came to pass, that the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, I reveal unto you concerning this heaven and this earth; write the words which I speak. I am the Beginning and the End; the Almighty God. By mine Only Begotten I created these things. Yea, in the beginning I created the heaven, and the earth upon which thou standest.—Gen. 1: 1-3, I. T.

In the beginning was the gospel preached through the Son. And the gospel was the word, and the word was with the Son, and the Son was with God, and the Son was of God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made which was made.—John 1: 1-3, I. T.

God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds.—Heb. 1: 1, 2.

And it came to pass that Moses called upon God, saying, Tell me, I pray thee, why these things are so, and by what thou madest them? And behold the glory of God was upon Moses, so that Moses stood in the presence of God, and he talked with Moses, face to face: and the Lord God said unto Moses, For mine own purpose have I made these things. Here is wisdom, and it remaineth in me. And by the word of my power have I created them, which is mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth. And worlds without number have I created; and I also created them for mine own purpose; and by the Son I created them, which is mine Only Begotten. And the first man, of all men, have I called Adam, which is many. But only an account of this earth, and the inhabitants thereof, give I unto you. For behold there are many worlds which have passed away by the words of my power. And there are many which now stand, and innumerable are they unto man, but all things are numbered unto me, for they are mine, and I know them.—D. C. 22: 7.

In Herald No. 21, vol. 43, page 332, in the article, "Worlds Made," Bro. Elvin, if I rightly understand him, seems to take some exception to a quotation from Paul found in Hebrews 11: 3:—

Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God.

And, making use of the above quotations, proves that God created the worlds, the heavens, and the earth, by his Only Begotten, even Jesus, our Lord and Redeemer, which is sincerely believed by every Latter Day Saint. And, perhaps by none more strongly than the author of the article "Faith," in Herald No. 19, vol. 43, page 301. But who shall say that Christ, in all his work, done under the direction of his Father, ignored or in any way whatever set aside the principle of faith, one of the great fundamental principles of the universe, as also as the gospel?

The mighty manifestations of which we have record were through faith, by the word of God, and without his word faith would be void, for in Genesis we read,—

For God having sworn unto Enoch and unto his seed with an oath by himself; that everyone being ordained after this order and calling should have power, by faith, to break mountains, to divide the seas, to dry up waters, to turn them out of their course; to put at defiance the armies of nations, to divide the earth, to break every band, to stand in the presence of God; to do all things according to his will, according to his command, subdue principalities and powers; and this by the will of the Son of God which was from before the foundation of the world.—Genesis 14: 30, 31.

This is the thought to bear in mind when we quote Christ,

If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall move: and nothing shall be impossible unto you.—Matt. 17: 20.

As also nicely expressed by Nephi:—

And I said unto them, If God had commanded me to do all things, I could do them. If he should command me that I should say unto this water, Be thou earth, it should be earth; and if I should say it, it would be done.—1 Nephi 5: 96, 97.

Hence it is plainly understood that Christ created the worlds through faith, by the word of God; and also, that there is a living faith, productive of power and good, the word of God must direct in its action. Hence it stands first, as a principle in the universe, and first as a gospel principle. As a principle in the universe it fills and puts into activity every principle and power therein. As a gospel principle it fills all the others. Because of faith, men repent; because of faith, by the word of God, they go through the waters of baptism, and observe the laying on of hands. Through faith, by the word of God is brought about the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment.

There are a few thoughts expressed in Doctrine and Covenants, Lectures on Faith, to which I would call attention:—

From this we learn, that faith is the assurance which men have of the existence of things which they have not seen, and the principle of action in all intelligent beings.—Sec. 1: 9.

By this we understand that the principle of power, which existed in the bosom of God, by which the worlds were framed, was faith; and that it is by reason of this principle of power, existing in the Deity, that all created things exist; so that all things in heaven, on earth, or under the earth, exist by reason of faith, as it existed in Him.—Ibid. 1: 15.

We here observe that God is the only supreme governor and independent being in whom all fullness and perfection dwell; who is omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient; without beginning of days or end of life; and that in him every good gift and every good principle dwells; and that he is the Father of lights; in him the principle of faith dwells independently, and he is the object in whom the faith of all other rational and accountable beings centers for life and salvation.—Ibid. 2: 2.

The writer still affirms the thoughts expressed in the former article, "Faith," that for grandeur and power, it stands unparalleled. The finite mind, unaided by the Spirit of God, is unable to comprehend it. Neither the handiwork of God, nor the principle of faith can be comprehended by sailing in "theological balloons" and playing "peek-a-boo" from them, "among the stars."

See the grand information contained in the Book of Abraham. He did not receive his instruction by gazing out of those balloon windows, but by the Spirit of the Lord through the divinely appointed means.

It is indeed true, my brother, that if ever we fully comprehend the principle of faith we must keep out of those "theological balloons and ecclesiastical diving bells," and not permit the imagination to become more vivid than the hallowed influence of God's Holy Spirit.

And that the Lord hasten the day when we shall see eye to eye, and there shall abide in us a full, perfect, and intelligent faith, is the prayer of,

Your brother,

FRANCIS EARL.

EDITORS HERALD:—Please give space in your columns for the following, just as it reads, as it is a copy of the original sent to the Searchlight in answer to the editor's articles published in the issues for April and May. He sent us a letter stating that he was obliged to decline inserting our article because of want of room for his own articles. We expected that he would decline to place the other side of the question before his readers, and for this reason we reserved a copy to send to you, that both sides might be presented, at least to those of our brethren that he has sent those sample copies of the Searchlight to. We are a subscriber for his paper, and think justice demands a hearing from us, when he took the liberty to publicly criticise our private letter to him. As we have been denied this right we send this to you, asking that you will please insert it, with this explanation, and oblige,

Your brother and co-worker in the cause of truth,

ELIAS B. PORTER.

LOS ANGELES, California, May 26, 1896.

A REPLY TO MORE ABOUT “WHAT'S IN A NAME?”

To the Readers of the Searchlight; Greeting:—Inasmuch as the editor has publicly criticised my private criticism of his April issue of “What's in a name?” we now claim the right to publicly put the other side of the question before the readers of the Searchlight. Whether we will be granted this right or not remains to be seen, but we know that in justice to the readers both sides of any question should be put before them, so they can judge for themselves. With these remarks we proceed to answer our brother's argument.

First, the brother's statement about cheap books, etc., as found in paragraph 2 of his May number might be all right if the writers of the latter-day work did not quote from any other books or papers but the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Covenants; but as the writers of the different factions of the church are quoting more or less from many other books and histories to prove their rights, we say it is impossible for more than one fourth of the membership of the church to purchase all those books and read up for themselves; which is needful for us all to do, if the writer will not quote a full paragraph when he is quoting from another writer on any subject, but just picks out the part that suits him and leaves the readers to go to the trouble and expense of buying those books, and seeing if the writer quoted right or not. And if they have not got the money to purchase those books they have to accept the writer's interpretation of the subject; and if the writer is wrong both he and those who accept his interpretations will fall into the pit together.

Now to make the above plain to the readers we will quote the paragraph under consideration; first as our brother has it quoted in the April issue of Searchlight, then we will quote it as it reads in the Doctrine and Covenants, beginning where our brother did and quoting it all, and not cutting the heart out of it, as he did. Then you readers can see for yourselves which looks the best. After the brother quotes from the twelfth chapter of Nephi about what the name of the church is, then, in order to confirm his argument he jumps to section 16, paragraph 4, of Doctrine and Covenants and begins quoting as follows:—

Take upon you the name of Christ. . . . Wherefore all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called in the last day. Wherefore if they know not the name by which they are called they cannot have place in the kingdom of my Father.

Now we will quote it as it reads in Doctrine and Covenants:—

Take upon you the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness, and as many as repent, and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved. Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby man can be saved; wherefore, all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called at the last day, wherefore, if they know not the name by which they are called, they cannot have place in the kingdom of my Father.

Now we ask the reader to carefully reread this paragraph, both as it is quoted in the Searchlight of April and as it reads in the Doctrine and Covenants, and see if you do not think the editor did violence to that paragraph in cutting the heart out of it. As to his motive in doing so I ask the reader to leave it with God, as none but him can judge the motives of any of us. So let us not judge in such things “that we be not judged.”

It can easily be seen by any close reader that whatever subject the first and last parts of that paragraph quoted by our brother has bearing on, the middle part has bearing on the same thing, and that the parts he quoted cannot be properly understood when separated from the middle part, for the part he quoted says:—

Wherefore, all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father.

Now we ask the editor, or any other kind reader who may feel so disposed, to show us any place in any of the word of God where it says “Christ” only without “Jesus” is the name given of the Father. The middle of that paragraph tells us what the name given of the Father is, and also tells us how to take upon us that name. Now being baptized in the name of Jesus Christ is being baptized into his church, which Paul says is his body (comparatively speaking), and it is in the act of lawful baptism that we take upon us the name of Christ; and it is the baptized believers that make up the Church of Christ, and not a building we meet to worship in. This being so, if there was no one lawfully baptized in the name of Jesus Christ there would be no Church of Christ on earth; hence if we who have been lawfully baptized into Jesus Christ and thus put on Christ by taking upon us his name and keeping his commandments make up his church, then his church, which is his people, must bear his name which they have taken upon them when baptized in his name, which is Jesus Christ. Christ alone, or Jesus alone, will not do, for it would only be part of his name. “Well, then,” says the objector, “if that be true we must also add the name the ‘Lamb of God’ and all the other names given to the Savior." Yes, my brother, if you can show that those other names were given of the Father, then we will add them, but not until then. Another thing; the Lamb of God is not a name at all, for a lamb is an animal without a name until some one names it; and as God had foreordained that Christ his only begotten Son should shed his blood for the sins of the world, until the time appointed for him to be offered up God had his Son typified by a lamb without blemish, without any respect as to what name the lamb might be called. Therefore the prophet in writing or speaking of Christ as the Redeemer of the world, referred to him as the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," without any respect to any name whatever. And so with all the other so-called names used by the prophets. If you will refine them down you will see that they are not names at all, but are figurative expressions used by the prophets in describing the mission work of Christ. But as it is lawful for all things to have a name, that when they are referred to we might know who or what is spoken of, it was and is needful that the "Lamb of God" should also have a name; and as it is the right of every father to name his sons, just so was it the right of the eternal Father to name his only begotten Son, which right he maintained and sent an angel to announce the birth of his Son and also to give the name which he wanted him called by.

And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favor with God. And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shall call his name Jesus.—Luke 1: 30, 31.

Read in connection with this Acts 4:10-12, and you will get the full name given of the Father.

Another reason why Jesus alone, or Christ alone, would not do to call his church by is that there are many and have been many who have lived in the world who are called Jesus. Now if the church was called the Church of Jesus, if we were asked, "What Jesus?" it would not be so easy to answer as it is now, if that was all of his name, knowing that his name is "Jesus Christ." Again; on the other hand, suppose that he had only been called "Christ" and we called ourselves the "Church of Christ," the question would arise, "Which Christ?" as many false Christs have risen claiming to be the true Messiah. But no one has ever risen to our knowledge that has been called Jesus Christ, but the Son of God, as recorded in his word; hence the wisdom of calling the Church of Christ in his full name. Then there will be no question as to which Jesus or which Christ was meant, as all know there has been but one Jesus Christ.

But the reader may ask if we intend to put up our wisdom against the wisdom of Christ. We answer, No, God forbid. "Well does not Christ say in Nephi, chapter 12, in Book of Mormon, that the church should be called the Church of Christ, and here you have been trying to show that it must be called the church of Jesus Christ?" We answer, If the reader can point out the chapter and verse that says that Christ commanded his people to call his church the "Church of Christ," then we will yield the point, that we are wrong; but not till then. Now, the nearest you can get to it is in the following:—

Ye must take upon you the name of Christ, which is my name.

Now, reader, what is the name of Christ? Is it not Jesus that was given by the angel at his birth—Christ being his parental name, so to speak? Christ knew that the Nephites knew what his full name was, therefore did not repeat it; but said unto them, "Have they not read the Scriptures which says, Ye must take upon you the name of Christ, which is my name?" The above simply shows that he wanted them to understand that he was the Christ spoken of in the Scripture. This is shown by the words "which is my name;" and as they knew what his full name was, there was no need of repeating the name at all. So he gives them to understand they must call the church in his name, which can mean nothing more or less than Jesus Christ. But the Lord foreseeing that there would again arise a dispute about this thing in the last days because of the dullness of the understanding of his people, saw fit to interpret his own word. This interpretation is found in section 16 paragraph 4 of Doctrine and Covenants, which we claim the editor did violence to in quoting.

Now, he admits that the part he quoted has bearing on the church name. Now with this thought in mind I ask the reader to read the third paragraph of Nephi twelfth chapter and then read the fourth paragraph of section 16 of Doctrine and Covenants, and see if paragraph 4 of Doctrine and Covenants section 16 is not an interpretation of paragraph 3 chapter 12 of Nephi.

Yours for truth,

ELIAS B. PORTER.

THE TOBACCO QUESTION.

In Herald for June 17, page 386, in answer to questions concerning the eligibility of an elder who uses tobacco, and who is not enrolled in any of the quorums of the church, to be chosen to preside over a branch or district, also whether such choice would be in harmony with the position the church occupies, we find the following statement:—

The Twelve resolved some years ago that they would not recommend or support anyone for mission work under their appointment, who used tobacco, or was addicted to drink. This rule remains unchanged by them, but governs their actions only.

Did the Herald, in answering this question, lose sight of the important fact that while the rule referred to originated with the Twelve, it was referred to the body in conference assembled, indorsed by a strong or unanimous vote, and thus became the property of the church, and, therefore, defines, so far as it goes, the "position" of the church on this matter?

Now it may be that districts and branches have the right to choose for their presiding officers men who use tobacco; but to affirm that such choice "would not be out of harmony" with the position of the church, is, it seems to me, putting the matter entirely too strong. Let us see: The Lord says in one of the accepted revelations of the church, given in 1833, that

Tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill.—D. C. 86: 1.

In 1837, in an accepted revelation given "to the Elders of the Church," we find the following:—

Avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example.—D. C. 119: 3.

Now, to be brief, in the face of all the above, from the church and from God, can we choose men who are addicted to the use of tobacco and who will not sacrifice the habit for the good of the church, word of God, or anything else, to preside over districts and branches, and at the same time be consistent, and in harmony with the position of the church? I think not.

Sr. Nantes appealed against the action of the district president and the Tilbury branch. R. C. Evans, John McKenzie, and John Shields were appointed a committee to hear said appeal. George Green was sustained district president, R. Coburn vice president and secretary, George Hampshire treasurer, and J. H. Tyrrell Bishop's agent. Brn. S. Brown and Leverton appointed last fall as a committee to select suitable hymns for tent recommended that the Saints purchase the Hymnal from the Board of Publication. Recommendation adopted and committee discharged. The committee appointed on the appeal of Sr. Nantes found that the branch had acted illegally and the district president had done wrong in permitting it to do so, and they recommended that both apologize to the sister for the same. The above was received and the recommendation adopted by adding that they be given one month to do so, and failing to do so, that the whole matter be turned over to the president of the mission to deal with. The Wilkesport branch was disorganized and the members instructed to apply to the district secretary for letters to join other branches. Five were baptized and two others confirmed that had previously been baptized. Preaching by R. C. Evans, John Shields, and J. H. Lake in the hall, and in Tecumseh Park by Arthur Leverton and Samuel Brown. The amount of $18.64 was collected for expenses and paid over to the district treasurer. The sisters' aid society of the branch provided a supper on Saturday evening and made $24.50 towards their church fund. Adjourned to meet in Ridgetown, October 3 and 4, 1896.

Bishop's agent's report showed amount received $175.15; amount paid out $181; leaving balance due agent of $5.85. Election of officers for ensuing term resulted as follows: R. Archibald president, Ivor Davies vice president, J. G. Smith secretary. Arrangements were completed for the prosecution of tent work in the district, same being in charge of A. D. Greer and M. H. Bond, together with district president. Saturday evening the district Sunday school association gave a musical and literary concert, a large and appreciative audience being present. Preaching by Elders R. Archibald and M. H. Bond. The conference was one of the most pleasant and successful yet held by the district, the presense of the good Spirit being felt in a marked degree in each session.

Sunday School Associations.

FREMONT.

Convened at Farm Creek, Iowa, June 5, 1896, at ten a. m. Reports of the schools of the district, teachers' reports, and the treasury report were read and accepted. It was voted that we take proper steps to financially sustain the circular work of the district and that the expenses be apportioned as the constitution prescribes. Decided by vote that we hold our next convention one day previous and at the place of the next quarterly conference. The remaining part of the time was spent in an intermediate class drill by Sr. Maude McClenahan, followed by criticisms on the work and a blackboard outline of the work of teaching. The remaining reports of schools and teachers were read. A Sunday school newspaper, entitled, "Zion's Sunday School News," was read by its editors, Emma Hougas and Blanche Andrews, and followed by general discussion and questions led by H. F. Durfey. The paper was a new feature in our convention work and was found to be both interesting and instructive. An illustrated talk on "The prepared and the unprepared teacher," was given by Joseph Roberts. This was followed by discussion and comments and a motion that Bro. Roberts prepare his work and send it to the Sunday School Department in the Herold. Friday, eight p. m., Temperance program. The following are the principal features: Paper, "Social evils of intemperance," Sr. M. E. Pace. Recitation, Blanche Andrews. Essay and illustrations, "Narcotics and the human system," Charles Fry. Chalk talk, T. A. Hougas. Quartet, "King Bibler's Army."

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—A new conference year with its missionaries in the field and their families at home to be cared for is one of the present assured facts. So also is it that he who honors the law honors also the Lawgiver. Let us, then, as Saints of the Giver of the law, manifest our love to him and his Son in that we freely offer our tithes and offerings as he has directed in his law, thus doing our duty and continuing to hold honorable place as a district in helping the poor and spreading the word of truth that all may be made free and we be justified as the children of wisdom. If we love God let us do the will of God.

All moneys, checks, or orders promptly receipted for; stock or produce taken if desired. Present address, No. 2,227 Spruce Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

REUNION NOTICES.

The reunion of the Massachusetts district will be held at Poquonnock, Connecticut, commencing August 8, 1896, in a beautiful grove situated at the mouth of a river running into Long Island Sound, thus affording both fresh and salt water privileges, including opportunities for fishing, boating, and bathing. There will be a commissary on the grounds, also chances for lodging at convenient distances for those who do not wish to tent. There will be straw for bedding and lumber for flooring for the tents, if such be desired. The grove is in sight of the main line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, between Boston, Providence, and New York. A special invitation is offered to the Saints of the Philadelphia district to come and join with us. Those from Philadelphia district can take the boat from New York to New London, fare $1. From there take train to Poquonnock station. Mileage tickets can be used going both ways by rail from Boston, Providence, and New York.

MARRIED.

MOORE—EDWARDS.—June 7, 1896, Fred W. Moore to Mary Edwards, at the home of the bride's father, Cornelius Edwards, at Zonker, near Mountain Grove, Missouri, by W. C. Catter.

DIED.

PIDDINGTON.—Sr. Mary Piddington, at her home in Garner Township, near Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 8, 1896. She was born in Saint Brides, South Wales. She was married to Evan Evans in 1835, who was an elder in the Old Church. She united with the church in Wales in 1846. Together they crossed the ocean with the company that came over with Captain Dan Jones. Came to Council Bluffs with the handcart company in 1856. Becoming dissatisfied with the way things were going they remained in Iowa near Council Bluffs until her death. After over thirty years of married life her husband was called to the other side of the mystic river. There were nine children born to them. But three sons are still living. In 1866 she was married to Mr. Piddington, who preceded her to the other shore a few years ago. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church by her son, John Evans. She bore a faithful testimony to the work of God up to her death. The funeral was from the house of her son, Joseph Evans. The sermon was by Elder F. A. Smith to a large gathering of relatives, friends, and neighbors, who had gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to one who was known far and near as a faithful wife and mother, a true Latter Day Saint who never tired of testifying to the truth of the God she loved and his work. Thus we laid to rest another one of the faithful in a nice little private burying ground overlooking the home where she had long lived, to await the summons from on high to come forth. Full of years and good deeds, she left for the rest of the righteous.

MOORE.—David C. Moore was born at Whitesand, Mississippi, July 10, 1836; baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ June 20, 1881, by George Montague; died June 17, 1896, leaving to mourn his departure, wife, two sons, and two daughters. He lived and died a true believer in the latter-day work.

CHAMBERS.—Eliza Chambers was born May 8, 1812, in the State of New Jersey. Married to Thomas Chambers November 9, 1843. Of this union were born two daughters and one son. She died June 14, 1896, at the home of her daughter, Sr. J. B. Wayt, with whom she has lived for two and one half years. She left one son and one daughter, ten grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren to mourn their loss. Funeral sermon by Elder G. T. Griffiths to a large concourse of people. She was a member of the M. E. Church.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., L. Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,
P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the ange's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

HETERODOX BAPTIST PROFESSORS.

THE Baptist Church is threatened with some difficulties over the teachings of two of its prominent educational leaders. Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson, the well-known Baptist clergyman of Chicago, has opened an attack upon Dr. W. R. Harper, President of Chicago University, a Baptist institution. Dr. Henson objects to Dr. Harper on the ground "that he as the head of a distinctly evangelical institution does not represent the views of the men who put him there. Every man," says Dr. Henson, "has a right to his own ideas, but Dr. Harper has no right to teach agnosticism when parents all over the country, who send their children to his school, expect them to be reared in the old-fashioned Baptist faith as taught in the Bible." These criticisms are based on Dr. Harper's recent lectures and writings on the inspiration and interpretation of the Bible. He has been accused in other quarters recently of a strong leaning toward the views of what are known as the Higher Critics. A controversy has also arisen over the views expressed by Prof. W. H. Whitsitt, President of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Kentucky, in an article on "Baptists" in one of the cyclopedias of the day. In this article Professor Whitsitt says that prior to the year 1641, the Baptists of England were in the practice of sprinkling and pouring for baptism; that Roger Williams was sprinkled and immersed; that a certain Mark Lucar introduced immersion in this country, and that the First Baptist Church of Providence, Rhode Island, dates back to the eighteenth century instead of the seventeenth century. A number of Baptist writers have disputed these statements. Dr. Whitsitt himself explains and defends his position in the columns of The Examiner (Baptist, New York). He says:—

"During the autumn of 1877, shortly after I had been put in charge of the School of Church History at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, in preparing my lectures on Baptist history, I made the discovery that, prior to the year 1641, our Baptist people in England were in the practice of sprinkling and pouring for baptism. I kept it to myself until the year 1880, when I had the happiness to spend my summer vacation at the British Museum. There I assured myself, largely by researches among King George's pamphlets, that my discovery was genuine, and established it by many irrefragable proofs from contemporary documents.

"Upon my return to New York, in September, 1880, I felt so sure of my ground that I made known my discovery in the columns of The Independent. It was received with much disapproval and sneers from many quarters. Zion's Advocate, of Portland, Maine, and The Standard, of Chicago, will be found, upon consulting their files, to have given special attention to the subject. Among others, I was also engaged with Rev. Henry Martyn Dexter, D. D., whom I criticized because he had recently asserted in The Congregationalist that Roger Williams was immersed by Ezekiel Holliman, and pointed out to him that it was entirely probable that Mr. Williams had been sprinkled by Holliman. Apparently Dr. Dexter was interested by my explanation and proofs, for he shortly found his way to the British Museum, where he also convinced himself that my view was correct and my citations authentic. As a fruit of these researches he issued, near the close of 1881, more than a twelvemonth after my discovery had been declared in The Independent, the well-known volume entitled 'John Smyth, the se-Baptist,' wherein he adopted my thesis, defended it by many citations, and entirely ignored my discovery as set forth in The Independent.

"My discovery was not only embraced by such an eminent authority as Dr. Dexter, but it has likewise been accepted by Baptist historians of note, who have written for the public since it was made known. In his 'History of the Baptist Churches in the United States,' Dr. Newman says of the baptism of John Smyth: 'It is almost certain that the rite was administered by affusion and not by immersion. The same is conceded of Spillsbury's church, organized in London on the 12th of September, 1633 (History, p. 80). It is granted, he says, that 'contemporary testimony is unanimous in favor of the view that immersion was practiced by Roger Williams,' but Dr. Newman shows admirable discretion in omitting to cite the passages."

In an editorial note on the subject, The Journal and Messenger (Baptist, Cincinnati) says that Dr. Whitsitt has been teaching this same theory for fifteen years, and it adds:—

"We do not regret the demolition of the 'church succession' nonsense, but we cannot sympathize with the burning of the house to get the rats out of it. True, the baptism of Williams is not the cornerstone of Baptist faith. It would not shake their confidence in the correctness of their position, if it could be demonstrated that baptism was never administered between the age of the apostles and the middle of the seventeenth century. They would go on practicing baptism, even if Dr. Whitsitt's theory concerning Williams could be demonstrated. They plant themselves on the New Testament, and, without fear of successful contradiction, declare that the teaching of the sacred book is the baptism in water of a believer in Christ as his personal Savior. And yet, they as firmly believe that Roger Williams was actually baptized in water at the hands of Ezekiel Holliman, also that as the baptism administered by Holliman was as scripturally valid as it would have been had it been administered by the Archbishop of Canterbury."

After referring to the statements made in the article on "Baptists," The Standard (Baptist, Chicago) says:—

"Dr. King, of Providence, Dr. Christian, and others, of Louisville, and, in fact, nearly everybody who has appeared in print on this subject, have denied these statements, and ask for the proofs which Dr. Whitsitt claims to have found in certain documents at the British Museum. Dr. Whitsitt defends himself against the charge that he borrowed from Dr. H. M. Dexter, the author of well-known works upon some of these topics. The discussion is not a new one; some of the questions received much attention sixteen years ago, when Dr. Dexter published his book, 'The Congregationalism of the Last Three Hundred Years.' We called attention at that time to several erroneous statements in that book, especially in reference to John Smyth, the 'se-Baptist.' Certainly if Dr. Whitsitt can throw new light upon these vexed questions by the aid of documents hitherto inaccessible, he will receive the gratitude of the denomination."

In an editorial on the subject The Christian Evangelist (Disciples, St. Louis) says:—

"It will probably puzzle the uninitiated in Baptist ecclesiology to understand this hue and cry over so harmless a thing as an expressed opinion concerning the form of a man's baptism who lived in the seventeenth century. Suppose Roger Williams was sprinkled, and that Continental and English Baptists did not practice exclusive immersion up to 1639—what of it? Much in every way to the high church dogmatism of Baptist Israel. If R. Williams submitted to affusion, and immersion was not universal among Baptists in those days, what becomes of the pet fiction of the Baptist imagination that there has been an unbroken succession of Baptist churches from the year 30 to the present hour, and the related priestly figment that immersion administered by a succession of Baptist preachers is the only valid baptism? This sacerdotal anti-Christian dogma is dear to the hearts of many Southern Baptists, and men of the ecclesiastic type do not surrender theories to save men, but they surrender men to save theories."—Literary Digest, May 23, 1896.

WHICH IS YOUR WAY?

The man who is satisfied to let somebody else do his thinking for him will read but one or two papers. He will gulp down what the editor of his party paper tells him, go to the polls and vote the party ticket, and then retire within himself, quite sure that he has done his duty. But the man who wants to know the "other side" and to be able to make up his mind for himself will not be content with this plan, least of all during a great political campaign like the present. He will read PUBLIC OPINION (published at New York), get all sides of every important public question, political, social, religious, educational, and others. And then he will form his own conclusions and act upon them. Specimen copy free. $2.50 per year. Special rate for the campaign three months, for 50 cents.

"Handling the Immigrant" is the title of an article by Helen M. Sweeney, in the July number of The Catholic World Magazine. Many excellent engravings illustrate the paper. There also appears an interesting account of "A Chinese Holy Island," by T. H. Houston. The article is illustrated.

LAMONI, IOWA, JULY 8, 1896.

BY FAITH.

WE are inclined to think that faith is made to do duty in some respects for more than it was intended to do.

At the risk of drawing a fire of criticism we venture a few comments, using Paul's statement to the Hebrews, 11: 1, as the basis for examination.

This passage in the King James' version is given thus:—

Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

This rendering has evidently misled some; and it is possible that what has tended to mislead them has also been the foundation for more or less of the dissertation we have had on the subject itself.

Paul, in writing to the Romans, wrote of hope in almost a similar vein of thought.

For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

This evidently means that through the exercise of the influences of desire and expectation, man abides in constancy, fidelity, and carefulness of life with intent to be worthy to receive what is promised when the time of probation and trial is ended. But, having said so much, the apostle argues, correctly too, that when a man already sees, or possesses, what he has hoped for, then he is no longer moved by hope, but realizes what he has hoped for; the word "it" being understood to attach to the sentence, "Why doth he yet hope for;" in reference to the thing hoped for.

Apply similar reasoning to the text; "Faith is the substance of things hoped for;" and we have a similar conclusion; If a man secures the substance of that which he has hoped for, then the office work of faith has ceased, and faith has ended in knowledge. The translation by the Seer helps us out of this difficulty, and some others, we think. It is rendered thus:—

Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

To us this is by far the better rendering, for the reason that a consciousness of the actuality, the absolute realization of what is hoped for, still not seen; is possible, without the substance being present with us; and this is evidently what is meant in the second clause of the sentence, "the evidence of things not seen."

For many years now, an apparently popular idea, gathered possibly, from the imperfect text in the King James' Version, has been that faith stands for power, force to do and accomplish, with God as it is apparently intended by the apostle to teach that it does with man. This is to us the misleading element too frequently introduced into the discussion of faith as an element, a principle of power, an attribute attaching unto, or inhering in man; and is referable to a mistake in reasoning on the word "substance" found in the first verse; which reasoning is discoverably faulty when the word assurance is used.

The effort of the apostle in writing to the Hebrews, as stated in this eleventh chapter, was to convey to the minds of those to whom he was writing the nature, use, and benefit to man of the faculty, principle, or attribute of faith. And pursuing the theme, he assumes first, that "by it the elders obtained a good report." The effect of this statement is to convey to the reader the idea that by the exercise of faith, the elders in their ministry so wrought as to secure from those among whom their work was carried on a "good report," of work done under great difficulties, dangers by sea and land, wrought faithfully, sincerely, and well, attested by divine ministrations and occurrences attributable to miraculous powers only.

In the third verse of the chapter the apostle prefaces a long list of things wrought by different ones, or in their behalf, by a statement clearly intended to account for the comprehension of himself and his brethren of the means by which the worlds were brought into existence:—

Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

There is nothing in this passage that, rightly read, warrants the conclusion that Paul meant to write that the worlds were made through or by the existence and exercise of faith in himself on the part of God. He affirms quite differently, that the "worlds were framed by the word of God."

This agrees with the statements made in Genesis concerning the creation:—

And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

This is the formula of statement used at the relation of each creative stage. It was the word of God; the Divine mandate of the one, all-powerful; in whom was vested not only supreme wisdom, but self-existent will and force. Paul evidently accepted this record of what was done by God through the exercise of creative energy; but, not being able to demonstrate from his finite conception of the things that are seen, how they could have resulted from a condition of things which were not apparent, sums up his conclusion in accord with his convictions, accepting the too plain certainty that human wisdom was not equal in itself to understand this great truth; and writes that it is "through faith," confidence, assurance, that we can and do understand; not how, but that "the worlds were framed by the word of God."

The Psalmist, writing on the same topic, wrote thus:—

By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth.—Ps. 33: 6.

Peter understood it in the same way:—

That by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water.—2 Peter 3: 5.

Jeremiah was of the opinion that God made the earth by reason of power resident in himself, for he writes of it thus:—

He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and he hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.—Jer. 51: 15. (See also 51: 12.)

There can be no question but what God has confidence in himself, has absolute assurance that in himself rests all wisdom and all power; but adopting Paul's reasoning concerning hope, and applying it to faith, we may safely conclude that God having infinite knowledge of himself, and the attributes with which man invests him, love, wisdom, will power, does not, indeed cannot exercise faith as an attribute, in the sense that man, the finite man may, can, and must.

Jesus said, "Have faith in God."—Mark 11: 22.

He could hardly have said to God, Have faith in thyself.

Two kinds of faith are named by the apostle. One is found in Romans 8: 17:—

So faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

The other is referred to in 1 Corinthians 12: 9 as a gift of God to the believer; and is named as one of the communicable manifestations, or gifts by which the Spirit reveals, or confirms the conviction that Jesus is the Christ.

It cannot be in the sense of either of these texts that God has, or exercises faith; for man does not preach to God his own word to beget faith in himself; nor does God need the gift of faith to show to him that Jesus is the Christ. This he knows, and it is his prerogative to bear witness to man of the truth thus known to him.

Faith, as we understand it, is an attribute, or quality of the finite man, and inheres in him, because by reason of his environments man cannot exercise perfected knowledge in the flesh, hence, is called upon to accept many things in the sphere in which he moves as a finite being by trust, by confidence, by assurance; not seeing, but having confidence in the evidence presented, the veracity of the persons, things, circumstances, and conditions that testify to him of that upon which he is to exercise his faith. It is an attribute, that can attach to a finite, an unknowing condition only. It is so treated of all through the New Testament Scriptures; and is the almost saving principle insisted upon in connection with Christ, as the Savior of men, in the Book of Mormon. "Except ye have faith in the Son of God ye cannot be saved;" is the grand exhortation. Nor is this used in the sense that it inheres in man as a self-resident power to be self-exercised at will. But is always made to depend for its results upon the power of God.

Faith, as an inherent force, equivalent to the accomplishment of all that God did, all that Christ did, and all that it is promised man he will do for him, cannot rest in God; for the reason that he knows, past depending on an assurance, a confident trust on evidence, that in himself lies the control of all forces, the right to exercise all the powers of heaven, earth, air, water; the visible and invisible potencies of all laws. He knew he had but to speak, and orderly agencies would engage to reduce the elements from a chaotic, disordered condition, to the forms and conditions of a world created in beauty, goodness, majesty, and grandeur, fitted for the abode of man, whom God had created "a little lower than the angels."

Even in man when faith has become perfected into knowledge, faith ceases; the man knows; trust, confidence in evidences, have passed; he sees, and neither hopes for, nor exercises faith; he has become conscious of, and knows.

This is to us the really tangible elucidation of faith; other things seem to be but merely speculative, a play of texts to cover a defective basis of argument.

A HEALTHFUL SIGN.

THE Enquirer, published at Provo, Utah, has in its issue for May 26 an editorial account of the Sunday services May 24, held in the Tabernacle at Provo. From this account we quote:—

Elder J. M. Tanner was the next speaker. He had observed a remarkable activity in missionary work of late, probably more activity than ever before in the history of the church. It means a great deal for men to break away from kindred ties and go to the world on missions. It is impossible for our elders to go abroad without also gaining some knowledge. While they go away to convert others, they are themselves converted to many of the virtues of the world. Speaker had seen such virtues as he hoped Zion might possess. For instance, when he observed here at home five thousand people in a city like Provo saying that the liquor traffic could not be put down, and on the other hand where he had observed a city in Massachusetts of more than seventy-five thousand inhabitants, where no grog shops existed, and other cities of a like character, with five thousand people and more without a police patrol, he had said in his heart would that we could be converted here to such virtues in the world.

Speaker depicted the morbid curiosity on the part of some elders to see the inner life of large cities when abroad. A knowledge of sin is not a good thing, for it is liable to beget sin. There are things, there in the world, which it is not good for our young men to learn.

At home it is easy to be good, for the support of a public's gaze is great. In the world a man has no such support; there he stands alone on their own resources, and God's help.

A few years ago the elders taught gathering, but now it seems to be the policy to strengthen the branches in the missions, and by so doing, the gospel has wonderfully spread. At the same time the Saints abroad are grounded in the faith before they come to Zion. Soon we shall have powerful branches in the Southern States and in other missions where the Saints will have their churches and Sunday schools.

It has been the observation of the speaker, that the world is after authority. About the only other church that makes a pretension of authority is the Catholic Church, and the Catholics to-day are much greater propagandists than Protestants. The Latter Day Saints prove their authority is direct from heaven, and their work in the mission field is marvelous. All successful elders tell boldly that they are commissioned of God, through the Prophet Joseph Smith.

A few points in this statement of Elder Tanner are worth attention. 1. The activity in missionary work. 2. The acknowledgment, that there were virtues in the world that the "Zion" of Utah ought to possess. 3. The improper curiosity of missionaries abroad to sound the inner life of the large cities. 4. The decadence of the teaching of gathering to the valleys.

1. Referring to these in their order. Whence arises the missionary spirit? What is its inciting cause at this period?

It is a possible thing to date the rising of this missionary spirit to the taking away of the ban of the plural marriage dogma, which ruled over the Utah Church like a nightmare from 1846 to the manifesto abandoning it. And to find the inciting cause to such activity at the present period, especially in the United States to the two causes; first, to the necessity of making effort to meet the propagandizing work of the Reorganized Church; second, to the enlarged freedom for the elders resulting from the abandonment of polygamy.

2. It is rather an awkward confession that Elder Tanner makes in the statement that the city of Provo, though a city of five thousand inhabitants, could not put down the liquor traffic; while a city in Massachusetts of fifteen times the size could. That was a home thrust, and we are pleased that Elder Tanner had the courage to make it. Of all people under the heavens that ought to shun the vices attendant upon the traffic in and drinking of intoxicating beverages, Latter Day Saints of every shade of differing beliefs should be first and foremost; for the simplest of all reasons that they have been told by the voice of inspiration that "no drunkard shall inherit eternal life." He that is a drunkard and he that makes men to be drunkards must take their part in the pit alike. There is no escape from the edict.

Who is to blame for the existence of liquor shops in Provo? Is the city a city of the Saints? The ruling classes belong to the Utah Mormon Church, and we presume hold the control of municipal affairs, and could, if they would, enforce a cessation of the traffic. When, where, and whence originated the Utah saloons? Are they to be traced to Gentile influences alone? We confess we should be pleased to know.

In all the places where the Reorganized Church holds the control no liquor is sold by virtue of law. In all places the members of the Reorganized Church are a sober people, opposed to the sale of liquors as beverages, and always refusing their consent to the licensing of the traffic. Why? Because to them drunkenness means depravity, and depravity means ruin, physical, mental, moral ruin, degradation, and destruction. Hence they oppose it, steadily and always.

Temperance, the tone of society against drinking has been steadily advancing in the world, and if our Utah neighbors have been unmindful of the fact it is time they were made acquainted with the fact. Elder Tanner did well to tell his people that the Gentiles had some virtues Saints might emulate.

3. We should hope that the reference of Elder Tanner to the disposition of the elder abroad on missionary work having a morbid desire to make personal acquaintance with the inner and evil life of the large cities, would be applicable to the few, not the many; and pass it by with the thought that the elder did well to reprove such curiosity if it exists.

4. The abandonment of the policy of gathering suggested by Elder Tanner, as being a change from old time methods is fairly significant, and may be productive of a better spiritual life and development.

Taking it altogether we regard Elder Tanner's remarks, as reported, as being a good and hopeful sign.

THE following is sent us by Bro. L. R. Devore, under date of May 1, just two months on the way.

It is not practicable for us to state who the missionary referred to is; there having been several, among whom we remember, C. W. Wandall, — Hanks (Reuben we think), Addison Pratt, and an elder by the name of Lincoln, as well as Benjamin Grouard. Elder Hanks died at sea, Elder Lincoln, on shipboard near San Francisco, on his return to America, Benjamin Grouard near Santa Ana, California, within a few years past. However, the name may be presented later on. The fact remains that from the islands afar off comes a voice of testimony to the position taken by the Reorganized Church that the succession of the church was understood by many at the time of the Prophet's death. We give the letter as Bro. Devore sent it, he writing that he had received it from Bro. Hubert Case, and sends it "without change, or addition."

April 27, 1896.

To My Beloved Brother Joseph, and All the Brethren in America; Greeting:—

I, Tehopea, write this word because great contention is rising at this time between the Reorganized Church and the Church of Utah. I will clearly make known the teachings of one missionary, — by name. I am able to do this because his own writings, signed with his own name are in my hands.

This was his teaching of the matters of the church before Joseph's death, and of his (Joseph's) youth:—

"Joseph was born December 23, 1805, in the village of Sharon. In the year 1815 he removed to another village, Palmyra, where he dwelt four years. He then went to a farm near Manchester (1819), where he dwelt until the beginning of the work of the church."

This missionary, —, also made known unto us that Joseph, the father, laid his hands on his son Joseph, before two witnesses, and afterward made known to the church that this son was to be their prophet, and that he should lead the Church of God.

He also made known that a temple of God was builded at Nauvoo, which was a city of Zion until Christ should come. — also said that he saw the ground dedicated, and the corner stone laid for the temple in Nauvoo.

This missionary was sent by Brigham Young in the year 1846 I think, but it is long ago. He remained until about 1851.

Three others, James Brown, Jonathan —, —, also taught these things and they too were sent by Brigham Young.

I, Tehopea, talked with one Andrew Jensen, who came here this year, and rebutted his speeches by telling him these things. I made known to him that — did not teach as he, Andrew, did; neither did Grouard, and the three before mentioned.

He, Andrew, said that Joseph, the father, had dwelt in Utah, and had dedicated the ground for the temple there. He also said that Grouard was sent by Brigham Young, which we knew to be a very great falsehood.

And now I am well pleased that our brother Hubert and his wife Alice are dwelling among us, to lead us in truth and good works. I remain in the Reorganized Church,

Your brother in love,

TEHOPEA.

It is curious that Elder Andrew Jensen should take advantage of the simple nature of the native islander in such a thing as stating that Joseph Smith, the elder, should have gone to Utah and laid the foundation of a temple there, when it is such a notoriously well-known fact that Joseph Smith died in 1844, long before the Salt Lake Basin was known as a rallying spot for the driven and persecuted people. What benefit could Elder Jensen have hoped to receive from such a statement? It is to be hoped that Bro. Tehopea has misunderstood Elder Jensen.

BRO. JOHN SMITH, of Summit City, Missouri, now in England, sends us a copy of the Manchester Guardian, for June 18, from which we clip a portion marked by Bro. John; being a part of the speech of Rev. J. Thomas, of Liverpool, moderator presiding at an association of Baptist churches, held at Jubilee Drive, Liverpool, June 17. Mr. Thomas said:—

The time was opportune to touch on "The springs of Christian power." There was now too much inclination to weaken these, and it was almost impossible to regard with patience the poor, beggarly attenuations of God's truth that passed current amongst many who called themselves Christian thinkers. To identify Christianity with a moral code, however beautiful that might be, and however complete—if a moral code could be complete—was to deny the very life and essence of the Christian religion and make it as impotent as Paganism. Moral grit and power and victory could no more be made out of a mere programme of services than could an army of fighting men out of a valley of dry bones. Christian ethics could not possibly be separated from the infinite life that filled them. The Church of Christ must guard itself with all the holy resources at its disposal against being reduced to a state of mere mechanical degradation and poverty. To effect that it must go to the hiding place of real power and of eternal life, where sound moral enthusiasm was given men. The fact was that the power of the third person in the Trinity was forgotten, and Christian thought neglected to find any place for the Holy Spirit in its general scheme of Christianity. The power of the Spirit was now but inadequately realized. He longed to see the day when a true and full conception of the Holy Spirit and his power would find as necessary and vital a place in the belief in the unity of the Godhead as had been found for the Father and the Son. The splendid apostolic missionary church that followed the day of Pentecost knew the true power of the Spirit and shook the earth with it. That was not so now, and if any man was satisfied with the present work of the Christian Church, he was sorry for that man. The Apostle Paul, he believed, had done more than all the present day churches did for true Christianity. That was because the apostle went in the power the churches now lacked, for it must be remembered that the spiritual power they were capable of receiving was proportionate to their content and to the intensity of their faith. The power of the Holy Ghost would not come upon either churches or individuals until they embraced with a living faith all the wondrous revelation of God in Jesus Christ. (Applause.) The meeting afterwards adjourned until this morning.

GRACELAND.

PROF. T. J. FITZPATRICK, Prof. J. T. Pence, and Prof. J. A. Gunsolley, will own lots in Graceland, near the College. Bro. James Kelley, of Macedonia; Bro. G. J. Waller, of Honolulu, and Sr. M. H. Crowson, of Alton, Illinois, are all purchasers of lots in Graceland. Others are negotiating for them.

The citizens of Decatur County, are all friendly to the effort being made at Lamoni. If we had a man or two like Rockefeller, for an endowment of a few thousands it would help us wonderfully. The walls are up and the roof is being put on.

A SCANDINAVIAN PAPER.

"SANDHEDEN'S BANNER" AGAIN.

OUR readers, especially the Scandinavian Saints, will remember that some years ago a monthly publication, Sandheden's Banner, was issued by the Herald Office, edited by Bro. Peter Anderson, for the Danish, Norwegian, and Swedish Saints. The paper was not financially supported, however, and the Board of Publication was obliged to drop it from the list of publications. The failure to support it caused it to become a source of loss to the office, a drain upon its limited resources that, after a time, it was found necessary to stop; hence Sandheden's Banner was suspended; not, however, until after an earnest effort had been made to continue it, and it became evident that there was not sufficient interest in the paper to meet the expense of its issue.

Some of the Danish and Norwegian and Swedish Saints were much interested in it however and were sorely disappointed when the publication was discontinued. The following letter addressed to President Joseph Smith, is from one of our Danish sisters and, as our readers will see, is an earnest appeal for the revival of Sandheden's Banner:—

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, May 21.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Brother Smith:—You will please excuse me for breaking over the rules and addressing you personally. I have been impressed many times to write something concerning the long felt want of choice literature for those of our Scandinavian sisters and brothers to read who cannot read the English. I do think it a pity they must be left without anything good to read while we are blessed every week with an abundance of good things, helping us to more fully develop our spiritual as well as temporal natures. It would seem like parting with a tried and true friend to part with either the Herald, Ensign, or Autumn Leaves. There could not be better literature in the world than our church publications.

I went down to see a poor sick sister the other day and she said with tears streaming down her face, "Oh, if I only had my Truth's Banner to read in the long hours! God knows I for one paid for it right along until the publication stopped; then it was as though a light had gone out and we began to wander about in the wilderness. The Lutherans furnished us plenty of their best literature, but there was something lacking in it after all; and when you tell me about all the good things you have to read in the English, it fills my soul with a tender longing for God's Scandinavian children to be remembered in like manner, if He is no respecter of persons as the good books say."

I told the sister how I had been impressed to write; but it takes money as well as good wishes to accomplish great things. She said a dime was all the cash she had in the world. "Take it," she said, "and may God help you to put more with it."

I would ask in Jesus' name that every Scandinavian in the church, man or woman, rich or poor, will lend a helping hand in this worthy enterprise, or else have their own papers stopped for six months, just to find out what a lonely part their Scandinavian friends are playing in life's great theater.

Please be generous, dear Saints, in this matter, as you know what a comfort our reading is to us. Why could not every branch president find out just how many copies are needed and report, thus avoiding unnecessary expenses to begin with? Why could not Bro. Peter Anderson translate some of our English into the Danish language—take just the cream; but as it is all cream, take part of it? The voyage of the Evanelia would prove interesting, I am sure.

Hoping you will approve of this plan, and sending my all as the widow did, I will patiently await the results, knowing that if every brother and sister will do as Sister — and I have done, it will prove another success for the Master's cause.

I shall try to send more if the good work goes on. I know what a few words of encouragement mean from your pen, in this as well as any other cause, so with God's work at heart, and willing to be set right if acting out of my place, I await your pleasure.

SISTER HELENA STERRETT.

The Board of Publication desires to meet every proper demand for church literature and stands ready always to supply such demands as rapidly as means are furnished. It believes that the Scandinavian brethren and sisters should have a publication in their own language and that it could be sustained and made a power for good, if proper interest was manifested in the movement. It has decided that another opportunity should be given them in that respect and therefore presents the following proposition: Sandheden's Banner will be revived and issued monthly at a cost of fifty (50) cents per year to each subscriber, provided enough subscribers are obtained to justify the reviving of the paper.

Now is the opportunity and all those who are interested are requested to go to work in its behalf and send in subscriptions. The Board awaits the action of all whom it may concern, suggesting that all who can will obtain subscribers.

Remember the terms: Fifty cents per year, payable in advance. Address all orders to the Business Manager of the Herald Office, Bro. Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa.

The Board will also be glad to issue the paper weekly when subscriptions shall justify the change from a monthly to a weekly issue.

Should the subscriptions not be sufficient to justify the publication, money will be refunded or credited to HERALD or book accounts.

THE following from the Chicago Tribune of July 1 is interesting in connection with the statements of leading prelates that the policy of the Roman Catholic church is to favor personal political freedom of action. We republish the item for what it may be worth:—

Montreal, Que., June 30.—The Liberals of the District of Quebec are so incensed over the interference of the clergy on behalf of Sir Charles Tupper's candidates that they have decided to send a deputation to Rome with a petition to the Pope, praying that measures be taken to put an end to the scandals and injury to religion caused by the attempt of the hierarchy and priesthood to intimidate the Catholic electorate. The Liberal leaders are in possession of a number of private letters written to parish priests in this district by their ecclesiastical superiors instructing them to take an aggressive stand against the Liberal candidates and authorizing them to warn their parishioners that it would be a mortal sin to vote for such representatives.

The late Canadian election turned largely on the Manitoba school question, the Liberal party advocating that the public schools be entirely free from sectarian influence or control.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOSEPH WARD, Cato, Arkansas, June 27:—

I am preaching in the same church where I met J. H. Lawson the Christian evangelist in debate last winter; large crowds come out to hear. Three will be baptized this afternoon and many more very near the kingdom. Lawson and I will meet at Shady Grove church, Falkner County, the 27th of July, to hold a six-days debate on church propositions. I am expecting a large crowd in attendance and I ask to be remembered while defending the truth.

CORRECTION.—Bro. Thomas Street, Midway, Utah, calls attention to an error in the statement of Queen Victoria's age, occurring on page 371, HERALD number 24, for June 10:—

Being born May 24, 1819, she would be seventy-seven last May, hence in her seventy eighth year instead of the seventy-ninth.

We thank Bro. Street for calling attention to the error.

Bro. and Sr. Devore expected to leave Papeete, Tahiti, June 12, for home. They are likely in California, at present writing—June 30—enjoying the welcome of Saints who have watched and prayed for their success in the far-off isles. At the close of Bro. Devore's letter he writes:—

PAPEETE, May 5, '96.

I spoke twice last Sunday, the 3d; once in native, and once in English; baptized five; blessed one child; confirmed three; so you see they are still coming. I know of nineteen baptized during and since our General Conference. Bro. Case writes: "I am having great liberty in the native." The Mormons are expecting a reinforcement from Utah soon. Bro. Case needs help. We hope conference appointed some one or more to come at once.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A CLIPPING from a Cleveland, Ohio, paper sent us shows that Bro. J. W. Burgett has been preaching in the public square of that city. The paper makes favorable comment on his work and presents the position of the Reorganization in contrast with that of the Utah Church.

Brn. F. M. Cooper and J. A. Grant have notices in the Sunday Herald, and News, Port Huron, Michigan, for June 20, asserting a distinction between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Mormon Church, and throwing down the gage of discussion to those Utah elders who have been and are laboring in that part of Michigan. It is no use, Brn. Cooper and Grant, those elders from Utah, are instructed not to discuss with the "Josephites;" hence will not choose to do what they are told not to do.

Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser, at Sharon, Pennsylvania, wrote June 29, announcing the baptism of "five more making eleven in all," of late.

Bro. Fred A. Smith reports the baptism of four at Omaha, Nebraska, the 28th ult.

We are informed that some await announcement of dates of the coming Nauvoo reunion, that preparations may be made to attend. We suppose the committee will publish announcement at an early day.

Bro. G. J. Waller, writing under date of June 9, reports the baptism of eight native Hawaiians. He is doing all he can to keep the work moving.

The present address of Bro. L. R. Devore is, Care C. A. Parkin, No. 3010 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, California.

Sr. F. Miller, of Dunnville, Ontario, writes suggesting that literary workers among the young people might do good in behalf of others, especially isolated ones, by arranging courses of readings in the Book of Covenants and Book of Mormon. We note the statement; others have already been considering it.

Sr. Louverna Varner, of Mount Sterling, Brown County, Illinois, requests that prayer be made for her, also for Bro. and Sr. Bump, all of whom are in poor health. Sr. Varner requests that some of the sisters write her. She would be encouraged by a kind word from some and would answer with pleasure.

Bro. George E. Spencer wrote from El Moro, Colorado, that on the way from Missouri to Kansas, he called at St. John, Stafford County, Kansas, and was received in kindness by the Bickertonite brethren there. Bro. Spencer states that he does not see why the elders of the Reorganized Church should be afraid to go among these Bickertonite brethren, as they are kindly disposed people and seem willing to listen to what one may have to say. We are not aware that the elders have refrained from going to St. Johns, because they were afraid; but presume that it is with that locality as with many others—too many fields ready for labor to be done with too few laborers. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send more laborers into his harvest," was never more appropriate than now. Nor was the modern injunction, "Let him that is warned warn his neighbor," more applicable than now.

Will whoever is in charge of that portion of country in which Stafford County, Kansas, is located see what may be done down there.

Bro. J. M. Kennedy, writing from Roscoe, Pennsylvania, June 25, reports Bro. D. L. Shinn at work among the various factions of the Bickertonites in the Monongahela Valley, at Roscoe, Bannings, Fayette City, and other points. The three factions, formerly divided, had united on the arrival of Bro. Shinn. Some attend his meetings, however, and prospects are excellent for others breaking away from that movement. Bro. Shinn had baptized one.

Bro. J. W. Hudgens was at Atchison, Kansas, the 23d ult. He was filling appointments in various parts of that field.

Bro. D. C. Smith, of Dahinda, Illinois, writes in commendation of the preaching of Bro. F. G. Pitt at that point; also of the labors of Bro. J. A. Robinson in portions of the Kewanee district. The work was slowly but steadily progressing. Former enemies were becoming friends, confessing that spiritual power for good attends the preaching of the ministry.

Bro. Isaac Carlisle, Jr., reports an excellent session of the Pottawattamie district conference. He wrote from Underwood, Iowa, June 27.

By letter from Bro. Pitt, Chicago, we learn that Brn. Roush and Henley are using the tent at Mission, LaSalle County, Illinois, with good interest manifest.

Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," died July 1, at Hartford, Connecticut, in her eighty-fifth year.

One of the brethren writing of his work reports the baptism of one "in a heavy rainstorm." Our proofreader asks, "Is this a case of baptism by aspersion?" We think not, but that the brother meant "during a heavy rainstorm." Though the Baptist Church has been disturbed by the admission of one of its leading lights that Baptists practiced sprinkling in England for years, we have not yet heard of a Latter Day Saint who accepted sprinkling or pouring for baptism.

The Albia, Iowa, Progress Defender, has a pleasant notice of the late effort at Hiteman, including the conference, in its issue for June 27.

MATTERS OF COMMON INTEREST.

TO THE SAINTS IN GENERAL:—Anything pertaining to the general interests and welfare of the work is or should be of personal interest to every member of the church. Knowing this, and that every true Latter Day Saint desires to be kept posted on all matters pertaining to its progress, that each may do his part to advance its interests we again present a few items concerning this department for the consideration and necessary action of the Saints.

Within the past year we have had occasion to make several statements concerning the financial condition of the publishing department. The response was encouraging, in remittances, especially for a time; and by repeated calls we were able to bring the business status of the Herald Office up to a more satisfactory standing. However, much yet remains to be done before we shall succeed in placing it where it ought to be as a power for good; hence a continued further effort is demanded, and on this account now is made.

The new conference year opens up with bright prospects in spiritual things, moving the hearts of all the faithful to push the work, to move forward and upward, and to place the church and themselves on higher ground. Temporal prospects are also encouraging in the prospects of abundant crops, thus promising us the prosperity necessary to do our individual part in building up and establishing the work of God.

Wherever the gospel is preached the publishing department must work hand in hand with the ministry and laity, in distributing the printed word; indeed, it often prepares the way for the ministry. It seems unnecessary to call attention to it as a means for good. The tracts and other church publications not only evangelize the world, they also do pastoral work, building up, educating, and strengthening the Saints in the faith of the gospel.

All who love the work will see at a glance the necessity of meeting their obligations, promptly, with the Herald Office and in keeping their accounts squared, that their part be helpful, not a drag, a dead weight, as many accounts now are.

Collections again are slow and money again is needed to meet present demands and to provide for future steps forward that are urgently demanded by the interests of the service. Twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) yet remain against delinquent subscribers and on book accounts, which must be paid and placed in the hands of the management before the duty of the literary department to the church can be fully performed. Think of it, $25,000 carried as a dead weight, a heavy load!

We want to collect this outstanding money and put it into circulation by meeting our obligations, devoting the balance to the issue of new tracts and other necessary literature.

We want to add to our facilities to meet the wants of the work.

A committee consisting of Brn. Joseph Smith and Heman C. Smith has been appointed by the Board of Publication to write a history of the church. This needed work will be issued just as soon as means are available. Every remittance is a help to that end, every delay a hindrance. We want to place the work on the market this fall. Will you aid us to do so? The general and local ministry are earnestly requested to work with us by selling church publications, taking subscriptions for church papers, especially where there are no branch book agents. It is hoped that they will see to the interests of the Saints and of this department by placing the publications in every family in their various fields.

We regret to learn that some of the ministry are indifferent in this respect.

A special tract fund should be started in every branch, for the purpose of issuing tract literature for missionary distribution. The fund should be remitted to the Herald Office to print and supply tracts to the ministry. We suggest that branch presidents take action in this matter.

We trust the Saints will make such general response to our appeal that we shall soon be able to make a better report. We want to present a clear statement at the next conference—of all accounts collected in, of additional work done, and a balance to the credit of the department.

It is the property of the church and to the church we look for prompt coöperation.

For the advancement of truth,

Your servants,

E. L. KELLEY, President,
D. DANCER, Treasurer,
FRANK CRILEY, Bus. Mgr.,
Board of Publication.

LIFE'S MUSIC.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

I would not touch the harp to-day,
For life has struck a solemn chord;
But something seems to me to say,
"Go, send thy music heavenward."
In days gone by my heart has sung
The lighter and more thoughtless lays;
But now the lines of life have swung
Into the deep and conscious ways.

Up through the music of the years
There swells the deep majestic notes,
And strength of purpose soon appears
While yet the pleasant prelude floats;
And through the happy time of youth
That rings its changes scarcely heard,
We catch the higher call of truth,
And feel our beings deeply stirred.

We see the stately growth that springs
From strong endeavor and from trust,
And note the master mind that sings
Through its weak instruments of dust.
O, mighty souls with flesh allied
Who tremble at no crown of thorn,
But ever at the Master's side
The cruel crucifix have borne!

Can we do less than they, or bring
With slighting hand a tainted gift?
No, rather let us work and sing
Till God himself shall stoop and lift
The burden we have borne so long.
And life shall strike a happy note;
And love and joy shall swell with song
And praise, each weary pilgrim's throat.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Day after day Heaven, listening, hears men cry:
"What have I done that such a fate as this Should follow me? What have I done amiss
That clouds of Care should darken all my sky?
That Pain should pierce, and that shrewd Poverty Should pinch me in that grievous grip of his,
What time I tremble over the abyss,
And long for death, yet, longing, dare not die?"

But when does Heaven, listening, hear men say:
"What have I done that in the blue-domed skies
The evening star should shine, the spring clouds move,
The world be white with innocence, that May
Has set afield, and God in children's eyes,
To win our hearts to wonder at his love!"

MY BIRTHDAY.

SIXTY-ONE years to-day, the 20th of February, 1896, since my spirit or myself was placed in this frail house of clay; sixty-one years since it left the realm of spirits and was consigned to earth life or to the temptations, trials, and sorrows of this probationary life. O how often at the anniversary of our birth we have resolved to live a better life,—yes, even from our childhood,—and yet how far short have we come from attaining our ideal standard!

We are one of many thousands who have each, in all probability, had a similar experience, some of whom may read this and wonder why we should fail to carry out our resolutions, which were right in our opinion, and in accordance with the will of our Master.

Why were the very temptations that were so hard for us to encounter thrown directly in our pathway, or lying in ambush for our soul? O, how many times, when under the influence of the Spirit of Christ, we have thought that we would do so and so, if we were in the situation of some other person, or had to encounter his or her temptation.
But when time and circumstances brought something similar into our own experience, we learned that we, too, were lacking in sufficient grace for the emergency. Not that grace did not abound, not that it was not free, but because we had not retained it perfectly.
Thus we were taught that in our own strength we are perfect weakness—thus we learn that we must not put too much confidence in our own powers.

We once heard a dear little girl who was a cripple say, "It is no use for us to say what we will do, or what we will not do, for we don't know what we will do." What an amount of meaning in these words, and what a little thinker she was. When we are without the nourishment of the Holy Spirit we are as a broken branch of a tree. We cannot stand firm before the trials of life without the power of the Spirit, any better than a tree whose roots are only in the surface can stand before the tempest.

The experience of our many years has taught us that it is useless to set our affections on the beautiful things of this world; they are only as bubbles, that burst as we grasp them; the are only figures or types of the real, the eternal things that God has in store for his people. Yes, there must be something real beyond this life; the word tells us so, the yearnings of our heart tell us so, and the light and peace that have filled our souls when communing with our Father have confirmed the fact.

We are glad, and sometimes our soul is filled with joy at the thought that this world will not always be our home. But perhaps if we had a home and an abundance of earthly possessions we might not wish to leave them; our thoughts might be centered here instead of reaching out beyond. Our spiritual aspirations and longings have only been realized at intervals, to the degree that we knew that peace that passeth understanding and that joy that is unspeakable and full of glory.

During the last year, more than any other year of our life, it has seemed as if the enemy of all good has stood both before and behind us, has crouched in ambush on first one side and then the other, and our mind seemed to be robbed of good thoughts at times, and filled with wickedness and confusion. We have been led to exclaim, "A man's foes shall be they of his own household;" also, "Vengeance in mine; I will repay;" but when we could collect our mind we looked to the Source of love and felt to say from the depths of the soul, "O God, help us all!"

We are not sorry that so many years of our life have passed; no, not sorry, but glad that we have no more temptations of youth to encounter, no more of the trials and sufferings of middle age to endure, have now only the infirmities of old age to experience, and then all will be over.

Our desire for earthly possessions has been less than the average, and at present is very small indeed. We feel at times that "all is vanity and vexation of spirit," as have many, very many before us. After the whirlwind of disappointment comes the still small voice into our souls, saying, "Trust in me and all will be well—all is well." How can it be otherwise, if our trust is in God the Father and God the Son?

After a few more storms of life are over we hope to be robed in garments made white by the blood of the Lamb, and partake of the tree of life with the thousands who have come up through great tribulation. Was it not for that hope we should feel as Paul did, that we were of all men most miserable. If it requires vexations and pleasures, sorrows and joys to ripen the soul for the harvest, let us all who have had the experience and learned the lesson clap our hands for joy and lift our hearts with thanksgiving that we have been fully disciplined. SR. ALMIRA.

THE MINISTRY OF PAIN.

Long time I walked with pain, and constantly
She was my close companion and my guide,
Clad pilgrim-wise, forever at my side
I felt her touch and her stern ministry.

"Ah, leave me! I have had my share of pain,
Leave me to peace and comfort and delight
Before my life's day darken into night,"
I oft implored—as oft implored in vain.

Till once upon a slightly slope we stood—
I felt her touch relax, and as she went
She pointed where two angel faces bent
With smiles, and then, at last, I understood.

To these new guides Pain led my straying feet,
Patience and Resignation, pure and calm—
Giving to all to my hurts their healing balm;
To Pain I owe their gentle solace sweet.

JUDGE NOT BY OUTWARD APPEARANCE.

"WHAT great, clumsy feet that Nancy White has!" exclaimed Minnie Preston, with a toss of the head and a curl of the lip, which were anything but beautiful.

"Clumsy?" queried her friend. "How can you say so, Minnie? I think she has more beautiful feet than any other girl in the village."

"Well, I always thought you had very queer taste," rejoined Minnie. "For my part I can't see a bit of beauty in them."

"Well, I can, Minnie," said her friend.
"Have you forgotten that well-known stanza;

"Beautiful feet are they that go,
Swiftly to lighten another's woe,
Through summer's heat and winter's cold?"

"Nancy's feet are always carrying her on some errand of mercy, sometimes to read to blind Tom, sometimes to amuse poor little lame Roy Reed, and sometimes to hunt up a new Sunday school scholar. Certainly, Minnie, her feet must be beautiful, for the Bible says, 'How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace.'

"Only a short time ago I was at the railroad station and Nancy came in to wait for some friends. It was a bleak, snowy day, the train was late, and the crowd waiting looked cross and tired. Just then a forlorn old lady, shaking with the palsy, came in with a basket of little notions for sale, but nobody bought anything. She turned presently and poked about the room as if trying to find something. Nancy noticed her and instantly asked in a kind tone,

"Have you lost anything, ma'am?"

"No, ma'am, I am looking for the heating place. My eyes are poor and I cannot find it."

"Here it is," said Nancy, and she led her to the furnace and drew up a chair for her.

"Thank you," said the old woman. "I am almost frozen and have not sold a thing to-day."

Nancy smiled, went to the lunch counter, bought a cup of tea and a roll, and carried them to the old lady and said, "Won't you have a cup of hot tea? It is very comforting such a day as this."

"Thank you," said the old lady, as the tears flowed down her cheeks.

"As I watched Nancy doing this I thought what a sweet face she had, though until then I had thought her plain and awkward. It was only a kind word and a friendly act that she did, but somehow it brightened that dingy room wonderfully and touched many hearts, and I believe that simple act of charity was as good as a sermon to each traveler who witnessed it, and many went on their way better for that half hour in that dreary station, for they became interested in the old lady and purchased several things from her.

"And, Minnie, this incident taught me a valuable lesson that I only wish I could impress on your mind, that many noble souls are hid under a rough exterior. We must look more at the heart and the works that follow than at dashing appearance and style, which so often lead us to misjudge people."

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

THE large attendance at the recent Coldwater, Michigan, Sunday school convention showed the growing interest in the work in this district. The excellent thoughts brought out upon the subject of uniformity of texts for all ages seemed to stand out prominently against a change in that direction. We would infer by the discussion that the workers here believe that the present simplicity of method used in the Primary Quarterlies is better adapted to the child mind than any lesson that can be planned from the teachings of the Book of Exodus.

Much stress was placed upon simplicity of methods for primary grades.

Bro. E. A. Blakeslee showed how the connection of thought might be preserved throughout the lessons of the quarter that at the close it would form a perfect whole.

It was a talk fraught with value to both senior and intermediate workers. He showed that the Quarterly was simply a help in suggesting a line of questioning to be followed in home study; also a historical and geographical help, but not an instrument for cutting off the use of the Bible. In fact, he thought it necessary for the teacher to be so conversant with the lesson, that he need no Quarterly in his hand during recitation.

Several of the excellent papers read at this convention will be furnished our readers at an early date. SUPERINTENDENT.

THE PREPARED AND THE UNPREPARED TEACHER.

Delivered at the Fremont district Sunday school convention, Henderson, Iowa, June 5, 1896, by Joseph Roberts.

AT a certain teachers' meeting, a member was interrogated as to whether he had a part in the program. Replying in the affirmative, he was then asked the part he was to play. His answer was: "I, among others, am to act the part of receptive organisms into which is to be poured all the highly flavored messes of theorisms and methodisms."

Now I don't know as it makes any difference whether our part on the program is that of a receptive organism, or that of a promulgatory nature, as to leave out either, cowork would be impossible. So I trust we all consider ourselves on the program, and are ready at all times to work together. To give you something to do I shall read you a list of nine small words which I wish you to remember and give them back to me just as I give them to you. Now in order for you to get the worth of my remarks, it will be necessary for you to try your very best to retain them. Here we have them:—

It, do, see, be, am, to, my, day, we.

Now, should I wait five minutes for the sound to cease ringing in your ears? No, I shall not wait that long, but how many are ready to repeat the list now? Not a one? What's wrong? Surely the words are small enough. Now I shall read you a list of words more complex in structure, and many present can repeat them in their proper order. Now you may take them:—

Joseph, Egypt, feast, pit, prison, famine, sold, ruler, preserved.

Yes, there are those present who could repeat, this list one year from now. Why is it that one list is so easily retained while the other, though words of but two and three letters, are so difficult? That there is a something in one that produces mental activity; while in the other list that something is wanting, is not an unqualified assertion which I make, for you have demonstrated it for yourselves and know it to be a fact. And I shall not attempt to say what that "something" is for you have just experienced the activity in your own minds, and can define it for yourselves. But I wish to confine my efforts to that which leads up to that "something." And to receive our first illustration, we will go into the public schoolroom, not to reflect discredit upon the work done there, but simply to get an illustration.

While visiting certain public schools for the purpose of gaining ideas along the teacher's line, I wrote on paper a few ideas that I thought perhaps might come useful. At one school the class in United States History was called to recite—which it did excellently—several pages of almost the exact words of Barnes' History. And while the recitation was in progress, I dotted down every time a question was asked, a word that I thought would be most likely to suggest the answer. Here we have them. Nine of them:—

Died, gold, steam, birth, whisky, commerce, slavery, battle, panic.

I shall not ask you to repeat these words as that "something" is absent and you could not; but I shall read you another list I dotted down at another school, where the class in current topics were reciting. Here they are:—

Cleveland { Ven. boundary, M. doctrine, arbitration.
Cuba, war, belligerents, treaty.

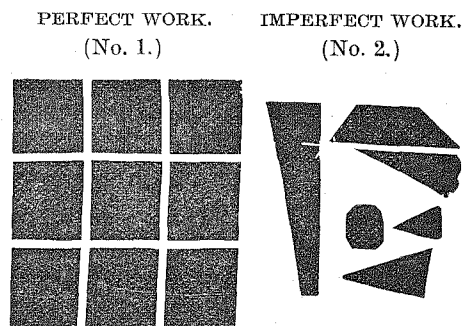

All those who are acquainted with current events will readily recognize in this list that same something which produced that same mental activity which we experienced a few moments ago.

I place along with each word a symbol, to show to the eye the parts after each recitation had been analyzed, and on the blackboard will be seen a facsimile of that which appeared on my scratch book:—

	Cleveland.		Died.
	Ven.		Birth.
	Cuba.		Slavery.
	Boundary.		Gold.
	War.		Whisky.
	M. Doctrine.		Battle.
	Belligerents.		Steam.
	Arbitration.		Commerce.
	Treaty.		Panic.

You will observe that the parts of one list are regular or symmetrical in form while those of the other are irregular.

Desiring to see the picture that these two recitations produced in the pupil's minds, I set to work to placing the parts together, and this is the best I could do:—

Ask a schoolboy to define this one (1) and he will tell you, "It is a perfect square." Ask a maiden to define this one (2) and she would tell you, "It is crazy patchwork." Surely there could be no objections to our calling it crazy work when the parts do not fit together; while those of needlework women manage to cover up all the holes. But if you wish a mild synonym for crazy you might term it imperfect work. I should prefer calling it as it appears to be, and, in fact, as it really is.

It is useless for me to comment on these two pictures, as all can readily see that in our perfect work (1) the teacher had the parts so prepared that when they were placed together in the recitation they produced a perfect figure, or a lasting impression; while in our imperfect work the teacher was not thus prepared, but simply took the slices as they presented themselves in the recitation, and the consequences were this chaotic mass (2).

Now, Sunday school teacher, the application to you and to your work: What kind of work are you doing, the crazy or the perfect? Now, be honest and don't deceive yourself, as there is no exposition required. I should like to stop here long enough for you to answer these questions in your own mind, but you can do that at your homes, so we hasten on. Do you, Sunday school teacher, go before your class with no definite object in view, but simply ask the questions as they are printed in the Quarterly? If so please step down and let the pupil ask questions (he can read) and never more complain about your pupils not having their lessons prepared, and having to refer to the Quarterly to read an answer, when you yourself have to refer to the Quarterly to get a question to bring out the contents of the lesson. Shame on such a teacher!

Now, don't ask me what these printed questions in the Quarterlies are for, or I should tell you that one objection is for unprepared teachers to use in the recitation. But if you persist in using them, for dignity's sake (if for nothing else) commit them to memory; don't read them.

Or do you, Sunday school teacher, go before your class with your work so prepared that you know just exactly what you are going to do and just how much of your general outline this particular lesson covers? Now in order for you to do this and have your work well in mind, it is not only necessary for you to have a perfect knowledge of past lessons, but at least every lesson in the quarter's work should be studied in advance, so that you could make the present conform to both past and future lessons.

What would you think of a carpenter who should attempt to erect a structure without first, receiving a plan, and without first obtaining a knowledge of the material to be used? You would think, at least, that he did not understand his business.

What would you think of a Sunday school teacher who should attempt to teach a class without first formulating a plan, and without having a knowledge of the material to be used? Think you she would understand her business?

Now, a few words in regard to the general outline to which I referred: We are now studying Hebrew history, and although not a Sunday school teacher, I have prepared an outline by which I follow. I offer it to you teachers simply as a suggestion;—

H E B R E W	Patriarchial Govern- ment.	} Era of Prosperity. } Era of Oppression.	} Period of Formation. } Period of Preservation. } Period of Hebrew Affliction. } Period of Egyptian Affliction.
H I S T O R Y	Monarchial Govern- ment.	} Era of Development. } Era of Decline.	} Period of War. } Period of Peace. } Period of Prophetic Teaching. } Period of Idolatrous Decline.

(Dates have been omitted and also the why.)

It is the best outline in existence—so far as I am concerned. Now that may be an immodest statement, but there is a true principle coming right in here, and you prepare you one and I shall say that yours is the best one in existence as far as you are concerned, for there is no one that understands it as you can—possibly.

After you have thus prepared your work, then fortify yourself, not only by placing the sticks of Judah and Joseph together and becoming one, but also the stick of modern Israel. Yes, furthermore; may all good books become as one stick in the hands of the Sunday school teacher. And may these two pictures (2 and 1), the unprepared and the prepared, the imperfect and the perfect, the real and the ideal, ever be present when before your classes; showing to you the results of lack of preparation on your part (2), and holding forth that degree of perfection (1) to which it is possible for the Sunday school teacher to attain if she sufficiently prepares her work. Amen.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

YOUR faith and prayers are earnestly desired in behalf of Sr. Effie Adams Benedict, of Terre Haute, Indiana. She is away from the church and its privileges, is to have a surgical operation performed, and is very weak. Pray that God may spare her life to her husband and young babe.

GUIDE ROCK, Neb., June 26.

Editors Herald:—Having been appointed by the last General Conference to labor in the Western Nebraska mission, I started westward from Wilber, May 5, making Kenesaw my first stopping place. Bro. James F. Lippincott, by appointment, met me there and conveyed me to his home near Shelton. I met with a few Saints at the home of Bro. Stirley and preached to them twice and then pushed northward to a point near Cairo, where Bro. Payne labored last winter. I remained in that vicinity over two Sundays, preaching eight times. From thence, by invitation from Bro. H. Christy, of Wilber, I went to Scotia, where he was making an extended visit, and preached three sermons in the Presbyterian church and one in a Baptist church a few miles from there. From Scotia I went to Grand Island and found the family of Bro. Jesse Dalton, who are old-time Saints and the only ones in the city. They gave me a very cordial greeting and offered me the use of their home for services—a very convenient one and well located—which I gladly accepted. I made arrangements at once to commence a series of meetings that night. Bro. and Sr. Dalton and Thomas and Delia Blodgett spared no effort to make the meetings a success. Seats were procured, a choir formed, neighbors invited, etc., and when the time for meeting had come we had a well-filled house. This was the first effort made in Grand Island. I was gratified with the fair appearance of things and was glad of so favorable an opportunity to preach the good tidings of the kingdom in that city. My efforts were well received and I concluded to continue the meetings for a week. The interest during the week remained unabated. On Sunday morning I obtained permission to preach in the church at the Soldiers' Home. This opening also seemed favorable, so I promised to return as soon as I could and preach again both at the "Home" and also in the city.

At the end of the week, by invitation from Sr. Pemberton, I went to Central City and preached four times in the Baptist church and once at the residence of Bro. Hyrum Blodgett. At this place the interest was not as good as at Grand Island. Sr. Pemberton did all that was possible to insure success, but I did not feel that much good was being accomplished. I remained there but five days and then returned to Grand Island and recommenced meetings there the same evening (Saturday). I secured an appointment at the Soldiers' Home for the following morning, and then by invitation continued the services at the "Home" at 10:30 a. m., for nine days, preaching in the evenings at Bro. Dalton's. The interest continued good throughout, and although I baptized none, yet it seems to me to be the best opening I have made for some time and as good as any I have ever made. At the closing service at the "Home" I was urged to return soon and was asked if I could not make arrangements to have some one meet with them once a week for prayer until I could return. I encouraged them all I could, but did not promise to return because I had just learned that Grand Island was not included in the Western Nebraska mission, the line having recently been changed. Will those having charge please bear in mind that in the judgment of the writer no fairer field is offered for labor than the one mentioned. We have equal rights at the Home with the other churches. All that is necessary is to go to the Commandant's office and get in the appointment. It will then be read to the inmates. The church is on the grounds, separate from the other buildings. It is well seated, lighted by electricity, books and organ in the church, everything ready for the preacher. If the one going there is as fortunate as the writer he will procure an organist and a few singers in the city who will attend the services and have charge of the music and singing. Sr. Delia Blodgett was of great assistance to us in this as also in other matters. Sr. Pemberton made a visit with Sr. Dalton while the services were in progress. She is a whole-souled Latter Day Saint and enjoyed the services very much.

We also had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Bro. Joseph Smith, of Chapman, Nebraska, a brother of Brn. H. O. and H. C. Smith, while at Grand Island. He stopped with us for two services. He reminded me very much of Bro. Heman C. He may not be a great preacher (we do not know, as we did not have the pleasure of hearing him), but he impressed me as a very good man. Altogether I shall long remember with pleasure our labor in Grand Island, and I sincerely hope that some one will go there very soon and reap a harvest from the seed sown. Bro. Alexander Buchanan, late of the Nebraska City branch, is an inmate of the Home, and although he is under a cloud, he is firm in the faith and contends earnestly for it as against all forms of false doctrine.

On the morning of June 16 I started for Wilber, arriving there on the evening of the same day. On the 19th I was called by telegram to Western, to preach the funeral of Sr. Munyan, who had died at St. Joseph while on her way to Nebraska. On the evening of the 20th, I returned to Wilber and preached to the Saints on Sunday. Yesterday, the 24th, I left Wilber, arriving here last night. I expect to labor here a few days, then continue my travel westward as occasion may demand, and I trust as God directs. Crops of all kinds are good in Nebraska this year, but prices are very low and money is scarcer than I have known it before since grasshopper times of twenty years ago. I wish our church papers, the Herald and Ensign, could be sent to the Soldiers' Home at Grand Island. Other people send papers to them free, and I certainly think it would be a good investment. Several spoke to me about church papers and said they would be glad to read them. They also have a library there, and if the publishing company can afford to send them a copy of the Book of Mormon, large edition, it would be thankfully received and highly appreciated. I spoke on the Book of Mormon by request and awakened a great interest in their minds concerning it. Your brother in Christ,

C. H. PORTER.

PEORIA, Ill., June 28.

Editors Herald:—I notice that our brethren of the Far West district have ordained that the reunion at Maysville shall be held on the 21st of August, the same date as the great reunion at Park Bluff, opposite Nauvoo. While this is the case I do not see the good judgment of so doing. Most of the Eastern Saints and a large number of the Western Saints will surely be desirous of basking in the sunshine of Nauvoo the beautiful.

The principal men of the church who are available will be at Park Bluff, thus depriving those who would have the pleasure of meeting them at Maysville. Many of the Saints around the western slope would like to go back to the old Mississippi shore, reviving the scenes of their childhood, while others would be charmed with the lovely in nature, made sacred by the memories of deeds and sayings of the past destined to abide in history, while health and inspiration, love of the beautiful in nature, and the true and noble in man would be planted in the human heart.

Park Bluff is the spot for the great gathering of the Saints, this year of grace. You western brethren are surely going to measurably starve yourselves, while if you held your reunion after the adjournment of the Park Bluff meeting you would have the eldership come to you like Peter and John from the assembly at Jerusalem, filled with divine inspiration, ministering to you not only the letter but the Spirit. If you think the matter worthy of your consideration act; if not, well.

Fraternally,

J. A. ROBINSON.

MANIHI, Oceanica, April 9.

Editors Herald:—Our conference is over and Saints are now going to their respective islands, some in boats and some in the large schooners. But the hardest parting of all is to see our worthy Bro. and Sr. Devore take their departure for Papeete, this evening, on board the Evanelia, and thence to America. We feel lonely indeed. To see such an able defender of the faith, congenial coworker, and servant of God, leave us children here, away out here in this wilderness, as it were, to carry on the Master's work, makes my heart sink within me. Surely the church will send some one to take his place. I pray often and earnestly to our Father in heaven that some laborers may soon come to the rescue.

Our dear brother and sister have endured much, and endeared themselves to the hearts of these people, and now they feel like their parents were leaving them, so to speak. Surely the Master will say "well done" to each of them for such a noble sacrifice as they have made.

Our conference was peaceful with very few exceptions, and we believe it to have been a very profitable session. It was well attended, there being eight hundred and fifty-one persons present. We were blessed in quorum work, and believe that this means of preparing the officers for their several duties will soon prove a great blessing to the mission.

Sr. Devore leaves the Sunday school work in this field of labor in a working and prosperous condition. Now for the onward move. We feel that the hastening time has come, and shall seek with all our might, mind, and strength to move forward with the cause we love so much.

Bro. Will S. McGrath takes charge of the Evanelia the coming year, and we expect to see her serve the purpose for which she was built. He understands the work and our prayers are that he may be blessed in the undertaking.

We thank the Master for his mercies to us, and trust that the blessings in store for the righteous may be ours to enjoy in future days.

While at Raratonga I realized the fulfillment of the words of the Spirit in 1894, "Angels shall go before you to prepare the way." I earnestly pray that our feeble efforts at said place may yet bear fruit.

In company with my wife we go next to the island of Hao, about five hundred and forty miles east of Papeete. We trust that the prayers of the righteous may go with us. The work is not well established at Hao and neighboring isles. The Utah elders are working there, and we expect to meet them.

There were twelve baptisms during conference, two marriages, five children blessed, and good feeling in general among the Saints. The feast was the best I ever attended, a description of which will be given later on. Our prayers are that the Lord may abundantly bless our coworkers everywhere.

Your brother in the gospel,

HUBERT CASE.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., June 25.

Editors Herald:—Two of the best conferences that the Eastern and Northern Districts have ever seen are now matters of history, but will long be remembered by many whose good pleasure it was to attend them. Latter Day Saints are no longer a handful in Michigan but number their converts by the thousands, with brighter prospects for the future than ever before. Michigan is ripe for the sickle and we hope that every minister will utilize the time given him, while the Saints will remember that they are not exempt and will be made responsible to some degree for the advancement of this work.

As ever,

R. E. GRANT.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 27.

Editors Herald:—I reached Fairfield in time to attend the Sunday school convention; it commenced on Saturday morning, and lasted throughout the day, winding up with a very excellent rendition of the program provided for the occasion, and considering that all the chances the young people have had for training are such as accompany a common school education, I only do them a very imperfect degree of justice when I pronounce the effort a very creditable one indeed. So long as we can have before us such testimonies of the latent talent of our youth as such an exhibition gives, we need not fear for the future of latter-day Israel.

On the opening up the Lord's Day for service, from the number of teams, buggies, and the modern wheel, it was evident to even the most casual observer that we were going to be encouraged with a good attendance for such an extremely out-of-the-way place as had been chosen for that session of conference; and I am glad to say that the facts fully bore the promise of the earlier hours, by filling the Baptist church which the members of the Baptist Association had kindly and generously granted us for the occasion.

First on the program for the day was a sermon by a visiting brother on tithing. The pastor of the Christian Church, who for some reason which does not yet appear left his own congregation, notwithstanding services were being held there, and attended our services, approached the speaker at the close of the service and complimented him and the church he represented for the views they held on the subject of "tithes and offerings." This much I may safely say for the one who tried to represent that department of church work, He spoke so plainly that no one had occasion to complain of inability to comprehend the subject so far as the speaker understood it himself. Three years of successive failures of crops in that region of country, and the storms of this year, unless one could visit them with supplies from more highly favored regions, seem to unite in rendering the subject of tithing a difficult subject to handle there in a satisfactory manner. Even that, however, supplied the speaker with an excellent argument in favor of the universal payment of tithes.

Brn. Waldsmith, Peak, and Forscutt were there, of the traveling ministry, and worked together harmoniously for the general good. Three services on Sunday were well attended, and the testimony of the resident brethren was that there was generally good satisfaction given. On Monday there was also a good attendance, and what was very pleasing to the visiting brethren was, that contrary to the practices in many places, instead of going home as soon as they had heard the preaching, the Saints from the country who lived too far away to go home and return the following morning staid there until the close of the conference, while those who lived within a few miles of the place, went home, but returned in time to take their part in the services, and were found ready to contribute their quota also towards the expenses. In consequence of the remoteness of the distance from most of the other branches, there was so very slim a representation from other branches as to render the conference, virtually, a conference of but two or three branches instead of a conference of the district. There were but three families of Saints there or residences there occupied by Saints; but the genial faces of such men as dwell and hold membership there, of whom Bro. Hopper is one, and who well represents the others, made every one feel that the cry, "Let every one that has no other place go home with me," was no unmeaning cry, and the result was that all were well provided for, and all felt at the Saints homes as well as at the church that "T is good to be a Saint of latter days."

I left for and reached home on Tuesday, and feel willing though not able to sing, "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." I shall rest a few days, while looking after some matters that need my attention as presiding elder of the branch.

Yours,
MARK H. FORSCUTT.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 29.

Editors Herald:—On the 7th of June one was baptized at Fall River in a heavy rain-storm, and yesterday two more were baptized there, and we were favored with another heavy rainstorm, and more are near the kingdom. Thus the Lord is working with and for his people. During the month Fall River and New Bedford have been visited by Elder I. M. Smith who preached at both places, and F. M. Sheehy, district president.

Prospects for business in Fall River are very gloomy at present owing to dullness in trade, and July and August may witness many stoppages of the wheels of industry. No matter what may affect the material interests of men, our hope is in the ultimate success of the latter-day work.

Yours in bonds,
JOHN SMITH.

LETTER FROM AN ELDER.

EDITORS HERALD:—I am deeply impressed with the grandeur and the glory of the gospel. The great and all-wise God, because of man's fallen and lowly estate, committed the gospel dispensation to men to preach to all nations, and to teach them all things he had commanded; and to observe that was to do what was designed in God's wisdom to make man perfect.

It is said in the history of creation of man,

And I, God, created man in mine own image, in the image of mine Only Begotten created I him.

This conveys to us the thought that if the Anointed One is and was perfect, then whatever means have been ordained of the Father for his perfection will perfect man; because he "took not on him the likeness of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham," and was made "like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God," so that as a teacher he could more perfectly show man the way. All that had been revealed in the misty past was not sufficient, and nothing but the revelation of the perfect and the Just One would suffice. Precept is good, but precept and example are better. So it is written of him, "Though he were a son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."

When we take into consideration his spotless life, his pure teaching, and loving nature, walking blamelessly before his Father and the world, we conclude that by him the way to perfection was fairly mapped out. From all we have been able to learn by searching the revelations, ancient and modern, they make the preaching of the gospel paramount, and the only means for the salvation and the perfecting of the race of man. It is not the adorning of the body with jewels or costly apparel, but that of a quiet, lovable, and peaceful spirit, and the putting on of the "divine nature" that commends men to God.

Much has been said and written about drinking tea and coffee, and how one shall eat, and what he shall eat; also much has been said and written about the use of tobacco and strong drink, all of which may be very good; but for me to draw the line and undertake to say where, when, and how everyone shall be governed would be more than I am competent to do. The best, and about all I could or would say is, Be governed by that wisdom that comes from above and the judgment that comes from a sound mind; for in the gospel we have the promise that God shall give knowledge and wisdom. When the great Teacher said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly;" and, that they who entered into the fold by the door "shall go in and out and find pasture," he meant all that is there expressed, or implied, and it covers about all the ground. All that God has made and placed on the earth may be utilized by man. He was to "inherit all things;" and on earth he was to have "power and dominion." If the seeds of everlasting life be thoroughly in the soul, and the divine nature developed, and the great law of liberty fixed in the mind of a man, and he walking blamelessly in the ordinances, who shall say what he may or may not eat or drink, or what he shall or shall not wear? It does seem to me that I would prefer a mantle of charity large enough to extend to all conditions and the surrounding of man. Everybody cannot always do what he would love to do, and what he knows to be good; and that does not necessarily mean he has to choose and do the evil; but it does mean under the circumstances to exercise the best wisdom and judgment at command. So as to the rule of eating and drinking; because we say, "Use wisdom," we neither advocate the drinking of tea, coffee, intoxicants, nor the use of tobacco. Wisdom, and a correct understanding ought to govern.

And now as to clothing. It may be possible that the good Latter Day Saints have become proud, have become haughty and foolish, and gone away to extremes in the simple matter of dress. All religious people have been counted extremists, dogmatical, and inclined to despotism, when the broadest liberty should be granted to all. I am willing to and do believe God is not the author of confusion. If his people were not free to conform to all the teachings of the wise ones of the world and the church, he would no doubt have given the pattern for a regulation suit; so we could all fall into line in full uniform; and when on dress parade we could make a grand display. Let no man judge in regard to what others shall eat and drink, is good, and in harmony with the teaching of the Nazarene. And let no man judge me in what I shall wear, is just also. By some it is thought that if a man stands inside of a twenty-five, or thirty dollar suit he is extravagant. And then, it may be urged that a person can serve God in a pair of overalls just as well, or a three or four dollar suit, and can administer in all the ordinances and preach just as fine a discourse as the other man; to which we agree. But the question may be asked, Why, then, cannot the other serve God just as acceptably in the more befitting suit? My experience is that some people who talk about pride shown their own vanity and pride in dressing commonly and slovenly, as surely as the one who is more careful of his appearance. We all expect to meet the Lord some day, and if I expected to meet him to-day I would put on the best I had to wear.

And if I thought my clothing was not scrupulously clean, I would be very sure to try and get something that was. I would want my character to be clean, and my dress to correspond with the Christ man.

Let all thy garments be plain and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands, and let all things be done in cleanliness before me.—D. C.

This has been quoted to show that we are not to be proud or extravagant, and, of course to be plain; and some almost see the cloven foot peeping out from under a beautiful skirt that has been adorned and made beautiful by the skillful hands of the wearer, or one who has been paid to do it according to her idea of the beautiful. Now the Lord was content to let the wearer use her or his own judgment as to the fineness or quality of the goods.

I turn now to the good sisters, for most all the mischief is laid at their doors, and especially to their extravagance in dress. We will now take a good, practical, pure-minded sister, and she goes out in public where she is engaged in church and Sabbath school work that she is so eminently fitted and qualified to do, and her heart and soul have been set to serve the Lord, and to use the talents he has so wondrously endowed her with; and never has an impure intent fixed itself on her mind; but love of God and blessing the race of man are the burden of her soul. But she is dressed in a lovely garment that displays her form in its beauty and loveliness; but, O my, how nice it would have been if she had left off the frills and furbelows. What was beautiful to her and what she had spent hours to make beautiful to her, was not just suited to the taste of another. To one the sleeves were too large, and to another the skirt was not as it should be, and to another the waist was out of tune; but perhaps the worst of all was that beneath that nicely fitting garment, that deadly corset held the body in its toils, and like the anaconda, was surely sapping the life and vitality from the body and unfitting her to fill the measure of her creation, because of her pride and vanity. But who is to be the judge? The one who looks on, or the one who wears the corset? To my mind, a woman who is competent to teach others would know whether she was injuring herself or setting an example that was liable to injure others. Learned divines and doctors of medicine have had much to say on this subject, and I see no reason why I may not speak also. It is the gospel that is to save and by which all people will be judged. Neither the dress nor the corset is likely to be called into question; but the Christ life will secure to all their reward.

We are cited by many to the ancients and to the Indian women. They dressed plainly and wore no corsets, but they displayed as much pride in fixing up what they did wear as the greatest belle of to-day. To return to the customs of the Indian women, the Chinese, or any of the ancients, may be all very well; but will the ones who cite the unfortunate damsel of to-day to the beauty and perfect form of the Indian maiden because she is not pinching herself to death with the corset, take the lead and by example let the world see and know they are faithful expounders of a better gospel in theory and practice. So far as my experience goes, women of all nations try to appear in dress as attractive as possible, according to their ideas and the tradition of the beautiful. All women should wear what becomes them best. If lacing sufficient to brace her up, and add beauty and loveliness to the form is needful, I would say, Draw the corset string a little, but do thyself no harm. It may be possible that many women do now and have hitherto drawn the strings a little too tight for comfort, but with all that, if the light and the life of the gospel are thoroughly planted in the soul the character will shine out, and reflect a beauty and grandeur that will so far eclipse the outward adorning, that the pride and little hurt that may attach in the estimation of some, will not interfere in their advancement in the divine life.

What may seem hurtful vanity and pride to one, is not always so to another. If one is properly instructed in the gospel and careful to be governed by that, he or she will stand the test in the great day of the Lord and enter through the pearly gates to the eternal haven of peace.

CHARITY.

PAUL said:—

Though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

Is it not a fact that many times we overlook the importance of charity in our struggle to gain great endowments of knowledge, faith, understanding of mysteries, etc.? And after we have gained a knowledge of the truth, and see its beauty, light, and consistency, and stand safe in its mighty fortress, are we not inclined to override the true law of charity, and in our abhorrence and contempt for unrighteous and corrupt principles and doctrines, apt to offend those who honestly adhere to such? I think we are; yet it is our desire to be charitable.

Many times those who know the truth and are sure of it and feel the strength of it are inclined to ridicule the position of others with contempt and disgust, and even to make sport of their foolish ways and thereby hurt their feelings if they have any. This should not be, and charity demands that we respect the opinions of others so long as they are honest in them. If we respect their opinions we will not ridicule them or speak lightly of them; for we should consider every man's honest opinion to be sacred to him till he is convinced of his error. Our opinions are sacred to us, for we hold they are truth, and we do not like to hear them ridiculed or spoken lightly of.

We have better feelings toward men when they favor our opinions, or at least respect us in them; just so on the other hand, if we will consider others' views as sacred to them they will feel better toward us. Then there is a better chance to reason with them and teach them the truth. But make a man mad by uncharitably trampling under foot what he holds as sacred, though it be a base superstition, and you cannot do anything with him. It is hard enough for a person to change his views when convinced by kind and respectful reasoning; say nothing about when he is convinced by hateful and cutting argument. It is hard to accept even truth when it is given clothed in uncharitable language.

Charity . . . is kind, . . . is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil.

If the ignorance and the superstition around us are abominable and repugnant to our taste, let us bear it; for charity "Beareth all things, endureth all things." It has ever been the nature of man to not consider the sacredness of the views and belief of his fellow man. Even the religionists who came to the "new world" to escape the persecutions they received in the "old world," no sooner gained religious independence than they began to persecute their neighbors who were of a different belief. We go farther back and find that the primitive church brought down much persecution upon itself from the Romans by being so uncharitable toward them; even the Romans enacted laws against them because of this. "Nero was the first emperor to enact laws against the Christians. Mosheim says that one chief reason why the Romans so persecuted them was because the Christians felt and showed such an abhorrence and contempt for the idolatry of the Romans. They dared to ridicule the absurdities of the pagan superstition."

Now this was an unwise thing to do, and they were surely very uncharitable to the Romans. If the early Christians had respected the pagans in their belief, and considered it sacred unto them, and worked with them accordingly, surely there would not have been so much persecution. We can see the result of such doings in the past, so let us take warning and learn a lesson, for I believe much hurt results from ridiculing or making sport of the positions of others. It is contrary to the spirit of charity, it works harm for ourselves as well as for others who will surely hear and see us, and it is in opposition to the spirit of this work and calculated to keep men in a hostile condition to the truth.

Conference Minutes.

FAR WEST.

Conference convened with Pleasant Grove branch, Saturday, June 20, at ten a. m.: William Lewis and W. E. Summerfield presiding, C. P. Faul secretary. Branch reports: Delano 106, Pleasant Grove 81, German Stewartsville 72, Stewartsville 114, De Kalb 42, Kingston 98, Edgerton Junction no report, Wakenda 50, St. Joseph 333. Ministry reporting: Elders W. Lewis, J. M. Terry baptized 6, R. L. Ware. T. W. Chaburn baptized 11, W. E. Summerfield, F. C. Graham, T. T. Hinderks, J. C. Elvert, J. D. Flanders, A. Nesser, Jr., T. J. Mauzey, A. W. Head, D. E. Powell, J. N. Cato, C. P. Faul baptized 1, B. Dice, J. Lampert, and J. Rounds; Priests F. Mauzey, P. Peterson, J. N. York, F. Hill, and T. H. Hinderks; Teachers T. McKee, M. F. Beebe, W. H. Worden, J. Butler, J. Piepergerders, R. Garlich, and L. Hovenga. The committee on the case of Pointer vs. Burlington, Winning, et al., reported, the report was adopted, and on motion J. C. Elvert, Ben Dice, and C. P. Faul were selected by the conference as a court to hear the case. A request came from the Delano branch asking the conference to appoint a court of elders to try a brother living in their branch. T. T. Hinderks, A. W. Head, and Ben Dice were so appointed. Doctor W. C. Hamilton, of Stewartsville, presented a bill for attending one of our poor sisters in her last sickness, asking the conference to pay him in whole or in part for his services. The matter was referred to a committee consisting of J. Burlington, C. Hinderks, and C. P. Faul to investigate the matter and report to Bishop E. L. Kelley for his opinion. The tent committee reported an indebtedness of $6.10 besides what money is in the committee's hands. It was ordered that a collection be taken up to pay off the indebtedness in full. The condition of the Alma branch came before the conference for consideration. The matter was referred to the district officers, they to report to the next conference. It was ordered that the president of the district take charge of the district tent. District officers were reelected for the coming quarter. Preaching by J. M. Terry, W. Lewis, and J. L. Bear. Adjourned to meet with the Delano branch September 19 and 20. It was ordered by the conference that if in the wisdom of the district officers it should be deemed wise to change the date of the conference, they can do so, due notice to be given in Zion's Ensign and Saints' Herald.

DECATUR.

Conference convened in the district tent at Hiteman, Iowa, June 20, ten a. m.; President Wm. Anderson was chosen to preside, F. E. Cochran secretary pro tem., R. M. Elvin assistant. After the preliminaries were attended to the following branches reported: Pleasanton 114, loss 1; Lamoni 1, 117, gain 24; Lucas 158, gain 2; Centerville 40; Greenville 41, gain 1; Leon 45, gain 3; Davis City 79, gain 11; Lone Rock 85, loss 3; Cainesville 51, gain 1; Hiteman 45; gain 2. Ministry reporting: Elders W. Anderson, S. V. Bailey, P. McPeak, D. W. Wight baptized 1, R. M. Elvin, J. S. Snively, J. W. Loach, T. A. John, I. Phillips, J. Allen, T. R. Allen, R. Archibald, Sen.; Priests F. E. Cochran, D. Archibald, M. D. Lewis, G. Young, T. Hopkins, J. Jervis, D. Williams, J. Brennan, T. Williams; Teachers J. H. Harp and J. Richardson; Deacons R. D. and J. T. Williams. The following resolution of respect was adopted: That while we humbly bow to the will of our heavenly Father, we feel to express our deep sorrow and regret at the death of our respected and beloved brother, President W. W. Blair, who was so suddenly taken from our ranks by the hand of death while attending to the trust reposed in him as a minister for Christ, and we feel that the church as a whole has lost one of her ablest and best men. We hereby extend and express our sympathy to his bereaved family. Resolved that these sentiments be spread upon our records, and that a copy of the same be prepared by the secretary of the district and sent to Sr. W. W. Blair. Treasurer's report was read, showing a balance of $6.97. Report of court appointed on case of Elder A. Himes was read and adopted, sustaining the calling in of his license by president of the district. Report of committee on case of Amy A. Page and Mabel Gaulter was received and further action deferred until October conference. Committee on case of Sr. Martha Dunlavy recommended that the Pleasanton (formerly Little River) branch restore her name on their branch record and grant her a letter of removal to the Nebraska City branch. Adopted. A question was propounded regarding the care of local houses of worship, whose duty, etc. Moved to refer to a committee to report at next conference. Carried. R. M. Elvin, E. L. Kelley, and R. S. Salyards committee. Report of district Sunday school association was read, showing an increase of three schools, the work being onward, and encouraging. Resolved that at the October conference a committee shall be appointed to draft rules of representation. Carried. Adjourned to meet at Lucas, Iowa, in October, date to be fixed by president of district. The services were well attended, especially the preaching services. Saints were present from various branches in the district, as well as from the Nauvoo and Des Moines districts. The business was transacted pleasantly and without a jar. The Spirit of Christ was present, bringing peace and the fraternal feeling so noticeable in such gatherings of the Saints, and characterized the entire conference.

SOUTHWESTERN TEXAS.

Conference convened at San Antonio, Texas, June 12; Vice President O. D. Johnson in the chair; L. L. Wight, president, present; W. H. Davenport clerk. Ministry reporting: Elders H. P. Curtis, L. L. Wight, C. Jackson, J. A. Currie baptized 1; Priests J. P. Neal, W. W. Willis; Teacher C. N. Powell. Bishop's agent's report: received since last report $14.60; paid out $1.50; due church $13.10. Branch reports: Bandera 41. Oak Wood 75; 1 withdrew. Medina City, no report. Crowfield Jackson was elected district president, W. H. Davenport clerk. O. D. Johnson resigned as Bishop's agent, L. L. Wight was recommended for Bishop's agent. The speakers were L. L. Wight, J. A. Currie, and H. P. Curtis. Adjourned to meet at Pipe Creek schoolhouse, Bandera County, Texas, November 20, to continue over Sunday, 22d.

SOUTH SEAS.

The annual conference of the South Sea Islands mission convened at Turipaoa, Manihi, Paumotu Group, on April 6, at eight a. m. Prayer by Secretary Pohemiti. The following were the officers elected: President, L. R. Devore; president's counselors, Hubert Case and Louis Bellais; secretary, D. M. Pohemiti; assistants, Petero and Tuira; American secretary, W. S. McGrath. Minutes of last conference read and approved. Reports of American missionaries, native missionaries, secretary, the priests', teachers', and deacons' quorums read and accepted. Reports of Elders Taihia, Araiaiti, and Mauritere, and Deacons Maui, Tapehu, and Varoa, not yet members of quorums, read and accepted. Adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

Afternoon session opened with prayer by Louis Bellais. Minutes of morning session read and accepted. Report of the Quorum of Elders was read and approved. Report of Hotu, Bishop's agent of the Fakarava division, was read, and President Devore was authorized to select a committee to audit the books and report as soon as possible. Committee, Petero and Alfred Sanford. Report of Metuaore, Bishop's agent for the Tahiti division, was read, and on motion was turned over to the auditing committee. The question of paying off the debt on the Evanelia which had been incurred by the rigging of her was then brought up for discussion and it was decided unanimously that the conference cancel the debt at once. Then the means to be employed in procuring the money was discussed. A motion was made and seconded that the debt be divided, each division paying half, but it was rejected as being unfair. A resolution was then passed that the debt be paid by subscription, and that the subscription be taken up at to-morrow morning session. The matter of fixing the missionary vessel Evanelia then came up as she was reported to be unseaworthy, and that the Governor had refused to allow her to go to sea, therefore necessitating the removal of the copper and caulking of her seams, as she had been bumping among the rocks so much—through the neglect, ignorance, and carelessness of the Captain—that her seams were all open and she was leaking so that the pump had to be kept going almost continually. After the copper was taken off it could not be put back on as it was perfectly rotten and was of such an inferior grade that it broke all to pieces. Thus new copper had to be put on or the vessel would be all worm-eaten in a short time and the ship would only last a few years. It was decided unanimously to copper the vessel and repair any other damages that had been done during the past year. The question was then discussed as to how the vessel was to be run the next year, nearly all being dissatisfied with the manner in which she had been run during the past year. President Devore stated that the missionaries and Bishop's agents had considered the matter and had decided that the best plan was to put her into the hands of Bro. W. S. McGrath to trade in and carry the missionaries, as he had several offers from large trading houses in Tahiti either for him to trade in the vessel or leave her and trade on land. He also had an offer of "supercargo" on a schooner at $150 a month, which offer he refused as the missionaries and Bishop's agents were unwilling that he should leave the Evanelia, the natives being perfectly incapable of commanding her. During the past year he had been on board, but had no authority, as he had shipped as sailor, and though in every instance where the vessel came to harm he had warned them of the danger the captain refused to take the advice of a "sailor," except when he was at sea with a foul wind and got out of his reckoning; in such cases he always left it to Bro. McGrath to navigate her. A motion was then made and carried that the church fix up the vessel, recoppering, etc., and place her in Bro. McGrath's hands. Carried. A motion to adjourn until to-morrow morning at eight o'clock was carried.

Tuesday morning session opened with prayer by Elder Petero. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. The work of collecting the money to pay off the debt on the Evanelia was then commenced, but it lacked $124.60 (Chile) of being enough, and it was finally decided to take that amount out of the building fund, and replace it next conference. The question of building or buying a small schooner for the benefit of Takaraoa, Manihi, and Takapoto branches—to assist them in getting to conference—was brought up by the said branches, they wishing to bear the expense themselves. After considerable discussion it was decided to submit the matter to Bishop Kelley and abide by his decision. Conference adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

Afternoon session opened with prayer by assistant secretary, Tuira. The auditing committee reported having found the Bishop's agent's books correct. Their report was accepted and the committee discharged. A letter from the Chief of Tubuai, and others, offering the land on which the new church on that island is built, as a gift to the church, was read and the gift gratefully accepted. A committee was appointed to investigate the matter of getting land for the purpose of building a church on the island of Fakarava. On motion a committee was appointed to investigate the matter of buying the land upon which the church stands at Tamarie, Anaa, as Petero reported that it could be bought for $250. There is a fine stone church upon the premises, which is claimed by the Utah people, but which belongs rightly to the Reorganization, so to settle the dispute the owner of the land would not let either have it, but has lately offered the land to us for $250, thus giving us the right to the church. Petero, Hotu, and Pohemiti were appointed as a committee. A resolution was passed doing away with the October conference. Viriamu, of Manihi, was elected president of the Fakara division and Louis Bellias president of the Tahiti division. The subject of procuring a printing outfit was then discussed and finally decided to leave it until next conference, as the mission could not raise sufficient means at present. Conference adjourned until 7:30 p. m.

Evening session opened with prayer by Metuaore. Minutes of afternoon session read and accepted. Secretary Pohemiti asked the conference to appoint a committee of two to assist him in making out his report to Secretary Stebbins. Alfred Sanford and Petero were appointed. Many ordinations were refused as being unnecessary. Resolution passed authorizing Elders John Hawkins and Tapuni to dedicate the new church at Tubai. Following is a summary of the work done in the mission during the past year as far as reported:—

	Ser.	Bap.	Ord.	Ad.	Ch.Bl.	Mar.
White Missionaries	449	31	6	179	12	6
Native	214	3	2	21	10	2

	3,394	111	19	699	69	19

Disposition of Missionaries: Bro Janssen to labor among the Windward Islands; John Hawkins, Tubai, Tapuni, Tubuai, and adjacent isles; John Purahui, Vaitataki; Hubert Case, Hao and adjacent isles; Teaia, Rarotongia. The question of where the conference in 1897 is to be held was decided almost unanimously in favor of Kaukura.

Resolution was passed that the church assist and sustain the government of France as far as lies in its power. A resolution of thanks and gratitude was tendered Sr. Devore for the sacrifices she has made in laboring among the islands for so long, and for the manner in which she has labored in organizing and conducting the Sunday schools. Motion carried sustaining all the authorities of the church. Resolution passed sustaining the Sunday schools organized by Sr. Devore. Resolution was passed thanking Bro. Devore for the heroic manner in which he has labored in this mission and overcome the many difficulties which lay in his path. Resolution passed sustaining the Bishop's agents and secretaries. Bro. Devore then delivered a touching address to conference, during which there were few dry eyes in the building, they realizing the sterling worth of the servant of God who was bidding them farewell, never to meet again until Zion is established. Elder Case made a short and touching address, after which President Devore closed the conference with prayer.

W. S. McGRATH.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Conference convened at Cash, Michigan, June 13; F. M. Cooper and J. A. Grant presidents, A. E. Hicks secretary, assisted by W. J. Smith. Branch reports: Bay Port 98, loss 1; Applegate 32, gain 2; German 23, no change; Evergreen 100, gain 27; Huron Center 70, gain 3; East Fremont 34, gain 4; For-ester 27, gain 1; Juniata 63, loss 2. Ministry reporting: Elders L. Phelps, baptized 10, W. J. Smith baptized 10, R. E. Grant baptized 32, F. M. Cooper, E. Delong baptized 2, W. Davis baptized 8, A. Barr baptized 2, W. Dowker baptized 1, J. A. Grant; Priests A. P. Dewolf and P. W. Surbrook. Bishop's agent's report: On hand and received since last report $714.27; expenditures $690.52; on hand $23.65. [Figures erroneous.—Ed.] J. A. Grant sustained district president, Wm. Davis elected district secretary, A. Barr sustained Bishop's agent. Preaching by J. A. Grant, A. Barr, R. E. Grant, W. J. Smith, F. M. Cooper, and E. Delong. Adjourned to meet at Bay Port at the call of the president.

Sunday School Associations.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Convention of the Northeastern Missouri district convened at Huntsville, Missouri, June 19, at 9:30 a. m.; J. A. Tanner superintendent, Allie Thorburn secretary. Reports were received from Higbee and Bevier schools. Number of schools in district 2. Number of delegates present 12. On hand last report $15.40; received since $2.15; total $17.55. Officers chosen for the ensuing year: Louise Palfrey superintendent, Allie Thorburn assistant superintendent, M. J. Richard secretary and treasurer. Afternoon lesson, a talk, entitled, Principles essential to a successful Sunday school, by Louise Palfrey, in which she used a tree illustrating the different principles it takes to make a Sunday school successful. It was beautifully illustrated, indeed, and well worthy of our earnest consideration. Intermediate teaching by J. A. Tanner, after which criticisms were invited. Paper, Are we pursuing the best methods in our convention? Mary A. Richard, which was very interesting. Brief testimonies of the Sunday school work were listened to from Brn. T. W. Chatburn, M. M. Turpen, J. R. Lambert, J. A. Tanner, and Srs. Louise Palfrey, Maggie Kelso, M. A. Richard, and Allie Thorburn. A peaceful spirit prevailed and we heartily rejoiced that we had enlisted in so noble a work as the Sunday school, and we felt to praise God from whom all blessings flow. Evening session consisted of music and an address by J. R. Lambert on Sunday school work. Adjourned to meet in Salt River, Friday previous to district conference.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.

The Millersburg, Buffalo Prairie, and White Eagle Sunday schools united for the purpose of having a quarterly review. We met at ten a. m. The usual time was given to the day's lesson, after which were black-board exercises, conducted by Sr. Florence Holmes. At 11:30 Elder D. S. Holmes delivered an instructive sermon on the Ten Commandments. Then came the basket dinner, which is always a pleasant feature of the day at Buffalo Prairie.

In the afternoon was given a program, which showed the development of talent among our young people. The topics chosen were: Serve God, Keep the Sabbath; and Honor thy parents, each school being assigned a different subject. Songs, papers, recitations, and readings were prepared with appropriateness.

Nature favored us with a beautiful day, therefore a large crowd attended, and I think all who were present will commend the statement, that our first Sunday school union was a complete success. We hope to keep the good work rolling on, and will meet at Millersburg at the close of next quarter.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENTS.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

The Saints and friends of the Southern Indiana district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will please take notice that owing to the transfer of Bro. James M. Scott, Bishop's agent for said district, to labor in other missionary fields, it has become necessary to make an appointment of new agent for said district. At the district conference of the Southern Indiana district, Bro. William C. Marshall, of Wirt, Indiana, was duly recommended for the position of agent; and in accordance with the request of the said conference I have this day duly authorized the said William C. Marshall to act as agent of the Bishopric for the aforementioned district.

To the former agent, Bro. James M. Scott, I also desire to express the thanks of the Bishopric for his diligent labors in behalf of the financial interests of the church in Southern Indiana. May the Lord bless and prosper him abundantly in his new field of labor.

It would greatly advance the work in Southern Indiana could the Saints and friends of the cause awake to the necessity of each and every one contributing his or her mite according as the Lord has blessed each, placing the same in the hands of the agent. The duty of one in this matter is but the duty of all; and nothing would more encourage the ministry and move grandly forward the work in each and every district in the church than to realize that every member was fulfilling to the best of his ability the law of Christ in temporal matters as well as spiritual.

Trusting that wisdom and fruitfulness may follow the new appointment, I am,

Very truly yours,

E. L. KELLEY.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 1, 1896.

MINNESOTA REUNION.

The reunion is over, and the Saints have returned to their homes. Our meetings were in every way a success, and we received the best of treatment from the citizens of Fergus Falls. Five were baptized, Bro. I. N. Roberts officiating. The preaching was exceptionally good. Saints were well pleased with Bro. E. L. Kelley, but were much disappointed at not seeing Bro. Joseph. All wished to be remembered kindly to him. A spirit of love and union was exhibited all through our meetings. All seemed to be happy. The meetings closed Sunday night, with the expectation of bringing the tent here in the near future.

I was favored with a seat in Bro. William Nunns' family carriage, and an invitation to come with him to this place; so we came home yesterday, sixty miles, a long day's drive. We stopped at Brother Andrew Tabbut's, and visited him a couple of hours. While expressions of sympathy for poor Bro. Tabbut were the order, I could not feel depressed. A man who has lived a long and active life, filled with good deeds, whose machinery of life has worn out, lies waiting and seemingly anxiously looking for his deliverance, ready to go, and only waiting the summons home, is not to me a subject of pity. His sufferings are not great now; his mind is clear and vigorous, and loves to dwell on the hope he has for what waits him in the future life. We left him last evening in good spirits, but a little grieved because we did not stay over night with them. The night drive was cool, while the day drive was hot, but O, the mosquitoes! they were cruel and came in swarms. We arrived here at midnight, all glad we had made the drive. If all our reunions are as much of a success as the one just past, a good work will be done this year. Many of the citizens expressed themselves as very well pleased. Suspicion and prejudice seemed to melt away as we became acquainted. I am satisfied a good work can eventually be accomplished there. A resolution was entertained to hold another next June at the same place.

A. H. SMITH.

DETROIT, Minnesota, June 30, 1896.

A DAY AT GALLAND'S GROVE, IOWA.

On Sunday, June 28, 1896, the Saints, friends, and neighbors of the Galland's Grove branch assembled at their church in the Grove to pay a tribute of love and respect to the memory of our departed brother and friend, President W. W. Blair. The church was richly and profusely decorated with flowers and ferns; from the ceiling hung festoons of green, and was appropriately draped in black, relieved by white here and there. The flowers, both cut and house plants, were profuse in variety and rich in the beauty of their colors. An enlarged portrait of Bro. Blair was furnished by Sr. Mary Hawley, appropriately draped and hung over the pulpit. A banner of black with ornamental letters of white, inscribed, "In memory of W. W. Blair," furnished by Srs. Fanny Pett and Mary A. Shaw, was hung beside the portrait. Services began by a voluntary, Hymnal 245, beautifully rendered by the choir. Hymn 184, Hymnal, was sung, prayer was offered by the writer; after which the anthem "Vital Spark" was sung by the choir. Bro. Charles Derry was by invitation the speaker for the occasion. He read for a lesson the 90th Psalm. Hymn 246, Hymnal, was sung. The speaker then used for a text Psalms 58:11, "Verily there is a reward for the righteous," and Isaiah 3:10, "Say unto the righteous, that it shall be well with them: for they shall eat the fruit of their doings." A brief memorial of the life and labors of Bro. Blair was read, and in the course of his remarks the speaker said, that there was no place, he believed, where the memory of our departed brother was more dear than it was to the Saints and friends in Galland's Grove. The discourse was most appropriate and pathetic and the writer noticed tears in many eyes when the speaker alluded to the brotherly and kindly associations had with many then present. It was with some emotion on the part of the speaker when he related incidents that occurred in his associations in the ministry and otherwise with our departed brother. Bro. Derry preached in the afternoon, the congregations being unusually large on both occasions. It will be a day long to be remembered for the quiet and sympathy and solemnity that characterized the occasion.

JOHN PETT.

July 1, 1896.

BORN.

HALEY.—Susie Augustie was born to Bro. Arthur and Sr. Artilla Haley, at Avenue City, Missouri, April 19, 1896. Blessed at Pleasant Grove conference, June 21, 1896, by Elders J. M. Terry and T. T. Hinderks.

WELLS.—George Ora, son of Bro. Richard and Sr. Ella Wells, was born May 6, 1896. Blessed at Far West, Missouri, district conference, June 21, 1896, by Elders T. T. Hinderks and J. M. Terry.

GUNSOLLEY.—At Dakota City, Iowa, June 11, 1896, to Bro. Victor W. and Sr. Olivia F. Gunsolley, a son; blessed at their home June 27, by Elder C. J. Hunt, and named Verne Victor.

EVANS.—At Hiteman, Iowa, June 2, 1896, to Bro. Wm. E. and Sr. Martha D. Evans, a daughter, and named Mary Ann. Blessed July 2, 1896, by Elder Robt. M. Elvin.

DIED.

FIELDIN.—At Fall River, Massachusetts, June 14, 1896, Sr. Sadie J. Fieldin. She was born at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, June 17, 1871; was the daughter of John C. and Bethany French. Had previously been a member of the Methodist Church. She joined the Latter Day Saints at the Plainville reunion in 1894, being baptized by Elder U. W. Greene, and received satisfactory confirmation of truth of the gospel. The first day of January, 1896, she was joined in matrimony to Dr. J. W. Fieldin. Notwithstanding a loving husband and pleasant home, death intruded with unalterable decree. The same young men who six months before acted the part of ushers and led the happy procession down the isle of the Saints' chapel to the wedding ceremony were bearers at the funeral; the cheerful white and orange blossom adornment were now changed to sombre hue and crape. The funeral was private, from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Moses Sheehy. Funeral sermon by Elder F. M. Sheehy, assisted by Elder John Smith, pastor of the Saints' Church, and Rev. J. T. Barlow, pastor of the Methodist Church, where the bereaved husband is an active member.

STEWART.—At Kirtland, Ohio, June 23, 1896, Archibald Stewart. He was born in Johnstown, Scotland, March 22, 1813. Funeral conducted by Elder L. W. Powell. Mr. Stewart was the father of Sr. Jessie Stewart, with whom he made his home.

HANSON.—Near Hillsdale, Montana, May 3, 1896, Ora William, infant son of W. F. and Millie Hanson. Was born at Lamoni, Iowa, September 24, 1895; blessed December 8, 1895. He was a healthy, happy, and lovely child, and bore his suffering very patiently.

God has called our darling Ora
To his home beyond the sky;
He who gave him hath recalled him,
Angels guide him now on high.

Shall mortals with a weak embrace
His heavenly flight detain?
Ah, no! the Father's will be done,
He was too pure to here remain.

Like a sunbeam shone his presence
Through the home he truly blessed;
But the lovely blossom faded;
He has gone home to his rest.

MEYERS.—At St. Clair, Franklin County, Missouri, June 18, 1896, George Arthur Meyers. Was born May 31, 1886, at Lucas, Iowa; was baptized and confirmed a member of the Reorganized Church September 22, 1895, by Elder A. S. Davison. His mother died when he was a babe and he was reared by his foster parents, Bro. and Sr. Davison. He was miraculously restored to life, report of which was in Ensign of October 5. He was a good boy. The Christian Endeavor Society, of which he was a member, attended the funeral. Congregational church was filled with sympathizing friends. Services conducted by Elder M. H. Bond.

WHITEHOUSE.—Sr. Elizabeth Whitehouse, at Farmington, Illinois, June 21, 1896. She was born May 25, 1856, at Merthyr Tydvil, Wales. Came with her parents to America in 1858 and located at Mineral Ridge, Ohio; afterwards moved to Canton, Illinois, then in course of years to Bevier, Missouri, where she met with John Whitehouse, and was married to him August 12, 1884. He and daughter remain to mourn her death. She made profession of faith in Christ at Brookfield, Ohio, in 1868, and was baptized by Wm. Lewis. She came to this place in 1894 and united with Farmington branch. Her faith in Christ was unflinching, while all her tribulations seemed to draw her nearer to Lord. During her last illness, in which she suffered much, she frequently said she was ready and willing to go if it was the Lord's will. Her pilgrimage has been patiently endured, her warfare valiantly fought, she rests from her labors in peace. Funeral service was held at the gospel tent, June 22, 1896, Bro. T. J. Sheldon in charge, Elder James McKiernan delivering the sermon. Interment at Oak Ridge Cemetery, Farmington, Illinois.

 Bro. H. C. Tharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes
 April 23, 1896:—
 "Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco.
 It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured.
 . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE
USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.
 From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.
 Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer
 from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies,
 among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.
 Yours respectfully,
 P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR
WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day,"
 "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

BAPTIST TROUBLES.

THE Baptists are now much agitated over the deliverances of Dr. Whitsitt. He has developed a situation which is exceedingly embarrassing to those who stand for immersion alone as baptism, and for Baptists as the only true apostolic church having, as they claim, transmitted this only baptism in succession to the present day. However ridiculous these claims have appeared to the learned world, certain Baptists, "land markers," as they would be called, have fought valiantly to hold this position.

But now Dr. Whitsitt, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at Louisville, Kentucky, and successor of the eminent Dr. Broadus, throws a bomb which demolishes this citadel of Baptist faith at one fell explosion. This is what he says [The first part of Dr. Whitsitt's statement was given in last week's Herald cover]:—

"In an article that may be seen in the Southern Baptist Convention Teacher for the current month of April, Prof. H. C. Vedder adds his eminent authority to the view maintained by me. He says: 'Baptists did not always practice immersion exclusively; both the Ana-baptists of the Continent and the early English Baptists practiced sprinkling and pouring for a time as well as immersion. Gradually they came to believe that the only baptism the New Testament knows is immersion.' Thus it will be seen that the three most eminent masters of Baptist history in our century accept my discovery. In fact, it has now become a universal possession among scholars, a commonplace in this department. I feel well repaid for the many reproaches I have endured for making and maintaining this discovery."

In conclusion Dr. Whitsitt declares:—

"I do not claim to be infallible, and yet in other instances where I have opened a new way, I have found recognition and approval by the foremost authorities of our times. I have hopes that these will all stand with me on this ground likewise. Years may elapse before that result shall be declared, but I am accustomed to wait."

The foregoing is not new information to all the Baptist preachers. A considerable number were aware of the facts which Dr. Whitsitt sets forth, but to the exclusives, the land markers, it is a terrible jolt which they make no effort to conceal.

Dr. Ray, editor of the American Baptist Flag, St. Louis, says:—

"The statements of Dr. Whitsitt in the Independent, in the encyclopedia and in the Examiner have accomplished more harm to the Church of Christ than Dr. Whitsitt could counteract were he to live a hundred years. It would be better, we think, to have a Presbyterian or a Methodist as the president of the Theological Seminary than for Dr. Whitsitt to retain his position under the circumstances."

To men outside the Baptist fold this confusion and consternation seems quite useless. Dr. Whitsitt is an eminent scholar. He tells what he found in the British Museum. If the records are as he states, that settles the question. If not, the refutation is easy. But is it conceivable that the eminent scholars referred to can either be deceived or that they should state falsely.

Most Christian people have constantly held that faith and life are the test of true discipleship, and not the mode of an ordinance.

It is reported that the trustees of the seminary will stand by President Whitsitt. Truth is of more value than any Church traditions. The Baptist Church maintains a high standard of Christian character, and has borne a noble part in the propagation of Christian faith. If her leaders have concluded that immersion alone is scriptural baptism, let them stand on that ground and defend it as well as they can. But the pretense of having perpetuated immersion in unbroken succession from the apostles, and be thereby the one only apostolic Church, has always been regarded by other Churches as a baseless pretense and a bigotry unworthy so noble a people. No Church can afford to pervert history in defense of such claims. Of this tenor, and quite in contrast with the utterances of its neighbor, the Baptist Flag, is what the Central Baptist, of St. Louis, has to say on the subject. The following utterances from this paper are Christian and manly:—

"It was exceedingly fortunate that no attempt was made either to correct or to cover up Baptist history by the utterances in the convention. The better way is to have the whole field explored and all the records examined anew that the exact truth may be brought out. If Roger Williams was never immersed, every Baptist in the land will be glad to find it out, and will still be a Baptist. If immersion was introduced from Holland into England about the year 1641, let us have the records in a full and frank presentation. If Dr. Whitsitt is right, then we all owe him our gratitude; if he is wrong, he owes us a retraction. In either case it is better for the court to hear the testimony first and render its decision afterwards."—Arkansas Methodist, June 3, 1896.

SCANDAL.

A woman to the holy father went—
Confession of sin was her intent:
And so her misdemeanors, great and small,
She faithfully rehearsed them all;
And, chiefest in her catalogue of sin,
She owned that she a talebearer had been,
And borne a bit of scandal up and down
To all the long-tongued gossips in the town.
The holy father, for her other sin,
Granted the absolution asked of him;
But while for all the rest he pardon gave,
He told her this offense was very grave,
And that to do fit penance she must go
Out by the wayside where the thistles grow,
And gather the largest, ripest one,
Scatter its seeds, and that when this was done,
She must come back again another day
To tell him his commands she did obey.
The woman, thinking this a penance light,
Hastened to do his will that very night,
Feeling right glad she had escaped so well.
Next day but one she went the priest to tell;
The priest sat still and heard her story through,
Then said, "There's something still for you to do;
Those little thistle seeds which you have sown,
I bid you go regather—every one."
The woman said, "But, father, 'twould be in vain
To try to gather up those seeds again;
The winds have scattered them both far and wide,
Over the meadowed vale and mountain side."
The father answered, "Now, I hope from this,
The lesson I have taught you will not miss;
You cannot gather back the scattered seeds,
Which far and wide will grow to noxious weeds;
Nor can the mischief once by scandal sown
By any penance be again undone."

Those who desire to be thoroughly posted on the great issues now before the country cannot afford to be without the July Arena. The question which undoubtedly takes precedence over all other questions at the present time is the money question. This subject is exhaustively dealt with, the Editor, Mr. B. O. Flower, in addition to some stirring editorials, contributes two remarkably strong papers to the controversy, one of which embodies the views of such prominent and authoritative thinkers as the noted financier and banker, Jay Cooke, Wm. P. St. John, president of the Mercantile National Bank of New York, and Judge Walter Clark, LL. D., of the Supreme Bench of North Carolina. H. F. Bartine, in a closely reasoned and well-written paper, replies to a recent article in the Forum, by M. Paul Leroy Beaulieu, in favor of gold monometallism. Mr. Bartine makes a strong case for the white metal and refutes M. Beaulieu's arguments in a clear and logical manner that is calculated to bring conviction to unprejudiced minds. Other economic and social problems are discussed by live thinkers in this number of the Arena.

HOW TO MANAGE THEIR KITCHENS.

Baltimore, Md., June 7.—The graduates of the Women's College, heard the baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. Dr. J. B. Van Meter, the dean.

Dean Van Meter gave the young women some wholesome advice on the treatment of servants in the home. He said that in the household the kitchen needs to be organized on the law of charity to the employé and thus only could the vexed question of domestic service be properly settled.

The servant should have a suitable room to live in, such as is fit for a girl to occupy. The mistress must learn to consult the esthetic side of the servant girl's life. When the servant feels that her employer has a heart as well as a stomach then will a great part of the servant problem be solved.

You should know all science, but you should also know your fellow-human beings, and if you find your education defective on this point determine that before you consider it completed you will overcome the deficiency.

The Southern Baptist convention, which held its sessions during several days past in Chattanooga, Tennessee, made a new departure in its proceedings on Sunday, May 10. Its ministers filled the thirty-eight pulpits of all denominations. The filling of pulpits in the unorthodox churches hitherto not recognized by Baptists was done for the first time in the history of the Southern Baptist convention.

HARVARD.

MEMORIAL TABLETS TO BE ERECTED.

Before the close of the present college year the Harvard Memorial Society, organized May, 1895, will place three bronze tablets, four feet in height by three and a half feet in width, on the front of Massachusetts Hall, opposite Harvard Hall. On each of the two side tablets will be inscribed the names of eleven noteworthy Harvard men, and on the center tablet will be given the main facts and dates in the history of the old hall itself. It is also the intention of the society to put up, if possible, a few bronze tablets, about one and a half feet in width, inscribed with the names of famous Harvard graduates, under the windows of the rooms which they once occupied. How many of these last tablets will be placed on the old buildings in the yard will probably depend on the amount of money that the society obtains before next June.

PUBLICATIONS WANTED.

The undersigned desires to purchase volumes 1, 2, and 3 of the Times and Seasons to complete the set; also volumes of the Messenger and Advocate, Millennial Star, or other publications of the early church. Volumes issued in the early times of the Utah Church are also wanted.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.
R. S. SALYARDS - - - ASSISTANT EDITOR.
HEMAN C. SMITH - - - CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, JULY 15, 1896.

AN IMPORTANT DOCUMENT HAS BEEN CHANGED.

In the Deseret News of June 30, 1896, appears an article from the pen of Franklin D. Richards, "Church Historian," of the church in Utah, seeking to explain the reasons for the differences which exist in the epistle from Liberty Jail, written by Joseph Smith, and others, March 20, 1839, as they appear in Millennial Star, and Times and Seasons, and reproduced in the SAINTS' HERALD, for June 3, 1896. We are glad to hear from Mr. Richards, and to have the privilege of examining his version of this important matter. After quoting our introductory remarks he states:—

1. The insinuations and impertinences contained in the foregoing would justify entire silence on the part of those who are directly or indirectly assailed. Such attacks deserve only the most profound contempt. But seeing that doubts are cast upon the correctness of historic documents, it is necessary for the public benefit to present the facts in the case.

2. The letter as published in the Times and Seasons of May, 1840, and that published in the Millennial Star in January, 1855, are correctly copied into the Herald. There is much in the latter which does not appear in the former. But it does not follow from those facts that anybody has been guilty of "corrupting the words of Joseph Smith since his death." In making that rash and serious charge it seems probable that "the wish was father to the thought," and it is certainly preferred in a most uncharitable and reckless spirit.

3. Is it not quite as reasonable to suppose that the letter as it appeared in the Times and Seasons was abbreviated to suit the limited size of that periodical, and also to suit those times and seasons when many things for prudence' sake were not fully made public? Did not the Lord command in some other cases that His servants should "hold their peace" concerning certain revelations until it became wise to declare them?

4. As to the necessity for condensation, that appears from an examination of the number of the Times and Seasons which contains the letter. It consists of sixteen pages. Four and a half pages are filled with the letter, one page is taken up with notices, leaving but ten and a half for other matter, and compelling the curtailment to a little more than two pages of the serial "History of the Persecution of the Church," the chief feature of the periodical.

5. But now as to the facts concerning the letter as it appeared in the Millennial Star: It was taken verbatim from the DESERET NEWS of January 26, 1854. By careful comparison, that has been definitely established. The unnecessary and ungenerous accusation against the then editor and publisher of the Millennial Star are thus shown to be as groundless as they are gratuitous.

6. But how did the editor and publisher of the DESERET NEWS obtain the matter as it appeared in that paper? It was taken, literally, from the History of Joseph Smith, written in Nauvoo, the volume containing it being that for the years 1838, 39, 40, 41, and 42, dating from November 2, 1838, and closing with July 30, 1842. It is to that volume that we are indebted for the various items of history and the text of the revelations of that period which are contained in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, and are accepted by the "Reorganized" church, as well as by the Church which has continued from April, 1830, to the present day. That volume with other Church records was brought to Utah, and they have been religiously preserved under the care of the several successive General Church Historians and Recorders. Elder Willard Richards, who was editor of the DESERET NEWS when the letter in dispute was published, was also the Church Historian.

7. But there is something more in evidence. The original letter, written in Liberty jail, has also been preserved with other important Church documents, and is now on file in the Historian's Office. Though somewhat yellow with age, it is complete and in good condition, and bears the personal signatures of Joseph Smith Jun., Hyrum Smith, Lyman Wight, Caleb Baldwin and Alexander McRae. The following affidavit should settle the matter in controversy:—

STATE OF UTAH, }
County of Salt Lake. } ss.

8. Charles W. Penrose and Daniel F. Collett, being first duly sworn, on oath say: We are over the age of 21 years; that we have carefully compared the copy of a letter written in Liberty jail, Clay county, Missouri, March 20, 1839, and signed Joseph Smith Jr., Hyrum Smith, Lyman Wight, Caleb Baldwin and Alexander McRae, as published in the Millennial Star of January 27, 1855, and in the DESERET NEWS of January 26, 1854, with the original manuscript letter of March 20, 1839, bearing the signatures of the said Joseph Smith Jr., Hyrum Smith, Lyman Wight, Caleb Baldwin and Alexander McRae, and find the printed copy and the original manuscript letter to be identically alike, except here and there a word which is incorrectly spelled in the original, but correctly in the printed copy. They are to all intents and purposes the same.

Witness our hands this 25th day of June, 1896.

CHARLES W. PENROSE,
Assistant Church Historian.
DANIEL F. COLLETT, Clerk.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 25th day of June, A. D. 1896.

JAMES JACK, Notary Public.

9. Instead, therefore, of the letter having been changed as charged ten years after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, it was copied into the current history of the Prophet during their lifetime and presumably under his direction and supervision.

10. By further investigation and comparison it will be seen that the letter written from Liberty jail at a later date and signed by the same persons, which appears in the Times and Seasons of July, 1840, and in the Millennial Star of February 10, 1855, was abbreviated and edited for that periodical in a similar manner to the preparation of the first letter for that purpose. In the Millennial Star it is given in full as it stands in the manuscript history. In the July Times and Seasons the word "Extract" is used in the heading, which does not appear in the May number. But critical comparison shows that similar work was done on both letters for publication in the Times and Seasons, and that if one may be properly called an extract the term is equally applicable to the other.

11. This explanation conveys no imputation against the editors, Messrs. E. Robinson and Don C. Smith. They doubtless acted with the full sanction of President Joseph Smith in giving but portions of both letters to the public at that time. There was not then, nor has there been since, any desire to "corrupt" the words of Joseph Smith. In the publication of the history of the Prophet, care has been taken both in the Millennial Star and in the DESERET NEWS to follow strictly the authentic records, and many important things previously published only in part appear for that reason in full in the DESERET NEWS and the Millennial Star.

Before rushing into print again as an accuser of the brethren, it is hoped that the parallelist of the Saints' Herald will be more careful both in his manner and in his matter.

FRANKLIN D. RICHARDS.

Historian and General Church Recorder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

We have taken the liberty of numbering the above paragraphs, and will make our reply under corresponding numbers.

1. We agree with Mr. Richards in this: That no matter what his opinion may be of our so-called "insinuations and impertinences," and no matter how much it may humble the dignity of the Church Historian to do so, yet when "the correctness of historic documents is questioned, the case demands attention by one who is made the custodian of such documents; and we hope Mr. Richards will continue his explanations until all points in this controversy are satisfactorily met. And Mr. Richards must admit, even if his version of the case be correct, that, judging from what is shown upon the face of the two letters as published, the presumptive evidence of corruption is strong.

2. If the only objection was that "There is much in the latter which does not appear in the former," then it would not follow "that anybody has been guilty of corrupting the words of Joseph Smith since his death." But that is not the point we raised; the point is this: Much of that found in the former and professedly reproduced in the latter is different in word and in meaning. This must be very apparent to the reader, but we will cite a few of the many instances:—

TIMES AND SEASONS.

But "we dwell with those who hated peace" and who delighted in war and surely their unrelenting hearts,—their inhuman and murderous disposition—and their cruel practices, shock humanity, and defy description! It is truly a tale of sorrow, lamentation and woe, too much for humanity to contemplate. Such a transaction cannot be found where Kings and Tyrants reign, or among the savages of the wilderness, or even among the ferocious beasts of the forest. To think that man should be mangled for sport, after being cruelly put to death. Women have their last morsel stolen from them, while their helpless children were clinging around them and crying for food—and then, to gratify the hellish desires of their more than inhuman oppressors, be violated, is horrid in the extreme.

We think we should have got out of our prison house, at the time Elder Rigdon got a writ of habeas corpus, had not our own lawyers interpreted the law contrary to what it reads, and against us, which prevented us from introducing our witnesses before the mock court, they have done us much harm from the beginning; they have lately acknowledged that the law was misconstrued, and then tantalized our feelings with it, and have now entirely forsaken us, have forfeited both their oaths, and their bonds, and are coworkers with the mob.

The Sheriff and Jailer did not blame us for our attempt; it was a fine breach, and cost the country a round sum; public opinion says, we ought to have been permitted to have made our escape, but then the disgrace would have been on us, but now it must come on the State. We know that there cannot be any charge sustained against us, and that the conduct of the mob—the murderers at Hawn's mill—the exterminating order of Governor Boggs, and the one sided, rascally proceedings of the Legislature, has damned the state of Missouri to all eternity.

In this last extract the words are not only changed, but the person of pronouns is so changed in the Millennial Star, as to put into the mouth of the public, sentiments which, according to the Times and Seasons, were expressed by the authors of the epistle. Does the necessity for abridgment make such work as this necessary?

Here is the point concerning plurality of gods to which we called especial attention: In the Star, and if Mr. Richards is right in the original letter these words are used: "in the midst of the council of the Eternal God of all other Gods, before this world was," etc. This sentiment is expressed in just eighteen words. According to this apologist this was too long for the available space in the Times and Seasons, so they condensed it as follows: "in the midst of the council of heaven in the presence of the eternal God, before the world was;" nineteen words. Here is one more word in the condensed form than it is said appears in the original; besides, the sentiment as well as an important doctrinal point is changed.

This will not do. It is hoped that before rushing into print again the apologist of the Millennial Star "will be more careful both in his manner and in his matter."

Do not get in such a hurry as to cause you to write so rashly; all the time necessary will be given for explanation.

Other passages might be cited, but to cite all would be to recopy the articles entire, as very few sentences are exactly alike.

MILLENNIAL STAR.

But O! the unrelenting hand! the inhumanity and murderous disposition of this people! It shocks all nature; it beggars and defies all description; it is a tale of woe; a lamentable tale; yea, a sorrowful tale; too much to tell; too much for contemplation; too much to think of for a moment; too much for human beings; it cannot be found among the heathens; it cannot be found among the nations where kings and tyrants are enthroned; it cannot be found among the savages of the wilderness; yea, and I think it cannot be found among the wild and ferocious beasts of the forest—that a man should be mangled for sport! women be robbed of all that they have—their last morsel for subsistence, and then be violated to gratify the hellish desires of the mob, and finally left to perish, with their helpless offspring clinging around their necks.

O that we could be with you, brethren, and unbosom our feelings to you! We would tell, that we should have been liberated at the time Elder Rigdon was, on the writ of habeas corpus, had not our own lawyers interpreted the law, contrary to what it reads, against us; which prevented us from introducing our evidence before the mock court.

They have done us much harm from the beginning. They have of late acknowledged that the law was misconstrued, and tantalized our feelings with it, and have entirely forsaken us, and have forfeited their oaths, and their bonds; and we have a come back on them, for they are co-workers with the mob.

The sheriff and jailor did not blame us for our attempt; it was a fine breach, and cost the county a round sum; but public opinion says, that we ought to have been permitted to have made our escape; that then the disgrace would have been on us, but now it must come on the State; that there cannot be any charge sustained against us; and that the conduct of the mob, the murders committed at Haun's Mills, and the exterminating order of the Governor, and the one-sided, rascally proceedings of the Legislature, has damned the state of Missouri to all eternity.

3. Not quite so reasonable. When we find a document written and published by responsible authority without any intimation that it is abridged or that any liberties have been taken with it, and that document is published in the lifetime of its author; if after his death it is published in different form, the presumptive evidence is in favor of the correctness of the first.

Will Mr. Richards please inform us what there is in the article as published in the Star and not found in Times and Seasons which "for prudence' sake was not made public" in 1840? Again, will he explain why they would write from jail, where all documents written by them were subject to official inspection, things not prudent to make public?

Further, the charge of cowardice implied in this supposition is so foreign to the character of Joseph Smith, and the brave men who suffered with him, that the very mention of it is contemptible.

4. Our compositor after careful measurement and computation informs us that there are about six hundred and sixty words more in the Star than in the Times and Seasons, which would make one hundred ten lines, of Times and Seasons, or less than one page. There is much of the matter contained in this issue which could have been carried over without loss of interest or importance. Besides, the epistle could have been divided and a part carried over to the next month. This alleged reason for condensation is far-fetched and of little force; and it certainly furnishes no shadow of excuse for changing even what they did publish.

5. In so far as the Editor of the Millennial Star copied from the Deseret News in good faith, supposing the News to be correct, he is excusable and can only be charged with carelessness. We are glad to know this. We are not interested in criminating Mr. Richards or anyone else; but we are interested in knowing the facts. The Reorganization is in the field to investigate everything connected with the latter-day work, and to give the facts to the world.

We are not converts to the theory that prudential or other reasons justify the suppression of truth.

6. Will Mr. Richards permit us, or a committee appointed by us, to examine in his presence, the manuscript history referred to? One of the editorial staff of the HERALD expects to be in Utah sometime during the year, and he would take pleasure in examining this history and publishing just what he finds.

7. We also respectfully ask the privilege of examining this purported original letter. We have the signatures of some of the original signers, and would be glad to examine the handwriting, construction of sentences, etc. Are we not entitled to see documents introduced in evidence?

8. According to rules of evidence an affidavit is not the best evidence of the existence of a thing when the thing itself is obtainable, as it is confessed this thing is. Besides, Mr. Penrose and Mr. Collett do not certify to anything establishing the genuineness of the document examined by them.

9. There is nothing in this paragraph but an assertion based on a presumption, except the admission that the history which is relied on for evidence was not written by the hand of Joseph, and that it is only presumed that he either directed or supervised it. Thank you, we have suspected that for a long time.

10. This is too amusing to be considered seriously. The idea that because the July number has an extract of a letter, and it is so marked, that the letter in May number which is not so marked is an extract also. Is it not rather the presumption that as they published an extract in July and were careful to so state, that if the other had been an extract it would have been so expressed.

We are aware that "similar work was done" on several documents.

11. If Messrs. Robinson and Smith, "acted with the full sanction of President Joseph Smith," as admitted by Mr. Richards, in publishing the letter as they did in Times and Seasons, does it not follow that the letter as published by them is official? He had the undoubted right to revise or change his own production before publishing it; but it must be admitted that when it has been submitted to the public with his "full sanction," that it is an authoritative statement of his opinion. No one had the right to object, except his co-signers, and as they were all alive and present and protested not; we conclude that the epistle as published by Robinson and Smith is also an authoritative statement of their sentiment as well; so if there is a manuscript draft of this article written before such publication and differing from the published article, it is not official.

After the death of an author to go back of his published work and hunt up a manuscript that had subsequently been revised and corrected is questionable journalistic courtesy; whether the Millennial Star or the Deseret News is responsible.

We therefore insist that an Important Document HAS BEEN CHANGED.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PROBATION AFTER DEATH.

QUES.—Will those who are deprived of hearing the gospel in this life, but who hear and obey it in the spirit world, be entitled to the reward of the celestial glory?

Ans.—From the answer of two of the wise men, who say respectively, "I say, yes;" and, "Why not?" we should conclude that the concensus of opinion among the elders would be that, inasmuch as the justice and mercy of God are without dissimulation and are applicable equally to all, then those who for reasons beyond their control are not privileged to hear the gospel in the life of the flesh, but do hear it in the spirit world, should not be deprived of their chance to receive the highest and best within the gift of God, but should be permitted to obey, and receive and enjoy the full measure of peace, happiness, and glory following obedience to and observance of the laws and commands of God.

Peter, writing upon the subject states:—

For, for this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.—1 Pet. 4: 6.

To live according to God is to live, hear, believe, and obey, such of his commands and laws as men may, do, and can become acquainted with. This must be applicable to both conditions to be impartially effective and applicable to all.

Jesus stated in John 4: 23, that the Father sought those who would "worship" him "in spirit and in truth."

To worship God in spirit is to bring the spirit into obedience to God's Spirit. This may be done in the body, or in the spirit out of the body. Hence, as the text referred to shows that the hour then was "when the true worshipers" were to, "worship" "in spirit and in truth," we are warranted in concluding that this obedience and worship may be in either condition—in this or the spirit world.

The description of the terrestrial world, as stated in the vision, section 76, paragraph 6, of the Doctrine and Covenants, seems to include those whom the Son visited and preached the gospel to, "who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterward received it." But in reading the statement in 1 Peter respecting this class, it is discoverable that they were disobedient; that is, they heard but did not obey. This is also apparent in the clause cited, who "received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh," signifying that they did hear in the flesh but did not accept. Those who died without law; that is, who did not hear in either condition, are to receive of the terrestrial glory with "the honorable men of the earth who are blinded by the craftiness of men." This shows no promise to them who have had an opportunity in the flesh to hear and receive and who neglect or refuse to obey; but leaves it to be inferred from a consideration of the goodness, mercy, and impartiality of God that there is a promise to those who have no opportunity in the flesh to hear—that they shall have such opportunity in the spirit world; not in the prison house, but in the paradise, perhaps, and being obedient shall receive a condition similar to that which is accorded to those who in the flesh hear and obey. As the wise man said, "Why not?"

It is not pleasant for the elders of the everlasting gospel to preach a gospel of condemnation to the world; the gospel of hope and life is a much better theme. To hold out the idea that all who have not heard the gospel while in the life of the flesh are in no wise to be offered an opportunity to receive what others may and do become entitled to receive at the hands of God through hearing that gospel, is equivalent to saying that God's partiality saves a few, while others no better are lost; and this is to admit in a sense that the wisdom, goodness, and power of God are not equal to the salvation of all "without respect to persons." The faith of the Lord Jesus Christ is "without respect to persons," so far as its ministration in the gospel economy in the life of the flesh is concerned, and if so here, why not in the other sphere?

The questions, "Will those who hear the gospel in the spirit world and obey it, be entitled to and receive the resurrection of the just at the beginning of the millenium?" and "What condition are they to rise unto?" cannot be answered satisfactorily, it seems to us, unless it is permissible and correct to say that obedience to the commands and laws of God in the life of the flesh and in the spirit world, or life after death—other things being equal—is to be followed by the same result.

It would seem too, that the principle stated by Paul in 1 Corinthians 15: 22, 23, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order. Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming," should have a wider, more far-reaching application than to the mere rising of the body of man at the final resurrection. And, as it is just to believe that when Jesus shall come, all the faithful men and women of the past who died before his resurrection shall come with him, including the hosts of the redeemed through belief and obedience in the spirit world before the preaching of the gospel in his time, as well as those who heard and obeyed in the flesh; so also shall they come with him who have heard and believed in the flesh and in the spirit, and have died and shall die since his resurrection, and before his second coming—"an innumerable host, which no man can number."

In no other way can we make broad the declaration to the shepherds on Bethlehem's plains, "Peace on earth; Good will to men;" and justify our conception of God's mercy and goodness in the gospel to ALL MEN. In no other way can we comprehend the realization of Simeon's prophetic statement:—

Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.—Luke 2: 29-32.

It is the business of the elders to preach life and salvation offered to men through Christ by reason of their obedience to the commands and requirements of the gospel; and it is not necessary to teach them that they will have a chance to obey it in the life to come, if they neglect or refuse to hear and accept it here. It seems that Jesus did not assume to do this; but distinctly stated:—

If any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not: for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.—John 12: 47, 48.

If the "last day" here spoken of means the day of final settlement, at the great judgment, then those who have the opportunity to hear and accept or reject the words of that august messenger from God, the wonderful Redeemer, here in this life, have no promise of an opportunity of hearing and obeying it in the life to come in such a way as to be entitled to the resurrection that precedes the millennial reign, but must wait until that last day for what may await them, without the benefit of obedience to Christ.

It is better to teach what is clearly laid laid down and let the rest follow, as the Spirit may direct. It is not needful that we should know it all at once; but it is wise to be contented with "line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little;" rejoicing always in what we receive.

IT is to be hoped that the following, announced by cable, will not prevail in the Austrian Parliament.

BERLIN, July 5.—A bill introduced in the Diet of Austria by Deputy Gregory provides that all Jews shall be excluded from citizens' rights; that their property shall be confiscated, and that corporal punishment shall be reintroduced for criminals of the Hebrew race. Deputy Schneider offered an amendment making it a crime for a Jew to marry a Gentile.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOHN PETT, Dow City, Iowa, July 2:—

We held memorial services at the Grove last Sunday. I was requested to write a report and send to the Herald for publication. We are having good spiritual meetings at the Grove, and always quite a good attendance. The word of the Lord is being fulfilled in that the Saints are finding "grace and favor in the eyes of the people." I often think of the contrast between the present and the early days of the church, and of the willingness of the people to listen to, if many do not obey, the word. I often pray that more laborers may be sent into the harvest. All goes fairly well.

Bro. S. D. Allen writes thus, from Milton, Florida, the 8th inst., of the recent cyclone in the Southeast which destroyed property valued at a quarter of a million dollars:—

We have just had the worst storm that Western Florida has ever experienced. No deaths reported yet, but vast destruction of farm products,—and some stock and buildings. The elders will be listened to and sought after more eagerly soon, if the signs of the times continue to multiply.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SEVENTY-FIVE baptisms in the mission over which Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths presides, since the April Conference, is a pretty fair showing for the number of laborers in that field. Bro. Griffiths expresses himself as much pleased with the work of his colaborers, though he feels that their number is far below what it should be.

Bro. J. R. Lambert returned home on the 3d because of ill health. Bro. A. H. Smith was called home on the 9th on account of the serious illness of Sr. Smith. She is now improving.

Brn. William Crick and John Luff of the Ensign force visited Lamoni on and about the Fourth.

Bro. Columbus Scott returned to his field, the Des Moines district, on the 8th, after a brief visit at home. By the way, Bro. Scott has promised to discuss some important, leading, doctrinal questions in the HERALD at no distant day. We make this note for the purpose of suggesting that it would be well if more of our leading ministers would write for the "Original Articles" department. Comparatively little has been written on some leading topics, and much more could be presented by those having experience in meeting the errors of the religious world—those who advocate the truth and are able to contrast it with the popular theological errors and fallacies of the day. Some of the ministry have done comparatively well with the pen. We trust others will devote some of their time to the literary demands of the work as suggested. The field should be more carefully cultivated. We have some good matter on hand, but also have much that is but medium in grade—far below what the themes of gospel principles ought to bring out. Let us hear from you, brethren. Give us some good, thoughtful articles on gospel topics—plain, pointed, clear-cut, and convincing.

Bro. W. S. Pender secured insertion of a column article defensive of the faith in the Concordia, Kansas, Blade of June 26, in answer to a criticism which appeared in a late issue of the Empire and which was also published in the HERALD. Bro. Pender also obtained right to be heard in the Kansas of June 25, also issued at Concordia. His articles were timely and excellent in spirit. So goes the work, increasing the more opposed, thanks to the good Lord and the diligent workers.

In the HERALD of May 20 appears an item concerning the death of the late Shah of Persia, Nasir Ed-din, which stated: "From press accounts he was a brutal and absolute ruler who did not hesitate to take the lives of his subjects on any pretext." Later press accounts reverse this judgment or state to the contrary, that he was both humane and just as a ruler. We state the latter in justice to Nasir Ed din. We hope he was a wise and considerate ruler. We prefer to believe that he was.

Jacob A. Riis writes in the January Review of Reviews that there are a quarter of a million of Jews in New York; that five out of every seven are orthodox, and about the same proportion are very poor. He predicts that they will rise to affluence, however.

Brn. T. W. Chatburn and M. M. Turpen were at Moberly, Missouri, July 6, doing tent work with attendance all they could ask.

Bro. S. R. Burgess, and family, of St. Louis, Missouri, visited at Lamoni for a fortnight, including the Fourth of July. Before leaving for his home he purchased two lots in Graceland, in the interest of his son, Samuel A. Burgess, a steady, sober, and studious boy, now nearly of age. It was a good thing for the lad and a graceful indorsement of the College effort, fully appreciated.

Brn. D. W. Shirk and J. L. Dietrich write from Custer, South Dakota, July 6. They have labored at Edgemont, Custer, and Hot Springs, South Dakota; also at New Castle, Wyoming. Nine were baptized at Custer, a Sunday school was organized, and six children blessed, after which they proceeded to Hot Springs, South Dakota. The ministry in that field are requested to labor at Custer. Write Bro. Urial Lake, who lives four miles from Custer. Saints desire labor.

We call attention to the letter of Eld. S. G. Spencer, of the Utah church, in defense against the charge made by some one in Williamson county, Illinois, concerning dancing, as stated by Bro. I. N. White, in a recent issue. Mr. Spencer is qualified to speak for his own people; and, being in charge of their missionary work in that part of the country is probably in a position to know he writes about.

From Kirtland advices we learn that a fire destroyed the roof of the Kirtland Hotel, on Tuesday, the 9th. The loss, we understand, is fully covered by insurance. The building is owned by Bishop Kelley and was occupied by the family of Bro. W. H. Kelley. The hotel is a landmark, having sheltered Saints of past and present times. We are pleased to learn that it is to be repaired, long to survive, we trust, to accomodate visitors to the temple, to Kirtland, and to such conferences and other gatherings as may be held there.

GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.—The July, August, and September edition of the September Quarterly has been exhausted, although more than the usual number were printed. Over a thousand extra of all grades (not of each) were printed last issue, but the supply of Seniors was not large enough. This illustrates the necessity of orders being sent in advance—that the required number may be issued as soon as possible to properly estimate it.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard of the Bishopric has a word for the Saints in this issue. Those who love the work will appreciate the appeal made and will respond to it so far as in their power.

The date of the Nauvoo or Montrose reunion is announced. See notice of committee in this number.

SELECT READING FOR AUGUST MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

SISTERS:—Let me premise this reading with the thought that no matter how deeply we study, how closely we examine, how far we search for that which is admirable and good in home life, it will always be found resting upon the foundation of reverence (a). This quality must be possessed by the parents or we cannot reasonably expect to find it in the children. In short, I do not think it is saying too much when I say we will look in vain for it. Reverence for God and his law, is the broad underlying base upon which it must be founded, and true piety—the love of God filling our hearts and overflowing in acts of love to man, the only fountain from which it can be fed. Criticism, unduly indulged in, disrespect shown to others, fault-finding with the acts of those placed in positions of trust or responsibility, will weaken feelings of reverence in the hearts of our children, and if persisted in, will finally destroy them altogether. I am not an advocate of ignorance by any means, but if I knew that I had my life to live over, and to-day was given the privilege of choosing my parentage, I would say, "Give me the home of poverty, and parents who know but little of worldly wisdom, but in whose souls is implanted a sincere reverence for God,—for all things pure and beautiful,—in preference to a home of wealth, where the cynics smile and the words of criticism are constantly withering and blighting every genial influence and filling the air with the poison of asps, even while they talk eloquently and are peers of any in learning and culture. May I go farther than this and say there is in the homes of the land and of our church also, a crying want of this reverence to-day? Cast about, in your minds enter the homes where you are most familiar, and see if you cannot indorse this assertion. Let each of us then enter our own home and if, after a careful examination, we find the same state of things existing, is it not our duty, remembering the covenant we entered into at baptism, remembering our responsibility to the children God has given us, is it not our duty to "cease to do evil and learn to do well"?

SOME HOMES.

Our author writes, "We may admire abstract virtue, our intellect approves it, but it has little effect upon our own lives until it is embodied in living example (b). We may talk abstractly of the home influence which tends to develop noble character, and though conscience approves, little impression is made on the heart. But if we can look into homes and see these influences at work, if we can see father, mother, and children living the life and developing the characters we admire, this home life becomes a beautiful pattern for our own, an inspiration giving an impetus that aids us in attaining it in our own homes."

The writer then takes up and describes the home of Dean Stanley, afterwards Bishop of Norwich. We wish space and time permitted us to present the description in full, but we can only give place to a brief extract, showing the way Mrs. Stanly met her maternal duties.

"Like the model wife described by Solomon, she looked well and ate not the bread of idleness. But while making sure that physical needs were supplied, she never allowed these to usurp time which should be given to supplying the needs of their spiritual natures. She believed Christ's words, 'The life is more than meat, and the body than raiment,' and while giving her children food and raiment convenient for them she never failed to give them what was of infinitely more value—herself. They were not as finely dressed as the children of many a poor day-laborer, nor had they great variety of rich food to eat, but they did have the companionship of their mother; the contact of her mind with their minds, her heart upon their hearts. Her pleasures were in her husband and children, the simple, innocent enjoyments, without great variety or novelty, that all mothers may have. Here is her record of a day which she marked with a white stone, as one she enjoyed to the full: 'I walked with the girls, swung with them, drew with them, and I believe the power of sympathy makes me feel younger with them. It is delightful to be a girl again, the moments are really too precious to be lost. Then came our walk this evening, our returning and playing at cricket, drinking tea on the lawn, and breathing the sweet evening air in the garden; the cheerful happy group drawing round the table with books and pencils the armchair in sight of the moon. All these things I have enjoyed and they have caused pleasant thoughts and imaginings to pass through my mind. In short, my mind and body have been in perfect health and everything has tasted well to them, for that I believe is the secret of all happiness.'

"You see there is nothing here which any mother may not have,—companionship with her children,—and it matters not whether it be over drawing books or stocking darning, so that it be companionship—enjoyment of nature, simple home pleasures, healthy bodies, happy hearts. The key to all this strength and beauty of character is found in her deep spirituality, her strong faith in God and in prayer. To her God was an ever present help; to him she went in perfect confidence, in all the perplexities which mothers know, expecting and receiving his guidance.

"One of her prayers, preserved by her son, shows the sweet humility which characterized her spiritual life: 'O thou who hast in thy wisdom decreed the difficulties and temptations by which the road to thee and truth is surrounded, assist me to attain that simplicity, singleness, and purity of intention which may lead me best to discover the true way of serving and worshiping thee. Assist me to love thee, to think of thee, and to believe in thee as I ought. Assist me to throw away pride, prejudice, vanity, and all earthly passions in reading thy word; that amid the contending judgments of my fellow creatures I may rest my faith and my hope on what is essentially thine. Keep alive within me the thought of thee, to be the guide and standard of every thought, of every action, of every pursuit.' No wonder that from a closet where such prayers were breathed she went out into the home to be its light and joy. Of her it could be said that 'the heart of her husband doth safely trust in her.' In all his work for his people she was his wise counselor, his efficient helper. The rectory became the home of the parish, the center of all good, theoretical and practical. . . .

"All the five children who went out from that home made their mark upon the world for good. Each practically adopted the motto contained in the last entry of Dr. Arnold's diary, 'Let me labor to do God's will, yet not anxious that it should be done by me more than by others, if God disapproves of my doing it.' . . . The influence of that home was not confined to its own inmates. To the Stanley home in Alderly, and later, in Norwich, came hundreds from every rank in life, and not one went away unblessed.

"Here Jenny Lind came frequently during the life of the good bishop. On her way to America after his death, she stopped to visit the stricken household. Sitting on a low stool at Mrs. Stanley's feet, she told how the influence of that home decided her to dedicate the talent God had given her to doing good to her fellow creatures; how she had devoted money to founding a hospital, sending out Scripture readers, establishing temperance societies, and training schools. After she had described all, she said; 'And all this the Bishop of Norwich began in me; that is, it was in me, but it did not know how to come out.' Sitting thus at the feet of the mother of this home, with heart full of gratitude to its father, she sang, as it never had been sung before, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth.' With those sweet strains lingering in our ears, we close the doors of that home whose blessed influence reaches to every quarter of the globe."

The writer next takes us into the home of David Livingstone. "His ancestors were sturdy Scotchmen, boasting not of blue blood in their veins, but of staunch hearts in their bosoms. His grandfather said the only family tradition of which he felt proud was that of an old man who told him, when he was a boy, that he never heard of anyone in the family who was guilty of dishonesty. Old Mr. Livingstone often repeated this to his children, and always ended by charging them not to introduce the vice into the family. They seemed to have heeded the injunction, for, as far as we can trace them, their descendants were staunch, true, upright, downright honest men and women. His son Neil, David's father, inherited these qualities in unusual degree. He was a man of great spiritual earnestness, strong convictions, and indomitable courage in carrying them out; a strict teetotaler when teetotalism was almost unknown, the advocate of Sunday schools, missions, and prayer meetings when these things were considered the badge of fanaticism. He was by occupation a tea peddler. As he went from house to house, from town to town, he carried, besides his teas, tracts which he distributed, and never lost an opportunity to speak a word for his Master. In his family he was firm, but tender, and of gentle ways. He inherited his share of his father's rugged Scotch wit, which brightened the household life and made him a merry companion for his children, whose devoted love, as well as profound respect, he always commanded. . . .

"It was one of the rules of this household that every child must be in the house by sundown, at which time the door was locked (c). . . .

(d) "David Livingstone was always proud of the class from which he sprung; when the highest in the land were showering compliments upon him, he was wont to refer with loving pride to 'my own order, the honest poor.' The record on his parents' tombstone bears testimony to this feeling. 'This stone,' it says, 'is to show the resting place of Neil Livingstone and Agnes Hunter, his wife, and to express the thankfulness to God of their children, John, David, Janet, Charles, and Agnes, for poor and honest parents.' There is a world of pathos in this simple inscription, especially its first clause, 'to show the resting place'—it was not needed to perpetuate the memories of these faithful, loving parents; that lived in the hearts of their children, and will be perpetuated so long as the world's heart holds in reverence the blessed influence of a Christian home. For to this influence, as much as to his native genius, it is due, that to-day the Scotch weaver boy, whom all the world delights to honor as the great Christian explorer, sleeps in Westminster under the same arch that bends over the resting place of Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, Dean of Westminster. It is no accident that the poor coter's son and the son of a Bishop sleep beneath the same dome. It is one of God's own appointed sequences. The same influence pervaded the cottage and the palace, the same love to God and love to man, the same courage and spirit of self-sacrifice, the same devotion to principle when that principle was unpopular, the same instilling of earnest purposes into childish hearts, and training to industry and self-reliance, the same beautiful love and sweet companionship between parents and children and brothers and sisters, the same strength and sweetness united in both parents, for in both cases father and mother alike possessed strength and sweetness, the strength was not all the father's nor the sweetness all the mother's, as we see it in some families to their sorrow, but in each parent was found strength tempered by sweetness, and sweetness made resistless by strength."

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

- (a) Let the subject of reverence be fully discussed.
- (b) The different effect of abstract and embodied virtue.
- (c) At home when night comes.
- (d) Are the essentials of a well-ordered home limited to a favored class?

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR JULY.

"The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 30.

Thursday, July 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—James 5: 8-16.

Thursday, July 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Jeremiah 23: 3-8.

Thursday, July 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to hem tof the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace. Memory Verses.—Ezek. 36: 24-28.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. PAULINE RUBY, St. Louis, Missouri, asks ("if not asking too much," as she modestly expresses it) the sisters to appoint a day of fasting and prayer that her hearing may be restored, if God wills.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,
Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.
(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

1. HOW BEST teach geography in the Sunday school?

(a) By supplemental lessons before the school or in the class. (b) Let the scholars draw maps at home and bring to class for comparison, inspection, and grading. (c) Make an outline map and add places as they appear in the lessons.

2. Should the librarian confer with pupils and distribute books during the lesson hour? Decidedly no! No one would think of such a proceeding during the preaching of a sermon. The superintendent should see to it that the lesson hour is kept sacred, that from the pastor down no one be allowed to interrupt any teacher.

3. What would you do with the continual whisperer in the class?

Instead of talking so much myself I should give that pupil a chance to whisper for the benefit of the class.

4. How to increase the attendance of the primary scholars?

"Suffer the little children to come." Invite them. Get the parents' cooperation. Make the class a pleasant, helpful place. Keep the living Jesus in the midst.

5. Is it best to grade country schools?

As far as you can, apply the principle.

6. What should be the chief attraction of the Sunday school?

The Lord Jesus Christ—in the word of God and incarnate in men and women and children.

7. Is it advisable to use a cornet with Sunday school singing?

Yes, if it helps the school. If it is done to praise the Lord. "Praise him with the sound of the trumpet (Margin cornet)."—Ps. 150: 3.

8. If parents take no interest in the Sunday school, what shall take the place of their interest?

No one can take the parent's place. The Sunday school can in a measure become a religious home for the irreligious. And as Paul calls Timothy "My own son in the faith," so the Sunday school teacher can, in a way, fill a parent's place, but never as a parent can and should.

9. What shall we do with Spiritualism in Sunday school?

What shall we do with the boy that eats green, unripe apples? Advise against it? That will do no good. Give him some ripe apples and he has no use for the others. Fill the school so full of the Christ spirit that there will be no room for anything else.

—Question Drawer, S. S. Advance.

WHO WILL REPLY?

WHO will give an explanation of blackboard work in Sunday schools, plain and simple enough so that those who have never seen such work can understand it well enough to follow it out.

I have seen, a great many times, notices of "chalk-talks," blackboard exercises etc., in convention programs; and while those who were privileged to be there were benefited, many who are desirous of knowing more about such work are still "hungering and thirsting" after it, because of not knowing how to carry it on.

The wheel illustration of the journeyings of the Israelites in a late Herald is good and easily understood. Something simple is what we want. I once read an article on chalk work in a Methodist publication. It was profusely illustrated, but the work shown would take an artist to execute it. It was too difficult for beginners. I think it shows a spirit of wisdom to have the illustrations as plain as possible. What are they for? To show off artistic talent, or are they to make more plain the gospel truths in our lessons?

When you have a good thing, pass it along for the good of others by sending it to the Sunday School Department.

In a branch of the church the Saints are very widely scattered, the most of them living from eight to ten miles apart.

A few live within a radius of six miles and these have an organized Sunday school.

One sister, whose children are small and whose home is too far away to meet with the Sunday school, has sent for the Primary Quarterly and is trying to teach her little ones in a home school. She finds it hard to keep their attention; the children lack that feeling of restraint and reverence that is rightful and necessary to have in any meeting for the worship of God.

How shall she do that a more suitable observance of behavior in her home Sunday school be obtained?

NORMAL OUTLINE OF THE "MODEL TEACHER."

He should—

- 1. Be a Christian.
 - (a) In belief.
 - (b) In experience.
 - (c) In example.
- 2. Be a Church Member.
 - (a) In profession.
 - (b) In walk.
 - (c) In work.
- 3. Be a Student.
 - (a) Of the Bible.
 - (b) Of the scholars.
 - (c) Of the methods.
- 4. Be a Friend.
 - (a) In sympathy.
 - (b) In helpfulness.
 - (c) In watchfulness.

Some one has said that "The teacher stands at the highest point of organized humanity." Said Bishop Ames, "The greatest office in the church is held by the Sunday school teacher."

Says Vincent, "The affix in the future will not be D. D., but S. S. T."

"THE MODEL SUPERINTENDENT."

Letter Department.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 3.

Editors Herald:—In your late issue of July 1, 1896, appears an article originally from the pen of W. M. Rudolph, Vienna, Illinois, replied to by Mr. I. N. White, and republished and commented upon by you, headed, "Is this Mormonism?"

You have answered in behalf of the Reorganized Church, and in a fair manner to all parties, I believe. It is hardly worth the while to answer in behalf of the Church of Jesus Christ with nothing but ignorance and falsehood arrayed in ridiculous terms against it. But inasmuch as you have answered for your church, I believe a word for ours will not be out of place.

Yes, "make dancing honorable." "This is an awful bad religion to have our boys and girls converted to," says the gentleman from Vienna. While we do not believe dancing to be positively essential to salvation (!) but believe it to be one of the privileges of the faithful, and not fit to be intrusted to the filthy and impure (for unto the unbelieving nothing is pure—their conscience is defiled), or to illustrate it, we believe "corn bread" is for them that can afford no better, but for those who can use butter and honey on their bread, they have a perfect right to do so, as we believe neither one nor the other will affect salvation, if properly used. So it is with the principle of dancing: the pure can engage in the dance and be bettered by it, but the wicked and unbelieving think evil, consequently they are not fit to engage in the dance with the pure.

If he is so opposed to the "awful dance," why did he not quote some passages against dancing "to lead us from our error" instead of ridiculing and circulating falsehood against us? There is surely much in the Bible in favor of dancing. David "danced before the Lord" (2 Sam. 6: 16) and it displeased Saul's daughter; but we have no account of it displeasing the Lord, so Michal "had no child unto the day of her death." Psalms (149: 3; 150: 4) tells us to praise the Lord with "stringed instruments" in the dance. How could we praise the Lord in the dance if we were not to enjoy such a gathering? Ecclesiastes (3: 4) tells us "there is a time to mourn and a time to dance." When is this time to dance? Is this scripture misleading?

And as for the thirty-first chapter of Jeremiah which Mr. Rudolph quotes, there is not one word said about the "Jews," but it refers to the whole house of Israel. The Jews are of one tribe only so it does "refer to Mormonism" and they do actually dance in the "height of Zion."

In the Gospel according to Saint Luke fifteenth chapter Jesus himself gives us an illustration of how a certain man would do when one son had been off spending his money in evil ways, and when he returned from evil the good father gladly welcomed him home with a dance. If there be such harm in dancing as this unbeliever would fain have the people believe, will he please tell us why the Savior did not say that this father did an awful wrong when he received his son with "music and dancing."

I do not quote the foregoing passages with a view to persuade anybody to dance, for I don't care whether they dance or not. If their hearts are besotted with evil, I would most certainly advise them not to dance, for I should not want my wife or sisters in the society of any such; but I quote them to show that many passages favor dancing and absolutely none can be found against dancing. Does the Vienna righteous man think that the Lord forgot to give any?

Now for the "young lady" and "Mormon preacher" having a "parlor dance" in Johnson County, Illinois. It happens that I am well acquainted in this county, and know of no circumstance that occurred from which he could make his story, and I will say right here, that never has there been a "parlor dance" opened with prayer in Johnson County by our people; neither has an elder belonging to the "Mormon Church" advised any lady to dance. On the contrary, they have advised them not to attend any dances, (and hundreds in the county will testify to it,) because of having to, oftentimes, be mingled with the wicked and unbelieving.

It is not the "dance" part of "Mormonism" that the gentleman has such an aversion to, but the incontrovertible doctrine they teach. When he visited the church he refers to, he not only found that one "young lady" had obeyed the gospel, but a great many of the most honorable men and women the country affords had also taken upon them the name of Christ by being "born again." This is the part that hurts. The "truth is mighty and will prevail."

If it could be proven that dancing were a sin (but it cannot) and he heard of a "Mormon preacher" dancing, why does he hold the church responsible for what one of its members does? What if we should judge the Baptist by what Holmes did, and make them guilty of the twenty-seven murders he committed, because he once belonged to that faith? Nearer home: What if we should howl about the awful Baptists because we read in the Leader (published at Marion, Williamson County, Illinois) of April 9, 1896, that a Baptist divine (?), Rev. J. S. Edmonds, who was for a long time pastor of the Baptist church at Benton, while riding his circuit last September, October, and November, preaching Baptist doctrines, behaved himself so as to make it necessary to find "three indictments for assault to rape." What if we should ask if this was the fruits of Baptist doctrines?

Yours for the right,

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 2.

Editors Herald:—On opening the Herald of current number my eye caught an extract from my pen, which was not intended for the public eye. I fear it will put me on the roll of boasters. I intended the writing for individual information. 'Tis too late now to lock the door, but I hope this explanation will pass as amende honorable.

I am feeling well in the work, the only difficulty is I cannot make the truth boom as I should like to see it. Bro. Lewis is doing tent work at Edgerton, Missouri, commencing last Monday night. If interest justifies we may join him later on. We are now operating two missions in the city with good prospect for a third. Our meetings are quite spiritual and fairly well attended. The faithful are being blessed with spiritual power, while the careless are losing their oil. The shakable will be and are being shaken. The constant pleadings of the Spirit are to live more prayerful, come up higher, etc. May the good All-Father bless you all.

Still for humility,

J. M. TERRY.

GOODLAND, Kans., June 30.

Editors Herald:—This morning finds me at this place, feeling well and hopeful. Will commence meetings to-night in the city and if the interest justifies will remain over two Sabbaths. Since I last wrote you I have been very busy looking up the scattered sheep. You know that Jesus gave us the parable of the ninety-nine that were safe in the fold and the one out on the mountain top far away; so there are many to-day out far away from the fold on these broad plains, cold and hungry, that need the cheering voice of the Shepherd to give them new life. It is necessary to hunt them up. "Feed my sheep" and "my lambs" was the Savior's instruction, and this I desire to do by the help of God's Spirit.

I believe it is as needful to save those we have in the church as to convert the sinner.

There is, to my mind, too much planting done without the proper cultivation, hence the seed is lost or the plant dwarfed, and it fails to make the proper growth; hence the Lord's oft repeated injunction to the Saints to come up higher and grow until we become more like Christ—fully developed spiritually as full-grown men and women, as our great Head and divine Teacher. May God help us all to so live and labor together as brethren until we all come in the unity of the faith as one man in Christ.

ALMA KENT.

WASHINGTON Ind., June 30.

Editors Herald:—We came here the 25th inst. and have preached a number of times, in town, at Bro. Peter Binkley's house and at Tom's Hill, four miles away.

I have hoped for a reanimation of this branch, but the way seems dark. We are hopeful of the future nevertheless, but are very sorry to see the Saints give way to discouragement.

"The faithful in Christ Jesus" at Oakland City are doing well. All things considered, and look for additions to their number in the near future. They will have their first sacrament service July 5.

I take this means of informing the brethren and friendly aliens at West Fork, Beall, New Harmony, Mt. Carmel, and other points that I will reach them when time and circumstances permit and the Spirit of God directs, which may not be soon.

We expected to meet Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., here, but for some unknown reason he did not appear. My health is improving some.

BATTLE LAKE, Minn., July 3.

Editors Herald:—Our reunion is over and truly we had a joyful time. The meetings grew more spiritual each day and all seemed to enjoy them more and more; in fact our reunion was a success. Brn. A. H. Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, Swen Swensen, E. A. Stedman, Henry Way, A. Whiting, and others did valuable service in preaching and assisting in the different services. The attendance from the outside was good, especially in the evenings. The new tent was well filled and many stood outside and listened. Good order prevailed through the entire time we were there. No one seemed to have any desire to molest the camp of the Saints nor to injure the big tent in any way. Many friends were made to us as a religious body, and prejudice gave way before the preaching of the word as the frost before the morning sun. I was here six years ago with the tent. Then the people stood off and pointed the finger of scorn, and never once asked me to their homes; but now it is "Come and see us when you come to Fergus Falls. May God bless you in your good work for man." This is indeed encouraging to me.

Bro. E. L. Kelley did valuable service in presenting the law to the Saints and has made many friends in and out of the church. Come again next June, Bro. Kelley. In fact the people of Fergus Falls proved to us that they were our friends. They raised over twenty dollars for our new tent and also contributed to the incidental expenses of the meeting, for which a vote of thanks was tendered them at the close of meeting and ordered published in the county papers.

Bro. A. H. Smith and the writer begin a series of meetings in Detroit this coming week. We anticipate a good time. Five were baptized during the reunion.

Yours,

I. N. ROBERTS.

SLOAN, IOWA, July 8.

Editors Herald:—While at the union depot, St. Joseph, the night of leaving home, I was captured by Bro. D. Krahl and taken to the Espey mission, where Bro. and Sr. G. Whitehead were in waiting, and enjoyed good liberty in talking to those assembled. From thence to Woodbine and Six Mile Grove, attending a two-days' meeting at the latter place which was very largely attended, enjoying the company of both Saints and friends at these places.

By request of Bro. Chambers the tent at Whiting was the next objective point, where Bro. Hutchings was joined, and together we labored till the 5th inst., but with very poor encouragement, save in the fact of getting the scattered Saints together, to whom we administered the sacrament and succeeded in getting them to decide to meet together every two weeks in social capacity, and to partake of the sacrament, Bro. Benedict being an elder, and Bro. McKinney a priest.

Thence to this place where, through the kindness of Rev. Wilson, the Christian minister located here, we had been announced the night previously to a very large congregation incident to an entertainment. Not arriving in time to finish seating tent, he very generously gave us use of the church free of even the lighting expense, and opened and closed our service with prayer. And as if this were not sufficient he has very generously dispensed with Wednesday and Sunday night meetings during our stay. On our part we have decided not to have any eleven a. m. service Sundays.

The cause producing such effect is found in the exemplary lives of Srs. Annie and Effie Winegar, who, not yet two years old in the gospel, are a power for good in the society of the young people here. By their energy and perseverance we have an organ, the property of Rev. and Mrs. Wilson, the latter being a material aid in our song service—organist, and choir. These young sisters tastily decorated the pulpit with bunting and flags for me yesterday, and though left alone—Bro. Hutchings having gone home for the present—the preacher felt well (who would not?) before a most attentive congregation of seventy-five last night, the minister making one. Individually, the spiritual prognosis was never more portentous for good when first entering a place.

I tell you, Mr. Editors, it makes me feel good to occupy in a place where our people have set such examples as I find here. Will report further developments.

In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

AMADORE, Mich., July 9.

Editors Herald:—Please publish this appeal to the Saints. I am here laboring in the interests of the cause of Christ which we love. I have visited Coleman (attending the district conference there), Bay City, Bay Port, Huron Center (attending a two-days' meeting there), White Rock, and Forester branches, and go to Buel to-night, and back to Amadore for the two-days' meeting next Saturday and Sunday. There is a great deal of work needed in Michigan. Brethren Cooper, Cornish, J. A. and R. E. Grant, Davis, Phelps, David and W. J. Smith, Keir, Carpenter, and others are doing what they can to push it ahead in this part of the State; but more laborers are needed.

The need for laborers is so great, and the laborers, that can have their families sustained so few, with the best effort the Bishop can make to raise means for the support of the work in that department that it looks a little discouraging to the average elder. And it seems like more ought to be done. A greater sacrifice will no doubt be required of us to carry on the work, and a greater effort put forth on the part of the Saints to raise means to support the elders' families, so the work will not lag.

The Saints should not forget that they have claim on God for blessings, when they do his will, and every one, rich and poor, should bring their tithes and offerings to the Lord's storehouse (or treasury) and prove him by doing what he has said; for he has said, "I the Lord am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise."—D. C. Sec. 81:3.

The question for us to decide individually is whether we are willing to trust God or not; and if we decide in the affirmative, don't delay a moment, but bring in your offerings at once, whether much or little, and if done in the proper spirit you will receive a blessing, and the work will be advanced. Section 75:4 Doctrine and Covenants shows it to be the duty of the Saints to assist in supporting the families of the elders who are called to go into the world and proclaim the gospel; also that all should go, that can get places for their families and support of the church for them. The elders are called and willing now, and many of them that are anxious to go have to stay at home and provide for their families. Our prayers now should be that God would bless us with means to support the work, and willing hearts to give when he does bless us.

I am truly sorry for some men who profess to be Saints, worth thousands of dollars, who do nothing comparatively to help carry on the gospel work. "He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you."—D. C. 41:2. And again Luke 6:46: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?"

The Bishop is straining every nerve, and I am helping as best I can, to raise means to supply the wants of the work. Shall we work in vain? Shall we call on the Saints in vain? Shall our prayers be in vain? or will the Saints come to the rescue as the Lord has prospered or shall prosper them, and be willing workers now in the time of need, and make some sacrifice for the sake of the gospel? We shall work, wait, and see, and constantly pray that God may bless his people with all things needful, and that they may willingly and cheerfully respond, and not only supply those that are in the field, but soon be able to send others that are willing to go, until the world may be warned, and the honest-hearted ones everywhere be gathered into the fold of Christ, when we shall have accomplished the work intrusted to all, (D. C. 119: 8,) that we may receive the reward of the faithful.

G. H. HILLIARD, of the Bishopric.

THE SUCCESSOR IN THE PRESIDENCY OF THE CHURCH.

I HAVE now before me the Doctrine and Covenants, as published by the Utah Church, at Liverpool, in 1879, from which I will offer some quotations and comments. On pages 177, 178 we read:—

O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give an ear to the words which I shall speak unto you; for behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him [Joseph Smith] whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand. And this ye shall know assuredly that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me. But verily, verily, I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him.

Question: Did Joseph Smith ever appoint Brigham Young to be the one to receive this gift—to receive revelations for the church, to be the President, Prophet, Seer, and Revelator of the church? No. Did he ever appoint the Twelve? No. Then they could not possibly hold that office, for “none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him.” There was no other way by which any person could obtain it only by receiving their appointment through him, for if it be taken from him, he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead.

The only power he was to have, if the gift was taken from him, was to appoint another as his successor. Appoint another, that means one. Then if he was only to have power to appoint one other, as his successor, the claims that the Twelve made from 1844 to 1847 as to leadership, were false. He could not possibly have appointed them, as he was only to have power to appoint another—one.

Did he appoint another? He did; he appointed the only one he could legally appoint, his oldest son; and most of the church membership knew of the appointment, and sanctioned it. Brigham Young knew of it, and testified of it.

Young Joseph says:—

I know that there was such an appointment of myself as my father's successor in office.

James Whitehead says:—

I recollect a meeting that was held in the winter of 1843, at Nauvoo, Illinois, prior to Joseph Smith's death, at which the appointment was made by him, Joseph Smith, of his successor. His son Joseph was selected as his successor. Joseph Smith did the talking. There were present Joseph and Hyrum Smith, John Taylor, and some others who also spoke on the subject; there were twenty-five, I suppose, at the meeting. At that meeting Joseph Smith, the present presiding officer of the complainant church, was selected by his father as his successor. He was ordained and anointed at that meeting. Hyrum Smith, the Patriarch, anointed him, and Joseph, his father, blessed him and ordained him, and Newell K. Whitney poured the oil on his head, and he was set apart to be his father's successor in office, holding all the powers that his father held. . . .

The church did take action as a body on the question of the ordination of young Joseph as his father's successor; the church consented to it. That was done first by the indorsement of the High Council, and then it was brought up before the whole body of the congregation, the whole people; and there were thousands there. That was done at the meeting held in the grove at the east end of the temple. . . . There was a vote taken, the congregation voted, and agreed to the appointment of young Joseph as the successor of his father.

John H. Carter, Sr., says:—

Joseph came on the stand leading his son, young Joseph, and they sat him down on a bench at the prophet's right hand, and Joseph got up and began to preach and talk to the people, and the question he said was asked by somebody, “If Joseph Smith should be killed or die, who would be his successor?” And he turned around and said, pointing to his son, “There is the successor.” . . .

Continuing in the revelation, we read:—

And this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments. And this I give unto you that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me.

We here have God's law given to the church, so they may not be deceived by any false claimants to the rights of the successor. And by this law we are to know that “they” whose teachings come as revelations and commandments, are not of God. The pronoun they in this quotation, means more than one, and from this we learn that God knew there would be a number of aspirants to that office, and he desires to impress it upon the minds of the Saints that “none else [no one else] shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him” (Joseph Smith).

For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.

To “come in at the gate” means to come in at the proper entrance, and not in any irregular way, but, in the way prepared for entering.

As God says that the one to be ordained as the successor must “come in at the gate,” let us see what the gate is. Remember, he is speaking of the successor to the office of President of the Church. Now read page 360, verse 9:—

The President of the Church, . . . is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church.

And the next verse tells us that his two counselors are to be appointed in the same way. Thus we see that through revelation given to Joseph Smith he was to appoint his successor, thus making the person so appointed one of God's own choosing. That being the only way open through which the person chosen could enter so sacred a position, shows that clearly to be the gate through which “he that is ordained of me shall come in,” as God has declared. “And be ordained as I have told you before,” that is, “none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him,”—Joseph Smith. This is a repetition on the part of our heavenly Father to still further impress on the minds of all the great necessity of observing this law, so that none should be deceived.

Let us look a little deeper into this matter. We learn from these quotations the positive fact that Joseph was to appoint his successor, and no one could be his successor except the one he appointed. Now what does “appoint” mean?

1. To fix with power or firmness; to establish; to make fast. 2. To fix by a decree, order, command; . . . to ordain. . . . 3. . . . To set apart by authority.—Webster.

Then for Joseph to appoint his successor, he was not only to select him, but he was to ordain him, by a command, and set him apart by authority given him from God. Who did he appoint? His son Joseph, and no one else. Who did he ordain by the laying on of hands? His son Joseph, and no one else. Who was anointed with oil under the hands of the Patriarch, for this office? Joseph Smith, and no one else.

We learn more as to God's way in regard to the Presidency of the church in the following: When F. G. Williams was rejected from the First Presidency in 1837, Hyrum Smith was appointed counselor in his stead. When Hyrum's father died at Nauvoo, September 14, 1840, Hyrum was called to be Patriarch, and William Law was chosen to be counselor in his stead. It was then necessary for William Law to "come in at the gate," and the Lord speaks concerning him, saying:—

Let my servant William be appointed, ordained, and anointed, as a counselor unto my servant Joseph.—Page 440-91.

This was God's way for entering the First Presidency. Who has thus entered as successor to the Presidency of the Church? Joseph Smith, and no one else.

But we read more on page 178. The one appointed was to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.

Thus saith the Lord, speaking to the church. Then if teaching those revelations is a test as to the true successor, let us see who has taught them? What did Brigham Young teach concerning the books of the church containing the revelations from God? That they were "like a last year's Almanac"—or "a child's garment which he had outgrown." And again, that they were "not worth the ashes of a rye straw." Young Joseph has always taught that they were the law of God unto us, and as such must be respected. He is continually calling the people to the observance of what is written in the books and telling them that they will be judged by them at the last day.

What do those revelations teach? That there is one Lord, and one God, who is above all and over all—our Father in heaven. That to him we must pray. That by him we will all be held responsible for our acts. They teach that his Son Jesus Christ is our Redeemer, and our advocate with the Father, and that it is in his name that we will be saved. This is the doctrine as taught by Young Joseph.

What did Brigham Young teach? Here are his words:—

Now hear it, O inhabitants of the earth, Jew and Gentile, saint and sinner! When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is Michael, the archangel, the Ancient of Days! about whom holy men have written and spoken. He is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do. Every man upon the earth, professing Christians or nonprofessing, must hear it, and will know it sooner or later.—Sermon, April 9, 1852.

"Those revelations" teach further, page 170:—

Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come.

This teaching is strictly adhered to by young Joseph. But what did Brigham teach? Blood atonement! to kill a man to save him:—

I could refer you to plenty of instances where men have been righteously slain, in order to atone for their sins. I have seen scores and hundreds of people for whom there would have been a chance (in the last resurrection there will be), if their lives had been taken and their blood spilled on the ground as a smoking incense to the Almighty, but who are now angels of the Devil until our Elder Brother, Jesus Christ, raises them up, conquers death, hell, and the grave.

I have known a great many men who have left this church for whom there is no chance whatever for exaltation, but if their blood had been spilled, it would have been better for them.

The wickedness and ignorance of the nations forbid this principle being in full force, but the time will come when the law of God will be in full force. This is loving our neighbor as ourselves; if he needs help, help him; if he wants salvation and it is necessary to spill his blood on the earth in order that he may be saved, spill it.—Sermon by Brigham Young, Salt Lake City, February 8, 1857.

Again we read on page 170:—

Thou shalt love thy wife [not wives] with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else.

This doctrine young Joseph has strictly contended for, since the days of his youth, against a mountain of opposition. He is firm in regard to it to-day, and always has been. What did Brigham teach? Polygamy—to have as many wives as you want.

"Those revelations" teach that whoever believes the gospel, repents, and is baptized for the remission of sins, has hands laid upon his head for the gift of the Holy Ghost—and then lives in harmony with the laws of the gospel as taught in "those revelations"—shall be saved in the celestial kingdom of heaven, where God and Christ and all the holy ones dwell. This has ever been the teaching of the present Joseph. What did Brigham teach? That a new covenant had been revealed to the Saints! and although they were in a saved condition and many of them pure in the sight of God, he taught them that unless they would receive and obey this new covenant they would be damned. The so-called revelation on polygamy says, page 464:—

I reveal unto you a new and everlasting covenant; and if ye abide not that covenant, then are ye damned; for no one can reject this covenant and be permitted to enter into my glory; . . . the new and everlasting covenant, it was instituted for the fullness of my glory; and he that receive a fullness thereof, must and shall abide the law, or he shall be damned, saith the Lord God.

Joseph taught that man's salvation or condemnation rested upon his acceptance or rejection of the gospel. Brigham taught that it rested on his acceptance or rejection of polygamy—as the above quotation shows.

In consideration of all this, we now ask, Who, as the successor, has taught the revelations received through Joseph Smith? His son Joseph, and no one else.

LINEAL RIGHT.

On page 303 we read:—

Thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God; therefore your life and priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.

Reading the above, no one can deny that the priesthood held by Joseph Smith was to descend to his son, and continue through his seed until the end. This is equally true, even if the Lord was speaking to more elders than him. It is evident from the statement at the beginning of the revelation that God was speaking to at least two persons, for he says: "You my servants." But who were those persons? It may have been only those of the Smith family. The writer has not been able to learn who the Lord was addressing at that time, but the revelation was given through Joseph Smith to those who were "lawful heirs according to the flesh;" and there is no reasonable line of argument that can be used to deprive Joseph Smith of the priesthood held by his father, and he not only held the Melchisedek priesthood, but the Presidency of the High Priesthood—the Presidency of the Church, the office of Prophet, Seer, and Revelator. And not only was his priesthood to descend through his seed, but his life—the life he lived, the office he held, the work he did—was to continue; to be picked up and carried on from where he laid it down, even until the "restoration of all things."

On page 385 we read that the quorum of the Presidency is composed of three presiding High Priests, of the Melchisedek priesthood; and on page 387 we read.

It is the duty of the twelve, in all large branches of the church, to ordain evangelical ministers, as they shall be designated unto them by revelation.

These are to be ordained high priests, to preside over branches or districts, for we read on page 445 concerning high priests, "who shall be appointed standing presidents or servants over different stakes scattered abroad, and they may travel, also, if they choose, but rather be ordained for standing presidents; this is the office of their calling, saith the Lord your God."

This shows us that the special duties of high priest is to preside. Their office in the priesthood is to preside, and this right descends from father to son the same as does the office of Patriarch. In this dispensation of the gospel, the office of presidency—Prophet, Seer, and Revelator to the church—began with Joseph Smith, and was to descend through his seed. But the office of Patriarch began with his father, and was to descend through Hyrum Smith and his seed. (See page 440 verse 91.) As to this special line of presiding, high priests and their priesthood, we read on pages 387-8, "The order of this priesthood was confirmed to be handed from father to son, and rightly belongs to the literal descendants of the chosen seed, to whom the promises were made. This order was instituted in the days of Adam, and came down by lineage in the following manner: From Adam to Seth"—Enos, Cainan, Mahalaleel, Jared, Enoch, Methuselah. Verse 53, page 389 says that three years previous to his death Adam called these men together and that they "were all high priests." And when they had assembled with all his righteous posterity he bestowed upon them his last blessing. I don't think that it is doing violence to the subject to assume that they were presidents of the stakes or districts of the church assembled in General Conference. On page 390 we read more concerning "the rights of high priests and the high priesthood, which is the greatest of all; wherefore it must needs be that one be appointed of the high priesthood [not of the Twelve, as was Brigham Young] to preside over the priesthood, and he shall be called president of the high priesthood of the church; or, in other words, the presiding high priest over the high priesthood of the church." This is continued on page 392:—

The duty of the president of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and be like unto Moses. Behold, here is wisdom; yea, to be a seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet, having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church.

All this is held by the royal line of high priests, and it came down from father to son, from the beginning; but during the long periods of apostasy was hid with Christ in God, but revealed in our day.

God gave the office of Bishop to the seed of Aaron, and it descends from father to son. He gave the office of Patriarch to descend from father to son, and revealed that it was to descend through Hyrum Smith and his seed. Then did he give nothing to descend through the choicest seed, that of Joseph Smith the Martyr? If he arranged for the descent of these two offices, did he not consider concerning the descent of the greatest office of all, the Presidency of the Church? If he planned for the line of men to have charge of the finances of the church, and the line of men to convey the sealing blessings to the church, would he not plan for the line of men to be his spokesmen to the church; to receive revelations from him, the men with whom he was to converse, and through whom he was to make known all things necessary for salvation? Most assuredly he would and did! And that gift to them was the Presidency of the High Priesthood, the highest gift and office of all. Joseph was known ages ago as the "choice seer," and his name was known, so the Book of Mormon says. He was the only man upon this earth who could do the work he performed. He was born to do that work. He was of the chosen seed, of the royal lineage, of the direct line; and that seed did not end with him, neither did his authority nor right to that sacred office; neither did it fly off on a tangent and fall upon Brigham Young, the President of the Twelve, a man not of that royal line. But it continued through his seed upon the head of his son Joseph Smith. Now it makes no particular difference if the Lord said the same to others, none can deny that he told Joseph Smith that "the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers," and that he was a lawful heir to it "according to the flesh," and that it must remain "through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things."

NAUVOO HOUSE.

And now, I say unto you, as pertaining to my boarding house, which I have commanded you to build, for the boarding of strangers, let it be built unto my name, and let my name be named upon it, and let my servant Joseph and his house have place therein, from generation to generation; for this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so say I unto my servant Joseph, in thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed. Therefore, let my servant Joseph, and his seed after him, have place in that house, from generation to generation, forever and ever, saith the Lord.—Page 436-56, 59.

Our Utah friends try to make it appear that there is nothing very special in Joseph Smith's favor, in the above; that it relates chiefly to his connection with the boarding house. But we can see therein some very clear and positive statements. In the first place Joseph and his family and his seed after him were to have a home in that house for ever—"from generation to generation, forever and ever." Why was this right given him? It was given to no other man? Others were to have the right to buy stock in that house, for the benefit of themselves and their children, but no one was told that they might have a "place" in that house, except Joseph and his seed. Here is surely special favor shown.

But, they say the anointing and blessing here spoken of, was all in connection with that house. What nonsense, to try to make it appear that all the kindred of the earth should be blessed through his seed in connection with a boarding house! There is something deeper than that in the statements. Great things were to come through him and his seed, and great blessings to the race. Through them great work was to be accomplished, which no other men could do, because they would not have the right or authority to do it, therefore, they were to have a place in that house, upon which the name of God was to be named.

Verse 57 says:—

For this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him.

What anointing? That he shall have a place in that house—is that the thought conveyed? No, indeed; but—“this anointing . . . that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him.” That was his anointing, that his blessing should be given to his seed—should continue through him and his lineage. The word “also” means, “in like manner;” that is, the blessing that Joseph received should in like manner be put upon the head of his posterity. The same blessing that he had, should be given to his son. Which son? his oldest son—“the head of his posterity.” His blessing—the same blessing that he had, mark you—was to go to his son. What was his blessing? To be the President of the Church, Prophet, Seer, Revelator, and Translator. “In like manner” Joseph was called to that all-important office by revelation, because he was the only man upon earth who could fill that office. He was born at the proper time, to fill that office. He came of the chosen lineage to fill that office. He was chosen of God and called to fill that office, and in like manner his son Joseph, “the head of his posterity after him,” now fills that office.

In the following quotation there is more said to Joseph Smith than to any other man, in the present dispensation:—

As I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, in thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed.

We are here told that mankind is to be blessed through Joseph's seed. Why? Because it is the Abrahamic seed, it is the direct line, that has been “hid with God.” They are “heirs according to the flesh” “chosen before of God,” selected as the ones who would truly and faithfully present the word of God to fallen man, and picked out as the ones to preside over and care for the church; therefore, in them, the kindred of the earth were to be blessed, and if they desire the choice blessings of God, it is through them that man must seek them; and we are justified in chiding our fellow men for rejecting that seed as much as we are in blaming them for rejecting Abraham and his seed. The greatest blessings have come and are to come through that seed, for the Lord says: “as I said unto Abraham . . . so I say unto . . . Joseph.” “As,” means “in the same manner.” In the same manner, as the kindred of the earth should be blessed through Abraham, even so shall they be blessed through Joseph Smith and his seed.

Will any other seed than his answer the purpose in our day? No. Can we obtain the blessings through any other leader than his seed? No. Will God make allowances for his people disregarding his statements in this respect and blindly following blind leaders? No. How was mankind blessed in Abraham's day? Through the gospel, which he, as the chosen of God, presented to them. How are they to be blessed now? Through the gospel, which Joseph Smith and his seed, as the chosen of God, presents to them. There is just as much danger in rejecting the present Joseph Smith as there was in rejecting Abraham.

On pages 405-12 we read:—

After this Elias appeared, and committed the dispensation of the gospel of Abraham, saying, that in us, and our seed, all generations after us should be blessed.

This is an account of a vision given to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery.

Our Utah friends claim that here is at least one case where the same promise that was made to Joseph was also made to another. But let us see, this is only the story of the vision, written for the benefit of the Saints. I have not been able to find who wrote it, as it appears in the book. If Oliver wrote it, he may have said “in us and our seed.” He might have so understood it! If Joseph wrote it, he may have said “us” out of modesty, or in this case he may have used the pronoun, as it is very commonly so used by writers, almost everywhere, but meaning the writer alone. At any rate, as Elias did the speaking he would not have used that word at all; it was supplied by the writer of the vision, whoever he was. Elias would have said, “In you and your seed all generations shall be blessed.” And as the revelation quoted above from page 436 was given nearly five years after the vision now under consideration, and it clearly says that it is in Joseph and his seed that the kindreds of the earth shall be blessed, it shows us clearly that it was Joseph's seed that was spoken of in this vision. If any should still have doubts on this matter, I would ask them, Where is the seed of Oliver Cowdery? What are they doing for the kindred of the earth? The seed of Joseph Smith is in his proper place at the head of the church, as Prophet, Seer, and revelator; and thousands can testify of blessings received through him; of how he has unraveled the snarls of others' clumsy work; how he has corrected false doctrine, and cheered the hearts of the disheartened and discouraged; how he has led them out of gross darkness into the marvelous light, and fanned the little spark of faith they had retained, into a burning fire for this great latter-day work; how he has gathered together the broken fragments of the Church of Jesus Christ and successfully reorganized it, and made it honorable in the sight of God and honest men; how he had made friends for the cause, even in those places where Saints were once persecuted and driven out;—how he is now leading the church on conquering and to conquer, until Messiah comes.

Requests for branch organizations at Walker, Vernon County, and Quincy, Hickory County, Missouri. New officers chosen for district, A. Lloyd president, Ella Miller clerk. Preaching by T. R. Walters, F. C. Keck, and I. N. White. The session was held in the M. E. church; a hearty vote of thanks extended for same and to choir for assistance. Adjourned to meet with El Dorado Springs branch, November 14.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference held at Indian River, May 23 and 24; S. O. Foss president, J. D. Wilson clerk. Reports of branches presented and accepted. Ministry reporting: Elders S. O. Foss, J. S. Walker, and A. W. Kelley; Priest J. N. Ames; Teacher B. F. Foss; Deacon U. W. Kelley. Brn. Alonzo Beal and U. M. Kelley were presented to the conference for ordination to the office of priest, and they were accepted by the conference. Bishop's agent's report presented and accepted. S. O. Foss was appointed to correspond with Western Maine and establish the boundary line between the two districts. Whereas a report has gone from the district to the Twelve that has been injurious to Bro. J. N. Ames, and its influence has barred him from appointment, therefore resolved that we recommend him to the confidence of the Saints and that we sustain him as a minister and preacher of the gospel. This was signed by U. M. Kelley and B. F. Foss. It was put before the conference and he was sustained to labor in the district. Preaching by A. W. Kelley, J. N. Ames, and S. O. Foss. Adjourned to meet at Jonesport at the call of the president.

Miscellaneous Department.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENTS.

WESTERN TEXAS DISTRICT.

The Saints of the Western Texas district will please take notice that in accordance with the recommendation of the conference of said district held in June, 1896, that Bro. L. L. Wight, of Medina, Texas, has been appointed and duly authorized to act as agent of the Bishopric of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in and for said district, in place of Bro. O. D. Johnson, resigned.

Saints in paying and contributing of means for the work of the Lord and the prosecution of the publication of the gospel in said district will please remember and pay to Bro. L. L. Wight, of Medina, Texas.

The Bishopric take pleasure in extending to Bro. Johnson thanks for the faithful services performed by him in the interest of the church in connection with the Bishopric during the time that he has acted as agent, and trust that the change of positions will not in the least impair his efforts for usefulness and good in building up and extending the work of the kingdom of Christ.

We trust the Saints in the district may each and every one respond at once to the good of the work in said district, and if it is only a nickel or dime, contribute what is right and proper to the interest of the work, pay the same to the Bishop's agent, so as to encourage and sustain him in his work, and may the peace and blessings of the Master remain and abide with all.

Very respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY,

Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 9, 1896.

LONDON, ONTARIO, DISTRICT.

To the Saints and Friends of the London, Ontario, District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:—Please take notice that Bro. J. R. Shepherd, of St. Thomas, Ontario, has seen fit by reason of pressure of other business, to tender his resignation as Bishop's agent for the London, Ontario, district, and that upon the recommendation made by the district conference of said district, I have this day appointed as agent of the Bishopric of said church in said district, Elder Richard C. Evans, No. 474 Adelaide Street, London E., Ontario.

Saints will pay all funds, tithes, and offerings, into the hands of said agent, that they have to contribute for the use and benefit of said church, and the said agent will act for and in behalf of said church in said district until further notice be given in the premises. I trust that the hearty support of the Saints, both in means and in prayers and faith, may be given to sustain the agent, and that the work in the district may prosper.

I take pleasure also in commending the work of Bro. J. R. Shepherd, former agent, during the time he has acted as such, and extend to him the thanks of the Bishopric for the special aid given to it during his incumbency in the office.

Very respectfully submitted,

E. L. KELLEY,

Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 11, 1896.

REUNION NOTICES.

BLUFF PARK GENERAL REUNION.

The General Conference of 1896 decided to hold a semicentennial reunion at or near Bluff Park, Iowa, and appointed a committee to make arrangements. The committee now announces that said reunion will be held at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, beginning August 21, and continuing until September 1, 1896, to which all are invited. This camp ground is located on a high and airy bluff on the banks of the Mississippi River opposite and overlooking the "city of beauty," Nauvoo, around which cluster so many memories hallowed by trials of the past. There is quite a village of nice cottages, a large, well-seated tabernacle for meetings, and an artesian well, springs, and cisterns to supply water, and ample room for tents. In fact, there is no place in this part of the country that possesses so many advantages, conveniences, and attractions.

The committee has agreed on the following named subcommittees to help in carrying to a successful completion this reunion: On grounds, cottages, and tents, James McKiernan and Daniel Tripp. Finance, E. L. Kelley, F. G. Pitt, J. S. Roth, and William Anderson, with authority to appoint assistants as they deem wise. On railroad rates, E. L. Kelley and R. S. Salyards. On music, F. G. Pitt and Alma Whitehouse. On speakers, Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley. On advertising in Herald, Ensign, and circulars, J. R. Lambert; in local papers, James McKiernan. On Sunday school work, F. M. Weld, James McKiernan, Sr. Whitehead, and T. A. Hougas.

There will be hay, straw, and wood on the ground for sale, and provisions of all kinds can be ordered from merchants in town and will be delivered at cottage or tent.

All those—who have not already done so—wanting to rent cottages, write to Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, inclosing a couple of stamps for reply and state about the size or kind and rate you are willing to pay. The price ranges from $1.50 (unfurnished) to $5 (furnished), and one room to four rooms. Also state whether or not you will take a tent and what size you want if you can't get a cottage, as the number of cottages are limited, and a number already engaged.

There is a boarding house on the ground where meals will be served to regular boarders for $4 per week. Transient 25 cents each for supper and breakfast, 35 cents for dinner. The boarding house is in the hands of the ladies of the M. E. Church, of Montrose. Those wishing lodgings at the lodging house must bring sheet and pillow slip and towel. Room, cot, springs, pillow, mattress, and blanket will be furnished at 15 cents per night and a cheaper rate for the ten days. Those wanting tents only or lodging only, write at once including stamps to James McKiernan, Box 225, Farmington, Iowa, so we will know how many tents to order. We will furnish the tents at as low a rate as practical. Terms on tents will appear as soon as we can ascertain something near the number wanted, as the price will depend somewhat on the number rented. Those who bring their own tents will be furnished ground free.

We are late in making these announcements, but accident and unforeseen difficulties and delays have made it impracticable to get a full understanding sooner, and we did not want to announce until we were sure of the arrangements.

Yours respectfully,

2t JAMES MCKIERNAN,
Chairman of Committee.

SOUTHEASTERN NEBRASKA MISSION.

After consultation with the Saints at Wilber, Nebraska, we have concluded to hold a camp meeting at the above-named place commencing August 20, 1896, to last over two Sundays. The district tent will be placed near a beautiful grove about one mile south of Wilber, where plenty of wood and water will be furnished free of charge. A sufficient corps of speakers will be present, and the outlook at present is somewhat flattering for an enjoyable and profitable time.

Remember, Saints, that we can have all the blessings of the gospel in Nebraska as well as elsewhere, if we place ourselves in the proper condition; so let us come with our camping "outfits," prepared to spend the time in spiritual recuperation. The mission is large and only has two missionaries, so we need a united effort to carry the work on to success. The mission is progressing nicely and we hope good to result from our camp meeting.

W. E. PEAK.

J. W. WALDSMITH.

The Northern Missouri reunion will convene at Maysville, Missouri, on August 21, 1896, in J. M. Harvey's grove. Extended improvements and preparations have been made for this meeting. A fine grove, plenty of good water for man and beast, splendid pasture of one hundred and sixty acres of timothy and clover, at the nominal sum of three cents per day per horse. The committee will spare no pains in making all welcome. Committee on speakers, J. R. Lambert and T. W. Chatburn; on grounds, stands, etc., A. W. Head and C. P. Faul; chorister, C. P. Faul; police, T. L. and James Flanders. All the ministry of the district are invited, which comprises Far West, Northeast, and Nodaway, Missouri, and Eastern Kansas districts. Tents will be furnished on the grounds, bedded with straw. Those desiring tents should communicate immediately with A. W. Head, Clarksdale, Missouri, that a sufficient number may be secured. We hope to make this the best of all the series of meetings, so come prepared to camp on the grounds, bring the Spirit of God with you, and contribute to the grand feast that all may be blessed. Sunday school workers, take notice that one day will be devoted to the Sunday school work under the supervision of a committee composed of the respective superintendents of each district, C. P. Faul chairman. Thursday, the 27th, will be the day. Bring your best talent to edify and instruct the little ones, and remember this will be childrens' day at the reunion. Let all the little ones come.

T. W. CHATBURN.

Reunion and conference of the West Virginia district will be held with the Mt. Zion branch, commencing August 21, 1896; conference on the 22d. It is desired that all the Saints in the district will attend the conference, for this will be the last conference of this year, and we hope that all will come who can, and let us have a good meeting. Let all come who can from the adjoining districts. We will use you the best we can, and try to make your stay among us as pleasant and enjoyable as possible. So come all who can. Those coming from the east should come on the morning train. All should try and come by the 21st, on Friday. All coming by train will be met at the railroad at Cornwallis if they will notify B. Beall or J. B. Russell, at Goose Creek, Ritchie County, West Virginia.

J. B. RUSSELL, Sec.

MISSOURI REUNION.

The Southwestern Missouri mission reunion will be held from August 21 to 30, at Midway Park, which is situated on the electric railway between Joplin and Webb City, Missouri. A large pavilion well seated, ample grove, lighted throughout with electric lights, will be furnished free for the occasion. Midway Park is connected by electric railway on the south with Joplin, Blendsville, and Galena; on the north with Webb City, Carterville, and Carthage. Exceptional cheap rates are offered on this electric line, with extensive advertisement of our meeting on every car five days before convening and continue during the whole time of meeting. This, with a large branch of our people both at Blendsville and Webb City, and a number in the surrounding country, bids fair to claim one of the most interesting and profitable camp meetings ever held in the mission. A lovely stream of water running right by the grounds and fine well water for camp. Ample room for teams, wagons, and tents. Bro. W. N. Robinson, of Independence, Missouri, will have charge of securing railway rates, and will report through Herald and Ensign. Bro. Charles Sutherland, of Webb City, Missouri, will have in charge and conduct the Sunday school work. Friday afternoon and night, August 28, is awarded to the Sunday school. Sr. Ida Davis, of Weir City, Kansas, will have charge of boarding hall. She will be assisted by the Weir City Saints and others; the proceeds to assist in furnishing the Saints' chapel at Weir City. Rates for boarding 20 cents per meal; 50 cents per day; $3 per week. Bro. J. C. Chrestensen, of Jasper City, Missouri, has in charge the tent business. All who wish to buy or rent tents, please write him at once. Brn. Chrestensen, Graves, and Walter Taylor will have the oversight and managing of the grounds. Brn. O. P. Sutherland and Daniel Bradford have the oversight and securing of pasture, wood, hay, and straw. All of these appointees will please secure or appoint such other aid as they deem wise to assist them in their labors. Let us all work together and none need be overburdened. Good and efficient speakers will be secured for the occasion. Good music is being arranged for. Please, those that are appointed to the different departments, look well to it, and thus secure happy results.

Any needing further information upon any of their departments of work, address me regarding it at Independence, Missouri.

I. N. WHITE,

Chairman Reunion Committee.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Central Nebraska district will convene July 25, at two p. m., in the Saints' chapel at Meadow Grove. It is hoped some of the General Conference appointees will be present. All are invited.

LEVI GAMET, Sec.

GROVE MEETING.

Near New Marion, Ripley County, Indiana, August 8 and 9. Saints of Union and Manville branches respectfully invited. A good time expected. Brn. W. C. Marshall and J. D. Porter, will be present. An effort will be made to secure the presence of district president and A. C. Barmore.

CORRECTIONS IN BISHOP'S ANNUAL REPORT.

Please notice corrections in the Annual Report of the Bishop, as follows:—

TITHE AND OFFERING FUND.

Instead of Peter Adams, Indian Territory, read Peter Adamson.

Jn report of William Leeka, Thurman, H. F. Green $150 should read J. F. Green; Henry Hemp $10 should read Henry Kemp.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

Page 411 as reported.

Read Sarah Hills $2.00 instead of Sarah Mills; Birdie Snow $1.00, instead of Birdie Rhode.

Under heading of Temple Lot Suit in Annual Report, page 409 Herald, the name of Joseph Chester $5.00, should appear instead of John Chester.

A. M. Newberry, Lamoni, Iowa, and C. L. Munro should not be marked "not paid." This was simply an oversight in copying into the report, the memorandum made at the time the name was handed. The accounts were duly paid when money was called for.

From the Far West, Missouri, district, report of William Lewis, $74.77. This was omitted by oversight not having a list of names, and have not the list on hand at the present time, so as to publish.

Also omission in published report of John Orth, California, $10.00.

SAINTS' HOME ACCOUNT.

In receipts of Saints' Home Account the items should have been published but were overlooked; they are as follows:—

BORN.

MCKINNON.—At Monmouth, Illinois, March 10, 1896, to Mr. Wiley and Sr. Mary E. McKinnon, a son; named Wiley Fay. Blessed in the district tent at Hiteman, Iowa, June 21, 1896, by Elders Robert M. Elvin and S. V. Bailey.

SHAKESPEARE.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, April 11, 1896, to Bro. W. T. and Sr. Jane Shakespeare, a daughter; named Helen Gertrude, and blessed June 28, 1896, under the hands of Elders H. A. Stebbins and A. S. Cochran.

BLAKESLEY.—In Lamoni, Iowa, January 9, 1896, to Bro. A. J. and Sr. Mary E. Blakesley, a son; named Ray, and blessed June 28, 1896, under the hands of Elders A. S. Cochran and H. A. Stebbins.

GARVIE.—In Lamoni, Iowa, March 22, 1896, to Mr. William and Sr. Hattie Garvie, a son; named James, and blessed June 28, 1896, under the hands of Elders H. A. Stebbins and A. S. Cochran.

HIDY.—To Bro. John and Sr. Hattie Hidy, at Des Moines, Iowa, April 7, 1896, a son, and named Herald. Blessed June 7, 1896, by Elders W. H. Kephart and Wm. Thompson.

MEISKER.—To Bro. Otto E. and Sr. Anna Sophia Meisker, at Des Moines, Iowa, November 19, 1895, a daughter, and named Carrie Anna. Blessed June 7, 1896, by Elders Wm. Thompson and W. H. Kephart.

MARRIED.

STEWART—LYTEL.—At the home of the bride, at Santa Cruz, July 2, 1896, Bro. G. H. Stewart and Sr. Ollie B. Lytel, Walter Scott, officiating. A large number of the Saints were present and partook of the good things prepared for that occasion. Both parties are highly respected. They start together on the journey of life with the best wishes of all.

BROWN—EDWARDS.—At the home of Mr. A. G. McCloy, Shenandoah, Iowa, July 1, Bro. William S. Brown Sr. Alta May Edwards, Elder Edgar Price, of the Christian Church, officiating.

DIED.

BURNETT.—Jessie Amelia Burnett was born at Vincennes, Iowa, February 22, 1874; died June 30, 1896. Sr. Burnett was baptized by J. S. Snively, February 16, 1896. Husband, mother, and one brother mourn. J. S. Snively conducted funeral services at Union chapel, July 1.

BORTON.—At Oakland, California, June 16, 1896, Ann C. Botton. Born in London, England, March 10, 1815. Funeral sermon by Elder C. A. Parkin on the redemption of man through Christ; consciousness of the dead; and the pre-existence of man, and the especial blessedness of those who "sleep in Jesus." Quite a number of the Oakland Saints attended and some of the San Francisco branch. She was interred in the "City" cemetery at San Francisco. Services at the grave by Elder Joseph Vernon, of Oakland. Her rest will be glorious.

souri, June 16, 1896, William Skidmore Batchelder. Deceased was born in North Carolina in 1816. He moved to Tennessee in childhood. Accepted the gospel in 1839, baptized by Elder Andres, in Murray County, Tennessee. He moved to Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1840; was ordained an elder in 1843, and in 1844 was ordained a seventy. He was a man of great courage and very zealous in preaching the gospel. He was married to Miss Huldah King at Nauvoo, Illinois, February 21, 1842. Six sons and six daughters were born to them, of which three sons and five daughters, with his beloved wife, survive to mourn their loss. He with his wife united with the Reorganization on their original baptism in 1880 at Buffalo, Iowa; moved to Independence in 1887. Thus one of the old veterans of the restored gospel has passed on to the paradise of God, and his body returned to the dust to await the time when the trump shall call the dead in Christ to put on immortality and eternal life. His testimony was that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that often he had heard Joseph and Hyrum oppose polygamy in the strongest terms and often denounce it from the public stand. Funeral service from the Saints' church, conducted by Elder R. May, assisted by Elder Joseph Luff.

MUNYAN.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, June 17, 1896, Sr. Charlotta C., wife of Bro. G. W. Munyan. Mr. and Mrs. Munyan, accompanied by their children, May and Grant, had been to Lamoni, on a visit to their daughter, Mrs. Robert White. While at Lamoni Mrs. Munyan's health was not good and it was deemed advisable to return to Nebraska. She stood the travel to St. Joseph all right and rested well the night of the 16th, but died suddenly and quite unexpectedly on the morning of the 17th of June. The remains were embalmed and shipped to De Witt, and from thence conveyed to Western, Nebraska. The deceased became identified with the Reorganized Church about nineteen years ago, being baptized at Wilber, Nebraska, by Elder R. J. Anthony. The funeral service was held at the Methodist church, conducted by Elder C. H. Porter.

MACHEN.—Eliza Jane Clark was born at Mansfield Center, Connecticut, April 26, 1826; united with the church, being baptized by Orlando Godfrey, in 1846. She removed to Utah in April, 1850, arriving there in October of the same year. She was married to Thomas Machen, November 26, 1855, and remained in Salt Lake City until April 15, 1858, then with her husband removed to St. Joseph, Missouri, remaining there till July 10, 1860. From there came to Amboy, Illinois, where she died June 30, 1896. She was the mother of six sons and one daughter, all of whom were present at her funeral, except two sons, who had gone on before. She was highly spoken of by her neighbors. She was a kind mother, and is greatly missed and mourned by husband, four sons, one daughter, and one granddaughter. She was firm in the faith of the church. The funeral was held at her late home; sermon by W. Vickery, of Plano, Illinois. Interment in the beautiful cemetery near Amboy, July 2. We believe her rest is glorious.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.
Eureka Chemical & Mfg., Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.
Yours respectfully,
P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

POPE LEO AND MR. GLADSTONE.

ANOTHER encyclical letter from the Pope on the subject of church unity was made public by Cardinal Gibbons June 30. The letter, which is addressed to all bishops in communion with the Holy See, makes no reference to Mr. Gladstone's letter to Cardinal Rampolla, but is received by the press as in some nature a reply to Mr. Gladstone, and as preparing the way for a decision adverse to the validity of the Anglican Orders. The opening sentence of the Encyclical, or rather of the summary published by Cardinal Gibbons, is as follows:—

"The Holy Father, intent upon the work of bringing all to the one fold of Christ, considers that it would conduce to that end were he to set before the peoples of the Christian world the ideal and exemplar of the church as divinely constituted, to which church all are bound by God's command to belong."

Then follows a statement concerning the necessity of the unity of the church in order to accomplish the work intrusted to it by its divine Founder. The letter then continues:—

"It is the duty of all followers of Christ not merely to accept his doctrine generally 'but to assent with their entire mind to all and every point of it, since it is unlawful to withhold faith from God even in regard to one single point.' Christ endowed his apostles with authority like to his own and promised that the Spirit of Truth should direct them and remain with them forever, and because of this commission 'it is no more allowable to repudiate one iota of the apostles' teaching than to reject any point of the doctrine of Christ himself.' This apostolic mission was intended for the salvation of the whole human race and consequently must last to the end of time. The magisterium instituted by Christ in his church was by God's will perpetuated in the successors appointed by the apostles, and in like manner the duty of accepting and professing all that is thus taught is also 'perpetual and immutable.' There is nothing which the church founded on these principles has been more careful to guard than the integrity of the faith. The fathers of the church are unanimous in considering as outside the Catholic communion anyone who in the least degree deviates from even one point of the doctrine proposed by the authoritative magisterium of the church.

"Wherefore Christ instituted in the church a living authoritative and lasting magisterium. He willed and commended under the gravest penalties that its teachings should be received as if they were his own. As often, therefore, as it is declared on the authority of this teaching that this or that is contained in the deposit of divine revelation it must be believed by every one as true.' The very nature of divine faith makes it impossible that we can reject even one point of direct teaching, as this is practically rejecting the authority of God himself. Christ commanded 'all men present and future to follow him as their Leader and Savior,' and thus not merely as individuals but as forming a society, organized and united in mind. . . .

society can be conceived which is not governed by some supreme authority,' so Christ of necessity gave to his church a supreme authority to which all Christians must be obedient. For the preservation of unity there must be unity of government jure divino, and men may be placed outside the one fold by schism as well as by heresy.

"The nature of this supreme authority can be ascertained from the positive and evident will of Christ on the matter. As he willed that his kingdom should be visible, Christ was obliged to designate a vicegerent on earth in the person of St. Peter. He also determined that the authority given to him for the salvation of mankind in perpetuity should be inherited by St. Peter's successors. It cannot be doubted from the words of Holy Writ that the church by the will of God rests on St. Peter as a building on its foundation. St. Peter could not fulfill this duty 'without the power of commanding, forbidding, judging, which is properly called jurisdiction.' It is by the power of jurisdiction that nations and commonwealths are held together. A primacy of honor and the shadowy right of giving advice and admonition, which is called direction, could never give unity or strength to any society of men. The metaphorical expressions of the keys and of 'binding and loosing' indicate the 'power of making laws, of judging, and of punishing,' a power which our Lord declares to be of such amplitude and force 'that God would ratify whatever is decreed by it.' Thus the power of St. Peter is supreme and absolutely independent, so that having no other power upon earth as its superior, it embraces the whole church and all things committed to the church.

"As the governing authority belongs to the constitution and formation of the church as the very principle of unity and stability, it was clearly intended to pass to St. Peter's successors from one to another. Consequently the pontiffs who succeeded him in the Roman episcopate receive the supreme power in the church jure divino, and this is declared fully by general counsels and is acknowledged by the consent of antiquity. But though the authority of St. Peter and his successors is plenary and supreme, it is not to be regarded as the only authority. The bishops, who are the successors of the apostles, 'inherit their ordinary power,' and 'the episcopal order necessarily belongs to the essential constitution of the church.' They are consequently not to be regarded as mere vicars of the Roman pontiffs, since 'they exercise a power which is really their own, and are most truly called the ordinary pastors of the people over whom they rule.' For the preservation of unity in the Christian Church, it is above all things necessary that there should be union between the Roman Pontiff, the one successor of St. Peter, and the bishops, the many successors of the apostolic college. It is necessary to bear in mind that no prerogative was conferred on the apostles in which St. Peter did not participate, but that many were bestowed on St. Peter apart from the apostles. 'He alone was designated by Christ as the foundation of his church. To him he gave the power of forgiving and retaining, and to him alone was given the authority to feed.' From this it follows 'that bishops are deprived of the right and power of ruling if they deliberately secede from Peter and his successors, because by this secession they are separated from the foundation on which the whole edifice rests.'"

The general subject which Mr. Gladstone and the Pope have been treating continues to excite a lively interest in the church press on both sides of the sea. There is not as yet apparent on this side any such alarmist spirit as seems to prevail in nonconformist circles in England. The Churchman, of New York (Prot. Episc.), speaks as follows:—

"To some minds, the connection between the validity of Anglican orders and the controversy of faith with unbelief seems to be a very remote one. We do not find any evidence from the outside that such a connection suggested the motive to Pope Leo, in ordering the inquiry upon which the divines of the Latin Church are at present engaged. A more plausible motive may perhaps be found in the fact that Cardinal Vaughan has given it as his opinion that the Anglican Church is to be won over to Rome through the gradual defection of the ritualistic party. It may be thought by the authorities of the Vatican that many English priests shrink from defection because they cannot consent to reordination. We have all along looked upon the Pope's movement in the question of Anglican orders as a movement purely politic and political. If, as Mr. Gladstone allows, it will not lead to intercommunion, the admission of the validity of English orders by the Vatican can be of no advantage to the 'first bishop of Christendom,' unless it may be expected to remove one great obstacle to the absorption of the national church of England by the papal communion. Besides this, we may remind Mr. Gladstone that the fight against unbelief is to be waged nowadays in a quarter of the field of evidential controversy as far removed from the area of distinctly ecclesiastical disputes as can be possibly imagined. The revolt from faith originated largely in the laboratories of science, and passed thence into the school of philosophy and metaphysics. It concerns not so much the existence and claims of a church of God, as the existence of God himself."

The Independent (Undenominational) concludes an editorial on the subject as follows:—

"Some of Mr. Gladstone's points do not appeal at all strongly to us. He says that if each church among the ninety-nine hundredths of Christendom that believe in the Trinity and incarnation can show that their affirmative faiths agree, it helps them all. Very true; but only so far as these doctrines extend, and not as to validity of orders on which they do not agree. If it would help Anglicans and Roman Catholics in this matter to recognize each other's ecclesiastical regularity then equally it will help their common faith in the Trinity if Anglicans and Dissenters should do the same; and let Mr. Gladstone write another needed letter to his own church on this subject. From his point of view it is true that three fourths of Christendom holds fast to 'the historical transmission of the truth by a visible church with an ordaind constitution;' namely, that of the Roman, Greek, and Anglican churches, and that it is well that they should not reduce their common testimony by invalidating each other. We prefer to validate all, from Jacobites to Quakers, not by making church order a matter of 'profound importance,' but by minimizing its importance and magnifying the importance of the spiritual element of Christian life possessed in common by the old churches of the 'Apostolic succession' and the 'independent religious communities.'"

The Christian Commonwealth (London) says:—

"The Romanizing tendency in the church of England is justly regarded with the most serious apprehension by Christians both inside and outside of the Establishment. In the physical world bodies attract each other in the geometrical ratio of their proximity, and the final conjunction is made with constantly accelerated velocity. It is to be hoped that these laws do not prevail in the ecclesiastical world; and yet they are unpleasantly suggested in the history of the Anglican Church since the beginning of the Tractarian movement. Let every true Protestant consider, in the matter of plain and undeniable deviations in the practice of his church from New Testament precept and example, how much in such deviations is held in common with Rome, how much is derived from Rome, and whether there is anything better than Roman and church authority for them. And is it not time that those who are responsible for the doctrine and practice of the nonconforming bodies should consider whether it would not be well to stop halting between two opinions, or attempting to occupy two opposing positions, and commit themselves unreservedly, in practice as well as in theory, to the only position from which Rome can be consistently or successfully opposed—to wit, the impregnable rock of Holy Scripture?"—Literary Digest.

WHY?

WE are asked, Why should a just God visit the iniquity of the parents upon the children?

The question furnishes the answer, Because he is just.

The answer may seem harsh. Let us see! Suppose the question to be asked by or for some one, young or old, who has inherited from father or mother, or both, liking for tobacco, strong drink, or lustful tendencies. These all being to the detriment of the individual, and two of them at least, against the good of society, why should God visit on this child the iniquity of the parents, by fastening the appetite on him?

The same principle placed in man and made active at his creation by which this visitation of iniquity of the parents upon the children, as it is called, was made possible, also causes the inheritance to or visitation of whatever is good in the parent upon the child. Without the principle no good could follow; and, unless the principle existed in such way that evil or the tendency to evil might be entailed on the offspring, it could not exist for the descent of good; hence the justness of God.

The condition of all born of the flesh is that whatever attaches by reason of the laws of the flesh inheres in accordance with those laws; hence, the long continued and constant divergence of man from the correct rules of life have entailed upon the present race many weaknesses and vicious propensities, which can be overcome only by the effort of the individual, led thereto by a proper understanding of the law.

The law of heredity, while it may be deplored by many and perhaps denounced by some, was a wise one in its original enactment, and ought to be taken advantage of by all who believe in its existence and are acquainted with its provisions. A good man and a good woman impress their good qualities upon their children by heredity, just as clearly and solidly as do a bad man and a bad woman inflict their evil upon their offspring; and it is for this reason that very early in the history of the race the Creator said, and caused it to be written that "the fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge." In the same way it might have been written, "the fathers have eaten sweet grapes and the tastes of the children are refined thereby." And the same principle that wrought the bad effect would have produced the good result.

The seal of divine wisdom was set on what had been wrought by divine power, and that seal was, "And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good."—Gen. 1: 31.

This included the higher work, man; and, as a matter of course, the laws of his creation and continued being. These laws were continued outside of the Edenic state, as they would have been in it. The change of condition carried with it those laws operative and controlling. Due notice was served on the fathers of the race that to them was intrusted in large degree what their children should be after them; and the race has builded ever since the fall with the knowledge that they could and would affect those coming after them for good or evil; all to be wrought out in the flesh.

This is not to be viewed in the suggestive light of the question, as if to the child attached moral sin, because on him falls this weakness, or evil tendency left by his parents as a heritage, in the sense of punishment visited on the child for sin committed by the parents. Such a view is an injustice to the Creator, a misunderstanding, or a perversion of the situation. It is pardonable in one suffering from inherited perversity of temper, vitiated tastes or tendencies to depraved habits, if he fears the issue to himself, or doubts, at times, the wisdom of permitting a principle intended to work for good to result in such evil; but even such a one may learn that the same wonder-working Creator has placed him in such conditions that while he so fears and so doubts, he has the remedy largely in his own hands, and may serve the good received from his ancestors, and overcome the evil resulting from inherited evil tendencies, and bequeath to his own succeeding generations only the good. The gospel plan offers the spiritual remedy; by it there may be a reversal of results, and good come whence evil was possible.

The men of the race in the world at large have an opportunity to make amends to their successors for the mistakes of their own progenitors; and whether the religionist is willing to acknowledge it or not, it is still a fact, that outside of religious work, and the circle of sectaries there is a work of redemption going on, for the eradication of the evils which inherited causes have wrought. The recognition of the facts in the case has roused a desire to evade the evil, and the remedy sought for is being applied, and is being largely successful. Every lover of the race should hail these efforts with rejoicing and help where he can.

Take the supposed case stated at the beginning of this paper, and founding on it a cause for action, drive the evils resulting to society from the habit of drinking intoxicants, out of the generations yet to come, because the men of the present are sober, and bequeath the tendencies to sobriety to their children. In like manner apply the remedy to the cure of all hereditary tendencies to evil.

KNOWLTON HANKS.

BRO. ALBERT PAGE, of Lamoni, was well acquainted with Elder Hanks, whose name we gave in a late issue as Reuben Hanks, and informs us of our mistake. He gives the names of the four as Knowlton Hanks, Addison Pratt, — Rogers, and B. F. Grouard.

"JERUSALEM AS AN ORANGE MARKET."

THE following is clipped from the Chicago Sunday Tribune of July 12. If Palestine can compete with sunny Spain, and the productiveness of California and Mexico, the promise of restored fruitfulness has certainly been fulfilled, to a great extent at least:—

Jerusalem is now competing with Spain, Mexico, and California for the orange trade of the world. The fruit is grown in the district between Jerusalem and Jaffa.

A QUESTIONABLE METHOD.

THE following letter and the accompanying statement from Mr. Braden, in his own handwriting, will serve to show that sort of tactics the man resorts to in his zeal to damage the cause of the Saints, against which he feels to make war.

WESTON, Iowa, July 7.

Editors Herald:—I had heard much of Clark Braden, who so relentlessly has been waging war upon "Mormonism," but not until June 2 was I permitted to behold and hear the man.

Upon the evening of that day I listened to one of his lectures delivered in the Christian church in Fontanelle, which consisted chiefly of slander and the most sarcastic ridicule that I ever listened to; yet, I was informed by the Saints that he was quite moderate compared to what he had been in his previous lectures. He spoke, among other things, of the custom of the Saints of "greasing sick folk with olive oil," saying that those who adhered to such practice instead of calling in a doctor ought to be prosecuted. He then told a story concerning a lady in Lamoni, who being sick, called for the administration, but grew worse instead of getting better. But one Sunday morning while she was lying at the point of death a social service was being held in the temple—"the Mormons call their church building a temple"—in which Isaac Sheen, who was the first editor of the Saints' Herald, got up and began to give a revelation telling the people to be comforted, because the sister would recover and not die. While he was speaking Asa Cochran entered and spoke to the officer in charge who stopped Sheen in his revelation, and announced that the woman was dead.

I was satisfied this was a yarn, knowing that Sheen had been dead for at least twenty years; and besides, that the Saints do not speak of their house of worship in Lamoni as the temple.

I afterward asked Mr. Braden for a written statement of the matter and received the inclosed which you may use as deemed best. He did not tell us in his lecture that it was some woman's tale, but stated it as a known fact.

I regard Mr. Braden as an unscrupulous falsifier anxious to get hold of any yarn that may have been told, enlarge upon and then use it in his lectures against the faith of the Saints. He is a man who does not deserve to be noticed by the ministry of God, only perhaps to expose his wicked work.

I learn by letter from Bro. Cochran that he knows of no such transaction as told by Clark Braden. Yours for truth,

H. N. HANSEN.

In the Spring of 1891 I debated with E. L. Kelley in Lamoni, Iowa. I stopped with a Mr. Hart, who was a teamster, and his wife a dressmaker. Mrs. Hart told me that she and her husband were present at a Sunday morning service in church of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in Lamoni, at which Isaac Sheen stated that he had received a revelation that a woman who was lying at the point of death, would recover. While he was speaking a person entered the church and spoke to the leader in the services, who stopped Sheen, in his revelation, and announced that the woman was dead.

CLARK BRADEN.

It so happens that Elder Isaac Sheen died at Plano, Illinois, April 3, 1874, some years before the place called Lamoni was known, or named as a town; and was never at any time at Lamoni, or in its vicinity.

Bro. Asa S. Cochran, who has been at Lamoni from before the building of any meeting place for the Saints there, made a statement in writing for Bro. T. W. Williams in his late debate with Mr. Braden, at Fontanelle, stating that no such transaction ever occurred in the branch in his knowledge. The Herald Office and force was removed to Lamoni, in the fall of 1881; and no such instance has occurred since that date to our knowledge.

But, suppose that such an occurrence with some other person than Elder Isaac Sheen, as the one who may have prophesied, would that prove that no healings by the anointing with oil ("greasing them," as Mr. Braden calls it) and the laying on of hands; had ever occurred among the Saints, or that no such provision was made by the Savior? We believe not.

Bro. Isaac Sheen was not much given to prophesying in prayer meeting, but usually spoke instructively on some topic suggested by the occasion, or some circumstance or event connected with the church or its history. He was a good defender of the faith, and spoke and wrote without fear of either friend or foe. We knew him intimately from 1863 to the date of his death, and never knew nor heard of his making such a slip as

Mr. Braden's informant charges upon him. We differed from him, or he from us, as anyone chooses to have it, in some things of history and doctrine, but had no reason during his life, or since his death to doubt the honesty of purpose, or the earnestness and integrity of his love for the church.

THE News, of Republic, Kansas, of which Gomer T. Davies is editor and proprietor, has the following short, sharp, and pithy defense of the right of American citizens to hold other ideas of religion than those that may be prescribed by their orthodox (so-called) neighbors. Editor Davies is evidently of Welsh origin, and loves fair play in religion as in everything else:—

Two Mormon preachers have pitched their tent in Brown's grove in this city and are holding forth nightly to small audiences. As might be expected their congregations are made up largely of women. But as they call themselves the expurgated edition of Latter Day Saints and eschew polygamy as a doctrine, the phase of that faith that has always made it so popular with the women has been discarded.—Concordia Empire.

"Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." We might add that the most brutal cruelty perpetrated against Christians is that wrought by other Christians. Here's a man who pretends to be a Christian, whose congested, sickly, sour little soul runs riot in the joyous belief that hell is principally populated with the spirits of infants not more than a span long, casting the imputation of lasciviousness on thousands and thousands of the women of America because their religion does not bear his label.

We will warrant that every other religious congregation in the town of Concordia is "made up largely of women," but we are not warranted in the assumption that they go from any other than the purest motives. If Mr. Sawhill cared to tell the truth or to be fair, he would say that the organization to which these "two Mormon preachers" belong has done more to bring into disrepute the system of polygamy heretofore practiced in Utah than all other organizations combined. It may be to the credit of the women of Concordia and to the town itself to be mentioned in such an insinuating manner, by a local paper; but, somehow or other, we can't see it in that light.

DIVORCE LAW INEFFECTIVE.

THE following will be noted by those who believe that the present divorce system is not what should be written on the statute books of many of the States:—

FORT SCOTT, Kan., July 15.—The Kansas

Court of Appeals, all the Judges concurring, has declared ineffective the law under which divorces have been granted in this State for over twenty-five years. It is estimated that from 35,000 to 50,000 divorces are affected. The decision also affects property rights and the custody of children.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. BROADWAY, writing from Hamilton, New South Wales, June 8, says:—

I am glad to say that the Lord is gathering out the ones and twos in this part. We have built a nice little chapel. We owe something on it, but what we owe is to brethren in the church. We have not got the deeds, but hope to do so, and will then send them to the Bishop. Times are hard here, as I suppose they are all over the world. We are now having a big strike and it seems to stiffen all trades. We hope to see it settled in a week or two. Bro. Kaler baptized one last week and we expect two to be baptized this week. Three were baptized a few weeks ago; so the work is speaking slowly. We were disappointed when we did not get an appointment or two to this mission, but the Lord knows best.

Bro. A. M. Baker, Neosho, Missouri, July 13:—

I have been preaching for the past month in and around Neosho. Bro. Boone, Christian minister (?), exposed us again last Sunday night. I reply to him to-night. Many of the Campbellites are holding up for the "boy."

Bro. Henry Kemp, Shenandoah, Iowa, July 11:—

Our work in this district moves slowly; five have been baptized in Shenandoah of late, four of them Sunday school scholars, one a member of the old church. We have many urgent calls for preaching. The conference of the Nodaway district was well attended, the meetings quite spirited; all I think enjoyed themselves well. We are grateful to our Father in heaven for all.

Bro. Roderick May, of Independence, Missouri, wrote July 11:—

There never was better opportunities for preaching than now in this district. We have one tent with a seating capacity of two hundred and fifty, and could find use for a dozen. About fifty have been baptized in the district in the last month. Bro. Luff left for California to-day.

Bro. U. W. Greene, writing from Machias, Maine, July 11, sends a newspaper account of a new religious movement that is making considerable headway in Maine, under the leadership of F. W. Sandford, who claims to teach primitive Christianity, including baptism, healing through faith, etc. Of our work in Maine Bro. Greene writes:—

Bro. Blanchard and myself are in this place with tent. Good interest, good audiences, some names for baptism. Will attend to it to-morrow. We are well and happy in the work. God is truly blessing us in our efforts.

Bro. D. L. Shinn, Roscoe, Pennsylvania, July 14:—

Our debate is over and I am truly thankful that I can say truth is triumphant once more. When I came here there were but a very few came out to hear, but now I have great numbers of attentive hearers. I was called on and congratulated by some of the leading men of the place. Prejudice flies away and the gospel is heard and respected. I am more than satisfied with my debate, only that the time was not sufficient—six evenings.

Bro. W. S. Pender, Linn, Kansas, July 16:—

Closed meetings at Concordia, Sunday night with large crowd and good interest. Three were baptized during the meetings. Commence with tent here Saturday night. Linn, Washington County, Kansas, will be my address until reunion at Fact, Kansas, commencing August 20.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Herald Office is now using a gasoline engine to run its machinery of an entirely new pattern designed and made by Bro. Joseph B. Rodger, of Lamoni. Bro. Rodger has, after thoroughly studying the relation of power to resistance as shown in the many styles of gasoline engines, succeeded in creating one, in which many of the defects in the ordinary engines in use have been remedied; and he now presents to those having need of engines to drive their machinery, an almost perfect and forceful machine in which the powers latent in burning oil and heated air are harnessed, and equipped and held to the service of man. The engine put into the Herald Office by Bro. Rodger, to do its work, is many dollars cheaper than any of the generally known standard machines now on the market; and should it wear well, as it now gives promise to do, it is destined to take rank among the best, and to place Bro. Rodger's name among those of the inventors of the age.

Elder L. P. Hansen, a Danish brother, at Manti, Utah, sends money for Sandheden's Banner. He hopes to see the paper again a regular visitor at the homes of the Scandinavian Saints, that they may read in their own language of the progress of the church. He bears witness to the prophetic calling of the President of the Reorganized Church, in which he stands and contends for the faith delivered to the Saints through the Martyr.

Bro. Gustav A. Johnson, of Kansas City, Missouri, writes that there are six thousand Swedes in the city, but it is hard to reach them without literature. He thinks something should be done to publish tracts and books in the Danish language.

Property valued at one million dollars was destroyed by a cloudburst at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, July 15. Other portions of Western Pennsylvania, also Southern Michigan and Cincinnati and McArthur, Ohio, suffered great destruction of property by rain and windstorms on that date.

President Faure of France was twice fired at by a man during the celebration of the fall of the Bastille, July 14.

Smallpox prevails to an alarming extent in the city of Havana, its victims outnumbering those dying from yellow fever.

"Good hotels have recently been opened on Mount Carmel, at Nazareth, and at Tiberias."

Cloudbursts and hailstorms devastated many districts of Siberia on the 6th and 7th inst. Hailstones destroyed crops and swollen rivers inundated large districts of country.

Cairo, Egypt, reports the daily number of cholera cases to be from 320 to 360. Yellow fever prevails in the Spanish army in Cuba and a cholera outbreak is feared.

GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.—The July, August, and September edition of the Senior Quarterly has been exhausted. Orders for the Intermediate and Primary grades can be filled, as plenty of them remain.

THE CRY OF THE CHILDREN OF MEN.

"We are weary, we are laden,
We have wandered far astray;
Let us taste the sparkling waters
Flowing by the grassy way,
Let us pluck the clust'ring berries,
Luscious grapes hung overhead;
Take our ease, forget to-morrow,
Banish thought and banish dread."

Still, O, still, amid the pleasures
Comes the ceaseless cry of pain:
"Who will give us rest and quiet?
Who will give us rest again?"
We have tried each flowing fountain—

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. ABBIE CHILDERS, of Maysville, Arkansas, earnestly requests the prayers of the Prayer Union in behalf of Sr. Julia Balentine that her faith in God may grow stronger and that she may be healed of her afflictions. Also Grandmother Childers and little Innis Jinkins, that the Lord may heal them if it is his will. They are sorely afflicted.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR JULY.

"The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 30.

Thursday, July 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Jeremiah 23: 3-8.

Thursday, July 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

MYSTERY OF MYSTERIES.

Curse not the web of circumstance;
Is God no God to thee?

A brooklet ripples not by chance
To join the brimming sea;
By law its babbling waters dance,
And skip in minstrelsy.

And are the laws of sea and brook
But fables in thine eyes?
And are the leaves of nature's book
Writ with eternal lies?
Is there no God of law to look
On man, and sympathize?

Are great worlds moving without plan?
Were they by chance begot?
The smallest insect doubt may scan
Shows wisdom, without blot;
Then, be ye patient, foolish man—
God is, or law were not.

—Blackwood's Magazine.

AS I HAVE never written for the Sunday school department, I thought I would drop a few words this eve. I think the Sunday school a grand place to learn, and none of us are too old to learn. I would like to see the older Saints take a greater interest in this department of the work. There is a work for all. I well remember when I was in the intermediate class. Sr. Sutherland was our teacher, and how we loved her. She taught us our lesson, and made her own life harmonize with her teaching. We, though young, learned that there was truth in what she taught, as her daily life showed. How careful Sabbath school teachers should be in teaching by example as well as precept. If we teach one thing and practice another, the little ones soon see it. We should all try to be prompt at every session. It is not only disagreeable to ourselves and class for us to be late, but to others around us.

When we come, let us come prepared with our lessons, and let us as young ladies and gentlemen not permit the little ones to get far in advance of us in this. Just because we are older is no sign we know all there is to learn, and if there is more to learn let us see we profit by the time spent in Sabbath school. We should all improve our time, while in a class, for perhaps there may be a time when we may be called upon to take charge of a class. If we have not studied our lessons well, it may be the class will know more about the lesson than the teacher. And if we never do teach a class, we will never regret what we learned in the Sunday school.

I wish to say to those patient teachers, whose efforts sometimes seem fruitless to themselves that they know not the influence one word of theirs has had, on that wayward boy, or thoughtless girl. It may be, in after years, they will remember your teaching, and it may guard them against many a snare. So be not discouraged in your efforts for you know not the good you have accomplished, till you receive your crown. Let us, as teachers, ask God to guide us in our teaching. I have a class of little girls, (the one that a few years ago I was in.) And I do desire to teach by example as well as precept, that I may leave a clean record behind. I love to read the instruction in the Sunday school department, and hope to profit by it. I hope that I have said something that will benefit some one. Let us not be weary in well doing.

COUSIN BELLE.

RIGHT USE OF LIMITED TIME.

TIME is an important element in any work we have to do. The length of time given for that work is not always a matter of our choice; but the proper distribution of that time is within our power. We have a duty to know what time is allotted for a given task, and then to use that time wisely in view of its limits. If we have twenty minutes in which to teach a lesson, or ten minutes in which to make an address, we ought to know at the start how that time is to be divided, so as to form a complete and symmetrical whole when it is finished. A superintendent who occupies three fourths of the time of the teachers'-meeting on the first few verses of the lesson, and finally closes with the more important portions of the text untouched, or hastily skimmed over, shows himself, by that very fact, a poor leader of the meeting,—an incompetent one. A teacher who does not bring his entire planned lesson teaching within the time assigned to it, wrongs himself, and wrongs his scholars. To say that it is impossible to do what one has to do within the time that there is for its doing, is to say that one does not know how to use the time wisely, or is unwilling to do his plain duty.—S. S. Times.

FIND how many good teachers you have, and organize just that many classes, says Bishop Vincent. Yes, and organize one class more, one for training more good teachers, for they are needed.

LOVE to Christ is no pent-up emotion or hidden force. It is demonstrative. It is absent from no circle or condition. It is more than a transient feeling, or a momentary heart-glow. It is a real, moving, and constraining affection. It affects the mind, fills the soul, thrills the being, evokes latent energies and sets the entire nature on fire. It is as all-pervading as was Mary's broken alabaster box, which filled the entire room with its fragrance.—Selected.

Letter Department.

ROCKWELL CITY, Iowa, July 8.

Editors Herald:—The work in the Galland's Grove district is moving nicely forward, all things considered. So far as is known to the writer the branches are all in a fair working condition and their officers making an effort to feed the "Church of God" with the bread of life. Those branches which give the most encouragement to their own ministers, thus inspiring them to activity, reflect the greatest light upon the world and have the most "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Scattered Saints who live their religion and bear patiently "the scoffs and frowns of the world" are letting their light shine before men, and leading them to honor Christ and glorify God. Example-preaching is so much needed in these days of wickedness to demonstrate to a dying world that there is power enough in the gospel of Christ to convert, save, and sanctify; to make pure, and good, and happy, every one who will believe and obey its glorious principles of life. Those who love the work of God and desire the salvation of souls never lose sight of this fact. "For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed."—1 Peter 2: 20-24.

Our missionary force is unable to supply the demand for preaching, but we will do the best we can and leave the results with God. We actually need twenty more missionaries in this large district in order to warn the people as they should be warned to prepare themselves for the coming Lord. Elder C. J. Hunt and the writer commenced tent work at Rolfe, Iowa, the 13th ult., and have had fair attendance and excellent attention. The work done at that point last fall by Brn. J. F. McDowell and C. J. Hunt resulted in good.

I had the pleasure of baptizing our worthy brother, Henry Tilley, at that place on the 4th inst., and five or six others are almost persuaded to go with us; therefore we think best that the tabernacle should remain there until these are baptized or left without excuse.

I met with the Saints of the Union branch at the home of Bro. and Sr. D. King, near Ayrshire, on the 21st ult., and feasted with them at the Lord's table and baptized our worthy brother, William H. Wilcox. The Saints of this branch did not forget that the elders running the gospel tent needed some help. The assistance was timely and is remembered as coming from the disciples of the Lord; and the kindness of those at and near Rolfe who have furnished us with a home and made our stay pleasant is appreciated. Elder W. W. Whiting has been doing some good work, for which the Lord will evidently reward him.

On the 6th inst. the writer stopped off at Newell and found Bro. and Sr. Oliver Rounds well and looking after the interest of the work in that pleasant village. Sr. R. sent an invitation to some of her neighbors to meet at her home and I enjoyed the privilege of preaching the first sermon by one of our ministers in that town, to about twelve intelligent ladies and Bro. R. and family. I called on the editors, Messrs. Landon and Gordon, though I forget the name of their paper, and found them to be liberal and fair-minded gentlemen. Mr. Gordon once taught school at Camp Creek, making his home at the time with Father and Mother John Skinner, where he became acquainted with a number of our people and their religion, and because of this, I should judge, he is not prejudiced against our work. We hope to do some tent work in this town in the near future, if all goes well.

Our late conference and dedicatory services at Auburn, where President Joseph Smith and President of the Mission, Bro. Alex. Hale Smith did such good work, was a success throughout and much appreciated by the Saints and others.

"Let us not be weary, comrades!
Let us faint not by the way!
Though the night be long and dreary,
Soon will dawn millennium's day.
Let us keep the camp-fires blazing,
Let us sound abroad his word:
There are glorious victories coming
For the army of the Lord."

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

MACHIAS, Maine, July 7.

Editors Herald:—Since entering upon the new conference year, we have been quite busy in Maine. Bro. U. W. Greene and I are associated in labor. We spent May in the western part of the State, preaching between fifty and sixty discourses: opened three new places. The liberty enjoyed in preaching was refreshing to mind and body. We feel that it is good to be engaged in a work so satisfactory.

In this section we feel the blighting effect of traveling round in old circuits, established when the work first came to Maine. The failure to heed the admonition, not to "build on another's foundation, neither journey in another's track," leaves us with no new life in our district and the old, feeding upon itself, becomes vitiated. We hope to be able to change the circuit as the season advances.

Conference at Surry was quiet. Bro. S. G. Cunningham was ordained an elder and H. Saunders teacher, by recommendation of West Surry branch. From Surry we came to Machias and opened our tent. We are having fine audiences, bad weather notwithstanding. We are holding meetings at Chase's Mills also, alternating between the towns. Bro. J. C. Foss calls upon us occasionally.

Yours for success,

W. W. BLANCHARD.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., July 7.

Editors Herald:—Too much cannot be said in praise for the zeal and enthusiasm manifested by the Saints in the little towns of Windsor, Fulton, and Santa Rosa, for the spread of the grand and glorious truth, which seems to shine like a bright silvery star amid the darkness. Through the untiring efforts of Brn. Newton and Daley quite a large branch has been raised up, and with the exception of a few the Saints are battling valiantly for God and the right. Bro. Newton has been our teacher for some time and under his beautiful instructions the Saints have indeed made rapid advancement. May God bless him and reward him for the grand and glorious work he has accomplished in this vicinity.

Bro. Daley is at present in Lake County, doing all in his power to put down prejudice and error, and in its stead raise aloft the banner of light and truth. O, would to God that more just such noble workers were in the field! The "little stone" would then roll through the land like a mighty avalanche, crushing error and superstition in its onward progress.

But the object I had in view when I picked up my pen was to give you an account of our little church picnic which I had the pleasure of attending yesterday. About sixty Saints from Fulton and Santa Rosa, including the children belonging to the Sunday school, were in attendance. Conveyances were provided by the brethren sufficient to convey all to the grounds. O, what a merry, happy throng! As I looked upon those joyful countenances this thought flitted through my mind: "Will we all meet together as an unbroken family in that upper and better world?"

A chapter was read and prayer offered by Bro. Parks, of Fulton. We then all crowded around such a beautiful repast of all that heart could wish. To say that we all enjoyed the feast and did ample justice to the work before us would be putting it mildly, as the sequel will show, for in taking up the fragments they fell far short of twelve baskets. That part of the program being dispensed with it was proposed that we transform the picnic into a little prayer meeting; but the idea prevailed among the majority that it would not be wise, but when a messenger arrived a few minutes later communicating the sad intelligence that our teacher, Bro. Taylor, who was absent, had suddenly been taken ill, with one accord our hearts seemed to go out in sympathy for that dear brother, as we dropped on our knees and plead to the healer of all ills to touch the suffering one with his healing power. The peaceful and purifying influence of the Spirit seemed to brood sweetly and calmly over each dear one that knelt upon that grassy spot. The Spirit selected Sr. Jennie Page through whom to communicate his mind and will to us, and the tongue in which she spoke was beautiful; it seemed to thrill each heart with such a happy, indescribable sensation, as we listened to those lovely words of inspiration and gazed with inexpressible rapture upon that resplendent countenance. Our joy was unbounded, for the Lord assured us that he was pleased with us and that he had directed us to the little shady nook we now occupied and had been one in our midst from the first and had blessed our food before we had partaken, that the ground on which we were then kneeling by the side of that clear brooklet that trickled and meandered from its source far above us was consecrated, for at this very spot in the little pool shaded by lovely overhanging branches fifteen months ago nine precious souls were buried beneath the crystal element and arose to newness of life.

Dear readers, pardon this little digression, but I feel in duty bound to say a word in behalf of Sr. Jennie Page, that she is one of our most staunch and enthusiastic Saints. By her noble and untiring efforts to sow the good seed together with the wise and fearless manifestation of those heavenly gifts which God has so bountifully and deservedly bestowed upon her she has been instrumental in helping to swell the ranks of God's people to its present numbers. Although comparatively young in the cause she has been called upon to endure some very severe trials and persecutions, but she is like the gold that passes through the furnace and comes forth burnished and brighter for having gone through the fiery ordeal.

But to return. After listening to those beautiful and soul-stirring prayers and testimonies in which all participated, we wended our way back to the city of roses, each one resolving to live a purer and better life in the future. I will here state that before we had proceeded far on our return trip our hearts were made glad by the joyful tidings that our dear brother who was taken so suddenly ill was healed, for which we gave God all the praise.

A word about our little Sunday school. We have a thriving school here, composed of as bright and intelligent a band of innocents as one wishes to see. O, may the beautiful instructions they receive each Sabbath from their able instructors bud and bloom, and may the aroma be sweetly and calmly wafted on the wings of time far down the dim vista of the future, and may our progress ever be upward and onward, and the peaceful, enlightening, and purifying influences of the Holy Spirit reign supreme in our midst; and may each dear one ever bask in the sunshine of that love and charity that only can emanate from the source from whence all that is good and purifying comes, is the heartfelt desire of

Your humble servant,

E. F. ADAMSON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 9.

Editors Herald:—We who are privileged with the gospel of the Son of God—I mean we who have seen its power and truth, and have the assurance of what may be attained by living it, ought indeed, to be a happy people. The words of the Master come to us with double force, "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" The salvation of our souls should be the aim of our lives. "Draw nigh unto me, and I will draw nigh unto you," is an expression of the loving Father to his dependent children. Those who have drawn sufficiently near to the Almighty to be able to affirm a knowledge of the above, do know assuredly of its truth. And yet, with the evidence before us, certain evidence too, we find it hard in many cases to convince men that the God of the ancients is still the same, that he is. Well might the inspired Paul write: "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Who wants to "put him to an open shame"—the best friend men have? Certainly no one who has his own interest in view.

That it is possible for one who has "tasted of the heavenly gift," to turn away and need repentance, is clearly indicated, and in conjunction with what Jesus said (Matt. 12:31, 32) it is made certain. But it is not to be supposed that one in the enjoyment of the gift of the Holy Ghost is going to immediately, with the consciousness of the doom to follow, make this change in his life's work; but we have the evidence before us, and cited, that this change can come, therefore we see that it must be a thing which slowly engulfs its victim. Just as a man becomes a drunkard, no one taking his or her first glass of intoxicating drink thinks for one moment that the future is a drunkard's grave, and yet we know it to be too true. With these facts before us how careful we ought to be not to take the first step. It is a self-evident fact that if we do not take the first, we certainly will not take the second. We see the wisdom of the Savior's words, "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." I have often felt the force of this statement. And I can affirm to all the world the efficacy of prayer; not a mere speaking of words, but a coming before God, realizing that he is the source of all supply, and ask him in all sincerity to aid in keeping one in the way of salvation. "If any man lack wisdom," or anything else in reason, whether he be Saint or sinner, "let him ask of God." And let him expect an answer. And that the answer will come as divine wisdom shall see proper.

The way and means of salvation are of our Father's appointing, and he knows all our needs. I can say and say truly that I find a grand principle of truth in the statement that "if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." This is the way we are to be cleansed and the way to remain cleansed, and there is no other way. O, dear Saints in all the world, let us walk in the light, and remember that Jesus Christ is the Savior of all men, and especially of them that believe.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 14.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a seven-weeks' meeting here. I have been blessed by the Spirit of our Master to a great degree, inasmuch that a great many believed and eleven were baptized. Those that believed which were not baptized we have left, feeling assured that if they never get any nearer the kingdom they will be friendly to our people and that their old theology is badly spoiled. Bro. and Sr. Pickering and other Saints have done all they could to make the meetings a success, especially the former, who bought four dollars worth of tracts, which we have distributed every night to the people, besides selling two dozen of the Voice of Warning and giving out a great number of Ensigns and Heralds, which the people were very anxious to receive.

We moved the tent once and scattered three thousand bills. We leave feeling that the work has now got a start and that the persistent effort which Bro. and Sr. Pickering have put forth and the money they have willingly expended have not been in vain, and the prospect for an early organization makes their faces beam with delight. And their cup of joy was full Sunday morning when they had their first opportunity of partaking of the sacrament and hearing the glad testimonies of nineteen of the Saints. God was indeed with us and our souls were full of joy. Bro. White was with us and presided over the meeting, and on Monday night he was greatly blessed in speaking to a tent full of interested hearers. It was a fine closing sermon and it was well received, and many were the friends who stopped to say "God-bye" and "God speed you."

The Saints remained a little while after the sermon and a petition was signed by those present that the coming quarterly conference should take steps towards the organization of a branch at this place. A prayer meeting was organized for Sunday afternoon. May God bless them, is my prayer.

NEW HOPE, Va., July 14.

Editors Herald:—Months and years have passed into their never-returning course, but my name has never appeared in your golden leaves as a contributor to your letter department. The inestimable comfort the Herald affords me can be appreciated only by those who have refused all kinds of inducements calculated to make the short stay of this life happy, and gone out into the cold and insulting world to assist others to make ready for the real and lasting happiness that is ushered in at the inevitable call of death to all those who love Christ's appearing.

Often while meditating upon the incomprehensible works of God, my agitated mind is frequently arrested upon the complex thought, "Why is it that the very ones who sacrifice everything that is near and dear to the throbbing heart and to move out into the cold heartless world with prayers, tears, and pleadings, are only answered with scorn, contempt, and abuse, and not infrequently with clubs and stones?" I know it is true that our stainless Savior had it all to bear and much more, too; but why the just must suffer for the unjust, has always been a query to me.

The evening of May 18 found me encircled with loving friends beneath a welcome roof, and giving the parting hand to ones who have ever stood ready, for many years, to assiduously administer to my many wants, to enter into unwelcome walks with no certain dwelling place. However, when my soul is at perfect ease, and my tired mind drinks in the beatitudes of heaven to the realization of the endless peace, perpetual felicity, and absolute contentment, the perplexities of this hypocritical world with all its concomitant trials fade into oblivion.

Since coming here I have sacrificed no honorable means in trying to get our claims before the people, but public buildings are hard to obtain and but little has been done.

There is an excellent little band of Saints here who are doing all they can to uphold the integrity of the church; nevertheless, they are not free from dead branches. The enemy has done us much harm by working through some of his dupes, and his wrath was not appeased until he saw the only church of the Saints in the State go up in flames. The Lord reward them "according to their works."

On the 3d of July I hopefully left the pleasant and hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Coffman to try and effect an opening at a new place, but am sorry to say that trying was all the further I got. I stopped over night at Lexington, and the next morning at eight o'clock while flags and banners were proudly floating in the exhilarating breeze and the gay youngsters were draped in their luster garbs of jollification, and crowding the over-packed excursion trains headed for the parks and places of amusement, I firmly grasped my two satchels loaded with the message of truth, directed to a sin-cursed village, on a foot and wagon road excursion of fifteen miles, stopping occasionally only to counteract the burning effects of the sun. The trip was by no means a pleasant one; but it is experience that we young elders need to qualify us for higher places in the great work of redemption, and I certainly got it on that trip. With physical exertion, mental anxiety, and spiritual depression, in one week I dropped eight pounds in avoirdupois. I am willing to drop it all for the promulgation of this latter-day glory if the Lord will only give me the Spirit of liberty when doing so.

At bedtime on the evening of the 13th I unexpectedly stepped into the house of loving Saints. To add to my discomfort I found a rumor afloat that I had gone or was about to elope with a young lady of this place. About this time I began to realize the force of the Bible statement in regard to the unmarried man that it's "not good" for man to be alone, although it is just as bad for the married men (elders), for they are often accused of having two or three wives. John came neither eating nor drinking and they called him a devil; and when Christ came in the very opposite manner the same accusers said he was a glutton and a winebibber.

Prejudice is the main argument used against the Saints here; preachers standing in the pulpit and claiming to be called of God to enlighten the people will warn their flocks to keep away from our meetings. They haven't the manhood or courage to come out from behind their crumbling creeds and walls of hypocrisy and show the true American spirit, but will squeal out very piously, "Don't go among the Mormons." It makes me think of the statement of Bro. Clapp at Kirtland, "I would rather be swallowed by a whale than to be nibbled to death by minnows."

We are waiting very anxiously for the arrival of Bro. F. C. Smith. We expect him here next week. From here we go down about the old famous city of Richmond, and along the Atlantic coast. I am informed that we have a few noble Saints down there.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 13.

Editors Herald:—Since I last addressed you I have been busy looking after gospel matters as well as doing a little harvesting. From Coleman conference I went to West Bay City in company with my wife and little daughter Grace, to advertise meetings for Bishop G. H. Hilliard, who, for one week, made the little church ring with gospel truths so plain that "the wayfaring man though a fool" could tell just what he was talking about. The Saints who fail to pay their tithes after listening to Bro. Hilliard, will not pass upon their ignorance in the great day of judgment. We all felt very much edified and instructed with the good teaching we received.

On the morning of the 2d inst. Mrs. Grant informed me that just twelve years ago that day she had taken me for the better or worse, and gave me a strong invitation to attend the celebration of our twelfth anniversary at Wenona Beach, in company with a number of friends, who seemed very anxious to make the occasion an enjoyable one, Sr. S. C. Robertson and Bro. J. S. Kier being among the number. After sizing up a big watermelon which was checked for the same destination, I concluded to go with all my appetite. The melon never returned. A very pleasant day was passed, and in the afternoon I had the pleasure of burying a young man and his wife beneath the crystal wave in Saginaw Bay for the remission of their sins.

While in Bay City the Ladies' Aid Society purchased a fine Estey organ for the church. The sisters of Bay City are alive and do all they can for the advancement of the work there.

From Bay City we went to Bay Port in company with Bro. E. White and wife, and met with the Saints there in sacrament services. We had a very enjoyable time. After a twelve-miles' drive on the 6th inst. I found myself under my own vine and fig tree for the first time since the 1st of May. After looking the little plantation over for a short time, it was found that the wheat was ripe, waiting to be harvested. The necessary arrangements were made, but the neighbor being a little slow to enter with the modern harvester, we concluded to try the old-fashioned way; so Bro. Bates took the cradle, while the writer followed him with a wooden rake and bound up the grain. For a half day it was nip and tuck to know whether the preacher would tie up all the grain one cradle could cut down or not, there being a few Canada thistles to add to his comfort (?). While the propelling power of the raking apparatus was seriously thinking the thistle question over in his mind, and wondering why men did not do as they agreed, the neighbor came with his machine and finished reaping the grain.

On the 9th inst., after gathering clothes and books together, I bade the dear wife and loving children farewell and started for this place. On my arrival I found all feeling good and pleased at my return. On Sunday we had two good meetings with good attendance. Some outsiders came as far as twelve miles. I was told that out at Englishville where the Baptists would not let us have their church to preach in, and the schoolhouse being closed against us, the outsiders were arranging to build a hall for me to preach in. I have never spoken there yet, but by invitation will speak in a private house there Thursday evening of this week. There seems to be a good interest all through these parts. There is so much to do I hardly know where to go first. Bro. Briggs, can't you send me some one to help fill the many calls?

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 16.

Editors Herald:—In a great city like this unusual things are liable to happen and the rather unusual thing of the advent of missionaries in the interest of the Utah propaganda in our midst, and knocking at our doors for a place in which to preach, is the thing which has happened within the last few days.

Elders Fackrell and Christensen, the former lately from Lamoni and Independence, the latter direct from Manti, Utah, called at our home last Wednesday one week ago, requesting the use of our chapel for meetings, etc. I told them that if my consent was the only thing wanting the way would be clear, but that the trustees or directors would have to be consulted. Matters having been arranged they spoke Sunday morning, in defense of the claims of the Utah Church, but were not aggressive nor offensive, only as their presence, as representatives of an unauthorized and unrecognized church, with such statements as that Brigham Young, the present apostles, and presidents in succession were "good men, men of God," "filled with the Holy Ghost," etc., etc., could offend some of the sensitive ones.

Our already advertised subject for the evening, and text (Heb. 8: 6), seemed to prove an inspiration, and the law of unchangeability in the methods of God in dealing with the human family, and as especially applied to the work of Brigham Young and others, was, by the Spirit's aid, shown seemingly to the satisfaction of most everybody present, save perhaps the elders before-mentioned.

Some of our people seemed anxious to have them present their views in detail in regard to "successorship" of the presidency of the church, and an arrangement not altogether of my best judgment or consent under the circumstances was made for them to occupy last Tuesday evening, with an arrangement for reply, if desired, upon last (Wednesday) eve.

Unusually large audiences were present the two evenings, and whatever the ultimate of things may prove, we are satisfied that a policy of necessity has forced the directors of affairs in religion at Utah to forbid public discussion with elders of the Reorganized Church.

I do not wish to be found running contrary to the counsel of the Spirit given in paragraph 4, section 119, Doctrine and Covenants, and if it has application in the case of the people who have been led away into the "salt land," I do not want to be found among "ministers for Christ" who would "hinder" or "prevent" their return to the true fold; but whether a person is "returning" or traveling farther away from a given or desired point, must be left largely to our individual judgment; and judging by that standard, there seems to be a good many whose faces are set away instead of toward the Reorganization, and rules of logic or law seem as useless to them as to the sectarian world.

As men, we have endeavored to apply to our Utah visitors the law of the golden rule, and to treat them with all courtesy and kindness, and for which they have not been slow to express their thanks. But in coming among us, I believe that wisdom and justice demands that they should be kept in remembrance of the fact that they are the responsible representatives of a system of religious faith which, as a whole, has, in the past, made life a burden and the work of establishing the true Church of Jesus Christ both a costly, tiresome, and trying task for the elders of the Reorganized Church; and to fete and feast an enemy, either directly or indirectly, is not always to do good to them. In other words, I take it that the church that has millions within its hold should be able to provide halls, entertainment, and support for its ministers. The "without purse and scrip" plea has been so abused and misapplied by men who are willing that it should apply only to others than themselves, that we should not be deceived in this matter. Judas carried a bag—a legitimate and lawful one. There is a church provision ordained by the church for all in the "very hour" of their need (D. C. 23:7): "Whosoever feedeth you and clotheth you, and giveth you money, the same is my disciple," etc. "Into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who is worthy, and there abide." Who is here referred to, Saints or people of the world?

Our Utah elders might have inquired or knocked at the door of the Mayor of St. Louis or some of the rich "worthy" people who live upon Grand avenue, or at Vandeventer Place, but they didn't, and if it were not for the "deluded" and "apostate" of the Reorganized Church they could, according to their own statements, be in a hard place for friends and necessary comforts.

To investigators and sincere seekers after and lovers of truth our time and means are ever at their service; but I don't want to be made, under any guise, a stool pigeon for the propaganda of Brigham Young and Company. Jesus said, "Be ye wise servants and harmless as doves," and to effect the latter we must remember that "wise servants" will not forget that there are a good many ways in which we may be the thoughtless promulgators of harm and harmful influences; and that in the great fight which the enemy is waging against us, especially here in this city, we shall, while treating everybody courteously, have to look to our own fences and be judges as to who are our friends and who are not, and as "wise servants" act accordingly. Neither to do this are we obliged to follow the example set by those who are held up to us as "great and good men," in their treatment, especially of the first elders of the Reorganization in Utah. Things may be better now than when lives were threatened, but the virtue of a necessity is but poor virtue with those who seriously reflect upon the value of motive that compels or forces an action.

By papers which we send you it will be seen that these men are to be reinforced by the presence of Elder B. H. Roberts, of Salt Lake City, "the most eloquent man in the church and one of the highest members of its priesthood," and with two vocalists from the famous "tabernacle choir" will proceed to reinforce and reawaken the slumbering spirit of Utah Mormonism in the city of St. Louis.

Church matters, in spite of many opposing and hindering influences, are tending slowly upwards all the time, matters are mending, but the evil force is rampant everywhere and by no means leaves the church unhindered and unharmed. Our attendance at both prayer and preaching service is gaining in a gratifying way—many seriously investigating, and with patient watching we hope to overcome the enemy.

We have secured a free place for tent service, and will erect this week, commencing on next Sunday. There is good interest at Alma—a Sabbath school being organized last Sunday by Brn. Dawson and Archibald. Lovely weather this month, though very warm at times. Have recarpeted the church and are well on the way to a new organ and trying to do the best we can in an all around way for the cause.

M. H. BOND.

BOONESBORO, Iowa, July 13.

Editors Herald:—I notice in the Deseret Evening News, of Salt Lake City, Utah, issue for July 2, a statement under the caption, "Slandering Utah People," and signed by one Levi A. Colvin that is quite misleading in a number of particulars, and that leaves me in a false light before its readers. The caption of the letter is false to begin with. I detest a slanderous tongue, as the vilest of expediences, and as being beneath the contempt of all gentility; and as a violation of good sense, good manners, and all law.

"Our Josephite brethren" did not send for "one of their brightest lights, Scott by name," "to counteract" the "teachings" of Elder Colvin and colaborer, as stated by him; nor did he know "all the time" that such was the case, for it is not true. Our Josephite brethren of the Des Moines (Iowa) district of the Reorganized Church held a regularly appointed district conference at Boonesboro May 30 and June 1; and I being a General Conference appointee to labor in said district, attended the conference, as was my right and privilege, without being "sent for" by anybody. Milford, or Incline, is a coal mining settlement on the west side of the Des Moines River, some three miles west of Boonesboro, and a number of the Josephite brethren live there. They invited me to go there and preach to the people. They rented the hall, and I preached twice, on the signs of the times, the increasing evils of the age. Found the people in the humor to attend the services and listen attentively to the word; hence, did not have to give "the people 'taffy'" to "get them in a good humor."

Bro. Colvin and his "indignant" colaborer, David A. Robison, had circulated some of their tracts and other literature in the community without making any explanations regarding the distinction between the Utah faction and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as reorganized, after their separation from the church and the faith.

This distinction the people not of either faith desired to know, a number of them made inquiries to know, and we being of that class that desire the light of truth and facts turned in on all subjects of interest to the people, announced this the topic for the next evening. I sent requests to the adherents of the Utah faith to be present. Elders Colvin and Robison came. Elder John Batts did not attend.

I traced the history of the church in brief, showing the faith to have been the gospel, as set forth in the New Testament. I then enumerated some of the leading points of difference existing in faith in the adherents to the latter-day work in 1830 to 1844, and, as being engrafted onto the faith by President B. Young (so-called), after the year 1844 and onward till now. The additions being mainly the theory and practice of polygamy, that Adam is our God, "and the only god with whom we have to do;" sealing wives to men for eternity; blood atonement; repudiating the written word of God and substituting therefor men—"living oracles;" and that there is no law providing that Brigham Young and his successors should become the presidents of the church. And the dictatorialism of "Do as you're told and ask no questions," which of course is the infallible insignia of priestcraft instead of priesthood.

To this effort Bro. Colvin essayed to reply the evening following. He referred to Brigham's statement, that Joseph the Martyr rolled the kingdom off onto the Twelve, and that the Twelve Apostles are the First Presidency of the church. He read Brigham's statement, to the effect that he had never been in nor stood in his proper place in the church in the world till then, (the fall of the year, 1844,) officially. He read Robert's account of Brigham's transfiguration, some other matters. He defended sealing as set forth in the fraudulent so-called revelation of 1843, reading extracts therefrom. And after doing so, charged me with dealing with an issue (polygamy) now dead in Utah, and he hoped it would never be resurrected. Bro. Colvin had been sealed to his wife for eternity, and grew very ecstatic over it, and did not think a great deal of any man who would not do likewise! I devoted another evening to the subject, including some things said by Elder Colvin, and that was the "tirade," that semi Rip Vanwinkle "tirade," that awoke "ten years too late," was away behind the times, and not even worth remembering, altogether uninteresting! I think, however, that the five representatives, three of them missionaries from Utah, that sat on the front seat that night, just before me, were quite deeply engrossed in thought, absorbed in meditation profound; in fact were keenly interested, for they heard things they never heard before. Elder Colvin stated so after the services ended. This "tirade," so-called, consisted mainly of examination of the statements of B. Young, as quoted by Tullidge, from Times and Seasons, "Life of Joseph," pages 533, 4, 5, 6, and 439; his revelation of Adam-God, and his famous prophecy on the universal spread and popularity of the doctrine and practice of polygamy (Tullidge pages 565, 6), delivered at its public inauguration in Utah, August 29, 1852. Also, Joseph Smith the Martyr's statement, found in Times and Seasons, October 1, 1842. And certificates of citizens of Nauvoo, including President John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, their wives, and Eliza R. Snow, all denying at that time that polygamy was either taught or practiced in the church. Joseph's and Hyrum's denunciation of that doctrine as late as February and March, 1844 (Times and Seasons, vol. 5, page 423), and the scathing denial of the dogma by an "old man in Israel" five months after the death of the Martyrs; and John Taylor's editorial vouch that the statement was "genuine" (Times and Seasons 5: 715, 711), with John Taylor's own denial of and denunciation of polygamy as being "without authority from God," eleven months after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. (Times and Seasons 6: 888.)

A comparison of the statements here cited with the subsequent statements and lives of those same men, coming in on the young advocates of the Brighamite side of the questions involved, took them so by surprise that they mistook the avalanche of evidence from these men for a "tirade"! But what could these men do? They held the two-edged boomerang by the blade! The question is, When did Young, Taylor and Co. tell the truth—in 1842-5, when they denied the existence of polygamy in the church, or in 1852 when they set the idol up? The "Abstract of Evidence" is a strong auxiliary in this connection, also.

Bro. Colvin says: "Bro. Robinson and I had a talk with the Saints here about the situation, when it was decided that if the gentleman, Mr. Scott, was fair in his remarks we would not agitate the question any further. On the other hand, if he slandered and abused as he had done before, the presiding elder of our little branch here, John Batts by name, and by the way a well posted man, would challenge him to debate, which he did the next evening at the close of Mr. Scott's remarks, and the gentleman colored up and backed down like a little man. He knew his big blow wouldn't stand the test."

After I had dismissed my meeting there was a man (whom I have learned since, was Mr. Batts) began to talk as the crowd was leaving the hall, and said something about desiring to find the truth, and proposed to show that polygamy, which Bro. Colvin said the night before was a dead issue in Utah, was taught in the Bible, and approbated of God! Why is it that after the church in Utah has declared in the most positive terms that polygamy with them is no more, and after having professed to participate in the adoption of the constitution of the State of Utah that prohibits its practice in the State "forever," that the elders of that church cling to polygamy and its defense with such tenacity?

The audience dissolved while Mr. Batts was talking. The people at Incline did not wish to hear him. This I was told by a number of persons who are not members with us. He left an appointment to discuss the question the next evening, but not a soul save his adherent, and three other little girls, were in attendance. The little girls left, and Mr. Batts adjourned his little audience without holding any meeting. Mr. Batts said nothing that I understood to be a challenge to me to debate with him.

But if Mr. Colvin and Mr. Robison insist that a challenge was planned by themselves and their brethren there, and that such was offered through Mr. Batts to me, be it hereby known by them, that if the church represented by them, will honor this challenge of its missionaries, above named, they being unable to meet the issues involved, and appoint a capable defender of its faith, one whom it will intrust with its cause and will indorse him as such, I will accept the challenge to debate the live issues constituting the difference between the Church in Utah, known as the Latter Day Saints, and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, under circumstances properly arranged, in Salt Lake City, or in any other place where the discussion of such subjects would be beneficial and of interest to the community. Will the church presided over by Wilford Woodruff, so honor their missionaries sent to Iowa, and respect their challenge?

Here is an opportunity for the Church in Utah to manifest its sincerity in the advocacy of its cause and faith,

My postoffice address is Box 211, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa.

Most respectfully,
ELDER C. SCOTT.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, July 14.

Editors Herald.—Our two-days' meetings at Wheeling, West Virginia, were a grand success. There was a large attendance of both Saints and friends. Much of the Spirit of God was present, hence all were encouraged to continue their diligence in the services of the Lord. Old Bro. Byrd, of Bellaire, Ohio, was baptized by the writer on the 7th ult., and two more on the 23d, which made six that I had the pleasure of leading down into the waters of baptism during my sojourn in the city. The officers of said branch are active workers for the Master, and under their administrations the branch has prospered very materially of late. The outlook for the work in Wheeling and vicinity is very encouraging indeed.

The rain interfered very largely with the two-days' meetings at Glen Easton, West Virginia. However, we had some good meetings. Baptized Bro. William Richmond and wife, who will be a great help to the work there, if faithful. The Saints there are talking very strongly of building a churchhouse, which is very much needed, as the schoolhouse in which they hold their meetings is not commodious enough for the large audiences that come to hear our ministers preach. I left quite a number who seem to be very near the kingdom and with little labor will shortly unite with the church.

On the 20th and 21st ult., we held two-days' meetings at Blake Mills, Ohio. Here as at the other places the Lord remembered his people and abundantly blessed their weak efforts. On Sunday evening I baptized three in the Tuscarawas River—Bro. Klair and wife, and Bro. Cramer's daughter Flossie. Much credit is due to Bro. Thomas Darst, the Cramer brothers, and many others of the young people there, for the excellent singing that is furnished by them. The Blake Mills branch ought to be very proud of its choir. God bless these young people in their grand effort to make the services of the Lord interesting and profitable.

There have been over fifty baptized in the Pittsburg and Kirtland district since April 1. The brethren of the ministry report progress in their respective fields of labor. I go to Ashmont, Ohio, this week. Bro. W. H. Kelley returned home on account of his wife's illness. She is much improved. Bro. Lake is with us but will soon leave for his field of labor. On last Sabbath I preached twice in Cleveland. Bro. Rushton and his brother officers are doing nicely, and they are working together in unison. We were glad to meet with Sr. Rushton, who arrived in America a short time ago, and with whom we made our home during our sojourn in Leeds, England. With kind regards to all the brethren in the office and God's people in all the world, I remain,

Your brother in bonds,

WHY DO WRONG?

THE realism of Christ's gospel is too apparent to the lover of righteousness to doubt, which fact involves a necessity for a practical demonstration of a corresponding realism in our moral rectitude. Herein lies our spiritual warfare.

The fact of salvation being promised to those who overcome makes it possible to overcome, otherwise such a promise were tantalizing.

Though motives may be hidden from all save God, there must be motives prompting every act of our lives, so long at least as we are blessed with a sound mind. And so we are amenable to God, whose decision in the time of retribution will be final. But in the meantime we are amenable to the church for our moral conduct; and rights granted by virtue of church relationship do not mean license. Christ began and terminated his ministerial career in the light radiating from the written word, not thinking himself greater than or above the word, while acting as a representative of his Father. Should we do more or less?

It were indeed a sad spectacle (to my mind) to hear a fellow-mortal making claims with a plea for acquiescence because of position, irrespective of principle, law, or rule; especially in the light of modern revelations, which have been given to God's servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, and so explicit, as to benefits secured by abiding in or by law, and the consequence to ensue, if transgressing law. Nor were such sadness lessened but intensified, if such a procedure were indorsed or passed by, as if it would not injure. For if the commission of wrong will be harmless, it were as well, perhaps, to sin that grace may abound.

God doeth as he pleaseth, but we are bound to make given and accepted law our rule of action, otherwise the claim of its verity or imperativeness were a farce.

A love evinced to God, by diligence in present duty, will beget a love for all God's creatures, especially the household of faith, and effectively eliminate all desires to seek for power or prestige by adopting policy in lieu of principle, that God's law would not guarantee. The gospel being right, all that is opposed thereto purporting to be religion must be wrong. And since power is given to act and do right, why do wrong?

It is quite evident that the satisfaction of wrong is but for a limited time, and when the mind which conceived and by the coöperation of the will power perpetrated the wrong, is brought to a calm and contemplative condition, and thus reviews the act, it is more than likely that the satisfaction is supplanted by remorse of conscience, and a struggle begins in which a godly sorrow is felt, suggesting retraction with a corresponding determination to be more cautious in the future, or the predominance of man's proud and rebellious nature, saying, "Why should I yield, retract, or repent? It's too humiliating. I'll not do it!" Thus the flesh subdues, and the spirit is led captive; for where two antagonistic and contending powers exist, one is quite likely to subdue the other. It must of necessity be so with the flesh and the spirit, for there can be no compromise; hence the promise is to him that overcometh. Therefore if we fail to overcome we shall be overcome, and to my mind this is the end of the chapter on that point.

It is possible to delve and soar for a reputation by essaying to settle vexed or abstruse questions and yet pay too little attention to our moral rectitude, which would be a rare specimen of human folly. And I don't know but that it is possible to justify ourselves in the commission of wrong under the pretext of our inability to evince a godly perfection. For self-justification is a very prominent trait in the human character. But I incline to the opinion that were we to change and evince the same desire to correct "self" as we too often evince to correct others, we would do much towards the subjugation of this trait so often made too prominent.

There is such a striking and vivid contrast between a godly righteousness and the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, as to induce all Latter Day Saints to strive as zealously to keep from being pharisaical as they should from being liars, tale-bearers, or drunkards. I am not prepared to say that Christ was mistaken in attributing a cleanliness to his disciples (John 15: 3), or in enjoining upon them to be perfect as their heavenly Father was perfect (Matthew 5: 48); for in the first place I believe through obeying the gospel the word reflects they obtained a remission of sins. Hence were clean in the sight of God, being then free from sin; therefore God recognized them as his adopted children. In the second place, by virtue of this relationship with God they occupied a new sphere and by a perfect obedience to the laws given to govern them would be perfect in their sphere as God was perfect in his. Further: It being through pure desires and the coöperation of the will power that they through obedience had obtained a remission of their sins, it was made possible for them to so live as to retain a remission of sins, and thus remain clean in the sight of God.

But I don't understand that the perfection to which they could aspire in their several spheres was equal to the absolute perfection with which God is clothed; but, having attained to a remission of sins, they were clean in the sight of God; and as they had so far subdued the flesh as to submit to the ordinances of God's house, thus rising to a life divinely new, the same resolution being brought into requisition would have enabled them to have kept the flesh in subjection, and thus to have retained a remission of their sins, and therefore to have remained perfect in their spheres. This thought is quite compatible with the apostle's teachings; viz., "Sin is the transgression of the law." Hence no transgression, no sin; no sin, no condemnation; no condemnation, God's recognition is assured; therefore justification by God through Christ is felt and enjoyed; hence the admonition to stand fast in the liberty where-with Christ has made us free, thus being prevented from being again entangled with the yoke of bondage. (Galatians 5: 1.) In the same chapter the works of the flesh are enumerated as, "Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like;" etc; so it were an error to suppose that drunkenness is the only crime that prohibits an inheritance in the kingdom; for variance, revellings, etc., are placed in the same category with drunkenness.

But in contradistinction to these evils we find that the fruit of the Spirit is enumerated thus: "Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law. So that if from motives, desire, or aforethought, with the coöperation of will power we commit any of the above evils, and come under condemnation, thereby jeopardizing our liberty in Christ, from motive, desire, or aforethought,—with the coöperation of the will power we can show forth the fruits of the Spirit, being above the law. Why, then, do wrong?

We are very largely if not altogether, what we desire to be; and since we do not do that for which we have no desire, why cherish a desire for wrong?

If evincing a nonmental reservation, in our acceptance of the gospel, and we have received a peace that passeth all understanding, why not evidence a nonmental reservation in being governed by given and accepted law as citizens of the kingdom? It cannot be thought that law given to govern citizens of Christ's Church are less imperative than those by which we were made citizens. Why then evince an indifference or essay to palliate, cover over, or pass by wrong, which is made palpable by a violation of those laws.

Should I now or at any subsequent period, feel convinced that the laws reflective of our method of adjudication were defective, I would be at a loss to know how I could advocate or believe in the realism of our method of adoption. I have not, nor do I now believe, that the right to aspire to a citizenship carries with it the right to priest or people, to think of, much less to enter into, the sacred precincts of God's divine and revealed economy, to change or modify its reflected decrees; for then would the kingdom be divided against itself. "Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law."—Mal. 2:9. To even the causal observer there appears at once, a visible compatibility between the above, and section 85:8 of Doctrine and Covenants in reflecting the verity and therefore the imperativeness of the law. I cannot regret that the power to offer or receive bribes or the love of nepotism should exist; but, if offered, accepted, and cherished, with a view to hinder or prevent justice, I would think it were unfortunate, as sooner or later disastrous results must follow such a procedure. I have thought it strange that those evincing rebellion should, as it is sometimes made to appear, so easily excite sympathy, for no evil can possibly come to any, if charged with wrong, by submitting to the operation of given and accepted law. For if justice is prevented or denied by one tribunal, appeal to another is permissible, or provided for. But I perceive it possible that much evil may ensue, by undue officiousness in efforts to prevent the operation of law.

All members of a regularly organized branch are amendable to that branch for their moral conduct, and no plea, whatever may be the incentive, looking to the prevention of recognized officials from carrying into practice church law and rule, would be justifiable.

I neither wish to extend nor to limit law-imposed duties or prerogatives; but think there is a difference between officials of districts and branches and the local ministry of an organized district, who are under the jurisdiction of the district president. The former are charged to see that God's law is kept, by virtue of their appointment, the latter only as they may be called, or appointed. They may, however, cooperate by informing the proper authorities, if knowing of evil which had not yet come to the knowledge of the latter. But such information would necessitate a proper inquiry and labor, which should invariably precede accusation and citation to trial. Undue interference in duties by one official, which legitimately belongs to another, would be very effective in making trouble, hence the necessity of practically sticking to the text, viz.; "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence," etc.—D. C. 104:44.

A failure to be diligent is bad, but diligence evincive of a zeal not according to knowledge is worse, hurtful to the individual, and if permitted to go on unrestrained must prove hurtful to the cause. Christ very nicely informed the disciples that it was not for them to know the times and seasons that the Father has put in his own power. Let us shun undue inquisitiveness, essaying to be wise servants, being diligent, true, and faithful in our respective callings.

THE TWO GENEALOGIES.

THERE is a seeming disagreement between the records of Matthew and Luke concerning the genealogy of Christ. After studying the matter, the following seems to me the most reasonable explanation of the difficulty. I however cordially invite any to pull my theory to pieces, provided he can offer a better; or, if this seems reasonable, I shall be grateful for any additional evidence in its favor.

MATTHEW 1:6-16.

LUKE 3:23-31.

1. David.	David.
2. Solomon.	Nathan.
3. Roboam.	Mattatha.
4. Abia.	Menan.
5. Asa.	Melea.
6. Josaphat.	Eliakim.
7. Joram.	Jonan.
8. Ozias.	Joseph.
9. Joatham.	Juda.
10. Achaz.	Simeon.
11. Ezekias.	Levi.
12. Menasses.	Matthat.
13. Amon.	Jorim.
14. Josias.	Eliezer.
15. Jechonias.	Jose.
16. Salathiel.	Er.
17. Zorobabel.	Elmodam.
18. Abiud.	Cosam.
19. Eliakim.	Addi.
20. Azor.	Melchi.
21. Sadoc.	Neri.
22. Achim.	Salathiel.
23. Eliud.	Zorobabel.
24. Eleazer.	Rhesa.
25. Matthan.	Joanna.
26. Jacob.	Juda.
27. Joseph.	Joseph.
28. Jesus Christ.	Semei.
29.	Mattathias.
30.	Maath.
31.	Nagge.
32.	Eli.
33.	Naum.
34.	Amos.
35.	Mattathias.
36.	Joseph.
37.	Janna.
38.	Melchi.
39.	Levi.
40.	Matthat.
41.	Heli.
42.	Joseph.
43.	Jesus Christ.

Evidently the writers of the two Gospels (Matthew and Luke) have traced the lineage of the Savior through two different lines; both, however, springing from the loins of David, and both, therefore, in harmony with the prophecy uttered by Jeremiah:—

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.—Jer. 23:5.

David's two sons, Solomon and Nathan, stand as heads of these two lines, Matthew tracing the genealogy through the former, and Luke giving the history of Christ's descent through Nathan's line.

By Matthew's account the generations from David to Christ, excluding both David and Christ, number twenty-six. Luke gives forty-one. The number of years from the birth of Solomon to Christ was about one thousand thirty-three; so that by Matthew we are allowed a little less than thirty-six years to a generation, and by Luke a trifle over twenty-five. From this it may be supposed that Nathan's descendants usually married younger than did those of Solomon. It will be observed that the name Salathiel is given as the sixteenth (beginning to count at David) in Matthew's record, the same name being located by Luke in the twenty-second generation.

By our estimate as to the length of a generation in the respective lines Matthew makes Salathiel to live about five hundred seventy-six years after the birth of Solomon; and five hundred fifty years after that event according to Luke, a difference of twenty-six years, which is easily accounted for by the consideration that the length of the generations varied, some exceeding and some falling short of the average.

From all this we are led to the conclusion that the name "Salathiel" refers in both records to the same individual; and we seem to be confirmed in this conclusion when, by a comparison of the two accounts, we discover that in both Zorobabel is declared to have been the son of Salathiel.

If the above be true then the two lines have been united which we believe may have come about in this manner: In Matthew Zechonias is said to have begotten Salathiel, while Luke says, "Salathiel, who was the son of Neri." In 1 Samuel 16: 19, David is called the son of Jesse. In the twenty-sixth chapter, seventeenth verse, and those following, Saul addresses David as his (Saul's) son; and in the twenty-fourth chapter, eleventh verse David speaks to Saul calling him "My father." In reality David was the son of Jesse and the son-in-law of Saul.

The thought that we would bring out is this: The genealogies record the names of the male descendants in the two lines down to the time of Zechonias and Neri, when, it may be supposed, Neri failed to supply a male descendent; but that his daughter married Salathiel who was therefore reckoned as his (Neri's) son, but who was in fact his son-in-law. Here again let us call your attention to the fact that both writers state that Zorobabel was the son of Salathiel, and we can see that here is a strong point in favor of our theory. But after Zorobabel the records again diverge, one giving Abiud, the other Rhesa, Zorobabel's two sons, evidently. The accounts again coincide when we get to the name Matthan (Matthat, Greek). The union of the two lines is here effected in the same manner, we presume, as before. But another difficulty arises: One writer states that Matthan begat Jacob, the other affirming that Heli was from the loins of Matthat. Remember that Matthan and Matthat are the same. And then Matthew says Jacob begat Joseph, while Luke claims that Joseph was from the loins of Heli. Thus both of the sons of Matthan are given as the father of Joseph.

This does not look reasonable until we are enlightened somewhat in regard to the ancient customs and laws.

In a book entitled "Joseph the Seer" (by Bro. William W. Blair), on page 47, are found these words:—

It was a custom of the ancient Hebrews, (Gen. 38: 8), and a law under the Mosaic polity, for a man to marry his brother's widow and raise up seed unto his brother. And it was especially provided "That the firstborn which she beareth shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that his name be not put out of Israel."—Deut. 25: 6.

Now Joseph, the husband of Mary, was the natural son of Jacob, but, under the law we have cited, he was reckoned from "the loins" of Heli; for Joseph's mother was first married to Heli, and, as he died without seed, Jacob took her to wife and their firstborn was Joseph, who by the law was reckoned as Heli's son, and as being "from the loins of Heli." LETTER FROM AN ELDER.

A REPLY.

EDITORS HERALD:—A few lines by way of comment upon the letter from "an elder." Is it not remarkable to find elders who fail to distinguish between things that differ? He reminds us that man was to "inherit all things" and on earth was to have "power and dominion." Is he not trying by these statements to prove the right of the Saints to use tea, coffee, tobacco, and strong drink? Perhaps he does not exactly put it in this light. But he comments that "much has been said" about these things, "all of which may be very good; but for me to draw the line and undertake to say where, when, and how every one shall be governed, would be more than he is competent to do"—governed in the things he mentions of course. He makes a witty solution of the problem by saying, "Wisdom and a correct understanding ought to govern."

Just so. He speaks of being charitable. But can we afford to be charitable with things which do not belong to us? The "Word of Wisdom" is given. If we believe it to be inspired why not reverence it? "It may be urged that these things affect our temporal salvation only." This is a strong statement; who can prove it? Every scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable," etc. Our charity cannot alter that which is revealed. "Wisdom and correct understanding" should only lead to a ready acceptance of whatever it pleases God to reveal. "Know you not ye are servants to whom ye yield yourselves to obey?"

Perhaps I am mistaken, but it seems to me that the charity of "Elder A." seeks to justify the use of tea, coffee, tobacco, and strong drinks, and also extravagant dress and tight lacing, if it is consistent with the judgment of the individual. God has spoken plainly concerning the use of tea, coffee, tobacco, and strong drink. He also said, "Let all thy garments," etc. How can garments be plain and extravagant? He continues:—

It is the gospel that is to save and by which all people will be judged. Neither the dress nor the corset is likely to be called into question; but the Christ life will secure to all their reward.

Will "Elder A." please tell us how to consider the Christ life apart from the dress and corset? If the dress and the corset cause our good to be evil spoken of, shall we consider them the outcome of the Christ life?

Our brother is right when he says,

Those instructed in the gospel and are careful to be governed by it will stand the test in the great day of the Lord, etc.

Whatever our individual opinions may be the word of God teaches us to be sober and temperate. We see that extravagance in dress and tight lacing are things of the world; and it is written:—

Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.—1 John 2: 15.

Of course man is to inherit all things. He inherits razors. Should he cut his throat with them? He inherits tobacco and strong drink. But the Lord has told him what they are good for; the Lord has told him that hot drinks are not good.

Time and again we are reminded that tea and coffee are injurious, a statement that some of us can prove. Our bodies are or should be the temples of the Holy Ghost, habitations of God through the Spirit. If God shall destroy him who defiles the temple of God, will he commend those who injure it?

Charity is commendable — that charity which tells our brothers and sisters of their errors (which often are more serious than they imagine) is true charity, and if done in the spirit of meekness is that charity which Paul says "is the bond of perfectness."

Trusting "Elder A." will pardon this reply, I remain, His brother and yours in the one hope, T. J. SHELDON.

Report of district Sunday school association read, showing a gain of 16 and one new school at West Pullman. F. G. Pitt president and M. J. Danielson secretary were sustained for ensuing quarter. W. Vickery was chosen assistant president of the district. Moved and carried that M. J. Danielson be treasurer of this district. Bishop's agent, F. G. Pitt, was sustained for ensuing four months. Voted that district secretary and treasurer be authorized to call upon the different branches for money when needed for district expenses. Preaching by Brn. Pitt, Carter, Hougas, and Vickery. This conference was one to be long remembered by the Saints of the district, God's Spirit being enjoyed by all those who love the gospel. Adjourned to meet at Sandwich, Saturday and Sunday previous to full moon in October.

Sunday School Associations.

SPRING RIVER.

Convention met May 25; Mina Hart superintendent. A. H. Herke clerk pro tem. Superintendent's report: "Since last convention have visited all the Sunday schools but Seligman, and find them, with few exceptions, working nicely. Have organized two schools, which have applied for admittance. Have better reports from schools than ever before." Assistant superintendent reported: "Have visited Columbus and Pleasant View schools. Find them doing nicely." Schools reporting: Webb City, Blendsville, Angola, Seligman, Wier City, Pleasant View, and Columbus. Schools all doing well under circumstances. Treasurer's report accepted. District superintendent reported expenses; report accepted. Voted that the treasurer pay Mirtie Jones thirty cents for stationery. Voted that treasurer pay Mina Hart $2.15. Ordered that treasurer pay $1.40 balance on banner. Voted that we receive the two new Sunday schools organized by Sr. Hart into the district. The report on tobacco question read and adopted. Voted that rules on program of last quarter be readopted. Afternoon session, blackboard exercises by M. S. Frick. In the evening a fine program was rendered, and banner awarded to Angola, Kansas, Sunday school. Adjourned to meet the Monday following district conference, at 9:30 a. m.

SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

Meeting called to order at eight a. m., April 1, 1896, by Tapu. After singing and prayer Sr. Ella R. Devore was called to the chair. She chose Bro. Tapu as her assistant in the work of the day. Bro. L. R. Devore rose and spoke for some time on the duties of members toward those in office. Immediately afterward Bro. Hubert Case arose, and after speaking a few moments, Bro. Devore interpreting, the Spirit came upon him in power, rebuking those present for the spirit of insubordination manifested at the beginning of the meeting, as well as at previous gatherings. Minutes of convention of 1895 read and approved. Reports of General Superintendent, and Assistant Superintendent Tapu were also read. Native secretary, Teuira, also reported. Reports were read from the following schools: Rairoa, Avatoru school, total enrollment 35; average attendance 23. Rairoa, Tibuta, enrollment 34; attendance 30. Apataki, enrollment 36; attendance 36. Tarona, enrollment 67; attendance 51. Niau, enrollment 73; attendance 73. Kaukura, enrollment 110; attendance 84. Tikehau, enrollment 102; attendance 65. Manihi, enrollment 105; attendance 66. Arutua, enrollment 98; attendance 34. Takaboto, enrollment 41; attendance 24. Anaa, attendance 20. Some faulty reports were returned to the secretaries for correction and presented later.

Afternoon session, 1:30 p. m.—After singing and prayer business was again taken up. Numbers of schools were not properly reported, the secretaries not being present. The following are the names of the schools not reporting: Makatea, Taega, Tauere, Tuboi, Marakau, Vahitahi, Raroia, Hao, Makemo, Takume, Amanue, Makemo.

For the encouragement of all, a short time was given to brief speeches from Sunday school workers. Thirty-eight teachers responded, occupying perhaps one minute each. All were well pleased in the work. The election of officers for the ensuing year followed: Sr. Alice M. Case was chosen general superintendent for the year, with power to choose her assistants. She chose Tapu and Petero Derrien. Secretary Teuira was reelected. On motion it was agreed to use Sr. Devore's question books throughout the year. Also agreed that one hour should be the length of time for Sunday school, and that twenty-five questions in the question book should be the limit of the lesson. A vote of thanks was tendered Sr. Devore for her long and efficient service. Many feeling speeches were made, and a general spirit of love and good will was manifest at this closing session. Adjourned to meet again at Kaukura, April 1, 1897.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Convention met at Cash, Michigan, June 12, at ten a. m.; Sr. Frone Schinnick president, W. J. Smith assistant, F. M. Cooper secretary pro tem. Remarks on Sunday school work by Frone Schinnick, district superintendent, W. J. Smith, F. M. Cooper, R. E. Grant, Fred Stephens, A. E. Hicks, Charles Whitford, William Davis, and J. A. Grant. District superintendent reported. Secretary not being present, J. A. Grant reported for her. Report accepted. Amount of 71 cents for postage was granted the secretary from treasury. Treasurer's report accepted. Schools reporting: Evergreen, St. Clair, Bay Port, and East Fremont. Port Huron report referred back for correction. A verbal report of Buel Center school accepted, on condition that a written report be forwarded to district secretary. Officers for coming year were elected as follows: Superintendent, William Davis; assistant, J. A. Grant; secretary, Addie Grant, sustained; treasurer, A. E. Hicks, sustained. Committee on program for October convention, William Davis, Frone Schinnick, and Addie Grant. Adjourned to meet one day previous to October conference.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Convention of Eastern Iowa district will be held at Fulton, Iowa, August 21, convening at one o'clock for business. A full attendance is desired as there is to be election of officers. The Superintendent of the General Association will be with us and will instruct us in blackboard work and some other points of interest. A literary program will be rendered in the evening by the Fulton Sunday school, assisted by others. Please remember to send delegates to represent your school. Do not forget to bring or send reports. If you send your report, send it to Elder John Heide, Fulton, Jackson County, Iowa.

ELLA J. GREEN, Supt.
MYRTLE HARVEY, Sec.

The Southeastern Illinois district Sunday school association will convene on Friday, August 21, at Arrington Station, during the reunion at that place. The exercises will begin at ten a. m. The morning hour will be devoted to discussions on methods of teaching and questions and answers. The election of officers and some literary exercises will occupy the evening. The schools in the district will please make out reports and send to me or bring them in time for the convention. Everyone come prepared to take a part.

ARTHUR H. BURROUGHS, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in the Southeastern Nebraska Mission; Greeting:—This mission includes that portion of the State east of the 99th parallel of longitude and south of the northern line of counties running west of the north line of Douglas County on the east to Sherman County on the west. We have the tent purchased by the Southern Nebraska district at our disposal for the season, and desire to do all we can with it. There is considerable expense attached to the running of one, and as the intention of purchasing it was to open new fields, we find it necessary to call on you to assist us financially. It should be remembered that this is a missionary work, and all should be willing to do something for its success. The tent is a good one, well equipped, and has only been used at one place since purchased. You made quite a sacrifice in obtaining it, so it will be a mistake in not enabling the missionaries to run it. Therefore, brethren, send in your donations as you are able. Let the branch presidents take a collection for this purpose and send it all together, to save extra expense. Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, of Nebraska City, will receive all donations and see that it is judiciously expended. We now have the tent located in Eagle, Nebraska, with fair prospects in view. We have several invitations to locate when we leave here, and will proceed as wisdom directs. It will be seen that it is not hardly right to expect the few scattered Saints to defray all the expenses, as they are no better off in this world's goods, as a rule, than those in branches; but if all will do something the burden will be light on all. Come to our rescue, brethren, and let us make a united effort in missionary work this year. The prospects are good, so let us do our part. My permanent address is Box 54, Netawaka, Kansas.

Yours in gospel bonds,

W. E. PEAK,
Submissionary in charge.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

I take this method of notifying the Saints of the Southern Indiana district, that owing to the change of field of labor of Bro. James M. Scott I have been appointed Bishop's agent for said district, and duly authorized to receive moneys in behalf of and for benefit of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Now dear Saints, will you please hand in your tithes and offerings that we may have meat in the Lord's house. While we are aware that Saints throughout the district are mostly poor temporarily yet we may be rich spiritually; but to be so we must abide a spiritual law. A little from each one will amount to considerable. Realizing that there are over four hundred members in the district even the pitiful sum of one dollar from each would be quite a help. When we hear so many testify to this glorious work, how glad we are we have had the opportunity of receiving it, do we stop to think that some other ones sent this glad tidings of good news to us; are we not willing to sacrifice a little, so that some one else may rejoice with us? When we look around us and see numbers that are starving for the bread of life it makes us feel to proclaim, "Awake, Saints, Awake to a sense of duty!" Remember the Lord hath said "They that are tithed shall not be burned;" also, "The Lord loves a cheerful giver."

We hope and trust that something may be handed in from every one in the district from time to time as the Lord may prosper us. We know these are hard, "perilous" times; but are we not responsible to a certain degree for these hard times? Are we not afraid to try the Lord? He says for us to prove him and see if he will not open the windows of heaven and pour us out a blessing—"And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground."—Mal. 3:10, 11. Let us be laborers together with God. If you can't preach, help send some one that can. Let us bear in mind that if we want to inherit the celestial kingdom we must abide the celestial law.

I would earnestly and kindly request the branch presidents and collectors to look after this matter and send the contributions of the Saints to me, and the name of each one contributing, and I will receipt for same.

I expect to visit all the branches in the district as soon as the busy season is over if I don't hear from you before that time. We hope you will respond then. None of us are so poor but what we can give for the work of the Lord five cents per week (to say the least) or more. The elders' children get hungry and it takes money to buy them bread. So then let us strive to enter in at the straight gate that leadeth to life eternal. My address is, Wirt, Jefferson County, Indiana, Box 14.

Yours in bonds,

WILLIAM C. MARSHALL.

REUNION NOTICES.

All the Saints and friends who are interested in the Southwestern Missouri mission reunion, (to be held at Midway Park, and within the city limits of Joplin, from August 21 to 30,) and that are in want of tents for that occasion, are requested to write me at once giving style and size of tent that you want to rent, and do not wait till the last moment of time, as we must have all things ready and prepared beforehand to avoid disappointments. If you do not feel able to rent a tent, buy a few yards of good muslin and make you one. The goods can be used for other purposes when you return home. But do not stay at home because you are not able to rent or furnish a tent. Come right along anyway. Where there is a will there will be a way, but be sure to bring your own bedding, tick, covering, etc., and we will see that you are hung up somewhere. Let everybody come prepared to stay during the whole reunion (ten days), that we may have a feast of fat things spiritually. A large tent will be divided off into bedrooms for the ministry. How many of you that live in the nearest branches to grounds will now volunteer to furnish a whole bed for each room? And while you are reminded of bringing plenty of bedding, do not forget to bring eatables of all kinds for yourselves and some to spare. Yes, bring your loaves and fishes and a stove to cook them on. Those who come by team should bring their own grain to feed, to save expense; all who come by rail should buy tickets to Joplin (four railroads run into Joplin), and then take the electric line to Midway Park, which will cost you about five cents, and some one will be appointed to look after your baggage and bring it to the grounds at as small a cost as possible. Remember that every grown person is allowed 150 pounds baggage, hence you can bring your bedding, etc., as baggage. Address me regarding the above at Jasper City, Missouri.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

A conference of the Ohio district will be held at Vale's Mills, beginning Saturday, September 12, 1896, at ten a. m. The new chapel will also be dedicated Sunday, the 13th. It is expected that President Joseph Smith will be present, also one of the Bishopric. Apostle G. T. Griffiths and other officials are expected. Come one and all. We specially request the brethren of the priesthood to be present as there will be some important matters to consider. Come on Friday, the 11th. Let us come in the Spirit of our Master.

JAMES MOLIER, Pres.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Members of the Fifth Quorum of Elders, please take notice that at the last conference session a resolution was passed by the quorum urgently requesting each member to procure a diary and keep an accurate itemized account of labor done and report to quorum at close of the year. Members who haven't diaries can procure them by writing to the Secretary, at Ridgeway, Missouri. According to resolution, conference appointees will be supplied at quorum expense. Others please remit 35 cents when ordering.

D. W. WIGHT, Sec.

BORN.

WOODS.—To Roy and Julia Woods, of Macedonia, Iowa, April 24, 1896, a son; named Zenas Leroy. Blessed June 7 by H. Kemp and D. Hougas.

GOODE.—March 15, 1896, to Charles and Nancy Goode, of Tabor, Iowa, a son; named Freddie Nelson. Blessed June 14 by H. and George Kemp.

MARRIED.

MORTON—ROHRER.—At the home of the bride's mother, Sr. Esther Rohrer, Colton, California, by Elder J. F. Burton, Mr. J. Sherman Morton and Sr. Regina Rohrer, Sister Esther's elder daughter. Some seventy-five of the relatives and friends of the young people were present to witness the nuptial ceremonies, including a number of Sr. Regina's music pupils, from Colton, Riverside, Redlands, Highlands, San Bernardino, Beaumont, Los Angeles, and Compton and surrounding country. Sr. Regina is well known about the places named as a teacher of music, and the groom is a son of Judge Morton, of Compton, California, near which place the home of Sr. Regina and her good husband will be.

OLESEN—SANBERG.—In the city of St. Louis, Missouri, June 28, 1896, Elder M. H. Bond officiating, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Bergstrom, Bro. Niels J. C. Olesen to Miss Sanna Sanberg.

DIED.

LANDERS.—At Lamoni, Iowa, July 15, 1896, Sister Christiana Landers passed to her rest in the paradise of God. She was born in the city of Glasgow, Scotland, January 18, 1806, therefore was aged 90 years, 5 months, and 27 days. Her pilgrimage was long and eventful and her reward is sure. Her maiden name was Cairns, and she came with her parents from Scotland to Canada when she was thirteen years old. On July 21, 1830, she was married to Elder John Landers, who was then a minister of the Baptist Church, at Brockville, Ontario. She was firm in Methodism, but he prayed daily that they might come to see alike in religious matters. Finally she noticed that he no longer mentioned this desire in his prayers and she asked him why he did not. He replied that the Lord had spoken to him and said that they should yet be in harmony, and therefore the promise of the Lord was enough; he did not need to importune further, for it would be brought to pass. In 1836 they heard the news of the restored gospel and accepted it, he being baptized October 2, and she December 3, of that year. In 1838 they removed from Canada to Quincy, Illinois. From there he went to Far West twice and brought Saints away in the time of their oppression and distress. In 1839 they removed to Henderson Grove, Illinois, and later lived in Knox and Bureau counties, and from 1847 they lived chiefly in Lee County until 1873. After that in Montgomery County, Iowa, and Blue Rapids, Kansas, until 1886, when they came to dwell in Lamoni. Here Father Landers died January 22, 1892. In all these travels and sojournings the chief thought and purpose of their lives was to aid the cause of righteousness and truth among the people. She was one with her husband in making sacrifice and in performing labor to advance the gospel, all that they had and all that they received being spent in the Master's cause during the long years of their journey on earth. She was the mother of nine children, seven of whom are dead. The two living are Sr. Catharine Stedman, of Lamoni, and Mr. Alexander Landers, of Greenleaf, Kansas. With the former she has had her home during the final years of weakness and decline. There she was carefully nursed by faithful hands and loving hearts until the end came that released her at fourscore years and ten. After prayer at the house the funeral services were held in the Saints' chapel, in charge of Bro. H. A. Stebbins. The sermon in memory of her life and her works was preached by Bro. Heman C. Smith. The spirit, from its dying load made free, went to the happy company beyond, while the mortal part sleeps at Rose Hill, awaiting the call of the Master of life.

MAITLAND.—Opalita Haddassah Maitland died the 9th inst., at Des Moines, Iowa. Service in Saints' chapel. Interment in Woodland cemetery, July 10, at four p. m.

HAIGHT.—On June 23, 1896, Sr. M. R. Haight, aged 45 years, 5 months, 8 days. The remains of Sr. Haight were shipped to St. Joseph, Missouri, for burial; being accompanied by her daughter, Sr. Mamie Musser. After a long, tedious trip of five days she arrived on the 29th, and at three o'clock of the same day the funeral took place at the church, conducted by Elder J. M. Terry, from Psalms 17:15, and was quite largely attended. Sr. Mamie wishes to express thanks to the Saints in Oakland, California, for their great kindness to her, and floral tokens of love for her departed mother.

ROWSE.—At Capistrano, California, June 28, 1896, Joseph Rouse. He was born February 22, 1846, in Canada. His father was at one time an elder in the first organization. Deceased was not a member of the church but a believer and a helper in it. Sr. Rouse is now left entirely alone to fight the battle of life, none of her folks being in the faith, herself but recently baptized. May God bless and protect her as she journeys on through this world of trial. Funeral preached by Hiram L. Holt to a large following of friends.

GOODALE.—At Barry, Pike County, Illinois, June 23, 1896, Elder Jackson Goodale, aged 80 years, 1 month, 25 days. He was born in New York City, in 1816; came West in 1840, and settled; in 1852 he located in the town where he died. He was a member of the old organization, and in 1865 he united with the Reorganized Church. To the interests of Christ's gospel and the work of the church he was very faithful. In 1876 he was ordained a high priest at Plano, Illinois. His wife, Sr. Maria Goodale, died in 1887. Of eight sons born to him five are yet living. Of the life of Bro. Goodale the Barry Adage has the following good words to say: "Mr. Goodale was a member of that religious order known as the Latter Day Saints. He became a member of this society early in life, and during most of his religious life he was known as a preacher of its doctrines. He was very pronounced in his views, was a great lover of home, and was always regarded as very thoughtful and kind in his family. As a citizen he was of a very quiet disposition, strictly honest and upright, and deeply interested in all that tends to the moral elevation of society. He had a strong faith in a future life, and ever maintained a bright hope in eternity. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at the Baptist church, Rev. A. J. Young preaching the sermon."

TOBACCO HABIT CURED

NO CURE NO PAY.

BRO. B. F. ORDWAY,

OF PEORIA, ILLINOIS,

Who is making and selling a Tobacco Antidote called QUIT-TO-BAC, sends us the following letter to show what good work the remedy is doing.

The regular Price of Quit-To-bac is $1.00 per box, or three boxes $2.50, postpaid anywhere, with written guarantee to cure or money refunded.

Bro. Ordway wishes us to say that for a time he will send one box for 75 cts. or three boxes for $1.50 with guarantee, postpaid to any place where he has no agent to anyone who if cured will agree to act as agent or try and get an agent.

Bro. H. C. Sharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes April 23, 1898:—

"Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco. It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured. . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,

P. H. MABURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

[A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SEER OF PALMYRA AND SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3 1/4 x 5 1/2 inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush..25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

RECORDS AT LAST OF THE ISRAELITES IN EGYPT.

ACCORDING to the Bible account in Genesis and Exodus, the descendants of Jacob passed several centuries in bondage in Egypt. Ever since the hieroglyphics on the monuments began to be deciphered hopes have been cherished that some traces would be found of the connection of the history of Egypt and Israel at that time; but up to the present year of grace no direct mention of the Israelites has been found. The Egyptian kings that figured most largely in biblical history—Necho, Tirhakah, So, and Shishak—have been identified; but little of their doings in Palestine has been found recorded; in short, little beyond lists of some of the Palestinian towns conquered by Shishak and Tirhakah, which enlarges our knowledge of the geography, but not of the history.

Captain W. N. Flinders Petrie gives an interesting account in The Contemporary Review (May) of the first discovery of a contemporaneous record on the monuments of the existence of Israel in the age of the Egyptian king Merenptah, supposed to be identical with the Pharaoh of the Exodus. The failure to find such traces heretofore is explained by Captain Petrie when he says that unfortunately only the sites of temples and fortresses occupied by the dominant Egyptians can be readily submitted to examination, and, as he shows further on, the Egyptian monuments belonging to the Hebrew period were largely destroyed by the later kings.

It was last December that Mr. Petrie undertook—with the permission of M. de Morgan, the Director of the Department of Antiquities, and the cordial coöperation of the Franco-Egyptian Administration of Antiquities—to excavate an important district at Thebes, containing most of the royal funerary temples. The more immediate results are thus given in summary form:—

“Three months of excavation in this ground brought to light the sites of four royal temples hitherto quite unknown—those of Amenhotep II., Tahutmes IV., Tausert, and Saptah, dating from about 1450 to 1150 B. C.; another temple was identified as belonging to Merenptah, and two others already known—of Uazmes and Rameses the Great—were fully explored and fresh results obtained. With six of these temples we are not here concerned; but that of Merenptah contained the historical prize of the year.”

The story is then told of King Merenptah, who was the vandal of his age, and who, finding that his expulsion of foreign enemies left a scarcity of men for public works, proceeded to build his own funeral temple by tearing down that of Amenhotep III. and using the material. The account proceeds as follows:

“Amid all this destruction—as bad as anything ever done by Turk or Pope—there was one block which almost defied injury. For a great account of his religious benefactions, Amenhotep III. had selected a splendid slab of black syenite, penetrated with quartz veins. It stood 10 feet 3 inches high and 5 feet 4 inches wide, while its thickness of 13 inches of such a tough material prevented its suffering from a mere fall. It is the largest stele of igneous rock known, and was polished like glass on its exquisitely flat faces. The religious change of Amenhotep IV. led to his erasing the figures of the god Amen, and nearly all the inscription. But Sety I. piously reengraved both the scene and inscription, and added that ‘the restoration of the monuments was made by Maatmen-ra (Sety) for his father Amen.’ This noble block Merenptah stole and re-used: the face of it was set into a wall, and the back of it thus shown was engraved with a scene and a long historical inscription of Merenptah. It was afterward overthrown on the destruction of his temple, and lay flat on the ground without any damage but one small chip. The amount of inscription on it is almost without precedent. One side alone contains nearly twice as much as the enormous stele of sandstone still lying in the temple of Amenhotep, and both sides together contain about 6,000 signs. The condition of it is perfect; not a single sign is defaced or injured; the scenes are complete, the faces of the figures as fresh as when cut, and the painting on the scene of Merenptah is as bright as if laid on yesterday.”

The writer gives a translation of the inscription, following the rendering of Mr. Griffith, and for convenience dividing it into paragraphs with appropriate headings.

The matter of chief interest is found in the closing portion, “Triumph of Merenptah:”—

“For the sun of Egypt has wrought this change; he was born as the fated means of revenging it, the king Merenptah. Chiefs bend down, saying, ‘Peace to thee;’ not one of the nine bows raises his head. Vanquished are the Tahennu (N. Africans); the Khita (Hittities) are quieted; ravaged is Pa-Kanana (Kanun) with all violence; taken is Askadni (Askalon?); seized is Kazmel; Yenu (Yanoh) of the Syrians is made as though it had not existed; THE PEOPLE OF YISRAAL IS SPOILED, IT HATH NO SEED; Syria has become as widows of the land of Egypt; all lands together are in peace. Every one that was a marauder hath been subdued by the king Merenptah, who gives life like the sun every day.”

The entire inscription makes 1,400 words in the translation. Of course, the most important point of all—and the point that may never be absolutely settled—is the interpretation and historical setting of the short sentence in the translation, printed in small capitals: THE PEOPLE OF YISRAAL IS SPOILED, IT HATH NO SEED. Captain Petrie concludes his article by suggesting five different views that may be taken of the passage. His discussion of these five views is too extended, if not too purely speculative, to be quoted here. We part with his most interesting article by citing the closing paragraphs which suggest the two essentially different points of view from which the discussion may be carried on, and the need of more light before any certain conclusion can be arrived at:—

“Which view is taken of this new light on Old-Testament history must largely depend on the manner in which the earlier books are estimated. I have here endeavored to make the statements such as to be as little affected as possible by diverse opinions already existing. To those who attach the fullest value to every word of the books of Numbers, Joshua, and Judges, some of these hypotheses that I have named will be somewhat hard. To those who see in these books a collected body of various records and oral history, and already look on the migration to Egypt as but partial, there will not be much to choose in the probabilities on the biblical side, and the argument from the dates of Egyptian history will have more weight. Far more positive information is needed before we can place the question of early Jewish history in a clear connection with the rest of the world. But we have now got one firm point in the midst of the great uncertainties which have hitherto beset the subject.

“Two practical lessons, however, may be clear to the public: first, that if we are ever to understand history, in the Bible or out of it, the pick is our instrument and the ruin-mounds are our material; second, that it is by the exhaustive clearance of small sites which can be readily examined that we shall soonest reach our results, and leave the less to be destroyed by the ceaseless plundering that is always going on.”—Literary Digest.

* A UNIQUE LITTLE MAGAZINE.

A little publication, but of value out of all proportion to its size, is Alden's Living Topics Magazine. For the ridiculously small price of 25 cents a year it gives nearly 400 pages of information of interest and value to every one, and hardly obtainable elsewhere. The last issue gives just the facts every one wants concerning the States of Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, and Indian Territory. The statistics are brought right down to date generally from one to five or more years later than the latest cyclopedias. Thus it deals in every issue with the States of the Union, all the nations of the world, and other important topics. Living Topics ought to secure an enormous circulation. A sample copy may be had free by applying to the publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 10 and 12 Vandewater Street, New York.

A member of the Jewish community of Moscow recently petitioned the governor for permission to complete and open an unfinished synagog for public worship. The petition forwarded to the governor was answered by the Chief of the Police, who intimated that it would not be considered, and if any further petitions on the same subject were sent the authors of them would be punished. He added that unless the building were turned to some other use, it must be sold forthwith, otherwise it would be confiscated by the authorities.

One of the most important practical questions decided by the recent General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church was whether a presbytery can refuse to license a man on account of his color. A colored student applied to the Presbytery of Charleston, to be received under its care as a candidate for the ministry, and his application was refused. The record of the Presbytery, in noting the refusal, simply stated that he was a colored man. The Synod of South Carolina approved the records of this Presbytery, with the exception that the Presbytery refused to receive under its care an applicant simply on the ground that he was colored. This action of the Synod was complained of to the General Assembly, but the General Assembly refused to sustain the complaint.

Among the important changes in church polity effected by the recent General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church the following may be noted: An important change was made in the elimination of the disciplinary footnote forbidding the rebaptism of persons who have been baptized in infancy. This is a radical departure from the policy which has been pursued by this church. The mode of asking the questions of applicants for admission to the church concerning debt and the use of tobacco is changed. Answers to these questions may be made in writing, and handed to the committee or to the secretary of the conference. The tobacco question is hereafter to be asked of all young men when they come up for admission on trial.

A STATEMENT AND A CORRECTION OF IT.

WHILE at Independence, Missouri, on March 17, last, Elder S. G. Spencer, of the Salt Lake, Utah, Church, requested of me the privilege of an interview, as he desired to have a talk with me. I made an appointment with him for nine o'clock the next morning, at the house of Bro. Joseph Luff. At the hour, Elder Spencer, accompanied by E. S. Hart, A. G. Young, and W. E. Criddle came to Bro. Luff's house, where, although a little surprised that Elder Spencer should have brought others with him, they were courteously received. The interview lasted until nearly twelve noon, when they took leave.

Some time after my return home, I received from Bro. J. M. Stubbart, of Octavia, Nebraska, a letter dated May 15, stating that Elder W. E. Criddle was using a report of an interview of S. G. Spencer and others with me, and sending a copy of a list of questions submitted to me and my answers thereto, furnished to Bro. Stubbart by Elder Criddle.

Bro. Stubbart states:—

"I asked for a copy of their questions and your answers and he gave them as follows":—

W. E. Criddle, A. G. Young, E. S. Hart, and Sam. G. Spencer, to Joseph Smith.

1. Do you claim to be a prophet of God?

Ans.—Yes, I claim the same authority as my father.

2. Did your father ordain you to be a prophet to lead the church?

A.—No, he did not. He blessed me, but did not ordain me to any office.

3. You say a voice told you to join the Reorganized Church. Is it not possible that the voice was from a seducing spirit—a transformed devil—instead of from God?

A.—Heard a voice, but will not say whether it could be deceptive or true.

4. Who ordained you unto the apostleship?

A.—Marks, Blair, and Gurley ordained me to be an High Priest.

5. Did they hold the office of an apostle?

A.—Marks was not an apostle.

6. If not, how could he give something he never had?

A.—I think one holding an office in the Melchisedec priesthood can do so.

7. Have you had any visions?

A.—Yes sir, a number of them.

8. Have you ever seen an angel or heavenly personage?

A.—I have seen angels. One came as a man and sat by my bed and gave me instructions as to whether to get a doctor or not. (He said he did not know whether it was an angel or not.)

9. Did your mother ever deny that your father entered polygamy?

A.—Yes sir, more than once.

10. Did she, Emma Smith, ever deny to you that he ever had the revelation on spiritual marriage?

A.—She said that she did not believe that he did. I do not believe that he did. I do not know.

11. Do you believe that principle will be practiced in the millennium?

A.—I do not believe that it will, but I have no objection individually.

12. If not, what will those do who have married one, two, or three women here and they die?

A.—I do not know how that will be. I know nothing about whether we will have a wife or not. Apostle Luff interrupted, "can't you give more than a belief? Don't you remember that revelation you said you had?"

13. Do you believe that you will assist us in building this grand temple? Or, in other words, do you believe that the church you represent will ever unite with the organized church in Utah?

A.—No opinion to express; am perfectly willing that the people of God shall build it, and if I am permitted to help build it, all right.

14. Can you honestly say before all men and your prophet father, if you could meet him, and your God, that you know the people of Utah are without authority to administer in the gospel ordinances and ordinations?

A.—I believe there are many in the Utah Church who have authority to administer in the gospel, and the people who they administer unto, I would not be surprised, if they also held authority.

15. Spencer asked, "President Woodruff for instance?"

A.—I do not like to pass upon individuals.

16. Do you say that you have authority to administer the ordinances of the gospel?

A.—I believe I have authority.

17. Who would lead the church if you should die?

A.—I have a theory that it would be upon the apostles.

18. When Elijah informed Joseph the Seer that the time had fully come spoken of by Malachi, how is it that there has been such a delay with your church?

A.—I do not know anything about that.

19. Were not endowments and baptisms given and performed for the dead in the prophet's day?

A.—Yes there were.

20. Have you ever inhabited the Nauvoo House?

A.—I did not.

21. Do you or your posterity ever expect to possess it?

A.—The building is partly down, and of course we cannot dwell in it.

22. If you have failed to receive this promise, for reasons best known to the Lord, is it not possible that you have also failed in the promise of leadership or priesthood?

A.—Yes it depends upon the worthiness of the individuals.

23. Instead of Joseph the Seer leaving the keys with you, did he not take them with him, placing the oracles with the church—the apostles at the head—or as Jesus gave, first apostles?

A.—Yes they were the proper persons to take the lead at Father's death.

I prepared an answer to this letter of Bro. Stubbart's, giving my statement of the interview so far as the subjects introduced by the questions are concerned.

I wrote to both S. G. Spencer, and W. S. Criddle, stating that the questions given by Elder Criddle misrepresented me, and that as neither questions nor answers were submitted to me in writing for examination and verification, they had no right to use them without my consent. This they have done, however, Mr. Spencer having sent them to the Deseret News, which published them; and Elder Karl S. Fackrell, one of the Utah elders in St. Louis, sent, in a letter dated July 14, a printed copy of such interview. This is headed with the statement that it was "witnessed by the three elders—Young, Hart, and Criddle, on the part of the Utah Church, and "Apostle" Luff of the Reorganized Church. At the close of the heading is this statement in brackets:—

[The following questions were prepared and written with space left between to be filled in with answers. The answers were written in the presence of all as they were given.—S]

This list sent to me by Elder Fackrell, does not agree with the one furnished by Elder Criddle to Bro. Stubbart. In the list sent me by Elder Fackrell the words "to lead the church," are left out of question number 2.

In the same list the words, "ordained me to be a high priest," are left out of the alleged answer to question number 4. The word "each" is inserted in question number 5 making it to read, "Did they each hold the office of an apostle?" In the list furnished to Bro. Stubbart, the interruption by Bro. Luff is placed after answer to question number 10, in relation to the denial of my mother concerning the revelation on celestial marriage. Also, in Criddle's list the words "spiritual marriage" are used and in list sent by Fackrell they are "celestial marriage." But in the list furnished by Elder Criddle, Bro. Luff's interruption is placed after question number 12, which refers to what a man having two or three wives here should do over on the other side if there was no plural marriage in the millennium.

In Elder Criddle's list question number 14 has the words "and ordinations," added to it. During the answering of this question Elder Spencer interrupted with, "President Woodruff, for instance?" But question number 15 in Elder Fackrell's list gives an entire question thus, "Do you believe that President Wilford Woodruff has divine authority?"

This question was not asked me.

In Elder Criddle's list, question number 16 begins, "Do you say," etc.; but in Elder Fackrell's it is, "Dare you say," etc.

In Elder Criddle's list question number 17 is, "Who would lead the church if you should die?" while in Elder Fackrell's it is, "Who would lead the church if you and one of your counselors should suddenly die, leaving no one appointed in your places?"

In Elder Criddle's list, question 22, the last half of it is, "Is it not possible that you have also failed in the promise of leadership or priesthood?" But in Elder Fackrell's list it concludes in this way: "Is it not possible that you have also failed in the promise of the 'seed' or 'priesthood'?" and the sentence is italicised as above.

This list sent me by Elder Fackrell closes with the following certificate:—

We certify that the foregoing is a true and correct report.

Signed, SAMUEL G. SPENCER,
WM. EDWARD CRIDDLE,
ARCHIBALD G. YOUNG,
EUGENE S. HART.

Neither Bro. Joseph Luff nor myself signed that report nor would we have done so had it been submitted to us for such purpose. It is not a correct report; and the fact that it does not agree with the one Elder Criddle gave a copy of to Bro. Stubbart, shows that it was doctored before being put into print, to suit Elder S. G. Spencer, or others.

I am prepared to answer for and defend the positions taken in the statement made by me of that interview; but distinctly disavow the statement of Elder Spencer and his associates, in all those points in which there is a difference between the two. It was not understood by me to have been an interview for publication, or any public use by Elder Spencer or his associate elders. The questions were not written in my presence, nor did I see them if written; neither were the answers shown me, nor written in my presence to my knowledge.

JOSEPH SMITH.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 20, 1896.

STATEMENT OF INTERVIEW.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 19, 1896.

BRO. J. M. STUBBART,
Octavia, Nebraska.

Yours of 15th received. In reply, Messrs. S. G. Spencer, E. S. Hart, A. G. Young, and W. E. Criddle, were at Bro. Joseph Luff's house, and Mr. Spencer did the talking. He asked me several questions; the form of which I do not remember. If he had them written, I did not see them; but he certainly has not given the answers as I gave them. He had asked me for an interview, and I granted it. He brought the others with him at his own motion, and without consulting me. I had no thought he would misrepresent me. If he had the questions numbered and set down, I did not see them; nor were his minutes of what I said submitted to me for correction. I hoped that neither he, nor either of them, would go away and lie about me.

1. Do you claim to be a prophet of God?

Ans.—I claim to occupy the position and office my father did.

2. Did your father ordain you to be a prophet to lead the church?

A.—Not in the sense of installing me in the leadership, for he was living and occupying. But in the sense of conferring on me by his blessing and the laying on of his hands whatever appertained to me as his son and his successor, he did, using the word "ordain" to mean blessing, conferring and confirming upon me whatever he held that could descend to me as his son by right of lineage. He did this in Liberty Jail, in Missouri; and again at Nauvoo, some time before his death, after I was baptized, in the Brick Store and in the presence of witnesses, of whom James Whitehead, now of Lamoni, was one. Whether he used the word "ordain" I do not know. He again laid hands upon me and blessed me to the same blessing, just before he left Nauvoo for Carthage, in the north room at the Mansion, at which time a number were present. Whether this may be considered an ordination or not; it was a setting apart by blessing; and I have so considered it.

3. You say a voice told you to join the Reorganized Church. Is it not possible that the voice was from a seducing spirit—a transformed devil—instead of from God?

To this question, though I believe the latter part respecting a transformed devil has been added since, I replied in substance:—

"That is not a fair question, Elder Spencer, and is asked with a view to make capital out of a possible answer. I went to God, earnestly asking for direction, as my father did. The conditions were similar; and I believed that if there was a man on earth who had the right to believe that God would deal fairly with him, I was that man. I believe that now. I asked in sincerity, 'Where shall I go?' And I was told as plainly as I can hear you speak to-day, to 'join the Reorganized Church.' I am not prepared to admit, in any sense, that I was deceived; or that the voice was that of a seducing or evil spirit. I am not prepared to say or to believe that God would either deceive me or suffer any evil or lying spirit to deceive me. To admit that would be to throw doubt on every manifestation said to have been received during the rise of the church. It would subject the statements of Joseph Smith, David Whitmer, and others who said they saw angels, and heard them, to grave discredit. No sir; I do not admit that there was, or could have been, any deception or deceiving spirit in the case."

Mr. Spencer tried in several ways to get me to admit that it might have been a deception; but I did not at any time make such admission. He has given in two lines, what I did not say; except that I told him I "heard a voice." That much is true. I would not and did not say that it could be, or was deceptive. I fully believed it to be true and from God, in answer to my prayer.

He asked me if I claimed to be an apostle, and I told him, "Yes;" that as my father and O. Cowdery were apostles, after the ordination that made them the first and second elders of the church in 1830, so was I an apostle.

4. Who ordained you? (The word "apostle" was not used in this question at that time.)

A.—William Marks, who was president of the High Council at Nauvoo, and president of the stake at Father's death; William Blair, and Zenas H. Gurley. Elder Gurley was a seventy in Father's lifetime. Elder Blair had been baptized by my uncle William, who was one of the Twelve at Father's death; these men ordained me to be an high priest; I was then chosen to be president of the church, and set apart to the office.

I furthermore told him that neither Marks nor Gurley, had ever been divested of the authority they held in Father's time.

5. Did they hold the office of apostle?

A.—Marks was not an apostle, in the sense of being one of the Twelve; Blair and Gurley had been chosen to the apostleship.

6. If not, how could he give something he never had?

A.—Anyone holding the Melchisedek priesthood, could, at the command of God, ordain to any office in the church; and could in case the necessity required it, perform any duty that an apostle might under the same conditions. It is provided for in the revelation on priesthood, Sec. 104, of our book. Don't know what section in yours.

7. Question and answer about correct.

8. Have you ever seen an angel or heavenly personage?

A.—I have seen personages that I believe to have been angels. I then cited to some instances, among them the one referred to; but not in reference to "getting a doctor." It was in regard to my administering to those who being sick employed a doctor. I had about concluded not to do so; when I received the visitation referred to. I believed it to be a messenger sent by the good powers above, to show me my duty. It had no more reference to my sending for a doctor than it had to whether I should hire a horse, or buy a dog. I would not say whether this was an angel, as the word "angel" is sometimes used; but it was certainly a messenger, and not a human personage, such as a living man in the flesh, like you and me. This was in substance the answer I gave in my talk on the subject. I referred him to the men who appeared to Abram as he sat in his tent at the close of the day.

9. I think in this question Spencer used the words "practiced polygamy." To this I replied as stated, adding, "She always denied it; not only to me but to others."

10. Did she, Emma Smith, every deny to you that he ever had the revelation on spiritual marriage?

A.—She said that so far as her knowledge went he never had that revelation. That she believed that he did not have it, or give it to the church. That she never saw it, never heard it read, never burned it, or had it burned, and never had anything to do with it whatever. Personally, I do not believe that he did give such revelation; though I do not know.

11 and 12. There was nothing said about the practice of polygamy in the millennium. The question had reference to the "resurrection;" and I replied that I knew nothing about the laws that would govern in the resurrection. That I accepted what Jesus said that in the resurrection there was neither marrying nor giving in marriage. That I knew of no authentic teaching that defined what the conditions there would be in detail; but that personally I was contented to accept the conditions of the laws ordained of God to govern there when I got there. That I had lost one wife and had another, and that I was not troubled about whether I should have one, both, or none at all over on the other side. The revelation referred to by Bro. Luff was that in answer to prayer upon the question of plural marriage, or polygamy, I was commanded to "have nothing to do with it, only to oppose it." And I stated that I had kept the commandment, to the best of my ability.

13. Do you believe that you will assist us in building this temple—the one to be built here in Independence?

(Here Bro. Luff suggested, "Had you not better ask whether you will assist us? We claim to be the church in succession.")

There was no question whether I thought we would unite with the organized church in Utah; except in the idea of assisting to build the temple in Independence.

I replied: "As to the question of who will build or assist to build the temple here (at Independence), I have no opinion to express. I am quite willing that the people indicated by God as his people shall build it. If I and my brethren with me shall be thought worthy of building, or even assisting to build it, all right; I shall be satisfied for the will of God to prevail in the matter."

14. The question of authority in Utah came up, but I do not believe the question was in the form of number 14. I think it was simply, "Do you believe the church in Utah has authority to administer in the ordinances?"

I replied; that we of the Reorganized Church had always held that there were those in the church that went to Utah and affiliated with that body who held priesthood derived from the church in Father's time. That undoubtedly there were some there still who had not forfeited their priesthood by transgression, and had the right to act for Christ; but that this did not attach to them as a body; only as individuals.

Elder Spencer here interjected, "President Woodruff, for instance?"

I continued: "Excuse me; I do not care to answer the question as to the individuals by name. Each case must be determined by the conditions when the questions as to individuals may arise for consideration; if such contingency occurs."

16. "Do you say [I think the word "hold" was used] that you have authority to administer in the ordinances of the gospel?"

A. Yes sir. I fully believe that I have such authority. And the evidences of the Lord's acceptance and indorsement of my ministry during the last thirty years are quite numerous. I then related some of them.

17. In reply to the question of who would lead the Reorganized Church in case of my death, I told Mr. Spencer; that the care of the church would devolve upon the Twelve as a Quorum, until my successor was pointed out by revelation. That the same rights that I held as the son of my father would descend to my sons. But that the calling of anyone depended on worthiness, as well as lineage, or birthright. That the question of the succession of a son to what his father held would turn on the question of worth, other things being equal. But that the Lord by his Spirit would determine the call.

18. I have no recollection of any such question as No. 18; certainly, not in that form. It was evidently a forcing of the text referring to the turning of the hearts of the fathers to the sons, and of the sons to the fathers, etc., and the delay referred to was in reference to the baptism for the dead, etc. I had nothing to say why the Lord had not given a permissive command since the stoppage in such ministrations mentioned in the revelation of 1841; and I so told Mr. Spencer.

19. Mr. Spencer's question about endowments and baptisms for the dead was answered by me in this way: "I know of nothing in the books, nor published teachings of Joseph Smith and his fellow ministers teaching or authorizing endowments. Nor do I know whether any endowments were given in Nauvoo during my father's lifetime." I knew of none, I did know that there were some baptisms for the dead in the River at Nauvoo for I saw them performed. I did not tell him that there were endowments, for I knew of none. My answer as he gives it makes me to say there were endowments as well as baptisms for the dead; which is not true.

20. Have you ever inhabited the Nauvoo House?

A. I have not lived in the house as a residence. My stepfather finished a part of it, and my mother lived there with him for several years, and died in it in April, 1879. I cannot say what my posterity may do. Personally, I do not expect to live in the Nauvoo House, in its present condition and ownership. It is now occupied and owned by the widow and son of my stepfather, Lewis Bidamon. My stepfather tore down a part of the building and built up another.

22. I do not think this question was framed in this way. I think the question was fixed up after the men left me. The question was, "If what is promised, that is, a residence in the Nauvoo House, has failed to be fulfilled, might it not be possible that any other promise made in the same revelation may fail also?"

To this I replied: "Yes, it is possible that any promise made to man may fail so far as he is personally concerned; for the reason that all the promises of God to man are conditional, and worthiness or unworthiness has much to do with such things. But I am not aware that the loss of any priesthood right I may have been entitled to as the son of the prophet is involved in the loss of a residence in the Nauvoo House."

23. There was no question asked me in regard to my father leaving the keys with me. The question was, "Did not your father take the keys of his priesthood with him; as the revelation says they shall not be taken from him?" I answered that the revelation stated that the keys of this kingdom should not be taken from him, neither here, nor in the world to come. That unless he transgressed, what was his and what accrued to him because of his faithful work, should be continued his. But that this did not affect the fact of his place being made vacant, nor the right of myself, or another to occupy, if God so willed it. And that the oracles were to be given through him to the church. That men, whether apostles or prophets, were not oracles in the sense of the term used in the revelations. That the oracles there named were the commandments of God contained in the books, or the books themselves for that matter; and the revelations of God to the church. That the revelations and commandments of God were given to the church as a whole, and not to the Twelve alone; and that was one of our reasons for the course we had taken. That, in our judgment, those oracles had been treated as a light thing, and condemnation had resulted, as the revelation stated.

Mr. Spencer then asked me whether the apostles were not the leading quorum after the Presidency, as the Savior said, "first, apostles," etc.

To this I answered, "Yes." I then added: "I have always held that, had the Twelve, as a quorum, taken the lead at the death of Father and Uncle Hyrum, and carried on the work righteously, and in accordance with the gospel as given to Joseph Smith by the angel, continuing in their places as missionaries to the world, until the Lord had revealed, or called on the one he chose to lead, or become president in its time, there would never have occurred such a scene of apostasy as took place. Nor would there have been a doctrine so evil introduced as we believed had been forced upon the church. That the Twelve, as a quorum, should have taken such steps as guarded the church from imposition, until such time as the one chosen of God to lead had been called, as that quorum was next in authority; but that the Twelve in authority of decision was only one of three, which were equal, as the section on priesthood clearly stated—the Presidency, the Twelve, the Seventy." (See Sec. 104.)

It was in this connection that I said the Twelve were the proper ones to lead after Father's death; and I qualified it as I here have stated. I did not, at any time nor in any way indorse the idea, nor the fact that the right to lead the church, at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, devolved unqualifiedly on the Twelve; though Bro. Luff stated after they were gone that Spencer would so report me.

I know of no revelation to me on the relation to married people, as asked of in question 12, other than the ones referred to by me in my biography, in which I was told that polygamy was not of God. And I stated to Mr. Spencer, that as I had asked the Lord which church I should join; so had I asked in regard to polygamy, and had been as clearly and positively told that polygamy was not of God. I recollect no other revelation. If Bro. Luff referred to any other I know nothing of what it was he referred to.

This interview lasted from about 9 a. m. to nearly half past eleven. Mr. Spencer was the talker; the rest scarcely joining in the chat. The talk was long and apparently friendly. I made no statements and took no positions that were either untrue in themselves, or if understood were damaging. That Mr. Spencer and his men may distort and twist what I did say appears to be possible. Mr. Spencer expressed the hope that there might be a unity of the two, "you and us," as he expressed it. To this both Bro. Luff and I expressed assent, if it could be done on the lines laid down of the Lord in the works of the church—his word and his will.

I do not take the position that both the Utah Church and the Reorganized Church are both baptizing into the same body of Christ. I took no such grounds with Mr. Spencer. Both Bro. Luff and I gave them to understand that we claimed to be the church in succession. That we had nothing to conceal; and were willing what we had done to be investigated.

I believe the "set time" referred to, cannot be properly applied to the practice of endowments and baptisms for the dead. I know of no endowments being practiced in Father's time. There were baptisms for the dead for awhile in the river until stopped, as referred to in section 107, revelation of 1841. I am satisfied that the endowments practiced in Utah were not had in Father's time; they may have been in Nauvoo after he died; though personally I know of none then.

I never lived in the "Nauvoo House." I did live in the Nauvoo Mansion. It would be possible to build the Nauvoo House, and me live in it yet if God so ordered it to be done.

I did not say the leadership vested in the apostles; I did say that had they remained in their places, and iniquity kept out of the church, the great confusion and wrong that resulted would not have been possible. The conversation on the leadership question was quite long; and some of the answers as sent by you are not only not full; but are absolutely incorrect; as in question 23, which has three in one; and the answer to one, "Yes," referring to the keys being taken by Father, etc., is right; but wrong to each of the others. My answers were full, and plain; at the same time, guarded from incorrectness, especially so in regard to the priesthood and lineal right. They have cooked both questions and answers.

You are at liberty to withstand Elder Criddle or any of them; all over Kansas, so far as I am concerned. Bro. J. R. Lambert is in charge and will give help if needed. But they will not meet you. Those men are not at liberty to use or misuse an interview with me which Mr. Spencer said was for their own private benefit. Besides this, the elders are not bound by any absurd answer of mine to baffling questions, contrary to the books of the church.

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH SMITH.

Misrepresentation may serve the purposes of those guilty of it for a time; but men of fair minds discriminate at the last against such men. It is not only against the men who misrepresent themselves, but it badly injures the cause they seek to serve.

THE THREE WITNESSES.

WHAT were the nationalities of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon?

The three witnesses to the Book of Mormon were all of American birth. We do not know the nationality of their ancestors.

PARK BLUFF (NAUVOO) REUNION.

THE Park Bluff (Nauvoo) Reunion, provided for by action of the late General Conference, will be held, as advertised, at Park Bluff, Montrose, Iowa, opposite Nauvoo, as announced in a previous issue of the Herald. The opening date is August 21. This we learn from Brn. A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert, who with Bro. James McKiernan, chairman of the Reunion Committee, have succeeded in removing some obstacles that for a time seemed to stand in the way, and who now have perfected such arrangements as give promise that the reunion will be a success in every way.

The committee hopes to announce reduced railway rates at no distant day. There is also a prospect for securing a lower rate for boarding than the rate announced.

The committee renews its invitation to the Saints to attend and partake of the enjoyments of this important reunion, and to make it a means for good to the work in the Nauvoo and adjacent districts and the work abroad.

Applications for tents, cottages, and other information should be addressed to the committees in charge. See notice in Miscellaneous Department of this week's HERALD.

By later advices from Bro. McKiernan we learn that the price of board has been reduced to $3.50 per week, a reasonable price.

PROGRESS.

AT the Northern Michigan conference at its session, held at Coleman we presume, though the minutes do not state where, June 20, the elders reported one hundred and fifty baptisms, pretty good showing for the district labor.

We congratulate the brethren of that district on the report made. It speaks well for the effort put forth, especially as some of it has been in localities where great prejudice has been engendered by the work done by

Mr. Musser and his coadjutors; added to the difficulties of the studied hostility of sectarianism, and the apathetic indifference of people who care little about religion as a whole, and less for those who preach it.

LATTER-DAY PESTS.

THE canker worms are making sad havoc with the trees in some parts of Western and Central Massachusetts.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., July 22.—The army worm which made its appearance in the northern counties last week has reached Winnebago County, and is doing a great amount of damage to the growing crops. From reports received from all points throughout the north and north central sections of the State the worm seems to be marching over the entire territory, and there is nothing to stop its progress.

Religious services have been held in many of the churches, and farmers have gathered from all quarters praying for the extermination of the pest.

If the worm cannot be exterminated the amount of damage it will do the crops in this part of the country is incalculable. The worms are so thick along the Green Bay road that they can be scooped in shovelfuls.—Chicago Tribune.

Eagle, Wisconsin, Mason City, Iowa, and Toledo, Ohio, report great damage by the pest in various counties of their respective States.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. I. N. ROBERTS, wrote from Detroit, Minnesota, July 17:—

I held meetings last week on Pelican Lake, preaching to the pleasure seekers. Baptized one last Sunday, making sixteen since leaving home. I am glad to say we are in better shape up here than ever before,—if we only had more preachers. I am laboring as missionary and as a local worker also.

Bro. J. M. Stubbart, Tekamah, Nebraska, July 16:—

We had a good time at our two-days' meeting last Saturday and Sunday at Lake Shore. Three were baptized and a good interest shown. To-morrow I go to Omaha to take charge of the two-days' meeting there. Expect a debate at Blair, between Bro. Scott and an Advent named White. The work in the district generally seems to advance.

Sr. Sarah Blazey, Mitchell, Ontario, July 17:—

Inclosed find remittance for Herald. We would not like to be without it. I look forward to its coming as a letter from a dear friend. I love to read it; it cheers me on my way. My father, mother, and one brother are the only Saints in this place. We have been in the church thirteen months. I can say I have been greatly blessed and do rejoice in this latter-day work. I know it is of God. I desire to do all I can to further the cause,

Bro. M. M. Turpen, Macon, Missouri, July 21:—

We closed a very interesting meeting at Moberly on the 12th instant. We erected the tent here last week but the excessive rains prevented our meetings until last evening, when we opened up with a fine congregation and Bro. Chatburn did well in laying the foundation for our future work. We feel well in our work and are a witness of the last revelation given to the church in receiving that peace of mind promised.

Bro. J. B. Roush, Norway, Illinois, July 24:—

Kindly make some editorial mention in the Herald that the Saints of my mission may know the reason of my remaining here so long. I have been confined to the house for the past two weeks with a complication of rheumatic pleurisy, rheumatism, and other diseases. At the present writing I am no better but can only sit up a part of the time. I will return to my field as soon as I am able to make the trip.

Sr. Minnie Tilley, Rhea's Mill, Washington County, Arkansas, July 13:—

We would be pleased if any of the elders would call on us as they are passing this way. We would assist them as much as possible. There are no Saints here except my husband and I. There has never been any of our preachers here, so they do not know anything of our faith. This is a Methodist community; still some good may be done. The Herald is a great comfort to us. Elders passing inquire for John Tilley.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE once in awhile receive a letter containing some such notice as this: "Put this in as it is written, or drop it in the wastebasket." This usually insures the letter going to the basket, as it would be quite improper to put the letter in, for obvious reasons. We are not prepared to accede to such a demand, for the reason that it leaves the editors no discretion as to either the contents of the letter, or its construction; hence the only safe thing is to put it where the writer says, "into the wastebasket."

In the news from the field we notice that Brn. S. W. Simmons and T. J. Sheppard, laboring in the Indian Territory and Arkansas, are having a pretty tough time of it. Bro. Simmons has been sick, the desire to hear the gospel not very pronounced, the clothing of the brethren is pretty well worn, and the prospects not bright for good times in that field. We suppose there is a great difference in fields. Some must be much pleasanter than others. Those where access to different places may be by rail, makes traveling easy; those where elders must go on foot, or in private conveyances, would make traveling hard. Those in which there are many of the faith, or friendly to it, where the people are fairly well-to-do afford better conditions, both for hearers and for food and shelter supplies than do those where the people are poor, the population scarce, and places to preach in far apart, and the people careless or indifferent. But who shall say that the laborer in the thickly peopled field is entitled to and shall receive the better reward; or win more souls to Christ? Shall not the humble, faithful man, laboring in the field in which he was born and reared, among the people who are the poor of the earth, thirsting for righteousness, be entitled to and receive a shining crown and sheaves of souls for his labors; though he may himself be poor, and clad in humble garments, and eat of humble fare? We certainly think so.

We have made arrangements to obtain the North American Review, that high-class monthly journal, which probably is the best expositor of general American topics published in the United States. By extracts from its eminent correspondents we hope to furnish additional attractions to the HERALD readers in the way of cover articles. We devote the first half of our cover space to the treatment of leading scientific, religious, and economic topics. We regard the Review as second to none in its line. Those whose tastes incline them to the best in current literature will find the monthly visits of this ably conducted magazine both a pleasure and an intellectual satisfaction. Published at No. 3 East Fourteenth Street, New York; price 50 cents per number, $3 per year.

Bro. Albert R. Boush, of Oakland, California, writes enumerating a number of marked testimonies received by him by which he has been assured of the divinity of the latter day work. He loves the work, in which he advises all to remain steadfast. Lack of space prevents insertion of the letter entire.

Bro. W. E. Peak reported himself and Bro. J. W. Waldsmith pushing the work in the missionary field, in which prospects in that respect were bright. Bro. Thomas Blodgett, lately ordained an elder, had also entered upon missionary labor.

Cloudbursts have occurred in various counties in Kentucky, causing loss of life and destruction to property on the 20th inst. Galena, Illinois, and Brazil, Indiana, report great damage to property, also on the 20th.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, has been and is still making an active summer missionary campaign in the Eastern and Northern districts of Michigan, from which he is to go into the Canada mission, proceeding afterwards to Southern Ohio and West Virginia. The Saints in these various fields will be benefited by his labors and the financial and general interests of the work be taken cognizance of and aided by tithes and offerings in proportion to the faithfulness and ability of those who love the cause.

CORRECTION.—It was Bro. Edward L. Page, of Lamoni, who gave us the name of Elder Hanks, noticed in last issue. Please correct in your memories.

Bro. Frederick Gregory, writing from Melancthon Township, Ontario, July 13, gets a column and a quarter of defense of "the faith" and the Book of Mormon in the Herald, of Dundalk, Ontario, for July 16. It is quite a full and good paper, for which Bro. Gregory is to be commended.

Attention is called to a ruling of General Conference which provides that citations to trial to answer charges shall not be published in the HERALD. We have one now in hand which reads: "Whereas, it has been commonly reported that Bro. ———, a member of the ——— branch, has been guilty of," etc. It may readily be seen that such notices if published would reflect generally upon anyone so charged, however innocent he might be; that it is manifestly improper and unjust to insert such citations in the HERALD columns, hence the action of conference in prohibition.

We regret to hear of the death of Mr. Abraham H. Cannon a member of the Quorum of Twelve in Utah. Though we never had an intimate acquaintance with him, during our missionary work in Utah, we several times had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Cannon, and he always impressed us with his sincerity. Though we could not indorse all his teaching, we admire a man whom we believe to be honest, and we regret to see his career so suddenly end while in the vigor of manhood's prime.

Elder Joseph D. Flanders, of Horton, Kansas, who, with some thirty-five or forty others at Horton, accept the mission of Joseph Smith, but joined the church under the presidency of James J. Strang, or in that belief, visited Lamoni, July 23 and 24, to make inquiry and get an understanding of the view of the Reorganization on questions affecting the organization and leadership. He was courteous and kind in his deportment, and gave evidence of entire sincerity in his convictions. We did what we could to give him the information he sought, and he left us in peace, whatever his conclusions about his visit may be.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

THREE GATES.

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold:
These narrow gates—First, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer. And the next
Is last and narrowest. "Is it kind?"
And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result of speech may be.
—The Housekeeper.

[THE following was written by Elder J. F. Mintun, Magnolia, Iowa, June 9, 1896, by request of Sr. Anna Gosset, of Decatur, Nebraska, in commemoration of her two children, James and Edna, both of whom died December, 1895.]

A MOTHER'S SOLILOQUY.

"Mamma," was the word 'twas whispered,
"Mamma," was the word 'twas said
By two precious children treasures;
Those two children now are dead.

Joy came with the word 'twas whispered,
Joy came with the word 'twas said
By those two sweet household treasures;
But now all such joy has fled.

Yet, methinks,—can it be real,—
I hear it whispered, "Mamma," now?
No; 'tis only sweet remembrance
Come to soothe the aching brow.

"Better's the joy that now awaits you,"—
'Tis sweet Hope that speaks to me,—
"There now rest in Abraham's bosom
Those two cherubs whom you'll see.

"If by faith you pray and labor,
Prompted by God's wondrous love,

'Tis a promise—do not doubt it—
You will meet them yet above."

On this promise I am resting,
And my joy is near complete;
For I surely have a witness,
That these two and I shall meet.

Would I wish now to recall thee,
To this cold, unfriendly world?
Nay, I joy that you are resting,
Both my darling boy and girl.

Little James and baby Edna,
Could I now speak unto you,
I would tell you that your mamma
Is endeavoring to be true;

True to God and to his teachings,
True to all that's pure and good;
And that I am seeking Jesus,
To help me do that which I should.

Patiently I pray and labor,
O, that angels would me cheer,—
Till I finish all earth's duties,
And in paradise appear.

MAYSVILLE, Arkansas.

Dear Sister Frances:—My heart is filled with love and gratitude to God for his goodness and mercy to me, and I just feel impressed to write to the column. I have long felt that I did wrong to enjoy the labor of others' pens and not add my mite. I love this work and I thank and praise God for the noble work and efforts of the mothers and daughters to benefit the world. The Lord has given me five dear little ones to train and nourish for his kingdom, and I feel the weight of the great responsibility so sacred and so momentous, but I feel to thank God that he has given me the sacred trust of helping to raise a righteous generation that shall be prepared to meet the King in his glory. God help all mothers to wake up to a sense of their duty and the responsibility that is resting upon them. I enjoy very much the letters in the Column also the leaflets and the Daughters of Zion department in Autumn Leaves. I would that I might be privileged to meet with the sisters, but as that cannot be I will try to do the best that I can and then leave the results with God. May the Lord help us as wives and mothers to so live that our husbands and children shall rise up and call us blessed, and that we may at last hear the "well done." Your sister, ABBIE CHILDERS.

CLITHERALL, Minnesota.

Dear Sisters:—I have felt as if I ought to write for the Home Column, ever since I got home from the reunion at Fergus Falls. But there was so much to be done, washing, ironing, cleaning up, and berry picking, all needing to be done at once, that I am afraid I put that kind ahead of the spiritual part of my work, and thought the temporal must be done anyhow. So the result has been, I have done a little too much, and brought on an old affliction. Now I can lie on the bed and write. I think it would be wiser to put the spiritual part of our work ahead, and if any is neglected, let it be the temporal. And it occurs to me that if Sr. Walker should wait till everything else needful was attended to first before attending to her editorial duties, that our Autumn Leaves, Home Column, and Hope would be lacking, and if she needs our help we ought to give it willingly and not grudge the time taken from our home work to cast in our mites.

Our reunion commenced on Saturday, the 20th of June, and closed on Sunday, the 28th. I believe it was in answer to prayer that the way was opened for us to attend. We enjoyed ourselves well. The Holy Spirit's presence was felt at our meetings, and we were strengthened and encouraged to go on in the good work, feeling that God is with us. I begin to realize more and more the need of taking everything to God in prayer. We were somewhat disappointed at not seeing Bro. Joseph Smith. But he cannot be every place at once, and we were cheered by the presence of Brn. A. H. Smith and E. L. Kelley and others of the elders. We were thankful to hear the sound of the gospel, which is to be preached in all the world as a witness just previous to our Savior's second coming. We were also thankful for the love and unity which seemed largely to prevail among the Saints, making us feel that we were indeed members of the one family or household of God, and we were made to realize more fully why it is that all the law and will of God revealed through the prophets should hang (as it were), upon the two commands to love God with all our hearts, and our neighbors as ourselves. And when we learn to be watchful unto prayer, and to do unto others as we would like them to do unto us, we will not be found wanting in any of the graces needful to make us true followers of the lowly Nazarene. I was particularly impressed by the admonition given us by Bro. Smith. Of course I cannot tell it, as he did, but can only give my understanding of the subject. If we should see any of the members of "God's army" being led astray, or overcome, or taken captive by the enemy, we should rally to their defense and try to bring them back to the lines of safety, even the straight and narrow way which leads unto salvation, and not be so ready to close our eyes and fold our hands and say to ourselves, "I am not my brother's keeper." Let us not be willing to give them up for lost. Just as soon as we see them losing the way and being enticed or even surrounded by the enemy, then is the time, we have the more need to throw around them an influence for good, and try to win them back; then is the time, if we have any charity, to let it be seen, and not turn a cold shoulder, and make them think their comrades have all deserted them. For if we desert others in their time of trial and temptation, then when our time of trial shall come we may find others deserting us. And we are sure to be tempted and tried in some way. Even the Savior did not escape. And if we shall be able to overcome all through faith, happy will we be. So let us try to be true soldiers of Christ and keep our lamps trimmed and burning, that by the light of the Holy Spirit thus given we may be able to discern the approach of the enemy, and try to prevent, as much as in us lies, his making inroads in our ranks. If the Spirit will reprove the world of sin, it will also reprove the children of the kingdom, of sin in their midst, and if we love them we will try to call them back. Christ came to call sinners to repentance. But we sometimes see people who act as if they were too good to speak to sinners. Christ said to the sinner, "Go thy way, and sin no more." And I believe it is our duty to forgive everybody and everything as we desire God to forgive us, even though we might not be able to reclaim them. Some excuse themselves by saying, "I don't think they wish to be forgiven. They have not repented, nor have they asked for forgiveness." But that makes no difference, it is for our own sakes that we should forgive, that we also may be forgiven. Nevertheless, transgressors should be dealt with, as the law directs, else would the officers appointed to see that the law is observed, be transgressors themselves, not being faithful in their line of duty. And one of the surest ways of forgiving is to go to praying for the one we think in error. It will bring forgiveness to our hearts every time, if we pray with real intent.

I was glad to see Bro. Williams' letter in the Home Column. It is the elders' duty to teach the law, and when they have taught that part of the law more fully, the flock may come to a better understanding of the dress question. For my own part I have been blessed in trying to dress plain. I have a large family to do the work for, and have had poor health much of the time, and have not had hired help more than four months in my life, yet I often find time to rest and to read, and I take great satisfaction in reading. I am a constant reader of the Herald and find much good in it. I sometimes pity people who never have time to look in a book or think of resting, yet think they are obliged to do so much unnecessary work to follow the fashion, and I wish from my heart we all believed it right to "Let all your garments be plain." Let us all try to live worthy of salvation, and pray for the adornment of a meek and humble spirit.

Your sister,
EMMA L. ANDERSON.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS. MEMORY TEXTS FOR JULY.

"The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16: 30.

Thursday, July 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Ezek. 36: 24-28.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. S. D. ALLEN, Milton, Florida, writes:—"Please say that I desire the prayers of the Prayer Union, and also of the brethren, that I may be healed of an ulcer of the stomach, which has developed through hereditary tendencies. I am an elder, thirty-nine years old to-day [July 20] and can do a great deal for the cause, if I am spared. I love the work better than all else, and desire to devote my life to it, but as my health now is, I cannot do much."

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

XENIA, Ill., July 10.

Sunday School Department:—Being much interested in the Sunday school work and highly appreciating the instructions received through the Sunday school column, I trust that it may ever continue to have a place in the grand old Herald.

Energy and perseverance rightly directed, say by the power and influence of the Holy Spirit, seasoned by the experience and counsel of those who have long been engaged in this department of church work, will surely be the means of development; yea, of continual advancement in this the grandest work that the human mind can conceive of.

I do feel to thank the Lord for the Sunday school, for the powerful influence that it is wielding with the children and youth of today, thereby fitting and qualifying them for the sacred responsibility that will so soon rest upon them.

Self-reliance is a very important feature of one's general makeup. I fear we do not fully realize the importance of teaching a child to think. Teach it individuality, and that it must early begin to develop the reason and judgment with which the Lord has blessed it, and not go through this beautiful world a mere machine, never realizing the wonderful possibilities there are in store for those who will develop their God-given faculties.

We have a little Sunday school in Xenia of which we are truly proud, and feel to thank our heavenly Father for the success we have thus far had.

We Saints rented a hall, fitted it up, organized a Sunday school, and on the first Sunday in April, 1895, opened our school; and although we have only nine scholars who are children of the Saints, our little school numbers from thirty-eight to fifty-five—sixty-eight being the greatest number we have had at any time. Forty-seven was our average for last quarter, and what we highly appreciate is that they all take part in the lessons, hardly ever having to put a name on the visitors' list. Depending as we do on those who are not of us, for patronage, we feel uncertain as to the final result, realizing that the ministers of the different denominations have a great influence with the parents. There is something about our school that seems to attract the children, and if the children of Xenia were at liberty to go where they pleased, our hall would be full every Sunday. Your sister in Christ, HEPPIE MORRIS.

[SR. MORRIS, stand by your little school though you meet some discouragements,

Yours is the kind of courage that wins. Secularism may try to overthrow your work, but the reflection of the Spirit of the Master in the daily life of his Saints will win the respect of those who are looking for good. It requires little courage to go with the throng, and do as others do, but brave indeed must one be to step out from accustomed associates and do those things that merit approbation but bring only frowns and jeers. The Lord is blessing the Sunday school work and we have much to encourage us. Go on, sister, and the Lord will bless.]

I FELL into the habit years ago of talking with God, and it becomes so natural that in all my open spaces I do it without thought.—Horace Bushnell.

A CHRISTIAN layman of repute, living in an adjacent city, writes the editor of the Superintendent and Teacher as follows:—

"The great lack of our Sunday school teachers as a whole is the power of the Holy Ghost. This, it seems to me, is occasioned by a misconception as to what it is. . . . The consequent failure on the part of pastors and others to present the plain New Testament doctrine upon this great subject often and persistently to all classes of Christian hearers and readers, but especially Sunday school teachers and superintendents, is an error, the first to be overcome, after which the best approved machinery of teaching will accomplish legitimate results. . . . Emphasize it, dear brother, and make it, as it deserves to be, first in place and importance."

LAMBERT, N. D., July 18.

Editors Herald.—I am afraid that like many other places, the work is not on as good footing as it might be here, but I am happy to report that through the earnest labors of Elder Swenson, who has been among us for the past two weeks, we have reason to hope that the Saints, assisted and guided by the promptings of that good Spirit which our Father is anxious to bestow upon his obedient children, are more fully alive to their responsibilities.

How grand, majestic, yet simple, the teaching of our Lord upon this subject, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Dear Saints, let us reflect, What is to become of this surging mass of humanity if we, the professedly chosen people of God, fail of our duty? My heart goes out in response to the earnest appeal of Bro. Roberts. But four missionaries in three States! But the comforting thought comes to me, We are working in line with that same Jehovah who divided the Red Sea and brought down the walls of Jericho. God help us to stand firm.

Bro. Swenson stayed two weeks at Clifford. At the close I had the pleasure of baptizing one who has long been under conviction—Bro. Carl Ericson. On the following day we started overland to this place, driving ninety miles by team, and are now stopping at the house of M. J. Laughton. We have one candidate for baptism here and hope for more.

My principal object in writing is to get the scattered Saints all through this State to correspond with the missionary force or myself. Comply with the law and attach yourself to the nearest branch, no matter whether you can meet with us or not. Perhaps we can come to you, and if you are letting the light shine by a faithful and consistent walk, there is not the least doubt but that a few others can be gathered in. I have written to two different parties whose address I saw in the church papers and have received no reply. It may be that the letters miscarried. If so, will the brother at Aneta, Nelson County, and Bro. Rasmussen, at Sykeston, Wells County, please write again and let us take advantage of the opportunity while we have Bro. Swenson in the State?

Yours in truth,

WILLIAM SPARLING.

EUSTIS, Neb., July 16.

Editors Herald.—Four years ago when I moved from Lamoni to Nebraska there were no Saints here but two, and they had become indifferent and did not let the people know what they believed; but when I came I told the people what we believed and distributed tracts; then Brn. G. W. Shute and J. W. Waldsmith came and preached, and some were interested. Last winter Bro. J. W. Gillen came here and preached, and now we have twenty-eight members, and Bro. J. W. Gillen, on the 26th of last January, organized us into a branch of fourteen members and the writer was ordained an elder, Bro. Gottlieb Keller priest. Since then I have been president of branch and superintendent of our Sunday school. We have meetings ever Sunday, also Sunday school.

I have opened three new places to preach. On the 11th of July I drove thirty-two miles and preached once, held three meetings on the 12th and baptized five and blessed two children. I have been hunting up the scattered Saints in this country and encouraging them that they may be up and doing and discharge the duty that is enjoined upon them.

Your brother in Christ,

G. W. JOHNSON.

DODGEVILLE, Wis., July 20.

Editors Herald.—Your readers may be encouraged to read of the progress of the church here, as I have been to read of the advancement elsewhere. The missionaries always have a peculiar feeling of joy when they read of the success of others, even though we ourselves may feel a little despondent.

In company with Bro. J. T. Hackett and wife, my wife and I have been holding tent services since the season opened. Times have been very hard here on account of a failure of crops last year, so that people are straining every nerve this year to catch up. At Yellowstone the weather and corn planting were against us, but I think if they could be visited this fall, good could be accomplished.

And, at Portville, in Green County, there is an excellent opening. The most influential men in town have sent us word to come and they will furnish us a place for our tent and care for us while there; but we could not go. If the brethren with the other tent could get there I am satisfied no better point could be found. Portville (the post office is Stewart) is six miles east of Blanchardville.

At Waldwick we encountered the grossest ignorance concerning our work I have yet seen in the State. Our stay there was short, and ineffectual so far as this world is concerned. The effects in the next may be more effectual. We viewed an old mining shaft that was sunken, it is said, because some sister had located mineral there in the early days of the Reorganization through the gift of tongues and interpretation. Peepstones have been brought to bear on the spot with affirmative answers as to there being mineral there. Old miners tell me there are no signs of mineral (lead) there, and I was informed by a Mr. Short, who was employed to help to sink the shaft, that little or none was found. May not some one have been deceived in the source of that tongue and lost a fortune thereby? Or, have I heard it straight?

From Waldwick we moved to Adamsville where we met with the success I wish to inform you of. There was once a Congregationalist society there, also a snug little frame church building, but for years there have been no services there by any of that denomination, and the building has virtually fallen into the hands of the original owner who last winter asked me to occupy in it, which I did for four weeks, and as I was preaching near there all winter I occupied there all winter every alternate Sunday. So we set up the tent there and baptized seven, with good material for a branch with a church and organ thrown in. They are among the most wealthy and influential in the county. Others have given their names for baptism and will be baptized soon. I expect to watch over them if there is no one else to do so as long as I remain in the State. There is an excellent interest there. Any of the brethren passing along the Northwestern or Illinois Central road could stop and do much good. Get off at Hollandale, on the Illinois Central road, or Barneveld on the Chicago and Northwestern.

We came to this place (the county seat) on the 14th and expect to remain here nearly two months, and then move to Lancaster and Flora in Grant County. We expect Bro. McDowell with us to-day and to help us storm the fort here. The editor of the principal paper in this county called on us and asked what we wanted to say for ourselves. I wrote him a column article, which I inclose, which you may use or throw in the waste basket. The editor altered it somewhat after I wrote it, and even changed the extract from the "Temple Lot suit;" but we are glad to get that much. I heard from an editor of another paper that a certain minister would score us this week. "We'll be at home" I told him. All we ask is fair play.

J. W. PETERSON.

TEMPLE, Ohio, July 18.

Editors Herald:—The last of May I left home for the East, Massachusetts district being the objective point. Joined Bro. F. M. Sheehy at Boston and began work on the proposed map, feeling anxious to get it completed. But other work could not be neglected, so we preached Sundays at the most convenient places, and attended other meetings during the week as they came. While there I visited the Saints at Plainville, Providence, Boston, and Brockton, to find the work on a good footing in the main and the Saints going forward. Some very complimentary things might be said of the Saints in that district in the way of encouragement to them and others, but it is sufficient to say, perhaps, that they are in the faith and standing nobly for the cause, aiding the work every way in their power.

During this time and at the present, Brn. H. E. Moler and W. A. Smith were doing tent service in Philadelphia, Brn. I. M. Smith and George Robley on Cape Cod, and Brn. U. W. Greene and W. W. Blanchard in Maine, and Brn. S. O. Foss and John A. Ames in East Maine; but the last mentioned not engaged in tent service. Also Bro. Holmes J. Davison alone in Nova Scotia. So we have been accomplishing what we could with the force at hand.

July 4 Bro. Richard Bullard and I concluded to visit the Saints at Little Compton, Rhode Island. On the way to the depot we were intercepted by the big parade marching down the street, out in honor of the "glorious Fourth." Flags and banners were fluttering in the morning breeze and beautiful sunlight, everything conspiring seemingly to emphasize and honor this memorial of liberty. That which especially attracted our attention and in which we felt great pride was the "little red schoolhouse" borne aloft, emblem of America's free schools; as against sectarian schools where creed and catechism become prominent in educating the youth. All honor to our American free schools, where sectism and catechism have no right to intrude, but where every boy and girl, rich or poor, may obtain a liberal education in the things needful in practical life free. Let the church take care of the rest.

Done with the procession we passed on to Providence, and taking boat rode three hours down the Narragansett Bay to where we were met by Bro. Joseph Pearce, with team, who conducted us to his home, where we received a welcome. But how it did rain that night!

Sunday, the 5th, we attended the Sunday school and sacrament services in the forenoon at the Saints' church and preaching at evening. The Sunday school was well directed, the prayer service excellent, and there were a goodly number out at the evening preaching. There are very worthy Saints here.

Monday morning, while engaged with Brn. Pearce and Bullard in counseling over some local church matters, a telephone message reached me from Bro. Sheehy stating that a telegram had been received at Boston to the effect that Mrs. Kelley was very sick and to return home immediately. Sr. Silva and husband were just ready, with team, to start to Fall River, distance fourteen miles, and the nearest point to the railway. I joined them and started for home, leaving Brn. Bullard and Pearce to care for the evening meeting. At Fall River I chanced to meet Bro. Samuel W. Ashton and son and Bro. Moses Sheehy, who gave a good account of things there in few words.

Bro. Ashton accompanied me to the depot, and while waiting for the train invited me to lunch with him, and paved the way to Boston, not forgetting to ask, "Can you see your way home?" All of which is golden. Things like that help one to get ready for heaven. Many thanks.

Arrived in Boston just in time to miss the fast train, which leaves at three p. m. I purchased a round trip excursion ticket as far as Buffalo, and started on the seven o'clock train. At Buffalo noon next day while attending to some red tape connected with said ticket both trains left. At 8:30 I took the fast train for Cleveland, Ohio, in hopes of catching the motor to Willoughby, as the fast night train did not stop there. But on arriving at Cleveland found that the motor had gone on its last trip for the night, so was elected to tarry over. I was on the early train next morning to Willoughby. On arriving there the telegraph operator informed me that he had sent a message the evening before to me at Boston, stating that the hotel had burned, so I went on, thinking, "What next?" When nearly over to Kirtland I met Bro. G. T. Griffiths with team on the way to the depot to meet me. I learned that Sr. Kelley was better, but that on the previous Sunday they had about given up all hope of her recovering. I also learned that the hotel was but partially burnt. When the fire broke out the Temple bell was rung, which brought together a large number of the citizens and some strangers, who united and fought the fire bravely and successfully. The fire crept along in the gable between the ceiling and roof, a distance of seventy feet, before it was subdued. Doubting their ability to check the fire at one time, the building was cleared of pretty much everything in it and piled in the street in front of the Temple, and placed in the vestibule, etc., and a watch placed over the goods, so when I arrived things had a look as though a western cyclone might have gone wild and come over and paid us a visit. Fortunately no one was injured. The checking of the flames was a splendid achievement, accomplished by efficient and well-directed purpose.

Sr. Kelley is better and things look some brighter. We are busy untying ends and getting things as far as may be in place. Impressed with the idea that duty calls elsewhere, but first duty is here just now. The meetings are being well attended and are good. Temple callers frequent. Crops are good, fruit (apples) in abundance.

Do not forget the Reunion to begin August 8 near New London, Connecticut. Likely none other will be held in the East this year.

In the faith,

WM. H. KELLEY.

HALLS, Mo., July 21.

Editors Herald:—The Baptist church here is open the first and second Sunday of each month for the use of our traveling ministry. We are not allowed to have a standing appointment, but every traveling elder can stop off here and have the church on those days, if he could drop us a card a few days before so we could give it out.

There are eight Saints living here and we would be so glad if some elder could come and preach for us. There will be no trouble in getting a good crowd out; the people want to hear the gospel as we teach it. We live just one mile from the depot and in plain sight. Anyone can tell where we live, and if we knew when any of the elders could come we could meet them at the depot.

A tent meeting would do a splendid work here, for everyone would turn out, and many have asked me why our folks did not come with a tent, as everyone wanted to hear. But it is so hard to get a church to preach in and get it on conditions that we can do any good. The preachers won't consent for us to have the churches, only this one, and on the above conditions; but the people want to hear and will turn out. Please come; we will care for you while here and be so glad to do so. Remember the place, Halls, Missouri, sixteen miles south of St. Joseph.

Yours in bonds,
BRO. AND SR. I. W. MILLER.

TEKAMAH, Neb., July 17.

Editors Herald:—Tent meetings were continued at Blair, Nebraska, until the 21st ult. with but slight results for good. The few Saints there have many things to discourage, but had they remained patient and cheerful under their peculiar trials they would have been much more highly blessed and would have added an impetus to the missionary work, which under present circumstances they could not, though doing the best they now could. The kindness and hospitality shown by the Saints and many nonmembers to the missionaries were commendable. On the eve of the 20th I took severely ill, and did not hold services, though several had gathered; but through prayer I was so relieved as to hold three services on the following day.

From Blair the tent was shipped to Tekamah, where I began meetings on the 25th, and with the exception of the evening of the 4th and last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights have continued since, with interest on the part of a few. Religious indifference and prejudice have made the labor here very trying; besides lack of wisdom on the part of some has increased the burdens of the missionary's work very much. The few Saints now living here seem to be striving to follow the Shepherd's voice. One grave difficulty is the lack of information, and with some the lack of seeking to supply themselves with the proper literature to gain and retain the information needed. While many of them are financially depressed, yet should they save the little amount at times unnecessarily expended their ability to obtain the church literature would be sufficient.

On last Friday the Saints of the Lake Shore branch and their children met and with their friends enjoyed one of the most enjoyable seasons that could be anticipated. Recitations, songs, boat riding, swinging, and partaking to the full of earth's bounties formed the chief characteristics of the enjoyments. The program was good, the repast was all that should be asked, and the day was Nature's best. The two days following were occupied entirely in religious services, the results of which were six preaching services and one social service were held, five children blessed, five sick administered to, and three were baptized and confirmed. The brethren of the ministry present and assisting were Elders F. A. Smith, J. M. Stubbart, James Huff, and the writer. Several brethren, sisters, and friends from a distance were present and the universal verdict was that a season of rejoicing was had. A peaceful, profitable, and successful two-days' meeting was truly held, and do the Saints and friends profit by the instruction given God will be honored, in paying heed to his law, a proper distinction will be recognized between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church, with especial honor towards the Reorganization, and there will be no tale-bearers in the land, but all will seek to learn and abide in the way of salvation.

The discussion between Elders C. Scott and Almus Adams of the Church of God which was to have been held in this month at Blair, has been postponed until in September.

I expect to visit the Central Nebraska district next week, to be present at their quarterly conference the 25th and 26th.

Yours respectfully in the gospel covenant,
J. F. MINTUN.

STOFIEL, Nev., July 16.

Editors Herald:—Brn. J. Arthur Davis and E. B. Morgan, missionaries to Nevada, have been preaching in the northern part of Elko County. They are noble workers and men of God, well liked and loved by nearly everybody. They baptized four, three of them Christians or Campbellites and one Presbyterian, and the writer two of his grandchildren—six in all. Others are near.

Brn. Davis and Morgan are now south of Elko. During harvest time the settlements are close together. They go thence to Elko and Tuscarora and back again to our part of the county, fifteen miles north of Elko. I would like to go with them but Sr. Penrod is still confined to her bed and has been for over four years. She is past seventy years old. Will the Saints pray for her health to return. She suffers with patience, trusting in the Master.

Yours for truth,

E. PENROD.

STANDLEY, I. T.

Editors Herald:—We are not doing all we can for the cause of the Master, but some of us are trying to come up higher. We have Sunday school at ten a. m., prayer and testimony meeting in the afternoon, and preaching most every Sunday night. Bro. Ellis Short or Bro. Earl Bailey speaks for us, giving good advice and counsel in regard to eternal life. Will say to the ministry that have appointments in the Indian Territory that Bro. D. Wade, of Franks, Indian Territory, wishes an elder to come to his neighborhood and preach. Some want to obey the gospel. Bro. Wade will make any of the elders welcome. Bro. and Sr. Harrington, of Broadway, Texas, also want an elder to come and preach in their neighborhood. They think one could do well. People say an elder could have a house to preach in.

Brethren and sisters of the kingdom of God's dear Son, live for Jesus; he is our best friend; keep all the commandments, for they are life eternal. I ask prayers of all the Saints that I may always be found worthy of the name of Saint, that I may labor incessantly for the cause of our Master, and ever be able to point the erring ones to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, that I may help to make the rough places smooth and the crooked ways straight.

In bonds,

JOSEPH BEDWELL.

COLDWATER, Mich., July 22.

Editors Herald:—Ex Priest ex Saint Musser, the extra, has come and gone. "Why should we mourn departed friends!" For eight nights in the Presbyterian church at California, Michigan, we defended the truth of God against a compound of ignorance and conceit, Methodist and Presbyterian societies forming a combine and securing the services of the above named gentleman. And to begin with, the combine assumed a degree of sentimentality. Just imagine that old religio-political institution getting sentimental! But it wore off. The paper correspondent gave us one of the most tearful contributions to religious literature. But now they are ashamed of the action, and as mute as a sepulcher touching the debate.

We had baptized eight there and after the debate baptized one more, Bro. Cairnes, unimpeachable for integrity, and we have bright prospects for more, many more. Work looming up all over the district. L. F. Daniel and H. H. Robinson made arrangements to bombard Fremont, Indiana, from Hickory Grove—to have commenced Sunday last, but doubtless rain prevented.

We return to California over Sunday.

Cheerfully etc.,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

WILBERTON, I. T., July 6.

Editors Herald:—I have been holding regular meetings of late in my house. Interest good, and the good Lord blessed me with his Spirit. Some of the Baptists say they will send for their minister to meet the doctrine of our church. Well, let him come; we will be right there. We held Sabbath school at eleven o'clock, then went three miles and preached at two o'clock, and preached a funeral sermon at five o'clock. Preached at eight p. m.; have two appointments for next Sabbath; so you see I am busy on the Lord's day. My desire is to spend my days in preaching this gospel of the kingdom.

Your brother,

PETER ADAMSON.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 3.

Editors Herald:—Bro. H. E. Moler and I are holding tent meetings in the city, assisted by Bro. A. H. Parsons, to small congregations, but very good interest. On the 7th ult. I baptized a promising young man and his wife, who attended a few of our meetings and became interested. They were members of what is called the "Brethren" Church, a branch of the Dunkards. Their minister became troubled and told them that if any man would prove to him that he was wrong he would make him a present of a fifteen dollar Bible; and they made arrangements for him to meet Bro. Parsons at their house. Bro. Parsons could not go, so I went.

When we gathered at his house the minister brought a few of his followers with him, and as we assembled together I said that I was in the work of the Lord and that before we commenced our friendly discussion we should bow before God in prayer and ask him to be with us that we might say nothing but what would be pleasing before him.

We commenced about eight o'clock and talked ten minutes, turn about. We talked till about twelve and the Lord was with me by his Spirit. I took the Bible and he took the grammar, and after we had talked about two hours I asked the little audience which they were going to take for a guide, the grammar or the Bible? and they said the Bible.

Our talk lasted about four hours, and the next morning Bro. Edwards' wife came to church and said she wanted me to baptize her; and O, how my heart was made to rejoice in the work of the Lord! On the following Monday I baptized her.

Well, I did not get the fifteen dollar Bible, but I got something better; I received a blessing and was permitted to baptize the sister into the kingdom of God; and was not that better? She seems to have such a gentle spirit, and full of faith, and I think she will make a good Saint. I feel that the good Lord will bless her. That makes three that have been brought into the kingdom since we came to the city, and this is partly the results of Bro. Parsons' labor performed in the past. So the good work goes on, and as the Lord says, One of a city and two in a family. I pray God to bless his Saints, and that the honest in heart may be gathered in.

Your brother,

W. A. SMITH.

HANOVER, Wis., July 16.

Editor's Herald:—So far as the world is concerned we have no fault to find but we do think some of the people who live in it could do better if they would. We came to this place last Tuesday, July 14, and held our first service last evening, the 15th, with an audience of fifty in the tent and some on the outside, and from what we are able to see during the short time we have been here the people are a warm-hearted, friendly people, which is quite a pleasant change to what it was at the place where we came from. For the past two weeks we were located at a small village called Afton, a railway station on the C. and N. W. R. R., in Rock County, and in all my ministerial work so far I never came so near a complete boycott as we found there; and the two Sundays that we were there passed without any services, for not a soul came to the tent only a few children, and on one of those nights, I had just retired for the night when the people were passing by from the one church of the town (Baptist) which had dismissed its audience at a late hour when I heard one say, "Oh hell! them fellows needn't think they can come here and run opposition to our church!" And by the way that one particular church about one year ago refused to open its door for me to preach in, but in about two weeks afterward opened said doors for a negro minstrel show which was largely patronized by "our church" (theirs.) "If ye were of the world the world would love his own."—Jesus.

I remember some years ago of reading a letter published in the Herald by a sister who requested some of the elders to visit this place—Hanover—saying she had some friends or relatives who lived here. Now should this letter meet the eyes of that sister will she kindly drop a card to the writer, giving the names of her friends that we may call on them while here.

When or where we will go from here only time and the interests of the work will determine.

In bonds,

CHAS. H. BURR.

VINCENNES, Iowa, July 10.

Editors Herald.—Brn. Weld and Snively have been of late in our midst and have now left with good wishes from us and desire from Saints and others to soon return. On June 30 Bro. Snively preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Jessie Parrish Burnett in our union chapel to a large concourse of friends, who went away comforted by the elder's discourse. Disinterested ones declared it the best funeral sermon they ever listened to. On the following Sabbath the same brother preached two sermons, closing the meeting after a very stirring sermon on Monday evening. While here two brethren were baptized and confirmed, making now eight baptized by Bro. Snively since he came to us first in February. Others are near the water and we hope for their return in the near future.

As our former president had moved away and death had entered our ranks and reduced us below a quorum, our branch declared itself disorganized, and reorganized yesterday afternoon with a membership of seventeen, choosing Elder F. M. Weld, our district president, to preside over us until some more available president could be had. We will occupy the union chapel at this place the second Sunday of every month, preaching morning and evening and testimony and sacrament meeting in the afternoon.

SISTER E. I. SARGENT.

ROSCOE, Pa., July 8.

Editors Herald.—I am in the midst of a debate with one of the champions of Campbellism. The propositions are as follows:—

1. "The church with which I, Ira C. Moore, stand identified, sometimes nicknamed by its opposers the 'Campbellite Church,' is the Church of Christ as founded by the apostles, in faith, organization, doctrine, and practice."

2. "The church with which I, D. L. Shinn, stand identified, sometimes nicknamed by its opposers, 'the Mormon Church,' is the Church of Jesus Christ, in faith, organization, doctrine, and practice."

We have three sessions of two hours each on each proposition, beginning at seven each evening, for six days. We have one more day on the first proposition. He has never attempted to prove organization, faith, doctrine, or practice, but has been claiming identity with the primitive church. In his last two speeches he showed signs of anger and jumped on "Joe Smith" about eight or ten times. This was evidently painful to the audience and the moderators. They would have called him to order, but I requested them to "let him have rope." The people cheered me to-night and some say they are beat already.

I have been kind and charitable toward him throughout and tried to show the good Spirit. I have been blessed from the start. Although the people are deeply prejudiced against "the Mormons" here, I have the sympathy of the audience already, and the debate is the daily topic of conversation all around here. Mr. Moore has said all he can say—has already repeated himself. His learning comes to his relief once in awhile, and to-morrow night we may have a nice little speech on metaphysics.

I have baptized two here Sunday and one at Banning before I came here. The Bickertonites are divided into two parties. One party was so alarmed at my work that they have organized more permanently since I came. As a church they die hard, but die they will. It is only "a question of time" now. They say they would join us were it not for second baptism. By this they admit all I ask—that they are not the true Latter Day Saints' Church.

I have now been away from home a month and if nothing happens will likely be here another month. There is much to do here. I am well and full of the latter-day blessing.

Bro. Robert Perrie, of Fayette City, is acting moderator for me; and Rev. Mr. Rodgers, of this place, not a member of either of our churches, is the third party chosen to act as chairman of the moderators, and he has proved so far the right man in the right place—a Christian of no mean sort and unprejudiced in heart. As ever,

D. L. SHINN.

MONTRÖSE, Iowa, July 25.

Editors Herald.—Brethren A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert have taken up the Bluff Park reunion matter and will assist the committee to carry it on to success. All the former arrangements and announcements hold good except the price of beds at the lodging house; it is found necessary to raise the price to $1.25 per bed for the ten days; but this is done by the reunion committee, who have to rent the lodging house and secure some one to care for it.

Those who are keeping the boarding house have reduced the board to $3.50 per week for regular boarders.

Arrangements for good speakers are being made. The committee is on the ground completing all necessary preliminaries. Excursions can be arranged—by steamboat to Keokuk and return through the Government Canal; or up the Mississippi to Fort Madison and Burlington; or by hack to Carthage or Nauvoo, visiting all points of interest. These excursions all at greatly reduced rates.

If you ever want to see these places, have plenty of company, and a good time at a reunion, come now.

The cottages are not all taken yet—several unfurnished ones along with plenty of tents. Let us know in time what you want and we will do our best to get it for you.

Write to Bro. D. Tripp, Montrose, Iowa. If you have written, your wants are being looked after; so make your preparations to come.

Remember it is a good idea to bring along an empty straw tick and some bed linen and towels if you want lodging, and let us know how many to prepare for.

We are looking after railroad rates.

JAMES MCKIERNAN,
Chairman Reunion Committee.

PERPETUAL MOTION.

PERPETUAL motion is supposed to be a machine or contrivance, so arranged or constructed that the power or driving force is produced and applied by the machine itself. I have not the least doubt but that in all ages of the world man has exercised his abilities and spent his life and means to invent such a machine. More time, brains, and money have been expended upon this than upon any other invention he ever sought after; and many a poor, foolish fellow, after exhausting his lifetime and fortune, has ended up in a lunatic asylum.

Every now and then we hear or read of some one who has, or is just on the point of discovering it, (most always the latter, however,) and loudly tells what great things he is going to accomplish when he gets it. He is going to revolutionize the motive power of the world, change the whole system, and instead of horse, steam, or electric power moving our wagons, machinery, locomotives, ships, etc., behold, we will see them rattling, banging, tearing, snorting, gliding, and cavorting around on their "own hook," without the least expense to the owners, save the wear and tear.

Notwithstanding these claims have been made years ago, I notice there has been no change in the world's motive powers, only as new ones have been discovered, and in every case where such claim has been made, a close investigation has revealed fraud. I read some time ago of a man who claimed that he had invented a watch which was moved by perpetual motion; and for a long time excited the praise and admiration of thousands. But upon a rigid examination it was discovered that the opening and shutting of the case kept it wound up. Another had a clock that moved without being wound up, which greatly puzzled the world for a long time. But it was finally discovered that the works of a watch had been placed in the pendulum which kept it in motion by throwing a weight from one side to the other, similar to two children squatting and rising at each vibration of the swing. This was quite cute, but would hardly pass for perpetual motion. Another unfortunate fellow still had discovered it and placed it upon wheels, and when he cut it loose it ran him all over a ten acre field and finally broke to pieces in a rail fence. He was so badly frightened that he could never remember "the combination" again. So the valuable invention was lost to the world.

If the devotees of this delusion would devote the one tenth part of the time and money to the investigation of the laws of nature, they would soon discover that such a power as they seek cannot possibly exist. For where in all nature, I will ask, is a precedent? You may point me to the heavens, to the sun, the moon, and the stars, and say, "There is a case of perpetual motion." Not so. The same force that drives and whirls the schoolboy's ball as he tosses it in the air, drives and whirls these huge bodies through the blue regions of heaven. You may point me to the rivers as they go winding their tortuous courses to the sea. Wrong again. For away back of them all, are hidden forces which produce the heat, the cloud, and the wind, which are necessary to the existence of all rivers.

You may point again to animal existence, and say, "Certainly there is perpetual motion." Still wrong. The same laws and forces which produce and feed the great rivers are back of all animal life, doing the same for it. Man, the last and noblest creation of God, is no exception in this case; he is no more of a perpetual motion than a wagon wheel, or a steam engine. The motion of his lungs in breathing and the palpitating of his heart in the flow of blood, are as much the result of outward forces, as the sustenance of his life by eating and drinking. We may examine the forces of nature in all their different avenues as applied to the heavens, earth, animal and vegetable life, and we will find no precedent for perpetual motion. The reader may then ask, Why cannot there be such a motion? The reason is plain and simple. All forces or laws of nature governing motion are equally balanced, that is, they exert the same power against motion that they do in favor of it. This being true it will be seen at once that all friction will be in favor of the latter, or against motion. It is true then that there can be no motion at all unless an outside power is applied to overcome friction. To make this plain I will illustrate. Suppose a large stone is placed upon the ice, and it is of such a size that it will require a force of five pounds to move it either way. Ropes are attached to the two opposite sides and two boys of equal strength pull their utmost at these ropes. Will the stone move? Certainly not. Why? The two forces are equal, with the five pounds friction against it going either way. If the stone moves at all an outside force greater than the amount of friction must be employed. The boys cannot give this, for they are both doing their utmost. They may pull a lifetime under these conditions and the stone will not move.

Again, you may build a wheel and place it in a position for motion and to it will be subject this same equality of force. The downward pressure of gravitation is exercised equally on both sides of the axle, and if there is any motion at all it must be from some outside power. Your wheel may be so perfect in construction that the weight of a hair may start or stop it, and yet it will be the same. This balancing of nature's forces cannot possibly be destroyed. It is as fixed and firm as the fact that water finds its level, or air seeks its equilibrium. To prove the truth of this, I will illustrate again, by supposing that the wheel referred to above is similar to a wagon wheel though hub and felloes need not be so large. It must be well balanced. The spokes must be hollow and in these must be placed leaden balls of such a size that they may roll freely from one end of the spoke to the other, as the wheel moves around. It may be supposed that these balls rolling into the hub on the one side and out on the other would cause the wheel to move perpetually. But will they? A person who has never tried the experiment may say yes. They will not. The wheel may move till it reaches a balance and there it will stop. What is the reason it will not move? You will observe that the balls on the one side will not roll in to the hub until the spokes get a certain distance above a horizontal line; and on the other, they do not roll out until the spokes get an equal distance below a horizontal line, this throws the wheel on a balance and it will stop. This may disappoint the ardent hopes of the experimenter, but it leaves old nature still herself.

As has already been stated, the great obstacle to perpetual motion is friction — friction of axles and air. And as nature's forces are equal or balanced, it can readily be seen that to start it, man must create power; something he never can do. But says one, I will not try to create power, I will just arrange or construct my machine so that one side of the wheel may have greater force than the other. Thou simpleton, can you not see that if you build a machine for that purpose, it will be subject to the same conditions governing the original one? That is, you would have to build a third one to destroy the friction of the second, and the third would necessitate a fourth and so on ad infinitum. It makes no difference what kind of a machine or contrivance you build; how simple or how complicated, it will be subject to these fixed and immutable conditions.

I will say in conclusion and to sum the whole matter up and put it in a nutshell, whenever a man can from seventy-five cents make a dollar, or three quarts of water fill a gallon measure, or nine inches make a foot, he can start perpetual motion, and not till then can he do it. And it is just as reasonable, consistent, and profitable for him to attempt the one as the other. I trust that there are none of the Saints to whom these remarks will be applicable; but should there be, I will say, "Do give it up," and instead of seeking perpetual motion, devote your time and means to the work of pointing fallen man to the way of perpetual life.

HAPPINESS.

How to obtain and retain the precious boon is the problem of problems. My eldest child, who is still a dutiful daughter, when quite small had a juvenile maxim,

"I am always happy,
When I mind my papa."

Her philosophical adage touched, swept, and fairly thrilled the sympathetic cords that led to my parental heart. If we are ever loyal, and obedient to, and abide in the light and smiles of our heavenly Parent, our joys will be multiplied and intensified, the delight of the infinite God will be promoted, and the peace and good will of the heavenly hosts will be accelerated and magnified.

On this stage of action the bars fall across the dial plate of time, but when the night is over and the clouds lift, the sun registers the true time. Our surroundings may, seemingly, momentarily retard the onward and upward march of the soul and thwart our good designs. These untoward circumstances and gloomy environments may, can, and of right ought to be met and surmounted. When, as mudsills, or flagstones beneath our feet, they are benign mercies in disguise. In that things of utility and beauty are the product of great labor, and mechanical skill and honest toil should be rewarded, pray tell me why in the realm of grace anyone expects something for little, or, worse still, nothing? Diamonds are hidden away in Africa's shining sands; gold is obtained from the deep gulches and mountain gorges; the walrus is a denizen of the deep; the polar bear sojourns in a high latitude; monkeys, apes, and baboons, as also other beasts, serpents, and insects innumerable live in the torrid zone, and abound in the tropics; but this pearl of great price—happiness—is down in the sapphire sea of the domestic circle. When the shrines and altars of home are neglected and the mercy seat of the household is forgotten in cold and dark oblivion; when the dying embers cast fitful and retreating shadows from the fast cooling hearthstone; misery is inevitable and despair the doom. Be, feel, and act lovable, and thou shall be loved by all that is loving, which includes an exalted standard of self-respect. Character cannot be secured from over the sea or fashionable watering places, nor yet in the halls of luxury, neither in the busy marts and fields of mankind. Deep sea diving brings up the trophies of the brine, and far beneath the surface of the earth the rich ores are stored away.

The need of money leads man into the subterranean caverns of the earth; across the raging main; out into the fields of the plain; away to the forests and the quarries, and, behold! this restless pilgrim utilizes the water, atmosphere, electricity, and the sunbeams, all for his convenience, and to promote the pleasures and comforts of those nearest and dearest to his heart; and, forsooth! it is praiseworthy service.

In happyfying others you receive a double benefit and a rich reward. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," but the selfish majority prefer to take. The sum total of our joys are largely found at the loom of industry or within the workshops or fields where the dinner horn can be easily heard. No avaricious person can enjoy his possessions; for the more he gets the more he wants.

I heard the other day of some old rich bachelors who own hundreds and perhaps a thousand or more acres of good land near here, who have been known to wear shirts made from the old coarse sacks that had held the bone dust used to fertilize the soil.

The ambition of Alexander and the mighty Cæsars, the glory and power of Charlemagne, and the great achievements of Napoleon Bonaparte left misery desolation behind.

When disasters are appalling and conquest and carnage, the red hand of war, and the black pall of death are on the land, history piles up, but in seasons of peace and plenty and in times of health and prosperity, everything runs so uniform and regular that naught scarcely invites his facile pen. Fire and sword, strikes and arson, assignments and failures, infidelity and depravity, and the like, are all chronicled and blown broadcast. The domestic leaven that brings peace is as silent as the stars, as constant as the magnetic needle, as cheering as the sunbeams, and as aromatic as India's spicy groves; hence it is a house-plant, a faithful warden, and a tree of life. So when the family of God will be complete it will be the scepter, robe, palm, miter, and crown. Pleasure and pain, bitter and sweet, light and darkness, love and passion, thorns and flowers, nutritious food and death dealing poisons are so very minutely related and often mingle and mix in such an adroit manner, that, behold! we need the wisdom and grace, the guiding, directing, protecting hand of Omnipotence in order to sail our frail barks on the jasper sea and safely to anchor in the harbor.

In contradistinction and juxtaposition to, "Let no man deceive" himself, and "Be not deceived" we are admonished to "Rejoice evermore;" to "prove all," and "overcome evil with good." If light and truth cannot and will not gain the ascendancy and "hold the fort," I am in midocean on a thawing iceberg.

One eternal truth is stronger than a thousand ephemeral falsehoods, though the latter may apparently run well for a season. The devotees of error and ignorance may eke out a brief sojourn on the poppy leaves of tradition and superstition, but, forsooth! the anointed of God will be blessed in time, cheered in death, and saved in eternity, and that too with a fullness of pleasures forevermore.

I love the people too much to teach them wrong, and thereby fill my soul with remorse. I would not purposely advocate and practice or give sympathy and support to any principle that would belittle and degrade myself, my family, or my neighbor, but the rather seek to advance all that are influenced by my integrity and deportment. To acquaint yourself with evil, in order to avoid its gins, and snares, and pitfalls, and its very appearance, is meritorious. To seek the good in order to love it, embrace, and adhere to it, is the imperative duty and pleasing service of man. Do not tarry in the light of the glow-worm, the firefly, foxfire, or the aurora, when you can bask in the light of God and warm by the rays of the Son of Righteousness. A rich heritage this, where we can go onward and upward, even amid unmantled cities, devastated fields, and when war, pestilence, and famine fairly revel in the halls of death. It has been said that the darkest hour is just before day, and the hotter the battle the sooner peace; so universal commotion harbingers the dawn of peace, and the day of redemption.

All who love "the law of kindness, and adhere to the perfect law of liberty," and faithfully, willingly, intelligently, ardently, reverently, and persistently abide in the law of the Spirit of life," can think, say, and realize with the ancient worthies that naught can separate us from the love of God. I believe the unerring Spirit of inspiration said: "Happy is the man whose God is the Lord." If the infinite, independent, all-wise and eternal One is pleased, and actually delighted to promote the welfare of his creations and creatures; to seek and to save the lost ones; to redeem the redeemable, and to everlastingly glorify his submissive children;—what manner of persons ought we all to be? All doctrinal truths and gospel obligations are intended to benefit us here now, henceforth, and forevermore. The yoke is easy, the burden light, the aim, object, and end is rest to the soul; therefore we should "gladly receive the word."

We should be as willing to repent and make reparation, as we are to eat and go to the celebration. The hardy sons of toil with frugal board and scanty fare, behold the pleasure seekers, all untrammled, go abroad with pomp, and pride, and pelf. With sun-tanned skin and weary frames they murmur at the contrast. Honest labor is rewarded with at least the common comforts and necessities of life, while health and sweet content crown the scene. The voyager returns with his head full of wonders and his mind stored with society matters. By and by the most exciting drama ceases to enchant his morbid soul and all that is left his cloyed, foundered, and sickened self is "to travel the morphine route." Like the boy he had eaten all the sugar that was good, so he now takes a fatal leap into the dark. The Lycurgus and Solon elements have met in the rural seminaries of learning to discuss before rustic judges wherein was the greater amount of pleasure; viz., "in pursuit or possession?" Really the two above conditions are but parts of the whole, and cannot, in justice, be two questions. Let a person have all of one in the complete absence of the other, and sure! there is no joy whatever in it. The sooner we learn that the straight and narrow and rugged path of duty is the way of peace and the road to glory, and the quicker we put our knowledge in practice, the better it will be for all concerned. May we as a people, both collectively and individually, strike off the shackles, remove the barnacles, and cast away our ponderous sins, and run with patience, and swift delight, the race for life set before us so as to secure awards and renown.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Conference convened in district tent at Huntsville, Missouri, June 20, at ten a. m.; J. A. Tanner president, Louise Palfrey secretary. Reports were read from the following: Elders J. R. Lambert, M. M. Turpen, J. A. Tanner, W. J. Vaughan, J. T. Williams, R. R. Jones, D. F. Richards, W. H. Vincent, C. Perry; Priests G. O. Adkins, D. Edmonds, F. T. Mussel, J. Waltenbaugh; Teachers G. Thorburn, J. T. Richards. Branches reporting: Bevier 151, Higbee 79, Huntsville 6, Pollock 16, Missouri River 32. Bishop's agent's report: Received $69; paid out $65.70. The following resolution was passed: "Resolved, that hereafter the branches of this district be restricted from ordaining anyone to the Aaronic priesthood without the sanction of this district's conference, or in case of emergency, the district president and missionary in charge." Resolutions of condolence to the family of Ephraim Rowland were adopted. Election of officers resulted in J. A. Tanner for district president and Louise Palfrey district secretary and treasurer. The next conference will meet at Salt River, Missouri, at the call of the president. The speakers were Brn. J. R. Lambert, M. M. Turpen, T. W. Chatburn, and J. A. Tanner. The choir, under the efficient leadership of Bro. W. J. Richards, realized the possibilities of music in spiritual work, and did their share, fully, towards making conference successful. Bro. Lambert's visit, anxiously anticipated, was a rare treat, and it is hoped that his wise advice took root and will be the means of directing to better things. The presence of our missionaries, Brn. T. W. Chatburn and M. M. Turpen, was appreciated, and infused life and cheer into the sessions. The Huntsville Saints are more than entitled to the vote of thanks that was tendered them for their unselfish kindness and effort in providing for the visitors, and on the whole the attendance was very good, and the conference marked by considerable spirituality.

NODAWAY.

Conference convened at Union church, the fourth Saturday and Sunday in June; M. P. Madison president, J. N. Byergo secretary, E. Fannon assistant. Reports were presented and accepted from Pleasant View and Rising Hope branches. Platte and Sweet Home were sent back for correction. Elders reporting: H. Kemp, J. Hawley, W. Woodhead, R. K. Ross, J. T. Ford, C. C. Nelson, E. S. Fannon, and M. P. Madison; Priests J. N. Byergo, A. Jenson, and Bro. Jeffers. Teachers J. Nelson, A. Madison, and Bro. Lane; Deacon Bro. Torrence. All officers of the district were sustained. Adjourned to meet at Guilford, October 16, 17, and 18.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Conference convened at Fergus Falls, June 20, at two p. m.; Henry Way president, T. J. Martin secretary pro tem., I. N. Roberts assistant. Branch reports: Oak Lake 72; loss 1. Audubon 25; gain 2. Union 85; gain 4. Central 14; loss 1. Minneapolis 46; no change. Ministry reporting: Elders H. Way, E. A. Stedman, I. N. Roberts, W. Barnhard, T. J. Martin, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley; Priests W. W. McLeod and F. Y. Barnes; Teacher M. O. Erickson; Deacon M. L. Hawley. Report of W. W. McLeod, Bishop's agent: Received previous to March 1, 1896, $333.35; paid to Bishop, $333.35; received since March 1, $3. Report of reunion committee: Received $113.75; paid out $118.30; due committee $4.55. I. N. Roberts, chairman. The report was accepted, the committee discharged, and a collection was then taken up, realizing $4.55, the amount due committee. Voted that W. W. McLeod, G. L. Jones, and W. W. Gould be a committee to arrange program and perfect other necessary arrangements for this reunion. Voted that W. W. McLeod be a committee to take charge of tent and other church property. Voted that on Sunday, June 28, this tent be dedicated for mission work. I. N. Roberts was elected district president, G. L. Jones was sustained secretary, and W. W. McLeod was sustained Bishop's agent for the ensuing year. The president and secretary of this district were instructed to make out and sign credentials to any one of the brethren who shall attend the General Conference at Lamoni, April 6, 1897. Voted that this body appoint a committee of three to locate place and set time for the fall conference. I. N. Roberts, T. J. Martin, and Joseph Elliott were appointed. Preaching by Elders I. N. Roberts, E. A. Stedman, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley. Three children were blessed. At the close of the meetings (June 28) the following resolution was presented and adopted: That inasmuch as during the ten days spent here we have received nothing but kind treatment and many marks of personal regard, we desire to have the same go on record. Therefore, be it resolved that a vote of thanks be tendered to the citizens of Fergus Falls for their many acts of kindness, and that the same be published in the Fergus Falls Journal and also entered on our district records.

Sunday School Associations.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Association convened in Educational League Hall, No. 54 Main Street, Brockton, Massachusetts, May 9, at 7:45 p. m.; superintendent, E. H. Fisher. Reports from superintendent and assistant read and received. Statistical reports from Boston, North Plymouth, Fall River, Haverhill, Providence, Plainville, Little Compton, Brockton, and Woodville, read and referred to a committee of two, F. Orin Coombs and M. C. Fisher. The committee reported three incorrect, which were ordered back for correction. Treasurer's report read and referred to the above committee, audited, and found correct. E. H. Fisher and F. Orrin Coombs elected superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, for the ensuing year, and Ora V. Holmes secretary and treasurer. Voted next convention meet in Plainville, November 14 and 15. Voted the secretary be authorized to pay the indebtedness of this convention. Sunday morning: Devotional exercises. Opening address, M. C. Fisher. Class drill and discussion on "Teaching and Teachers," F. Orin Coombs. Voted we request the manuscript of the opening address for publication. At 2:30 p. m., Solo, Ora V. Holmes. Piano solo, Mr. Littlefield. Essay, Life of Moses, Master Frank Dobbin. Duet, Messrs. Hoxie and Coombs. Teachers' training class, followed by discussion under the direction of Daniel T. Shaw. Voted this convention recommend the organization of teachers' meetings to every school in the district. At 7:30 p. m., Trio, Messrs. Hoxie, Littlefield, and Clark. Vocal solo, Ora V. Holmes. Lecture, Ancient America, illustrated by stereopticon views, F. M. Sheehy. Points of interest regarding trepanning the skull, Dr. John Gilbert. Violin solo, John Hoxie. Benediction, F. M. Sheehy.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Ohio district Sunday school convention will convene at Vale's Mills, Vinton County, on Friday, September 11, at 9:30 a. m. We trust there will be a good representation from all the schools in the district. Let those that can, prepare essays on teaching, and the best method to pursue in Sunday school work. Bring your Winnowed Songs, and Quarterlies with you, and let each strive to make the convention a success. There will be some important business to attend to. I desire to be with you, if at all practicable; but if not, let the good work go on; I will report. Be sure and come on Thursday, the 10th. Get off at Radcliff, C. H. V. & T. Railway. H. E. MOLER, Supt.

Miscellaneous Department.

REUNION NOTICES.

BLUFF PARK GENERAL REUNION.

The General Conference of 1896 decided to hold a semicentennial reunion at or near Bluff Park, Iowa, and appointed a committee to make arrangements. The committee now announces that said reunion will be held at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, beginning August 21, and continuing until September 1, 1896, to which all are invited. This camp ground is located on a high and airy bluff on the banks of the Mississippi River opposite and overlooking the "city of beauty," Nauvoo, around which cluster so many memories hallowed by trials of the past. There is quite a village of nice cottages, a large, well-seated tabernacle for meetings, and an artesian well, springs, and cisterns to supply water, and ample room for tents. In fact, there is no place in this part of the country that possesses so many advantages, conveniences, and attractions.

The committee has agreed on the following named subcommittees to help in carrying to a successful completion this reunion: On grounds, cottages, and tents, James McKiernan and Daniel Tripp. Finance, E. L. Kelley, F. G. Pitt, J. S. Roth, and William Anderson, with authority to appoint assistants as they deem wise. On railroad rates, E. L. Kelley and R. S. Salyards. On music, F. G. Pitt and Alma Whitehouse. On speakers, Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley. On advertising in Herald, Ensign, and circulars, J. R. Lambert: in local papers, James McKiernan. On Sunday school work, F. M. Weld, James McKiernan, Sr. Whitehead, and T. A. Hougas.

There will be hay, straw, and wood on the ground for sale, and provisions of all kinds can be ordered from merchants in town and will be delivered at cottage or tent.

All those—who have not already done so—wanting to rent cottages, write to Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, inclosing a couple of stamps for reply and state about the size or kind and rate you are willing to pay. The price ranges from $1.50 (unfurnished) to $5 (furnished), and one room to four rooms. Also state whether or not you will take a tent and what size you want if you can't get a cottage, as the number of cottages are limited, and a number already engaged.

There is a boarding house on the ground where meals will be served to regular boarders for $3.50 per week. Transient 25 cents each for supper and breakfast, 35 cents for dinner. The boarding house is in the hands of the ladies of the M. E. Church, of Montrose. Those wishing lodgings at the lodging house must bring sheet and pillow slip and towel.

Room, cot, springs, pillow, mattress, and blanket will be furnished, at 15 cents per night or $1.25 for the ten days. Those wanting tents only or lodging only, write at once including stamps to James McKiernan, Box 225, Farmington, Iowa, so we will know how many tents to order. We will furnish the tents at as low a rate as practical. Terms on tents will appear as soon as we can ascertain something near the number wanted, as the price will depend somewhat on the number rented. Those who bring their own tents will be furnished ground free.

We are late in making these announcements, but accident and unforeseen difficulties and delays have made it impracticable to get a full understanding sooner, and we did not want to announce until we were sure of the arrangements.

Yours respectfully,

JAMES MCKIERNAN,
Chairman of Committee.

Those interested in the Northwestern Kansas reunion, and knowing themselves to be members of the reunion society, please forward or come prepared to settle annual dues, as we shall need financial aid.

MRS. MARY SMITH, Treas.

N. W. K. Reunion Society.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas.

The Fremont and Pottawattamie district reunion will be held at Thurman, Iowa, commencing Friday, August 21, and will continue over Sunday, August 30. Every effort is being put forth to make this a success. Let no one who can possibly come fail to attend.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

The fifth annual reunion of Northwestern Kansas district will convene August 20, continuing over two Sabbaths, at Goshen, Kansas, ten miles south and one mile east of Linn, Kansas, in George Gray's grove. Cook stoves, wood, and straw free on ground for those who come to camp. We cordially invite all to come, and especially those of Nebraska and Eastern Kansas districts, as we have met with some of them on like occasions in times past, and shall be glad to see them again. We request all the Saints of our own district (who possibly can) to be present, and pray God's blessings upon all that are willing to sacrifice time and means to build up and sustain the cause of Christ in these parts.

We expect Bro. H. A. Stebbins and E. L. Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, and all those who are appointed to labor in Northwestern Kansas on that occasion. Come one, come all, and let us have a time of rejoicing together.

All those wishing to come by rail can write Bro. C. D. Carson, Fact, Kansas, and he will provide a way out to the camp ground. Clay Center, Linn, or Morganville are the near points.

ZELONA SMITH, Clay, Kansas,

WM. LANDERS, Concordia, Kansas,

Committee.

P. S.—Those receiving posters will please post the same in public places and oblige the committee.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

CORRECTION.

Instead of November 20, 1896, the Western Texas district conference will meet at Pipe Creek schoolhouse in Bandera county, Texas, October 23, 1896, to continue over Sunday. W. H. DAVENPORT, Sec.

Conference of the Eastern Iowa district will meet at Fulton, Jackson County, Iowa, August 22 and 23; Sunday school convention August 21. Let all the ministry and every branch of the district send reports to John Heide, at Fulton. All are invited to come and encourage the work in this district by their presence. WILLARD W. BEAL, Sec.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

As provided for by the district conference, two-day meetings will be held in the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district as follows: August 8 and 9, Flint, Indiana. August 15 and 16, South Scott, Indiana. August 22 and 23, Clear Lake, Indiana. August 29 and 30, Coldwater, Michigan. September 5 and 6, Dimondale, Michigan. September 12 and 13, Charlotte, Michigan. October 3 and 4, Nicholasville, Michigan. October 10 and 11, Hartford, Michigan. October 17 and 18, Buchanan, Michigan. October 24 and 25, Knox, Indiana. California and Troy will be provided for later on. Brn. L. F. Daniel and H. H. Robinson will take charge largely of these services. Will presidents of branches see to it, that the dates be submitted to the county papers and all necessary preliminaries arranged for.

Awake ye slumbering nations
Who've slept a long night.

Clap shining cymbals of truth till the tree tops tremble and all the stellar orbs twinkle a response. S. W. L. SCOTT, Pres.

MASSACHUSETTS AND PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT NOTICE.

Everything to be sent to the Massachusetts district reunion should be sent to Poquonnoc Bridge. Express, freight, or mail. There is another Poquonnoc in Connecticut.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT REUNION.

Friday, July 10. An organization was effected by electing Elder H. L. Holt to preside and William M. Gibson to assist, with other necessary officers and rules, after which short and instructive speeches were made by president and others. The eight p. m. sermon was by H. L. Holt, from the text, "What is truth?" Various ideas in the social and political world are presented as truth, but do not bear the test. So in religious matters. The Latter Day Saints claim to have "the truth." This claim must be practically tested. All truth is susceptible of demonstration. Reward and happiness come from having the truth in fact, not in belief only. Men will be rewarded for what they do, not for what they believe. All truth is of God, and is elevating. The Bible alone is not a sufficient guide. Anciently truth was known by revelation. God is unchangeable, hence the same to-day. The knowledge, "Thou art the Christ," was received by revelation.

Saturday, the 11th. Preaching by A. Carmichael at 2:30 p. m. Text, "Let us go on to perfection." A timely and lucid explanation of the relations existing between the officers of the church and the laity. The evening sermon was by W. P. Pickering; text, "Search the scriptures," showing the necessity of studying and obeying the written word. Christ's words shall judge men in the last day.

Sunday, eleven a. m., the sermon was by Elder Charles Baly, Bishop's agent. God is watching over us and we are under obligations to him in all things. Every law of God will bring good to man if obeyed. All things that pertain to our prosperity are because of our obedience to God's law. No man is his own master, but is subject to law. Partial obedience to law is not sufficient. Obedience to law does not bring servitude. Law should be respected and obeyed until repealed. There is no room for laziness in God's kingdom; all must work. The sermon was an able exposition of the duties of Saints as to the law of tithing. In the afternoon Elder H. L. Holt, by agreement, continued the morning subject. The law of tithing is of great importance. It is a part of the gospel. Obedience to the first principles are necessary but not sufficient. The peculiar systems of raising means to carry on church work in the Christian world are not in harmony with God's law. God's work is not to be left to a system of begging; but is governed by a law, or system of order. The speaker showed that the system of tithes and offerings governed in ancient times. This law was a part of the gospel economy four hundred years before Moses, and was taught thirty years after Christ. The sermon was a very forceful exposition of the duties of Saints in temporal things. At eight p. m. the sermon was by Elder Holt. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." The Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants are the only three religious books in existence, the truth of which is susceptible of practical demonstration. The sermon was full of good points.

Monday the 13th. Preaching by Elder Wm. M. Gibson at 2:30 p. m. Text, Not many after the flesh are called, etc. Man's ways are not God's ways. In every dispensation God calls the humble and lowly of earth to do his work. Afternoon sermon was by Elder D. L. Harris. Text, Ephesian 2:8, 9; Philippians 2:12; Acts 16:33. In these texts salvation is predicated on three propositions. The speaker showed the inconsistency of expecting salvation by faith without works. Salvation is predicated on works as embodied in obedience to the gospel.

Tuesday, the 14th. The 2:30 p. m. session was given to the Sunday school association. After business session a short but interesting program was rendered consisting of songs, papers, and short speeches, and considerable interest in Sunday school work was manifested. At eight p. m., preaching by H. L.

Holt. Text, "He that believeth in God hath the witness in himself." It is a grand thing to be right, and a good thing to know we are right. Possession of a spirit that makes one feel happy is not conclusive evidence that we are right. The Holy Spirit reveals a knowledge of the truth; reveals the things of God. If you are within the church of God you are entitled to know these things. Saul acted in all good conscience, but was wrong. The Holy Spirit shall guide you into all truth. The Spirit of truth does not teach two men differently.

The morning prayer meetings have been very enjoyable; the peaceful influence of the Spirit in testimonies, exhortations, admonitions, warnings, and prophecy was present to a marked degree. Bro. Luff has not yet put in his appearance, which causes a feeling of disappointment in the minds of the Saints; but notwithstanding this, and the fact that the attendance is not quite so large as last year, the Saints are enjoying themselves as only Saints of God can. More anon.

BORN.

COCHRANE.—Lucy Gertrude, born to Bro. Byron and Sr. M. L. Cochrane, July 26, 1893, at Stockville, Frontier County, Nebraska. Gracie Ethel, Born August 3, 1895, at Stockville, Nebraska. Both blessed at Stockville, July 13, 1896, by Elder G. W. Johnson.

DIED.

GARNER.—At Malaga, Fresno County, California, July 9, 1896, Althea Eudora, infant daughter of Daniel and Mary Cazaly Garner. She was born June 22, 1896.

Seven and ten days passed so sweetly
With white-winged thoughts of purest love,
With arms encircling, bosom swelling,
Kindling hope of joys above.

But alas! how soon, how fleeting;
Are the home joys borne away;
Only come with heartfelt greeting,
Then are called from earth away.

Flowers? Yes, oleander blossoms,
Waxen white, so pure and sweet;
Smilax green, the dainty runner
With the rose, have come to meet.

And sweet clysium, folded gently,
To the hands of purest mould,
On the breast of our dear loved one,
Who was dear, much more than gold.

The resting place where flowers are blooming,
And shades of umbrella trees,
Were where we layed our darling loved one,
In the morning's fragrant breeze.

Unto God who is most holy,
Purest love so meek and mild,
We have given up our treasure,
Which to us was a sweet child.

AGAN.—At Allegan, Michigan, June 29, 1896, Sr. Harriet A. Agan, aged 72 years, 7 months, and 19 days. She was born in Herkimer County, New York, in 1824, and united with the church December 22, 1842. She and her husband, Bro. Ira Agan, united with the Reorganized Church in Michigan in 1862. Both remained faithful unto death. He died November 3, 1894. For many years they lived in the Fox River branch, near Plano, Illinois, and were well known by the elders and Saints in the times of activity in that region.

TOBACCO HABIT CURED

NO CURE NO PAY.

BRO. B. F. ORDWAY,

OF PEORIA, ILLINOIS,

Who is making and selling a Tobacco Antidote called QUIT-TO-BAC, sends us the following letter to show what good work the remedy is doing.

The regular Price of Quit-To-bac is $1.00 per box, or three boxes $2.50, postpaid anywhere, with written guarantee to cure or money refunded.

Bro. Ordway wishes us to say that for a time he will send one box for 75 cts. or three boxes for $1.50 with guarantee, postpaid to any place where he has no agent to anyone who if cured will agree to act as agent or try and get an agent.

Bro. H. C. Sharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes April 23, 1896:—

"Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco. It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured. . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, color, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Bacco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Bacco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Bacco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Bacco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Bacco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,

P. H. MARBURY.

Pastor C. P. Church, Clayton, Ark.

Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per box; three boxes, (thirty days' treatment), $2.50 with iron-clad, written guarantee, or sent direct upon receipt of price. Write for booklet and proofs. Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis., and Boston, Mass.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

- Paper covers 35
- Muslin binding..... 59

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SEER OF PALMYRA AND SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

- In plain limp cloth, cut flush... 25 cts.
- Full cloth, durable binding... 35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

NOTES OF RECENT DISCOVERIES— AMERICAN ARCHÆOLOGY.

WHILE the course of study was confined to the so-called "Old World," the notes necessarily pertained to the discoveries in the countries under discussion. With the present number, however, we approach American shores, and turn toward our own historic problems.

The American continent is not newly born. The snow-capped peaks of our mountains were kissed by the rising sun, as early as the white crowns of the Himalayas. Our rivers were flowing to the sea, while the Euphrates was wending its way through the unbroken valleys of Babylonia.

The virgin forests were teeming with life, and the gigantic mastodon roamed at will, from the valley of the St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico, while the great musk-ox went as far south as the confluence of the Ohio and the Mississippi Rivers. The reindeer is also found in a fossil state in New Jersey and Kentucky, as well as upon the frozen cliffs of Alaska.

The Great Irish elk was the monarch of his tribe, but a specimen which rivaled him in height of stature, and spread of horn, was disinterred at Waukegan, Illinois, and at last destroyed in the Chicago fire. There was also a large horse on the Pacific Coast and in the Southern States, while a smaller animal of the same species roamed the wide plains and yet when this country was discovered the horse had so long disappeared, that the Indians had no tradition of his existence.

The cave-lion appears to have been of the age of the mammoth, and to have disappeared at about the same time, while in this country, the Felis Atrox Leidy, larger than the existing lions, roamed along the Gulf Coast, and another feline animal frequented the coast of Texas which rivaled in size the Bengal tiger.

AN EARLY RACE.

There were men as well as animals before the beginning of authentic American history, and man, the marauder, has probably been an active agent in the destruction of many forms of life.

Whether these people were the ancestors of the Indians of to-day as Prof. Powell claims, or whether they belonged to another race, as some suppose, it is not within the province of this department to inquire. Certain it is, that they were the builders of earth works, of stone works, and were the occupants of cave dwellings. They had implements and ornaments, and other minor vestiges of art. There were different tribes also of these early peoples, and these tribes bore about the same relation to each other as did the Indian tribes inhabiting this country, when first visited by Europeans.

Each tribe adopted different methods of burial, and it is possible that cremation was sometimes practiced. In some of the southern districts, it appears to have been the custom to erect dwellings on low mounds constructed for the purpose, and when deaths occurred, to bury the remains in the floor, burn the houses, and heap mounds over them before they were entirely consumed. The houses appear to have been constructed of upright posts, set in the ground, lathed with cane or twigs, and plastered with clay, having the roofs thatched like those described by the early French explorers. Some of the mounds were elongated, some were constructed in circles or squares.

The were octagons, gateways, and parallel roads, sometimes extending over an area of several square miles. These mounds were after constructed in the form of animals, men and birds, beast and fishes, being represented in the outlines. Sometimes a single mound would be thus shaped, and sometimes the outline would be formed by a succession of mounds like the turtle figure in Hughes County, South Dakota.

AGRICULTURISTS.

That some of these tribes cultivated the soil is evident, for the prints of corn cobs are found upon their clay vessels, and there are lumps of clay bearing the impress of the ears. It is also true that charred cobs, ears, and grains have been repeatedly found, and that, too, in the mounds and pits, which appear to have been the work of the "veritable mound builders."

They must have raised tobacco also, as well as maize, for the supply of "prehistoric pipes" is very large and varied. Some of these are quite modern in appearance, and others are in the form of animals.

MINERALS.

They must have mined copper to a certain extent, many copper articles having been found. Bracelets were sometimes made of copper roughly hammered, while those of another class are made of sheet copper, by first forming a cylinder of required size, and then bending it to proper shape.

Sometimes they were made as in the illustration, of copper beads alternated with shells.

Articles of silver have also been found, although their age is quite uncertain, and they may belong to the class of intrusive burials. In a large mound at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, there were found fragments of blankets and clothing, various articles of copper, and ten silver bracelets similar to the one shown in the illustration.

A GIGANTIC INDIAN.

Egypt, with her careful art of preservation, has a rival in the natural resources of California, and near San Diego has been found a veritable mummy.

This is the wonderfully preserved body of a gigantic Indian, who must have been about nine feet tall. This calculation makes allowance for the shrinkage, which may be pretty closely calculated.

There can be no mistake about the accuracy of the measurements as they were taken by Professor Thomas Wilson, curator of the department of Prehistoric Anthropology in the Smithsonian Institution, and also by other scientists. The tape line, even now, shows the length from the heel to the top of the head, to be eight feet and four inches.

The mummy is evidently that of an Indian, and is probably prehistoric, although its age cannot be determined with any degree of accuracy. The historical records of California go back about two hundred and fifty years, but they make no mention of any man, or race of men, of gigantic stature.

Its preservation, in that arid region, is scarcely a matter of surprise, the atmospheric conditions being such that a body buried in the dry season may become perfectly dessicated before the arrival of the rains, and thus be rendered permanently proof against decay.

The body was found in a cave by a party of prospectors. Over the head are the remnants of a leather hood, and the man was evidently well advanced in years.

A PREHISTORIC BATTLE FIELD.

An interesting field for the archæologist has been found in the Indian Territory, a little south of the Arkansas River, and near Redland station. At this point the Kansas City, Pittsburg, and Gulf Railroad enters and passes through a deep cut about sixty rods in length. In the process of excavation here the graders uncovered tons of human bones and barrels of pottery. It is estimated that not less than one hundred thousand human bodies have here been laid within an area of about fifty acres.

WERE THEY OF THE EGYPTIAN TYPE?

The skulls found here are unusually long and narrow, the forehead retreating, the top and back head being proportionally large. The cranial sutures are fine, sometimes almost imperceptible. The measurements indicate a people of small stature. Although they were all adults, they could not have measured more than five feet, or five feet and some inches in height.

THEY WERE WARRIORS.

Only fighting men were buried here, and the skeletons, many of them are fragmentary, and sometimes the fragments of several different individuals are found in the same grave. Many show intentional mutilation, the limbs being bent back upon the trunk, so as to bring the feet and head together. Arrow points and spear heads are frequently found in the skeletons. One skull contained thirteen arrow points, and a fine agate spear head, four inches long, was taken from the spine of another skeleton. They were buried in great confusion, the heads being placed towards every point of compass.

WHO WERE THEY?

It can only be conjectured who they were, and conjectures would be out of place in this department. It has been supposed that they belonged to the Egypto-Maya race, which originated in Yucatan and Central America. The material of the arrow points and spear heads indicate that the battle was not fought by the typical mound builders, for they are formed of agate, obsidian, and other materials belonging to the far west.—Progress, Vol. 1, No. 10.

The Review of Reviews for August, while largely given over to the issues of the Presidential campaign, finds space for the treatment of other important topics. Besides the character sketch of Mr. Bryan, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, the Review has illustrated articles on Harriet Beecher Stowe and Dr. Barnardo, the father of "Nobody's Children." There is the usual elaborate résumé of the current magazines; and the departments of "the Progress of the World," "Record of Current Events," and "Current History in Caricature" answer the typical American demand for what is up to date and "live."

The August Arena contains the first of a series of "Bibliographies of Literature, Dealing with Vital, Social and Economic Problems," which will fill a want long felt by students of social and economic problems. This first Bibliography deals with the Land and the Land Question, and is carefully complied by Thos. E. Will, A.M., Professor of Political Economy in the Agricultural State College of Kansas.

IN ANSWER, CERTAINLY.

THE Searchlight, published by the Church of Christ (the Hedrickite Church, so-called), at Independence, Missouri, in its issue for July corrects its reference to Vol. 3, No. 1, of SAINTS' HERALD, from which the quotation upon which its argument against the Reorganized Church for believing Joseph Smith to have been a prophet to the time of his death was predicated, and upon which we asked for information in a late issue of HERALD, and now says "Vol. 1, No. 3."

There is a difference of two volumes and two numbers in the periodical, and of two years and three months in time between the two citations; and we are not expected to know what was intended by the writer, unless it is stated.

The Searchlight for July, page 43, after correcting its citation, continues:—

Now that we have corrected this typographical error, will the Herald kindly verify our quotation and then answer our questions contained in the article above referred to.

We have verified the quotation, from the citation for Vol. 1, No. 3, p. 64. Our answer will follow.

The article from which this quotation is taken will be found in the number of HERALD for March, 1860, published at Cincinnati, Ohio.

At the conference held at the house of Bro. Israel L. Rogers, near Sandwich, Illinois, October 6, 1859, it was resolved "that this church publish a monthly paper to be issued as soon as convenient;" also that William Marks, Z. H. Gurley, and William W. Blair should be appointed a publishing committee, and Isaac Sheen editor.

In accordance with this action material for filling the columns of the periodical was collected, articles and contributions to it were solicited, and the first number was issued in January, 1860.

The other articles in the March number of 1860 are signed, and the one from which the quotation is taken is not, from which it is presumed that it was an editorial, Bro. Isaac Sheen being the editor. The article itself is entitled, "The Early Revelations," and was written upon the occasion of a letter received from some one of the brethren giving an account of a conference "of members of the Church of J. C. of L. D. S., held in Woodford Co., Illinois, Dec. 22 to 25, 1859." The brother writing the letter did not claim that the conference was one held for the church, but was merely "of members of the church." At that conference "a resolution rejecting the second edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, claiming a want of sufficient proof in its Divine origin, was adopted."

This resolution of these "members of the Church of L. D. S.," held as stated, was the occasion for the writing of the article, "The Early Revelations," from which the quotation was taken.

The opening paragraph of that article gives the proposition in support of which the author of the article was to write; and, in the light of which all that follows after it was to be understood.

Now we propose to prove that all the revelations which Joseph gave unto the church, we are bound to "give heed unto." If the first edition of that book is divine, all the subsequent revelations which are contained in the Book of Covenants, in the Book of Abraham, &c., and which he gave unto the church, are equally divine. The first edition endorsed and recommended "all his words and commandments which he shall give unto you." We suppose that a revelation "given April 6th, 1830," will be sufficiently early, and its validity will not be disputed, but the fact is, that this is a revelation which was given on the identical and memorable day, when the church was organized with six members, and in it the Saints are commanded to give heed unto all his subsequent revelations.

The revelation upon which the argument of the article was based is found in the first edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, section 46, paragraph 2. It is section 19, of the present edition used by us. It is also found in Book of Commandments, section 22, paragraph 4, dated April 6, 1830.

Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory. For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good; and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard; yea, his weeping for Zion I have seen, and I will cause that he shall mourn for her no longer, for his days of rejoicing are come unto the remission of his sins, and the manifestations of my blessings upon his works.

The writer then propounds certain questions directing them,

To those brethren who reject all the revelations of Joseph, which were given within thirteen years preceding his death.

Some of these questions are,

Do you give heed unto all Joseph's "words and commandments," which he gave unto you? Do you obey this commandment of God which I have cited; viz.: that "his word ye shall receive as if from mine (God's) own mouth?" Do you believe that "by doing these things the gates of hell shall not prevail against you?" . . . If you do not believe in these things, you do not believe in this revelation, and if you had believed in this revelation, you would not have rejected the subsequent revelations which were given through Joseph to the church.

Then follows a statement of the writer that the revelation referred to and quoted from, taught why the "gates of hell" had prevailed against the church, and thick darkness had gathered about the sheep wandering as if without a shepherd, then the quotation which the Searchlight has presented with such gusto to prove that the Reorganized Church have vowed to believe "Every word that came from the mouth of Joseph Smith, even until the day of his death."

To this were added the words,

What will they do? They have plenty of Gods and if one fails they can call on another.

The quotation is,

If you "are determined to advocate and practice old fashioned Mormonism," as you say you are, you will have to give heed unto all Joseph's words and commandments, instead of rejecting all, except those that are contained in the first edition of the Book of Covenants, and even some of them.

We might leave the subject without another word of comment, for there is not a line in this quotation that is an avowal of belief in all the words of Joseph Smith in any sense, to say nothing of belief in those words and commandments which were given by him to the church, he having received them from God. But, this statement that the Reorganized Church was under obligation to accept and believe all that had been uttered by Joseph Smith, the first president of the church, has been so persistently and recklessly made both by those who attacked the work from the outside, and those who, like the publishers of the Searchlight, accept a part of his revelations to the church and reject a part, and those who fall out with the church and reject the Book of Doctrine and Covenants as a whole, that it may be well to state the position of the church in this regard, as we understand it, speaking for ourselves, as editors of the HERALD, and for the church as we understand the general attitude of the ministry on the point.

"Are we to understand by this request from the Herald that they do not now indorse and believe in all the words and commandments of Joseph Smith?"

Our request to the Searchlight was to ask them to inform us where the Reorganized Church ever made an avowal of such indorsement and belief. To our request the Searchlight goes back to an article written and published in HERALD for March, 1860, a month before the present Joseph Smith was connected with the church, and some three years before he had anything to do with the HERALD as its editor, and cites a statement made in support of the writer's proposition to prove that the church was bound to give heed unto the revelations which Joseph Smith received from God and gave unto the church, in accordance with the revelation cited and quoted, given in April, 1830, nearly three years before the Searchlight fixes the date of the falling of Joseph Smith as a prophet. There was no attempt to prove other position than that, and no claim to any other than that made in the article from which the quotation was made.

There was nothing in our request to the Searchlight that states a withdrawal from any position ever taken by the Reorganized Church, or that warrants the conclusion that the church has ever taken the position assumed in the question to which we are writing; whatever the Editor of the Searchlight may choose to understand from the question for information asked by us. We asked for information, and were met by a quotation twisted from its intended application.

We now distinctly state that the Reorganized Church has not at any time in private, or in public council, in quorum meeting, or joint quorum meeting, in special or in General Conference, or in any sort of official statement, in writing or otherwise, ever taken the position that the church or any members of it were under obligation to accept, indorse, believe, or be governed by all the words of Joseph Smith spoken or written.

The further question of the Searchlight on the point, referring to the Reorganized Church, is,

Have they revised their position regarding their claim that Joseph was a true prophet up to the day of his death?

We answer: The Reorganized Church has not revised the position taken that Joseph Smith stood as the leading presiding officer of the church organized in April, 1830, and was accepted by the people, the church, and indorsed and approved as a prophet by the Lord through the Spirit by prophecy, revelation, discernment, and the conferment of the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth upon those ministered to by him in laying on of hands; and in baptism in water for the remission of sins. That he was a prophet and accepted of God at the time of his death.

This does not involve the necessity of assuming the position that "all the words" of Joseph Smith were to be indorsed and taken as the "words and commands of God," no matter what those words were, how, when, or upon what occasion those words were uttered, or written. Not having at any time taken such position just referred to the Reorganized Church has had no necessity to revise it, nor is it under necessity now, either to avow or disavow it.

The Searchlight proceeds, and says:—

Mr. Hedrick, who was the author of the article, published it in 1864, is now dead, and his statement of their belief has gone unchallenged for over thirty years.

The pith of the foregoing statement would seem to be, that, because Mr. Granville Hedrick chose to assume the privilege to make a false statement about the faith, or belief of the Reorganized Church thirty years ago, and no one saw fit to pay any attention to it, therefore to revive it now makes the false statement true. The statement was false in 1864 when it was made and is false now; no such avowal of belief has ever been made by the church, and the statement that it had would not be true if Mr. Hedrick had been dead a hundred years instead of thirty.

Neither Mr. Hedrick in 1864 was, nor the Searchlight in 1896, is authorized to state the belief of the Reorganized Church.

The HERALD editor has been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1860, and from that date has been closely identified with the controversies among the elders, and with the council considerations of those called and acting in the various public offices of the church, and knows that during all the time since April, 1860, a careful scrutiny and studied steadiness of purpose have been maintained by all the leading minds to prevent the church being compromised by theories only, and the unauthorized statements of men. Legendary teachings and traditional philosophies of the elders may be good in their way; and some of them may be correct in themselves; but as belief or unbelief in them can neither save nor damn, the elders of the Reorganized Church have been careful to take them and give them for what they might be worth; and belief or unbelief in them has been left to the personal privilege of the elder, and member, the church not being compromised by them.

The Church of Christ, for which the Searchlight is supposed to stand, hardly gives the eldership of the Reorganized Church credit for the modicum of good sense it is entitled to, when that journal in its desire to compromise the eldership in the theory of a plurality of gods; which Mr. Granville Hedrick was disposed to dispute; presumes to state that the Reorganized Church has avowed its belief in "all the words of Joseph Smith," and is for that reason under obligation to avow and defend the dogma, asking the question,

Will the Herald defend this doctrine of plurality of gods as a plank in the platform of their faith?

To which we answer, Certainly we will, when it is placed in the platform of faith by the church. Until then, we are not under obligation to so defend. When that doctrine, or theory is made a part of the faith of the church, we shall be ready to maintain it, or to take defeat in attempting to do so should we fail.

The Searchlight states that the doctrine was "publicly proclaimed in Nauvoo, by Joseph Smith," and that he emphasized "his sermon by telling his audience that he spoke as one having authority."

The Searchlight goes further and speculates on this statement of its own, thus:—

He based his ideas doubtless on the Book of Abraham which was claimed to have been translated by virtue of his powers as a translator.

We venture now to suggest that the Searchlight has done what some others have done—taken a short extract of what is called the King Follett sermon, said to have been the last one preached by Joseph Smith, and which occupied some two hours and a quarter in its delivery, which extract can be read in fifteen minutes, and which was published after Joseph Smith's death, as the official declaration of a dogma of belief of the church. It was not revised by Joseph Smith prior to his death and its publication; nor do we know what the complexion of the teaching of the whole of that sermon would have been if we had it all, instead of a small portion taken in longhand. It is for this very reason that the Reorganized Church has refused to stultify the manhood of its eldership, and infringe the right of examination and belief or disbelief upon evidence, by avowing, or claiming that "all the words" of Joseph Smith, and all his acts were to be accepted, indorsed, and observed without inquiry, and without hesitancy. Broken evidence like the King Follett sermon, the published record of which was made after his death, is at best doubtful; and unless supported by corroborating proofs is unsafe to build upon, whether the attempt to build be for or against the dogma supposed to be taught in it. Building no theories on that evidence, the Reorganized Church is under no obligation, either at the demand of the Searchlight, or anybody else, to either affirm or deny the statement of any belief based on that sermon. Nor is the church under obligation to affirm or deny the extract of the sermon as published. Elders are at liberty to use it for what it may be worth to them.

In the same sentence from the Searchlight reference is made to the Book of Abraham; and an effort made to force the idea that the Reorganized Church has adopted that too, as one of the standard works of the church. It says:—

This Book of Abraham has been often used by the early elders of the Reorganized Church as authority, and especially to support the doctrine of lineal right to office.

The Book of Abraham has not been indorsed by the Reorganized Church; nor has it been incorporated in the Book of Covenants and Commandments. Is the Searchlight so obtuse as not to see that had the Reorganized Church accepted the Book of Abraham that it would have been included in their resolutions of indorsement with the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants?

The writers for the HERALD, including the editors, have used the book, as well as the Polyglot Bible, the Douay Bible, the Doddridge and McKnight New Testament, the Revised Version, the Apocryphal New Testament, and the Book of Jasher, all of them with current histories, sacred and profane; and none of these works have ever received the indorsement of the church. Are we, then, under obligation to defend every theory, absurd or profound, false or true, that any elder or writer may have elaborated from any one or all of these, as a plank in the platform of our faith? Surely not.

The Searchlight makes this statement on page 37 of the July number, the one we have been replying to:—

The church who so boldly claims that Joseph was a prophet to the day of his death should not be backward about accepting all his words, whether they purported to be by inspiration or otherwise. For if a man continues so pure before God as to be his prophet he is pretty sure to speak the truth at all times regardless as to whether in the Spirit or out, and those who are believers in his divine calling should be perfectly willing to not only "avow an intention to believe all his words, but, actually believe in all his words."

This statement is either an ignorant one, or a malicious one. If an ignorant one, it may be excused; if a malicious one, it is born of the irritation that is roused in some portions of the believers in the latter-day work and the mission of Joseph Smith, partially or wholly, because his sons and those with them refuse to be concluded by the reputed sayings of the Seer, upon which those opposing have built theories and predicated doctrines, or raised tomes of objections to him as a fallen prophet. For instance: Our Utah religionists assert that because the sons of the prophet say they believe in the mission of their father and in the revelations given by him to the church as published in his lifetime, they should just as consistently accept the dogma of plural marriage and the alleged revelation, which is claimed as the basis for its introduction into the church; and the Searchlight now asserts that because we of the Reorganized Church believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet at his death, and died a martyr, therefore we should proclaim belief in, and be concluded by all the words of that man, whether those words "purported to be by inspiration or otherwise."

Since the church was founded till now, the contention has been that man was fallible and not infallible; that there has been but one perfect man—the man Christ Jesus; that man could not of himself be considered infallible. This was the contention of the early church as against Catholicism, and all other claims to infallibility. Shall the role now be changed to suit the argumentative theory of the Searchlight? Shall the Reorganized Church take this position against the primitive church itself, and against the better judgment of the honest minded among nearly all classes of believers in Mormonism, so-called, because, forsooth, the Searchlight says we should? Hardly.

Some of the prophets of olden times lived and died accepted of God, and yet some things in their records are indicative of the fact that they did and said what human wisdom, or the lack of it, directed.

The Searchlight states its position thus:—

Now we agree with both of the great factions of Mormons on the first principles of the gospel and in the teachings up to February, 1834; but after that day we say that Joseph did cease to be a seer to the church and whatever he gave after that time lacked the inspiration of God, and was as liable to be wrong as right, and that some of the revelations and teachings coming from him after that date is one of the causes of the present prostrate condition of the church.

To prove this statement of position to be correct the Searchlight cites the "many-gods" sermon, which was delivered in the spring of 1844, only an extract of which was published after Joseph Smith's death. To be consistent with its own position the Searchlight people must believe "all the words of Joseph Smith" up to February, 1834, "whether they purported to be by inspiration or otherwise."

To prove itself right in attacking the reputation and character of Joseph Smith as a man of God, the Searchlight resorts to the following bit of logic:—

Some people think that because we refer to the mistakes of Joseph Smith we are injuring the latter-day work. We would ask these same people, Does it injure the Christian religion to refer to the mistakes of King David? Just because King David did practice polygamy, must we all sanction polygamy for fear that by referring to King David's connection with this practice we hurt the Christian religion? Is this logical?

We answer, that there is certainly no logic in this argument and question. The Christian religion is not dependent on either the good or evil practices of King David. He lived long prior to the coming of Christ, and did not in his life, or acts in life, or his teachings, mould, fashion, or direct in the establishment of the Christian religion. His practice of polygamy was not consistent with Bible teaching and history, and was directly condemned by revelation to which the Searchlight itself sets the seal of its sanction and adoption. Joseph Smith lived, taught among, and died in open connection with, and in the active discharge of the duties of a leader of the people; thousands upon thousands of whom were born into the faith through the preaching of the gospel by him and his associate elders, and who received under their hands the ministrations of the Spirit of truth, long, long after 1834.

David Judy, A. C. Haldeman, Granville Hedrick, — Owen, and perhaps several others, who made up the charter members of the "Church of Christ," when it was born in Woodford County, Illinois, were members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints under the presidency of Joseph Smith, at his death, and had been cognizant of the course of the church, its doctrine and practices, during their connection with it, and yet registered no protest against either the man, the doctrine taught, or the practices observed, until after he was killed. Whence, then, comes the inspiration by virtue of which some years after the man is in his grave, did they discover that for nearly ten years of his life, and theirs (or some of them) in the church, he had fallen from his standing as a prophet and had by virtue of a false spirit taught false doctrine and given false revelations?

The Reorganized Church has from the first stated that the so-called revelation on celestial marriage gave sanction and credit to a doctrine contrary to all of God's revelations to the church prior to the alleged date of it; hence could not have been from God; or, if it had been given by Joseph Smith, as from God, it had not been given to, nor accepted by the church in legitimate form; hence was not any part of the faith of the church, and could not be.

If you believe Joseph Smith to have been a prophet, then you have got to believe that revelation, as well as the rest, say our Utah Church people. The Church of Christ, by its then president, C. A. Hall, who became their president by virtue of revelation, as we have been told, undertook to connect Joseph Smith with being the author of that revelation on plural marriage, and failed. The object evidently was to claim that too as evidence of Joseph Smith's fall. This Church of Christ sets up a misstatement of the faith of the church uttered by Granville Hedrick, thirty years ago, and charges the Reorganized Church with having "vowed to believe every word that came from the mouth of Joseph Smith, even until the day of his death;" therefore, say they, we of the Reorganized Church have necessarily to believe in a plurality of gods; or if we do not defend that dogma; or that we by a refusal tacitly admit that Joseph Smith gave false teachings to the church. And this too in the face of the public declaration made by us that,

We believe in God, the Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.

Paul gives the position in 1 Corinthians 8:5, 6:—

For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.

The Searchlight says in this same article, page 37, third paragraph of left hand column, in reference to our request to be informed where to find the avowal "to believe in all Joseph Smith's words," that,

It looks to us like this is a neat evasion by the Herald of the question at issue and an attempt to raise a cloud of dust to obscure the real point of the article; viz.: That Joseph Smith did preach and teach false doctrines after 1834.

The issue was this: The Searchlight made a statement compromising the good sense, and misstating the faith of the Reorganized Church; and the HERALD asked for information as to where the asserted avowal would be found. It appears that the question did raise a cloud of dust; but who has kicked it up? Did we do it, because we objected to being misrepresented, as an individual, and as a people?

We accept the Bible, the King James' or Common Version, the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Covenants, containing the revelations to the church, as given by Joseph Smith. We accept the teaching of the eldership, including Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, O. Cowdery, and all the rest of the ministry, where such teaching is in harmony with the word. We have not and do not pledge ourselves to believe all the words of any man, whether they "purport to be by inspiration or otherwise." But when any word comes from the Lord and is tried, approved by the accredited word and the revelations already received and accepted by the church, we shall stand or fall in defense of it. And, no matter through whom words may come that impose beliefs and practices contrary to the received and accredited word, we are under no obligation whatever, moral or by the avowal of any one, or of many, to accept such words, or to defend them, apologize for them, or be bound by them; no matter what the Searchlight and its supporters may think about it.

The "members of the church of J. C. of L. D. S.," at that conference of December, 1859, rejected by resolution the "second edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants."

The first edition of Book of Covenants contains 234 pages with revelations to the date of June, 1833. There are two revelations after that date—the Appendix, and the Minutes of the General Assembly, held at Kirtland, Ohio, August 17, 1835; two hundred and fifty-seven pages in all. It would be understood, by inference, that the second edition being rejected, the understanding would be that the first edition would be or was approved.

With this answer to the questions of the Searchlight on the topics treated of we leave it with our readers, our apology for offering what we have written being that by our inquiry we provoked the Searchlight to the article to which this replies.

We believe that the commands and words of God to the church are valid law, and should be heeded and obeyed. We believe that the words of God received by Joseph Smith and by him given to the church, should be heeded and observed. We believe that what has been or is spoken by inspiration should be credited as inspired. We believe that "holy men of old spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost," and that men in our own time may and do so speak and write. We believe that men may be inspired as prophets, and do and say what God commands them to do. We believe that men may be thus inspired as prophets to do the work God may command them to do. And yet we do not believe that because a man may thus be inspired to speak and do the work of a prophet of God, that he is for that reason so invested with attributes of sanctity that all his words and acts are necessarily the result of inspiration, or that he cannot mistake in judgment and err in word, or in deed. We believe that when a man speaks or writes under the inspiration of God, what he writes or speaks is of God; but that the same man may, as a man, both say and do many things that are just, wise, and true without being necessarily inspired; and that such a man may, as a man, say and do things by man's wisdom that may be unwise, or even foolish, which would not be binding on the people of God with whom he might be associated, or entitled to be believed and acted upon; and that unwise things said or done would not necessarily prove the man not to have been, or not to be a prophet, still accepted of God. This being our belief, it follows that the thing done or the thing said is to be considered and weighed for itself, and not for the reason that the man said or did it. Prophets were measured by this rule since the world began, and will be till prophecies fail, tongues cease, and knowledge be vanished away. Nor do we in so writing state, or mean to state, that Joseph Smith said, or did, as a man, wise or unwise things; nor do we write it, or intend it to be an apology for any unwise things which he may have said, or done; leaving each thing said, or done, to be determined upon when and where occasion, or emergency may demand.

BRN. CHATBURN and Turpen, doing tent work at Macon, Missouri, "particularly invite theologians, historians, agnostics, the practical man, the thoughtful and critical reasoner to attend at the city park," etc. This is an age of advertising and some of our brethren are developing in that line of getting their work before the people. Their handbills bear witness to their enterprise and efforts to reach the masses.

In addition to the handbill the local paper advertises the work of the brethren as follows:—

LATTER DAY SAINTS.

The meetings being held by the Latter Day Saints in their tabernacle at the City Park, are becoming interesting, as evinced by the increasing attendance. Elders T. W. Chatburn and M. M. Turpen are conducting the services. Mr. Chatburn is a speaker who holds the close attention of his hearers, by the clear points he makes, fortified by texts of scripture fitting his peculiar theology. The chart lectures are something new, and seem well received by the audience.

Mr. Turpen takes up another line of Gospel preaching. He is also a good speaker, and presents his arguments in a logical way. These people are not, they claim, connected with the Utah Mormons. They are anti-polygamists, and all their books and ministers renounce the dogma which was a great obstacle placed upon the church by Brigham Young after the death of the Prophet, Joseph Smith, at Carthage, Illinois, in 1844. Young and his followers are apostates from the religion of the original founders of the church, according to these preachers. This reorganization was effected in 1860 by Joseph Smith, Jr., whose headquarters are at Lamont [Lamoni], Iowa, where they have a fine town composed chiefly of Latter Day Saints. The Herald Office, the official organ of the church, is located there. These people number about fifty thousand, and claim to be increasing throughout the United States, the Canadas, and elsewhere.

The meetings will continue for a week or ten days longer. They will doubtless attract large audiences.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

THE fiftieth anniversary number of that excellent journal, the Scientific American, published by Munn & Company, No. 361 Broadway, New York, dated July 25, is a good one. It contains an epitomized account of the progress of improvements on machinery from the printing press of the Franklin wooden frame hand press of the capacity of 240 impressions per hour to the Hoe octuple press of the New York World of the capacity of 96,000 per hour, through which the paper travels at the rate of thirty-two and one half miles per hour, and which requires the labor of ten men and boys to tend and remove from it the printed, pasted, and folded papers all ready for the mail. From the sedan chair for "my laydy" to the bicycle of 1896. From the Morse telegraph to Edison's phonograph; from the common road bridge to the Brooklyn cable and St. Louis steel railway, and Niagara Falls cantilever bridges. It is a wonderful record of scientific achievement. It will pay any man with mechanical tendencies to take the Scientific American, weekly journal, $3.00 per year, 10 cents per number.

THE Oracle, published at Orting, Washington, in its issue for July 24 contains the following item, from which it appears that Bro. J. C. Clapp is still facing the opposition:—

Rev. D. L. Fordney of Ballard, who preached two excellent sermons in the M. E. church last Sunday to large congregations, is to favor us with another visit soon. While here he challenged Mr. Clapp, an elder of the "Latter Day Saints" to public debate, to begin August 3. Mr. Fordney is one of the strongest evangelical preachers in the Northwest, and Mr. Clapp one of the best debaters of his church, so the public may expect a spirited debate.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. C. CLAPP seems to be renewing his youth in the great Northwest, at least he is succeeding in getting the word before the people in a way that promises good for the cause. He wrote from Orting, Washington, July 24, as follows:—

We have been having a warm time here at Orting. Some of the best folks in town have embraced the faith and Satan is in a rage about it, and he has stirred up the people to a great rate. Truly they say "all manner of evil" "falsely." They tried first to raise a mob and failed; then they tried to get the town council to drive us out; and then after having failed to have the house—the Christian church—closed against us, they sent off and got a big preacher and he "exposed Mormonism." And, Oh! what a tirade of abuse and falsehood. It was painful to listen to it. In the morning I wrote him a note telling him I would hold him accountable for what he said and would reply to him next night, which I did to a large audience and turned the tide of popular opinion decidedly in our favor. So now we are to have a public discussion and the big egotist is going to affirm (his own proposition) that "the Book of Mormon is a romance written by a man by the name of Spalding and was stolen by Joe Smith and a man by the name of Rigdon." I think I have heard something about this before, but no doubt it will be very interesting and I shall anxiously wait for Monday night for the debate to begin. He is already so broken down in the minds of the people that they are mocking him on the streets. As soon as the debate is over I will write a letter to the Herald.

Bro. H. E. Moler, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, July 28:—

We are still continuing our tent meetings at this place. Our tent was blown down in yesterday evening's gale. Bro. Smith was struck on the head by a pole, causing a scalp wound but not serious. No serious damage done, and the tent is up now, and ready for meeting to-night. The Germantown Independent, came out last week with a portrait of Bro. Joseph giving a short historical sketch, and statistics of the Reorganization, which were correct.

Bro. J. W. Wight, Sloan, Iowa, July 29:—

Five baptized last Sunday. All going well.

Bro. Columbus Scott, writing from Boone, Iowa, July 30:—

I am here occupying the tent for a few evenings while Bro. William Thompson has by urgent request gone to Oskaloosa; he visits his home briefly, at Centerville. He writes that he will return Monday next, August 3. Sunday, August 2, being my birthday, I shall, if alive, be aged forty-six years.

I, too, am growing o'd,
The years so quickly glide away;
I trust, the faith, though tried as gold,
With grace, may bide the day.

The excessive rains here of late militate some against our tent services, but we try to be courageous. I found the remnant of the Saints at or near Eagle Grove, alive in the work, and keeping the Sunday school work vigorous and strong. I have been laboring most of the time since our June 1 conference, at Boonesboro and vicinities. Have baptized and confirmed two, sowed some gospel seed; and we now have the Utah missionaries all on the retreat.

Bro. W. S. Pender, Linn, Kansas, July 27:—

Had excellent audience in tent yesterday afternoon. Spoke an hour and thirty-five minutes to attentive hearers, setting forth scientific evidences corroborating Book of Mormon history. Presented biblical evidences of Book of Mormon in evening to about two hundred people. Before the close of the service the M. E. minister asked if he could make a statement, and being informed that he could, stated to the audience in a very grave manner that he had been informed that an attempt would be made to do personal violence to the men who were conducting these meetings to-night, that there was talk of egging them; that it had worried him a good deal; that he hoped it would not be done. If it was done Christian people would not sanction it and should not be held responsible for it. He had no confidence in our church work and considered us "jugglers" of God's word. What a fiasco! Surrounded as we were by interested listeners and friendly disposed people. We assured the minister that we were in no danger and advised him to cease worrying for our safety. The people had supplied us with eggs and we had eaten them three times a day, and that was probably what the gentleman meant who spoke to him about our being egged! I then invited him to show the people wherein we had "juggled" the Scriptures, offering him the use of the tent in which to do so. He repeated the statement but declined to attempt to prove it true! We assured him that personally we would not feel at liberty to make such charge unless prepared to prove it. That under the circumstances we considered the charge as untimely as the alarm he had endeavored to create for our safety.

Sr. M. A. Anway, Dickens, Nebraska, July 20:—

I want to thank the brethren and sisters for their kind response to my call for reading. It has been a great pleasure to me to get the papers, although, as Bro. Rudd says, they piled up by the sackful. I have found a place for them. Bro. Payne took a lot with him to distribute and I see that one Ensign was taken out of the wrapper to be read before we got it, showing that somebody was interested, and it may do good. My health is getting worse and I ask the Saints to pray for me. I would like to get letters from Saints, and will answer if able to.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, Macon, Missouri, July 25:—

Inclosed find clipping from the Macon Republican, which will give you an idea as to our meetings here. Tent is full to overflowing every night with a very intelligent class of people. The South Methodist minister is out this morning in the city paper, with a scathing article against us—Brigham Young, Spalding Story, fanatics, unstable people, superstitious, Joe Smith," etc. Will notice him in due time. "Great is Diana," but she must crumble before the truth divine. We are well and happy in the fight. Bro. Richards, of Higbee, with his choir is with us, Sr. Thorburn, organist, rendering the finest of music. Bro. Richards was born singing and never cried only by note.

Bro. T. W. Williams, Macedonia, Iowa, July 25:—

Am holding meetings at Carson. Expect to commence tent meetings at Oakland on Monday. Am physically unfitted for it however.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOHN SMITH wrote from New Bedford, Massachusetts, July 21, that one more had been baptized at Fall River. So the work moves, "here a little, and there a little," one by one, here and there as the Lord directs.

We acknowledge receipt of a letter from Sr. Nellie Richardson, no address appearing on the letter however. She writes of blessings received through the gift of healing in the church, also of a manifestation of divine personal ministrations.

Bro. Gustav A. Johnson writes that his address is Kansas City, Kansas, not Missouri, as we gave in last HERALD. Please read it so.

From late advices we learn that Bro. A. H. Mills, who has been quite ill at the home of Bro. G. H. Hulmes, Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, is slowly recovering, and will return home to Independence, Missouri, as soon as able to travel.

Mrs. George Burns, a sister, residing at No. 140 Fremont Street, Flint, Michigan, requests that mission or district authorities arrange to do some ministerial labor at that point. Some believe the word and desire further knowledge of it.

Reports from Wisconsin announce a new pest that threatens the entire product of the cucumber producing region, a large district in the southern part of the State. The prophecy of Joel concerning the "locust, the cankerworm," etc, is being fulfilled. It is well that Malachi's record provides a means of deliverance from the "devourer." Some farmers are offering prayers for deliverance, others, enlightened, are finding it by obedience, to the spiritual and the temporal law.

Mrs. John Warden, a sister residing at Cadillac, Michigan, writes some details of her spiritual experiences in the latter-day work. By trust in God and willingness to accept the truth as she saw it she has been confirmed and established in the faith of the gospel. Blessings have come to her home as a result, of which she bears witness as an expression of her gratitude. God loves a grateful heart and is pleased by manifestations of appreciation. He has said that against none is his anger kindled but those who confess not his hand in all things.

Storms and cloudbursts continue to be the order of the year, so far. Western Pennsylvania suffered severely from a deluge of rain on the 27th. Railroad and other bridges were washed away "by the hundreds," the dispatches say. Houses and other properties were destroyed, and some lives lost. Indianapolis, Frankfort, Bluffton, and Anderson, Indiana, report similar visitations, on the same date. Central Indiana was visited by the severest storms in years.

George Jacob Schweinfurth, known as the Rockford messiah, has been indicted several times for "unlawful cohabitation" in Winnebago County, Illinois, the seat of the "heaven" of the impostor. It is said that he has admitted the fraudulent character of his claims and will shortly make a confession. Scandalous details are promised in connection with the conduct of the headquarters at Rockford, Illinois.

Sr. Emma McFadden, Buxton, Ontario, writes of the labors of Bro. John Shields at that point, who had evidently given satisfaction to the Saints, who met to present him with a book satchel. The occasion was a pleasant one to all, the gift a help to the minister. We are obliged to omit details. Sr. McFadden also sends an account of a meeting held at Broadbent's Grove, near by, which was attended by visiting and local Saints and ministers.

By letter to Bro. Fred A. Smith we learn that Bro. W. E. Peak was doing tent work at Eagle, Nebraska, July 20, assisted by Bro. Thomas Blodgett. Times were very close, but the brethren were hopeful, reasoning evidently that they must try to convert the world, whether favorably or unfavorably received, so far as in their power. It is sometimes difficult to preach the gospel, under peculiarly adverse circumstances, but also hard not to preach it if called to labor in the vineyard. The influences for good that prompt men to labor for the redemption of men are and must necessarily be strong, and to the good man, irresistible. The men who are laboring for good are conscious of its indwelling power and that the hope of humanity is in the gospel. They have hope toward God, knowing that the difficulties incident to earth life and its mission are "but for a moment." It is the men and women who endure in this hope, who grow in power to move forward steadfastly in the prosecution of their work, who are useful here, who will be honored hereafter, and who are appreciated and worthy in the sight of God. Difficulties, trials, and sufferings are regarded as unnecessary by some, but they seem necessary to test us and evidently are means by which we prove God. There might be very little sympathy and considerateness and compassion in the world were there no special causes requiring manifestations of those qualities; there might be comparatively but little development in patience, endurance, and hope for perfection hereafter, were there no interruptions to the smooth easy current of life conditions here. The Lord has seen fit in his wisdom to permit the course of human life to so run that all its legitimate currents shall tend toward the future life as a final haven or home. That is the true course, because the things that are seen are but temporal, while the unseen is eternal, abiding, perfect.

The "hope of life" is not of life here, but "hereafter." "To you it is given in the behalf of Christ not only to suffer, but to reign with him." The right to reign is conditioned upon the willingness to endure the necessary suffering incident to the discharge of duty. "No excellence without labor" has become a proven and trite motto in the affairs of this temporary world, and "no heaven without endurance and necessary suffering" is a statement of the same principle in spiritual things. There came to the Master the evidences of his Father's pleasure and open acknowledgments, during his earthly ministry; there comes also to the faithful servant the manifestations of the Master's commendations and acknowledgments in the same line of duty, so that like the experience of the apostle, the fellowship of Christ's sufferings brings the inner consciousness of divine fellowship and communion by which comes assurance of both suffering and reigning with him. Thus to the faithful servant of God is renewed the divine pledge of the future reign with Christ brought near, and of which he receives a foretaste, in the blessings that follow trial. Could we all learn to endure patiently, without repining, the necessary difficulties incident to earthly duties, greater strength of character would result, more service be rendered to the cause, and added blessings be realized. Called to endure the fellowship of Christ's reign and sufferings, let us also seek for the strength that shall cause us always to look upward and be strong, as he was strong, and able to endure. He has inspired us to strength and goodness, we may also inspire others to endurance.

Bro. Mark H. Forscutt has returned to Lamoni, after a brief visit to Nebraska, apparently improved in health. He will remain in the Bishop's office for a time, at work on a set of new books. Those who would have their names engrossed on the new ledger in Bro. Mark's excellent chirography would do well to make their remittances at an early date.

Bro. F. G. Pitt, writing from Chicago, the 30th, says: "Our new location is a success. We are reaching a greater number of strangers. Our numbers are gradually increasing. Several investigating and good interest manifested generally."

Original Poetry.

THE CRY OF THE SONS OF GOD.

"Children we, yet pilgrims, strangers,
Wanderers in the desert bare;
Lead us, Lord, to verdant pastures;
Lead us to the meadows fair.
We can trust thee, we can love thee;
We are thine, for weal or woe;
Sons of men, why will ye linger?
Unto whom else would you go?
"He it is in blood-stained raiment.
He who erst from Bozrah came;
Jesus Christ, the King, the Savior;
Ever and for aye the same.
He the light to guide you heavenward;
He the fount in barren ground;
Living water, heavenly manna,
All in all in him is found.
"Hark! his loving voice is saying,
'I am come, the Prince of Peace!
Hush that mournful, bitter wailing;
Sons of men, from murmurs cease!
Hear him, Oh, our best Beloved!
We will follow, lead us on;
Time is passing, life is fleeting,
And the day will soon be gone."

TO MY BABE.

BY M. W.

My darling baby thou hast come
And brought new joy unto our home,
Right welcome, welcome here thou art,
You precious, gentle little heart.
Who could refuse thee warmest place,
After looking in thy lovely face.
Round about thee, ever present,
Night and day, making so pleasant,
O'er thee, may bright wisdom hover!
Comes this prayer from thy fond mother;
Kisses too—and without number!

If the world seems cold to you,
Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comfort hide from view
Winters that deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan,
"Ah! the cheerless weather!"—Set.

A SAD MISTAKE.

"WELL, there, Mrs. Best, you don't know how glad I am to see you!" exclaimed Mrs. Coddle, as she ushered her friend into her nice sitting room, and threw open the blinds. "There; take a seat in my new stuffed chair—lay aside your hat. I was just wishing I could see you, for I—"

"I wished to see you enough to drop my work—but not wholly for you; I wanted to get out and rejoice in the sunshine, with the birds, bees, and flowers; but I would not pass you by in my little ramble. Now go on, Mrs. Coddle, and tell me why you were wishing to see me."

"Because I am feeling so dull and gloomy, and it always does me lots of good to have you come in with your face sparkling with joy, just like the water sparkling in the sunshine. O, I wish I could be as you are!" said Mrs. Coddle, actually wishing it, yet not feeling strong enough to attain it.

"Why, I should think you would rejoice in your heart, whether asleep or awake, when you have such a beautiful home, such lovely children, and such a worthy husband."

"Well, I suppose I ought to, but if I can't how can I?"

"Why can't you? What is there to hinder you? Just for a moment compare your circumstances with the circumstances of many of your neighbors, and even with mine, and see how much more you have to enjoy than we have."

"I know it, but there is a skeleton in every house, you know, and sometimes it seems as if mine is of gigantic stature."

"That is a saying derived from a story, which probably was not true in its statements, only an illustration. I don't think there can be any skeleton or spectre in this beautiful home that cannot be expelled by your ignoring it and directing your attention wholly to the appreciation of your blessings, and the happiness of others."

"Now, dear Mrs. Best, please don't censure me. I can't bear it to-day. I have all I can endure now. O dear! if you only knew, you—"

"Pardon me, do pardon me, Mrs. Coddle; I did not intend to censure you, nor to wound your feelings in the least. I was simply judging from appearances and from experience."

"That is the way people usually judge, but still their judgment may not always be correct. They can only look on the surface; they don't know what is behind the curtain," replied Mrs. Coddle, her face assuming a sad, dejected look attended by a sigh.

"If you are in trouble I truly sympathize with you, inasmuch as I can without knowing the facts of the case, and if I can comfort you, I will be glad to do so," was the kind response.

"I know, Mrs. Best, that I have a good home and pleasant surroundings, but that is not all one wants." A tremulous voice and moistened eyes plainly told how deep were her emotions. "The fact is right here, Mrs. Best, between you and me, my husband is not kind to me. He does not seem like the same man he was before we were married. Then he was more than willing to gratify my every wish; now he don't seem to notice what I say. I consented to settle down with him because I loved him, and thought he loved me; but I can see that he grows more cold and distant every year, and sometimes is cross and fearfully disagreeable. And here I am tied down to this house, and the care of three children, and this will fret if I want him to help me, and is never willing to hear a word about my trials or hard work. He is a good provider I know, and always keeps help for me, if possible to get anyone. Only this morning I wanted him to spade up a little spot in my flower garden, but he would not touch it, and grumbled over something and went off to his business. I have felt all fussed up ever since, or I should not have told you what I have. But there it is, and 'tis the truth, and something similar occurs almost every day. Well there, Mrs. Best, I wish sometimes that I was situated as you are, had no husband, no children, and no home to take care of. I could go around and enjoy myself, and do good in helping others who are in trouble, as you do."

Probably a few who may read this can, either by experience or observation, realize some of Mrs. Coddle's feelings.

"It must be a very sad case to have an unkind husband, and I am sorry to say that there are many women who feel just as you do in regard to their domestic affairs. You consented to be his wife because you loved him, and had reason to think he loved you. Very good; that is the first step. Then you were pleased with his attention and he was pleased with your appreciation of the same. His mind was not overtaxed with business, neither was yours burdened with care. He was happy in wooing you, and you were happy in being wooed by him, neither knowing or thinking of the responsibilities that awaited you. No fault, no blame, only a common occurrence. The world has many, very many similar cases, and many of them no doubt are very much worse than your own. I know a person will get tired of a sameness in her work, and sometimes feel wearied and fretted, and so do the men with their business. They, too, get vexed, and tired, and often ill, but must stick to their work for the necessities of the household depend on their diligence and economy, just as the use of the same depends on the interest and skill of the wife. The love of every married couple should strengthen every year, and will if properly nurtured by both husband and wife. Your husband loves you, and you love him. Let some accident happen to either of you and the other will quickly exhibit the truth of the case. We get wearied and vexed with our cares and obstacles, and sort of fall into a morbid state of mind, and don't realize that we are fretting others with our own fretfulness, neither do they realize that they affect us, and the best thing we can do is to shut out all unpleasant feelings, and remarks of others, and with the help of God fill our own soul full to running over with kind, loving thoughts toward every member of the household. Several, who have good homes, have told me just as you do, that they would like to be situated as I am. But they don't count the cost—the loss of husband and children and the entire upsetting of everything, to say nothing about the trials connected with adapting oneself to the freaks and customs of different people, for whom one may work. Ye who have homes and near connections in life, don't so long for the pleasures outside of your home as to make the inside disagreeable. If you cannot find happiness in the situation you are placed, probably you would notice some of the disagreeable things in other situations, for there is no place without some things not adapted to our mind, and either you or I might long for our former blessings, and regret many things we had done, but then it is too late," replied Mrs. Best, whose experience and observation had taught her many lessons.

"Very true, very true," exclaimed Mrs. Coddle, who had given respectful attention to her friend's kind suggestions, "and I will try and govern myself by your ideas."

She, like thousands, thought she was to live a life of ease in the marriage relation; was to be a pet and have all her frivolous notions granted, regardless of the trouble it might cause others. She had not fully realized that her husband, too, got weary with a sameness in his work, and more weary with her constant complaining and fault-finding.

"Now, my dear friend," continued Mrs. Best, "set self aside and let your first object be to confer happiness on every member of your family. Study the characters of the noble women of old, as well as of the present day, and with the blessing of God try and come up to their standard of goodness. I must hasten home to my domestic labors, for one must practice as she preaches."

"Come again; do."

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. SUSAN TYLER requests your prayers in behalf of Tibbe Andrews, of Butler, Pennsylvania, a worthy widowed sister, that if it is God's will she may be healed.

Bro. A. S. Guinand, of Louisville, Kansas, is sorely distressed with rheumatism. The best doctors, he says, fail to help him. He therefore desires the sisters to supplicate the good Father for the restoration of his bodily and spiritual strength.

Bro. Alma C. Barmore, of Oakland City, Indiana, writes: "Please place my name before the Prayer Union. I desire prayer that my health may be restored."

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR AUGUST.

"Repent, repent and prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; yea, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost.—D. C. 32: 2.

Thursday, Aug. 6.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 50: 1-23.

Thursday, Aug. 13.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verse.—Mosiah 2: 3.

Thursday, Aug. 20.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—James 2: 1-8.

Thursday, Aug. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—D. C. 28: 2.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

Beloved Collaborers in the Sunday School:—Thinking that a few encouraging words from one who knows what it is to labor under difficulties might help some one and prove an incentive to greater effort and renewed zeal, I essay to write.

We often feel the need of such in our work; and, in endeavoring to encourage others, we are sometimes helped and encouraged ourselves.

We need not expect when we enter the Master's service, no matter in what department we take our place to labor, that we are not going to meet with difficulties. We will not "be borne to paradise on flowery beds of ease." There will be crosses to bear, sacrifices to make, obstacles to overcome, and battles to fight (with self perhaps). But the heavier the cross, the greater the sacrifice, and the fiercer the battle, the brighter will be the crown, the greater the reward, and the grander the victory.

The adversary understands the importance of this work better, perhaps, than we do; hence his efforts to discourage and overthrow its adherents. But through patience, perseverance, and much prayer, we shall conquer.

As has been said by others, The magnitude of our humble efforts we may never fully know here; but when we stand before the great and just Judge, and the books are opened, and everyone shall receive according as his works have been, we shall know.

And as the poet has so beautifully expressed it,

"It may be that the children
We have lead with patient hand,
Will be found among our jewels
When we reach the better land."

What a glorious thought! Let none think the Sunday school work is a mere children's institution and too small for them to engage in. Let me tell you it is a noble work, and worthy your very best efforts. Every true Christian should be interested in it, for it presents a broad and beautiful field in which to sow the precious gospel seed.

Parents, do not think when you have sent your children to Sunday school that you have discharged your whole duty. When it is possible for you to do so you should attend the Sunday school yourself. Let the children see that you are interested in the work and they will be interested. Let the teachers and officers keep in touch with the General Association as far as possible. Avoid getting in a "rut," study and keep yourselves informed as to the latest and best means of conducting a Sunday school.

This is a progressive work, and if we do not keep our eyes open and make an effort to keep up with the work, we will be left in the rear; for the work is bound to move. We are thankful to hear of the progress it is making. Be prayerful and humble. Teachers should not only make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the lesson, but should seek earnestly for God's Spirit that they may teach aright. If the servants of God who are sent out to preach the gospel cannot preach without the Spirit, neither should we expect our teaching to accomplish much good if unaccompanied by the enlightening influence of the Spirit. Do we, as primary teachers, understand the sacred and important trust placed in our hands? That of feeding the dear lambs of the flock?

"Feed my lambs," said Christ our Savior,
"Place the food within their reach."

That we may have patience and wisdom to place the spiritual food within the reach of the little ones, that they may understand this beautiful gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ while their hearts are pure and tender, is the prayer of your colaborer,

MATTIE HUGHES.

PRIMARY WORK PLANNED FROM THE CHILD'S POINT OF VIEW.

TOO MUCH cannot be said in favor of special exercises for the primary class.

It is unreasonable to expect that the little ones will enter heartily into the singing, if the words are meaningless to them, and the music is beyond the range of their voices.

Children, like older people, have a preference in the matter of songs, and, if they dislike any special one taught, will almost invariably show it, either by engaging listlessly in the exercises, or by remaining silent. A few of the familiar tunes used by the main school may be utilized, by adapting to them words which the child-mind can grasp and understand.

The same is true in regard to prayer. A few simple petitions, which the children are asked to repeat after the teacher, will impress them more, and make more real to them the fact that they are talking to God, than to listen to a prayer that is offered in behalf of older pupils.

Some of the best talent in the land is now furnishing material in both of these directions, so that no primary teacher need be at a loss to obtain what is necessary for her class.

The needs of the little children should be the law for superintendents and primary teachers.—Sel.

MEADOW GROVE, Neb., July 27.

Editors Herald:—I closed tent meeting at Tekamah on the eve of the 21st with apparently a good interest, the best I think shown during the entire series of meetings. Some are near the kingdom, and many have been unburdened of much prejudice. Had tent shipped to Valley, Nebraska, by kindness of Brn. Nelson and Ralph Brown, where services will be held for several weeks or as interest demands a continuation.

Came to Meadow Grove on the 25th, where I attended a very peaceful quarterly conference of the Central Nebraska district. One new branch was reported as organized by Bro. W. E. Peak at Shelton, Nebraska. Nine children were blessed. A goodly attendance at each preaching service. I preached four times with fair liberty. Assisted in organizing the Meadow Grove Sunday school, selecting Sr. Belle Williams superintendent, Bro. George Lewis assistant superintendent, Sr. Mary Young secretary, and Sr. Alice Fish, treasurer. A collection was taken sufficient to pay all first expense and prospect is bright for a permanent school work, as all seem interested in doing all they can to make it a success.

I speak here again to-night and at Norfolk to-morrow night. Will be at Valley, to begin meetings on Wednesday night, to continue in tent meetings.

Hopefully your brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

FREMONT, Ind., July 23.

Editors Herald:—I left home on May 8 for my field of labor—Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana. I arrived in Coldwater, Michigan, the next evening and was kindly received by the Saints and friends. I met with Bro. and Sr. Bailey from Lamoni, who were there on a visit. On Sunday Bro. Bailey preached in the morning and the writer in the evening. The afternoon prayer-meeting was a spiritual feast. Sr. Bailey sang a beautiful hymn in the Spirit full of good advice to the young as well as those of riper years.

I remained there over the next Sunday preaching for them mornings and evenings.

Then Bro. Granger took me over to South Scott and Flint, Indiana. We preached a number of times in each place with some interest. We were kindly cared for and Saints are anxious to have the elders come and preach for them. We then returned to Coldwater and attended the quarterly conference, which was a good one. At the close Bro. Briggs baptized Sr. Trout. Others were almost persuaded to be Christians.

We then attended Bro. L. Scott's debate at Hall's Corners, with Mr. Musser, of the Campbellite Church, which lasted eight nights. There were large crowds and much interest manifested. Bro. Scott has continued the work there and baptized one, and others are near the door. Brn. Briggs and L. F. Daniel have assisted the work there some while I have been looking after the work at South Scott.

Last Monday Bro. Daniel and I commenced grove meetings here. Yesterday he thought it was necessary for him to go home, and I am still here battling against opposition of various kinds. The Advents have commenced meetings in a hall, and last night there was a free show on the street, and it rains nearly every day; but we are having some interested listeners and will continue over next Sunday. There are but few Saints here, and they are anxious to get some more, so they can have a branch.

This is a fine part of the country. Crops are good, fruit is plenteous, and we expect to have a fine spiritual harvest here as well.

My mission address is Angola, Indiana.

In bonds,
H. H. ROBINSON.

NAPONEE, Neb., July 23.

Editors Herald:—Since writing to you I have been laboring in Webster and Franklin Counties. I have been quite successful in securing places to preach, and also in getting a hearing.

Bro. William Parsons and family assisted me greatly while near Guide Rock, and Bro. W. A. Moore and family have been of great service to me while at and near Naponee.

I had the pleasure of leading a sister into the waters of baptism while near Guide Rock, and yesterday I had the satisfaction of baptizing a brother at this place. Last week, by the assistance of Bro. Moore, I preached at a schoolhouse about six miles from his place, and this week I am preaching at a schoolhouse yet further distant. The interest at both places is good. I have also preached at the residence of Bro. Moore, and twice at the Congregational Church at Naponee, and I am to deliver a lecture at the church on the Book of Mormon to-morrow night. The minister expressed surprise at the doctrine taught by us from his pulpit. He said he came expecting to hear a good deal of heresy but instead of that he heard nothing but good sound doctrine.

I have had no invitation or calls to preach from the Western Nebraska mission field except from Bro. Moore and Bro. John Hill. I shall be pleased to hear from any of the brethren in said field. My permanent address is Wilber, Nebraska.

Your brother in Christ,
C. H. PORTER.

SANTA ROSA COUNTY, Fla., July 24.

Editors Herald:—I have read a few copies of the Herald recently and find in them but little written from this region, (Santa Rosa and adjoining Counties in Florida and South Alabama) which I know has some prominence in regard to the spread and prevalence of the gospel truths. We have a district comprising all of Santa Rosa County, Florida, and a big strip off the Southern part of Escambia County, Alabama, comprising nine branches with a goodly quantity of members (cannot state at present how many), and presided over by President Edward Powell, of Milton, Florida, an old veteran in the cause, who has worked with energy and zeal in support of the truth, and in defense of the Saints; and he is still at work, and he with the assistance of Bro. Van S. Jernigan whom he (Bro. Powell) has recently ordained to preach, has made wonderful progress during the last year in bringing to light the gospel truths among our people, and the work, as well as its production, is still going on.

Some of the most intelligent and aged people of the district have embraced our doctrine and the young people of both sexes are zealous workers in the cause. There are very few if any drones in the hive, and it is evident that the Lord is helping us and that the Holy Spirit is among the people of this district.

We have a beautiful and a healthy country, which is watered by the best cooling springs, rivulets, streams suitable for milling purposes (water power and small rivers) which make it convenient for the transportation of timber, logs, lumber, and other products to the gulf, where there is always a market for such products as our country produces. Our people are generally healthy and, better still, it has been the will of God up to date not to visit us with hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, and other devastating disturbances so disastrous to the lives and property of his people in this locality. I am a new member of the Church of Christ, though over seventy-one years of age.

T. JEFF. JERNIGAN.

NEWELL, Iowa, July 23.

Editors Herald:—We closed a five weeks' tabernacle meeting at Rolfe, Iowa, last Sunday; four baptized, all adults. The families of Brn. J. M. Reed, Alex. Barker, Henry Tilley, also Sr. Coiner, greatly aided us in the services. Sr. Dora Barker presided at the organ. The last week we were cheered and ably assisted in song service by Bro. William McKim and wife, of Deloit, and Sr. Anabel and Yokely Carroll, of Auburn, the former coming a hundred miles by team, the latter over sixty miles on bicycles. Bro. McKim gave us two cheering sermons. Bro. E. Ford, of Curlew, the energetic president of Union branch, gave the friends a stirring practical talk on the reasons why he was a Latter Day Saint. He expects to visit and feed the scattered sheep at Rolfe.

After Bro. C. E. Butterworth went to Benan, to take charge of a grove meeting, Bro. W. W. Whiting came to our help and with his soul lit up with gospel fire he acquitted himself nobly. Last Sunday he baptized a woman who had been on probation in one of the popular churches for thirty years because she would not be poured or sprinkled and call it "following Jesus through the waters of baptism." Last winter she talked to her pastor about being immersed, but he advised her to study up sprinkling and pouring a little closer.

The noble efforts of Bro. J. F. McDowell at this place last autumn have not been forgotten, and more of the fruits will yet be seen.

Bro. Whiting and the writer reached this town (Newell) yesterday, a distance of about forty miles, by team, having quite an experience in a rainstorm. Bro. and Sr. O. A. Rounds, of Ozark, Missouri, reside here and are alive in the latter-day work; anxious for their townspeople to hear the gospel. A pleasant location for the tabernacle has been secured and we expect to begin services tomorrow night.

CHARLES J. HUNT.

DOW CITY, Iowa, July 23.

Editors Herald:—Since my last letter Bro. C. J. Hunt has baptized two and Bro. W. W. Whiting one at Rolfe and have closed their meetings at that place and moved the tabernacle to Newell, where they expect to hold meetings as long as the interest demands. From there they expect to go to Cherokee.

Bro. J. F. McDowell baptized one at Dow City and went to Benan to assist in tent meetings at that point. Meeting at Benan lasted nine days and the preaching was done by Brn. R. R. Montgomery, Charles Derry, J. F. McDowell, and the writer. At the close of this meeting three were baptized and the Saints were rejoiced to see the additions to their number. The two-days' meeting at Deloit conducted by J. F. McDowell and the one at Harlan where J. M. Baker and R. Wight had charge, were both excellent meetings. At Harlan Bro. Charles Derry rendered some valuable assistance, where on Sunday, the 19th, he preached at the request of branch officers and those in charge of said meeting a memorial sermon in honor of our late worthy brother, President W. W. Blair. Bro. Charles Derry's visit to our district was enjoyed by the Saints and his preaching much appreciated by all.

Bro. J. F. McDowell is now at Defiance where he and the writer expect to hold forth in one of the district tents, while Brn. C. J. Hunt and W. W. Whiting hold forth in the other tent, as stated above.

The time of holding the two-days' meeting at Pilot Rock was changed at the request of the branch officers from July 18 and 19 to August 8 and 9. All goes well.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

SHAWNEE, Texas, July 21.

Editors Herald:—On May 22 I reached Manchester, Texas, and labored there two weeks. On June 7 I went thirty miles south to Blossom Prairie. One family of Saints live there. Preached three days and returned to Manchester. Only small congregations met with us. Bro. Elem Erwin was with me on this trip. On the 13th of June I came to this place in company with the same colaborer. We labored here till the 26th, then moved to Douglass, where I remained till the 8th of July. Audiences here were small, but very attentive. Some good was done. On the 11th returned to this place and have been preaching ever since till yesterday, when we closed our meeting with two additions to the church.

While attending to baptism an enemy set fire to our arbor and burned it down. Bro. Erwin assisted me again at this meeting. The enemy is on the alert in Texas, and the work moves very slowly. The opposition is stubborn and malignant. Some men are very patriotic, to hear them talk, but act contrary to the first amendment to the Constitution—the fundamental law of the land. But we are advancing slowly here in Texas. We have no advantages as far as permits are concerned over the roads in Texas, which renders traveling more tedious and difficult. This is especially so to a man from the North.

It being so very hot my body now resembles a person with the measles. The heat is intense. I intend to move south in a short time, a call having come from Percilla to come and help them.

As ever,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

SELVIN, Ind., July 24.

Editors Herald:—We came to this place the 22d, and preached the first sermon last night. We shall continue a few more evenings if nothing prevents. We are occupying the M. E. church. We preached here three times three years ago and removed some prejudice, and so found most of the people glad to have us come back. We shall go to Tennyson Sunday, the 27th, and remain nearly a week, as Messrs. George and Elijah McNeely of that place are very anxious that we come. It is not a very good time for missionary work, but by God's help we are doing some good. Brethren, pray for us that our health may be restored.

In bonds,

HERBERT, Ala., July 24.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have been very busy trying to spread the everlasting gospel in these parts. I find the field white for harvest and but few laborers; but I am confident God will do his work in due time. The missionary can baptize people in nearly every place if he will only preach the gospel plainly and simply so the populace can understand it. Fine, flowery sermons will do very well to represent a man's smartness, but fail to represent Christ to the people. The best preachers the world has ever had are plain, simple gospel preachers. The world is well supplied with fine scholarship and oratory, but has few gospel preachers. What the people need is the gospel preached plainly and in power. Both learned and unlearned can understand plain preaching, but few can understand fine, flowery language. Take the people as a whole and they command a small vocabulary and they have something else to do besides going to the dictionary for the meaning of words. Preachers make a mistake by preaching over the people's heads. They will never be successful gospel preachers until they adapt themselves to the language of the common populace. Everybody admits plain preachers to be the best, hence if you want to be the best preacher tell the gospel plainly. Quote no Greek or Hebrew in your sermons.

I am holding meetings at this place with interest. Will go from here to Flat Rock. I have baptized several since last writing—a negro once, and white. Some became so stirred at Moss Point, Mississippi, that they threatened me with a dose of eggs; but I failed to get the argument. The Devil is not bound down yet, but will continue his work for a season. In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 26.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. A. Smith and myself are still at work with the district tent on the outskirts of the city. We now have been at this present location two weeks.

Very small audiences greet us, but they are attentive. Sometimes it looks quite discouraging to think of continuing the effort, but we still strive on; some good may be done, we cannot tell. The Saints of Philadelphia have nobly supported us with their means so far.

We are as yet undecided as to where we shall next locate. We are now on Stenton Avenue, above Haines Street, Germantown. We will likely continue here the remainder of the month. We ask to be remembered to our heavenly Father by all the Saints.

Yours in the gospel,

H. E. MOLER.

BLUFF PARK, Iowa, July 28.

Editors Herald:—I spent Sunday commemorating the eighty-third birthday of the surviving sister of the martyred prophet. Sr. Salisbury had seventy-three of her descendants and friends to congratulate her upon attaining the age and passing it—limited by the Psalmist—four-score years. After feasting, Bro. Wint McGahan called the assembly together under the shade trees, a hymn was sung, and prayer offered by her son, Solomon Salisbury. The writer was introduced as the speaker of the occasion. We reviewed the many thorns she met in her young days and the few roses she was able to pluck as she ascended the hill of life; the sacrifices offered for the gospel she had embraced; that her life was lived in the most eventful period of the world's history—from the shearing hook to the binder; from the tallow dip and the pine knot to the incandescent light; from the goose quill to the phonograph; from the flail to the steam thresher; from the ox team to the electric car; from the stitch-stitch to the sewing machine; in theology from the terrible doctrine of despair to the glorious one of sunshine and hope, made so by her illustrious brother; from the darkness of the dungeon to the light of joy: A new world and alongside of the events of time the glorious gospel of Jesus in revealed beauty and power—God's kingdom on earth. Then the evidences of that kingdom and the divinity of the Book of Mormon, closing with an exhortation to all her descendants to put themselves in accord with the gospel of Christ by obedience to its mandates.

A gloom was cast over the assembly by the absence of Bro. Alexander Smith. Poor, short-sighted people we are! We invite an elder and say, "Come and visit us; spend some time with us; minister to us the spiritual, give us plenty of it; you have it in abundance," and never for a moment think that we should minister of our temporal to help them along. Why not be as liberal with what we have temporal as the elder is with what he has spiritual, and so balance accounts? So Alexander could not come for want of cash—temporal. Our elders have no way of making money. The railroads will not let them travel on their good looks, so the Saints who wish an elder to visit them, kindly take this hint—that the wheels be greased beforehand, when they send the invitation "Come." Don't rejoice when you read of an elder traveling on foot carrying his grip like a tramp, but at once see to it that you sacrifice and send him some of your abundance to let him hire a livery or ride in a car if the Saints cannot meet him or take him. And, elders, do not borrow! Just be brave and tell the Saints you need the money to travel, and it will come.

Arriving in Keokuk, I met the great kicker, James McKiernan, and I glory in his spunk. Just kick again, Brother James, when they impose upon you. Bluff Park reunion had been declared off because the willing would work and others were willing to let him; but it is on again. We met Bro. Alexander, who had come to the rescue. He and Bro. James had set the wheels in motion and the General Church Reunion was shaping into a thing of life. I had a very pleasant trip up the river—or rather, canal, with Bro. Alexander, he pointing out the scenes of his childhood, the forests where he hunted the turkey and the deer, the cooling spring, the old Nauvoo House as it loomed up to view, the Mansion, and the graves where lay the silent dead. While I contemplated the scene and entered into sympathy with my brother in his review, my eyes were attracted to the glorious beauty of the landscape. Like a sea of light the grand river moved on in majesty, the banks on either side fringed in a livery of green, reflecting back their shadows in the water, while cloud and sky seemed to vie with each other as to which could take the palm of splendor from my admiring eyes. Yonder a tall chimney, as tall downwards as upwards; see the dead tree mingling its gray length in shadow among the living green and then notice the shading as the eye runs backward. See that fish jump clear out of the water, catch the fly, turn a complete somersault, and back to his element he goes head first. Out goes a life to help perpetuate another's life. No consideration on the part of the fish; the little intelligent pleading eyes are never once thought of; it is only, "I want you." And now that same fish must swim for life else a bigger fish will catch him, serving him as he did the fly. As Samantha Allen says "Cur'ous, 'aint it?"

We near the Bluff. What is that building? It is the station where the Saints may get off the train right at the foot of the hill, and if they wish to climb and save the nimble sixpence which some one is—fish-like—waiting to catch, you may do so. The cottages are right on top of the hill. I bade Bro. Alexander good-bye and steamed over to Commerce landing, drove up Young Street past the Temple Lot where once in magnificent grandeur stood an unfinished temple, erected by the most willing, unselfish workers ever God gave life to, now vanished. I drove through fields of vineyards that can challenge any spot on earth, even the vine-clad hills of Bingen—"Dear Nauvoo," on the river. "For beauty and splendor as I saw the enchanting scene, I challenge John's sea of glass"

Yours fraternally,
JOHN A. ROBINSON.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 26.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing you we have organized a branch here to be known as the Grand Rapids branch. Its membership will approximate sixty at present. Bro. E. K. Evans was ordained and chosen presiding elder and J. A. Cavanagh was ordained and chosen presiding priest. There were thirty-six members present. The organization was perfected without a jar or even a dissenting voice.

Several were baptized during the last week, and more have given their names for baptism, which will take place in the near future. I am preaching every night and twice on Sundays, and cannot fill the calls. I have opened up the work at Alpine, Belmont, Englishville, and to-morrow night will speak at or near Dutton, a place where the restored gospel has never as yet been told. All of these places are from eight to twelve miles from this city. Nearly forty have been baptized since the 1st of January, and the end is not yet.

I wish to say to the brethren and Saints in Northern Michigan district, that as your field officer I will do the very best I can to help you as much as possible, so don't feel discouraged if I fail to reach all points as early as anticipated. Money is scarce, and time so precious, and there is so much to do I hardly know where to turn first. I wish the Saints in an unorganized condition would report to me the condition of the work in their respective localities that I may know just how they are getting along. The organized branches will look to Bro. J. J. Cornish to assist them in counsel and ruling matters, as he is their district president.

In bonds,
R. E. GRANT.

SPARKS FROM OUR ANVIL.

AFTER the conference at Auburn, Iowa, held the forepart of June last past, the writer tarried and lectured about the Book of Mormon, using sciopticon in illustrating. We also delivered a few sermons; audiences "from fair to good" in size.

From there we went to Dow City, tarrying two weeks, then to Benan, Carroll County, to assist in a grove meeting from 10th to 20th of July. Elders C. Derry and C. E. Butterworth present, the latter in charge. Meetings were spiritual and resulted in three baptisms. On the 17th the writer left for Deloit, Iowa, attending two-days' meeting; preached five times to interested audiences; social service on Sunday a. m. was good. Elder Derry left Benan for Harlan on the 18th. We go from here to Defiance the 22d inst., to erect tabernacle, Bro. Butterworth to be present the 25th, and he in charge. On the 25th and 26th in company with Bro. J. M. Baker we expect to attend a two days' meeting at Galland's Grove.

Am feeling well in the work of the Lord, and find much to rejoice the soul. Everything connected therewith appears so firm, and a divine certainty attaches thereto. Increased light comes "as the days go gliding by"; we behold new beauties causing an enlargement of faith, a strengthening of our hope, a confirmation of our expectancy. All this serves as nourishment to the soul and intellect, building up and establishing our life in the cause of Christ, which is primitive Christianity restored, and no mistaking it. It cannot be weighed in the balance and found wanting, for it is all there as God primarily ordained it. It has endured, unharmed, through sixty-six years of attack from the wisdom of the world. It has never withdrawn from being criticised; it has never feared a thorough investigation; never sought cover from the world's gaze; never faltered in its onward march; has always refused to compromise a single point at issue; has never offered an apology for anything it presented for man's consideration; has never feared a foe; its dauntless courage is born of truth's intrepid power; and we feel that

"Tis a glorious thing to be
In the light, in the light,
Which the Saints of old did see,
The true light of God."

It is our desire to abide in the faith, and partake of its benefits. We feel we have received much of good therefrom, and although poor we desire to make many rich. We are conscious that although we strive for the masteries we are not crowned except we strive lawfully. We would not injure anyone, knowingly, nor seek aught but their good. I would that all who claim to follow Christ would learn that evil speaking, gossiping, exaggeration, false accusations, etc., are not of God, neither are they prompted by his Spirit. Saints should live above all such things.

We glean a few extracts from an article appearing in the Mid-Continent, of July, 1896, issue; a Presbyterian paper. "The New Church." After speaking of the large number of churches Mr. Parker says:—

There is a restlessness on the part of a multitude of worshipers who seem determined to establish another church, which may be denominated for lack of a better name the Eclectic Church. Multitudes of men, many of them intelligent Christians, do not attach themselves to any particular, existing church organization, but worship wherever they find spiritual food suited to their wants. . . . When they fail to find in one church the intellectual and spiritual food demanded . . . they go to another church where these things are supplied. . . . They are too numerous, intellectual, and respectable to be called religious tramps. . . . this church seems to be growing to such proportions that it cannot be passed by with indifference, or disposed of with some uncomplimentary epithet, but it demands intelligent and serious treatment, for its very existence has been made possible by the probable defects of present church organizations.

The last clause evidently explains the presence of these Eclectics. What of the claim so long made by the preachers that all these evangelical churches were and are branches of Christ's church. Did Christ organize a defective church? Why do these Eclectics go from one church to another seeking spiritual food if all are fed by the Holy Spirit? If the true gospel is preached by them all, what are these Eclectics in search after? Again he says:—

The Eclectic Church is an admonition to organized churches to conduct their work in harmony with the principles of Christ's kingdom.

Precisely, but who of them is willing to surrender sectarianism in favor of Christianity proper?

The theology of the medieval ages was good enough for those times, but human statements of divine trust need revision from age to age.

Does he not tacitly acknowledge that people have been and are being fed on "human statements" instead of the "divine trust" itself? And these Eclectics are wearied of "human statements."

Truth is eternal, but the symbols of truth may be modified to suit the progressive conceptions of truth by men.

We have a new astronomy, a new botany, a new chemistry; . . . the stars are essentially the same as in the times of the Chaldeans, but there are various systems of astronomy.

If "the truth" as Jesus gave it had been taught instead of their vague "symbols," such a condition of affairs in the religious world might not exist. We may have a new astronomy, etc., but one thing is strongly patent—that a new gospel of Christ is among the impossibles. The Eclectics are in search for the gospel. Can the Presbyterians supply the demand? Private interpretation has cursed the world. Creeds are becoming obnoxious, and the truth as it is in Christ is being sought for, and the Latter Day Saints' Church holds the key, by divine providence, that can unlock and solve the problem now existing in the domain of religion.

Theologies are becoming putrid, and ecclesiasticism is a burden of oppression; doctors of divinity are becoming laughing stocks, and modern Babylon is trembling on the verge of dissolution. Their misconceptions and perversions of God's word are breeding contempt; the wisdom of their wise men is perishing, but the gospel of the Son of God is bound to win the laurels in the great conflict, and to shine forth as the glory of God and his Christ, and all the obedient shall

"Join the everlasting song
And crown him Lord of all."

A few days ago we were handed a bill containing a likeness of one, W. W. Blalock, who was holding a series of meetings at Carroll, Iowa. He has closed there and opens at Arion; two miles east of here, to-morrow evening. Upon this bill is printed the following which we give as an "eye-opener" and suggester to the ministry:—

The Christian Church is one of the most respectable religious bodies in the United States. We have ten weekly newspapers, fifteen Bible colleges, one hundred missionaries, five thousand preachers, eight thousand churches, and nine hundred thousand members.

We have had in our fellowship one judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, Jeremiah Black, two Presidents, Andrew Johnson and James A. Garfield, four Governors, R. M. Bishop, of Ohio, Ira J. Chase, Indiana, W. J. Stone, Missouri, and F. M. Drake, Iowa.

How is that as a bid for proselytes? Has the "Christian" Church the gospel and Jesus Christ in its ranks? If not, then of what avail are all such officers? In their church edifice at ———, there is painted on the wall back of the pulpit the motto: "No creed but Christ." We felt like taking a piece of chalk and writing underneath so to make it read, "No creed but Christ, and not much of him." Why? Because they "deny the Holy Ghost who giveth utterance;" deny the original form of church polity; deny many of the promises of Christ; deny the efficacy of several ordinances. Then surely our suggestion is not out of place.

We would that our "Christian" friends preached an affirmative rather than a negative Christianity. If what Christ and the apostles advocated as recorded in the New Testament was the Christianity of Christ, no man should have any hesitancy in declaring it as the counsel of God necessary for present uses. Certainly the Being who then gave it to the world as his conception of the right policy in religion should be willing to maintain it as the correct idea for to-day.

We so hold and teach, awaiting time's own decision respecting the matter. Respectfully,

J. F. MCDOWELL.

Conference Minutes.

DES MOINES.

Met with the Boonesboro branch, May 30; W. C. Nirk presiding, C. Scott associate; W. Johnson secretary. Branches reporting: Angus, Boonesboro, Des Moines, Valley, Newton, Richland, Oskaloosa, and What Cheer. Boonesboro report referred back for correction. What Cheer report referred back for approval. Elders reporting: C. Scott, W. Thompson, D. M. Rudd, W. C. Nirk, W. Johnson, W. H. Kephart, J. W. Morgan, N. Stamm, M. H. Cook, S. McBirnie, P. P. Batten, and Bro. Troughpear; Priests E. Rowley, J. Barnes, and Bro. Pratt; Teachers A. Freel, J. Clark, and J. Prosser. Bishop's agent's books and report audited and accepted on committee's report. Preaching by Brn. C. Scott, W. H. Kephart, and W. Thompson. Adjourned to meet with the Valley branch on the first Saturday in October.

Judge Culberson, of Texas, now a Congressman, has defended 110 men charged with murder in the first degree and has never had a client sentenced to death.

Sunday School Associations.

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.

Convention met in Atchison, June 19; Sarah A. Parker superintendent, assisted by Evan Davis; William Williams clerk pro tem. There are five schools in the district. Fanning, Netawaka, Topeka, and Atchison reported. No report from Scranton. A gain of one school since last convention. Adjourned to meet in Fanning, September 18, at 10:30 a. m.

PARK BLUFF SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

All Sunday school workers that expect to attend the Park Bluff reunion on August 21 to 31, 1896, are requested to meet on August 22 at eight a. m., the second morning of the reunion, for the purpose of organization and to perfect the program. This work is invaluable to the church, both in the missionary department and for the instructing and the encouraging of those already in. All should be interested. You that have met difficulties in your work, formulate them into questions and present for discussion. The leading workers of the church are intending to be there and we can expect good instruction and a profitable time. Let all come loaded with important questions on methods, etc, etc.

F. M. WELD, Chairman,
S. S. Committee.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Kewanee district Sunday school association will convene at Buffalo Prairie, Illinois, September 4, at two p. m. The schools of the district are earnestly requested to have reports from each school and forward to the secretary, also credentials for delegates, and a large representation from each school present at this session.

ALMA WHITEHOUSE, Sec.

Box 624, KEWANEE, Illinois.

On account of the change in the program, the convention of the Eastern Iowa district will meet August 21, at Fulton, Iowa, at ten a. m. instead of at one p. m., as formerly announced in convention notice. A "Model Sunday school" will be held in the evening. Let all the children come. The lesson for August 2 will be used, so all who are coming prepare yourselves and bring your Quarterlies and Bibles.

ELLA J. GREEN, Supt.

Miscellaneous Department.

REUNION NOTICES.

The reunion of Northern and Central districts of California will convene at Santa Cruz, California, at ten a. m., on Friday, September 11, 1896, and continue ten days. We have secured the same place where we held our joint reunion last year. It is a beautiful grove situated in East Santa Cruz, known as Vienna Garden, in which there is a large hall. The grounds, together with wood and water, will be furnished free by the Santa Cruz Saints. They have also appointed a committee to make arrangements with the different traders, such as bakers, butchers, vegetable peddlers, dairymen, etc., etc., to furnish the grounds with such necessaries at a reduced price. Board and lodging can be had near the grounds as cheap as at any town on the coast; meals at from 15 to 50 cents. Plenty of room to pitch tents on the grounds, which are inclosed with a good high board fence. Good pasture near for horses at 75 cents per head during the reunion.

Now let all come who wish and can, and come with the full determination of having a grand good time, and help to make it, and none will go away disappointed.

Those intending to come by rail can obtain one third rate return certificates by writing Bro. C. A. Parkin, 3010 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, California. See his notice in Herald of July 1, 1896.

BLUFF PARK GENERAL REUNION.

The General Conference of 1896 decided to hold a semicentennial reunion at or near Bluff Park, Iowa, and appointed a committee to make arrangements. The committee now announces that said reunion will be held at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, beginning August 21, and continuing until September 1, 1896, to which all are invited. This camp ground is located on a high and airy bluff on the banks of the Mississippi River opposite and overlooking the "city of beauty," Nauvoo, around which cluster so many memories hallowed by trials of the past. There is quite a village of nice cottages, a large, well-seated tabernacle for meetings, and an artesian well, springs, and cisterns to supply water, and ample room for tents. In fact, there is no place in this part of the country that possesses so many advantages, conveniences, and attractions.

The committee has agreed on the following named subcommittees to help in carrying to a successful completion this reunion: On grounds, cottages, and tents, James McKiernan and Daniel Tripp. Finance, E. L. Kelley, F. G. Pitt, J. S. Roth, and William Anderson, with authority to appoint assistants as they deem wise. On railroad rates, E. L. Kelley and R. S. Salyards. On music, F. G. Pitt and Alma Whitehouse. On speakers, Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley. On advertising in Herald, Ensign, and circulars, J. R. Lambert: in local papers, James McKiernan. On Sunday school work, F. M. Weld, James McKiernan, Sr. Whitehead, and T. A. Hougas.

There will be hay, straw, and wood on the ground for sale, and provisions of all kinds can be ordered from merchants in town and will be delivered at cottage or tent.

All those—who have not already done so—wanting to rent cottages, write to Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, inclosing a couple of stamps for reply and state about the size or kind and rate you are willing to pay. The price ranges from $1.50 (unfurnished) to $5 (furnished), and one room to four rooms. Also state whether or not you will take a tent and what size you want if you can't get a cottage, as the number of cottages are limited, and a number already engaged.

There is a boarding house on the ground where meals will be served to regular boarders for $3.50 per week. Transient 25 cents each for supper and breakfast, 35 cents for dinner. The boarding house is in the hands of the ladies of the M. E. Church, of Montrose. Those wishing lodgings at the lodging house must bring sheet and pillow slip and towel. Room, cot, springs, pillow, mattress, and blanket will be furnished at 15 cents per night or $1.25 for the ten days. Those wanting tents only or lodging only, write at once including stamps to James McKiernan, Box 225, Farmington, Iowa, so we will know how many tents to order. We will furnish the tents at as low a rate as practical. Terms on tents will appear as soon as we can ascertain something near the number wanted, as the price will depend somewhat on the number rented. Those who bring their own tents will be furnished ground free.

We are late in making these announcements, but accident and unforeseen difficulties and delays have made it impracticable to get a full understanding sooner, and we did not want to announce until we were sure of the arrangements.

Yours respectfully,

JAMES MCKIERNAN,
Chairman of Committee.

BLUFF PARK REUNION SPEAKERS.

The committee on speakers has selected the following named persons as speakers: Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, Joseph R. Lambert, Heman C. Smith, E. L. Kelley, C. Scott, F. A. Smith, and T. W. Williams. F. G. Pitt and Alma Whitehouse committee on music. Other speakers will be present who will assist in the work.

The above-named persons will please consider the publication of this list a sufficient invitation and notification to cause them to be present for duty, if no other more formal invitation is sent out.

The cottages are all now engaged. Those wishing accommodations will have to take lodgings or rent a tent, or go in with some one who has a cottage. In either case you had better bring bed tick, pillowslip, and towels in your luggage.

Mr. Cassady will have two hacks to convey passengers and baggage from ferryboat and depots to Bluff Park at the following rate: Passengers from Montrose depot, 15 cents; Bluff Park depot, 10 cents; trunks 25 cents; valises 5 or 10 cents, according to size. Excursions to Nauvoo and return, including ferriage, 10 persons, 35 cents each. Free excursion by Steamer Vanmeter from Montrose to Keokuk and return to trade Mondays and Fridays. Come right along to Bluff Park General Reunion.

JAMES MCKIERNAN,
Chairman Reunion Com.

TENT NOTICE.

Will the Saints and friends interested in the Southwestern Missouri reunion (to be held at Midway Park, on the Southwestern Missouri electric railway line, between Webb City and Joplin, from August 21-30) and that are in want of tents for and during said reunion, please order them at once. Tent rate will be as follows: 9½x12 wall tents each $1.10; 12x14 wall tents each $1.50; canvas cots each 25 cents; good double blankets each 25 cents; pillow cases not filled each 5 cents; gasoline lamps each 25 cents. To the above rates freight charges will be added from Kansas City to Joplin and return, whatever that may be. If I can get your orders at once all can be shipped at once (and save expenses), set up, named, and numbered, before the reunion begins, which will save trouble and confusion. Write your wants plainly to me at Jasper City, Missouri.

J. C. CHRESTENSEN,
Sec. Reunion Com.

July 29, 1896.

REUNION WITHDRAWN.

We are sorry, yes sorry indeed, after all the work the committees had accomplished, to be compelled to withdraw our reunion that was to be held at Arrington Station, Wayne County, Illinois, because of speakers being engaged elsewhere, coupled with shortage of finance.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

NOTICES.

Those coming to the conference of the Eastern Iowa district, come to Maquoketa on the morning trains, as all trains will be met Friday morning only. Fulton is seven miles from Maquoketa, and Sunday school convention convenes Friday afternoon.

JOHN HEIDE,
Pres. Fulton Branch.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

At the conference of the Kewanee district, held at Canton, Illinois, two days' meetings were ordered to be held at Millersburg, September 12 and 13; also at White Eagle, the third Saturday and Sunday in September.

ALMA WHITEHOUSE, Sec.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Kewanee district conference will convene at Buffalo Prairie, Illinois, September 5 and 6. An invitation is extended to all Saints to attend who find it convenient to do so.

ALMA WHITEHOUSE, Sec.

The Colorado district conference will convene with the Denver branch, August 29, at ten a. m. All who possibly can are respectfully invited to attend. All the branches in the district will please see to it that full reports are forwarded to the secretary in time to be in his hands at the opening session. The special attention of the Cottonwood and Eustis branches in Western Nebraska, are invited to this notice. As the Southern Nebraska district, of which they formerly formed a part, has been divided to conform with missionary lines on the ninety-ninth degree of west longitude, the above-named branches no longer form a part of that district. They are therefore at liberty to unite with the Colorado district if they desire to do so. And we cordially invite them so to do. Please send a full report by the hand of delegate if possible; if not, by mail to secretary.

GEORGE E. MCCONLEY, Sec.

STERLING, Colorado.

By arrangement with the General Reunion committee the Nauvoo district conference will convene at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, August 21 and 22, the first days of the reunion.

The district Sunday school association will occupy Friday, beginning at 10:30 a. m., and the conference proper will convene Saturday at 10:30 a. m. As we only have two conferences a year let us have a good attendance. All will want to attend the reunion, just make a little extra effort, and be there the very first day, and show by your works you are interested in the welfare of the district. All preaching services will be in charge of reunion committee.

F. M. WELD, Pres.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT REUNION.

Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. Elder Van Fleet occupied the stand. The speaker showed that Romans 12 represented the body of Christ, also that 24th and 25th chapters of Exodus were typical of the body or church. When God establishes his church he has his servants to follow the pattern laid out. The speaker explained in detail the organization of the church and its type as given in these chapters. The ark with its mercy seat and cherubims represented the First Presidency on earth, also in heaven. The candlesticks represented revelation, etc.

Elder D. L. Harris was the speaker of the evening; text, Matthew 24: 4, 5. Does the good book teach that Christians are liable to be deceived? The speaker showed from the Scriptures that there would be many deceivers, and proposed to show how to detect them. A false teacher will not teach all the truth. They say certain gifts are not needed. "Our gospel" came "in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." These were needed to confirm believers and detect deceivers.

Elder Joseph Luff arrived unexpectedly, late this afternoon, much to the joy of the Saints. He is feeling quite unwell but thinks after a little rest all will be well.

Thursday 2:30, Elder H. L. Holt was the speaker; text, 1 Corinthians 3:10-15. We must build upon the true foundation; of proper material. We are promised temporal blessings as a reward for keeping the the temporal law. This is good, even if no higher motive is present. Having testified of a knowledge of the truth we are under greater responsibilities. Elder Luff in closing testified that the blessings of the Lord followed those who keep this law.

Elder Joseph Luff spoke at eight p. m., using as a basis Isaiah 55:8, 9. It is inconsistent to look into God's word for guidance and direction, and then attempt to correct or modify the instructions there given. God's object is to bring man to a unity of the faith. "He set some in the church," etc. (1 Cor.

12:28.) What for? (Eph. 4:11, etc.) Paul said there was one Lord, one faith, etc. Now there are many faiths. Man has attempted to improve on God's plan, but has made a sad failure. It is said Jesus paid it all. This is not true. The Bible does not teach it. To believe alone in Jesus Christ is not sufficient. We must believe in him as a witness, a leader, a commander. We must believe in his life work as well as his death.

Friday, 9:30.—At the morning prayer service Elder N. Van Fleet was ordained to the office of high priest by Elder Joseph Luff.

Elder D. L. Harris spoke at 2:30 p. m. from Romans 1:16. The speaker showed that had the Saints obeyed the word of the Lord they would now have been in possession of the land of Zion. It is possible to have faith in God, in Jesus Christ, and in the gospel, and yet not have sufficient to keep all his commandments. How is it with us to-day?

The eight p. m. sermon was by Elder Joseph Luff. Ecclesiastes 3:14, 15, What God doeth he doeth it forever, etc., and 1 Corinthians 12:28, God set some in the church, etc. God is the common Father of the race. Whatever he ordains for the race, is for the whole race. God's works are perfect from the first, and cannot be improved upon, while man is constantly adding new discoveries and improvements. Man learns and improves, but no improvements in God's works. The speaker showed that God's wisdom is perfect, therefore what God doeth he doeth it forever. "God set some in the church" in ancient times. He did it forever. The sermon was an unanswerable argument for the continuation of the church after the pattern laid down by the Christ.

Saturday, the 18th.—At 2:30 p. m. business session was held. Downey was chosen as the place; as near the Fourth of July as practical, the time; and R. R. Dana, Joseph Chester, of Los Angeles, and J. Scott, of Garden Grove, as the committee for the reunion of 1897.

Preaching in the evening by Elder H. L. Holt; text Isaiah 55:4. A good gospel sermon.

Sunday, the 19th.—Prayer service began at eight o'clock, in which Elder D. L. Harris was ordained a seventy as provided for by General Conference, under the hands of Apostle Joseph Luff and H. L. Holt of the Seventy. Also fourteen who had been baptized the day previous were confirmed. Two more were baptized during the day, making sixteen in all baptized at this reunion.

At 10:45, sermon by Apostle Joseph Luff; texts, 1 Corinthians 12:1-7; 2 Corinthians 5:7; Ecclesiastes 10:10. More care is needed among the people of God than among others. The gospel is commensurate with all the moral exigencies of the race. It pledges an emancipation of every man from every evil. The Spirit of God is diverse in its operations in order to meet every condition of the Saints. The character of every person should be transformed to the perfect image of Christ Jesus. We have not learned of any better way of meeting the conditions of this life than that taught by the apostles. The superficial thinker, deep student, and all classes are brought into the fold of Christ; hence there must be at first some variance between them. One man should not expect another to come all the way to meet his views. Each should abide the counsel of God. Both may travel in opposite directions and still approach a common center.

The church is an arena in which the counsel of God is reflected in the character of those brought into it. A man should prepare his tools to do good work; so God's people should prepare themselves by examining whether their will conforms with God's. This requires close self-examination. The blunt instrument should be ground down by the stone. So our characters should be refined by a grinding process, that the work we do should not be a disgrace to the church or ourselves. In our intemperate zeal we have led people to come into the church under a false apprehension. These should be taught that sorrows as well as joys will be met. Faith in God should teach us to bow submissively to his decrees. The object of all gospel truth is to form character. All the thanks that God wants for his blessings is the building of our characters.

The 2:30 sermon was by Elder Charles Baly. "Take heed to the doctrine." The speaker showed that the propositions laid down in the Bible are susceptible of demonstration; thus differing from any other book except the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. Relating to religious matters, the speaker plead for an impartial examination, with the promise that "He that doeth the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine."

At eight p. m., preaching by Elder Joseph Luff; text, Matthew 16: 26; James 5: 2; John 10: 10; The Savior had reference to spiritual life. The body without the spirit is dead; so is the church without the Spirit of God dead. The speaker maintained that man is not totally depraved naturally but may become so. Christ was the life and the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. The church that has not within it the power to communicate life to those who are in it, is dead. The speaker showed from Revelation 12th chapter that the woman represented the church in its spiritual character. The man child was the life or soul of the church. The church gained the world and lost its soul or life. What shall we do to get back the soul or life of the church? A grand gospel sermon, bristling with points polished by the Spirit, and replete with rich food for thought.

Thus closed our fourth reunion at Downey. The preaching was of a superior character, the prayer and testimony meetings were spiritual and marked by the exercise of the gifts, and a very social time was had among all present.

W. P. PICKERING.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

Dear Brethren of the Southwestern Texas District:—In Compliance with your wish expressed in and at your last local conference held at San Antonio, Bishop E. L. Kelley has appointed me to act as Bishop's agent. A more worthy man never held the keys of any trust than Bro. C. D. Johnson, who, by his own request, has been removed from this office. And so far as my efforts are concerned, I cannot expect greater proceeds than were obtained by him. For you well know that during the few years that Bro. Johnson has filled the office he has been a faithful servant of God and his people. If, therefore, you should feel more the weight of your own responsibility in helping to carry on the work of God and put forth a greater effort than you have ever done before, and if you will resolve to do this carry and your resolutions into effect, then as an unworthy servant of the most high God I am ready to guarantee prosperity to you and the work. We read, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes."—Mal. 3:10, 11. I. T.

Then as God has said prove him, we cannot be out of place in doing so. Then let us go back to the days of Abraham, who was the first Hebrew we read of, and follow the children of God through all ages down to the present time, and find, if we can, where God has in a single instance failed on his part. He says, "Prove me." And when we prove God a failure, then, and not until then, let us fall into doubt. "Wherefore, Abram paid unto him tithes of all that he had."—Gen. 14: 39. I. T. "And he lifted up his voice, and he blessed Abram, being the high priest, and the keeper of the storehouse of God; him whom God has appointed to receive tithes for the poor."—Gen. 14: 37, 38.

Surely Abraham was one of the favored of God. And do we not believe that "God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him"?—Acts 10: 34, 35. I. T. And again we read, "Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year," (Deut. 14: 22. I. T.) and this "that the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come and eat and be satisfied."—Verse 29.

We surely cannot expect the fullest blessings of heaven until we have complied in full with the law of God. That law is perfect, and will make us wise unto salvation. Then let us be wise servants, learn the will, the whole will of God, and do it. For it is said, Thou shalt live by every word that comes from God. "Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people."—D. C. 64: 5. The Lord is merciful to his children. Then I am safe in saying that when the whole law is complied with he will bless those that will so do. May the Lord bless the work in the South and all over the mission, and be a stay and a comfort to the weary and wandering children of modern Israel, and hasten the great day of his coming when we shall no longer prophesy in part, see in part, neither know in part, or see through a glass darkly, but see as we are seen and know as we are know, and be remembered by him when he comes into his kingdom, when the light of his countenance will light the earth, and all these things which are in part be no longer needed, and the faithful will hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," and the pure in heart see God and his Christ, and reign with him a thousand years. Until that time may the God of heaven, of peace, and of love, with the mighty power of his strong arm, hold you up through all the fiery trials of life, and bring you before the bar of God without a blush or shame of having omitted any part or portion of his law, is ever my prayer, for the sake of Christ. Amen. L. L. WIGHT.

BORN.

BOODRY.—At Bluff Center, Nebraska, December 13, 1895, to Bro. Leslie and Sr. Dora A. Boodry, a daughter; named Ila. Blessed May 14, 1896, by Elder C. H. Porter.

HEFFNER.—At Guide Rock, Nebraska, January 25, 1891, to Mr. Henry and Mrs. Bertha Heffner, daughter; named Annie May. Blessed July 7, 1896, by Elder C. H. Porter.

AULT.—At Naponee, Nebraska, August 13, 1895, to Bro. Lee and Sr. Mary Ault, A son; named Floyd. Blessed July 19, 1896, by Elder C. H. Porter.

ELEFSON.—At Woolstock, Wright County, Iowa, to Oliver and Amelia Elefson, June 16, 1896, a daughter. Blessed July 21, 1896, at Woolstock, Wright County, Iowa, by Elder C. Scott, and named Florence Mable.

DIED.

HAWLEY.—Bro. Clarence W. Hawley, at Osage, Minnesota, July 6, 1896. He was in bathing and swam across the mill pond and on his return he went to the bottom and rose no more. It is supposed he broke a blood vessel, as he was bleeding quite freely when taken from the water, about thirty minutes later. He was born July 21, 1874. He and his brother, who had just gone before him, were baptized at the same time, June 9, 1894, at Pelican Rapids, Minnesota, by Elder Swen Swenson. Clarence was teaching school at or near Osage, some forty miles from home, and was in high standing as a teacher. He was loved by all, which was manifested by the large attendance at the funeral. Sermon was by I. N. Roberts at the Baptist church in Detroit, assisted by T. J. Martin and the Rev. Mr. Hall, pastor. Bro. and Sr. Hawley have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement. Who will be the next?

BOLTON.—At Oakland, California, June 16, 1896, Ann C. Bolton. Born in London, England, March 10, 1815. Funeral sermon by Elder C. A. Parkin, on the redemption of man through Christ; consciousness of the dead; and the preexistence of man, and the especial blessedness of those who "sleep in Jesus." Quite a number of the Oakland Saints attended and some of the San Francisco branch. She was interred in the "city" cemetery, at San Francisco. Services at the grave by Elder Joseph Vernon, of Oakland. Her rest will be glorious.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, color, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,
P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

JEW IN PALESTINE.

THE WAY BEING PREPARED FOR THE PREDICTED RETURN OF THE JEWS TO THEIR OWN LAND. — AN AMERICAN TRAVELER'S OBSERVATION.

SOME notable facts of deep interest to students of prophecy are reported by Dr. Harvey B. Greene, of Amherst, Massachusetts, who returned last week from an extensive tour of several months' duration in the Holy Land. Dr. Greene, as our readers may remember, is the eminent botanist who made the collection of familiar flowers of the Bible from which were made up the floral Albums issued by the Christian Herald. Dr. Greene has been busy since the beginning of the year in and around Jerusalem, in Galilee, and east of the Jordan, searching for the flowers referred to by Bible writers. His quest took him into all parts of Palestine and brought him into contact with the people who now live there in the villages identified with the lives of our Lord and the Patriarchs. He had consequently unusually good opportunities of learning the present condition and character of the people and comparing them with those he observed in them in his former visits.

One of the first matters forced upon his attention was the prominence attained by Jews in Jerusalem, Jaffa (the ancient Joppa), and other towns. In some streets, notably in Jerusalem, nearly every store is in the hands of the Jews. Going out on the first morning after his arrival in Jerusalem to purchase implements, etc., for his work he was surprised to find the principal stores closed. He could not understand the suspension of business at first, but looking up at the signs he recognized the Jewish names and remembered it was Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath.

Dr. Greene learned that there are fully forty thousand Jews in the city, which is double the number there were there fifteen years ago, and they are growing in numbers and influence. The number who went there at the time of the exodus from Russia some ten or twelve years ago, was so large that the Sultan issued a special order forbidding any Jew of Russian birth to settle there. Those who had settled were not to be disturbed, but no more were to be admitted. Some, however, do gain admission still by the familiar method of backsheesh. With Jews of other nationalities there appears to be no difficulty. Dr. Greene was much interested in one colony managed by Jews. The property had been acquired by fifty families, and five families have been sent forward to occupy the ground and prepare it for cultivation. The five families are supported by the other forty-five, who furnish them with implements and materials. When they report that the colony is ready, the forty-five families will come out and take possession. The tendency, however, still is to settle in the cities, the Jew preferring trade as an occupation, to the tilling of the soil.

When we consider how many promises there are of the Jews being once more in the possession of their own land and the statement that they will be there when our Lord comes, these facts observed by Dr. Greene are very significant. The way is evidently being prepared for their return and the advance column is already in possession. To this must be added the suggestion of Holman Hunt, the famous artist, that the Jews should lease Palestine from the Sultan, giving him guarantees of increased revenues, a proposal which Mr. Hunt says he would favorably consider.—Editorial in Christian Herald and Signs of Our Times, June 10, 1896.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE.

AS COMPARED with the nourishment they give, fruits and nuts have the least proportion of earthy salts. Animal flesh comes next, then vegetables, and fourth in rank we have cereals and pulses, which are shown to have the largest amount of the earthy matters. From the analysis we see that fruits as distinct from vegetables have the least amount of earth salts. Most of them contain a large quantity of water, but that water is of the purest kind—a distilled water of nature—and has in solution vegetable albumen. We also notice that they are to a great extent free from the oxidized albumens—glutinous and fibrinous substances; and many of them contain acids—citric, tartaric, malic, etc.—which when taken into the system act directly upon the blood by increasing its solubility, by thinning it; the process of circulation is more easily carried on and the blood flows more easily in the capillaries—which become lessened in calibre as age advances—than it would if of a thicker nature. These acids lower the temperature of the body and thus prevent the wasting process of oxidation, or combustion in the system. Exhilarating and stimulating effects produced by tea, coffee, and chocolate are caused by theine in tea, caffeine in coffee, and bromine in cocoa or chocolate—the latter containing a smaller percentage of the stimulant than the others. All have a similar alkaloid base. Milk has become extremely popular with all classes of physicians of late years. Formerly a fever patient was forbidden to take milk. In modern practice milk is about the only food allowed. An exclusive diet of milk is found very efficacious in diabetes. At the German spas, Carlsbad, Wiesbaden, etc., a very little bread is allowed and the diet mostly made up of milk, eggs, grapes, and lean beef. A non-starch diet is the rule, bread, starchy vegetables, and cereals being almost excluded. Rice is easily digested and an excellent food, except that it abounds in earth salts. Fruits are not only digested in the first stomach, but they have a large part of their nourishment already in a condition to be absorbed and assimilated as soon as eaten. The food elements in bread and cereals have to undergo a process of digestion in the stomach, and then be passed on to the intestines for a still farther chemical change before they are of use to the human system. This is the great advantage of a diet of lean meats and fruits.—

near, in North American Review for August.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

GENERAL HARRISON CONSIDERS IT THE NATIONAL POWER PLANT.

"THE Treasury Department is the steam plant from which all the other departments get their power," writes ex-President Harrison in an article on "The Secretary of the Treasury," in August Ladies' Home Journal. "In the ordinary operations of government it is only a collecting and disbursing agency—collecting such taxes as Congress has authorized, and paying out the money as directed by law. It would be an ideal condition of things if the Treasury Department received each morning just the sum of money it had to pay out that day—no surplus money out of use in its vaults, no deficit to be met by loans. But things cannot be so nicely adjusted. Wars make burdens that a single generation cannot bear, and they must, in part, be put over upon other generations, by the sale of time bonds bearing interest. Out of the great expenditure for the suppression of the Rebellion of 1861 it has come to pass that the government furnishes, either directly or through the national banks, all of the money used by the people. The Treasury Department is now a great bank, and no longer a mere public collecting and disbursing agency. It issues paper money, receives it in payment of customs duties and internal taxes, and pays it out again for salaries, supplies, and public works. It is also required to redeem the greenbacks and treasury notes—to give coin in exchange for them if demanded."

THE YOUNG MAN'S LIFE WORK.

WHAT HE DOES NOT DO HEARTILY HE NEVER QUITE DOES.

"ANY man is unfortunate who devotes himself to an occupation that is vetoed by his own tastes and preferences," writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., discussing "Selecting a Career," in a paper addressed to young men in August Ladies' Home Journal. "The scriptural injunction, 'Whatsoever ye do do it heartily,' is one to be respected quite independently of the moral consideration that was weighed by Saint Paul when he wrote it. What a man does not do heartily he never quite does, which is to say, what a man does not do with his heart he never quite does. There are touches of excellence to which an effort does not attain except as it is the outcome of a certain amount of enthusiasm. Work is doing a thing because we have to. Play is doing a thing because we like to; and there is a great deal more of one's true self in what he does because he likes to. Only a part, and that the driest part, of any workman is enlisted till his endeavors emanate from a spot deeper down than the level at which he keeps his intelligence and his skill, and begin to flow out from the fresher and juicier regions of the heart. So that in settling this question of a vocation it is a matter of prime importance for a young man to decide what that particular business or profession is into which he can go without a remainder, into which he can throw himself in unreserved investment."

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-
MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE
AND COVENANTS ANSWERED
AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

COMPENDIUM OF FAITH.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—1. Should all the bread and wine that is blessed for the sacrament be partaken?

2. If not, what disposition should be made of the remaining?

3. Is this residue sacred?

4. Is it proper to ask God's blessing on all the food prepared for a meal and then consume only a portion of it?

Ans.—1. This is a matter of custom, to be regulated by the branch itself, there being no general rule about it. If a large branch, where the number attending sacramental service varies from a few to many, it is out of the question to so regulate the amount of bread and wine to be provided, as to furnish just enough to go round; and, hence, it is not practicable for all to be consumed at every session.

2. The same disposition that should be made of any other residue of sweet and wholesome food.

3. Not necessarily. The terms of the blessing are that the bread and wine shall be blessed unto "the souls of all those who partake of it." This does not so include the portion that may possibly be left over under conditions, that it makes it sacred, as the shewbread was supposed to be, lawful for the priests only.

4. The same is true of the food placed on the table. It is not all eaten, as it is usual that more than enough is made ready; and it would be almost an act of gluttony to sit at the table and eat all that might be there, because the blessing of God had been invoked on that portion partaken of by each.

These questions have been answered a good many times already in the HERALD. Some few branches have a rule that the bread and wine provided shall be continuously passed until all of both is eaten and drank. In a small branch where the attendance was regular this might be practicable, for just enough only could then be prepared, after the experience of a meeting or two; in large branches it would not be so practicable.

Q.—Is it right to soften or smooth down the law of the Lord against iniquity, or any form of evil, in order to root it out of the church (as we are commanded in Doctrine and Covenants) simply on the ground of the transgressors being sensitive in the extreme, or even on any other ground?

A.—It is not right to compromise with iniquity in any sense. However, the mission of the church is to save, which requires wisdom and longsuffering and patience in dealing with transgressors. No specific line of action can be laid down to meet the emergency referred to, outside of the general provisions of the law, which are both merciful and just, and require that the transgressor be persuaded from wrongdoing if possible, also that the law be honored. The conditions and circumstances surrounding the case referred to must determine the course to be pursued. A knowledge of human nature with a love both for humanity and the good of the church will enable the one dealing with the transgressor to deal wisely, to avoid extremes, and in nine cases out of ten to influence the erring one to do right.

Q.—How long may a member of the church willfully absent himself from the services, before a charge of apostasy may be preferred?

A.—No specific time during which a member may willfully absent himself before being dealt with is given in the law. It is our personal opinion that if after patient labor and friendly effort to persuade to "go to the house of prayer" the member manifests no disposition to maintain his spiritual standing, he should be dealt with, either by suspension of membership for a time, or otherwise. Mere enrollment with spiritual indifference does not constitute membership in the church in the true sense. However, care should be taken that no one be either suspended or expelled who might be saved to the church and to their eternal good; but withered branches cumber the spiritual ground of any branch organization.

Q.—Will a man who has been born a cripple, or deformed by being minus any essential part of a perfect body, either by birth or subsequent accident, have a perfect body restored to him at Christ's coming or any time thereafter?

A.—Yes, certainly; God is to perfect the works of his hands. "The spirit and body shall be reunited again, in its perfect form," etc. Read Doctrine and Covenants 28:6; Alma 8:10.

Q.—What, according to our time, is to be considered early, either morning or evening, with regard to retiring or rising, as referred to in section 119, paragraph 9, Doctrine and Covenants?

A.—We should think that from nine to ten o'clock for retiring and from five to six o'clock for arising—with the hours of nine and five o'clock preferred—would be an approximate time to the spirit and letter of the commandment for an adult, unless some specific condition required a change in special instances. It is well-known that sleep in the early part of the night is more beneficial than that taken after midnight; hence the importance of retiring "early." The early morning hours are invigorating; sleep beyond the proper hours of arising is often enervating and a cause of intellectual stupor or drowsiness, unless one has lost sleep by late hours, etc. Nature teaches in harmony with the revelation—"early to bed and early to rise." Children, of course, require earlier and longer hours of sleep. The tendency to late hours almost always results from habit, but the habit may easily be corrected if one desires.

Q.—May it be considered according to the pattern for an elder or priest to use a rubber suit for baptisms? If wrong, would it be justifiable in case the elder or priest has only one suit of clothes with him?

A.—It might be, but we prefer to baptize without the rubber suit. Convenience caused the adoption of sprinkling in lieu of baptism, and we think it may go so far as to cause undue precautions against contact with water. We prefer to actually "go down into the water" with the candidate and to feel that we are "in the water." It is a type of cleansing and the better apprehended, by us at least, by actual contact. Personally, we would rather borrow another suit than to use the rubber. We don't like it, but would not say that its use was unlawful, though it might be. The liquid wave is refreshing and invigorating and has never hurt us, even in winter, with proper arrangements, which can easily be made.

Q.—Please show where the harmony is between the last two words of the second line of paragraph 3, "Another church" and the last two words of the second line of paragraph 5, "In all churches," of Sec. 51, Doctrine and Covenants.

A.—This revelation was given in Kirtland and when other Saints from New York State were gathering to Kirtland. The Kirtland Saints probably were unable to do more than to maintain themselves, unless by temporary loan to others about to join them; hence the provision was made that the means placed in the Bishop's hands be used for the wants of those to whose use it had been contributed. The words "all churches" refer to all branches of the church, the design being to make all self-supporting, not dependents upon the main body at Kirtland. However, should one branch wish to obtain help from another, help could be afforded, but as stated, and under proper regulations. This is as we understand it. The Saints at Kirtland were, as a rule, poor or in moderate circumstances. This with the prevalence of religious persecution from all the sects seems to justify the conclusion that the language was not designed to provide for loans to other religious societies. It might be done, and under a contract; but we know of no time when the church had means at her command for which she did not have abundant use in the prosecution of the work.

Q.—Where may the limit be placed to the first six and one half lines of paragraph 4, section 51, Doctrine and Covenants—the limit of reservation, I mean.

A.—The limit was and is to be placed by the integrity of the officer named who under the spirit of the law was to place it at the limit fixed by "a faithful, a just, and a wise steward." (Par. 5.) He, like others, makes report of all receipts and expenditures, and in his administration is required to "appoint unto this people their portion, every man according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs" (See par. 1), under the specific and general provisions of the law.

A BROTHER has written a little screed on equality, and asking us whether he is right. Answering from the standing point occupied by him in his article we answer, Yes.

There is no law of either God, or man, that makes it the duty of the careful and diligent laborer to share the results of his toil with the vicious, or idle, who toil not.

A strangely inconsistent idea has obtained with some and remains, that a man cannot secure a competency, or acquire wealth beyond his daily consumption, honestly, only as he does it by absolute hand labor; that means acquired by the use of money, property, or land, without personal labor is dishonestly gained. This is quite contrary to the teaching of the Master in the story of the talents. It is also out of harmony with the examples afforded by the cases of Abraham, Jacob, Lot, Solomon, David, of Old Testament times, and of Joseph of Arimathea, Lydia, of Thyatira, and some others of New Testament history.

That there are many at the present time, whose fortunes have been gotten by morally improper ways, none will dispute; but there are others who have by legitimate means fostered the little resulting from labor, until fortunes were assured.

We are not apologists for the rich; but we read that God said "ye might have been the richest of all people;" which cannot be interpreted, except by admitting that some would save and accumulate while others would have competency, and others only the results of daily toil, and others still cared for from the industries of the whole, being incapacitated to labor.

Those who by reason of misfortune fail to secure what is necessary to feed and clothe them have just claim on the laborer and the careful manager; but the idle, the brawling, dissatisfied, and discontented, who are faultfinders and enviers of their fellows, have not just claim; their situation is named in the sentence, "the idler shall not eat of the bread of the industrious." The average American lives beyond his means. His desires and affected wants are always ahead of his needs and income.

The result is, he is usually in debt, and a portion of his daily earnings is constantly diverted from the supplying of his daily needs and the legitimate "laying up in store," which ought to characterize every industrious man.

God has never yet offered a premium on laziness, nor offered a reward to the vicious. He has designed that to him that sows there should be a reaping time, to him that seeks there should be a finding, to him that labors a result in bread. And, this has followed since the world began; and must continue, with now and then an exception, for which none but he who knoweth all things can assign a just reason. It is unwise to murmur, unavailing to whimper and complain, and folly and madness to rebel, and seek by human wisdom only to withstand and overturn the conditions which make the exceptions possible. Let us then be industrious, patient, and wise, and "in due time we shall reap, if we faint not."

It is urged, now and again, that the spiritual leaders are responsible to some degree for the lapses from integrity and virtue that occur among the people. It is admitted, however, that this responsibility, in the Reorganized Church, is of a negative, rather than a positive nature, in that it is said that a correct life and virtuous conduct are not sufficiently taught and rigorously insisted upon.

We had supposed that the ministry, from the first to the last in standing and importance, had taught the principles of morality, virtue, and honesty, persistently, and as of the first necessity in a Christian and divine life; and that such ministry were constantly so teaching; that responsibility to so teach was imposed by their calling and their office; and we certainly believe this to be the case now.

There is nothing in the gospel that makes a place for, or winks at sin; or preaches license to murder, kill, rob, steal, lie, commit fornication, adultery, or anything like it; to commit prenatal murder in any of its forms; to distort the human form by any kind of human device, by which it is rendered incapable of performing all the functions of its being designed of God in the creation; to thwart, or prevent the carrying into proper fulfillment the laws of nature by which human life is conserved and the race perpetuated, or the doing of anything by which the race is dwarfed in physical stature and strength, or stultified in spiritual development. All these things are inconsistent with and contrary to the gospel, and he who does any of them will be held to answer to God, in the day when the books are to be opened and all men judged.

It may be true that there has not been a constant arraignment of the sinners in special forms of sin, and the supposed transgressors held up to the lash, but there has certainly been the closest of teaching of the positive rules by which men cease to be carnal and devilish, and do become spiritual and Christlike in thought, in wish, and in conduct.

THE city of Chariton, Iowa, the main line point from which one departs to reach Lamoni, is now receiving some attention from our missionaries, as states the Chariton Herald of July 30:—

Revs. R. M. Elvin and A. M. Chase, of the Latter Day Saints' Church, of Lamoni, have both been callers at the Herald office the past week. They are the men holding a tent meeting at the corner of Eighth Street and Linden Avenue. They say they are having good and orderly audiences and "doing well for a town where people's religious views are pretty well established already."

It is to be hoped that the item below is founded on more than mere rumor. The Turk has manifested his true inwardness to such an extent, that few doubt the duty of the great powers to drive him out of Europe or reduce him to the supervision or rule of another government. The world is too far advanced for the rule of the Moham-medan.

LONDON, July 28.—The Daily News will tomorrow say that the relatives of the Czar in England, Denmark, and Greece have submitted to the Russian Emperor official documents bearing upon the atrocities committed in Turkey, which have had the effect of alienating his Majesty's sympathy from the Turkish Government, and have given rise to the hope that concerted action will be taken by the powers that will put an end to the Turkish horrors.

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES TO BLUFF PARK GENERAL REUNION.

REDUCED rates have been obtained from the Western Passenger Association lines for the Bluff Park (Nauvoo) reunion.

This will give many an opportunity to be present and visit the historic scenes of the past and participate in the enjoyment of a general reunion of the church.

The rate fixed is one and one third fare for the round trip. The lines of railway over which said rates have been obtained run from Chicago on the east to the Pacific Coast on the west, and from the Dakotas on the north to the Gulf on the south.

For full particulars concerning lines of travel, etc., see announcement of committee in our miscellaneous columns.

It is to be hoped that the efforts of the General Conference committee will be seconded by a large attendance. The outlook is encouraging. Prospects are excellent and an extra good time is anticipated.

The reunion opens at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, on Friday, August 21.

THE record of the year, already startling, gives promise of being an appalling one in the manifestations of destructive physical forces. The statistics that accompany reports of destructive storms, etc., do not tell the complete story. It is also told in the poverty, sickness, and general disaster and despair that immediately follow in proportion to the extent of the calamities; also in their later influences upon the conditions of the people, affecting local and general sections as they often do for years to come.

The following tells the story of a recent tidal wave:—

SHANGHAI, August 2.—News of a terrible disaster, with great loss of life, has just reached here. A tidal wave, estimated to have been about five miles in length, swept in from the sea last Sunday and inundated the coast of Haichau, in the northeast of the Province of Kiang-Su.

The damage done was great.

Many villages were destroyed and it is estimated that 4,000 people were drowned. In addition an immense number of cattle perished, the rice fields were submerged and almost totally destroyed, with the result that a famine is feared in the district during the coming autumn.

Haichau is situated opposite Yuchan Island on the coast of Kiang-Su Province, which is on the Whang-Hai, or Yellow Sea. The surface is mostly level, which may account for the great loss of life. Kiang-Su is one of the most fertile provinces of the empire, and exports more silk than any other part of China. The Yang-tse-Kiang enters China through this province, the principal city of which is Nan-King.

THE brethren named below have evidently made a good impression on the people of Rolfe and Newell, Iowa, judging from the following and another friendly item which appeared in the Newell, Iowa, Mirror, of the 7th. The best of causes ought to make the best kind of men, and the best kind of men ought to make a good, a saving impression. It was because of this, no doubt, that the Savior declared to his people, "Ye are the salt of the earth," etc., or, as the Inspired Translation reads, "I give unto you to be the salt of the earth":—

The Latter Day Saints closed their meetings here Sunday night and have gone to Newell. During their stay here they made several converts to their teachings. These people are not Mormons and do not agree with the teachings of the Utah Mormons. The elders who conducted the meetings here, C. E. Butterworth, W. W. Whiting, and C. J. Hunt, are very pleasant men to meet and are always ready to explain any points in their creed. They made many friends here among those who do not agree with their religious belief.—Rolfe Argus.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. WILLIAM LEWIS, writing from St. Joseph, Missouri, July 31:—

We have more calls for the tent than we can fill. Bro. J. M. Terry and William Summerfield are now in Cameron, having full tent of earnest listeners. Bro. J. T. Kinman preached four times at Hemple, near his home. Friends came asking him to come and preach, which he did very satisfactorily.

Bro. J. W. Peterson reports from Dodgeville, Wisconsin:—

Expect to remain here about a week. Am having some conflict with a Church of God preacher. They are very much like us in many things. Whether he is the kind that "are not against us" or those that "scattereth abroad" I have not yet determined.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, writing from Bevier, Missouri, July 6, says:—

I baptized Bro. Palfrey, of Macon, last Sunday. All the family, but one boy, are now in the church. Had a splendid time at Macon, a thousand people out at our tent meetings, and the city preachers in the papers against us—we answered mildly.

Bro. W. S. Pender, Linn, Kansas, August 6:—

Lightning struck a residence last night about one hundred yards from tent, tearing down chimney and shattering the building some, but did not seriously harm anyone. Big rain here, which assures good crop of corn.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, Roslyn, Washington, August 6:—

Been having lively times at Orting; spoke twenty times; began here last night; will speak ten nights and baptize several, then on to Spokane for about ten nights. I am alone, but as Fred Douglas says, "One with the Lord is always a majority." Love to all.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE learn that Bro. and Sr. L. R. Devore arrived at San Francisco, July 29, from Papeete, Tahiti, after a voyage of forty-five days; both in their usual health. They will remain in the Pacific Slope mission.

We are informed that the San Francisco brethren are having success in their open air meetings on the public streets. They expect Bro. Joseph Luff to be with them by the 11th. Bro. J. F. Burton was expected to reach the city on the 2d inst., to make final preparations to sail for the Society Islands mission.

Mr. J. L. Mize, of Jones Mill, Alabama, writes of his pleasure in noting the plain differences in faith between the Reorganized Church and the organization claiming to be the church, in Utah. He is investigating the faith.

Bro. O. B. Thomas, writing from Low Moor, Clinton County, Iowa, the 3d inst., reports the general interest there to be very good. "Some seem to be very near the kingdom; one or two desired baptism, but met with opposition from their husbands too positive to be overcome at present."

Cincinnati, Ohio, received a second visitation of cloudbursts on the 1st inst. Hundreds of people were prostrated by the severity of the lightning, which was unusually sharp and vivid, and which, accompanied by high winds, did much damage in the suburbs of the city. Other points, west and south, report heavy and destructive storms on that date.

Prayer is requested in behalf of an afflicted lady residing at Battle Creek, Iowa—no name given—who is a Latter Day Saint in belief.

Bro. F. M. Slover writes that Bro. I. N. White has been successful in the White-Slover debate, near Parrish, Illinois. Particulars later on. Much interest in the discussion.

Bro. Edward Trimby, writing from Scranton, Pennsylvania, July 31, states that Brighamite elders are endeavoring to plant an organization, or rather, to secure converts at that point. He would like to see the Reorganization represented by a constant missionary effort.

Bro. C. M. Fulks, at Lehigh, Indian Territory, has had occasion to do considerable local labor in refuting the false claims of the Brighamites, who have baptized some in that locality. From his experiences with representatives of the Utah Church he is satisfied that polygamy is a cardinal tenet of their faith, whether practiced by few or by many.

By letter dated Brant, Michigan, the 29th ult., we learn that Bro. Hiram Rathbun, Jr., was laboring in that portion of the field. He had met with some old-time Saints who had rejoiced to meet a representative of the Reorganization, in which they recognized the faith and spirit of the early church. He was encouraged to continue labor for the cause.

Elders of the Southwestern mission are earnestly invited to visit Clyde, Callahan County, Texas, by Bro. F. M. Oldham, who is doing what he can to prepare the way for the missionary. He asks to hear from brethren laboring in that field.

Bro. Aug. Johnson, of William's Bay, Wisconsin, wrote July 27 that in his opinion a publication of paper, and tracts in Danish would not reach the Swedish people to any desirable extent. He thinks publications should be in the Swedish language. He was preaching among his countrymen last winter, and found that the printed word was a most necessary thing for successful work.

Bro. A. H. Smith left home on the 7th for Western Iowa. He will return en route to the Bluff Park reunion.

Bro. Fred A. Smith has been called home because of sickness in his family. He hopes to be able to attend the General Reunion.

Bro. G. M. L. Whitman's address is Blair, Washington County, Nebraska. He expects to resume work in the field at an early date; is now at work building a home.

Two hundred people were rendered homeless and property valued at $200,000 destroyed by a cyclone at Steubenville, Ohio, of late.

Rumor has it that King George, of Greece, will abdicate in favor of the Crown Prince if the great powers compel Greece to cease her operations to make the island of Crete a part of the Grecian dominions. Kings ought to abdicate, but the King of Greece has done well in almost driving the Turk from ancient Grecian territory.

The imposition of new taxes has caused renewed riots in the interior of Spain. The day is near when the people will refuse longer to sustain the war policies essential to the support of monarchical systems of tribute levying and expensive government.

We renew our request for terse reports or synopses of the proceedings of the various reunions now about to open their tents in the different fields. The main features of the meetings are all that are essential.

Heavy rains caused the Rama and Siquia rivers, in Nicaragua, to rise rapidly on July 29, doing damage estimated at $1,000,000.

Original Poetry.

CRY OF THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

"Softly as the breath of twilight,
Like a whisper through the grass,
Comes a footfall, faint, so faintly,
Through the shadows seems to pass;
Draweth nearer; will they hear him?
Sad he seems and all alone.
Hush! He cometh! calling, calling,
And He seeketh for his own.

"Come, ye wayworn, wandering children;
I have sought you far and near;
I am come to soothe the weary,
Come the broken heart to cheer.
Would ye taste the crystal waters?
Would ye feast on heavenly bread?
Follow me, and in my footseps,
Safely, sweetly, ye may tread."

THE APPEAL OF THE SONS OF GOD TO THE SONS OF MEN.

"Sons of men, why will ye linger?
Day is fleeing, night is nigh;
See, He passeth! softly, slowly,
Sons of men, why will ye die?
Still he waiteth, still he calleth,
Through the mists and shadows dim.
Unto whom else are ye calling?
Unto whom, if not to him?"

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till rainbows span it;
Breathe the love that life endears,
Clear of clouds to fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto souls that shiver;
Show them how dark Sorrow's stream
Blends with Hope's bright river.

CHILDREN'S RIGHTS.

A CHILD'S first right is the right to be well born. By this we do not mean born to an inheritance of riches, but born to an inheritance of physical, mental, and moral health. The law of heredity is God's rendering in Nature of his law promulgated from Sinai, "Visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments." This is no arbitrary law of an arbitrary law-giver, but an immutable scientific fact. Dr. Elam, in his work on "Natural Heritage," says: "All the passions appear to be distinctly hereditary: anger, fear, jealousy, libertinage, gluttony, drunkenness—all are liable to be transmitted to the offspring, especially if both parents are alike affected, and this, as has often been proved, not by force of example and education merely, but by direct constitutional inheritance." Dr. Horace Bushnell says: "Take a parentage that has in it all the dyspeptic woes of gluttony and self-indulgence, one that is stung and maddened by the fiery pains of intemperance; one that is poisoned and imbruted by the excesses of lust; one that is broken by domestic wrongs or exasperated by domestic quarrels; one that is fevered by ambition, or soured by morbid humors of envy and defeat; lengthen out the catalogue, take in all the sins which in some true sense are also vices and have their effect upon the body, how is it possible on any rational principle of physiology that the children who are sprung from this distempered heritage should be as pure in their affinities, as close to the order of truth, as ready for the occupancy of all good thought, as well governed before all government, as ductile, in a word, to God, as they that are born of a glorious lineage, in faith and prayer and God's indwelling peace? It is a most dismal and hard lot as every one knows, to be in the succession of a bad, a vicious parentage. No heritage of wealth can repay, or more than a little soften, the bitterness of it. The real and true beginning of a godly nature is this: the child is not to have the sad entail of any sensuality, or excess, or distempered passion upon him. The heritage of love, peace, order, continence, and holy courage is to be his. He is not to be morally weakened beforehand, in the womb of folly, by the frivolous, worldly, ambitious expectations of parents concentrating all their nonsense upon him. His affinities are to be raised by the godly expectations and prayer that go before; by the steady and good aims of their industry, by the great impulse of their faith, by the brightness of their hope, by the sweet continuance of their religiously pure love in Christ. Born thus the child will have just so much of Heaven's life and order in him beforehand as have become fixed properties in the type of his parentage."

A careful study of heredity shows a great and unexpected proof of the scientific accuracy of the Bible, and a correspondingly strong refutation of the assertion so often made, that there is a conflict between the Bible and science. Note the words, "to the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments." Inheritance of evil is limited to the third and fourth generation; inheritance of good goes on indefinitely, blessing thousands. One of the best established laws of heredity is that the evil taint, for example that transmitted by drink or tobacco, exhausts itself on the third, or at longest on the fourth generation. Often the family dies out by this time in consequence of this evil taint; but if it does not, there comes a total revulsion in the fourth or fifth generation, an utter loathing for that which their fathers craved. On the other hand, an inheritance of health, mental and physical, of genius, of high moral qualities, goes on indefinitely reproducing itself. The history of America gives many examples of this fact. The sturdy stock which gave to Franklin his strong, clear common sense, his dauntless moral courage, makes itself felt in his relative, Lucretia Mott. The Adamses, from that grandfather of the American Revolution, Samuel Adams, down through two presidents and a long line of descendants, show the "bent" for statesmanship. The Beechers show a similar "bent" for preaching. The Willards, at whose head stands Mrs. Emma Willard, mother of higher education of women, show the teaching faculty; while in the Abbotts, whose lineage and home we have sketched, we see the teaching and preaching faculties combined.

The fact that an inheritance of good has greater persistence than the inheritance of evil, lights up what would otherwise be the blackness of darkness, as we think of the innocent's suffering for the sins of the guilty, and makes this law one of promise as well as one of threatening. No stronger bar against the indulgence of evil habits or passion, no higher incentive to pure living can be set before men and women, than the fact that unborn children are to reap the fruit of their doing, whether it be good or whether it be evil.

Children's rights to a healthy physical inheritance are often violated ignorantly; indeed, the violation may grow out of the very best of motives. I remember a case in point. Among my friends was once an old lady whom I loved very much; she was a typical New England housewife; never a speck of dirt was seen on her premises; she was the best cook in the neighborhood, as well as the best butter and cheese-maker. When I knew her at seventy, she was hale and hearty, living on a farm, doing all her own work, washing included, and priding herself greatly, as well she might, on her strength. Two sons lived with her, but they, as well as her daughters who were married, were in poor health. The daughters were home on a visit and I was invited to meet them. During the course of the afternoon the mother said, "I cannot understand why it is my girls are not healthier! not one of you four can do as much work as I can do now. When I was your age I did more than all four of you put together can do." "That is just the trouble with us now," remarked the eldest daughter, "you used up our strength before we were born;" and it was a fact.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR AUGUST.

"Repent, repent and prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; yea, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost.—D. C. 32: 2.

Thursday, Aug. 13.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verse.—Mosiah 2: 3.

Thursday, Aug. 20.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—James 2: 1-8.

Thursday, Aug. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—D. C. 28: 2.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

Dear Primary Teachers:—I have been asked to give a few hints on the opening exercises of the primary room, and I have tried to pick out the ways that have seemed to me most helpful in my work among the little ones, with whom God has permitted me to plant the seed, and so I bring them to you. I hope you feel that your work is one of the most important in the Sabbath school, and that you, as well as myself, desire to do the best work possible.

We are dependent on each other in a sense, so I hope these few hints may help some who may have just started in the good work. I desire, first of all, to fix God's word in their hearts. Illustrations are good and I would use them; also the blackboard, but be careful not to let the picture or story cover up the Bible truth.

Let us, however, begin at the very beginning: First, Try to to be present to greet your scholars as they come in, inquire about their parents and show an interest in the everyday life of the family.

Second, When you are teaching new hymns be sure before you have your opening exercises to have one familiar hymn that all can sing.

Third, Have variety. Make them acquainted with the Scriptures. Take a few verses at a time, repeat them over and over, as they become familiar with them, add a verse or two until they have learned the Psalm or chapter. Sometimes it is good to take a Psalm and arrange questions and answers. Take the 112th Psalm for instance. Who is blessed? Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in his commandments.

What about his seed, will he be rich? etc. and you can easily make the questions and as easily answer them by using the commandments, the Beatitudes, the first, twenty-third, twenty-seventh, one hundred and twenty-first and many other Psalms that may come to you.

Fourth, Teach them to pray by having them repeat the sentences after you. It will be a little hard at first but in a little time you will not mind it. Use as simple words as you can, so that they will understand what they are asking for. This will help them to pray and not say prayers. Teach them that a person may say over a great many words to God and it is not praying, then tell them what true prayer is.

Fifth, Have a little march song of some kind, so that they will be rested and ready for the lesson.

Sixth, Take the Bible in hand and read a few words then have them repeat after you and so read the lesson together. God has promised that his word shall not return unto him void, so don't be afraid and say that they will not be interested. If you plead with God before you go, to give you just the message from his word that he desires taught, having made as careful preparation as you can, you will not be disappointed.

Seventh, Don't try to teach too much at a time but have the points so that they can remember them for the next Sunday's review. Make them so plain that they can live by them all the week.

Eighth, Try to have each one earn the money that they bring to help on God's work. This will teach them to sacrifice for God's work, so as they grow older it will become a habit with them. As far as possible urge the parents to cooperate.

Ninth, Help the children to see that they can work for God by bringing new scholars to Sabbath school. . . .

In working this way we can all be working together to build up Christ's kingdom on this earth, remembering always to try to do as Christ would if he were in our place.

Promptness and regularity in the schools are first principles in management and essential to their successful conduct. A faithful teacher is a prompt and regular teacher.

Letter Department.

WOODBINE, Iowa, July 31.

Editors Herald:—Believing that I am indebted to you for words of instruction and comfort, and realizing that the only way I can pay that debt is by trying to give comfort and encouragement in return to some poor struggling souls who like myself stand so much in need of it, I take this opportunity of contributing my mite to your pages.

My labors at present are chiefly in and around Woodbine, trying to keep the gospel stone rolling; but I am not very successful, partly because the professedly religious element have got all the religion they want (not all they need) and are so satisfied with their own righteousness that they have no desire for the righteousness which comes of the true faith, and partly because the avowedly irreligious are given up to the pleasures and evils of the world, hence have no taste for the things of the kingdom of God. Another reason, and perhaps not the least, is that we neglect our duties, because we lack the zeal that should characterize the children of God, hence we do not grow in the grace of God as we should and are far from being lively members of Christ's body. Is the slumbering time come? The wise and the foolish were all to be caught napping when the midnight cry goes forth; but the wise should store up plenty of oil before they go to sleep, and when their lamps are trimmed they will be ready to go and meet the bridegroom. Are we among the wise? God help us to see the necessity of filling our lamps, that his grace may be in our hearts, and his Spirit illumine our minds, that may be ready to go into the marriage feast. Then the cry, "Behold the bridegroom cometh" will be the sweetest music our ears ever heard.

But with all our deficiencies I find the majority of the Saints strong in the faith. In our meetings we are blessed with the Holy Spirit's presence, and our hearts are made glad as we "Speak often one to another," which is evidence that the closer we draw near to God the nearer he will draw unto us. Then let our faith be manifest in our works; for, we read that "the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith, as it is written, The just shall live by faith."

It has been my privilege to visit different parts of the field and see the workings of truth under different conditions, but I find its glorious effects the same wherever people embrace and live it. "One body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is through all and in you all." This same hope inspires all his children and this one God and Father is ours. This is evidence that we have not followed a cunningly devised fable, and the certainty brings peace to the soul.

It has fallen to my lot to memorialize the life and death of our dear lamented brother, Bro. Blair, several times, but owing to physical incapacity I had to request Elder H. O. Smith to preach the sermon in Woodbine after I had read a brief memorial of our departed brother's life as I have known him for over thirty-five years. Bro. Smith did well. I was afterwards invited to Persia, Galland's Grove, and Harlan to perform the same sad duty. In the three last places we had crowded houses, and in Woodbine a very respectable audience; but in Persia the M. E. friends gave up their service for the occasion and the minister offered prayer. In every place there was manifest a deep and abiding love for that man of God, and deep regrets at his departure from us, but also a resignation to the divine will, believing that "God does all things well."

I attended a ten-days' meeting at Benan in Carroll County, at the request of President Butterworth. The attendance was large each Sabbath, but the farmers were too busy in their harvests to attend in great numbers during the week. There was preaching every night whether the audience was great or small; preaching done by R. Montgomery, J. F. McDowell, and the writer, until Saturday the 18th, when it was left to Bro. Butterworth and local brethren. I learn that three were baptized. I went to Harlan on the 18th the Saints paying my way. I attended meeting there that night, as there was a two-days' meeting there, in charge of Elder James Baker, of Dow City, and Romanan Wight, of Galland's Grove. Bro. Wight delivered a good discourse on the prophetic calling of Joseph the Martyr. Elder James Baker delivered an excellent discourse in the afternoon, but I fear that Harlan is not hungering and thirsting much for the gospel of Christ, judging from the general attendance at the meetings. It is true there was a large and attentive audience at the memorial service, but during the week nights the audience was slim. The Saints generally seem devoted to the cause, and the old veterans stand boldly for the truth, and it occurred to my mind that among the younger officers of the branch there was talent and devotedness that would be heard, seen, and felt in that vicinity. I occupied the pulpit five times while there; I visited old Saints and friends and tried to cheer the afflicted. I was kindly treated by all with whom I came in contact, whether in the church or out, and I am thankful to say this is my experience everywhere among the Saints. I was presented with a beautiful large print "Pronouncing Bible" by Brother Brewster, and my expenses were paid by the Saints, and Bro. Brewster kindly brought me to Panama, and Bro. Wilder kindly brought me home after sharing his and his wife's hospitality during the night of the 23d, so that on the 24th I arrived home, according to contract with my family, that I might be able to spend the seventieth anniversary of my birth on the 25th inst. It has seldom been my privilege to spend the anniversary of that day at home and they desired me to do so this once.

Well, on Saturday morning at the breakfast table, I found a beautiful gold fountain pen under my plate, the gift of my family, and later on a dozen splendidly executed photos, illustrative of my ugliness, came by mail, the gift of Bro. J. O. Booth, artist of Harlan, and as I was busy poring over my books, I heard the rumbling of vehicles and looking up I saw a number of buggies stopped near my house, all filled with smiling faces, that had traveled from twelve to twenty miles to celebrate the anniversary of my birth. These were my old friends and neighbors from Magnolia branch, among whom I had labored at different times for over thirty years, and with whom we had lived fifteen years. Surprised? Yes, genuinely surprised, for I was caught that time for certain! I had come home to spend a quiet day with my family, never dreaming that anybody thought enough of me to come twelve or twenty miles through the scorching heat to celebrate my birthday, even though I was seventy years old; but I see that gospel ties are strong and enduring, and I thank God for such abiding love. It did me good, and was abiding evidence my labors had been appreciated; and in their loving thoughtfulness they presented me with a beautiful easy-chair, in which to recline in my old age. Elder Fy-rando made a neat presentation speech, brief, but appropriate; but my eloquence all evaporated in the words, "God bless you all." We spent a pleasant day together—my family, and Magnolia Saints, and friends. That day was an oasis in the desert of life, and will always be gratefully remembered by me. Why do I mention it here? Simply as an act of gratitude on my part for the kindness shown, and also to show that there are bright spots in the life of even a poor traveling elder.

Well, seventy years is not a very great age, but that is the number God has permitted to man, "And if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow." In looking back upon those threescore years and ten, it seems but as yesterday, when I was thrown a helpless waif upon life's troubled sea, and in viewing the struggles and trials, cares and perplexities through which I have passed they seem as nothing, though bitter for the moment, and I recognize them as part of God's method in schooling me for the work which lay unseen before me; and the only things I now regret, as I stand upon the threshold of eternity, are my dullness at learning and backwardness to apply the lessons taught, together with the many froward steps I have taken, both before and since I became an adopted child of God. It lacks but little of half a century since the Master called me into his ministry, then I said, "Here am I, Lord, send me." It was not for ease, nor worldly honor, nor for earthly gain that I laid down the hammer and left the anvil to take up the sword of the Spirit—the word of God; it was because I recognized God's kingdom as "a little stone, cut out of the mountain without hands;" and I desired to help to roll it forth and thereby secure to myself a part and a place therein. I cannot boast of the good I have accomplished; I only know I have tried to labor for God, and the result eternity must determine; and for my reward I trust to his boundless love and mercy. Indeed, I feel that I receive my reward day by day in the loving kindness God has shown to me and mine; but if I shall have succeeded in leading any to the Tree of Life, my joy will be infinite.

Brother Joseph, I appreciate your editorial in present number of the Herald, and especially that part in which you speak of the different fields of labor the elders occupy. I have been in all kinds, the rough and thorny, and the smooth and pleasant, the latter especially in my later years. I have tasted the bitter and the sweet, and I think I can appreciate the saying of the angel to John in Revelation 10, where the the angel presents to John the "little book," that signified the great mission, to "prophesy again before many peoples," etc., saying, "It shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey." No doubt the receiving of such great commission from God was sweet, but the experience would be bitter, making sad the heart to see the stubbornness with which his efforts to bless were rejected by the high and low. Such is the mission of every servant of God. It is pleasant to be a coworker with Christ, but to be spurned and rejected of men is better indeed.

I want here to tell my brethren, It is not the pleasant fields and easy circumstances with comfortable surroundings that yield the wisdom and knowledge, and develop the patient, loving, faithful qualifications of the heart and soul, such as shall qualify us to be successful coworkers with Christ, and fit us to "stand as saviors on Mount Zion." These qualifications are gained by experience in the rough, rugged, thorny paths of life. If our young men desire to grow and develop strength of character, with the excellencies found in the life of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they, like him, must take up the cross wherever they find it, and be willing to wade through trials and difficulties, and over the rough, uneven paths of life, going into the highways and hedges, hunting in holes and dens of the mountains for the wanderers, and fight for every inch of ground with the sword of the Spirit; hence the necessity of buckling on the whole gospel armor and launching out into the deep sea of life, trusting in God for the guidance of your fragile bark; and if adverse winds and angry waves seek to engulf you, cling more firmly to the promises he has given, and do not stop to send up a piteous wail of woe, because of a few privations and hardships you may be called upon to endure, "Knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed." (Rom. 5.) Then, "giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Peter 1: 5-7.)

I desire the prayers of all Saints that I may endure to the end in the fellowship and service of Christ. CHARLES DERRY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 30.

Editors Herald:—All is well with this branch of the church; we are holding the fort nicely, and still waging war against evil and the indifference of men. We are endeavoring to teach the way of truth, and free ourselves from all blame as far as showing our fellow men their duty toward God, is concerned. We have preaching at our hall twice each Sunday, and also hold Sunday school. We have prayer meeting every Wednesday evening, and for some weeks now our younger brethren hold meetings on the public streets every Monday evening, where they preach the word, distribute tracts, and cards, advertising our place of worship, and inviting all to attend. Quite a number of strangers are thus led to attend our meetings. We enjoy quite good liberty in preaching the word, and are always blessed in so doing. Many hundreds have heard the truth here, but for the result we must wait. As a rule we are all strong in the faith, anxious and willing to do our duty, and praying for the way to open up so that we can do more and serve the cause better.

In Herald of late date, I see my father's name mentioned among the missionaries at Tahiti. When Addison Pratt and B. F. Grouard sailed from America in 1843 or '44, Seth Smith Lincoln, a Baptist preacher, and his wife Priscilla H. Lincoln, were among the passengers. During the voyage they undertook to convert the elders from their errors, but were themselves converted to the truths they taught. On reaching Tahiti they were the first white persons baptized there, and I understand that my father was the first soul immersed there. He was ordained an elder, and from then on united his labors with the missionaries. As soon as there were enough converts they organized a branch of the church, and I learn from Elder Joseph F. Burton that my father was the first president of that branch. He remained there three or four years, and landed at San Francisco (then Yerba Buena) in 1847. Here he found a body of the Saints who had come from New York in the ship Brooklyn under Samuel Brannan, and after remaining here some time was made the president of the San Francisco branch. In the fall of '51 or spring of '52 my parents returned home to Boston, on a visit, and on going back to the Pacific Coast my father died on the ship just outside the "heads" near San Francisco. He died strong in the faith, never having accepted the dogmas of apostasy.

We have with us now in our city Elders Daley and Gilbert, and this morning I had the pleasure of welcoming home Elder Devore, who landed last night from Tahiti. He is looking fine and as young, apparently, as when he went away. I have not yet seen his good wife, as she had not yet come ashore, having remained all night on the ship. We are looking anxiously for Bro. Luff, and hope soon to see and hear from him. All the Saints here are well as usual.

The Mormons have established a branch here and hold regular services. The attendance at our services is fair, and the interest shown is good, and we make good impressions upon the minds of the hearers if nothing more, and we have the satisfaction of telling the good news. May God bless our efforts.

KAITANGATA, New Zealand, July 6.

Editors Herald:—We are still in the faith and striving to let our light shine. We go on the streets Saturday nights, when the weather permits, and we get a good hearing. The people seem slow to obey the gospel, but we leave the increase with the Lord. We go out and deliver tracts on Sundays, so we are preparing the way for the missionaries when they come. We are longing for some one to come here, for the harvest is great and the laborers few; but we hope the time is near at hand when some one will be sent; for it is a good field to work in.

We have had several interested in the work, but they have had to go away because work in the mines became slack in the summer; but they will take the seed with them. We pray our Father in heaven in their behalf. We are glad to hear of the work's progress in New South Wales. We trust it will increase the more.

We have a home for an elder when one comes; he will have plenty to keep him from wearying. We have no tracts but the Epitome, so our work in that direction is at a standstill till we get more; but I have some Heralds I can give to the people.

One time when I was preaching a man came to me with a stick, but he did not strike me. The Utah people are very strong on the north island and among the natives. The people took us for them, but we strive to let them know the difference. I think we have been among them long enough for them to see. Your brother in the gospel,

THOMAS DIXON.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., August 2.

Editors Herald:—I have not written to your columns since quitting the active ministry a year ago. This was not because my interest in the gospel of Christ has in the least abated, but because I did not feel that I could write anything of special interest.

I have been preaching as often as I could and do my work at the same time, and have been blessed with excellent liberty. Since Saturday evening, the 25th, I have spoken eight times and done my work, which latter is quite hard. The Spirit aided in every effort and there was evidence that good was done to the glory of the Master.

The Utah elders are busy, and the result will be good to our cause here, if we all stand firm and unitedly for the work. It is rumored that they have converted some, but I guess not. I think the opinions of the Saints here are what they have always been. It is to be hoped the branch officers will so perform their duties that all will understand the true position of both, and so choose the better and true way.

The tent work here is moving, but slowly. The only trouble I can see is a lack of laborers. The efforts of those in charge are, however, heroic and faithful.

I send a word of good cheer and greeting to the Saints of Western New York, Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and West Virginia, who know me. I hope to see you all again some day and to labor again among you for the Master; but I suppose it will be a good while in the future, if ever, when this wish is realized.

The saddest thought which came to me in leaving dear old Kirtland and that country was the thought "The souls I baptized for the Master—will they continue and go on unto perfection?" This was the only thought that could bring tears; but I left them in God's care. That was of course all I could do, and indeed he only is able to keep them, and of course, can do so without my special efforts. Man is puny, but God is great and powerful. I acknowledge him in all I have and am and in his blessings to Lillie and our little ones. We are all well and striving to continue in the upward walk.

I was much cheered by Bro. Francis Ebeling's last letter in the Herald. I hope he won't do too much walking this warm weather, for it must be almost torrid where he now is.

I pray for all the Saints. May they likewise remember me. With kindest regards and fellowship to you, brethren, and to all.

JOHN S. PARRISH.

BERWYN, Neb., July 27.

Editors Herald:—On the 15th of May I reached my field and began meetings on the night of the 16th in the Cottonwood branch, near Maxwell, with fair attendance and good interest. While there I made my home with Bro. Knapp, who with his wife did all they could to make my stay comfortable. While in that region, by the kindness of Bro. Knapp who took his team, I visited some of the scattered Saints—Bro. H. Newberry and family at Hershey; Bro. and Sr. Huey, who live about seven miles north of North Platte, in the sand hills; and old Sr. Braffett and daughter in North Platte;—and I think some good was accomplished. From Maxwell I, in company with Bro. Payne and daughter Della, went across the country southwest to Dickens, where we stopped for the night with Bro. Anway. Here we parted, Bro. Payne going to Chase and Dundy Counties to labor for a few weeks, while the writer was headed for Hayes County, Bro. Anway furnishing conveyance and accompanying me. Here the writer preached his first sermon in a sod schoolhouse, near Marengo. While here, Bro. Leach, in his seventy-fifth year, was born into the kingdom. The few Saints at that place were very kind and alive in the work, but are very poor on account of repeated crop failures.

From here we moved eastward, and stopped off for a week or more at Eustis, where there are a few Saints, but all earnestly engaged in the work. Because of ill health three times is all I preached while there. A week or ten days rest at home again prepared me for active labor. I then went to Arcadia, Valley County, on the 8th inst., where I was met by Bro. E. B. Knott, who conveyed me to his home. Bro. K. and all the Saints in that neighborhood, except Bro. and Sr. Huffman, are but children, in the work, being baptized last spring—all the fruits of earnest labor performed there by Bro. C. W. Prettyman. I labored there and at Longwood until coming here to-day. Of our meetings at these latter points I will say they were the best attended I ever held in this season, it being right through harvest. At Longwood I preached for nine consecutive evenings with congregations averaging about ninety. Was assisted at these last points by Bro. Prettyman. Expect to go from here to Belmont or Crawford on the 30th.

I thank the Saints for their offers of papers in answer to my request. Have received all the offers I can use, and a few more.

In bonds,

Editors Herald:—The eighty-third birthday anniversary of Catharine Salisbury was observed here at the residence of her son, Don C. Salisbury, last Sunday, July 26. By request, I send in the following account of the event:—

Grandmother Salisbury is the only one living of the brothers and sisters of the prophets, Joseph and Hyrum Smith; and pursuant to the usual custom all her relatives were invited to meet last Sunday, to observe her birthday. Seventy-five persons were present—all relatives but eight.

Her sons Solomon, Don, and Frederick, and their families were there. Of the children of Lucy Milliken, Don, Florence Neuland, Clara Hendel, and families were present, also George and Clarence.

The grandchildren and great-grandchildren present were numerous; among whom was her granddaughter, Mrs. Emma Newman, and family of Burlington, Iowa. The other Iowa relatives were unable to be present, greatly to the regret of all.

After dinner Elder J. A. Robinson, of Independence, Missouri, made an excellent address in which he recited some of the principal events of her life and told of the wonderful progress in the arts, sciences, and religion since her birth, in 1813.

"When she was born, men were mowing with the reaping hook, as in the days of Abraham, and groping in theological darkness." "She has seen her brother as the chosen instrument of God dispel many illusions and establish the Church of Jesus Christ on earth once more."

Grandmother is in good health and sews and reads fine print without spectacles, every day. She is a constant reader of all the church publications and takes great interest in all church work. Her birthday is July 28.

Editors Herald:—We arrived at this place from the Islands Mission, in the evening of July 29, having been forty-five days out, ten days over average time.

We left Papeete June 14. We were both very ill more or less of the time; but, thank the Lord, we have landed safe and are recruiting somewhat already. Have met with a kind reception by the brethren and sisters we have met so far. More anon.

Hastily, yours as ever,

NETAWAKA, Kan., Aug. 4.

Editors Herald:—My labors in this mission field are about being closed. Since General Conference by request, I have acted as missionary in charge of Northeastern Kansas district. And to all concerned I would say, In the future send all inquiries and information concerning missionary work to my successor, W. S. Pender, as I cannot take any charge any longer in this field. I am ready now to go to my field in the West—the Rocky Mountain mission. I am now waiting the convenience of the Bishop, and the Bishop I am afraid has to wait the convenience of others. I hope the Lord will provide.

The field here is promising and the missionaries are at work. Brn. E. A. Davis and J. W. Hudgens are occupying all the territory north of the Kansas River; Bro. J. Alfred Davis south of that river; and Bro. Wedlock in Atchinson and vicinity for the time being. The writer has labored of late at Topeka, Scranton, Atchison, Fanning, and a trip through the western part of Spring River district, which was enjoyed among relatives and many Saints that I have not met for years—I pray for success to the field I now leave and the one I am soon to enter.

In bonds,

NESHANNOCK, Pa., Aug. 2.

Editors Herald:—On the 25th ult. I left home for Sharon, Pennsylvania, and remained there over Sunday and Monday. In the meantime I held three meetings. I was kindly received by the Saints there, whom I had not seen for about two years and a half. I found the branch in a very good condition. I ordained our young brother, Richard Baldwin, to the office of priest. If Bro. Richard will only act out the advice or admonition of Paul to Timothy, to apply himself to study, and live a humble and prayerful life, he will become a useful instrument in the hands of God in accomplishing much good. Bro. R. Etzenhouser rendered good service to the Sharon branch during his sojourn there.

On the 28th I began operations in the Union church at this place. It was here where Bro. Etzenhouser created such a sensation during the month of May. Just as soon as Bro. E. left here, the Rev. Baker, of the Christian Church, was sent for by a few members of said church, to expose Mormonism. Of course the Rev. B. could not refuse such an urgent invitation, especially when he learned that Bro. E. had gone to Missouri. Now this same minister attended some of Bro. E's preaching services, but had not a word to say to Bro. E. The next week after Bro. E's departure he went for Bro. E. and Mormonism at the rate of ninety miles an hour. However, his "balderdash" did not have much effect on the large majority of his audience, as a great many of the people left the house in disgust. His method of exposing Mormonism is similar to the course pursued by the Rev. Braden; in fact he read entirely from the Braden and Kelley debate. I replied to the misrepresentation of Rev. Baker to large audiences in the Union church for six nights, and the Lord stood by his servant in defending the blessed truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ in a marked manner. The best class of the people there are very friendly to our cause, and I have no doubt but what many of them will unite with the church in the Lord's own due time. We have eight members there now, all of whom seem to be kind-hearted, and very earnest in the work. Much credit is due Bro. George Powell, who was the first minister to introduce the gospel in this place. Bro. P. has the high respect of both the outsiders and the Saints here. He has been with me all week, and has rendered excellent service.

Very glad to learn that our worthy brother, G. H. Hilliard, intends to be at our conferences in West Virginia and the Ohio districts on the 22d of August and 12th of September, respectively. We sincerely hope that the Saints will make a great effort to attend these conferences. I leave this week for West Virginia and Southern Ohio. We are all well in these parts.

Yours hastily,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

"IT'S NOBODY'S BUSINESS!"

ANSWER TO ELDER A. IN HERALD
OF JULY 8.

INDIVIDUAL rights, independent of society, institutions, or government, have always been a mooted question, and presumably will be, as long as present conditions continue. Mutual and voluntary concessions are absolutely necessary in all liberty-loving organizations. Where agency is exercised allegiance is not compulsory but optional. No individual is forced to become a citizen of this country, but when he of his own accord does so, he becomes amenable to the laws of the majority. Individual opinion can never supersede a majority decision. When the majority passes judgment, or decides a question, it must so remain until revoked by a majority. Ofttimes laws are enacted which are repulsive to a minority, yet they must submit. When they do not, disintegration commences, and if continued, organization finally ceases.

Men in America say, "This country has no right to legislate as to what I shall eat, or drink, or wear. My citizenship is not to be determined by these things. If I am a good peaceable citizen that is all that is necessary."

Who is to determine what constitutes a "good peaceable citizen," you or the majority? The majority who made the laws alone can decide. If they decide it is wrong for you to drink alcohol or for women to wear men's clothing, their decision becomes a part of the constitutional statutes and you are amenable thereto, notwithstanding you as an individual may feel it should not be so. It so remains, and your opinion does not change nor withhold enforcement.

This is equally true regarding the church. Individual members do not decide as to what is right or wrong; the Constitution making power; that is, God, alone, can do that.

In the Herald of July 8 a brother signing himself "Elder A.," says:—

From all we have been able to learn by searching the revelations ancient and modern, they make the preaching of the gospel paramount, and the only means for the salvation and the perfecting of the race of man.

I believe this to be true, and, standing as it does here, I heartily indorse it; but our brother proceeds to modify and says:—

It is not the adorning of the body with jewels or costly apparel, but that of a quiet, lovable, and peaceful spirit, and the putting on of the "divine nature" that commends men to God.

This statement separated from the rest of the article, would seem simple enough, but the writer tries to prove that it makes no difference what a person wears so the heart is right, or what one eats and drinks just so he feels it is right—he will be acceptable with God. This is the old sectarian idea, "It makes no difference, just so you feel you are right," made to do service by a Latter Day Saint elder in the interest of personal freedom in conduct and personal adornment.

One thought intrudes here: "God is his own interpreter." Individual interpretation of God's law was never granted to any age nor any people—Latter Day Saints included. I understand that God is the author of all law, whether physical or spiritual; and if I violate the law of my physical being I have violated God's law, and I am as surely a sinner in God's sight as though I had broken any other part of his law. To argue that just so one complies with the written law he is at perfect liberty to break the unwritten law or, if he obeys the cardinal principles of the gospel that, as far as his general actions are concerned, he is free to do as he pleases, is contrary to the gospel.

A sister who loves her tea and coffee says, "O, well, I can use my tea and coffee and I can be just as good a Christian as you if you do not use them." A brother uses tobacco and he says, "It's nobody's business, if I want to use tobacco I'll do so, and I'm just as good a Latter Day Saint as those who do not."

A sister puts on a corset, paints her face, and adopts the restrictions of body which are a menace to good health, and she says, "I'm as good a Latter Day Saint as any of you."

Another brother and sister grow slovenly and careless and are unclean in their habits and say, "Well, we are as good as any of you; it's none of your business how we live in our own house."

It is evident that neither of the persons mentioned above has the spirit of this work. Why? Because the principal point with them is self-justification of an act, which they think all right (because it suits them), but which others think is wrong. No one is his brother's keeper, but each is answerable to the law. If it teaches that cleanliness is a virtue, then the one who is not clean breaks the law. If it teaches the preservation of the physical body, then the one who violates the law of his being is a sinner. If it states what an individual should or should not drink or eat, and that individual violates it, he is a sinner. True, the gospel is the only means for the salvation of man, but in that gospel are included means which, if obeyed, will save us physically as well as spiritually. If saved at all, the physical and spiritual must be saved together, and to secure that salvation we must obey the laws of the physical as well as the spiritual being.

The brother says:—

If the seeds of everlasting life be thoroughly in the soul and the divine nature developed, and the great law of liberty fixed in the mind of a man, and he walking blamelessly in the ordinances, who shall say what he may or may not eat or drink, or what he shall or shall not wear?

From this we gather that the only thing absolutely necessary to salvation is an observance of the ordinances, then each man can be the judge himself as to what he shall eat, drink, and wear. If this position of our brother is correct, it is optional with the individual as to what he drinks, eats, (chews,) or wears; and the man who yields to passion and human appetite, yet has obeyed the gospel ordinances, is as well off as the individual who seeks to observe every known law of body, mind, and spirit!

How are we to know that "the seeds of everlasting life" are "in the soul" or the "great law of liberty fixed in the mind" of any man or woman? By their assertions? No. We can only determine to the extent that they find expression in a conquered physical organism, in subdued passion, in restrained appetite, in crushed pride, and in resisting that which injures, and obeying that which develops the complete man. If the "seeds of everlasting life" are "in the soul" they will impregnate the physical organism with truth and light, thus eliminating the sin-breeding germs, and by this process overcome the disposition to err in any direction, and as it finds expression more and more will evidence to all that its saving force is experienced now and here. Do not tell me that the seeds of everlasting life are thoroughly in the soul if you eat and drink that which shortens and destroys life. Do not tell me that the "great law of liberty is fixed in the mind" of any woman who enslaves her physical organism by binding a corset around it. It is inconsistent to think the "law of liberty" is in her mind when she proceeded to place in bondage the only outlet for the expanding seed—her body.

Elder A. continues thus:—

If his [God's] people were not free to conform to all the teachings of the wise ones of the world and the church, he [God] would no doubt have given the pattern for a regulation suit, so we could all fall into line in full uniform; and when on dress parade could make a grand display.

This is the first time I have ever heard an elder urge that the membership of the church were "free to conform to all the teachings of the wise ones of the world"! The world is at variance with God, and a majority of the teachings of the "wise ones" conflict with God's simple truths. All that appertains to the physical and spiritual needs of man is included in the gospel, and we need not, neither can we with safety, go to these "wise ones" for a solution of these vital questions. Does not God rebuke ostentation and display? Does he not discourage squander and extravagance? Does he not disparage gluttony and drunkenness? He does; but according to Elder A. the church is helpless in enforcing his wishes because no man is to judge "what I eat, drink, or wear," and should have a "mantle of charity large enough to extend to all conditions and the surrounding of man"!

Elder A. champions the wearing of a thirty-five dollar suit of clothes and tells how he would like to meet his Master. If Christ came to-morrow I would prefer to meet him in a negligee shirt and clean ducking pants than to meet him in a thirty-five dollar suit of broadcloth, knowing at the time that the hard earned contributions of the poor of his people had been taken to purchase it, I would feel more acceptable before God if I entered his presence realizing that I was clothed in modest apparel, than to wear silk or satin and know that some poor ones had gone without the necessities of life. No man or woman to-day who has the "seeds of everlasting life in the soul" or "the law of liberty in the mind," will spend money for unnecessary adornment or extravagant clothing when the poor of his people are crying for bread. In these hard and troublous times it would well become some of our people to emulate the Adventists in their sacrifice of unnecessary, harmful, and gaudy adornment. As a church they are ahead of us in this.

In quoting Doctrine and Covenants 144:12 the brother says:—

Now the Lord was content to let the wearer use his or her own judgment as to the fineness and quality of the goods,

Thus leaving it to the individual to determine whether to wear diamonds, high priced silks and satins, or more modest apparel.

We quote D. C. 42:12:—

Let all thy garments be PLAIN, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands, and let all things be done in cleanliness before me.

The Encyclopædic Dictionary defines the word "plain" as,

Devoid of ornamentation, show, or adornment, simple, unadorned, not rich, not luxurious.

Webster says;—

Simple, natural, void of extraneous beauty or ornamentation; not luxurious, free from costliness; not rich.

This being the definition of the word "plain" as used in the above quotation, is the individual left to choose as to the "fineness or quality" of the goods without any divine restriction? We opine not.

Concerning the wearing of corsets, Elder A. says.

But who is to be the judge? the one who looks on, or the one who wears the corset?

So might the tobacco user say, "Who is the judge, I or the one who looks on?" So also the drunkard, the libertine, and the glutton might argue. Anything which hampers or obstructs the free exercise of the functions of the body is a violation of God's law if used.

Elder A. continues:—

To my mind a woman who is competent to teach others would know whether she was injuring herself or setting an example that was liable to injure others.

Individuals may be competent and qualified to teach certain things and be ignorant of other vital and necessary truths. A woman who laces or fetters her body with a corset is not competent to sit in judgment concerning her action, neither is she fitted to give advice on this point to others. In the discussion of this question the woman who wears the corset is the one on trial, and it is not permissible to appeal to the one on trial to decide whether the act is right or wrong. I have visited Sunday schools where good meaning, yet erring sisters, have been essaying to teach a class of young girls, when the corset strings were pulled so tight they were in constant misery! A woman wearing a tight-laced corset is not suitable for a Sunday school teacher, especially if the class is of girls, because of her bad example! I have known Latter Day Saint (?) mothers to try to hide the crowning evidence of motherhood by tight-lacing, thus depriving the child of prenatal growth and thwarting the purpose of the Creator! But, go ahead and do it, for you will be acceptable with God in the end, even though by your folly you ruin your own health, bring on premature old age and female weaknesses; yea, though you permanently thwart the full development of the laws of creation, because Elder A affirms that the woman is to decide what is injurious and what is not! O no, Bro. A., this argument will never, never do.

Again he says:—

If lacing sufficient to brace her up and add beauty and loveliness to the form is needful, I would say, Draw the corset strings a little, but do thyself no harm.

But who is to decide as to the harm? You say the woman. Then the young girl who hooks her corset strings over the head of the bed in lacing is all right, for she says, "It don't hurt me a bit," notwithstanding she can't walk up a hill at an angle of fifteen degrees without getting out of breath, and when in company she must constantly resort to that peculiar corset sigh and side-grasp which an observing person notes so frequently.

The natural form given of God to woman, according to Bro. A., is to be improved upon and she to secure "beauty and loveliness" above that given of God by drawing "the corset strings a little;" and an elder of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints advises her so to do! God made woman, but her shape can be improved upon and she can have more "beauty and loveliness" by means of an invention of corrupt man; so says Elder A. I repudiate such a position, maintaining that God created man and woman intending that each organ should have a healthy, untrammelled growth, and anything that interferes therewith should be discouraged rather than commended by God's ministry.

Bro. A. continues:—

It may be possible that many women do now and have hitherto drawn the strings a little too tight for comfort, but with all that, if the light and the life of the gospel are thoroughly planted in the soul, the character will shine out, and reflect a beauty and grandeur that will so far eclipse the outward adorning that the pride and little hurt that may attach in the estimation of some will not interfere in their advancement in the divine life.

While I give our brother credit for sincerity, yet no sentence could be more misleading and erroneous than the above for if the "light and life of the gospel" are "in the soul," and bearing fruit, so far as earth life is concerned, it is shown in resisting the world, the flesh, and the Devil. Bro. A. reasons that one can yield to the world and the flesh to the extent that it does a "little hurt" and yet be as much in favor with God as one who does not! Anything that hurts the body—God's temple—is contrary to the gospel and censurable. If God wanted woman's waist to be small, why did he not so order it in the beginning? Every woman who puts on a corset and laces herself and by this means changes her natural form, hurls an insult into the face of her Creator, tacitly affirming that he did not complete his work, or else made it wrong! It is a duty of God's ministry to denounce the inventions of men which pander to pride, vanity, and sin; and I am sincerely sorry that any elder should champion things which human experience, reason, and scientific research have proven wrong.

The corset has done more lasting injury to woman since its adoption than any other of the inventions of "Dame Fashion."

Are we to let every young boy and girl know that they can decide what they are to eat, drink, and wear? Can our young girls and women pander to vanity, "draw the corset strings a little," resulting in "pride and little hurt," and it not "interfere with their advancement in the divine life"? Whether Bro. A. meant to convey this thought I am unable to say, but his reasoning followed to a legitimate conclusion results in this.

Respecting "Bro. A." in his honest convictions, yet radically differing from him, I subscribe myself as one who is a foe to error, yet a friend to all mankind,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

A PLEBEIAN'S VIEW.

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power in the church but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God.—Rom. 13:1. (I. T.)

Taken in connection with its context, the above affords abundant food for thought, at least to the common mind, the central thought being, subjection to higher authority; and so sweeping is it that it includes every soul, laity and priesthood of every degree, and applies with equal force to all. Following this line of thought, step by step, we come at last to the President of the church, the highest in authority, and the query arises, To whom shall he be in subjection? "To the decision of the entire body when in council assembled;" has been given in answer to the above; but will it bear investigation, and is it in harmony with the written word of God? And, as we are admonished to "be not wise above that which is written," it might be well to heed this injunction.

Perhaps the nearest approach to human authority, to which the President should bow, will be found in Doctrine and Covenants 5: 8, where the Lord instructs Oliver Cowdery to admonish Joseph the Seer in his faults. The action of the general church, in passing upon any measure, is simply an acceptance or rejection of it as binding upon the body in a similar manner as one may baptism, and not in a sense of authority. The church was commanded to receive the words of the "Seer" as from God's own mouth. By parity of reasoning, we may conclude that a similar obligation devolves upon the Reorganization, in reference to the teachings of the present Joseph, whether in the form of direct revelation to the church, or in teaching the revelations of his father, the "Seer." This view is sustained, in part at least, by conference resolutions of September 13, 1878. Again, if he is to teach the revelations of his father, he must be endowed with the same Spirit that his father was when he received them; as it requires the "Spirit of God to understand the things of God."

Herein we find an answer to our query and learn that the higher authority to which he must subject himself is the authority of heaven, even God the Father of all, through Jesus Christ his Son. How straight his path, how swift his doom for deceiving the people of God, may be inferred from the statement that God will destroy that prophet who deceives his (God's) people. As authority in this instance is clearly reserved, it requires no proof to show that it is not delegated; and as delegated authority only may be exercised by man, we are driven to the conclusion that the prophet of God who stands as a mouthpiece of God, can only be in subjection to God as higher authority. Guided by the Spirit of God, he will not seek to interfere with the agency of man by trying to force them to accept his theological opinions; but those who reject or treat them lightly, do so to their own injury, be they high in authority or obscure among the laity, and they are entirely without warrant for so doing. From the decisions of all others the right of appeal is granted in regard to law; but, an appeal from his decision of law or requirements of God, has not been provided for. An appeal carries with it the possibility of reversal of judgment, and reversal in this case would be God reversing his own words, if we are to receive the words of his prophet as from his own mouth, and he has said, "My words fail not."

We are at liberty to accept or reject the prophets of God, but must also abide the consequences of our agency. The only difference I can see between ancient and modern prophets is, that the latter speak in a language known to me, and whose idioms I am acquainted with, not so with the former; hence the modern are more comprehensible, and I am not so liable to misunderstand them, therefore my condemnation will be greater for rejecting the counsel of those in authority in the church at the present day, than of those away back in the misty past. And the same deference is due from me to each officer in his sphere until higher authority decides in regard to the question at issue.

It is my right to appeal from, but not to ignore the findings of any court from the lowest to the highest. But from the highest there is no appeal, neither am I afraid that injustice will be done me there. My confidence in the church authorities is measured, not by the man or men composing the different quorums, but according to their relative positions in the church. My confidence in the President of the church is absolute, as I believe that his integrity and devotion are second to none, while his official position gives him advantages to which others may not aspire. His lookout on the walls of Zion towers far above that occupied by any other watchman and consequently he can descry the enemy at a greater distance, and, like the Commanding General, has a right to unquestioned recognition.

Confidence in other authorities decreases in proportion as they descend the line of priesthood, by reason of station alone. I hold no man's person in admiration, but I do the wisdom of God; and to me the different divisions found in the Aaronic and Melchisedek orders, are an exemplification of it. As God knows the end from the beginning, I do not believe that he ever did, or ever will make a mistake in choosing a medium through which to communicate his will to mankind, nor do I concede that veneration born of confidence in God's wisdom is in any sense dangerous or intenable.

To question the prophetic calling and teachings of Joseph Smith, President of the Reorganized Church, is to question the mission of his father. Disprove the claims of the "choice seer" and the validity of the Bible is overthrown; accomplish this and the sonship of Jesus Christ disappears. Such disappearance destroys the Godhead, and inaugurates anarchy. But, thanks to his holy name, God, our wonderful God, has placed such an undertaking beyond even the faintest appearance of success, and every effort to detract from its splendor, or bedim its fame, only develops more of the hidden beauties of this "marvelous work and a wonder."

May God speed the day when "every soul" shall be in subjection to higher authority; and may he teach us all to cultivate wisdom, patience, veneration, and love for the powers that be, and thus prepare ourselves to meet and yield perfect obedience to "Him whose right it is to reign." May we be enabled to keep a unity of the faith as it is in Christ Jesus, and learn to clearly distinguish between positions and persons, giving honor to whom honor is due, have our lamps trimmed and burning, and wearing the wedding garment when the midnight cry, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," shall thrill each waiting soul.

WHEN BAPTISTS FIRST BEGAN TO IMMERSE.

SOME of the Baptist papers, particularly in the South, are still devoting considerable space to the discussion of the points raised by Rev. Dr. Whittitt, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, concerning the historical basis of the doctrine of baptism by immersion. The latest and perhaps the most important contribution to the discussion is a two-column editorial in The Religious Herald (Baptist, Richmond, Virginia,) reviewing the controversy from its inception up to date. The chief grounds of complaint concerning Dr. Whitsitt's encyclopedia article on "Baptists" were his statement that Roger Williams, a pioneer Baptist, was sprinkled and not immersed, and that the immersion of adult believers was introduced into England in 1641.

It appears that Dr. Whitsitt spent two months in the British Museum, in the summer of 1880, and obtained, according to his recent statement in The Religious Herald, about forty contemporary witnesses for the position he has taken as to English Baptists previously to 1641. It appears also that such Baptist historians as Dr. A. H. Newman, Dr. Henry C. Vedder, and Dr. Burrage agree with Dr. Whitsitt on 1641 as the time when the so-called early English Baptists began to immerse. In confirmation of this position appeal is now made to certain documents in the British Museum called the King George pamphlets, which fix the date, it is said, at 1641. The Religious Herald thinks that there should be a suspension of judgment in the case until the documents in question have been thoroughly examined again and their testimony on the point at issue clearly established. In conclusion it says:—

We have reached the stage in the discussion where we can await the result with perfect equanimity. No generally accepted principle of Baptist faith is involved. Landmarkism can never be made a test of orthodoxy in the Southern Baptist convention. When rightly viewed, the Pedopapists are not given any advantage whatever. Our strength lies in the appeal to the New Testament. We shall all be led to emphasize the Bible more and to teach Baptist principles more vigorously. We have no desire to canonize persons of any age, by whatever name they are known. If people of the Baptist name in England had to struggle toward the full apprehension of New Testament truth, are we not doing the same thing now? How long has it been since we grasped the missionary idea, and has it grappled all of us yet? Let us honor the men of old for what they did. Our history is glorious enough without claiming more than is our due. We do not attempt to say now who is right in this controversy. We are not in possession of enough evidence. We need all the evidence, and it must be settled, not in the heat of debate, but in the balanced judgment of cooler moments. Whatever is the truth, let that stand. If we have been wrongly instructed on these matters heretofore, it is not the first time that such a thing has happened, nor will it be the last. In the meantime, there seems small ground for haste in determining a question of history of two hundred and fifty years ago.

In an editorial note The Episcopal Recorder (Philadelphia) thus refers to the same controversy:—

The statement of Professor Whitsitt, himself a Baptist, that immersion was unknown in England prior to 1641, is causing much commotion among his co-denominationalists. Some Baptist papers indignantly accuse him of want of loyalty, seeming to lose sight of the necessity of proving the accuracy or incorrectness of his fact, rather than of personally assailing their Professor. To be sure the statement militates against the unbroken succession of that mode of baptism, but this is an assumption accepted by nobody but Baptists; yet honest seekers after truth, and that denomination contains very many such, will care more for facts and proofs than any matters of personal feeling or conviction which may or may not be based upon prejudice. Turn on the light, by all means. That is what we all want as much as Ajax did, and no cause worthy of support will suffer from the closest scrutiny. A cause which will not pass unscathed through every and any fair examination should and must be given up.—Literary Digest.

Conference Minutes.

SHEFFIELD.

Convened at Clay Cross, July 11 and 12, at six p. m. John Austin, president, Joseph Arber secretary pro tem. Reports were read from Elders J. Austin, S. Platts, S. Holmes, and H. Hoole; Priests F. Beaumont, W. Sharpe, J. Holmes, and J. Arber. Communication from Apostle Caffall read, also a general report from district president. Reading of the letter convening conference. Branch report received from Sheffield. Clay Cross did not report. Whereas, much negligence has been evinced by some officials of the Sheffield district in failing to report to the conference, therefore be it resolved, that those failing to report their labors to the July and January conferences hereafter, their licenses will be demanded unless it be known that the force of circumstances prevented them reporting. All church authorities in their various positions were sustained. Sunday morning meeting at 10:30 was held in the Market Place, Elder James Caffall as preacher. His sermon was excellent, more especially from one who has passed his seventy-first milestone. At two p. m. the Sunday school held a session of an hour. The time was a most profitable one and enjoyed by all. Prayer and testimony at three p. m. Sunday evening service was held in a field close to the meeting room. Bro. Caffall was again the speaker. It was a good effort and we trust will do good. Thus closed one of the very best conferences ever held in the Sheffield district.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.

Met with the Meadow Grove branch, July 25, at two p. m.; W. M. Rumel president, J. H. Jackson secretary pro tem. Elders reporting: J. F. Mintun, W. M. Rumel, L. Gamet, D. M. Rudd, H. O. Smith, W. E. Peak, and C. H. Porter; Priests E. Downey, C. N. Hutchins, J. H. Jackson, and J. Lippencott. Branch reports: Deer Creek 46; 1 baptized 17 absent. Clearwater 67; 10 baptized, 1 received, 1 removed, 1 died. Elkhorn and Evergreen, no report. Letters from Brn. Lippencott and Peak showed that a branch of fifteen members had been organized at Shelton, Nebraska; James Lippencott president and Mrs. Sterly clerk. No statistical report was sent. Bishop's agent's report: On hand and received $77.65; paid out $40.26; due church $37.39. W. M. Rumel was sustained as president of district and Levi Gamet as secretary and Bishop's agent. The preaching was by Elder Mintun. Those present reported a pleasant and profitable session. Arrangements were made for a three days' meeting to be held in the vicinity of Clearwater, October 1, 2, and 3, in charge of the missionary in charge and president of district. Adjourned to meet with Clearwater branch the last Saturday and Sunday previous to full moon in February.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Met with the Saints of Fairfield, Nebraska, June 21 and 22; J. W. Waldsmith president, M. H. Forscutt assistant; J. L. Diefendorf secretary. Branch reports: Fairfield 64; gain 5. Palmyra 38; gain 3. Nebraska City 138; gain 2; 36 absent. Eustis 14; no change. Hebron 26; no change. No report from Blue River, Brownville, Cottonwood, or Lincoln branches. Elders reporting: J. W. Waldsmith, W. E. Peak baptized 1, M. H. Forscutt, C. H. Porter baptized 9, J. Thompson, P. C. Peterson, A. J. Myers baptized 1, C. E. Blodgett baptized 4; Priests R. O. Self, M. J. Schafer, J. H. Drury, and J. Lippincott; Teacher J. E. Hopper. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $12.79; received $182.80; paid out $198.66; due agent June 1, 1896, $3.07. The resolution laid over eight months ago came up and passed unanimously, which reads: Whereas, the General Conference has decided that the business of the church should be done by the conferences and that the conferences should consist of delegates properly chosen by the bodies to be represented, and by the elders in charge thereof, therefore be it resolved that hereafter the branches of this district be requested to send delegates to the several district conferences according to the rule constituting them representative or delegate conferences. J. W. Waldsmith, W. E. Peak, and J. L. Diefendorf were chosen as a committee to draft a set of rules that shall govern the district under the delegate system. Petition from Fairfield branch that D. Thomas Blodgett be ordained an elder was granted and the brother was ordained by M. H. Forscutt, W. E. Peak, and J. W. Waldsmith. By the advice of missionaries in charge, James Gillen and A. H. Smith, the boundary lines of the district were changed to correspond with the boundary lines of the missions, and so the 99th degree of longitude is the western boundary of the Southern Nebraska district. The present district officers were sustained for ensuing term. Charles Woods was chosen as assistant secretary. Preaching by Elders M. H. Forscutt and W. E. Peak. Resolution of thanks tendered the friends and Saints of the Fairfield branch for assistance rendered in the care of those who came from a distance. Adjourned to meet with the Palmyra branch at call of district president.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.

Conference convened in the tent at Mountain Grove, at the close of the district reunion, July 25; W. C. Cather president, W. A. Brooner clerk. Branch reports: Burnham 42; gain 2. West Plains 58, Vera Cruz 87, Ozark 48, Woodside 33. Some of these being somewhat incorrect, and the Willow Springs branch not reporting, the secretary was instructed to confer with the branch clerks and have their reports corrected. Ministry reporting: Elders W. C. Cather, H. Sparling, C. J. Spurlock, C. M. Bootman, J. R. Wedlock, A. M. D. McGuire, and J. P. Knox; Priests T. Hamilton and H. Havey. Treasurer's report: On hand and received $6.11; expended $4.13; on hand $1.98. Report accepted. A petition from the Saints at Springfield asking for the organization of a branch at that place was then heard and the district president and missionary in charge were requested by the conference to organize said branch as soon as practicable, the same to include all Saints living nearer to Springfield than to other branches. The question of enlarging the district and taking in more territory was brought up, and on motion the counties of Laeclde, Pulaski, Phelps, and Dent were added to the district. The officers elected for the ensuing four months were: President, C. J. Spurlock; assistant, Henry Sparling; W. A. Brooner was sustained secretary and treasurer. Henry Sparling was sustained Bishop's agent. Conference adjourned to meet with the West Plains branch, November 14, at ten a. m.

PASTORAL.

To the Ministry and Saints of the Southern, Central, and Northern Districts of California; Greeting:—Having been appointed by Elder Joseph Luff, of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles and missionary in charge of the Pacific Slope mission, to take the oversight of the work in California, which appointment has been duly ratified by the First Presidency of the church, it seems proper to me that I should address you a few lines through the Herald to notify you of this fact, and that you may be able to judge of my status in the gospel and learn what manner of man I am, and know of my hopes, my desires, and my intentions: also by the grace of God in regard to this portion of the Lord's vineyard committed to my watchcare and through which I have been made a coworker with you in the same.

I have not sought this appointment, but rather would have evaded the responsibility; but believing those through whom the appointment came to me to be both duly authorized and also inspired servants of God, I have accepted the appointment reverentially, as from God. I have been slow to buckle on the ministerial harness, but having now done so, I desire, and fully intend, God helping me, to keep my neck well up in the collar. It is far from my wish to shirk any duty whatever or pass by an opportunity of doing work for the cause, and hope never to be found reclining in idleness in the cool and pleasant retreats of the vineyard while my fellow laborers are manfully bearing the heat and burden of the day.

Dear brethren in the ministry, I am now in the field to work with all my might for the Master. If you need a helping hand in opening new places or in any department of the work, I am always at your disposal, conditions permitting. I should be pleased to hear from you all at your earliest convenience, and to learn of your whereabouts, get your address, and learn of the condition of the work in your several branches, districts, and fields of labor. I would be pleased also to hear from the scattered Saints who are away off from the branches and association of the Saints. Please send your address so that the elders when passing near your places of abode may visit you.

There are a great many more things that ought to be said, but my time and the Herald's space forbids more at present.

With an ever abiding faith in the divine origin and final triumphs and greatness of this glorious latter-day work, I am,

Your brother and fellow-laborer in the kingdom of God.

J. B. PRICE.

No. 1537 Eighth St., OAKLAND, California, July 25.

To the Saints in Australia; Greeting:—As I have been placed in charge for the ensuing year, I send you these few words of advice as to the needs and wants of the mission.

First, we need to maintain unity and concord among ourselves, that we may arise to higher planes, thus extending our views, and get a better understanding of our surroundings.

Second, we want officers in the several branches who will strive to honor the cause, and magnify their calling by being "lively stones" and energetic in the discharge of their duty.

Third, "all are called according to the gifts of God unto them," and are naturally expected to be "lights in the world" and be ready to give every man that asketh a reason for the hope that is within, with meekness and godly fear. Now, all are not called to labor on the farm, in the mines, nor in the ministry; but all are called to labor in their respective places and positions for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all. The Lord doesn't need your money, for the cattle upon a thousand hills are his, the gold and silver mines are his; yea, "the earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof;" but he wants the individual as a "living sacrifice," a willing and contrite heart—one at least who is willing to pay his just debts, and square accounts with the Lord before he boasts very much about being "free indeed," and owing no man anything.

Fourth, the traveling ministry need the sympathy and prayers of the Saints collectively, to aid and cheer them on in the good fight of faith, that they falter not, nor give up in despair, but finally "come off more than conqueror through him who gave himself for us." I would also ask the district secretaries to be as accurate as possible in recording new names, and send the same to the General Church Recorder by January, so that a true statement of our labors may appear in the minutes of General Conference. Bro. Stebbins' report shows twenty-two baptisms for our last year's labor, when to my knowledge seventy were baptized by the three traveling missionaries. Let every one stand at his post, perform his own part, and the work is sure to prosper. There is a better outlook, notwithstanding the depression, than there has been for years in the past, and if we walk up and occupy wisely the work will prosper. Peace be with you all.

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES.

BLUFF PARK GENERAL REUNION.

The committee on railroad rates to the General Reunion, at Bluff Park, Iowa, takes pleasure in announcing that reduced rates have been obtained over the lines included in the Western Passenger Association, covering territory from Chicago to the Pacific Coast, over the following lines of road; viz.; Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fé; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern; Chicago and Alton; Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington, and Northern; Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy; Chicago Great Western; Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha, Hannibal and St. Joseph; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keokuk, and Northwestern; Illinois Central; Jacksonville, Louisville, and St. Louis; Minneapolis and St.

Louis; Missouri Pacific; Rock Island and Peoria; St. Louis and San Francisco; Sioux City and Pacific; Wabash; Wisconsin Central Lines; Burlington and Missouri; Colorado Midland; Denver and Rio Grande; Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley; Rio Grande Western; St. Joseph and Grand Island; Union Pacific.

The following rules govern the reduced rates: An attendance of one hundred purchasers of tickets over any or all of said lines is necessary. Said tickets must be signed by the chairman or secretary of the reunion, after arrival, at Montrose Iowa. Ministers who travel at reduced fare are not entitled to this reduction, nor to be included in the one hundred referred to.

To obtain the reduced rate all passengers should purchase a full fare ticket and obtain a receipt from the selling agents for every ticket purchased on the going passage.

If a through ticket to Montrose with one certificate cannot be had, the purchaser should be particular to obtain a certificate with every ticket purchased.

"Certificates which shows the purchase of tickets not earlier than three days prior to August 21, the opening date of the meeting, or which show the purchase of tickets during the first three days of the meeting, may be honored if presented not later than three days after the date announced as the closing date of the meeting, Sunday not to be accounted as a day in any case." In other words, going tickets are good on the 18th to the 24th inclusive, and return tickets on any day up to and including September 4.

Tickets on the going passage may be limited or unlimited, according to the rules governing roads issuing, but return tickets are limited to continuous passage to destination.

For further particulars inquire of local railroad agents.

COMMITTEE ON RATES.

BLUFF PARK REUNION.

By reference to the minutes of the last General Conference, pages 21, 22, it will be seen that the church ordered, or appointed, a General Reunion to be held at the time and place appointed by committee, etc. The request of the committee was as follows: "To this end your petitioners were appointed a committee and instructed to petition your honorable body to make or appoint a General Reunion of the church to be held with the above-named districts in the year 1896, at the time and place to be designated by the undersigned committee; or that you appoint a committee to act in conjunction with said committee to appoint time and select location."

The action had on said petition is stated thus: "The petition was granted and the committee named in the document was selected to have charge of the General Reunion thus provided for."

Being fairly well acquainted with the situation, I think I am prepared to say that it is important that this reunion be made a success. The location is a beautiful one—healthful and pleasant—and those who attend with a proper object in view will be well paid for their efforts and sacrifices. For needed information, see the advertisements in late Heralds.

Come, all who can, and come prepared to assist in defraying the necessary expenses of the meeting. Come in the spirit of prayer, and for the service of God. Take such innocent recreation as may be needed, but do not come for worldly pleasures.

J. R. LAMBERT,
One of the Committee.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Eastern Maine district conference will be held at Jonesport, August 29, 30.

S. O. FOSS, Pres.
J. D. WILSON, Sec.

By arrangement with the General Reunion committee the Nauvoo district conference will convene at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, August 21 and 22, the first days of the reunion.

The district Sunday school association will occupy Friday, beginning at 10:30 a. m., and the conference proper will convene Saturday at 10:30 a. m. As we only have two conferences a year let us have a good attendance. All will want to attend the reunion, just make a little extra effort, and be there the very first day, and show by your works you are interested in the welfare of the district. All preaching services will be in charge of reunion committee.

F. M. WELD, Pres.

Quarterly conference of Little Sioux district will convene at Moorhead, Iowa, September 5 and 6. Sunday school association on Friday, 4th, at 2:30 p. m., for which an entertaining program is being arranged. Prepare to attend both. Seek blessings for yourself and others.

A. M. FYRANDO, Dist. Sec. and Supt. Ass'n.

NOTICES.

Anyone who is going to attend the general annual reunion at Woodbine, Iowa, September 18 to 28, and can play a tenor horn, will kindly correspond with S. B. Kibler or F. L. Hupp, in regard to same; also baritone. We want a full classification of instruments which we think we are going to succeed in getting. Answer prompt and oblige. (We can furnish instruments.) Yours,

S. B. KIBLER.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

To the Saints in Northern District of California; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—You who have means and can, will you send your tithing and offerings that there may be wherewith to supply the worthy poor and the families of the ministry who are about the "Father's business"? We need funds now. We have no funds on hand.

Need I impress upon you that this is part of the necessary work to be done? Let us all labor together for the spread of the glorious gospel and honor our Father who has appointed us stewards over the means put into our hands. It may seem far off, but the day will come when we will be called to an account for our stewardship. O, then, we will be so glad that we acted wisely; or sorry if we did not. Let us keep before us that all we have, God has permitted us to have. Let us all be anxiously engaged in the carrying forward the gospel of the Son of God. I would not ask you for myself personally, but I do in behalf of the needy and deserving.

May God inspire you all by his Spirit to observe and obey every word that comes from his mouth. In bonds,

CHAS. A. PARKIN, Bishop's Agent.

REUNION NOTICES.

NORTHERN ARKANSAS CAMP MEETING.

This meeting will begin September 10, and will continue ten days or more, in a beautiful grove three miles above the post office on Martin's Creek, Sharp County, Arkansas. Parties coming from near Center will do well to come by way of Williford, and there inquire for Martin's Creek post office, and the people there will tell you the way to the camp ground. Those living in Fulton County can find the way easiest by following the County road that leads from Salem to Poca-hontas, as that leads by the camp ground. Those in Southern Missouri can best find the way by coming to Coates' post office, which is five or six miles distant from the camp ground, and Bro. Hasbrouck will give you directions.

This grove is located by the side of a beautiful stream of running water, clear as crystal, and the waters are densely populated with the finny tribe, and there is also a beautiful spring of cold water in the edge of the grove. We are very anxious to make this meeting a grand success, and to do this we must have the cooperation of all the Saints living round about. Therefore we say, Come one, come all, and bring your wagons, tents, horse feed, and enough of the necessities of life to do you and one more while there. In thus doing you will be prepared to have a good time. We will be pleased to see a goodly number from Southern Missouri. Bro. Montague, the missionary in charge, will be one of the speakers, also Brn. D. R. Baldwin, formerly of Lincoln, Nebraska, now of Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, and C. M. Bootman and A. M. D. McGuire, of Southern Missouri, are expected to be there and assist in the preaching and other services. If anyone wishes to correspond with me, please address me at my home office, Pomona, Missouri. In bonds,

JOSEPH WARD.

MAYSVILLE REUNION.

Old Far West and adjoining districts are wide awake, and our reunion will be a huge success, and although it seems almost impossible to procure speakers from a distance, yet we will have a fine corps of local ministers, together with the missionaries of the district, who will be on the grounds. The grounds are beautiful, the location all that could be asked for, and the people are anxious and happy. We hereby extend a cordial invitation to all the ministry of the reunion district to come and camp with us for a week or ten days. Bring your best sermons with you and be ready to deliver them when called upon. I want every man from teacher to missionary to be present, bring your wives and children, and the Spirit of God with you, and success is ours. We will try and care for all and make you welcome. Harder the times, greater the sacrifice and grander the blessings. T. W. CHATBURN, Chairman.

The following numbers are a selection of hymns from Saints' Hymnal to be used at Park Bluff reunion: 1, 11, 12, 18, 21, 24, 26, 28, 31, 43, 53, 58, 62, 69, 73, 75, 80, 84, 88, 99, 102, 121, 135, 138, 145, 155, 161, 164, 167, 169, 179, 180, 190, 191, 195, 211, 217, 230.

RAILWAY RATES FOR THE SOUTHWESTERN MISSION REUNION, AUGUST 21 TO 30.

We have succeeded thus far in securing reduced rates on the railroads for those attending the reunion at Midway Park, near Joplin, Missouri, one and one third fare for the round trip, but only on the basis of one hundred paying full fare going to Joplin. Whatever further concessions are granted, will be announced by Bro. Sutherland as soon as he receives notification of such from the railroads. As at present arranged, it will be necessary for those going by train to the reunion, on either the Pittsburg and Gulf; Missouri Pacific; or Ft. Scott and Memphis, to buy a ticket to Joplin, paying full fare therefor, and get a receipt from the station agent from whom you purchase this ticket. This receipt, or certificate will be signed at the reunion by Bro. Sutherland or some one whom he authorizes, and when he has signed one hundred of them, he will notify the agent at Joplin of the fact, and then on presentation of this receipt thus signed, the agent will sell you your ticket home for one third the regular fare.

W. N. ROBINSON,
Of the Committee.

RAILWAY RATES TO GENERAL REUNION.

Those coming should purchase tickets to Montrose or nearest junction points on roads leading to it, and ask the selling agent for a receipt, containing certificate of attendance, which when filled out and signed by clerk at the meeting entitles the holder to one third fare returning on presentation to ticket agent at junction points where receipt was given as you came through on going trip. Be sure to take receipts when and wherever you purchase tickets. Receipts for fare paid on the train cannot be recognized, nor will any reduction or refund be made to parties who do not hold receipts. Those coming over the C. R. I. & P. should purchase where they will get C. B. & Q. train to Montrose. Keokuk is best point to change. Through tickets can be via C. R. I. & P. from all points on the M. & St. L., B. C. R. & N., R. I. & P., D. M. & N. W., M. K. & T., T. P. & W., K. C. St. J. & C. B., H. & St. J. or K. C., F. S. & M. railroads.

Those on the C. B. & Q. or any of its branches can get tickets direct to Montrose. Those on other lines can ascertain the best and nearest route by asking the nearest ticket agent.

The Western Passenger Association having granted us the privilege of these reduced rates, let all who wish to avail themselves of this reduction be careful to observe the rules and present your certificate to the clerk of the meeting on or before the 24th day of August so that we may certify them to the agent at Montrose. We must have one hundred or more of these certificates to present or the reduction will not be granted. See that the word "delegate" is marked on the contract and on each coupon of tickets purchased.

The roads named will carry you returning for one third fare (if the conditions are observed). A. T. & S. F., B. & M. R., B. C. R. & N., C. & A., C. & N. W., C. B. & N., C. B. & Q., C. G. W., C. M. & St. P., C. St. P. M. & O., Colorado Midland, D. & R. G., F. E. & M., S. C. & P., H. & St. J., K. C. St. J. & C. B., Illinois Central, Iowa Central, J. L. & St. L., M. & St. L., Missouri Pacific, R. G. W., St. J. & G. I., St. L. & S. F., U. P., Wabash, and Wisconsin Central lines along with others before mentioned. JAS. MCKIERNAN, Ch'n. Com.

HENDERSON, Illinois, August 6, 1896.

BORN.

KEYPORT.—To Bro. William and Sr. Mary Keyport, at Powersville, Iowa, February 7, 1896, a daughter, and named Janette Alfreda. Blessed at Powersville, Iowa, July 22, 1896, by Elder W. H. Kephart.

WARNOCK.—To Bro. Robert and Sr. Minnie Warnock, a daughter, May 15, 1896. Named Mary, and blessed by Elders James McKiernan and Robert Warnock, July 5, 1896.

DIED.

SWAGERT.—At Lyons, Wisconsin, July 29, 1896, Sr. Ida L. Swagert, aged 27 years. She was born April 27, 1869, at Milwaukee, Wisconsin; married to Isaiah L. Swagert, June 17, 1887. She was baptized into the church August 6, 1889, by Elder M. T. Short. Funeral services at the M. E. church at Lyons, July 31, by Elder Charles H. Burr, assisted by the M. E. pastor. The remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of relatives and friends. The floral offerings were unusually fine.

COOK.—At Lamoni, Iowa, July 19, 1896, Majory L., daughter of Bro. George and Sr. Malvina Cook, aged 2 years, 14 days. Funeral from the house, in charge of Elder J. A. Gunsolley and sermon by Elder R. M. Elvin from Matthew 19: 14; interment in Rose Hill cemetery.

HAWLEY.—Lislie Hawley, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Hawley, in her eighth year on July 3, 1896. Funeral sermon by Elder C. A. Parkin, at the residence of the parents, July 6, at three p. m. She died as she had lived, pure in the sight of the Lord, and we feel assured she will come forth in the resurrection of the just.

BELL.—At Fall River, Massachusetts, July 18, 1896, Sr. Sarah E. Bell, mother of Bro. Daniel T. Shaw, aged 60 years, 3 months, and

3 days. Funeral July 20, with sermon by Elder John Smith. "Gone to her rest."

MCBIRNIE.—Little Willie, infant son of William and Jennie McBurnie. Born at Boonesboro, Iowa, November 13, 1895. Died July 24, 1896. A lovely bud of promise plucked so early in life's springtime from the family plant. Funeral sermon by Elder C. Scott, at the home. A very large assemblage attended. Two verses sung at the tomb, a brief benediction, and the faithful little grave solemnly took charge of its sacred trust. But, we'll meet little Willie "In the sweet bye and bye."

GOODRICH.—Ivan Guston, son of Bro. Vinton M. and Sr. Eliza Goodrich, was born June 29, 1893, at Byer, Ohio; died at Byer, Ohio, July 20, 1896. Ivan was a bright child, loved by all who knew him. His short life was one of joy to his parents. Father, mother, three brothers, one sister, and many relatives and friends mourn, but are comforted with the words of the Savior, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." The funeral services were held at the Christian church, Byer, Ohio, conducted by T. J. Beatty, assisted by J. L. Goodrich.

ELLIOT.—Mary L. Grose was born February 2, 1844, at Parkersburg, West Virginia; was married to William Rooks in 1860 or 1861. Her second marriage was to George M. Elliot, March 24, 1864. Was baptized August 13, 1884, at Limerick, Ohio, by Elder L. R. Devore. She continued firm in the faith through many long years of suffering with consumption. Died near Richmondale, Ohio, June 28, 1896. Husband, adopted son, and many friends mourn. Funeral in the Saints' church at Limerick, Ohio, June 30, conducted by T. J. Beatty.

HUNLY.—Mary Hunly was born May 18, 1838; died at Wellston, Ohio, July 11, 1896. Mrs. Hunly was a member of the Baptist Church. She said at her parting hour, her way was bright, she was not afraid to die; all she wanted was her Savior. Three sons and three daughters mourn. Funeral at Wellston, Ohio, July 12, conducted by T. J. Beatty, assisted by A. W. Kriebel, a large audience being present.

JACKSON.—At Twin Mounds, Kansas, March 30, 1896, Bro. Lewis Jackson, aged 88 years, 1 month, and 4 days. He was the son of John and Sarah Jackson. He was born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio. He became identified with the church in the days of the martyrs; baptized by Parley P. Pratt, and confirmed by P. P. Pratt and Oliver Cowdery. Ordained an elder by J. Savage. He was a member of the Galland's Grove branch at the time of his death. His remains were laid to rest in the Twin Mounds cemetery, there to await the resurrection of the just.

HEPWORTH.—At Armstrong, Kansas City, Kansas, July 31, 1896, Mabel Matilda, infant daughter of George F. and Laura J. Hepworth, aged 10 months and 15 days. The funeral took place August 1 from the church at Armstrong; services in charge of Elder George Hicklin, assisted by J. H. Stratton; sermon by George Hicklin, from 2 Samuel 12: 23.

BRO. B. F. ORDWAY,

OF PEORIA, ILLINOIS,

Who is making and selling a Tobacco Antidote called QUIT-TO-BAC, sends us the following letter to show what good work the remedy is doing.

The regular Price of Quit-To-bac is $1.00 per box, or three boxes $2.50, postpaid anywhere, with written guarantee to cure or money refunded.

Bro. Ordway wishes us to say that for a time he will send one box for 75 cts. or three boxes for $1.50 with guarantee, postpaid to any place where he has no agent to anyone who if cured will agree to act as agent or try and get an agent.

Bro. H. C. Tharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes April 23, 1896:—

"Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco. It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured. . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected. Impairing health, cool, fort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Bacco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Bacco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Bacco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Bacco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Bacco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,

P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

Paper covers 10c.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SEER OF PALMYRA AND SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N. B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

A GLORIOUS FUTURE FOR PALESTINE.

A CORRESPONDENT of The Jewish Chronicle quotes an article by Dr. Alfred Hettner (in Die Geographische Zeitschrift) in which the outlook for Palestine, both from a religious and economic point of view, is glowingly depicted. Dr. Hettner says:—

“The future of Palestine rises up before us in as pleasing colors as the present displays a somber aspect. Once let a good government be established, and from that moment the development of the country will set in. To-day, it has about the worst possible government, and notwithstanding that drawback an improvement is taking place in consequence of increased communication with Europe. This is most notable in Haifa, Jaffa, Nazareth, and Jerusalem, but slighter traces of the same influence are felt even east of Jordan. Nazareth has established three hospitals and twelve schools, at some of which technical instruction is given. In Jerusalem, where the Mohammedan population is on the decrease and is already in the minority, we have seventy synagogues and numerous hospitals, besides schools, orphanages, and other public buildings.

And at the present day the Holy City has more than ever the aspect of the city of the world and also of holiness.

“Though agriculture and commerce have declined and the population has decreased, Palestine may yet become the granary of the southeast Mediterranean and even for Europe. It is capable of increasing its population fourfold; i. e., to three millions, or one hundred to the square kilometer. West of the Jordan the water supply is so good and agriculture can be carried on so successfully, that it would support this population. The conditions are extremely favorable to the growth of oranges, cotton, tobacco, and sugarcane, and already garden plots are successfully cultivated in the neighborhood of Bethlehem, Nablous, Tichenin, and a few other places.”—Literary Digest, August 8, 1896.

BIBLICAL CRITICISM UP TO DATE.

PROF. W. GARDEN BLAIKIE, D.D., LL.D., of the Free Church College, Edinburgh, contributes to The Watchman an article on biblical criticism and its results up to date, as he sees them, in the settlement of doubtful and disputed points in the Old and the New Testaments. As to the latter, Dr. Blaikie says that rationalistic criticism has suffered a defeat all along the line. As instances of this he mentions the naturalistic theory of Paulus, the myth theory of Strauss, and the suicidal theory of Renan, all of which he says have now been discarded by scholars generally. After speaking of the arguments against the nonsupernatural position presented in the writings of Pfeiderer and Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Dr. Blaikie continues:—

“Rational criticism, therefore, hard though it has labored in the very fire, leaves Jesus Christ where it found him, and where his church has ever placed him; and we may say nearly the same thing of the Gospels which record his life. Desperate though the effort has been to relegate the Gospels to the second century, and thereby impair their historical authority, it has proved a failure. Rationalists themselves have been driven back toward the first century, if not within the century itself. Even in regard to the fourth Gospel, which has been the Malakoff of the position, the whole trend of criticism is now in the conservative direction. Were you to poll scholarly Christendom to-day, you would find such a preponderance of opinion in favor of St. John as would leave all other possible writers of that Gospel in a miserable minority.”

Dr. Blaikie next turns to the criticism of the Old Testament, summing up his observations here under four heads. On the following points he asserts that the critics themselves have had to draw in:—

“(1) It used to be contended that the art of writing was unknown in the early history of Israel and did not come into operation until the time of the kings; consequently that Moses could not have written the Pentateuch, and that there could have been no written record of the earlier laws. This has been entirely refuted by the recent discovery of the Tel-el-Amarna tablets, which show not only that writing was common both in Egypt and Canaan before the Exodus, but present us with the very letters which were received at that time by the King of Egypt from his tributaries in Canaan.

“(2) In like manner, the contention that the Hebrews had no books till about 800 B. C. is inconsistent with the obvious tenor of some of the early prophets, preeminently Hosea and Amos. Israel is charged with having all through their history neglected the law of God—not a mere traditional law, but a law contained in writing. ‘I have written to him the great things of my law but they were counted as a strange thing.’ It is assumed that the law was written, and there is no hint that that was a recent arrangement; it seems to have been contemporaneous with the law itself.

“(3) There is now a disposition on the part of the critics to allow to Moses a larger share in the construction of various law-codes than was at first conceded. For even critics must own that, from first to last, the law was counted to be the law of Moses.

"(4) And the idea of Wellhausen and others that more than half the Old Testament was written after the Exile is manifestly extravagant and untenable. No reasoning, however plausible, can disconnect the name of David with the authorship of Psalms, or make it credible that there were no men in the nation till the return from Babylon whose religious experience qualified them for the task. Equally out of the question is it to argue that when David, with such elaboration, organized his body of singers and players for the service of the tabernacle and the temple, he left them without any suitable songs to sing.

"On the other hand, some points contended for by the critics have been very generally accepted. We have learned to lay more stress on the historical development of the nation of Israel, and to view all the transactions in which they were concerned more directly in their historical and geographical connections. It is generally allowed, too, that the historical books, as we have them, were compiled in a large measure from preëxisting materials, and that probably two or more such documents were drawn upon in the compilation of some of the books. And a considerable share of supplementary work must be allowed to the successive redactors who brought down the books to date. Of course this view conflicts with the impression which some seem to have that each book came into existence in a complete and finished form, 'bound, gilt, and lettered,' as some one has put it, just as we have our Bible to-day. There is no point on which our presuppositions are more liable to conflict with the divine plan than the manner in which God inspired the sacred records."—Literary Digest, July 18, 1896.

A GREAT DISTANCE TO THE SUN.

"The sun is about 93,000,000 of miles distant from the earth," writes Alden W. Quimby in the Ladies' Home Journal. "It varies through the year, because the earth's orbit is elliptical, and the sun is at one focus of the ellipse. The earth is more than 3,000,000 of miles nearer the sun in December than in June, at which time the latitudes south of the equator receive his direct rays and experience the great heat of their summer.

"Let us try to comprehend the figure stated. The other day two racers of the sea proudly lowered the record of transatlantic passage. Could they turn their prows to the sun, and drive their great engines day and night in the crossing of the ether main, it would be five hundred years before they could reach harbor.

"Most persons have noticed the appreciable interval of time between the stroke of an ax at a distance and the resultant sound; could we hear the sound of a solar explosion we would know that the explosion had occurred fourteen years before. Perhaps the most striking illustration is that which imagines a little child to have an arm long enough to reach the sun. The child might thrust its fingers into the seething fires but it would grow up to maturity, and calmly descend into the valley of extreme old age, blissfully unconscious of any pain from the burning; in fact, it would require another such a lifetime to bring the news to the brain."

RED SEA MIRACLE.

It is a well-known fact that at certain times of the year Link River, a stream a mile and a quarter long, which connects the great water systems above and below this point, becomes almost dry. This state of affairs, however, lasts, as a rule, but a few hours, during which time people have been known to walk across the river, 300 feet wide, without getting their feet wet. The bottom of the river has been dug out in many places by the action of the water, forming large potholes, and when the river becomes dry these holes are filled with trout, which are left stranded. At such times it is a common occurrence to see men and boys knocking the fish in the head with clubs, and in this way they secure many a good meal. There are many traditions regarding this phenomenon among the Indians here, but the real cause of the low water in the river is the action of the wind. The course of the stream is southeast, and the high winds which prevail in the spring and fall are from the south, and blow up the river. The outlet from the upper lake being small, the force of the wind keeps the water back in the big lake, causing the river to become very low.—Klamath (Ore.) Express.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

CONSISTENT CHARITY.

BRN. D. E. TUCKER and M. H. Bond, both of whom, with others of the eldership, have been meeting and counteracting the missionary efforts of the Utah elders, write of the work of the latter in their fields. The former urges that said elders be granted use of chapels of the Reorganized Church only on condition that they agree to discuss the issues between the two bodies; the latter states the conditions on which the St. Louis brethren granted use of their chapel. Both propositions are fair and just; the basis upon which anyone asking for right to use a house devoted to public worship being the right of free speech and the granting to the people the opportunity to investigate, to fully consider the relative claims of opposing bodies or principles—to see diverse claims placed side by side, for comparison. Upon whatever terms the elders of the Utah Church obtain access to our chapels, whether by the foregoing or without specific agreement, they will doubtless be subject to review in any case.

We believe they should be urged to discuss the issues, but if they will not, that those in charge of chapels should take such measures as they see fit to vindicate the faith, should they be granted use of said chapels without specific stipulation of terms.

Representatives of public bodies are public men, and under their missionary appointment to go into all the world are under obligation to declare and defend their principles in public. They are supposed to study the questions affirmed and opposed by them, and the people have a right to demand that instead of confining their efforts to making a house-to-house canvass among the laity, they meet the men chosen to represent the Reorganization, and who hold themselves in readiness to meet the points in issue. A full comparison of views can thus be had, and their relative worth tested by contrast. Besides this, time can be saved by gathering bodies of the people together for such discussions; for hundreds may be reached in an hour by open public discussion, instead of but two or three.

Here is the golden opportunity for the Brighamite Church to reach the people. Its ministers are seeking for openings to present their faith. Why not accept the offers made them by the elders of the Reorganization? They can safely guarantee the attendance of most if not all of our own people, as well as the presence of many who do not profess the faith. Can the Utah people hope for indorsement by the American public of their refusal to enter the arena of conflict? Certainly not; hence as an organization showing weakness, the results of such weakness will be apparent and result in final disintegration.

No sophistry can justify the present policy of the Utah elders in refusing to meet the issue. No quarter should be shown their efforts to evade it. The truth knows no compromise with error and palliates no efforts to evade full and open investigation. It also shows no respect to persons.

It is a mistaken sense of charity, a false idea of forbearance, to permit Utah missionaries or any others, whomsoever they may be, to evade issues in that way. The truth courts open methods, and has no fear of results of such methods. The Utah Church leaders are manifestly conscious of the weakness of their claims, else they would readily authorize an exchange of views. They who are possessed of the truth are not influenced by improper methods, by evident disposition to evade the consequences of examination. Truth is consistent with itself. Truth is also permanent, and cannot be moved. Error is always faulty, and fearful, and must give way and be overcome as light is brought to bear upon it.

If the priesthood of the Utah Church are chosen of God and rightly occupy the right to succeed the organization built up by the Martyrs and their coworkers, why are they afraid to meet the Reorganization in discussion of the points at issue? They are stronger in numbers, in wealth, and in all that numerical strength gives. Why be afraid of the sling of the smaller Reorganization if the God of Israel be with them? Is their God too weak to give them the victory? Are they not ashamed or afraid to meet the record they have made?

Is anyone unprepared to justify the position taken by the elders of the Reorganized Church in calling them to account? Does anyone justify the course of the Utah Church in making the Martyr and the work responsible for the so-called revelation of 1843 and the practice of polygamy? Can men be men of God who urge that the principle of polygamy is a true principle, even though its practice now be desisted from, as claimed?

The truth is, those who possess the spirit of the latter-day work possess the spirit of investigation, and they demand, under the inspiration of its spirit, that nothing shall pass muster that seeks to remain under cover; that merit—truth—is the only rightful claim to acceptance; and that truth will not evade, but welcome and challenge examination and comparison. The eldership of the Reorganization are also inspired by a wholesome enmity against falsehood, false principles, and evasiveness. They are moved upon by a conviction of duty to war against and pull down that that is wrong, enslaving, and misleading, wherever they find it.

They recognize that true charity is neither an active nor a passive abettor of anything untrue; that it refuses to be so weak or foolish as to be lulled to sleep or to wink at or permit wrong in any place.

Some of the worst evils that have come upon the world have been presented by those who in manner simulated guilelessness; who were apparently very meek in spirit and possessed of a "voluntary humility;" who to the incautious appear to be goodness and humility personified. And, such characters, almost without exception, "do not believe in debating!"

It requires true wisdom to exercise true charity. Wisdom refuses to justify such weakness and folly that would lull to stupor or wink at or permit wrong in anyone. It has learned to discriminate between what is actual and what is imitated, between what is real and what is assumed. Such ideas of charity as some would urge would entail oppression and spiritual darkness upon every soul beguiled and led away by such fallacy and weakness.

Charity is "the pure love of God," not the impure policy that in any sense passes over the terrible wrongs of the past and glosses over the career of Brigham Young and others who have succeeded him in wrongs and usurpation.

We have kindness toward the people of Utah, but such kindness as will prove of practical value to them; that gives them to understand, unmistakably, that they must repent and reform; must acknowledge their errors, and must conform to the plain provisions of the law of God; in which course alone can they be justified, receive God's favor, and find deliverance. The true in heart among them will ultimately do this; those who justify their leaders and indorse the wrongs of the past and such as exist in the present, will refuse to do it.

The eldership and people of the Reorganized Church have a right to demand and to insist that the faith of their fathers which they have espoused shall not be falsified and made odious by the past history of the Utah Church, or by the present Utah policy that justifies the past and parades it to the world as true Latter Day Saintism. Our own interests as a people, the interests of our children,—and, greater than all, the vast interests of humanity, are concerned in this matter; for until the world can be satisfied that our work is what it claims to be, we cannot hope to lead true, honest-hearted men and women into the fold. God has committed to the "remnant" the lifting up of the standard, and by his power the eldership of the Reorganization have succeeded in stemming the tide caused by the surge and flood of evil that came in like a flood from the enemy through the preaching and practice of polygamy and other evils in the Utah organization.

When it becomes right to call the evils of the past good, when the time comes that virtue and truth in morals and the word of God can be trampled beneath the feet of men at will, and the gospel does not require an upright and a consistent course from those who claim to represent it, it will be time to let the Utah elders pursue their untrue course unhindered. The war against their wrong system and incorrect claims to succession can never be ended until they capitulate or go to pieces as an organization. They must take the consequences and accept the results of the campaign upon which they have entered. The same love of God that requires men and women to be right, to "cease to do evil and learn to do well," and that designs to save them "from their sins," urges the principles of truth upon the Utah people.

The ministry of the Reorganized Church have not adopted this policy especially for the Utah Church; nor have they found it necessary to adopt more than one policy in meeting error and establishing truth universally. The Spirit of truth makes no exceptions in its disapprobation of wrong wherever found. Its mission is to reprove the world of sin, of misconceptions of righteousness, and of judgment to come. Truth makes manifest: "All things are naked and open before him with whom we have to do." The word of God is "quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore, give heed unto my words," is the language of one of the first and primary lessons given to the church in the days of the Martyr. It is one too that the Utah priesthood has never learned, nor outgrown, and that cannot be ignored. God's "paths are straight" and "his course is one eternal round." It will go hard with any body of people, however great its claims to priesthood power, to be found in persistent opposition to the truth and standing in the way of its progress. The day has come for error to be hit hard, for truth is to prevail. The Lord has declared that he would make his servants mighty in him; that he would be their strength and defense, their helmet and shield, and clothe them with the sword of the Spirit; and that he would turn and overturn by the use of various agencies to accomplish his will. Men who stand by the word of God are made conscious of his presence in the strife, giving them the victory. Men in error must avoid the arena of open conflict and skulk in the byways of quiet and retreat.

And, "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men."

Joseph the Martyr and others in his time were brave men, like the servants of God in the past. Why not the Utah ministry profit by their examples of bravery and meet the issues squarely?

URGES EXPOSING OF FRAUDS.

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 10.—Reports submitted at the annual meeting of the Michigan State Spiritualist Association to-day showed the year has been a prosperous one, three charters having been issued and fifteen ministers ordained. The total number of charters now in force is twenty-seven. The President . . . urged the exposing of frauds who use spiritualism as a cloak for bleeding the public as the most potent method of overcoming prejudice. Officers were elected as follows. . . .

All lovers of truth will concur in the sentiment that frauds of all kinds should be exposed. However, many of them doubtless hold to the opinion that spiritualism itself would stand a poor show for continuance if all frauds were exposed. In this connection the queries suggest themselves as pertinent, Who ordains or grants authority to ordain ministers in spiritualism? Who is the responsible or official head of the organization—of the unseen spiritual forces said to be directing and controlling the hosts mustered in spiritism?

Who is he? Spiritism in its philosophy and teachings denies the personality of God, hence is in direct conflict with the cardinal or foundation principle of the religion of Jesus Christ, and at variance with the government of God. Who then is the logical head and general of its forces? Certainly some one whose special business it is to oppose and war against the God of the Bible and the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Finding a unity of purpose and that calculated to mislead and destroy, in spiritualism, and recognizing in all the realm of mind that there can be no intelligence without personality, we have been obliged to conclude that spiritism is directed and controlled by a recognized head, and one who by his lengthy experience and peculiar makeup is evidently well qualified for the position he occupies. From and after the foundation of the world he seems to have brought upon man the legitimate fruits of following his counsel, and will doubtless never cease his malevolent career until subjugated by the power that is to destroy him and his works.

It is doubtless true that the policy of "ordaining" or appointing authorized agents to represent and act for him is no new policy upon his part. Through the various grades of his fellows in the nether world, including many who in this mundane sphere do his pleasure, there evidently are those who like him in disposition, love to do evil and hate to do well.

We do not doubt that many in spiritism may be innocent of its destructive character and tendencies. However, they have but to continue in its influence for a time until they learn to their sorrow that not only have they done evil to others, but have also been darkened in mind and prostituted to their own personal hurt; and that the Devil and his principles are such by nature that they injure and finally destroy those engaged in their service and belief.

God is the center and soul of every sphere, the divine Personality who presides in the midst of all things;—the Creator; the light of truth. He is the Father of all, and manifests and extends the principle of Fatherhood in the intelligence seen in the course of nature, in which he rules in things spiritual and temporal, or in the entire realm of the universe. In his works we have the manifestation of mind, of intelligence, of personality. We know of no intelligence that is impersonal; we cannot conceive of intelligence that is not personal. Personality of intelligence is a manifest, a self-evident truth—a cardinal, foundation principle upon which rests the great spiritual and temporal universe, the spacious temple of God's works. A comprehension of this truth is essential to an understanding and proper conception of the vast spiritual and temporal realm, or of even its first principles. The personality of God and the attributes of his character enter into and form the basis and, with the works of his hands, the superstructure of the entire fabric. For this reason evidently the Devil, though himself a personality, has made the doctrine of the nonpersonality of God (or god it should be written) the first or cardinal feature of spiritism—declaring man, nature, anything and everything to be God or a part of him, that he might mislead, corrupt, and finally destroy those deceived by him. Hence in spiritism we find its natural results—no God, no lawgiver, no law; no standard of truth in morals, in spiritual things, etc., and spiritual and moral anarchy and final misery as the result of disregard of the divine order instituted and fostered by the government of God.

God created to exalt and bless by law, and all his rules of government are founded in justness and truth, hence they exalt and save. Satan assumes to control and, being wrong, would supplant good by evil and rule to the destruction of law and the final misery of mankind. Light and darkness, truth and error, benevolence and malevolence, happiness and misery, one and the other, exist side by side, or open to the choice of every free agent. Men often love darkness rather than light because their deeds are habitually evil, while he that doeth truth cometh to the light that his deeds may be manifest that they are wrought in God.

The evident, the manifest organization, education, and discipline of the forces of error and the perfection of evil designs, so far as perfection may apply to such a cause, argue that evil does work by a duly constituted system and regularly devised plan.

God works by means, employing regularly organized and authorized forces. Satan's work is now, as from the beginning, an imitation of the works of God—a perversion, yet in some respects an imitation. Evil is said to be a perversion of forces and means. Why not look for organization, coöperation, generalship in the forces not of flesh and blood, in the spiritual darkness that arrays itself against the truth? It is but natural, reasonable to expect it. We have it in the organized evils that array themselves openly against society in the saloon and other elements, why not in other and specific forms?

Let all frauds and untruths and those engaged in fostering them be manifest in their real light, and frauds and wrongs will be both exposed and overcome.

GOOD ADVICE FROM A GOOD WHILE AGO.

PRES. F. G. WILLIAMS, once wrote to the Saints as follows:—

We have seen a letter written to Sister Whitney, in Nelson, that has a great deal to say about the gift of tongues, and the interpretation which was given by way of prophecy, namely: "that Zion would be delivered by judgments," and that certain ones named, would go to such and such places among the Lamanites, and "great things would be done by them"; and also, that two Lamanites were at a meeting, and the following prophecy was delivered to them, "that they were our friends, and that the Lord had sent them there, and the time would soon come when they should embrace the gospel," and also, "that if we will not fight for our selves, the Indians will fight for us."—Though all this may be true, yet, it is not needful that it should be spoken, for it is of no service to the Saints, and has a tendency to stir up the people to anger.

No prophecy spoken in tongues should be made public, for this reason: many who pretend to have the gift of interpretation are liable to be mistaken, and do not give the true interpretation of what is spoken; therefore, great care should be had, as respects this thing; but, if any speak in tongues, a word of exhortation, or doctrine, or the principles of the gospel, etc., let it be interpreted for the edification of the church.—Times and Seasons Vol. 6, page 865.

KAZAN'S human sacrifice trial has ended after four years in a verdict of acquittal. The seven persons on trial were accused of beheading a peasant named Konon Mativunine as a sacrifice to their idols, pagan idol-worship mixed with some Christian forms, being found in many parts of Russia. The accused were all dwellers in the village of Staraia-Moultana, a suspected district.

The foregoing press item together with other evidences lead to the belief that revolting survivals of pagan worship yet remain in some portions of Christian Europe and Asia. While such extreme evidences of fanaticism are rare, it remains true that many and other traces of paganism remain firmly fixed in the soil of our so-called Christian civilization. The modern western world is largely Christianized in name—more than it is in fact. Tobacco as now used, "Heathendom's most popular gift to Christendom," and many vices and errors of the past, yet remain fastened upon the social and religious life of the people.

It is not an easy thing to be a Christian in the dominions of the Sultan. The following shows that Turkish troops still continue their fanatical butcheries of the Christians. Bad as it is, this massacre is limited compared with others perpetrated in Armenia. The rule of some other government might be bad enough, but could hardly be worse than that of the Turk:—

ANAPOLIS PEDIADA, Crete, Aug. 10.—On Saturday 1,000 armed Mussulmans butchered thirty unarmed Christians in the precinct of the St. John Monastery. Priests and women and children are the victims.

One woman was slaughtered for saving her children.

Several churches were desolated, and a priest named Jeremiah had his ears and nose severed from his head and was then burned alive on a pyre of sacred pictures.

Later advices present the following:—

LONDON, August 12.—The Chronicle asserts that it learns that England and Russia are on the point of an agreement to save both Armenia and Crete from Turkish oppression without disturbing the peace of Europe.

An editorial in the same paper hints that the agreement will involve the presence of a Russian army in Armenia and of a British fleet at Crete to guarantee Turkish compliance with the terms of the agreement.

The Berlin correspondent of the Daily News hears that the Czar has written strongly to the Sultan on Cretan affairs.

BRO. M. P. MADISON DEAD.

THE following from Bro. J. M. Terry relates the sad news of the sudden death of Bro. M. P. Madison, of the Seventy, who was killed by lightning while engaged in tent work. We are pained to learn of his sudden demise. He died at his post of duty while engaged in the active service. We sympathize with his afflicted family, upon whom the blow falls heavily.

The visitation was sudden and unexpected.

Bro. Madison was a faithful laborer and enjoyed the confidence of the Saints in his field—Northwestern Missouri and Southern Iowa, where he was held in high esteem. He is the second member of his quorum (the Second Seventy) to die suddenly while on duty.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 13.

Editors Herald:—I have the sad news to impart to you and Herald readers of the death of Bro. Peter Madison, who was struck by lightning about two and one half miles from St. Joseph. He was engaged in tent work at Cosby and was coming to St. Joseph with a son of Bro. Arthur Haley, when a storm approached and they took shelter in a barn. The lightning struck the barn; the bolt passing down a beam struck Bro. Madison in the forehead, leaving an abrasion, passing down left another mark over the heart, passing on down tore his left shoe badly. The watch in his pocket was also injured and stopped at 10:37 a. m., indicating the time of the stroke.

His body is now at the undertaker's. His parents and family have been notified by wire. They will arrive at 6:40 this evening.

A noble man, a faithful officer, a true leader among his people, has thus suddenly been removed by this sad and fatal stroke. I cannot inform you further now.

Your brother,

J. M. TERRY.

CHOLERA IN EGYPT.

WE aim to give brief accounts of the leading signs of the times, for the benefit of our readers. The following is presented concerning cholera in Egypt:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 11.—"Increase of cholera in Egypt" is the principal feature of a report received from the land of the Pharaohs by Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine Hospital service.

"Notwithstanding the measures taken by Dr. Rogers Pasha," says the report, "the proportions of the cholera outbreak show the disease has got beyond the control of the sanitary authorities. It is no reflection upon Rogers Pasha or the members of the staff who are assisting him to suggest that the cholera has got out of hand. For nine months they have fought with an energy that gained for them recognition in all quarters of the country. So long as the infected areas were comparatively small the efforts of the limited staff of European doctors at the disposal of Rogers Pasha were sufficient to stamp it out in place after place. Now, however, the dimensions of the outbreak forbid the possibility of any successful attempt to stamp out the disease.

"To show the futility of any hope of arresting its course at present, during the week before last fresh outbreaks occurred in sixty-nine different places, and last week in eighty-seven. During the seven days up to August 1, 1,200 deaths were reported, and in the following six days 1,700 deaths. Over 8,000 deaths have already occurred from the present outbreak, and these figures will be largely increased before the disease runs its course."

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes and will be sold at $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume, according to the styles of binding.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Prices, as stated, $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume, according to styles of binding; cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders to the Business Manager, as heretofore.

ARCTIC EXPLORATIONS.

DR. NANSEN, the Norwegian explorer, who sailed from Christiania, Norway, June 24, 1893, in the steamer Fram, on a voyage of discovery to the Arctic regions, with the intention of reaching the North Pole if possible, arrived at Vardoe Island, Norway, August 13. Dr. Nansen left the Fram with one companion on March 14, 1895, in 84° north latitude. He traversed the Polar Sea to a point 86° 14' north latitude, situated north of the New Siberia Islands. No land was sighted north of 82°. In consequence of the scarcity of dogs with the expedition he was compelled to turn back at 86° 15'. He was met by Jackson, of the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition, near Elmwood, the headquarters of the British expedition, where he awaited the arrival of the steamer Windward which came to the relief of the latter expedition.

Prof. Mohn says the scientific results of Dr. Nansen's observations are magnificent, and that several islands have been discovered. Dr. Nansen expects the Fram to arrive safely at Spitzbergen. He adds that wherever they penetrated they found the ice broken. Large patches of water were found 3,800 meters deep. Below the depth of 190 meters the water was appreciably warmer, probably owing to the Gulf Stream. The land voyage was most arduous, but extremely valuable scientific results were obtained.

Jackson of the British expedition also reports valuable discoveries in exploring the western parts of Franz Josef Land. He has drawn extensive accurate maps and has discovered new regions. He adds:—

This spring had been phenomenally mild. Although we marched north a great distance, using sixteen dogs and a pony, we met, after a fortnight, open water reaching from the face of a huge glacier east to the precipitous end of another huge glacier to the west. Advance by sledges was thus cut off. We then struck southeast, down Markham Sound, and added greatly to our discoveries of 1895. But we were again stopped by open water, reaching entirely across the sound, etc.

During April terrific snowstorms, coupled with rises in the temperature, entirely broke up the ice and prevented marching. . . .

BLUFF PARK RAILWAY RATES.

In addition to the rates already announced by the Western Passenger Association, we publish the following from the Keokuk and Western people, who offer the low rate of one fare for the round trip between the points named. Notice particularly that tickets are good only on August 21, 22, and 24 on the going trip, and limited to return not later than August 31:—

KEOKUK & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

KEOKUK, Iowa, Aug. 13, 1896.

MR. R. S. SALYARDS,

Lamoni, Iowa,

Dear Sir:—Will you please insert the following in each issue of your Herald from now until the close of the Convention at Bluff Park:—

"The Keokuk & Western and Des Moines & Kansas City Railways will make one fare rates from Leon, Humeston, Decatur City, Van Wert, Osceola, and Des Moines to Keokuk for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale August 21, 22, and 24, limited to August 31."

Respectfully,
J. F. ELDER,
General Passenger Agent.

The Keokuk & Western extends from Van Wert to Keokuk, Iowa, where it connects with the C. B. & Q. for Montrose. It also connects at other points. The Des Moines & Kansas City road extends from Des Moines, Iowa, to Cainesville, Missouri, and connects with the Keokuk & Western at Van Wert.

Full particulars concerning connections, etc., can be obtained from agents of said lines. It should be remembered that neither the Keokuk & Western nor the Des Moines & Kansas City roads is included in the Western Passenger Association, and that persons using either of those lines should obtain certificates with tickets purchased going from Keokuk to Montrose, or to other points enroute over any lines of the association, in order to also secure the reduced one and one third fare round trip rate granted by the Western Passenger Association.

FLOODS IN HUNGARY.

BUDA-PESTH, August 8.—Terrible hurricanes, accompanied by destructive hailstorms, occurred in various parts of Hungary yesterday. Many persons are known to have perished in the floods from the mountains, and it is feared that later reports will show heavy loss of life. The damage to property all through the country districts was very heavy. In the towns of Graz, Terentschintepplitz, and Kecskemet there has been a tremendous amount of damage done to property by the wind and the floods. In the latter town, which numbers about 50,000 inhabitants and is about fifty miles southeast of Buda-Pesth, it is reported that almost every house has been damaged to a greater or lesser extent, and the loss is estimated at millions of florins.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. T. W. CHATBURN, Macon, Missouri, late date:—

We closed our tent meetings here last night. We had a fine crowd, tent full and running over. One hundred and fifty school-teachers turned out en masse and favored us with their presence. The County Institute is in session here and the city is full of "schoolma'ns."

Bro. J. F. Mintun, Valley, Nebraska, August 13:—

I go from here to Fremont with the tent. There Elder Romig, of the Disciple Church, has just closed a series of tent meetings and claims about one hundred and seventy-five baptisms, and invites anyone to show wherein he has not preached the whole truth as found in the Bible. I have accepted the invitation in a published notice in one of the papers at Fremont. I expect to show that he has not taught the whole truth about baptism, and the kingdom of God, and then show what the Disciple Church lacks of believing the whole truth. Large attendance at each service here since Saturday eve. Brn. Stubbart and J. S. Strain are with me.

Bro. E. W. Nunley, Marlin, Texas, August 5:—

Bro. Hay and I came here last Saturday. I preached in the courthouse at night to a small congregation of attentive hearers, then we went out four miles in the country and preached some to many more people than at the town of Marlin, then we came back to Marlin and preached again to small turnout. Now we leave for other parts. We found the saints moving on splendidly in this section.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. ASA S. COCHRAN, Secretary of the Board of Publication, will be present at the General Reunion at Bluff Park in behalf of the saints and the Herald Office. He will have a full stock of church publications on sale, also copies of subscription lists, etc., and be prepared to supply the demands of all desiring church literature.

Brn. M. S. Frick and J. C. Christensen will represent the Herald Office at the coming Southwestern Missouri reunion which convenes near Joplin, Missouri. Brethren and sisters in attendance can be supplied with Herald Office publications and make remittances during said reunion through those brethren.

Sr. Libbie Van Brunt, of Ludington, Michigan, writes commendingly of the labors of Bro. J. J. Cornish at Reed City; also of the efforts of Brn. Grant, Beckly, Shippy, and Elles. The work at Ludington was not moving as it once did, the present condition, she thinks, manifesting who are in earnest and who are not, giving opportunity to the saints to prove where they stand spiritually. A revival and increase there was hoped for, and not without some ground for hope. The people of Reed City were being awakened to an interest and many were astonished at the doctrine taught by the saints. Sr. Van Brunt desires the present address of Bro. James Drown.

Bro. J. S. Strain wrote of late from Valley, Nebraska, where he had been assisting Brn. Mintun and Stubbart in tent work. Interest was increasing; weather cooler and house-to-house visiting among the people was contemplated. He also writes of change of date of one of the western reunions, by which some were denied attendance, of which we know little or nothing. Bro. Strain also refers to the manifest indifference of many concerning religious matters. Politics, pleasure, and spiritualism, he thinks, take the crowds.

We publish elsewhere an announcement of the annual opening of the Iowa School for the Deaf. A well-known and reliable educational institution located at Council Bluffs, Iowa. It is apparently a well-managed school, worthy of patronage, and "fostered and provided for by" the people of the State. It is "free to all deaf persons of school age of Iowa." Address the Superintendent, Mr. Henry W. Rothert, at Council Bluffs, if interested.

Liberals and freethinkers, so called, from all parts of the world, are preparing for a congress of liberals to meet in Chicago, November 13-15. Robert G. Ingersoll, Mrs. Annie Besant, and G. W. Foot and Charles Watts of England, Samuel T. Putnam, Helen Gardner, and other celebrities are expected to be present.

The intense heat has proved very destructive to life in many of the cities, especially in New York, Chicago, and St. Louis. One hundred deaths occurred in New York in one day, one hundred and fifty in the city and surroundings. Last week Chicago reported thirty-seven persons and four hundred horses killed by sunstroke on the 10th. St. Louis reports four hundred deaths induced by heat in fifteen days—July 27 to August 10.

By letter from Bro. Thomas Hamilton, of Willow Springs, Missouri, we learn that Bro. W. C. Cather has secured help in his work, having been married to her who once was Sr. Mattie Havey, on the 2d inst., near Pomona, Missouri. Many present extended congratulations, in which the HERALD joins.

Bro. J. M. Kelley of Macedonia, Iowa, a brother of Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley, made a brief visit to Lamoni during the past week. He left on the 14th with Bro. E. L. Kelley, who went to the Thurman, Iowa, reunion, to remain over Sunday, the 16th.

Forty-eight hours of rain and windstorms resulted in the death of eight persons and great destruction of property, on the 8th and 9th, at various points in the United States.

Bro. J. M. Blood, of Menominee, Wisconsin, writes in criticism of articles which lately appeared in the Searchlight. He finds the testimony of the Lord in acceptance of the Reorganization and expresses his satisfaction with its positions and general status. He thinks the Hedrickites are too late in the day with their criticisms.

Some of the brethren have sent us conference minutes, conference notices, and other matter for publication in reprint form, after such have appeared elsewhere. We wish to remind such brethren that the HERALD will not republish old and stale matter that rightly belongs in its columns, after it has become stale. Those who wish matters for publication to appear in the HERALD must treat the publication with at least the same courtesy accorded others. We have never declined to publish matter simultaneously, though having first claim as the church organ, but positively decline to publish such matter as referred to second hand.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins left Lamoni on the 17th inst. for a three weeks' missionary tour in Kansas. He will attend the reunion near Clay Center and also visit and labor at Troy and Fanning, Kansas.

Floods have destroyed life and property in far-away India. Other points than those noted report recent visitations of storm and flood.

Sr. M. Brand, of Tabor, Iowa, has about five or six recent volumes of the HERALD that she would send to anyone who desires them, the receiver to pay the freight. Write her if wanted.

Brn. R. M. Elvin and A. M. Chase, who have been doing tent work at Chariton, Iowa, raised their tent at Creston on the 15th inst. They are operating on new ground, in the tent of the Decatur district.

The steamer Orient, at Vancouver, B. C., August 13, brings Chinese news to the effect that a famous Chinese society, in obedience to the imperial command, has begun a massacre of all Mohammedans. At Hsiningfru 3,000 were slain and their wives and daughters sold. Fears of a general uprising prevail. Floods are doing terrible damage in China. In many places towns and villages are submerged. All railroads have stopped running. Many deaths have taken place and hundreds of homeless men, women, and children are starving to death.

Thirty lives were lost and much property destroyed by windstorms and cloudbursts at and near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, August 13.

Semi-official advices of the 14th deny the statements of the London Chronicle that England and Russia would interfere to protect the Cretans and Armenians from Turkish atrocities.

Letters received from Brn. William Thompson, D. C. White, George Montague, Sr. Louise Palfrey, and others will probably appear next week. Space considerably crowded this week.

We devote some space this week, as at other times, to special current events that present some of the signs of the times having a bearing upon the latter-day work and latter-day developments. It is well, we think, to glance at some of the causes of all things being "in commotion," that the general trend of events may be noted and, so far as possible, understood; to "discern the signs of times."

Bro. W. B. Paul, of the Herald Office force, will attend the reunion of the Far West and adjoining districts at Maysville, Missouri, with a stock of books and general church publications. He will receive subscriptions and transact general Herald Office business. Look out for him.

CHILDREN'S RIGHTS.

ANOTHER instance occurs to me, this also was in a farmer's family, where all the surroundings were unusually conducive to health. All the children were well and strong except one daughter, the middle child in a family of seven. While developing intellectually and spiritually into a beautiful character, in physical strength though not in size she never developed beyond infancy; was never, during her life of twenty-two years, able to bear her weight on her feet, or help herself more than a baby of a year old can do. Friends looked upon it as a mysterious dispensation of Providence. To me the mystery was solved by a remark of the mother one day, who never suspected that in the fact thus incidentally stated, lay the solution of the mystery. A neighbor was complaining of feeling oppressed for breath, and the mother of the unfortunate Annie remarked, "I know how to sympathize with you; all that summer before Annie was born my husband suffered so terribly from neuralgia, he could not bear a breath of air. We slept in the little bedroom at the head of the stairs, and he could not have the door or window open the least crack. I never shall forget those long, hot nights, how I panted for breath; it seemed as though I should die of suffocation." Here was the secret, the stifling air of that close-shut little room was totally insufficient to purify the mother's blood and make it fit to nourish her own body, much less that of her unborn babe. This ante-natal smothering resulted in life-long invalidism for the daughter.

Across the way lives a talented lawyer whose oldest child is epileptic. Only yesterday I was conversing with one of the family; she remarked, "We always thought that Alice's condition was unaccountable, till my brother-in-law, a noted physician, visited us. He traced it to these facts: Her father took the two last years of his college course in one. Immediately after the graduation of himself and his wife, they were married and both commenced teaching at once, and continued to do so in an unusually hard school, till three months before Alice was born. The doctor said the vitality of both parents was thus exhausted, and they had no nerve power to bequeath to their child. Lacking this, she is an epileptic for life."

By excessive action, certain powers and faculties are exhausted and children of such parents often show deficiency in the very qualities for which their parents were most noted.

Inherited predisposition to disease is undoubtedly the principal cause of the fearful mortality among children. They come into life under such disadvantages that they cannot live. Examination of the death-list in Philadelphia last year shows that forty-two per cent, nearly one half, were children under five years old. Taking the entire country over, statistics show that one half of the children born die before they are seven years old. The heavenly side of this fact is beautiful, for we know these little ones, saved by the blood of the Lamb, are "safe folded to rest," forever shielded from sorrow and from sin. But its earthly side is dark and appalling, it shows fearful wrong somewhere. As Rev. C. C. Harrah forcibly says: "There are not many children who have such an advantage in beginning life as had John the Baptist, of whom it is said, 'He grew and waxed strong in spirit.' No physical suffering interrupted his peace and activity. He was a child of Nature and never was doctored with soothing syrups and cordials. Neither did parents and friends ever weep and agonize and pray for his conversion. He was born and re-born at the same time. With every accession to his physical power of growth, his soul also received new strength. And thus, a man true in all his parts, harmonious in all his powers and faculties, he passed on year by year into a physical, as well as a spiritual maturity. Under the operation of a true Christianity, with the passions controlled and all the habits of life and of living formed by a godly care and sincerity, I should like to know if there is to be only one infant John, or only a few scattered here and there among the physically pious throughout the country? Was not his birth and life as well as his words a harbinger to men? A work of reformation which will lead to so great a result is urged upon us as a necessity of Christian love and duty, to save one half of the race in their helplessness from sufferings which they cannot tell, and from an early grave. If our Lord commended the Samaritan for saving the wounded man, He makes it a positive duty for us to save, if possible, the distressed children, and rescue their lives from the robbers that are taking them away."

We have spoken elsewhere of the hereditary influence of alcohol; but this influence is such a potent factor in the problem we are now considering that we cannot omit reference to it here, even at the risk of repetition. The point we would emphasize here is, that it is not the abandoned drunkards alone who entail the curse upon their children; steady though moderate use of intoxicants seems even more likely to entail this fearful heritage than occasional sprints. Dr. Lees, of England, gives a striking case illustrating this fact. Incidentally, it also shows that physicians themselves are often blind concerning causes of effects with which they were familiar. Dr. Lees says: "I recollect lecturing some years ago at St. Ives. Taking supper afterwards with some of the chief persons of the town, including three or four physicians and lawyers, a doctor said he thought I exaggerated the matter; says he, 'We have such cases of free drinkers who, nevertheless, are in good health. Mr. W., a friend of mine, told me, only the other day, that he had drunk at least a bottle of wine a day for the last fifty years; good wine, none of your adulterated stuff.' 'Well, is he a fine looking man?' 'O, very! we have not a finer in the town. Wine cannot be so bad a thing as you represent, when a man is so hale at eighty, after taking so much drink.' 'Now for your opinion,' said the lawyer, turning to me. 'Well,' I said, 'I cannot give an opinion without knowing the facts; this gentleman lives in a good situation?' 'The best in town, the only eminence in the district.' 'He lives well and not extravagantly?' 'Just so.' 'And what sort of a lady is his wife?' 'O, she is a very moderate woman.' 'Pretty healthy?' 'Yes.' 'I should think you would not have much to do in such a family.' 'O yes,' said the doctor, 'but I have.' Proceeding on this hint I asked, 'What family have they?' 'They have had eleven children, only six now living.' 'That is very singular,' said I; 'good food makes good blood, good blood good structure, and good structure transmits good structure. When the parents are healthy the children ought to be healthy; now, here is something to be accounted for. Six children are living, five are dead; what is the constitution of the six?' 'O,' says a lady across the table, 'you know Miss — was touched in the head.' 'And Mr. George,' says another, 'was in the asylum.' 'And Mr. William was certainly queer,' said a third gentleman. I said, 'Nothing is more certain than that some great and serious law of life must have been violated; and upon the face of it the one bottle of wine a day for fifty years may have been the agent.' This is my case.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR AUGUST.

"Repent, repent and prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; yea, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost.—D. C. 32: 2.

Thursday, Aug. 20.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—James 2: 1-8.

Thursday, Aug. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—D. C. 28: 2.

Parental love is a divine endowment and requires communion with the divine for its complete and adequate expression.

Letter Department.

GORDON, Ala., Aug. 2.

Editors Herald:—I came to this place July 21, from South Pittsburg, Tennessee, stopping on the way at Huntsville, Alabama, a town of ten thousand inhabitants, watered by one of the most beautiful springs the eye of man ever beheld. Bro. J. M. Hethcoat, wife, and children came with me, he having three sisters and mother and a brother or two living there. Through his instrumentality I was granted the privilege of preaching in the little schoolhouse, which was a private house fitted up for the purpose in one of the suburbs of this city, known as Dalles Mills, which is a very fine large cotton mill, where they employ some seven or eight hundred hands. Some men with families working for fifty-five cents per day, paying five dollars per month house rent. Little boys and girls, men and women, are employed here.

Our audiences were small. Bro. Hethcoat remained over Sunday, assisting me in the way of opening meetings and doing such other work as he could. The Presbyterians were carrying on a little protracted meeting at their little church n t far away and had been for some two or three weeks before we began. They would come in the evening near where we were staying and stand and sing and pray on the streets, the evangelist taking the lead with a so-called young grass widow at his side looking on the same book, and in this way call a crowd together and then start for the church. But as well as ourselves they played out and had to quit, as people there as well as many other places care but little for preaching. But suffice to say, our effort there was opportune, and I feel satisfied we accomplished some little good.

My next stop was at Garland, where I spoke to Saints a few times; then to this place. Bro. G. Wiggins conveyed me some thirty miles on my way in his buggy. I am glad indeed to find scattered here and there over the country, faithful saints who are willing to do what they can for the work; and the few saints at South Pittsburg are noble in this respect. May the good Lord ever prosper them.

I commenced meeting the evening of my arrival here, in the academy, and continued every eve for about a week, and part of the time with very good attendance and interest. One Baptist minister and school-teacher expressed himself as being well pleased, and came to visit me on Sunday morning; but I was away making arrangements for meetings at another place. But Sr. Vickrey supplied him with Heralds and Autumn Leaves, and invited him to come again when I would be home. He said he would, but as he was only stopping here for a little season, he has moved elsewhere to teach school. I am favorably impressed with him, for the reason he is an old gentleman and I believe means what he says.

Since coming here I have baptized two and have preached in three different places. This is some hundred miles from any branch, and the first preaching that was ever done in this county by our people that I am aware of. Bro. M. M. Turpen preached some in Barbour County and made a new opening there near Reeder's Mills. I have written Bro. Reeder at that place, but have received no word from him. If Bro. Turpen reads this and could give me any information as to who I should write to there, it will be thankfully received.

The State election drawing near, which is August 3 in this State, I concluded I would cross the line into Georgia and see what could be done there; so with satchel and umbrella in hand I took a stroll on foot of some fifteen or twenty miles in the State, not knowing a soul there, but having a recommend from Bro. A. J. Vickery here, whom I just baptized and who has a position on the railroad bridge, across the Chattahoochee River, watching it and opening it for boats, for which he receives one hundred dollars per month, but must hire two assistants out of that, which position he has held for several years. I found people in Georgia who were willing to feed me and keep me over night when I told them Bro. Vickery recommended me to them; but they concluded they did not want any preaching. One place where I stopped at noon, being almost overcome with heat, and seeing the family, or a part of them, in a room in the back yard preparing for dinner, being very anxious to get to the shade I opened the gate and walked in onto the porch, when they espied me and told me to take a seat, and presently the man of the house drove up in buggy and wondered how I got in without being torn to pieces by the dog. I told him the dog did not notice me; then the gentleman who was with him remarked, "You must have been under some kind of protection for no stranger dare come in that gate without some one to guard him; and when I saw the dog dragging his block around over the lawn I wondered myself how I did get in. I was told this gentleman had two of those dogs and that they became so unruly he gave one away. Of my own mind I thought he had better give the other one away. But maybe I was wrong. I am not much of a friend to dogs anyway.

I was anxious indeed to do something in Georgia, but failed after a day and a half and two nights, and was glad to return to Bro. Vickery's again. Please don't ask me if I was tired. But I am not going to condemn Georgia yet; for she is said to be the Empire State of the South.

While at South Pittsburg I and Bro. Kelley thought it would be advisable to go over to a certain cave of which I have forgotten the name, which is some eight miles away, where the Utah elders had preached some and baptized some four or five; so we left an appointment at the schoolhouse for Saturday evening, and it fell to my lot to fill the appointment. I found by talking to some of the people that these elders always put their best foot foremost by telling the people they did not practice polygamy and that it was all a thing of the past; and that if the people did not believe the gospel as they presented it to them, there was no hope for them, for theirs was the only true church on earth, and when their elders went from house to house and left their little pamphlet that was sufficient to condemn the people if they did not believe it. But I explained to the people how they had departed from the faith, and were not the true and original church, reading from Judge Philip's decision in the Temple Lot suit, and how that it pleased God to save people by the preaching of the gospel, and not by leaving little tracts at each house. At the close I left a challenge with the people for them on their return, which seemed to be satisfactory to the people; and one man remarked, "That is fair." I hardly think they will baptize any more at that place. I also told the people that they practiced dancing, and that all took part, both old and young, and charged so much a couple, and then used that money to send out missionaries to preach. And when I made this statement in the presence of two of their elders last autumn in Kentucky, Elder Richardson said he was glad I stated that they opened their dance by song and prayer service the same as they would any other meeting; for, said he, "We believe in worshipping God in the dance as well as any other way." "And sometimes," said he, "we use that money to send missionaries to preach." This he acknowledged before about about one hundred people, after having told the people that their missionaries had to pay their own way to their fields of labor, and while they were in their fields, then pay their way back home again.

The more I learn of these people the more I can see the inconsistency of their claims and their cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive; for they are deceitful workers of iniquity. And since the courts of our country are recognizing the Reorganized Church as the original church and Joseph Smith as his father's successor in the prophetic office of the church, they are feeling their sting very sorely. And they are seeking undermining holds on the Reorganized Church, as did Elder S. G. Spencer with the editor of the Herald.

I believe the time has come that we should heed the admonition of the Apostle Paul to Timothy when we meet the ministry of the Utah Church—to "reprove" and "rebuke" them, and let the world know we are their aggressors. I don't believe in compromising a single truth with them. If God is with, and owns, and recognizes this church as his church, he is not with the Utah Church; neither does he own and recognize it as his church; for God is not divided against himself. They claim and say the Reorganized Church is an apostate church, and is not worthy of notice; and yet they are seeking and asking favors of this little unworthy apostate church, calling upon it for their churches and chapels to preach in. Think of it, a church that loves to boast of its millions worth of property condescending to ask favors of this poor little apostate church! O, thou great Goliath, how hast thou fallen since the days of yore!

When they ask of our people the privilege of preaching in their houses, we have a right to demand of them a public discussion of the issues between us, and if they refuse, I believe we are justified in refusing them the use of our houses, for the reason that they are "holding the truth in unrighteousness." They believe, hold, teach, and practice doctrines they cannot sustain from the standard books of the church, and I believe we have no right to bid them God-speed in their work; for if we do, we are partakers of their evil deeds. Neither do I believe we have any right to receive them into our houses as ministers of Christ.

I love to stand for the right and contend for the faith and doctrine once delivered to the saints.

A SUGGESTION.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 14.

Editors Herald.—Just now please allow me to make a suggestion to those who contemplate attending the various reunions this fall. In the interest of those poor elders' wives and children who have not heard from the Bishop or his agents for months because of a lack of means in their hands, would it be unjust to ask you to deny yourselves of this pleasure for once and send the means thus saved to the Bishop, so that the missionaries' families, who are making a continual sacrifice for the work, may not be discouraged?

Please consider well this matter before going, and let the spirit and principle of mercy, justice, and self-denial enter into such consideration.

Yours for the work of God,

PETER ANDERSON.

ALTON, Ill., Aug. 8.

Editors Herald.—We thought that leaving St. Louis behind would bring relief from the terrible heat, which in that city is amounting to a calamity, heat prostrations and deaths surpassing all previous records and making business transactions not only exceedingly uncomfortable, but dangerous to health and life. Matters in this direction but slightly better here in Alton, a slight shower while coming up on the river yesterday affording only short relief.

The representatives from Utah are still in St. Louis, and are, we understand, to start matters by opening in Pickwick Theater Sunday night. We understand from quite good authority, that they claim already twelve of the membership of our branch in St. Louis as adherents to their claims. That this, like many other of their claims will not bear a close analysis, is quite true; yet it is true also that there are many influences in St. Louis of an encouraging sort to a proselyte of that hybrid system of religion. Personally, we are not alarmed for the result of the discussion, and believe that the atmosphere will be the clearer after the excitement has passed away. The supporters or missionaries of the Utah Church cannot turn the corners fast enough to deceive those who are at all acquainted with its history from the beginning. Succession legitimately means an indorsement of Brigham Young as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator to the Church of Jesus Christ, and with a little more wisdom or cunning than we find manifested in isolated instances; for example in the Reorganized Church. The priesthood or ministry of the Utah Church, wisely and as in days of old "obey orders" not to risk a public exposure of the history of their doctrines and their doings in the past.

I do not apprehend a large success for the Utah propaganda, however. The public will readily see, I think, through the thin gauze of respectability that the Reorganized Church and the United States Government have forced upon them—Mexico, for example, and their own avowed belief in polygamy, etc.

At our last business meeting it was voted to allow Elder Roberts the use of our pulpit on condition that a reply could be had before the same audience and at the same time.

Personally, I think that an offer to publicly discuss all the vital differences between us in a large hall and well advertised meeting, with due notice to the public and all concerned, the expense to be mutually borne, ought to be accepted by our Utah friends as a reasonable and just ultimatum. They certainly have more money, and if they have more truth, they can well afford to put an end to the controversy with those who are seeking after the right in these matters.

I do not fear the outcome and I think we shall have a revival of interest yet in St. Louis district.

There is considerable inquiry here in Alton, and we expect to open meetings here soon; but the weather is so intolerably hot that large attendance at services cannot reasonably be looked for in cities or large towns.

We hope now to attend Bluff Park reunion, and gratify a long cherished desire to visit historic Nauvoo as well.

DEFIANCE, Iowa, August 10.

Editors Herald:—One was baptized here on the 3d inst. and nine yesterday. Bro. William McCord and wife, and Sr. Nancy E., wife of Bro. Patrick McCord, son and daughter of Bro. and Sr. George Gunsolley, two sons of Bro. and Sr. I. McCord, and son and two daughters of Bro. Richard Yaman. These young people range in age from eleven to about sixteen. The seed of life has been freely sown here by Brn. J. F. McDowell, C. J. Hunt, F. M. Weld, the writer, and others, and the young people's parents have evidently tried to comply with the law of God by instructing their children in the principles of the gospel. It matters not who did the watering so long as the Lord giveth the increase. All goes well.

OTTO, Arkansas, Aug. 3.

Editors Herald:—I came here from home July 25, and found Bro. J. W. Jackson here. He came to be with me in my debate with Elder J. H. Lawson, but the Campbellite brethren said they could not raise thirty dollars, the amount he demanded of them, to get him to stand by his own challenge; consequently Mr. Lawson failed to appear after all his boasting through the Primitive Christian, his own church paper. I consider it a square backdown upon his part and the part of the so-called Church of Christ at Otto and community.

Bro. George Montague also came down from Washington County, August 1, and found Bro. Jackson and I holding meetings at Ingleside, preaching every night to large crowds. We will continue here the rest of this week. We will baptize Wednesday.

The work is moving slowly but surely in Northern Arkansas. Bro. Jackson reports fair interest in Southwestern Arkansas, with some prospects of a debate.

In bonds,
JOSEPH WARD.

REED CITY, Mich., August 5.

Editors Herald:—Our district tent has been up at this place seventeen days, and we have preached twenty-two discourses and held one social and sacrament meeting in it. Brn. Joseph Shippy and W. D. Ellis have spoken twice each and Bro. J. R. Beckley came up from Fork and spoke once. I put in the other discourses. But we all feel tired out, so this week we will not hold meetings every night.

It seems strange to me to be at home preaching. I have had my family here for ten years, and never preached one discourse in the town yet, until we pitched the tent and began this summer. I never could see my way clear here until now; and since commencing I think this is the proper time. We have seats arranged for two hundred people.

At the commencement we had the seats half full or thereabouts; later they were filled; now for the last two or three meetings we must have had nearly one hundred outside. Surely full three hundred people heard the discourse last evening. They pay good attention, and we have pretty good order. At nearly every house within a few rods from the tent we see groups of from three to eight listening to the preaching. One can hear as readily outside as in. Surely good is being done. I have felt and had good liberty in presenting the truth before them; yet it is rather hard to work alone. I am alone in the tent, only with what local help I get from those brethren. There is only one other missionary in the district.

Since commencing the work here, I have received four telegrams to "Come here at once," besides letter after letter to come to the help of others. I cannot fill the calls. It seems too bad, too, when called to preach a funeral sermon that I must answer "No." If I had or could attend to the calls since pitching the tent here I could not have put in three discourses here. I hope the Saints will not urge upon me to leave the tent unless we have some one to take my place. The tent should not be left alone one night. I have no money to hire one to take care of it; besides, interest would die out.

I hear that the M. E. reverend of this place is being alarmed at some of his members attending our meetings so regularly, and I was informed that he had forbidden them to go to the tent meetings.

What usually follows the preaching of the word is now commencing, such as, "They are all Mormons, don't go out to hear them;" "None but the ignorant go," etc. I expect Musser here any day. If I could get in about twenty more discourses before Musser would get here to make his usual muss, I would feel more satisfied, but the work is the Lord's and I am his servant; God being my helper I will stand by the cause.

Brethren, pray for us.

J. J. CORNISH.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., August 3.

Editors Herald:—Four times during the last week we have troubled the waters for baptism, eleven in all being baptized. Large crowds greeted us at the new opening near Dutton last Monday and Tuesday evenings. As a whole, the Grand Rapids district is the most encouraging field the writer has ever worked in, and by all means must be kept up. By request of the Saints, and feeling it will answer the best purposes of the work, I have concluded to move my family here as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

Grand Rapids is the metropolis of the world as a furniture manufacturing town. Buyers from all over the United States come here twice a year to buy their furniture. Millions of bushels of fruit will be marketed here this year, as this is in the midst of the great peach belt of Michigan.

L. D. Hickey hove in sight the other night, and at the close of the services fired a few volleys from ambush with reference to "Joseph and his calling;" and when asked who he was, refused to tell his name or where he lived; but we located him all the same and answered his questions so direct that he said to the audience, "Bro. Grant is no fool I see, but there is a Grant in Utah who knows more than he does, and he maintains that Brigham Young is the legal successor to the Martyr." I told him I was prepared to meet and prove to the Grant in Utah that he was entirely wrong on that question, and I was somewhat surprised to think he was there under the influence of that faith; that so far as I was concerned I should have to feel satisfied with the little endowment of good sense God had given me, and had chosen to use it in behalf of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, as truth would protect itself. I had rather be a little David, rooted and grounded in the truth, than a great Goliath without anything but eloquence for protection. It was easy to be seen that Mr. Hickey was looking for a place for "King James" to sit down, but we kept the prophetic chair so well occupied that the Voree Seer (?) would have been left standing had he been introduced on the scene.

Hopefully yours,

R. E. GRANT.

PARRISH, Ill., Aug. 8.

Editors Herald:—The debate between Bro. I. N. White and Rev. Marion Boles closed last evening. It lasted nine sessions. The claims of the two churches were discussed as stated in the Braden and Kelley debate. The debate was held in the Oak Grove Christian church. Bro. White affirmed for our church first. He maintained his proposition well, showing that we were the church of God in fact and accepted with him.

When Mr. Boles came to affirm for the Christian Church most all could see that his effort was very weak indeed. He would, while affirming his own church, run back onto Bro. White's proposition and make fun of the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, and also the Holy Spirit. He would say to Bro. White, "Just work a miracle!" He made fun of our work all through both propositions.

He admitted that God answered his prayer. "Well," said Bro. White to him, "you are as bad as Joseph Smith—you have had a revelation from God. Hand that revelation here to me; I want to read it." White still urged Boles to hand over the revelation so he could read it, but the gentleman dropped his head and made no reply.

Bro. White says to him, "I don't want to accuse you of telling a fib."

All fair-minded people saw that the preacher was cornered; he had been fighting this principle of revelation all through the debate. There are two propositions to discuss here in the saints' church—the Book of Mormon first, then the Christian Church. This debate is to hold nine sessions yet, although I have been informed that Mr. Boles only wants one day on his question; but we intend to hold him to his agreement. The debate so far has done good, as the majority of the people are in our favor. The debate was held in a new place; none of our people live there. It was a grand victory for the truth. I will send items at the close of the next debate.

Your brother,

F. M. SLOVER.

CHARITON, Iowa, Aug. 10.

Editors Herald:—Bro. R. M. Elvin and the writer have been at this place since July 22. We have held twenty-one meetings with attendance averaging about fifty. Have been compelled to miss three nights on account of rains, and one night for lack of congregation. We have slept in the tent, and with the exception of two meals, have also eaten there. A good many printed sermons and tracts have been distributed, and people—some of them at least—are thinking.

As we could not hold meetings during the day the writer took advantage of circumstances and attended the teachers' normal, held here during the past two weeks. I feel that I have obtained some benefit mentally, got acquainted with a good many teachers, and made some friends for our cause by so doing. The work here has been quite hard, as we were strangers in a strange town and so many are perfectly satisfied where they stand that it is hard to get them to make an examination of any truth that may be presented. Their watchmen have cried "peace and safety" so long that they are secure, in their own estimation.

We have found a few who were ready to hear, and we think there are some that are not far from the fold. We may not baptize one here at present, but feel assured by the blessing of the Spirit that the seed will grow and in his own due time "bring forth both flower and fruit."

We have found a few faithful friends here who have done what they could for the work. Some of the saints and friends of Lucas have been very kind, and we feel as though we were "their children," as Bro. Elvin expressed it. They have visited us when they could and brought us of the necessities of life. May God regard their efforts and reward them.

Our health is good. If all goes as we expect, will ship for Creston on Thursday.

Hopefully, your brother,

A. M. CHASE.

MACON, Mo., August 5.

Bro. Joseph:—I herewith send you a statement of Mr. T. F. O'Daniel, of Macon, Missouri, who was well acquainted with your father. This is only one of many instances while at Macon of men and women coming up to the stand and claiming relationship with some of our people, or speaking a good word for the church.

Our tent meetings were very well attended and the people agreeably surprised at our showing. I baptized Bro. F. Palfrey on Sunday.

Yours,

T. W. CHATBURN.

MACON, Mo., August 3, 1896.

This is to certify that I, T. F. O'Daniel, was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and that I lived in Warsaw, Illinois, during the "Mormon War," or Nauvoo troubles. Was well acquainted with Joseph Smith the Prophet, and regarded him then and do yet as an honest, upright man, conscientious and fearless in what he deemed to be right.

I have heard him teach and preach in Nauvoo, but never heard him or anyone else teach or speak of polygamy being a doctrine of the church; in fact I did not know of anything of that kind until in after years it came from Salt Lake City, that the Mormons was practicing polygamy.

I further state that I am acquainted with the facts leading to the killing of Joseph Smith at Carthage jail, and know the men who were in the mob. The real cause, in my opinion, was that the saints were all "Whigs," or anti-slavery men, and voted the anti-slavery ticket, which finally led to the troubles and final killing of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

POQUONNOCK, Conn., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here this morning at 10:20, in the midst of the heat wave that has been holding the East in its grasp for the last few days. There are but few houses about the little station, and no trees; rather of a desert looking place; but one can look far out to sea. A half mile away to the east is an attractive looking grove. I could see the top of a large tent, and so divined that to be my objective point; so with a valise in each hand I made my way across the little desert lying between, stopping to rest and wipe off the perspiration occasionally and look around to see if it isn't a mile instead of a half mile.

At the reunion grounds I found the tents neatly and pleasantly ensconced in a beautiful oak grove that covers the hill which gradually slopes to the water south. The commissary and dining tents are just about perfect. The first to catch the eye were Srs. Maude Lawrence and Flossie Sanford, Sr. Bowers, Sr. Chase, Sr. Waterman, Bro. Gerrish, and Bro. George Smith, the latter presiding over the commissary, and then Sr. Gerrish, the chairman of the reunion committee, in the cooking tent with sleeves rolled up and rolling out pie dough as chatty and glib as when talking to the reporter at the General Conference last spring. He (or she) that would be greatest, let him be servant of all. A good example.

The reunion ground lies on the Poquonnock River near where it flows into Fisher's Island Sound, and is about five miles east of New London. Blue and blackberries grow profusely in the grove and are just now in their prime. Fishing and boating are parts of the amusement. Bathing suits were brought in abundance, and the Massachusetts girls will dive down into the salt water with all the agility of an experienced sailor boy, and swim like fish. I have been looking out upon the water and thinking how I might enjoy similar sport—but—"shark" comes to mind all the time, so I think I will let others do the swimming. Last year a merry party went out from Boston to enjoy bathing in the sea. When out quite a ways, one lively fellow made a dive from the boat, and a big shark made a dive for him, and the fellow has not come to light since.

A gentle breeze comes sweeping up from the south off the bay, which strikes the tent grounds squarely, rendering it the pleasantest place experienced by the writer for several days. But every rose has its thorns. The ubiquitous mosquito is here also. As proof of their ability to make their presence known, some of the sisters stretched out their arms and exhibited how they had plied their long bills with effect to their wrists.

There is not a large turnout at this reunion. Some twenty tents on the ground. The meetings are reported as having been quite well attended by the outsiders. There was no meeting this morning nor this afternoon. The reason, all of the ministers and saints went early this morning to "Bushie Point," by invitation, to hold meetings there to-day. It is a pleasure resort and but a little over a mile away by boat. This accounts for so few on the grounds when I arrived. Brn. I. M. Smith, U. W. Greene, George Robley, Orrin Coombs, Holmes J. Davison, Henry Arnold, George H. Gates, F. M. Sheehy, and George Burnham are in attendance. Brn. A. H. Parsons, H. E. Moler, William Smith, and others from Philadelphia, and a number from Brooklyn, New York, were expected, but the hot wave, or Bryan coming to their city, or some other cause, has prevented their attendance. The brethren are well and everything is cheerful and pleasant in camp. Preaching at 7:30 this evening. Particulars later.

Some cannot understand why Eastern saints associate pleasure with the holding of a reunion. They imagine that preaching and prayer service and song should be the constant employment. But if they will call to mind, Eastern people usually work in factories, spend the day indoors from early dawn till late at evening, for weeks and months. They secure a vacation at the time of holding a reunion. It is their "outing." They don't want to sit in a tent all the time and attend meeting. They long to get out into the open air and improve the physical as well as the spiritual. It is to do it then or not at all. So they fish, boat ride, run and race in the open air, and turn up all right at meeting time, just as good saints as are in the world. Surroundings change customs. Judge not by appearances, is good doctrine yet.

Faternally,

WM. H. KELLEY.

NORFOLK, Neb., Aug. 6.

Editors Herald:—I received a very urgent invitation to come to Inman to reply to some lectures being delivered there by Rev. J. Grant Shick, of the M. E. Church, against Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. Bro. H. O. Smith, preceded by Brn. Evan Davis and W. E. Peak, had preached there and their preaching in connection with the private influence of a few members had led some of the active members of the M. E. Church to accept baptism, and they with others were baptized by Bro. H. O. Smith last spring.

These members being young in the work it was thought to disaffect them by poisoning their minds with Howe-Lamb-Braden compound mixed with the "History of McDonough and Hancock Counties, Illinois." I arrived on last Wednesday eve, preached on Friday and Saturday nights to good audiences, not once referring to the lectures during my sermons. At the close of my sermon on Saturday eve I gave notice that if a discussion could not be entered into then I would begin a reply. On Sunday eve I listened to one of his lectures. It was Bradenish except the ability; however he did his best. I arose and by the minister's consent gave notice of reply. I was greeted with a good hearing for three nights considering the busy time of year, and was much blessed by the assistance of God's Spirit in defending the character of both the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith. The saints were much strengthened and much trash was cleared away preparatory to sowing the "good seed."

One story which has been gleefully circulated was checked in its career. It was told that a Mr. Harmon who had lived in his boyhood days in McDonough County, Illinois, being about eight years old when Joseph Smith was killed, had said that an aunt of his had married Joseph Smith as his fourth wife, and that Joseph Smith had broken up his uncle's family. Associated with Bro. E. Downey I went to his place and found him alone. In answer to an inquiry from me he said emphatically that he had never said anything like it, and that anyone who said he had, told that which was wholly untrue. How surprised some of the good Methodists looked who had been peddling this story when I told them publicly of my visit and its result.

The saints at Inman are a noble band, and have endured the crosses of saint-life exceedingly well. A good work will yet be done there.

I go to Valley to begin in tent meeting tomorrow. I speak here to-night. With increasing assurance of complete victory, I am,

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

A BLACK EYE.

EDITORS HERALD:—One may have a lively remembrance of the past, while the future may be a blank. Hence I little thought as I arose from slumber on the morning of July 16, the second day in my seventy-second year, that I would, on the evening of the same day, be standing before an audience to fill a previous appointment with a black eye. Such, however, was a fact, and very much to my discomfort, only made tolerable in the fact that this unfortunate event was the result of an unforeseen and unavoidable accident.

I was at Clay Cross, Derbyshire, England, the guest of Bro. S. Holmes, Sen., preparing to leave for Sheffield at two p. m. It was approaching noontime and a dray halted at the premises of the above brother, with a crate of crockery of over half a ton weight; and one is apt when necessary to be useful as well as ornamental; so I hastened to assist in shifting the crate from the dray to its appointed place, it being raised and placed in a sliding position. And whether it moved too fast or I moved too slow, I won't pause to decide; but suffice it to say, the thing gave me a punch on the left shoulder and a brush on the corner of my left eye, and ere I could count five the toe parts of my boots were skyward, and head downward, which was a ludicrous position. But before I determined how much of the hard, stony ground I covered lengthways, I had risen to a perpendicular position, the back of my right hand being bruised, a lump on the corner of my left eye, with an effect of a general shakeup.

I left at the time appointed, and with fair grace responded to the interrogations of the brethren and sisters as to what reason or cause I could assign for appearing among them with a black eye.

It is a blessed thing for Latter Day Saints to live in one another's affections and confidence, in which event, there were no necessity for lying or equivocation of a prevaricating character, which to my mind is one part of a reasonable service for every Latter Day Saint. And with the acquirement of this "godly trait," it will prove a great stimulant to other godly works during the lifetime of every true-hearted Latter Day Saint. The thought that every act of our lives is so much toward making our record, which in the great time of retribution we must meet for weal or woe, is grave and solemn, or so I think.

The little accident, which might have been much worse, reminded me of a sudden roll I once experienced in Colorado. I was walking on a railroad track with the Platte River to the right and a steep declivity to the left. A furious wind and the foaming waters precluded the possibility of hearing other sounds. On looking back I saw a freight train dashing towards me under a full head of steam, no escape but the river or sudden roll down the declivity. I chose the latter, experiencing a fanning of my face by wind caused by the passing train, as I reached the edge of the declivity. Whether the engineer and fireman kept me in view until I arrived at the bottom of the declivity, I have not learned unto this day. However I found myself all there, and though my ascent to the track was slower than my descent therefrom, I reached it at length; and continuing, I made the objective point, conscious of and thankful for a visible interposition of divine providence, by which my unprofitable life was prolonged; for a failure of another second in turning my head, must have moved fatal, and my body might have been strewed along the track in parts, instead of enjoying locomotion.

The weather is rather hot on this side of the Atlantic, politics complicated to the uninitiated at least. I inclose a clipping; the latest I have seen on the Venezuelan question, being an editorial from the Sheffield Telegraph for July 20. I have forwarded papers at two different times, but suppose they miscarried, were overlooked, or thought of no import; don't know which. I believe the hope for a peaceful arbitration between the two nations on the above question is generally cherished on this side of the Atlantic.

The love of games, horse racing, betting, of light literature, beer drinking, smoking, etc., etc., seems to know no bounds. The teeming thousands that sweep through the towns and cities on Sundays in pursuit of pleasure afford a striking evidence of Paul's prediction; viz., "Lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." The following clipping speaks:—

THE POPULARITY OF BEER CONSUMPTION INCREASING BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS.

Not only is this so at home, but the English national beverage is also making headway abroad. The excise returns for the first three months of the present year (1896) must be highly gratifying to the brewing industry. No fewer than 8,362,130 barrels of beer were manufactured in the United Kingdom in the period mentioned, an increase of more than a million barrels compared with the first quarter of last year. Of these 8,219,651 were retained for home consumption and 142,479 sent abroad. In view of the former the following is not surprising.—Chit-Chat from London.

The number of prisoners received during the year in local prisons in England and Wales was 147,827, besides 1,451 soldiers and sailors sentenced by court martial.

The following speech or part thereof is credited to Mr. G. Harwood M. P., who was principal speaker at the annual dinner at Bolton Licensed Victuallers Society on Wednesday. He said he believed that alcoholic liquor should be regarded as one of the gifts of God in reason. It was what he was accustomed to ever since he was a boy, and he did not think it disagreed with him. He gave it to his children and he would never, if he lost 500 elections, take part in any action which would deprive others that which he regularly used himself. (Applause.) He had lived a great deal abroad, and he did not see why public houses had not the same association here as abroad.

A man ought to take his wife into a public house without any sense of demoralization, and unless they remedied that state of things they would not put their trade upon a proper foundation. He asked them to cooperate with the sensible men in this country to get rid of bad public houses. They ought to go for improving the liquor. He was told that Sir William Harcourt was going to propose a resolution asking the house to confirm the principle of "local veto," but he (Mr. Harwood) told the whip that if Sir William did he should take the liberty of moving a rejection, etc.

The following appears in print under the heading of "A Sweetener of Life":—

Presiding at a smoking concert in connection with St. Giles Cathedral young men's Guild, Edinburgh, the very Rev. J. Cameron Lees, D. D., said, they were met for amusement and entertainment—to have a smoking concert—and he hoped they had all acquired the accomplishment of smoking. He regarded tobacco as one of the greatest gifts that had been given to man. It was said by Charles Lamb, the greatest litterateur, that if he said a grace he would rather say it over a book than over his meat. Well, he (Dr. Lees) would as readily say grace over his tobacco as over his food. It sweetened up life, and he feared he would have been dead long ago if it had not been for his pipe. He trusted they would have a good night, and that tobacco would help to keep them up. (Cheers.)

A WORD ON THE OTHER SIDE. ENGLISH
ANTI-TOBACCO SOCIETY.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the English Anti-Tobacco Society and Anti-Narcotic League was held on Tuesday, in Manchester, Mr. A. E. Eccles presiding. The report said it was alarming to see so many school lads and others of tender years indulging in the use of tobacco. The Rev. C. T. Porter, of Southport, urged the necessity of getting school boards to take action in the matter of juvenile smoking. The Rev. W. H. Towers declared that smoking exercised a prejudicial influence on morals and manners.

Thus the war against and encouragement for the two greatest evils of the age—smoking and indulging in intoxicants—goes on. And how significant is the bringing into requisition the powers of the great men of the age to expose the injuries of the use of tobacco, in view of what the young Seer of Palmyra revealed concerning it and other evils, in 1832. But then, what may be expected by the masses who confide in lawmakers and reverend divines, who not only encourage, but advocate the practice of these demoralizing practices. The sad effects are daily witnessed in the streets of England. Not infrequently are mothers seen emerging from the alehouse in a staggering condition with an innocent babe at their breasts, or one or two children at their sides, just able to walk, with disheveled hair, ragged garments, besmeared faces, and dirty hands, hearing a stream of vulgarity from the mouths of those who should be mothers indeed, but whom the use of intoxicants has made brutish, or brought to a position below the brute creation. What a sad, sad spectacle!

No wonder that Paul should wish himself accursed for his brethren's sake, if the effects of demoralization were as visible then as now. For he indeed must be willfully or supremely ignorant who fails to see accumulating incontestable evidence of the literal fulfillment of Christ's prediction. (Matt. 24: 36-39.)

I cannot refrain from expressing my surprise at the action of General Conference of 1896 in reference to the tobacco question, for I have believed, and the lapse of time confirms the belief, that the word of the Lord is greater than men or societies, General Conferences not excepted. I may believe that a republican form of government reflects three compartments; namely, executive, judicial, and legislative, but that is no warrant for me that the legislative acts of elders in district or General Conferences are to be of such a nature as to in any way enter into the sacred precincts of God's divine economy with a view to modify its reflected decrees, or in any way detract from their importance or imperativeness, which their revelation may impose on the church. The Reorganized Church has sustained in this land and Wales very much injury and encountered much prejudice because of its members indulging in intoxicants. Think of an elder essaying to advocate the merits of our church in an alehouse, under the influence of alcohol. Why, this disgusts even the non-professor, though himself indulging in the practice.

I assisted in open air meetings at three different points at ———, not more than a year ago, where evidence had developed of similar conduct by an elder. Why, we were treated with perfect contempt; we could no more catch the ears of the people and demand their respect than if we had been lions fresh from the forest.

Avoid the use of tobacco, and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example.

The above being unaccompanied by threats in no way detracts from its imperativeness, in view of what went before on this matter. Therefore I feel justified in cooperating with branches or districts who may object to ordain anyone addicted to the use of tobacco or strong drink.

I hereby inform the church that I shall never knowingly ordain anyone addicted to either of the above practices. If the church thinks well to deal gently with those who prior to 1887 were addicted to either practice, in failing to make it a test of fellowship, I shall offer no objection; but tolerating the use of tobacco under the above circumstances and ordaining or appointing those to positions of trust who are addicted to the use of tobacco, is different, or so I think. What the future may develop, I pretend not to know, but present aspects do not favor the thought or belief of many accessions to the church in this land at present. I regret to know that the apathy or inactivity of the saints in some localities, tends to hinder or prevent progress. I readily take in the situation of some of the saints; I know 'tis trying, but Latter Day Saints have to take things as they find them, as do other folk, and we ought to have learned long ere this that the great philosophy of life is, or should be, to rest contented in our several stations, with a view to progress and prosperity by industry, economy, etc., as far as possible, being content, especially so, if enabled to secure in an honest manner the actual necessities of life, only taking a step in advance when well assured that step is for the best. For he who maketh haste to get rich often plunges deeper into trouble and is encompassed by financial environments grievous to think of.

Ancient Babylon is no more. The fate of modern Babylon, is clear or should be, to every diligent Latter Day Saint; hence her attractions and practices should be studiously avoided.

In view of the fact, of six parts of time being granted to man for labor, the seventh ought and should be devoted to the service of the Lord.

I may be told that we who are in business are forced to continue on Saturday night until twelve o'clock. Granted; but Sunday morning service seldom commences until 10:30; so that if it is one o'clock on Sunday morning ere you close your eyes, there's a chance for seven hours repose until eight o'clock, affording two and one half hours to prepare for service. And seven hours sleep for one in health is better than more. But ah me! custom is so enchanting that it often holds us so firm within its grasp, as to forbid our advance in that opposed to it. Some excuse themselves from Sunday worship because it is the only day in seven that the family are together, so a big dinner must be provided and partaken of, in consequence of which the stomach is apt to get so overloaded as to beget a drowsiness; so Sunday worship consists in going to chapel in the evening, providing the service is sufficiently brief to give time for a nice walk after service for the benefit of the health. But it's possible that this Sunday night worship may be interfered with if Neighbor Brown or Cousin John should call for a visit, unless like Sr. —, who says to friends visiting at chapel time, "I'm going to chapel; would like your company." What consistent man or woman would take umbrage at this procedure? But consistent as it may be, such a one would not likely be often troubled by Sunday visitors. I believe it decidedly wrong to make our religion secondary, which does not enjoin doing or leaving undone what in life is a necessity; but it does enjoin the sacrifice of worldly pleasure, idle gossip, and the like; and if we can't believe or give evidence of our belief it were better to lay down our profession and appear in our true character; for God is not mocked.

I do not believe that anything related above should deter us from diligence; nor do I think that those who have espoused the latter-day work for the love of it will permit such exigencies to interfere with duties that constitute their "reasonable service."

If two weeks is consumed by two hundred elders in attending Annual Conferences, in which they could preach two thousand sermons by remaining in their respective fields, which might be heard by twenty or thirty persons, I believe more good would be done for the cause than could be done by spending eight or ten days in conference, unless an exigency existed, necessitating such a gathering. The preaching of the gospel is primary, or should be, second to nothing, unless necessity compels. Hence on the hypothesis that the proper utilization of time and money is imperative, (and who would deny it?) the misappropriation of one or both must be wrong.

I pray the good Lord may preserve, bless, and prolong the lives of our discussionists in America and other places. And I sincerely hope that our suffering, enduring, and sacrificing missionaries—Bro. and Sr. Devore—may be comforted, blessed, and encouraged, in returning to the land of their nativity. And may God add many days to their lives. That we may all be wise, faithful, and enduring,

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints in the Northern Nebraska District:—Please take notice that upon the resignation of Bro. G. M. L. Whitman, Bishop's agent for said district, that on the 25th of July, 1896, Bro. James M. Stubbart, of Octavia, Nebraska, was duly appointed Bishop's agent for the Northern Nebraska district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and duly authorized to perform the work of Bishop's agent in and for the said district. The saints will pay all moneys and all contributions into the hands of Bro. Stubbart and he will authoritatively act in behalf of the Bishopric in financial matters, in and for the said district under this special agency.

I take pleasure in extending to Bro. G. M. L. Whitman the thanks of the Bishopric for his faithful services in the office of agent, and trust the Lord may bless and direct him in his every undertaking for good in the Master's cause.

We trust the saints will remember the new agent, and feel it a duty to assist in the work financially and thus aid the cause of Christ and the special work in their district.

To this end may the Spirit of the Master be and abide with all.

Very respectfully in the truth,
E. L. KELLEY.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 25, 1896.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Dear Saints:—I appeal to you once more for financial aid, as this grand work depends not only on our faith and prayers, but it needs our temporal means also to carry the glad message to those that are perishing for the gospel food. Our district is growing in numbers, and there are many calls for preaching throughout the district. The brethren of local force are doing all they can to fill some of the demands in their surroundings, with little sacrifice on their part, but many places beyond their reach are left without any preaching. Brn. T. W. Chatburn and M. M. Turpen have done excellent tent preaching in this district, which I am confident will reap a good harvest in future time. When preachers of other sects are getting jealous it is a very good sign that they are afraid of losing their flocks. The interest of the people is good and prejudice is fast being removed; and while the interest of the people is in this latter-day work and the spirit of investigation is moving upon them, our duty is not only to pray in their behalf, but also to help financially, that more laborers can go into the vineyard. I appeal to the presiding elders of the branches throughout this district, and also to solicitors where there are no organized branches, to call the attention of the saints to this appeal. My reason for this is because there are many of the saints who do not subscribe for the Herald, hence will be ignorant of this request. Every Latter Day Saint family should subscribe for the Herald, even if it should be a little sacrifice to do it. Saints, if you want to get posted in the doctrine and movement of the church, get the Herald, but at the same time do not neglect sending your tithes and offerings to the Bishop's agent.

I have heard some giving as their excuse that they do not give of their means; that their offerings were so small and they were ashamed to send such a small amount. To such I will say, Do not let that thought prevent you from casting your little mite into the Lord's treasury. If you are not able to give as much as Bro. or Sr. So and So, the Lord does not require it. Your little mite is as much in the sight of God as the one that gives of his abundance. It is not the matter of amount that we give that is the question, but do we give what we are able to give ungrudgingly, let it be ever so small? In proportion the small amount is equal with our heavenly Father as the large amount, and the sacrifice made, perhaps, is greater, comparing circumstances. I trust this request will arouse every saint throughout the district. The law of tithing is as binding upon us as the first principles of the gospel, and the prosperity of the gospel depends largely on our temporal means. The Apostle James says: that faith without works is dead. Let us then show our faith by our works. This is a day of sacrifice until he shall come with ten thousands of his saints. May God bless and prosper his people, is my prayer.

J. T. WILLIAMS,
Bishop's Agent.

THURMAN REUNION.

All day long the sound of wagons coming and going, mingled with the whack, whack, of the hammer and tramp of busy feet, have been heard on the camp grounds. Several of the committee, aided by friends, have been making preparations for the camp meeting, (the large tent having been erected the day previous,) until the close of the day finds eighteen canvas residences reared on the grounds anticipating the arrival of the Saints who are beginning to come from different points, while the local brethren are putting forth every effort to make the meeting a success, notwithstanding the weather looks very unfavorable.

August 7.—Morning dawns rather gloomy, but still the work goes on. The Saints are feeling encouraged with the anticipation of the arrival of the brethren of the ministry, Brn. A. H. Smith and T. W. Williams being expected to-day. Half past two finds the Saints present convened in the tent for organization, feeling a little disappointed that none of the brethren expected have yet arrived; but in full confidence of their coming the work goes on by choosing A. H. Smith president, H. Kemp assistant, H. F. Durfey secretary. The same rules previously used were adopted, with the amendment that those who preside grant such time to the Sunday school workers as they may see proper. Speeches were then called for from H. Kemp and H. F. Durfey, followed by remarks by George Kemp, William Leeka, Rachael Leeka, and Joseph Roberts. Sundown finds twenty-four tents on the grounds. At the evening hour Bro. Kemp preached from John 14: 6. The Saints were edified and comforted. Late in the evening Bro. A. H. Smith arrived from Lamoni.

August 8.—All day the storm clouds have hovered in the distance and the heat has been very oppressive. The usual prayer service was held at nine a. m.

At 10:45 the saints and friends were addressed by A. H. Smith. Twelve m. Among the late arrivals are T. W. Williams and J. W. Waldsmith.

At 2:30 p. m. Bro. T. W. Williams addressed the audience from Matthew 4: 1-11.

In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith treated the hearers to an able and eloquent sermon on the evidence contained in the scriptures that God is.

August 9.—During the night quite a heavy shower of rain fell. The morning dawned rather gloomy, rain falling from daylight until about 8:30, making it rather unpleasant for those that came from a distance. At nine a. m., those present convened for prayer service in charge of Brn. J. W. Waldsmith and Geo. Kemp. An interesting and profitable time was enjoyed.

Bro. A. H. Smith again addressed the audience at half past ten, the effort being a continuation (to some extent) of the subject of the previous evening. The tent was well filled and the grounds literally alive with people, the number being estimated as at least 3,000, all seeming to feel well and to be enjoying themselves.

At 2:30 p. m. Bro. T. W. Williams preached an able and eloquent sermon from Romans 10: 13, after which the Sunday school workers met to organize for their work. The secretary being busy could not attend, so cannot report. Proceedings will likely be reported to Sunday School Department.

In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith preached to the people from John 3: 16; 1: 12.

August 10.—During the night quite a heavy rain fell, but the morning dawned clear and bright. Thirty-four tents are up and several covered wagons are being used as tents. More anon. SECRETARY.

REUNION NOTICES.

MIDWAY PARK—RAILWAY RATES.

Reunion at Joplin, Missouri, August 20 to 31. Cut rate on railroads. A one and one third fare rate has been obtained on the Missouri Pacific, Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis; Kansas City, Pittsburg & Gulf, and St. Louis & San Francisco railroads to Joplin, Missouri, if one hundred tickets are sold on all roads. On this plan buy full fare to Joplin, and get a certificate receipt from railroad agent for money paid for ticket, which will entitle you to return home for one third fare.

C. W. SUTHERLAND, Sec.

BLUFF PARK.

To those on the railway lines mentioned who wish to attend the General Reunion at Bluff Park, the agents of the Fremont, Elkhorn, and M. V. railway and Sioux City and Pacific railway will, upon application, furnish delegates with certificate receipts for fare paid to Cedar Rapids or Des Moines, Iowa, via C. & N. W. railway, where they will be on lines connecting with road to Montrose. Cedar Rapids will probably be the best point at which to change if fare is the same. Be sure to take certificate receipt for each ticket purchased on all roads coming.

Everything now indicates a large attendance. If you are coming send a card stating that fact and how you want to be provided for, in boarding and lodging house or in tent (if you have not already done so), so we can be prepared for you. Address, Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa.

JAMES MCKIERNAN,
Chairman Com.

NORTHERN AND CENTRAL CALIFORNIA DISTRICTS.

According to notice already published the above reunion will convene at Santa Cruz, September 11. Good rooms can be had for $1 to $1.50 per week; good tents for $1 during time of reunion. To aid us in completing arrangements, and to secure accommodations for all, those desiring either rooms or tents are requested to write to Sr. Serville Clapp, 180 Ocean View Avenue, East Santa Cruz. Everybody please bring your hymn books, and come prepared to sing, as it is intended to make the congregation singing a feature of the reunion.

By order of the Santa Cruz committee of arrangements,
JOHN A. LAWN, Sec.

WOODBINE.

All who wish to rent tents during the reunion at Woodbine, September 18 to 28, will correspond with S. B. Kibler, Woodbine, Iowa. Tents can be furnished for term as follows: Wall tents: 10 x 12, $2.00; 12 x 14, $2.50; 14 x 16, $3.00; 14 x 21, compartment tent, $5.50. This includes freight. Payable in advance. If any desire tents set up, 25 cents extra will be charged. Notify undersigned not later than September 5.

S. B. KIBLER.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

TO DISTRICT PRESIDENTS AND CLERKS.

As sometimes branch reports are mailed with only a one-cent stamp upon the package, the same as if they were newspapers, therefore some fail to reach their destination, evidently because thrown out by the postal clerks. If they have a two-cent stamp on, then they come through, but usually I have to pay the difference here. And, as the June reports of the following districts have failed to arrive, it may be that some of them have thus been lost. Therefore this notice to district officers. All concerned please read this list:—

Northern, Central, and Southern California districts; Northern and Southeastern Illinois; Fremont, Little Sioux, and Eastern Iowa; Spring River, Kansas; Massachusetts; Northern and Southern Michigan; Philadelphia; Pittsburg and Kirtland; Southern Missouri; Southern Wisconsin. And no reports have come from the Nauvoo district since those for September, 1895.

I would like to hear from the officers of the above districts at an early date.

In sending reports do not mutilate them to save postage. If the body of the report contains neither gains nor losses, new ordinations nor marriages, no changes at all, then cut off the fold that contains the statistical statement of how many members and officers there are, etc., and send that. The other seven eighths of the report are blank and of no use in recording; hence a waste of postage in sending.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.

LAMONI, Iowa, August 13, 1896.

DEDICATION AND DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The new church at Carson, Iowa, will be dedicated on Sunday, September 6, at eleven a. m. This church does credit to the noble little band of saints who have so earnestly labored for its completion. An invitation is extended to all the saints and friends in the surrounding country to attend. The Pottawattamie district conference will be held at the same place, commencing on Saturday, September 5. The district Sunday school convention will be held Friday, September 4, at 10:30 a. m. Let the saints come and have a good time.

By Order of Committee.

IOWA SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

FREE TO ALL DEAF PERSONS OF SCHOOL AGE OF IOWA.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, August 15, 1896.

To Parents, Friends, Guardians, and Pupils:—Notice is hereby given that the next term of school will commence Wednesday morning, September 9, 1896, and it is expected that all pupils will be present on that day or the day prior; viz.,

SEPTEMBER 8, 1896.

Conveyances with officers of the Institution in charge will meet all trains on arrival September 8 and 9. After these dates, parents and pupils must not expect to be called for by teams of the Institution unless same can be done without detriment to other work.

Parents need have no fear as to the care of, and attention to, their children after they reach the railroad depots at Council Bluffs if they arrive on the dates above named.

There have been many betterments and improvements made during the past vacation tending to the comfort, health, advancement, and contentment of the children.

KINDERGARTEN.—In case a requisite number of applications are received, a Kindergarten will be established in connection with the school.

THE INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT.—Carpentering and Cabinet Making, Printing, Shoemaking, Broommaking, Baking, Plain and Fancy Sewing, Dressmaking, Ironing and Household Work, and Family Cooking will receive especial attention.

For the physical development of the children the gymnasium with a system of calisthenics has been improved and increased in its appurtenances.

A postal card notifying each parent or friend of the safe arrival of the child will be issued immediately after registry of name.

All trunks or baggage should be checked to Local Depot, Council Bluffs. This is imperative to avoid trouble and delay. Please bear this in mind.

Promptness as to date of attendance is urgently necessary. Our classes are organized September 9. Do not think it will be as well to send the child a day, a week, or a month later. It is an injustice to the school, unfair to prompt scholars, and detrimental to the tardy pupil. Sickness can only be considered a legitimate excuse for delay.

Every parent or friend interested in one of our children should be interested in all the deaf persons of school age in the State and are therefore requested to give this notice the widest circulation and greatest publicity possible.

Hoping for a prosperous year, and ready at all times to answer any and all communications, I remain,

Truly yours,

HENRY W. ROTHBERT, Supt.

BLUFF PARK RAILWAY RATES.

"The Keokuk and Western and Des Moines and Kansas City Railways will make one fare rates from Leon, Humeston, Decatur City, Van Wert, Osceola, and Des Moines to Keokuk for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale August 21, 22, and 24, limited to August 31." See editorial notice in Herald.

COMMITTEE.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in Montana:—I take pleasure in informing you that arrangements have been made under which Elder Gomer Reese can labor a part of the time in the mission field during the autumn and winter. Any consideration or favor shown him by saints or friends will be duly appreciated.

Trusting that God will crown his labors with success, and that his association with you as a minister of Christ may be mutually pleasant and profitable, I am,

Your coworker,
HEMAN C. SMITH,
Missionary in Charge.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE
 AND COVENANTS ANSWERED
 AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

 to anyone who if cured will agree to act as agent or try
 and get an agent.

Bro. H. C. Tharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes
 April 23, 1896:

"Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco.
 It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured.
 . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, con-fort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer
 from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies,
 among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174
 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day,"
 "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

SIR WILLIAM DAWSON ON SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

PROBABLY no scientific man is to-day more prominent as a defender of religious faith than Sir J. William Dawson, LL. D., F.R.S., late the principal of McGill University, Montreal, and at one time president of the British Association. Sir William in addition to his scientific attainments, is a student of Hebrew and Greek. In a recent issue of The Christian Commonwealth, London (one of the few religious weeklies that avails itself of that modern invention, the interview), appears an article by him on "Science as the Handmaid of Religion" and an interview with him touching lightly on numerous important points such as the biblical account of creation, the origin of man, the extent of the Deluge and miracles.

To take the interview first, Sir William was asked if there is any real discrepancy between science and Genesis. He replied:—

"In my judgment, none. I maintain that so far as an inspired record can be compared with what is at best a record we work out for ourselves, the correspondence between the two is marvelous. I have held that view since 1856, when I published my book 'Archæia' (since replaced by another, 'The Origin of the World') and I think the proofs of its soundness are multiplying daily. To my mind the first chapter of Genesis, in the way which it has anticipated discovery and still holds the ground as something that cannot fairly be cavilled at, is itself a remarkable proof of the inspiration of the Bible. Those who attack Genesis either do not understand it or willfully misrepresent it."

"Then you think the first chapter of Genesis represents solid fact?"

"Decidedly. It represents the order of creation, but from a special point of view, that of a writer who wishes to show that the things that were objects of idolatry to the ancient world are really the works of one Creator. The aim of the writer and of the Spirit of God in guiding him is distinctively religious. In early days men did not distinguish between the creature and the Creator, and the object of the first chapter of Genesis is to show that the Creator is the absolute and eternal spiritual Being and that everything in the world and the universe is his work."

On the origin of man, the interviewer elicited the following:—

"I know nothing about the origin of man except what I am told in the Scripture—that God created him. I do not know anything more than that, and I do not know anybody who does. I would say with Lord Kelvin that there is nothing in science that reaches the origin of anything at all. That man is a product, a divine creation, is all that I can say. So with the first animal, it must have been a product of absolute creation. With man something new is introduced into the world—a rational and moral nature, of which there is no trace in the animal kingdom. That is why in the first chapter of Genesis man is said to have been 'created,' an inferior term, 'made,' being usually used in the case of the animals."

On the subject of miracles:—

"My view is that the possibility of miracle is enormous, because God's knowledge and power are infinite, and ours very small and limited. Anything God thinks proper to carry out that goes beyond what we know becomes to us a miracle, and he may make it a sign for the advancement of our moral interests. A miracle is really God carrying out his higher designs in ways perfectly within his own power but beyond our power of comprehension of causes. The proximate causes of miracles are, however, sometimes revealed to us in Scripture."

"As a scientific man have you any difficulty in accepting the miracles of both the Old and New Testaments?"

"None whatever. The two must stand or fall together. I do not think a man can logically reject the Old Testament without also rejecting the New. The evidence of inspiration in the Old Testament, considered as the preparatory dispensation for Christ's coming, is just as good, in my judgment, as in that of the New."

In his signed article Sir William speaks of the word "supernatural," as used in religious circles, as one of the principal stumbling-blocks to scientific men. He says:—

"The word does not occur in the Bible, nor is the idea which it represents one that is sanctioned by the Spirit of God. In the Bible God is at once over and in all his works, and the distinction between those that we can refer in some degree to secondary or proximate causes, or to natural laws, and those that we cannot so understand, is one purely subjective or human, and in no way expressive of the divine action. It is, in short, an idea dependent on our imperfect knowledge; and hence, if we make such a distinction, we shall find that as knowledge increases the domain of the so-called supernatural appears to diminish as if about to vanish away. The true distinction which the Bible adheres to throughout is that between the natural as embodied in matter and energy, and the spiritual as denoting the domain of intelligence and will.

"When in this lower world we seek for ultimate causes, we find one only, the human will, which cannot be referred to material power nor brought under the dominion of the laws of matter and force. Yet we do not regard reason and will as supernatural, though, like the Creator himself, they belong to the unseen and spiritual. The First Cause, or Creator, whose existence we must, even independently of revelation, assume, in order to avoid the absurdity of mere chance and causelessness, must also be spiritual, and his modes of action, though inconceivably greater than, must have some analogy to those of the will of which we are conscious in ourselves. Hence arise two different but not contradictory modes of expressing ourselves respecting material nature. The first is that which relates to secondary causes and natural laws; the second that which relates to the first cause as present in all phenomena. In ordinary elementary science we are occupied with the first aspect of the matter. In more philosophical science and in religious beliefs we rise to the consideration of the latter. So far as we can understand, not only the whole material universe, but even the spiritual world, must be under the domain of divine law; but in any case we may be sure that God is over all and in all, and this last is the appropriate view of Holy Scripture, which speaks of all things as originating in God, and does not, except on rare occasions, concern itself with secondary causes.

"Let us not, then, present to our scientific friends the partial and inaccurate distinction of the natural and the supernatural, but the real and scriptural one of the natural and the spiritual. We shall thus find a true meeting place for science and religion, excluding atheism and agnosticism, and leading easily and naturally to the Almighty Creator and living Father and Savior presented to us by divine revelation."

The writer denies that the majority of scientific men are skeptics, saying that, so far as his observation goes, most of them are pious and devout men.—Literary Digest.

INFLUENCE OF FOOD ON CHARACTER.

"FOOD and Character" was the subject of a talk yesterday afternoon by Mary H. Ford before the Chicago Society of Anthropology. The speaker maintained that food influences the character and actions of mankind to a remarkable degree, and gave as an illustration the quiet and peace-loving people, whose food is purely vegetable, while the fierce and warlike nations as a rule are the eaters of meat.

As a physiological reason for the influence of food upon the character was cited the fact that after eating, the blood always leaves the brain for the stomach.

"No one can do good brain work," said the speaker, "immediately after eating a hearty dinner. This accounts for the frequent cases of apoplexy among after-dinner speakers. One of the secrets of Chauncey M. Depew's success as a post prandial speaker is the fact that he is abstemious about eating when he has to speak.

"From these facts we may deduce arguments for a vegetarian diet. Not only the quantity but also the quality of what we eat should be taken into account. Not only do most people eat too much, but they are not careful as to what they eat. A careful diet is the best preventative against disease, and the best means of a careful diet may be found in the use of vegetables.

"But even vegetarians themselves are prone to eat too much. During such heat as we have been having lately the best preventative against prostration is a careful diet. Many of the cases of prostration may be traced to overeating, as well as those which are due to insufficient nourishment.

"Dieting has been reduced to a science, but the simplest rules are the best and may easily be mastered by all. Those who diet themselves soon acquire an instinct which tells them what foods the system requires."

WHEN THE MARKET MAN COMES.

Household News:—Guard carefully the amount of food purchased during these "dog days." Such vegetables as lima beans, corn, and peas spoil quickly and must be put at once in a cool place, even if they are to be kept only over night.

When the market basket comes home on Saturday, if it contains lima beans have them spread out on a large platter and put at once in a cold place. Have the lettuce sprinkled and placed on the cellar floor or in an equally cool place. Corn must be spread out singly and kept very cool. Fruits should be kept in a cool, not cold, dark place. Meat must go into the refrigerator, on the bottom—the coldest place—the moment it is taken from the market basket. Fifteen minutes' standing in the ordinary kitchen will spoil the flavor. Remember most of our meat is kept in cold storage, perhaps for one or two weeks; it is the better for it. Such meat, however, should be cooked as soon as it is taken from the cold. I have seen, in some ill-regulated houses, the market basket delivered, we will say, at 8 o'clock in the morning, and allowed to stand in the kitchen until 8:30 or 9 o'clock to suit the convenience of the cook. Under such circumstances meats and fruits are partially spoiled and do not give good results, in short, are unfit for food.

GRACELAND COLLEGE.

THIS institution is very nearly completed, so far as the building is concerned. It was thought best by the church in conference assembled that such an institution should be created; a committee was appointed to make the attempt to build a house, and take such other steps as were needful to secure what was ordered.

It seems to us, as one of that committee, unfortunate that almost as soon as the committee began to take active measures to do what they were chosen to do, a sort of indifference as to whether the work was done, or the committee able to do it, which is much the same thing, settled on the church, or has at least been shown the committee in their effort to do what they were appointed for.

It may be that the church as a whole may feel like the man on ship-board who, when the storm was raging and being wakened from his sleep inquired, "Who is at the wheel?" and was told that it was the captain, and then remarked, "Let her blow, the old man is at the helm." The feeling of security manifested by the sailor that all was safe if the captain was at the helm, may have been felt when the committee was appointed. If so, the committee feel flattered by the supposed act of confidence; but, really, is there not something else needed?

The College now needs students. Are the saints who have children to send away from home proposing to send them to Graceland, or to some other institution of learning? Or, is it like this: "Where are you thinking of sending your boy, this year?" "Well, I have been watching Graceland College. If they make a success of it, I would like to send there; but I don't like to send if they don't make a success of it."

Exactly. The they referred to are the committee; and if all feel as does the one making the foregoing statement, how will the committee reach success?

It is known that the committee are not men of wealth, or even mediocre competency. None of them is in successful business; but all are really men of slender means. Whence is to come their means to accomplish their work? If the friends of the enterprise, besides the committee, have no permanent interest in making the College a success, how shall the committee accomplish their design?

It strikes us that there is really an indifference about the matter in the church that is not warranted. There is certainly no one but what is interested in the success of the venture. The enterprise languishes for lack of appreciative support. This is not commendable.

If a man see another trying to lift and carry a heavy load, and stand by watching to see whether he can do it without offering to aid him; and upon discovering that he can lift and carry it offers to and rushes forward to help him; but if he fails to lift and carry the burden, leaves him to stagger and fall under it, of what value is such support on the one hand, how unfortunate and foolish on the other. Help is wanted now, help of both sorts, the financial and the help by scholars.

THE GENERAL REUNION.

WEST BURLINGTON, Iowa, Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—In the last issue of the Herald I read an article from Bro. Lambert stating that the General Conference held in Kirtland last April appointed a committee to make all necessary arrangements and select time and place to hold a General Church Reunion in 1896.

According to notices in the Herald and Ensign the committee has selected "Bluff Park," near Montrose, Iowa. I also notice the supplement of this same issue of the Herald that the General Church Reunion is to be held at Woodbine, Iowa. Now as Bluff Park is in the extreme southeastern portion of Iowa, and Woodbine in the extreme west, will you please say at which of the two places is to be held the General Church Reunion so the people will not get mixed up about it.

Yours in bonds, C.

The committee appointed by the Bluff Park reunion last year, petitioned the April Conference to authorize the holding of a "general reunion" at the same place, or Nauvoo, as might be determined, for 1896; and the conference granted the petition; hence the reunion at Bluff Park is a "general reunion," and not the general reunion.

The reunion to be held at Woodbine, Iowa, in September is a continuation of a series of reunions begun several years ago by the church in Western Iowa, to take the place of the Semi-Annual Conference, always held in that part of the State until the fall of 1882, when the last one was held at Lamoni. It has always been known and called as the general reunion, or world's reunion, was authorized by the church in conference assembled, and has been continued from year to year with great success.

We foresaw last April what might occur by bringing the two reunions into apparent conflict by the name suggested; but there was much enthusiasm at the session to see the old town, and so the motion to grant the petition and authorized the Bluff Park meeting carried pretty nearly unanimously.

The action of conference will be found on page 21 of the minutes of the April session of 1896. It was to the effect that the conference would "make, or appoint a General Reunion of the church to be held with the" districts named in the "whereas" which were Nauvoo, Decatur, Eastern Iowa, Des Moines, Kewanee, and Northeastern Illinois.

There are to be some six or seven reunions of the church to be held on the same dates, August 21 to 30, each of them demanding attendance from their several localities, and the managing committees of each, asking for a supply of preachers, some of which requests cannot be complied with.

That some confusion has been caused by the choice of the same dates is probable; but the only remedy now is to be good natured and make the best of the situation, on the part of all concerned and at all the places named in the bills.

THE following will serve to show what Brn. J. F. Mintun, J. Strain, and J. M. Stubbart are doing in their field.

The Norfolk, Nebraska, News for July 29 has this:—

The meeting of Latter Day Saints held last evening on J. H. Logeman's lawn was quite largely attended. Elder J. F. Mintun of Magnolia, Iowa, delivered an address which was greatly appreciated by his listeners.

The Valley Enterprise, Valley, Douglas County, Nebraska, this:—

The tabernacle meeting which has been in progress at this place for the past week under the management of the Latter Day Saints Church will continue until the opening of the reunion next week. The attendance is quite large and Rev. Mintun and Elder Strain of Iowa and Elder Stubbart of Octavia, Nebraska, have preached able sermons and conducted a good meeting. Elder Mintun said in his sermon Tuesday night that many people believed their church to be similar to the Mormon Church and believes in polygamy, but said he, "We have done more to free this nation of that curse than any other church in America."

DOES THIS FIT?

THE Methodist congregation have for some time been annoyed by rowdyish girls and boys, principally girls, disturbing public worship, and last Sunday Rev. Yost took occasion to make a few burning remarks on the subject which should be sufficient to quell the intruders. The Reverend paregorically said "If you don't know enough to come here and behave yourselves you had better stay at home," and the congregation said amen.

We cut the above from the Valley, Douglas County, Nebraska, Enterprise, sent us by Bro. J. F. Mintun, as we suppose.

It is suggestive, and we wonder whether there is a community in the neighborhood of where congregations of the Saints live where similar things occur. Do girls, whatever that term may mean, (young women, or young ladies,) become so careless in their estimate of what is becoming in manners and deportment as to disturb by levity and improper conduct the enjoyment of others in the sobriety and earnestness of religious services? Do they, while oblivious to the charms of religious devotion and fervor for themselves, forget that to many the time spent in attending worship is the pleasantest of their lives? That to these worship means communion of spirit with the invisible, though present Spirit of the living Master of life. It is unfortunate that the youth of either sex has so fallen into the brusque and self-indulgent spirit of the age as to be indifferent to the better feelings, desires, and enjoyment of others. We ask the Saints to consider this clipping, read it carefully, find the hidden meaning in it, and try and impress it upon the children, that sons and daughters of those who have the "light of life" should do better things.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

BRO. JAMES CAFFALL, of the Twelve, sent us a copy of an English journal, and a clipping of an editorial of another upon the Venezuelan question, favoring the idea of an agreement between our government and that of Great Britain, for a Board of Arbitration to which international disputes should be submitted, and a resort to war be avoided. We give the editorial without further comment than this; that as suggested in the editorial itself, there may occur such matters of dispute which neither government would feel either justified, or safe in submitting to such arbitration, hesitancy or refusal to submit being based upon and arising from human selfishness which has root in human governments, because inherent in the men of which the governments are composed. If this was eliminated, it is probable no disputes would arise which could not be easily settled without recourse to war.

VENEZUELAN.

The truth of Shakespeare's words about the soul of goodness in things evil has seldom been so aptly illustrated as it is by the Blue Book just issued, containing the correspondence between Lord Salisbury and Mr. Olney with reference to a treaty of arbitration. The Blue Book, it is true, does nothing, and leads us nowhere; yet it is certainly one of the most important ever published. It signifies a movement in the direction of universal peace, and that movement owes its origin to this country being brought within measurable distance of war. The olive branch, in short, has grown out of the shadow of the sword. Six months ago England was full of indignation at the uncalled-for terms of President Cleveland's message to Congress. In that message, the United States put forward a claim which it was impossible for England to recognize; and, though war, if it had ensued, would have been forced on us by America, it was difficult to see how war was to be avoided. It has been avoided, however, thanks to the moderation and good sense displayed by both sides; and, though the dispute is not yet settled, the danger may be said to be over. Out of that danger, also, there has grown a more assured prospect of peace. There were two chief obstacles to an amicable settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty. The first was that England could not recognize the United States as having any "locus standi" in the matter; and the second was the impossibility of subjecting to the risks of arbitration territory which had been thoroughly settled by British colonists on the strength of British protection. So far as the first is concerned, there is obviously a great difference between the United States posing as the arbiter of destiny and the United States asking to be allowed to mediate as a friend of Venezuela's. While England could not recognize the United States in the former capacity, England could welcome her in the latter. It is, therefore, as the friend of Venezuela that the United States are now negotiating with England, with a view to the settlement of the dispute. The second obstacle is still blocking the way; and it was evidently with a view to finding a way round it that Lord Salisbury began negotiations with a view to a general treaty of arbitration.

The subject had been broached before in the time of Mr. Gresham, Mr. Olney's predecessor, when Lord Rosebery was in office; but, beyond an exchange of communications, nothing came of it. Nothing definite, it must be admitted, has come of the negotiations yet. That, however, by no means implies that no progress has been made. It is not by any means as easy as it looks to draw up a treaty of arbitration; and, anxious as both parties are that such a treaty should be concluded, the nation at large will praise Lord Salisbury, and not blame him, for proceeding slowly and with due caution. It is better that the treaty should be delayed a month or two than that it should be concluded hastily, and then fall through because it is found unworkable. The difficulty has been, as Lord Salisbury says in one of his dispatches, to decide "how far the undertaking to refer all matters in dispute is to be carried," since "neither government is willing to accept arbitration upon issues in which the national honor or integrity is involved." It is evident that a claim for damages on account of some action taken by subjects of another State is a very different thing from a claim to sovereignty or to territory. With regard to the former, arbitration ought to be the invariable rule. With regard to the latter, circumstances are conceivable in which a State would be justified in refusing to accept arbitration. In a matter of territory, other countries are often interested parties; and it would be difficult, therefore, to secure an arbitrator who was entirely without bias. Lord Salisbury has stated these and other difficulties with great lucidity and force in one of his dispatches; and he has accompanied it with a draft treaty. Mr. Olney, President Cleveland's secretary of State, declares that "these proposals of Her Majesty's Prime Minister are welcomed by the President with the keenest appreciation of their value, and of the enlightened and progressive spirit which animates them."

As Radicals do not often credit Lord Salisbury with the possession of an "enlightened and progressive spirit," that acknowledgment by a Republican statesman is worth nothing. Mr. Olney joins issue with Lord Salisbury, however, with regard to his proposals for something in the nature of a court of appeal. As Lord Salisbury has pointed out, an arbitrator between two nations "has no jury to find his facts; he has no court of appeal to correct his law;" and, therefore, he had in his draft treaty made very careful proposals with a view to supplying such a court of appeal. Mr. Olney has made counter proposals. These have given rise to a great deal of discussion and criticism; but, while the two countries have drawn nearer to a common ground, they have not yet reached it. There is, however, good reason to hope that it will be reached before very long.

It is an unusual thing for dispatches to be published before the matter under consideration has been finally disposed of. In the present case, however, there is a very strong reason for departing from precedent. In arranging an arbitration treaty, Lord Salisbury and Mr. Olney are, in a sense, mortgaging their country's future. To compare great things with small, they are like the incumbent of a parish, who is asked, for some reason or other, to give up part of the temporalities of that parish. Personally, he might be willing enough to waive his rights; but it is not merely his own rights or his own inclinations that he has to consider. The living is not his: it is only his in trust. He has the interests of his successors to safeguard; and for their sake he may feel himself obliged, much against his will, to fight to the bitter end to preserve his emoluments intact. Lord Salisbury and Mr. Olney, therefore, as trustees for posterity, have laid all the pros and cons of the case before their respective countries. It is now the duty of the people to speak. How much are they prepared to risk? Will they agree, for instance, to disputed sovereignty being matter for arbitration, clearly understanding that, as the result of that arbitration, the sovereignty may be taken from them? It is not a matter to be decided lightly; but that some decision will be arrived at so that a treaty of arbitration may soon be an accomplished fact is, we are confident, the heartfelt desire of every true well-wisher of humanity. Such a treaty concluded between Great Britain and the United States will offer an example to the world, which other nations will surely not be slow to follow. In any case, to Lord Salisbury belongs the credit of having tried to do something practical towards the establishment of that parliament of man, that federation of the world, which the poet dreamt of, and towards the realization of that vision of the inspired prophet concerning a time when men shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and the nations shall learn war no more.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes and will be sold at $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume, according to the styles of binding.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Prices, as stated, $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume, according to styles of binding; cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders to the Business Manager, as heretofore.

BLUFF PARK RAILWAY RATES.

IN addition to the rates already announced by the Western Passenger Association, we publish the following from the Keokuk and Western people, who offer the low rate of one fare for the round trip between the points named. Notice particularly that tickets are good only on August 21, 22, and 24 on the going trip, and limited to return not later than August 31:—

KEOKUK & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

KEOKUK, Iowa, Aug. 13, 1896.

MR. R. S. SALYARDS,
Lamoni, Iowa,

Dear Sir:—Will you please insert the following in each issue of your Herald from now until the close of the Convention at Bluff Park:—

"The Keokuk & Western and Des Moines

& Kansas City Railways will make one fare rates from Leon, Humeston, Decatur City, Van Wert, Osceola, and Des Moines to Keokuk for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale August 21, 22, and 24, limited to August 31."

Respectfully,

J. F. ELDER,

General Passenger Agent.

The Keokuk & Western extends from Van Wert to Keokuk, Iowa, where it connects with the C. B. & Q. for Montrose. It also connects at other points. The Des Moines & Kansas City road extends from Des Moines, Iowa, to Cainesville, Missouri, and connects with the Keokuk & Western at Van Wert.

Full particulars concerning connections, etc., can be obtained from agents of said lines. It should be remembered that neither the Keokuk & Western nor the Des Moines & Kansas City roads is included in the Western Passenger Association, and that persons using either of those lines should obtain certificates with tickets purchased going from Keokuk to Montrose, or to other points enroute over any lines of the association, in order to also secure the reduced one and one third fare round trip rate granted by the Western Passenger Association.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. R. LAMBERT made an opening at Glenwood, Missouri, some time ago, during a missionary tour, the results of which have been heard from, as the following from Mr. John Hombs, dated Glenwood, August 13, shows:—

We have had the Quaker preaching in Glenwood his heretic doctrine, and no one had the courage to oppose or try to sustain the true gospel of our Lord Jesus. I thought of you and wished you were here to show the people the truth. He created considerable stir in Glenwood. I hope we may have the pleasure of hearing you preach again in our community, and I would be glad for the privilege of hearing you and the Quaker meet in debate on this subject. May grace, mercy, and peace be with you.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, Creston, Iowa, August 19:—

Will you please direct some one to call upon Mrs. A. F. Norman, No. 28 Franklin Street, Huntington, Indiana. Her mother informs me that she and her husband desire baptism. This is a hard town, but our attendance is much larger than it was at Chariton. We are hopeful and trusting.

Bro. J. L. Goodrich, Byer, Ohio, August 13:—

I have just returned from Ironton, Ohio, where I was called nearly two weeks ago by the sickness of Sr. Ethel Cleary. I held about nine or ten services in that region, baptizing four, two very promising young men, one the husband of Sr. Ethel who is sick "nigh unto death." I just closed a meeting at Wheldon before going there, which resulted in four baptisms, two others giving their names for the future, and several undecided. My brother has lost two of his children by diphtheria, and has not had the opportunity of preaching as much as he expected. I also lost my mother a fortnight ago; it seems that troubles never come singly.

Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., writing from Manchester, England, says:—

Our mission conference held in the North Manchester branch, August 3-5, has been a very successful one. President Caffall was in charge, and has, I believe, enjoyed himself immensely. The work is growing apace in this part of the mission. We have some internal difficulties to contend with, but through it all those who are striving to keep the commandments of God and honor his law are supported by his grace.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp, writing from Roslyn, Washington, August 10, says:—

I was just thinking of the promise of the Spirit to me that my remaining days should be profitable to the church, if I would observe certain rules of living. I have not been able to obey the voice of the Spirit in all things as I would like to, but have been greatly blessed for what I have done; and yesterday I did a good day's work for the Master. I rode nearly six miles to the Cle Elum Lake and buried six souls beneath its crystal flood, then returned to Roslyn and instructed them in regard to the solemn ordinance of laying on of hands for confirmation; then confirmed the six; then ordained two teachers, blessed two children, and administered to the sick; then attended sacrament meeting and gave instruction in regard to the sacredness of that institution. I then organized a Sunday school of twenty-five, and gave a lecture to the children; and wound up the day's work by a public sermon in the town, and came out of the work as strong as I went in. I have visited Cle Elum Lake again to-day and baptized one more.

I write this in gratitude to God for his wise counsel and sustaining grace.

My next point is Spokane Falls.

A good day's work, certainly.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, writing from Audubon, Minnesota, to Bro. A. H. Smith, August 14, writes thus:—

I have just returned to these parts from the Southern part of the State. I was called on the 20th of July, by telegram. A young lady who had been sick since February was the subject. The doctors had been attending her ever since her sickness began, and at last held a consultation and concluded she would soon pass away. She had not obeyed the gospel but her desire was to have me come to see her. On my arrival I found her very low. I administered to her, and thanks be to God, she was greatly blessed: and was able to go fifteen miles to where there is much water, and was baptized. She said afterwards that when she went into the water she felt the disease go out of her body. O, what a blessing it was to her! There was quite a crowd witnessed this, but no visible impression was made upon them. One of the doctors said, "That old Mormon ought to be shot." Others said it was a shame to allow me to take her into the cold water; that she would die in there, etc. This could be heard on all sides. When I got back to Minneapolis, as I was going into the stand to preach a message was handed me to come to Magnolia to see old Sr. Premo, she was at death's door. I went, and thank God, he raised her at once. The Spirit told me three times to stop at St. Peter. I did so. On my arrival at the home of Bro. Weiler, I found him down with sickness. I administered to him and the Lord raised him up. So you see how the good Lord is blessing his children in this field.

Bro. J. C. Crabb, Pierson, Iowa, the 18th:—

Bro. J. W. Wight and I held four weeks' meeting in Sloan, baptized five; a week and a half in Smithland, baptized two. Expect to set up our tent in this place to-day. Tent meetings largely attended at the two former places. This is a new place, but hope for good attendance. We are both feeling well.

Bro. Leonard Scott, Fremont, Indiana, August 15.

Concluded our two days' effort at Flint. We had splendid services; large audiences. We baptized four persons, all married. There are now fifteen saints at this place. The Disciples are wonderfully angered. Mr. Wyrick, their minister from Ashley, seems to be quite demonstrative, calling me a liar in public; but the truth triumphs. We begin at Clear Lake to-day. Bro. H. H. Robinson and myself do the preaching so far. Busy as ever.

Bro. Jay Hoffman, Kansas City, Kansas, August 15:—

Will you kindly notify the missionaries in Oklahoma that Mrs. Ida L. Emmons, living at Okeene, would like very much to have an elder call. She is a Campbellite, but having heard of the restored gospel through friends—saints of this place—she is dissatisfied with her former experience and would very much like to hear the saints' doctrine. Her husband's name is Nelson Emmons. Though young in the ministry, yet many times have I been made to rejoice because of the goodness of God. Truly he does confirm the preaching of the word as in days of old.

Bro. David Hurbaugh, Byrneville, Indiana, August 15:—

Byrneville branch is in a good prosperous condition at present. We have occasional sacramental meetings every third sabbath. Meetings good, saints made to rejoice by the blessed Spirit. I love this work; am glad I ever enlisted in it. Hope to be faithful. The crown is at the end of this life.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRN. R. M. ELVIN and A. M. Chase now doing tent work at Creston, Iowa, report a more promising outlook than at Chariton, where they last labored. Larger attendance greets them and there is some interest already awakened. They were hopeful. Saints at Creston were hospitable and helpful.

Bro. J. T. Scott, writing from New Albany, the 17th inst., reports the work moving in that region of Southern Indiana. Brn. M. R. Scott, Jr., also Bro. W. C. Marshall and others, are busy affirming and defending the truth and baptizing. Prospects were bright. Letter omitted; lack of space requiring brief mention of much interesting matter.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote from Niagara Falls, Ontario, August 14, enroute from Maine to Canada. He has stopped at Haverhill, Massachusetts, where he met with saints and baptized one, leaving others interested.

Bro. L. E. Ellis, residing temporarily at Munising, Alger County, Michigan, would like elders of that field to labor there. He testifies of receiving witness of the truth, by obedience.

Sister Bump, of McGee, Brown County, Illinois, is desirous that the Saints will pray for her restoration to health.

Bro. W. Ortleb, of Burlington, Iowa, sends the office a package of German tracts owned by himself and Elder J. G. Bauer, deceased; to be used by distribution or sale for missionary work. We thank the brother for the useful gift.

ASK PRESIDENT WHITSITT'S DISMISSAL.

DANVILLE, Ky., Aug. 20.—A convention of twenty-five Kentucky churches, which adjourned to-day, demanded the dismissal of Pres. W. H. Whitsitt, of the Southern Theological Seminary at Louisville because of his belief concerning the Baptist creed. The seminary is the largest school of the kind in the world.

The foregoing press dispatch refers to Professor Whitsitt who lately published evidence to substantiate his claim, that in studying the history of the English Baptists he discovered historical evidence that said Baptists at one time practiced sprinkling for baptism. This declaration was decidedly obnoxious to the wing of the Baptist Church that claims "Baptist succession," as it breaks the link in the chain if true. The other wing, which includes eminent theologians and historians of the Baptist Church, ignores or discredits the succession theory and frankly admits there is no ground for it. Professor Whitsitt's late statements have given especial offense to the successionists, hence the action reported above.

If the Professor's statements are correct, he should be given due credit for his candor in adhering to the truth, whatever the results to the Baptist Church. We are reminded that this same Professor Whitsitt at one time, at or near Kirtland, while hunting for facts concerning the Latter Day Saints, refused to accept Bro. E. L. Kelley's statements in our behalf, or to meet the latter in discussion; also that he afterwards did injustice to the faith of the saints in a religious cyclopedia or theological work. However, though his failure to do justice to the faith of the saints is censurable, we would not withhold due credit for his honest statements concerning the religious practices of the Baptist in England. It was apparently not to his personal interests to state what he has stated.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

If the world's a wilderness,
Go build houses in it!
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to din it?
Raise a hut, however slight,
Weeds and brambles smother,
And to roof and meal invite
Some forlorn brother.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

WILL you, my dear sisters, and especially the young or inexperienced, allow one who is interested in your welfare to throw out a few hints on housekeeping? It is with kindest feelings that we address you on this very important subject. We have served in housekeeping both as a wife and as help and have had much pleasure in the same, notwithstanding our efforts were often attended by trying circumstances. "The battle is not to the strong alone, but to the active and the brave;" so also is the victory. One's pleasure in housekeeping does not wholly depend on the abundant possessions, but more especially on the how the possessions are managed, whether they are great or small. The bee has pleasure in obtaining honey from small flowers as well as from large ones; likewise a child will often be as pleased with a rude homemade toy as he would be with a boughten one, and especially if he has a hand in making it.

When the mind is put into our work, whatever it may be, with care and force enough to give a good effect, there is a pleasure derived therefrom.

"What if one has a languid, don't care feeling, or feels too weak to perform the needed work, what can she do?" I think I hear you ask. We have been placed in just such a situation many, many times, so will give you our prescription, hoping that those who are in a like situation may be benefited thereby.

First, on rising in the morning ask God the Eternal Father to help you to forget your own bad feelings, both of mind and body, and to give you strength sufficient for every duty of the day. Second, lay down bad feelings, anxieties, and overmuch care at the feet of the Burden Bearer, and go about each duty as it presents itself. Don't let yourself feel that your situation is one of the hardest in the world, or even hard at all, for such thoughts will make it so to you. There is no situation in life entirely destitute of a blessing, neither is there one without a defect, and it is each person's choice to live in the full enjoyment of her blessings, or to live in the disenjoyment of her perplexities.

As "he that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much," make it a point to look after the seemingly small affairs of the household. Also make it an important point to please your companion, whether he always pleases you or not, and do not neglect to kindly administer to the needed wants of the children. So labor whether you can do little or much—that they will know that your object in life is to make them happy. Not by foolish indulgences; but by a kind, straight-forward discharge of your duties, as a wife and a mother.

You say you have tried, and tried to do so, but obstacles would arise. And that is so, for every person from Eve down, and especially the Eves, have had many hindrances and perplexities to contend with, and if they had not, there would not have been anything to overcome. Probably some of those souls referred to by the Revelator, who came up through much tribulation were housekeepers, and possibly you and I were among them. If husband and the boys are in a hurry to get off to their work, and fret because you don't get their breakfast quite as quickly as they want it, what then? Why, keep as calm as possible, and do your very best to meet their requirements, and at the same time keep the tongue still and be sure not to cry for men cannot bear to see their wives in tears—they are too tender-hearted.

We have found it a good way to do all that can be done towards breakfast the night before. Try the method and see, and under each trying circumstance, don't forget that in your patience you possess your soul, the souls of your family, and the success in your work. We do pity anyone who has hard circumstances to contend with, and yet we have known many who made them much harder than they would have been if differently managed.

We have known several women, and some of them in the church, whose husbands had provided them with good homes, to be so thoughtless and inactive in their household duties that there was no good home feeling for its inmates and no charm for visitors—no, a disgust to each of the five senses. It is awful, but it is true all the same. On the other hand we know other wives who have labored and made their little cottages seem like dwarf mansions. Which think you is the happier, to say nothing about the misery or the happiness conferred on others? "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." It is a dreadful thing for a woman to so keep her house that no one can enjoy it. It is awful for parents to thus disgrace their children! "Order is heaven's first law," and so it is in all nature, from the solar system down to the simplest thing at our feet, and it should be established in every household in the commencement, and should be continued to the end, but not so rigidly as to destroy the peace of others, for that, too, is an error but on a medium line.

We have found it much easier to have certain days for certain kinds of work, as circumstances may require. One who has a small family and a small house cannot understand just how one who has the reverse should manage her business to the best advantage, but she may have some general idea, and understand some points and particulars.

It is a good way in spring to mend every winter garment that can be used the following winter and put it away; likewise in the fall do the same with the summer garments. We practiced the method and found it satisfactory to all concerned. If one does so she will be up with her work and thereby escape much hurry and confusion.

We think it an enjoyable business to keep a house in order, and to wash and mend or make garments for others, and we think that those who have near family connections to work for might be happy in discharging such duties. Now is the time, while they are with you, so put not off any duty or any privilege you have in serving them till to-morrow, for you know not what to-morrow may bring to you and yours. Yes; sisters, forget self and make it your first object, concerning this life to make your home a happy one. I am glad I tried. SR. ALMIRA.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

BRO. W. B. TORRANCE, of Arkoe, Missouri, writes:—

"With the beginning of the second quarter of this year we organized our Sabbath school. Two efforts had been made to organize a union school, but without success. Our school is superintended by Bro. E. S. Fannon, who is an energetic and influential worker. I thank God for our grand privileges, the Sunday school, to my mind affording one of the greatest opportunities for fitting ourselves for eternity.

"Our school is moving along nicely, especially the class of about twelve children instructed by Sr. Mary Fannon. How inspiring to see the interest taken by them! May the lessons taught be indelibly stamped upon their memories.

"The class of young people do not learn their lessons as well as I wish they did, but I am hoping that in time they may do better.

My heart goes out to the unconverted young men with whom I have associated since childhood. My prayer is that I may be able to set them an example worthy of imitation. God bless the Sunday school."

First line: Explain and question on Moses and Master, meekness, and mercy, and say "God is merciful." Christ was merciful and meek as Son of God. So must we be as children of God.

Second line: Show that faith causes joyful obedience; obedience brings fruits, and fruits cause blessings.

Third line: Korah was spiritually blind; was not meek nor obedient, and did not manifest faith; so that disobedience brought curse, sorrow, death.

Bartimeus was physically blind, but obedience and faith brought blessing, joy, life; and that God through obedience heals body and soul.

If you have two colors of chalk it will attract little ones more than one. If you can't use the red writing at right of last line near margin, leave it out; but be sure and present the idea, as your board may be too narrow.

MUSIC IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

[Paper read by Miss Jessie Corless at Coldwater Sunday School Convention.]

THE Sunday school without the music is as a plant without the sap; it is dry and lifeless. There is something about music that inspires and fills one with enthusiasm and enables us to make known and receive God's thoughts in a better light. It gives the children confidence and makes them feel as if they were doing their share of the work.

When Sunday comes and the smiling faces of the little children gather at the church, it is by means of music that they manifest their happiness and let their joyous hearts overflow and fill the room with thrilling notes.

How many children do you think would be eager to attend Sunday school without the song service! Without it would be as the bread without the butter; the bread would sustain life, while the butter adds flavor and makes the bread taste the better; so it is with music in the Sabbath school; we could conduct the class without the music, but the music adds enjoyment and interest, and enlightens our thought.

Poetry will reach the child's mind when prose will not. How eager they are to sing of the story of Christ, his crucifixion and his resurrection!

The story of the gipsy boy in the tent receiving the gospel just before dying alone at the close of the day, appeals to the child's heart when the same story told in prose would not impress him so greatly.

A mere child was known to weep at the singing of a hymn, which I think proves that music appeals even to the tender hearts of the children of the Sabbath school.

The person who is dead to music is blind to one of God's great gifts. I have heard a Sabbath school teacher say that often when she went to Sabbath school she would feel lifeless and not capable of instructing those who were under her care; but after hearing the joyous voices of the little children singing of the story of the cross, she felt inspired and more capable of performing her duties.

How many of us have been in the same condition?

Please do not say that the time is ill-spent when so much good comes from music in the Sabbath school. Fifteen minutes spent in song service does more toward making noble and honorable men and women of the children than sixty minutes spent in discussion on topics which they cannot comprehend.

Remember, the Sabbath school is for the youth. "Let not the aged forget the gladness of their youth." Let the children lift their glad voices in triumph on high.

Have music in the Sabbath school for the children's sake, and I am sure the older ones will enjoy their share.

Letter Department.

ORCHARDVILLE, Ill., Aug. 16.

Editors Herald:—The long-continued discussion between Bro. I. N. White and Mr. Marion Boles is now a thing of the past.

The debate began at Oak Grove Christian church, near Benton, Franklin County, Illinois. The claims of the Reorganized Church and the Christian Church as is stated in the Braden-Kelley debate were discussed. The debate began here August 3. Each disputant occupied nine half-hour speeches each on the claims of the Reorganized Church. Bro. White used the same line of argument that is generally used by the brethren to substantiate our claims, and Mr. Boles used about the same arguments that are always used by our opponents, if worthy to be called arguments. He continually clamored for a sign, also trying to make a laugh. We think our work was maintained to the satisfaction of all who love the Bible and have a desire to know the truth.

Each disputant had eight speeches on the claims of the Christian Church. Mr. Boles was in the affirmative. Here we think the gentleman made a complete failure to prove that his church is identical in faith, organization, worship, teaching, ordinances, and practice with the Church of Christ as it was left perfected by the apostles. He denied living apostles in the church on earth to-day; also the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost and healing of the sick; also no tongues, no prophecy, no discerning of spirits, no miracles, and no revelations from heaven in this Campbellite Church to-day. However, he did admit that God answered his prayer, and then denied it by saying, "No revelation to-day." He used a great part of his time in trying to expose our work, even when on his own proposition, and the last words he uttered on his last speech were, "The Mormon Church." Of course he could not prove the identity of his own church, so he tried to turn the hearts of the people against our work. We think good was done, as many people got to hear our side that never heard it before.

The disputants then proceeded to the saints' chapel, near Parrish, where Bro. White affirmed the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon. Each party occupied nine half-hour speeches on this question. Prophecies from the Bible and archæology were used in support of this divine record. Boles only tried to show one contradiction in the Book of Mormon on page 451. He claimed that Solomon Spalding was the author of it, that Sidney Rigdon stole it, and revamped it, and that Joseph Smith was used as an instrument in publishing it to the world. Here Clark Braden's logic as used by the preacher was exposed so plainly that we think the majority of the people saw it. Yes, we believe that some were convinced at least of the necessity of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon to fulfill the prophecies of the scriptures.

Mr. Boles then affirmed for two days again the same proposition that is spoken of above, viz., the claims of the Christian Church. Here again he occupied a great portion of his time in trying to expose our doctrine. He finally called us all liars. He claimed that his church was set up on the day of Pentecost, but it was plainly shown that it was founded by Alexander Campbell, and that their "Discipline" is found in the "Christian system," which is sold at their publishing house at St. Louis, Missouri, price $1.50.

We think the debate has done good. The faith of the saints seems to be strengthened and many people were permitted to hear our work who never heard it before. There is talk of another debate between us and another Christian preacher by the name of James Manning, who acted as moderator for Rev. Boles. Your brother,

F. M. SLOVER.

MACON, Mo., Aug. 11.

Editors Herald:—The earnest desire of our fifteen years of residence here has been realized at last, and the gospel has been preached in Macon under the energetic, aggressive, and dauntless generalship of Bro. T. W. Chatburn, faithfully and ably seconded by Bro. M. M. Turpen, in a two-weeks' series of tent meetings.

It will be inferred that we are the only family of saints here, which is true. Macon is an old, aristocratic, and very conservative town of between five and six thousand inhabitants; but notwithstanding the character of our people, and this being the first time that any thorough effort was ever made to enlist their attention to the claims of Latter Day Saintism, the weather too, being oppressively warm, yet the perseverance of our elders, their determination to do their part, finally overcame all obstacles, and brought down the blessings and aid of heaven.

No good was ever accomplished without a struggle. Sometimes, while expecting opposing influences, we are yet surprised at the peculiar manner of attacks, which, though seeming on the surface to have no relation to the chief point in view, are all the more perplexing and disheartening because of the very subtleness of indirectness. But the great lesson that is taught in different ways and in different degrees of intensity with different ones and according to the measure of the possibilities for good and usefulness in an individual, or to result from an effort, is that the good to be achieved may be measured by the very opposition met; and, second, that God rules, and has been moving when we perceived it not.

This district has had a very unfavorable reputation in the past for opportunities for gospel work, and while opportunities may not be of spontaneous growth, but must be created and cultivated, the success of efforts in that direction must depend upon the right time having come. Although ever since a determined effort has been contemplated for this district there has been a mighty strength of opposing influences and circumstances brought to bear, the refusal to be deterred from making a test by discouragements has been rewarded by aid to gain the mastery from on high, and from the beginning of Bro. Chatburn's labors in this district a few months ago, the efforts of him and Brother Turpen have been a series of triumphs never before experienced in this district.

The attendance here was very good, quite rivaling throughout the congregations of the churches of town this hot weather; and often the tent was crowded to overflowing, while with one exception, the order and attention was the best we ever saw given here at so large outdoor assemblages. The interest created is the finest. The latter day message is looked upon in this town as no humble thing, but as a highly intellectual theory, at least, and is regarded by general sentiment as of dignity. Is it not significant that in such a town with its eleven or twelve salaried and learned pastors that not one of the latter dared to put in an appearance and make an open avowal against two unknown, unpopular Latter Day Saint preachers, upon the first advent, too, of their peculiar teachings in the town, but kept a safe distance? One minister was seen, a number of times, listening outside the tent.

The pastor of one of the churches hazarded at the start, a summary of his opinions of "Mormonism" in one of our papers. But he made no further argument to sustain his position in answer to the reply that Bro. Chatburn promptly made, nor did he accept the invitation to come to the tent, use our pulpit and half of the time in discharging his duty of warning his flock and presenting proof, etc. Members of his church told us that had made enemies among his own people by his his action, and a goodly representation of his congregation was among our listeners.

We do not wonder at the ministers' evident fear of us; we only wondered that any man could fail to be convinced by such logic, argument, and proof, delivered with such assurance as our elders gave it. We felt that it was the proudest thing in the world to be a Latter Day Saint, and on one particular occasion when Bro. Chatburn was greatly blessed and unraveled the circumstances of the establishment of the many churches and presented the facts of the latter-day restoration with the force and courage of a lion, we felt that we could go among the greatest and wisest of earth and hold up our heads fearlessly and gladly, for before truth we see its imitations fade like mists before the morning sun.

Choosing this as an opportune time to put into effect a long cherished intention, my dear father rejoined the church of his conviction, love, and pride, and he is again a saint not only in heart,—he was always that—but legally, in name, now.

I would be omitting a very important factor of the success of our meetings not to mention the assistance rendered by Bro. W. J. Richards, as chorister, and Bro. and Sr. Thorburn, who furnished the tenor and alto, Sr. Thorburn also acting as organist. These saints exemplified the good that laymembers may do, in their different ways, towards the advancing of the cause. They came up from Higbee, sacrificing the emoluments of their occupations to help make the effort here a success.

We look back over this long anticipated event, and we are happy and grateful for the results, and look forward to the future when, we trust and believe, a branch will be gathered out. To that end we shall do all in our power to keep alive the interest awakened, and water the seed sown. Thank God for such soul-elating work as the gospel affords each one of us.

Cheerfully and hopefully,
LOUISE PALFREY.

CATO, Ark., Aug. 7.

Editors Herald:—I left home May 19 and came direct to Webb City. In company with Bro. O. P. Sutherland I attended the sessions of the Spring River conference, where I enjoyed the company of some old and tried friends, and ordained Brn. T. J. Sheppard and S. W. Simmons to the office of seventy, as provided for by General Conference.

Returning to Webb City after a few days, Bro. Sutherland, with horse and buggy conveyed me to Maysville, Arkansas, where we met the saints we organized into a branch one year ago. We were made glad to meet them again, especially those who were so kind and attentive to me a year ago when I was brought so near the mystic river. Such love and kindness should never be forgotten, and I trust never will be.

Our work done at Maysville in an endeavor to strengthen the saints, we returned to Webb City where I spoke a few times, attended a few services at Blendsville, also speaking a few times there. From there I made my way to Standley, Indian Territory, holding some meetings. Here the kindness of the saints was made conspicuous by presenting the missionary a new suit of clothes, a kindness that will long be remembered. From Standley I went, by request of Bro. Jesse Hogue, who furnished the means, to Washington County, Arkansas. Being the first one of our people here, of course the story we told was new, and the Utah Mountain Meadow Massacre and all the prejudice caused by the latter-day apostasy had to be met and set aside by proof. Then when we could be heard and began to present the gospel, commencing with first principles, it was amusing to note the effect on different ones, according as previous views were sustained or otherwise. At about the fourth discourse we drew the fire of the Disciples, who replied with a good deal more vigor than logic; so we kept up the crossfire for about four nights, when we were left in possession of the field. There was some talk of debate, but when they found we did not propose to debate a side issue, but the entire church propositions on both sides, I heard no more about debate. I baptized one there, a girl about fifteen years old. Nothing else would do her; she begged and wept till consent was obtained. I left her alone, but there is a number there that will obey the gospel in due time, I believe.

From Durham I came here to assist Bro. Ward, expecting to find him in debate, but when I arrived the opposition had failed to come to time, and so I found Brn. Ward and Jackson holding an arbor meeting, and have been helping them as I could. On August 5 we held a meeting of the Ingleside branch and ordained Bro. J. S. Moore to the office of elder and Bro. Joseph Ward to the office of seventy as provided by act of General Conference. The Spirit's presence made us joyful in the Lord. Thank God for a gospel that demonstrates its truth and power.

Our hearts are made glad sometimes by seeing that our prayers are answered in behalf of the afflicted ones, but when we see the great necessity of laborers in the great harvest field of God and witness the Spirit's call to young and middle-aged being obeyed, and see them coming up to the help of the Lord, we are sure that he who has cared for his work in the past will continue to carry it on and will raise up men to stand in defense of his truth, and will qualify them for their work.

Bro. Ward is a valiant young soldier for Christ, and his future is bright before him if faithful. The work has hardly been commenced in Arkansas and needs many more laborers than we have. Bro. J. W. Jackson is a young man of much promise, but needing encouragement. He has passed through much for the gospel, and we pray that God may sustain him.

The ministry that have labored here before have done nobly, and are remembered kindly, especially Bro. J. D. Erwin, whose stripes for the gospel's sake will shine as stars in his crown if faithful to the end. How we are to move on from here we don't yet know, but are trusting that the way will be opened. With love for all saints,

Your brother,
GEORGE MONTAGUE.

MURRAY, Ky., Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—We are trying to do something for the Master's cause down this way. The work moves slowly, but I think we have made some improvement. Opportunities for preaching the word in new places are more plentiful than formerly, and a few are being gathered out here and there.

Bro. W. R. Smith was called home a few days ago on account of sickness in his family. Encouraging reports come from Brn. J. D. Erwin and D. E. Tucker from Southern Alabama. Bro. Allen reports the work in Florida as "lagging," though he and Brn. Baggerly and Powell have done considerable preaching there. Bro. Snow has been doing some good work in Tennessee and Kentucky. We hope to make a better showing in this mission by and by.

The writer has been busy during July and the first half of August, traveling over five hundred miles, over one hundred of it on foot; preached about forty times, attended several other preaching services, prayer-meetings, etc.

I spent from the 8th to the 15th of July at Tatty's Bend (on Duck River), Tennessee. This was only about ten miles from the place where three of the Utah elders were killed by a mob some years ago. The killing was done on Cane Creek, south of "the Bend." The leader of the mob was also killed by a young man, at whose father's house the elders were holding meeting. He (the young man) and his brother were in turn killed by the mob. A brother of the leader still lives in the vicinity and swears he will yet kill any "Mormon" who dares to go back there, so I was told.

The people treated me as well as I could ask for during my stay with them and some of them seemed to be interested in the work. My home while there was mainly with Mr. Samuel and Mr. Frank Totty. They were formerly members of the Utah Church, and in company with several others went West to "Zion;" but it was not Zion to them. They yet have faith in the latter-day work, but are far from believing that the Brighamite Church is the true Church of Christ. I had excellent liberty in preaching to the people there and feel sure that some good was done.

I also found a welcome at the homes of Mr. Coleman and another man whose name I cannot now recall. May God reward them all. When I left Samuel brought me to the railroad and, without letting "his right hand know what his left hand" was about, gave me a substantial token of his appreciation of the work I was striving to do. It was a case of "free silver," and although some say it is "unsound money," it bought enough oil to grease the wheels of Nahum's chariot for quite a ways. Now who says "free silver" isn't the proper thing? Not I.

Yours hopefully,

T. C. KELLEY.

BOONE, Iowa, Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—After holding tent meetings for about four weeks in Boone to small but interested congregations we moved some three miles west to Milford, where a small branch of the Brighamite Church is located. This is the place where Bro. Scott labored last spring and turned the light of gospel truth on the erroneous doctrines of Brighamism, opening the eyes of the Gentiles and throwing confusion where it belonged. As a result we are greeted with good and attentive congregations. Many are friendly to the work.

Bro. Scott being called to Radcliffe, left here yesterday. His time and presence are needed elsewhere, though we would like to have him with the tent all the time. It seems strange to me to find so many who admit we preach the truth and yet do not obey it. I am glad to learn by the Herald that our missionaries elsewhere are gathering them into the fold; but we will continue, the Lord being our helper, to labor on, hoping and praying for the salvation of our fellow men.

We have been greatly cheered by the presence and aid of Bro. and Sr. Hidy, of Boone. Others have done well, but these have been our main helpers. They have shown a determination to make the meetings a success so far as lies in their power that has been cheering for us to see. Could others take the same interest in this branch I believe it would be better for the work.

Our next place is Nevada, Story County, and as the sectarians have studiously barred our way there hitherto, making it impossible to get a place to preach, we hope to be blessed of God in our efforts so they may look upon us as their friends and our cause worthy of their consideration. On July 23 I was called to Oskaloosa to administer to Sr.

Swalm, who was very low. God was very gracious to her, raising her up and causing us to rejoice. On the 27th ult., being so near home, I ran down to see my family and found them well, and returned to my labor on the 30th. I still desire to be found among the workers in God's kingdom.

Your fellow servant,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

BLAIRSTOWN, Mo., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—On August 1 and 2 I attended a two day's meeting held about four miles from Wheatland, Hickory County, Missouri. Brn. F. L. Sawley and Mannering have been preaching in that section for some time. Quite a number of the visiting saints attended this meeting; of the elders, A. Lloyd, Gouldsmith, and T. R. White. The interest was good and we had a splendid time, save one exception, which some will not forget the remainder of their days. A man named Walker lived close to the camp grounds. Prior to this time he seemed to be a friend to the saints and their work. Some of the brethren and sisters went to his house on Saturday to stop all night. Just as they were undressing for bed Mr. Walker began to swear and damn the Mormons, throwing rocks and clubs, striking one sister on the head, making quite a wound. The saints had to flee for their lives, some leaving shoes and clothing behind. This man's (if it is lawful to call him a man) wife was a saint, having been baptized some few months ago. She too was compelled to go with the rest. However, she returned next day and matters quieted down. Some of the saints felt rather sad and disappointed. We felt determined that the Devil should not cheat us out of the good we hoped for, so continued our meetings on up to Wednesday, the 5th, baptizing five noble souls, one of them Mr. Easton Paxton, who had lived there for the last thirty or thirty-five years. He was a lieutenant in the Union Army and is a man well informed. His noble wife and daughter also accepted the work. Others seem to be almost ready, two giving their names for baptism later on.

I spoke nine times at this place and three times at Prairie Grove schoolhouse. Found a people there that in time will obey the gospel.

Yours in bonds,

D. C. WHITE.

MCGALLARID, Schoolhouse, —.

Editors Herald:—I wish to say to all saints and friends who are interested in missionary work in Northeastern Kansas district, that Bro. Evan Davis and I have closed a very interesting meeting at the McGallarid schoolhouse on the 12th instant. Bro. Evan opened here with a small congregation, but by holding on for two weeks closed with a fine congregation. The brethren McGallarid, Ditimores, and Bro. Price, and others, have acquitted themselves like true soldiers of Christ. By so doing they have laid a foundation for future work. Paul says (1 Cor. 3: 14, 15): If "any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss." Consequently these brethren are feeling well in the faith, with us, and are witnesses in carrying into effect by cooperating with the missionary the last revelation given to the church, and we are receiving that peace of mind promised.

So let us be true soldiers of Christ and keep our lamps trimmed and burning; for says Matthew 16: 30, "The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."

Let us all try to live worthy of salvation, and pray for the adornment of a meek and humble spirit.

Your brother in bonds,

J. W. HUDGENS.

ROCKLAND, Maine, Aug. 4.

Editors Herald:—I arrived home yesterday from the east, where I have for the past five weeks put in very good time in preaching the word. Bro. William Haskell called on us to-day, and was very much surprised to see me, as he saw in the paper that John C. Foss of Rockland was dead: but it turned out to be another John C. Foss at North End. Brother William reports things are moving along very well on the Island.

Bro. D. S. Seavey from Tenant's Harbor called on us to-day. He is firm in the faith. He was very much pleased with Brother Joseph's piece in the last Herald, correcting the misstatements of the Utah elders.

To-day has been the hottest day of the season; some were nearly sunstruck.

I have been hindered from going to my field of labor this spring, for the want of means to travel with, until a few days ago I received enough from Canada to pay my way.

Times are very hard in the East, everybody crying out "hard times," "no work," "no money." The Lord willing, I will be at Niagara Falls, Ontario, next Sunday.

My address till further notice will be Niagara Falls, Ontario. Brn. Greene and Blanchard stored the tent and went home this week.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., August 4.

Editors Herald:—I do not expect to add greatly to the wisdom that already is "under the sun," but my experiences and observations for the last few months have caused me to do considerable thinking, and to reach certain conclusions in regard to missionary work in general, and my own desire and efforts for the future in particular.

My labors have been in city and country, and I have been led to study the needs of both from a broader point of view possibly than if I had been confined to either one. Life in Christ unfolds to all new meanings and possibilities. We are brought to realize keenly the value of time, and the need of well directing every energy. "Work while the day lasts that rest may be enjoyed when it closes" is manifestly the true order. The warfare we are engaged in is an unequal conflict, so far as the visible is concerned, and requires the exercise of superior wisdom on our part. I confess that I am puzzled in studying and planning how to make the truth triumphant in some places and under some circumstances. It is encouraging to read in the Herald reports of progress from various quarters, but so far as anything a condensed report might show, my own work of late has been almost nothing. In the last five months I have preached but twenty-six times, baptized none; yet have tried to seize and improve every opportunity. I have felt that time is largely wasted in these parts at least, trying to operate in the country in the season of hot weather, short nights, and busy farmers. But the same time of year is favorable to tent work in the towns and cities. Reports from the different brethren engaged in tent work go to show that the movable canvas churches are peculiarly adapted to the exigencies of our warfare, and by their help the missionaries' time may be profitably employed the year round.

Take this State as a whole and I do not believe that there is any field more difficult to obtain visible results in, unless it may be Utah, and the opportunities for profitable missionary labor I consider are very limited at present as compared with other parts, but might be increased or extended by tent work in summer. The towns and cities completely inaccessible to us otherwise might at least be attacked.

Our Adventist friends in this State are constantly campaigning in the towns with tents, and are successful. Why not we?

For my part I am not content with seeing so much of the time go by unimproved, and am desirous, under the circumstances, of being where, according to the reports sent in, the demand for laborers is more pressing and the harvest more nearly ripe. And I might add, that while it is evident that this work demands on the part of the missionaries, in order to success, the acme of devotion, diligence, wisdom, watchfulness, prayerfulness, self-sacrifice, etc., yea the consecration of every thought and energy, and the saints seem to expect it, and rightly of us, may we not ask on our part the same devotion and self-sacrifice of them, so that by the united efforts of all greater works may be done than have yet been accomplished?

I have come to believe that God will not help us in the conflict to do what there is a possibility of doing for ourselves. It would not inure to our manhood or perfection of character if he did. Our "might, mind, and strength" are required. Victory gained will then be earned and the "well done" accorded.

May we, then, summon resolution, laying aside the sins which beset and hinder us, and while necessarily the ministry must be extremely careful of every penny, foregoing every unnecessary gratification of appetite or worldly pleasure; is there not room for improvement on the part of saints that by the sacrifice of those things not needful, relief may be given to an empty treasury? Saints, many of you can give by way of free-will offering or tithing to the general treasury, who have not as yet done so. Do not wait to send in a large amount; it is not the impossible that God requires. Out of small things comes that which is great. How very few there are but what might do something and yet how few comparatively have done anything to aid financially!

Not wishing to exceed my authority, I will only say further on this line: I am sure that God will abundantly bless on the part of those who are privileged to be at home every effort you may make to sustain the work, however small it may be. Try it as the Lord hath said, and as it is written in the words of Malachi, "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it;" and in the words of Joseph Smith, "I the Lord am bound when ye do what I say."

Asking the prayers of all saints that I may be enabled to understand and perform my part in the work, I am, In bonds,

M. F. GOWELL.

MONROE, Iowa, Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—The Searchlight at hand this week. I wish it was not sent me any more, as I do not believe the doctrine they advocate.

I was born in Old England in the year 1815; was baptized a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (my wife also), on the 9th day of October, 1848. You see I have been a member of this church, if I live till the 9th of October next, forty-eight years. My wife has since died. I have kept the faith, having a knowledge of the truth before leaving Old England.

I came to the conclusion that the gospel of Jesus Christ was the same in all ages. I did not believe in doing as you are told. They told us while on the voyage that there was a gospel for England, one for the plains, and that we should have another when we got to Salt Lake. I said, "The gospel is the same immutable gospel in all nations." I came to the conclusion that if God did want me to go to Salt Lake he had to reveal it to me, or I was going to take Moses' advice to the children of Israel, "Stand still and see the salvation of your God."

I was baptized into the Reorganized Church December 18, 1860, by Elder John Shippey, in Clark County, Missouri. I know the work is true and that Joseph the Seer was an instrument in the hands of God of ushering in the dispensation of the fullness of times. I believe the doctrine advanced by Joseph Smith to be the word and mind of God unto the people, both saints and sinners; and I also know that Joseph Smith the present is the mouth-piece of God. I have experienced too much of Mormonism to be enticed with lo heres or lo theres. The Searchlight will have no hold here with Bro. John Sayer. I am what they call a Josephite, and desire to remain one as long as I can test them by the law and the testimony.

When the Lord gave the revelation Section 83: 1, to Joseph Smith, Jr., and six elders, as they lifted their voices on high; yea, the word of the Lord concerning his church established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets and for the gathering of his saints to stand on Mount Zion, which shall be the city of the New Jerusalem; which city shall be built, beginning at the Temple Lot which is appointed by the finger of the Lord in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri and dedicated by the hand of Joseph Smith, Jr., and others with whom the Lord was well pleased, I ask, "Is the Searchlight's people going to take that Temple Lot from the saints?" I say No. Please read the next paragraph; and again, in section 84, paragraph 3. This is satisfactory that the present Joseph Smith is the prophet, seer, and revelator to the church, acknowledged by God.

I will now bear my testimony to the truth, and I know that the apostolic gifts and blessings do follow the believer as in days of old. I pray that I may remain faithful to the end, that I may receive the crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge will give me at that day.

Yours for the truth,

JOHN SAYER.

CAMERON, Mo., Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—We closed our series of meetings here last night. Bro. Turpen spoke to a full tent of very earnest listeners. The effort was a good one and the saints and friends enjoyed it. The good Spirit's presence was and is the secret of the success of such efforts. May we all live so that we shall be worthy of the Spirit of our calling. There have been twenty-five sermons delivered at this place by Brn. Terry, Summerfield, the writer, and Bro. Turpen. The latter in company with Bro. Chatburn came the last week of our meeting, Brn. Terry and Summerfield having left for other fields of labor. Quite a disappointment to many not to hear Bro. Chatburn. He had a bad cold and did not think it advisable to preach, still his voice was heard in prayer and in some closing remarks during the meetings. The saints from the Delano branch attended. The young did their part well; they were on hand nearly every night to take charge of the singing. There are some six families living in town and we have hopes that ere long some of those that expressed themselves so much in favor of our doctrine will take hold.

I am glad that I can say that all did their part well. All were laboring with the one motive in view—to reach the people, and we are satisfied with the result. We think now that sometime this fall it would be wise to return and hold meetings in the good old gospel tent.

I wish we had just one dozen such tents. Plenty of room in this Far West district. People will come out to a tent when they will not to a private or public house. The tent, to my mind, is one of the very best means to reach the people during the hot summer and fall months.

I wish to say as a word of encouragement to Bro. May, of Independence, Missouri, that the tent is giving good satisfaction, and that many who claim to be good judges have spoken in the highest terms of the workmanship of this tent. If this is a sample of what he will do we cheerfully recommend all who may wish to invest.

From here we go to our reunion at Maysville, that convenes the 21st. Crops are good, fruit plentiful. As I look at the orchards and see the ground covered with apples I think of some of the poor that would like to get some, and in this Far West district there will be thousands of bushels of early apples go to waste—a good chance for some one to go into cider and dried apple business. This part of the county was favored with a splendid rain this morning, very much needed for late corn and pasture.

One day last week at Mabel, seven miles north, the church building was struck by lightning and burned to the ground—not one dollar of insurance, but one hundred dollars debt on the property. Our people have a neat church building just three miles south of there, all paid for, but no insurance. I make the inquiry, "Why not insure the house?" One says, "Well, I have tried;" Another, "It should be;" a third, "Well, I do not believe in insuring the house of the Lord; he can take care of it." Strange as this seems to me, and wrong to some of the readers, there is quite a number of good Latter Day Saints that hold to that idea; and while I admire the confidence they have in the Lord, I must say that to my mind it is not wise to so talk or do. It is true that we build churches and dedicate them to the Lord; and while it may appear that we have confidence in him by not insuring the property, the best plan and the wisest, to my mind, is to do all we can ourselves first to protect life and property. The best argument that I know of in favor of the idea that it is wise to insure the church property is in the language found in Matthew 2: 13. Here we find that Joseph was instructed to take the child and his mother to Egypt to stay there till he should receive word when to return. The cause for this was that King Herod was anxious to take the child's life. Now, you who make the statement that the house is the Lord's and that you do not believe in having it insured; that it is the Lord's, he can and will protect it; had you lived in that day when Joseph received the instructions to go to Egypt, you would have said, "Why, Joseph, the child is the Christ, the Son of God; do not go to Egypt; the Lord will take care of the child." He could have done so, but he had his way of doing so. It is true that the Lord could have put to death the king, or he could have removed the evil thought; but he did not.

Much might be said on this matter, but I trust you see the point. One good reason why we should insure our property is that it removes the temptation. If our enemy comes along and he knows that the house is insured he will say, "There is no use to burn that down; for it is insured, and they can build it again." If the "Prince of the . . . air" comes along and he sends the lightning or the cyclone and destroys the property, we can console ourselves with this thought: "Well, we can build another."

God helps those that will try to help themselves. I confess that I would have more faith after having done all I could myself first, to go to God in this as well as in all other things.

I remember asking a brother once that spent most of his time in the ministry and had a large family to support if he had rented a farm; yet it was then getting late in the season and the best farms in the county were let. He said, "No, I have not; nothing has turned up yet."

"Well," I said, "is it not getting late?"

"Yes," he said, "but the Lord will provide; he always has."

"Well," thinks I, "I believe you ought to have looked around and got a place."

He traveled all over the district and he had a good chance to look out for a home, but he did not; he worked on the principle of faith; but I thought then and do now that faith without works is dead; so I called on him later in the summer. He had rented one of the poorest farms in the county. He had plenty of chances to get a better farm had he improved his privileges. Again, I believe that God helps those that help themselves.

WILLIAM LEWIS.

POQUONNOCK, Conn., Aug. 14.

Editors Herald:—The hot wave was broken here this morning; sharp lightning, heavy thunder, and gathering clouds came with the dawn and rain is pouring down at this writing. Good tents give ample protection to every one and they are guarded as if at home. Yesterday was very hot; three services were held in the tent. The prayer service in the morning, in which there was a general interest manifest, was good. The attendance of outsiders seems to be in keeping with the thinly settled condition of the immediate community round about. New London is not far away but there is some difficulty in overcoming the distance. No electric or high-way except the regular railway train.

We are announced to-day to hold morning and afternoon services again at Bushy Point. Success was reported from the effort on the 12th and the brethren returned at evening cheerful. The rain may defeat to-day's program, but meeting has now been announced for the tent here; so at any event meetings will be held. Everything goes well in camp and all are well. Bro. Coombs is present with his cornet. Sr. Ashton presides at the piano. These, with the choir of good voices to sustain them with Harp and Hymnal in hand, make the preparation for song sufficiently complete. Among those of long service in the work are Srs. Kate Blood, Julia Glover, Ora Holmes, Orilla Sheehy, Sr. Merritt; the latter the only one residing near here, and she does her full share to see that the things needful are provided. Also Peter Hanson, the Fisher boys, etc. Bro. Pierce came in last night.

August 17. — Yesterday, the closing, was the best day of the reunion. It was a perfect day and large audiences in attendance. Seven were baptized in the afternoon, saints feeling well and a splendid spirit prevailed.

The weather is cool and nearly all in camp are hurrying around this morning in order to reach home to-day. Bro. I. M. Smith and I are headed towards Maine. Brn. H. J. Davison and George Robley will continue meetings in the tent here for awhile. All going well.

WM. H. KELLEY.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—The Thurman reunion was among the best I ever attended. The speakers, with scarce an exception, enjoyed good liberty, resulting in general expressions of satisfaction. The Sunday school, under the direction of Bro. T. A. Hougas, was the most interesting of any yet held. Spirited testimony meetings were held each day. Bro. A. H. Smith was present throughout the session; Bro. E. L. Kelley the last two days. The counsel and presence of such spiritual, earnest brethren could not but give force and added interest in the services. The local force, both among officials and laity, was ever ready to respond in any and every way. Bro. Henry Kemp was, as usual, on the alert and active. A well-arranged choir under the supervision of Brn. T. A. Hougas and Joseph Roberts in their excellent rendition of inspired music lent pathos, dispelled worldliness, and inspired reverence. Bro. and Sr. Leeka, as usual, welcomed the ministry to their homes, and may God continually reward them for their generosity. Thirty-three souls were buried with Christ in baptism.

From Thurman I went to Shenandoah, speaking there twice. The last night we had a full house, the town having been billed during the day. At the close of the service a Mr. Jameson, an infidel lecturer, who has been holding forth there for some time and who was creating quite a stir challenging the clerical representatives of the city, informed me that he had been negotiating with one of our brethren to hold a public discussion at Lamoni. He further suggested that we hold one in Shenandoah. My time being engaged up to October 1 I could not do so. He may insist that I meet him later. Well, inasmuch as God is on our side and we have the truth I shall not say, "No." I leave for Montrose to-morrow. Saints here are feeling well. Attendance at church perceptibly smaller, owing to hot weather and no regular speaker. Concentrated action is absolutely necessary in the cities to realize best results.

A CRITICISM AND A REPLY.

LEON, Iowa, August 3, 1896.

REV. J. R. LAMBERT,

Lamoni, Iowa;

Dear Sir:—In your yesterday morning's sermon, delivered at this place, you made the following statement, in substance: That the condemnation of the "wicked" (?) (a term applied to unbelievers in general—regardless of what their life is morally) was a penalty for unbelief, and nonpractice of sacraments, when property presented.

How are we to judge of these matters, except through the promptings of our own conscience? And, in this connection, the object of my letter: Do you believe that my homage would be acceptable to your God, when not dictated by conscience? Then, as we are not responsible for that conscience, which is a part of us, should man in justice be damned for following its guidance, even though things biblical and of the church are harped in his ears from infancy till death?

Further: if through this power of determining right and wrong, he is convinced of the rightness of these things, and lives as near in accordance with them as his judgment and reason dictate he should—possibly from a Methodist and Roman Catholic standpoint—then does he again lay himself liable to damnation, if on account of a faulty judgment, he does not accept your particular faith?

You found your church upon the same chapter of Matthew, as do the "Disciples" and Catholics. Why do you not then believe alike? There is undoubtedly wrong interpretation somewhere. Is the mangled meaning still the "word of God," even though not the intended meaning? If so, then this book is a miracle in every sentence.

I am aware you claim your church to be the church, and that it is inherent from the primitive church; yet every argument you can put forth to substantiate the claim, can be, and is argued for all it is worth.

If you want us to believe your church was the church established by Christ, prove it by undisputable facts—men do not argue facts—they submit.

As to your argument on the "signs of the times," I must admit blindness regarding them. At least that they do not exist now more than history teaches they did in the middle ages. Was not Mohammed a false Christ, though he claimed to be much more? Has not the emperor of China, in all ages always been dubbed "Son of Heaven" and paid divine reverence? Does not history teach that the conquest of Spain by the Moors had been predicted many years previous to its occurrence? And has not Arabia in all ages reared prophets—"false" I suppose? I do not believe the loss of life, owing to earthquakes, sum total, that has occurred in the last two hundred years, would equal the fatality of the greater eruption of Vesuvius, and earthquake of Lisbon. As to casualties: Their increase is but the result of the progress of civilization, which has on the other hand, along with the perfection of national law, put an almost effectual damper on war.

I do not write this through a spirit of antipathy, but for the reason that I take an interest in these matters. I therefore put this whole letter in the form of a question, which you are at liberty to do as you please about answering.

I am, respectfully,

FRANK W. CRON.

LAMONI, Iowa, Aug. 5, '96.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of the 3d inst. received yesterday. As my time for extra work will be very limited this summer and fall, I deem it best to test my opportunity for the accomplishment of good. If I take the time and pains to answer the different points you raise in your letter, will you consent to the publication of your letter, just as written, with my reply? If so, I will answer your letter as soon as practicable.

I take this course, because I perceive that you are able to take good care of your cause, and because it is just to both sides.

Yours for truth,

J. R. LAMBERT.

LEON, Iowa, Aug. 6, 1896.

REV. J. R. LAMBERT,

Lamoni, Iowa;

Dear Sir:—Yours of the 5th inst at hand.

I am pleased to learn that it is your intention to answer my letter, which will be a great favor to me, although at the time it was written I thought proper to insert that I would not insist upon an answer, thinking you might consider your time better devoted elsewhere.

You are at liberty to answer the same in the way you indicate.

Respectfully,

FRANK W. CRON.

LEON, Iowa, Aug. 18, '96.

REV. J. R. LAMBERT,

Lamoni, Iowa;

Dear Sir:—Your favor of yesterday received. I will be content with a copy of your paper, or rather, I inclose you ten cents, and would be pleased to receive two copies, as I am much interested and have indulged in some speculation as to what your answer will be to my first interrogatory, regarding "our responsibility," as I have on several occasions urged as a most stubborn fact, what I put to you as a question, and have never yet received a satisfactory refutation or answer, except to the man who gave it. I will send the extra copy to one of them.

Respectfully,

F. CRON.

LAMONI, Iowa, Aug. 11, 1896.

MR. FRANK W. CRON,

Leon, Iowa;

Dear Sir:—I now undertake to answer your criticism on my sermon, and I do so with pleasure. I take it for granted, of course, that you were present and heard the discourse you allude to, though I was not aware that any such person was listening to me until after I received your letter.

My subject, as you are aware, was the "signs of the times," and it was based on Matthew 24: 3, the most applicable part of which reads as follows:—

"And what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"

I explained the "end of the world" to mean the destruction of the wicked "when they shall have filled up their cup of iniquity to the brim." (Matthew 13: 38-43.) And the wicked I defined to be: First, all those who embrace the gospel, but fail to live in accordance with its just and pure precepts—those who after having been enlightened by the divine plan turn from it, and knowingly sin against light and truth. And second, those to whom the gospel is properly preached, but not being willing to walk in the light, they choose to follow the dictates and leadings of a false and deceptive spirit, and hence they come under condemnation. Now in the face of all this, why should you throw in that parenthetical statement as though you were properly defining the term "wicked" for me and others? Your statement is this: "(A term applied to unbelievers in general—regardless of what their life is morally)."

Now the gospel enjoins the practice of the highest and strictest code of morals ever known to man. It not only condemns all wrong deeds, but it strikes at the very conception of wrong in the heart or mind. When speaking of the crime of adultery, Jesus said:—

"But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart."—Matt. 5: 28.

That is, if he settles it in his heart that he will commit the crime if opportunity should permit, he is guilty under the law of the gospel. No wonder, then, that the same great Teacher should say, while addressing his disciples on the mount,

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."—Matt. 5: 8.

And further:—

"For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5: 20.

Instead, therefore, of the condemnation of the wicked being a penalty for mere unbelief and the nonperformance of sacraments, it is the penalty for transgressing and refusing to obey the gospel.

I do not admit "conscience" as a proper and sufficient guide; but believe, nevertheless, that the gospel of Jesus Christ, which we preach, is of such a character that it commends itself to the judgment, and conscience, and sympathy of every one who has been rightly and sufficiently trained to love that which is pure and good. For various reasons, some reach this condition much sooner than others; but as God is just, and the willful rejection of light is what brings men under condemnation, therefore none will be finally condemned, as the wicked, except those who have knowingly rejected the truth, or transgressed God's laws. It follows, therefore, logically and unavoidably, that all men will be made to see that it is their duty to obey the gospel, either in this life or in the life which is to come. Conscience, however, is largely a creature of education, and it prompts the doing of that which is directly opposite in character. And while we may not be responsible for its existence, we are very largely responsible for its condition. If not, where does our responsibility come in? And why do all the civilized governments of the earth frame laws which when executed condemn and punish that which men's consciences lead them to perform? As no one can judge another's conscience for him, it may easily be seen that all the wrongs in the catalogue may be sheltered under the plea that they resulted from the promptings of conscience. The apostle, Paul, informs us that in all good conscience he served God from his forefathers; and yet, before his conversion, he bitterly persecuted the saints, put them in prison whose consciences led them to obey the Christian religion, and held the men's clothes while they stoned Stephen to death! You are not at liberty to contradict Paul's statement that his conscience led him to do these things, no more than I am at liberty to deny your claim that your conscience will not permit you to accept the Christian religion.

What we are required to do is to see to it that our desires are pure and right; that our consciences are enlightened by the knowledge of truth. Or in other words, our duty is to honestly and earnestly seek for light and truth, trying the unknown by that which is known. Or as Paul expressed it after his conscience had been enlightened, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5:21.

If we constantly seek to know the truth, and live as well as we know how, though our consciences may lead us to become Methodists, Roman Catholics, or skeptics, we are free from condemnation; but at the same time, nothing less than an intelligent and willing obedience to the truth, as it is with God, will prepare us for the enjoyment of celestial glory. The gospel, not one's sincerity, is the great condition of salvation. The Heathen are just as sincere as the Christians are. The statement of Paul that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is true scientifically as well as scripturally. If I sow "wild oats," I will not reap tame ones. If I sow thistle seed, I will hardly reap a fine crop of wheat as a reward for my toil, no matter how honest I might have been.

The Bible teaches that all men will be judged according to their works. That there will be, in the future, degrees of reward and degrees of punishment. That true character formed by obedience to the divine plan, in all its parts, is what is required to produce this character. It is, therefore, the willful rejection of light and truth which brings men under the direct and strong condemnation of the Almighty.

"And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."—John 3:19.

"It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you."—Matt. 11:22.

Why more tolerable? Evidently because their opportunities were not so good.

"And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes."—Luke 12:47.

"Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."—James 4:17.

Certainly, we believe that the church we represent is the Church of God in fact, and in harmony with the teachings of the New Testament in doctrine and church organization. We do not, however, "found" our church upon any chapter in Matthew, but believe that it rests secure, so long as we do right, upon the true foundation, Jesus Christ, which, as the term is used in the New Testament, comprehends, or includes, the great system of truth which he presented to the people. You will please bear in mind that we do not claim to be the Church of God and proper representatives of the gospel, by virtue of succession, but by virtue of a restoration, which has occurred in fulfillment of the clear prophecies of the Bible. These prophecies locate very plainly the very age in which this restoration was to take place, by describing contemporaneous events. Our claims, in this respect, are in striking harmony with the teachings of the Bible, both as to their character and the time when they were first made.

The Roman Catholics, to whom you refer, claim that the church has come to them by succession, and that they are governed by the word of God and tradition. The Disciples (Christians or Campbellites), to whom you also refer, claim that the church has come down to them because of succession, and that they are governed by the word of God, all of which is found in the Bible. They both agree that present revelation from God is out of the question. The Latter Day Saints believe in the doctrine of present revelation, which is so fully and plainly set forth in the Bible. Now these fundamental differences will account for all the other differences of belief which exist. You are certainly not prepared to reject an accepted standard of evidence as invalid, because those who appeal to such standard do not all believe alike, are you? If so, I am curious to know what standard you will name as the proper one for all to follow.

You ask for facts which, you affirm, men do not argue, but submit. Will you deny that men may properly argue where facts apply, and what they prove? It is certainly no compliment to the belief or unbelief of some men, that when you furnish them with "facts," they ask for logic and reason; and when they suppose that nothing more than logic and reason have been presented, they anxiously ask for "facts." But more of this by and by.

As to the "signs of the times," I will restate my position which, however, was plainly stated in the sermon you refer to. I presented the predictions contained in Matthew 24: 5-7, 23-27; Luke 21: 24-28, summing them up in the following order:—

First, there shall be false Christs and false prophets.

Second, iniquity shall abound and men's hearts fail them with fear in looking for those things that are coming upon the earth.

Third, nation shall rise up against nation, and there shall be wars and rumors of wars.

Fourth, there shall be famines, pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places.

Fifth, upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring.

There is no claim made in the Scriptures referred to, nor was any made by me, that these things would not and have not occurred, more or less, in other ages of the world; but the claims made by me were:—

First, that frequency of occurrence and destructiveness have marked them as signs of Christ's second advent in glory, and "the end of the world."

And, second, I distinctly stated at the close of the morning's discourse that I would continue the subject at night, and speak upon a sign which was plainer, and more important than all the others put together; and that the contemporaneous occurrence of them all designated our time as "the last days," or "the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—(Acts 3: 21.)

Were you present at night, Mr. Cron? If so, you chose to ignore the latter and more important half of my subject. If not, you could not do me justice on the "signs of the times," for the reason that you only heard the first half of my subject. At night I spoke on the restoration of the gospel and the establishment of the church, using for a leading text Matthew 24: 14, and connecting it with the leading text of the morning; that is, Matthew 24: 3. Now the restoration of primitive Christianity, known in the New Testament as "this gospel of the kingdom," and "the everlasting gospel," together with the restoration of the Jews and the land of Palestine, are the leading and most important signs of the times, though there are many others which are more or less important.

Your stated position is that these "signs," of which I spoke, "do not exist now more than history teaches they did in the Middle Ages." Right here you ignore the facts and figures which I presented, and offer your unsupported opinion followed by a list of questions. Sectarian priests frequently dispose of our positions and proofs in this way, but we ought to receive something better from those who are asking for facts. I have two statistical accounts of earthquakes before me, covering a period of 3,568 years, that is, from 1700 B. C. to 1869, A. D. These two accounts, though presented in different forms, substantially, if not exactly, agree in every particular. The first account was furnished by Rev. W. H. Bidwell, and published in the New York Observer about eighteen years ago, at which time it came into my hands. This is the one I presented to the people of Leon, in the discourse you refer to. The second account is found in a book entitled "Facts for the Times," published in 1885. Here is the account just as I presented it:—

"1. In the 1,700 years previous to the Christian era, there were 58 earthquakes, four of which were disastrous.

"2. In the first nine hundred years after Christ, there were 197, 15 of which were disastrous.

"3. During the next 600 years to the end of the fifteenth century, there were 532, 44 of which were disastrous.

"4. During the next 300 years, there were 2,804, 100 of which were disastrous.

"5. During the first 50 years of the present century, there were 3,240, 53 of which were disastrous.

"Of destructive or great earthquakes' writes Ponton, 'the number registered to the end of 1865 is 231, only four of which occurred before the birth of Christ.'

"The years 1867 and 1868, surpassed all others in the number of destructive and other earthquakes. April 4, 1867, Mitylene was destroyed and 1,000 lives lost. During the year 1868, more than 100,000 souls perished. During the years 1867 and 1868, there were about 4,000 earthquakes."

These facts and figures effectually dispose of your reference to Lisbon, Vesuvius, etc. Indeed as you fail to furnish any figures, or establish any comparison, except by bare assertion, you establish nothing, and overthrow nothing. But let us put these statistics in another form.

The period of time covered by the account is 3,568 years. In the period of time which brings us to the beginning of the present century, that is, 3,500 years, there occurred 3,591 earthquakes, an average of but little more than one per year. In the first fifty years of the present century, there occurred 3,240 earthquakes, or an average of 64 4-5 per year. Of the earthquakes which occurred in the 3,500 years, only 163 were destructive, that is, an average of a little less than one in each 22 years. But in the first fifty years of the present century, there were 53 disastrous earthquakes, or a little more than an average of one per year.

The great earthquake at Lisbon did not occur in the "Middle Ages," but at the late date of 1755.

Mohammed was not a false Christ. He claimed to be a prophet of God, hence, if not a true one, he was a false one. He was born in 571, A. D., hence appeared on the stage of action immediately after the apostasy of the primitive Christian Church, and belongs with the false prophets which were also to appear in connection with Christ's first coming. The false Christs of which Jesus spoke were to come professing his authority and power, "saying, I am Christ." Do the emperors of China so come? Hardly. Because the Apostle John is called by the publishers of King James' Bible, "St John the Divine," it does not prove that he was anything more than human or that he ever claimed to be. If the conquest of Spain by the Moors was plainly and unmistakably foretold many years before it transpired, and the things predicted were beyond the power of human sagacity, then, so far as the evidence goes, it proves a true prophet instead of a false one. But if you have any such authentic prophecy, bring it out and compare it with the prophecy of our late civil war, which I alluded to at Leon.

You affirm that the increase of casualties "is but the result of the progress of civilization, which has on the other hand, along with the perfection of national law, put an almost effectual damper on war."

The fact remains, that "wars and rumors of wars," just as I put it, at Leon, have been both marked and frequent in our age. I quoted an extract from a published letter of Joseph Smith to N. E. Seton, Esq., bearing date of January 4, 1833, as follows:—

"And now I am prepared to say by the authority of Jesus Christ, that not many years shall pass away, before the United States shall present such a scene of bloodshed as has not a parallel in the history of our nation."—Times and Seasons, volume 5, page 707, published in November, 1844.

Joseph Smith derived his leading information concerning our civil war from the revelation which he received on December 25, 1832, and in which it is plainly stated that the war would begin with "the rebellion of South Carolina," and that the Southern States would be divided against the Northern States. Let us see what the historian says of this war in 1872, or about thirty-nine years after Joseph Smith wrote the above language to Mr. Seton. In a work entitled, "The Nation; Its Rules and Institutions," etc., by Anson Willis, under the heading of "The Wars of the United States," we have the following:—

"This [that is, the late Civil War] was by far the greatest, the most expensive, and most bloody war that was ever carried on upon this continent. In magnitude, in expense, in the lives it cost, and in the evil consequences which resulted from it, it surpassed all the other wars combined, and verified the old adage that 'civil wars are the worst of wars.'"—Page 391.

This war occurred in the very blaze of modern civilization and the "perfection of national law." Since the great rebellion, war has been both widespread and destructive. You will hardly deny that one part of the work of "modern civilization" has been the invention and making of implements of death by means of which men's lives can be destroyed quickly, and in a wholesale manner; and they have been effectually used to this end.

I heard the lecture of Henry Ward Beecher, at Centenary M. E. Church, Chicago, Illinois, July 24, 1883, also read it the next day in the paper. In this lecture he said:—

"About thirty years ago I delivered a peace address in which I prophesied that there would be no more wars among Christian nations; that the difference between countries would be arbitrated; but since then five of the most terrific wars on record have occurred, and I have quit prophesying. The European nations are armed to the teeth. The spirit of war was never so rife as now."

So far as the increase of casualties being due to modern civilization is concerned, if true it does not affect my position in the least. I only spoke of casualties in an incidental way; but if they are the subject of prophecy, ancient or modern, the direct cause, or causes, does not invalidate the facts that they were foretold, and are being fulfilled. How can human sagacity foresee whether modern civilization will, in the next fifty years, devise means to decrease the death rate from accident, or whether its achievements will still tend to increase it?

I accept your statement that you do not write "through a spirit of antipathy;" but when you state that you put your "whole letter in the form of a question," how am I to understand it? What am I to do with your assertions, expressed opinions, and arguments?

I have thus written at length, because the burden of proof devolved upon me. But had space permitted, much additional evidence might have been adduced. You will remember, perhaps, that when speaking, I presented evidence which showed that the waves of the sea have literally heaved "themselves beyond their bounds."

With a desire that you may see the truth, I am,
Yours respectfully,

J. R. LAMBERT.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in the Florida District, Greeting; Brethren and Sisters:—I take this method of informing you that Bro. D. E. Tucker is now in charge of your district, and I hope you will sustain him by hearty coöperation in gospel work. The Florida district, as I understand from a recent letter in the Herald, is part of Escambia County, Alabama. For convenience, Henry, Barbour, Dale, Geneva, and Coffee Counties, Alabama; also Eastern Georgia, are also attached to Bro. Tucker's field. Those wishing to correspond with Bro. Tucker can reach him by addressing him at Milton, Santa Rosa County, Florida. Praying for the blessing of God to rest upon you and him, as also on all the household of faith,

Yours in bonds,

T. C. KELLEY.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District, Greeting; Beloved Saints:—It has pleased God and the Bishopric of his church to appoint me Bishop's agent in this district, so it becomes a duty of mine to call on you to give in your mites to help push forward this glorious gospel we all love so much.

I presume you all know that the church is very much in need of every cent that can be possibly raised, to defray the expenses of the missionaries' families, the support of the poor, and general church expenses. So do not delay sending in your mite. It is needed now, and needed much. Do not say you have paid your tithes and therefore have nothing to pay. God said, both in the Bible and Book of Mormon, "Ye have robbed me . . . in tithes and offerings."—B. M. p 468; Mal. 3: 8. You can rob God just as much in keeping back the offerings as in keeping back the tithes. The widow's mite was just as thankfully received as the millionaire's "tithes of mint and anise and cummin." She would have failed to receive that reward of praise in this life as well as the enjoyment of that praise in the life to come if she had not given it. God expects something of each of us. Let each do what he can, if it be but a small amount. If the individual's amount is too small to send alone, let him hand it to the president of his branch and receive a receipt; and the president can send the various offerings to me; giving a list of the donors and the amount of each offering and I will send receipts for each.

I cannot visit all the saints in the district, as I have to pay full railroad fare out of my own pocket and support my family as well; so don't wait for me to call on you, but secure a money order or draft on Omaha and send it to me as soon as practicable.

If you are in debt and would like to be prospered so as to meet our obligations, begin by making your peace with God; not only by becoming citizens of his kingdom, but by complying to the temporal as well as all others of his laws. God said when we obey him then he is bound, and of course he is not bound if we do not obey him. He has said that if you will pay in your tithes and offerings he will "pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Malachi 3: 10. You trust God for salvation, why not trust him in this? Here he offers you temporal salvation. Will you accept? If not, why not?

I have no individual interest in making this call for means, as not one dollar goes for my support or that of my family. My only interest is to help God's church, and I expect to see you prospered by complying with God's laws, for I believe his word is true. We all need his protection these trying times in our temporal interests. Are we willing to receive it on his proffered terms, or are we going to slight his offers of mercy and rob him of his dues? Yours very hopefully,

J. M. STUBBART, Bishop's Agent.

OCTAVIA, Nebraska.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Southern Indiana district will convene September 19, 10:30 a. m., at Union chapel, near Wirt, Jefferson County, Indiana, Elders S. W. L. Scott and E. C. Briggs are expected to attend. We wish all branches to report that can. Send all reports to JOHN T. SCOTT, Sec. No. 19 Cotton Avenue, NEW ALBANY, Indiana.

REUNION NOTICES.

TRANSPORTATION RATES, WOODBINE REUNION.

The committee on transportation to the general reunion to be held at Woodbine, Iowa, on September 18-27, 1896, reports as follows: One and one third fare on certificate plan over the following named roads: A. T. & S. F.; B. & M.; B. C. R. & N.; C. & A.; C. & N. W.; C. B. & N.; C. B. & Q.; C. G. W.; C. M. & St. P.; C. R. I. & P.; C. St. P. M. & O.; Colorado Midland; D. & R. G.; F. E. & M. V.; S. C. & P.; H. & St. J.; K. C.

St. J. & C. B.; St. L. K. & N. W.; Illinois Central; Iowa Central; J. L. & St. L.; M. & St. L.; Missouri Pacific; R. G. W.; R. I. & P.; St. J. & G. I.; St. L. & S. F.; Union Pacific System; Wabash; and the Wisconsin Central lines.

Applicants for transportation certificates must apply to your home ticket agent "within three days of the opening of the meeting, or during the first three days of the meeting."

Where the journey is made over more than one line ask the ticket agent where you purchase your certificate for special instruction how to proceed.

Do not fail to get your certificate when you purchase your ticket. Immediately upon arriving at the grounds hand your certificate to S. C. Diggle, secretary of reunion committee, for his signature. COMMITTEE.

NOTICES.

All those who expect to attend the conference dedication and Sunday school convention at Vales Mills, commencing September 11, and are coming by railroad, all that are coming on the C. H. V. & T to Radcliffe, will notify S. J. Jeffers, Arbaugh, Ohio; and those on the K. & M. to Carpenter, will notify Jasper Bowen, Vales Mills, Ohio.

S. J. JEFFERS, Branch Pres.

BLUFF PARK RAILWAY RATES.

"The Keokuk and Western and Des Moines and Kansas City Railways will make one fare rates from Leon, Humeston, Decatur City, Van Wert, Osceola, and Des Moines to Keokuk for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale August 21, 22, and 24, limited to August 31." See editorial notice in Herald.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas; it has pleased almighty God, in the dispensation of his providence, to remove from our midst by the hand of death, George F. Seigfried, our esteemed brother and fellow laborer in the church and Sunday school, especially in the latter, he having been an active teacher in the Pleasant Grove Sunday school, by his removal we have lost a noble brother, he having reached that age in life when he would have been a great benefit to all whom he came in contact with, whether in private or public life, loved by all his associates, whether in Sunday school or public school, of which he was one of the foremost teachers, having selected teaching and educating the young as his profession in life;

Therefore be it resolved, that while we deeply feel our loss and miss his kind counsel and companionship, we humbly bow to the divine will of God, believing he doeth all things well. And further, that we tender our kindest sympathies to the bereaved mother and family of our departed brother, and pray God to sustain them in this their severe trial. And further, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Saints' Herald, Zions' Ensign, a copy to the county papers, and one to the family of our departed brother.

THURMAN REUNION.

August 10.—The morning prayer service was an hour earlier than usual. At 9:15 a. m. the Sunday school convened, about eighty or ninety present. The exercises showed that the district workers had not been idle. At eleven a. m. a heavy storm threatened. Bro. John Lentz addressed the audience from Isaiah 28: 21. At noon the storm broke over the camp, but not so heavy as feared. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. H. Kemp preached from 1 John 2, while the rain continued to fall. At 7:30 p. m. the rain had ceased. Thirty-seven tents were upon the grounds. T. W. Williams addressed the audience, at 8:30 from John 7: 17. The effort was strong proof of the necessity of our being assured of our acceptance with God.

August 11.—The morning dawned clear. The health of the camp was good and all seemed to be enjoying themselves. At nine a. m. the Sunday school workers again met. School in charge of T. A. Hougas. A marked increase in numbers and interest was noticeable. The hour at 10:30 was devoted to social service. The day was clear and pleasant, a cool breeze blowing from the north, giving relief from the heat, which has been very oppressive at times. Bro. Thomas Blodgett, of Nebraska, spoke in the afternoon. At the close of this service the Sunday school workers met in convention. There are now about 250 camping on the grounds and more arriving every day. Several names have been handed in for baptism. In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith spoke from Mark 16: 16. The effort was interesting and instructive to all, both outside and inside the church.

August 12.—The morning dawned very gloomy. Rain began falling early and continued until about ten o'clock, making the roads so slippery that those from a distance could not get to the camp, consequently the attendance was small at the early service. Nine a. m. was again devoted to Sunday school work. Bro. D. Hougas addressed those present at eleven o'clock. At 2:30 the sun broke forth clear and bright, and the camp assumed a more lively appearance. The Sunday school workers were again assembled at this hour. At eight p. m. there were forty tents on the grounds. Only one case of sickness reported. T. W. Williams addressed the audience.

August 13.—The rain began falling gently about daylight, bidding fair to be the worst day yet. The one reported sick yesterday was better this morning. Nine a. m., social service. At eleven a. m. the rain ceased to fall, but the clouds still hovered over, and the day looked gloomy indeed. The saints met and listened to an able address from Bro. A. H. Smith. The sun broke forth again at 2:30, and those living near began to arrive, and the camp assumed the usual lively appearance. Bro. A. H. Smith preached an excellent discourse from Matthew 16: 18, showing clearly what was the rock upon which Christ prepared to build his church. In the evening the tent was well filled to listen to a temperance address by Bro. T. W. Williams. At the close Bro. Charles Fry gave an illustration of the expense of intemperance by figures, showing what it would do if the money thus thrown away was used for other useful purposes. This closed the Sunday school work.

August 14.—There were no new cases of sickness reported. The early morning looked gloomy, another storm threatening, but by nine o'clock it had cleared away and the saints had assembled for social service. A spiritual time was enjoyed. The occupants of the forty-one tents are estimated at three hundred. New arrivals are noticed every day. Saints and friends were addressed by T. W. Williams at eleven. During the noon hour several more names were added to the list for baptism. At the close of the afternoon sermon by Bro. A. H. Smith fifteen were baptized by Bro. H. Kemp. The sick sister has taken a relapse, and at this writing is reported very bad. The elders have been called to administer. From nine a. m. until the close of day was fair overhead, but the ground damp. At eight p. m. those baptized were confirmed by H. Kemp, T. W. Williams, and D. Hougas. After the confirmation Bro. A. H. Smith spoke.

August 15.—The morning looks favorable for another fine day. There are now forty-three tents and five covered wagons that are used as temporary homes for the saints and their friends. The sick sister is much better this morning. One brother is reported sick, but not seriously. The social service was in charge of Bro. T. W. Williams. Quite a number of new faces were seen in the audience at eleven o'clock, when Bro. H. Kemp preached from 1 Corinthians 13: 8. While the meeting was in progress we noted the arrival of Bro. E. L. Kelley, who had been anxiously expected for some time. The tent was well filled at 2:30, the sun was shining brightly, and the heat was very oppressive. Bro. E. L. Kelley addressed the audience from Ecclesiastes 12.

At four p. m. the saints met to consider the advisability of holding another reunion. Voted that we hold another reunion next year on these grounds. The appointing of a committee of arrangements was left to the Plum Creek branch. Said committee was empowered to set the time for holding the reunion. A vote of thanks was tendered Bro. Wm. Leeka, the Plum Creek branch, and especially the committee, for their efforts in conducting this meeting.

Quite a number of new names have been handed in for baptism. At half past six a heavy storm broke over the camp, the most severe of any during the reunion, but at eight it had passed over, doing no other damage than wetting a few of those who were not provided with good tents, and drawing a few stakes of the large tent, which were soon replaced, and at the call of the bell the audience assembled to listen to another able effort from Bro. Kelley. Those sick in camp are getting well.

August 16.—Nine a. m. the usual social service was held. Eleven a. m., preaching by Bro. E. L. Kelley to a large and attentive audience. Bro. T. W. Williams treated the hearers to a splendid discourse at 2:30. Not one fourth of those present could get within hearing. The crowd was variously estimated at from five to six thousand people. During the intermission fourteen were baptized by T. W. Williams and four by H. F. Durfey, making a total of thirty-three during the meeting. At seven o'clock those baptized were confirmed by E. L. Kelley, T. W. Williams, and H. Kemp. In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith preached an excellent discourse from the words, "What shall I do then with Jesus, which is called Christ?" The meeting closed by singing, "God be with you till we meet again."

Thus ended one of the most successful reunions ever held on these grounds. The local workers feel encouraged by the harvest of souls that has been gathered. While the crowning effort has been put forth in the reunion, resulting in the ingathering, they feel that the seed sown by them has not been lost.

August 17.—Again the jostle of heavy wagons and the sound of the hammer are heard as the camp is broken up and all take their homeward course, feeling well paid for efforts in coming, hoping to be permitted to meet in many such meetings; while the elders take their course to other places, to mingle in the efforts there.

In bonds,

H. F. DURFEY, Sec.

BLUFF-PARK GENERAL CHURCH REUNION.

On a prominent Iowa bluff overlooking the once proud boast of modern Israel—"our loved Nauvoo," and fifty years after that memorable expulsion which forced inoffensive men, innocent women, and helpless children from home and comforts, into the hitherto unknown wilderness, are gathered hundreds who in the bitter experiences which followed heeded the return cry as heralded by the Reorganization forces, and under its inspiring spell have so urgently presented our claims that where once it was almost death to disclose one's identity, now with open arms they welcome us back again.

This morning as the sun glistens on the waters making doubly picturesque what once was old Commerce, memories made plain in history surge through the brain and involuntarily covers that mournful thought, "It might have been!" Methinks that if the spirits of our illustrious Martyrs and sires could view the present from their abode above their souls would thrill with joy! "Your children shall return and build the waste places;" yes, Iowa sheltered the oppressed, and it is but right that when victory crowns our effort that we should commemorate our triumph on her virgin soil.

It is Sunday. Three days of the reunion have passed and the pen can but beggar a description of the progress so far made in reunion work. On Friday the Sunday school occupied morning and afternoon, and in the evening Bro. J. A. Robinson entertained the assembled congregation. His effort was highly spoken of, it being reminiscent, historic, and poetic in character.

On Saturday a permanent organization was effected; Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, and J. R. Lambert presidents; T. W. Williams secretary; F. G. Pitt, Alma Whitehouse, and T. A. Hougas, committee on music; policemen and ushers provided for. During the day a Sunday school organization was effected with T. A. Hougas and Wallace Robinson as superintendents. The greater part of the day was consumed by the Nauvoo district conference. In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith in his characteristic way delved into the earth, soared into the skies, plucked the grass, caught the rainfall, moved the rocks, and interrogated the sun, moon, and stars in his search for God, and he came not back empty-handed, but presented unanswerable arguments, evidencing a design and Designer, intelligence in creation and Creator, and communion between man and God.

Sunday morning clear sky, beautiful sunshine, happy throng; the camp numbers swelling with each incoming train. Prayer service in charge of Bro. F. G. Pitt and M. H. Bond. Scarcely a moment passes unoccupied; testimonies short, yet pungent; prayers brief, yet efficient. Morning preaching by J. R. Lambert assisted by A. H. Smith. It abounded in clear, sound, yet calm reasoning and was alike applicable to saint or sinner. He is a modern James.

Preaching at 2:30 by T. W. Williams, but I was so busy thinking what to say that I had no time to note what was said, hence have no comment. Bro. Columbus Scott preaches to-night.

Little sickness, cool weather, and healthy surroundings with an ideal camp ground promise a successful reunion.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

BORN.

ANDERSON.—To Bro. Joseph and Sr. Eliza Anderson a daughter and named Mary Ethel. Blessed at Grand River, Iowa, August 9, 1896, by Elders Asa S. Cochran and Samuel V. Bailey.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-
 MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE
 AND COVENANTS ANSWERED
 AND REFUTED.
 BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.
 The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.
 In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.
 The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.
 The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

 Bro. Ordway wishes us to say that for a time he will send one box for 75 cts. or three boxes for $1.50 with guarantee, postpaid to any place where he has no agent to anyone who if cured will agree to act as agent or try
 and get an agent.
 Bro. H. C. Sharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes
 April 23, 1896:—
 "Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco.
 It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured.
 . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, con-fort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.
 From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.
 Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer
 from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies,
 among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.
 By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174
 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day,"
 "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is in-

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

Paper covers 35
Muslin binding..... 50

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

Paper covers 10c.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SEER OF PALMYRA AND SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

GERMAN TRACTS.

Tracts in the German language may be had of Ad. Richter, Burlington, Iowa: The Baptism 6c., the Repentance 5c., the Principles of the Gospel 6c., the Epitome of Faith 2c., the Sixth Trumpet, a fifty-four page pamphlet, 25c. These prices include postage.

Die Eine Taufe, a German translation of "The One Baptism." This German tract is on sale at the Herald Office; price one cent each.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush... 25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding... 35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

GOOD THOUGHTS FROM "PUBLIC OPINION."

THERE is the greatest difference between presuming an opinion to be true, because, with every opportunity for contesting it, it has not been refuted, and assuming its truth for the purpose of not permitting its refutation. Complete liberty of contradicting and disproving our opinion is the very condition which justifies us in assuming its truth for purposes of action; and on no other terms can a being with human faculties have any rational assurance of being right.—J. S. Mill, "On Liberty."

The safeguard against temptation is not seclusion, but self-culture. As it is not disinfectants which will most certainly secure one against infection, but a sound constitution, so it is not rules of life which will strengthen one against temptation, but a strong soul. One must build up his moral constitution by the habit of noble deeds and high thinking, by fellowship with pure women and honorable men. The chief aids in this regimen are literature and friendship.—Ian Maclaren.

Public sentiment is everything. With public sentiment nothing can fail; without it nothing can succeed. Consequently, he who molds public sentiment, goes deeper than he who enacts statutes or pronounces de-isions. He makes statutes and decisions possible or impossible to be executed.—Abraham Lincoln.

Be honest with yourself, whatever the temptation; say nothing to others that you do not think, and play no tricks with your own mind. Of all the evil spirits abroad at this hour in the world insincerity is the most dangerous.—James Anthony Froude.

Some will say, "You are an optimist. You expect too much; what you hope for will never be realized." I do not deny that I have always been an optimist by nature and by practice. No reformer could live if this were not true of him and all those with whom he works. We believe in human nature under the shining Sun of Righteousness. The coal measures are but stored-up sunshine gathered untold thousands of years ago; and in the hereditary inheritance and environment of humanity there is an immense deal of good that can be counted on.—Frances E. Willard.

The growth of wealth and of luxury, wicked, wasteful, and wanton, as before God I declare that luxury to be, has been matched step by step by a deepening and deadening poverty which has left whole neighborhoods of people practically without hope and without aspiration. At such a time, for the church of God to sit still and be content with theories of its duty outlawed by time and long ago demonstrated to be grotesquely inadequate to the demands of a living situation, this is to deserve the scorn of men and the curse of God! Take my word for it, men and brethren, unless you and I and all those who have any gift or stewardship of talents or means, of whatever sort, are willing to get up out of our sloth and ease and selfish dilettanteism of service, and get down among the people who are battling amid their poverty and ignorance—young girls for their chastity, young men for their better ideal of righteousness, old and young alike for one clear ray of the immortal courage and the immortal hope—then verily the church in its stately splendor, its apostolic orders, its venerable ritual, its decorous and dignified conventions, is revealed as simply a monstrous and insolent impertinence!—Bishop Potter.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY FOR SEPTEMBER.

THE September number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, just out, is a brilliant one. It is impossible to even mention all of its special features. A few of these are: "Colonial Dames and their Daughters," by Sally Nelson Robins, of the Virginia Historical Society, illustrated with many old portraits; the second paper of Colonel Garnett's description of General Lee's part in the battle of Gettysburg, forming the eighth article in the Popular Monthly's great Lee Series; "A Staff Officer's Recollections of General Lee," by Colonel M. V. Moore; "The U. S. Light-house Establishment, by Joanna R. Nicholls, describing the buildings, vessels, and buoys in our waters, and their maintenance, liberally illustrated; "The Nuremberg of the Master-singers," by George Willis Bardwell, with seventeen pictures; "The War in Cuba," by Frederick A. Ober, giving an account of the battles and progress of the struggle for independence, with portraits, battle scenes, etc.; "Signaling on the Battlefield," showing how messages are transmitted during an engagement. Then there are a number of short stories and poems, the conclusion of a serial, an attractive young folks' department, and other features.—Frank Leslie's Publishing House, New York.

In this day of partisan politics a truly independent paper has been thought to be among the impossibilities, but the Chicago Times-Herald is approaching very near the ideal. It is fearless and outspoken in its editorial utterances and its vigorous fight for better men and cleaner politics is already being felt. As a newspaper the Times-Herald is deservedly ranked with the very first, and those of our readers who wish to keep posted on all the news of the world will find the Times-Herald covers just that field.—The Railway Conductor.

In the August number of Current Events, the monthly news-review published in Hartford, Connecticut, the position of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe on woman suffrage is clearly defined.—Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, the famous philanthropist and suffrage advocate, telling of her sister's relations with the cause. This phase of her character has never received the notice it merits, and the article will interest all of Mrs. Stowe's admirers. The other features of the magazine are as complete as usual. At news-stands or mailed from Hartford for five cents in stamps. Trial subscription, 30 cents for one whole year.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes and will be sold at $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume, according to the styles of binding.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will aborn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Prices, as stated, $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume, according to styles of binding; cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

SAMPLE PAGES.

THAT the HERALD readers may the better estimate the character and value of the forthcoming History of the Church we publish herewith sample pages of the first chapter of the work—facsimiles of the pages as they will appear in book form.

We are assured that these opening pages will commend the history to every adherent to and friend of the latter-day work; also that the interest created by reading the opening chapter will be continued and increased by a further reading and study of the work.

Our advertisement, which appears on the HERALD cover, presents the main descriptive features of the history and states the general plan pursued in preparing it. To it the reader is referred for a general description of the work, prices, terms, binding, etc.

The book presents the introduction of the latter-day dispensation and the growth of the church as no other publication in our literature can do, narrating the leading events in the light of attending, contemporaneous history, in such a manner as to give the reader a comprehensive insight into the character and philosophy of the faith; of its development, its influence upon the spirit and general conditions of the people, and especially upon the creeds and theology of modern times.

Those who would be acquainted with the general events connected with the rise and growth of the church; the experiences of God's people in their persecutions and leading movements, should possess themselves of this valuable publication.

Great movements are worthy of close study. They can only be fully

CHAPTER 1.

HISTORY OF JOSEPH SMITH AND THE CHURCH UNIQUE—ANTAGONISM TO BE EXPECTED—CLAIMS WORTHY OF INVESTIGATION—IN HARMONY WITH REFORMERS—COMING OF AN ELIAS—LUTHER IN THE SPIRIT OF ELIAS—JOHN WESLEY ON THE LATTER-DAY GLORY, AND THE KINGDOM—PROTESTANTS SHOULD PATIENTLY HEAR—HON. JOSIAH QUINCY ON JOSEPH SMITH—REV. MR. PRIOR ON JOSEPH SMITH—SMUCKER ON JOSEPH SMITH'S CHARACTER.

THE history of Joseph Smith and the work to the establishment of which he gave his life must ever be a strange and unique chapter in the history of his generation. The claims he made were not only new and strange, but in positive conflict with the traditions and settled convictions of his time.

For a man to claim that he was intrusted with a divine appointment to restore to a Christian nation what they supposed they already possessed and richly enjoyed, would naturally create bitter antagonism, and we are not surprised that the conflict still continues; nor do we blame men for refusing to accept the claims of the Latter Day Saints until good reasons are shown for so doing, but we are quite anxious that the world should patiently hear and investigate, assured that our claims will bear all the light that can be thrown upon them.

The supposed extraordinary claims of Joseph Smith seem to harmonize with the spirit and feelings of some of the Reformers who preceded him. The claim that one should come in the spirit and power of Elias, as a "restorer," now seems strange and new; yet Martin Luther said:—

"I cannot tell what to say of myself. Perhaps I am

2

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

Philip's (Melancthon's) forerunner. I am preparing the way for him, like Elias, in spirit and in power."—D'Aubigné's History of the Reformation, vol. 2, p. 105.

It is evident from these words that Luther felt that he was laboring in the spirit and power of Elias, as a restorer; and that he was the forerunner of one who was to do a greater work than he. He thought it might be Philip Melancthon, but did not know.

The claim of Joseph Smith that Elias did come to restore all things is but a testimony of the consummation of an event that Martin Luther felt would come, and for which he ardently hoped, zealously labored, and fervently prayed.

The famous John Wesley also believed in the ushering in of a latter-day dispensation and the establishing of God's kingdom on the earth. He says:—

"The times which we have reason to believe are at hand, or even fairly comprehended by an acquaintance with the leading conditions surrounding and the events connected with them. There is a philosophy in all general history, in both profane and ecclesiastical history. Religious movements have a close connection with the moral and religious development of mankind. This is especially true of the work of God in all ages, and specifically so of the great latter-day work. It was brought forth in an age peculiarly distinguished by intellectual activity. The experiences and research of the past, together with the best thought and acumen of the present have been placed side by side with the great work of God, and by which it has been subjected to close scrutiny and critical analysis. To read its history in the light of events past and present is to trace the dawn and extension of the light of the world in modern times, and by its aid to study and analyze the general development of the world and the race from a comprehensive, central point of view.

The History of the Church will prove peculiarly interesting and profitable to the reader. We therefore commend it and solicit subscriptions with the assurance that the purchaser will obtain value received for the price of it.

THE Staunton, Virginia, News, of the 21st inst., sent us by Bro. O. E. Cleveland, contains the following, which shows that old Virginia is being invaded again by the elders:—

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints expect to hold a grove meeting on Mr. Isaac Coffman's place on the New Hope road, seven and one half miles east of Staunton, Virginia, to commence on Thursday, August 27, 1896, and continue over two Sundays, as follows: Preaching every evening at seven o'clock, and on Sundays at 10:30 a. m., 2:30 p. m., and seven p. m. Elders F. C. Smith, of Michigan, and F. J. Ebeling, of Wheeling, West Virginia, are expected to do the preaching. The above-named Church has its headquarters at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, and is in no way whatever affiliated with the Utah . . . Mormon Church.

CIVILIZED nations, especially European and American peoples, have condemned the course pursued by Turkey in the administration of its government in Armenia and Crete.

(if they are not already begun,) are what many pious men have termed, the time of 'the latter-day glory';— meaning, the time wherein God would gloriously display his power and love, in the fulfillment of his gracious promise that 'the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea.'"

Again, he says:—

"What could God have done which he hath not done, to convince you that the day is coming, that the time is at hand, when he will fulfill his glorious promises; when he will arise to maintain his own cause, and to set up his kingdom over all the earth?"—Wesley's Sermons, vol. 2, sermon 71.

Are not the claims of Joseph Smith regarding the glorious display of God's power, the 'latter-day glory,' and the setting up of God's kingdom, if true, a remarkable fulfillment of what Wesley said would come?

You Protestant lovers of the Reformation, will you not then patiently hear us while we relate the thrilling experiences, the wonderful testimonies, and the remarkable work of this strange man, and invite your investigation of the work accomplished or begun by him?

Already some of the most astute minds of the age have paid their tribute of respect to the man and his work. In a work called "Figures of the Past," by Josiah Quincy, on page 376 occurs the following:—

"It is by no means improbable that some future text-book, for the use of generations yet unborn, will contain a question something like this: What historical American of the nineteenth century has exerted the most powerful influence upon the destinies of his countrymen? And it is by no means impossible that the answer to that interrogatory may be thus written: Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet. And the reply, absurd as it doubtless seems to most men now living, may be an obvious commonplace to their descendants. History deals in surprises and paradoxes quite as startling as this. The man who established a religion in this age of free debate, who was and is to-day accepted by hundreds of thousands as a direct emissary from the Most High,—such a rare human being is not to be disposed of by pelting his memory with unsavory epithets. Fanatic, impostor, charlatan, he may have been; but these hard names furnish no solution to the problem he presents to us. Fanatics and impostors are living and dying every day, and their memory is buried with them; but the wonderful influence which this founder of a religion exerted and still exerts throws him into relief before us, not as a rogue to be criminated, but as a phenomenon to be explained.

"Joseph Smith, claiming to be an inspired teacher, faced adversity such as few men have been called to meet, enjoyed a brief season of prosperity such as few men have ever attained, and, finally, forty-three days after I saw him, went cheerfully to a martyr's death."

A Methodist preacher by the name of Prior, who visited Nauvoo in 1843, speaks of Joseph Smith as follows:—

"I will not attempt to describe the various feelings of my

The dispatch annexed indicates that the resistance to tyranny by the Cretans has not been in vain; that the Sultan has been forced by the moral support of the great powers to recognize and grant demands of the people of Crete. It is both a success of the Cretan rebellion and another step in curtailing the hold of the Ottoman Empire, which is destined to disappear from the face of Europe, if not from the world—the just compensation of the Turk for his murderous atrocities. Every lessening of the hold of tyrannical governments is a step forward in the world's progress, a movement in the direction of ultimate liberty and equality. Men, like plants, need proper conditions essential to their growth, to show the results of that growth. Liberty, in the fullest and truest sense, is the ultimate goal now before the race and constantly coming within clearer view.

LONDON, August 24.—A dispatch to the Telegraph from Athens says that the proposals of the powers for the government of Crete are as follows:—

First, the nomination of a Christian Governor of Crete, who shall serve for a term of five years under a guarantee from the powers.

Second, economic autonomy with the payment of a tribute to the Sultan.

Third, the reorganization of the gendarmes by European officers.

Fourth, the independence of the judiciary of Crete by the creation of a high court at Canea.

It is announced that the Sultan has rejected the fourth proposition, but that he has agreed to adopt the first three propositions of the powers.

WOODBINE REUNION.

BRO. S. B. KIBLER writes from Woodbine, Iowa, August 24:—

We learn there is a rumor gone out that the grounds on which our reunion is to be held here are in bad condition owing to rain and high water. Please say to all concerned that during all the rain and high water this year the water has never been on our grounds, and they are now in good condition, and we are endeavoring to have all so arranged that all who come will be pleased; and we say, Come and see.

REUNIONS.

THERE is likely to be an overabundance of reunion news this fall; we shall be obliged to shorten details, or leave some out entirely, giving only a brief notice, while columns are crowded. This will also be necessary in the letter department.

bosom as I took my seat in a conspicuous place in the congregation, who were waiting in breathless silence for his appearance. While he tarried, I had plenty of time to revolve in my mind the character and common report of that truly singular personage. I fancied that I should behold a countenance sad and sorrowful, yet containing the fiery marks of rage and exasperation. I supposed that I should be enabled to discover in him some of those thoughtful and reserved features, those mystic and sarcastic glances, which I had fancied the ancient sages to possess. I expected to see that fearful, faltering look of conscious shame which, from what I had heard of him, he might be expected to evince. He appeared at last; but how was I disappointed when instead of the heads and horns of the beast and false prophet, I beheld only the appearance of a common man, of tolerably large proportions. I was sadly disappointed, and thought that, although his appearance could not be wrested to indicate anything against him, yet he would manifest all I had heard of him when he began to preach. I sat uneasily, and watched him closely. He commenced preaching, not from the Book of Mormon, however, but from the Bible; the first chapter of the first of Peter was his text. He commenced calmly, and continued dispassionately to pursue his subject, while I sat in breathless silence, waiting to hear that foul aspersion of the other sects, that diabolical disposition of revenge, and to hear that rancorous denunciation of every individual but a Mormon. I waited in vain; I listened with surprise; I sat uneasy in my seat, and could hardly persuade myself but that he had been apprised of my presence, and so ordered his discourse on my account, that I might not be able to find fault with it; for instead of a jumbled jargon of half-connected sentences, and a volley of imprecations, and diabolical and malignant denunciations, heaped upon the heads of all who differed from him, and the dreadful twisting and wresting of the Scriptures to suit his own peculiar views, and attempts to weave a web of dark and mystic sophistry around the Gospel truths, which I had anticipated, he glided along through a very interesting and elaborate discourse with all the care and happy facility of one who was well aware of his important station, and his duty to God and man."—Smucker's History of the Mormons, pp. 151–152.

Smucker sums up his character as follows:—

"But whether knave or lunatic, whether a liar or a true man, it cannot be denied that he was one of the most extraordinary persons of his time, a man of rude genius, who accomplished a much greater work than he knew; and whose name, whatever he may have been whilst living, will take its place among the notabilities of the world."—Smucker, p. 183.

Reader, do you not think it wiser to investigate the work of this remarkable character than to ignorantly hurl unsavory epithets at his memory? If you do, we ask the privilege of submitting historical facts for your consideration.

THE EDITOR AT SEYMOUR.

THROUGH the influence of Dr. J. W. Denoon, formerly a resident at Lamoni, now a citizen of Seymour, Wayne County, Iowa, the committee on speakers for the Old Settlers, of the Seymour district reunion to be held at Seymour, August 29, invited the Editor to make the oration of the occasion. Accordingly we attended, reaching the town on Friday evening, the 28th. We were most kindly received by J. H. Morrison, president; T. L. Morrison, secretary, and C. A. Conger, treasurer of the association.

The day was fine, a slight rain in the early morning having cooled the air a little. The meeting was held in a grove on the public square, where stand and seats were arranged in the shade.

The exercises began at 10:30 a. m., and were only interrupted to permit a lunch at noon, and were resumed at 1:30 p. m., when the prayer having been offered by the Christian minister, Elder Rice, the editor delivered his address to a large audience. It is needless to follow him in what he said; it was conceded to be a happy effort pleasing to those assembled. The rest of the afternoon was occupied by several speakers, and a series of amusements characteristic of such reunions everywhere.

The editor was invited to occupy the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sunday, the 30th, by the pastor, Rev. S. H. King, and did so occupy, at morning hour, eleven a. m. In the afternoon at three o'clock he preached from the stand in the park to an excellent audience, respectful, manly, and attentive. Both the morning and afternoon efforts were well received. The editor finished the day by attending the evening service of the M. E. Church, Rev. J. W. Bott, pastor, opening by prayer for the sermon by the pastor.

Altogether the visit to Seymour was a pleasant one, the editor being the guest of Dr. Denoon and family, who gave him royal welcome.

Seymour was begun in 1871, and by the unflagging efforts of its leading men has flourished until a thrifty town of two thousand inhabitants has become a fixed fact in the midst of a productive, healthy, and prosperous section of country, forty odd miles east of Lamoni.

The address of welcome was by Rev. S. H. King, the response by Hon. D. M. Clark, a pioneer settler, fifty-five years in the State, six feet two inches in height, and seventy years of age; a hale and hearty man.

The editor was most respectfully treated by the committee, members of the association, and the citizens generally, to whom he was introduced, and with whom he became acquainted.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

LETTER from Bro. G. J. Waller, of Honolulu, Hawaii, August 13, reached us August 26. The work in the island is progressing slowly. Bro. Waller was to baptize one on the 16th, a South Sea Islander. He says of his efforts in the pulpit:—

I am pleased to say that I am gradually receiving more power in preaching the word; have better liberty and enjoy more of the spirit.

Surely the Lord doeth well, when he places such men in places where his work needs them.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, writing from Creston, Iowa, where the Decatur district tent is pitched and gospel meetings being held, August 25:—

We are having a fine hearing at this place. Cannot tell what the result will be, but there are quite a number manifesting considerable interest. Pray for us.

Bro. Charles Walton, Birmingham, England, August 17:—

We are trying to do our best to make known the truth among the people as our limited opportunity will allow, but time, money, and men are wanted before very much can be accomplished. There has been an addition to the Birmingham branch of six recently, all young people.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE reunion at Bluff Park is progressing nicely, and every one is enjoying it; except now and again one, who may possibly never be happy only when they are miserable, and never enjoy the things that others do enjoy; and to whom the sight of others' enjoyment brings jealousy and discontent. But we hope these are very few.

Brn. Mintun and Stubbart began meetings Friday, August 21, at Fremont, Nebraska, with fair prospects for good results. The Herald, of Fremont, for August 21, gave the brethren a good notice.

The two days' meeting in the Green schoolhouse neighborhood, near Lamoni, Saturday and Sunday, August 22 and 23, was a success, albeit a drizzling rainstorm all Saturday morning spoiled half the services for that day. Sunday the day was fine and the attendance large.

The Herald Office has a good boiler and engine to sell. See advertisement on cover.

There is a breezy, cheery letter from Bro. James Caffall, in this issue. He is contending against great odds; and, with the force at command, is doing well. It is wonderful how the good Lord sustains his ministers, those of them who are faithful, upright in walk and virtuous in speech and in act. Bro. James has the prayers of all the loving and true saints, surely.

Bro. Joseph Luff was at San Francisco, California, August 14. He had been in the Golden State a month, and had visited at Los Angeles, Downey, Garden Grove, Santa Ana, Riverside, San Bernardino, Cucamonga, and San Gabriel, in the Southern, and Oakland and the city in the Northern district. He had preached some twelve sermons. His health was better than when he left home, though not fully established yet. All things were not altogether pleasant before him as to the work, but he was hopeful.

Mr. W. F. Jamison, who once debated with Bro. Isaac Sheen, at Plano, Illinois, and afterwards at Glenwood, Iowa, with Bro. W. H. Kelley, is seeking a discussion with Bro. T. W. Williams. In writing to the HERALD editor about it he states: "I am not a Braden Christian." Mr. Jamison desires that the debate shall be at Lamoni.

Letters crowded out:—

Bro. J. F. Mintun was at Valley, Nebraska, the 19th, where he had closed a series of well-attended meetings, the people, and especially members of the Grand Army, giving the word a respectful hearing; invitations to return being followed by general expressions of kindness. Bro. J. S. Strain had rendered good service; Bro. J. M. Stubbart, his associate, was doing excellent work. Mrs. S. J. Allen, of Springfield, South Dakota, wrote Bro. Mintun requesting that a minister come there. He asks brethren in that field to respond; others there are also near the kingdom.

Rev. Shick, of the Baptist Church, was attacking the faith at Inman, Nebraska, but declined to discuss. Bro. M. expected to begin work at Fremont soon. Was pleased to learn that Bro. G. M. L. Whitman expected to resume field labor; wished him success.

Bro. William Thompson closed meetings at Milford, Iowa, the 16th ult., having been assisted by Bro. William Johnson, of Angus; large attendance; some ladies desired baptism, but were deterred by objections of relatives, whom he hoped would soon yield to truth. He had met two Brighamite elders and who, as usual, refused to "reason together," calling such "contention." In their zeal to convict the Martyr of polygamous teaching and practice they quoted a Christian minister who, though but forty-five years of age, was acquainted with him. They were young men, ignorant of or blinded to the truth, and zealous in advocating Utah Mormonism and belief in polygamy as a principle. Bro. T. had been assisted by Bro. Eli Hayer, at some points. Saints and friends were kind and true; baptisms, though not frequent, were occasional.

Bro. E. E. Williams, residing at Marceline, Missouri, is doing what he can for the work by teaching a Sunday school class in one of the churches, also by general conversation and correspondence. Interest in the message he bears is manifest and increasing. He is assured that much can and should be done in addition to pulpit preaching in teaching the gospel. Those who thus labor will be blessed and have success in their efforts.

Sr. Lettie Dunn, residing at Tama, Iowa, formerly at Sandwich, Illinois, writes of her continuing faith in the work of God. She writes feelingly of past associations in the Sandwich branch—Brn. W. W. Blair, Israel L. Rogers, and others. The promises of past days are verified to her.

Bro. J. S. Strain, of Council Bluffs, writes of his missionary labors with Bro. J. F. Mintun, whom he commends as a humble and courageous minister for Christ. He contrasts the excellent and convincing preaching of the elders with the spiritual indifference of the people, who listen but do not obey. Many of the elders refer to this prevailing condition. All, however, express satisfaction at the help received and the assurance of divine acceptance of their labors. The more abundant increase may come by and by. Sometimes the spiritual harvest is delayed until conditions are righted and surroundings become better adapted for increase in membership. We can only labor on, assured of ultimate success. However, the faithful minister prompted by divine love, feels a deep interest in the people and realizes their need of the truth, and would bless them and their children by its ministrations. It is not surprising that men in the field desire to bring their fellows within the realm of spiritual life and peace. Life conditions and humanity's general needs prove and emphasize that all communities stand sadly in need of the life and blessings of the gospel.

Sr. P. A. Hughus, of Percilla, Texas, writes good words concerning the labors of Bro. I. P. Baggerly, whom she characterizes as an able and fearless defender of the faith. She asks prayer in behalf of her family that they may obey the truth. Her advice to bear trial patiently, to endure with patience afflictions and cares incident to earth life, is good and worth heeding. It is the strong man or woman who, when he has done his best, accepts the condition in which he is placed and steadfastly continues the even or uneven tenor of his way without repining.

Bro. Roderick May is prompt to commend the issuance of the forthcoming History of the Church and to substantiate his commendation by a remittance for the first volume; he was the first to order. Others, including a Pennsylvania lady not of the church, have ordered the work.

A cablegram dated Canea, Crete, August 26, states that Cretans, reinforced by Greeks, have burned twenty-nine Turkish villages to avenge massacres inflicted by the Turks. The failure of the Greek government to prevent aid being rendered the Cretans is liable to cause strained relations between Greece and Turkey.

There is a rumor of possible war between Italy and Brazil, growing out of failure of the Brazilian congress to agree upon terms of settlement of Italian claims.

Bro. and Sr. A. H. Smith, Bro. and

Sr. Whitehead, Bro. and Sr. E. A. Smith, Brn. J. R. Lambert, A. S. Cochran, E. L. Kelley, F. A. Smith; also Srs. Blair, White, Gaylord, and others of the Lamoni people, are in attendance at the Bluff Park reunion. Bro. Heman C. Smith went to Maysville, Missouri, on Wednesday, the 26th, to assist in reunion work there.

Bro. Eli Hayer, who has been doing tent work in the Des Moines district, has returned home to Lamoni for a time because of sickness in his family.

Bro. E. A. Stedman, home from the Minnesota field, expects to return north shortly. He is somewhat improved in health.

There is nothing gained by boisterous manners in pulpit oratory. In the work of the average elder, the safest and best way to obtain and keep the attention of the people is to show by manner and speech that the man is thoroughly in earnest, and believes what he teaches.

Original Poetry.

MY BABY JULIAN.

Face so bright and sweet,
With eyes so blue;
Lips that softly meet,
Pearls shining through.

Little form so dear,
He's mamma's pet!
In her arms, no fear,
Pain he'll forget.

Baby playing sweet,
Thunder's loud tone!
He jumped to his feet,
"Where's mamma gone?"

So from room to room,
Quickly he went;
But he found her soon,
Then was content.

And with meek head bowed,
Against her knee,
For the thunder loud
No more cared he.

There so patiently
The darling stood;
And the mother thought,
O, lesson good!

May my trust increase,
And patience too,
That I ne'er may cease
God's will to do.

For my baby's faith,
Sweetly divine,
Will be starved or fed
By example mine.

ALL SINGERS.

All singers do not sing their songs in words;
The brook's low ripple is unwritten rhyme;
The melodies we hear in summer's prime
From leaf-dimmed covert are the songs of birds;
Unlanguaged music to his listening herds
The shepherd pipes, prone lying 'neath the lime:
The star march, grandest symphony of time,
In silent splendor walks the sky that girds.

Save those invisible letters of the ground,
The sinless Man who dwelt in Galilee,
Our perfect Poet, wrote nor verse nor line;
The story that he voiced is angel-crowned,
And to earth's ultimate children it will shine
And be their light through kind eternity.

A PICTURE.

BY ELEANOR.

I see thee sit with thoughtful eyes
Fixed on the far horizon's rim,
Where meet the blue of summer skies
With penciled line of forest dim.
Dear, earnest eyes that seem to know
All depths of mysterious things!
And ear intent to catch below
The music sweep of angel wings!

Long years ago I learned to con
The thought-waves lined upon thy face,—

As though some sculptor chiseled on
The lines by love and wisdom traced,
And graved the story of the past,
The prophecy of future years,
And truth and tenderness, nor last,
The battle scars of grief and tears.

No artist hand on canvas placed
The picture that my eyes doth see,
A mem'ry-graven image traced
Upon my heart indelibly.
There, Mother, I still see thee sit
Reading love's lesson in the skies,
And I, O, Love, am reading it
In the calm light of the dear eyes!

AFTER an absence of two years or more I write some of the thoughts that arise in my mind. When last I wrote the editor, in a note at the end of my letter, called on some of the elders (by name) to give their testimony as given them either in dream or vision relating to the subject I wrote on, The duties of parents teaching their children and having them prepared to receive baptism at the age of eight years. I thought then I would wait until I read their articles before writing again, but have concluded I would better not wait, for I may never write again if I should. I have also been shown in a dream or night vision that it is not right for just a few to supply the food upon which we all feast; that I was spending time upon that which was of no benefit; that I should employ in supplying some of the food myself. This with other things presented showed me that my duty was to write. How weak we are, that we must so oft be admonished or we fail to perform our part! May my heavenly Father help me that I be not slow to perform my duty in this again.

How little it seems, looking at immediate results, we can do. And yet we ought to realize and never lose sight of the fact that God requires nothing of us that we are not able to perform. But we allow ourselves to become engrossed with the cares of this life, take upon ourselves burdens under which we would groan loudly if they were not self-imposed: when if we would look upon our real duties calmly and follow some method in all of our work, how much better for us in this life, and vastly better in that to come, for we could use the time saved by doing only real duties in a methodical way in improving our minds, writing for the church publications, or doing good in whatever sphere we are called to labor in.

I believe we all have some special work that our heavenly Father requires of us, and for which we will be rewarded if faithfully performed. If we prove slothful and choose rather to close our eyes to the need, our conscience accusing us, then great will be our condemnation. And the Lord will call others to do the work for which we might have received the reward, for his work will go on whether we choose to be true to our part in the work or false. His work is not hindered, but we lose the great blessings and privileges he graciously extends to us, in permitting us to be coworkers with Jesus the Righteous in the great work of bringing souls back to God, when we neglect or refuse to perform our part. "Do not say, 'I can't do anything.'" Have you tried? Surely this is not so. Or do you think you were a mistake in creation? Keep trying until you find something you can do. Do not be content to be a drone. If we live worthy we will receive his Spirit to guide us and we need not fear that we will do too much. Let us close our eyes to the failings of our brothers and sisters and choose rather to look upon our own, and then seek diligently to overcome them. Let us ever be ready to improve each opportunity for doing good, both in our homes and among the people with whom we come in contact, realizing that the eyes of the unbeliever are ever on the alert to catch us in any wrongdoing. So much is expected of us by the people of the world. And why should they not expect much of us? Do we not claim to be the only church recognized of God? Then let us prove by our words and our acts that we are indeed children of the kingdom.

Yours in hope,

CLARA D.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. REBECCA JAMISON, of Runnells, Iowa, requests your faith and prayers in her behalf, that if it is God's will she may be healed.

Sr. Virginia Hay, of Bandera, Texas, desires your prayers in behalf of her brother, J. Minear, and her daughter, J. Currie, that they may be restored to health if it is God's will.

Sr. Kate Rausch, Fairbury, Nebraska, writes: "I have been a sufferer for about five months, and have repeatedly sought the Lord for release, but have not yet received a complete restoration to health. I now desire the faith and prayers of the Sisters' Prayer Union in my behalf, that if it is God's will I may be healed."

Sr. Cairns, who is sorely afflicted, requests the prayers of the Union in her behalf, that if it is the will of the Lord she may be healed and spared to raise her family.

Mrs. T. A. Hicks, of Spokane, Washington, desires the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union in behalf of her mother, Mrs. Nelson Brown, of Waterloo, Nebraska, that if it be God's will she may be restored to health.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

Love has his hidden treasure
For the patient and the pure;
And time gives his fullest measure
To the workers who endure;
And the word that no law has shaken
Has the future pledge supplied;
For we know that when we "awaken
We shall be satisfied."

Thursday, Sept. 3.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—2 Thessalonians 5: 12-23.

Thursday, Sept. 10.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Titus 2: 1-15.

Thursday, Sept. 17.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—James 2: 14-16.

Thursday, Sept. 24.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—D. C. 49: 5.

WEBB CITY, Missouri.

Dear Sisters:—We are trying to keep up our Prayer Union each Thursday afternoon, although it has been quite an effort, and at times it seems impossible to keep up an interest; but a few have tried and kept trying against every opposition, and we have been blessed in the effort, and the Spirit of the Lord was with us last Thursday to that degree that we all felt to rejoice and felt encouraged and more fully determined to go forward and try harder to live so as to be a light and strength to others. We have set next Thursday for a day of fasting and prayer for those who have requested prayer, also for the husbands and wives and children who are yet out of the church, also for the young in the church, that they may feel and realize that there is a work required of them and that the Lord will open up the way that those desiring to attend the coming reunion may be able to do so.

Dear sisters would it not be well for us to set a day of fasting and prayer, say about the first Thursday in September, so it could be understood by all the different Unions. Surely the prayers of the mothers, sisters, and wives would ascend up to our Father in heaven with a power that would cause the angels to rejoice and many would feel the blessing thereof. It seems it is a time now when our elders need our faith and prayers, and especially our branch officers, and those who are burdened with trials and cares of this life, and those who have opposition in their own homes. I have only written this as a suggestion, but hope that every heart will respond and will leave it for the Spirit of the Lord to direct, for thus I have felt to write.

COMMITTING VERSES.

How may the committing of verses be made profitable in the Sunday school? Much of our valuable time in the Sunday school is taken up by the recital or reading of verses. Since the organization of our school we have followed the beaten track, and at the close of the lesson each class has been given time to read or recite one or more verses, the number recited being accounted for and entered on the secretary's book.

But where has been the profit—how many verses have really been committed to memory? Has it not been common for the pupils, the older ones especially, to hurriedly look over a verse just previous to the recital, retaining it in the mind for the time being only, while the lesson subject has been hurried through and perhaps cut short before being completed? This we think has been found unprofitable. If our time is limited to one hour, let nothing interfere with the satisfactory completion of the lesson. Cut short the preliminaries—anything but the subject under consideration.

But variety is the spice of life; give us a little more time and we think the Sunday school could be made more interesting by learning verses. We would suggest this mode, however: Let a certain class be delegated to learn as many verses as they can find concerning a certain subject given out by the superintendent or teacher. Perhaps the teacher would better understand the needs and qualifications of the pupils. And, lest too much time be taken up and it become monotonous, let the classes take turns each Sunday and the verses be recited before the school. By this means pupils may be taught to look up scripture references and gain much knowledge, if the subject be wisely chosen.

There are many questions of vital importance to the church and the young; much evil that might be avoided if in the seedtime of life good seed has been sown, kind admonitions given. Take, for instance the first principles of the gospel. The subject of faith, alone, could occupy several Sundays, and so on, till each principle is impressed on the mind of the pupil. Might not much of the evil that is strewn in the pathway be safely met if we have searched the Scriptures and know what the Spirit of the Lord has said upon the subject? For example, the subject of spiritualism. Let the teacher point the class to a verse or chapter referring to it, none of which is better than the twenty-eighth chapter of 2 Samuel, and train the pupils to look up the references concerning it throughout the book, and what a mine of information they have found! Will they not be better fortified against this evil that sometime they will meet to know that God's ban is upon it?

By this means a desired line of thought may be controlled and sometime be a help to tide us over the swift-rolling current of temptation.

ADDRESS IN VERSE.

To the dear saints and friends who have met in convention

To uplift the work of the Sunday school here,

We extend hearty welcome. Your presence enlivens,

Gives zest to our efforts and hearty good cheer.

We would take a review of the work that's been done here

By this people who term themselves "Latter Day Saints;"

For our neighbors and friends will all well remember

When our elders first preached here there were bitter complaints.

And words such as these were often repeated:

"They are wolves in sheep's clothing, their mission bodes ill;

Impostors, deceivers, deluding the people;"

The war cloud was threatening their efforts to kill.

But for sake of the truth of the Master who sent them

These scoffs and untruths have been patiently borne;

The seed that was planted has been watered and cared for;

God has given the increase—there is no cause to mourn.

Gathered out of your midst are over one hundred

Good people comprising the Coldwater branch,

We question the creeds of men that's arising

But in doctrine of Christ you'll find we are staunch.

It's been thirty odd years since first the glad tidings

Was preached around here by the heralds God sent.

We've now a neat church and rejoice in God's favor;

We still would walk humble and of evil repent.

Death has been in our midst and from the ranks of our workers

A few have been chosen, none of these were to spare

Though we cherish their memory, we bow in submission.

The Father knew best, they were needed elsewhere.

Not alone do our dead, claim our loving remembrance,

But the lone, scattered ones do each claim a share;

They're away from our branch, but if they are faithful

Not away from God's Spirit, not away from his care.

Not the least of the work is the Sunday school mission;

It's an Aaron supporting a Moses's weak hands,

It's the will of the Father—hear the voice of the Savior

Appealing to Peter, Feed, O feed my lambs.

We know not their worth—these bright Hopes of Zion,

But sometime the burden on them must be rolled;

Then prayerfully lead them, ask God that his presence

May go on before thee, as did Moses of old.

O God, give thy grace to the Sunday school teacher, Especially those who have charge of the young!

The sheep hear the voice of the shepherd and follow,

But the lambs of the flock must be carried along.

When the judgment is set and the books are all opened

And our deeds written there the heavens do unfold,

May this branch of God's planting have down to its credit,

"They gathered some jewels, some gems of pure gold."

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 11.

Editors Herald:—The European mission conference that convened on Saturday, the 1st, and adjourned on Monday, the 3d, is a past event; yet I think it will linger in the memories of those participating therein.

There were two business sessions, two preaching services, and a sacrament and social meeting Sunday afternoon; Sabbath school convention, Sunday, from 9:30 to 10:30, and Monday morning from nine till 11:30, the exercises being profitable to the aged and the young. The Sunday school association, consisting of Manchester and Sheffield districts, is making some headway, such as forbidding exigencies and available facilities will permit.

From the inception to the close of the conference the evidence of a unanimity of feeling and oneness of purpose was as visible, or more so, than at any conference I have attended in this land. The social meeting on Sunday afternoon was most enjoyable, comforting, and confirming, by reason of the unmistakable evidence of the Holy Spirit's presence. But I think the Monday evening prayer and closing meeting, which lasted three and a quarter hours, was some in advance of it. It was without exaggeration a grand time. No three and a quarter hours of my life, that I remember, seemed to pass so rapidly.

The palpable evidence of the Spirit's presence created such superlative joy in one's soul as to afford a full compensation for what few unpleasant things one had met up to the then present time. One sister stated that the two-days' conference had been to her like spending two days with God; and I am sure all were so far from doubting her statements as to give a heartfelt amen thereto.

There were a hundred or more members present, and the time was well occupied. The presiding officer found it requisite to be vigilant, as frequently three or four arose almost simultaneously, so that it became rather difficult to decide to which one the right to occupy belonged. But none questioned the decision when given; no, for a dissenting voice was not heard from the inception to the close. To preclude the thought of carrying the service to an unseasonable hour I would state that the exercises began at an early hour and adjourned in time to enable many if not the majority to reach home by 10:30.

With a view to a proper utilization of time meals were provided Monday and Sunday at the place of worship, and such was the agility of the committee appointed that the rapidity of disarranging and rearranging seats, spreading and clearing table, and feeding more than one hundred and fifty persons each meal-time, was surprising. Time is precious in this country, and Manchester is a place of distances; and if all had gone home and taken some of the visiting saints with them, few would have been present at the several sessions of the conference; and the assurance of meals on the premises begot a resignation, which otherwise might not have been visible.

Six have recently been added in Birmingham. The members of the Manchester district, amid some unpleasant exigencies, are diligent in lengthening their cords and strengthening their stakes among the three quarter million of souls in the big town of Manchester and the hundreds of thousands in Salford, which is both burdensome and expensive; but the burdens are borne and the expenses met by the willing and obedient; for they know their labor is not in vain in the Lord. But to some, perhaps, the pocket nerve is the tenderest of all nerves, and labor most arduous, unless it consists in something that is desirable. But the good comes, and the evil confronts us. Who shall abide in the time of separation?

For the want of a better place Bro. Thomas

Austin with brethren of Sheffield and Clay Cross have been performing ministerial labor in the big town of Chesterfield, under the broad blue canopy of heaven, to fair congregations. Bro. Austin thinks something may be done there by due perseverance. The love for pleasure grows and the love for the vital question of religion correspondingly decreases in this country. But the gospel zeal should increase with all members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Let us see to it, for the time for God's revealed method of separation is coming—the "midnight cry" will be heard. Who will be ready? Who?

Bro. A. N. Bishop, of the Eastern district, and Bro. E. R. Dewsnup, of the Western district, South Wales, with the force at their command are doing, as I believe, the best they can. In a recent letter from Bro. Bishop I learn that Bro. John D. Jenkins baptized a young lady on the 2d of August, in Penygraig, and had done some effective outdoor preaching. I hope good effects may result therefrom.

Best regards to all saints on the other side of the Atlantic, with great gospel success.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—It has been a long time since I have written to the Herald. Many new trials and difficulties seem to cross our path and increase the burdens of a missionary life. We believe, however, that some of the clouds will arise and the work roll on. The great drawback is the very close times and we have no way of getting about. We need a horse and buggy to travel in, and this I think will be had now, as the saints and friends are interested in getting us one.

We expect to go in a few days for Kerrville and points in Bandera County, and will hold large meetings; if possible will fix up arbors. Texas people are more inclined to go to outdoor meetings than in schoolhouses. There is an abundance of work here had we conveyance to reach the different points. Our faith has been severely tried on this line. I remember that Bro. A. Kent once told of making a covenant with the Lord, that he would preach his gospel if he had to do so in rags. Thank God for such men.

Now that the fire of the latter-day trials are upon us, brethren, let us stand like men. We are no better than our blessed Lord and his apostles. Be economical and careful; do not travel so much by railroad; have some of the brethren hitch up their teams and take you. Hunt up the lost sheep of Israel between places. I will promise this much: if we will all go in the name of the Lord about our Father's business he will not see us suffer. Do you need anything, then live so you can rightfully come before the Lord and ask in righteousness. Be practical and help ourselves like Paul of old. He stopped and made tents. I presume times got hard. Times are hard now; some are too old to work, and some of us are too frail in health. I am one of the latter unfortunates, but yet I can do something and I believe not interfere with the preaching of the gospel.

Through the kindness of Mr. Zirkel, a marble and granite dealer of San Antonio, I am furnished with a nice outfit to carry with me, so I may take orders for monuments and tombstones, for which I am well paid. He is a good man and our slight business connection is to our credit. It is a nice business, honorable and needful. I would caution anyone against taking up with any trifling thing or allowing anything to take up too much time from the preaching. Be wise, brethren. If we can make an honest dollar if needed I believe the Lord will bless us in the effort, for the times are close.

So much has been written to the church about their duty pertaining to tithing; beloved brethren, do your best; and you, fellow laborers, let us do our best and all labor hard together for the great kingdom of God. May the Lord help us all.

Your brother,

H. P. CURTIS.

PIERSON, Iowa, August 21.

Editors Herald:—We continued at Sloan for four weeks with an increasing interest, and, as after-developments proved, should have remained there another week at least. Some of the leading families were very interested attendants. We could not have received kinder treatment than at the home of Bro. and Sr. Winegar. Five were baptized, and from there we went to Smithland where our attendance augmented from the first till the afternoon and evening of the last day it looked like a reunion.

We were fortunate here in getting our tent in the public park—one of the prettiest natural parks ever seen by the writer in all his travels.

While here our Sloan choir came over and camped for a week, and together with the singers at Smithland, formed a fine body of singers. At both places outsiders rendered valuable assistance in the song service.

At Sloan, Misses Bird and Bryan, the latter the organist of the Methodist church, were our organists; while at Smithland Sr. Maud Peasley and Miss Bryan rendered such service. At the latter place two were baptized; one lady who had given her name was prevented through sickness. This is the first time our faith has ever been presented in Pierson and thus far our audiences increase each night.

Saints and friends very much regretted our departure from Smithland, and the Sisters' (or Ladies', many of them not belonging to the church) Aid Society remembered that it costs the elders something to travel.

No two could get along together better than Bro. Crabb and I are doing, though he is getting rather old for the vicissitudes of tent work. We expect to continue till time to go to the reunion at Woodbine, where we have been chosen as two of the speakers.

Never have I seen, in all my experience, a better apparent interest than during the past summer, save at Whiting. Bro. C. and I have kept out of the branches, and yet have had such crowds at times that they could not all get into the tent.

Have stayed over night and enjoyed a good visit with Bro. and Sr. Davis, two of whom I baptized at Kingsley, in July, 1887. They are driving six and one half miles to attend services. These recurrent visits take the writer back to some of his first missionary experiences, and to some of the most spiritual events of his life. It was here that he saw President Smith in vision, and by that vision saw his approval of the work being done, as well as receiving one of the most marked physical blessings ever obtained. Contracting a severe cold which resulted in hoarseness and a chill, he took the matter to his God in the seclusion of the lonely corn field and there plainly stated the facts, leaving the matter wholly in his hands. The reception of the Holy Spirit in the opening prayer of that night's service, the removal of every particle of disease from his body, the tears of those both of and out of the church, resulting from that prayer, the liberty of thought and speech granted the speaker during the progress of the sermon will never be effaced while memory plays her role in recalling the events of the past.

The fact of never having previously related the facts for publication is the excuse for doing so now. And I am glad after all these years and the transposition of events to find many of those whom I was humanly instrumental in calling from worldly vices to the marvelous light of the gospel, still as firm as the everlasting hills; while others, incident to the vicissitude of this life, have permitted the gospel fires to smoulder and yet are having those fires rekindled. So mote it be.

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—Quite frequently we hear that some of the saints from other States visit Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, which is one of the famous summer resorts of the Northwest; and we even hear of them often coming to Williams Bay and visiting the great Yerke's observatory, little dreaming, we presume, that they are in the near neighborhood of a Latter Day Saints' church, and quite a large branch of the church.

The East Delavan branch of the church is only a short distance from Williams Bay railroad station, which is the terminal of that Division of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, the church house being only one mile north from the depot and a number of families of the saints living in the immediate neighborhood, only the road runs between the church and the residence of Elder W. A. McDowell, and any of the saints would be glad to welcome visiting saints from other localities

Bro. F. M. Cooper from the Michigan field has been visiting old-time friends here for a few days and treating them to a few of his characteristic sermons. Arrangements have been made for troubling the waters next Sunday, there being four candidates in waiting. We hope the number may be increased when the day rolls around. Your brother,

CHAS. H. BURR.

FACT, Kan., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—Closed tent meetings at Linn Sunday night with an audience of about three hundred; a rousing sermon by Bro. A. Kent. Baptized a lady in the afternoon and confirmed in the evening, and another gave name for baptism. Go with tent to Fact, Kansas, where reunion begins August 20 and continues ten days. At its close we return to Linn for one week, and thence to Fanning, Kansas, for district conference September 20, from which time the writer will cooperate with the laborers in the Northeastern Kansas district.

Through Herald and also by letter I learn of the departure soon of Bro. John T. Davis for his field in Utah. While we regret the loss of his valuable aid in Kansas, we are compelled to admit that his ability and long experience in the church will be especially desirable "in the valleys of the mountains." Success to the efforts made there. I trust the recent sending of Utah elders to the States and their "mixing up" with some of our ministers, will be productive of good not only in showing the superiority of the claims of the Reorganization, but also in giving each body a better understanding of the views and position of the other and so remove other barriers which in the past have existed and do still exist, rendering the two organizations so antagonistic to each other. Let "the restitution to which my people are looking forward" be hastened "in its time."

POQUONNOCK, Conn., Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—Some time ago I wrote you from Wareham, Massachusetts, where we were looking for a place to put the tent; but as we were unable to find one, we concluded to ship the tent farther down the cape, and in a day or two we were at work in West Harwich, where we continued preaching until July 16. The saints from Dennisport aided us by their presence and singing. The attendance was good throughout the services, although the weather was bad. On Sunday, the 5th, I had the pleasure of baptizing Sr. E. Nickerson, who was healed of blindness by administration when a young girl.

On the 17th we moved to Harwich Center and began services the same night preaching to people who had never heard the gospel as we present it, with possibly two or three exceptions. Friends were made for the truth and its representatives. The saints at Dennisport were very kind to us as were those who were not of our faith. May God reward them all.

Monday, August 3; we shipped the tent to Poquonnock, where the reunion was to be held. Bro. Smith preached Monday and Tuesday at Dennisport, while the writer went home for a day or two. August 8 found us at the camp of the saints where all was bustle and rush getting things in order for the services. Personally, I enjoyed my stay in camp, taking it as a whole. By the advice of the missionary in charge we have set up the district tent near the station at Poquonnock, and last night was to have been our first meeting; but owing to the brightness of the moon, or the forcefulness of the preaching at the camp last week, or some other unaccountable thing, the people did not come out. The tent was so surprised that the curtains nearly fell down. We sang and prayed and sang again and still the people would not come. Bro. Davison would not preach to the seats, although they looked interesting enough, so we closed the tent and went to bed. I do not know what to-night will bring forth, but will wait and see.

Yours as ever,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

ORCHARDVILLE, Ill., Aug. 16.

Editors Herald:—An article appeared in the Baptist News, which is edited by W. P. Throgmorton, D. D., at Duquoin, Illinois, under the caption, "Is this Mormonism?" which was republished in the Herald and replied to by Bro. I. N. White. In the same issue of June 13 the editor of the News says:—

"The man to expose Mormonism is Elder W. J. Moore, of Gallatia, Illinois. We hereby invite him to give us a few one or two-column articles on the subject."

Since that time a few articles have appeared. Then in the News of July 25 the editor says again:—

"The articles which are appearing from the pen of Bro. W. J. Moore on Mormonism are well worth any man's reading, and we have no doubt will be generally taken by our readers. In any section where Mormons are troubling Israel Bro. M. is the man to send for. He can do a neat job in showing them up, and he does it with dispatch and thoroughness."

As the writer is a subscriber to the News we sent a reply to the article first named above, which was never published. Now as we once heard the editor of the News in a debate with Bro. I. M. Smith we are of the opinion that the editor feels a little sore over the result of the proposition he affirmed; viz., "The Bible contains all the revelations of God to man until the second coming of Christ." Now he says that W. J. Moore is the man to send for when we are troubling Israel, as he can show us up. Perhaps the editor of the News is not acquainted with the way this man has been showing us up in the past. The writer has heard him in three public discussions with our people. The first one was with E. Curtis at the Unity Baptist church and the writer baptized four persons at that place soon after the debate, some of whom were from the Baptists. The next debate was at Tunnel Hill, Illinois, with Bro. T. C. Kelley, in the Baptist church at that place, since which time forty-five have been baptized there, some of whom were from the Baptists. The next debate was with Bro. I. N. White at Simms, Illinois. The majority of the people were in our favor at the close. Even the boys went through the streets cheering Bro. I. N., although we do not consider that kind of work argument; yet it was an evidence to us that the majority of the people were in our favor at the close of the debate.

Now the writer does not believe in being overanxious for public discussion, yet when our cause is assailed by the pulpit or the press, we believe it our indispensable duty to say a few words in defense of the cause we love so dearly; and as we have been assailed through the News by both the editor and W. J. Moore, we take this method of informing them that when they get ready to meet us in a fair investigation of the doctrine we preach, that we are willing to meet them with a representative man of our faith on the following propositions:—

1. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in harmony with the pattern given in the New Testament in organization, faith, and doctrine; Latter Day Saints will affirm; King James' Translation of the Bible is to be the standard of evidence.

2. The Missionary Baptist Church is in harmony with the pattern given in the New Testament in organization, faith, and doctrine; Latter Day Saints will deny; King James' Translation of the Bible to be the standard of evidence.

We believe in taking the instructions given by Paul: "Prove all things; and hold fast that which is good.

In behalf of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—I am in the midst of a four nights' discussion with Elder Ostrander, pastor of the Seventh-day Adventist faith, on the Sabbath question. We use alternate evenings. Two evenings have been occupied thus far. Elder Ostrander made his affirmative argument, or at least began it Tuesday evening. He is one of the smoothest talkers of that faith I have heard. I was on the negative last night and I never felt better in my life in talking on the Sabbath question. The very best of attention is had on both sides, the hall being packed to its utmost capacity each night. Bro. Ostrander talks to-night again. More anon.

R. E. GRANT.

BERWYN, Nebraska, Aug. 22.

Editors Herald:—The work is moving along fairly well with us in the northeastern part of this county and in the western part of Valley County. Bro. Rudd favored us with a visit in July and remained with us about twenty days, and by his proficiency as a teacher of divine things, coupled with good manners and godly fear, has won for him a place in the minds of the people here never to be vacated. God bless you, Bro. Rudd, and may the guiding hand of him that doeth all things well direct you this way that we may have a second benefit.

I wish to say to Bro. Rudd that I have passed over the ground since his departure, attending my regular appointment, and the interest has not subsided a particle and I think others will obey the gospel soon. Sure enough, one of those great lights (?) of the Christian (Campbellite) Church put in an appearance at Longwood. I went all the way over to hear him, but he "gave us a good letting alone;" he never said a word about "Mormonism" while I was there; nor of the world-wide challenge he threw out last winter and then backed out from so flatly.

My eyes soften with tears of gratitude to God for the great message of truth restored in this age, and for the ability he gives his servants to carry forward and defend the same. May the divine blessing abide the laborers in the field and may others be raised up and sent forth until truth shall be disseminated as far as human feet have trod; and may the honest in heart crowd into the "regions round about" until Zion's children shall truly sing, "Give us room that we may dwell." Yours in hope of eternal life,

C. W. PRETTYMAN.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 24.

Editors Herald:—On the 4th inst. moved our gospel tent from Germantown, Pennsylvania to this place. We secured a favorable location and everything seemed to be moving off nicely, when to our dismay the next day a circus located by the side of our tent. They had rented the same lot and paid for it; while consent had been given us to use it. I guess it was brought about by each party contracting with different members of the firm. But we concluded to make the best of it; and as we could hardly hope to combat the noise of their band and drums by our vocal powers, we concluded to wait till they were through, and thus were hindered for three nights. But having once started, we have had fair interest from the commencement till now. Interest seems to be better here than over in Philadelphia.

Some here seem to be almost ready for baptism. One man and his wife are ready to be baptized, but owing to an urgent demand of his employers was hurried off to Helena, Montana, to look after the interests of their business there; and thus he was hindered for the time being. His wife will likely be baptized before we leave here. They were both formerly members of the Utah Church, but becoming dissatisfied with their teachings and practices, left them. His wife is our organist, and her playing and singing is quite a help to our meetings. He will likely be baptized at the first opportunity he finds in Montana. His name is J. M. Stewart, and his present address is, Bailey Block, Helena, Montana. He is a traveling agent for the New York Life Insurance Company. He will be pleased to know of the whereabouts of any of the elders near there, as he will make an effort to get to them to be baptized.

We will continue the tent work in Camden for some time yet. I will leave for a visit to my home on September 1, leaving Bro. W. A. Smith in charge of the tent, to continue the work, assisted by the brethren of Philadelphia.

We left some quite interested at Germantown, and I will go there this week and hold a few meetings in a private house. The work moves slowly in these regions, but we hope and believe that the summer's campaign with the tent will be productive of good. When we close meetings in Camden, the tent will likely go to Maryland.

Yours in the conflict,

H. E. MOLER.

MILO, Iowa, Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—I went to Oskaloosa about the 1st of August; spoke five times there. I am glad to say that though few in number, they are alive in this great latter-day work. Never did I meet a people more willing to make a great sacrifice for the salvation of those around them. While there, I had the pleasure of leading three precious souls into the water of baptism.

While at Oskaloosa I received a letter requesting me to come to Runnels and baptize Sr. P. W. Brown. On arriving at that place I found all well, and preached for them on Thursday evening. I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. W. C. Nirk and Columbus Scott there. Bro. Scott remained over Sunday and was then to start for the Bluff Park Reunion. On the 15th Bro. Nirk accompanied me to Hickory Grove, ten miles southwest of Milo, where Bro. Nirk preached three soul-reviving sermons, and on Tuesday morning I baptized Bro. and Sr. Westerly, of that place.

Then we came to Milo where we found the old district tent awaiting us, and we have set it up and will commence meetings to-night. We have a central location in the town, between the Methodist and Presbyterian churches. Bro. Nirk has kindly consented to remain with me for a time. Pray for us.

To God, the Father, be all the praise and glory, now and forevermore.

In gospel bonds,

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 10.

Editors Herald:—I feel thankful to "our Father" who has so wonderfully blessed me with light of late and given me great liberty in presenting the word. And I am persuaded that the following night vision deserves more than a passing notice:—

I was in Lamoni. I saw a large building and was told it was the workshop of the Latter Day Saints. I felt deeply interested in so grand a building and it the property of the people I held dearest to me on earth. I went to the door and knocked for admission with a feeling of timidity. When the door opened my timid feeling all left me when I saw the smiling face of Bro. Joseph Smith. He invited me in and I noticed at once that he was the head of the place. I saw numerous workmen at work on parts of machinery. I followed the brother who admitted me all through, and noticed all the workmen worked on parts of some kind of a machine. I remarked to my guide that I saw no finished work. He said: "When the right time comes it will all go together like clockwork." No one was idle. Just before I passed out, near the exit I saw a completed machine and I said to my guide: "How does that work?" He said to a workman near. "Show the brother." The workman put his foot on a treadle and picked up something which looked like a spear to sharpen it. As his foot pressed the treadle I noticed a large rubber ball near his foot—a part of the machine—and as he pressed the treadle it sang in tune,

"When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,

I'll bid farewell to every fear
And wipe my weeping eyes."

I said, in astonishment, "Well! harmony in that;" and the answer was, "Yes, all will be harmonious in the end." I understood that Bro. Joseph was the director of all the work. It was quite significant to me at a time when there is being so much said about who has authority to lead the people to victory and to harmony with God. I am certain, within my own soul, that those who follow the true servants of God will come to see eye to eye, to harmony and peace; and it is made doubly certain to me that the Reorganized Church is the means through which harmony will come. In bonds, THOUGHTS ON THE GATHERING.

A COMMON SENSE VIEW.

Two kinds of people will doubtless be the first to gather to the regions round about. One class are the most spiritual ones in the church. They are those whose hearts are pained to behold the wickedness around them and hence flee toward Zion to find more congenial surroundings. The other class are those who cannot agree with their neighbors, saints or others, but quarrel over trifles, and expect perfection in everyone else but themselves. This class, too, flee toward Zion as a last resort to find peace. What must surely be the result, when both these classes meet as brothers and sisters in Zion and her borders? Who can tell the extent of contention after such a meeting? If the gathering were of human origin, we might look for more disastrous results than we do. But for his name's sake and the fair name of the church it is to be hoped that the Master will overrule all obstacles, and give his servants wisdom to execute the law strictly yet kindly and for the best good of all. Not only for the good of those in the church, but for the good of those who would come into it were things as they should be. Be as hopeful as we may, we cannot be blinded to the fact that when two opposite and extreme factions meet, such as we have just mentioned, there will for a time be contention and strife. In the very nature of things it always must be so. Especially when the wrong is arrayed against the right or the right against the wrong. In the above case it may be both—a double battle.

When explosive gases come in contact with living fire it is sure to produce an explosion, destructive to both elements and the materials near them. If the fire could be confined until the gas be either absorbed or forced away, or the gas confined till the fire had passed, an explosion might be prevented. Better yet if both the fire and gas could be put under control and utilized in the proper way. It is not always the fault of the gas that an explosion is produced, nor always the fault of the fire. If either were confined it would be sufficient. If both were it would be better in case one of them broke its bounds.

The second class referred to above we liken unto the gases because of the superabundance of gas (figuratively speaking) which they possess. And to make the matter plain we will call these gases, slander, evil surmising, fault-finding, backbiting, worldly pleasure, and impatience. But the fire represents the first class who are too fiery. Having more spirituality than wisdom they are ready to cause an explosion every time they come in contact with the opposite party. There never could be strife or contention with only one party concerned. This is a self-evident truth that needs not to be proved. It is not hard to see that the overzealous cause quite as much trouble as any worker of iniquity. A religious zealot who imagines God behind his every act is almost uncontrollable.

Applying this kind of reasoning to the principle of the gathering we can see the wisdom to gather first to the "regions round about;" that the necessary experience might be had both by the priesthood and saints in general as a very essential kind of discipline leading to the final gathering; that those who are too fiery and those who spend too much time and talent watching and talking about their neighbors may each be more fully converted and instructed in the ways of righteousness.

When the true saint moves into the "regions round about" (for they gather, too, but have the true motive in view) and finds such classes as described above, what must be his feelings at first? Not pleasant I assure you. But being of the right kind of material he will only be developed perhaps in a needful way, though he may often blush to see iniquity abounding and the love of many waxing cold.

To see the tares choking out the wheat is perhaps to a true saint as undesirable a sight as could be presented. Not only is it unpleasant for the sake of the wheat, but the world at large and the fair name of the church as well.

Some may say, "Let the wheat and tares grow together until the harvest." Yes, that is a true principle founded upon logic for the reason stated, "Lest while ye gather up the tares ye root up also the wheat." It is right to be forbearing, forgiving, and longsuffering, and let them grow together until the harvest. But what shall we say, when the wheat ceases to grow. Is it not better to destroy the tares lest they choke to death other wheat also? But if we are too lenient in this matter we will transgress two other rules:—

Let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

Also,

They shall be cast out.—D. C.

But the tares may not refer to the wicked ones in the church at all, but to the children of the evil one—those who have been planted (baptized) by him or his followers. If so, then to defer action too long on the strength of this passage is dangerous and useless.

I could expect that in the larger branches there would be more evil than in the smaller ones. Perhaps no more according to the size of the branch. But ought there not to be more good also at the same ratio of membership? When therefore one moves into the "regions round about" he may expect to find anything he looks for, till after the sifting time and then he may not be there to look, for he who watches the lives of others may himself fall through the sieve. Self is the best man to watch. But some one may say, "In that case the evil ones would grow worse and worse if there was no one to watch them." I said nothing about no one to watch them. Here is where proper discrimination is necessary—absolutely necessary. Who has this right?

The membership, the priesthood, or the branch officers? A proper solution of this problem will serve to prevent much trouble. Every saint should be instructed in this matter, and should also instruct himself. This is one object in writing this article, to get the matter started so that a better understanding may be had and much trouble avoided. It must be apparent to the careful observer that this matter of watching rests alone with the branch officers and mostly with the teacher; with the possible exception of those who by law are made the regulating authorities of the church in all the world.

Sometimes newly baptized members and especially those who have been denied church privileges,—scattered members,—when they move into the “regions round about” have more zeal than wisdom, and may try to rectify things that it is not their right to meddle with. In such a case it must always work more harm than good, for it is illegal and void of the help of the divine Master.

Some may think they are prompted by the Spirit to prophesy or otherwise try to settle difficulties when not a branch officer; but the manifestations of such a spirit is not of God, and those who are deceived thereby should repent, for God has given a law and of course will not go contrary to that. The law is, to prefer charges and settle the matter according to evidence and not according to spirit manifestations, that is, of course, after the preliminary steps have been taken. I heard of two elders one time who while on their way to sit as a court to try two brethren, received a prophecy through one of themselves that one of the brethren to be tried was in the fault and the other was entirely innocent. So when the trial came on the brother whom they supposed to be in the fault was scarcely permitted to speak for himself and was judged guilty without much regard being paid to the testimony presented. But subsequent events showed the brother to be innocent. The wrong spirit had deceived the brethren, through their failure to observe the law to decide upon the evidence. Besides the brother was placed in a bad light before the world and the good he might have done hindered. This was evidently the design of the evil one. So it is necessary to try the spirit by the law and make it subject to the prophets. If one thinks he is prompted by the spirit to do the work of the branch officers it would be well to try that spirit by the law before giving it action.

I suspect that in branches where there reside several of the priesthood there may be those who think they have more right to rectify wrongs, simply because they hold the priesthood and may be that order where they are commanded to see that the law is kept. This is not true. To see that the law is kept is to keep it oneself and not interfere in something that by right belongs to another. The branch officers should make no distinction between priesthood and laity and any interference with the duties of branch officers should be promptly dealt with for it is certain to work great harm. There being no God in illegal work there is apt to be a good deal of Satan in it, especially when the works of Satan are being dealt with.

Another thing that might be a source of discouragement to the new member and a bar to keep many out of the church is negligent officers. I can readily see that a negligent officer would be like an open gate to a field. Through it the sheep run in and out and so do the wolves. Why not shut the gate and make the field a place of safety for the sheep inside and a desirable place for those outside? Then catch the wolf and put him out. If the gate be too short or insufficient, put in a new one. If officers will do their duty the church and all the powers of heaven will be behind them. By administering the law strictly but kindly the erring may be saved, the fair name of the church preserved as a place of safety for those who are longing for salvation. If the wolves are as bad on the inside as on the outside, many timid ones will be hindered and the shepherds will be to blame.

For the benefit of those who contemplate removing to Zion or her borders, the following points might be considered with profit: Get ready first. Begin with the heart and end with the pocketbook. Observe the command, “Let all things be prepared beforehand.” Do not go until you learn to confine the fires of your temper; for you will find many things to try you, perhaps more there than where you are; for the enemy is strongest at the seat of war. The bride has not made herself ready yet or else the Bridegroom would come. Hence you will not find perfection till then. You are not perfect; do not expect it in others. If you see faults in others deal gently with them as God has dealt with you. Be as forgiving to the brother as to the outsider. Do not let his actions hurt you worse either. And when you get to Zion be fully prepared for anything and surprised at nothing.

You who are too full of gas—you who talk too much—better learn to govern your tongue before you go, or there may be an explosion and you may be lost. The Devil will find more for the talkative in the heat of battle than in the outskirts. If one learns to look at and talk of no one's faults but his own he will be as busy as he needs to be. When the real, true saint feels the kindling influences of the Spirit prompting him to move toward Zion it is safe to go. But be wise; prepare for yourself. Do not depend on others. If you cannot support yourself where you are, by all means do not go to Zion till removed by order of the Bishop. If you act unwisely in this matter, perhaps a hundred as unwise as you have gone ahead and the saints are overburdened at the hub. Once there quietly settle down and appoint yourself a committee of one to keep self in place, and then when the bride has made herself ready and the officers through your prayers shall have arrayed the church in her wedding gown you will be among the wise.

By guarding against pride of dress or heart, slander, evil surmising, (O the power of this silent but cunning little devil,) backbiting, and all evil, you will have oil in your vessels and be permitted to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb,—at least, this is as I see it.

A TESTIMONY.

EDITORS HERALD:—If you can find place for the following in our much-loved paper the Herald, I have no doubt but that many of the elders, including Bro. John T. Davis, of Kansas, with whom I labored over twenty years ago, will be pleased to see a communication from the writer.

GOD'S POWER AND GREATNESS.

A manifestation of the Spirit of God given in a "Vision of the night," on the night of September 3, 1895. Circumstances: I had been for several years in a troubled and doubting frame of mind as to whether the power of a Supreme Being did or did not rule the universe—the result of being away from the Church of God, when on the night of September 3, there was a total eclipse of the moon. I watched it with profound awe and reverence and then retired to my bed and became slumberous, when the Spirit of God rested upon me (as of old) and the following is a true and faithful account of what was shown to me:—

I became very happy and while in this agreeable state the nations of the earth were shown to me, and the power exercised by the rulers over the people, from the lowest officer in the government to the highest; how one ruled over the others, both in civil and military life, until the ruling power culminated in the president or king. I was then shown the different churches and sects of religion and how the self-same ruling power existed there also—the clergy over the people, the bishops over the clergy, culminating as before either in the ruling power of bishop, archbishop, patriarch, president, or pope. I was then shown my own standing and the littleness of great men as compared with God, and then I was shown the greatness and majesty of the eternal God as compared with nations and churches on the earth; and I declare with all soberness that the difference between the peasant and king is as nothing compared with the difference between an earthly king and the heavenly "King of kings and Lord of lords." The greatness of the eternal God, and his might, majesty, and power is more than my tongue can utter or my pen write, and I now more fully understand St. Paul when he was caught up in the heavens that he then saw many things impossible to utter, also the testimony of Brn. Joseph Smith, Jr., and Sydney Rigdon, when in the Spirit on February 6, 1832.

And now in this latter day I give my testimony in all humbleness, hoping that it may benefit some poor doubtful and erring brother or sister as it has benefited me.

JOHN HALL POPE.

BROOKLYN, New York, November 3, 1895.

BLUFF PARK AND NAUVOO.

WE were pleased when the conductor shouted, "All aboard," because we were bound for Bluff Park and Nauvoo. We were more pleased when at length the iron horse had gallantly borne us to our journey's end.

We found the spot selected for the Bluff Park reunion a very pleasant one indeed. Thickly shaded by forest trees, the cottages, tents, and tabernacle stand upon a bluff down which one looks one hundred and twenty feet to the broad Father of Waters, and out upon a scene of surpassing beauty. The stream, which is one and one half miles in width here, is divided in places by long, narrow, wooded islands, and moves in a broad circle, forming as you see it from the bluff, a huge half moon. To the left are wooded bluffs reaching to the farthest horizon, and to the right just opposite us stands the old city of Nauvoo. That it is a loved spot to the saints is witnessed by the groups that morning, noon, and night stand upon the brow of the bluff where the best view is obtained. Among them are men who fifty years ago were driven from the town, and now for the first time in all those weary years they are drinking in with eager eyes the beauty of the dear, familiar scene. Strangers are upon their land, aliens are sheltered by their rooftrees, yet, in a better sense, it is by right of memory still theirs.

Strange thoughts come to one standing thus. We picture the scene as it would be had man lived for it, and God willed it so to be. Upon the summit of the hill we see the grand, white temple, and all the fruitful slope below thickly sprinkled with cottages and stately homes. We discern the saints in quiet garb going about their work or worship with the Spirit of peace and the inspiration of God in their midst, and then involuntarily there rises the picture of what was. We see our fathers, by the cruelty of men who would not or could not understand them, murdered or driven from their homes into the unbroken wilderness, behind them the intolerance of man, before them hunger, and cold, and sickness, and worse,—what seemed another overthrow of the work of God. No wonder that the power of darkness obtained such hold upon some of them.

Wednesday was probably the most memorable day of the gathering. Four or five hack loads of the saints, numbering some fifty or sixty, with Alex. H. Smith as guide, visited the historic spots of Nauvoo. While the vine-covered slopes and grape-scented air are very pleasant, reminding one of descriptions of Italy, and the scene all it has been claimed to be, yet such a visit brings much of sadness. The old battle ground back of the city is vine-clad and quiet, but the scars of the strife yet linger in the homes and hearts of many men and women, and time is powerless to remove them, yet more to be pitied are the persecutors than the persecuted, and among the visitors to that spot made sacred through the principles it cradled we heard no bitter thought expressed, only a softened sadness.

The little group of members of the Reorganization gathered there just fifty years after the expulsion of the saints was a witness to the eternal fact that truth will prevail—not men nor demons may crush it down and hold it down. A pause was made at the graves of the two martyrs and their relatives, and a very affecting service of song and prayer was held. It is a noble spot that holds such a sacred charge, a southward sloping hillside, upon them the thick shade of the green locust trees, and ever at their feet the musical waters of the mighty Mississippi, calling to mind the song composed by my father:—

Then dig him a grave on the warm hillside

'Neath the shade of the green locust tree.

It was a fitting spot in which were reared the three sons of the prophet who were destined to stand for a time shoulder to shoulder as leaders in the cause for which he shed his blood. Surrounded by the romance and tragedy of the past and the mystery and hope of the future, their call, when it came, found them ready.

A fairly large crowd is in attendance. No census has been taken as yet, but the tabernacle is quite well filled and all express themselves as having a "fine time" in a spiritual and in every other best sense of the term. It will be a long time ere we lose from our mind's eye the pictures of woodland, and water, and city we have beheld, or from our ears the mournful musical whistles of the steamboats, or out of our hearts the impressions from the inspiration of spiritual truth which we have discerned, not only in the congregation of the Lord's people, but also in the hallowed spots we have visited.

The saints are so well acquainted with the character of discourses which such occasions help to inspire from our elders that we make no special mention of the sermons we have enjoyed.

While the labors of others to make the reunion a success are not to be forgotten, those of Bro. McKiernan are especially worthy of note.

We are inclined to think that a better spot for a reunion could not well be selected, and we were about to say that a better reunion could not be held upon such a worthy spot, but the thought comes to us that these gatherings are only a foretaste of the greater and more glorious reunions to be held by and by.

Conference was well attended, and peace and good will reigned throughout all the sessions.

BIRMINGHAM.

Held at Summerfield branch, Birmingham, England, May 23-25; C. H. Caton president; James Caffall chosen vice president; Charles Walton secretary pro tem. The president addressed the assembly in his official capacity and referred to the loss the church had sustained in the death of President W. W. Blair, and moved a vote of condolence to President Joseph Smith and the church in general, which was carried unanimously. Branch reports: Birmingham 116; no change. Summerfield 28; 2 baptized, 1 died. Stafford 24; no change. Financial account was presented as follows: On hand and received £1. 4d.; total expenditures £4. 18s. 4d.; due treasurer 18s., less 4s. 8d., secretary's expenses to conference; net amount due 13s. 4d. E. A. Webb and F. Edwards appointed auditors of the account. Their report was accepted and ordered spread upon the minutes. Ministry reporting: Elders T. Taylor, G. S. Greenwood, E. A. Webb, J. R. Greenwood, J. Caffall, J. E. Meredith, C. Walton, H. Tabbiner, C. Tyler, J. Matthews, J. T. Davis, and C. H. Caton; Priests D. Roberts and J. Healey; Deacon F. Edwards. Licenses sent in were ordered to be indorsed according to the rule of the district. Resolved that this conference declare the Hanley, Staffordshire, and Burton-on-Trent branches disorganized. G. S. Greenwood, through ill health, asked for release from the office of district secretary. The release was granted and a vote of thanks passed and ordered to be forwarded to Bro. Greenwood for his services during nineteen years. General church authorities and president of mission were sustained. C. H. Caton sustained district president. Charles Walton appointed secretary. A vote of thanks to the brethren and sisters of the Summerfield branch for their care of the members of the conference was carried unanimously. Whereas many of the brethren in this district are very lax and fail to give in reports of their labors, also to forward their licences as per rule of said district, please note that all licenses not to hand at the proper time, or not accompanied by report, if holder of said license is not present to report in person, will not receive an indorsement. Adjourned to reassemble Whitsun Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, 1897, place of meeting to be fixed by the president. Preaching by Brn. James Caffall and J. R. Greenwood.

Sunday School Associations.

MANCHESTER AND SHEFFIELD.

By permission of Apostle James Caffall the above-named association held its annual convention in connection with the European mission conference August 2 and 3. The Sabbath exercises were opened at nine a. m. by singing and prayer. Solo by Master S. Mather, entitled, "Do no sinful action." Elder J. Dewsnup, Sr., read a paper called "The object of Sunday schools." A model lesson on "St. Paul's second missionary journey," by Elder S. F. Mather, illustrated with map and blackboard was next. Monday, August 3, the convention met for business. Reports from the district superintendent and secretary were read, as also those of the schools, all of which showed that the future is hopeful. Good, solid work is being done. Many of our scholars are children of nonmembers. Some of these have been baptized, others will be. We have nine schools with about 460 names on the books, 42 officers and 41 teachers. Business ended a paper was presented by Joseph Arber on "Our school methods." A model lesson called "Jerusalem," illustrated by a map specially prepared for teaching purposes, also sketch maps and sections together with charcoal and chalk sketches, was given by Wm. R. Armstrong. It dealt with its history, ancient and modern, prophecies in connection therewith, the connection of the Lord's life with the city, its destruction, restoration, types, etc., also the topography of city and environs.

An interesting and enjoyable session was brought to a close with words of commendation from Elders H. Greenwood, J. Dewsnup, and our beloved mission president, Elder James Caffall, who has a warm place in the hearts of all our Sabbath school workers. His watchword to us is first and last, "coöperation." The following were elected officers of the district for the ensuing year; viz., S. F. Mather superintendent, Thomas Taylor associate, W. R. Armstrong secretary, C. H. Barton treasurer.

WOODBINE REUNION SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

Opening session Saturday, the 19th, at four p. m. A regular Sunday school session will be held at eight a. m., the 21st, 22d, 23d, and 24th, at which time will be taught lessons 4, 5, 10, and 12 in the senior, intermediate, and primary Quarterlies. Officers and teachers will be selected to make these sessions the most interesting and instructive possible, as well as to represent the plans to be carried out to make the Sunday schools the most efficient. We request those coming to bring their Quarterlies and Bibles, and prayerful hearts. Normal work will be held at 4:30 p. m. on the 21st, 22d, 23, and 24th, at which time the following subjects will be discussed: How to conduct local teachers' meetings; The appointment and duties of visiting committees; and The use of the Quarterlies in class work; the last meeting being the examination of such questions as may be presented previously for answers and explanations. To prepare for this work we have enlisted the assistance of such helpers as Brn. E. A. Blakeslee, W. N. Robinson, R. Wight, S. C. Diggle, Sr. Anna Salyards, and others. Send or hand all questions to either Bro. R. Wight, of Earling, Iowa, or A. M. Fyrando, Magnolia, Iowa, previous to the organization.

Friday at two and 7:30 p. m. general sessions will be held in main tent at which will be treated the following subjects: How to organize district associations, W. N. Robinson; Our association, its history and present condition, T. A. Hougas. The above subjects at the two p. m. session, while the following will be for the 7:30 p. m. session: The relationship of the Sunday school to the home, J. W. Wight; The Sunday school as a factor of the government, T. W. Williams. Appropriate vocal and instrumental music will be rendered. The little Sioux district tent will be prepared for our regular work. Let the schools, as far as they can spare them, send Winnowed Songs by some one who will see to their return. All who have copies bring them. The committee has arranged this work with an eye single to the benefit possible to be obtained at such gathering, and our prayers are that much good may result.

BLUFF PARK GENERAL CHURCH REUNION.

At midnight, Sunday, the busy whirl, in whose vortex we have moved, preventing previous communication, has passed away. The last sermon preached, the last hymn sung, and the last good-bye said, and as the cricket chirps in his safe retreat a sense of sadness creeps over the soul and we sigh for parting friends. O, speed the day when we shall meet in that grand reunion, conscious of no future separation! Associations are formed which may God grant shall be perpetuated. May each and all be so guided that we shall not forfeit the behest of heaven to meet with Christ and reign with his people. Never were there happier, more loving, whole-souled people than I have been privileged to meet at Bluff Park. Nothing has occurred to mar our peace. Universal good health, pleasant weather, and an ideal camp ground have given us a glimpse of the millennium.

It would be unwise for me to essay to give even a recapitulation or summary of the meetings, speakers, etc. The following have been active participants: J. R. Lambert, A. H. Smith, T. W. Williams, C. Scott, F. A. Smith, R. Etzenhouser, M. H. Bond, J. R.

Evans, E. L. Kelley, O. B. Thomas, J. S. Roth, Joseph Snively, M. T. Short, T. J. Sheldon. A number of other brethren gave valuable assistance in the services. Large crowds attended both Sundays; not many except the campers and people in the immediate vicinity attended during the week. Still the reunion was a complete success, and so far as actual good accomplished, may exceed others of greater magnitude.

Wednesday was taken as a day of outing, the majority of the saints desiring to go to Nauvoo. Early in the morning in carriages, buggies, wagons, and on foot they boarded the ferryboat, and soon we were standing on historic ground. The objects of interest pointed out were, the old Seventy's hall, the bottom story only remaining, the site of the Times and Seasons publishing plant, the home of Hyrum Smith and his office across the street, and Joseph's store, the foundation of which still remains, and a brick house builded by William Marks. Next we come to the old Smith homestead and slake our thirst at the "old well." Just back of this is the Smith graveyard where rests the remains of several of the Smith family. Here lie the ashes of Joseph and Hyrum who so unselfishly sacrificed their lives in an endeavor to stem persecution's relentless tide. When all the company had gathered in the grove—"God's first temple"—at the request of Bro. A. H. Smith, Bro. F. G. Pitt offered an invocation full of pathos; following which Bro. Columbus Scott gave a short address which was pertinent, timely, and suggestive. Then followed the singing of several hymns and Bro. M. H. Bond pronounced the benediction. Such light and blessing did we possess that there was scarce an eye but was moist with tears. And as Bishop Rogers expressed himself, "I looked around to see if the angels were not present."

We then visited the Nauvoo House, a part of which remains and is owned by the widow Bidamon. On the adjoining corner is where Joseph addressed the saints just previous to his departure for Carthage, and across the street is the old Mansion House. The temple lot is about a mile away up on the hill where the main part of the town now stands. The other buildings mentioned above being near the river.

After a day spent in sight seeing, with glad hearts and buoyant spirits we returned to camp.

The Sunday school work has been a success here. Prominent questions have been discussed and a better understanding obtains on many points. One of the best prayer meetings I ever attended was held Saturday morning under the auspices of the Sunday school. A temperance program rendered Wednesday evening gave general satisfaction. The preaching, so much as I was privileged to listen to, was of a high order and evidenced research and deep thought.

The reunion adjourned with the understanding that another reunion be held next year and it be known as the Nauvoo Reunion. Brn. A. H. Smith, D. Tripp, R. S. Salyards, Jas. McKiernan, F. G. Pitt, and F. M. Weld were chosen as general committee on location, arrangements, etc.

There have been fourteen baptisms, and others very near. In all the reunion has been all we could hope for, and the saints depart for their homes with redoubled diligence and renewed energy. Much disappointment has been felt over the nonappearance of Bro. Joseph.

MIDWAY PARK REUNION.

The Southern Missouri reunion is now in progress at this place, and thus far surpasses any of the reunions held in this mission. On Sunday last the large and spacious tabernacle was filled to overflowing. The weather thus far, with other advantages, is all that could be desired. Hundreds are in attendance. About thirty of the ministry are present. The preaching and prayer services are above the average, each one present seeming to be more than usually endowed with the Spirit of the Master. Peace and good will prevail in the camp. About twenty-five small tents are now on the grounds besides a large district tent, or ministers' tent, occupied by the ministry, a hotel, and numbers camping in wagons. Many coming and going to and from the cities. The camp is located in a beautiful park, a beautiful stream of clear water flowing at the foot of the hill by the encampment. The woods at night are lighted with electric lights. We are anticipating a grand, glorious, elevating reunion in every way. One was baptized last Sabbath. Hundreds witnessed the solemn and impressive ceremony. I. N. White is chairman in charge, William Mannerling chief of police, Sister Tonnyhill chorister, Sr. Cordie White organist, F. L. Sawley secretary.

Will write again at close of reunion.

F. L. SAWLEY, Sec.

MAYSVILLE REUNION.

Friday, August 21.—A number of saints came in to-day, getting ready for a ten days' meeting in a beautiful grove one mile east of the pleasant city of Maysville, Missouri. A short business session was held. Bro. T. W. Chatburn was elected president, Wm. Lewis vice president, C. P. Faul secretary, Frank Mauzey chief of police, Henry Soule janitor, C. P. Faul on finance.

On Saturday morning at five o'clock a terrible storm passed over the camp. One mile west of Maysville in a grove the large tent, 100x140 feet, of the Maysville Chautauqua, which is now in session, was blown down and nearly ruined. Corn fields were leveled by the storm in the surrounding country. No harm came to our camp, which we are very thankful for. Morning prayer meeting was held. Eleven a. m., preaching by Bro. Wm. Lewis. Three p. m., prayer meeting. Eight p. m., preaching by Bro. M. M. Turpen. We now have twenty-two tents on the ground, and four covered wagons, representing as many more families.

Sunday.—The day was a beautiful one. Saints feeling splendid. Morning prayer meeting was the same as all previous ones have been, spiritual. At eleven a. m., Bro. E. Keeler occupied the hour. Three p. m., C. E. Guinand was the speaker. Eight p. m., Bro. T. W. Chatburn occupied the stand.

August 24.—Usual prayer meeting in the morning. M. M. Turpen, T. T. Hinderks, and J. M. Terry were the speakers of the day.

August 25.—The prayer meeting was marked with the manifestation of the Spirit in prophecy. A number of prominent men were present, among them the Rev. Doctor Norton, a noted Baptist, of New York City, and Rev. Mr. Hopkin, a noted singer. These men were here attending the Chautauqua. Saints are rejoicing greatly because the Lord is pouring out his Spirit in power, in both preaching and prayer services. So far each evening saints gather around a large camp fire and sing songs of praise, after which all bow while one of the brethren lead in prayer. Eleven a. m., the gentlemen who were present in the morning prayer meeting were present to hear Bro. A. W. Head, who delivered an able address. At 2:30 p. m., Bro. C. E. Guinand was the speaker.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

A two days' meeting will be held at Eustis, Frontier County, Nebraska, September 12 and 13, beginning Saturday at 10:30 a. m. It is expected that at least two of the missionary force will be present. D. M. RUDD, Submissionary in Charge.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Mobile District: Greeting.—It is the expressed wish of all the Sunday schools which I have thus far visited and labored with to effect a district organization at our conference at Bay Minette, Alabama, September 19 and 20. Will the district president please arrange to give us a session for this purpose, and will each school report to us upon the blanks provided therefor, and if possible send one or more delegates to represent it in the business that may be done. Let us all take part, and success will attend our efforts.

Your brother in Christ,
C. I. CARPENTER.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference will convene September 19 and 20 in the gospel tent, at Wilder, town of Porter, Rock County, Wisconsin, five miles east of Evansville, which station being on the Northwestern railroad, the saints will be met by teams on Friday, the 18th, at twelve m. from the south and two p. m. from the north. We hope to see the district well represented by all that can make the sacrifice to come, that a profitable time may be experienced by all. Ministry who cannot come, please send in a full report of labor done since last conference, that all may be done in order and for the furtherance of this great latter-day work.

HENRY SOUTHWICK, Pres.

Conference of the Southeastern Illinois district will convene at Dry Fork, Wayne County, Illinois, Saturday before the fourth Sunday in September, at ten o'clock. A full report from all the branches is desired.

J. F. HENSON, Pres.

Northeastern Kansas district conference will convene at Fanning, Kansas, September 19 and 20 at 10:30 a. m. We hope to have a good attendance. Those who cannot come please remember to send in a full report of labor done since last conference.

PHINEAS CADWELL, Pres.

The semiannual conference of the Eastern Michigan district will convene at Bay Port, Huron County, Saturday, October 10, 1896, at ten a. m. It is expected that Apostle E. C. Briggs will be present, and we hope Elders F. M. Cooper, H. C. Bronson, J. J. Cornish, and R. E. Grant, with the missionary force of the district, will be in attendance. Come one and all, but don't forget your lunch baskets. We hope the branch secretaries will see that their reports are in in time. Let us come in the Spirit of our Master.

J. A. GRANT, Pres.

Conference of the Northern Minnesota district will be held Saturday and Sunday, October 10 and 11, at Bro. Ed Anderson's, on the St. Pier, north of Clitherall, town of Girard, Ottertail County. Parties from a distance, if coming from the west, can reach the place by way of Fergus Falls and Clitherall, or if coming from the south and east, by way of St. Paul and Minneapolis, they can reach the place by way either of Wadena and Clitherall or Fergus Falls and Clitherall. All persons interested in the cause of Christ and his gospel are cordially invited to attend.

G. L. JONES, Sec.

BORN.

MORRIS.—To Bro. Henry and Sr. Julia A. Morris, April 12, 1892, a son, and named Charles Rex. Blessed at Oskaloosa, Iowa, August 10, 1896, by Elder W. H. Kephart.

WELDON.—To Mr. Alexander and Mrs. Sarah Weldon, at Jefferson, Iowa, February 3, 1890, a son, and named Charley Otto. Blessed at Oskaloosa, Iowa, August 10, 1896, by Elder W. H. Kephart.

WELDON.—To Mr. Alexander and Mrs. Sarah Weldon, at Jefferson, Iowa, October 16, 1892, a son, and named Ray Virgil. Blessed at Oskaloosa, Iowa, August 10, 1896, by Elder W. H. Kephart.

DWYER.—To Bro. Charles E. and Sr. Sadie Dwyer, December 7, 1893, a daughter. This little bright beauty was blessed at Cameron, Missouri, August 5, 1896, by J. M. Terry, William Summerfield, and William Lewis.

TROTTER.—To Bro. Leroy P. and Lillie M. Trotter, August 27, 1895, a daughter. To this darling bud of promise was given the name of Clarinda. She was blessed at Cameron, Missouri, August 5, 1896, by William Lewis, William Summerfield, and J. M. Terry.

DIED.

MUNNS.—At his home in Netawaka, Kansas, July 31, 1896, Daniel Munns. He was born January 23, 1823, in England. Heard the gospel in his native land and was baptized in 1848, and received a testimony of its divinity, which he was always willing to defend. He loved to talk on religion, and his faith was unshaken to the last. Funeral services were conducted in the saints' chapel by Elder J. T. Davis; sermon by Elder W. E. Peak.

MADISON.—Mads Peter Madison was thirty years and six days old when he was stricken down by a shaft of lightning two and one half miles northeast of St. Joseph, Missouri, to which place he was enroute, taking shelter in a barn from a storm. From infancy Bro. Madison was reared in Nodaway County, Missouri, under the care of godly parents who, like Elkanah and Hannah of old, dedicated their boy to God and his service. Like Samuel he was obedient to the "call of God," serving first as a priest, then an elder, and lastly as a seventy, which office he was nobly filling at the time of his death, being engaged in tent meetings at Cosby, Missouri. He was married to Sr. Hannah Jenson on February 20, 1895. He leaves a young widowed wife, an aged father and mother, an only sister, and many others who were endeared to him, to mourn his sudden demise. In childhood, youth, and manhood M. P. Madison was industrious, truthful, and honest. He loved his parents dearly, and his young wife was the idol of his heart. But he loved his God better, being willing to leave them for the gospel's sake. A noble workman for the Master of the vineyard has been called from the troublesome and narrow confines of the vineyard here below, only to engage in a wider field above. The Nodaway district has lost its president, its missionary, and one of its brightest stars in the removal of Bro. Madison. The work belongs to God, who is able to supply the sad vacancy in his own time and way. Let the saints look to him. The funeral occurred at the Union Church in Nodaway County, Missouri, Saturday, August 15. At twenty-three minutes of eleven o'clock, August 13, as indicated by his watch, which was stopped by the electric bolt, the death messenger came. The funeral was in charge of Bro. R. K. Ross; the sermon by J. M. Terry. The presence of a large concourse attested the high esteem in which the brother was held.

GAITHER.—Richard Ridgley Gaither was born in Annapolis, Maryland, August 9, 1823; died July 28, 1896, at Farmington, Washington. He was firm in the faith. Death came upon him as though he were going to sleep.

CHUTE.—At Bay Minnette, Alabama, August 11, 1896, Sarah A., wife of Elder G. T. Chute, aged 45 years, 1 month, and 12 days. She was born near Brewton, Alabama. Baptized into the church by Elder Thomas H. Waddell, September 27, 1867. She was the mother of twelve children, eight boys and four girls, eleven of whom survive her. She suffered a great deal. She regretted to give up her children, but at the last prayed God to take her away. Sweet is her rest.

HOLTON.—At St. Louis, Missouri, on the day of its birth, July 25, 1896, Horace Charles, child of Horace and Sr. Matilda Holton. Funeral service by Elder M. H. Bond.

HOWARD.—At Lamoni, Iowa, August 11, 1896, Willie, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Howard, and grandchild of Bro. and Sr. Harmon, of Davis City, Iowa, aged 7 weeks. Funeral services at the house by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Bacco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Bacco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Bacco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. Cured By Bacco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.
 From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.
 Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Bacco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.
 Yours respectfully,
P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHECIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

Paper covers 35
Muslin binding..... 50

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

Paper covers 10c.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SEER OF PALMYRA AND SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

GERMAN TRACTS.

Tracts in the German language may be had of Ad. Richter, Burlington, Iowa: The Baptism 6c., the Repentance 5c., the Principles of the Gospel 6c., the Epitome of Faith 2c., the Sixth Trumpet, a fifty-four page pamphlet, 25c. These prices include postage.

Die Eine Taufe, a German translation of "The One Baptism." This German tract is on sale at the Herald Office; price one cent each.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

GOOD THINGS FROM COLLEGE PULPITS.

"THE problem which society formulates for us is how we may bring our students and our instruction into life-giving and practical touch with the social activities of the communities in which we dwell. Men are continually seeming to ask us if we are fitting our student life to the practical life that must inevitably come after.

"My purpose is to seek to answer this questioning by presenting to your attention first the true method of instruction, and in the second place the view point of society which that method aims to set before student life.

"The function of every true instructor is twofold—investigation and interpretation. A teacher is an interpreter, a revealer. It is a too common belief that the teacher is not in vital touch with the striving world of to-day. Let our colleges encourage the spirit of careful investigation, of fidelity to facts, of determination to know them as thoroughly as possible, of humble and patient reservation of judgment. But our instructors will hardly do this in being content to become automatic fingerposts at cross roads indicating divergence only, or perchance distance, but fearfully refraining from any indication of choice of route.

"Let me say to you, young men and young women, this life about you is one of the good gifts of God. It is intended to be a good gift for your neighbors also. It is for you not only a privilege but an opportunity: not only a possession, but an arena. This gospel of truth and righteousness, of wise control of your environment, and of masterly control of your physical and spiritual natures, is one to be shared with your fellow men.

"But you cannot talk it to them in books, or preach it to them from a distance. You must carry it to them by experience; not dogmatically, not by proxy, but in person. You cannot live a class life solely and touch for a moment the pulsing life of the larger humanity.

"God said: 'Ask what I shall give thee.' This was a whisper which was passed from the throne of heaven to the couch of a sleeping king. What a temptation it must have been to an earthly monarch! The answer was as simple as it was unexpected: 'Give thy servant an understanding heart to judge the people.' This reply was an indication of the early character of Solomon. It showed the desire to be unselfish and the realization that he was an integral part of a society from which he could not separate himself. Man cannot successfully live for himself alone. When he tries to do so he strains the ties which bind him to society and he breaks the law of God. The lesson is a fitting one for you who for the last time are seated as students within these walls hallowed by so many memories. In your seeking shun selfishness, that monster who fills the mind with cunning and the soul with misery; who shrivels up the heart and poisons the whole life."

Dr. Blanchard, in opening, paid an eloquent tribute to the pioneers who dared found a Christian college on the trackless prairies. The purpose of the hour, he said, was to contemplate the mighty work of the mighty dead, and the mighty task before the living. His central thought was that the separation of the Christian from worldliness gives him power. Men are afraid to seem peculiar; Christ and disciples, in their day, were regarded as peculiar men; Luther was designated a peculiar man; that audience of fifty years ago assembled to hear the first baccalaureate sermon was composed of peculiar men. Those to-day who fight the liquor traffic are deemed peculiar men.

Dr. Blanchard contented that the great and pressing problems of to-day in the social and industrial worlds require of men separation, devotion, consecration, self-sacrifice.

President Draper called the attention of the class to the fact that the relations between them and the university were about to change, and with this change must come much sober reflection as well as congratulations that the college course had been successfully completed. The parting words to a senior class should be addressed to mature men and women, as the weaklings have all been left behind. He urged upon the outgoing class the importance and significance of environment and association, and that young people starting out in the world should not forget their dependence upon these things. All are dependent upon one another, and he who tries to act alone is bound to fail.

Since the Reformation, no such general religious awakening has been experienced as that which marks the closing years of the nineteenth century and the question discussed in the September Arena by I. N. Taylor, "Is a Universal Religion Possible?" is one that has exercised many minds. While, of course, all discussions of this nature must be merely speculative in character, Mr. Taylor handles the question in such a broad, comprehensive, and unorthodox manner that his paper cannot fail to be of great interest to all those to whom the great subject of religion appeals.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraits of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

MORE LABORERS.

THERE was a time when the following was excellent advice:—

Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9: 38.

The harvest field is the world of mankind. The laborers are those who are called by him upon whom the burden of saving the world has been laid and sent out with a message, the message of "repentance and remission of sins," with a warning cry, "The hour of his judgment is come."

Whence the sources from which these laborers are called? They were from the men who by reason of being of the people were in touch with those to whom they were sent, and knew the depths into which man had fallen, and what the need of regeneration and redemption.

To those called and sent the word meant much, and to those to whom they were sent it should mean equally as much. But, while many heard, few obeyed, indifference to real good, and superstitious regard for already existing faiths, being the causes.

It is now as it was then. The same one who called them then is calling now. The same need for laborers in the harvest field exists. The supply must come from the same classes. The men called have the same knowledge of the depths to which man has fallen and what will bring regeneration and redemption. The same indifference to real good and deference to already existing creeds meet the laborers in every field.

Will the harvest of the world be garnered? Who, other than the Master, can tell? He has said that every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess unto the glory of God. When this is done, the work of the laborers will have been accomplished and the scepter of power now lying prone and unused in the hand that would redeem, will be raised, and regal force take the place of persuasion and reasoning entreaty.

It is the part of wisdom to take the step forward in the "way of life" required to place a man in safety from death eternal; and the courage born of conviction is needed to push forward in that way. No half-hearted, or faltering work will do. And, one of the requirements of qualifications of laborers is steadfast pursuit of their calling.

The Master calls. Who is hearing; who is heeding the call?

There is in some quarters a strong feeling against what is called sectarianism. Some are opposed to certain methods of church work, the reason assigned for such opposition being, "It is sectarian." This is true in regard to some of what seem to be good measures; those which are being productive of good results. One of these is the Sunday school.

There are some things which, while they may have been first observed in sectarian organizations, have become universal by application and adoption, hence cease to be sectarian. One of these is the song service before and after preaching; another is the benediction, the "good word," pronounced at the close of service.

We have not yet discovered any specific rule by which the ordinary meetings of the congregations should be conducted; and are following in the ways of our predecessors, because of habit. Are not these services, or rather are not these ways, good in themselves, and, instead of being the creatures of inviolable rules to be infallibly observed, are they not continued because they add significance, pleasure, and beauty to the worship? We think so.

Bro. M. H. Bond wrote us from St. Louis that Elder B. H. Roberts, with Elders Fackrell and Stevenson, all of Utah, were at work in St. Louis in behalf of the church dominant in the mountains. They had hired a good hall and were making efforts to get an advanced hearing in that city.

St. Louis has a large number of old-time saints and their children and children's children in it, and the "faith once delivered" by the angel to Joseph, Oliver, David, and a host of others, should be found in the old places, which knew it years ago. But the policy pursued by the church under the Twelve, after the death of the Martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum, caused many a heart to ache, and many a mind to revolt against the elders' teaching; and we should think that until the things complained of and revolted against were fully done away, in fact, as well as in theory, these remnants of the once believing host would have no use for the devotees of that old-time policy.

Bro. Bond seems to think that the brethren of the Reorganized Church are quite able to hold their own against this revival of Utah effort in St. Louis. We are of that opinion.

"Bring forth your your strong reasons," was once the rallying cry of the preachers of the new-old-faith; and continued to be so until the dispersion after 1844. But, alas, "how are the mighty fallen!" The advice now is, "Let them alone;" "Don't meet them in discussion."

It may be thought that because the Reorganized Church so persistently asks for an opportunity to cross swords in theological debate with the Utah section of the believers in so-called Mormonism, that it is done for the sake of notoriety. This is not true. We, of the Reorganized Church, stand, as we believe, as the representatives of the true faith, insisting that nothing shall be added that may have had its rise in human ambition, desire, or wisdom, or devilish ingenuity and design, nor anything taken away that was designed of God. We believe that great and grievous wrong was done to the faith and the flock by the introduction of doctrines that will not stand the test of open examination, and as believers in this we demand that the issue be tried. Nor do we intend to be set aside in our demand by the pitiable plea; "O, you are apostate; we will not discuss with an apostate church!"

The issues joined are vital in importance. It is needful that the truth be known; and so far as it is possible for the Reorganization to maintain its ground it will do so.

It is an era of religious as well as political agitation and education. The Reorganized Church is in the field and will not retire from it without a contest.

NAUVOO REUNION.

It was the privilege of the assistant editor to be present during the last two days of the Bluff Park reunion, his first opportunity to attend a reunion among our people. He found the spirit of the meetings to be one of excellent fellowship, in which all without exception seemed to be united; and, as a result, all loth to part when the time came for separation. The results of this reunion seemed destined to be far-reaching for good to the work in the Nauvoo district as well as the work in general, giving it local prestige and redeeming the good name of the church where once put to shame; emphasizing the mission of the Reorganized Church as the continuation and lawful successor of the original church, and the rebuilder of the waste places.

All were kindly received by the people of Nauvoo and surrounding country; indeed, we saw no exhibitions of unfriendliness anywhere. It was manifest that the church, though once prostituted and put to shame, had power superior to adversity and to reestablish itself among the people, even though evil in its most corrupting forms had asserted itself in its strength to destroy it. This in itself is a manifest evidence of the true character of the Reorganized Church, of its divine acceptance and strength. Provision was made to hold another reunion near to or at Nauvoo in 1897, and which will no doubt prove a still greater success.

A view of the location and a visit to the old city more than confirms the accounts given of the natural beauty of the place and the faithfulness of many who labored heart and hand to establish a city of God. We were impressed with the thought that the membership of the Reorganization, as a rule, had not come up to the old-time saints in point of sacrifice. However, we trust that all are as willing to do so and will prove such willingness on all necessary occasions, and as such occasions continue to present themselves, as doubtless they will, inasmuch as the present dispensation entire has been called "a day of sacrifice." All reunions and means of development but impress true lovers of the work with a sense of duty in this respect, and prompt to more careful and widely extended service. The Nauvoo reunion peculiarly impressed us that as others had so labored, the Reorganization had entered upon a work of sacrifice and devotion; that other men and women have labored for good and we have entered into their labors. It will prove fruitful for good if the hearts of the children are turned to the fathers in this as in other respects.

Seasons of spiritual enjoyments are seasons of opportunity and occasions by which we may profit. Demands are upon us that the work may prosper, the ministry be sustained, and the gospel preached in all the world.

Among the places visited was the grave of the Martyrs, who willingly gave their lives that the truth might be witnessed to the world, and by which they testified of their sincerity, the purity of their motives, and the spirit of sacrifice and love to God and man that prompted them. We believe that they with the work are worthy of vindication and will be vindicated, because true to it and to the people. We may not be called to sacrifice as did they, but their example should serve to prompt that requisite sacrifices be made and in the same spirit of trueness to the work. Peace pervades their resting place and attests the truth of their mission and their worth as men and as servants of God.

MAYSVILLE REUNION.

OUR visit to Maysville and attendance at the reunion was a pleasant experience. It was a release from close application to books and musty papers, and we enjoyed it on that account.

But a more especial source of enjoyment was the presence of the Holy Spirit in much power and love. The preaching was generally good, and the elders affirmed that good liberty was granted. We were especially pleased with Bro. William Lewis' presentation of the financial law. He made some excellent points, and did it so easily that it seemed to be natural to him. As for our part, we do not remember to have felt more of the demonstration of God's power in presenting the word than we felt on Sunday morning. The saints and friends were cheerful and happy, and enthusiastically resolved to accept of the generosity and kindness of Mr. James Harvey again by holding another reunion on his grounds in 1897. We enjoyed the association, and should it be our privilege to attend again would enjoy it better, as we have now made many agreeable acquaintances. One remarkable and commendable feature of the gathering was that all other cares were left behind, and the people came there to enjoy the worship of God and communion with saints. Notwithstanding the great excitement on political issues, we heard not one argument based on politics. If the subject was mentioned it was incidentally, not as a leading topic.

FROM THE PRESS.

THE Chicago Inter Ocean of the 31st, sent us by Bro. T. W. Williams, contains a half column article on the late Bluff Park Reunion. A number of other leading journals, we are told, published excellent articles describing the same meeting, all of which tend to give the work prestige both in Nauvoo and vicinity and in general.

The Creston, Iowa, American, of September 3, makes respectful mention of the labors of Brn. Elvin and Chase at that point; it also puts the church in proper light, in contrast with the apostasy. The writer says:—

Mormonism, as interpreted by Mr. Elvin, is not a bad religion, nor are its members outlaws, as some people are willing to believe.

The Herald, of Maysville, Missouri, in its issue of the 3d has good words for the late Maysville Reunion, which we give below.

These articles show what the public press is doing and indicates what it is disposed to do for the cause. It is one of the influences at work destined to assist in preparing the way for the preaching of the gospel. The door is opening more widely and the church has but to accept and make use of her opportunity to extend the work.

The Latter Day Saints' camp meeting closed last Monday morning. The meeting was very successful and a number of converts were added to the church and the faith. We heard Elder Turpen deliver an excellent sermon on baptism last Sunday. His discourse was certainly clear and logical and worthy of the closest consideration. The reunion will be held at Mr. Harvey's grove next year, he having generously donated the grounds for this purpose, free of charge so long as the saints so desire to occupy them. The attendance of families from a distance this year was perhaps greater than on former years, but the meetings were not so largely attended by people from Maysville, which is perhaps due largely to the Chautauqua and other gatherings which immediately preceded the reunion.

DEATH OF EX-CONGRESSMAN STEWARD.

HE WAS THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR AGAINST SHELBY M. CULLOM TWENTY YEARS AGO.

PLANO, Ill., Aug. 27.—Lewis Steward died this evening of muscular rheumatism, aggravated by an injury received in Chicago three years ago. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon.

Lewis Steward was born November 20, 1824, in Wayne County, Pennsylvania. The family removed to Illinois when he was thirteen years old, settling in Kendall County.

He headed the granger and Democratic tickets as candidate for Governor in 1876, but was defeated by 5,000 votes. He had been a member of the State Legislature, and in 1890 was elected to Congress and served one term.

He organized the Marsh Harvesting Machine Company, and afterwards, in 1860, the Plano Manufacturing Company. He accumulated considerable wealth, including some forty separate farms.

Mr. Steward had been married twice and is survived by his last wife and four children.

To Mr. Steward belongs the historic distinction of having hauled to Chicago the first wheat ever shipped by water from this port.

In 1882, when Mr. Steward was nominated by the independents for Congress, the Democracy held a convention soon afterward and telegraphed him to know whether he would accept the place on their ticket. At the time of the receipt of the message he was beside the bed of his dying mother. A nomination by both independents and Democrats was almost equivalent to an election that year. Mr. Steward would not leave the bedside of his mother long enough to answer the telegram and let the thing go by default.

His race against Shelby M. Cullom for Governor in 1876 is historic, and although it was a Presidential year, he gave the Senator a hard race. In his death the city of Plano, which was virtually the child of his creation, loses its foremost citizen.

We notice the above concerning the death at Plano, Illinois, of Hon. Lewis Steward. We should fail in due respect to Mr. Steward if we neglected to call the attention of the saints to some facts connected with the history of the church at Plano and the attitude of Mr. Steward toward it.

At the time the HERALD was founded, in 1860, it was published at Cincinnati, Ohio, but it was decided in 1863 to secure a press and publish under the immediate direction of the church, at some point further west; and the task of securing the necessary materials and locating the office was assigned to Bishop I. L. Rogers. He naturally made the first effort to secure a suitable room at Sandwich, the town nearest his home; but, by reason of the then prevailing prejudice against what was known as Mormonism, and the strong hold which religious bigotry and conservatism had on the community there, Bishop Rogers was obliged to go elsewhere. So he turned his attention to the town of Plano, the next nearest to his home, it being desirable to locate as near to his home as practicable for prudential and business reasons. In order not to make a mistake in locating against public sentiment, Bro. Rogers went to Mr. Lewis Steward, then the leading man of the place, and asked what objection there would be to such an enterprise as the church contemplated being located in the town. To his surprise, Mr. Steward at once interested himself in favor of the project, and aided him in renting a room in the Henning Block, a suitable and eligible site. In 1863 the plant was put in the building, Bro. Isaac Sheen, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and William D. Morton, of Burlington, Iowa, moved to the place, and took charge of it and the church began its own publishing work.

Soon after this a branch was organized, and for a little while met in private houses, using the residences of Brn. James Horton, W. D. Morton, and Isaac Sheen as meeting places. These soon proved to be too small, and the brethren went to Mr. Steward, who secured for them the use of what was known as Academy Hall, an upper room in a hall built for school and educational purposes. Mr. Steward was not a religionist, but was a man of democratic tendencies, strongly prejudiced in favor of the greatest personal liberty in matters of religion and politics; and the fact that the saints were spoken ill of and ostracised as being heterodox, was to him a warrant authorizing him to look after and protect them when it was needed. This he did, without hesitancy, and without demanding anything in return.

When in January, 1866, we moved to Plano, to take editorial charge of HERALD, we found the little congregation worshipping in the Academy, Mr. Steward having charge of the building, and furnishing the fuel used by the meetings. At the end of some two or three years as agent for the church we sought to get a settlement with Mr. Steward and pay him for the fuel the saints had used. He put us off several times by one excuse after another; until finally, upon our urging upon him the fact that we then had the means, and were desirous of paying him, he remarked. "Never mind it, elder, I will not charge you folks anything. I have furnished the wood to keep you warm here; maybe it will help to make the fire less hot for me when I go to the other side." In this remark he referred to the somewhat too prevalent idea that if a man was not a church member he must necessarily go down to hell. Nor could we prevail on him to take pay for the wood we had used.

When the church decided to build a meetinghouse at Plano, we waited upon Mr. Steward personally, and asked if he could and would help us. In reply, he handed the subscription back to us with the remark, "I will not sign the list; but build as big and nice a house as you will, and I will pay one tenth the cost of it; and you can draw on me at any time for the amount as you shall need." We built at an aggregate cost of $6,700, and drew on Mr. Steward for $300.00. After the building was finished, and the cost of it ascertained and published, he met us on the street one day, and hailed us with the remark; "Here, Elder Smith, you folks have not treated me fairly. I see your building has cost you some $6,700, and you have drawn on me for only three hundred. I promised to pay one tenth and expected you to draw for the amount I promised; why have you not done it?" We told him that we did not think it right to do so; that he had paid a liberal amount, and we were quite satisfied. He suggested that we were more modest than some of the other churches; "For," said he, "they would take all they can get." However, we did not ask him for anything further.

Mr. Steward was always friendly to the saints, and hospitably entertained numbers of them at the conferences held at Plano for several terms. He was not a religious man, but advocated and defended every man's right to worship as he pleased; he respected an honest devotee, but disliked a hypocrite, and despised a man who was afraid to avow his convictions.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. R. C. EVANS was at Waterford, Ontario, the 29th ult., whence he wrote thus:—

I was called here after nearly two years' absence, to preach a funeral sermon. A fine man has passed away. Though not a member of any church, he requested friends to send for me to preach his funeral sermon. The house could not hold one third of the people, and at night a nice congregation filled the church. Good was done. I feel well and never was more busy in the work.

Bro. J. F. McDowell is in the forefront of the battle at Arion, Iowa, of which he wrote from Dow City, Iowa, the 1st inst., as follows:—

Am in a six-sessioned debate at Arion with Elder W. W. Blalock, of the Disciple Church, to close on Wednesday, the 2d. Was called from Charter Oak, Iowa, where we have a tabernacle pitched.

Bro. H. F. Durfey, Thurman, Iowa, August 30:—

Bro. T. A. Hougas writes me that I omitted to state in my report of the Thurman reunion that the same time allotted to the Sunday school work this year would be allotted them next year. If I did, will you please make a note of it as a correction; also that Bro. A. H. Smith arrived on the morning of the 8th instead of the evening of the 7th as reported.

Of Bro. Hilliard's visit to the Chatham district, Sr. Mary M. Green wrote from Appledore, Ontario, September 3:—

The Chatham district is enjoying a pleasant visit from one of the Bishopric in the person of Bro. G. H. Hilliard. He has been teaching us some of the true principles of the gospel that we might "come up higher and inherit the reward of the true and the faithful." He has imparted to us more knowledge concerning the law of tithing and offerings than we have ever had before, and I sincerely believe his labors in this part of the Lord's vineyard will not be in vain. We want to do our part, work for the right, and try and not let the adversary have all his own way. I pray that God may bless you one and all.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, Lucas, Iowa, September 4:—

We shipped district tent from Creston yesterday; will set it up in Albia to-morrow, the Lord and weather permitting. Please note it in the Herald and oblige. I sent you Creston paper, the article was written by a boy, a Catholic. I shall write them an explanation of our faith.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Herald Office does not publish a German edition of the Book of Mormon. Orders for a German edition have been filled by ordering a Utah edition, which is sold at $1.25, bound in cloth. We are unable to state the value of the translation, but presume it is a correct one. This in answer to question.

Bro. Alfred White, Bishop's agent of the Clinton district, writes that he has removed to Independence, Missouri, where tithes and offerings from the Clinton district saints should be sent him, until another agent is appointed. Those interested please take notice.

Bro. E. A. Erwin, of Manchester, Texas, reports a missionary journey into Van Zandt County, Texas, during which one was baptized and others brought near. That portion of country has had drouth for the past three months, and the people are suffering from it.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard of the Bishopric will be present at the Ohio district conference at Vale's Mills, Ohio, September 12; also at the Southern Indiana conference, to convene near Wirt, Indiana, September 19.

The Minneapolis Times, of August 24, published a summary of a sermon delivered by Bro. Peter Anderson, by which many important features of the faith were presented in a correct manner. The article was fair in spirit and its subject matter well stated.

Minutes of the Maysville reunion for the 25th-29th are summarized because mislaid or for some reason delayed. We notice that Brn. E. Keeler, William Lewis, J. M. Terry, M. M. Turpen, Heman C. Smith, T. W. Chatburn and J. T. Kinnaman were the preachers for those dates, assisted by other brethren. A Sunday school convention, an entertainment by the school workers, good prayer meetings, and other good things mentioned in the report indicate that everything was good and a good time all the way round. We regret the omission of part of the minutes, but at this late hour it is impossible to insert in full.

Original Poetry.

WHEN THE PROPHET FOR ME PRAYED.

Gathered round the family altar,
Kneelt a group of children fair;
Wife and mother, worn and weary,
Now would cease their daily care.

Then the prophet, meekly bowing,
With time's frosts, upon his head,
In sweet accents, soft and loving,
For the weary stranger prayed.

O, what peace then took possession
Of my troubled heart and soul,
Beyond the powers of expression,
Like an overflowing bowl!

Thank the Lord that I have met him,
In God's livery arrayed;
No, I never shall forget him,
Since he for my safety prayed.

A LOST DAY.

The darkest of dark days that crowd a life
Is when the tempted spirit, fighting, falls;
And as the humbled soul reviews the strife,
The sound of God's condemning voice appalls.
Weeping and weak the soul lies all undone,
And conscience says, "This field you might have won."

How bright and glorious the early morn,
When, proudly, I my strength to battle led!
The boasting enemy was laughed to scorn,
But now! upon the field, my forces fled,
The hopes, so blindly cherished, dying lie,
While night enshrouds my soul and fills my eky.

WOMANLY CONVERSATION.

Keep a watch on your words, my sisters,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet, like the bees' fresh honey—
Like the bees they have terrible stings!
They can bless like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life;
They can cut, in the strife of anger,
Like an open, two-edged knife.
Let them pass through your lips unchallenged,
If their errand is true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind;

If a bitter, revengeful spirit

Prompt the words, let them be unsaid;
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on the heart like lead.

Keep them back, if they're cold and cruel,
Under bar, and lock, and seal;
The wounds they make, my sisters,
Are always slow to heal.

God guard your lips, and ever,
From the time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the words of beautiful truth.—Sel.

DON'TS FOR FATHERS AND MOTHERS.

DON'T quarrel; at least not in the presence of your children. If you must say mean and spiteful things to each other, go into a room by yourselves, and have it out where no one but God and your own ears can hear; but don't be the ones to teach your children the contemptible art of wrangling.

Don't break promises made to your child. You must keep your word if you wish to keep your child's confidence. A gentleman once went to call on a friend. As he approached the house, he saw him and his wife riding away in their carriage. He was about to turn back when he was startled to hear a voice exclaim, indignantly: "There goes two of the biggest story-tellers in the whole world!"

The gentleman turned quickly, and saw his friend's child, a beautiful little girl, gazing, with a flushed, angry face, after her father and mother. Considerably shocked, he inquired whom she meant. "I mean my papa and mamma," she answered, "and it's true. They have promised a hundred times to take me out riding with them, and they haven't done it once."

Do you wish your children to have such an opinion of yourself?

Don't punish your children for not behaving themselves when away from home. Punish yourself if anybody; you are the one to blame. Had you taught your children to conduct themselves properly when at home, you would have no trouble with them while abroad.

Don't act as if you were afraid your children would discover that you loved them. If you do love them, let them know it; caress them; play with them; sympathize with them. Children need love just as much as flowers need sunshine, and it is your duty to see that they get it.

Don't punish a child without letting him know why he is punished. It is unjust, and the child knows it. First show him where he has done wrong, and how he can get right, and then discipline him as you think best.

Don't give up the care of your children to a hireling. "A child's care-taker should be a child-lover," and who loves a child like his mother and father? The father love and the mother love should be like two wings, ever lifting the child upward. Don't delegate this up-lifting business to some one who probably cares more for the dollars there are in it than for the welfare of your child.

Don't tell, or allow to be told, to your children horrible hobgoblin stories. Fill the child's mind with beautiful thoughts, thoughts that in after years will blossom into noble deeds. Don't crowd into his head a host of hideous monsters, that will always be thrusting their frightful faces from out of every dark corner, unless you wish to grow a crop of cowards.

Don't make it necessary for your children to go away from home in order to have a good time. Some children feel most at home when away from home. Don't be the fathers and mothers of such children.

Don't scold. What good does it do? Listen to your scolding neighbor. She is your looking-glass. Take a good look at yourself, and then, ever after, be pleasant and sweet, though firm, with your children.

Don't try to make your children mind by threatening impossible punishments. They will soon discover that you never do "knock their heads off," that the "bogey-man" never does catch them, that "I'll skin you alive" don't mean anything; in fact, they will soon find that you have been lying to them right along; and this knowledge will not tend to make them more dutiful and lovable.

Don't forget to throw wide open the doors and windows of your home to every good influence; but be sure and put screens in to keep evil things out.

Don't be so busy with your "charities," your "good works," etc., that you can't find time to give needed care to the souls and bodies of your own children. In all the wide world there is not a spot where you can do as much good, good that will count for all time, as right at home, planting beautiful thoughts in the gardens of the hearts God has given to you.

Don't let false modesty or anything else keep you from warning your sons and daughters of the pitfalls that lie all along the pathway of life. Not only tell them to beware, but tell them of just what to beware. Teach them how they will be assailed, in order that they may know how to guard themselves. Be the first to reveal to your boy or girl the so-called secrets of life. Don't let one of your children's foul-mouthed companions get the start of you.

Finally, don't shirk your parental duties. Don't let your children bring themselves up. Don't let anybody else bring them up. Bring them up yourselves. Pour into their lives all that is best in your own. Give them the right start. Plant love deep in their hearts; instill beautiful thoughts in their minds, and leave the rest with God.—Alvin B. Jovenil, in the Household.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 15.

Editor S. S. Department:—As I am somewhat engaged in Sunday school work as superintendent I thought it might be well to write a few lines to explain my views upon the Sunday school work.

The duty of the mothers to the children's work is first, to be good and kind to their little ones; second, to let them know you are their masters, and know what is for their good, and let them know it if you have to apply the rod. And if you do, after you have corrected them, explain to them why you did it, and that you did it for their good and not merely to master them; and kiss the little ones and talk to them kindly and I believe you can correct any child in this way. Try it.

We are becoming conscious of the fact that the children of to-day are the men and women of to-morrow, and while the Sunday schools are doing a noble work there is a force behind all these that can be made efficient, and that is the influence of mothers. The child has more confidence in Mother's judgment and work than all others. This being the case, it is the duty of all Latter Day Saint mothers to teach the children while in the nursery the gospel of Christ, the condition of the unsaved world, and our privilege to aid in bringing them to a knowledge of the truth.

The habits and character of the man are largely formed in the nursery by the parents, hence they should encourage and aid in every possible way the efforts that are made to interest the children in the Sunday school work; then as they grow up the parents show their interest in the cause by going with their children to their meetings as often as they can, and conversing with them on the lessons presented in the Sunday school meetings, encouraging them to present a few thoughts of their own. By doing so parents will be of help to their children and will be blessed by Him who pays all for doing right. The above are my sentiments, and I do not believe they are extravagant. Read Doctrine and Covenants, section 100, from the sixth to the ninth verse. It seems that the Lord does require parents to set in order their house, and that they should know what is the best for the ones God has given them care over, so when they go to Sunday school they may know their duty.

In Sunday school work, as I understand it, it is the superintendent's business to watch over the school in a general way and see that everything is in order and that everything passes off peaceably and unitedly.

Second, that the teachers should have control over their classes, and that the pupils should pay attention to the ones placed over them and chosen to teach. I believe that all that come to Sunday school should come with a purpose in view to help strengthen the school. Brethren and sisters, it is my desire to see the work of the Lord prosper, and to do what I can for its advancement.

Your brother,
GEO. W. JOHNSON.

Letter Department.

SHERIDAN, Nevada, Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—I believe at this stage of my experience in the Nevada mission a line is due the Herald. On May 23 I left my home. Stopped ten days at Salt Lake City to see the sights. Preached once in our little chapel and once at St. John, southwest of the city sixty miles. The people of the Utah Church were kind to me in giving bread and bed. I staid most of my time with those of the Utah Church, hoping in this way to do some good for our work. I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. H. O. Smith while there. He has a very hard mission to handle, and after all that has been said and done about the Utah mission, it needs lots of hard and wise work before it is in good order. The people of the Utah Church are spiritually dead. We account for it in this way: That the people have left the law given of God and have followed doctrines of men. We hope the Lord will bless his servants so they may reach the good and true ones.

On June 9 Bro. E. B. Morgan and I left Utah for our mission. Stopped at a place called Elko. After getting something to eat we went on the hillside to see the grave of Bro. Glaud Rodger. Glad to see that it was in good shape and quite well looked after. Next day we went on stage northwest sixty-five miles to Stoffel. In this part Bro. P. Penrod and his kind family live. We did all the work that could be done there at the time. Preached on Sundays and went from house to house through the week days. Six were baptized at Stoffel while we were there, four by Bro. Morgan, two by Bro. Penrod.

Our next place was Ruby Valley. There used to be a branch at this place, and it exists still on the books, but only one member there at present, Bro. L. Covert, a good man, well liked by all the people of the valley. We had good audiences. Think some will come in the church some day. They were good to us. It was at this place we saw the notice in Herald of there being Saints at Tuscarora. It would cost more money than we could get, to go there, so thought it wisdom to move westward. Stopped at Lone Lock one week; did some preaching in the M. E. church; interest not good. However, baptized one, Sr. J. S. Stouts. Mr. Stouts and wife were kind to us, for which we are thankful. Very bad water at that place. Bro. Morgan and I were quite sick there.

July 30 we came to Reno. Found Sr. Gault. She is the only one of the family in the church. From here we went to Dayton to see Bro. Hawkins, the district president, in order to talk matters over as to the best ways of working this part of the mission. We found a man of good judgment in the work. We only preached once at Dayton. Came to this place, found many good saints. Bro. D. R. Jones is trying to hold meetings but the interest is not good. We hope the saints will take hold and work as they should, as there are so few in the State we need all the strength we can get. Our work in Nevada is at a very low point. It will take a long and a hard pull to shape things up to their proper condition. I doubt the wisdom of trying to keep this mission up in the winter if snows are as they say. We will tell more of the mission as we learn.

Yours for truth,
J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

CANTON, Ill., July 20.

Editors Herald:—It seems to me that pride is one of the failing features the churches are now having to contend with. And why is it? Is it because the brethren and sisters do not have the right love and feeling one toward the other? Most assuredly it is, and especially among the young brethren and sisters; and what a task it is to try to overcome these proud ways we have! Before I joined the saints if I would happen to meet a lady acquaintance on the street, if her clothes did not equal mine I did not care to be in her company. Now my language is plain and simple. But I merely describe pride in this manner that the younger ones who read the Herald will understand my idea on this subject. How much harm we do to ourselves by being so vain!

I for one am trying to overcome pride. How much more pleasing it is to God for us to have a pleasant word and smile for the rich and poor, especially for the poor! If we young brethren and sisters see a poorly clad person, don't let us scorn that one, but let us greet him with a hearty welcome, and God will reward us in the end for such. I know some will say, "It is hard to make of such people; they think they will not be classed in with the higher society of the world." Now when we look at some of our higher society are its members composed of the best of people? No, indeed, not always.

I am going to try to have a more humble feeling in the future for the poor and needy than I ever have had. I want to remain a true and obedient sister in the church.

A LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

CHATHAM, Ont., Aug. —.

Editors Herald:—Will you please publish in the Herald the inclosed letter of condolence sent me by Elder W. J. Smith, on the death of my mother. It has been a source of comfort to me; and there may be thoughts in it that will cheer the lone pathway of some other child of God. Mother died on the 12th of April, at Chatham, Ontario. She had belonged to the church for eight years; was baptized by Elder R. C. Evans. She passed away peacefully in the triumphs of faith in this great latter-day work.

My heart is sore in my bereavement; but I desire always to strive to commit my all into the hands of God and be resigned to his will in all things.

By publishing the letter for me you will confer a favor on one who is hopeful, struggling for victory and final glory in the beautiful realms of eternal peace.

AGGIE DEPEW.

DETROIT, Mich., April 23, 1896.

MISS AGGIE DEPEW,

Chatham, Ont.,

Dear Sister in Christ:—I write you these few lines this afternoon, having learned of your sore trial in being called upon to part with your mother. When I learned that it was your desire for me to preach the funeral discourse, and that you had telegraphed me to that effect, I was sorry indeed, that I was not at home that your desire in that regard might have been gratified.

I truly sympathize with you, Sister Aggie, in your sore bereavement, and sincerely hope and pray that God will not leave you comfortless, but by his Holy Spirit's presence richly supply all your loss, and help you to realize more fully than at any time in the past that all things work together for good to them that love God.

When adversity has clipped the wings of earthly splendor, and intervening clouds shut out the rays of sunshine which in the past have cheered the soul, we should still endeavor to stand erect and take life as it comes. Nor should we ever give up to despondency or despair. While sorrow doubtless has its useful lessons, it often seems like a millstone hanging around the neck; though we believe that sometimes the soul's great blossoming is the flower of suffering. While it is true that for Sr. Kennedy we sorrow not as for one who had no hope, we would not keep back the tear that bespeaks our affections for loved ones passing from this stage of action to the shoreless sea of eternity. When we behold kind tokens of a mother's love, and realize that her place is vacant here—that no more shall we see her in this life, our hearts swell with sadness; nor can we at all times assuage our grief. But in our darkest hours of trial may we ever remember that as the beauty and grandeur of the starry heavens are only to be seen when set against the brows of night, so sorrow often reveals to us our Father whom the sunlight of prosperity has hidden.

The rough and stormy road is necessary, perhaps, to develop in us the elements of true greatness, designed to entitle us to a place in the land of eternal sunshine—that Eden-home of unmingled beatitude, where the cold hand of death shall never enter, nor sorrow cast a shade; but where the sparkling flow of the river of life shall be attuned to whispering melody with the great orchestra of heaven, in songs of coronation to him who sitteth upon the throne—the Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father.

In connection with these thoughts, Sister Aggie, permit me to say in conclusion:—

Weep not for her departure; she's only gone to rest From trials, gloom, and sorrow, to dwell among the blest,

Her work on earth is ended; she served the Master long.
Her peace and love are blended in that summerland of song!

No pen can paint the glory, no tongue to us convey
The bliss of those translated, where Jesus holds the sway;

Though sadly we shall miss her while in earthly life we roam,

We would not call her back again from that transcendent home.

Calm in the love of Jesus she gently passed away,
In answer to the summons ushering in eternal day;

We thus commit her to his care of whom she loved to tell,

And feel whatever is best; he doeth all things well!

Her faith being sure and steadfast while dwelling here below;

She sought to serve the Master from whom all blessings flow;

With holy confidence we trust to meet her by and by,
Where perennial springs of love shall banish every sigh.

We'll daily strive to do our part; We'll try to do it well;
That beside eternal fountains in glory we may dwell;
Thus, in hopes of sweet reunion we'll wipe away our tears,

We'll emulate her virtues and drive away our fears.

Very truly and sincerely yours,

WILLARD J. SMITH.

COLDWATER, Mich., Aug. 28.

Editors Herald:—I last wrote you that our two days' effort closed at Flint, Indiana, with the baptism of four, also a lecture at night on the social problem. I now resume:—

Our services at Clear Lake were largely attended; weather fine. Brighamite cannonading over at South Scott brought Bro. Frank Deller up on Sunday evening. Bro. Robinson departed for the battle ground with him, while I remained to prosecute the work during the week at the Lake. As usual, the saints at Clear Lake displayed unbounded generosity in the gathering of eatables at the church on Sunday. A large crowd of people fared sumptuously on the good things. But O, our South Scott saints piled it up profusely! Worship there was very meagerly attended on Saturday and in the evening; but a crowd of thirty people at Bro. Deller's, including Elder L. F. Daniel, afforded him opportunity for cottage service, if the storm did break up our service and the "ice cream social" for the Campbellites—spitework is ever compensating.

Sunday morning dawned clear and somewhat cooler and the church building began to fill up. How I thought of the time when I stood there to defend in my weak way the great work of divine revelation from the crafty bombast of Clark Braden. It occurred to me that somebody called in the Bible "Gentiles" were almost confessing that "lies" had been their inheritance. We felt good in trying to present the word. Dinner? Well, I have a confused memory of cakes, pie, and such like. A table fifty feet long, across Bro. Deller's barn, in proximity to church, was spread so bounteously by our sisters there that the eyes dim to look across. It was beautiful to gaze upon, but more satisfying to feast upon. Two hundred people sat down and tasted "that the Lord is good." Long may the occasion be remembered. In the afternoon Bro. L. F. Daniel preached, after which we repaired to the water and baptized Bro. J. Somerlott's wife. On Tuesday eve we baptized Bro. George Maxton's wife—both estimable ladies and widely respected. May the loving Father keep them in the only good way.

Tuesday evening came and with it the Brighamites, to the number of four, replying to Elder H. H. Robinson's reply, the subjects of "temple building," "baptism for the dead," "polygamy," "Utah Zion," etc., were deftly examined by Elder Foote. Bro. H. H. Robinson occupied about three quarters of an hour in measuring the likelihood of truth in his presentation. It was plain to us that the Utah ministers represented a dark and wicked apostacy.

We open the meeting here, tomorrow.

Editors Herald:—Three were baptized at Valley, on the 19th, and two here the 23d; interest is increasing. Elder J. A. L. Romig has declined to discuss propositions with me, but has promised to furnish "a scholar, a gentleman, and a Christian," to meet me in discussion in the near future, to discuss the merits of the two churches, the Christian and the Latter Day Saints. This is causing some added interest to my presence here, as the people here think Elder J. A. L. Romig is some great one, and certainly thought he would discuss the propositions, and that in so doing we would be nothing or comparatively so. Have some of the better and wealthier class of citizens out to our services.

I am pleased to know the History of the Church is soon to be published. It will fill a long-felt want.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 28.

Editors Herald:—Not dead as supposed by my superior, "W. H. K.," yet confess the hot wave came near capturing the Parsons. It was not with any disrespect to the invitation of our brethren and sisters of Massachusetts district that not one from this part joined them in their reunion, but the fact that such arrangements are a departure from anything known to this district, hence none was able to attend. It is a critical time in this part with many and economy is a necessity. Brn. Moler and Smith could not see their way clear to go, hence continued tent work. They have been in Camden, New Jersey, for about two weeks having larger audiences than hitherto. Bro. Moler leaves for home next Monday; Bro. Smith thinks of trying to run the tent himself, with what local help he can have. It is too much for one. I hope Bro. Kelley may send him help soon.

On the 22d our district Sunday school association convened at Broad River, Connecticut; Bro. W. F. Atkinson, of Baldwin, Maryland, superintendent, present, and the writer from Philadelphia, composed the delegates from this part. Brooklyn, New York, was quite well represented by the young people, with Sr. Squire and Brn. Cocks and Lester of more matured years.

The convention passed off pleasantly. At eight o'clock an entertainment was given to quite a large audience in the new church which the saints and friends had inclosed for the occasion. This is the second church built in this part. Much credit is due them for the effort made.

The Sabbath was wholly taken up with meetings and the Sunday school. At the close of the evening service I had the pleasure of baptizing Mr. Edwin Kellogg, who has been a fast friend to the work ever since I had a turn with the Baptist minister of that place. There is a good opportunity for gospel work in that part, so far as a place of worship is concerned at least.

The writer could not complain, so far as an audience is concerned, in all the efforts made there; in fact, my audience has been fair in size and the best of attention, more so than found generally in this district. I don't say this to discourage Bro. Smith, but to encourage them so they may return there at their first opportunity, when the season is more favorable for attendance.

Bro. John Zimmerman sailed for Europe on Thursday, the 25th, to visit his father and mother. The latter is very feeble and blind.

The political arena has become so clouded and uncertain that business is about at a stand-still—but little to do and many to do the little to be done.

BRUNER, Missouri, Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—From the reunion in Mt. Grove I came to Vera Cruz to look after the work there. Two of the Hedrickite elders had been preaching at Vera Cruz for about two weeks. The saints there were not familiar with the teachings in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and being in a weak condition spiritually when the Hedrickites arrived, some of them were deceived by them. It is strange but true that saints who have a testimony that this work is true will afterward deny it.

I would advise the saints everywhere to read the Doctrine und Covenants till they are familiar with its teachings, and if they do not I shall not be greatly surprised to hear of their faith being shaken, because there are those whose business it is to shake the faith of saints in the Reorganized Church. Such deceivers begin by finding fault with some of the brethren in the Reorganized Church, and next with the Doctrine and Covenants and Joseph the Seer. While, as I understand, we as a people or church claim Joseph Smith, the Seer, to have been a prophet, and that his son Joseph rightly succeeded his father by proper appointment and ordination, we do not claim them infallible in their words; nor do we claim that the members other than the presiding officers in the church are perfect; yet we do claim the law contained in the Doctrine and Covenants which was given through Joseph the Seer and his son Joseph, is the law of God, and we must abide by it or by it by condemned.

From Vera Cruz I came to Bruner, where I engaged in a seven days' discussion with one W. H. Mills, of the Disciple order. Each of us affirmed the church of which we were members; the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon was also discussed. My opponent would not affirm the Church of Christ or Campbellites or Christians, but tried to make it appear to the people that the church of which he is a member "has the Bible characteristics, entitling it to be regarded the church of Jesus Christ." Before we entered the discussion we agreed to answer questions in writing, but that not exceeding five were to be answered in any one half-hour speech. He claimed that the church of which he is a member was set up after the resurrection of Christ, and that it had been in existence ever since; but when I asked him to give the name of any member of his church who lived between the time that expired from 570 A. D. to 1700 A. D., he could not give any. I also asked him if he had been living in the year 1800 if he could have united with the church. He answered in the affirmative. I then stated that according to his theory the Methodist or Baptist Church must be the Church of Christ as they were in existence in 1800; but that the church of which my opponent was a member was not then in existence as the people well knew.

When asked the names of the officers in his church my opponent replied that they had an elder, and a bishop or deacon. He claimed these were not called by present revelation; then of course it was easy enough for me to show that the church he represented was a man-made institution. He complained about us claiming a plurality of high priests in the church to-day. I referred him to Hebrews 3, where Christ was called the apostle and high priest of the same profession as the other apostles.

Rev. Mills asked if all truth harmonized. I answered that it did. He only offered a few objections to the reading in the Book of Mormon, all of which are easy to answer when guided by the Spirit of Christ.

I will give the page and verse in the Book of Mormon where objections were raised, so that others may note them if they desire. They are as follows: Book of Mormon, page 43, paragraph 46; 16:28; 64:3; 96:9; 123:20; 148:14; 149:2; 153:2; 157:7; 171:2; 178:8; 188:2; 193:12; 235:10; 241:1; 249:8; 278:8; and 315:12. All these objections were urged in our debate last January, and some of them in this last one. My opponent read much from the Braden-Kelley debate, and I had not a book of the kind to refute his argument, but read in the book written by R. Etzenhouser, entitled, "From Palmyra to Independence," to show that seventy-five persons met at the close of that debate to eulogize Bro. E. L. Kelley for the way he had answered his opponent. I also read where Bro. Heman C. Smith showed the mistakes of Clark Braden, giving the page in the Braden-Kelley debate. This changed the tide of public opinion to some extent, as Rev. Mills had been claiming all the time that truth harmonized with itself. I showed that Braden's evidence did not harmonize with itself, hence it was not good and should not be taken as evidence in this debate. Two were baptized.

HAY SPRINGS, Neb., Sept. 1.

Editors Herald:—Since writing last I baptized Sr. Prettyman, at Berwyn, and from there went to Belmont, where I preached fourteen times and ordained Bro. Richard S. Mengel to the office of elder. Bro. M. took me from there to Custer, in the Black Hills, where we preached four times to a few of the saints, but didn't get anyone but members out to hear. Saints there are very earnest in the work.

"On the 20th ult. I came here, accompanied by Bro. Irvin Mengel. Have spoken thirteen times to very attentive hearers, baptized one young man about twenty-seven, last Saturday, and another this morning; both single men. They are the fruits, principally, of the labors of Bro. James Shepard, who has never covered his light with a bushel. I ordained him to the office of priest, and Bro. Leon Turner as teacher, at a business meeting last night. This branch has been practically in a disorganized condition for some time, having no officer but teacher, and holding no meetings. I leave them in shape to work, and believe they will now progress nicely, if they will keep humble as at present. A number of others are about ready for the water; don't know what they wait for. I go from here to Bro. Haywood's, twelve miles south of Gordon, to-morrow. May God's blessings attend all his saints.

Your brother,

D. M. RUDD.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 30.

Editors Herald:—The first conference of the Eastern Colorado district as organized last February by Bro. J. W. Gillen, met in this city the 29th, and closed yesterday the 30th inst. It was a success and seemed an epoch, a turning point in the work for Colorado. Bro. W. T. Bozarth was chosen to succeed Bro. Seli as district president. Bro. Bozarth's sermon Sunday morning on the latter-day work and its varied and unimpeachable evidences was inspired and inspiring. Bro. Seli's sermon in the evening on the Urim and Thummim was instructive and unique. The prayer and testimony service was a profitable and enjoyable one, many taking part therein. Bro. Kemp spoke to the saints by the Spirit, words of exhortation and encouragement.

Numbers of saints have moved into the State of late, including some of the priesthood; and these with some recently added by baptism should give strength to the work and place it on a firm foundation. The priesthood was well represented. There were present of the elders, J. W. Gillen, W. T. Bozarth, C. R. Duncan, James Kemp, E. F. Shupe, — Seli, and the writer; of the priests, Brn. J. Schmutz, S. H. Eye, O. A. Westland, — Goldsberry, and I. C. Edwards.

Bro. Goldsberry has been active in his locality and has baptized a number. I was pleased to notice that the local force is becoming numerous, and is likely to be added to by some young in the faith who give evidence of becoming useful. Thus the district ought soon to be able to take care of itself.

Bro. Duncan is about to go eastward into Nebraska, and the writer to Michigan. As we leave those whom we have learned to admire and love for their zeal and devotion to the right, our parting is not without pain and sadness. The saints in Denver and outside, so far as I have traveled, have shown a disposition to assist and provide for the needs of the ministry, which is gratefully remembered and acknowledged. May we all through faith, and prayer "for one another," be enabled to overcome our weaknesses, endure trials, surmount difficulties, remain faithful to the end, and receive at last an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom, is the hope of,

Your unworthy brother,

M. F. GOWELL.

ANDOVER, Missouri, Aug. 22.

Editors Herald:—As we read of earthquakes, tidal waves, cyclones, cloudbursts, etc., we are forcibly reminded that God's judgments are being poured out upon the inhabitants of the earth, and also that the hastening time of God's work is at hand. The question arises, What are we each one doing to help in the hastening time? We hear of our minister's families having received nothing from the Bishop for several months, and the Bishop and his agents are continually calling for means to carry on the work. We also saw by the Herald a little while back that the saints were owing the Herald Office over twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000).

Why is there such a condition of affairs in the church? Has the Lord ceased to bless and prosper his people that we cannot pay our debts, and have no tithing to pay? If so, why is it? Has the Lord proved untrue to his promises, or have we failed to keep his law?

We read and hear of many ways in which the saints spend money foolishly, but one which to me seems foolish I have not yet seen mentioned; that is, paying money to insurance companies. A brother insures his house, his store, all he has, and his life, and pays no tithing, and then asks the Lord to bless and prosper him. Can he consistently expect it? We even build a house of worship and dedicate it to the Lord and then for fear the Lord in sending his judgments on the earth might destroy his house we pay our money to a company of men of the world to insure it. Saints, where is our faith? I want to ask every true saint where he can get a better insurance policy than we find in Malachi 3: 10? Christ quoted this to the Nephites as the words the Father gave to Malachi, and commanded them to write them that they might be taught to future generations. I venture to say that if the money paid to insurance companies by the saints was paid to the church, almost double the number of preachers could be sustained in the field.

Saints, think of it, and let us insure with the Lord.

W. A. FRANCE.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., July 31.

Editors Herald:—Three months ago I wrote you from this place. Since then I have visited Sydney, and the Argent's Hill branch two hundred twenty-three miles north of Sydney. My stay of over six weeks was profitable to me and to the brethren at latter place. I found some additional laborers necessary and accordingly ordained Bro. Amos Ballard to office of priest, and Bro. Joseph Argent to office of teacher, the Spirit confirming the work. Was called to the bedside of a sick man in critical condition, who wished me to administer to him. He had been convinced of his duty for twenty years, having heard the gospel through our pioneer, Elder Glaud Rodger. In company with local elders his request was granted. He began to amend from that very hour, and announced his intention to be baptized as soon as well enough. The Lord certainly raised him up; but the curious thing is, he changed his mind, and still remains outside of the "one body." With this exception I finished my labors there in the sunshine. The Sunday afternoon of the ordination was something of a Pentecost, a day long to be remembered.

Took boat for Port Macquarie where I intended to have made "a new opening," but the boat stuck on the bar going out and the passengers went direct to Sydney by another boat, where I found my counsel needed by the brethren in a special case of misconduct. I learn since that prospects at Port Macquarie are not so good as we at first thought, so the grounding of the steamer happened just right.

After conducting an elders' court in Sydney, came here, where prospects are as bright as they were in Sydney a year ago; in fact, brighter. The energy of Bro. Broadway, the presiding elder, contributes not a little to the excellent interest I find. Expect to commence another "mission" next Sunday. Weather is not as good as before but we hope for good results. Several are near the door.

One of the local elders of the "Disciples" invited me to a public discussion, but his brethren objected because he was not able enough, and it was declared off. Our gospel is taking hold of their flock. Three have been baptized and several more are thinking of taking the same step; so they are agitated, some praying to be protected from the wolf in sheep's clothing, others talking up a debate. There may be something of the kind in the future. But I distinctly told them I was here to preach the truth, and if they wished to gainsay it, they must consider themselves the challenging party.

At last word, Elder Butterworth was intending to make this part of the mission a six-months' visit with wife and family. A new recruit in the Kaler household is reported; so, withal we will have plenty of help which we need very much.

My work continues to get more arduous, yet more interesting every day. Am thoroughly supplied in all things, lacking nothing. Feel that as long as God does his part, I should try to do mine.

G. R. WELLS.

GRINNELL, Iowa, Sept. 2.

Editors Herald:—After an absence of about four months from my field of labor, I returned home last night. I stopped at Montrose reunion from Tuesday till Monday, and indeed I felt to rejoice when I reached the top of the bluff and heard the Saints singing in prayer meeting; for I longed to associate with them again. Many times while I was in Pennsylvania was my spirit stirred within me to see the people given wholly to priestcraft. I then understood the real meaning of Paul when he was at Athens, as we read in Acts 17:16, 22, 23. I preached some in public and a great deal around the fireside, and some places after I had left they sent for me to come again and preach for them; but I could not comply very often.

We had a very enjoyable time at Montrose, and now I am ready for the field and will start out in a very short time; and as there are a number of letters waiting my answer, I will take this means of answering them, as the stamps are not very plenty with me, notwithstanding somebody or a number have spread the word far and wide that I had received a legacy of twenty-five thousand dollars, and now would end my preaching. I want to disabuse their pure minds, for I did not get even twenty-five cents, neither have I ten cents coming as a legacy from anywhere, neither has my wife; and besides all that, it would take something else than money to drive me out of the ministry, as many are aware that I forfeited a legacy once for the gospel; so it is not likely that now at this late hour I would forfeit the gospel for money, even were it true that I was to get some. But it is not true, so I must still depend on the saints and friends for my traveling expenses as before.

May the Lord bless his people. My sojourn and mingling with sectarianism this summer made me stronger in the doctrine of Christ. I heard some strange doctrine in Babylon. May we all be able to do more to enlighten the world.

SCRIPTURE VS. DANCING.

DEEPWATER, Mo., Aug. 5.

Editors Herald:—A piece about dancing, from I. N. White, and a reply by a Kansas City man requesting some one to show wherein dancing ever did any harm. To this I wish to say that I read in the Bible of an army that went drinking and dancing, and a contending army destroyed all of them that night. And again, about three thousand Israelites died in one day after their dance. (See Exodus 32:28.) And John the Baptist lost his life by a girl dancing. (Matthew 14:6.) And by a dance there were a great many girls captured and taken prisoners for strangers' wives (Judges 21:21). In another place I read that a king's only daughter came to her death by her dancing. (Judges 11:34.) Dancing was turned to mourning in Lamentations (5:15).

I think I never heard of any good coming from dancing, but it is very common for drinking to be carried on at a dance and many other things too tedious to mention here. So much against dancing.

SERMON BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

Delivered at Lamoni, November 25, 1894.

THERE is one thing I presume that all of us will agree to, and that is this, that if there is salvation offered to man, it has been done by him who is the author of life, and who has the power to keep any promise that he may have made. I presume also that we will agree, that if there is anyone that has a right to declare what are the qualifications that he demands as requisite to fit and prepare individuals to dwell in his presence, in what we call heaven, he is the one, for he is the author of life.

And in the light of this agreement there are some things that it seems to me it will be profitable for us to think about this morning. To them that are in the faith—as we understand the faith—with reference to what shall be their daily life; what the character of their thoughts, the nature of their words, and the result of their deeds, toward their perfection of faith in God; and they that are without the fold and faith—if there be any present—to present the necessity of manifesting faith, and of becoming subject to God in order that they may have life. And it strikes me that there can be no better time than what we call the day of rest, called the Sabbath, for the consideration of these greater questions, for the examination of what we might call our better, our inmost thoughts. While I might subscribe to the thought that this is the day, preëminently, in which our thoughts should be turned heavenward, to contemplate heavenly things, I am persuaded that God uttered no idle word to us, when he said that we should consider all days holy alike; which is significant to the statement that in none of them shall we be found doing evil; in none of them are we justified in thinking evil thoughts; in none of them are we justified in doing evil deeds, in allowing ourselves to become subject to him who is the enemy of our souls.

There are some things happening of late that have directed my attention to the consideration of this thought, Do we represent Christ? I mean in this sense, do we as teachers represent Christ? or do we misrepresent him?

I have been satisfied for years that no salvation reaches man except that which has been given of God authoritatively; and the whole tenor of the New Testament scriptures, from first to last, teaches that Jesus began a work, to be accomplished according to the will of the Father; and while he was careful to avoid doing anything contrary to that will, in his declarations to the Jews, and also to those who were his disciples, there were occasions when he was sufficiently bold to declare in language that has come ringing down the corridors of time, from then till now; and is just as strong, just as immovable, both in itself and consequences, as in the day it was uttered. For instance, we have this expression: "I am the way, . . . the resurrection, and the life," which has never been recalled, but is as persistently re-affirmed in this record given to us called the Book of Mormon—villified as it has been everywhere, having been attacked from the first issue until now, for the last sixty years, with all the antagonism that superstition could by any means invent, and by some with absolute bitterness and hatred. That book tells us plainly there is no salvation except in Christ; and that God will pardon no departure from his word in them who have once been made partakers of the heavenly light. He will hold them accountable for it, from first to last. But while it is consonant with the thought that man may be saved in the Church of Christ, but after he is received into the church and family of God and made a member of the household of faith he may become reprobate, in a sense, and the salvation that will be credited to him will be attended with great loss; but happy is he who has a proper understanding of what that loss will be now, and shapes his life in accordance with that thought.

I was brought up the major part of my young life on the Mississippi River. I frequently engaged in rowing a boat on the river. There was a ceaseless tide flowing to the sea, and whenever we found ourselves in the stream, it was necessary for us to keep up a continued effort. We could not be careless of stroke; any failure to measure the strength of the stream resulted in loss of headway; and hence we were always careful of our landmarks; always careful to measure the strength of the current and to keep ourselves in perfect accord with the circumstances surrounding us.

I have learned a lesson on that river and it entered into my calculations when I first espoused Christ, in the sense of taking up an active work in him. I knew that from that hour until I stood in divine presence, I never should be excused for carelessness, or viciousness, in any respect; and the more especially was I impressed with the thought that if I did not represent Christ, I had no business to misrepresent him.

When Christ says, "I am the way," it certainly means something. He does not say he is a highway, or a paved road upon which men may walk; but he means in the sense of example, in the way by which salvation may be given to man, in the sense of direction, in the sense of giving commandment and insisting upon its observance; in that sense he is the one of whom it is stated by the apostle:—

There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.—Acts 4: 12.

Last Sunday when we heard so plainly illustrated the character of Christ and his gospel, it seemed to us that every man, with the New Testament in his hands, ought to know better than to misrepresent Christ in the sense of teaching life and salvation to man. One illustration alone, we think, ought to be sufficient. There came a time in the history of a man in which he found himself speaking against the powers of God, and he was visited; and the individual who visited him preached Jesus to him. The historian does not tell us what was taught in that conversation, but that he taught Jesus to him, and when he had done that, and the man's soul was affected, and so far as practicable to be converted he was converted, that man says to him, "Why tarriest thou?" why do you labor and hesitate? why do you not make manifest your power of obedience, your will to be baptized?

Now people say we place too much stress on baptism; but can we? It is the first step that shows a man has received Christ in spirit, by which he can make a visible manifestation that he has accepted Christ. You say repentance is the first step. Repentance!

what is it? It is a work that may produce light in the heart and in the brain, and no man be cognizant of it except Christ and God. The individual may be moved upon in his inmost soul, and feel all the day long, like him that has said, "I will put my mouth in the dust, and cry unclean." Indeed we may be like him who stood afar off from the temple, and could scarcely lift his eyes, who said:—

God be merciful to me a sinner.—Luke 18: 13.

This was a confession of utter worthlessness of the individual and no man recognized it. That haughty man who stood on the other side said, I thank thee, Lord, that I am not like these men, or even like this poor publican; I give tithes of all I possess. I fast twice a week, I pray in the market place, I thank thee I am not as that man.

The record says the poor humble man, that could scarcely lift his eyes, went down to his house justified, rather than the other because there was such an acknowledgement there that God knew that when the time came, that man would obey the truth.

To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.—1 Samuel 15: 22.

The question may be asked, What would have happened to Saul of Tarsus if he had not been baptized? I do not know that I have heard the question asked before. But if, after Ananias had said to him, "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins calling on the name of the Lord," he had refused to obey, would not his sins have been retained to him? And would he not have had to pay the penalty and answer to the Lord for the opportunity of life given to him? Would he have been saved? There is not a single soul but answers No! not one, and why? Because there had come a direct commandment to his soul; there was an offer of life given to him. When I go among the people and say, "I want to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified," I do not mean only his agony and sufferings on the cross, when the red blood streamed from his hands and feet, and from his pierced side, resulting in his death; but I must go back of that and show the foreground in which the Lord left the glory he had with the Father, when he said to the Father, "I will go and do your will and will save the race, and thine be the glory forever."

The work of saving the race began there and did not culminate at his death, but is progressing still under his supervision, and will till time shall end. A man cannot lay claim to being saved while in this probationary state; the language of the New Testament scripture is,

He that endureth to the end shall be saved.

And not till that time comes is any mortal man authorized to say, I am saved. Men may shout in the congregation, "Glory to God, I am saved!" but not till the last week of probation is o'er, not till the last day of trial, not till the last hour of the sojourn in the flesh shall have been passed, will a man be able to say, "I have endured to the end;" not till then. Now if Saul of Tarsus would not have been saved if he had not obeyed, how is it with me? I make the inquiry as if I was needing and seeking for salvation, and a man was preaching Christ to me, and he should make it clear that it was my duty to be baptized, but when I got outside of the house I would say, This man seems to be preaching the Bible, but he preaches too much Bible. What should be my action providing the man had rightly represented Jesus to me,—crucified Jesus, and him raised after his crucifixion; and I am commanded to follow in his footsteps, and he was baptized to fulfill all righteousness. It strikes me it would not take any of you long to tell me that under such circumstances, if I did not obey I would be like the individual who went down to his house unjustified.

The Savior found a woman at the well in Samaria where he stopped and asked of her to give him water to drink. She was surprised by his action because she was a Samaritan woman, and the Jews had no dealings with Samaritans. She said to him, "The well is deep and thou hast nothing to draw with;" and he said, "If thou hadst known who it was that asked of thee to drink, thou wouldst have asked of him and he would have given thee the water of everlasting life!" He said unto her, "Go call thy husband." She says, "I have no husband." He says, "Thou sayest well, he that thou livest with now is not thy husband." She went her way into the city, and saith to the men. "Come see a man which told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ?" What else passed there? Why, he told her, "We know whom we worship." She said, "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain, but ye say in Jerusalem is the place to worship." He said, "The hour cometh and now is in which they who worship the Father must worship him in spirit and in truth." Now I grant that men do worship in spirit all over this land, and all over every other land, they are worshiping in spirit, but are they worshiping in truth? Jesus says that the Father seeketh such to worship him as will worship him in spirit and in truth. No man can come to the Father save by the Savior. That is the language of the New Testament; that is the language of the angel's message to us in these latter days; that is the language of these revelations vouchsafed to us in accordance with the word of God given hitherto. We grant that our Catholic brethren are worshiping in spirit; that every branch of Protestantism, in all the world is doing it, yes, the Arab, that wild man that worships according to the teaching of Mohammed is doing it; and the Greek brethren worship in spirit; yea the whole tenor of worship in man is that of devotion, the natural tendency in man placed there by God to worship something higher than himself; and you and I, in this Christian land, worship in spirit. Do we worship in truth? What is it to worship in truth? I will tell you what I think about it. When Jesus said,

Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. And he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned, he meant just what he said. That is an everyday religion. It is not a Sunday religion alone; it is not to be taught only on Sunday, but every single day of the week by any man that presumes to represent Christ; anywhere, on the walk, in the warehouse, in the store, in the blacksmith shop, in the pulpit, or anywhere else; by walk, by precept, by social organization, by everything that is in man. That is the rule. What nonsense that God should send men out to preach baptism, and then say to others that man has no need to be baptized, and tell the people, "You keep away from them that preach baptism; you don't need to be baptized." What nonsense that would be! If a man should hire me to go out to sow a certain kind of seed on the land, and then send men who should tell me there is no need to put that seed in the soil, I would go back to that man and tell him to give me some command that had some sense in it. Jesus actually told these men to go into all the world and preach baptism, and he said every one that had need of salvation should be baptized. That is the way it strikes me every day and twice on Sunday, all day long. Again in the 28th of Matthew Jesus says, Go ye and teach all nations.

Teach them what? Now they have something to teach them, and what is it? Teach them what their duty is; teach them what awaits them in the time that is to come; teach them the responsibility that rests upon them now; and if there is one thing that this latter-day work has enforced from first to last, it is that while we are accountable to God for all we do he has authorized an organization by which we can assemble together, and be called the kingdom of God on earth. In one sense that is a dangerous doctrine, and why? Because it causes people to be careless in one way, and to say, "If I don't quite come up to the standard God will give me credit for that which I do;" and some are so spiritually lazy that they are content with that which they can get without much effort. I have seen such laziness as that. It is one thing to be spiritually lazy, and another to be temporally lazy. I heard a remark on my way to church—one of the Gentiles said to another, "If these Mormons are allowed to stay here they will build this town up." What did he mean by that? He meant if they were not disturbed by outside influences, that they proposed to stay. What I have been trying to teach the people is that they should build their hearthstones and rooftrees solid, that they need not be moved till the traditional Gabriel blows his horn; and, if the world has to be changed in the twinkling of an eye, we can say, "We are in the kingdom, now, and are prepared for the change, come when it may."

I have something to read to you. It will do you good, and if any of you are inclined to shout, why shout. I know well what it will do, it will cause the tears to well up to your eyes and you will feel like giving praise to God, if you do not feel like shouting.

A little while ago—you may remember it was in the Herald—a Reverend Savidge, of Omaha, had made an attack upon our religion and it was defended by Bro. T. W. Williams, a coal miner—who was laboring in the mines a few years ago. A good sister, when she heard that Bro. Thomas Williams was going to meet Reverend Savidge, groaned in spirit and said, "Why, he is one of the ablest men in Nebraska, and for the church to put up against him Bro. Williams; they ought to know better!"

Bro. Williams knew his business in representing Christ, and he made the effort to do battle for the truth as he understood it. They entered into discussion. We got a letter from Bro. Porter, and this is the letter:—

The debate last night was on the second proposition; viz., 'The church of which I, T. W. Williams, am a member; viz., The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the Church of Christ and identical in faith, organization, and worship.'

It terminated disastrously for the Reverend Savidge, so far as his position was concerned. He acknowledged his defeat and said he never before had experienced such feelings as had come over him during the debate. He said he was conscious that God was working mightily with him. He seemed unable to comprehend the true position of things. He didn't use all his time in his first speech, and in his second he humbly acknowledged his defeat. He said he was certain God had a purpose in this, both for himself, the Latter Day Saints, and others. After using about thirteen minutes of his time he commenced to pray, and during his prayer he said, "O God, thou hast rebuked me! Thou hast rebuked me! Thou hast rebuked me!" It was a wonderful scene. The house was filled, and I think all felt the force of his remark when he said he had never experienced the like before. He said he slept but two hours the night before and he never had felt such a power upon his body and spirit before. He never before had been so that he had to speak with stammering tongue to his congregation. He was very humble; but while he made his acknowledgment of defeat, he asked with mildness, "Do you people live this religion? Is it not true that such and such things were done publicly by you people not long since?"

I confess that my face burned with shame when he asked the question, and I trust it will be a lesson not soon forgotten by our people. Bro. Williams did excellently. His defense of Joseph Smith as against the testimony of Governor Ford, was exceedingly good. Many of the saints were present, and I believe they all felt the power of God's Spirit. I hope this debate will prove of lasting good to the saints as well as others; and I trust the saints will endeavor to live so that when they are asked either privately or in public, "Do you live this religion?" they will be able to truly answer, "By the grace of God we do."

Here is a case directly in point. When the letter came in I asked myself the question, Did Bro. Williams represent Christ? Many of you know the young man, and you give thanks to God that he so wrought upon this able minister when opposing this latter-day philosophy, that when he stood face to face to discuss the question before the people, Sir, do you represent Christ? and when this boy that was sent represented the coming of the angel, taught the gospel message fearlessly from the scriptures and the work of the church to which he belonged, this minister was constrained to say, "I never felt such a power upon my body and my spirit before." He, perhaps, had been like many others who had never had the authority of God presented before as it was brought to bear there. But we that have been preaching this gospel for lo, these many years, have many times when speaking before the public asked the Lord in humility of purpose, "Lord, let me represent Christ without fear or favor, without any of this truckling to popular sentiment, let me represent Christ as I find it in the scriptures." This man acknowledged that he had never read the "Book of Mormon," and yet he presumed to say it was not of God; and he went further to say that the church without any doubt was the foulest blot on the fair breast of the land of America.

I felt then when I read it, if Bro. Williams was careful, if he was as humble as I had seen him before, that the power of God would be with him, because he stood in the majesty of the true worship in spirit, and the New Testament truth, abiding in that we are safe.

The Savior said to his disciples, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." In Michigan a few years ago Bro. Blair and myself and Bro. William Kelley were at Coldwater, at the house of Bro. Corless; and a Rev. Miller, a member of the Second Advent Church, a middle-aged man, and a man who had the reputation of being an old debater, was by his people forced to meet the Latter Day Saints in discussion.

Bro. Blair arranged with Rev. Miller, and when the time came Bro. Blair went home and Bro. Kelley and myself went into Canada, and all left an untried boy to discuss this question with this old debater. Bro. Scott said, "I cannot do it!" I said, "No more you can, but the Lord can do it!" He said, "I will try." And he did try and the Lord stood by him. Now the question arises with me, Did he represent Christ? While he continued in the word Christ's Spirit stood with him and he would not have stood with him if he had not so continued. That is where we ought to stand. If we continue in his word then are we his disciples, if we do not he does not go a single step with us. God is proposing to save the world by his authority, and that he has vested in the message that he sent his angel to bring to the earth. It began its operation then, and it never will cease until the last son and daughter of Adam born into the world has had an opportunity to know what is the gospel and to choose whether they will have the Spirit to abide with them or reject the message and take the consequences. I don't anticipate the highest glory unless I shall be found worthy by thought, by word and by deed to obtain that glory. I do not expect to receive beyond what an honorable man of the world shall receive from God, unless my acts conform to the word of God, unless I have the disposition and courage to so labor. Let us not be lulled into any false security, that because we have been baptized into Christ and put him on, and become heirs of God, that therefore we cannot sin and become cast away; but remember that it is he that endureth to the end shall be saved; not he that goes part way, but he that endureth to the end shall be found worthy. There are some weighty things in the law. There are such things as paying tithes of mint and anise and rue and cummin, and forgetting the weightier things of the law. I must grow in the Spirit, I must become conscious of that which is around me that will conduce to my spiritual growth and assimilate it. I must grow by it as the plants grow by that which is around them; as the rose and the different variety of flowers and plants grow upon that which is like themselves, upon that which it was the intention of the Almighty to make their growth increase. And so must man grow, and we in our spiritual lives must grow upon that which is assimilated by us yielding obedience continually to the commandments of God, and obedience shall bring to us the greatest good that shall be possible for God to bestow upon us. But we must put ourselves into a willingness to receive it, and we shall not receive until we do. I believe in my soul that the set time to favor Zion is come; when he will not only send his Spirit before the elders who are carrying glad tidings abroad, but to every soul who is ministering in faith shall come the warrant of that which is asked for, and its being guaranteed to him because he asks not amiss. And when Rev. Savidge asked, "Do you people live this religion?" he asked, Do you live in your lives, making them conform in practice to that which is involved in this word of that which you ought to enjoy now? I don't know what was especially referred to by him when he asked the question, "Do you not do so and so publicly?" Bro. Blair says it was difficulties between members of the Omaha branch. If this is so it is only fulfilling that prophecy made a few years ago, that the adversary had in many ways tried to disrupt the church, and he was now going to sow jealousies among the brethren. We propose here in Lamoni to try to prevent that; and still he is working, sowing jealousies, pulling this string and that string, to see if he can pull us apart; but if we shall resist him he will flee from us.

Conference Minutes.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Conference held with the Mt. Zion branch, Goose Creek, Saturday, August 22; G. T. Griffiths was chosen to preside, G. H. Godbey was chosen assistant, J. B. Russell secretary. Branch reports: Fairview 48; gain 6. Union Grove 17; no change. Harmony 17. Wayne 31; gain 1. Cabin Run 25; gain 1. Mt. Zion 12; 8 removed, 1 expelled. Buffalo City report returned for correction. Clarksburg reported in a scattered condition. New Hope disorganized. Elder G. H. Godbey baptized 10, and Priest Thomas Smith reported. All of the district officers were sustained. Preaching by Elders G. T. Griffiths, G. H. Godbey, and D. L. Shinn. The best of feeling prevailed. The conference was the best ever held in the district. Adjourned to meet in August, 1897, with the Buffalo City branch in Jackson County, time to be left to the president of the district and missionary in charge.

EASTERN IOWA.

Conference met at Fulton, Iowa, August 22; C. E. Hand, assistant president, in the chair; Willard W. Beal secretary, J. B. Roush assistant. Branches reporting: Fulton, Grove Hill, Butternut Grove, Powersville, Brush Creek, and Apostolic. Elders reporting: C. E. Hand, J. Heide, B. F. Miller, W. Turner, O. B. Thomas, and J. B. Roush; Priests C. S. Shippy, D. J. Dierks, and F. H. Horne. All chair committees were discharged. The district president was authorized to receive and expend all funds raised for tent purposes; the committee composed of branch presidents, appointed to solicit funds for tent purposes, was continued. The Bishop's agent reported: On hand last report $10.38; received since $193.90; expended $330; on hand $74.28. A committee appointed to audit the Bishop's agent's books found them correct; the report was adopted and the committee discharged. C. E. Hand was elected district president, Willard W. Beal sustained secretary, and J. B. Heide sustained Bishop's agent. A request that the Davenport branch be disorganized was considered, and the district president authorized to appoint a committee of one to examine and report upon the condition of same. A communication from F. J. Potter was read, acknowledging his error in ordaining W. Wilson and in calling the business meeting declared by conference illegal, and asking forgiveness for same. He was forgiven and restored to his office of elder. Conference then reconsidered his ordination to the office of elder, at Fairbank, and it was declared illegal. The following resolutions were accepted as a substitute for those adopted by last conference: Whereas, the Lord has requested the saints to come up higher, and in a revelation given to the church April 11, 1887, the Lord has spoken again and said, "Men of God, who bear the vessels of the Lord, . . . avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form," therefore, in order that we may be in harmony with God's word, be it resolved; that it is the sense of this body that all branch or district officers should discontinue the use of tobacco in any form, that they may be examples to their charge, and that no persons be upheld as officers who are addicted to the use of intoxicants. A vote of thanks was tendered the Fulton branch for its kind entertainment of visitors during conference. Adjourned to meet with the Brush Creek branch the last Saturday in February, 1897.

Sunday School Associations.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK AT MONTROSE REUNION.

A meeting for the organization of Sunday school was held Saturday morning, August 22, F. M. Weld acting as chairman. On separate motions the following officers were chosen: T. A. Hougas chairman, W. N. Robinson assistant, A. A. Reams and Bessie Bond secretaries, T. A. Hougas chorister, Roxanna Gaylord organist.

Sunday.—Regular lesson of the day studied at four p. m. in the following classes and teachers: Book of Mormon class, W. Hudson; Bible classes, F. G. Pitt, J. A. Robinson, Roxanna Gaylord, and Sr. Whitehead; intermediate classes, by Sr. Blair, Belle James, Ammon White, and Emma Hougas; primary classes by Jennie Newton, Amy James, and Sr. Burchell. Class study followed by a general review, oral and blackboard, by T. A. Hougas. Officers present, 5, plus teachers, 12; pupils, 105; collection $2.37.

Monday.—What constitutes a live Sunday school, discussion by T. A. Hougas, with this outline: I. Officers. 1. Superintendent. 2. Assistant superintendent. 3. Secretary. 4. Treasurer. 5. Librarian. 6. Chorister. 7. Organist. II. Teachers. III. Scholars: 1. Elderly. 2. Middle-aged. 3. Children. IV. Helps. 1. Song books. 2. Bible, Book of Mormon, etc. 3. Papers. 4. Record book. 5. Blackboard. 6. Maps. 7. Money. V. Support.

F. G. Pitt outlined the qualifications of a superintendent as follows: He should be, 1. A live man. 2. A godly man. 3. An earnest man. 4. A man who loves. 5. A humble man. 6. A sympathetic man. 7. Have a knowledge of human nature. 8. A social man. 9. A prayerful man. 10. An orderly man. 11. A broad-minded man.

On motion the speaker was asked to prepare a paper on the above outline for publication. It was stated that a Sunday school superintendent should have as many of these qualifications as possible. Few have all of them.

Tuesday.—Columbus Scott spoke on, "What should the traveling ministry do for the Sunday school?" W. N. Robinson outlined, What is a model secretary; his duties, etc. Secretary should have, 1. Activity. 2. Be accurate and orderly. 3. A clear head. 4. A good voice. 5. Be an earnest man. 6. Be a fair penman. 7. Knowledge of duties of officers. Duties of secretary, 1. Be prompt. 2. The speaker was asked to prepare a paper on the above outline for publication.

Wednesday, August 26.—Subjects discussed: Should prizes be given to pupils? Should classes be separated as to sex? These questions were discussed at two different sessions, pro and con, each side of both questions having friends. The sentiment at the close would have answered both questions in the negative.

Thursday, August 27.—Regular lesson study as a model school. Officers present 3; teachers 12; scholars 81; visitors 38; collection $2.94. Thursday evening Sunday school work. Address, "Temperance," by T. W. Williams. Temperance is a moderate use of all things necessary and a total abstinence of all things harmful. The speaker also referred to the subject of social purity, and in his plain, positive manner laid aside all false modesty and gave a most interesting address.

Friday, August 28.—Teachers' meeting at eight a. m. Saturday, August 29. Sunday school prayer meeting at eight a. m. The president asked that the Sunday school workers come fasting and this was generally observed. During the service four prayers were offered and 43 testimonies given. The presence of the Holy Spirit was sensibly felt, and many were melted to tears. The Spirit by his silent presence testified of the divine blessing resting upon the Sunday school work. At five p. m. a business session was held. Finance committee reported $7.65 collected and paid to T. A. Hougas for expenses. The secretary reported $5.36 collected at the two sessions of the school during the week. A bill of $1.10 for call bell for reunion was allowed the superintendent, and the bell turned over to Nauvoo district superintendent as the property of Nauvoo reunion. The balance of collection $4.26 was on motion paid to W. N. Robinson for his expenses. On motion the General Superintendent, the Assistant Superintendent, and the Secretary were made a committee to prepare a program for Nauvoo reunion of 1897.

A. A. REAMS.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Northeastern Kansas district Sunday school convention will convene at Fanning, September 18, at 10:30 a. m. Would like every school in the district to be represented.

SARAH A. PARKER, Supt.
MARY HUDGENS, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

Northeast Kansas District Conference.—Having been informed by Bro. John T. Davis of my election as president of the above district, I desire to call the attention of the saints to the coming conference which meets at Fanning, Saturday and Sunday, September 19 and 20. I am a stranger to most of you and to the special needs of the work in this field; but in a general way I hope all will come up to this meeting filled with a sense of our official and individual responsibilities as servants of God. Let all try as far as possible to be promptly on hand at the beginning of the session. If there are differences of opinion, bring a good supply of charity for each other's motives; if any feel a lack of zeal, pray that God will fill us with his Holy Spirit to enliven. My position does not make me a dictator but a servant, and in order to serve you well, please give me your full confidence and hearty cooperation, and if you meet me with such sentiments I promise to try to the best of my ability to serve you in love and humility. Visiting elders and others from adjacent fields are cordially invited.

In bonds, your brother,

P. CADWELL.

BURLINGTON, September 1, 1896.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

There will be a meeting held at Pleasant Grove, Utah, beginning Friday night, October 16, at 7:30 p. m., and continuing over Sunday the 18th. Hearing of some of the good times enjoyed by the saints in the east, the saints in Utah are desirous of seeing what they can do in that line; and as this meeting is for the saints especially, let all come who can possibly do so, even though sacrifice has to be made. Those who can come with teams can come prepared to camp and take care of themselves. The resident saints will do all they can in entertaining those who come. Let us see what we can do in a small way at first, and who can tell but it may grow into magnificent proportions? We hope to have Bro. H. N. Hansen and J. T. Davis with us by that time, and possibly Bro. Heman C. Smith.

H. O. SMITH,

Missionary in charge of Utah.

NEPHI, Utah, September 1, 1896.

GENERAL REUNION, WOODBINE, IOWA.

To all who contemplate coming to the annual reunion at Woodbine, September 18-28, will say, There are rumors afloat that the grounds on which reunion is to be held are very wet and have been flooded with water. Neither statement is true. During the whole of the wet summer just passed the water has never been on our grounds, and today we were all over the grounds and can truly say they are in good condition, and we believe all who attend will be in favor of relocating for another year. We say to all, Come and see, and enjoy the meeting, which bids fair to be a feast for all Latter Day Saints.

Very respectfully,

S. B. KIBLER.

W. P. LANDINGHAM.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Far West district conference will convene September 19, at ten a. m. With the Delano branch, three and one half miles north of Cameron, Missouri. Our district Sunday school convention meets on Friday, September 18, ten a. m. Come up to these gatherings, brethren. Bring the Spirit of the Master with you, so that we may have an enjoyable time.

WILLIAM LEWIS, Pres.

CHARLES P. FAUL, Sec.

Conference of the Galland's Grove district will convene at Harlan, Iowa, Friday, October 16, at 2:30 p. m., holding over Sunday. Branch presidents and clerks will please see that their reports are made out and approved by their respective branches and forwarded to Sr. Nellie Rudd, district secretary, Dow City, Iowa, in good time. We hope all officers will have their reports prepared so no time will be wasted when business session opens. Brethren and sisters should make an effort to attend and make this conference a success and a spiritual feast. Sunday school work will be under the management of district superintendents, William McKim and R. Wight, Saturday afternoon and evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and everybody will be made welcome.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH, } Presidents.
J. M. BAKER, }

Dow City, Iowa, September 7.

Notice is hereby given that the quarterly conference of the Spring River district will convene at Blendsville, Jasper County, Missouri, October 16, 1896. We shall look for a full report from all the branches and a large delegation, bringing with them a spirit of love and peace.

J. C. CHRESTENSEN, Clerk.

JASPER CITY, Missouri.

WOODBINE REUNION.

The General Reunion of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will begin its annual sessions September 18, 1896, at Woodbine, Iowa. A general invitation is extended to all the saints and friends to come, as ample preparations have been made to make it pleasant for everyone. Come prepared to enjoy a spiritual feast long to be remembered.

Speakers and lecturers who are invited and expected to be present: Presidents Joseph Smith and Alex. Hale Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, Elders Charles Derry, J. W. Wight, Fred A. Smith, T. W. Williams, J. C. Crabb, and Alma M. Fyrando, who will be ably assisted by other ministers from various points.

D. CHAMBERS,

Chairman of Committee.

To all singers and those playing instruments of any kind who are going to attend the Woodbine reunion. Come prepared to take a part; come early, bring your instruments, Hymnals, and Harmonies. We want to organize early and thoroughly so all may know their place and part. The invitation is to all musicians, singers, etc. Please come to help make the song service the best we ever have had. Let us praise God from whom all blessings flow.

Yours,

S. B. KIBLER.

J. A. PEARSALL.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS DISTRICT REUNION.

The reunion met in the grove of Mr. Gray, three miles southwest of Fact, Clay County, Kansas, in the district tent. The first session was a preaching service, August 20, eight p. m. W. S. Pender was the speaker assisted by Bro. A. Kent; text, John 4: 24: "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." The theme was the oneness of the gospel and the necessity of finding the truth and abiding therein.

Met August 21, three p. m., to effect organization. Bro. A. Kent was elected president, Bro. W. S. Pender secretary, and Brn. Ed Fender, B. F. Lee, and J. F. McClure were appointed marshals. Sr. Ella Landers was elected organist and chorister. The services of each day were, prayer nine a. m.; preaching eleven a. m., three p. m., and eight p. m. Provision was also made for the saints all to meet in the tent for morning worship at 6:30. The first day or two of the reunion but few saints were on the grounds, owing to the fact that rain had been falling for several days before, and nearly all came across the country in vehicles of their own. The attendance of saints and others continued to increase until Sunday, when there were about three hundred persons present. The only ministerial aid from abroad is that of Bro. H. A. Stebbins who arrived on the grounds Friday. The saints were much pleased with his excellent instruction and kindly counsel.

Preaching August 21, eight p. m., by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. L. F. Johnson. John 4: 7-14, was read as a text: The speaker showed that as water is necessary to sustain physical life so is the Spirit of God necessary to sustain the "inner" life of man, the spiritual. When a man takes the position that the Bible is a "hundred books to a hundred different people;" or that each may understand a hundredth part only, and a different part from all the others, of the Bible, he contradicts the statement of Christ: "When he, the spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth."

Saturday, August 22, was devoted to the business of the conference which the district clerk will report in due time. Saturday, 8 p. m., preaching by W. S. Pender. The "kingdom of God" was the theme, showing that the church is the Lord's great training school or "school of correction." Text, Mark 1: 14.

Sunday, prayer service at nine a. m. in charge of Wm. Landers. At eleven a. m. Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached using as a text Hebrews 1: 1-3. The speaker showed that the Scriptures speak of the "last days"—"the latter days"—the "dispensation of the fullness of times"—the "time of the end." Latter Day Saints are so named because they believe we are living in the "last days." Of the remarkable signs preceding the "end" a "falling away" from the truth was predicted. This occurred as stated by Mr. Wesley, "Christians turned heathen again and had only a dead form left." The reestablishment of the kingdom of God in the earth was also expected by Mr. Wesley as the following statement of his shows: "The times that we have reason to believe are at hand, if they are not already begun are the times of the 'latter day glory.'" "The generality of Christians can see no sign of the glorious times which are now approaching." The theme of the restoration was treated in an interesting way and the same subject was continued by the speaker at three p. m. In this effort the reign of Christ upon the earth and his assumption of the reins of government was dwelt upon. Attention was called to the constantly multiplying distress of nations "with perplexity," indicating the need of Christ's return to earth as well as being a sign of his coming. Signs of the times, such as storms, tidal waves, and earthquakes were referred to as rendering these "perilous times." Sunday, eight p. m., the writer spoke upon the fundamental principles of the gospel, using Hebrews 6: 1-3 as a text. Definition of gospel is "good tidings." Faith, repentance, and baptism were each shown to be "good tidings."

August 24, nine a. m., prayer service in charge of Bro. William Landers. The Spirit of the Lord was present, special prayer being offered in behalf of the health of Bro. Bunt, of Gaylord, Kansas. Bro. H. A. Stebbins spoke at eleven a. m., August 24. Text, Romans 8: 23. Attention was called to the difference between the saints who overcome and those who do not, and the superior privileges of the faithful in rising in the resurrection "first" and reigning with Christ a thousand years. August 24, three p. m., Bro. L. F. Johnson preached. John 4: 23 was selected as a text and the necessity of abiding in the truth constituted the theme of the discourse. August 24, at eight p. m., the writer spoke upon the principle of the "laying on of hands," to bless infants, to ordain ministers, to heal the sick, and to confer the Holy Spirit upon baptized believers.

Not being present at the exercises during the day, August 25, can only write that the usual prayer service at nine a. m., was followed by preaching by Bro. V. F. Rogers. At three p. m. Bro. H. A. Stebbins began a series of lectures on the divinity of the Book of Mormon. The speaker continued this subject at eight p. m., and also at eleven a. m. and three p. m., August 26. These services were of especial interest, setting forth many scientific and scriptural evidences pointing to the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. At eight p. m. the writer spoke upon the organization of the church, showing necessity of same offices as were in the primitive Christian church; viz., apostles, prophets, seventies, elders, pastors, teachers, and deacons. (Eph. 4: 8-11; also 1 Cor. 12: 28; etc.)

August 27, at 7:30 a. m., the saints came together fasting and held quite a lengthy and profitable social service. At 1:30 p. m. the Sunday school convention of the district met, presided over by the superintendent, Bro. William Landers. Interesting speeches were made by a number of Sunday school workers, including Brn. Stebbins, Hart, Kent, Carson, and Huling, and Srs. Nelson, Landers, and Cook. Necessary business was also transacted. The officers of the district association being all sustained.

Friday morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. Goble and Hart. Two young sisters were confirmed at this meeting by Brn. H. A. Stebbins and William Landers. They had been baptized at an early morning hour by the latter. The Spirit of the Lord was present in power and all present seemed to rejoice. At eleven a. m. Bro. A. Hart preached, reading the eleventh chapter of revelation. Subject, The first mission of our Savior. God created the earth for man, giving him charge of it. The meek will finally inherit the earth. Closed with exhortation to the saints. At three p. m. Bro. C. D. Carson preached, his subject being the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith. The Bible provides for prophets.—Ephesians 4: 8-11. Joseph Smith was misunderstood and misrepresented same as other reformers, and Jesus and his apostles. The writer spoke in the evening upon the necessity of Christ's ministers being called by revelation.—Heb. 5: 4.

August 29, nine a. m. prayer service conducted by Bro. A. Kent. Preaching at eleven a. m. by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Spoke on the subject of authority, using as a text Romans 10: 16. We are careful that our title to earthly things is genuine. How much greater care should be used that our title to heavenly things be secure. There are two clear cases proving that it is not the purpose of God to forgive sins without the mediation of a man holding authority to administer the ordinances of the gospel. One is the case of Saul of Tarsus. "Behold he prayeth;" but remission of sins was not received until Ananias came and commanded Saul to arise and be baptized and "wash away your sins." The other case is that of Cornelius who was "a good man and prayed to God always." An angel came to him and directed him to send for Peter who would tell him what he ought to do. "And he commanded him to be baptized in the name of the Lord." Sermon on tithing by Bro. A. Smith, Bishop's agent, at three p. m. The writer did not hear this sermon. At eight p. m. Bro. A. Kent preached, reading Acts 3: 12. Prior to the sermon the three persons who were baptized during the day were confirmed by Brn. H. A. Stebbins, H. Hart, and W. S. Pender. The preacher said that the brethren who had preached at these meetings had quoted extensively from the Bible, giving book, chapter, and verse. People had an opportunity of determining whether their teachings are true. Christ came to save us from sin. Men sinned and the decree went forth: "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." Now it is different. Men eat bread by the sweat of their neighbors' brows. As soon as people obey the law the work of sanctification begins. Men are sanctified by the truth.

August 30, nine a. m., prayer and sacrament service in charge of Brn. A. Kent and Wm. Landers. Prior to the administration of sacrament two infants were blessed under hands of Brn. Wm. Landers and H. Hart. A very excellent meeting was enjoyed. Many short and inspiring testimonies being offered. All rejoiced together in the presence of the Lord. At three p. m. Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached, using a text found in 2 Thessalonians 2: 1. This text proves that there was to be a "falling away from the truth" ere Christ should come "in power and great glory." Prof. Swing says that the kingdom of God, either by accident or design, was shattered into a great many pieces. The rise of the great reformation proves a falling away from truth. John Wesley says: "It does not appear that extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost were enjoyed in the church for more than two or three centuries. The occasion of their loss was not because all the world had become Christian but rather because Christians had turned heathen again and had only a dead form left." We are, therefore, informed in Revelation 14: 6 that an angel would recommit the authority to preach the gospel with all its original ordinances. August 30, 8:30 p. m., Elder H. A. Stebbins spoke with reference to the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith. He read an extract from Matthew 23. People have always been ready to accept the idea that God did great things and spoke to the people in ages preceding their own; but it is very difficult to believe in such manifestations in the living present. Christ said: "Beware of false prophets," but he did not say beware of all prophets. He had placed prophets in his own church. In Deuteronomy 18: 20, 21, we are told if a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord and the thing follow not nor come to pass thou shalt not be afraid. We are willing to apply this test to Joseph Smith. The revelations of Joseph Smith teach the highest morality. The revelation announcing the rebellion of the Southern States was read and its fulfillment commented on. On page 239 Doctrine and Covenants the prophecy is recorded: "Not many days hence the stars shall fall from heaven" and in eleven months this was fulfilled. The fulfillment of many other prophecies of Joseph Smith was noted.

MAYSVILLE REUNION.

August 29, four p. m.—Business meeting of the Reunion was held at this hour, T. W. Chatburn in the chair. It was resolved to hold a reunion at Maysville, in 1897. A committee was elected composed of T. W. Chatburn, C. P. Faul, A. W. Head, Thomas Flanders, and William Lewis. Resolved that should a vacancy occur in the committee, the other members shall have power to fill the same. A vote of thanks was tendered to James Harvey for the use of his beautiful grove, also a vote of thanks to the officials of the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad Company for giving us rates and stopping trains at the ground. The new committee met and elected T. W. Chatburn president, C. P. Faul secretary and treasurer. At eight p. m. T. W. Chatburn preached to a large congregation.

Sunday, Aug. 30.—In the morning social meeting there were sixty-one testimonies borne, seven prayers offered, four prophecies, and one tongue. After the forenoon sermon, which was by Heman C. Smith, four were baptized by T. W. Chatburn in a beautiful lake on Mr. Harvey's farm. It is estimated that five hundred people witnessed the ordinance. Those baptized were confirmed by William Lewis, J. M. Terry, and T. W. Chatburn at three p. m. At this hour M. M. Turpen preached. The evening address was by Heman C. Smith.

August 31.—A prayer meeting was held prior to breaking camp. This reunion was the best ever held in Northern Missouri. The power of God was with his saints from the beginning. Those that were sick who came to be administered to were greatly benefited. Saints are rejoicing greatly. To God be the glory.

IOWA SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

BURLINGTON, IOWA, OCTOBER 1 TO 8, 1896.

It will be of interest to the people of this locality to know in what place at Burlington the State Semi-Centennial Celebration will be held. The outdoor events will take place in a newly opened park of ninety acres, covering a tract of natural woodland. This tract includes the brow of a high and steep bluff overlooking the grand rolling Mississippi and miles upon miles of the picturesquely wooded lowlands of Illinois. The events of an assembly character will be held in the Coliseum, a permanent structure now being built by the citizens of Burlington on land immediately adjoining the park. This building will have a seating capacity of nearly 10,000 people; in length it is 180 feet, in width 150 feet, and height 60 feet. It will cost about $13,000 and is intended for musical festivals and entertainments of like character, conventions, etc., after the celebration in October. The Mississippi River will be utilized for brilliantly lighted night carnivals, fireworks, etc.

BORN.

BOND.—To Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bond a child was given February 12, 1896. The name of Elizabeth Elsenia was given. She was blessed at the house of Bro. and Sr. Aspey, St. Joseph, Missouri, August 11, 1896, by J. M. Terry and R. A. Marchant.

DIED.

HOUCK.—Near Radcliffe, Iowa, August 10, 1896, William Henry, son of George and Maintainna Houck. Born May 12, 1863. Wife, and daughter Pearl, father, mother, two sisters, and one brother survive to mourn. Funeral at the M. E. church at Radcliffe. Sermon by Reverend Flint.

LEWIS.—May 28, 1896, to Bro. Evan and Sr. Lewis, a daughter; named Elizabeth Jennett. Blessed by Elder Dan Davies, June 7. Died July 13, 1896. Funeral sermon by Elder Dan Davies.

Not in anger nor in wrath
An angel came one day,
And took the flower away.

JACOBS.—Thomas Jacobs was the son of John James and Jane Thurston Jacobs, and was born March 15, 1821, at Wexford, Ireland. He came to Canada in 1831, and to the United States in 1834. He died at the home of Pres. Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Iowa, September 1, 1896, at 1:20 p. m. He was apprenticed to the cabinet and furniture business, and was an excellent and honest workman. He also learned the business of pattern making, and carpentry and joining. He built the house of President Joseph Smith in the spring and summer of 1881; built Elder Banta's house, the East Side schoolhouse, and several other buildings in Lamoni, and was a painstaking and diligent workman. His death was the result of a derangement of the stomach preventing food assimilation. He believed in God and the hereafter; but had no religious convictions other than that. Funeral services were held at the saints' church, Lamoni, in charge of Elder S. V. Bailey, Bro. M. H. Forscutt preaching the sermon; interment at Rose Hill cemetery.

RASMUSSEN.—Sr. Eliza Matilda, wife of Bro. N. H. Rasmusson, of Highmore, South Dakota, July 28, 1896. Sr. Rasmusson's maiden name was Miller. She was born January 24, 1856, in Polk County, Iowa; was married to N. H. Rasmusson, June 10, 1880, in Story County, Iowa. Moved to Hyde County, South Dakota, in the fall of 1888. Husband, four children, father, and a host of friends mourn. She was baptized and confirmed July 12, 1890, by Elder Charles Sheen. She was a woman of good education, being a school-teacher. Funeral sermon was preached by Elder Charles Sheen at the home of the deceased.

BOOKER.—Sarah J. Booker, born February 3, 1823; died June 12, 1896, at Whynot, Mississippi. She was baptized by Elder William A. Litz, January 28, 1866, at Lone Star, Alabama. She lived and died firm in the restored gospel. Seven children and a host of grandchildren mourn their loss.

SEIGFRIED.—George F. Seigfried, son of Margaret Head, and stepson of A. W. Head, July 31, 1896. He was born July 30, 1874, at Salem, Kansas. He was baptized by Elder E. D. Bullard, August 13, 1882, at Creston, Iowa. He was a noble young man and was making his mark both in temporal and spiritual matters. He was among the first-class school-teachers of DeKalb County, and was a Sunday school teacher in the Pleasant Grove branch. His sociability made him many friends, both in the church and out of it, which was manifest at his funeral, the church being packed inside and out. Nearly the whole congregation was in tears while the services were being held. He was buried at the Pleasant Grove cemetery, August 1; services conducted by Elder C. P. Faul, sermon by Elder William E. Summerfield.

HOLLAND.—It is with a sad feeling that I report the death of Bro. Richard Holland, of Armstrong branch, Kansas City, Kansas. Bro. Holland was accidentally killed on the Union Pacific railway while at work. He was employed as a car inspector and in some manner he got beneath the car wheels and was terribly mangled. He lived about an hour after the accident. The bereaved ones are Sr. Mary Holland (his wife) and three children, the oldest a boy of about fourteen years. Bro. Holland, with his wife, was baptized May 24, 1896, by the writer. He met his death August 20, 1896. He was a man of splendid principles and his only desire seemed to be to do what was right. Infinite is God's wisdom in caring for those of his children. May peace and blessings such as God alone can bestow, rest upon the bereaved family. Bro. Holland was born March 20, 1854, in London, England. The funeral sermon was delivered by Elder W. H. Pease.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895. Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition. Yours respectfully,

P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

COMMENT ON THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

THE Commonwealth (Baptist), Philadelphia, says:—

The Discipline now requires any Methodist pastor to immerse a new convert if he asks immersion and has not been baptized as a child. It is now proposed by the General Conference to permit each convert to choose to be immersed even if his parents had him baptized without consulting him in infancy. In the debate on the proposal to futher amend the Discipline, it was said that a full half million are in the Baptist denomination who would have naturally remained Methodists had the discipline been modified earlier. Inasmuch as we are all indebted to the Church of Rome for the rite of infant baptism, and inasmuch as such non-Baptist scholars as George Edward Steitz in Herzog freely admit that "There is no trace of infant baptism in the New Testament," we may happily congratulate our Cleveland brethren on their new light.

The Independent (Non-Sectarian), says:—

The element of patronage is a dangerous one in church or state, unless it is kept under effective safeguards. The elections to the episcopacy and other positions occupied at Cleveland the greater part of eight days, and were the cause of much excitement, delaying the important business of the conference and giving occasion for the charge that political methods were introduced. It was freely said that one of the best men failed of an election to the episcopacy because he had no office to vacate to give additional opportunity to the army of aspirants, and no shrewd managers to promote his candidacy. Is there not great peril in such a situation as this?

The Christian Leader (Universalist), Boston, says:—

The long agony in the General Conference of the M. E. Church over the election of two bishops is indicative of the extent to which politics has taken possession of John Wesley's family. Altogether similar to the balloting in legislatures and in political connections was the continued polling of the Conference. The great M. E. Church is so large a part of the country that its throes agitate the whole land. Whether this contributes to the prevalence of pure and undefiled religion is another question.—Public Opinion, June, 1896.

COMMENT ON THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY.

THE Congregationalist, Boston, says:—

The Presbyterian General Assembly at Saratoga appears to have been turned into something of a love feast, largely by the postponement of burning and divisive questions. But next year's docket will have these postponed and divisive questions to settle, with the addition of at least one heresy trial.

The Boston Herald says:—

The appointment of Dr. Withrow as the moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Saratoga was a measure intended to harmonize the liberals and the conservatives among Presbyterians. Since the strife in the Presbyterian Church over the Briggs affair, the subscriptions for benevolent objects have gone down from $7,000,000 to $1,000,000, and the time had come for a new deal.—Public Opinion, June, 1896.

The burning question "Are Anglican Orders Valid?" is learnedly discussed in the course of a second paper in The Catholic World Magazine for September, from the pen of the R v. Charles J. Powers.

IOWA'S SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

The fiftieth anniversary of the statehood of Iowa will be celebrated at Burlington, October 1-8, 1896. This event will be under the direction of a state commission appointed by Governor Drake. The following gentlemen constitute this commission:—

P. M. Crapo, Burlington; Colonel John Scott, Nevada, Iowa; George C. Henry, Burlington.

At the last session of the legislature the sum of $10,000 was appropriated of the State's funds to be used for the celebration, providing Burlington raised a like amount. Burlington raised more than the amount required, and is working hard to provide a suitable program for the entertainment of the citizens of Iowa and the guests of the State. Invitations have been sent to President Cleveland, members of his cabinet, governors of all the States, and other prominent men. Many of them have signified their intention of being present. There will be river carnivals, fireworks, oratory, reproduction of pioneer scenes on Old Settlers' Day, educational exhibit, the Iowa State Band, and a chorus of 500 trained voices, and numerous other features.—Advt.

According to a writer in The Christian Advocate who has lived in Jerusalem for forty years, the Jewish population of that city is increasing. "Twenty-two years ago," she says, "there were only between 15,000 and 20,000 Jews in Jerusalem. In those days no houses were to be found outside the magnificent walls, the gates of which are closed at night. Since then many changes have taken place and the Hebrew population—mainly on account of the increase of the Jewish immigration from Russia—now stands at between 60,000 and 70,000."—Literary Digest.

At a meeting held in Vienna, recently, consisting of members of the various religious bodies specified, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "The members of the Protestant, the Greek, the Anglican, and the old Catholic churches, at their meeting to-day, protest against the arrogance of the Pope, who has attempted, in his last encyclical, Satis cognitum, to present himself as the principle of freedom of the church, and Roman Catholic faith, the only faith which affords salvation; and express their conviction that not the slavish subjection demanded by Rome to papal infallibility and power, but agreement in the spirit of evangelical freedom and brotherly love, will lead to the union of all Christian churches, longed for by all noble minds."—Literary Digest.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portrayments of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

IS IT RIGHT?

EDITORS HERALD:—In the Gospel of St. John, chapter 7, verse 17, we find the following:—

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

Is it right and proper for Saints in their testimony to quote this passage of Scripture to fortify themselves in the statement they make when they say, "I know this is the work of God"?

The way I understand this saying of Jesus is, that he is referring to his work then in hand, and in nowise referring to the work which was to come forth eighteen hundred years in the future. With my understanding of the matter it is very trying to have this scripture so often repeated in our prayer meetings in reference to the latter-day work. And then it is often misquoted like this: "He who doeth the will of the Father shall know," etc.

I wish you would give us some plain talk in the Herald on the subject so that all controversy on the matter may come to an end.

So writes a brother from a distant city.

We do not know that we can write in such a way that all controversy will be stopped; we think to the contrary. However, as we entertain specific views on the subject we will give them.

The text is a marked one in gospel preaching and came about in the following way: The Jews' feast of tabernacles was about to be celebrated, and it was a question with Jesus and the disciples whether they should attend in the city at that feast. Jesus told the disciples to go, but that he would not then go. They went, he remaining in Galilee. After the disciples had gone Jesus followed after, unknown, secretly. The Jews sought him at the feast but did not find him there. Much talk was had concerning him, but none spake openly against him, fearing the Jews—we presume those who believed in him.

14. Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15. And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?

16. Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.—John 7: 14-17.

It is not directly stated in this quotation what it was that Jesus taught in the temple; but turning to the opening chapter of Mark's testimony we learn that the occupation of the Savior at the time was the "preaching of the kingdom of God." (See Mark 1: 15.)

It is clear, then, that at the time Jesus was teaching in the temple he was following the instruction of the Father, and teaching the things appertaining to the kingdom,—the gospel of the kingdom; the "doctrine of the gospel of the Son of God."

It must be admitted that in the commission given to the disciples as the same is stated in Matthew 28, and Mark 16, the words "he that believeth," were intended to be of universal application:—

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.

No one disputes this position. From that day to this it is held that the promise of salvation made in those words, in that commission, was intended to apply to all—every one, and to extend to all time.

Another instance is found in the Gospel according to St. John 3: 14-16. In this text the idea expressed is certainly clear, to the effect that whosoever, without limit either as to time or country, should believe in the Son of God, shall have everlasting life. The Son of Man was lifted up "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." And, it is repeated in a much more emphatic manner:—

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

The predicate, "For God so loved the world"—the whole world, and for all time; that to save it he gave his Son that every man who would believe "should have eternal life." In this, it seems to us there is no limit and no restriction; but that it is open to all, in every age.

It is repeated after Jesus' death, as certified to by John the Revelator, in different words, but similar import:—

And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely.—Rev. 22: 17.

In the eighth chapter of John's testimony it is stated that Jesus said to those Jews who had been converted and believed on him:—

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 31, 32.

This text is, if possible, more limited in its application than the one being examined, and yet it is construed to apply to those who now profess belief in Jesus and essay to keep his word, and that if they do so keep within the lines of, or abide in his word, they are to receive a knowledge that shall make them free indeed.

The text being considered is more easily understood and applied to present conditions and time, because of difference in expression; as Jesus does not say "He that doeth the will of my Father," which might possibly be construed as being applicable to those he was immediately addressing only, but he said:—

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine.

It is as clearly of universal application as words can make it.

We believe that Jesus intended to give the sentiment world-wide meaning; so that wherever his doctrine, the doctrine of God who sent him, should be taught, preached, and believed, there should be attendant on the word, the ministration of the Spirit by which men should be given to know whether the doctrine was of God, or of Jesus only.

It may sometimes be irksome to some who are more finely constituted than others may be, to hear men make use of the text in the manner the question intimates; but, will that vitiate the text or make its application incorrect? Decidedly not. Some may use the text and declare that they do know, of whom some sitting by may have reasons to doubt their probity and steadfastness of character, and this may create a dislike to having the text so applied; but this will not make the word itself void, nor make it necessarily a misapplication in the period and under the conditions in which the gospel is now preached, heard, and obeyed, and saints called to live in its requirements.

It may be that some use the text in a vain and boastful way, the manner in which the testimony they bear is given itself being objectionable, in which case while the text is not misapplied, in a general sense, it is made to sound incongruous to those who believe that sacred things should be used in a reverential way, and thus offense is given which is unfortunate for both him who speaks and him who hears.

We believe it is the privilege for men who obey the word of doctrine from the heart and in the spirit of it to know that the doctrine is of God and that Jesus is the Christ; and we can see no harm in a man bearing the testimony to the facts, in a proper and becoming manner, giving offense to none.

May the Lord lead us all into the right way of doing things proper to be done, should be the prayer of all.

CLERGY PUTS BAN ON PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

ST. LOUIS, Missouri, Sept. 9.—The priests of the Archdiocese, of St. Louis, have met for the purpose of revising the laws governing the action of clergy and laity. In the promulgations resulting from the meeting is a section which states that in parishes where parochial schools have been established, Catholics shall send their children to them or to other Catholic schools in the city. Under no circumstances shall the children be sent to the public institutions. The same section includes a clause stating that schools shall be built in every parish in the city, and if the laity have reasons for not sending their children to them these reasons shall be presented to a commission to be appointed by the Archbishop. Those not observing this rule shall be refused absolution for their sins.

Membership in the Freemasons is not allowed under pain of excommunication, and the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, and others are also barred.

Catholics will not hereafter be allowed to sing in the choirs of Protestant churches, as many have been doing, on account of the salary connected.

Those who take cognizance of the spirit of leading movements will note the above press item concerning the attitude of the Catholic clergy toward our public school system. If true, and we regret to state that there seems little or no reason to doubt it, which will finally prove the stronger and prevailing sentiment among the Catholic people, love for country, or blind adherence to the dictates of the Catholic priesthood?

A system of religion that dreads the results of its adherents coming in contact with the American public school system, and the educational effects of such contact, is manifestly at variance with and in direct opposition to the spirit of the age. It is also contrary to the order of nature itself; for it is a scientific psychological truth that to correctly educate man is to teach him to discriminate between truth and error—to educate him to know and to love the truth, not from coercion but from a personal desire to adhere to it.

Catholicism will not always be able to hold men to its measures and policies. The spirit of the times is permeating the masses with a view to the ultimate emancipation of everyone. The propaganda of the St. Louis Catholic clergy is both unscriptural and un-American, and can scarcely hope for complete success among American Catholics. That many may heed it is not to be denied; but that many Catholics themselves will not do so, we believe. Repeated efforts to control the laity and to dominate them will doubtless prove disastrous to the Roman Catholic Church in America in time.

The spirit of our national life is fatal to such measures of the clergy. It is not to be denied that the general forces at work in the daily life and routine of the people are such as to prompt them finally to rebel against measures that dictate in the control and education of their children. Rome is no longer the dictator of the religious and national policies of the world. The spirit of our modern world is Anglo-Saxon. Westward the course of empire takes its way.

The wheels of progress are not reversible; they go forward.

THE Cherokee, Iowa, Times, of August 27 publishes the following, which shows that Bro. C. J. Hunt is awake and trying to stir up the people in his field. He is a live young man:—

LATTER DAY SAINTS,—NOT MORMONS.

Services will continue at the gospel tabernacle every evening this week, and Sunday, at 3:30 and eight p. m.

We claim to present the New Testament church in organization, ordinances, faith, and practice. On the question of water baptism we affirm the Bible teaches but one mode—immersion; that pouring and sprinkling, calling it baptism, was instituted by man long after the days of the Savior. We also claim that infant baptism is not a scriptural ordinance and cannot be substantiated by the New Testament.

Written questions on doctrine or church history, cheerfully entertained and read at the tabernacle. Come and hear before passing judgment on these questions.

With malice toward none, I am,
Yours for truth and right,

C. J. HUNT.

CONFIDENCE.

EACH of the leaders of the too great parties now appealing to the citizens of the United States for their support in the pending election express the sentiment that one of the main things to be done now to restore the country to a condition of prosperity is to re-establish confidence in all classes in the ways and methods of political governmental management, and it may be that both of these now leading minds have a proper conception of the situation. It is a suggestive theme for it brings to mind the travail of that great soul to whom was confided the bringing about the redemption of the human race.

He asks for the confidence of the human heart that he is and that he will do for each and all what he has promised:—

He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

THE Armenian Relief Association, which has its location in New York City, has sent us a circular letter setting forth the deplorable condition of the persecuted Armenians, and asking for pecuniary aid from all disposed to help in the effort the society is making; directing that all donations of money or property be sent to Charles H. Stout, Treasurer, of the Armenian Relief Association, National Bank of the Republic, No. 2 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

The circular is too long for insertion in HERALD in the present crowded condition of affairs; so we content ourselves by giving this notice, that all who feel for Armenia's woes, and have any means to devote to the amelioration of them may know how to reach an organized effort to accomplish the object sought. Organized charities are usually the most direct and safest.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRN. J. C. CRABB and J. W. Wight, at Pierson, Iowa; press item:—

Elders Crabb and Wight are now conducting a series of tent meetings at Pierson. They represent the Reorganized Latter Day Saints and have no affinity with the people in Utah. The Reorganized Church has missionaries throughout the United States, in Europe, Australia, and the islands of the seas, with its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. In the progress of the above tent meetings, each week night at 8:15 and Sundays at three and eight p. m., they give liberty for questions and a free exchange of thought. Give them a hearing.

Bro. A. J. Epling, writing August 28, from Drytown, California:—

Our God has spoken to this people here by the mouth of our beloved Bro. Thomas Daley, one of the Seventy; and eight precious souls have answered by following Jesus through the waters of baptism. Mountains of prejudice rolled back into oblivion, and our God and his Jesus, our Savior, were glorified. O may this glorious gospel never cease its work until Jesus shall say, 'Tis enough—I have a people; I will come with the mighty heavenly hosts, to usher in the millennial reign. My saints to give peaceful rest. Bro. Thomas Daley has baptized into the kingdom to date thirty-two since April 6, and still the good work is being heralded by him to poor souls who sit in darkness.

Bro. Thomas Street, of Midway, Utah, now in the seventy-ninth year of his age, writes at a late date, as follows:—

I was pleased to hear of your teaching to the saints at Lamoni of Jesus telling them of old who were his brothers, and sisters, and mothers. If we can do the will of the Father, we shall be his brethren and sisters and mothers, if we follow his examples. The elders have different fields of labor, and they are sent forth to glean the honest-hearted, and preach the gospel to them that are in darkness and in the valley of the shadow of death. I always had an instinct in me, from a little boy that told me right from wrong, although I did not do right at all times; so I take the blame to myself. We can bring destruction on ourselves, as the Jews did by rejecting the teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ. We are in the world and we must resist the evils if we expect to escape the judgments. I must now conclude, praying that God will guide and direct us in all truth and righteousness.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths, writing from Creola, Ohio, September 7, states:—

The West Virginia district conference, held at Goose Creek, West Virginia, the 22d to the 24th ult., was indeed a great success. Quite a number from Wheeling and Bellaire were in attendance. Brethren D. L. Shinn and G. H. Godby were present, and were in the best of spirits. The good Spirit of God attended our efforts throughout the entire sessions. I am now on my way to Vales Mills, to attend the Ohio district conference. I preach here to-night and go to Radcliff in the morning.

Bro. J. W. Wight, Correctionville, Iowa, September 7:—

We are having a most excellent hearing and expect to trouble the water next Sunday.

Bro. Columbus Scott, Milo, Iowa, August 7:—

Interest here is at high tide; tent overflowing, prejudice melting like snow before the sun. Liberty Center and Sandyville await the tent, and expectation is on tiptoe at those points. Bro. Kephart is doing a good work in this county. Bro. Thompson was at Colo, Marshall County, occupying the Christian church. Do not know where Bro. Roth is, but presume he is busy, as he usually is. May be at Liberty Center, where we go Thursday, 10th, from seven to ten days, and then to Sandyville. Our district conference convenes at Runnells, October 3 and 4, and we are anticipating a large attendance. Brn. Joseph Smith and Bishop Kelley will be with us at that time, if it is possible for them to be there. The latter partly promised to attend. I believe the forthcoming History of the Church by President Joseph and Apostle H. C. Smith is just the one thing needful by all the saints, friends of the work, and all others. The magnitude of the great latter-day work is not fully to be conceived without this general history of the work. I hope the saints of this district will order it at once, for the work's sake. I trust the ministry of the different fields will write of it in the Herald and Ensign, as saints generally read the letters of those they know first, and in particular.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SOME one sends us a copy of the Reading, California, Free Press, with an account of Japanese traditions, said to have been related by Ex United States Minister to Japan, John A. Bingham, of a small Japanese migration to America, which lost its identity among the aborigines of California and Mexico, but left traces of Hindoo religion and mythology received from India.

A sister, Mrs. E. A. Bennett, a widow, living at Rock, Kentucky, desires to ask of the Saints, if they will kindly inquire for her, if a place may be found where she can have a home, and work at which she can make a living. Sr. Bennett is able and willing to do any kind of farm work such as women do. She has three boys, all stout and hearty and able to work. She would like to get a place near a school and the church. Should anyone know of such an opportunity write to Sr. Bennett, addressing as above.

Original Poetry.

"CONTINUE YE IN MY LOVE."

'Tis false to say, when first we love,
That love should deeper be
Than when in years we ought to prove
So those without can see;
True gospel faith will e'er impart
To each true heart the power
The Lord to love with all our heart
Till fled is life's last hour.

'Twill help us to our neighbor love
E'en as we do ourself;
Nor should we let aught ever move
Us with fear; nor Satan pelf
The peace that flows, where love's supreme;
Our hearts grow cold and stern,
Nor take offense when it might seem
Rage must within us burn.

The Master said when he was here
That we should perfect be;
Now perfect love casts out all fear;
From fear we should be free.
He who does his brother love,
Will ne'er his presence shun;
He who loves his God above
Will with his Saints be one.

God's word has said, How can he love
The God he has not seen,
Who does his heart with hatred move
To those with whom he's been?
'Tis futher said he is untrue
Who doth his brother hate,
And then profess to love and know
The One whose love's so great,

That when the world in sin and death
His mercy did behold;
His only Son, the Scripture saith,
His love did not withhold;
But freely gave the sacrifice,
That could for sin atone,
Who only could full pay the price,
The wine press tread alone.

CHRISTIAN POSITION OF WOMEN.

Text.—“For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all things are of God.”—1 Corinthians 11: 12.

THIS message I have from God. If ever God gave me a message he gives me this. In this place, only honest words must be spoken—sincere, faithful, true. I am not here as an apologist, antagonist, or eulogist of women. I have to-day nothing to do with sentiment as sentiment.

Let Shakespeare say,

“Frailty, thy name is woman!”

Let the ancient proverb declare that “a continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike.” Let Pope assert that “woman’s at best a contradiction still.”

Let Otway sing: “Oh, woman! lovely woman! Nature made thee to temper man; we had been brutes without you.” And then alter his note and sing:—

“What mighty ills have not been done by woman?

Who was’t betrayed the capitol?—a woman.

Who lost Mark Antony the world?—a woman.

Who was the cause of a long ten years’ war.

And laid at last old Troy in ashes?—woman.

Destructive, damnable, deceitful woman!”

Let Scott apostrophize:—

“O, woman! in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please.

When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou.”

Let Wordsworth praise woman as “A creature not too bright or good

For human nature’s daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles.
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill;
A perfect woman, nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort, and command.”

With these sentiments as sentiment I have now and in this place nothing to do. In reverence to woman in her best state, and in tenderness for woman in her relation to me, I yield to no man the palm of greater devotion. My sense of obligation to the women who have touched my life and largely molded my character is profound. The very little I have achieved is under God almost wholly due to the inspiration I have received from them—not in making it so little, but in making that little as much as it is—“for nothing lovelier can be found in woman than to study household good, and good works in her husband to promote,”—with tenderness and reverence I bow, believing with the great apostle that “the woman is the glory of the man,” and that “all things are of God.”

Did I not believe that “he who built all things is God,” a God of wisdom, power, and love, I would not waste your time in an effort to learn the meaning of God in making man and woman. Believing as I do, I believe that an intelligent knowledge of the meaning of God in the creation of man as both male and female will largely solve the present problems as to the relation of men and women, and woman’s place in Christian civilization, in the minds of those, at least, who yet believe that there is a God and Father of all men. God is not yet out of date; and his meaning is yet the only intelligible theory of human genesis, significance, and destiny. Every theory that repudiates the creative energy of God is far less satisfactory than that which declares that “he who built all things is God.”

Putting to one side, then, all resentment against the fact that the principles of righteousness are fundamental, and all chafing under the fact that God-made distinctions are both wise and eternal, our best duty is to learn, if we can, what God meant by creating man, male and female, and whether that interpretation of his meaning is correct which is given in the text: “The woman is of the man; the man by the woman; and all things are of God.”

God made man, male and female. He divided man into male and female. Each fraction is necessary to constitute the unit, and each is as necessary as the other. In order to constitute man you must add the two fractions, male and female, together. Neither without the other is man. They are equal. There is not, in my view, in all this, any assertion of or any ground for maintaining the inequality of men and women. Any assertion of it on one hand or any complaint against it on the other is excluded by the fact declared that God made man, male and female. There is no intimation that one half was made superior and the other half inferior. The question does not enter in any more than if you were to take a perfect sphere and divide it equally, would there be room for claiming superiority for the one half and inferiority for the other. They are simple halves of a perfect whole. Nor does the fact that the male was made first establish the superiority of the male half over the female half.

This world is made of land and water.

According to Genesis the water was made first. The whole material creation was “waste and void;” “darkness was upon the face of the deep;” “the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters;” “and God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so. And God called the dry land Earth; and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.”

But it is not said that he saw one was better than the other. For his purposes it was good and necessary for the material universe to be divided into land and water. One was not more necessary than the other. One was not superior to the other. Each was as good and as necessary as the other. The male was made first, we are told. But that is an order of time merely. It is not a declaration of quality. The simple fact is that what we understand by the inequality of the sexes as sexes is nowhere asserted in the Scriptures, and there is no point to the claim or the complaint that men and women are not equal—equally necessary, equally valuable, equally capable for all God’s intention and meaning in dividing his human creation into male and female.

There is then no subordination of the one to the other—that is, such subordination as would disturb the divinely established equality of the sexes. There is a good deal of rather warm colored rhetoric expended in eloquent resentment against the supposed claim that woman is subordinate to the man. It is a waste of both eloquence and energy. The notion of subordination the modern advocates of woman’s emancipation denounce does not seem to me to be the notion of subordination that the Scriptures hold. The Scriptural subordination of woman to man does not seem to me to be a qualitative subordination, any more than the subordination of the Son to the Father in the Holy Trinity is a qualitative subordination. Each is equal to the other. The Son is as much God as God is God. They are of the same essence, quality, being. And yet there is a certain subordination of the one to the other in their differing spheres of operation. In the dualism we call man, each person is equal to the other. The female is as much man as man is man. The only subordination is a subordination of one to the other in their differing spheres of operation. There is no doubt that their spheres are distinct, although equally important and necessary. And there is as little doubt that each sex is divinely qualified for its distinctive sphere; each better qualified for its own sphere than for that of the other.

Men and women are manifestly not meant for exactly the same things. Had they been intended for exactly the same things and distinguished from each other as at present a well-ordered development of life would have been impossible—and God is a God of order. The land and the water into which the earth is divided without having superior or inferior qualitative endowment are nevertheless each better adapted to its sphere of operations. The water unquestionably is better for fish, and the land for corn. A man can do better what God intended him to do. A woman can do better what God intended her to do. This fact is not disturbed by this other fact that occasionally women have excelled men in masculine arts and occasionally men have excelled woman in feminine arts. The rule is that there are certain things man can do better than woman, simply because he is a man—not because he is more worthy, more valuable, or more intellectual. Just as there are certain things woman can do better than man, simply because she is a woman—not because she is his superior or inferior in intellect. Almost all this mischievous clamor for woman’s emancipation from the duties of her own proper realm and this intolerable demand that she be given the right to invade those dominions from which her sex excludes her, grows out of the ignorant notion that nothing is involved in sex but gender. That there is much more than this in the separation of man into sexes is evident from the intent of revelation and the whole history of the human race. Sex marks a distinction in mind and soul as well as in body—and the sphere of operations is determined by the peculiar adaptability of mind and soul and body to the special demands and possibilities of that sphere. And order is possible only on the supposition that as a rule woman will do things for which she is better equipped than man, and man will do those things for which he is better equipped than woman. The differing spheres of men and women are defined by what is involved in their providential separation into sexes. I believe that the history of the world shows beyond doubt that mankind more steadily wins the goal of destiny when men and women advance with equal step—pari passu—along their particular lines as they are marked out by Providence. And I believe that the better progress of the race is obstructed whenever either sex thrusts itself or allows itself to be thrust into the special realm of the other.

Moreover, I believe that wisdom is justified whenever men and women are content to operate within the sphere to which each sex is limited by the purpose of God and the order of nature. There is abundance of opportunity in the sphere of each for the amplest exercise of all physical, mental, and moral powers with which the sexes as sexes are endowed. There is no demand or excuse for either to transcend the limits of a well-defined sphere in order to secure a broader and better adapted field. I believe God knew what he was doing when he separated man into sexes and imbedded in their natures a distinction of function and duty which, when violated, is a violation both of the will of God and the constitution of nature.

Therefore, in my understanding, there is no reasonable ground for rivalry between the sexes—no more than there is reasonable ground for rivalry between land and water. Water is better where it is, and land is better where it is. The whole of nature would be disturbed if the water should grow ambitious to raise corn, and the land should try to bring forth fish. For the best results each should be satisfied to operate within the divinely ordered definitions of its own sphere.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. H. W. BELVILLE requests your prayers for his brother, Harvey M., who is very low from typhoid fever.

Letter Department.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, Sept. 3.

Editors Herald:—I have been conducting tabernacle meetings in this city for three weeks. Bro. W. W. Whiting came to assist me two days ago. Bro. and Sr. N. Hayes and daughter Lulu live here and are earnest workers. Sr. Lulu furnishes instrumental music.

The "Christians" dedicated their church-house at this place, August 23. I attended the morning service; was invited into the pulpit and requested to read the Scripture lesson, and did so. After the sermon by Rev. Haggard, he announced that they needed one thousand dollars. An hour was devoted to "dunning," then they lacked seven hundred, which they hoped to raise at the afternoon and evening services. Only a few men present, as they are a little careful about attending church dedication exercises.

On the 24th ult., I was called to Ayrshire, Iowa, by telegram, to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Eliza J. Devault. The services were held in the M. E. church and the attendance was large. The writer was blessed in presenting the soul-cheering theme of the resurrection. Brn. D. King, C. L. Carmichael, and Sr. N. Hayes paid my car fare. May the blessings of God attend his saints everywhere.

Your brother,

C. J. HUNT.

GARDEN GROVE, Cal., Aug. 26.

Editors Herald:—The work in these parts is moving slowly. The "revolving lights" have passed on and we are now dwelling in the dim twilight of the "tallow-dips," waiting the revolutions of the great lights, that the warming over process may begin—the times of refreshing.

I have just returned from a trip into San Diego County, and start in the morning for the northern part of the district. I am satisfied that none are hungering for gospel food in Southern California. We of the South keep them fed, so there are no cries of hunger. I have been thinking that it might be best that the California elders go East and supply those in need there, seeing all wants are supplied here.

Silver money seems to be more sought after here just now than gospel. Gospel work never did go very fast in the West, and it will go still more slowly until after the election.

Our reunion at Downey was a pleasant and I think a fairly profitable one, made more so by the presence of Bro. Luff. In hopes of better times we will try and continue on in the work.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

BANNING, Pa., Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—We were organized on the 24th of May, 1896, by Elder G. T. Griffiths, with nine members. I was a member of the Bickerton organization for a number of years. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Pittsburg, in August, 1895, one year ago this month, and was the first member of the Reorganized Church up in this valley, with the exception of Bro. and Sr. Robert Perrie, of Fayette City, who preceded me about two months. We now have thirteen in this valley and a couple who do not belong to the branch, who have lately been baptized and are now on their way to the West, who were members of the Bickerton branch.

We are receiving letters from some of our brethren, who are talking of coming here to find the difference between the Reorganized Church and the one they formerly belonged to. They believe in restoration, and also that the church should be governed by law; and as there has been a law given in this last dispensation, we mean to bring every man's claims to the law and to the testimony, as we brought our own testimony; and while we see we were without the law and knew nothing of it, we were without sin so far; when we became convinced of the law of this nineteenth century, we became convinced of sin, for not keeping the law.

The Bickerton organization ignored the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and I think on account of the revelation given February, 1831, where God speaks to the elders of his church; and that is what convinced me when I saw it, and I was convinced of all those that claimed to be prophets and seers.

We have had Bro. D. L. Shinn here, preaching to us, who was also once one of our laborers in the Bickerton organization; and he gave all the Bickerton organization a good welcome into the Reorganized Church by doing the will of God, speaking unto them as a servant of God, in meekness and humility, which I think will end in good. He baptized three. I have also baptized three since he left us, and preached three funeral sermons, two being outside of the church; the other was that of Bro. Hileman's little boy.

The saints all seem to be lively stones in the building, and the work, we believe, will go on. All we need is laborers. The fields are many, but there are lots of scattered sheep on these mountains who need to be gathered into the fold. May the Lord bless all his saints here and everywhere.

Your brother,

JOSEPH MAXON.

ANDERSON, Mich., Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—I opened up the work here last February and have labored here two or three times since, and have baptized thirteen, some of whom were members of the Methodist Church. This was too much for the Methodists, so they sent for Mr. Joseph Musser to champion their cause; so it has been arranged that he and Elder H. C. Bronson should enter into a debate which begins on Monday, the 31st.

Mr. Musser affirms that the Methodist Protestant Church is the Church of God and is in harmony with the Scriptures in doctrine and organization; and Elder Bronson affirms the same for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

There seems to be a good interest here, and we hope and pray that the debate will terminate with good results.

Yours in bonds,

LEVI PHELPS.

CHARTER OAK, Iowa, Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—The debate between Bro. J. F. McDowell and Elder W. W. Blalock of the Christian Church, so-called, closed at Arion, Iowa, on the evening of the 3d inst. with a victory for the truth, or at least so it appears to me. Elder Blalock has quite a knack of enlisting the people's prejudice and holding it, though his methods are very questionable. Indeed, no true minister for Christ can afford to score a victory by such means; or, if they can, they are welcome to it, so far as I am concerned. Elder Blalock's bold assumptions, wit, and misrepresentations made many of those not acquainted with our work think he was the victorious disputant, until on the last two evenings, when the tide of opinion very largely turned to the side of Bro. McDowell and the truth he was defending.

The propositions discussed covered the doctrine, organization, and practice of each church; and notwithstanding Elder Blalock's assertion to the contrary, this debate was forced upon us, as the facts which led to this debate appear to me. In his last speech Elder Blalock said: "You baptized a live man for a dead man at Dow City, you know you did! When I debated with I. N. White I made him acknowledge that you practiced baptism for the dead, that's what I did!" Bro. McDowell denied the statement of Elder Blalock that one had been baptized for the dead at Dow City or anywhere else by the Reorganization. After the debate closed Elder Blalock said: "Now, before we leave this tent I want to know if there are any persons present who know that my statement about these people baptizing for the dead is true. If so, let them stand up." Whereupon Mrs. Valdo Talcott and Mrs. Ellen Richards stood up, and the latter said it did not take place at Dow City, but at Galland's Grove. "I was there fourteen years ago and saw three persons baptized for the dead; and Joseph Smith was there." I told the audience that I was sure these ladies were mistaken, as I had been a member of the church ever since the fall of 1861 and knew that the church did not practice baptism for the dead; that they could not do so without violating the revelations given to the church. As the congregation was passing out, Mrs. Valdo Talcott said, within the hearing of myself and a number of the members of the church and outsiders, that she had seen Mr. Joseph McColl baptized for his brother Dock (Hyrum), at Galland's Grove.

The next morning I called on Mr. Joseph McColl, who lives at Dow City, who gave me the following written statement with reference to the matter:—

"DOW CITY, Iowa, Sept. 3, '96.

"To All Whom it May Concern:—This is to certify that I was never baptized for my dead brother, Hyrum McColl, or anyone else but myself, though it was his dying request that I should do so; as, the ministers of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints told me it could not be done. I am willing to give an affidavit to this effect if necessary. Respectfully,

"JOSEPH MCCOLL."

Mr. McColl is at present a member of the M. E. Church at Dow City, and his statement will be published in the Dow City Enterprise and the Arion Enterprise of this week, together with a short statement by the writer.

When last heard from, Bro. C. J. Hunt was holding tent meetings at Cherokee and was expecting Bro. W. W. Whiting to assist him.

The few Saints at Defiance, Iowa, and vicinity have concluded to hold a Sunday school and social meetings at that place in order to assist the children and young members to more fully understand the truth, and enable them to walk in the light and to enjoy their portion of spiritual life. Brn. J. F. McDowell and R. Wight were with them and assisted on Sunday, the 30th ult., when they undertook the good work. It is, under the circumstances, a noble undertaking, and God will bless them in their work if they are humble, faithful, and persevering in their efforts. They are about all members of the Galland's Grove branch, and the officers of that branch will please see that all necessary help is furnished, and the missionary force will assist them when they can.

Our missionaries are encouraged, the saints hopeful, and all goes fairly well.

In bonds,

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

CHARTER OAK, Iowa, Sept. 5.

Saints' Herald:—Tried, true, and substantial Herald of the gospel, many years have you stood in the front at battle for the right; uncompromisingly have you maintained a loyal position toward the kingdom of God amidst the intriguing of subtle forces; unyieldingly have you withstood the attacks of a smiling foe, or the scorn of a mistaken friend! For all this you are to be heartily congratulated; for such effort has been weaving for your brow a victor's laurel. We have seen in some religious periodicals a headline, "Our easy chair," and read of its sitting in shady bowers by a lakeside, or ocean, or gulf view, enjoying a cooling breeze, during the summer solstice. We queried, "Where is the Herald's 'easy chair'?" Talk about heroes! They live too often unrecognized; but eternity will tell. God bless the sturdy, silent, untiring laborer for Zion's weal; and the moistening eyes say, Amen!

Still we live, move, and have a being in this great latter-day work; and our heart beats warmly with a glow of unspeakable gratitude because of the foundation other than which no man can lay; upon which we build our hope for eternity, trusting to the un-failing certainty of God's promises. Bro. C. E. Butterworth has penned you respecting a religious altercation at Arion, Iowa, of recent date. How brightly shines the truth, and fearlessly walks to the front for inspection. If the Book of Mormon is such a "monstrous absurdity," and the Doctrine and Covenants a "vile teacher of crime," as our opponents allege, it appears passing strange that we advertise them so freely, and that our membership loan them so readily to borrowing friends. They are sold even to these "orthodox" warriors, and they wield them as a battle axe; but they act real clumsily about it.

That Palmyra Seer is a thorn in the side of "this generation," and has been for seventy years. If there is no God in this "latter-day work" what is all this fussing about? We are so very glad that God blesses the defense of his own cause by an outpouring of the Holy Spirit as we enjoyed on evening of the 2d inst. The day does not come to mind when we were filled with the Spirit as on that evening!

"O, what a foretaste of glory divine!"

God helped us to show up Campellism in its weakness, inconsistency, bold pretensions, presumptuous claims; "a form of godliness denying the power thereof."

Their elder, W. T. Moore, declared that, "so far as human instrumentality was concerned, it cannot be denied that Campbell was the man who conceived, organized, and made successful the present reformation."

This was like a two-edged sword against them, and the Spirit forced it home with power. The audience seemed spell-bound and our opponent perspired profusely! How humbly thankful all saints should be unto our heavenly Father for the gospel restored, and that it has come unto us "not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance;" and we know that "It pays to serve the Lord, I speak from my heart;

He'll always be with us, if we do our part;

There's naught in this wide world can pleasure afford,

There's peace and contentment in serving the Lord."

The writer has always sought the help of the Lord to preach the word. Never have we entered the pulpit without private prayer first, knowing that of such work Jesus said: "Without me ye can do nothing;" and again: "If ye have not the Spirit ye shall not teach;" and we believe that no elder in this church who understands the genius of "the work" would even dare to entertain a thought of depending upon his own intellectual resources, however extensive they might be. The faith of the people is not to rest in the wisdom of man but in the power of God. Whatever may be the successes attendant upon our public ministrations, we are always to bear in mind that "He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord." The work being of God, he the originator of the holy message of life which we promulge, we are called upon to ever have in memory the necessity of depending upon him for guidance, utterance, light, wisdom, and understanding, so that no flesh may glory in his presence, for our sufficiency is of God. There can be no vain glorying in this church; God's Spirit and human pride do not harmonize; untainted sincerity, unfeigned humility, living, active trust in God are all demanded at our hands.

We are called upon to labor for the salvation of mankind, and doing so faithfully we can afford to leave results with the Lord. We are assured that he has spoken in these latter days; the obeying thousands testify to the confirmation of their faith, the verity of the message received. The rapidly increasing multitude testify that "The Holy Spirit is sent down like as in days of old,

To bring to mind things that are past and things to come unfold."

And we

"Thank the Lord that we have lived to see

The good he bringeth in the latter day."

Confiding in his promises, I am, in the faith,

J. F. MCDOWELL.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 5.

Editors Herald:—The results of my labors at Kerrville were seven good meetings and much interest.

I wish to notify the saints and all who are interested in theological wars in these parts that I have completed arrangements to meet

Mr. A. J. McCarty, Christian minister, in public discussion at Kerrville, Texas, September 23; discussion to continue four nights on two propositions, involving the organization, doctrine, faith, practice, and teaching of both churches. This will be a largely attended debate. We look for from six to eight hundred to be in attendance.

We missionaries are happy as larks down here over a nice buggy, and Bro. Neal has promised us a pony to drive. The buggy is to be the property of the district, and the saints are contributing nicely toward paying for their buggy and harness. Now we can go everywhere and anywhere.

I ask and invite all that can effect an opening anywhere and want my help to let me know. We are pretty well filled up with calls now, but there is always room for one more.

We expect Bro. I. P. Baggerly here in a few days. May the Lord bless his work here, and elsewhere, and fill his people full of zeal and knowledge,

Your brother,
H. P. CURTIS.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—It seems to be a long time since I left the councils of the busy workers gathered in Kirtland to worship the God of our fathers in the temple of the Lord, and one scene from the many of those days is fixed upon my mind. It is early Sunday morning and many men, old, middle aged, and young, leave the various houses and are wending their way towards the "Temple." They are going to meet in the upper chamber of that hallowed building in prayer and fasting—high priests, bishops, the Twelve, and seventies, uniting their voices in song of praise, in supplication, in exhortation and testimony. And God was with them; such a hallowed influence I never felt. And when the spirit of supplication rested upon a brother and his whole soul seemed to be filled with the spirit of prayer, as he gave utterance to his desires and voiced the wishes of that assembly, we felt surely that our Master was near, and that it was a blessed thing to wait upon the Lord. And those men left that room that day with the spirit of love, fellowship, and calm reliance and trust in God, which is so beautiful in the children of a great King. And who that was there will ever cease to remember that conference, and the serenity of mind of those who were there, of the calmness of the deliberations, (almost without exception,) of the intricate and important questions which were disposed of with such unity of sentiment, with such apparent desire that justice and judgment should obtain, which gave us a foretaste of the joy we shall receive when all the "watchmen shall see eye to eye!"

But what produced the hush, the quiet, the solemnity that rested upon that august assemblage, if it was not the shadow, forecast, of that great sorrow which would cause a whole church to mourn? for at that time the message came that would remove a prince of the house of Israel from his important duties and toils and cares in the church of God on earth, to his sweet rest in the paradise of God. But the record of that conference is made. Is it in the record of the "acts of men in the six thousandth year"? And will we have to account for our part in it? May the gracious Master deal kindly with us and have mercy on us.

The conference is over. That noble band of Christ's ministers are moving out in every direction, to preach the gospel, to assist in the redemption of Zion, and to prepare a people to meet the coming Savior. And accompanied by Brn. A. H. Smith and F. A. Smith I left Kirtland, the Temple, and all its hallowed scenes behind, and wended our way westward, and was privileged to enjoy a day in the great city of Chicago, under the care of good saints there; then on to Montrose, on the banks of the great river, and there the mysterious wires flashed the sad news to us that Bro. Blair, from whom we had parted but a few hours previously, had ceased his labors—his life's work was ended: and while much anticipated work for Zion's good was yet undone, while in the car of Nahum's chariot on his way, and about his Master's business, he was called hence—earth may not retain him longer. He has left us an example we may emulate of zeal, industry, faithfulness, love for Zion and her cause, and a life devoted to doing good. The servant of God whose hands he so often upheld so unflinchingly, will no longer have his help in conveying the precious things of God to the children of the household of faith. Firm and unwearied in his toil and care for Zion he labored unceasingly.

His family and the companion of his youth will no longer hear his cheery, encouraging voice, his steady counsel, nor comforting words by the fireside. And she—is she not left to mourn? Yea, and to rejoice also. But did she not bow under the tempest of that great sorrow? Ah yes! But look through the dews of that weeping countenance and see the clear shining joy produced by her faith in God, and although you may think that she, like the "perfect man," should say, "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me!" yet you might see the exultation produced by perfect faith in God which would say, Why should not I rejoice in my Savior? Has he not touched me, even me his child? And so with increased faith in God she says humbly, "Father, thy will be done." O precious faith, that which sees the hand of God in these things, and knows that he who permits the sorrow assuages the grief; who permits death restores life, and gives peace here and a crown of glory beyond!

And now the boat is all ready and we will row across to beautiful Nauvoo. See the grassy streets, now disturbed only by an occasional pedestrian; they were once without grass because of the multitude of feet of boys and girls, of men and women, of the gentle horse and faithful ox, then so noisy with activity everywhere, now so quiet, so still! But we saw the far-famed Nauvoo House, the Mansion House, and the homestead where the servant of God lived, the prophet of God; and while I heard the slight wash of the river upon the gravelly beach where he so often stood and prayed, and talked of his Savior's love to man to the multitudes assembled to hear him, and to witness the beautiful ordinance of burial in the water in the likeness of Christ's death, I could not but meditate upon the past and grieve because of the wickedness of men.

But we wend our way up towards the hill where the Temple once stood, and as we near the brow of the hill Bro. Alexander said, "You better take a view from here, as it will be better than farther on."

I now will relate an incident in my life: In May, of 1874, at Bro. J. H. Lawn's in San Benito I was ordained an elder by Brn. A. H. Smith, D. S. Mills, and Hervey Green. At that time I saw the following picture: I was ascending a large hill, walking between two men, each of them holding one of my hands in his, and as we neared the top of the hill I saw a large temple facing the west and saw these three men and a number of others entering it; and while viewing the building with admiration, and especially delighted with it for its solid and firm appearance; one of my guides said, "Turn and look!" I did so, and before me was a beautiful sight. From the foot of the hill upon which we stood I saw a plain before me, divided by streets running parallel to each other and others at right angles to them, into small farms or lots, and clean looking and tidily kept houses, and fields dotted the landscape and made it appear beautiful; and a peculiar feature of the scene was, that looking westward as far as you might the horizon seemed to incline upward instead of curving downward; and when Bro. Alexander told me to look now, I turned and before me was the picture I had seen twenty-two years before.

After viewing these scenes we went on to where the Temple once stood, now no sign of such a building is to be seen, and but a very few saints are left in the city by the river to keep the name "Latter Day Saint" alive there. O, how sad, how sorrowful those must feel who once knew the city in its glory with its thousands of citizens, and now but so few, and a spirit of sleep—inertness—seems to brood over the place, which we hope will some day give place to a life of activity and the busy sound of hammer and saw, and the whirl of the wheels of industry break the silence of the night of rest.

A night of mourning succeeding the taking away from life of those noble men of God. Why should not beautiful Nauvoo mourn and stay in sackcloth and ashes until Zion's King shall convert her mourning into gladness with the songs of everlasting joy sung by the returning children of the King? Sin brings sorrow and death now as always; righteousness brings peace and life eternal.

But now Bro. Alexander must return by the first train to Chariton and Lamoni to do whatever willing sympathy may do to make the funeral obsequies befitting the memory of an honored saint of God, and to ameliorate the grief of the widowed mother of Israel and her children. Bro. Fred returned to Burlington to deliver the message of life on the Sabbath day, and on Monday he met me again and we went with horse and buggy across the beautiful country between Nauvoo and Carthage. It was night when we arrived at the hospitable home of Bro. Salisbury, so we tarried with them, and on the morning continued our journey on to Carthage jail. It was house-cleaning day and the carpets were up, and so we were shown the blood-stains on the floor, the hole in the door through which the missile of death entered, and the window from which the dying prophet fell. It is commonly reported that their murderers said, "The law cannot touch them."

A long time ago a Roman ruler and judge said of the Savior, "I find no fault in him;" but the wicked mob cried out, "Crucify him!" and a wickedly yielding judge granted them their desire and he was slain. And Jesus said to his disciples, "They shall deliver you up to be afflicted and shall kill you."—Matthew 24: 9. And, "The disciple is not above his Master; but every one that is perfect shall be as his Master"—Luke 6: 40.

From Carthage we went across the river to Keokuk, up to Montrose, and on to Burlington, where we spend a happy day with the saints, preach, and at ten o'clock in the evening perform the baptismal ordinance in the river; then on to Lamoni, Independence, and California. All the way is marked with pleasing incidents, but this effusion has already overspread too much space and I must stop.

Bro. Luff is fairly electrifying his audiences here in California with his eloquent appeals to their better natures to learn of God and serve him. We think he is improving slowly in health and hope he may be made as strong in body as he is in spirit. We—Emma and I—are trying to get ready for our mission, but with me I fear it is somewhat like Shakespeare's boy on his way to school. Yet I am ready. God's will be done. May peace abide with all Israel.

In bonds,

J. F. BURTON.

ALBIA, Iowa, Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—We closed our meetings at Creston the night of the 2d, having held twenty-three meetings there with an attendance ranging from twenty-five to one hundred and fifty. We baptized none there, but left many thinking seriously and, we think, some believing. The few saints there and some friends of the cause did nobly in the way of sustaining us, giving us all the help they were able to. Who could do more? While there, we enjoyed a visit from Sr. Lillie Conover, who was on her way to Lamoni from her visit at Glenwood. She gave us good aid in the music for a few days while she stayed.

Bro. John A. Evans, of Lucas, was with us during one service and Bro. S. E. Ballou also stopped one evening with us as he was passing through. Dr. Messinger, of Prescott, attended two services with us, and Bro. Fred Johnson, of West Burlington, was with us one service; and, last but not least, Bro. Charles France drove up from Lamoni bringing Srs. Mamie Elvin, Pearl Jones, and the writer's wife and bairns, arriving Thursday evening and returning Monday morning, August 31. Such things as these cheer and help us on our way.

We shipped for this place the 3d inst. and put the tent up and commenced meetings on the 5th. Saturday evening, Sunday morning and afternoon services were attended by about thirty each session. On Sunday evening at 7:30 we were greeted by a larger audience, fully a hundred coming to hear. The Hiteman saints are coming to our aid nobly, and prospects are good for our cause. The political tide runs high, but some get time to think of other things. In our congregation last night were about fifteen of the colored race, and they were quiet and attentive. Much thought seemed to be aroused by the discourse of Bro. Elvin, as he showed the gospel platform. Quite a delegation of Foster saints were present with us yesterday and they are anxiously looking for us there when we leave this place. A Reverend Snow, who claims to be the grandson of an elder in the old church, called at the tent this morning. We are rejoicing in the possession of an organ with our tent, which we find to be a help in the work. Hopefully, your brother,

A. M. CHASE.

FULTON, Iowa, Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference closed here August 23, and was extra well attended by the visiting saints. I believe all enjoyed themselves. Our Sunday school convention was good; the children did their part well, as did the teachers and officers of the convention. The preaching during conference was done by Elders Hand, Thomas, and J. B. Roush. I hope all felt that it was good to be a saint in latter days.

I must not omit that the saints did nobly by helping with their tithes and offerings. I thank God that so many have seen the need of obeying all of God's laws.

After conference Bro. Hand continued the meetings one week, with fair attendance. Bro. J. B. Roush also spoke once before leaving for his field of labor. Bro. O. B. Thomas took in the Bluff Park reunion. The tent is a nice place to hold meetings in. The tent went from here to Edgewood, Iowa.

May God bless this district in the future. Some have obeyed the gospel in this branch, and a few, yes, quite a few, in the district.

Your brother,

JOHN HEIDE.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—In reading the quite interesting minutes of the conference of the "South Seas," in Herald of July 8, current year, we notice a statement, which without explanation may cause some confusion. In speaking of the Evanelia it is said: "After the copper was taken off it could not be put back on, as it was perfectly rotten, and was of such an inferior grade that it broke all to pieces."

I offer the following statement from the firm in San Francisco from which it was purchased:—

To Whom It May Concern:—We hereby certify that the metal furnished the schooner Evanelia in August, 1894, was of the first quality, and equal in quality to any of the standard brands of metal used for sheathing purposes.

Respectfully,

"CH. J. HENDRY'S SON & Co.

"August 31."

The metal is designated "Taunton, 16 oz. metal," and was not of an inferior grade.

I was informed that "Lloyds" will not insure any ship for wheat at first-class insurance rates, whose metal is three years old; because the action of the ocean salts corrodes it and makes it brittle; besides this the description in the same "minutes" of the mismanagement of the vessel is sufficient to account for the condition of the vessel, and the copper, without supposing that it was an inferior grade,—copper is not supposed to withstand, when on a vessel, repeated bumping on the rocks, especially when those rocks are coral with its thousands of sharp points puncturing it; and no vessel can in reason be built strong enough to stand such usage without leaking so that "the pumps have to be kept going continually."

The Evanelia was built, not extravagantly, but with the best material available, copper as well as all else, and was built staunch, and strong, and well; and when delivered to the brethren in Tahiti was in good order with everything complete, and not leaking a drop more than the day she was launched—after making the four thousand miles voyage, encountering a gale the first twenty-four hours of her ocean life, and carrying sail as strong and long as needful.

But with the present arrangements it is hoped there will be no more bumping on the rocks, and hoping that the Evanelia may long exist and be a comfort to the church in the islands, I subscribe myself,

Your brother in Christ,

CARSON, Iowa, Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—An ideal fall here, commencing early, slight frosts already. The dedication at Carson, the district Sunday school convention, and conference, are now matters of history. The Sunday school convention on Friday moved the gauge of progress one notch forward. Dispatch in business with terse speakers and inspiring subjects elicited marked interest. The literary program in the evening was fully appreciated.

A short address by "a missionary," several recitations, and a number of inspiring hymns, made an enjoyable service. The conference on Saturday and Sunday was one among the best held; general unanimity and harmony prevailed. Elder H. N. Hansen preached Saturday night; theme, "The restoration." The dedicatorial service was at eleven a. m. Sunday; a crowded house, befitting choir and music, a fervent dedicatorial prayer by Bro. H. N. Hansen, with a sermon "an hour long" by the writer. The Holy Spirit was present and we are not ashamed of the effort.

Immediately after service I was called several miles into the country to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. Elswick's child; returning, Bro. Butler preached at three p. m. and I again at night. Am following up the effort this week and so far have had fair audiences. There is much prejudice here, but I think by a careful effort some can be removed. All the district officers were sustained. Conference goes to Hazel Dell in November. Politics are the inspiration of the hour with most people. Hope the infection won't grow too much among us. This nation is in God's hands. May we not forget that without the gospel we or any other people cannot expect liberation from moral and physical ills. The gospel should be the the leaven of the world.

There is not that earnestness and willingness to labor manifested among the local priesthood that there should be, as evidenced in reports to conference. The saints are languishing for spiritual food; the world is famishing from spiritual hunger. Ye of the local ministry, why do you not do your part and feed the flock of God, thus permitting the general ministry to "warn the world"? Awake to life and diligence or you will come under condemnation! No elder or priest should let an opportunity pass without preaching somewhere if at all possible. You may say, "They don't want me to preach in our branch." Well, go somewhere else then. Even if you are a "local" you was not ordained to hang around a branch all the time. Visit surrounding schoolhouses. Do something so you can have something to report at conference. If the world is to be warned, do your part, and the good Father will abundantly bless you. May God help us to be alive and active. Yours very truly,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

P. S.—In my unsigned report of Bluff Park reunion last week I inadvertently omitted the name of Bro. J. A. Robinson in the list of speaking participants. Beg pardon. If any others it was an oversight. T. W. W.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—I am holding tent meetings in this city, with good attendance and good interest. Bro. H. E. Moler has been laboring with me for over three months in the tent work, but he left on the 26th of August for his home in Arbaugh, Ohio, and I have continued the tent work since with good interest, and have been assisted by our worthy brother, A. H. Parsons, from the city of Philadelphia. He has been over several times and gave us some good preaching. Bro. Joseph Stewart from the city of Philadelphia has been very kind in helping to keep order and acted as usher in our meetings and I wish to say in regard to the Philadelphia saints they have done their part in furnishing food and money while we were running the tent in Philadelphia and in Camden, New Jersey, and they are a noble-hearted lot of saints and if any of our brethren should happen through this way I can say they will be looked after and cared for; and I wish our noble brother, W. H. Kelley, would come and give them a trial and see. He has been talking as though he was coming to see us, but we have failed to see his pleasant face yet. The saints have been kind to me and they seem like brethren and sisters indeed.

Yesterday I left the tent in charge of Brn. Henry Carr and A. H. Parsons, and Bro. Parsons preached last night, and yesterday morning I started to Cape May with Bro. H. Bacon and kind family with six hundred and fifty other passengers on the boat called the Republic. We landed about 1:45 p. m. It was quite a sight for me to see the great ocean and the great waves dash upon the shore, and on our trip we were out of sight of land for about two hours. We bought return ticket for fifty cents. Surely the conduct on the boat was the ways of the world and quite a contrast from the gospel tent work.

Well, our tent work is looking prosperous at present; good interest. Last Sunday I was permitted to lead two sisters into the waters of baptism in the Delaware River. One was formerly a member of the Utah church, but could not indorse the abominations they taught. Several more are very much interested, and I expect to baptize more before I close the tent meetings here. They are near the kingdom.

The Lord has blessed me in our meetings here. It was quite an undertaking to run the tent alone, and I have been made to miss the noble counsel of Bro. Moler and his labor. It has been rather hard on him this summer to train a green soldier, but he has been patient with me, and I will try and profit by his wise counsel. I pray that God's blessings will be with him wherever he may go.

I am trying to hold up the gospel banner and do what I can for the work; but last Thursday evening I could not hold up the gospel tent, for there came a hard wind, and down it went, and Bro. Stewart had just come to the tent; but we got out without a scratch, and sent after my right hand man, Bro. Parsons, and we had it up for meeting the next evening. Things are moving along nicely now, and I am interested in the work here. Brethren and sisters, all of you that know me, and all that don't know me, when you read this, stop and send a silent prayer to our heavenly Father and ask him to bless me with his Spirit that those here that are near the kingdom may obey, and that what I may do may be guided by his loving Spirit, and that I may prove faithful to the end with you.

Your brother,

WM. A. SMITH.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Aug. 24.

Editors Herald:—As my former communication escaped the wastebasket I feel encouraged to put forth another effort hoping that it may encourage some weary wayfarer whose pathway seems obstructed by insurmountable barriers. If I might be instrumental in throwing even one little bright beam of hope across the darkened pathway of one solitary wanderer, I would feel that I had not lived in vain. O, you dear recreant saints, could the veil of futurity be raised, you would discover your little beacon light burning very dimly, while your frail life bark would be seen drifting, drifting near those dangerous whirlpools and rocks that are interspersed along life's great voyage! O, how many have launched out on their homeward voyage with good resolutions and bright hopes, feeling their ability to cope with the loftiest waves and the fiercest of storms, but alas! at the approach of the first dangerous breaker that comes rolling in from the great sea of trouble the helm is deserted and their life bark lies a hopeless wreck upon the shoals and rocks.

Dear saints, is this imaginative picture overdrawn? Young saints of Santa Rosa and Fulton, are your environments of an elevating character? Are your associations all that is desirable? Is the love of the great Ruler of the universe implanted in your hearts? Are you kind and respectful to your parents? A boy or girl that is disobedient to parents or speaks unkindly or disrespectfully to them can never hope to attain to that degree that will enable him or her to enjoy the true Spirit of God. Those unkind words spoken to that patient, overworked mother are recorded in imperishable characters in the archives of heaven which you must some day face.

One of the highest emotions of which we are capable is the feeling of pleasure derived from the fact that we have always been kind and obedient to our parents. Remember that you can never have but one mother. I have been deeply impressed to write this hoping that you will receive it with the same kind, loving, charitable spirit in which it was written.

Saints of the Santa Rosa branch, what means this lethargy which like a pall seems to envelop us all? Does the fault lie with me? Does it lie with you? Am I as faithful and prayerful as I should be? Have I my family altar erected in my house? and do I gather my little flock together at morning, noon, and at night? Saints, do we do this? If not, we are far from doing our duty. Do we love our brothers and sisters as we love ourselves? Do we allow ourselves to speak ill of anyone? Do we slight anyone? Do we do unto others as we wish to be done by?

Wife, have you always a kind word for your husband when he comes in from his day's toil, with his cares and troubles? Do you sympathize with him and cheer and comfort him, and if he seems out of humor do you bear patiently with him and do all in your power to lighten his burden and shed a ray of light on his pathway? Husbands, do you try to lighten your wives' burdens? Do you always give the good-bye kiss when parting? Remember a wife and mother has many trials and vexations that the husband knows nothing of. "Kind words can never die;" they sink deep in the tender heart and are remembered so long as time continues to roll his ample round.

I hope I do not tread on forbidden ground, but saints let us examine ourselves. Remember, this little probationary state is only a moment of time compared to a never-ending eternity.

O, let us follow the beautiful teachings of Bro. Newton, then our progress will be upward and onward, and our light will grow brighter and brighter until the perfect day.

Bro. Newton is at present near Calistoga, working for the cause. May God bless him in his noble efforts to battle for the truth. While absent his place is being very ably filled by Bro. I. N. Adamson, priest of the branch. We have prayer and testimony meeting every Sunday, prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, ladies' prayer union Thursday afternoon presided over by Sr. Tupper, one of God's most noble workers, a bright and shining light in the branch. Through her untiring efforts she has been instrumental in helping to place the Sunday school as well as the branch in their present elevated condition. May God bless her and give her strength to carry out the grand and noble work that she has been called to perform.

A heroic effort was made on the part of the young saints to establish a young saints' prayer meeting, but meeting with no encouragement, were unsuccessful; but I hope and pray the day is not far distant when they will all unite and make a success of it; if carried on in a proper spirit, it cannot help but result in good. Saints, let us all come up a step higher. Will all who read this resolve to take that step?

May each one of us see ourselves as God sees us and strive a little harder to become what God would have us to be. Our branch will then become what the Spirit promised it should be—a bright and a shining light to all the world. God grant it may be so is my prayer. Yours in Christ,

E. F. ADAMSON.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

ITS ORIGIN, NECESSITY, AND PURPOSE; ITS MORALS, AND THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCES OF ITS VALIDITY.

BY ELDER I. N. W. COOPER.

THE Book of Mormon, if what its enemies have said about it be true—that it is mainly responsible for the social evil existing in the "valleys of the West;" that its teachings are adverse to the morals and the social good of man; the peace, tranquility, and permanence of the God-ordained institution of the family;—we would never expect to find within it the footprints of the apostles and prophets, or the "great things of God's law to Ephraim."

The Book of Mormon as a volume is not the production of a single individual written at one time, period, or place; but, like the Bible, it is a collection of books written by different authors, at different places, and at different periods of time; consequently it presents widely diversified, though harmonious views, according to the ability, cultivation, and opportunities of its authors, on a great variety of subjects relating to the glory of God and the salvation of man, in all of which they are simple, comprehensive, and consistent; and not only in harmony with the Bible, but rendering it plain and simple, removing many of its ambiguities, and vindicating the character of the God of Adam, the patriarchs, prophets, and apostles, as One who is eternal and unchangeable, whom we can confidently worship and consistently adore.

In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, and the object of the earth's creation was that it might be inhabited by man, Isaiah 45: 18: "God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited," by a righteous people, the seed of a righteous branch, to be propagated by a specific plan in order to bring about this end.

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.—Gen. 1: 26-28.

And that plan of multiplying was by monogamy; and as the Lord in all ages acts like himself, so it was in the creation; God created but one helpmeet for Adam. If there ever was a time in which the Almighty would have been under the necessity of adopting a plan for the most speedy population of the world, it would, no doubt, have been in "the beginning" when he created the first pair; and in Noah's time when he caused but four pairs to be preserved during the flood. But quality and not quantity seems to have been the design of the Almighty in peopling the earth; and in order to raise up a righteous people he must, in the very nature of things, have a righteous seed to start with; the race must be propagated on a monogamic principle. Therefore,

The Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a helpmeet for him. . . . And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.—Gen. 2: 18-24.

It is a strong inferential argument in favor of monogamy that the Almighty in the beginning took but one rib and made it a woman, and thus created but one helpmeet for Adam; and when he is represented in Scripture as speaking he nowhere recognizes more than one woman as the wife of a man.

In that same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates.—Gen. 15:18.

"Now Sarai, Abram's wife, bare him no children: and she had a handmaid, an Egyptian, whose name was Hagar. . . . And Sarai, Abram's wife, took Hagar her maid the Egyptian, . . . and gave her to her husband Abram to be his wife." An act of Sarai's only, and one which she bitterly regretted, as she assumed to govern the affairs of the Almighty without his counsel. And when she saw that she was despised by Hagar (because Hagar supposed she was favored of the Lord), "she said unto Abram, My wrong [which I have committed from mistaken zeal, and for which I suffer in thy esteem, being despised by my handmaid without rebuke from thee] be upon thee." (Gen. 16:1-6.) And rightfully too, as the sequel proves; for the Lord expected in those days, as well as later, to be importuned by his people, especially those whom he had signally marked out as representative men. And since he had promised that Abram's seed should become as the stars of heaven for number, it was but reasonable to suppose that Abram would (as the friend of God) be diligent in inquiring of the Lord and entreating him in behalf of his wife, who was for the time barren, no doubt as a test of his faith, as it was afterward in the case of his son Isaac. (Gen. 25:21.) If not, why this arraignment of Abram by his wife, if he was innocent in the sight of the Lord? The fact is, Abram was at fault for obeying the voice of Sarai his wife, and for not trusting the Lord for his promise already given, both of legitimate seed and vast territorial possessions. He saw fit to step aside from the law of rectitude, and was rebuked by the Almighty thus:—

Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in Isaac shall thy seed be called.—Gen. 21:12.

And also when he said:—

Walk before me, and be thou perfect. And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.—Gen. 17:1, 2; (See also verses 3-16 and Gen. 15:18.)

But for all this Abram ceased not to parade Ishmael, the son of his shame, before the Lord, when the Almighty was constrained to teach to Abram for his posterity and for all time the immutable decree enacted in Eden that man shall have but one wife:—

And God said, Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him. And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: . . . but my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee.—Gen. 17:19-21.

We have a parallel instance of barrenness in the case of Isaac's wife Rebekah, but instead of resorting to illegal means for posterity as did Abram, we find that Isaac entreated the Lord for his wife; and "the children struggled," and she knew of their contention and adverseness before they were born; and being burdened she cried out, "If it be so" (probably, that the Lord has heard and answered the prayer of his servant Isaac), "Why am I thus?" or in the condition soon to reap the curse of another Cain. And as she thus afflicted herself, "she went to inquire of the Lord," perhaps at the hand of God's high priest, Melchisedek, King of Salem, "And the Lord said unto her, Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger."—Gen. 25:22, 23.

And it was so, "And when her days . . . were fulfilled, behold . . . the first came out red all over like a hairy garment; and they called his name Esau," because Esau means hairy, or complete, prepared from his birth as a "son of the desert." "And after that came his brother out, and his hand took hold on Esau's heel; and his name was called Jacob," which means a supplanter, being, in a sense, true in his life, and true to the prophecy going before; "the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger." And as if legally to give coloring to this prophetic declaration, Esau sells his birthright, the patriarchal and tribal blessing of inheritance, to Jacob.

We are now prepared to consider the deception practiced upon Esau by his mother, thereby seemingly to cause Jacob to take advantage of and to supplant his brother Esau.

It must not be forgotten that to the seed of Isaac pertained the right of the Abrahamic covenant, he being the only legitimate seed of Abraham; and that Isaac had but one wife and but two sons; that the right of the covenant of Abraham belonged to the eldest son, and that Esau was the firstborn; that these two sons, as an allegory, represented two nations, as the two women, Hagar and Sarah, represented the two Jerusalems or kingdoms (Galatians 4: 21-26); the first or Adamic nation, the weaker, to be supplanted by the second and stronger; and as Adam sold his birthright for a morsel to eat, so Esau sold his right to the heritage or heirship of Canaan for a mess of pottage; that as Adam was born first into the earth, but was unfaithful to his trust, so Christ became the second Adam, the promised deliverer; and as a faithful Son he despised not his heritage, being heir of the world.

And as Esau was born first, so Jacob was the child of promise to the heirship of the Abrahamic covenant, and as Esau sold his birthright he was no longer legitimately eligible to the covenant. (Gen. 12: 3.) And as Christ paid the price of the purchased possession, so Jacob paid the price of the birthright which Esau did not esteem. And the blessing of Isaac upon Jacob, when he said: "The smell of my son is as the smell of a field which the Lord hath blessed: therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine: Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee," could not from its very nature have fallen elsewhere than upon the head of Jacob, as the word of the Lord had gone forth, that two nations were struggling within for dominion, and that the elder should serve the younger, and as the elder had already sold his right to sovereignty, the younger had bought it, and thus legally held the claim; and the apparent deception, practiced by Rebekah, "vanishes into thin air," as we see the blessing following was but the confirmation of the birthright which now rightly was vested in Jacob, and Rebekah was simply a trustee in trust to see that the conveyance was rightly made. Therefore she could say unto Jacob, "Upon me be the curse, my son: only obey my voice," knowing that no curse could ensue, as she was in possession of the will and promise of God. And while "Isaac loved Esau because he did eat of his venison; Rebekah loved Jacob" because he was the chosen of the Lord.

As the Bible is the record of God's dealings with one branch of the house of Israel through Judah, so the Book of Mormon is the record of his dealings with another branch of the same household through Ephraim, who was adopted into the house or family of Jacob in the room of Reuben the firstborn of Jacob, who had forfeited his right to the chief tribal blessing, entitled the "birthright," which was the prerogative of the firstborn son.

Since Ephraim, Jacob's grandson by Joseph, was adopted in the room of the firstborn, the birthright was necessarily and legitimately his.

His birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph.—1 Chron. 5:1, 2.

Reuben and Simeon lost their right to the birthright and tribal representation in Israel by their sensuality and blood guiltiness (Gen. 49:3-8). And Moses records the genealogy lost referred to in 1 Chron. 5:1, 2.

And the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren [in that he retained his tribal representation], and of him came [or was to come] the chief ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's.—1 Chron. 5:1, 2.

And Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days. . . . Reuben, thou art my firstborn, my might, and the beginning of my strength, the excellency of dignity, and the excellency of power: unstable as water, thou shalt not excel; because thou wentest up to thy father's bed; then defiledst thou it: he went up to my couch.

Oh! the weight of that bitter moment on Jacob's soul, when he contemplates the dignity, excellence, and power of God to be manifested through his direct lineage, his firstborn, his own son Reuben, the beginning of his might in his early manhood. and then the deep degradation to which he had irretrievably fallen! "He went up to my couch." Though thou wast excellent, now thou shalt not excel; though thou wast powerful, now but as water, thou shalt be poured out, thy vessel emptied, and another shall take thy dignity.

Simeon and Levi were not eligible to the blessing of Reuben; for, aside from the special line of work laid out for them in the divine economy, for which they had more or less disqualified themselves, they were full of bloodguiltiness, and instruments of cruelty were in their habitations, and so a loathing and a bitter curse their legacy; and they would be "divided" in "Jacob" and "scattered" in "Israel." (Gen. 49:5-7.)

To Judah was bequeathed the progenitorship of the Messiah, for "The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come."—Gen. 49:10.

The other sons of Jacob were allotted their several missions, as is set forth in Genesis 49; but to Joseph by the degradation of Reuben and Simeon, a double portion is assigned. We find,

The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him who was separate from his brethren.—Gen. 49:26.

It is here declared that Jacob's blessing on Joseph had prevailed; that is, had gone beyond, exceeded, the blessings—tribal blessings—vouchsafed by his progenitors; and the blessing added is identified by the phrase, "unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills."

(To be continued.)

TITHES AND OFFERINGS.

WHOSO looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.—James 1:25.

It is admitted by all saints that this law of liberty is the gospel law.

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.—Matt. 5:48.

Here the Savior of mankind tells us to be "perfect." If we are imperfect, which is admitted, in order to be perfect a change must take place, and that change must be according to some rule. The gospel is the rule, "Repent ye, and believe the gospel," said the Master.

It is not a looking into this perfect law that will make us perfect, but continuing therein. All know that the prize is at the end of the race. The Psalmist says, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Then this perfect law is intended to convert the whole man to observe a perfect system whereby perfection in God's sight may be obtained. Observing a part of the law will not accomplish the end sought. Now, for instance, you are not a full member of the church when you are baptized in water only; and the answer to "why?" is, because Jesus Christ said:—

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3:5.

He was a teacher of that law. But the "new birth" does not perfect us, we have only begun to walk in the right way. True, we are saved, if death should overtake us suddenly. We have "put on Christ" and we are now to be "laborers together with God." There is something for us to do, to press forward in the line of perfection. There is the same responsibility resting on one as another, each one in his own duty.

We have the example of taking of the bread and wine—the sacrament—in connection with the giving of "tithes." (Gen. 14:18, 20.)

We see here the unchangeability of the "everlasting gospel" or rather the antiquity of it. God's law was always perfect, always the same. Paul speaks of the same event in Hebrews 7:1, 2. Jacob understood tithing to be a part of God's law as you may see in Genesis 28:20-22; also in Leviticus 27:30-33. We rob God in failing to observe this part of the law. Many saints have not thought about this part of the law. They have thought they were secure in having entered the church. But are you? That is, have you complied with the whole law? Has the perfect law done its work of reformation in you? Because it is only by rendering absolute obedience to the law that you or I can become like the law—perfect.

Dear saints, any of us on mature reflection knows that a great change must take place in us to bring us into harmony with God. If we were "strangers and foreigners," and if we are "no more strangers and foreigners," but are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets," then we must do the works that our dignified position calls for, which is an observance of the whole law of the "household of God."

Christ taught it:—

Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the others undone.—Matt. 23:23.

Here the great teacher instructs us that we are not only to observe a part of the law but the whole law. Nothing can be plainer. Not only do the dispensations of the past proclaim the necessity for a full observance of the whole law, but the "dispensation of the fullness of times" also declares the necessity for observing the whole law of God. But before leaving the testimony of the Bible I wish to notice Malachi 3:8-12. After asking, "will a man rob God?" the statement is made that those people had done so by failing to observe the law of tithes and offerings. Then this promise is made,

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing.

What is this blessing to be given for? Why, for bringing the tithes into the Lord's storehouse. Do you believe the Lord? "Have faith in God." Not in financial things and men.

Especial enjoinder upon the saints in these last days:—

Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people for he that is tithed shall not be burned.—Doc. and Cov. 64:5.

This comes to us direct, pointing us to duty, to the will of God, and showing a way to escape the certain judgment that is to come—an expressed rule of action with promise. Another very pointed expression of our kind Father's is found in Doctrine and Covenants 101:2, and speaks in unmistakable and clear terms.

I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things are mine; and it is my purpose to provide for my saints, for all things are mine; but must needs be done in mine own way; and behold this is the way, that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my saints: that the poor shall be exalted, in that the rich are made low; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves.

Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.

The conditions of this paragraph are these: First, The Lord has made and provided "enough and to spare." Second, He intends to provide for his "poor" saints by the rich, or those who have more than they need, supplying them. Third, He has given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. They are to act of their own free will, and that, too, according to his gospel. Fourth, If any man shall take of this abundance which God has made, and permitted to come into his hands, and not impart his portion, according to this gospel law, to be with the wicked in hell will be the result. The author of this statement is responsible for it, not I. In God's law we see the grand principle of love taught. As God has cared for us, so we are to care for each other, love "Thy neighbor as thyself."

We are to be agents unto ourselves. God permits us to use our will power, and bases our present and future condition, measurably, as to how we use it. We have entered into covenant partnership with God, he having furnished all the capital. Shall we do our part, or shall we stand on the left hand of the Son in "that" day? (See Matt. 25:41-43.)

I, for my part, see no other way to become perfect, or in other words, acceptable to the Son when he shall come to judge men according to their works, other than to follow the teachings of God's perfect law, which is adapted to supply all man's wants, temporal and spiritual, and maintain the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God.

And we see the weight of doing in temporal things as applied by the Master in our last citation.

TWO GENEALOGIES.

IN answer to the "two genealogies" by Bro. Frank L. Kelley, I will say, I think that Matthew and Luke in tracing the lineage of Christ both failed to give us the lineage of our Savior. Now for the proof.

What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David. He saith unto them, How then doth David in spirit call him lord? . . . If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?—Matt. 22:42, 43, 45.

This seems to be more than the Pharisees could answer. (See also Luke 20:41.) Now I want to know why Luke also says:—

Being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph.—Luke 3:23.

Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. . . . The Lord appeared unto him [Joseph] in a dream, saying, . . . that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.—Matt. 1:18, 20.

If Joseph had begotten Jesus who is called Christ, then I could see how he was called the son of David. It is said that as man partook of flesh and blood, so Christ likewise partook of part of the same; so I conclude that if we run his genealogy it must be through his mother. I know this would be an exception to the rule, but how can he be accounted of the seed of Abraham in any other way?

"How is he then David's son?"

HOME.

WE are all on our way home. Some of us have the place located, while others seem unconcerned as to the kind of home they are preparing for; but let it be as it may we are all approaching the goal of life. We have all passed over some difficult places, and have had struggles and disappointments on the way while trying to pursue a straight course. We also find that we have made some mistakes in our journey and have had to retrace our steps sometimes. All along the way we have found landmarks serving as guideboards in pointing the way leading homeward.

Before us lies the future, an unexplored region over which no living soul has ever traveled. Enemies may lurk in the way, wild beasts and serpents may infest it; we know not what we may encounter. Dare we go unarmed in the face of such dangers? Experience has taught us that we must go prepared for everything that may arise. If prepared, every obstacle will remove out of our way and as we draw nearer the home of our rest we will feel that calm serenity of soul that characterizes the wise man as he approaches the mansion of the Father.

Cheerless indeed would man's declining years become had he no hope in a future state, no aim or object farther than the boundary of time. But to the true Christian whose whole aim and object is to help his fellow man and lift him up to a higher plane, as did his great Exemplar, to him this life is one of self-denial and sacrifice. He finds in pursuing this course that higher enjoyment of soul which brings him nearer the divine pattern.

Then let us be wise; let us work while day lasts. "Let us come out of this little narrow self and assume larger proportions," until we reach the required standard. We will then justify that wisdom that gave us this being and be brought into nearer and higher relations to Him who is the designer of all things great and grand, in whom and through whom we may become his grateful and acknowledged children.

THE USE OF OLIVE OIL IN SICKNESS. DR. M. H. LOGAN, of San Francisco, contributes a paper (in California Medical Journal) on the beauties and medicinal uses of pure olive oil, from which the following is condensed:—

"Olive oil is indicated in infantile diseases, marked by a want of vitality, malnutrition, or when constipation and irritability of the alimentary canal exists. It is remarkable what a rapid improvement will occur in rickety, constipated, bottle-fed babies. Growing children at any age, when subject to colds, cough, catarrh, etc., should take one or two teaspoonfuls after meals. A half a teaspoonful two or three times a day for a very young infant is a proper dose."

"I have recently had a very pleasant experience with a severe case of hemorrhage from the lungs. Mrs. R—, aged about thirty-five years, mother of three children, had been suffering for about three years, with phthisis, with frequent and severe hemorrhages. She said she would lose a pint of blood at a time. She had taken ergot and other astringents until they had no more effect. She was so reduced that she could not take strong drink, so I put her on olive oil, a tablespoonful at first every hour or two, and increased the dose to a half a teacupful three times a day. The hemorrhages ceased rapidly. In nineteen weeks she had taken nineteen bottles of olive oil and gained nineteen pounds. She is still taking the oil, and still gains in flesh and weight. From an exhausted consumptive, drained dry with severe hemorrhages, she has become in less than a year a magnificent type of womanly loveliness, weighing one hundred and eighty pounds. I ascribe all this to the persistent use of olive oil."

"Another experience, almost as remarkable and certainly as interesting, is Baby I—, three years old, a delicate, rickety bottle baby, croupy catarrhal, constipated. The little teeth would rot away as fast as they appeared. Withal, a beautiful, delicate, golden-haired girl, surrounded with all desirable comforts except a nervous, hysterical mother. The most persistent annoyance was constipation. A few months ago I ordered a half teaspoonful of good olive oil to be given three times a day and increase to a full teaspoonful if necessary. I succeeded beautifully in working myself out of a very fine job, but it is a pleasure and worth all the loss to see what a little olive oil can do."

"I might cite many more cases where the oil is doing noble work, but the above will suffice to represent the range of its action."

"All my cases of phthisis, syphilis, anæmia from any cause, active or passive, hemorrhage from any cause, get olive oil."

"In active hemorrhage from lungs or stomach it soothes the patient quicker than any astringent I have ever used. It is admitted that oils and fats are essential to the construction of tissue and production of heat. Modern researches have proved that they have a necessary office in the production of force. It has been proved by experiment that on a diet of hydrocarbons great muscular effort can be undergone with but little destruction of muscular tissue. Turkish porters, who are remarkable for their muscular strength and endurance, live on a diet of fat and rice. The acrobats of Japan, who live on a similar diet, develop enormous muscular power and accomplish feats of strength and agility far beyond most other races."

LITTLE SIOUX.

Convention met at Moorhead, Iowa, September 4, at three p. m. Superintendent and assistant being absent, meeting was called to order by the secretary. W. R. Davison was chosen to take charge. Reports were received from the following schools: Logan, East Union Center, Union Center, Mondamin, Magnolia, Persia, Little Sioux, Missouri Valley, Pleasant Valley, and Woodbine. Number of schools in district 12; schools reporting 10; delegates present 19; total membership 578. On hand last report $0.50; received since last report $0.90; balance in treasury $1.40. Reports of officers and teachers of the different schools read. In the evening a very interesting program was rendered by the Union Center school, after which the spiritual condition of schools was reported and the topic, What is the best method to cause scholars from ten to fifteen years of age to become interested, was discussed by O. Case, D. Hutchings, and A. M. Fyrando. Met Saturday morning for additional business. Question box. Adjourned to Little Sioux, Friday previous to session of quarterly conference.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The convention of the London district Sunday school association, Canada, will convene in St. Thomas, Ontario, on Friday, October 9, at two p. m. for business, followed by short speeches from the assembly on Sunday school work. A session will also be held in the evening for the benefit and instruction of the Sunday school workers. Come one and all and rejoice together in this department of the great latter-day work. Reports from secretaries and superintendents of all the Sunday schools in the district are requested. Please do not delay in this duty.

PASTORAL.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, AND SOUTHERN ILLINOIS MISSION.

To the Ministers and Saints; Greeting:— When in your judgment, it becomes necessary to make arrangements for public debate, or to attempt it, at least, you will please refer the whole matter, with our opponent, to the missionary who is in charge of the "field of labor" where such supposed demand originated; that is, to the missionary in charge. Should said missionary need counsel or advice, it is his duty to call upon the missionary who is in charge of the mission where said "field of labor" is located. And while speaking of debates your special attention is called to the following:—

For twelve years or more, we have met Elder Clark Braden of the Disciple or Church of Christ, in public debate. He has been fairly and fully met by us from the rostrum and through the press. During all these years, we have never backed down from a fair contest with him on the issues existing between the two churches. He has been met four times by Elder E. L. Kelley, in Nebraska, Ohio, Illinois, and Iowa; once by Elder J. W. Gillen at Stewartville, Missouri; once by Elder J. F. Mintun; also once by Elder J. F. McDowell, in Western Iowa; once by Elder Leonard Scott, in Indiana; once by Elder I. N. White, at El Dorado Springs, Missouri, and once by Elder T. W. Williams, at Fontanelle, Iowa; making nine times in all, leaving out replies to his lectures and written controversy. We have patiently borne his abuse, together with his low, wicked methods and policy, which for quantity and quality can hardly be surpassed. To say the least, he has received from us all the consideration to which he is justly entitled, and we can now well afford to ignore him.

I therefore advise that, hereafter, when arrangements are made for public discussion with ministers of the Church of Christ, or Disciple Church, an exception be made of Elder Clark Braden. Just say that we will meet any representative minister of the Church, who comes properly indorsed, except Elder Braden.

Of course I am aware that Elder Braden will say, "They are afraid to meet me; they have backed out." Has he not said this all along? We can hardly expect that this proposed change of policy towards Elder Braden will so reform the man as to cause him to stop lying about us from the rostrum and through the press. However, we can well afford to have them say, if they wish to, that Clark Braden is the only man they have who can properly and safely defend their faith, and expose Mormonism! Or, that they have no hope of success so long as their man debates fairly and decently, and sticks to the propositions. Let them assume these positions if they wish.

Again: The attention of all whom it may concern is called to preambles and a resolution adopted by the General Conference on April 13, 1892:—

"Whereas the Quorum of Twelve deem it wisdom to appoint none as church missionaries who do not honor the Lord in 'avoiding the use of tobacco,' etc., as enjoined in the revelation of April, 1887, and,

"Whereas branch, and especially district presidents, are important church servants, therefore be it

"Resolved, that we do respectfully call the attention of all saints to the propriety of observing the example of the Twelve in appointing such officers, especially where others equally competent are available who do thus honor the Lord."—Conference Minutes of 1892, page 73.

There are important reasons why all the saints should avoid the use of the forbidden weed; but it is especially important that men placed in responsible positions like those of branch and district president, should be clean from the polluting habit. If the above resolution means anything, it means this much at least: All other things being equal, branch and district presidents should be chosen from among those who see and believe that the use of tobacco should be avoided, and who practice in harmony with their faith. "COME UP HIGHER."

Times are close, money scarce. It is difficult for many of the elders' families to get along without going into debt. Do not go into debt if you can avoid it. Let it be the last resort. When you can no longer avoid it without suffering, see to it that your indebtedness is not made greater than your promised income. All should strive to live within their income. It is much easier to do this than it is to live beyond our income, and pay our debts as all honest men should, saying nothing about saints. It is, too, the duty of the missionaries to economize and live within their means, as well as their families, and all saints. It is not the privilege of any person (that is, his right) to use a dollar for mere pleasure, when necessity and needed comfort do not demand it, while at the same time that dollar is due, or soon will be, some one else. That would be using somebody else's money without his consent, and what do we call such an act? Let us be saints, not in word only, but in deed.

A word about the holding of reunions. While it is evidently the privilege of districts to hold reunions, annually if they see fit, I think it is wrong for them to expect to pick up ministers wherever they can get them, outside of the "field of labor" in which the district is located. The practice of writing to picked ministers, east, west, north, and south, and trying to get them to come to "our reunion," is an improper one. I refer more especially to district reunions and the invitations and pleadings of committees of arrangements.

After this, so far as my own mission is concerned, I advise that no district depend upon, or call upon, missionaries outside of the district, or the "field of labor" in which such district is located, except by the consent or arrangement, of the general missionary in charge where such reunion is to be held. A little reflection will convince all, I trust, that such a policy will be for the good of the work.

Satan is very busy trying to hinder and destroy the work of God. There is great need that all should be watchful and prayerful, and especially the ministers of the church. The relation of the sexes to each other should be guarded with double care. Sociability and kindness, when true, do not require the elder to select some young sister at the reunion, conference, or in the neighborhood where he is preaching, and make a constant companion of her as though they were lovers. And especially is this injurious and unbecoming when one or both of them are married. After careful observation for years I am inclined to strongly condemn such a course as unwise and dangerous, and therefore wrong.

Let the ministers remain in their fields unless necessity compels them to return home to provide for wife and children, in which case they should notify the missionary in charge at once.

I am, your brother and coworker in the Lord's vineyard,
J. R. LAMBERT.
LAMONI, Iowa, September 7, 1896.

To the Saints of the Northwestern Kansas District.—At our last conference you elected me as your district president, an honor unsought for by me; but I feel thankful for the confidence manifested by you; and hope I may be able to discharge the duties imposed upon me, to our mutual benefit and the glory of the Master. To this end I ask you all to cooperate with me in every honorable way to advance the cause we love.

The district is large in territory and the people poor in the things of this life; so we will be obliged to hurry slowly. It shall be my endeavor to visit you all as soon as possible. I hope you will be patient, and while patience is a virtue, idleness is not; so let all be up and doing while it is to-day, remembering that the enemy is always on the alert to pounce upon the sleepers in the army of the Lord.

At our conference just past it was voted to raise money to buy a small tent, to accompany the district tent to accommodate the ones in charge. Now let all chip in as we are able, remembering that it is for God's servants to occupy while on duty. The presidents of the different branches will please see to it that collections are taken for this purpose and hand to the district president as per resolution.

Yours in bonds,
HENRY HART, Pres.

WOODBINE REUNION.
I am authorized by chairman on board and lodging for reunion at Woodbine to say he can furnish all who desire such in private homes at $2.50 per week. We can furnish pasture for quite a number of teams at $1.00 per team for the term of reunion. Our water tanks are being put up to-day and they are fine. The fitting and preparing of grounds are being pushed to completion by the town committee, and all will be ready for a large gathering. We say to our people, Come one and all, and don't disappoint our town committee by staying at home. We have arranged for everything to be cheap.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The fall conference of the Chatham district will be held in Ridgetown on the 3d and 4th of October. Officers of branches will please see that their reports are made out correctly and contain all the necessary items.

GEORGE GREEN, Pres.

RICHARD COBURN, Sec.

BLENHEIM, Ontario, September 6.

The conference of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district will be held at Cleveland, Ohio, in the Wilber Hall, No. 445 Pearl Street, October 3 and 4, 1896, commencing at 10:30 a. m. sun time, Saturday. Every branch in the district should send delegates to the said conference. One item of importance to be attended to is the electing of a district president. We hope to see a large gathering of the saints at Cleveland, as we expect to have a grand and good time. Brn. Etzenhouser, Short, Hilliard, and we also expect that Brn. Kelley and Lake, with others of the traveling ministry, will be present. We desire all those who expect to attend the conference to please inform Bro. Edwin Garrett, Box 28, Cleveland, Ohio, of your intention. The committee will meet all the trains on Saturday and will wear a red ribbon.

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS,

President of Mission.

The annual conference of Southern California district will convene at saints' chapel, San Bernardino, California, October 16, 17, and 18. Complete reports of branches as provided for in "Rules of Order" will be expected, also a report from the Sunday school association, as provided in the by-laws. Let as many of the saints, especially the priesthood, attend as possible.

A. CARMICHAEL, Pres.

Conference of the Northeastern Illinois district will convene at Sandwich, Illinois, October 17, at ten a. m. Secretaries of branches are requested to forward credentials and branch reports to the district secretary, M. J. Danielson, Danway, Illinois, not later than October 12. Those unable to forward reports by the 12th will send them to F. G. Pitt, Sandwich, Illinois, otherwise they will be liable to fail in reaching conference in time. We hope to see every branch fully represented. Come, and come in the Spirit of the Master and help in making our conference a success.

In bonds,

F. G. PITT, Pres.

The Northern Nebraska district will hold a conference at Fremont, October 10 and 11.

The Sunday school convention will hold its meetings on the 9th, occupying the evening hour also. Representatives of the branches and Sunday schools are expected to be present. All who can are invited to come and enjoy a good spiritual time together.

Yours in bonds,

J. M. STUBBART, Pres.

The London district conference will convene at St. Thomas City, Ontario, October 10 and 11. Branches are hereby requested to send their reports to the district secretary so as to reach her by October 7, or else send them direct to St. Thomas. We hope to have a report from every branch, and that all who can come will come to conference.

MAGGIE CAMPBELL, Sec.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Philadelphia District:— On October 4 (Sunday), at 10:30 a. m., the dedication of the church at Baldwin, Maryland, will take place. You are cordially invited to participate in this extraordinary event, being the first church property dedicated to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ in this district. Elders W. H. Kelley, H. E. Moler, W. A. Smith, and the writer will be present, and we trust as many as can will avail themselves of this opportunity to assist in the exercises of the hour.

In bonds,

BORN.

OKESTROM.—At Goshen, Clay County, Kansas, July 18, 1896, to Mr. Nels and Sr. Carrie Okestrom, a daughter; named Carrie Pearl and blessed August 27, 1896, by Elders H. A. Stebbins and Henry Hart.

DENNIS.—At Goshen, Clay County, Kansas, January 11, 1896, to Bro. F. M. and Sr. Amanda Dennis a son named Marion Leroy, and blessed August 27, 1896, by Elders Henry Hart and H. A. Stebbins.

SCOTT.—At Blue Rapids, Kansas, May 13, 1896, to Bro. James and Sr. Sarah Scott, a son, named Don Nathaniel and blessed August 27, 1896, by Elders H. A. Stebbins and Henry Hart.

HEIDE.—To Bro. John and Sr. Almira Heide, at Fulton, Iowa, July 10, 1896, a daughter, named Emma Blanche; blessed August 23, 1896, by Elders C. E. Hand and Warren Turner.

MARRIED.

BROWN—TRUMAN.—At the home of the bride at Lamoni, Iowa, at eleven o'clock a. m., September 10, A. D. 1896, Bro. George V. Brown to Sr. Victoria A. Truman, both of Lamoni's progressive and prominent citizens. Ceremony was performed by E. L. Kelley, before a company of relatives and special friends. Mr. and Mrs. Brown took the southern bound train at twelve o'clock the same day for a short tour. May peace and good fortune go with them and abide.

DIED.

SUTTON.—At Maquoketa, Iowa, of diphtheria, Paul Russell, youngest child of Bro.

J. R. and Sr. Libbie Sutton. He was born August 12, 1895, at Grove Hill, Iowa, and died August 24, 1896. He was sick ten days, and from the first administration the elders had no hope, but felt that the Savior had need of this little one. By his sweet and winning ways he had endeared himself to all around, and will be sorely missed in the little home his presence brightened. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Funeral sermon on Sunday, September 6, 1896, by Elder Warren Turner, of Massillon, Iowa, from 2 Samuel 12: 22, 23 and Acts 3: 20, 21.

MERCER.—At Fall River, Massachusetts, September 4, 1896, Sister Elizabeth E. Mercer, aged 30 years, 1 month, and 1 day. Funeral from the saints' chapel, September 6, with sermon by Elder John Smith. The musical part was in charge of Mrs. Linney and Ashton. She was not afraid to die, and said she would not recover. How comforting and strengthening the words, "I know."

HUTCHINS.—At her home in Meadow Grove, Nebraska, on Saturday, August 1, Sr. Mary E. Hutchins, wife of Bro. Charles N. Hutchins, aged 33 years and 9 months. She was baptized May 21, 1882, and was the only one of her near relatives who has obeyed the gospel. Besides her husband, she leaves father, mother, three sisters, and one brother to mourn. She died in full faith of the gospel, retaining consciousness till the last. Funeral services conducted at the saints' chapel at Meadow Grove, Nebraska, by Elder J. F. Mintun, the presence of several hundred showing the respect of all who knew her.

HINELINE.—Solomon Hineline was born August 20, 1819, in Easton, Pennsylvania, was sprinkled into the Lutheran Church when young; removed from Easton in 1833 to Ottawa County, Ohio, where he resided until he came to De Soto, Nebraska, in 1855. He obeyed the gospel on the morn of his seventy-fifth birthday. His life always a life of purity, he passed away as a child, without fear, to that better state of the just, July 11, 1896. Sermon by G. M. L. Whitman.

JEWIS INCREASING IN JERUSALEM.

According to a lady who has lived in Jerusalem for forty years, the Jewish population of that city is increasing. "Twenty-two years ago," she says, "there were only between 15,000 and 20,000 Jews in Jerusalem. In those days no houses were to be found outside the magnificent walls, the gates of which were closed at night. Since then many changes have taken place, and the Hebrew population—mainly on account of the increase of the Jewish immigration from Russia—now stands at between 60,000 and 70,000. Whole streets of houses have been built outside the walls, on the site of the ancient suburban districts, which for hundreds of years have remained deserted. It is not, however, only in Jerusalem itself that the Jews abound, but throughout Palestine they are buying farms and establishing themselves in a surprisingly rapid manner. In Jerusalem they form at present a larger community than either the Christian or the Mohammedan."—New York Tribune.

Bro. H. C. Tharp, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, writes April 23, 1896:—

"Dear Sir:—In February last I purchase three boxes of your Tobacco Antidote. I took one and one half boxes and it made a complete cure. I do not care for tobacco. It makes me sick to smell of it. I let my brother-in-law have the other box and a half and it has cured him. I think it is a great remedy. I believe three boxes will cure any tobacco user in the world if he wants to be cured. . . . I will recommend and do all I can to help the sale of your antidote."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895. Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition. Yours respectfully,

P. H. MARBURY.

Pastor C. P. Church, Clayton, Ark.

Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per box; three boxes, (thirty days' treatment), $2.50 with iron-clad, written guarantee, or sent direct upon receipt of price. Write for booklet and proofs. Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis., and Boston, Mass.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE "CREED" OF AGNOSTIC SCIENCE.

A WRITER, "R. J. M.," in The American Catholic Quarterly Review paraphrases the teaching of evolutionary science, as taught by the agnostic school, in the following "creed of science:"—

"1. Matter is the origin of all that exists, without the intrusion of any creative agency; all natural and mental forces are inherent in it. Nature, the all-engendering and all-devouring, is its own beginning and end, birth and death. (Büchner, 'Kraft und Stoff,' pp. 32 and 88.)

"2. At first there existed only a cosmic gas; then a fiery cloud; next a molten spheroid, in which not alone the more ignoble forms of life . . . but the human mind itself . . . all our philosophy, all our poetry and all our art . . . all are supposed to have been latent and potential. (Tyndall, 'Scientific Use of the Imagination.')

"3. Thereupon followed a long cooling process. The vapors were condensed; the crust of the earth, its seas, lakes, and rivers, and life itself were formed. The difference between a living and non-living body is a difference of degree, not of kind. (Fiske, 'Cosmic philosophy,' p. 422.) All natural bodies with which we are acquainted are equally living. (Haeckel, 'Natürl Schöpfungsgesch.' by Dr. Ernst, 6. edit.)

"4. Light shines upon the water, and it is salted. Light shines upon the salted sea and it lives. (Oken, 'Elem. Physiol.')

Thus was produced the sea mucus (or protoplasm), which is the life-stuff or physical basis of the earliest and simplest organisms. (Sec. 905, Ray society's Edit. 'Oken's Physiol.')

"5. All the forms of vegetable and animal life, including man, have been successively and gradually developed from the earliest and simplest organisms (Spencer, 'Social Statistics,' p. 79), and, in particular, man himself is, without doubt, a lineal descendant of the anthropoid apes." (Haeckel, l. c.)

CHRISTIANS AND THE THEATER.

REV. DR. THEODORE L. CUYLER has been giving the religious papers an expression of his views on the old but ever new subject, "Ought Christians to patronize the theater?" Dr. Cuyler gives a number of reasons why he thinks they ought not. One reason is because the theater "constantly unsexes woman by presenting her before the public gaze in masculine attire." Another reason adduced is that "a very large proportion of the plays presented in the average theater contain more or less of immoral teaching." Dr. Cuyler also adduces the testimony of Fanny Kemble, the actress, William D. Howells, and other notable people in the theatrical world and out of it, in support of his contention that the theater is a vicious and demoralizing agency. For a further view from the same source, we quote from Dr. Cuyler's article as it appears in The Northwestern Christian Advocate:—

"If the theater is a school of morals, as its defenders constantly contend, then the teachers in that school ought not only to learn their own lessons, but to bear the most high and irreproachable character. I do not affirm that every actor is immoral nor every actress is impure; but I have no doubt that the best of them would confess that if they manage to preserve a delicate purity of heart they do so in the face of terrible temptations. A celebrated actress told a friend of mine that she 'only enters a theater to enact her own part, and has as little association as possible with the members of her profession.' An actor who had quit the stage from conscientious convictions once said to me, when we passed the playhouse in which he had often performed, 'Behind those curtains lies Sodom!' It is notorious that a very large proportion of the plays presented in the average theater contains more or less of immoral teaching; and the exhibition which the theater makes of itself in the pictorial advertisements that cover the dead wall is enough to reveal its true character. The theater, as I have already remarked, is a public institution to be estimated by the sum total of its influence, just as the pulpit is. And if a follower of the Lord Jesus Christ bestows his pecuniary patronage upon the theater, then is he to that degree responsible for it, and in a moral partnership with it.

"There is an old and plausible theory that if Christian people would all agree to sustain an entirely unexceptionable drama by unexceptionable performers, the theater would be regenerated. It is a lamentable fact that this has proved to be an 'iridescent dream.' The experiment has not proved successful when fairly attempted. The theater manager is not a professional philanthropist; he 'runs' his business simply and solely to make money. He produces what pays best; and if he can spice his evening entertainments with a plot that turns on some sort of sexual depravity, or burlesque of evangelical religion, or a shameless exposure of physical beauty, the temptation to fill his coffers is too strong to be resisted. The licentious stage and the Sabbath-breaking press are both conducted for filthy lucre; and the Christian who contributes to the support of either or of both is responsible for the spiritual mischief that they work."—Literary Digest.

The income of the 15,000,000 church-members in the United States and Canada is estimated to be $2,250,000,000 per year. They give one dollar out of every $409 to missions.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

LAMONI, IOWA, SEPT. 23, 1896.

THE DUTY OF A DEACON.

A BROTHER interested in the latter-day work, as all the rest of us, writes: "I would be greatly obliged if you could find it convenient to outline briefly the duties of a deacon."

It is unfortunate for an answer to this request that so little of what is "written" on the subject is lacking in specific statement as to what the duties of the deacon's office are.

In the present edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, pages 96, 97, 225, 231, 243, 294 and 296, there will be found mentioned the office of deacon and the deacon as an officer.

The duties of a deacon as stated in par. 11, sec. 17, page 94, are; "To watch over the church always, to be with and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty. . . . And take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest." They are also "To warn, expound, exhort, and teach, and invite all to come to Christ."

It is true that the foregoing are given as the duties of the teacher, and attach to the deacon by reason of the statement, that the teacher "is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church, by the deacons, if occasion requires."

Brown's Bible Dictionary gives the following as the office work of the deacon. "An officer in the church, whose business it is to serve in distributing the elements at the Lord's table, and to provide for and daily distribute provisions to ministers and the poor."

Dr. Buck has this to say of the office:—

The office of deacons originally was to serve tables, the Lord's table, the minister's table, and the poor's table. They took care of the secular affairs of the church, received and disbursed moneys, kept the church accounts, and provided everything necessary for its temporal good. Thus while the bishop attends to the souls, the deacon attends to the bodies of the people: the pastor to the spiritual, and the deacons to the temporal interests of the church. (Acts 6.)

From a consideration of the rule of law found in section 83, paragraph 22, Doctrine and Covenants we draw the conclusion that good, kind, watchful ministers should be had to watch over and be with the church always, and that deacons should be thus appointed. The church certainly needs the services of such an officer, and the need is an ever increasing one, as year after year adds to the numbers and importance of the church as a body.

It is essential that this officer shall do whatever may be necessary for the benefit, welfare, and spiritual advancement of the members, so far as they may by their special ministrations.

What follows is copied from the HERALD for September 15, 1878, and is reproduced as being applicable now, and more extended than we have time to write at present.

Deacons must learn their various duties by being instructed therein; and this instruction may be derived from inspiration direct, from the teachings of other deacons, teachers, priest, or elders, in preaching and in conversation upon the word; or from the actual necessities of the condition of the church, (congregation, association of saints, or branch of the church,) of which he is an enrolled member, and of which he is a chosen officer, called to minister unto and for the church.

Deacons are also expected to act at times as presiding officers, to sit in council, direct, control, and guide the deliberations of that council, and teach the members of it their duty, the duties of their office as deacons being clearly understood by this. Doctrine and Covenants, section 104, paragraphs 31 and 38, pages 294 and 296.

We have now gone through, very briefly, what is written, so far as we are at present informed, respecting the duty of a deacon in the church of Christ. All the duties spoken of or specified, thus far, are of a general character, and apparently no provision is made for many things necessarily to be done, and which must therefore be considered in the inquiry, "Who shall do them?"

In order that every branch of the church, having a membership of six or more, may receive and enjoy the fullest benefit from their church fellowship and association, it is absolutely necessary that they have and control a place where meetings for worship, fellowship, and business, may be held.

This place of meeting must be kept clean, must be warmed during the season of cold, whenever meetings are held, and must be lighted during all evening meetings. To do all this requires the outlay of time, labor, and money, even under the most favorable circumstances. This outlay of money, labor, and time, must be met, and to meet it "somebody" must act, must in a word "do something."

Many, if not quite all the duties specifically named in the Covenants are of what we may justly call an honorary character. By this we mean that they are those duties more immediately connected with public administrations, preaching, baptizing, laying on of hands, blessing children, and administering the sacrament; duties upon the discharge of which it is supposed there attends the conferring, or the receiving of some special spiritual power; duties to which there attaches, from their nature, some special privilege or prerogative.

The duties just enumerated do not comprise the whole list of things necessary to be done, to secure a healthy spiritual condition in a church, an association of members of a church, called a branch.

We have no written law commanding the appointing of deacons other than the one cited from section eighty-three of the Covenants. Notwithstanding this lack of positive commandment, the whole body of spiritual authorities of the church, from its earliest history, have considered them necessary; and the custom of appointing them has grown by usage to be a law. If the custom was founded upon a misconception of the law of the church, and has been continued in error by reason of false precedent, it should be abandoned. If on the contrary, the custom was founded upon a wise and just conception of the law by which the church should exist, and has been continued by reason of wise yielding to true precedent, then should the law, made so by custom and use, be sustained and honored.

The unwritten duties of the office of deacon are not less binding than those specifically defined. The fact of their being unwritten in the Covenants, is not a defense against a charge for their not being fulfilled; the reasons why they should be faithfully discharged more than counterbalancing such defense when it is urged.

These unwritten duties are the ones; which, however necessary their performance, or however much the association of church members may suffer because they are not performed, few are willing to perform; their willingness being judged by their failing to do.

We have elsewhere written that every branch must have a place of meeting. This place of meeting, if a public building, hall, or meetinghouse, or church, must be in the actual possession of the association of church members worshipping there, at least while worshipping; and if the property is owned by the church, some one must have constructive possession at all times. What particular officer of the church has precedence of right to this constructive possession? The right to carry the keys; open the doors; conduct visitors, either those belonging or not belonging to the church; to see that the floors, doors, windows, pulpit or stand, seats, table or stand, lamps, and other fixtures are clean and in good order; to open the doors at the hours of gathering for preaching, fellowship, prayer, or business meetings; to see that the lamps or candles are trimmed, lighted, and burning, in time for all evening meetings; to see that the members coming in find seats; to keep watch over the saints during the meetings, repressing loud talking, whispering, and laughing; reproving the thoughtless and rebuking the giddy; putting a prompt stop to rude, indecent, and boisterous acts, by which the propriety, solemnity, and peace of the meetings may be disturbed; to exercise kind and diligent supervision over the health and comfort of the saints while in meeting, by securing a proper ventilation of the room; to light and keep burning the fires by which the room is kept warm; to have charge of the treasury; to receive, disburse, and account for the contributions of the saints, intended for the necessary and incidental expenses of the association of members; to keep, preserve from damage, and account for all personal effects of the association; to visit the poor, ascertain their needs, and report the same to the church; and in fact, to perform any and all of those necessary duties by which the welfare of the saints is secured through a careful administration of the outward ordinances, a faithful employment of the talents entrusted to that man? We repeat the question, whose prerogative, privilege, right, duty is it, by reason of official standing, to do all these things?

It is not the elder, for his is the duty to administer in word, in doctrine, and in spirit; to preach, expound, and exhort in spiritual things.

It is not the priest, for to him pertains a duty to visit the members at their houses; to exhort them to attend to spiritual duties.

It is not the teacher, for it is made his prerogative to act as a sort of spiritual constable, a kind of general conservator of the peace among the saints.

It follows then of a necessity that the right, the duty of performing these acts,—these unwritten but essential things of the law, devolves upon the office of deacon.

Some portions of the law which may be cited in support of the opinions expressed in this article have been already given; to wit:

The general understanding long since obtained concerning the institution of the office of deacon, and the duties of that office, as cited at the beginning of this article.

The acquiescence of the church, by its constant practice, hitherto, in that construction of the duties of a deacon.

The actual necessity for the performance of those duties.

The positive declaration that the deacon should be a standing minister to the church; and the fair presumption as to what some of the absolute requirements from a standing ministry would be.

The specific appointment of other duties to other officers, and these unprovided for.

What we have here written was not intended to deny the right of any one holding the higher priesthood, from acting as a deacon; or to deny his privilege to do any and all of these things specified as duties of the deacon, if he shall so choose, and there is a necessity therefor. Nor will the fact of there being good, kind, true, and noble men holding the office of elder, who are willing to perform those duties without a murmur, if they can thereby serve the church, secure unity and provoke some to the emulation of good works, make the law any less void, or detract from the dignity, prerogative, and efficiency of the deacon's office. On the contrary, it goes to show that any duty which may be performed by an elder that comes within the province of a deacon, that does not sully nor detract from the spiritual efficiency of that elder, may be far more profitable, honorable, and properly done by a deacon.

Many elders have thought so lightly of the offices of priest, teacher, and deacon, that it has been thought to be somewhat disdainful to suggest that men of any promise or talent should receive the office of deacon. It has been thought, by far too many, that an eldership was the lowest position or grade of office which it was honorable to aspire to, or to offer another.

Let every man be esteemed according to the integrity and faithfulness with which he fills the office whereunto he is called; not according to the peculiar honor which is supposed to attach to the office itself. Honor him who honors God by honoring the offices ordained of him.

"For there is no power in the church but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God."—Romans 13: 1.

"Nay, much more the members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary."—1 Corinthians 12: 22.

"Let every man stand in his own office, and labor in his own calling."—D. C. 83: 21.

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence."—Ibid. 105: 44.

GRACELAND is a graceful addition to Lamoni, and there are splendid opportunities for locations in it for those who, being willing to help the College work, do not choose to donate outright, but prefer to invest in real estate adjoining the College grounds. Lots for sale. For particulars consult Bishop Kelley, William Anderson, Frank Criley, or D. F. Nicholson, all at Lamoni.

If we have not stated it before we state it now, that the words and commandments which Joseph Smith, as prophet, seer, revelator, and president of the church received from God for the church and gave to the church as he received them from God, have been and are received by the Reorganized Church in the light and meaning of the revelation of April 6, 1830, as found in the 19th section of Doctrine and Covenants, the second paragraph of which reads as follows:—

2. Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me; for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you.

There is nothing in this revelation that requires the church, or any member of it, minister or layman, to accept, indorse, or heed and observe, any words of Joseph Smith not coming from the Lord, or inspired by his Spirit. What Joseph Smith received from God for the church, that the church may and must accept, or suffer the consequence of rejecting it; but no consequences of loss or punishment can possibly accrue to the church for rejecting words spoken only by human wisdom, or folly, whoever may have spoken such words.

In the exercise of our own agency, we utterly refuse to be compromised, or concluded by the words, or actions of any man, which actions, or words, are either not in keeping with the accepted word of God as found in the standard books of the church, or are contrary to, or in conflict with said revealed and accepted word. Those things which the Lord has given to the church, are tender, true, lovable, and of virtue and of force, and may not be set aside for, or by human opinions; all other things are to be accepted only as they are examined, tried by the processes open to us all, and found to be worthy of credence, acceptance, and observation.

This is the clear and obvious meaning of the revelation referred to, and no amount of jeering and sophistry will succeed in forcing other conclusions on the men of the Reorganized Church. It is their safeguard, and ground of security in the turmoil of human opinion surging round them, and they do not propose to be taken unaware, or driven from their vantage ground.

COLLEGE WORK.

It is now in order for all lovers of success in what the church undertakes, to take serious thought about our College enterprise. The building is nearing completion, and soon will be occupied by teachers and students. The trustees have borrowed means to push the building in such way as to be within the five years limit, on which the title to the site depended; and it is now desirable that there be a general support to the enterprise. Send subscriptions to Bishop E. L. Kelley or to William Anderson, treasurer, to swell the fund, the general College fund. The institution now needs something more than empty resolutions. As Treasurer Anderson remarked: "Resolutions are good things in their way; but we cannot buy bricks and lumber and pay workmen with them."

Live encouragement is now wanted; and should be forthcoming.

BRO. JOSEPH F. BURTON, in preparing the way for the work in the Society Islands, under the French Protectorate, wrote secretary of State, and from the reply he received, he is inclined to believe that we will not experience any trouble in our work as American citizens in the mission; and that if we suffer undue discrimination against us, there exists a disposition to see that we are properly cared for by intervention; though it will be as citizens only, which is right, and all we ask.

Bro. Burton has, by the assistance of Bro. Joseph Luff, secured a suitable press to take to the Islands.

ERROR, PLEASE CORRECT.

IN HERALD for September 16, page 610, first line under heading "Confidence," please read "two," not too; the intention being to refer to the two great political parties, not to the greatness of them.

STANDARDS.

THERE is a great deal being said nowadays in the press and on the street and rostrum about single and double standards, in relation to money; and it suggests the thought whether there can be justly either a single, or a double standard of moral excellence and religious purity. That is, whether the standard of morality as drawn from the Mosaic code, or the ten commandments by the ordinary pulpit teacher is to be considered as the standard by which all life and religious endeavors are to be finally determined, or whether there are really two standards; one, that of the code; the other, the ethics of the New Testament as taught by Jesus Christ.

The one standard, that of the code, sought the prevention of sin by imposing penalties for the transgression of law, the rules and provisions governing conduct drawn out and particularized from the ten commandments, with punishments for the infraction specified; which were in all but the darker crimes in the nature of fines by offerings, or sacrifices, from the spotless dove to the equally spotless bullock; varying according to the turpitude of the crime, or transgression charged as having been committed. In the other, it was sought to deter men from committing crime by the conferring of the Spirit of truth and the love of God, to be a quickening guide and prompter, an ever-present impelling and restraining force; impelling men to do the things that are good, and restraining them from doing what is wrong and evil. The one was a written law, the other an unwritten one put into the heart and mind of man. They may be briefly written thus: Whatsoever men do unto you, do ye also unto them; or its equivalent, contrasted with, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

It may be possible for human legislators in the exercise of their function of office to make two standards of measurement of values; but, from what is known of the teachings of Christ Jesus, there is but one standard of measurement of human conduct for saints, and all who accept Jesus as the Savior; that one, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, . . . and . . . thy neighbor as thyself." Its fulfillment is measured by the Golden Rule: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

BRO. WILLIAM THOMPSON DEAD.

WE learn just as we go to press and by letter from Bro. William C. Nirk, of the Des Moines district, that Bro. William Thompson, of the Seventy, died suddenly at Colo, Iowa, September 17, to which point he had gone to respond to a call for labor. Full particulars are not given, but will doubtless be furnished for next week's issue. Another good and true man has gone to his rest, another family is bereaved, another of the recently organized quorum of minute men, the Second Seventy, has been called home while at the post of duty. We sincerely sympathize with the bereaved wife and little ones left to mourn the loss of husband and father. To them and to all among whom he lived and labored the memory of his life will be that of an example and inspiration for good.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE increasing number and severity of tropical hurricanes that have prevailed along the Atlantic, Gulf, and lake coasts has caused the government weather bureau to adopt a special signal called the hurricane signal, which will be displayed at all weather bureau offices and wind signal display stations along the coasts mentioned. Sail and steam vessels will also carry such signals of warning, when possible to supply them on outgoing voyages.

Bro. Mark H. Forscutt has been chosen Dean and Registrar of Grace-land College, and will take pleasure in enrolling the names of students. College work began Tuesday, September 15, with a small array of pupils; but the faculty are all in line.

President Joseph Smith left for the Woodbine reunion on Friday, the 18th, Bro. Alexander H. and Fred A. Smith having gone forward a day or two beforehand. Bro. Frank Criley is also on hand, representing the Herald Office.

Bro. C. M. Fulks, of Lehigh, Indian Territory, wishes brethren engaged in shoemaking to write him, as he wishes to correspond with them.

Bro. J. R. Lambert is at Allendale, Missouri, preaching the word and defending the work and the characters of the early elders against influences designed to cast odium upon them.

We have received a note from the secretary of the Fremont, Iowa, district stating that dates sent us of district conference and Sunday school convention had been changed to make them read one week later, and requesting that we change dates in notices of said meetings to that effect. We have not received the notices referred to, but make this note for the benefit of all concerned.

Card from Bro. W. T. Bozarth, formerly of Independence, Missouri, now located at Denver, Colorado, informs us that he is again in the field and feeling better than for years past. This we are pleased to learn. Bro. Bozarth is a veteran in the cause—one who has labored much and in the face of difficulty caused by ill health. We wish him long continued usefulness and abundant success.

Those desiring Gospel Quarterlies for the coming quarter should get their orders in as soon as possible—both individuals and schools. Promptness in ordering will aid the office and prove helpful to students of the lessons. Get them in hand in good time and thus get them all.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. ELIAS B. PORTER writes from a place where the air is pure and the soul unfettered, evidently. He wrote from Martin's Camp, Mount Wilson, Los Angeles County, California, September 4, as follows:—

We are dwelling on the mountain where the air is pure and free, Seeking wisdom at the fountain of the soul's divinity.
Is not this the Holy Mountain, glorious mountain of our God?
Where the angels of his mercy
Have removed the chast'ning rod?

The above is the sentiment of our soul, for indeed the air is pure and free from the evil of city life in Los Angeles; and we have felt more of the Spirit and heavenly inspiration in the past week since we have been dwelling on the mountain than we have felt for some time. Indeed, as we look down from our lofty perch upon the cities of Los Angeles and Pasadena at night when they are lit up with electricity, it is so beautiful to see those lights, so thick, twinkling like the stars above. We think, What a beautiful world this world of ours could be made to be, if men were all righteous and were led and instructed by their Creator! And then as we cast our eyes along the long range of the everlasting hills with their towering peaks kissing the clouds as they glide swiftly by, our mind drinks in the inspiration of Joseph's land, and we remember the many great and precious promises and blessings concerning said land and those that dwell thereon, who are subject to him who gave it to Joseph and his posterity and as many of the Gentiles as would obey the new and everlasting covenant. We also remember the cursings and judgments pronounced upon the rebellious, therefore we are greatly desirous of being faithful, that we may have a part in helping to beautify this world under the instructions of our Lord and King, when he comes to take his kingdom which he has purchased with his own blood, when Satan shall be bound, and there be nothing to hurt or destroy in all his holy mountain.

Bro. Henry Sparling, writing from Blendville, Missouri, September 8:—

I am at this point preaching a few days and teaching the tithing law, and I feel thankful that some have taken an invoice of their goods and paid some down for a start. Others have promised to make a start as early as possible, I start to Springfield, Missouri, to-morrow, to commence tent work again.

Bro. J. W. Wight has had excellent results from his labors at a new point of late, of which he wrote from Dow City, September 16:—

Our stay at Correctionville was one of the most interesting, pleasant, and profitable yet had in tent work. Sold sixteen Voice of Warnings, two Spiritual Gifts, baptized two, and got all the names sent you for sample copies of Herald. Had it not been that our tent was advertised for use at reunion we would not have left so soon. The town was turned "upside down" and many warm friends made for the cause. It was the first effort of the kind ever made in the place. Our headquarters were at Mr. and Mrs. Jones' while Bro. and Sr. Vansickle, three miles in the county, Sr. Hodges, of the town, and numerous friends, cared for our needs.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Reed City, Michigan, September 17:—

We intended to move the tent last week to Kalkaska, but the interest was still good and so many urged upon me to continue another week, that we concluded to remain over the coming Sunday. Truly the Lord has blessed me here. While defending the claims of the prophet Joseph I was wonderfully blessed, as has usually been the case all along in the past. O, the words came plain and rapid, but clear and distinct, while the Spirit of God thrilled through many, both members and nonmembers! While the power of God's Holy Spirit was upon me I said, "I see some here now who have recently been baptized filled with the Holy Spirit of God. I see others who are believing but who have not obeyed the gospel as yet, who have received such a manifestation of the Spirit of God that it has thrilled through your bodies, until you feel to say in your inmost soul, that God is at the head of this work and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God." And with many other words did the Spirit of the Master through me manifest to them all that this work is of God. When the meeting closed one gentleman, a business man of the town, came up to me and said: "Well, Elder, you told one truth in your discourse; the Spirit of God or some power, thrilled through my whole body from head to foot; I never felt so in all my life; there must be a God back of it somewhere." O, we were all blessed! To God be all the praise. Eighteen have thus far been baptized, and several others are believing. Several believe whom we fear will not obey the truth on account of outside pressure. May the Lord lead the work, and assist the servants to push it on to victory.

Bro. H. C. Bronson is in the heat of the battle again in debate, this time at Anderson, Michigan, whence he wrote under date of the 17th inst.:—

I am right in the midst of a heated debate with Mr. Joseph Musser. We close to-night on the third proposition, and have three more. The work stands firm and unshaken, and we have added strong friends to the cause. I am feeling well and blessed with the Spirit in defending the truth. Musser is not honest but quite cunning. Considerable excitement here. May God direct all.

Original Poetry.

CROWNS.

A golden crown the monarch wears, reflecting brightest gem
Of purest water, undefiled, a beauteous diadem.
Dire emblem of despotic power o'er millions held in thrall!
Why not choose that heav'nly realm where crowns are free to all?
In ancient days the victor's brow with laurel leaves was crowned;
In war, in peace, in civic game, reward for those renowned;
Triumphal march, and festooned arch, and wreath worn on that day,
And victor's brow—Where are they now?
Gone, all that pageantry.
Brows celestial wear a crown, halo of purest light,
Surrounded by the peace of God in majesty and might;
The star of Hope, that heav'n-born star,
beams on that diadem,
And joyous song, both near and far, of "peace, good will to men!"
Go, Love and Duty, hand-in-hand, where Faith's in sweet accord;
Duty's 'tis to wear the cross, and Love, the crown of God;
"No cross, no crown!" How light the task!
Wouldest thou be free?
Then wear the cross that wins a crown for all eternity.

CHILDREN'S RIGHTS.—CONTINUED.

THE case cited in our last illustrates a fact in heredity apt to be overlooked, but of fearful significance. The tendency to drink, terrible as it is, does not at all exhaust the possibilities nor the probabilities of this inheritance. It often shows itself in a tendency to various diseases. Dr. Hargreaves says: "The effect of the habitual use of alcohol, even in moderate quantities, seems to be to lymphatize the whole body; that is, to diminish the fibrous part of the body, that which gives enduring strength, and to make the lymphatic or watery portions abound in all the tissues. The children of parents so lymphatized are apt to be scrofulous, and their children, again, are apt to be feeble in body and weak in mind. Idiots and simpletons are common among the progeny of such persons." Dr. H. P. Ayers, in his report on imbecile and idiotic children, made to the American Medical Association, sustains the position that a very large proportion of such cases is due to the alcoholic heredity. Dr. H. M. Hurd, Superintendent of Eastern Michigan Insane Asylum, says: "Some of the children of drunkards inherit immediately from their parents diseases like epilepsy, chronic chorea, hysteria, idiocy, or imbecility. They are objects of interest, from the standpoint of the pathologist or physician, from the cradle to the grave. They suffer, and are burdens to their friends or to the community as long as they live. Their condition will be more fully described in another connection. I now desire rather to speak of the characteristics of those who do not inherit actual disease. As a rule such children are precocious. They develop prematurely and show considerable intellectual quickness. They often possess a taste for music or painting, or for special handicrafts, and are ingenious, winning, and attractive to all who come into relations with them. They are tasteful in dress, if females, and show almost brilliant in conversation and bearing. They sometimes display from tender years perversions of the moral sense. They are untruthful, unscrupulous as to the means employed to accomplish cherished plans; indifferent to the property rights of others, and lacking in an appreciation of abstract right and justice. At puberty they often develop unpleasant characteristics. They usually display at this time a lack of mental equilibrium, and frequently lose those traits of mind that in childhood proved so attractive. They are wayward, jealous, suspicious, perverse, and often shock their parents and interested friends by acts of apparently wanton cruelty towards younger children or towards animals. As adult life is reached, if females, they become hysterical and nervous, and often sink into a condition of invalidism which terminates sooner or later in actual insanity. Males at a corresponding age become restless, reckless, dissipated, and vicious. Many of both sexes develop insanity at adolescence without adequate exciting cause, and remain insane for life. It would seem as if the original potential energy of the brain and nervous system had become exhausted during the comparatively brief period of childhood and youth. Stimulated to unnatural activity by a highly excitable nervous system, they develop precociously and wear out prematurely. If the early environment of such persons has been favorable, or the morbid tendencies derived from one parent have been neutralized by those inherited from the other, they may go through life without breaking down."

We might fill this chapter, indeed might fill this book, with unimpeachable testimony showing that the dearest, most sacred rights of children are ruthlessly violated by drinking habits in their ancestors. Sometimes the children escape only to have the curse with accumulated force descend upon the grandchildren. This very winter I have heard from an eye-witness of a tragedy which terminated the life of the last of a family of five children whose parents were pure and good, but both of their grandfathers were drunkards. Every one of these five children inherited the curse, some in the form of epilepsy, one deaf mute, one insane, and two drunkards.

Tobacco heredity, if it be not so virulent, is scarcely less alarming in its effects upon the community, because it is more widely distributed than alcoholic heredity. The primary action of tobacco is upon the nerve centers; by its depressing and disturbing influences upon them it produces changes of organic structure which are transmitted to offspring. Among these changes Dr. Richardson enumerates: causing undue fluidity to the blood and a change in the red corpuscles; debility of the stomach, weakened and irregular action of the heart; irritability of the lungs; derangement of the organs of sense, resulting in confusion of vision and inability to define sounds clearly; impaired activity of the brain and paralysis. Few families are free from the taint of inherited nicotism; when it descends from generation to generation its cumulative force manifests itself with fearful power. Within two blocks of where I write there is a little child who is the victim of his forefather's sin. The saddest thing about it is that they are Christian men and women. Those living now have, and those dead had, no suspicion of the fearful inheritance they were laying up in store for this poor child. From the hour of his birth it has been all that loving parents and skillful physician could do to keep the poor thing alive. His stomach is disordered, though both father and mother were unusually robust; his whole nervous organization is out of tune; sight and hearing are both defective, he has never uttered an articulate sound, nor attempted to stand upon his feet. We can find no explanation for it unless it be in the fact that his father, his grandfather and grandmother, his great-grandfather, and so on back through the five generations we have been able to trace, were tobacco users. This poor child's deficiencies are exactly those pointed out by Dr. Richardson as likely to result from tobacco heredity.

Another case occurs to me. A fine old gentleman, strictly temperate as regards everything except tobacco, was accustomed to laugh at my ideas concerning it. "If tobacco is a poison, as you think," he used to say, "it must be a very slow poison, for I have used it fifty years, and my father used it before me, and we were none the worse." In this belief he died, for I loved him too well to tell him what I firmly believed, that the palsy which shook his hand might have had some relation to his tobacco. His wife was one of the smartest women I ever knew, with a well-balanced mind in a healthy body. They were wealthy farmers, with all their home surroundings conducive to health in their two children. But these two children were life-long sufferers from neuralgia and other nervous diseases; the son who followed his father's example in using tobacco, became while in the prime of life a confirmed invalid, and developed an appetite for strong drink, a thing unknown in the line of his ancestors.

Physicians tell that one marked effect in nicotine heredity is physical degeneracy, a state in which the system succumbs easily to attacks of disease, and special organs break down without, apparently, sufficient cause. In families where this taint has descended through several generations, very marked degeneracy is manifest. In such families we find a very large per cent of nervous diseases, with morbid tendencies, uncontrollable impulses, and little moral or physical stamina.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

OUR FATHER.

"O Thou whom we are taught, in faith, to call
Our Father, glad in our dear right we come
With mind, with soul, with spirit, bringing all
To lean accord with thee—life's perfect sum;
Not as a slave, but as thy child, we hear
Thy voice, and find in perfect love no fear.

What could we call thee by thy works alone?
Science stands mute before them, known in part,
'Tis love hath made the high prerogative our own
To say, "Our Father who in heaven art!"
Heaven is thy kingdom that shall rise within
When hearts elect to let thy reign begin.
Dear name that binds us to the Infinite,
That grants us heirship to a grander life!
It holds us safe, even while we whisper it,
And hushes into peace all sense of strife.
Our Father cares for us, O restful thought,
A breath of balm, with heavenly healing fragrance."

Thursday, Oct. 1.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—1 Timothy 2: 1-10.

Thursday, Oct. 8.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—1 John 4: 7-13.

Thursday, Oct. 15.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Peter 4: 7-10.

Thursday, Oct. 22.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Micah 4: 1-7.

Thursday, Oct. 29.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Joel 2: 21-32.

QUESTION DRAWER.

CONDUCTED BY E. K. MOHR, GRAND RAPIDS.

1. What are we to do for teachers? Why not be as wise in the church as we are in the state? This cry for teachers will continue to be heard until teachers' meetings, training classes, and normal work we make teachers enough and good enough to supply the demand. Poets are born, but teachers are made.

2. Should a teacher or superintendent ever use tobacco?

We teach more effectively by example than by precept. Shall we teach our boys and girls to use tobacco? Tobacco using is selfish, filthy, expensive, demoralizing. "What? Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost?" Does our divine Guest like the use of tobacco? There are good people who use tobacco, but no one can be as good with it as without it. Can you imagine Jesus Christ with a cigar, a pipe, or a chew of tobacco in his mouth? The very thought of it is abhorrent. Shall the teacher or superintendent represent or misrepresent Jesus Christ?

3. What can be done to make the indifferent teacher realize his responsibility?

Indifferent is the result of ignorance. Enlighten your teacher. Send him to the State Sunday school convention.

4. What is the best way to bring proud and fashionable folks into the Sunday school?

Make the Sunday school "the fashion" and make it such a school that all can be "proud of it."

5. What can we do with the smart boy irrepressible as a volcano? Do not try to repress him. Be his friend. Make him your friend.

Make his activity count for instead of against the Sunday school class. Use him. Never abuse him.

6. How can you have a teacher's meeting when the teachers will not come?

First, get them to come, and then make it such a teacher's meeting that they will come again and bring others. Do not allow your teacher's meeting to become a debating society, a lecture, or a social club. Make it bright, earnest, helpful, and practical and you can have it anywhere if you want it with all your heart.

7. How shall we get the older ones interested in the Sunday school? Give them a place in the school and tell them of it. Get a good teacher for the Bible class. Talk Sunday school on the street, in business, in the home, at church, everywhere. Pray for the Sunday school, work for these older people and you will get them into the Sunday school. We can have anything we ought to have if we work hard enough for it.

8. How guard against the tendency toward disorganization in townships? Eternal vigilance on the part of the county officers. Personal work counts. One man or woman can keep that organization alive. Secure that man or woman.—S. S. Advance.

GALENA, Kan., Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—Having the pleasure of attending the Midway Park reunion as one of the speakers, I can say it was one of the most enjoyable times I have had for a long time. The meeting were good all the way through. As none of the Bishopric was present I took the liberty to represent that part. I spoke twice on the subject of tithing and was surprised to hear so many say, "Well, I never heard the law of tithing taught that way before;" and others and not a few said, "I never understood the law before." Another brother told me he had been a member of the church for ten years and had only heard the law of tithing preached once and he has been paying his tithes as he understood the law; that was, a tenth of the cash he had on hand. Others had been taught that what they give to an elder for expenses was the same as if given to the Bishop or his agent as tithes; others thought they had to pay a tenth of their increase only; and the result of the matter was, they did not understand how to find the increase; and supposing they had none, they felt justified in not paying anything.

The most of the saints are poor, and while they understand that they must pay one tenth of what they own, and after that could never find an increase; but I find that many of them have had increase, and did not know it, and of course were robbing God of his share. I will just explain how this can be: For instance, a saint pays his tithes of all, God blesses him as he has promised, and next year his wages are increased and he has more money. He moves into a larger house, pays maybe two dollars per month more rent, which would increase expenses twenty-four dollars per year. The family next take up the old carpet, replace it with a new one at an extra cost of say ten dollars. They next trade off the old sewing machine for a new one at an extra cost of say forty dollars, which many do. Again, the father buys a thirty dollar suit this year while last year he was satisfied with a ten dollar one. This year the good wife has got better clothes for herself and children at an additional expense of say twenty dollars. Again, the old knives and forks are replaced with better at an additional expense of say two dollars, and this list might be continued further, and all these things are considered expenses of the family. They have no money at the end of the year; it has all gone in expenses, and they say God has not blessed us as he said he would, while at the same time they have increased:—

In rent.....	$ 24 00
New carpet.....	10 00
New sewing machine.....	40 00
The father's new suit.....	20 00
Wife and children increased value in clothes.....	20 00
Better knives and forks.....	2 00

Total increase over last year.....$116 00

Tithing due the Lord.....$ 11 60

The saints, a great many of them, have been overlooking these things and have accused God of not keeping his promise; while the truth of the matter is that they themselves have failed to keep their part, and now the treasury is low, our good Bishop not knowing what to do. Some elders' families are now three or four months behind with their allowances.

Let us see who is to blame for the saints not understanding their duty. The Bishopric cannot be all over the country. The Doctrine and Covenants says that the elders shall see that the law is kept. Have they done so? I am afraid not. Some say it is none of my business, but they do not fail to drum up their traveling expenses. Some elders seem to be afraid to speak of the tithing law for fear some one will pay them all they have and they will not have anything to give them for expenses. And again, I have heard of some elders saying that if they give it to them it is just the same as giving to the Bishop, but failed to give receipt for it. All should teach the whole gospel and nothing less. Trusting this may help some,

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 12.

Editors Herald:—We returned from Bluff Park and the reunion, comforted and refreshed by the memories of the pleasant and profitable things enjoyed, the old acquaintances renewed and the new friends joined to our life's experiences, making it rich in its associations and fellowship. Riches, earthly honors, are uncertain possessions at best; but the association that brings into our life the treasures of honest hearts and minds quickened by communion with God are to us among and of the stable things which it is both a duty and pleasure to strive to attain to. The weather could be talked about only as being all that could be asked for, and rather more than could reasonably be expected. All the services—preaching, singing, social, and prayer service, Sunday school work, were marked by intense earnestness, and accompanied by the favor of God.

Our visit with the company of saints to Nauvoo; the lessons of the past, whether a success or failure, but valuable as lessons always; suggested by that part or portion of the history of the Church of Jesus Christ relating to this place; the visit to the temple lot; the former dwelling places; and, the later and last, "Nauvoo House," and the homestead where repose the ashes of the illustrious dead—the remains of men whose tombs will yet in the future become a shrine and a household word to thousands who have never heard, some but with reproach, but many thousands more unborn, the names of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. Wonderful men they were, made wonderful to us especially who know so well that none like them have been seen since the ascension of Jesus Christ into the heavens. To Joseph Smith was first broken in this generation the silence of centuries.

We remember that once we, unlike the travelers to Emmaus, had not even the consolation of suggestion of a dead hope. Christ to us was not even born or buried. The "idle tales" of women or of preachers concerning a resurrection hardly made our life's journey even for the time a question of interest. But, thank God, we have ourselves visited the empty tomb; we have ourselves heard the angel say, "He is not here, but is risen."

"O fools, and slow of heart," O, blind and deaf generation of men "not to believe all that the prophets have spoken" and that God hath so wondrously fulfilled in our day and before our eyes! And more, the record says, "And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?" And no sooner had my pen recorded the names of these latter-day servants and apostles of Jesus Christ but that my "heart began to burn" and my whole being was enveloped in a glow, as through the presence and power of the promised "Comforter" I was, as it were, brought face to face with Jesus Christ "while he opened to" me "the scriptures," and affirmed, as he so often has before the truth and power of the heavenly calling and work of Joseph Smith, the wonderful, the choice seer.

I really suppose, however, that these things mean more to me than to others who believe so easily. But I know that there are some in the church who appreciate the fight out of the darkness into the light that I have had, and pardon the intensity of feeling upon this matter.

But anyway, I am truly thankful to God that he to me no longer is "not," but "is," and more, "that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" in his own perfect way.

May diligence and faithfulness absorb our lives, until such a salvation as God alone can provide—full and complete—be administered unto us, is my prayer.

M. H. BOND,

NEW HOPE, Va., Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—The activities that generally characterize an outdoor meeting in a prejudiced community are over, and the ordinary affairs of a quiet rural life are again the order of the day, but not without producing impressions which time will never be able to obliterate.

While we did not have the privilege, at this time, of testing the temperature of Virginia water, we feel confident that some will do so ere long, as some have expressed themselves well pleased with our claims. Many friends have been made and much prejudice allayed.

We preached the first sermon on Thursday to a small audience, but attendance increased nightly until the close, when we had the pleasure, on Sunday, of telling the angel's message to about three hundred people. Good liberty prevailed throughout, with but a few exceptions. On the 3d inst. a heavy load was lifted from us by the unexpected appearance of Bro. F. C. Smith and wife, and the former with sonorous voice like a lion in the jungles, sent the glad tidings of life roaring through the tree tops and bushes until they reverberated an enthusiastic response that almost raised us from our seats.

I labored about six weeks at Roxbury, doing all I could to strengthen and encourage the few saints, who are truly worthy of the name, and who should be looked after by any of the elders coming this way. While there I organized a Sabbath school with about nine members, which met the next Sabbath at the house of Mr. King, with twenty-five, which was far beyond the reach of our expectations. Our energetic sister, Sr. Taylor, is at the head of it, who for several years has been the backbone of the Baptist Sabbath school; but constantly refusing to let our elders use their church, she withdrew from them.

I preached whenever I could, and went from house to house, which will result in baptism by the next elder who goes there, as I learned they are now ready. These, however, will be the fruits of the saints' labors, by giving them the church literature. Right here, dear saints, is where you all can do a great work, and wonderfully aid the elders in their work.

Any elders coming this way should visit Hampton. There they will find a pleasant welcome at the home of Bro. and Sr. Rand. Bro. Rand is not yet a member of the church, but he has received enough of its spirit to discern the needs of the elders; and being a railroad man he knew we could not travel on our "good looks;" hence my needs, both in clothes and in railroad fare, were graciously supplied by him. Dear saints, who have professed to love the work, learn a lesson from one who has never made such a profession. Any elder in this field will never need to suffer for anything if the saints know it.

If the results of our grove meeting be measured in the same measures of zeal shown by the saints, we shall be perfectly satisfied. Bro. Coffman called the men out of the fields and in a short time we erected a tabernacle in his wilderness that provoked the admiration of all who saw it. We should feel it an injustice to Bro. Moneymaker and his excellent family should we neglect to make mention of the valuable aid rendered us by their singing.

I am about ready to leave this field to enter new ones, but wherever I may be I shall ever cherish the pleasant associations of the dear saints in Virginia.

KANSAS CITY, Kansas, Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—I am here in charge of the gospel tent of the Independence district, at Chelsea Park Place, near Wyandotte, Kansas. We put it up on the 3d inst. The weather has been against us some, but the interest is fair. We are having a debate now for six nights; Bro. E. T. Atwell, of Kansas City, Missouri, on the one side and Elder W. L. Winslon, of the Christian Advent Church, on the other. The question is on the setting up of the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2: 44. I do not know what good will come out of this debate, but we do hope and pray to God that some good for the church and the people will result.

I am thankful to God for his loving kindness to me. I am able to go around first-rate and I spend most of my time trying to spread the gospel news of glad tidings to the people around. I do not spend much time at home. I am trying to do my duty as an elder in the church and the Lord is blessing me in so doing, and I am ready and willing to do all I can—to go anywhere that my brethren in authority wish me to go at any time. This great work is everything to me. I say great because great it is, and I want, as one, to spend my time and life in it and for it; that is, in my weak way, in doing all the good I can, and I must say that the good Lord is blessing me in so doing. Wherever I go and open up the work I find I am making many friends to the cause as I go. I ask the dear saints to pray for me. Love to all.

BREWTON, Ala., Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—I have all I can do and cannot accomplish as much as I desire. If I possessed my thousands I would spend it freely to spread this great work; the true gospel of Jesus Christ does so much for poor humanity. Indeed, it is a blessing to all the race.

Since last writing I have baptized eleven. I just closed a meeting twelve miles west of Mobile, Alabama. Many are persuaded that we have the truth, but have not the courage yet to obey. I believe a work will be accomplished at Pine Tucky, Alabama. I left many convinced that we have the truth. The Baptists are trying to find a man to defend the Baptist Church and to prove ours to be false. If they succeed in getting a man the debate will take place at Whistler, Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. Some think we will have a thousand people to hear it. While at Pine Tucky I had the pleasure of meeting two Utah elders, Elder Irving S. Pratt, of Provo, Utah, grandson of Parley Pratt. Elder Pratt seemed to be a nice young man, well educated, but like millions of earth's inhabitants, wrong in his religion. I exposed Utah Mormonism and had them out to hear. I proposed to discuss the difference but they utterly refused, and seemed to be ignorant in regard to the false doctrine taught by their leader, Brigham Young. They had Mr. Robert's book on succession. I borrowed the book, read it through, and publicly exposed its false statements and garbled quotations. Elders Call and Pratt said they never met one of the Reorganized Church's elders before, and both invited me to come to Utah on a missionary tour. Elder Pratt said he would furnish me a hall at Provo that would seat a thousand people.

I wonder if our missionaries in Utah are asleep or remaining around a few saints. What is the matter? Wake up, brethren, no time for sleeping soldiers.

I am holding meetings five miles west of Brewton, with good interest.

TEMPLE, Ohio, Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—A combination of circumstances ordered my return home for a season, so I was debarred from going to the State of Maine as I was intending at last writing. Brn. I. M. Smith and F. M. Sheehy went instead, however, and they will assist the missionary force there until in October anyway, after which we hope to place other help in support of the work in the State of New York and in Eastern Pennsylvania.

We are not idle here, however, and although much disappointed at having to return, and just a little blue, have settled down to the notion that it was about the best thing to do at the time. Right here there is much to do and one can reach the ears of more outsiders with an opportunity to properly impress them, then he can traveling, unless favored. Kirtland is important and it grows in that direction. A skillful hand is needed here, especially through the summer months—some one that can see beyond the smoke of his own chimney and meet occurrences as they come. The careful and honest inquirer readily finds something of merit with us. Then the impressions made here become widespread and tell for or against us. This refers to the comers which the following will illustrate: In the month of May (I learned by looking over the record), there were seventy-nine visitors at the Temple that needed to be looked after and supplied with proper literature and sent away with correct ideas and impressions of the faith. Numbers of them purchase literature and read it with interest. In June there were 119 visitors. In July 208, in August 308, and in September, up to date, 76; total 790; and on some occasions all do not register. Bro. Isaac Richardson has rendered valuable service in this line of work during the summer. Now suppose that but one fourth of these are earnest inquirers into the merits of our claims, are fairminded and become favorably impressed so that they will do us simply justice as they go abroad among the people, and it becomes no small matter. At least it is worth attention, especially as it is known that it has and does bear good fruit. They become educators of others into right notions and opinions in regard to the faith, if never converts; friends instead of foes.

While this has always been but incidental to the work in hand here, it is necessary and important, and takes time and thought. Means more than mechanically putting people through. Interested parties frequent the meetings, which gives chance for Paul and Apollos, but as of yore, God must give the increase; and who knows what time will do?

Things are going fairly. We regret the loss to the neighborhood of Hon. Stephen Carpenter, who died last evening of Bright's disease. He was not a member of any church, but was a good citizen, tolerant, and a fair-minded man, and always treated our people nicely.

From present outlook I shall be here the greater part of this month, but if colaborers and saints are as busy elsewhere as we are here, no criticism will be made upon them by the missionary in charge.

Fraternally,

WM. H. KELLEY.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—I have been at home nearly three months on the sick list and have been able to do but very little preaching since I came to California, on account of old troubles brought on from taking cold and the effects of an old hurt, which I feel more and more as I get older; but I am feeling a little better the last few days and am going to make another start in the morning for the reunion at Santa Cruz, and to continue in my field the rest of the year, the Lord so ruling and health permitting. There is so much to do and so few to do the work on this coast that I hope and pray that the Lord will give me the needed strength physically, and more faith, and all that shall make me a colaborer in the fullest sense of the word.

And, I know that every faithful minister of the word will have to go through many trials—yes, through refining processes—before they can reach a full copartnership with Christ; so I have ceased to ask that the fiery trials may be removed, because I know that they are our inherited rights in this world, that we may be prepared to enter into and enjoy that which is in store for the righteous. But the meaning of that word "righteous," brethren and sisters, when I try to study the depth of that word and what it comprehends and stand myself up by it honestly and fairly, I plead with the Lord to spare my unprofitable life and to apply the rod, if needs be, until Haws is better prepared to dwell with Christ; for I do not want to deceive or flatter myself up to a higher level than I have really reached, because I know that it will avail me nothing when I shall stand at the judgment seat of Christ. For I want to avail myself of God's mercy and the blood of Christ here and now, by walking in the light as he is in the light.

This means righteousness in the fullest sense of the word.

Brethren and sisters, we can reach the prize, provided we run faithfully to the end of the race. Let us remember that we, like the Master, will have more and more trials to bear as we near the end of the race; but with the increase of trials there is promised an increase of strength, and the only way to get the needed strength in the time of extreme trials is to bring self into subjection to the trial. If the Lord in his wisdom does not see fit to remove it by asking, why, suffer long and be patient, remembering that trials bring forth the fruits of righteousness in overcoming self, and suffering long, and being patient. These are all first-class steps up the ladder of righteousness; and they and many other steps are the fruits of trials and temptations; so we see that self, self, self, is the man that will bar us out of the promised inheritance. Then it is with self that we have to deal. Let us realize this and whip self by the grace of God.

Yours in bonds,

A. HAWS.

PINE LEVEL, Fla., Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—Some time ago I wrote you a short letter for publication in regard to the progress of the work of the saints in our district, which was not exaggerated in the least; the work still goes on under the supervision of our able and zealous president, Elder Edward Powell. We are sometimes blessed with the presence of some of our traveling elders, who are always received with pleasure and treated as well as our people are able to treat them. Our brethren are harmoniously at work for the good of the cause; there is no discord in our ranks; the good Spirit seems to prevail over all of our district; the gift of healing prevails in some instances, and there are continuous sessions to our cause, notwithstanding the opposition of the world, and sectarians who are still laboring in the dark.

There are many honest hearts among us who are willing to embrace the truth when it is presented to them. We have some zealous laborers in our district and, which I feel a desire to express, who work for the cause of truth, Elder John Hawkins and Bro. Van S. Jernigan, who has recently been ordained to preach. Our district at present is composed of nine branches, extending over the whole of Santa Rosa County, Florida, and the southern part of Escambia County, Alabama, all of which country is healthy and with ordinary industry and economy a man can make a living for himself and family. The land is poor, but with some help of fertilizers will produce fair crops; and there is room for many to settle in this district. There are still some lands here subject to homestead entry, and there are lands here owned by individuals which can be bought for homesteads. The land here is somewhat diversified; some is interspersed with creeks and branches, and are uneven; but this kind has some good locations for water power machinery; while there are other places where the land is level for miles in one body, suitable for farming purposes, pastures, etc. Stock of all kinds do very well here with proper attention.

I make these statements in order to let your readers understand what they could realize, should any wish to select a home among the followers of Jesus, and the truth, as well as those who wish to seek a home in the South. May the blessings of God continue among all seekers after truth, in the name of Jesus. Your humble brother,

T. JEFF JERNIGAN.

POLLARD, Alabama.

FAIRBANK, Iowa, Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—The work is onward. Yesterday I baptized three more; a man almost eighty-three years old, and a man and his wife, nice folks. Another one, a young lady, was to be baptized, but could not get here. May she soon find an opportunity to obey. Prejudice and rainy weather have been against me here, but the adversary can't keep all from obeying the truth.

I begin to feel like myself again since I got fairly to work again in the field.

J. S. ROTH.

PORCUPINE, Wis., Sept. 12.

Editors Herald:—I have not been idle, although I have not written for the Herald for some time. When I saw the account of Bro. M. P. Madison's death it brought forcibly to my mind how miraculously Bro. L. L. Cook's life was spared while attending conference here, June 6. He was struck by lightning on top of the head. The bolt tore several holes through his hat, burning him on the top of his head, and as it passed down it burnt the side of his face and left a black and blue spot over his heart, then passed down tearing out the gore from his shoe, and he was taken up as they thought dead; but through prayer and administration he was able to attend meetings the next day, and the day following he returned home to Ono, Wisconsin, fourteen miles. Well, thus did the Lord hear and answer our prayers in his behalf.

Since our conference fourteen have been baptized here as follows: On June 10 I baptized four, and on June 12 Bro. W. A. McDowell baptized one, and on July 11 I baptized five, and on July 25 one, and on August 30 one, and on September 5 two more; and others say they will be baptized ere long. Thus moves the good work.

Since July 1 I have been laboring alone, yet not alone, for the Lord has been with me. Of those lately baptized there were five young men, all of whom used tobacco before being baptized; but all quit its use the day they were baptized. Three others in this branch have also quit the use of tobacco this summer; and their united testimony is that the desire for tobacco was not only taken away, but that they could not bear to be near those who used the weed, without becoming sick. Thus the Lord will bless those who will trust him.

One young man who was baptized was almost blind before baptism; in fact, there were days when he could not see, and his eyes were getting worse all the time, although different eye doctors were trying to cure him; but on the day he was baptized he laid aside his glasses, medicine, and all, and the Lord healed him, and he is now well.

One of the young men was a Roman Catholic (German), who gives promise of a worker. Twelve of the fourteen baptized were young men and young ladies.

I ask an interest in the prayers of all the saints. May God's Spirit attend the ministry everywhere, is my prayer.

CARTHAGE, W. Va., Sept. 12.

Editors Herald:—The good work of the Lord is onward in this section of the moral vineyard. Bro. D. L. Shinn, accompanied by Elder L. D. Ullum, arrived on Friday, August 28. He was called here to represent the church in a discussion with a Baptist minister, C. E. Shafer, editor of the Good Tidings.

The propositions were, first: "The missionary Baptist Church preaches the gospel in its fullness, and is a church of Jesus Christ, being scriptural in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice. Bro. Shinn showed by the scriptures that the Baptist Church does not teach a fullness of the gospel, proved that they taught remission of sins without baptism; that they were short in the principles, baptism, and the laying on of hands; that they were short in doctrine, also in organization and authority. They could not, and dare not preach the word of the Lord, Mark 16: 17, 18. Mr. Shafer is not a man of great ability and we were to some extent disappointed, because from his reputation we supposed he would be the very man to represent the Baptists in a discussion with the saints.

The proposition affirmed by us was that "the church with which I, D. L. Shinn, am identified, sometimes vulgarly called the Mormon Church, is the Church of Jesus Christ, being scriptural in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice."

The discussion was commenced August 31 and lasted four days. Bro. Shinn was calm, deliberate, kind, and honorable, commanding the respect and admiration of every listener. He admitted whatever there was in the religion of the Baptists that could be called scriptural and Christian, but that they were an organized church of God in any sense, he most forcibly and successfully denied.

The saints are more than pleased with the result and proud of their representative, who so fully and powerfully set forth and defended their cause, meeting and exposing so clearly every trick of the adversary and all the trash put forth as history of "the Mormons."

Mr. Shafer on the second proposition failing to disprove the affirmative arguments, turned aside to a criticism of the Book of Mormon, evidently copied from Mr. Sheldon's work on Mormonism. Shafer asserted that the Mormon God was not the God of the Bible because the Book of Mormon said he had flesh and blood: "And he saith unto the Lord, I saw the finger of the Lord, and I feared he should smite me; for I knew not that the Lord had flesh and blood. And the Lord said unto him, Because of thy faith thou hast seen that I shall take upon me flesh and blood."—Book of Mormon, p. 506. But in reading this passage to make out his case he read to the word blood and stopped. Bro. Shinn called out to him to read the whole passage, and then he pretended to do so, but skipped the last sentence and began at this passage: "And when he had said these words," etc.

He then read a passage in Mosiah, page 200, paragraph 4, thus: "And they were scattered abroad upon the face of all the earth, yea, and even from that time until the creation of Adam," showing that the creation of man took place long after they had built the tower of Babel. Bro. Shinn upset his objection again by reading the whole passage. Every objection he found to the Book of Mormon was fully met and exposed in a scorching manner.

A committee of six young men from their own side of the controversy were appointed, some of whom were said to be illiterate and not capable of taking notes; these went out like a jury and brought in a sickly report in his favor, but no one gave any attention to this committee.

A Baptist minister by the name of William Cadle was his moderator, and it is thought that he and Shafer selected and packed the committee to suit themselves. A gentleman by the name of Lewis, a man of great ability and experience, was selected as chairman of the moderators, who ruled out Shafer's dodge from the question at issue to a criticism of the Book of Mormon, but Shafer appealed to the house and gained the case by one vote.

Bro. Shinn proceeded to prove his church, comparing the Latter Day Saints with the former-day saints, showing that they were one in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice. Bro. Shinn said he would reply to a few points in his criticism to give us a sample or two of his garbling and falsifying, which he did, and then gave no further attention to him.

Bro. Shinn is here yet, and has baptized five since the beginning of the discussion. Another will be baptized to-day.

Much good has been done in this locality and the saints are rejoicing. Bro. L. D. Ullum is with Bro. Shinn and is an efficient helper in the word and work of the Lord.

J. L. WILLIAMS.

MANNON, Ill., Sep. 15.

Editors Herald:—With the help of Brn. Sheldon and Junk we put up the district tent at Henderson, Illinois, on the 7th inst., and had good attendance and interest, until rain interfered on the 11th. The conference having ordered two-days' meetings at Millersburg and Eliza, one beginning the 12th and the other the 19th inst., and placing the duty of looking after them on my shoulders, Bro. David Holmes took my place at the tent and I on to Millersburg.

Rain made the meetings small on Saturday, but on Sunday large audiences greeted the speakers. Bro. M. T. Short occupied the morning hour, and the writer the afternoon and evening. The morning Sunday school (I wish we had a better name for it) was well conducted and much interest manifested.

But over all was a feeling of impending sadness that was realized at the opening of the morning meeting when word came that "Aunt Betsy Miller" was dead, and that the funeral would be held at the church at 2:30 p. m. to-morrow.

Bro. Short went to Mannon in the evening to fill his appointment there and make announcements for me for the remainder of the week up to Friday, when the two-days' meeting at Eliza will demand attention. On Monday, the 14th, we had almost constant rain.

At the saints' church in Millersburg, at 2:30 occurred the funeral service in memory of Sr. Miller, Bro. James Terry in charge. The writer delivered the address. In spite of bad roads and rainy weather a large congregation attended.

After dismissing the audience at the cemetery I was conveyed by Bro. S. Adams about eight miles (through the rain) to his home where the "traveling elder" always finds a warm welcome and pleasant home. The rain was so bad that no meeting was held last night but we will endeavor to begin again to-night.

Yours truly,

JAMES MCKIERNAN.

Original Articles.

THAT DREADFUL MAN.

IN HERALD of July 22 there is a reply from T. J. Sheldon to my letter, and in the August 12 number there is said to be an answer to the same. I have read both articles over as carefully as possible and confess surprise, and more so as I read that of Bro. Williams. I will first state my position and then see what has been replied to and what has been "Answered."

I stated this:—

From all we have been able to learn by searching the revelations, ancient and modern, they make the preaching of the gospel paramount, and the only means for the salvation and perfecting of the race of man. It is not the adorning of the body with jewels or costly apparel, but that of a quiet, lovable, and peaceful spirit, and the putting on of the divine nature that commends men to God.

I then referred to eating and drinking, and said:—

The best, and about all I could or would say is, Be governed by that wisdom that comes from above, and the judgment that comes from a sound mind; for in the gospel we have the promise that God shall give knowledge and wisdom.

Bro. Sheldon, after making a little argument, discovers that he is not certain as to what I was trying to prove, and says:—

Perhaps I am mistaken; but it seems to me that the charity of Elder A. seeks to justify the use of tea, coffee, tobacco, and strong drinks; and also extravagant dress and tight lacing.

Bro. S. says:—

He makes a witty solution of the problem by saying, "Wisdom and a correct understanding ought to govern," forgetting the proposition, and that I had clearly stated that:—

We neither advocate the drinking of tea, coffee, intoxicants, nor the use of tobacco, and that wisdom and a correct understanding ought to govern.

It does seem to me that one so ready to correct the error could understand that so far as meats and drinks were concerned, and also as to dress, I said, "It is not the adorning of the body with jewels, or costly apparel," and my good brother tacitly admits I was correct, when he said I made a "witty solution of the problem, by saying, 'Wisdom and a correct understanding ought to govern.'" That is the legitimate conclusion to the whole matter. That is just what I said, and, so far as I know myself, what I meant to say.

Brother Williams answers me, and paints a picture which if true, would cause all the hosts of Sheol to rejoice exceedingly. Bro. W. says some very good things, but like the other brother's reply, he answers something that I did not say. Bro. W. quotes from my proposition and says, "I heartily indorse it." But he thinks I "proceed to modify" when I say, "It is not the adorning of the body with jewels or costly apparel, but that of a quiet, lovable, and peaceful spirit, and the putting on of the divine nature that commends us to God." And then he tells what I try to prove, and makes a wordy argument.

One of the crimes I am charged with is "sectarian" argument. And after putting words in a sister's mouth, what she may say; and how a brother may "chew," and what he may say; some sister "puts on a corset, paints her face," and she too says something; others "grow slovenly, careless, and it's none of your business," etc. Then he says, "It is evident that neither of the persons mentioned above has the spirit of this work." Here I perfectly agree with my brother, and call his attention to the fact that a man or woman in possession of that peaceful spirit and divine nature within, and wisdom from above, and the judgment of a sound mind, would be in possession of the "spirit of this work;" and would not be guilty of what is here presented, but would exercise the best wisdom and judgment. That is no answer to my position. Bro. W. continues that line of answering all along, and at the conclusion says, "Whether Bro. A. meant to convey this thought I am unable to say. But his reasoning followed to a legitimate conclusion results in this;" and like the other brother he forgot what I did say. Brother S. used the razor argument and Bro. W. got twisted up in the corset strings, and both make an inquiry. Bro. S. says, "Will Elder A. please tell us how to consider the Christ life apart from the dress and corset?" Bro. W. asks, "How are we to know that the seeds of everlasting life are in the soul, or the great law of liberty fixed in the mind of any man or woman?" and proceeds to answer. I agree with his answer, and in defense of my position answer the questions by presenting the apostle, 1 Peter 3:3, 4:—

Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, . . . which is in the sight of God of great price.

Bro. W. thinks I was away off when I said the people were free to "conform to all the teachings of the wise ones of the world and the church." Bro. W. in answering this objection starts out wrong. He says: "This is the first time I ever heard an elder urge that the membership of the church were free to conform to all the teachings of the wise ones of the world." Possibly I was wrong in saying all, but God said to the church, "Seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom;" with the understanding that his wisdom should direct them and his Spirit guide into all truth; and thus directed they would do no harm. Admitting what the brother says to be true, that "the world is at variance with God," yet in the same breath he advises us to "emulate" the Adventists in their teaching and practice "of unnecessary, harmful, and gaudy adornment." I did not urge but said they were free. It is all very well to advise if they are an example to us in this respect; but for me to even say the people of God were free to choose is dreadful, but it seems to be just the thing for Bro. W. to do.

Again I say, who is to judge? God has left us free. The good is before us, extravagant dress, the hurtful corset, tea, coffee, tobacco, and strong drink. Now choose which it shall be. Is it not true, but fair to presume, that the man or woman in possession of the wisdom of God with the divine nature thoroughly developed would avoid the evils and hold to the good? I am persuaded the brother will say yes. Then why talk about "ostentation, display, extravagance, gluttony, and drunkenness;" and then say, "But according to Elder A. the church is helpless in enforcing his (God's) wishes because no man is to judge what I eat, drink, or wear?" Bro. Williams and all who read my letter must know my position is directly to the opposite of that. Paul said, Let no man therefore judge you in meat or drink.

Did he encourage "gluttony and drunkenness" when he wrote that? He was defending the gospel against Jewish customs and traditions and the law of Moses, and wrote with the understanding that the saints would live above all that.

Again he says, "Elder A. champions the wearing of a thirty-five dollar suit of clothes, and tells us how he would like to meet his Master," and then makes his argument from that standpoint, and among other things he says, "No man or woman to-day who has the seeds of everlasting life in the soul or the law of liberty in the mind will spend money for unnecessary adornment or extravagant clothing, when the poor of his people are crying for bread." That is in my way of thinking both unjust and unkind. I wish the brother had not made that plea. I did say, "By some, if a man wears a twenty-five, or thirty dollar suit he is called extravagant," then compared with a three or four dollar suit. I did not "champion" the one more than the other, but admitted a man could serve God just as well in the one as the other. Every one knows there is a difference in the position men occupy in reference to the dress, and God and good men will respect and honor the one in the humble, or common garb as the one in the more costly. If I am honest, as the brethren give me credit for being, why not believe what I say, and not try to make me say what I did not say? I proposed if worthy to meet the Lord neat and clean, making no reference to the cost of dress, but in the best I had; but as Bro. W. makes it appear, I would be a regular monster, a very octopus. I did not know I was so bad. I am inclined to think Bro. W. did not mean all that, but he had not got rid of all his war paint since his combat with, "I, Clark Braden," and his little hatchet was so handy he used it just to keep his hand in. It's all right, Bro. W.; there is no harm done.

I will just barely mention the dreadful corset. When I said, "Draw the string a little, but do thyself no harm," I did not want them to spoil their little bodies, nor hurt them. I knew they all loved to smooth down the wrinkles and brace up a little on special occasions, and I admonished them to do no harm. But since it appears such a dreadful thing and liable to spoil everybody, and produce such awful results, I am willing to be forgiven, and will add no more. Selah!

Both of the brethren think my mantle of charity too large. Possibly it is a little too broad, but I can't afford to exchange for a smaller one just now. I think I am in the faith and want to be free and let every one else be free; and my understanding of that is to do right, honor God and his law. That makes one free. The great Teacher said, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." To get drunk and in any way violate the law, is neither liberty nor freedom. God tells us in the Word of Wisdom what is not good for man. He also says, "All wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitution, nature and use of man," as well as fruits. "All these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving," as well as meats; and what is the best? The supposition is if we have wisdom such as God gives and a correct understanding, we will do the best we can to live and do according to what is written placed under the circumstances and surroundings and conditions in which we live. Surroundings and conditions differ. For this reason I would to love have sufficient charity to cover all the conditions and surroundings. I hope I am not an extremist and I do want to know what is God's will and to do it. If my brother prefers to meet the Lord in a "negligee shirt and a pair of ducking pants," I would say, "Go, with blessings on thy head." Or, if he preferred the twenty-five dollar suit, and his surroundings and circumstances justified it, I would say the same to him. And when the "heathen nations are redeemed," some may not have on the "negligee shirt" even; and I can to-day say the same for the untutored man as for the other.

Hoping we may soon all see eye to eye and "put on the whole armor of God," and do his will, I hope to continue in the faith.

August 20.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 2.

ITS ORIGIN, NECESSITY, AND PURPOSE; ITS MORALS, AND THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCES OF ITS VALIDITY.

BY ELDER I. N. W. COOPER.

ORIGIN.

THE Book of Mormon originated with the aborigines of the American continent. To state that the book had its origin with Joseph Smith through angelic ministrations, or with an angel through his instrumentality, would outrage the faith and good sense of tens of thousands of devoted believers in Christ, and the truthfulness of his word to the seed of Ephraim, the son of Joseph and adopted son of Jacob; and would do violence to the word of God as found in the Bible—the stick of Judah, and would unnecessarily drag into undue prominence the agent only, by which the sacred record was brought to light in the proper time and manner, and at the proper place. While we admit that Joseph Smith was the divinely appointed agent to bring to light the stick or record of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim, we do not admit that the work, or any part of it, originated with him. It had its origin with the seed of Joseph who was sold into Egypt; viz.: Manasseh and Ephraim; but Ephraim was adopted into the household of Jacob in the capacity of his (Jacob's) firstborn son, that he might receive the birthright of the sons of Jacob; for, as "the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birth-right . . . but the birthright was Joseph's" (1 Chronicles 5: 1, 2), therefore the seed of Joseph (Ephraim and Manasseh) "inherited the blessing," and were reckoned as the genealogy of Jacob in the tribal appointments or blessings of the "last days," with the birthright falling to the lot of Ephraim in the stead of Reuben; and Manasseh occupying the room of Simeon, and both of them, by their adoption, ranking their father Joseph, who stood in his own place according to his genealogy; and thus was maintained the tribal relations, or appointments, of the twelve patriarchs, or sons of Jacob.

The Book of Mormon claims to be the history of the ancient inhabitants of America, showing from whence they came, the times of their coming, their manner and route. It was written on metallic plates, or tablets, about seven by eight inches in width and length, and of the thickness of heavy paper. These were bound together by three rings on one side, passing through each plate as through leaves in a book. It was found by Joseph Smith on the morning of September 22, 1823, through the guidance of an angel; but he was not permitted to remove the plates until 1827. A part of the book was sealed; that is, the plates were closed on both sides so that they could not be opened without doing violence to the record, or marring the volume. The unsealed part is the present Book of Mormon, which was translated by Joseph Smith with the aid of the Urim and Thummim, found deposited with the records.

But exceptions are sometimes taken to the validity of the record on the grounds, that, as the record is claimed to have been written on plates of metal, it is not in accordance with the customs of the ancient Israelites, or of the Jews prior to or since the coming of Christ, as they wrote on papyrus, parchment, vellum, and the inner bark of trees; hence the record is a fraud and an imposture.

Without referring to the innumerable archæological finds that have been made on this continent, of bronze inscriptions, hieroglyphics and images, and inscriptions on stone and copper, to establish the fact of an ancient civilization on the continent of America antedating the discovery by Columbus, and harmonizing with the statements in the Book of Mormon; nor yet referring to Josephus or other writers to establish the ancient custom of writing on tables of brass, of stone, of silver, and of gold, on the eastern continent, we will, in deference to our critics, confine our subject to the limits of the Bible alone. Besides, the subject in hand does not admit the discussion of the merits of the witnesses; nor can we introduce historical or collateral testimony in the narrow compass of a work of this kind. We therefore hasten on and present only a few of the many Biblical evidences that might be adduced on this line, and leave the matter for every one to digest for himself.

To imagine the existence of cunning workmen in gold, silver, iron, and brass, without the ability to grave, or necessity arising for graving written characters in these metals would seem to be the height of imbecility.

And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron.—Gen. 4: 22.

Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, . . . and that can skill to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah.—2 Chron. 2: 7.

And his father was a man of Tyre, skillful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone . . . also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him.—2 Chron. 2: 14.

We read in 1 Maccabees 14: 18, 27, 48, 49, concerning the rule and record of Simon, a high priest of the Jewish order from B. C. 142 to B. C. 130 that when Jonathan was dead, and they heard that Simon was made high priest in his stead, "They wrote unto him in tables of brass, to renew the friendship and league which they had made with Judas and Jonathan, his brethren" (1 Maccabees), which writings were read before the congregation at Jerusalem. And for the great offices which Simon performed in confirming the league of friendship with Rome, the establishing of Israel, driving away their enemies and confirming their liberty, they wrote a memorial of him and had it inscribed in tables of brass. So then they wrote it in tables of brass. So they commanded that this writing should be put in "tables of brass," also that copies thereof should be laid up in the treasury thereof, to the end that Simon and his sons might have them. (1 Macc. 14.)

Provide neither gold, silver, nor brass in your purses.—Matt. 10: 9.

It will be well before proceeding further to consider the signification of the names used in connection with this strange story of the sons of Joseph and of Israel. The noun Israel signifies "the rod of Jacob's inheritance" (Jer. 10: 16), hence Jacob in concluding his blessing on Ephraim and Manasseh invokes the blessing or ratification of the angel who had formerly blessed (settled the title of the possessions upon) him, Jacob, and his fathers, Abraham and Isaac; and commands his name Israel (the rod of inheritance) to be named upon the lads, and "let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth."

MANASSEH.

"And Joseph called the name of his firstborn Manasseh: For God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil [sorrow], and all my father's house;" viz., the evil treatment he had received at the hands of the cruel brothers, hence the name signifies, freed from sorrow, or gladness. (Gen. 41: 51.)

"And the name of the second called he Ephraim: For God hath made me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction" (Gen. 41: 52), hence the name "Ephraim" signifies fruitfulness; and that son, being given him in the days of his prosperity before the years of famine came on, was the pledge (on God's part) of Joseph's fruitfulness; and the same spirit that directed the carrying of Joseph into Egypt, and the giving and the naming of the lads appropriately, guided the hands of the Patriarch Jacob in placing his right hand blessing on the head of the fruitful bough, Ephraim, notwithstanding the displeasure of his own father, Joseph.

The term "crown," as applied in Genesis 49: 26, signifies, "children's children," or in the case in hand, the culmination of the blessing which was to be realized in the last days; hence preëminently on his children's children, or on the seed of Joseph mainly through Ephraim, in the end of time.

Children's children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers.—Prov. 17: 6.

Let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top [the last offspring of children's children] of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.—Deut. 33: 16.

By referring to Genesis 15: 18 it will be found that the land of Syria from the "river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates;" and in Genesis 35: 11, 12 it will be observed that God makes to Jacob a double promise; first, that a nation and a company of nations shall come out of his loins; second, that all the land that God gave to Abraham shall be his.

It will be well to notice in this connection that Rachel, who was Jacob's wife by choice and design and the only one beloved by him, was the mother of but two children, Joseph and Benjamin, consequently they were the only legitimate children (Genesis 44: 27: "Ye know that my wife bare me two sons"), and really the only ones to whom the birthright properly belonged; and, in the economy of God, Ephraim and Manasseh were chosen as "the seed of a righteous branch," in the room of Reuben and Simeon, children of a woman given "in guile" or deceit, who, though legal children according to a heathen custom, were not, according to the scripture rule "in the beginning" the rightful heirs to the birthright. It will also be noticed that these two sons of Joseph receive the title of "Israel," and that Ephraim was to be the crown of Joseph's (therefore also of Jacob's legal) posterity, in a tribal sense, and not personally, directly, or immediately; but it was to be consummated in the "last days":—

And Jacob called unto his sons, and said, Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days.—Gen. 49: 1.

And in that prophecy note the great blessings put upon Joseph and his seed as found in verses 22-27, where it is predicted by the "spirit of prophecy" that his seed (branches) shall run over the wall or boundaries which circumscribed their father's possession in the land of Palestine. And they shall possess themselves of the lands beyond these limits, even the lands at the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills. That this land is not in the eastern continent, and that it does lie beyond the great wall or boundary (the sea) of that continent we need only refer to the prophecy of Moses in Deuteronomy 33: 13-18, of which we will quote here only the fifteenth verse and refer the reader to the balance and ask him to harmonize if possible the almost sterile land of Palestine, broken by hills and abrupt valleys and comparatively worthless mountains with the land of America, especially that clearly pointed out by Moses as lying between the two main mountain systems.

And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills.—Deut 33: 15.

Where are even these two mountain systems to be found in Palestine, with a rich and mighty country embraced between them, as it is in America, and properly should be, as portrayed by the Prophet Moses; and of such an extent as to be capable of maintaining a multitude of nations within its borders, to say nothing of the further definite and minute description, as, the "chief things" within the ancient mountains, and the "precious things" within the lasting hills? But turn to America and the difficulty vanishes as the dew before the sun. Here we have, as every schoolboy ought to know, the ancient mountains so-called by all geographers and geologists of any note, who declare that the Allegheny or Appalachian system, on the east, is the most ancient; and here we find, as God has before declared through his prophet Moses, deposited the "chief things," coal and iron, in close proximity to each other; and also the mighty reservoirs of oil. We have also, on the western boundary of this great continent, the "lasting hills," built of almost impregnable rocks, within whose bowels are found the "precious things;" viz., the treasures of gold and silver. So we have a country located and pointed out by the unerring voice of prophecy so direct, so broad and sweeping in its declarations, and yet so minute in its details, that none but the willfully blind can fail to see it.

"IT'S SOMEBODY'S BUSINESS."

THINKING some few remarks we might place in this column would be of some benefit to some one, we wish to speak of the many objections to women wearing corsets.

First, What is a corset? Webster says it is "something worn to give shape to the body."

Second, What is this something? Simply a piece of cloth made to fit the form with a few stays placed in it for the purpose of holding it to its place.

Third, Is it injurious? No, if worn properly. Common sense, that we have, is sufficient to teach us that harm can be made of this article as well as of other things. Numerous are the good and healthy hearts which have dwelt within the corset for many years. No one was ever injured by a corset unless improperly worn.

Fourth, Is it wrong for mothers to wear the corset during the visible evidence of motherhood? We say, No! so long as worn in such a way as to prove uninjurious to the living and the unborn.

We cannot see why modesty should have left the feminine sex to such an extent that boldness and being proud of their unsightly appearance should be practiced. Women of culture and refinement show more delicacy on this subject. What a pity the practice of hiding themselves had not been handed down from Bible times instead of being bold and brazen and the blush of shame to never crimson their cheeks! Our Savior taught modesty. The Apostle Paul taught that women should stay at home and learn of their husbands (if they by chance know more than their wives). No doubt this is the time he referred to.

The idea of an elder approaching this subject when he is commanded to go into all the world and preach the gospel! His commission doesn't even mention the wearing of corsets as a part of the gospel.

The spirit of a true Latter Day Saint sister ought to enable her to discriminate as to the right or wrong of wearing a corset. Sisters, wear your corsets and be as comely as possible.

We would think the elders would appreciate seeing their wives and daughters of comely form and attire. What class of people like to be dressed better than our Latter Day Saint elders with their gold cuff and collar buttons, watches, and chains, and shining shoes, not speaking of the time spent in dusting and brushing? Not many, if any, would put on the duck suit and leave the broad-cloth for the other brother who may be next. We all like to see "our elders" well dressed and neat and tidy in appearance.

If you tread on our delicate nature you must expect us to resent. Who may we hope to hear from next?

TWO SISTERS.

Conference Minutes.

BRITISH ISLES.

The British Isles mission conference met in the South Manchester branch meeting room, August 1; Elder James Caffall president; prayer by Elder Caffall. Appropriate opening remarks were made by chairman. He said he wished district presidents to report the work of the elders in their districts, also the condition of their districts. Elder James Baty was appointed secretary pro tem., in the absence of Elder J. D. Howell. Elder James Caffall, missionary in charge, read his address. Elder J. Dewsnup, Sen., (high priest,) reported the Manchester district. The following district presidents reported: Elders E. R. Dewsnup (Western Wales), A. Bishop (Eastern Wales), C. H. Caton (Birmingham), John Austin (Sheffield). Thomas Taylor now presented his report as Bishop's agent which was accepted. Elder C. H. Caton was next received as the duly appointed delegate of the Birmingham district. The statistical report of the Manchester district for 1895-6 was read and received.

The Manchester and Sheffield district Sunday school association was granted time; viz., from nine to 10:30 a. m., Monday, August 3, also from nine to eleven a. m. Sunday. The latter time was afterwards occupied with school exercises. Elder E. R. Dewsnup here told the conference that they had purchased a chapel for £155 ($744) in Morriston. He said he would be glad to receive help, as three of them had undertaken the purchase. He stated that they were prepared to fulfill their contract, even though they got no help. The conference heartily commended their action.

Conference business was resumed Monday, August 3, at nine a. m. in the North Manchester meeting room. Report of Elder John Austin, president of Sheffield district, read. The mission secretary was present on Sunday but had to leave for home. The report of the committee on rules was received, committee discharged. Resolved that we receive the above-named rules and consider them separately. Upon motion it was further resolved to defer their consideration until conference of 1897 and that they be printed and circulated among the elders of the conference in the interim. Elder John Smith (Rochdale) here asked permission to speak, but a motion that he be not heard was put and carried, as he had previously been silenced as an elder by vote of the Manchester district conference. Elder J. D. Howell (London), was here released from his duty as mission secretary by vote. Resolved that W. R. Armstrong be appointed mission secretary. Resolved that Elder S. F. Mather be appointed assistant secretary. Resolved that Elder James Baty (Manchester), secretary pro tem., continue his duties to the close of the conference.

A statement with reference to the Lydney (Gloucester) branch petition of 1895 was here made by Brn. Bishop and Gould, alleging certain neglect on the part of the mission conference secretary, which resulted in the conference asking Elder Caffall to write the said branch and to assure both the brethren and sisters that they have our united sympathy in their labors. Resolved that this conference do affirm its continued and unabated confidence in the integrity and uprightness of Elder James Caffall, the president of the European mission. Elder Caffall feelingly expressed his appreciation of the spirit of the resolution. The general spiritual authorities of the church were sustained. Resolved that the best thanks of the conference be tendered the North Manchester branch for kindness and hospitality to visitors; also to the catering committee, chorister, singers, and deacons of conference. Resolved that this conference condemns the unmanly and unchristian conduct of Elder John Smith as exhibited during this conference, especially toward our worthy president, Elder James Caffall. Resolved that we petition General Conference to again return Elder James Caffall as European missionary in charge.

The following were present during the conference: James Caffall, apostle; Thomas Taylor and J. Dewsnup, Sr., high priests; Alma Bishop, E. R. Dewsnup, Bro. Gould, J. H. Edwards, C. H. Caton, J. E. Meredith, Bro. Matthews, Thomas Bradshaw, John Austin, Henry Hoole, James Moir, J. W. Rushton, W. Eccleston, J. Harper, H. Greenwood, W. H. Greenwood, G. W. Leggott, Thomas Taylor (Northern Manchester), T. Brien, James Baty, C. H. Barton, S. F. Mather, W. R. Armstrong, F. Bruton.

Sunday school session Sunday, August 2, in charge of district superintendent, Elder S. F. Mather, assisted by district secretary, Elder W. R. Armstrong, Elder James Caffall, mission president, in the chair; prayer by Elder Caffall. Elder J. Dewsnup read a paper on "The object of the Sunday school," a most instructive and well thought out paper. A solo by Master S. Mather, aged four years. Elder S. F. Mather gave a map and blackboard lesson on St. Paul's second missionary journey, a very instructive and much appreciated lesson. Elder Henry Greenwood gave an address on "Our methods." He spoke of the best use being made of the material to hand in the branches. He made an appeal to the district Sunday school officers, asking them to visit the schools as much as possible in order to instruct them. Elder W. R. Armstrong was then announced to give a lesson on "Jerusalem." There not being sufficient time to do justice to the subject it was first introduced and the president of the conference announced that time would be given on Monday morning to complete it. This announcement met with general approval. The Sunday school superintendent made an appeal to both old and young to give support and attention to Sabbath school work. The present position is good, but there is room for improvement. President Caffall made some approbative and encouraging remarks regarding Sunday school work, and the session closed. At eleven a. m. President Caffall spoke. At 2:30 sacramental and fellowship meeting in charge of Elders Caton and John Austin. It was a good meeting. At 6:30 p. m. preaching by Elder E. R. Dewsnup. Monday, August 3, nine a. m.; Sunday school convention. Elder Caffall in the chair. Business conducted by district superintendent, Elder S. F. Mather. He read the rules of the association and answered questions relating thereto. Sr. S. Gibbs, Morriston, sang, "I have heard of a beautiful city." The superintendent's and secretary's report read and received. Reports from branch superintendents and secretaries were also read and received. Bro. Joseph Arber, Sheffield, read a paper on Sunday school work, which was commended by the superintendent. Elder W. R. Armstrong then resumed his lesson on "Jerusalem" and with the assistance of a diagram and sketches, which he had prepared and the blackboard gave a most instructive and highly appreciated lesson. There was a large attendance and the body expressed its appreciation by a rising vote. The convention was brought to a close at 12:05 p. m.

MANCHESTER.

The Manchester, England, district conference held July 4 and 5, 1896, in the North Manchester branch, Rochdale Road, Manchester; Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sr., presiding. Minutes of previous conference were read and approved. Deacons and chorister appointed. The report from the president of the mission, Elder James Caffall, of the Twelve, read and approved. He said he wished us a peaceful and profitable session of conference. Said it would have afforded him much pleasure to have participated with us, but present aspect afforded some basis for belief that he must forego the anticipated pleasure. His letter was dated from Leeds, the furthest outlying branch of this district.

The report of the president of the district was then read. He reported favorably on the work in the district in a general way. Said he was deeply pained to have to report upon the misconduct of two of the brethren of this body who have absolutely refused to be governed by his advice and counsel, but have persistently sought to undermine and destroy his influence as the lawful president of this district, with both the ministry and the saints, and have already by their disloyalty and unministerial conduct, succeeded in doing harm to the church. He alluded to Elders John Smith and Thomas Hughes, both of whom he had been obliged to silence in their ministerial capacity pending the action of this conference in the premises. The report was received and laid upon the table subject to call.

Elders John Smith and Thomas Hughes

essaying to speak, the body decided that they would not be heard until their case was properly before the conference, as it would be as soon as the order of business would permit. Business made the special order of the meeting: Recommendations for ordination, Wigan branch; Bro. Edward Edwards to the office of priest. Necessity and fitness having been shown, it was resolved that Bro. Edward Edwards be ordained to the office of priest with a view to his being elected a branch officer. In the case of Priest Thomas Spargo to the office of elder, the recommendation was withdrawn, the brother himself and also the body concurring. The consideration of the recommendation of Bro. Joseph Green, of Wigan, to the office of deacon deferred for three months. Priest S. H. Warren, of Leeds, not having made any application for the indorsement of his license, the case was left in the hands of the district president.

The question of district finance was raised, and it was Resolved, that the financial secretary appoint brethren in the several branches to receive moneys on behalf of the district and forward the same to him at stated periods. The president's report was now taken up and that part relating to Elders Smith and Hughes considered. The case of Elder John Smith was taken first. The president having laid the case fully before the body, the brother was allowed to make an explanation of his position before the conference. This he essayed to do in a speech occupying in all over three quarters of an hour. He was then requested to retire while the body considered the matter. The following was then placed before the body and adopted by unanimous vote: Resolved that the action taken by the president of the district in Bro. Smith's case is quite justifiable, and that we consider his (Smith's) conduct to be of a very disrespectful and unchristian character towards the district officers. It was further Resolved that Bro. Smith's suspension of license be continued until he has made an apology and full restitution for his conduct, and that the same apology be tendered in writing to a district conference when in session. The case of Elder Thomas Hughes was next considered. The district president having stated the nature of his misconduct, Elder Hughes here accused the district president of lying, and was otherwise disrespectful to the conference. He then left. The following was then put and carried unanimously: Resolved that the license of Elder Thomas Hughes continue under suspicion until the next conference in consequence of his improper conduct before this conference. An alleged appeal was read from Elder W. J. Armstrong, which was by vote referred back as irregular, the law relating to such appeals not having been complied with. The business session was then adjourned.

The Sunday services—morning and evening preaching and afternoon sacrament and fellowship meetings—were of a soul-cheering, spirit-satisfying character; there was a large attendance evidencing the growth and prosperity of the work, despite the opposing elements brought together against it. At the conclusion of the evening session resolutions were carried sustaining the authorities of the church, general, mission, and district; also thanking the saints of the North Manchester branch for their kind hospitality, and for the use of their meeting room. The location of the next quarterly conference was left in the hands of the district president. Benediction by president of the district.

EASTERN COLORADO.

Conference convened in first conference at Denver, August 29; Bro. K. Seli president, Bro. M. F. Gowell secretary pro tem., in the absence of Bro. G. G. McConley, district secretary. Minutes of meeting for organization of district held February 29, read and placed on file. Moved that visiting members be allowed to participate whether they be members of the district or not. Ministry reporting: Apostle J. W. Gillen baptized 2; Elders M. F. Gowell baptized 1, J. Kemp baptized 6, E. D. Bullard; Priest — Goldsbury baptized 2. Branch reports; Rocky Mountain 31, loss 2. CONVENTION NOTICES.

Northeastern Missouri district convention will be held at Salt River, Friday, October 16, at ten o'clock. There will be a session for didactic work in the afternoon, and a program for the evening. It is desired that this shall be a profitable and spiritual convention. To that end let each one come with prayerful heart, determined to do his part. We should like to see representatives, not only from branches, but from the scattered saints in the district as well. Come and get into our Sunday school work and prepare yourselves for usefulness in this line in your own locality. Those in a habit of coming only in time for conference, come a day earlier this time and attend the convention; get interested yourself and lend interest to the work by your presence. Remember to appoint delegates to represent your school, and do not forget to send report of your work to Miss Mary J. Richards, secretary, Beaver, Missouri. Bring all your Winnowed Songs, Quarterlies, and by-laws, your notebook and pencil. Visitors will make the Hannibal and St. Joe depot at Macon their waiting place, where they will be met on Thursday at 3:30 p. m., and on Friday at 8:30 a. m. and 3:30 p. m. Teamsters will be known by blue ribbon on coat lapel. Communications to superintendent should be addressed to Louise Palfrey, Macon, Missouri.

The convention of the Des Moines district Sunday school association will convene at Runnells, Iowa, on Friday, October 2, at 10:30 a. m. A large attendance is desired; all are welcome. Reports are requested from each school in the district.
