with a flaring headline like this: "Church Row: Hot fight between Topeka Pastors in Conference." (We wonder if it was as exciting a time as the "reverends" had at their district conference, a few weeks ago here, about preaching the gospel by the "expository method" without any political or scientific side issues.)

And so the world goes racing along while "we reformers" are agitating momentous questions with great gravity of mind.

Let us take heart, for what are such little foibles as overbeating a brute or hitching him in the street when it is more suitable (according to the sensibilities of civilized man) that it should be sheltered, or even looking on, and see a neighbor beat and threaten to kill his wife with drawn pistol, compared with these grosser wrongs done to whole communities?

"A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith,
And ready hands."

Let us not try to keep pace with the wicked, but join heart and hand, and march along with those whose joy is doing kindnesses. O may our heavenly Father protect and keep us while we sojourn here.

THE following eloquent passages from a late sermon by Dr. Hillis, formerly of Chicago and lately appointed as the successor of Beecher and Abbot as pastor of Plymouth Church, will be appreciated. It is timely and appropriate in this season of Easter. It will help to a fuller apprehension of the words, "Christ is risen indeed" the hope and the life of humanity:—

"Jesus Christ, the way home for lost men; an outlook upon Christ's relation to the poet and philosopher and the common people." The text was, "I am the way." His peroration was:—

"Not until fifteen does the youth wake to the thought 'I live.' A few days later he finds a grave digged in the waving grass, and man exclaims, 'I shall die.' Then comes life's greatest thought, 'dying, I shall live again.' The Roman orators exclaimed: 'There is a meeting-place of the dead.'

"Then Christ entered the scene, whispering that God was equal to the emergency named 'death.' Unto God all live. Passing through the grave he exclaimed: 'Because I live ye shall live also.' And from that hour death was clothed with the sweet affection.

"The falling statesman, the dying martyr, and mother welcome the signs of death as signals from the heavenly battlements. The iron mask of death fell off, and death stood forth, a shining angel of God, for welcome and convoy. The dark river narrowed to a tiny ribbon, and it seemed but a step to the immortal shore.

"The path of death became a path of living light, and, striking hands with Jesus Christ, the sage, the statesman, and the seer alike, went joyously toward death, and, disappearing, passed on into an immortal summer."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. F. M. Freeman, Toronto, Ontario, writes expressing thankfulness for the latter-day work, in which he finds assurance of faith and hope of ultimate triumph. He describes a late severe sickness and recounts his restoration to health in answer to the prayer of faith and administration, as provided in the law. The widespread effects of lagrippe and other maladies have given our people added reason to appreciate the ordinance by which the sick are healed or relieved. Lamoni has been fortunate in the degree of exemption it has enjoyed, having had less of the prevailing epidemic than other places near by, but has had enough to cause greater dependence upon the Lord for help, and the Father has been very gracious to many. The testimony of the saints in general goes to prove that healing power has been vouchsafed in no ordinary degree to the people of God. May faith grow firm and love become more fervent.

Bro. Isaac Vernon, New Straitsville, Ohio, writes the Business Department of the Herald Office for information concerning mission work at that point. Such matters are not within the province of the Herald Office. This item should be referred to Bro. W. H. Kelley, missionary in charge of Ohio, who at last accounts was at Temple, Ohio, whence mail would be forwarded.

Bro. A. J. Keck, Plano, Illinois, forwards matter from a school publication, Montgomery's United States History, published by Ginn and Company, Boston, 1898, which misrepresents facts of history connected with the church. We refer to the "committee on encyclopedias and school histories," as requested by Bro. K. It is to be hoped that all will be alert to protect the church in such matters. Bro. Keck's action is worthy of note and imitation.

Sr. Ella Wilson, Washburn, West Virginia, writes that Bro. D. L. Shinn, of the Seventy, who labored for years in that field, is ill. She commends him as a faithful laborer and earnestly prays for his recovery. Bro. J. L. Goodrich's labors in the Mountain State are also commended. She is a member of the Harmony branch, which is in charge of Bro. J. H. Huffman, a faithful servant in the cause. Increasing experiences increase her appreciation of the work. She commends the principle of faithfulness to all the children of God. Her family are with her in faith.

Sr. Josephine Wood, Coin, Iowa, states that she receives light and testimony in reading the Book of Esdras in the Apocrypha, as in reading other scripture. She would like comments from some of the elders, especially upon chapters 6, 12, and 13. She finds pleasure in study, and lack of understanding of some things increases her desire to know more, and light comes from her efforts. She is gratified at a sense of increasing love for her sisters and brethren, a good indication, indeed; desires the blessings of the gospel to reach all, and keeps her neighbors reading church tracts, etc. She derives comfort from saints' letters and thinks all can help and bless one another.

Bro. Israel L. Rogers, of Sandwich, Illinois, accompanied by Sr. Rogers, is a visitor at Lamoni for the time being, making himself at home among early friends and the saints in general. Bishop Rogers looks well and is quite vigorous in mind and body, though in his eighty-first year. It does one good to see him and to grasp his big hand again.

Bro. Wallace N. Robinson, Independence, Missouri, was at headquarters during a portion of the past week, doing duty as one of the general auditing committee, on the Herald Office and the Bishop's books.

Saints, if any, living in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, are requested to call on Mrs. H. E. Williams, No 304 Noble Street. Elders in the Territory requested to call.

Sr. Creta Dale, Scott's Mill, Illinois, baptized with others of late by Bro. J. C. Crabb, writes that she has been blessed because of her obedience. She desires to grow in grace with her family and with the church.

Very favorable notices of Bro. J. S. Roth's preaching by the Fort Madison Iowa News and Montrose Journal. Better could not reasonably be asked.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, of the Iowa mission, has been laboring of late in Sac, Calhoun, and Carroll counties. He intends to labor in Shelby County, beginning with April.

Brethren having articles or other matter to advertise are referred to the advertising columns of the HERALD; the editors cannot insert advertising statements in personal letters or in reading matter. The Business Department will name advertising rates on application. This rule has been stated in the past and will be strictly adhered to.

Bro. J. B. Wildermuth writes from Plano, Illinois, April 1. He has been laboring in Northern Wisconsin since last November. He now returns to Plano for a few days of rest, after which he will enter upon the spring and summer campaign.

Lamoni awaits the coming of spring, with about six to eight inches of snow and more in sight.

"Let no man dare attempt the performance of human duties without a divine motive."

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

EDITED BY FRANCES.

TUUHORA, South Sea Islands,
December 17.

Another Sunday experienced. Our last one here probably for this time at least. Those Sundays here are like young conferences, and Sr. Case knows what they are—in the line of fatigue. The day was very profitable to those who had ears to hear the words of instruction. Joseph preached three times with a good degree of the Spirit, especially in the evening. And the testimony meeting was good, too; still, with the day's exercises, and confusing of motions as well as voices, one is sufficiently weary to be left in quietness to retire; but it is not the custom here to leave the house as soon as meeting is over. And last evening they did not feel like discussing topics, and so they sang for nearly an hour—if it could be called singing—men, women, and children, at a pitch that bulged the veins in their faces and made their eyes stand out. The house being void of furniture, and having an iron roof with no ceiling, gave back a corresponding echo. I thought I should go crazy! Since it was our dwelling house, I could not leave, so had to stay and endure.

The night was too rainy and windy for any to sleep on the porches, so there was a field bed, covering all the rest of the room on the other side of our curtain, in which were two babies, and one was fretful; besides the crying, there seemed to be a continual tramping about that jarred uncomfortably to sensitive nerves. It seemed to me that I had only got to sleep when I was startled again by a heavy step on the floor; and by the talking and stepping about I knew they were mustering out for the morning. Early dawn finds them astir always. On account of rain and wind, all the doors and windows on one side of the house had to be closed, consequently this morning finds us both feeling very exhausted indeed, as if we had slept in a tight box and had not breath enough left to speak. Some went to their homes this morning, and others have come in again, so there is no rest. Those present now are eleven grown people, and three babies. Such is missionary life in the South Sea Islands. Having pictured the bright side in its brightest colors, I thought it only just to the missionaries to show also some of the things to be endured by them, lest some who might come here would realize a disappointment. We would have appreciated a rest to-day—an entire quiet; but being their special guests, because of having sent for us, they would regard it as a breach of hospitality to leave us by ourselves, consequently three couples with two children have forsaken their homes to remain with us till we go on board the steamer for Papeete again, which we expect will be on the coming Thursday.

Our isolated condition has caused me to have a greater sympathy for the "scattered" ones. And having read from the pen of a sister, her desire for more of those letters from afar, I was prompted by it to make the effort to furnish the column with this, another of my journals.

Papeete, South Sea Islands, January 8, 1899.—We left Anaa one day sooner than we expected, and it was the only good day for getting off the island there had been for a week or more. The wind and sea—what there was of it—was nearly aft, so we had a fine smooth run to Papeete. Arrived just two days before Christmas. Found lots of mail awaiting us, and also a generous "Christmas box" from the dear saints of San Francisco and Sacramento. But for those, we could scarcely have remembered that it was Christmas. We were so hungry for news from our dear native land, but more especially the church, that I could not take time to set our house in order or make any preparations for Christmas, there were so many things to read. And the saints here did not feel very much in the mood of rejoicing, for Afai's eldest daughter, fourteen years old, was thought to be dying all day. She had been sick for about two weeks, so that watchers were needed, and many of the saints were weary with watching. And though they went through with a short Christmas exercise, it was not with the usual animation. But they did not forget to collect the Christmas offerings. Tepuna rallied again Monday, and lived just a week.

The quiet monotony of life in these sun-bathed islands was greatly disturbed of late by a real "war scare." We were not here to share in the exciting event. After the tardy news reached this place that war was impending between England and France, many became quite excited over the matter, and all expected daily to learn in some way that war had been declared between those two nations, perhaps by a visit from English man-of-war ships. A boat came in from the Paumotu early in an evening, and reported to have seen a large ship sailing near the island, and yet not aiming for the harbor. Imagination soon transformed it into a man-of-war ship. A boat was manned from the French man-of-war that was in the harbor, and sent out to reconnoiter the coast. The night was dark and rainy; they kept inside the reef, and pulled up towards "point Venus." On seeing the lights of two fishing boats, they mistook them for ships of war, at a greater distance, and hurried back with the tidings that two man-of-war ships were lurking near. Immediately the whole town was in a panic. A messenger was dispatched to point Venus with orders to put out the light, and also all the lights along the coast. The city lights were put out also. The French man-of-war was brought into the dock and entirely dismantled preparatory to sinking her in the harbor next morning. All the horses from the livery stables were pressed into service, and the ship's guns, ammunition, and other valuables were drawn through the rain and mud, to the mountains back of the city. Thither also fled the inhabitants of the city as rapidly as the teams could convey their household goods and provisions. The street lights being put out, all was darkness, and men's hearts failed them for fear, and they became as children. Two of the crew of the Tropic Bird being ashore, got into a quarrel with each other, up by the market, and into a fight. From thence the word went like wildfire, that the British soldiers had landed and fighting had commenced at the market place. The authorities thought to arm the natives, ready to meet the soldiers, but feared to lest they should face the wrong way when they fought, or perhaps commence work too soon. Those of our people fled to Tiona (Zion) for safety. Some families did not get away during the night, on account of not being able to get teams to transfer their household goods, that were all packed, and remained by them trembling with fear. It is said that the city mayor was the only man who "kept his head level," and tried to bring the others into order.

As soon as morning came, all eyes were turned to the "look out," expecting to see the balls up; but there were none, which signified that there were no ships in sight. They waited and watched, thinking to be surprised from some other quarter of the island; but time passed, and nothing came of it. So they brought back their stuff, and re-rigged the ship, but one gun was missing, and is not yet found.

Mr. Rowel took thirty sacks of rice to the mountains for his family to eat during the siege. This man has turned out to be an enemy of our people, and is doing all he can to stop our conference. Some of the leading men are in favor of us enjoying our rights, and some against us.

Before closing, I wish to thank the sisters whom I am not personally acquainted with, but who kindly wrote me from the Woodbine reunion and elsewhere. Please accept this long letter as an answer, dear sisters, and write again. And let all remember that a letter is ever welcome, though I may not write personally in return. This is the method I take to reach all. This leaves us in good health, and feeling as cheerful and hopeful as the day demands.

SISTER EMMA.

OUR BABY.

A tender bud with promise fair
Bloomed in our home one day,
And we in love and happiness
Did homage to its pay.

We thought our babe the sweetest flower
In all earth's garden fair,
And planned to keep her little feet
From every sinful snare.

But God who rules in earth and sky
And knows our human frame,
Planned for our darling better things
Than we could ever name.

He took her from our throbbing hearts,
The snapping ties were sore;
But to his hands we cheerfully
Resigned her evermore.

We'll try to meet you, baby dear,
Within those realms of light,
Where all is peace and happiness
To those who here do right.

MAGGIE MCGREGOR.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Dear Sisters of the Prayer Union:—By request I send you the name of Mrs. Butterbaugh, who is sorely afflicted and has been unable to get relief. She complied with all the instructions of the elders. We have fasted and done everything we know to do without avail. This is our last resort. She desires you to fast on April 8, and to sincerely ask God to heal her. She has been sick nearly a year, is helpless; cannot wait on herself. She is a worthy sister. The attending physician says she has a chronic case of emphysema of the lungs. She is so wretched and miserable and is so desirous that God will heal her, so she can assist in the church work, and care for six children who are small and need her care so much. Please remember her, dear sisters, I am so anxious to see her helped. They will have to take her to the hospital if she gets worse. Her mother and sister have come to see her. They will make arrangements to send her off soon. I do hope it will not be necessary.

Your sister,

MRS. ELLA MYERS.

Sr. Lucinda Carlile requests that the Prayer Union pray for her mother, Mrs. Hannah Fisher of Underwood, Iowa. She has been administered to several times and always gets help immediately. She prays God that she might yet be restored entirely to health.

A sister requests the prayers of the Prayer Union for her, as she is afflicted in mind and body. The sister earnestly desires your prayers if it is the Lord's will she may be healed.

ELDER T. A. HOU GAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa."

"'Tis not for man to trifle: life is brief,
And sin is here.

Our age is but the falling of a leaf,
A dropping tear.

We have no time to sport away the hours;
All must be earnest in a world like ours.

"Not many lives, but only one have we;
One, only one.

How sacred should that one life be.—
Day after day filled up with blessed toil, Hour after hour still bringing in new spoil!"

—Horatius Bonar.

"WE throw away handfuls of time in heedless waste, and suffer no compunction; but if God, with heavenly will, take from us any expected hours, we burst into faithless tears."

"I will listen to anyone's convictions, but pray keep your doubts to yourself. I have plenty of my own."

A number of excellent papers read at the late convention of the Fremont, Iowa, district convention are received and will receive attention in the "Department" in due time. These papers are on timely subjects and show careful thought and much earnestness in their preparation.

We would be glad to receive more of the convention papers. They are of value to us in two ways. They serve a good purpose in the makeup of the department work, and also are to some extent good indicators of the condition and progress of the work in the district from which they come. Will the district officers not see that these are sent in?

WE are in receipt of the Sunday school newspaper of the St. Louis, Missouri, district, called the "Sunday School Advocate" and edited by the district superintendent, Bro. J. J. Billinsky, and his assistant superintendent. We consider it a model paper; and as many have asked that some good paper might be published in its complete form, so that all might see what was called a Sunday School Newspaper, we give this one in its complete form. On account of its length, (but it is not too long,) we are obliged to divide it. It will be concluded in next issue.

The plan followed in most of the districts is to place the editorial work in the hands of one or two persons, who may or may not be the district officers. They usually solicit contributions from many, or all that can and will furnish something appropriate. The editors do the work of arranging what they may have received, or written, or selected, and usually read it at the convention.

To make the reading attractive, let the readers be seated at a table on the rostrum. And having the paper previously divided into several sections, they will read the parts alternately. This rests the readers and rests the hearers, and adds much to the attractiveness of the paper.

Cautions: The paper should be not more than twenty-five to thirty-five minutes long.

There should be few if any very long heavy articles. Let there be many short, pithy, and pertinent sayings, original or selected. Let the whole paper breathe the air of earnestness, energy, and hopefulness. "We have found the Sunday school newspaper an indispensable number of our programs."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL ADVOCATE.

Published semi-annually, by the St. Louis district Sunday school association; in the interest of the Sunday school workers. District superintendent editor; assistant superintendent associate editor. Subscription price: attendance at the Sunday school convention. Advertising rates: merit.

"It is not until one begins to shrink from duty that he begins to shrink in manhood."

If you are refusing to teach or perform some other work in the Sunday school for fear you will make a mistake, is it not possible that you are making a much greater mistake by so holding back? Think it over carefully.

"SAINTS should be cheerful in their warfare, that they may be joyous in their triumph." Then why get so discouraged and downcast? If the work is the Lord's, he will take care of it; and if we are cheerful, we can surely do more to help him than if we were continually looking on the dark side and feeling gloomy.

IN preparing the lesson study the teacher is apt to raise questions interesting to himself. If he can put himself into the children's place, and imagine what questions they will be liable to ask, or would like to ask if they had sufficient confidence in themselves, a part of his preparation will have such queries in view. An eleven-year-old girl asked her teacher, "What if Jesus had yielded to the temptations in the wilderness?" It was a serious and anxious question, out of a new line of thought to her. Teachers should remember that what is settled, and perhaps simple to their minds, may be strange and perplexing to the child.

THE DRUNKARD'S WILL.

I leave to society a ruined character, wretched example, and memory that will soon rot.

I leave to my parents, during the rest of their lives, as much sorrow as humanity in a feeble and decrepit state can well sustain.

I leave to my brothers and sisters as much mortification and injury as I could well bring upon them.

I leave to my wife a broken heart, a life of wretchedness, a shame to weep over my premature death.

I give and bequeath to each of my children, poverty, ignorance, a low character, and the remembrance that their father was a monster.

TACT.

The superintendent of one of our large mission schools got to school some time before the opening of the session. Going quickly up the stairs, he heard the organ, and entered to find one of the small boys picking out, with one finger, "Nearer, my God, to thee."

One or two others were looking on admiringly and enviously, but all were startled at the presence of their head. Stepping quickly to the platform, the superintendent said kindly, "Why, Donnell, I did not know you could play; let me hear it again."

Suddenly, proud and pleased, the would-be organist went slowly through the hymn again, and said diffidently, as he finished, "She taught it to me," pointing to his sister, younger than himself, "and you just ought to hear her play it."

Blushing and shrugging her shoulders, the tiny Mary wasn't sure that she could play it. A little urging, however, made her relent, and she too went through with the same piece.

"Now, Mr. —, you play for us!" exclaims one of the children, as Mary finished her performance.

So, seating himself at the organ, the superintendent played one of their favorite hymns by special request, and the children crowded around him, singing softly, but with enthusiasm, for was not it their concert, gotten up just by themselves?

One hymn quickly followed another, until, noticing that the school was gradually filling up, the superintendent arose, and said, "Now we must come to order, for what will the teachers think if they find the superintendent playing on the organ?"

Smiling and thanking him, the children ran to their places, to get ready for the opening exercises.

It was not much, you say. No, perhaps not; but when you stop to consider that Donnell was one of the "worst" boys in that Sunday school, it may impress you as it did me. He expected to be rebuffed and scolded for attempting to touch the organ. Instead of that, he was not only spoken to kindly, but asked to play for exhibition.

What that can do for that boy no one can know, but surely it was the best way to deal with him.

May not we teachers learn a lesson from this rare tact in that superintendent, and in the future think twice before we hastily reprove a scholar for what may not be a wrong thing in itself?

More things are wrought by prayer Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice

Rise like a fountain for me night and day,
For what are men better than sheep and goats,

That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer,

Both for themselves, and those who call them friend?

For so, the whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

—Tennyson.

Letter Department.

LIMERICK, Ohio, March 27.

Editors Herald:—I wish to say, though silent for a long time so far as the church papers are concerned, I have not been idle, but have been trying to advance the interests of the work in this district, and have been especially urging the saints to a more consecrated life to the service of the Master; and I think quite a number are aiming to take higher ground.

In the early part of March, in company with Bro. S. J. Jeffers, I went to Middletown by request of the presiding officer of the branch there, to try to set the branch more fully in order. There is a noble few at Middletown and Excello who are making noble efforts to advance the interests of the work; but quite a number of others have become indifferent and unconcerned, and still others have drifted off and into transgression. Two of those who had drifted into carelessness and to some extent transgression made confession, and promised fidelity to gospel law; and those that continue in rebellion the branch officials will look after as soon as possible.

The saints at Middletown have a very comfortable hall in which to worship, and they keep up their regular meetings, and conduct a small though very interesting Sunday school. On the 9th of March the saints had five hundred bills printed and scattered through the city, announcing that at their hall, March 12, the writer would give reasons why B. H. Roberts, congressman elect from Utah, should not be permitted to occupy as a lawmaker of the United States of America. A goodly number were present and gave close attention; but it was too much for the adversary, and seeing that we had a fair opportunity of setting ourselves right in the minds of intelligent, thinking people, put it into the mind of one of his servants (who called himself "Poor Christian") to assail us through the Middletown Signal; but our energetic young sister, Edith Wren, who is always on the alert for the enemy, took up the pen in defense of the truth and made it very interesting, or I presume rather disinteresting, for "Poor Christian;" and in two articles Sr. Edith so routed him that he either gave it up or became disgusted with his name; and "Poor Sinner" took up his pen, but he is not succeeding any better than "Poor Christian," and the conflict is still on; but Sr. Wren is fully competent for both "Poor Christian" and "Poor Sinner," though she has but very little confidence in herself, and if she could sell herself for her real worth and then buy herself back at her own estimate of her worth, she would have a nice little sum. The controversy is causing many comments, and there is more interest manifest than has been there for some years. I expect to return there in the early summer if possible.

I am now at home, and expect to remain and work until the 1st of May. Elder H. E. Moler came in the 2d of the month from his mission, Northern Illinois, and now is here instructing in vocal music. He is succeeding fairly well.

Our missionary force is very limited in this district this year, and consequently there is but very little being done in the way of opening up new fields, although there is fair opportunity for that kind of work. We need some young, active men to push out into new fields. There has been considerable sickness in this section of country the past winter, but the saints have escaped fairly well; I believe only three have fallen in the last year, and two of those quite aged.

My desire is to see the saints come up higher and so live that the Lord will delight to bless and protect them. I have a desire and an inclination to try in the near future to direct my course Zionward, but do not wish to be in haste; nor do I wish to sacrifice what little I have, but I expect the good Father to so provide that I will be released here in his own due time, and to this end I expect to pray, labor, and wait.

Hopefully in the conflict,

JAMES MOLER.

LYDNEY, Eng., March 13.

Editors Herald:—Perceiving in a recent number a notice to the effect that no reports had been sent to the Herald from several of the branches this side the blue Atlantic, I embrace this opportunity of penning you a few lines. Our beloved brother, F. G. Pitt, has labored in Cardiff, where the greater part of his time has been spent for the past six months, with a fair amount of success, thanks be to God: and from what I can gather from the district president, Bro. Thomas Griffiths, if they fail in making old saints down there they will be enabled to make young ones, as a Sunday school has recently been organized and there is a fair attendance.

Our missionary in charge has not favored us with the long-promised visit yet, but it is with great pleasure I notify you that our worthy colaborer, Bro. William Newton, came from Plymouth to this place. We managed to prevail on him to stay with us ten days, and I believe his able discourses and wise counsels to us who are young in the faith will be the means of helping us along the rugged path which leads to God's right hand.

There is one thing lacking in this branch; and that is, to my mind, a man of wisdom and experience to devote his energies and all his time to the great work of God. While Bro. Newton was with us we requested the subject of tithing to be expounded to us, which was effectually done, and two or three have the determination now to pay their dues into the storehouse of the Lord. May it please our all-wise and ever-loving Father to appoint his equal in this neighborhood, to gather the honest in heart into his church; for we are surely in like condition to them in days of old at Macedonia.

It gives me great pleasure to hear how the good work is flourishing at Scranton, and I say you got a good man in the harness there. Let us have some more news soon, Bro. Morgan. No doubt it will meet your approval to learn that the Lydney branch is contemplating erecting a meetinghouse in the near future. I am glad to say some of the labor has already been begun by the local brethren. It is a thing which is badly needed in order that we shall be enabled to meet the opposition which is hurled against us. Up to this time it is for that end we have labored and shall continue to labor, as I believe the time has arrived when nothing short of the pure and undefiled gospel of Jesus Christ will satisfy the people in this neighborhood.

I trust that by God's help and guidance I may be able to hold fast the faith I have embraced and go onward and urge a war against sin and Satan. Finally I hope to overcome and be saved with the redeemed.

Your colaborer,

HENRY ELLIS.

WOODSIDE, Mont., March 19.

Editors Herald:—It is a long time since you heard from this part of the vineyard. There seems to be a famine here for truth. We have Bro. A. B. Moore with us now, and he is preaching to crowded houses. The people come from far and near in spite of all the muddy roads. We expect three more to be baptized, and many are nearing the kingdom.

We would like to keep Bro. Moore here, for there is so much work to do; both saint and sinner would keep him and his wife here if they could have him. There are six Brighamite elders here; they cannot do anything only preach to empty benches because they are cold and clammy as clay; they have nothing to draw the people with; but while the influence and power of God is with us and Bro. Moore, that draws the people, so that we hardly have house room. The people here don't believe in an Adam-God; they want the truth and nothing but the truth. I think the Brighamites have gotten about to the end of their rope.

Your sister,

ALICE A. BURROWS.

AKRON, Iowa, March 20.

Editors Herald:—I am one of the isolated ones and have been one of the readers of the Herald for thirty years, and cannot do without it. Bro. T. W. Williams voiced my sentiments in the last Ensign in regard to gathering and the preparation for the gathering; in fact, all his Sharps and Flats in the above-named Ensign no one can take any exception to. I have wondered and asked, When and how are the saints going to gather? for until just recently there has been so little said about the gathering that I have so often wondered, When will Zion be redeemed? But, dear saints, if all will go to work with their might and carry out the suggestions Bro. Williams has mapped out, I feel sure every effort will be crowned with success; and I feel that there is no time to be lost in any department of God's work.

I have no desire to live only to help forward on this work, and the most I seemed to ever do is with my widow's mite, in scattering reading matter, entertaining the elders, etc. I bear my testimony, when there is an opportunity, to the truthfulness of this blessed, restored gospel. I pay tithes on every dollar I earn and live on what is left. If I would exact my living first I would have nothing left.

Unless God in his kindness heals me, I feel that my work is short. I have been sick ever since October and am able to help myself but very little. I ask all the saints to pray for me, and if the sisters of the Prayer Union will please fast on the second Thursday of April and pray that if it is God's will that I may be restored to health, the praise shall all be his; and as I cannot be administered to on account of no elder being near, I ask Bro. W. E. Peak and Bro. A. J. Myers to join with the sisters in my behalf at that Prayer Union hour. May God bless all his children and his work, is my earnest prayer.

The only two saints I knew of in this place were Sr. Libby Smith and W. R. Calhoun, and both have died recently. With best wishes for the spread of truth,

Your sister,

M. A. CHRISTY.

BURT, Mich., March 17.

Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote you I buried three more in the Flint River to rise to walk in newness of life; two heads of a family and a young man; others are near the kingdom. I was going to leave here after the baptism, March 1. I was holding meetings in an Advent church on their Sabbaths and in the Indian M. E. church every night. This is my fourth week, with good interest and the best of liberty; but the Advent people would not hear to my leaving so soon, as they claimed I had brought them more light than they had.

One of their teachers got up in our meetings and said he didn't see as I did (I suppose on the Sabbath question), but that I was preaching the true gospel and that I had brought him many truths which he had not seen before; that he had been enlightened, etc. We have heard no complaint from M. E. people; some have said they wished I would stay and preach all the time in their church.

Some of the Advent brethren at the village of Burt who took exception to something some one reported I said when I spoke on the Sabbath question, sent for one of their big guns, who I am informed came but only stayed one night. It is reported that when he learned it was a Latter Day Saint holding meetings he never came to his church, but took train next morning for other parts. It was expected that those brethren who let me into their church were going to get a raking down when he came, but he hadn't called on them as yet. He might come back after I leave for home. The Advents that have been attending my meetings say they don't care whether their preacher likes it or not. They are Seventh-day Saints now, and if I can get my twisting machine on the Sabbath and turn it to the first-day Sabbath, they will stand by me, etc. I have heard that the M. E. preacher at Burt, who preaches in the Indian church every two weeks here, had said that I was a Mormon, and some of his members who heard me tell the difference knew better and went for him, and he is afraid to speak against me. They also jogged his memory of the night I attended his prayer meeting, that he didn't invite me to the stand with him, but called on me to open the meeting with prayer. I sat down the aisle towards the door. Last Sunday evening when he came to our church, as it is called, to preach, he came and invited me to the front with him and to open in prayer, and before the meeting was closed I spoke twice with good effect, and "amen." He is afraid to say much against me, for most of the people who speak after preaching services say God sent me here and that I am doing good.

If faithful labor could be done here I have no doubt but much good could be done. If the Indian M. E's. accepted the truth the church might be captured, which is a fine frame one. They want me to move here and occupy it, etc. I would remain here longer, only my wife writes that I am wanted at home; she complains that not a saint has stuck his head in the door since I left, about eight weeks ago, and through neglect I have lost about forty dollars. I hope what is my loss is somebody's gain. Since I left home in January I have preached fifty times and baptized six, besides attending to other meetings.

This would be a good place for Bro. J. J. Cornish or some other good elder to come. Anyone coming will find a welcome at Bro. and Sr. James Burleson's, Burt, Saginaw County, Michigan. With love for the cause of Christ,

Your brother,

A. MCKENZIE.

FORT MADISON, Iowa, March 27.

Editors Herald:—I closed my meetings here last night. I have been here over three Sundays. The people say the town was never so stirred up over the Bible. I began with one outsider, the next meeting twenty, and so it ran on. Last night the large room was jammed full, the window sills full, others standing up, many sitting around on the floor of the pulpit, others at the windows on the outside trying to hear. After my third sermon the outsiders proposed to pass a paper to raise money to buy an organ for the saints, and as none objected it was done, and the result was the saints got an organ and about eight dollars more than we needed to pay for it; and wisely they sent for fourteen hymnals for public use, and several new reflector lamps for the hall, which were much needed.

I baptized two yesterday; five more were ready and wanted to be, but some of their pious (?) friends prevented them. About fifteen are very near the kingdom, and I believe will obey soon. All the city papers, four in number, gave the meetings splendid notices. I could not learn who sent in the items; nearly every day there would be a glowing account or notice of the meetings, and not one detrimental or slurring notice came out. The inclosed clipping from the Fort Madison News is a fair sample of a dozen or so of the same kind. Many invited me to come to see them, and many wanted the meetings to continue, but I took a bad cold and must lay off a few days.

I had a splendid meeting of four weeks at Montrose. Some there are waiting for baptism. There the editor of the Montrose Journal proved himself a perfect gentleman. The inclosed clipping, from his paper of the 24th February, is a fair sample of all his notices. How much easier it is—yes, what a help it is, when the papers do us justice.

I was at Burlington over three Sundays. Some are waiting there for baptism; had good crowds, and good interest. The Lord blessed me greatly in my work. I preached thirty-four times in twenty-eight days, and hope to be in the conflict till the end.

In bonds,

Editors Herald:—We are pleased to have Bro. and Sr. C. R. Duncan with us in our home. We go to-day to Woods County to commence a meeting to-night. Bro. Duncan is improving some in health and we hope the altitude and climate of Western Oklahoma will prove a benefit to him. Saints, let us unite in our prayers in his behalf that good health may be enjoyed, that the Lord will give him strength to continue in the gospel work.

I hope to be able to visit the Oklahoma and Stillwater branches before the May conference, and hope to have the cooperation of the saints. We would be pleased to see a goodly number of saints at the conference at Sumner, May 13.

Yours in haste,

R. M. MALONEY.

GRINNELL, Iowa, March 27.

Editors Herald:—I was called to this place on the 24th inst. to preach the funeral of Brother Lester P. Russell, who died on the 23d. He died strong in the faith of the gospel, after a lengthy and patient illness, of that dread malady, cancer of pancreas and stomach. He was aware that his departure was at hand, and to him death had no terrors; his hope for the future was bright. Among his last remarks made to his wife was, "Mother, when I am laid away, remember the worthy poor."

I feel somewhat lonely, laboring all alone, after a pleasant association of some three weeks in company with Apostle H. C. Smith, who left us for points in other fields of labor in the State. The saints of the Des Moines district will gladly welcome Bro. Heman to their midst, at any time; in fact, the saints of this district are partial to Latter Day Saint elders as preachers, and there are many calls in our borders for laborers in word and doctrine.

The winter that has visited with us so long seems not to weary of this beautiful country of Central Iowa, and so insists on remaining to chill the smiles of the sunny, southern spring, which we in ardent glowing hope see approaching us from the distance. May she hasten to revive us with her genial reviving warmth.

I desire to commend to the serious consideration of all saints the first editorial in Saints' Herald, number for March 22, 1899, entitled, "Reflections on study, work, and growth." I hope all saints will study and digest it, for the times in which we are entering, the circumstances shaping around us, are making and will make demands on the church not hitherto demanded, in some respects, and our efforts must be considerate and united, and the responsibility of the ministry will surely be correspondingly increased. It grows with the growth of the work, and the obligations of the saints will not grow less. No doubt we are entering the initial stage of the closing of Gentile times, and approaching "the time of the end;" and no doubt the time is approaching and hasteneth when the covenant will be offered again to the house of Judah. "God is marching on." His hand is seen among the nations, and shall the church and saints be found slothful and falling to the rear?

Our minds, our bodies, our circumstances, our dependent conditions,—all, cannot be neglected as we pass along. Never before since the days of Noah was the world such an interesting study as now in connection with God's "day of preparation." The fulfillment of divine promises of olden time are at hand to be fulfilled.

Let saints everywhere awake! Arouse ye from slumber; Gird ye, trim your lamps, and be ye on your watch tower! Faithfulness to present duty keeps us in readiness for coming developments. The church only, panoplied in the armor of God and walking in the light, can do the work and accomplish the divine purpose; and it is responsible to God, itself, and the world for the fulfilling of the work.

Your brother,

C. SCOTT.

PALOUSE, Wash., March 23.

Editors Herald:—I have felt impressed for some time that it was my duty to write a few lines, hoping they might be of benefit to some of the suffering saints. I sometimes read of their great suffering until it brings tears to my eyes, having been quite a sufferer myself the most of my life, and it seems the Lord is not always pleased to heal when we comply with the ordinances of the gospel. I have been healed twice since I have been a member of the church, very miraculously; once of kidney disease, and once of sick headache with which I had suffered for thirty years, neither of which returned any more; yet I found myself still afflicted with divers diseases. At the close of the year 1897 I had severe stomach troubles, rheumatic pains all over me, the piles very bad, catarrh in my head and throat, and skin disease that was very uncomfortable. I nearly always had the headache. I had not been able to do anything for two years. I was so badly afflicted that I prayed earnestly to my heavenly Father to lead me into some way of living that I might enjoy better health, or to take me out of the world; for I did not want to live in such a condition.

About that time a friend told me of a book published at Santa Cruz, California, entitled

"Edenic Diet," and that he knew of people who received great benefit from living on Edenic diet, and that he tried it two months and received great benefit; so I sent and got one of the books; it cost me twenty-five cents. I received it January 2, 1898. At that time I was not able to leave my house. I read the book through two or three times and then began to put its teaching, partly, into practice.

I will not attempt to tell what the book teaches, for it would require quite a volume, but will give you my own experience. Partly in harmony with the teaching of the book I began living on rolled wheat and rolled oats, raw, with fresh milk and honey; and fresh fruit, berries, and vegetables in their season; all raw. I ate about eight ounces of grain per day, and within three weeks I could begin to feel all my diseases giving way. In four months I was able to go to work. I put in a good year's work for most any man, old or young, building a large stock barn and other improvements on the farm, and all my diseases kept giving way until I was left entirely sound. The last to give way was the skin disease, which took about nine months. Since that time I consider myself perfectly sound, except old age; I haven't had the headache in a year.

I have given this diet a thorough test, having lived on it for fourteen months. In addition to diet I have practiced the Ralston regime to some extent; that is, proper exercise, and full breathing in the open air, and bathing twice per week. For some months I have, for the sake of economy, been grinding my own wheat in a coffee mill, and I find it equally as good as the rolled grain, if not better. I don't grind it fine, but crack it up about like coarse sand, and soak it half an hour in milk or water, with honey or sugar. Eight or ten ounces per day gives me all the nutrition I need, with perfect health and strength; so I am convinced that the Lord never makes a mistake, and when he said in the Word of Wisdom, "Wheat for man," he meant just what he said; he did not mean fine flour, nor flour bread; and when he said "All wholesome herbs," and "fruit" "in the season thereof," he did not mean canned fruit nor vegetables. (D. C. 86.) In regard to eating meat, read Genesis 9: 11; Inspired Translation.

I am satisfied that if the saints would live as the Lord directs, they would not have to call for the elders so often, nor the doctors either; and just think, dear saints, what it means to live on Edenic diet; we dispense with the cook stove, and all cooking vessels, and fuel for cooking, and all the kitchen drudgery. Don't you think the sisters would have a better time and more leisure time to attend church and prayer meetings, and the meetings of the Daughters of Zion, and that we could all live healthy and happy and more economically? It is true; we must overcome all the lusts of the flesh, and carnal desires, and live pure in spirit as well as in body, to enjoy the fullness of the blessings of the Lord, which all saints ought to be able to do.

For some time it was a little tempting to see the family sit down to roast beef, fried fish, and chicken, and I take my little pan of wheat and sit down and eat it and nothing else; but it doesn't tempt me but little any more.

Hoping these lines may be of benefit to some of the saints, I close for the present.

B. R. TURNBOW.

CHELSEA, Iowa, March 26.

Editors Herald:—The year is ended and I have done what I could in my weakness to advance the cause of Christ and benefit man, to teach the people how they can be benefited both temporally and spiritually. I have tried to show from God's word that there is more to do than to obey the gospel; I have tried to show that we must build upon the foundation after it has been laid. To build character, and live pure lives, and to exemplify Christ in our lives—this is what I have tried to do.

How far I have succeeded I leave for others to say, but in trying I am more than convinced that I cannot please every one. I realize the sayings of Paul in Galatians 1:1-10: "For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men I should not be the servant of Christ." I am fully convinced that when we present the word as it is we do not please the great mass of the people. It may please a few and displease the many. The Lord said, Matthew 7:14, "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." But there is a consoling thought that it is said in John 10 that his sheep "hear his voice" and will follow him. I do not expect any but the sheep to follow very far; although some may make a start who are not sheep, they soon go again. Galatians 1:11: "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man." That is the reason it does not please all men, and I try to preach the same gospel that Paul did; and if it was of man it would be more readily received by man. Experience teaches this to all God's servants. I have observed this to be the case, and too often with Latter Day Saints. Brethren and sisters, please notice when there is some worldly amusement and see how well attended it is, then the following evening see how many are at church, and please notice the excuses: "Too tired;" "not well;" "the weather bad," and with many other excuses; but when the next amusement comes along, supper or dance, literary society or show, the weather is not too bad, none too tired, all is well, and the roads are all right, and plenty of time and money too.

I was in Eagle Grove about four years ago, and we had no services there at the time, so Bro. Hayer and I attended a protracted meeting by the Baptist and Congregational churches in the Baptist church. When we went in there were five hearers, we making seven, and two preachers. What was the trouble? A theatre in town. Then this scripture came to my mind, as it has often when seeing saints doing likewise: "Lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." I too often find the same among Latter Day Saints; when there are services they are not there;

ask them why, the answers are various; some say, "Not very well;" "Too tired;" "Did not get my work done in time;" "The roads are so bad;" "It looked like rain or snow;" "I did not want to expose myself." In a few nights there is a party, oyster supper, a sociable, lyceum, and sometimes a dance. The weather is just as bad, health just as poor, looks just as stormy, the roads just as bad; but we find then there and enjoying themselves in the society of the world. Nothing hinders, neither time nor money; others are taken up with the orders or societies of the world and must attend them, of various kinds; having their feasts and suppers, neglecting God's service to go there; then the next night too sleepy to attend, or if they do attend, they sleep during the service. This class must attend and pay up dues or they are dropped. They have the time and the money there, but the Lord has said, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." All of Israel are not Israel indeed. In Matthew 7: 21 we read: "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." These are a few of my sad experiences.

When I have spoken against these things to right them, I am told I am too strict. If I am, I cannot help it; the word teaches me that we cannot serve God and Mammon; neither can we serve God, the world, and the Devil; we must sink one or the other; that is my understanding.

I have often wondered how saints could spend their time and money in the worldly organizations and other amusements and see the treasure house of God empty and the poor uncared for in the household of God, also calls for preaching and no one to go. However, there are some to go if the way is prepared for them. Which way are we tending? Stop and think, for one moment. "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Prov. 14:12. How can we expect the gospel to spread if we withhold our means and supply other worldly demands, and let the Bishop's hands be tied? I am surprised to see the efforts being put forth to raise means for colleges and other worldly-like things, and a very little said about God's storehouse. Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Let us take more interest in the things of God and pay our tithes and offerings into the storehouse of God, that the wants of the needy be supplied, lest unhappily we be called thieves and robbers, as is said in Malachi; lest the Lord may say, Seek unto the gods whom you have served. This is my view. I have based it upon God's word. I know we all have human weaknesses, but we all want to overcome if we can. May God bless every honest heart and help all to overcome, is the prayer of your humble servant. May his love be increased in our hearts day by day until we fully do his will. "Thy will be done, and not mine."

My work for the past year has not been as great as I would like to have done. There have been some unavoidable hindrances, which I am not responsible for; but have endeavored to do the best I could, leaving all things in the hands of him who rules all things well. The winter has been a hard one to labor in, bad weather, bad roads, and much sickness among the people, so many sick, and some of the well ones have to take care of the sick; so all in all the congregations were small. For instance, I would commence meetings Sunday night; Monday stormy, no one out; Tuesday, a few out; Wednesday and Thursday, stormy, too bad to be out; that has been the condition a good deal of the time this past winter. It is hard to get an interest in this way.

I am at home at present. I stayed in the field until the roads were too bad to even try to do any more. I expect to be home until the roads and weather are better. I will have to look after affairs at home in seeding in order to keep the wheel rolling, or soon I would have to stay at home all the time. I only have one boy at home to do anything now, so will have to notice seedtime and harvest; but intend to do all I can as usual.

I think it would be a good thing for the saints to hold one or more two-days' meetings in the various branches during the summer. I have written more than I intended. This is perhaps the dark side of the picture, but I will try to give the bright side in the future if God wills. May God add his richest blessings to all his children.

In bonds,

C. E. HAND.

MOLINE, Ill., March 28.

Editors Herald:—I have been laboring in Rock Island County most all winter; have preached in different parts of the county, in company with Brn. F. A. Russel and D. S. Smith. In some places the interest has been very good.

We find it very hard to get the gospel before the people in the cities of Rock Island and Moline, where I have labored about two months. We have to do a great deal of preaching by going from house to house and talking with parties; we have also done considerable preaching in private houses. Quite a number of good people are interested; two have been baptized and eight or ten more have said they were going to unite with us. One baptized was a member of the Baptist Church in this city. She was a good worker in said church, and they tried very hard to keep her from joining us; both the Baptist and Methodist ministers and a host of her friends called on her and said bad things about the saints, by repeating the old stories that have long since been worn out. Even her own parents turned against her; nevertheless she was convinced of the truth and obeyed it. My life has been threatened for baptizing her. I hope the threat will not be carried out; however, I want to be found doing the Master's will, and if it is necessary to give my life for the truth, I am ready.

I had intended to go to other fields to-day, but thought I had better stay and preach this week, or until the excitement is over; for I do not wish to be found wanting where duty calls. I hope to baptize more ere long.

The saints here are moving along nicely; attendance at both Sunday school and church is on the increase.

Will say to the saints in other parts of the district, I will get there as soon as I can. I expect to go to Canton and Peoria when I leave here. Bro. R. is not with me, as he was called home on account of his father's sickness. Bro. W. A. Smith is with me at present for a few days. In gospel bonds,

J. W. ADAMS.

MIDWAY, Ark., March 18.

Editors Herald:—I feel unworthy to write for your pages, yet it is my desire to do all I can, and that is little. If I had thousands I feel that I could give it all to the Lord to roll on his glorious work, for I know it is true. I have never had visions nor seen angels, but have been taught by the Spirit of God. I obeyed the gospel about eight years ago. I believe the Lord sent Bro. Erwin here to tell the good tidings.

I am one of the isolated ones; have not heard a gospel sermon for over a year. Brn. Jackson and Kent preached for us. I am praying for Bro. Jackson's return. This is a hard place for the elders, but the people are not prejudiced as at first; some say they will be baptized when Bro. J. comes back. We would also like to see Bro. Erwin, and hope he will come soon. I was pleased to read Bro. E. A. Erwin's vision; I hope to see the time when the saints will be gathered and the temple built.

Would like to know the whereabouts of Bro. J. M. Kent. Anyone knowing will please write me. Your sister,

C. C. JUDKINS.

HARTVILLE, Mo., March 27.

Editors Herald:—I just closed meeting last night at Hartville, county seat of Wright County. It was the first public preaching they have had in the town, that is, by the saints. I have met with no great opposition, but have by the assistance of Elder Carrow, who resides here, made a number of friends to the cause. One lady said my chart beat any she had seen.

By permission of the sheriff we held service in the courthouse. I spoke with liberty last evening on the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith and the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon. I observed no frowns on the faces of the audience, but at the close was invited by the sheriff to come back and occupy again. Bro. Carrow at present is doing no public preaching, but he is strong in the faith and is respected by the people of the town. It is to be hoped that in the near future he will magnify the office to which he has been called.

Success to the Herald, Ensign, Graceland College, and the work of God in general. Saints, "Let us never cease the conflict till the summons home be heard."

C. J. SPURLOCK.

LARISSA, Mo., March 14.

Editors Herald:—We are still in the faith, thank God. Have had but little preaching here; Bro. C. J. Spurlock has preached some; Bro. Chrestensen came, but was unable to hold meetings on account of the weather. We hope some of the elders will come soon. There is a call for preaching near us, and we need help. The Methodists have been doing bad work for some of our members. May God help them.

I would like to ask if there is a girl woman who would like a home here in the Ozark Mountains with us—a woman that has been unfortunate not objected to; but do not come unless intending to remain a year or more. If anyone wants to come, write me at Larissa, Douglass County, Missouri.

Your sister,

THE GATHERING! ARE WE READY?

If so, Bro. Hilliard's article in Herald of January 4 covers much if not all of the ground of practical suggestion as to the method of procedure and accomplishment. If not, how shall we get ready? What preparation or duties lie before any or all, before a permanent, practical move forward may be undertaken? In a revelation given to the church in 1831 the Lord said to the elders assembled by commandment in Missouri, Jackson County:—

Hearken, O ye elders of my church, and give ear . . . and learn of me . . . concerning this land unto which I have sent you. . . . Ye cannot behold with your natural eyes, for the present time, the design of your God concerning those things which shall come hereafter, and the glory which shall follow, after much tribulation.—D. C. 58: 1, 2.

They were to be honored of God in "laying the foundation, and bearing record of the land upon which the Zion of God shall stand." A feast of fat things for the poor, "a supper of the house of the Lord well prepared," etc. The Prophet Isaiah evidently saw in vision this same thing, and bore record (Isaiah 24: 23; 25: 6).

Social conditions, free and universal discussion of the needs of the poor and the duties of the rich in the church and out, seem to be in the air and everywhere.

Hungry men, women, and children ought not to be in this land of present plenty, and future promise in this regard (D. C. 61: 3). And if this were all our need, practical work, and in proportion to the necessity, will duty demand of us prompt action for relief and succor.

Debs, and many other social reformers of our times are proposing, and the Salvation Army have or seem to have succeeded in an epitomized or inaugural way along those lines, and for the need referred to. Our "leader and commander" has, however, said that "man should not live by bread alone." It was Sheridan, the wit, I think, who asked, when invited to a feast and sumptuous bill of fare, "What is your bill of company?" A hungry stomach is a bad thing, no doubt; but what about a starved spirit and an empty soul?

The question of "gathering," as we view it, is more than a one-sided question, and needs discussion and thought.

Nearly two thousand years ago, Luke says the saints "had all things common;" they "sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need" (Acts 2: 44, 45). How universal this condition became history does not fully record; that it did not continue history does record. If this was done, as is contended, in fulfillment of the law of tithing, consecration, etc., as we have it to-day, was the doctrine of a "gathering" of the saints together connected with it? We are not without evidence. I think that it was. They were fortified by the prophets. The Patriarch Jacob had foretold that "The sceptre" should "not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be" (Gen. 49: 10). David had said:—

Gather my saints together unto me, those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.—Ps. 50:5.

And Malachi had warned them of the sudden coming of the Lord and the neglect of the law of tithing, etc. (Mal. 3; see John 11: 52; 2 Thess. 2: 1.)

Filled with a comprehension of the inequality of social conditions as existed among the purse-proud Pharisees, and Lazarus and his train, with the spectacle of waste and luxurious and wanton extravagance in Rome, where nobility sucked the life of the plebeian and the peasant, the wish became but naturally a father to the thought of relief from the oppressors of men, when the tender and beloved disciple wrote, "Even so, come Lord Jesus, come quickly;" and that he expected favorable answer is indicated by this confidence, "We know it is the last time."

The belief was evidently widespread in the church that "the kingdom of God should immediately appear" (Luke 19: 11), and that parable and instruction upon this point by our Savior was either neglected or misunderstood, though St. Paul seems to have been enlightened somewhat toward the close of his ministry, as seen in the second letter to Thessalonians, second chapter, where correction of former instruction in this regard in a measure seems apparent; but that he with other of the apostles had believed and taught that "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," is clearly evident. And to what extent they, like modern Adventists, may have mingled heavenly counsels with human zeal when and about the time they "sold their possessions and goods and parted them to all men," etc., is not clear to my mind.

At any rate it did not continue that way. Apostasy, disruption, scattering took place; miscalculation or mischiefs, one or both, both evidently, ensued. True, our Savior had said, to his own, "How often would I have gathered you." To the seed of Abraham and the "sons of Moses and of Aaron," in our day, through his chosen servants, he has indicated the same desire. I believe it to be "the dispensation of the fullness of times," a "gathering dispensation." That within the limits of what will be hereafter seen to be a just definition of the words, "this generation," men will see great and wonderful things come to pass. I believe that a temple will be built, not only in Jerusalem, "after the times of the gentiles are fulfilled," but also in Zion, when "the sons of Moses, and of Aaron," and of "Levi shall offer an offering unto the Lord IN RIGHTEOUSNESS."

But preparation must be had. We believe in the gathering, so did they here in Kirtland, nearly seventy years ago, and undertook it. They undertook to correct the failures of centuries; entered into a war with, and against human and fleshly passion,—unwise zeal, worldly ambition, covetousness, lust, pride, envy, etc. These, many of them brave men, noble women as earth ever furnished, challenged the forces of hell. They arrayed the standard as best they could—or evidently so thought—of the kingdom of right and righteousness, and flaunted the flag of Immanuel in the face and before the gates of the Prince of this world—in Jackson County, in Far West, in Nauvoo—and they went down, down to disaster and to a disgrace, and a reproach for which tears and even repentance for many will find no place for relief. They fell from their high contention and privilege; and, paraphrasing Mark Antony, we say:—

"O, what a fall there was, my brethren!
Then you, and I, and all of us fell down—
While bloody treason flourished."

Treason against God, against right and righteousness. They "trode under foot the Son of God," and counted "the blood of the covenant," an unnecessary thing. They "changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped" or substituted "the creature [Adam] for the Creator," "and even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge," God hath given "them over to a reprobate mind, being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, murder, deceit," etc., and a general repetition of the apostasy of the ancients, as referred to by Paul in the first chapter of his Roman letter.

We know and understand that the Lord has said to us as a church, in a recent revelation:—

The law given to the church in section forty-two, over the meaning of some parts of which there has been so much controversy, is as if it were given to-day; and the bishop and his counselors, and the high council, and the bishop and his council, and the storehouse and the temple and the salvation of my people, are the same to me now that they were in that day when I gave the revelation.—D. C. 122: 6.

And while we believe this to be all true, we also insist that not only gathering, and a storehouse, and temple building are necessary; but recognition and compliance with the balance of this section forty-two, as well as "every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God," so far as it relates to our case. The fact that the Lord here tries to correct a misapprehension of the scope and meaning of the revelation of October 7, 1861, should in no wise lead us to forget that "the salvation of my people" involves attention, and consideration, and obedience to such things as for

And again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands, and let all things be done in cleanliness before me. Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer. And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders [not doctors] . . . shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me. . . . And it shall come to pass that those that die in me shall not taste of death.—D. C. 42:12.

If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.—John 15:7.

"Thou shalt live by every word," etc. To neglect half of the commandments is but to half live.

"The word of wisdom" was given for the "temporal salvation" of saints, with promise of spiritual power through obedience to counsel contained therein; and temporal salvation is what we are all now talking about. If we "have faith to be healed," isn't it better than paying out the thousands of dollars that is paid every year for drugs, quack medicines, and anti-gospel medication and treatment? Why this fear to stand by the law of God? Why have men's persons in admiration because of some imaginary advantage they may possess, because of their influence or standing in the church or in society? Why not cultivate, preach, and practice faith in God's promises; no matter if even in the church of God it exposes a man to insult, ostracism, and opprobrious epithet? "All have not faith." No; and "pity 'tis 'tis true." But why discourage its acquirement? "But it is the gift of God." Yes; so is the gospel power and spiritual blessing; but we have something to do. If we "have a desire," Alma says, we may experiment successfully. Trust in God for a change, and try dying without drugs or a doctor. Did you ever do it? If so, how many of you died without a doctor? How many with one? But it's easier to die with one; what will the public say—"You have to have a burial certificate." No; I won't until I'm dead. Don't cross the bridge before you get to it. Let us quit this nonsense, and dispose ourselves toward a careful consideration of God's counsel and the facts of history in this regard. Physicians! Do we need them? Yes; plenty of the right kind; surgeons, conscientious, thorough anatomists; trained nurses; professors and possessors of a knowledge of physiology, and true hygiene, and healthful law.

Thomas B. Marsh was appointed to be a physician "unto the church, but not to the world"—and for the good reason—"they will not receive you." Of course not, if he followed God's counsel in these matters. But what has this to do with the "gathering?"

"Gather my saints together unto me." I want to emphasize that; and "those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Money is needed and must be had; but are we sure that the size of the dollar has not obscured our vision and hidden from our view some other things necessary, not only to a "gathering" but to success in staying together afterward? We are willing and anxious that the rich, the prudent, the industrious man should lay his money at the Bishop's feet, and that lands for an "inheritance" for us all should be possessed, and he ought to do it, when the Lord speaks, or the time has come. What of those who haven't got money or property to give? What is our "sacrifice"? Or having money, and giving; is that all the "sacrifice" required.

Authoritative testimony has been borne and recorded, we believe, "of the land upon which the Zion of God shall stand" (D. C. 58:3). We are quite certain of its place, but what of the location of the head and heart? For, verily, first and foremost, "Zion is the pure in heart." And the same revelation that gives us the location, tells us: "Verily I say unto you, My law shall be kept on this land" (Par. 4). Are we prepared to do this? If not, the assurance from the Lord is given us that "it shall not be a land of Zion unto" us.

In the revelation given to us March 3, 1873, we had, and have this:—

It is not expedient in me that there shall be any stakes appointed until I command my people. When it shall be necessary I will command that they be established. Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me.—D. C. 117:11.

The "commandments to gather into the regions round about" are associated—and may not safely be ignored or forgotten—with the commandments to "avoid haste," and to "have all things prepared before you." The "former commandments" say that wise men, and honest men were to be sought out and found, and money secured with which to purchase the land.

Changed conditions; conditions in many respects much harder, needing more money, and I may add, more confidence than what was needed then, and which unfortunately was not possessed neither then, and I feel positive in asserting, is not at present, or now possessed by us as a body.

In 1831 the Lord said that he willed "that the disciples, and the children of men, should open their hearts even to purchase this whole region of country, as soon as time will permit" (58:11). Time, or something else, has barred us so far, and up to the present.

And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.—D. C. 58:12.

A "joint council" was had in compliance with the revelation given in 1894. Some opinions or resolutions were adopted, and much good I believe accomplished; but serious doubts have arisen as to whether human opinion or a knowledge should have governed before carrying out the provisions of at least two of these "resolutions."

The disciples of our Lord anciently, and as before stated, "thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear."

Overanxiety, and the need of better things in the world, lead to misunderstanding and misapprehension.

If apostles anciently made mistakes, we may not be now all ironclad and proof against them. Argument is proof of nothing, but we may perhaps reach safe conclusions through argument, and the discussion should be permitted and encouraged on all sides of important questions; but always trying to keep in memory the saying of Solomon, that "there is no wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the Lord" (Prov. 21:30). And the longer I live the more am I impressed with the thought that it is not an easy task for humans to successfully analyze the letter already given, or reach or attain unto that exalted fellowship that readily and really assimilates the "thought of God" or the "mind of Jesus Christ."

True, we should not wait until we are "commanded in all things." Human wisdom and judgment are our only reasonable recourse in many things. But the importance of some undertakings demand certainty and a knowledge, or at best a confidence that superior and heavenly wisdom has planned and ordered our movement.

I remember that about the time I first became identified with the church, of hearing the presiding elder of this church, at Park's Mills, near Council Bluffs, Iowa, in answer to clamorous rumor of demand for revelation to the church, say that the wheel to the mill near by "would never turn until the stream poured on from above moved it." And my confidence in the man as a prophet has never been impaired—nor faith shaken in the quality or surety of the revelations that have since come through him because they were delayed or not coming as fast as some of us may have wished or expected. We may or may not have received all we were or are entitled to—all we needed or all we were able to appropriate or make good use of, I do not know. I may have an opinion; but I am thankful for the confidence and assurance given in regard to what we have received, and my confidence is still in the man that he will not speak until he is spoken to.

And in this connection, I wish to call attention to the following in Doctrine and Covenants:—

And now, I will show unto you a parable that you may know my will concerning the redemption of Zion. . . . And the lord of the vineyard said unto one of his servants, Go and gather together the residue of my servants; and take all the strength of mine house, which are my warriors, my young men, and they that are of middle age also, among all my servants, who are the strength of mine house, . . . and go ye straightway unto the land of my vineyard, and redeem my vineyard. . . . And the servant said unto his lord, When shall these things be? And he said unto his servant, When I will: go ye straightway: and do all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and this shall be my seal and blessing upon you; a faithful and wise steward in the midst of mine house; a ruler in my kingdom. . . .

And his servant went straightway, and did all things whatsoever his lord commanded him, and after many days all things were fulfilled.—98: 6-8.

In a revelation given March 3, 1873, we have this: that stakes are to be appointed by commandment; and in 1894, that Lamoni may in time be declared a stake; but the "former commandments" state that "the beginning of the gathering of my saints" is to be "in Jackson County, and the counties around about" (sec. 98: 9).

This movement is to be inaugurated through authoritative direction, and under the leadership and counsel of heaven, through the Lord's chosen leader and servant—as I understand.

In a revelation given to W. W. Phelps, through the "choice seer," we have the promise that: "I the Lord God will send one mighty and strong, . . . whose . . . bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God, and to arrange by lot the inheritances of the saints."

The gathering together of "the residue"—"the strength of mine house." The redemption of the land of the vineyard. The throwing down of the enemy's towers, and the possession of "the inheritance" referred to in paragraph seven of section already quoted, is a matter of future development, and for the accomplishment of which an observance of all the conditions upon which success was then promised becomes an absolute duty, and the things that caused failure then, must of a necessity be avoided now, or as the day follows night—so sure will history only repeat itself.

By a lack of wise counsels, or willing rather to follow human inclination, the spirit of speculation, and adventure, worldliness, "covetous, and lustful desires," they "polluted their inheritances," and were scattered—driven—some of them to the "salt land;" a place where still to thousands—honest thousands; ignorant thousands—Utah is Zion or a place of safety—or Mexico, perhaps. We are quite certain of the geographical location of the soil; but are we otherwise safely located? Are we in a state of moral and spiritual subservience to the law that can truly preserve us and save both soul and body?

many years ago, were admonished and warned that they were "not bringing up their children in light and in truth." Are these things forgotten by many of us?

Ye cannot behold with your natural eyes, for the present time, the design of your God concerning those things which shall come hereafter, and the glory which shall follow, after much tribulation.—D. and C. 58: 2.

Is our "tribulation" at an end? And are we prepared for the "glory" referred to? We are told that "the glory of God is intelligence." Are we possessed of it, or are we in a state of preparation to receive it?

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.—John 14: 21.

Herein lies our individual privileges and right of possession. It is not enough for leaders, or a few individuals to know some things—the whole body must be educated and elevated, or a thousand dangers may beset us on any land or in any country. False leaders are impossible, or powerless, without blind and ignorant followers. The history of Nauvoo to Utah emphasizes this, and its lesson of shame and failure is being painted across the heavens for the nations to read.

Moneys with which to purchase lands must be had, and somebody will have to make sacrifices in this direction; but we contend that this is not all, for "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, . . . and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." "Charity" defined to us is "the pure love of God," and this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar (1 John 2: 4-6).

Are we striving daily to master our passions and overcome appetites that are at war with the commandments and counsel of God? or are we juggling with our conscience, while we bar the heavenly guests and forfeit the richer blessings and "glory which shall follow after much tribulation?"

My belief is that a work of reformation is enjoined upon us all, and a consecration and endowment not yet possessed, in order that the work of "gathering" may become an assured success. I believe that God is feeling of us, and will speak to us when we are ready. His last word is still ringing in my ears:—

And the sons of my servants of the leading quorums of the church are admonished, that upon their fathers is laid a great and onerous burden, and they are called to engage in a great work, which shall bring them honor and glory, or shame, contempt and final great loss and destruction; as they shall in uprightness, faithfulness and diligence discharge their duties acceptably to God, or shall in carelessness, slothfulness, or wickedness fail in their calling and ministry therein; and to their sons shall come honor, or shame, as they shall approve, or disapprove themselves to God.—D. C. 124: 7.

Of the possibility of falling or failing upon the part of all the leading ministry we are by this last word warned.

Godly example; family worship; religious and conscientious observance of the Sabbath; attendance upon all the means of grace, from principle rather than convenience or human inclination; the necessary discipline and actual, spiritual consciousness of daily heavenly approval of our lives: Are these our possessions? If so, "Zion, the pure in heart," may move forward when the authoritative trumpet sounds; and "out of Zion," in all her physical, moral, and spiritual grace will God who planned her, execute her redemption from bondage—shine forth in "the perfection of beauty;" the significance and exposition of which is only possible in consecrated and Godly lives.

M. H. BOND.

TEMPLE, Ohio, February 28.

DISRESPECT FOR THE SABBATH.

To the heart of every Christian who is as zealous for the "law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus," as was Saul for the law of Moses before his miraculous conversion, the observance of Sabbath desecration among professed Christians is exceedingly painful. While the gospel law puts us on a higher plane than that given to Moses on Sinai, called the decalogue, on every other principle taught in both, is it possible that we are left by the "law of life" to walk on a lower plane concerning the day of rest and worship? I know it is said, that Jesus did not say, nor did the apostles write, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Nor is any mention made of it by the Savior in his answer to the young man of Matthew 19: 16-22. Granted; but will the reader turn to the Doctrine and Covenants, section 59, and carefully peruse the first four paragraphs?

No believer in the latter-day work can consistently read this revelation, with a desire in his heart to keep all God's commandments, and then make Sunday the day in which to do up all or any of the little jobs of work for which he could not take time during the week. No more should any saint allow himself to take the opportunity to do a little item of business on Sunday, while at the church, where he meets for worship, with the brother whom he could not take time to see by calling at his home, or going to his place of business on week day. Nor yet should old or young seek their own (worldly) pleasures on the Lord's day. Going to any religious service on Sunday on a bicycle is as harmless as by any other means of conveyance; but pleasure-riding, particularly racing, and emphatically so for a purse, on the Sabbath, is unquestionably wrong.

Sunday visiting is a most common way of violating the "day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High." (See Doc. and Cov. 59: 2.) There is, as the writer sees the subject, only one, or at the most two conditions under which Sunday visiting can be wholly consistent with a Christian profession. First; upon invitation to dinner from church, designing to return to the afternoon service, the motive of host or hostess being to save the guest distance between the two services, the guest accepting the proffered kindness with thanks. On such occasions the topics of conversation should be wholly religious; all worldly affairs being studiously excluded. Second; visiting the sick on Sunday is admissible as a duty; but absolutely wrong as extensively practiced. A person so sick as to need neighborly care, needs it on Monday as well as on Sunday. There is no Christianity in neglecting the sick all the week, and then making Sunday the day to "call" on them because the caller has no other time to go. Frequently the sick room is filled with these Sunday callers, talking till the sick one is tired out, and really worse than before.

Under the law of the ten commandments the slightest offense, that of picking up sticks only on the Sabbath day, was punished by death (see Numbers 15: 32-36); while only aggravated cases of theft and adultery were so punished; or, better perhaps, modified cases were not so punished. (See Leviticus 20: 10-12; and 19: 20-22; also Exodus chapters 21 and 22.)

If God was so jealous of Sabbath breaking under "the law of sin and death," when the plan was, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," what would be his care for the day of worship, in the gospel covenant, when the plan is, "love thine enemy"? Indeed the very object of all the incessant and untiring efforts to extend the Sabbath school work is defeated when the pupils, older or younger, attend the school never so regularly, and as soon as released, fly away as a bird released from its cage, to spend the remainder of the day, or any part of it, calling, or on the skating rink, or in any other associations for pleasure.

It is sad indeed to see any of the saints' children doing these things, especially those who have taken upon them the name of Christ, by following him through the waters of baptism. These thoughts though expressed plainly, are offered in love.

The following resolution was adopted: "Whereas, the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints stands pledged to the doctrine of loyalty to civil government, and is averse to any infringement upon right principles involved therein, or opposed to the purity of its standard, believing that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man, and that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments, and that sedition and rebellion are unbecoming every citizen thus protected, and their criminality and tendency to evil among men should be punished by the laws of that government in which the offense is committed; and, furthermore believing that the teaching and practice of polygamy is an act of rebellion against this government and a crime against society, of which B. H. Roberts, Congressman-elect from Utah, is guilty; therefore, be it resolved by the members of the conference of the above-named church, assembled in the city of Wheeling, West Virginia, March 11 and 12, 1899, that we express our opposition to the seating of the aforementioned B. H. Roberts in the House of Representatives of the government of the United States." Preaching Saturday and Sunday evenings and Sunday morning by Elder J. F. McDowell. The saints' meeting was an enjoyable one, the Holy Spirit being present, and the gifts of the gospel being manifested. Adjourned to Fayette City; time to be appointed by district president.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

To All Officers, Teachers, and Members, Greeting:—Having been elected your district superintendent for the ensuing year, I sincerely wish to fill the office to which I have been called with honor to God's cause and satisfaction to those with whom I am to work. The Sunday school work should be very near the hearts of all earnest thinking saints. Mothers and teachers, I appeal to you for coöperation in this beautiful Sabbath school work! We most surely believe this grand work is the stepping stone to help build up God's kingdom. It is beautiful, because in it we see the foundation laid for a religious life; seeds are planted that may bring forth a hundred fold. The faith of a little child is established in our heavenly Father by the knowledge instilled into the soul that "God is love," and they learn to love Christ because he first loved them, and said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Where shall they better gain an understanding of God's word than in the Sunday school? Such being the case, is not this truly a grand work, and it is surely woman's work? Who understands child nature as does woman? It is her natural gift; and the lessons of spiritual truths should be taught our children only by those who do and can understand the natures and minds to be reached and taught; therefore, my appeal to you, mothers and sister teachers. The sympathetic, tender, and prayerful woman exhales upon the children of her class the same influence for good which her own children feel; her teaching does not end on Sunday, it is continued throughout every day of the week, and she carries the love for these little lambs to the altar of prayer, asking the heavenly Father to give her his Spirit, that she may guide their young souls to rely upon that rock of safety, God's holy word.

Mothers and teachers, I do not overestimate your influence in this noble cause—much is given, much will be required. Mothers, attend Sabbath school, encourage your little ones. I know many mothers are burdened with household cares. I want to say to those mothers, there will be household duties to be performed long after the souls of little children have gone astray for want of religious teaching, and the encouragement that mother alone can give. What then should be the greater consideration—our household duties, or the souls of our children? To-day is your day and mine, the only day we have; the day in which we play our part—a part of action, a part of love; it is for us to express love in terms of human helpfulness. Jesus went about helping others. My desire is to arouse those who are asleep, and encourage those who are engaged in this soul-saving Sunday school work. It is the broadest, noblest method of laying the foundation of the gospel known to man. When we fully realize this, how much we will desire to be engaged in it. God speed the day, is my prayer.

I should like to have personal letters from any in the district that desire help in the Sabbath school work. I will visit you if you need aid which cannot be obtained by correspondence. Hoping to coöperate with all schools now organized in the district, and trusting that others may be organized and desiring the prayers of all the saints that I may be a profitable servant in the cause of Christ, I remain, in gospel bonds,

MATTIE A. KAIGHIN,

District Superintendent.

PASTORAL.

To the Brethren and Sisters of Nauvoo District, Greeting:—The missionaries in charge having published notice of my charge in this field, I hereby ask your coöperation in moving on the cause. Wherever and whenever you see an opportunity for preaching where local elders cannot or do not reach, please write to me and let me know how to reach the place, and the time that would suit best for holding meetings. I will come or arrange to supply as soon as practicable.

Bro. Joseph Snively, Lamoni, Iowa, is in the field with us, and will answer to calls that come to him. Bro. J. R. Evans, No. 1,001 South Tenth Street, Burlington, will render what aid he can. We hope and sincerely urge that all the local ministry will occupy as much time in preaching in their respective vicinities as their temporal affairs will permit; and where practicable seek for new openings, and when obtained, if you cannot fill them write to me and the matter will be looked after.

We hope to have the hearty assistance of all saints and the guidance of the Holy Spirit in the work. "We are laborers together for God." "Whatsoever ye do, do heartily as unto the Lord." May the Lord help us so to do.

Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and restoration of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.
Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

THE REACTION IN BIBLICAL CRITICISM.

That a reaction against the advanced positions of the more radical type and school of modern critics had set in became particularly evident by the massive volume of Harnack two years ago on the "Chronology of the New Testament Literature," in which he, himself a leading representative of the critical clans, insisted that more credence should be given to the traditions of the early church in reference to the origin and development of the New Testament books; and, secondly, he claimed that a space of forty years would suffice as an historical background necessary for the explanation of these New Testament books. This decided innovation in the direction of conservatism and reaction was followed by others, especially Professor Jülicher, of Marburg, in the department of New Testament literature, and the example has proved contagious in this department of the Old Testament also. For several years a number of writers from the ministerial ranks of Germany—for the academic theologians as yet to a man adhere at least to the literary substratum of the Wellhausen theory—notably Pastor Rupprecht and Dr. Ad. Zahn, of Stuttgart, have published some vigorous researches defending the old-time positions in reference to the books of the Old Testament. The latest and most complete work of this character is the

"Wissenschaftlicher Handbuch der Einleitung in das alte Testament," by Rupprecht, which is the first attempt for over a generation, in fact, since the days of Keil, to maintain on the ground of critical reasons and on the basis of scientific methods the traditional views of the church, including such claims as the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, the Isaiah authorship of Is. xl. 66, the authenticity of Daniel, and even the Solomonic origin of the Preacher. A characteristic feature of this school of critical reactionists is the conviction of the success of their attacks on the modern views and the certainty that they represent that truth which ultimately must prevail. The trend and tendency of the school are well illustrated by the "Schlusswort," in Rupprecht's Introduction, p. 506 sqq., from which we extract the following thoughts:—

"The position maintained in this work does not stand alone. It is in full agreement with the greatest theologians of the ancient and the modern church, whose works modern critics have thought it advisable simply to ignore. The present work goes back to the great representatives of theology in the Reformation and post-Reformation period, and if it has been successful in drawing anew the eyes of the church to these teachers of a genuine theology and science, a good deal has been accomplished. For such a return the people of our day are evidentially preparing more and more, and it is becoming evident that they are more than satiated with the siren song of the modern type of naturalistic non-theology and are seeking for a firmer basis upon which to stand for their acceptance of the Scriptures. Then, too, the number of theologians in England, America, and Germany who are taking this conservative view with reference to biblical criticism is constantly on the increase. The cry is now, 'Back to tradition!' 'Back to Christ and his testimony!' It is being more and more recognized that progress in biblical science is not to be found in an-tagonism to the teachings of ancient traditions, but in conformity with them. And it is probably most notable of all that those very men who have been most determined in raising this new issue in the interests of a conservative biblical criticism are themselves members of the liberal school. Prominent among those are Harnack and Jülicher. The position assumed by the former is an epoch-making event in biblical criticism, and in principle is a veritable catastrophe for modern negative and compromising criticism. Who would have thought this possible, that Harnack, originally from conservative Lutheran extraction, but later lost to the teachings of his father and his church, should now after so many years practically return to many of his former teachings! Is it possible that this Saul, who has for years troubled the church, is to become a Paul to up-build the congregation of Christ? Harnack now agrees in principle with Theodor Zahn, of Erlangen, that the traditional conception of the New Testament books furnishes a solid historical basis for their interpretation. The logical consequences of Harnack's position are absolutely destructive to modern biblical criticism, even as represented by mediating theologians, such as Kantzsch, Driver, and Briggs. Since Harnack's principle recognizing the legitimacy of tradition has entered the arena of critical debate, the days of destructive biblical criticism are numbered. There are reasons confidently to expect that within twenty years there will be as little left of the Wellhausen school of Old Testament criticism as there is now left of the similar New Testament school once so valiantly championed by Bauer and the Tübingen men."

The sanguine expectations and the scent of coming victory expressed by Rupprecht are shared by Dr. Ad. Zahn, who dedicated a recent work to Rupprecht "in honor of his victory." Others are rather slow in believing that Rupprecht's attack all along the line will result in any material gain for the conservative side. The Beweis des Glaubens, No. 1, contains two articles on this reactionary work, one by the editor, Professor Zöckler, who believes that there is some strength in the attack, and another by Professor Oettli, who regards the entire production as a "begging of the question" and from a scientific point of view worthless. The same position practically is taken by Professor König in the Theol. Literaturblatt, of Leipsic, No. 1. It seems, however, that Rupprecht's bold challenge to the entire modern Old Testament critical school may compel a reopening of all the leading questions and problems involved. — Translation made for the Literary Digest.

BURNS THE PASCHAL CANDLE.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 2.—The aroma of incense burned in a Paschal candle permeated All Saints' Cathedral for the first time to-day. The Paschal candle is the latest step in the progress of the high church in ritualism. The innovation caused little comment. The great candle was placed to the right of the altar and along its sides were a number of niches in which incense was placed. It is the first time a Paschal candle has been used in Wisconsin in an Episcopal church.—Chicago Tribune, April 3.

THE PASCHAL CANDLE.

Bishop Nicholson of the Protestant Episcopal Church has caused some comment by ordering the Paschal candle to be burned in one of the churches of his diocese in Milwaukee. His critics think that this advance in ritualism shows too decided a leaning towards Catholicism. In Catholic churches the Paschal candle is lighted on Easter morn and is kept burning during mass for forty days, or until Ascension Day. It is always a large candle, and on one side of it a design of five spices is inlaid to symbolize the five wounds of our Lord. There is always much of the great Paschal candle which is burned in the Vatican remaining when Ascension Day comes, and this remnant, which has been blessed by the Pope, is sent to the sisters of one of the convents. They use the wax in making the Agni Dei, which are worn by faithful Catholics all over the world.—Tribune.

NO CHURCH BAN ON TOBACCO.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 6.—The Presbytery of the United Presbyterians, at its session here, has voted not to adopt the overtures suggested by the General Assembly in regard to the use of tobacco. The overtures in part provide that "No student shall be admitted to license to preach the gospel or ordained unless he promise to refrain from the use of tobacco."

MUCH DAMAGE TO IOWA FRUIT.

Des Moines, Ia., April 5.—Secretary Greene of the State Horticultural society in his report says the Iowa fruits have been seriously damaged by the cold weather. Some varieties of apples show damage, 25 to 60 per cent; plums, 20 per cent; pears, 25 per cent; blackberry and raspberry, 50 per cent; grapes 25 per cent; strawberries, condition bad.

The biggest contract for whisky barrels ever let in this country was awarded to a Louisville cooperage firm by the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse company. The contract was made for 1,200,000 barrels, extra grade, to cost $2,400,000.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

The Spring Term has commenced, and Commencement at least seems to be within measurable distance. We hardly know whether we have done right in giving the name spring to this term; for is not the word synonymous with radiant sunshine, green foliage, budding blossoms, and delicious, odorous breezes? And what have we had to trudge to college through so far? Our lot has been snow, icy slush, still icier atmosphere, and the wretchedness of our condition has been further increased by the dismal appearance of the bare, lean, shivering trees. But, meliora speramus; does not the old maxim say, "Everything comes to him that waits?" And so we will compose our soul in philosophic patience, and dwell upon the springs that have been.

To return to Graceland, the opening exercises of the term were held on Tuesday, the 4th instant, and we had the pleasure of listening to an interesting address from Elder R. S. Sal-yards. On the following day classes, commenced, and work is now in full swing. New courses in Business Practice, Economics, Electricity, and Magnetism, have been added this term. So far, the registration of students has been quite encouraging, though we should be glad to see the number doubled, as it would be if our people would favor their own institution rather than external ones.

Through the efforts of Elder F. A. Smith, a fine set of the Britannica Encyclopedia has been added to the library; the college is certainly under deep obligation to our brother. Can we not have the name of some new donor inserted each week? Our Library ought to have ten thousand volumes at least. We hope that the collection and forwarding of specimens for our Museum will not cease. Much can be done in this direction by the traveling ministry, of whom some have already helped.

The "Success when United" Appeal is open for new subscribers, and we ask for twenty more by May 1. Will some of our brethren and sisters respond to the call? Who knows?

THE GATHERING.—ALL THINGS EQUAL, ETC.

We have received of late a few letters from localities something after the tone of the following:—

There is a spirit agitating the members of this church relative to the laws of consecration and gathering. This spirit is operating through those holding priesthood, and is teaching that the laws for the consecrating of properties, and gathering of the people upon the land, apportioning them an inheritance, and having all things equal, are in force and ought to be observed; and that this church should have been engaged in putting all this into practice.

Since the church has not seen fit to teach and practice these laws, ought not the elders let them rest until the church in conference and quorum capacity agree as to the extent of their application and the practicability of putting them into operation?

Also, until the Lord appoints a stake for a gathering place can the church enforce all these laws pertaining to this subject and be in harmony with what the Lord requires?

Again: If elders and priests teach that the Lord intended for the Reorganized Church to be teaching and practicing the application of these laws for the last twenty-five years, but that it is not so doing because the love of riches with some, and their influence over others in high places in the church have corrupted to such an extent that the mouths of others are stopped; will we not have confusion and lost confidence in the spiritual advisers? Will it not cause envy, and covetousness, and dissatisfaction among the poor?

Some elders censure the church in strong terms, condemning the church officials as rotten and not worthy of confidence, deceivers of the poor they say. These elders and priests are going among the members, telling them the church is not doing its duty, and are causing strife about the law, and confusion of understanding, and suspicion of evil. Please tell me what should be done, as I am branch teacher, and it seems necessary that I should meet all this and obtain peace and quiet. How best can I do this?

Should these and other subjects that it is known differences exist upon be introduced in prayer and testimony meetings? Should any one arise in such meetings and read copiously from Doctrine and Covenants, referring to numerous sections and paragraphs upon consecration and gathering and apportioning lands, and asserting that these things should now be enforced but are not? Would it be proper and in order to call such parties to order when attempting such conduct? If they insist on disturbing such meetings in that manner what course should be pursued?

1. We believe in the free discussion of all questions of importance upon which it is possible that there are differences, or more than one opinion, or upon which an argument is necessary and may be obtained by interchange of views. But such discussion should be had at such times and in such places as common sense, reason, and a sense of propriety shall dictate; and not where they are necessarily restricted or calculated to injure the spirit of peace among the saints. The prayer meeting is not the place where either elders, priests, or lay members should bring in and attempt to air, or discuss questions of the importance of the ones referred to in this letter. Whosoever does so and will not yield to admonition and remonstrance by the proper officer, should be compelled to desist. No question should be presented by the officers, or be allowed presented by anyone else, which in its consideration is calculated to create discussion, or a clash of opinions. No one should be allowed to take advantage of the saying, "Where the Spirit of God is, there is liberty," to ride a hobby, preach a sermon, or ventilate doctrinal differences in the saints' prayer and testimony meetings. For a man to take up the time of the saints in a prayer meeting on the gathering, all things common, equality, and other kindred topics, on which he may think other elders, or the church as a whole is astray, or derelict in duty, is an abuse of liberty and amounts to license, which no right-minded person should be guilty of.

Every branch in which we have lived had this rule and enforced it, that nothing calculated to stir up controversy, or discussion, should be permitted to take up the time of the prayer meeting; and if anything is presented, or occurs, starting a dis-ussion, the presiding officer should at once stop it, and defer consideration of it to the next business meeting. Such should be the rule in every branch, enforced without regard to persons.

The proper places for presentation and consideration of subjects of the sort are the branch business meetings, district and annual conferences.

2. The first revelation in which equality in temporal things is treated upon is section 36, Doctrine and Covenants, Lamoni edition, and is an extract from the prophecy of Enoch, not a command to the church, a matter of history and instruction.

The next mention is in section 38, given in 1831, commanding the removal to the Ohio. Paragraph 8 refers to the appointment of certain men, whose duty is pointed out, and applied to those removing from New York to the Ohio.

The next reference is in section 51, in which Bishop Edward Partridge was given instruction about organizing the people of the church at Independence, and by a direction in paragraph 5 was made an example for other churches, branches, or congregations to follow. According to paragraph 1, it was to be done in accordance with the law of the land. Whatever equality was to be secured it was to be within the precincts of the separate churches. See section 51, paragraph 2.

After this, equality in temporal things is presented in section 70, where instructions were given to Joseph Smith, Jr., Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, Sidney Rigdon, and W. W. Phelps, all of whom were more or less engaged in the spiritual, literary, and business affairs of the church rather than in temporal matters of their own; and it seems that a portion of paragraph 3 justifies an application to all similarly employed, and exempts none; nevertheless the closing paragraph confines it to those named at first.

What is called the "Vision," section 76, deals with an equality to be con-summed when the church reaches the presence of God. This we should strive to be ready for.

Equality is named again in section 77, paragraph 1, and seems to have been directed to those engaged in an order called, as we suppose, the order of Enoch. In this a covenant is referred to by, or in accordance with which they were to organize themselves; it was to be an everlasting covenant that could not be broken. The form of the covenant is not given.

In section 81 we have what is stated to have been the origin of the work given to "Enoch and the church in his day;" the fourth paragraph of which, while it teaches an equality, seems to make a restriction which would be by some construed as more favorable to some than to others; because it recognizes a difference of calling, office, work, and the needs for carrying on such work and recognizing a responsible stewardship in each. If this is applicable to us, it is applicable according to its terms, for several were named as those who should be bound in a bond binding them to the faithful discharge of the duties of their stewardship, in which they were to manage the affairs of the poor and the things appertaining to the bishopric, "for the benefit of the saints, and for a stake of Zion."

This contemplates the existence of a stake in which the rules are to apply. We have been told that stakes would be appointed, but none has been as yet. Can this apply as our querist states has been taught by elders and priests?

Section 82 provides that wives are to have claim on their husbands for sustenance. After the death of a husband the woman will remain on her inheritance, her home according to the law of the land; that is she will hold possession of her home of which her husband died seized, and manage the same for her support.

Children are to be cared for by parents until they come of age. They then become agents to themselves and will be answerable to the church for their conduct having claim on the general storehouse if parents cannot supply them. It is not to be supposed that it was intended by this that children coming of age are to be supported by the church in idleness, or careless freedom from the responsibility to labor and look after their own welfare.

Section 101 gives instruction to Enoch concerning an order for the benefit of the poor. By the terms of the revelation itself application is made to two localities and two similar orders; one, to be called the united order of the stake of Zion, the city of Shinehah. The other to be called the united order of the city of Zion.

Whether the names Gazelam, Mahemson, Pelagoram, Zombre, Ahashdah, Olihah, Shederlaomach, Tahhanes, Shinehah, Ozondah, etc., occurring in section 101 are the same as those in section 81, in which Alam, Ahashdah, Mahalaleel and Pelagoram, Gazelam and Herah and Olihah, and Shalemanasseh and Mahemson, are given as applied we may presume. If so, and Shinehah means Kirtland; Pelagoram, Sidney Rigdon; Mahemson, Martin Harris; Zombre, John Johnson; Gazelam, Joseph Smith; Shederlaomach, Frederick G. Williams; Olihah, Oliver Cowdery; as it is held by some that they do, then the order once existing at Kirtland, by virtue of this command, or instruction, lapsed with the removal from Kirtland; and the one at the city of Zion also lapsed, by reason of the driving out of the church from there, and the death and dispersion of the members of the order there.

We do not herein state any opinion as to the application of these names, whether it is correct or not. Section 81, it is stated, was given to Enoch and the church in his day; 101 was also given to Enoch.

The church in Utah, in the edition of the Book of Covenants published by them in 1876, names Joseph Smith as Enoch and Gazelam in section 76 of that work; and in section 103 Baurak Ale. In the editions of 1835, published at Kirtland, under the direction of Joseph Smith and others of the church authorities; the editions of 1845-6, the printing of which was begun while Joseph Smith was still living, and finished by John Taylor after the murder at Carthage; and the editions of 1852-4-6 and later, up to 1876, the names of Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon, etc., do not occur in connection with Enoch, Gazelam, Olihah, etc. By what rule of right, President Young, or those under his presidency, inserted these names in connection in the edition of Doctrine and Covenants, published by them in Utah in 1876 and later, we have not yet been informed. We of the Reorganized Church published the revelations as we found them, as we have every reason to believe they were left at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith; the same as we did the Holy Scriptures, or Inspired Translation.

If these orders of Enoch were originally instituted and the parties to them named by revelation, and they both lapsed by reason of a departure from the localities named in the revelations; and were revived at any time during the stay of the church in either Missouri or Illinois, it is clear that they could not be revived unless by direction, as church orders. Have any directions been given? If so, through whom?

It must be understood that the editor of the HERALD is quite as anxious for the advancement of the church, the building up of Zion, the relief of those who are oppressed and in want, the uplifting of those who are in the valley of depression, and the general good of all, as are many of those now agitating the question. The accomplished object and its desirability are easily stated. The picture of it may be drawn and is until the glow and beauty of it are felt; and the want of it painfully apparent. Yet, there is such an insistence that whatever is done must be done in the Lord's way that many are in doubt.

When the Reorganization began its work, the attention of the saints was called to the revelation given on Fishing River, after the expulsion from Independence, Jackson County, and the "regions round about" in Missouri. The method of gathering is there presented; and, if the principle therein given is a correct one, and applicable to the conditions, one important point in the theory of the gathering is discoverable.

CALL BY THE KNIGHTS OF ZION.
GRAND GATE ISSUES A NOTICE ON SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE JEWISH COLONIAL BANK.

The Grand Gate of the Order Knights of Zion has issued the following call to all its members and to the Jewish public in general:—

The success of the entire Zionistic movement and the hope of ever acquiring a home for the millions of homeless Jews in the land of their ancestors depends largely on the success of the Jewish Colonial Bank, which has been established in London for that purpose in accordance with the Basel program.

The bank will have its books open for subscription by the Jews all over the world on March 28, 29, and 30.

In Chicago subscriptions will be received by a trusted committee appointed for the purpose by the Grand Gate at Zion Hall, 209 West Twelfth Street, on the above-mentioned days, between the hours of 7 and 10 every evening.

"The par value of a share is $5; only 20 per cent (or $1) advance payment will be demanded from each subscriber.

Every Jew who sympathizes with the movement and is willing to contribute to the regeneration of his oppressed brethren should not fail to respond.

The foregoing, from a late issue of the Chicago Tribune, scarcely needs comment further than to say that the action is a result of the Zionist movement of which the HERALD readers have been quite fully informed. The movement seems to be endowed with life and vigor, and bids fair to succeed.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn wrote from Sacramento, California, that he was having a contest with the elders from Utah, on the streets. He closes his letter thus:—

I intend to stay with them every night until they are sick of their own medicine. We are in the fight and happy.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. William Franklin, Fish Creek, Wisconsin, sends us press clippings; one a good article written by him in defense of the Bible, another a new version of the old "Spalding Story" of the origin of the Book of Mormon. Bro. F. has corrected other misstatements of the faith in local papers. He makes a good point in stating that had Joseph Smith been an impostor he would have done well to have based his work on different foundation, omitting the Book of Mormon and other unpopular features to which the religious world urge such strong objection.

Bro. Rees Jenkins, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, No. 930 Von Lunen Road, requests any of the ministry or saints who may be near to call on him.

Bro. E. B. Porter, Santa Rosa, California, writes of spiritual blessings enjoyed in past times by saints there, which confirm his faith in the work, and of which he writes, bearing testimony to the satisfaction received through the gifts of the gospel.

Bro. S. E. Ballou and Sr. Alice, daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. W. Gillen, were married on the 29th ult., Pres. Joseph Smith officiating; and on the 9th inst., Bro. W. B. Paul and Sr. Ethlyn, daughter of Bro. and Sr. George Harger, were also united in the bonds of matrimony, Bro. A. S. Cochran, uncle of the groom officiating. Bro. Ballou and Paul are connected with the Herald Office composing department. The HERALD extends congratulations.

"The Pope's failing health is said to be the chief topic of discussion in nearly every European capital. His closest advisers have been quoted as saying that he can hardly be expected to live more than three months at the longest. One day the German Emperor is described as pulling the wires for the selection of his favorite, and the next morning a secret cabal in the Sacred College is represented as making advances to Cardinal Vaughn and endeavoring to induce him to stand as a candidate with a view to promoting the fusion of the Anglican and Roman churches."—London Dispatch, April 9.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

AS ONE MOTHER SEES IT.

Latter-day revelation states that if parents teach not their children the principles of the gospel, and have them baptized at eight years of age, the sin is upon the head of the parent. "Sr. Ida" has asked, "Dare we disobey?" This revelation speaks for itself, and God must know his own business. "Sr. Ida's" questions are good for each parent to answer, and I would like to add another. If the fault is in the system (baptizing them so young), why do not the children of Catholic parents come to the same end? The Catholic boast of "A Catholic at six years—always a Catholic," is comparatively without failure. They act upon the same system, but with better results, hence it must be the practice rather than the principle at fault.

All through the Book of Covenants we find admonition to all to teach the little ones these duties, and many that held high offices in the church were often under condemnation because they failed in their duties to their children. These are thoughts for parents to consider and act upon, and we believe the children would be as firmly rooted in the right way as is the Catholic child in the Catholic way, and baptism would be the natural desire of the child, as it is of the adult when once converted.

I know many good saints who hold the opinion that if a child is trained exactly according to the parents' wishes, they are robbed of their agency. If so, why are we not commanded to the contrary? Allowing that all saints do teach and train their children (which a large per cent of them do not), we close our eyes for a moment and memory brings the various systems of government we have observed before us, and we wonder no longer why there is such confusion and wildness in the ranks of the growing children. Here we see a family of little ones rushed through their childhood, and out into the world with fists, clubs, or anything else handy, behind them; here is mother with the proverbial wisp of hay ever before them, coaxing them on; then comes another packed in cotton to keep the harmful influences and evil knowledge from them; others are treated to exactly the opposite method; others are driven through their home training before a swarm of angry hornets in the form of a scolding mother's ungoverned tongue.

There are ways and ways—governments and governments—parents, parents, and parents—each calling "This way, please;" "My way's right." But still remains the sad fact that the children do drift away; a panic seizes them, and they often, like a frightened horse, plunge headlong into the very thing they would avoid.

Occasionally, like the oasis in the desert, passes before the mental vision the true home life. Here the children are reverent and obedient. Angry words are not heard here; nagging tongue-lashing has no part in their discipline; they never hear, "Get out of that, you little imp, or I'll skin you!" "Confound it I've told you the same thing a thousand times, and now if you don't mind I'll break your tormented neck."

There is no place on earth where accents of love are so required as in the home. How can we teach the love of God and his mercy to our little ones, and then tell them "Get out of my sight—you are too bad for me to care to look at."

O mothers—mothers—some other way must be found.

We send our children to school during the years they are too young to earn their way in the world, and the education they there receive they seldom forget, and we believe if they were as thoroughly taught by competent teachers in matters of morality, moral principles would be as permanently fixed in the mind as the multiplication table. We are their teachers in religious matters, and must be able to practice before we can teach. When we have learned to apply the principles to our own lives they will be such that the children will imitate. They can find no inharmony between our "system" and its "results"—hence will not abandon the system.

If a school-teacher said that "2 x 2 = 4. Remember that, children, it's right because the rule says so," then turns to the blackboard and demonstrates $2 \times 2 = 5$, what is the child to believe? No wonder confusion ensues, and the children doubt the teacher, doubt the system, and resolve to do as they please.

Let us deal with the little ones as God deals with us. Teach them, pray with them, chastise when necessary, never deceive, and through every moment of their lives love them and let them know you love them. Then I believe they will abide by their early teachings and all will be well.

TO THE READERS OF THE HOME COLUMN.

Since "Sister Emma" has been my writing signature for a number of years, I think it justice to myself and the author to inform you that the article in Home Column of Herald January 11, over the same signature is not mine.

This same thing occurred once before—a few years ago—and then, as now, there was no address given, or distinguishing mark of any kind about the signature. I have no desire to wear other people's honors or credit that does not belong to me, and since there are many Emmas in the church, I will in future subscribe myself

SISTER EMMA BURTON.

PAPEETE, February 16, 1899.

STANDLEY, I. T., Feb. 6.

Dear Sister Walker:—When I read the statement: "That as a rule the children of the church were leaving it, especially those who were baptized at eight years of age, according to the commandments in Doctrine and Covenants," in Sr. Ida's letter in Herald of February 7, I took my Doctrine and Covenants and read: "And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance; faith in Christ the Son of the living God; and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents; . . . and they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord. . . . These sayings are true and faithful; wherefore transgress them not, neither take therefrom."—68:4.

God did not say we were to teach these things if every child baptized at eight followed strictly in the line of duty and never swerved from the straight path Christ gave us to follow, but he did say we were to teach these things, or "the sin be upon the head of the parents."

It is written: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."—Prov. 22:6. If this be true, and the statement made by our brother to Sr. Ida be true, that "as a rule the children baptized at eight were leaving the church," I ask, where or what is the reason for this? Can we admit the fault to be in God's law? Surely not.

If God gave one imperfect law, what assurance have we that he gave one perfect law? or what assurance have we even of salvation?

It may be true that some so baptized lose interest and drop out, it is equally true that some adults baptized lose interest and drop out; some of Christ's disciples "went back, and walked no more with him."—John 6:66. Shall we fail, for these reasons, to teach the law as God has commanded? Could we at the judgment day offer such excuses for not teaching his law?

Christ said, "And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees."—Matt. 3:10. Therefore, let us as saints begin at the root and hew ourselves down to fit the law, and not try to hew the law to fit us, lest we be among that number of whom it is written, "I never knew you."

Christ said, "If a man love me he will keep my words."—John 14:23. So, dear sisters, do not hesitate to teach your children the "words" to "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."—Eph. 6:4.

Some day the ways of Providence shall be made clear; the "things hard to be understood" shall be explained; we shall discover order in what seemed intricate, and wisdom in what we thought unaccountable.

Till that time let us trust God and obey his laws.

Your sister,

EVA M. BAILEY.

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

SPRINGTIME is fast approaching. Are you prepared to fill up the deserted ranks in your school? There is no better time in the year than now.

We are now in a new quarter's work. Have you canvassed the work of the quarter? If you are teacher or officer, you should at the first of each quarter canvass the entire quarter's work, that you may be able to properly plan the work for the class or school. You can do far better work with this preparation than without it.

If your primary or intermediate class is annoyed or attracted by what they can see in the room, make a room for them by hanging curtains on wires. These curtains will slip back to the walls and be entirely out of the way in a few seconds' time. This has been tried by many and pronounced a decided success. Try it. You will be delighted.

"SOMETHING new under the sun." Did you ever hear of a district association without a school in it? We have the report of one. It was organized with two schools and both became disorganized. The district organization went on just the same and succeeded in reorganizing the schools. So much for a little hopefulness, and we might say "grit."

Early in February the General Superintendent sent out a circular letter to nearly three hundred missionaries and Sunday school workers. Many of them responded very promptly and carefully. We are much pleased with the results thus far; but would be very glad to hear from many others who have not yet replied. The questions asked in the letter are of much interest to all, and especially to all who are interested in teaching the plan of salvation. They are asked with the hope that the answers given will help to solve one of the problems now before the Sunday school workers. We sincerely hope that no one will entirely neglect to answer. Let us hear from you, and as soon as convenient. As soon as all or nearly all replies are in, we will give the questions and a synopsis of the answers to the readers of the department.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL ADVOCATE.—CONCLUDED.

(From the St. Louis, Missouri, District.)

Variety is the very spice of life, and let us have a little of the spice in our Sunday schools as well as elsewhere. A little wholesome seasoning is good, just so we do not season too highly, or use the wrong kind of seasoning. Anything foreign to the Sunday school work would be like salt in ice cream.

WHEN?

Written for the Sunday School Advocate, by Mrs. S. R. Burgess.

In a recent number of the Sunday School Times, under the above heading, we read, "A word of criticism or advice uttered by me to-day may only serve to ruffle still more my friends' feelings—. To-morrow that same word may accomplish all that I could wish—. If this time is not the best time for me to act—, it is wrong for me to do now, what may be right at some later time."

This may be too true in regard to criticism or advice, but a kindly word, a proffer of help to one in need, a little timely sympathy never comes amiss, and often accomplished more good than the word of "criticism," or "advice."

As Christian workers it is our duty to give help and comfort; and to do such acts of brotherly kindness as the Master would approve. The one we would criticize may be doing the best his circumstances will permit, and know his shortcomings only too well. Encourage the good, and be slow to censure, should be the aim of every one who expects success among the young.

The following is from a private letter to the superintendent by one of our young coworkers, now in one of the Southern States:—

"I will say right here in this connection, that from what I have observed, together with what I have read and learned otherwise, that the Sunday school work is assuming a position with reference to the church that is marvelous; and I am not so sure but the time will come when it will be regarded equally important with the church. It reaches a class of people that the church itself does not reach—a class that is in touch, you might say, with an element we need. And I am glad to see young men and women, with minds calculated to influence, giving the Sunday school question deep and earnest thought; not only are they thinking about it, but are giving their time and talents to raise it to a standard paramount to all other institutions in the church. And whether or no their efforts are crowned with success, as far as their aim is concerned, they will surely be rewarded as far as their motives are concerned in their effort to advance the cause."

UNITY OF THOUGHT.

All the ideas we bring to our study from outside the Quarterly should be made to conform, as nearly as possible, to the main thought of the lesson. Every lesson presents to our mind some kind of a picture, which, if our ideas are harmonious and definite, will be clear, attractive, and beneficial. But if on the other hand there is a discordance of purpose, and material is used which does not assist in bringing out the main thought distinctly, the result will be a picture more or less obscure, and one in which our attention is detracted from even this imperfect result by the presence of material, otherwise good. All our material, both from outside sources and our Quarterlies as well, should make the leading thought more clear, and everything that will not do this, however good it may be at some other time, is herein harmful.

CHRISTMAS OFFERINGS.

Now is the time to begin saving up for your Christmas offering for next Christmas. Superintendents, don't let your schools forget this. Teachers, keep it before your scholars, and help them devise plans for making money for their offerings.

THE TEACHER'S MISSION.

"What a mission is thine, O Teacher,
Most blessed beyond compare;
A mission an angel might covet,
Leading the youthful and fair
To the One altogether lovely,
Bidding them sit at his feet
Where they may learn precious lessons
Of perfect love, rich and sweet!"

THE GRADED SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Do you favor grading the Sunday school, or advancing the scholars from one class to another? Think it over, and we will discuss it at greater length at some future time.

If Sister "A" is an excellent primary teacher, is that any argument that she is a first-class intermediate teacher. If Bro. "B" was just the teacher for those boys when they were small, perhaps Bro. "C" can do more with them now since they are grown.

A B C.

In some of the schools we have visited we have noticed the teacher of the real small children using an A B C book, and trying to teach them their letters. While we believe this is much better than no teaching at all, the time can be employed to much better advantage, and much more good done the children by telling them the regular Sunday school lesson, or if you cannot make an interesting story out of the lesson, tell them some other Bible story. And always be sure to impress upon their minds some good moral, taken from the story, that will be of use to them in after life.

They will learn their A B C's at the day school, but will they learn any Bible stories there? Besides that, many times the parents will teach them their A B C's when they would not think of teaching them anything from the scriptures. The time the Sunday school teacher has with the scholars is so limited that they cannot afford to lose a single opportunity to impress them with some practical truth.

THOSE PENNIES.

We believe it would be hard to find among us many who are willing to contribute of their means to the church work without a good idea of about how it was a going to be used. When we appoint a committee to perform any work we want a detailed report of all expenditures. As men and women are only children grown older, they are not unlike their seniors. They, too, want to know where their money goes. So if we explain to them, minutely, the things that are purchased with them, the cost of each article, and make them feel that they are helping get them, we believe they will take a greater interest in giving than if they are merely given to understand that they are giving to Jesus, and at the same time have an idea that Jesus never gets the money. It will also teach them to watch their expenditures, both large and small, and know where their money goes and what for.

MOUND CITY, Mo., April 1.

Editors Herald:—I am reminded by your last issue that a debate in which I participated as moderator has been going on at Barnard. Some of the brethren agreed to write you concerning it, but as they may not, I will describe the battle as I saw it. In February, while Bro. William Roach (lately ordained a priest) and myself, were holding meetings near Barnard, the "Christian" fraternity challenged us to furnish a debater (I. N. White preferred) to meet T. H. Popplewell as their representative. I wrote out propositions as follows:—

1. Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?
2. Is the Church of Christ of which T. H. Popplewell is a member, in harmony with the church described in the New Testament, in respect to doctrine, organization, faith, and practice?
3. Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints of which I. N. White is a member, in harmony with the church described in the New Testament, in respect to doctrine, organization, faith, and practice?

Without delay the questions came back, duly signed and accepted by Bro. I. N. White for our church, and T. H. Popplewell for the Church of Christ. March 16, the fray began in the Christian church at Barnard, Bro. F. J. Chatburn appearing on the scene in Bro. White's stead. I believe the attendance would have numbered thousands instead of hundreds, had it not been for the awful state of the roads. This country is not noted for good roads anyway; the soil is too rich for one thing; but we had quite an interesting time as it was. Bro. Chatburn had only two days for preparation, and his strength was not specially on the first proposition, as regards the affirmative argument, nor in handling the prophecies, but his tact, wit, winning manner, and natural qualifications aided by the Spirit in handling familiar scripture, and setting forth the fundamentals of our economy, seemed gradually, and finally completely to gain the good will and friendship of the people. He was often applauded, while his opponent scored on that line but once or twice.

I am satisfied prejudice has been removed, light disseminated, and good will and friendship gained to a very considerable extent. I do not think one enemy was made to our cause by the debate. Bro. Popplewell signally failed in his grammar argument and effort on Mark 16: 14-20, to prove that the signs did not follow the believer, but rather the apostles. He cited the rule, "a pronoun must agree with its antecedent in person, number, and gender" and then tried on the blackboard to make them, verse 17, agree with "the eleven," or apostles as its antecedent, which the audience could see would not work, apostles being second person, (those spoken to) and "them" being third person (those spoken of). Jared's boat, as usual, came in for ridicule, but did not sink, notwithstanding the hole in the bottom. The name Reorganized was shot at, but not hit very bad. Frank referred to the reorganization going on in nature, and in the human body, saying "my friend [Popplewell] is continually being reorganized, and it won't hurt him either."

The debate was an educator I think to all of us who attended; it was to me at least. I realize more than before, perhaps, the necessity of study in the line of our work, "the books," Church History, opposing faiths, all that we may use in defense, all that we may meet in opposition. An elder must not go to sleep. He may get along knowing little of the letter, but can only be able in every situation, by being thoroughly furnished through study and constant application. I appreciate very highly the late Herald editorial, "Reflections on Study, Work, and Growth." By it I think I have a better understanding of my duty as a missionary in respect to study, visitation, etc. The visiting demands upon an elder if always responded to, would altogether prevent study, reflection, and mental development. I believe if all the elders, and then the saints, will read and profit by this article, the work will thereby receive an impetus. To my mind good counsel is often as valuable as a "Thus saith the Lord" in thunder tones, and should be as carefully treasured. "Wisdom is the principal thing," as Solomon said, therefore let us all seek for and receive wisdom.

The work seems to be onward with us. We are moving slowly but surely; yet I hope for better times in the near future; believe the incoming church year will be a successful one in this vineyard. Numbers of young people are rising up to strength and usefulness. I hope the older ones will not get weary in well-doing. That unity is the hope of our cause, I see more and more clearly. I for one wish to promote it. If the missionaries will without ceasing remember the high priests, elders, and local ministers all, and the district and branch officers will continually and thoughtfully sustain the missionary arm of the church, every member of the body being essential to success, what can hinder progress? Let us then of the priesthood, standing ministry, and traveling elders, "pray for one another" in our respective responsibilities, that the words of the hymn,

"Thou hast promised us thine aid
When we united be"

we may thus help to fulfill. Wishing the prayers of the saints, that I may be able to understand and fully perform my duty,

In bonds,

ELLENSBURG, Wash., March 25.

Editors Herald:—I am still striving to serve God. Brn. Enge and Holt have been holding meetings in this valley during the fall and winter, and have left good impressions here, with calls for more meetings and some investigating earnestly for the truth. Bro. Enge has preached at two schoolhouses and in Ellensburg, and has removed lots of prejudice.

I live nine miles southeast of Ellensburg, and if any elder or saint comes this way I would like to have them stop. My house is open. We want some more elders in this part, if possible. In June or in winter I think the best times for people to turn out. My earnest prayer is that all saints be humble and prayerful, that others may see our good work and fall in with us. I love to read the letters in the Herald.

W. T. SHELDON.

WINFIELD, Kan., April 2.

Editors Herald:—I am now located in my new home, three miles south and one west of Winfield, Kansas, and wish to say to any of the traveling ministry that my latchstring is out; that as they are passing to call on me and I shall be pleased to entertain as best I can. And if any saints are living near this place I wish to make their acquaintance and have prayer meetings, also preaching if opportunity offers.

I also wish to say to whomsoever is in charge of this part of the vineyard that I desire to let my light shine, and so humbly ask that they will grant me the right to labor in this part, either in calling the few saints in these parts together and holding prayer meetings, or in preaching, as we may feel led and occasion offers. There are here now, so far as I have learned, six members of the church, including myself and family. I hope to hear of more, and also trust the Lord will meet with us as he has promised to meet with two or three when they meet in his name.

I am truly thankful for the kind expressions of remembrance by the Plano saints and friends, feeling that I did but do my duty; if I did even that, or if I felt so I should feel more thankful. However, I pray the Lord to bless the Plano branch, that he will acknowledge them as his, and that they may be faithful to him. With regards for the saints at Lamoni and love for the truth,

Yours in bonds,

W. VICKERY.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 31.

Editors Herald:—I left home on the 13th ult., and it was with reluctance that I pronounced the sad words "good bye," and gave the parting kiss to loved ones. However, I felt thankful to our heavenly Father that circumstances were so auspicious as to permit of my leaving home to enter upon my missionary labors, in view of my wife's past ill health. It is very gratifying to me to know that, through the mercy and blessings of God, she is regaining physical strength very rapidly. She seems to feel confident of final restoration to health, and I truly appreciate the blessing of God to her, as her past suffering and weakened condition have been a source of great anxiety to me for many years. I feel to exclaim in the language of the poet, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

My first stop was at Bevier, Missouri. Here I had the pleasure of meeting Brn. I. N. White and R. M. Elvin. The former was not enjoying the best of health, but was in good spirits and alive to the interests of the work; the latter has changed considerably in his outer appearance since he acted as "best man" at our wedding at Sandwich, Illinois, in 1881. His grey hair and beard indicate that old age is creeping on. His labors are blessed of the Lord and appreciated by the "Northeast Missouri" saints. I was delayed about ten days at Brookfield, Missouri, owing to severe illness of my brother Edwin, who laid at the point of death for a number of days, but was much improved, though still confined to bed at my departure.

I remained a short time at Independence, renewing old-time acquaintances. It affords great pleasure to meet with those of like precious faith. The new building of the Ensign Publishing Company is a credit to the movers of that enterprise and will reflect credit as a church institution. The Editor-in-chief is as cheerful in spirit as in the "days of yore" and seems content with his arduous station. Independence is a very pretty city, almost as beautiful as Kirtland. I called on the families of Brn. Luff, Chatburn, and Etzenhouser, who were well but very anxious to see their "loved ones" who were far away from home, laboring for the salvation of their fellow men. I truly sympathized with them; yes, from the heart, for it has fallen to my lot to drink from the same bitter cup for lo, these many years. O, what a terrible ordeal to be separated from those we love so dearly! Nevertheless we must bear the cross patiently, for the Lord desires those who serve him to do so willingly and cheerfully. I attended one prayer service of the Armstrong branch. The meeting was attended by a marked degree of the Spirit. Remained all night with Bro. and Sr. Harrington, who are lively stones in the building of our God.

Arrived in Denver, Colorado, early on the morning of the 3d inst., and soon found Sr. Jamison, who took me to where Brn. Shupe and Gilbert work. The rest of the day was spent in the company of Sr. Schmutz and her daughters. At night met with the Z. R.-L. Society in the saints' commodious chapel. A very pleasant time; and, above all, a good spirit was manifested. Will not soon forget the saints of Denver. Was delighted with the city. Had I known that I was to be blockaded for twelve hours in a snowstorm at Laramie, I would have remained over the Sabbath; but then we do not know always what is ahead of us, and perhaps it is a good thing.

Sojourned for three days with my nephew, Prosecuting Attorney D. G. Thomas, and his wife, at Rock Springs, Wyoming. Here I met an aunt and two cousins who are members of the Utah Church. Was pleased to learn that they were not very strong in that faith.

Reached the "Great" Salt Lake City on the eve of the 8th inst., and was kindly cared for at the home of Bro. E. Barrows, also visited Srs. Robinson and Wilson and Bro. Davis and wife. Met with and preached for the saints in their chapel on Sunday and enjoyed a marked degree of the Spirit throughout the day. Bro. Barrows does well in view of his advanced age, but it was made apparent to my mind that a young man full of push and gospel fire should be stationed in said city. Was introduced to Ex-Governor Thomas. In the interview that I had with him he stated, in the presence of a "Mormon" who was piloting me through the city and introducing me to the leading lights, that the Josephites were not aggressive enough in their work among the Utah people. He felt confident that there were thousands of those people who were believers in the principles of the gospel, but disgusted with polygamy and its attendant evils, who were "on the fence." It was his opinion that we should keep able aggressive ministers in the city. I concur in this opinion. Your (Bro. Joseph's) cousin, Samuel Smith, attended my meeting. I had quite a chat with him, being favorably impressed. He does not seem to have a very high opinion of the Mormon dignitaries. I gleaned from his conversation that, if the coast was clear, he would be one with us. He spoke very feelingly and favorably of yourself and Bro. Alexander. Two of his sons are members of our church and are much interested in the work. They both told me that they had made up their mind to devote their time and talent in the interest of this grand cause. God help them to carry out their good intentions. I attended services in the Tabernacle and heard your cousin, Joseph F. Smith, speak; he said some good things and is quite an orator. The choir of five hundred voices with the organ was a grand and melodious affair. The Temple is magnificent, but Mormonism in Utah is a "rotten" institution. Yet they have thousands of good honest souls, among them several very warm friends of mine. I spent most of my time while in the city in company with their membership, eating and sleeping in their homes, and was treated with every kindness. We have some noble workers in our branch in Salt Lake City; Srs. Hogan, Davis, Cochrans, Wilson, Barrows, and others, whose names I do not now remember, through whose untiring efforts and that of a few middle aged and aged brethren the camp fire is kept blazing.

I came on by way of Sacramento and San Francisco, remaining only a few hours at the former city, meeting Brn. Daley and Joehnk. Met Brn. Sheehy and Chatburn in San Francisco. Was glad to gaze on their smiling faces and to grasp them by the hand once again. Judging from reports both have acquitted themselves nobly as ministers of Christ. My sojourn in the city was made very pleasant. I had the pleasure of forming the acquaintance of Brn. Parkin, Price, Lincoln, Anthony, and others of the saints. Expect to return to these cities in the near future, and will then have time to become better acquainted. Have been here over two Sundays and have enjoyed the society of the saints exceedingly. We have a noble band of workers in this city.

Bro. Williams is here and stands high in the estimation of the saints, by reason of his faithfulness to duty. He will be stationed in this place for some time to come, as his labors are in great demand. Bro. Dana, who has been hindered from performing ministerial work by reason of the illness of his son, is about ready to enter upon his missionary duties again. We have a priesthood council Saturday evening, April 1, at which meeting we expect Brn. Harris, Holt, and Carmichael. California has been favored with considerable rain since my arrival and there is an abundance of fruit and flowers. It is a strange sight for an easterner to see orange, lemon, fig, and apricot trees in the gardens. It is more pleasant to partake of the fruit. Have been kindly received all along my journey. With kindest regards to all,

Yours in Christ,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 4.

Editors Herald:—Have read your editorial on "Reflections on Study, Work, and Growth," and pronounce it good to excellent—worthy of thought and a putting into practice. "Tried experience" has proved to me that the church should heed such counsel. To keep pace with the demands of the times, is no child's play. He that is called to meet the adroit, cunning, and wily opponent of this great latter-day work, must be a man of more than ordinary faith, wit, and ability, if at all successful; unless he has had better opportunities to read—study and meditate—than a large majority of our traveling ministers have had.

During the cold days of January and February I made a trip through Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri. I was gone just forty-five days, and during that time preached forty-one sermons, administered to about fifty sick, reorganized one branch, attended and spoke at conference and Sunday school convention; wrote scores of letters, in which answered perplexing questions and made an effort to cheer and comfort some that were passing through severe trials, besides directing the work of the ministers in my charge. Went from house to house, calling on dozens of saints, and yet I failed to meet all the demands, and learned some felt "slighted" because I did not "call around." Well, no one would have appreciated such a "call" more than myself; but I was exhausted and nervous and was compelled to seek rest or go down both in body and in mental vigor. Could I have complied with the good advice given in the editorial referred to, I could have continued for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year and would not have felt the wear and tear of body and mind as I did in the forty-five days.

I do not write this to prevent the missionary who is wholly laboring with and among the saints from visiting and calling upon them to instruct and encourage. Neither would I discourage the general missionary from calling on the saints now and then in a general visiting way; but he cannot take the place of the priest whose duty it is, to "visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and to attend to all family duties," etc. (D. C. 17: 10.) Christ, in speaking to the Twelve, said: "And unto whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence." (Matt. 10: 11.) This is right in line with the instructions found in the editorial referred to. This applies more or less to all the general missionaries, but more especially to the Twelve, of whom Paul said: "Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me [the Twelve] daily, the care of all the churches." (2 Cor. 11: 28.) And again: "The Twelve are a traveling, presiding high council, to officiate in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the presidency of the church, agreeably to the institution of heaven, to build up the church and regulate all the affairs of the same in all nations." (D. C. 104: 12.) I ask, How can they do all this, if they are required to make regular "visiting officers" of themselves? They must have more time to "study" (the law), to meditate and write to enable them to "regulate all the affairs" of the church that are placed to their care. When I entered the Quorum of Twelve, Bro. Luff said to me: "Bro. White, you will not be able to preach as many sermons during this year as you did when you were a seventy." His words have proven true. When God revealed to me that I would be placed in the Quorum of Twelve, I, Jonah like, shrank at the thought; but seemingly to try me the voice said: "Your responsibility shall be increased." To say that this last sentence has proven true, is expressing it very mildly. I have tried to meet the demands of my office; but probably I have made mistakes, and some for lack of charity have seemingly turned a "cold shoulder," while others have remained friends and administered a word of comfort that has cheered me when burdened with care. I shall seek to abide the counsel of God given me through his Spirit, and honor the word; to-wit: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence." (D. C. 104: 44.) Shall hope to be mindful that "he that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand." (Ibid.)

I am more or less interested in the "gathering." There is a great preparation to undergo before we can expect to be qualified for such a great event. A member of the seventy writing me of late from the "hub" said: "It will be a long, cold day before some at this place will be prepared to gather." This saying will do to pass along the whole line, and let the saints commence to examine themselves. It may be that "five" out of the "ten" will have sufficient "oil" to gather into the "regions round about" and get their "lamps trimmed and burning" as a preparatory measure to the gathering.

"Consecration!" This means more than merely giving of our substance. The whole soul, body and spirit, must be consecrated to the Lord if we expect to abide in Zion. The admonition of the Spirit has been to "come up higher;" but I fear that few have fully heeded it in "all things." The command has gone forth: "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." (Ps. 50: 5.) This can apply to none else but our people, as they are the only ones called "saints" among all the bodies of religionists. I feel sure the time is nearing and an early preparation is necessary. Who will abide it.

On the night of March 28, 1899, while burdened with care, and praying for the redemption of Zion, I fell asleep, and the following vision was given to me: I saw two large bodies of saints attempting to march in line like unto our soldiers. They stood about ten to twelve abreast. One line was called the "western line," and the other the "eastern line;" all marching in the same direction. I was with the "western line," being with the number at the front. Those at the front seemed to be leaders and ran from side to side seeming to be greatly exercised over the carelessness of the many that would not keep in line. There was some compelling power that forbade a moment's halt; all had to move forward, whether disorderly or not, or fall out of the ranks altogether. It became such a difficult matter to keep the saints in line that presently I saw a whip hanging over the line as they were marching forward. The whip was small, though very lengthy, and was constructed of peculiar material that I was unable to describe. The whip was handled by some hand above us, but as I gazed up to see from whence it came, I observed it penetrated the misty dense high above us and the hand that held it was lost to view. This "lash" swung vigorously to and fro, and when one or a number of saints broke rank it would dart down like an arrow at their very heels, which sent a thrill to every heart; but there followed a reverential fear that caused the offending ones to seek refuge in the ranks again.

Oftentimes, a dozen, aye, an hundred, would become mixed up in some kind of a muddle; though they did not break the line, but were in great disorder and confusion. When in this condition the "lash" would come down among them, first here and there, in quick succession, seemingly like a chain of lightning. This was kept up vigorously until every one was in perfect line again. Every soul had a reverential fear of this "lash," even every man from the head to the foot of the line. Though the "lash" seemed to labor so vigorously, and was terrible, yet, so mild!

At this juncture I looked before me and there was a heavy, dark cloud that rested upon the ground. We were nearing it. Oh how dark! the eye could not penetrate it. I marveled to see how close we were to it. During our march I had often beheld some object before us, and noticed particularly that it was leading us; but it was obscured and I had to peer into the darkness to see the object at all. (The time was late in the evening.) Presently the "lash" moved to our front and struck this "object" and a flash of light burst forth from it, and I perceived that it was like unto the cloud that went before Moses and the children of Israel. No sooner had it flashed a gleam of light than it was dark again. We took courage and pressed forward, and the closer we got to the dark cloud that rested upon the ground the more frequent would the whip dash into the "object" before us, and more brilliant became the light, until it became one constant light, and growing larger and larger and more brilliant and grand.

Presently we reached the "dark cloud," and the "lash" flashed into it, and the whole thing lit up as bright as the heavens. It was simply a pillar of fire; but so dense that I could not see an object beyond it. The whole multitude was brought to a standstill. I stood with other leading men of the church in six or eight feet of this burning cloud. How grand, but O, how terrible! I felt no heat from it, yet it was like a consuming fire. I felt no perceptible change, yet every soul seemed to almost melt into ashes before it. I wondered if any could abide this trying ordeal. I felt its purifying power, and spoke out, saying: "Fire is a purifier, and this will consume the dross, but who can abide it? I ask, 'Who then can be saved?'" I said further: "This is a personal preparation for the events to come." We stood in amazement, wondering what our destiny would be when once passing through this burning cloud. I asked in my mind, Is it the gathering of the saints, or is it the millennium? which, or either? It was all hidden from my understanding. We all stood waiting for the command to go forward if that was the thing to be.

Now to return to the "eastern line." I was in the "western line," but when getting near the "dark cloud" I was commanded to go to the eastern line, which I did at once, and it was here that I saw all the latter part that I have related. Both lines were going in the same direction, and both met the "dark cloud" the same, and both had the same experiences. I awoke and was so impressed by the vision that I arose and dressed—thanked God and took courage. I ask, What does it mean? That I may not be too burdensome, I close.

Yours in gospel bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 31.

Editors Herald:—I am still on duty in the city. It is now the last of March and the ground is covered with snow. "When will spring come?" is the cry all around. Some two weeks ago the Utah elders held their conference in this city, elders from Chicago and other parts of the country being present. On Sunday, the 19th, Heber J. Grant, one of the apostles, addressed the people of the city in Masonic Temple, defending Elder B. H. Roberts of whom so much has been said since his election to congress.

We felt it our duty to say something in reply and further show the difference between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church. The daily papers kindly advertised us well for the occasion, so on Sunday, the 26th, we went to the hall without gloves. We had a fair crowd in the same hall; eight of the Utah elders being present at two of the services, and but two at the other one. We were blessed in our effort and feel sure good was done. I have challenged the Utah men to debate, but they won't take hold. None of them seemed willing to defend the issues between the churches. When we would introduce the evidences from their own history it was easy to see they were not posted in the dogmas of Brigham's teaching and thought I was only doing what I did to cause persecution.

Two of them called on me, wishing the use of our hall. I told them they could occupy it by paying for heating and lighting, but when I wanted the privilege of replying, they began to squeal and say, "We don't teach polygamy, but believe in it;" and when I began to press the question upon them they did not want the hall, and further said they did not want to get into a rat hole. I told them if they never got into any worse place than that they would come out all right. Finally I told them that if they were afraid I would not reply to them. O, no; that would not do; so I told them I would go out of the city until they got through. But, poor boys, they would not bite at that bait, so we let them go.

Several parties have told me since my reply to Mr. Grant that they were pleased at my exposure of their rottenness. Had we been able to have paid the rent of the hall for a week I should have liked it very much. All who helped pay for the use of the hall for the three sermons I delivered on Sunday say they got their pay. If we were only able to hire a place in the central part of the city we would soon get a large crowd out to hear and investigate our claims. I firmly believe if we had thirty or forty dollars to expend in the way above named we could after that get along much better with the work in the future. We can use the tent in the summer to a good advantage; we are figuring on a vigorous effort for this place during the summer, and I now am of the opinion that if we could bring the tent here earlier in the season it would pay us better in the conversion of souls than the reunions we have held heretofore. Not but what our reunions have been of good to us in the way of spiritual gain to the saints, for they have done much in that way; but I believe we could use the tent to a better advantage by continuing with it all through the summer in this city and St. Paul.

I married Bro. Edwin Bennett and Sr. Florence Serrell, of this city, on the 23d. I expect to go north the coming week. I spent nearly four months in the city and feel that my labor has not been in vain. Although there is a lack of unity amongst some, yet we hope in time to see everything properly adjusted and all rejoicing in the truth. I am well in body and spirit and hope to labor on.

In the faith,

I. N. ROBERTS.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 29.

Editors Herald:—The work in this field is slowly progressing. It has been a very tedious work and slow; but, thanks be to the Lord, there has been some progress made, and the work is beginning to be on a solid basis. I had the pleasure on last Sunday of baptizing seven precious souls into the kingdom of God. Among the number was a preacher, James Metcalf, a comeouter of the Baptist Church, who denounced that sect and united with the Methodist Church, but did not find there what he was seeking, and he denounced all sectarians and was among the Evening Light Sanctified Saints; but he did not find there what he believed to be the truth and separated from them and opened up a mission himself. But upon hearing the gospel as taught by the Reorganized Church, and the manifestations of the Spirit that a greater light had come, he was admonished to walk in the light, and he did not hesitate long before he and his wife demanded baptism. He will make an able defender of the faith. He has a work to do and will be a great help in this city.

During the past year I have baptized sixteen, all heads of families but one. We now have good material here to organize a branch. We are holding cottage meetings in the city. I preach in five different places in the city and out in Jacob's addition, once every month, and have opened the work out in the country in four different places. This city is a Babylon, sure enough; all kinds of deluded spirits here would, if possible, deceive the very elect; but we have a test to try the spirits by, and that is the law of God, bringing the doctrine of Christ and to the law and testimony as the Prophet Isaiah said, looking into the perfect law of liberty and continuing therein, being not forgetful hearers but doers of the work; such men shall be blessed in their deeds. (James 1:25.) Jesus the Christ said: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." (Matthew 7:21.) "And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" (Luke 7:46.) "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." (Matt. 15:9.) All the institutions of men are vain—the systems of uninspired men, who are vain worshippers, and under the influence of this false system of religion which constitutes the Babylon that must fall. Then there is something for the human family to do; not merely to believe, but render obedience to the gospel of Christ, by coming in at the door as Christ came in, by authority in one vested with it, by being baptized with water or born of water and of the Spirit, as Jesus taught. So we have safeguards. The law of God is the only sure foundation, and then the Spirit of God we receive under the law or in harmony with the law. The Spirit operates through the word. Paul said: "And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." So we see that the sword of the Spirit is God's word, to be used as the means of conversion of the soul. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul" (Ps. 19:7), when preached by authority, the minister being under the influence of the Spirit of Christ and those hearing the word and receiving the same are begotten spiritual children: "For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." (1 Cor. 4:15.) And there is a growth until the time of birth, then the children of God are born of water and of the Spirit, and are members of the household of God, and are entitled to the blessings of the government of God or of Christ, the spiritual manifestations and healings, and all the spiritual powers mentioned by the Apostle Paul 1 Corinthians 12. They must be sought for, for the benefit of the children of God. These are the jewels, or part of them, and they must be used with care and wisdom for the glory of God. At our confirmation meeting last Sunday night the Spirit was manifested greatly to the rejoicing of all. The Lord recognized the act and confirmed to others the truthfulness of the work.

My field address is, No. 624 Myrtle Street, Louisville, Kentucky.

LUCAS, Iowa, April 3.

Editors Herald:—About January 1 I went to Butler County, expecting to hold a series of meetings at Antioch, three miles from Clarksville, where I did some preaching two years ago, and I left it with bright prospects for an ingathering; but on my return I was surprised to find that two Utah elders had been there and told my friends that we were the same in faith and practice only differing in leaders. They staid around the neighborhood for months, until the people became disgusted with them and drove them off, and when I got there they said they did not want any more Mormonism, and I failed to get a hearing where I once had a large congregation. I told the people the men lied. I hope sometime to get a hearing there again.

I then went ten miles north, where I found Sr. Farr and Bro. and Sr. Metcalf, who had recently come from Canada. They assisted in securing a new schoolhouse, where I held two weeks of meetings with good interest, and no doubt but some will yet unite with the church; but owing to the extreme cold weather I closed. We had good congregations, with the mercury from 20 to 28 below zero.

I then went to Charter Oak schoolhouse, two miles north of Eddyville, where Bro. George Langdon secured the use of the house. I here held a series of meetings for five weeks with the best and most interested congregations I have ever met since uniting with the church. A goodly number await baptism on my return. Owing to the snow-storm and rise in the river I postponed it until the 20th of April; but Bro. Grant Barnett said he would not wait, and in spite of the storm, on March 30, with his father and brothers (who are not members of any church) waded through the snow and storm and was buried with Christ in baptism.

This is a new opening and our church was unknown to the people, who say they were astonished at the doctrine I preached, and more so when they found it all came from the Bible; and many of them publicly declared they had heard more Bible in three weeks than in all their lives before; and, strange to say, most of them were church members nearly all their lives.

I met much opposition from the different preachers. The Baptist and Christian preachers forbade their members coming to hear me; but Roman tyranny failed, except in a few cases. Bro. Langdon, who is a good musician, furnished an organ, and so interested the young people that we had splendid singing, which greatly added to the interest of the meetings. I will return and hold meetings in more new openings as a result of the meetings just held.

Yours in the conflict,

W. H. KEPHART.

COVE, Ark., April 1.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me at this place in the interest of the church. There has been quite an ingathering here of late; seventeen have been added by baptism; others have given in their names, so I learn. The work is getting along nicely, all things considered; the saints are alive to the work, which speaks highly for them. I hope their zeal will continue, seasoned with wisdom. "Be ye therefore wise servants, and as harmless as doves," should be kept in mind all along the line. This will bring great reward to the servants as well as advance the cause of the Master. One unwise act hinders greatly sometimes, and renders it hard to overcome. We are having a light exposé by Mr. Parker. We are taking notes each night with the expectation of making reply.

It seems that J. D. Erwin has gone out on the mission of faultfinding. This may be right in its time and place. Who can say when that comes?

He stated in Herald of the 26th of March that J. W. Jackson had spent most of the winter repairing his home, which is true, for it was in need. He then states: "I hope he will now push out and preach the gospel, and not fish too much in the little river which runs near his home," leaving the impression that I was fishing for the finny tribe too much. I have not put a hook in water for nine months. Does he want to do me an injustice? J. D. is a fine speaker and I honor him highly for the work's sake; so let us go on and be careful in our writing as well as in our preaching.

Our work is looking up in this State. We greatly need one more missionary in Arkansas, as Bro. J. M. Smith has gone to Mississippi, leaving us minus his help. I hope Bro. Smith will be of great benefit in his new field. The saints compliment him highly where he labored in Arkansas.

Yours for truth,

J. W. JACKSON.

THOMSON, Ill., April 3.

Editors Herald:—We desire to say through the Herald that we would be pleased to correspond with some of the saints at Savannah, Illinois, as we saw by a letter in the Herald that there were saints there and we are unable to learn if they have a place of worship or not, and where; and as we are of the isolated ones, we would like to meet with them as it is our nearest and most convenient place.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

MR. AND MRS. D. N. DANIELSON.

VASSAR, Mich., March 29.

Editors Herald:—The Herald is always a welcome visitor to our home. It has visited us for the past eighteen years. Friday is always the day we look for the Herald; and Autumn Leaves comes laden with good news to cheer our lonesome hearts. My little boy is always the first to get the papers and remove the wrappers, and I am so thankful that he loves to read the church papers and that he was baptized into the church.

We are taught to teach our children the principles of the doctrine and the love of God toward his dear children, and at the age of eight years to have them baptized. Alma always wanted his papa to baptize him; but he was quite young and I thought he did not understand what it was for. I remember one time his papa was baptizing quite a number, and he wanted to be baptized. I said, "No, Alma; you cannot be baptized to-day." So hand in mine he walked along by my side away from the banks of the river, crying as he went. And there and then I promised the Lord the next time he asked to be baptized it should be granted him. So it was not long before he insisted on his papa to baptize him; and what a load was taken from me then, for if he had died during that time and not been baptized I would have felt that I would have to answer for it, and I never could have forgiven myself for the act. Alma is now twelve years of age and is a great comfort to me in my lonely hours. I pray that we will ever prove faithful until the end, and meet with the loved ones gone before.

I have been a member of the church eighteen years, and the Lord has blessed us in a great many ways, temporally and spiritually, and I still feel his guiding hand over me and his watchful care. My heart was made to rejoice one day last week. My neighbors got me up a nice pile of wood and when cut will make about eighteen cords. Wood is very scarce in this part of the country and hard to buy at any price, and I was without money to buy with, and the wood pile was getting smaller every day, and I did not know what I was going to do. But God opened up the way for me to get wood. I had to sit down and weep, I felt so thankful.

One time this winter I had but a few sticks of wood, and had told the Lord about it; so early one morning I saw a man and team coming down the road with a load of wood. I said, "That man is coming here," not knowing who he was at the time. When he drove into the yard he said, "Mrs. DeLong, I thought I would bring you a load of wood." At another time when away working I came home at night and found a nice pile of wood, with which a man had come seven miles. He was not a saint, but it was a good, kind act and I thanked him for it, saying, "The Lord will reward you;" and I praised God from whom all blessings flow.

Although I have been called to pass through many heavy trials, one trial is that when my husband had to be taken away from me by the messenger of death. I am still thankful for the hope I have that reaches beyond this vale of tears. With love to all saints,

Your sister,

LIZZIE DELONG.

FAIRBURY, Neb., March 30.

Editors Herald:—We are still striving to keep the work before the people. Our new church is completed sufficient to hold services in. The attendance ran down to six and seven, owing to unwise and bad conduct of some of the saints.

As we had no money to buy seats we went around and solicited a chair from those who would help us. We now have over fifty chairs; some gave two and three; one man gave seven; some of them needed gluing and fixing. The second-hand man donated the fixing. Some gave nice new chairs; Sr. Voight and I put in the whole day Saturday in soliciting chairs and asking people to church. We enjoyed ourselves immensely in this kind of work. We have to paint many of them.

I never saw a building I felt so proud of; just imagine my joy when I tell you I have worked, prayed, and waited to see this accomplished for ten years; and now I have reason to feel thankful and rejoice. It looks neat.

Owing to diphtheria and scarlet fever raging in town the churches were closed, but that is about all over and the quarantine is lifted. We had preaching services in our church Sunday night for the first time. There were thirty-two in attendance; the weather was so unfavorable that it kept many away. Satan has tried his powers in most every conceivable way to destroy the work here. I think the worst is over; I hope so, but we must be ever watching and on our guard lest we fall and be overcome and be cast out. Ye elders who read this, Who can come this way and give us some preaching? We are now ready to hold meeting whenever it is convenient for you to come. Let us know and we will do the very best we can to get a large audience.

Your sister,

MRS. ELLA MYERS.

BAZINE, Kan., March 24.

Editors Herald:—The work in this part of the Northwestern Kansas district is in a prosperous condition; the members are partaking largely of the spirit of the work and conforming to the object lesson found in the meek and lowly Jesus. Extra efforts are made to meet together with the saints, especially in sacrament meeting, which occurs the first Sunday in every month. Ten miles is thought but a short distance for saints to go to attend meetings. The Spirit of the Master accompanies the work here, not only in dispensing the word, but in uniting the saints together in the bonds of love and unity. I have conducted two sacrament meetings since here, and at the last one (March 5) the spirit of confession was manifested in a way that is calculated to benefit the cause and redound to the honor and glory of God, the members nearly all taking part in the social meetings is very encouraging.

Bro. and Sr. Ebert deserve a word of commendation for persistent efforts in the Sabbath school work. When I was here in 1894 their Sunday school was kept in their dwelling house and consisted of their family; now they are running a large school in their district schoolhouse, with good interest and large attendance, using the saints' Quarterlies. I have not visited a better school since I left Decatur County, Iowa.

The Beeler debate that commenced February 15 and continued nine sessions of two hours each is worthy of notice. There were four propositions: Baptism by immersion essential to salvation; laying on hands; signs and spiritual gifts should follow the people of Christ to-day; living apostles and prophets should be in the Church of Christ to-day; Elder W. H. Mannering, of the Reorganized Church, affirming; Elder C. C. Platt, of the Pilgrim Church, denying. The writer was moderator for Elder Mannering.

Good order was maintained throughout, attendance good, the large schoolhouse being packed nearly every session. Both speakers were commended for the gentlemanly way they conducted themselves. Elder Platt argued that those outward ordinances were pertaining to the Mosaic law but were done away A. D. 64, and quoted Colossians 2: 14-23; 1 Timothy 5: 23; 2 Timothy 4: 20. Every proposition was met by Elder Platt with the same line of argument.

Elder Mannering maintained that baptism, laying on hands, and the officers of apostles and prophets, together with the spiritual gifts, pertained to the gospel economy, and that it could not be complete without them. He supported the first proposition with numerous spiritual texts connected with blackboard illustrations, showing a routine of witnesses testifying of the divine sacredness and essentiality of the ordinance of baptism, fortifying scriptural texts with logical reasoning. The remaining proposition was met with a variety of appropriate texts interspersed with blackboard illustration. The Doctrine of Christ (Heb. 6: 1, 2), was emphasized, showing that the principles of repentance, faith, baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection from the dead, and eternal judgment, were fundamental principles of the gospel, harmoniously connected together, each principle bearing its respective relation to the gospel economy, that dispensing with one of those principles would disjoin the whole system, equivalent to taking the principle of addition from the six fundamental principles of mathematics, which would affect the whole mathematical system.

The perpetuity of the gospel was maintained. It was Bro. Mannering's first experience in that line, and he did extremely well. Light was reflected upon the word, and good was done to the cause.

The traveling missionary finds good help here in the local ministry in the persons of T. E. Thompson, E. H. Ebert, J. W. Sawyer, and N. Lund.

BAYPORT, Mich., March 29.

Editors Herald:—I thought some of the brethren might be wondering where I was, or what I was doing, especially those present at our fall conference, as I said there that I intended to do all I could for the work this winter. For some reason unknown to me, I have been hindered, so I have not been able to do anything, either in the field or in the branch. I thought my intentions were all right; but it is nine weeks now since I took the grippe, and I am not able to be out much yet. My companion has been sick for some time, also two of my family. I do not write this as a complaint, but that the brethren and sisters might know our condition, that all will pray for us, that such blessings as we need, the Lord may be pleased to grant.

I rejoice when I read of the progress of the work; also the articles, "The atonement of Christ, and the final destiny of man;" that on "succession" was grand, also Bro. Hiliard's article on "the gathering." We are trying as much as we can to live to the law of God, but feel our imperfections very much. I would like to leave this part of the country as soon as I can, as I think a change of climate would improve our health. This is a good farming country, but it seems hard to sell land. I have it in my mind now, if I can sell, to go to Missouri, and would like to hear from some of saints in that State.

Hoping and praying for the advancement of the latter-day work, I remain

Your brother,

WM. DOWKER.

CRITICISM.—ANSWER.

In the second epistle general of Peter, the first chapter and twentieth verse of King James' translation of the Bible, we find the following:—

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation.

According to the Holy Scriptures, as translated by Joseph Smith, the above quotation is a mistranslation. In the Inspired Translation it reads thus:—

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is given of any private will of man.

Now I ask, is it right for the ministry when debating church doctrine with those from without the church to quote the above citation in the King James translation, merely to try to make a point in the argument against their opponent, when they themselves in many instances do the very thing they are accusing their opponent of doing? By giving the above quotation, in the King James Bible, our brethren sometimes endeavor to keep the ministers of other churches from putting their "private interpretation" upon the scriptures. Now the word "interpretation" means the act of explaining or unfolding the meaning of, and the word "private" in this sense would mean talking on scripture with one or more; but in a private way—what we call a fireside conversation. As a people we prove by our works that we believe in interpreting the scriptures, or "unfolding" their meaning, whether in public or private. This is not only our privilege, but our duty. However, if we place a wrong interpretation on scripture, either in private or public, we err in so doing. If when traveling to preach the gospel of our salvation we were asked to explain a certain scripture while sitting in the family circle, and we were to reply, We don't explain scripture in private, the people would think us very unwise, which in such case would be the truth. Suppose for instance we were not allowed to interpret scripture or unfold its meaning, and we were asked to explain such as Matthew 8:22:—

But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.

Also Matthew 9:16, 17:—

No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment; for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

Also in John 3:5. If we could not explain or unfold the meaning, and tell the honest inquirer after truth that this last citation means that the Savior meant that one must be baptized by water and receive the Spirit in the Lord's appointed way, by the laying on of hands, we would not be very wise servants. Certainly then the Inspired Translation by Joseph Smith, the latter-day prophet, is correct in the above quotation. The full quotation as given in the Inspired Translation is as follows:—

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is given of any private will of man. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.—2 Pet. 1:20, 21.

The latter part of the quotation shows plainly that the Inspired Translation is correct, as it shows that men uninspired of God did not write or speak scriptural prophecies, or that they were given merely by the mind and will of man; but that they were and are of God. I thank the Lord for the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures, as so much more light is reflected by them than by the King James Bible. There is as much difference in the King James Bible and the Inspired Translation as there is between an old broom and a new one, as was shown to a sister in a dream. With the old broom she by great effort could remove the dirt from the floor, but with the new one it is much easier. "A new broom sweeps clean."

It is hard to meet an infidel with the King James Bible, but his arguments are soon swept away by the Inspired Translation. In thus giving a word of reproof to those who quote the King James Bible, where it is a mistranslation, I do not mean to undervalue the King James, neither do I wish to overrate the work of Joseph Smith in revising the King James version.

When we speak of mistakes in King James' translation we attach no blame to God, neither to those whom he inspired to write it; but if blame is to be attached to any it is to fall on those who permitted the old manuscripts from which the scriptures were taken to become so much worn that some of the words were either torn out or blotted out. Latter Day Saints are not alone, however, in the statement that there are mistakes in the King James Bible. For instance, John Wesley says in his explanatory notes of the New Testament, third American edition, New York, published by Hitt and Thomas Wall for the Methodist connection in the United States, John C. Totten printer, 1812, Mr. Wesley says in his preface paragraph 4:—

In order to assist these (people in general) in such a measure as I am able, I design first to set down the text itself for the most part in the common English translation, which is in general (so far as I can judge) abundantly the best that I have seen; yet I do not say it is incapable of being brought in several places nearer to the original. Neither will I affirm that the (Greek) copies from which the translation was made are always the most correct. And, therefore, I shall take the liberty as occasion may require to make here and there a small alteration.

Also in the preface to the Revised New Testament we have the following:—

We recognized from the first the responsibility of the undertaking; and through our manifold experience of its abounding difficulties we have felt more and more, as we went onward, that such a work can never be accomplished by organized efforts of scholarship and criticism, unless assisted by divine help.

Also the Presbyterian General Assembly adopted the following declaration:—

Resolved that the Bible as we now have it in various translations when freed from all errors and mistakes of translators, copyists, and printers, is the very word of God, and consequently wholly without error. (See Three Bibles Compared, by R. Etzenhouser, p. 18.)

Again:—

At the regular weekly meeting of the Methodist ministers of New York, yesterday, the proposition "that the inaccuracy and infallibility of the Bible are no longer possible of belief among reasonable men" was advanced in a paper read by Rev. S. P. Cadman, pastor of the Metropolitan temple. . . . Mr. Cadman said that the authorship of the greater part of the Old Testament was unknown. The New Testament likewise contained many contradictions. At the conclusion of Mr. Cadman's paper the four hundred ministers present, including Bishop Edward G. Andrews, applauded him.—Kansas City World, March, 1899.

Seeing then that the Methodists, and Presbyterians, and many others say the Bible contains many errors—that is the King James translation,

I wish to ask our Methodist and Presbyterian friends, What are you going to do, seeing you are in a great dilemma as you admit? I kindly ask you, Do you want help; for help is at hand?

A BURIED TALENT.

In a recent Herald the writer of this brief article read a very interesting letter from one of the many active elders of the church, whose talent as a writer, as well as preacher, has not been buried. The editorial comment included a just, though gentle rebuke for those who have neglected writing, fearing they might be regarded as desiring notoriety, which was keenly felt. A resolution was quickly formed that such a motive should no longer hold a humble pen in almost "eternal" silence.

Thirty-two years ago, nearly, the writer, with five others, was led into the waters of baptism by Bro. E. C. Briggs, in a neighborhood where they were the first to "break the ice" for the "latter-day work," and where a branch was then organized with six members; afterwards numbering forty-two, in fulfillment of a prophecy given through Bro. N. W. Smith, who arose immediately after another had spoken of the coincidence in numbers between the organization of this little branch and the church of April 6, 1830, and said, "It shall number six times six and more," and sat down.

Not long after the writer was ordained a priest. Expressing a feeling of timidity in undertaking to preach, he remarked, if he could be permitted to write his sermons, as so many of the ministers of other churches do, he would have no fear. Bro. H. A. Stebbins replied, "If you like to write, why not write for the Herald?" "I will," was the ready reply. An almost wholly broken promise. "A baker's dozen" would most likely number all the letters and articles written for publication in all the church papers during the thirty long years. Shame attends the confession; and, most emphatically so, when remembering the many, many times the Holy Spirit has unmistakably prompted to write on a subject given also by the impression. No complaint can be offered that the few letters or articles sent have been rejected by the editors, since only in a single instance was any part of any communication withheld, and this instance caused no ill feeling, as the poetic portion not appearing was inferior to the prose portion of the same article. Why then the talent buried? For no other reason than that for which the gentle censure was given. 'Tis late now to set out to reprove the past. It cannot be done. No amount of exercise can now make it what it "might have been."

Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these, It might have been.

So far as "preaching the word" is concerned, no compunctions of conscience are felt for not having improved every opportunity; but the deep regret which follows such unpardonable neglect of pen, words cannot express. The stranger too, when writing has always been a pleasure. Whole days, day after day, have been spent at the desk, but not for print. Shame! Should one who deigns to read this humble article be led by it to wield his pen for general good, the object will have been reached.

O. B. THOMAS.

PROPHECY, AND THE LATTER DAY SAINTS.

They that have been scattered shall be gathered. . . . Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion. And all these things, that the prophets might be fulfilled.—D. C. 98: 4.

In 1844 the church was supposed to number over two hundred thousand members. Shortly after the death of Joseph Smith they were scattered all over the face of the earth; something like thirty thousand following Brigham Young to Utah. Many of the others united in bodies under the leadership of aspiring men who claimed to be Joseph's successors. But thousands of others became discouraged, disappointed, heartsick, and disgusted. They saw errors and wickedness creeping into the church; they saw the sanctuary being defiled; they beheld men who were supposed to be ministers of Jesus Christ becoming heady and overbearing, on account of the extra importance they placed upon their positions; they saw the law to the church and the Book of Mormon disregarded; and they saw disgrace and shame coming upon the fair name of the church.

Thousands of good honest souls who had become convinced of the truth of the gospel as preached by the Latter Day Saints, had left home and friends and forsaken all, for what they believed was the cause of Christ. But now beholding all these things, in their sad and dejected condition, they lost faith—as did the saints and apostles at the crucifixion of Christ. Many of these lost all confidence in religion, many tried to find satisfaction in spiritualism, and many became infidels. They hid themselves in all the towns and cities. Many also of those who followed to Utah soon saw the abominations practiced there, and became thoroughly disgusted. And when the sins which had long been practiced in secret began to be proclaimed openly, these virtuous and honorable souls became ashamed even to have it known that they ever had been Latter Day Saints. They tried to get as far away as possible from civilization, and to-day many of them are scattered all over the Pacific coast, in the cities and on farms and ranches, away up in the mountains, where they silently nourish their disappointment, and wish that they could know that the latter-day work was all a fraud. But a portion of the light which God gave them, in evidence of the truth, is still with them, to be fanned into a flame in God's own time.

Some doubtfully ask, "Is it possible, that a work that made such wonderful progress in fourteen years, and had such a marvelous display of God's power, could be a deception? If it was the work of God, why was it so broken up? Why was the prophet slain? Why did such spiritual darkness come over the people? and the church become disgraced." "All these things that the prophets might be fulfilled." "Those that are scattered shall be gathered."

All the trouble that came upon the church had been foretold! Our heavenly Father had foreseen it all, and had revealed it for our benefit and instruction. We, now, with the history of the past before us, can see by reading the scriptures and revelations to the church, that all this was necessary "that the prophets might be fulfilled."

All the scattered ones who remain "shall return," and build up Zion. It was known that the prophet would be slain and the church scattered. False apostles and prophets were to develop and be known. Wicked leaders were to cause the people to err, and because iniquity should abound, the love of many should wax cold.

Paul speaks very pointedly concerning one event fulfilled by a portion of the church:—

Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron.—1 Tim. 4: 1, 2.

Paul here gives us to understand that he had a special revelation, telling of the evils coming on the church in the "latter times," and that some should depart from the faith. This could not be until after the restoration of the gospel in 1830, as all Latter Day Saints are aware that the faith was not on the earth from early days until then. These who were to so depart were to "give heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." Shall we mention polygamy, blood atonement, Adam-god theory, etc., as doctrines of devils? These same individuals were to speak "lies in hypocrisy," and we are willing here to assert, that there never was a doctrine introduced, concerning which there has been more lying than there has about polygamy. It was born and bred in lies; it was introduced in lies, and has been lied about ever since; and those who gave heed to these have truly had their conscience seared, and in many instances, they have killed their conscience.

This prophecy certainly applied to the people of Utah, and the latter-day apostasy had to come in.

Peter speaking of the same people says they "privily shall bring in damnable heresies. . . . And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of."—2 Peter 2: 1, 2.

Elders of the Reorganized Church can testify that everywhere they go they are compelled to meet the shame and disgrace brought upon the church by the evil doers of Utah. And "the way of truth" is evil spoken of, on account of their transgressions. Peter, still speaking of them in verse 15, says they "have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray." Also, "it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them" (verse 21).

All this the Utah Mormons have fulfilled. And it is also proof that they once were in "the way of truth," and "the way of righteousness;" but have departed from it.

One of the most wonderful prophecies that had to be fulfilled by the Mormons was recorded by Jeremiah, two thousand five hundred years ago. He says:—

Thus saith the Lord; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord. For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited.—Jer. 17: 5, 6.

The church was rejected in 1844, and dire distress came upon the members; they met persecution of all kinds from their enemies, so much so that the leaders at Nauvoo concluded that they could no longer remain within the bounds of the United States, and they determined to go beyond her jurisdiction, where possibly they might live in peace. They began the exodus from Nauvoo in 1846; but before they evacuated the city, an armed mob came upon them and drove them out. They crossed the Mississippi, marched through Iowa, crossed the Missouri about six miles above Omaha, and on to the West, away out of the land of Zion. The Lord having said "the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and sent away." This prophecy they fulfilled! But what was their objective point? Where were they going? To California! then a possession of Mexico. One of their hymns reads:—

In upper California,
Oh that's the land for me.

Sam Brannan had been sent to California from New York, in the ship Brooklyn, with a company of saints. They sailed into the bay of San Francisco, and up the Sacramento River, where they began to build a city, and commenced to publish a paper—they having brought a printing press with them. Mr. Brannan then left the party and started overland to meet the body of the church wending their way westward. He met them on Green River, and reported what he had done in California. News soon reached them that the Mexican war was ended and California had been ceded to the United States, so their plans were frustrated, and circumstances compelled them to locate in the Salt Lake Valley, a barren, bleak place, where no white man lived, and where it was considered impossible for any crops to be raised. Where was this? "In the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited." Where Jeremiah said they should go. They had "put their trust in man." Had failed to accept of him whom God had appointed to be the successor in the prophetic office, and leader of the church; but had accepted man's advice and counsel, and had followed under the leadership of aspiring men, contrary to God's revelations, and as a consequence of this, and turning their hearts from God, they were now sent to this salt land—"that the prophets might be fulfilled."

Is it possible, some may ask, that the apostasy came in, and the great progress of the work was stopped, in order to fulfill the prophecies? Yes! God had foreseen what would occur, and had inspired his prophets to foretell it, and their prophecies had to be fulfilled. Brigham Young was permitted to become the leader of a portion of the people, to lead them into sin, into apostasy, and into the salt land.

Joel makes another peculiar prediction, which has also been fulfilled in our day. He says, speaking of the last days:—

It shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.—Joel 2: 32.

In verse 23 he predicts the return of the former and latter rain to Palestine. This was fulfilled in the year 1852, after there had been no rain for about eighteen hundred years. Then he passes on to verse 28, where he says, "And it shall come to pass afterward." That is after the return of the rain and the fertility of Palestine; after this there shall be safety "in the remnant whom the Lord shall call."

When those who followed Brigham Young and others from Nauvoo, got to Winter Quarters, they found that none of the direct family of Joseph Smith was with them. They never went away with them, neither did thousands of others; among whom were high priests, seventies, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. These who remained behind, and remained true to the gospel covenant, never lost the authority that had been given them of God. They became spiritually dazed for a time, by the calamity and troubles that came upon the church, and in their blinded condition they were afterwards found as described in the beginning of this article.

About 1852 the Lord began to feel after these loyal ones, and they began to meet together in prayer, a very few in number, in different localities, and little by little they began to add to their numbers others whom they found were true to the original faith. Soon they began to hold regular prayer meetings, and God heard their prayers and spoke to them by revelation. He gave them instruction how to form a temporary organization, who should preside, etc., until the rightful successor should take his place. These little groups of saints finally merged into one—called together by the Spirit of God. They had remained faithful. They were the remnant whom Joel says “the Lord shall call.” He did call them, and led them, and they eventually grew into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, with Joseph Smith as their God appointed president and prophet. Joel’s predictions were fulfilled; but had there been no latter-day apostasy, there would have been no remnant. All this was to be.

Micah takes up the strain, saying:—

In the last days it shall come to pass, . . . saith the Lord, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out; . . . and I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.—Micah 4: 1, 6, 7.

The Lord here says he will “assemble her that halted.” What does assemble mean? “Bring together; . . . collect into one place or body; . . . bring or call together.”—Webster. But who was it he was to bring together? “Her that halted”! What does halt mean? “To stand in doubt whether to proceed, or what to do; . . . to hesitate.”

The Lord here positively declares that in the last days he will bring together, into one place or body, those who stood in doubt as to proceeding, or what to do, and then he adds, “I will make of her that halted a remnant.” Three of these who did not know what to do, he is to make the remnant; and in the remnant “shall be safety,” says Joel. No other people has filled this prophecy but the remnant, which grew into the Reorganized Church. When the church was scattered, some of those who did not follow Brigham Young, “stood in doubt;” they knew not “what to do;” but eventually God called them—the remnant.

He also says, “I will gather her that is driven out.” To gather, is “to pick out and bring together from among what is of less value.” So God is to pick out the best of those that were “driven out,” and were “cast far off;” and is to reign over them. Where? In Mount Zion, forever after. He also said through Joseph Smith: “They that remain and are pure in heart shall return . . . to build up the waste places of Zion.” He is going to cull out the pure in heart! He also says he will then reign over “them”—those that halted, and those who were driven out—in Zion.

The Reorganized Church has fulfilled this prophecy, as pertaining to the remnant. The Mormons of Utah are the fulfillers of the rest.

Zephaniah also saw the work of God in the last days, and tells of his plans with the Jews and with the saints. He says:—

In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not: and to Zion, Let not thine hands be slack. The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing. I will gather them that are sorrowful for the solemn assembly, who are of thee, to whom the reproach of it was a burden. Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee: and I will save her that halteth, and gather her that was driven out; and I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame.—Zephaniah 3: 16-19.

The Lord here says he will gather for the solemn assembly, the sorrowful ones, who are of Zion. To whom the reproach of it—that is, being of Zion—was a burden, and he will get them praise and fame, everywhere, that they had been put to shame. Hear, O ye scattered saints, ye who have long cherished your faith, and tried to nourish your blasted hopes. The Lord is feeling after you, anxious to gather you into his solemn assembly, formed by the remnant that halted; which God here says he will save, with the pure in heart, culled from those that were “driven out” of Zion. Has it not been a reproach, all these years, when it was known that we were Latter Day Saints, or the children of Zion? and still worse, when we were called by the nickname—Mormon. So much shame and disgrace has been heaped upon that name, that we now absolutely refuse to be called by it, preferring to let it apply to the ones who disgraced it, now located in the salt land.

The reader will see that this prophecy also had to have its fulfillment. The very name had to become a reproach, and the reproach was to become a burden to those “who are of thee”—Zion. And after it had become a reproach and burden, the saving and gathering was to be accomplished, and with this comes the praise and fame which God promises “in every land where they have been put to shame.” All this is being fulfilled to-day. The reproach is being removed.

The world is learning the difference between the Mormons of Utah and the Reorganized Church. They are learning that the abominations taught and practiced there were no part of the original faith, and are not in any way countenanced by us.

The saints are learning that Brigham Young was not called of God to be the president of the church, but that Joseph Smith, son of the martyred prophet was. They are learning that Utah never was appointed of God as a place for building temples to him—nor for the works connected therewith, and that all their labors and efforts there are useless, and must all be done over again, under the supervision of the remnant which God has called and chosen, and commanded to build up Zion. And who now, in harmony with his commands, are gathering into the regions round about Zion, and with his help making the name of Latter Day Saint honorable, even in the very towns, cities, and States from which the saints were once expelled.

Now as we look over the history of the church, in the past, and see the prophecies concerning her, which have been fulfilled, our faith grows stronger, and we know that all is going, concerning it, as God knew it would go, and we are reminded of the words of our Savior, "he that endureth to the end shall be saved."

Brothers and sisters, let us renew our efforts, and do all we can for the cause, for now is the time when God says "to Zion, Let not your hands be slack." Let us work with a will.

Conference Minutes.

SHEFFIELD.

Conference of above district convened at Sheffield, England, January 14 and 15; J. Austin presiding, J. Roberts clerk. Officers present: 6 elders, 4 priests, 1 deacon; including Elders W. Armstrong and H. Greenwood of Manchester. The following resolutions were passed: Moved that in future all members of this district in good standing have voice and vote in said conference, and become members of the same. Letters of elders' court were read in case of Elder J. Naylor of Clay Cross; the decision was that his license be taken from him, and he be silenced until this January conference to make restitution. He not having conformed to the same, we therefore refer him to his branch president to be dealt with as seems wisdom. Resolved, that the European mission conference has no jurisdiction over the Sheffield district. Moved that we sustain all the church authorities and missionaries by our faith, prayers, and means. Sunday services: Morning prayer meeting in charge of C. Cousins. Preaching in the forenoon by H. Greenwood, J. Austin in charge. Afternoon, Sunday school session, when a very able subject was given on the flood, by W. Armstrong, which was very instructive and beneficial. Evening preaching by H. Greenwood and W. Armstrong. After the evening service, two ordinations were attended to: G. H. Holmes of Clay Cross, to the office of priest; and Deacon J. Roberts of Sheffield branch, to the office of elder. This was one of the most enjoyable and profitable times ever spent in Sheffield district. Adjourned to call of president, as to time and place.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.

Conference convened at Inman, February 25; Levi Gamet in the chair, W. M. Rumel secretary. Elders present and reporting: James Caffall, W. W. Whiting, D. M. Rudd, L. Gamet, J. H. Jackson, J. B. Williams, W. M. Rumel; by letter: C. W. Prettyman, R. Oehring, J. W. Smith. Priests: C. N.

Hutchins, E. Downey; Teacher M. Petersen. Branch reports: Clearwater 116, Meadow Grove 53, Shelton 77, Round Park 30. Bishop's agent reported: On hand and received $323.18; paid out $257.78; balance due church $65.40. The district officers were all sustained. The following on the Roberts case was adopted: Whereas, B. H. Roberts is, we believe, an avowed polygamist; and whereas, polygamy is condemned by the Constitutional laws of the United States; and whereas, the practice of the abomination is degrading to society and hateful to the Almighty; and whereas, the seating of the said Roberts as a member of Congress would foster the evils practiced in Utah; therefore, resolved, that we in conference assembled do hereby enter our protest against Brigham H. Roberts being permitted a seat in the Congress of the United States. It was ordered that a copy of the same be furnished the leading papers in the district for publication. Preaching by Elders James Caffall, W. M. Rumel, and D. M. Rudd. The weather was very cold and stormy, but a good and peaceful time was enjoyed. Adjourned to meet in Clearwater sometime in August, date to be fixed by the president.

Kinyon, assisted by the Congregational minister. She leaves a husband and three children. SHALL THE BIBLE BE EDITED?

Rev. S. P. Cadman, of New York City, appeared before the regular weekly meeting of the Methodist ministers of New York City recently, and read a paper in which he said that the Bible could not be accepted as the sole rule of faith any longer; that "the people can find truth only at the fountain head of the Bible, Christ;" and that the Bible should be edited. Remarkable as were the paper and the suggestions made by Dr. Cadman, the manner in which its delivery was received was none the less so, for the four hundred prominent New York Methodist ministers present, including Bishop Edward G. Andrews himself, actually applauded the man who took such a bold stand. The Bible stories that he would edit or entirely eliminate from the Bible are the following:—

That the earth was created in six days.

That Methuselah died at the age of 969 years.

That a whale swallowed Jonah, in whose belly he lay for three days.

That the Red Sea was divided in order to permit the passage of the Children of Israel out of Egypt.

That a snake tempted Eve in the garden of Eden.

That Joshua commanded the sun to stand still and that it obeyed him.

The tower of Babel narrative.

The turning of Lot's wife into a pillar of salt.

The story of Noah, the flood, and the ark.

That God spoke to Moses out of a burning bush.

That Aaron turned his rod into a serpent.

That Moses tapped a rock and that water gushed forth.

That Moses drew forth his hand and that it was "leprous, white as snow."

That Elijah was translated to heaven in a chariot of fire.

That Elisha threw the mantle of Elijah across the Jordan, causing it to dry up and allow him passage.

That the earth opened and swallowed Achan and his companions.

That Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego walked in a fiery furnace unharmed.

That Daniel stayed unhurt in the lions' den.

The speaker referred chiefly to the Old Testament, half of whose pages, he said, were unknown authorship. The New Testament likewise contained contradictions. The Bible, the church, the ministry, he said, were agencies, the true source of inspiration was neither a book nor a church nor a ministry, but the living Christ himself.

The Bible, he said, was compiled much as is any other book. It was written from the record and witnesses of the time. It had been impossible to determine the authorship of much of the Old Testament. Half of its pages, said Mr. Cadman, were of unknown authorship. The same was, in a measure, true of the New Testament. Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John differed in quoting words said to have been pronounced by Christ on a given occasion. Parallel passages were not alike.

The speaker said that the trend of thought in the Methodist Church during the last fifty years had been toward a better knowledge and a newer view of Christ himself rather than of the Bible. He said that there had been a vast increase in the number of the "Lives of Christ" in the last decade; that the energy and force of Christ as the incarnation of God was becoming better understood every day. He regarded as inevitable a re-statement and a rejudgment of the church on the infallibility and inerrancy of the Bible.

Science's contribution to the knowledge on mankind was hand in hand with a belief in God. By this statement he did not mean to agree with those philosophers who had used the word God as a peg on which to hang their vagaries, but nevertheless he believed in the demonstration of God in the seas, in the mountains, in the various forms of life on this planet.

There were the means of salvation outside of and beyond and before the Bible. God has saved souls before the Bible was written. That must be conceded by everyone.

"When we come to know God it is no longer necessary to know him through any book," said he, "but the book then will become all the more precious for having been the means of knowing God."—Monroe County, Iowa, News, March 24.

THE POPE'S FAILING HEALTH.

The Pope's failing health remains the chief topic of discussion in nearly every European capital. His closest advisers have been quoted as saying that he can hardly be expected to live more than three months at the longest. . . . One day the German Emperor is described as pulling the wires for the selection of his favorite, and the next morning a secret cabal in the Sacred College is represented as making advances to Cardinal Vaughn and endeavoring to induce him to stand as a candidate with a view to promoting the fusion of the Anglican and Roman churches. Then there will be a counter movement in the interest of a reactionary Italian candidate, and this will be followed by a canvass in favor of an American Cardinal, with Satolli as a compromise choice, agreeable to all factions.

All these surmises are imaginative, but the effect of so much journalistic enterprise is to induce caution and self-restraint in Vatican circles, and to encourage credulous acceptance of every rumor of improvement in the Pope's condition.

Little discernment is required for a true forecast of the nationality of the Pope. No foreign Pope can reaffirm the claims of temporal powers as forcibly as an Italian Pontiff.

These claims, moreover, must be proclaimed anew and instantly emphasized; for otherwise the Pope would become the chaplain of the King of Italy, and would lose much of his political prestige and influence in Europe.

The logic of the situation is an Italian Pope and an indefinite continuance of the struggle between church and state. The sacred college, in any event, is not controlled by a secret caucus. It does its work when the time comes for decisive action and not before.—London Cor. Chicago Tribune of April 9, 1899.

ENGLISH CHURCH ISSUE.

DEBATE IN PARLIAMENT ON NEW UNION.

London, April 11.—The church question is likely to become more and more prominent from now on in British politics, as the extreme party under the leadership of Lord Halifax has formed a church union.

This union issued recently a memorial inciting the clergy to disobey the rulings of the Bishops and the judicial committee dealing with church matters.

To-day Sydney Gedge in Parliament moved a resolution condemning lawlessness existing in the church and calling upon the Prime Minister to refuse preferment to any member of the church union.

The debate was interesting as showing a strong feeling in the House against the existence of a political party in the church, which already leans towards Rome, while it is actually breaking the law in matters of ritual, especially regarding the confessional.

Although Parliament is anxious to show its disapproval of Lord Halifax and his church union, there is evident reluctance to interfere in so delicate a matter.

Arthur Balfour made the most important speech of the session, requesting Mr. Gedge to withdraw the resolution because it was aimed against only one sect and not against lawlessness in the church in general; and, secondly, because no resolution of the House could be effectual to prevent illegal practices.

While opposing the propriety of the resolution, the leader of the House of Commons emphatically denounced Lord Halifax and his followers for embroiling the church in factional strife at a moment when the actual existence of the church was threatened.

He called upon all moderate-minded men to leave these unfortunate quarrels and defend the English Church.

He went on to say that in his opinion the English Church, like the Scotch Established Church, should enjoy greater autonomy than it does at present, since it is evident the Judiciary committee of the Privy Council is not capable of deciding the spiritual matters in controversy.

Mr. Balfour's speech was delivered with great earnestness, and produced a deep impression, because it recognized the great feeling which is growing up in England against the Established Church and against religion in general, and he endeavored to counteract this growth; and, secondly, because for a man like Balfour, who is almost a freethinker, to advocate the idea of giving greater autonomy to the church in dealing with its own affairs was, to say the least, surprising.

The resolution was fortunately not carried, since its effect would have been rather to strengthen the church union by seeming to persecute it.

Nevertheless, as an expression of opinion it showed that something like a crisis in church history is imminent, and although Parliament is loath to interfere in spiritual matters yet it dislikes intensely the tendency shown in the church to go back to the Roman ritual.—Chicago Tribune, April 12, 1899.

WHO IS THE CHURCH?

We frequently hear the expression, "The church believes thus and so," or, "The church teaches thus and so;" and it has occurred to us that some confusion of ideas has resulted from a too free application of the term; and that if there was a more commonly uniform understanding as to what, or who the church may be, it would relieve the situation.

When a man representing himself to be a minister of the church states in regard to the views or theories propounded by him before the public, that the church holds to this or that, there ought to be some way of knowing who are referred to as the church.

We are sometimes asked, What does the church hold in regard to a named subject? Unless there has been a consensus of opinion and belief of the elders obtained either by public statement and agreement, or by a series of inquiry and reply, the views held by the several elders are obtained and the preponderance taken as the belief of the church, how shall it be discovered?

On all the fundamental features of the faith of the church there is a unanimity of opinion and belief, and all those positions assumed are the result of long continued expression and agreement upon the word of God, contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the revelations in Doctrine and Covenants. These have been epitomized from time to time, beginning with the one made and published over the signature of Joseph Smith, Jr., in 1842. This, with the additions made necessary by events occurring in the history of the church forms today the belief of the church, so far as a formula is warranted.

It has been held that Methodism was the faith of the Methodist Church as presented by Bishops Wesley and Watson; and of course Catholicism is the faith of the Catholic Church as affirmed by the Pope; the faith of the Disciple or Christian Church as enunciated by Alexander Campbell and his associates at the institution of the church, etc. But we need not carry this further, only to inquire, is the proposition correct as applied to the Latter Day Saints? That is, Is the faith of that church those forms of belief and practice set forth by Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, Sidney Rigdon, and Oliver Cowdery, at the institution of the church in 1830 and during the period of time elapsing between that date and June 27, 1844, when the connection of the first two named with the church was severed by death, and that of the two others by disruption and division?

The exposition of the faith by these men and their able and spiritual associates was so thorough and full, that when the men themselves were removed from their labors there was no cause for misunderstanding the positions taken by the church under their teaching and rule.

While as a church no lawgiver other than Jesus Christ is acknowledged, it is necessary that for a safe continuous prosecution of the work begun in 1830, there should be a well understood and universally known and acknowledged adherence to the doctrines pronounced by those accepted exponents based upon the word of God, and an acquiescence in the idea that those who most certainly represent and hold those positions constitute what is meant by the term, The church believes and teaches it.

IOWA STATE FAIR.

The Iowa State Fair for 1899 will open at Des Moines, the capital city of the State, August 25, and hold to September 2. We have received from the secretary a premium list and a descriptive letter which we insert for the benefit of those of our readers who may feel inclined to visit the fair, or become exhibitors in it. (See Miscellaneous Department.)

PERSONAL LETTERS IN HERALD.

A brother writes us under a late date rather protesting against letters of a certain personal cast being put into the HERALD. He names two, one recommending certain Missouri lands, and other items connected therewith, and the other a recommendation of "Jaredite corn." He suggests that he hopes that the one or ones offering this "Jaredite corn" will faithfully fill all applications for said corn sent by mail; but states in connection with it, that last year the corn was tried in Northwestern Iowa, by some, who were not pleased with it, upon the ground that it did not do well in this northern climate.

We know nothing about the characteristics of the so-called "Jaredite corn," as a grower and a producer. The small amount left at the office by Bro. Bowen, looked like ordinary corn, something like a two-eared variety that used to be grown in Illinois some fifty years ago, with which we were quite familiar; except that this "Jaredite corn" seemed to be somewhat golden in color rather than red or yellow, and appeared to be a softer corn, as if grown further south than this latitude. If this corn was really "Jaredite," (of which we say nothing,) and its habitat was much farther south than this latitude, and it indigenous to regions where the soil and climate were different to those of Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, and other northern States, the very natural result of removing it and planting it in localities farther north would be a decrease in productiveness and a depreciation in quality. Corn brought from localities north to those south, within certain limits, increases in size of kernel and ear, and grows softer in quality, grows ranker in stalk and leaf, and matures later than in its northern habitat. Corn brought from the south to the north changes in like manner, grows smaller in stalk and ear, and hardens and matures earlier than south. If the distance between where the seed is grown to where it is planted is great, in either instance, north or south, the result is failure. No one ought to expect any departure from this general rule, even if it should be that this so-called "Jaredite corn" was really descendant from stock grown among the Jaredites long ago, which is, to say the least, problematical. It is a variety of corn to be tested; just like a few years ago in the region of Lamoni when an apparent failure in the corn crop to ripen and keep over the winter, caused fears in regard to the growing quality of the corn saved over; in which emergency corn for seed was shipped in from Kansas, sunny Kansas; the result of which was that the Kansas corn in Iowa soil and climate and under Iowa farm management and method of culture, failed to give satisfaction as a crop grower.

We supposed all these things would be taken into account by the HERALD readers, before sending to anybody for corn because it was "Jaredite." Nor did we for a moment suppose that the publishing of a brother's letter in regard to the corn, and his offer to furnish unlimited quantities of it to those who chose to apply, would be taken as an indorsement of either the brother or the corn, or as a voucher that because the corn was "Jaredite," it would therefore be a safe crop to plant in any climate and any soil, and be a profitable crop venture for any and everybody. "Try the spirits," of what manner they are of, is as true of corn, oats, potatoes, or any other plant or crop product, as it is of spirits as a principle.

The brother suggests, also, that there ought to be somebody, or somewhere, where letters for the HERALD of the kind cited, might be referred before publication, and thus avoid any possible loss, or trouble to the saints, either wise, or otherwise.

Of this we have to say, It might be possible, perhaps; but we may be pardoned the suggestion that if the person, persons, or committee or board was to be appointed by the church independently of the Board of Publication, it would make all such letters the authoritative utterances of the church itself rather than its members as responsible entities of the whole, and would establish a censorship by church domination. If appointed by the Board, would it be any better than it is now, the editors being responsible for the exercise of their duties to the Board, and the Board to the church, and every man whose letter is published responsible for what he writes and is published over his signature?

There may be a possibility that the saints who believe in the Book of Mormon may be so enthused by their belief as to be led to think that anything which might come to their attention as having come down to us from that people would be of great value, and they displeased and disgusted, if it should turn out differently. But we are of the opinion that in the case of this "corn" of supposed "Jaredite" origin, those of the saints who may send for it will not go wild over it, nor waste much time or money on it; until they have given it a trial in a small way.

In regard to lands in Missouri, or elsewhere, no matter by whom advertised, or whether in the church papers in private letters, or in paid advertisements, or in the secular and local newspapers. We have over and over again advised the saints in the HERALD, their own journal, not to buy lands upon which they proposed or designed to make homes, either in Missouri, the "regions round about," or anywhere else, unless they shall see and judge of the lands, their location, price, etc., for themselves. We renew this advice.

We advise further, that if any member of the church disregards the advice given above, and buys or trades for lands he has not seen, and finds that the lands are not up to his expectations, he will be manly and honorable enough not to blame the church or its officers for his error, but bear his supposed or real disappointment and loss as the result of his own action.

We advise further that if any one, two, or more members of the church in any branch or branches near to each other shall desire to combine and purchase lands in any locality in "the regions round about," for their own settlement, or to settle other worthy members on, in aid of those members, they will ascertain clearly the amount each member to the effort will have to put into the enterprise; select from their own number the "wise" man or men, whom they wish to represent them and act for them in purchasing and settling those lands, so that "all things" may "be done decently and in order." If it is desired that the Bishopric shall assist in the movement, let them be notified of and consulted about what is going on.

By taking into consideration what we have written above we think that those who may be anxiously desirous to help and hasten the building up of the localities where the pure in heart shall dwell, without taking part in any general movement by the church, may proceed safely and with a fair assurance of success in doing themselves and others good.

The details of each effort must necessarily be determined by surrounding conditions and according to the wisdom, energy, and perseverance of those engaging in them respectively.

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

This new work, lately published in the SAINTS' HERALD, and now issued in pamphlet form, is one of the most important and timely contributions to our tract literature ever issued by the church. It treats upon the leading or central feature of the gospel economy—the mission of the Christ. It brings out and develops the Christocentric theory and doctrine, revealing Jesus Christ as the center and circumference of human life and destiny.

The work is from the pen of Elder Isaac M. Smith, of the general ministry, a close Bible student and able minister of the word. It was written for the special purpose of reaching those unacquainted with the principles of the gospel, as taught by Jesus Christ and his apostles and restored in the great latter-day work.

The pamphlet is divided into seven chapters, which indicate its contents, as follows: 1. The Mission of Christ—its Object, Duration, and Final Results. 2. The possibility of repentance in the world to come, is it reasonable, is it Scriptural? 3. The work of Christ in Hades. 4. The unpardonable sin—The sin against the Holy Ghost. 5. The different glories—every one to receive according to his works. 6. The object of future punishment—for the good of the individual. 7. "Forever," "everlasting," and "eternal," as applied to future punishment.

This tract makes clear the central position of Christ in the history of the world, as Creator, Redeemer, and final universal Ruler; the Alpha and Omega, the "Desire of All Nations." The completeness of the atonement is set forth and demonstrated, that "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," "every man in his own order;" that Jesus Christ, not Satan, gains the victory; that Christ was "made manifest to destroy" "the works of the Devil," "sin and death," to bring "life and immortality;" and to whom "every knee shall bow and every tongue" "confess;" that he saves "all the works of his hands."

The magnitude and completeness of the character and mission of the Christ are presented from a Bible standpoint, in contrast to the erroneous conceptions of creeds formulated by men.

No candid reader will fail to find in this tract that which will lead to a fuller investigation of the faith of the church.

By mail, single copies 5 cents; 50 cents per dozen.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. C. W. Hawkins, San Jose, California, April 4:—

We are sick and afflicted, and poverty stricken, and don't know when we can pay for the paper; but we want it to read, and will pay for it when we get able. I am doing what local work I can while I toil for bread. May God speed the day when Zion shall be redeemed, and the Lord's poor have a chance to live. Still in the faith and battling for truth.

Bro. Jacob Petre, of Angola, Indiana, now in Alaska, wrote to Bishop Kelley a statement of conditions and prospects in the Copper River country, much advertised by interested parties, which we give herewith for the information of any who wish to know the facts as they appear to one on the ground. Bro. Petre's letter is dated Port Valdees, Alaska, November 26, 1898:—

I am in good health and hope the saints are well and prospering. Of the Copper River Country, I can say that no gold has yet been found in paying quantities, although there are many creeks located here and filed, and false reports sent out, how men are finding nuggets on Quartz Creek as large as pheasant's eggs; while the facts are there have been nothing but colors found and some scale gold about as big as one's little finger nail, but not so thick; and there are good miners here who think those large scales come from Forty Mile Creek, and for this reason bedrock in one place crops out in the bed of the creek, and by scraping the bedrock in the best places could only get fifty cents to the pan; so nuggets are few like small hen eggs, especially on Quartz Creek; and in the whole Copper River country so far nothing has been found. To show how deceiving some men are, on the Tazalena River they got good colors, so they put in sluice boxes and kept sluicing until they ran up the creek far enough to get down five feet deep and then take a pan of the best dirt and sand colors, send it to Chicago, and that is what we find in digging five feet from the surface of the ground; making people believe they got it by sinking a shaft, instead of by sluicing a half acre of ground. There are clippings from newspapers constantly sent in, felling how rich we are striking it on Copper River, when we are striking nothing; therefore I think it best to fully warn the saints in regard to these flattering newspaper reports published for the transportation company and the Klondike merchandise traders. No man should come to Alaska to seek gold unless he can stay three years, for he cannot get into the country in less than one year, and it is a slow job prospecting; for it is the swankest country I ever saw; and still it is a very dry climate—it is watered by glaciers.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly, Lydia, Texas, April 7:—

The gospel is slowly progressing here. I had the pleasure of inducting two precious souls into the kingdom of God near Detroit, Texas; Bro. Peter Godsby and wife, of good antecedents, who I believe will honor the cause. Others near there will obey in the near future. I also visited the battle ground near Clarksville, where Mr. Chism and I held our debate, and I received a very kind reception; the house was full to overflowing. Will return there next week. I think some will be baptized; indeed, some have so expressed themselves. Bro. John W. Kent has also baptized some in Bowie County. He is from Colorado, laboring at his own charges. The outlook is fair for quite an ingathering this year. I am feeling moderately well in body, also spiritually.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. M. D. Lewis, Hiteman, Iowa, writes that elders would be welcomed at the home of Bro. and Sr. Joseph Wilkinson, at Eddyville, Iowa, formerly of Pekay and Albia, this State.

Bro. A. McKenzie, of Michigan, writes from Five Lakes, that State, that continued success had attended his efforts in Saginaw County, where he had been laboring for five weeks. Opposing ministers had sought to destroy his work, but the people accepted him and the doctrine as sent of God. He was preaching every night, visiting among and talking with the people night and day. The opposition was creating a sentiment in his favor.

A report from the Manchester, England, District Burial Society comes to us—delayed in some manner, from which we learn that the society was established in 1880; that thirty-five funeral claims have been met, at a total cost of £122.; that the present membership is one hundred and sixty-nine; and that the total assets are, £160. 2s. 0½d.; Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., President; Bro. John Foden, Secretary. This is one instance of the advantage of coöperation in unity of spirit. The saints of this organization have done well in their effort.

Bro. F. T. Dobie, Galland's Grove, Iowa, writes again of his general experiences. They are in substance like that of many others; when diligent in duty God has blessed, when neglectful he has suffered because of unfaithfulness. He exhorts saints to be diligent in duties at church and in the home, and that children heed the counsel of parents.

Bro. Thomas Whipple, Mystic, Connecticut, writes of his desires to see the church occupy higher ground in all phases of life and duty, that the work intrusted to the church be well and faithfully done. He regards it of primary importance that the church observe and do according to the revelations given to govern the membership.

Sr. Jennie Stephenson, Red Oak, Iowa, writes that Utah elders have kept busy at that point throughout the entire winter and have baptized a number of people. She regrets that the Reorganized Church has not been represented there in contrast to the Utah Church.

We wish again to remind correspondents that advertising matter must appear in the regular advertising columns, not in personal letters. We have letters advertising articles and services for sale, which we cannot publish as such. It is not intended by this to prohibit publication of useful recipes, remedies, etc., etc., when attention is simply called to such things without advertising for pecuniary profit; but articles and services offered for a consideration are business matters and will be treated as such. Don't forget it, please.

The address of Bro. A. C. Barmore is No. 511 K Street, Sacramento, California; care C. C. Joehnk.

Bishop E. L. Kelley returned on the 14th from Omaha, Nebraska, and other points where he had been on church business.

The mission address of Bro. H. E. Moler is Box 142, Plano, Illinois; home address, Radcliff, Ohio.

The present address of Bro. A. H. Parsons is Temple, Ohio.

Sr. A. R. Crippen, Cherokee, Iowa, writes, urging payment of tithing that all demands for the prosecution of the work of the church may be met. Hearing of so many calls for the preaching of the word, she desires to see all have opportunity. Believing that the Lord gives all that is gathered, she thinks the distributions made by saints should be liberal, and that the spirit of free giving would bring the givers into closer sympathy with the Master who presides over his work and is seeking to advance its interests.

There is a positive sense of hunger expressed by many of the scattered saints, who write of their earnest, anxious waiting for the coming of some of the ministry to preach the word. It is in evidence of the power attending the preaching of the word in the Spirit which, conveyed to the honest in heart, is to them spiritual meat and drink indeed.

The second night settled down dark and gloomy, and Willy cried himself to sleep. His mother was ill from anxiety and confinement; but she never faltered. She told me she resolved that night that, if it were necessary, she would stay in that room with Willy a month. The next morning she said to him, more seriously than before, "Now Willy, you are not only a foolish little boy, you are unkind; you are making everybody unhappy. Mamma is very sorry for you, but she is also very much displeased with you. Mamma will stay here with you till you say that letter, if it is for the rest of your life; but Mamma will not talk with you, as she did yesterday. She tried all day to help you, and you would not help yourself; to-day you must do it all alone."

"Mamma, are you sure I shall ever say it?" asked Willy.

"Yes, dear; perfectly sure. You will say it some day or other."

"Do you think I shall say it to-day?"

"I can't tell. You are not so strong a little boy as I thought. I believed you would say it yesterday. I am afraid you have some hard work before you."

Willy begged her to go down and leave him alone. Then he begged her to shut him up in the closet, and "see if that wouldn't make him good." Every few minutes he would come and stand before her, and say very earnestly, "Are you sure I shall say it?"

He looked very pale, almost as if he had had a fit of illness. No wonder. It was the whole battle of life fought at the age of four.

It was late in the afternoon of this the third day. Willy had been sitting in his little chair, looking steadily at the floor, for so long a time that his mother was almost frightened. But she hesitated to speak to him, for she felt that the crisis had come. Suddenly he sprang up, and walked toward her with all the deliberate firmness of a man in his whole bearing. She says there was something in his face which she has never seen since, and does not expect to see till he is thirty years old.

"Mamma!" said he.

"Well, dear?" said his mother, trembling so that she could hardly speak.

"Mamma," he repeated, in a loud, sharp tone, "G! G! G! G!" And then he burst into a fit of crying, which she had hard work to stop. It was over.

Willy is now ten years old. From that day to this his mother has never had a contest with him; she has always been able to leave all practical questions affecting his behavior to his own decision, merely saying, "Willy, I think this or that will be better."

His self-control and gentleness are wonderful to see; and the blending in his face of childlike simplicity and purity with manly strength is something which I have only once seen equaled.

For a few days he went about the house, shouting "G! G! G!" at the top of his voice. He was heard asking playmates if they could "say G," and "who showed them how." For several years he used often to allude to the affair, saying, "Do you remember, Mamma, that dreadful time when I wouldn't say G?" He always used the verb "wouldn't" in speaking of it. Once, when he was sick, he said, "Mamma, do you think I could have said G any sooner than I did?"

"I have never felt certain about that, Willy," she said. "What do you think?"

"I think I could have said it a few minutes sooner. I was saying it to myself as long as that!" said Willy.

Few mothers, perhaps, would be able to give up two whole days to such a battle as this; other children, other duties, would interfere. But the same principle could be carried out without the mother's remaining herself by the child's side all the time.

Moreover, not one child in a thousand would hold out as Willy did. In all ordinary cases a few hours would suffice. And, after all, what would the sacrifice of even two days be, in comparison with the time saved in years to come? If there were no stronger motive than one of policy, of desire to take the course easiest to themselves, mothers might well resolve that their first aim should be to educate their children's will and make them strong, instead of to conquer and "break" them.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

Dear Sr. Frances:—I think it will not be amiss to write you at the close of this Sabbath day. O how I have longed to be with those of like precious faith; there is indeed nothing that gives such real satisfaction as meeting and enjoying the spirit of peace. I often thought, while I sojourned with the saints, that I could not be thankful enough (and I think so yet) for that spirit.

I have been reading the leaflets to-day, published some years ago by "The Daughters of Zion." I did not read them when they were received for the reason that because I did not have any little ones to instruct, and it always grieved me so, I felt as though I had no part with you.

However, I could not destroy them, as I thought there might come a time when they would be a benefit to some one, if not to myself. As I was reading of some sister who at one time didn't welcome the dear little innocent life, my heart was indeed sad; for O, there have been so many times in the past years that I have yearned so much to clasp a little one to my bosom and call it mine; but such has not been my lot, and I fear never will be. I have prayed as earnestly as I ever prayed for anything, that such might be; but as my prayer never was answered, I have felt resigned that it was not God's will it should be so. My prayers have been answered in many instances, so I know the Lord hears.

But many times when I have seen mothers who have not been happy in their condition (and they are indeed many), I have wondered why it was so. Again, I have seen little ones whose mothers have not been kind and good to them, and cuffed them and scolded them when the dear little innocent ones have not been at fault, but rather should have been talked to in a kind manner.

I have a little niece of three years, whom I had not seen until last summer. Often I would take her on my lap and talk to her, as I would to one of more mature years; and her mother would say I spoiled her. But I do not think that. She comes to me now, and I try to explain to her just how things really are, and I try to impress the mind of her mother to be careful in always telling her the truth; for O how many little ones, sooner or later, learn that all is not true that is told them by parents. How careful we should be to do and say only such things as would be for their good.

I feel like saying to all sisters, don't be discouraged, for yours ought to be a happy lot in life, to foster and rear these little ones in ways of righteousness. You reward is sure, and what can be greater? I know of nothing. God bless you and help you to magnify your calling, is the prayer of

SISTER MARGRETA.

HOW THANKFUL I AM.

How thankful I am that our Father above,
So great in his wisdom and might,
Is just as he was when in infinite love
He sent down his Spirit in form of a dove,
And caused it on Jesus to light.

How thankful I am that the gospel of old,
The Savior taught here upon earth,
Is given again to the sheep of the fold,
And Jesus is coming again, I am told,
But not as he did at his birth.

How thankful I am that while many deceive
When teaching from God's holy word
To those who in fullness the gospel receive,
The signs shall then follow all them that believe,
Confirming the words of our Lord.

How thankful I am we are given the choice
The good or the evil to serve;
The sheep hear the shepherd, and knowing his voice,
They follow their Master and happy rejoice,
Nor strive from allegiance to swerve.

How thankful I am that the virgins so wise,
Who tarry the Bridegroom to greet,
With those of the just from the dead who arise,
Will meet with the Lord and his saints in the skies,
Thus forming a union complete.

How thankful I am that he judges us all,
And gives to each one his reward;
Though low in the judgment of man we might fall,
He dealeth out mercy to great and to small—
Our Savior, Redeemer, and Lord.

WHY GIVE TEMPERANCE A PLACE UPON OUR CONVENTION PROGRAMS?

In studying over the subject assigned us for this paper, the story of the old parson came so impressively to our minds that it seemed a fitting answer to the question. You remember that when he entered his new parish his first sermon was on repentance, his second sermon was upon repentance, and his third, and so on until the good people alarmed and wondered if he were not a little demented, whereupon some good brother took it upon himself to ask what he meant by it, to which he replied, "I have preached repentance, but have you repented? It is of no use, I shall preach nothing else till you "repent." So it is with us, we need to keep the subject of temperance before us till we all become temperate.

So long as we have pauperism, wretchedness, and suffering, the blasting of all that is noble and grand and godlike in man, and are compelled to contemplate it in all its awful reality, as it crushes humanity down to the level of the beast; so long as we have ruined homes and broken hearts we shall teach temperance. Nor shall we cease until every tramp, whose condition is the result of intemperance, is morally reclaimed, and every man or woman who calls himself a citizen of this free republic is too conscientious to sell their vote and voice to the unscrupulous dealers in the liquor traffic. For so long as intemperance in the use of intoxicants exists, we shall not have an honest ballot and a pure government. It is undermining our liberty, ruining our homes and our happiness, destroying lives for time and for eternity.

But why all this to a gathering of Sunday school and church workers? Are we not safe and out of danger? Have we paid to temperance the tribute of Wordsworth, in which he says:—

"Temperance, proof
Against all trials; industry severe
And constant as the motion of the day;
Stern self-denial round him spread, with shade
That might be deemed forbidding, did not there
All generous feelings flourish and rejoice;
Forbearance, charity in deed and thought,
And resolutions competent to take
Out of the bosom of simplicity
All that her holy customs recommend."

Are we temperate? Are we trial proof and industrious? In our bosoms do the flowers of forbearance bloom and flourish? Is stern self-denial armed with resolutions strong enough to resist all temptation? Remember, "'Tis little sticks that build the fire; big sticks put it out." No man becomes a drunkard with his first drink, nor does he commit a crime while still a Christian. But little by little, step by step, is he led on, as the following illustration will show. I was a Christian young man, with confidence in myself that I could go where I pleased, with no danger of temptation. My employment threw me in the society of those whom I know to be morally bad. I laughed at the fears of those dear to me when I entered this society. At first the coarse language grated harshly on my ear, and I longed to be where I would not have to hear it. But I got used to it, and after a little while I partook of it a little, and soon I could keep up with the rest. The smell of the tobacco at first sickened me, but one of the men offered me his pipe, saying it would help me to get used to it if I would take only a whiff or two, and it did; but it took several whiffs to satisfy me. One day I chanced to remark that "I did not know the taste of liquor;" whereupon I must taste it—one taste would hurt no man. But I tasted it a few times and I rather liked it. I began to buy a little, and soon—you know the story. But I was no drunkard, I never got drunk. How it happened I never could tell. I had taken only the usual dram, but it made me drunk. While in this condition one of the men angered me and I struck him, and he died. I had no murder in my heart. I was no murderer. We see where he began. We see where he ended; and as Emerson says of Burns, we say of him:—

"Thus thoughtless follies laid him low,
And stained his name."

Are we out of danger? Is there need of our keeping the subject ever before us? Temperance, a moderation in all things, even our jollity, our soberness, our sociability and reserve, and a total abstinence from all things harmful. We need to think of these things, to discuss them at our conventions, that we may come to a better understanding of the best methods to pursue in the endeavor to advance the temperance cause. Until we are strictly temperate we must study temperance.

We, as Sunday school workers, have enlisted in the army that is to sweep evil from the land, and build up Zion, and prepare the people to dwell in that holy city—the "New Jerusalem" which John saw coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride to meet her husband. Of this city whose streets are of gold, and which needs not the light of the sun nor the moon, supported upon twelve foundations, which are twelve precious stones, and the twelfth an amethyst, Canon Wilberforce says: "The twelfth an amethyst—and why an amethyst? Put aside for the moment the unbroken chain of legend which has clustered around the amethyst, and which corroborates the application I would make; treat it in the matter of fact, scholarly point of view; put imagination on one side, and translate the word literally; it can bear but one interpretation—a combination of two familiar Greek words—'a' not, and 'methustos', a user of strong drink. Its literal common sense translation is, 'Abstinence from strong drink.'"

"The twelfth an amethyst." The twelfth regenerating principle upon which, as upon a foundation stone, the New Jerusalem alone can stand, "Abstinence from strong drink!" What a marvelous prophecy have we here! Uttered twelve hundred years before the pernicious art of distillation was invented, it points distinctly to the peculiar and special peril of these latter days and its remedy. How clearly and manifestly true, if in the New Jerusalem there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; how manifest to the meanest comprehension, that one of its foundation stones must be the victory over that ever-wasting destruction which, accompanied by the sigh of hopelessness and the groan of pain, is brutalizing, ruining, pauperizing, and maddening thousands for whom Christ died, and for whom Christ followers are in a large measure responsible!

If this be true, can we as Sunday school workers and professed followers of Christ abuse one privilege of purifying the social atmosphere, by breathing into it a healthy element, that of a pure life. We may not be able to evangelize the world, but we can prove ourselves a "shining light to the world," with the soft luster of an amethyst for God.

Editors Herald:—Dear Herald, ever welcome messenger to so many homes, bringing cheer and encouragement to those burdened with cares, doubts, and fears. With all the hindering causes which cause so many to falter and grow weary with the struggle, wishing it was over and the victory won; yet few, I opine, after a few bright victories in succession would change the conditions if they could. Every victory won but clears the obstructions and reveals the actual weakness of the foe supposed to be so mighty. Prince of darkness, indeed. Too many of us are beguiled with blandishments in the pursuit of pleasure or profit, to step over the dead line and fall an easy victim, in the snares so charmingly arranged.

We are often cautioned to write matter of interest for the general good, and I daresay those of us not acquainted with the necessary capacity of our church waste basket should be admonished, as a word to the wise is sufficient.

My appearance at this time at your reading table is to relate an incident in my life recently, which I wish all the world could have been a partaker of, or have a similar experience; for "the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple." I am very fond of reading the experience of others, along the "highway of holiness," who seek the pearl of great price, earnestly, zealously, and lovingly. These shall not lack in testimonies, which will move every impulse of the soul to diligence to seek the face of the Lord and nestle down in the "secret place of the Most High."

Between one and two o'clock a. m., the 19th inst., as I lay asleep at Albion where a daughter lives, I was roused by some one apparently by my bedside, calling my attention to a bright and growing light in the room. I looked to see who it was, but only caught a glimpse of a personage moving aside; but the light was growing fairer and my attention was drawn entirely to it. I thought, What a beautiful light is in this room, brighter far than morning light! I noticed it faded towards the edges, or near the ends of the room. Several seconds must have passed during its growth and its fading again leaving the room dark.

By this time my senses were fully alert, and a savory odor was present. For a few moments I lay, thinking how pleasant the sensation; then a low, sweet voice trilled through me, saying, "I am thy Lord, thy Redeemer, write my words for a testimony to those of like precious faith and to all who shall read them. I am moving my people to more diligence in observing the words of eternal life, in the laws I gave them for their sanctification and the redemption of Zion. My Spirit shall be poured out more abundantly, and the spirit of inquiry for "the old paths" wherein is peace and rest to the weary, shall grow stronger among my dispersed people. Be thou faithful to me in the covenant thou hast made and you shall grow stronger than many waters. Be my servant in very deed, and I will open to you the treasures of wisdom and knowledge as they are in mine own bosom. Grace for grace you shall receive, and so you shall be enabled to walk in the light as I am. Remember how many and how great have been the testimonies I have given you. I will give to you and all who obey lovingly my laws, assurances most sweet and convincing; for the elements and the starry hosts shall minister to dispel the doubts and fears of the faithful.

"None have ever sought me lawfully who were turned empty away. Those who prefer my pleasure shall sing for joy of heart, and only see and hear the destruction, misery, and woe befalling the wicked and rebellious, by the lighting down of mine arm; but those who love me need not fear.

"The meek of the earth shall increase among men, and none who wait upon me shall be ashamed; for I will truly honor those who honor me. As a lion among the beasts of the forest, shall the remnant of Jacob soon become. O my people, gird on the whole armor of righteousness, and let faithfulness be the girdle of your reins. Listen to my voice; as a song in the night shall it fill your senses with delight. A crown of glory shall my presence be to those who love righteousness and hate iniquity."

Truly, great is the peace of all who truly love the Lord, waiting daily on his pleasure.

We should aspire to the same spirit of loyal love as the Master showed. The crowning thought and desire, "Thy will, not mine, be done." Sons of God indeed, unto whom the word of God comes. Aspire earnestly to the purity which is in God. May not our bodies be the temples of the living God truly? Let us walk in the light as he is in the light.

What are the possibilities of the sons and daughters of the Most High? Let us covet, lovingly, the blessed promises of the Lord to his children, in this, the "dispensation of the fullness of times." As the apple of his eye, put away all bickerings and strife, cast every idol to the moles and the bats, and walk in holiness before the Lord, and be brethren in the Lord, as dear children of the household of faith.

Let us make straight paths for "our feet," lest the lame and the blind be turned "out of the way." We should seek to heal and bind up the brokenhearted. We are to be the only people that will not be at war with one another. We should have the fullest confidence in one another, and not trust in vain. This requires that we deal honestly with one another and with all men; that we should be a committee of the whole on the Lord's errand. This is the principle of the gathering, by the pure in heart. I am to answer for myself before the Lord, whether I will assist in this glorious work.

We are called to do a preparatory work before the coming of the Lord, "that by and by I may come with the residue of mine house and possess the land." (D. C. 98: 7.) It is evident that a few have been zealously at work for years, but they need the united hands, as also our prayers of faith. Our faith is the electric energy stirring us to action.

Day and night let us plead with the Lord that he come forth and pour the spirit of supplication upon us. We are to seek our restoration to Zion's land with all our might, mind, and strength. This is the way we seek everything the heart yearns for. And the redemption of Zion will be glory, honor, and the presence of the Lord, to those who thus seek it. Let us be one.

Loyally for Zion's weal,

CHARLES ALBERTSON.

SMITHLAND, Iowa, April 2.

Editors Herald:—As a pilgrim sojourning through this unfriendly world and looking for a better country beyond this vale of tears, I with the many readers of your pages rejoice with a joy unspeakable that God in his infinite mercy has brought me to the light of the gospel of Christ.

Eight years ago this winter the beauty of this latter-day glory was presented with no uncertain sound; it was like a fresh, cool spring to the thirsty soul. With much meditation, study, and prayer I oft sought the Lord, until I received a witness which is as an anchor to the soul.

I obeyed the voice, for obedience is better than sacrifice, and through this obedience I have enjoyed the fruition of the spirit. Had I ever been obedient to this heavenly voice how much greater would have been my joy, but we often learn obedience by the things we suffer; for, "whom he loveth he chasteneth." Many were the promises in confirmation, of which some linger yet clear in our mind. This brought great joy to me; still we have hopes that all the Lord has promised will yet be fulfilled. We realize that God will do his part if we do ours.

In the month of June, 1893, I was ordained a priest, a different brother invoking the blessing; but that same Spirit spoke, reassuring that it was the unchangeable God. I sought to magnify the cause of Christ and reaped the fruits of our labor. We labored on until the voicing of the Spirit came, and in June, 1897, was ordained to the office of an elder in Israel, under the hands of a different brother again; but the same spirit, only additional blessings, and that we should bring many unto Christ. Previous to this the Lord promised that I should yet go to my country people, to "Germany," and bring many into the church. This is part of a prophecy by a still different brother. Now with these promises set before us we still have hope to do our part by the help of the Lord.

It has not been all sunshine along our pathway; we have felt the bitter sting of thorns; trials have come, the darkest clouds have threatened our peace to destroy. We cleave to the rod of iron, and when God who is merciful saw it was enough, he bestowed a greater blessing than before; he opened unto us the vision of heaven and all that which is sublime. We heard the audible words of the immortal "messengers" with their heavenly chorus, accompanied by harpers, and, O, such melody! It was no dream, for it was in waking hours. With these testimonies, so far, along life's rugged road we feel to press onward and upward.

I am doing what I can in warning my neighbor, since I have been warned myself. Would to God we had many more shepherds in the vineyard to feed the flocks as they are scattered in various places. Also do we enjoy greatly the various articles and letters pertaining to the gathering. We watch them closely, compare the different ideas presented, then draw our conclusion that firstly as laborers to gather in the regions round about will chiefly be farmers, that fruits of the field may abound, the hungry be fed, the naked clothed. We oft desire to be among those who gather for this purpose to bring God's blessing upon his people. How pleasant it would be to dwell in a locality where peace and unity prevailed, but we must bear the glad tidings of great joy which should be unto all people to fulfill our office and calling.

May the watchmen of Zion cry aloud and God abundantly bless his servants and handmaids in every department of his kingdom, inasmuch as they humble themselves and seek his aid is the earnest and fervent prayer of,

Your brother in Christ,
F. E. COHRT.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., April 6.

Editors Herald:—"Why do you not write for the Herald?" "Why don't you write something for the Ensign?"

Looking back over a chequered life, ministerial and otherwise, it would indeed be expected that I should be a witness of some of the events which have caused and marked the changes that distinguish the church of to-day from the church of my earlier years. Abler men have dealt with this division of church work, and church history. Two thousand ministers are loudly, and strongly, and convincingly advocating its doctrines, so that it does not seem necessary for the aged to step forward into the line of the active workers, to be left behind very shortly by the Lord's young warriors in that department. Some years ago I reached the conclusion that I had done nothing worth naming, nothing worthy of especial mention, and was not endowed with the power to do aught great. What then, I ask my friends, shall I write? The only thing left, and that of little moment, is experience. I trust this will be a sufficiently intelligible answer to those who urge me to write.

As I turn from self to the dear saints among whom I have labored, and glance at the pictures of saintly faces on memory's canvas, I recognize among the faithful of to-day some whom I have known from 1847, some from the early fifties, some only during the past decade. The gladness of soul occasioned by reading about them and their faithfulness and perseverance in the divine life, suggested the thought that they might at least receive with kindness a word from me, however poorly written. I wish then to say to them, and to all my real, my true friends everywhere, that although sickness, circumstances, and sundry trials have prevented personal correspondence, I have not forgotten one of them, nor forgotten to love them still with the old-time love which "made dearer than self, our brother's fame." And as the faithful elders report of your faithfulness, so be assured that I am still in the faith of God's elect, still struggling with all the power I have to keep the earthy part of self subject to the spirit, still laboring to bring, and asking the Father to bring my spirit into such complete subjection to the Divine Spirit, that God may be my all-in-all.

I wish for the information of those who have no other vehicle of news than the Saints' Herald to say that, although I have not used space in the correspondence column for some years, to any extent, I have not been silent. But the brethren with whom I have labored have generally reported the work done, and that is all there is necessity for. Having been physically unfitted to baptize of late years, I have not added to the few hundreds of my former lists. Other brethren, physically qualified, have willingly and kindly relieved me of this burden. I have, however, been made glad with the testimony of some of those baptized, that God had used me as the means of their conversion. One plants, another reaps; one planteth, another watereth; but God giveth the increase.

At our late district conference at Wilber, Nebraska, an urgent desire was expressed for me to occupy more times than its equitable division among several elders would permit to one. I agreed to visit there shortly, and do this, if the proper officials should consent. Bro. Caffall, Peak, and Waldsmith, our mission, sub-mission, and district officials, were all in force, and in good health during our conference, and each did well the part of the work assigned to him. Bro. Caffall is especially blessed in health, and labors with an unwavering devotion to duty highly commendable for one in his eighth decade. Bro. Waldsmith is younger than he, and unites devotion to duty, and zeal for the right to the full measure of his ability. Bro. Peak is an able and thoughtful speaker, and a keen debater, shrewdly desecring the weak points an opponent makes.

A week or two after my return from conference, an invitation came through Elder Charles H. Porter, backed by the triune authority named above, and with the consent of all I returned and gave a series of twelve discourses at Wilber. Bro. Porter had already anticipated the series by a few discourses on inspiration. I found the spiritual atmosphere redolent with the fragrance of that plant, and pressed home the subject with all the spiritual and logical forces at my command, which, thanks be to God, were supplied abundantly for each occasion.

No candidates for baptism applied; but the expressions made by some of those who attended were not unfavorable to our claims. We can but do our duty, prayerfully and lovingly, and leave results with him who doeth all things well.

One feature of the work at Wilber was satisfactory. The branch has been presided over by Bro. Porter; but was asked to release him for the larger field. The feature referred to is the love for him and confidence in him held by the members there. Making my home with him during my series of discourses, and witnessing his earnest and studious manners there, I was not surprised. A clear-sighted brother with whom I was visiting one day, said: "Brother Charlie is well-posted on scripture and history. He suits well the field in Nebraska. God bless him and his."

We have had hindrances to the progress of the work in this city, but we trust the hindrances are mostly removed.

M. H. FORSCUTT.

CENTER CHAIN, Minn., April 5.

Editors Herald:—I give a brief account of my labor of the past fall and winter. I left this place after preaching twenty-seven sermons in and around this part of the county (Martin), October 4, for Fillmore County; called first on Bro. C. H. Crosby, at Spring Valley, with whom I remained for three days. I found no privilege of opening the work there, so went on to Rushford, to some of my distant relatives and friends. I tried to get a hall, but the charges were too high, so I tried for a schoolhouse, and got permission to occupy with the understanding that I preach to them in the Norwegian language; but being unable to fill the bill as a preacher in their language, I had to decline and therefore held no meetings at that place, but had a tilt with a Lutheran preacher for about two and one half hours; he in the Norwegian, I in English. This was by request of the family with whom I was staying; but it was quite evident the preacher's say was preferred to the written word of God, with the assurance that he ought to know, as he had been to school and therefore understood it perfectly well, and the Scriptures was taken as second-hand matter, and in explanation of the thousand years' reign we were informed that since the apostles were burned to the stake, crucified, etc., Satan had been bound one thousand years, consequently peace has been the result ever since. The hour of the evening by this time being late, the reverend bade us good night. We were sure he did not enlighten us, at least on the matters talked over.

The next day we went to Newburg, where I held two meetings in a country schoolhouse, with a fair attendance and interest, and on the following Sunday evening in another schoolhouse to a full house. The following week I labored at Harmony, five miles still further west, where I had the town hall for four evenings. These meetings were by request of Bro. T. Morris, of Greenleaf, after which I went to the Chatfield vicinity, where I met Srs. Butts and Garrett, who had not heard any of our preaching for more than twenty years. I spoke in a schoolhouse four times with good attendance and excellent interest, and think good results will follow in the Lord's own due time.

Being called home on account of sickness of my wife, I was away from the field over one month. When I returned to the last mentioned place I held nine more meetings with many invitations from outsiders to come and see them, which I did as much as possible, and the offer of the schoolhouse by the directors any time I wished it. The next week on to Greenleafton neighborhood, where I held seven meetings in all. The Dunkards reviewed us on one of them, to which I replied the following evening, to a packed house, mostly Dunkards. The truth lost nothing; the good Lord blessed the effort. All these were new openings except one.

Was called to Illinois on account of the death of my uncle, Ole H. Elefson; attended the funeral at the old Mission church, the first church building in the Reorganization, I understand, built in 1863, within sixty rods of my old birthplace, where I learned of this glorious message I am now trying to bear.

Leaving there after three weeks, I returned to Lamoni and found the folks at home well. I stayed over Sunday and returned to my field, and have tried to hold meetings as best I could. The Dunkards did not seem willing to hear more, as they thought we were too liberal with the departed dead and regardless of conditions or laws; "that we would all be saved just the same;" that's the way they prefer to have it, whether we believe otherwise or not. Consistency is truly a jewel. They were not in favor of letting us have the schoolhouse any more, fearing their craft was in danger, so I went back to Chatfield again, where I held five meetings with the promise that I must return, as they wish to hear more of our doctrine.

I came here, to Bro. and Sr. Taplin's, March 28; have held four meetings with rather light attendance, the roads breaking up perhaps the cause.

I feel to press on in this work, although I look for dull times in the near future among farmers, as the spring here seems very late and the work will be rushing when it comes. I feel hopeful, however, for the outcome of the work and for the salvation of souls, if we are humble and faithful each in discharge of our duties whereunto we are called.

Yours in the conflict,

ELI HAYER.

SEILING, O. T., March 27.

Editors Herald:—I came to this Territory on the strength of a letter published in the Herald, of August 17, 1898, I think. I landed in the vicinity of Guy and was very much disappointed in the country round that post office, as it is very sandy and covered with a growth of scrub oak called black jack; but by the assistance of Bro. Frank Vrooman I found this place, a new town in the north part of D (now Dewey) County, surrounded by a fine appearing country, bounded on the north by the North Canadian River, with other small streams running through it, with considerable timber of the cottonwood and elm varieties, principally. I am well pleased with the country so far.

There is no government land here worth taking, but claims can be bought for from five hundred up to two thousand dollars. I would advise the saints not to come here unless they have at least five hundred dollars in money, as those that are here are mostly poor and unable to help anyone else along.

Bro. Maloney, our district president, and

Bro. Duncan, the missionary in charge, are both in the neighborhood and have been holding a series of meetings north of the river, which the writer had the pleasure of attending a part of the time, and by invitation addressed the people on the 26th; but I am sorry to report Bro. Duncan in very poor health and thinks of leaving the Territory; but I trust when the weather settles he may improve and remain among us.

I write this letter for the benefit of my many friends in Iowa and the saints in general, who might come here and meet with disappointment.

Yours in bonds,

H. F. DURFEY.

DETROIT, Minn., March 29.

Editors Herald:—This winter I have been busy visiting and preaching. I commenced the last of January, at Audubon, and for seventeen days the glass never registered above zero and the lowest point reached was 60° below.

I reached Clitherall February 1, and was made welcome by Bro. Alonzo Whiting and family. I held one meeting at Girard, to a good congregation, at Bro. E. Anderson's. From there to Silver Lake, to Bro. Oakes', where we again held meeting. On Sunday we were with the saints in the Barnhard schoolhouse, where we again told them the old, ever new story. Here Bro. Powers, a priest, met and wanted me to go with him to open up the work in a new field; so we drove fifteen miles through the cold, taking our supper with Sr. Bundy in the town of Amour, then to the schoolhouse, where Bro. Powers gave a good sermon on first principles; after which we drove five miles to Bro. Huntington's. The next night I preached to a very small congregation; the weather was too cold to expect people to come two miles, and the next day I walked back to Maine, with Bro. Powers, thirteen miles, the thermometer 30° below. The remainder of the week was spent in visiting and preaching in saints' homes.

On Sunday, February 12, Bro. and Sr. Oakes took me to Amour, where we held three services to good congregations. The house was crowded, a number standing. We were well cared for at Bro. Nelson's, and on Monday, the 13th, Bro. Nelson drove us to Perham, where we took cars for Minneapolis. Two weeks of labor and visiting in company with Bro. Roberts was a pleasure. The saints arranged for a surprise, and so one evening a number of them came to Bro. Smith's, where I made my home, and with other friends we passed a very pleasant evening. May the dear Lord ever remember them.

I reached home February 23, and took up my work as branch president. On March 20, in company with Bro. M. Erickson, I went to Amour and held a series of meetings, Bro. Erickson preaching part of the time in the Swedish language. We were cared for by Bro. Nelson, who with others paid our traveling expenses; good congregations and some interest. We made many friends.

This was Bro. Erickson's first effort amongst strangers. The Lord blessed him with the Spirit, especially in his own tongue, and I hope the time will come when he can give more time to help on the work. Bro. Powers is commencing well, and I can only say, Go on. Bro. Whiting and Way hold their regular meetings, both as branch presidents, Bro. Whiting reaching out into new places. We expect to have our conference and reunion the last of June at Detroit. Expect Bishop Kelley will be with us. Notice will be sent later.

Yours in gospel work,

T. J. MARTIN.

SALT FOR CANCERS.

LEOTI, Kan., April 7.

Editors Herald:—Permit me to say that salt is a sure cure for cancers; to wet and apply or put strong brine on with a number of thicknesses of cloth; and I find the same taking away two tumors I have, as fast as can be expected, without pain. I used to have a cancer in my mouth. My daughter had a spider under her left eye, which got to be very troublesome to her. A woman here had a rose one on her under lip; a little salt cured them all. But the blood must be also cleansed.

I had long dreaded having my tumors cut out, so at last thought I would try my cancer cure. It is a perfect one; it is so good for catarh; a weak brine snuffed into the nostrils and the throat gargled. I give this not for gain to me, but to the afflicted.

Your sister,

MRS. MARY E. TURNER.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., April 11.

Editors Herald:—It may not be amiss to give a brief account of our situation here. We are three families, including three elders, J. H. and A. H. D. Edwards and the writer. We came here from Llanelly, Wales. Since our arrival we have endeavored to unfurl the banner of King Immanuel and invite people to accept the gospel. By invitation we have occupied at some of the churches of this city. Bro. J. H. and A. H. D. Edwards have occupied at the colored people's church many times, having good and attentive audiences. Elder A. Edwards will, by invitation, occupy the United Brethren church, April 9. We have also been invited to preach to another congregation of the United Brethren who are too weak financially to support a minister. Are also conducting services at private houses. So while one occupies at the church the other two occupy at private dwellings. We have our regular meetings on Sundays and on two other nights in the week at our house, also Sunday school. Thus we endeavor to spread the truth among our fellow beings. In presenting the truth to the people the Spirit of the Master has come to our aid.

Some six weeks ago Elder J. T. Davies visited us while on his way to Scranton, Pennsylvania. He preached several times with good liberty. We were very pleased to meet him; had not seen him for some ten years. Bro. Davies, come again.

We feel well with the work and hope to be instrumental in doing some good to the souls who are in darkness. Though having entertained the idea of remaining here to farther the work of truth in the Flood City, intelligence comes this morning which gives us to understand that while the mill here will be operated, things will undergo such a change that it will be necessary for us, or some of us at least, to seek fresh fields and pastures new, and I sometimes think that New Castle or Sharon will be our rendezvous.

How I wish the time had come so that we could gather together and establish among ourselves all the industries which would give employment to all artisans, from the tiller of the soil to the master mechanic, civil and mechanical engineers so that the church could be ready in every respect to have the Lord call upon us, "Come out of her [Babylon] my people," and leave her with all her trusts, syndicates, combinations, etc., and be free from her oppression and tyranny, and escape when her plagues come. Earnestly hoping, praying, and working to this end, I am as ever, your brother in bonds,

REES JENKINS.

CORDOVA, Ill., April 10.

Editors Herald:—I came here from Clinton, Iowa, on the 4th inst. Have held five services in the private house of Bro. Will McCauley. I tried to get the M. E. church, but the minister said it was to be occupied by orthodox denominations only. He would not as much as allow me the privilege of announcing meeting at Bro. McCauley's.

I understand that the devout people here have been warned against us; nevertheless I commenced meetings with an audience of one besides the four saints who live here. The last night of meeting the M. E. choir rendered excellent music. The brethren here will try to rent a hall for a series of meetings to be held sometime this summer.

I go to Rock Island to-morrow for a day or two, then on south, endeavoring to reach Canton a few days prior to our June conference.

Yours hopefully,

W. H. RHOADS.

NEBO, Ill., April 9.

Editors Herald:—There is a small branch here composed of members, some of whom were once members of the old Pittsfield branch. Some years ago Elders Mills and J. C. Crabb did some preaching north of here and were treated to a dose of eggs; so Bro. Crabb and others say. This was during the war. The first preaching the writer ever heard was by Elder Goodale, the next was by J. C. Crabb, who baptized my wife and I and one other brother. This was in 1892. Since then Brn. Crabb, Evans, and Snively have preached in this locality, all leaving such impressions long to be remembered both by the brethren and outsiders.

Elder Snively just closed a series of three weeks' meetings last Sunday night. In the meantime he baptized four. The brother launched right out on the main features of the work, showing that Christ organized a church; that it apostatized; and that it was restored again to the earth, in connection with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. True the work is not booming here, but is gradually gaining ground. For illustration, one old gentleman once said to me when I invited him to come to church, "No," he didn't "take any stock in it" himself. But, strange to say, when on his deathbed a few weeks ago he sent for me, and his request was for me to preach his funeral sermon, which I did to an interested crowd.

I have preached four funeral sermons right near home in six months, three of which were of nonmembers of the church. Do you hear, Bro. Crabb? One of those funeral sermons was to a full house in the Nebo Baptist church. Am invited to speak to a neighborhood gathering on the last day of our school on "Morals and religion in our schools."

There are now more opportunities for preaching than ever before in this locality. Those in charge of the Saint Louis district should know that there are some places for preaching in North Calhoun County. Can't you do something for this part of your district? When you want information regarding the matter address me as above.

For Zion's welfare,

WILLIAM A. GUTHRIE.

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo., April 10.

Editors Herald:—I love to read the productions of others in the Herald, and feel it is my duty to assist to keep that department supplied, providing I shall pen something that will meet the approbation of those who select articles for insertion. We as a branch, so far as I know, are the recipients of God's tender mercies and watchcare hitherto, for which we owe the deepest gratitude, even that which manifests itself by deeds of kindness unto others.

I value the efforts of others, brethren of the ministry, from Bro. Joseph down to the weakest layman, who bestow thought, time, and what means it takes to keep the columns of our church papers supplied with matter calculated to instruct and edify. I am also glad to help disseminate the truth by giving our papers to those in the church unable to take them; also to neighbors, or anyone casually calling or staying over night. I think sometimes we read too much and remember too little, and that our minds become too much like a sieve that cannot hold water, no matter how much is poured through it. In other respects it would be well to be like a sieve that rejects the bad and retains the good wherever found.

I am thankful that our church literature is so free from everything not calculated to elevate, especially of late. Sometimes when brethren measured theological swords I rather it had been elsewhere, as I wished to give the Herald to those, who could not probably understand the situation, and whom I thought would be benefited by other matter it. My object in writing is simply to let those know who labor in this department of church work that I, for one, appreciate their work and give others the benefit of it.

When I stop to think, What have I learned that I have utilized for my own or others' benefit? I feel discouraged, and I see the reason is because I have not sought as fervently and diligently for the Spirit that is promised to aid to wage a successful warfare against my own besetting sins or bad habits, not realizing the amount of damage they do, especially at home; not realizing that we are every day exerting an influence for good or ill to others around us, particularly the young. I believe that which is given by the Spirit of God orally or to be written for edification to the children of the kingdom or instruction in righteousness. If we are not helped to get out of the old ruts of bad habits, it will be our own fault. The sincere prayer of our hearts should be, as expressed in hymn 272 in Saints' Harp,

"Abide with me; . . .

"What but thy grace can foil the tempter's power?" etc.

Dear saints, let us wake up to live lives of usefulness in some way or another and not bestow our time, strength, and talent upon gaining the bread that perisheth by the using. I am glad to learn there are a goodly number who are willing to take the Lord at his word and make an effort to honor his laws as a whole, and thus find peace and comfort as well as growth in grace; for they are fruits of the Spirit. No passing events, however sad, can cause their hearts to fear, as the poet has sung,

"My steadfast heart shall fear no ill."

There are many promises given in the sacred word of God. They are known by those who are Bible students and students of latter-day revelations, to assure such as wish in sincerity to keep his commandments, that therein is the only path that leads to life eternal in glory.

If I understand the teachings of the gospel, we shall all live eternally. But where, oh where! That is for us to determine day by day. May I, together with all the saints that now are, and yet to be, see to it where we are going. I have no fault to find with any of God's laws; if I don't keep them I will have myself to blame and the consequence to endure.

I have a feeling of love and respect for those servants who teach the law of God without respect of persons, even though they are not perfect themselves in all things. With good wishes for Zion and her children, I wish to become worthy to be called one of them.

The effort of Bro. I. M. Smith on the atonement savors of inspiration, which we who are permitted to read should ponder upon, as it reveals to us the magnitude of God's love and mercy which he has designed to reach all the race of mankind. On the other hand we are shown what we who have already received the overtures of mercy will lose if we trifle away our time and means to make the proper use of those overtures. I now desire that this effort together with all others of like nature or emanating from the Spirit of God, will be blessed to arouse every saint to examine himself and see where he stands with regard to keeping the law in its entirety.

Let us try to purify ourselves, commencing at our own doorsteps, and not continue to grieve the Holy Spirit by yielding to the tempter's power from day to day. Then I believe we should have some grand testimonies to bear of what the Lord has done for us; then our faith will be strengthened as a natural consequence. We know that if we do not sow the seed we will not reap; in like manner if we do not do the works of righteousness we shall not reap Eternal Life in the conditions designed for the tempted, the tried, and the true.

C. LLOYD.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 10.

Editors Herald:—After three years' service in factory work, laboring locally as opportunity afforded, by request of those in charge I quit manual labor the 1st of March, to again enter the field of gospel work. I attended the district conference at Kirtland, Ohio, March 4 and 5. To me it was one of the most remarkable occasions ever experienced. To pass over the threshold of the only house which the Eternal One has builded to his name since the beginning of the Christian era, was a pleasure. "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning," has well been sung by those who under the inspiration of God's power have felt that "it is good to be a saint." Between those hallowed walls the inspiration of his love has been felt by the many here. The Lord of glory endowed his ministry with power and taught them in the school many truths hitherto not understood. As I passed through the temple, viewing the pulpits, the seats with straight backs, and the schoolroom of the prophets and ministry of bygone days, my soul went out with this query, "O Lord, how long before thy ministry shall gather to learn more perfectly thy will and be endowed with an increase of power to go forth into the world in this the closing hour?"

As the conference has been reported, I will only say that in touch with the sense of duty to God and in behalf of my fellows I reluctantly accepted of the presidency of the Kirtland district; hence to respond and do successful work will necessitate a united effort upon the part of all concerned. In response to inquiry made, let me suggest to my brethren and sisters (though many of you are strangers to me) that the system embraced by us is perfect and will produce perfect results when it is the rule of our life. It is the duty of each member to help maintain unity and peace. Jesus laid down the rule of action. If discord should arise, if we follow this, there will be but few calls for an elders' court: "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee [some teacher of the church, or, if such teacher be not obtainable, or be an interested party, a deacon, if obtainable, otherwise, a member, . . . but shall not state the matter of grievance to such officer or member except in the presence of the party offending.] one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church." "If no reconciliation shall be effected by this second visit and effort, . . . may lay the matter before the presiding officer of the branch, or, if such presiding officer be not an elder or other officer in the Melchisedec line of authority, before the presiding elder of

If each member will follow the Savior's advice, peace and love will prevail; the ministry can spend their time and talent in leading the hundreds who are standing out of the ark of safety to a knowledge of the truth, instead of being compelled by reason of failure in most cases of members doing their duty to settle difficulties; and when settled by elders' courts it is impossible to please everybody. Besides the loss of time by the ministry, there is an expense that some one has to meet. If cases could be settled to please both parties concerned, it is possible that they would feel more like meeting it themselves, but this cannot be done often; hence I believe the branch should see to it, when forced to call assistance by an elders' court that expenses are met. If members fail to do as Christ bade, then it is necessary for the branch officers to see to it, as outlined in the perfect law, and nip the thing before it grows or is magnified by the Devil's telescope; which he is always ready to loan, especially to saints. As men of God we should look carefully after the flock committed to our trust and allow no evil to enter therein and take root, that we can possibly help. I shall be pleased to hear from those in charge of branches occasionally, as to the condition of the work.

The brethren laboring in the missionary field in this district are cordially invited to render such service to the branch officers in the way of preaching as their circumstances and wisdom shall direct; and when thus laboring, shall be pleased, especially, to hear from them as to their observations.

After six years and a half of labor in the Philadelphia and other districts, I now linger on the threshold of severing my relation with it. It is not as easy a task as it would have been some time since. My maiden effort there was made in Sr. Cameron's house, October 30, 1892, to only eight persons. After a continued struggle since the above date, last evening the hall was quite well filled with interested listeners. I have baptized forty-three persons, and Brn. Moler, Smith, Kent, Baker, and Robley have baptized quite a few since I have been in charge. I have been blessed in administering in gospel duties, in some instances remarkably so. So far as I know, peace and love prevail throughout the district, with one or two exceptions. May they continue, and God's loving power increase in the midst of his children, for the redemption of themselves and fellows.

Prior to dividing the district I labored and baptized twenty-one in the territory of what now is called the New York district, helping to make an opening at or near Norwalk, Connecticut, where now they have a church building, which they are struggling, under the presidency of Bro. A. E. Stone, to pay for, and I hear are baptizing now and then; so the good work moves. I have intended to visit them during this year, but now it looks doubtful. I trust they will accept the desire for the visit till such time as opportunity may afford the pleasure. I extend grateful thanks to the saints of both districts for confidence enjoyed, and bid you to press on in your service for the redemption of Zion, and commit you to the care of our heavenly Father, trusting that in his allwise providence and our faithfulness we shall meet again.

In gospel bonds,

SANDWICH, Ill., April 13.

Editors Herald:—Last Saturday the saints in this part who could, assembled at Plano for a two-days' meeting. The attendance was only moderate, but the services were a success. We had a good supply of ministers present: Brn. Cooper, Southwick, and Moler, of our own district, and Brn. E. M. and J. B. Wildermuth, of Wisconsin. Five preaching services were profitable to both "outsiders" and saints. The two prayer meetings were spiritual seasons indeed. That on Sunday morning was specially profitable; promptness, earnestness, and brevity characterizing the prayers and testimonies. The Spirit of the Lord acknowledged those elements, as it always does. Our hearts felt the melting influence of divine power that makes us know why Jesus called it "the Comforter." Then, too, wisdom of speech and the gifts of tongues, interpretation, and prophecy manifested the work of the "teacher." A call to the ministry was indicated to Bro. F. T. Haynes, confirming impressions the writer received six years ago, and at other times since. Sandwich, Mission, Chicago, Ashton, and Shabbona were represented at the meeting. Elder Lewis, of Boyne, Michigan, was with us.

Paul said, "Neglect not the assembling of yourselves together often," and latter-day revelation says, "It is expedient that the church meet together often." Our experience proves the value of this counsel. "If ye are not one ye are not mine," says the Lord; and meeting together is one of the most potent means of unifying the body. We know this is true of the branch, for the Lord has appointed an office, one of the chief duties of which is to "see that the church meet together often." A branch is the church in miniature; the church is an aggregation of branches. May not these statements about "meeting together often" apply to the whole church? I voted for two-year adjournment, but I am at least half converted from that notion. Brethren, let us not get our religion so modernized that dollars become the measurement of spiritual values. General Conferences are expensive (in money); but if they produce spiritual good not to be had in any other way, dollars expended by them should not be mentioned. Then as to the time spent. I fancy some of our time-saving brethren could hardly have "tarried" at Jerusalem for the endowment from on high. Time spent in getting and keeping in condition for work is often more valuable than that spent in the work. (Editors: If you don't want to print these reflections, cut them out and print the news.)

Yesterday, Brother H. E. Moler and I came to Sandwich, and visited among the saints, and held prayer meeting last night. The "gracious Spirit" was present with us, and tongues and interpretation were manifested. We are feeling encouraged with the outlook at Plano and Sandwich; not that conditions are what they should be, but that they are improving.

If any in the district wonder where I am, I wish to inform them that for some time I will be devoted exclusively to the interests of the work at Plano and Sandwich.

Your brother,

ADAM J. KECK.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 14.

Editors Herald:—With much pleasure I write these few lines to inform you how I am getting along in this wicked city of Chicago. I think I have got my foot in it now. You will see by this card when I started my protracted meeting. I have had a very good congregation every night since I opened, and have preached with good liberty; the Lord has stood by me in speaking to the people. I have had able assistants in the missionary, J. H. Lake, who preached two nights, in Elder Keir one night, and in E. C. Briggs three nights, and with local ministers—Lange and Strange, and our worthy missionary in charge, J. M. Terry, once. Every week he preached with good liberty. May God bless all his ministers; for this is a wonderful work.

I baptized two March 13, and an able young man April 3, who, if he lives faithful God has a work for him to do in the sweet by and by. The colored people are getting stirred up to a sense of the duty they owe to God. I have opposition from deceitful, false so-called ministers, who work deceit against me and tell the people that our work is nothing. But I expect to fight on just the same. Last night just before I closed my meeting three more stood up for baptism, the best in the neighborhood, the upper tens.

My poor wife, who has been sick so long, is feeling a little better to-day. May the good Lord raise her up for this great latter-day work. Please, dear saints, remember her in your prayers. I never felt better in the work than now.

Yours for truth,

G. H. GRAVES.

An anti-Popery movement, which in the long run may be of serious consequence to Austria, has begun among the German Roman Catholic population in Bohemia and the other German provinces of Austria. The movement is leading to wholesale conversions to Protestantism in Bohemia, Styria, Carinthia, etc. It is not a religious movement only, but a political one, and is conducted by the National German or Germania Irredenta party, who wish to be absorbed by the neighboring German Empire. All their previous agitation was vain, because it was impossible for Germany to swallow up six or seven million more Roman Catholics without imperilling the Protestant supremacy in Germany.

Prove all things, learn their real character, whether true or false.

FALSE SYMPATHY.

In reading Herald and Ensign I have sometimes been amused at the soft soap religious generosity of some, who go beyond the bounds of the law in manifesting sympathy for some deceased friend who never obeyed the gospel. I'm not in favor of it. I believe in giving every gospel rejecter the full benefit of the law. Jesus said:—

He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.—John 12: 48.

One would almost think, if led by the expressions of some saints, that their dear brother or sister had actually steered clear of this judgment, and had reached a heaven of their own. While it is true that we should not partake of the feelings of the harsh and bitter, thereby becoming uncharitable, yet it must be understood that charity should lean toward the gospel law first and foremost. A true expression of charity is found in the Doctrine and Covenants:—

O, ye nations of the earth, how often would I have gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not? How oft have I called upon you by the mouth of my servants, and by the ministering of angels, and by mine own voice, and by the voice of thunders, and by the voice of lightnings, and by the voice of tempests, and by the voice of earthquakes, and great hailstorms, and by the voice of famines and pestilences of every kind, . . . and by the voice of mercy all the day long, and by the voice of glory and honor, and the riches of eternal life, and would have saved you with an everlasting salvation, but ye would not.—43: 6.

After such calls are made to every one to repent, do we think that some may still reject the gospel and expect charity of mercy awaiting them on the other shore? Nay, verily! The charity of judgment, or adherence to the law, will be forcibly displayed. In the above paragraph it is said, "Behold, the day has come, when the cup of the wrath of mine indignation is full." Mercy cannot rob justice; and all the charity in the world or in the worlds above, will not save anyone if they don't obey the gospel. In plain terms the Lord says:—

Verily, I say unto you, that woe shall come unto the inhabitants of the earth if they will not hearken unto my words.—D. C. 5: 2.

Woe, I say again, unto that house, or that village, or city, that rejecteth you, or your words, or your testimony of me; for I, the Almighty, have laid my hands upon the nations to scourge them for their wickedness.—D. C. 83: 16.

We understand that everyone is a "rejecter" if they fail to accept this gospel by obeying it. There should be no sympathy given to that class who have heard this gospel and understood it to be their duty to obey. If sympathy is used, let it be manifest towards those who fail to see it their duty to obey. In a revelation which God designs to go unto the world he says:—

And the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people.—D. C. 1: 3.

Know assuredly all ye gospel rejecters, who will not hear and heed the pleadings of a kind Father through his servants, that sooner or later the avenging hand of an Almighty God will consign you to hell, there to wail out your bitterness; it don't matter even if you have a cousin, an uncle, a brother, or father a Latter Day Saint, you stand in your own shoes for "that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes" (Luke 12: 47).

There is only one class that will be saved—those who obey the gospel, and even they shall hardly escape "if the righteous scarcely be saved where shall the ungodly and sinner appear" (1 Peter 4: 18). ;

Again:—

I, the Lord, am angry with the wicked; I am holding my Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth. . . . And fear shall come upon every man, and the saints also shall hardly escape; nevertheless I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father, and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire.—D. C. 63: 9.

This is plain talk, readers, and I believe the sooner the ministry will imbibe the spirit of the above, and with holy boldness denounce all that won't comply with this gospel; the sooner will they feel the eternal vigor giving force to their statements, and sinners will begin to partake of the reality in God's word, thus many more would obey. True it is, we believe in some glory being meted out to all, except the sons of perdition; but the glory of those who hear and will not obey, seems very slim in comparison with that of the obedient; moreover, let none think they will partake of their glory until prepared for it, and to be prepared means to obey the gospel, "for it is the power of God unto salvation." In Doctrine and Covenants we learn of a class who come up in the lesser glory; they are "they who received not the gospel of Christ, neither the testimony of Jesus;" and in reading a little further on we notice the abominable class, they come forth with the liars, sorcerers, adulterers, whoremongers, and whosoever loves and makes a lie; "these are they who suffer the vengeance of eternal fire; these are they who are cast down to hell and suffer the wrath of Almighty God until the fullness of times" (D. C. 76: 7).

It seems to me that if there be any brightness of glory given the gospel rejecters after they suffer in hell, that such glory will be very dim by the appearance of such an unholy crowd among them. Let no one think they can disregard the gospel and expect to come forth in a star glory regardless of their sin; they have got to be purified "as by fire." The Lord says:—

And surely every man must repent or suffer, for I God am endless; wherefore, I revoke not the judgments which I shall pass, but woes shall go forth, weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth; yea, to those who are found on my left hand; nevertheless, it is not written that there shall be no end to this torment.—D. C. 18: 1.

This is how we understand the gospel, hence they who obey not this gospel need not expect any reward until they suffer in hell, and do obey it; the Savior is coming "in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess. 1: 8, 9). I am in favor of proclaiming with force to every one who don't obey this gospel "except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 13: 3).

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.—Mark 16: 16.

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom.—John 3: 5.

We are not called upon to "smooth down rugged texts to suit a stubborn will." Any man or woman hearing this gospel, and won't obey, will have to go to hell, and they deserve all the hell they get. I have no sympathy with them.

Yours in sympathy with Christ and the gospel,

ARTHUR, Ontario.

DANIEL MACGREGOR.

WHY PEOPLE DO NOT COME TO CHURCH.

In the Herald, and also from the ministry, and especially the latter when occupying the pulpit, complaints are often directly and sometimes indirectly made in regard to the absence of the members; and the membership, in conjunction with the ministry, deplore the seeming prejudice of the public to the truth, that seems to them so plain and so easily understood. And complaints are often made that the saints will attend the reunions, conferences, and meetings where an able and experienced minister is to preach, and absent themselves from all other meetings. The acts of every person are the result of some cause, and in this article it shall be our endeavor to point out some of the causes that exist for their absence from church meetings. The object of preaching, as stated by Paul in his letter to the Ephesians, was to edify the saints. This is an age of intellectual development. There has never been a time in the world's history when schools, colleges, newspapers, magazines, and good books were so numerous and of easy access to so many people, and as a result they are very critical; and for a minister to induce the public to come and hear him he must have a message of interest to them, and also present it in an interesting manner.

With nearly twenty-five years of observation, it is my candid opinion that the minister who preaches Christ in such a manner that his mission can be understood, and who uses method and system in doing it, will not lack for a congregation. Many of the meetings of our ministry are not preaching in the true sense of the word. The minister commences with an apology. He tells the congregation that he is ignorant, and he will have to trust to God to help him. Fifteen to thirty minutes are spent in telling what he will prove by the Scripture. A few minutes is spent on the main question, and that mostly in reading proof texts, then a recollection of something Rev. Sam. Jones, or Rev. Moody has said, or what he has read in the various creeds gives an opportunity to criticize, and that very likely in a harsh manner. His domestic relations are talked of; the sacrifice that has been made in leaving wife and children is spoken of at considerable length. And he may not forget to tell his hearers that "his back was never rubbed against a college wall," and that the church does not believe in an educated ministry.

In "conclusion" is followed by twenty minutes of a rambling talk. The congregation has got weary in sitting for an hour and a half, and go away disappointed. They came to hear of "Jesus and his love," and how they might follow him. Is it any wonder they do not come back? They were looking for the bread of life, and received husks; they had a right to expect from one of God's servants food that would feed their hungry souls.

The following are some of the essential conditions that must exist, in order that a minister may be successful in his work. He must have a character beyond reproach; it must be above suspicion. He must be clean in person and honest in his dealings. He must remember that while he claims to be honest in his belief, to not forget that those who differ with him are equally so; and the best method to convince him of his error is to show the truth, appeal to his reason, and let him make the comparison between the conflicting ideas. He must be educated; not in the sense of being able to talk in several dead or living languages, although that would not injure him if he possessed the other qualifications necessary (D. C. 11: 4); but he must have a thorough knowledge of the scripture, its history, doctrine, morals, and its prophecies; also of ancient and modern history, so that he can successfully show the fulfillment of prophecy, its superior doctrine, and morals. (See D. C. 85: 21.)

In order to meet the opposition to the Book of Mormon, it is also necessary that he has a knowledge of the geography of the world, and especially of America, its inhabitants, their customs, traditions, and also their written history; knowledge from every avenue that will give added light to their past and present condition.

He must not weary his congregation with long and tedious discourses made up mostly of repetitions and meaningless phrases. As an example of what people sometimes think, the following narrative will illustrate. A friend attended meetings several times, and while in conversation on church matters, remarked, "Mr. Blank is no doubt a good man, but not much of a preacher; he tells all he knows of the subject in about five minutes, and the remainder is repetitions and pet phrases."

PAUL PARKER.

KINGDOM OF GOD IN LATTER DAYS.

It is affirmed in Daniel 2: 44:—

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; . . . but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.

The objector may say the kings referred to were the Cesars, and that the kingdom was set up by John; others say on Pentecost. That the above position is incorrect is evident from the fact that if the kingdom in the days of our Savior had "smote the image," it would have hit too high; for the image was not fully developed then. Rome was not divided into Eastern and Western division until A. D. 364; and that Rome was a unit in the days of Christ is farther evident; for Luke says:—

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus that all the world should be taxed.—Luke 2: 1.

Did the kingdom in the days of Christ do what is affirmed of the kingdom in Daniel 2: 44, "break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms?" No; but the reverse is true.

And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.—Matt. 11: 12.

It is affirmed of the little horn, or papal Rome:—

And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.—Dan. 7: 25,

From the above it is clear that no stone kingdom of Daniel ever smote earthly kingdoms, "and they became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the winds carried them away, that no place was found for them." As history records no such events in the past, we are forced to look to the future for the fulfillment of Daniel 2: 44. That the kingdom referred to will exist in a preparatory state, before it smites the image, see the following:—

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.—Matt. 24: 14.

The end referred to evidently is the time when Christ ceases to be Mediator, and God gives unto him the throne of his father David; the time when Mary asked for her two sons: "Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom." The thief said, "Remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." The Master in his great prophetic denunciations of the events that were to be characteristic of his coming and kingdom, said:—

Behold the fig tree, and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.—Luke 21: 29-31.

To my mind it is clear from the following: that when Christ comes he will find the kingdom in a preparatory state before it assumes its physical proportions, or smites the image.

I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom. . . . But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever and ever.—Dan. 7: 13, 14, 18.

I am of the opinion that we have not so much as a township of the inheritance yet, as Bro. Kelley said; but when he comes we expect to hear him say:—

Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.—Matt. 25: 34.

Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.—Rev. 22: 12.

May I say in conclusion, Come, Lord Jesus, come.

M. R. SCOTT, SEN.

THE EFFORT REQUIRED FOR ONE TO BE A TRUE SAINT.

But few persons if any out of the Church of Christ, and not all in the church fully understand what an effort it takes to be a true saint. It takes a greater effort than anyone unassisted by divine aid can imagine. To be a true saint not only requires that one obey the laws of adoption into the kingdom of God, but it also requires obedience to the laws of the kingdom itself, as given in apostolic times, as well as those that have been given in this age, or that may be given us in the future. Before anyone can make a successful effort to become a child of God, he or she must believe in him who gave the laws of the kingdom, as well as the laws of the kingdom by which its citizens are to be governed. As both spirit and body are to be effected and benefited by the laws of God, it naturally follows that both are to be exercised in the effort to secure salvation, hence the Savior taught that "thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself. . . . This do, and thou shalt live" (Luke 10: 27, 28).

Evidently one cannot comply with the above first and second great commandments, without putting forth great efforts of a mental, physical, and spiritual character. Bear in mind, the Lord did not say thou shalt love the Lord with a part of the soul, a part of the mind and strength; but in this connection the word "all" is used instead of the words a part; hence it will take our utmost endeavor, by using all the strength both of mind and body, to serve God acceptably. We sometimes see or hear of men of great strength, both of mind and body, who conclude they can be saved without using all their strength in the cause of truth; hence they exert only a part of their powers in the work of the Lord, and the rest in heaping up earthly treasures, and in indulging in worldly lusts; hence such, like David and Solomon of old and Brigham Young of latter days, gradually depart from the path of rectitude and right. For such there is tribulation and anguish, for our Savior says, "ye cannot serve God and mammon." So we see that whether our strength be great or small, we must use it all in the service of God.

If we trace the cause of the apostasy in the days of Brigham Young, or any individual member who has apostatized from the Reorganization, we will find that it was caused by those falling away not putting forth the proper effort to keep the two great commandments quoted above, and given by our Savior. If our strength be great, then our talents are great; but if our strength be small, then our talents are few. If we have many talents we must not conclude they need no improvement; if they be but few, we should not be discouraged. I believe it will take as great an effort on the part of the one who has five talents to secure salvation as for those who have but one. The more talents or ability we have, the more is required, and vice versa.

Men like Brigham Young and others, having great talents, have departed from the faith, not because their talents were few, but because they did not love God with all their mind, but used at least a part in serving Satan. While some having great talents have failed to make the necessary progress in spirituality, not putting forth the proper effort. God be thanked, others of fewer talents pressed steadily onward, keeping the even tenor of their way, have thus secured salvation. This shows that we must not put our trust in the arm of flesh, however great our talents; but that we must use them all in the service of God. To be a true saint one must study God's word, must pray vocally and in secret, must visit the sick and aid in a lawful way to help the poor by paying tithes and offerings. Perhaps some one says, "I can't do all that; I've not got time. I have my family to support." Does not the Lord know as well as you who are depending on you for support? If you believe the Lord has required an impossibility of you, I ask where is your faith? Do you believe in God? If so, what kind of a God?

Let us believe in the true God, and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him. As each saint is the keeper of his or her brother, it takes not only an individual but an organized effort to secure salvation, hence the necessity of an organized church of Jesus Christ, that the members thereof may make a systematic and united effort to watch over each other in love. This organization has been perfected by Christ himself, so that not only the laity may watch over each other, but there may be certain officers, whose duty it is to watch over each other and the laity, and instruct all in the principles of righteousness, that all may come to "the unity of the faith, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Eph. 4: 11, 13).

There being many poor people, and these poor having the gospel preached unto them, it is but natural for many of the poor to come into the church. Christ the head of the church, he being the one from whom all the members, whether poor or rich, receive their nourishment, certainly would provide a means whereby the poor might be cared for, and their financial wants supplied. In providing for the poor in the church we must ever keep in view the second great commandment, namely, "Love your neighbor as yourself." To love our neighbors as ourselves we must see that they are provided for as well as we. If he has a poor house and no money, and we have a good house and some money, we should contribute of our means till our poor brothers are as wealthy as we. "But," says one, "to do all that would take quite an effort indeed, even greater than I have ever made; yet seeing it is God's law, I would willingly make it now. But my neighbors—my brothers and sisters in Christ—who are worthy of my aid are scattered in Europe, in America, and in the islands of the sea, hence I cannot help them by consecrating my 'surplus' as the law provides, while they are thus scattered." Then what is to be done? Why, man's extremity is God's opportunity; hence he says the saints should gather together in Jackson County and the regions round about. Let your gathering be not in haste nor by flight, but let all things be prepared before you. And to the elders he says, you shall see that my law is kept. Shall we do it, or shall we say it takes too great an effort? Truly it will take a great effort both by the individual members and as a body, but the effort must be made.

Saints; why do we have the First Presidency, the Twelve, the high priests, the Bishopric, the seventy, the elders, and so on? Is it to carry on the work of the Lord, or to hinder its progress? Shall we get near the promised land, and then like ten of the twelve who went in the time of Moses to view the promised land, say: We can't occupy; we are too weak. If God is for us, who can be against us?

Ah, listen! Do we not hear the voice of one of the Bishopric, speaking through the columns of the Saints' Herald, in tones of love, saying the effort to gather together is not too great to be made. How many more are, like Bro. Hilliard, ready both by precept and by example to keep the whole law? I for one believe we can, by the help of God, do all things that he requires of us; but we must keep the two great commandments to do it.

IOWA STATE FAIR.

I mail you a State Fair premium list. In many departments the premiums have been increased over former years and the list of articles has been greatly increased. No entry fee is charged. We hope this concession will greatly increase the number of exhibits.

We have contracted for a better and more complete line of attractions than ever before, and they will be put on so that a continuous and magnificent show will take place each day and early enough so that the people can depart for the city before night, if so desired; and the management will do all possible to make the stay pleasant and profitable.

Good camping arrangements can easily be made and tents can be had at reasonable prices, put up ready for use. We recommend this convenient and independent method of visiting the fair. The hotels and citizens of Des Moines will entertain visitors at reasonable prices and a bureau of information will enable strangers to find lodging places.

A Century Closing Exposition feature has been added since the premium list (except the cover pages) went to press, so that only announcement, briefly stated, could be made, but we expect this feature to be entertaining and educational. We hope to show the progress and development by object lessons that will be a revelation to our people, and especially the young.

The great Iowa State Fair and Century Closing Exposition is for the benefit of the whole people, and we trust that the press of the state will aid us in making this the greatest fair ever held in Iowa. We will appreciate any assistance you may give us and will thank you for marked copies of your paper containing notices.

REPORT OF THE GENERAL CHURCH RECORDER.

For the information of the church in general I make my annual report this year the same as if there had been held a General Conference, believing that it will be of interest to many to know just how the church stands in numbers as each year passes.

During the past year I have recorded two thousand seven hundred and thirty-eight (2,738) names, as the accompanying "Statistical Table" will show. Of these there were one thousand eight hundred and forty-four (1,844) new baptisms, and the remainder, eight hundred and ninety-four (894), were received by letters of removal, or by vote upon evidences of prior membership.

The losses have been eight hundred and ninety-four (894) by letters of removal, one hundred and thirty-three (133) by expulsion, and three hundred and ninety-two (392) by death, making a total of one thousand four hundred and nineteen (1,419), thus leaving a net gain over all losses of one thousand three hundred and nineteen (1,319) members to the Church Records during the year closing March 31, 1899. The number of deaths has been more than usual, many of the aged having passed away in the twelve months since last report. Also the net gain is the smallest we have had for many years. The total names now as net membership upon the Record is forty-one thousand nine hundred and fifty-eight (41,958), including all officials.

Missouri 267, Michigan 253, Iowa 149, Canada 126, followed by Nebraska 87, and Ohio 68 net gain. The gain in England covers two years in the most important portion of the work there.

Two hundred and five (205) new ordinations have been reported, including high priests, seventy, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. Also two hundred and seventy-five (275) changes of names of sisters by marriage have been placed upon the records.

The work of indexing all names added, and changed by marriage, has been continued as heretofore.

Sixteen new branches have been reported, including copies of their record sent to me, which have been transferred to the General Record, names of branches being as follows:—

Arthur and King Lake, Ontario; Alta Pine, Alabama; Open Head, Florida; Leavenworth, Indiana; Alcona, Greenbush, Hillman, Mikado, Prescott, and Star, Michigan; Mountain Grove, Missouri; Toledo, Ohio; Canadian Central and Stillwater, Oklahoma; Bell Grove, West Virginia.

The existence of others I am informed of, but copies of branch records have not yet come into my hands. Branch and district clerks will kindly take notice that records of branches should be had in the Church Recordor's office before he can credit the church with such branches as existing and officially known to him.

There has been a commendable efficiency on the part of most of the district and branch clerks. Many letters of inquiry that I have written about errors remain unanswered, which I regret, as the perfecting of the records is hindered; but the majority of clerks are prompt, which I am pleased to note.

As my annual report this is respectfully submitted,

H. A. STEBBINS,

has lived the life of a consistent Christian gentleman, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of the entire community in which he lived. He leaves an aged wife, and some married children to mourn. Funeral service at his late residence by Elder J. W. Waldsmith.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

THEMES FOR DISCUSSION AT PEACE CONGRESS.

Captain Mahan and Captain Crozier, who will represent the navy and army respectively at the Czar's disarmament congress, have been furnished with the official Russian program of the event. The themes to be considered by the international conference are:—

1. An understanding stipulating the non-increase for a certain period of the actual effectiveness of armed land and sea forces as well as the war budget and all pertaining thereto. This understanding to permit a study to be made beforehand of the means in which in the future a reduction of the kind can be accomplished.

2. Interdiction of the use of new firearms, of new explosives, and more powerful powders than those now used both for small as well as big guns.

3. Limiting the use in field campaigns of high explosives already existing and prohibiting of the discharge of shells and explosives of any kind from balloons, etc.

4. Interdiction in naval warfare of submarine torpedo boats or engines of destruction in the same nature, and an agreement not to build in future any more vessels with rams.

5. Application to maritime wars of the stipulation of the Geneva convention of 1864, upon the basis of the additional articles of 1868.

6. Neutralization under the same heading of all ships and launches assigned to the saving of life during and after a naval fight.

7. Revision of the declaration concerning the advices or notices and customs of war, elaborated in 1874 by the conference of Brussels and remaining unratified until this day.

8. Acceptance in principle of the usages of the good offices of mediation and arbitration, to the end of preventing armed conflicts between nations and for an understanding to be entered into as to the uniform manner of procedure.

9. It is well understood that all questions concerning the reports of the states and the order of things established by treaties, as well as the questions in general which will not enter directly into the program adopted by the cabinet, ought to be absolutely excluded from the deliberations of the conference.— Chicago Tribune.

WARNS ENGLISH CLERGY.

London, April 18.—The Bishop of London to-day in addressing the clergy warned them against giving any offense against church rules.

In view of the recent controversies, the church is just awakening to the supreme danger of dismemberment and disestablishment which confronts it.

A strong effort is being made at Rome to win over the high church party to the Catholic churches.

ROME WANTS ENGLISH CONVERTS.

There is a rumor that Cardinal Vaughan is to succeed Pope Leo, which shows the anxiety of the powers in Rome to win over a large mass of the English converts by making an English appointment.

It is not likely, however, that Cardinal Vaughan will be chosen, although the energy of the Catholic Church is certainly turned just now in the direction of England.

In any case, disestablishment is bound to become soon an important issue. Even Arthur Balfour advocates giving fuller autonomy to the church, while the High Church party under Lord Halifax is openly in favor of disestablishment as the only means of freedom.— Chicago Tribune, April 19, 1899.

ROGER WILLIAMS CASE IS UP.

Boston, Mass., April 18.—Representative Davis of Cambridge presented in the Legislature to-day the following petition and resolve, which went to the Committee on rules:—

"Whereas, The General Court of Massachusetts Bay, at its session in Cambridge (Newtown) passed a sentence of banishment against Roger Williams, Oct. 9, 1635;

"Whereas, The Hon. John Winthrop, Governor of Massachusetts Bay, requested that Roger Williams be recalled, his sentence revoked, and be duly honored, which was refused;

"Whereas, Roger Williams' doctrine of religious liberty, for advocating which he was banished, has become the fundamental sentiment of Christendom; be it,

"Resolved, We, the citizens of Cambridge, Massachusetts, petition the honorable Legislature, at your earliest convenience, to pass an act revoking said sentence of banishment, and your petitioners will ever pray God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

The resolution provides that the sentence of expulsion against Roger Williams in 1635 be revoked.— Chicago Tribune, April 19, 1899.

JUSTICE AFTER TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS.

Liberal preachers of to-day can sympathize with old Roger Williams, whose sentence of banishment from the colony of Massachusetts, passed in 1635, the Legislature of Massachusetts has just been asked to repeal.

Before Roger Williams left England in 1630 he had become a clergyman in the Church of England, but he wanted more freedom than was there allowed him, and turned naturally to the Puritans. In February, 1631, he landed at Boston and became assistant pastor of the Church of Salem. Then began a series of charges of heresy against Williams, which he fought desperately. But he made friends with the Indians and got into trouble with the civil authorities by declaring that the land belonged to the Indians, and that therefore the king had no right to give it away.

Finally he took his stand on the statement that "no human power has the right to intermeddle in matters of conscience; neither church nor state may proscribe the smallest iota of religious faith."

A committee of ministers came to Salem to censure him, but he refused to recognize their authority. The General Court of Boston summoned him to appear for trial on a charge of heresy. He refused to go and a warrant for his arrest was issued. In 1635 he was banished from the colony. With a number of his congregation he settled at Providence, and as an outcast from Massachusetts founded the State of Rhode Island. He had great influence with the Indians and printed the first dictionary of the Indian language. All the remainder of his life he was busy in fierce religious controversies, but though he opposed men's opinions he never denied them liberty of thought. He died in 1683. A splendid public park in Providence, Rhode Island, bears his name.—Chicago Tribune, April 20, 1899.

LIFTING AN OLD BAN.

After the lapse of 264 years the Legislature of "the Commonwealth of Massachusetts" has decided to remove the ban that has rested upon Roger Williams all that time. The resolution providing for the revocation has produced a tremendous stir among the historical drybones, but there is little doubt it will pass and the shade of Roger will be permitted to cross the Seekonk River and wander over his old stamping grounds, free from any danger of penalty.

That sturdy old Baptist Puritan, Roger Williams, made a notable stir in his time. From the day he arrived in the colony he kept all the other Puritans in a ferment with his defiance of the constituted authorities, his denial of the spiritual rights of civil magistrates, and the accusations of inconsistency which he hurled against his Puritan brethren, as well as his assaults upon their theocracy. At last patience ceased to be a virtue and the general court in 1635 sentenced him to expulsion. It was the intention to send him back to England, but he escaped and went into the country of the Narragansetts, where he founded the Colony of Rhode Island and laid out Providence Plantations, "a shelter in God's providence for persons distressed from conscience." Having accomplished these tasks satisfactorily he be-thought himself that he had long been an object of persecution, and, not being able to revenge himself upon his persecutors, it is claimed by some of the chroniclers that he gratified his resentment by harrying the peaceful Quakers of Providence Plantations. If some reports are correct there is little wonder his righteous soul was exercised and his godly modesty shocked at the performances of some of these same Quakers.

Roger Williams was a man far ahead of his times. He first contended for that distinction between the spheres of the church and the civil government which is now conceded in this country, and he was the advocate of religious liberty which is now the fundamental sentiment of Christendom. He may have been eccentric in the details of application, as the Quakers would testify, but he was right in the abstract. Though it matters little now to Roger, who has been resting in Nirvana or No Man's Land nearly three centuries, it is a graceful courtesy to his ghost, provided he has a ghost, that it is given the freedom of Massachusetts and may be allowed to consort nights with the ghosts of the Mathers, the Sewells, the Aldens, and of others of his old persecutors in Boston, Salem, and Plymouth, and lament with them over the spiritual decadence of the present times as compared with the brisk and militant theocracy of their day.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts thus having done tardy justice to the remains of Roger Williams, can now resume its warfare against the pestilent gypsy moth, which works destruction by night, and the English sparrow who walketh abroad at noon-day and is altogether evil.—Chicago Tribune, April 20, 1899.

English advices from Constantinople assert the Turkish authorities in the Vilayet of Kossovo are compelling Christians to sign addresses to the Sultan thanking him for his paternal government and protection.

EQUALITY, ETC.

While of the opinion that the revelations to which reference was made in our former article were directly applicable to the two localities referred to, Zion and Kirtland, we still believe that they may be used as an example for organizations for similar purposes whenever men shall choose to so organize and keep within the laws both of the church and the land.

Whatever may have been possible in Missouri, or "the regions round about," from 1830 to 1838, it is quite certain that now and for many years past, no association of men combined for the disposition, care, and use of moneys and properties for mutual and collective benefit, in which individuals are expected to put their patrimony, or their earnings, for the purposes of the association, could have proper working existence, except by virtue of the laws of the State; said laws having been enacted to secure the weak, uninformed, and trusting from imposition and loss by the strong, informed, and crafty. And as a basic principle of the church established by revelation, is that "he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land;" no organizations for the accumulation, care, and use of moneys, goods, or properties can be formed among the saints that are not provided for and protected in their operation by the laws of the states where the saints may dwell and have their church organization.

Whatever is done in the church, by any of its members, for the benefit of others and the whole, whether as a movement by the church through its regularly constituted authorities, committees, or companies; or by individual effort singly, or in company organization, should be done in legal form, must be constantly borne in mind.

The church was "regularly organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country;" and whatever its final fate may be, it must continue to exist agreeably to those laws until the coming of the Son of man, "whose right it is to reign." The Spirit said, "Behold here is wisdom." The opposite, or contrary to it would be folly. (See Doc. and Cov., sec. 58, par. 5.)

Some difficulty in interpreting what is found in the revelations will be avoided by keeping the foregoing in mind.

THE LAWS OF TITHING AND CONSECRATION.

Tithing is a specific statement found in the revelations defining the financial rules and powers of the church, and means either the law, or the moneys or properties to be gathered under it, as the term may be used.

The entire system of church finance, so far as moneys, goods, wares, and merchandise are handled by church officers, may be called the Law of Tithing.

The word "tithe" means a tenth. As given by the dictionary it is: "A tenth; the tenth part of anything; but especially the tenth part of the increase arising from the profits of land and stock, allotted to the clergy for their support."

The Bishopric have so interpreted the word as applied to the work of the church, and upon that rendering have based their understanding of the law.

The definition is, of course, made from the understanding and application of the laws of finance to the support of the established church of England, which was sustained as a State religion, and the people taxed by the government to maintain the ministry. But it would not be hard to trace this rendition back to the days of Abraham and Moses. This has been so often done in the past by the preachers and writers for the HERALD, that we do not care to do so for the purposes of this paper.

The first notice we have of tithing, in the revelations to the church, may be found in section 64, paragraph 5, given in September, 1831; and from the tenor of the language used, we really think that the question as to when the church became, or was to become, subject to the administration of the law of tithing, ought to be determined. "Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people."

The word tithing, as used here, means the paying and collecting of tithes. In 1838, seven years after the Lord said, "It is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of man)," the question came up as to how much of the properties of the people was required "for a tithing." This question was placed before the Lord and an answer sought. When the answer came, it was as follows: "Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the Bishop of my church of Zion."

The purposes for which this requirement was made are clearly stated: "For the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church."

This expression "and for the debts of the presidency of my church," has been a cause of complaint on the part of those opposed to the church; the occasion of fault-finding on the part of the grumbler and fault-finder in the church; and stumbling and faint-heartedness, on the part of many honest but weak ones.

When it is remembered that for a number of years before that, those who constituted the presidency at that time had been solely engaged in church work, and had of necessity contracted debts on the account of the church, which the church of right should pay; and the Lord saw fit to remind them of that duty, or obligation. For the other uses it is plain; a gathering was in process of being made. A foundation was being laid for a great work which had been commanded to be done, including the building of a house to the Lord; so that if there was property in the hands of the saints, it could be utilized for the purposes named. If there had been any misunderstanding on the subject, as to the time of applying the law, it must have been dissipated then: "And this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord."

We may not know all the reasons why the question, How much? was asked; but we may presume that there was either a tardy unwillingness to observe, or an absolute uncertainty as to how one should observe the law; this was set at rest by this section.

The other features will be presented in another paper.

MORAL COURAGE AND TRUTH.

Louisville, Ky., April 13.—A movement that has been started in church circles to discountenance the liquor trade in Kentucky has resulted in the Walnut Street Baptist Church deciding to expel from its membership everybody connected in any way with the manufacture or sale of spirits.

The Walnut Street church is the largest and wealthiest Baptist church in the South, and many distillers and jobbers are on its rolls and active in church work.

Last evening at a congregational meeting resolutions were adopted saying that connection in any way with the liquor traffic was incompatible with a Christian life. Members so engaged were asked to choose between the church and their business, and were given twelve months time to make up their minds.

That both sides—the good and the bad—may be fairly presented in the religious developments of the times, we give such items as reveal the situation. The State of Kentucky has been so largely known by its distilling interests that the action of the church people referred to appears all the more to their credit. It is gratifying to see such exhibition of consistent moral courage, in these peculiar times when "religion" is characterized by so much of compromise with error, pride, and general selfishness and worldliness. Those called to represent the Christ are called as he was called, to "bear witness to the truth" in all the principles and phases of life. There is a profession of faith in fact when "principle" is strictly adhered to; there is a "falling down," a failure, a woeful and distressing exhibition of weakness—not an exhibition of the Christ nature, but a pitiable and distressing exhibition of human weakness—when truth, when principle, is in any degree compromised, ignored, or lightly passed by, through motives or actions based upon "policy," carelessness, indifference, or other evidences of lack of devotion to truth.

There is but one standard for the people of God, the professed followers of Jesus Christ; that is, the Christ standard, without hesitation, without mental reservation, without special regard to who may or who may not adopt it. There is no promise of attendant light and confirmation and of final victory to any individual who is influenced or content to abide by any other standard. "Whatsoever is more or less than this, cometh of evil." This we affirm in the consciousness that in so saying we are "right," and right without being radical or extreme. There is no promise of success to us as a people, individually or collectively, if our standard is lowered; if our policies, intentions, and acts—all of these—are not strictly in harmony with truth, and without respect to or fear of persons.

It is unbecoming in anyone professing the name of Christ to so much as hesitate to be guided by truth in any phase of life. We ought, the rather, to seek to know the truth of any principle, at whatever cost, even though it come out of any Nazareth which the world may despise. It is the privilege and normal duty of God's people to recognize and accept and thus to "know the truth," and out of that knowledge to imitate Christ, the fountain of truth, that out of such consistent adherence to truth we may become "like him"—be "glorified in truth."

Principle, not policy; frankness, not evasion; sincerity, not compromise; should characterize the lives, the methods, and the actions of those who are commanded to enter into life, to "be perfect." Those who thus develop can be depended upon for reliable service to God and man; those who fail cannot rise to the demands and occasions of God's work, which is truth, the whole truth, and nothing but truth.

GOOD CHARACTER OF JOSEPH SMITH, OLIVER COWDERY, AND THE EARLY SAINTS.

The following, sent us by Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser, is in evidence concerning the good character of Joseph Smith, Father Joseph Smith the Patriarch, Oliver Cowdery, and the early saints in general. It is in line with what the old residents of the Western Reserve, some of whom yet remain, testify concerning the Seer and his associates. This the writer states, from personal experience, after a residing at Kirtland and actual association with numbers of old-time residents referred to:—

AKRON, Ohio, March 9, 1899.

I, the undersigned, was born in York State, in the town of Sharzee, on March 9, 1816. In 1819 my father removed to Huntington Township, Chittenden County, Vermont. In 1835 he removed to within four miles of Akron, Ohio, which locality has been my place of residence till the present.

New Portage being three miles south of the Dodge farm, upon which I lived from 1836 to 1839, New Portage was also on line of travel westward of the Latter Day Saints in those days.

A more honest nice people I never met. They bought supplies of my father; camped in front of our house near a large spring. A camp would remain for days sometimes. Public meetings were held at New Portage in the residence of a Mr. Palmer, also in a warehouse; when the weather would admit, in the open air; also in tents and barns.

I attended their meetings often. Honesty, morality, and right living were characteristic of their teaching. Their practice conformed to this; I never knew one to fail to pay for what he got. Father had much too they could have stolen, but we never missed a thing. They were quiet and orderly, especially on the Sabbath; a people who were well brought up; were good society. I felt lonesome when they would break camp. Various ones, Palmer, Baker Whipple, P. Bronson, Griffith, and Taylor owned farms; also still others whose names I cannot recall. All were good citizens.

I heard Joseph Smith and his father, the Patriarch, both preach. They preached good morals and manifested the same in their lives. I don't know why they were so misrepresented; there was no just cause for it; they were perfect gentlemen. I knew Oliver Cowdery; heard him preach often. He too was a gentleman, and his preaching good, of an elevating influence on the rising generation.

My parents at the time belonged to the Free Will Baptists. They often took some of the campers who were sick into the house and cared for them. I have never belonged to any church.

My object in this statement is simply to tell the facts in the case as in any other matter within my knowledge.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, writing the Presidency from Los Angeles, California, April 17:—

I feel it to be my duty to state to you that I am greatly pleased with my appointment to this mission. I feel very confident that it was the Lord's will for me to come to this field, although it looked very dark to me for a time. Truly the Lord has been with me in a marked manner, so far on my journey. I never felt better in my life, spiritually. The officers and saints have treated me just as good as it is possible for them to treat a person, ever since I arrived in California. I shall strive by the help of God to do my full duty before the Lord. Pray for me.

Bro. John M. Terry, writing from Chicago, April 17:—

I am glad to report the work in a good condition—baptisms are growing more frequent, and our social meetings are more spiritual and better attended than usual.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. J. N. Perkins, Wilburton, Indian Territory, writes that he is having some controversy with a representative of the Utah Church by letter. He had little difficulty in disproving the assumptions of the Brighamite people.

Bro. C. W. Hawkins, San Jose, California, April 20, reports Brn. A. C. Barmore and T. W. Chatburn as preaching on the public streets there, to good effect.

TO CORRESPONDENTS: Please take notice that for past two weeks the time of the stenographer and book-keeper in Bishop's Office has been taken up with auditing committee and no one to aid in amanuensis work except myself, and no office room if ever so many to assist; hence delay in replies to letters. Be patient and all will be answered in short time. Before another year we hope to have more help and more office room.

Very respectfully,
E. L. KELLEY.

"Blindfolded and alone I stand
With unknown thresholds on each hand;
The darkness deepens as I grope,
Afraid to fear, afraid to hope:
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That doors are opened, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid,
By some great law unseen and still,
Unfathomed purpose to fulfil,
'Not as I will.'"

DON'T DO IT.

Don't do what? O, lots of things; but the particular one that presents itself is, the habit of rehearsing stories that are stained by obscene or by profane language. After we have repented and been washed in the waters of baptism, and have been made clean by the Holy Spirit, it is a greater sin to indulge in the act in question than it is for one who has not been cleansed, because we are sinning against a greater light—are more accountable, and consequently deserve a greater punishment. We should be greatly offended if one should put filth into our clean dishes; why then should one partake of another's filthy language and ideas, and put them into his or her own clean soul? How long can it remain clean under such treatment? No longer than a dish can, and it is no more fit for spiritual ideas than the dish is for table use. "Sweet water and bitter cannot flow from the same fountain;" then should we allow sweet and bitter to run into our fountain of thought? Such a habit is liable to give rise to the habit of using profane language when one is fretted, or offended. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh" is as true to-day as when it was spoken; so is the command, "Let no evil communication proceed out of your mouth," resting on us, as much as it did on the early followers of Christ.

By rehearsing other people's low stories, and assuming their manner of speaking and their gestures, we are making ourselves like them according to our practice; now if such language is low and irreligious for them, how is it for us? By indulging in such a habit we are schooling ourselves in a branch, or in an evil, that conflicts fearfully with our profession. It is a great hindrance in one's own spiritual development, and brings a great wound upon the cause of Christ. Where shall we find a person who has heard a saint indulging in the same who wishes to listen to the latter's prayer, exhortation, or his friendly counsel? O how true, and O how sad! His well-meant words have lost their power, because the hearer knew they flowed from a fountain that was corrupted.

If the temptation is laid before us, O God help us to drive the vile intruder from the door of the soul. Even light, unedifying talk brings leanness, and yet we should not be melancholy and sad, but happy and joyous; joyous in the development of a hope of eternal life, and joyous in the reception of our temporal blessings, for they are reminders of a tender parent's watchful care.

Improper thoughts are poor food for the soul—not nutritious, but as husks and other indigestible substances. As food that is not properly digested, is poisonous to the body, so is impure thoughts to the mind; and the effects are visible in the face, and not unfrequently manifested in the deportment. Thus the soul becomes as one who has a contagious disease, and those who come in contact are corrupted thereby, and especially youth and children. Innocent ones caused to sin by the evil example of their parents, or by others. We wish that such people were set apart from society till they were cleansed of their disease, as is the custom in cases of bodily diseases.

No unclean, unholy thing can stand in the presence of God; and if those who have never tasted the Love of God, and the good things of the world to come, cannot, how can those expect to who have been thus blessed, and have loved to wallow in sin again?

We desire to be thoroughly cleansed from our iniquities, and also desire that every saint might be, whether our sins are few or many. We all want to be saved with the redeemed, whether we stay till the coming of Christ, or pass away before that time. Then, O Father, set a watch over the door of our mouths, and help us to watch. May this be a blessing to some one, as well as a blessing to the writer. We try to profit by the thoughts given us. Our heart is often pained by hearing evil talk used, and freely too, by one professing to be a saint. That is why our mind has run thus.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Some time ago I watched some of the boys at my school, while they were building a dam in a little stream near the school-house. As I looked at them, while working, some thoughts came to me in regard to the work of the Daughters of Zion, and I felt like writing them for the Column, and will now do so, trusting that my feeble words may be the means of helping some one.

The boys had worked hard to get the dam built. At times the great chunks of ice and snow would come, threatening to destroy all that they had built. They could see all this coming some distance up the stream, and would be prepared for it, and were on the alert. They knew there was danger, and they would have their other work all planned, so they could be ready to withstand the shock and force of the large masses of ice and snow. When they came they would rally their forces, and all hold firmly to the poles that were helping to keep the dam in place. Sometimes the ice came with such force that it seemed as if all would be carried with it, but how the boys did work then. The ice would try to go over the dam, and if it had, would have soon destroyed their work. After many efforts in this direction, it would have to give up.

I thought this was so very much like our lives. That which we have built is our character. The ice that came tearing along, threatening to destroy all in its way, represented the many temptations and dangers that we have to meet. The boys knew of the dangers that were coming in the shape of the blocks of ice, and were prepared and ready to defend their work.

Parents; do your boys and girls know of the dangers that they will have to meet? Or, do you intend to send them out in life with no knowledge of these dangers?

Some say, "Oh, they will find out without our telling them!"

Others say, "If we tell them of these things, it will only lead them towards the wrong, as they will then have a knowledge of these things."

Parents; if you were going to send your boy or girl on a journey some place, would you not tell them of any dangers they might meet, or have to pass? If they were going over a rough stony road, would you not warn them of those things over which they might stumble? Would you let them go with no advice, no warning, and then have them come back suffering from the effects of their journey?

Why not use the same way when your children are going on the journey through life? Warn them of the things over which they may stumble, of the dangers and snares the enemy may place in their pathway. A knowledge of these things will help them, and they will be prepared to defend the work which they have built; namely, their character. I had rather risk a child with knowledge of the many things he will have to contend with than to send him out blindfolded, and with no warning. A child will learn of many things among his associates, and he had better learn of many things from his parents.

When God gave into your care and keeping a pure and innocent spirit, did he not wish it to remain so? Did he not give to you a responsibility that will be yours as long as life shall last? This responsibility cannot rightfully be put upon the shoulders of another. Parents, I believe, will have much to answer for in the actions of their children, and those who have been under their guidance and care.

There are none so good but the enemy will place dangers in their path. If they know of them they can be prepared. Do not—parents, I beseech of you—let your children learn all things by experience, for this is sometimes a dear teacher. Give them warning; then if they go astray, in spite of your efforts, you will feel that you have done your duty. It will make the pathway through life easier to have their parents' wise and loving counsel, and fewer mistakes will be made. The journey through life will be hard enough in this age of the world. Has not God given us warning? Does he let his people go without warning? No, indeed. Then let those who are parents, and those who have the care of the young, try to be like the Master in this way, and be true to the trust that is given them, and "let him that hath been warned, warn his neighbor."

NETTIE I. HEAVENER.

"Blest work! if ever thou wert curse of God,
What must his blessing be!"—Selkirk.

SAMUEL SMILES says, "Work is one of the best educators of character. It evokes and disciplines obedience, self-control, attention, application, and perseverance; giving a man deftness and skill in his special calling." ". . . Labor may be a burden and chastisement, but it is also an honor and glory."

"It is idleness that is the curse of man, not labor."

"To be idle and useless is neither an honor nor a privilege; and though persons of small natures may be content merely to consume, men of average endowment, of manly aspirations, and of honest purpose, will feel such a condition to be incompatible with real honor and true dignity."

Lord Stanley said, "I don't believe that an unemployed man, however amiable and otherwise respectable, ever was, or ever can be, really happy. As work is our life, show me what you can do, and I will show you what you are."

"The duty of industry applies to all classes and conditions of society. All have their work to do in their respective conditions of life—the rich as well as the poor."—Smiles.

There is a supposed saying of a Chinese emperor, that "If there was a man who did not work, or a woman that was idle, somebody must suffer cold or hunger in the empire."

After Charles Lamb was released from his official duties at the India Office, he wrote to a near friend; "I would not go back to my prison ten years longer for ten thousand pounds." To another he wrote: "I have scarce steadiness of head to compose a letter. I am free! Free as air! I will live another fifty years. . . . Would I could sell you some of my leisure! Positively the best thing a man can do is—nothing; the next to that, perhaps, is good works." When two long and tedious years had passed he had learned a splendid lesson. He wrote to the same friend: "I assure you no work is worse than overwork; the mind preys on itself—the most unwholesome of food. I have ceased to care for almost anything. . . . Never did the waters of heaven pour down upon a forlorn head. What I can do and overdo is to walk. I am a sanguinary murderer of time. But the oracle is silent."

"Then, again, length of years is no proper test of length of life. A man's life is to be measured by what he does in it, and what he feels in it. The more useful works the man does, and the more he thinks and feels, the more he really lives. The idle, useless man, no matter to what extent his life may be prolonged, merely vegetates."—Smiles.

"Let every man be occupied, and occupied in the highest employment of which his nature is capable, and die with the consciousness that he has done his best."—Sydney Smith.

Burton in his "Anatomy of Melancholy" says: "He or she that is idle, be they of what condition they will, never so rich, so well allied, fortunate, happy—let them have all things in abundance and felicity that heart can wish and desire, all contentment—so long as he, or she, or they, are idle, they shall never be pleased, never well in body or mind, but weary still, sickly still, vexed still, loathing still, weeping, sighing, grieving, suspecting, offended with the world, with every object, wishing themselves gone or dead, or else carried away with some foolish phantasia or other."

Which do we sigh for, aim for, strive for, work or ease?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

1. Does a Sunday school belong to the district association because the district superintendent organized it? 2. Has the district superintendent the right to send some one to organize a school and has that person the same rights as the district superintendent while there?

1. No; although it is commonly so understood or taken for granted. The proper thing for a school to do to come into the district association is to adopt the constitution and by-laws as prepared by the General Sunday School Association and report their action to the district association secretary, when they will be entitled to enrollment as a school of the district association. We believe it would be proper for the district officer effecting an organization of a school to announce that unless there were objections the school would be considered a part of the district association. If, then, objections were raised, a vote of the school would be necessary. But if no one objects, no further action would be necessary except to make report to the district secretary.

2. Yes, a district superintendent may delegate any competent person to do work that cannot be reached by one of the district officers. But such person would have only such rights as were delegated to him for the particular case. It often occurs that competent persons can be sent to do work that otherwise would of necessity be left undone. Such persons should be very careful to not exceed their commission. But usually it is better if some one of the district officers can go and attend to the work.

THERE will be no General Convention this year; but all districts will be expected to report for the year to the General Secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, Independence, Missouri, just the same as if there was to be a meeting of the General Association. District officers please take notice.

FOR the benefit of the young officers of schools and districts we give in full the officers of the General Sunday School Association and their post office addresses, as follows:—

Superintendent, T. A. Hougas, Henderson, Iowa.

First Assistant Superintendent, J. A. Gunsolley, Lamoni, Iowa.

Second Assistant Superintendent, Charles E. Crumley, 964 Court Circle, Los Angeles, California.

Secretary, W. N. Robinson, Independence, Missouri.

Treasurer, A. B. Hanson, Lamoni, Iowa.

Librarian, Miss Mamie A. Allen, Lamoni, Iowa.

Write any of them upon matters pertaining to their line of work.

London, April 10.—The Daily Mail publishes the following dispatch from Shanghai: 'An American Protestant missionary at Hankow, a Chinese treaty port on the Yangtse-Kiang, makes sensational allegations against the Roman Catholics of burning Protestant chapels and torturing Protestants. He gives the name of a priest concerned and pictures a reign of terror in certain districts.'

Letter Department.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, April 17.

Editors Herald.—Since last communication published I made an effort at Missouri Valley, but on account of extreme cold weather had but meager attendance, and finally closed without accomplishing but very little, but I learn that the Sunday school has taken on new life since warmer weather has come, and very lately there is a slight improvement in the church work, which I pray will result in permanent activity and spiritual life.

Remained at home till weather moderated, and on account of wife's illness, when I commenced a series of services at Woodbine, where we trust permanent good was done, although but slight interest being shown except by a few. During the time of being there I was called home on account of the sickness of our babe, whose body, on Wednesday March 29, was laid in the Magnolia cemetery to await the first resurrection. While many times a lonely feeling comes over us and a vacant place is noticed in the home, yet the consolation the gospel promises has come to us, knowing that his condition and associates are more blessed than they could possibly have been upon this sin-cursed earth surrounded by mortal beings. Since God could trust such a pure spirit as was his to our care even for so short a time we feel that we can trust his body and spirit into His care for eternity, especially when he has made provision that we may eternally enjoy his presence with all the pure and good. How blessed the thought of a future life, surrounded as it is with so many, many blessed and soul-cheering promises.

The Sunday school convention and district conference of the Little Sioux district convened at Mondamin from the 24th to 26th, at which time a very pleasant time was had. The officials of the Sunday school association were elected for the coming year, as were also the officials of the district. One was ordained to the office of an elder. After the conference and burial of our babe, I returned to Woodbine to continue services, but the interest was not so good as when called away.

From there I returned home to await the return of better health to my wife, and to recruit physically, as I find the strain of the past winter has depleted my physical forces as never before.

The visit of Elder Heman C. Smith has been much appreciated, only hoping that he may come oftener and stay longer.

The subject of the gathering is agitating the minds of the saints, but if it will only effect their lives with the preparation to be gathered as much, how much better it will be than it now is. When saints cannot live together in these local gathering places and act in righteousness towards one another it seems a long stretch of the imagination to anticipate a general gathering near. I have seen more selfishness, indifference, worldliness, strife, and adultery manifest in the last year than in any one year before; yet one hopeful sign grows out of this, which is the local officers are made to feel more and more their responsibility, and they are awaking to their duties and the need of better qualification than hitherto obtained.

My faith is fixed, my desire to do more increased, my hope of heavenly associates enlarged, and my anxiety for the redemption of Zion of a more practical nature.

Your brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

TESTIMONY OF KATHARINE SALISBURY.

FOUNTAIN GREEN, Ill., March 26.

Editors Herald.—I feel to write a few lines by way of explanation. In January I received a letter from Elder Lewis, of Michigan, and later one from Elder Sheen, of Independence, Missouri; also one from Elder Lambert, of Rock Creek, Illinois, asking for an explanation concerning my name being signed to a document or certificate in support of J. J. Strang being leader of the church; such certificate being found in the Strangite pamphlet, a thing I never heard of in my life until I received the letter from Elder Lewis.

I now in truth declare that I never signed my name to such certificate or document; neither did I give my consent for anyone to sign it. I never knew anything about Strang or his work, nor heard of him for several years after I left Nauvoo.

I do not believe that my mother, Lucy Smith, or my sisters, Lucy Millikin and Sophronia McClerrie, signed any such certificate.

As for my husband, I know he looked forward to Joseph Smith taking his father's place. We based our strong reasons on my mother's teaching, as she was known to her Grandson's calling. We all waited patiently for him to take his place.

It is preposterous to think that Emma Smith, wife of my brother Joseph, would sign such certificate, when she knew of her son's blessing in Liberty Jail, and knew beyond a doubt that he would fill his father's place in God's own due time. Such was her testimony all the way through.

So I say the whole thing was a forgery. Whoever the perpetrator was, his acts will surely be revealed sometime, as justice will prevail.

I expect to meet this testimony before the judgment bar of God.

With good will to all, I remain,
Your sister in Christ,
KATHARINE SALISBURY.

KINCARDINE, Ont., April 13.

Editors Herald.—I have just closed a series of meetings on the north line in a school-house five miles from this town. I came here from Port Elgin. This is a new field; the gospel has never been preached in its fullness here before. I held thirteen meetings to a full house, most every night. A week ago last Monday I took a relapse from la-grippe, and had to lay off, until last Friday and Sunday, when I tried to resume my work and was obliged to quit again on account of the effects of the illness. My lungs and nerves seem to be affected, so I closed with a full house, with the consent of the trustees to the use of the schoolhouse any time thereafter. Some have promised to obey when I return. I blessed four children while there, visited and distributed tracts both there and in this town.

I was promised a place here to hold meetings, but am not able to start at present. Will accept the offer if the good Lord shall permit me to return later on. The summer months are the best times to labor here. This place is situated on Lake Huron and is a terribly cold place. It needs a strong man to labor here in the winter months.

The enemy is at work here; one good Baptist brother has written a lengthy article in the Kincardine Reporter, styling the Utah Church and the Reorganization the same. I have written a twelve page rebuttal, to the Kincardine Review. Hope error will be put down and the truth upheld.

From here I make my way home by way of Wingham, McKillop, and Rostock, wishing to be remembered by God's people that I may be fully restored to health and strength again to perform the work that is placed upon me to do.

In gospel work,
ELDER S. TOMLINSON.

OPOLIS, Kan., April 18.

Editors Herald.—You are a welcome visitor. In perusing your pages filled with light and truth I receive additional evidences concerning the gospel. I always endeavor to keep the Herald and Ensign before the people (especially the saints) as one of the means of spiritual development. Yet many are without the church papers; some because of lack of interest, and others because of financial embarrassment.

Bro. Beebe and I are still laboring together. We closed a series of meetings at Medoc with but very little interest. From here we went to "Hell's Neck" or Sage, Missouri, where we expected to hold forth, but the Baptists were ahead of us. They were intending to close in a few days, but when they learned we were in the neighborhood, the meeting was continued indefinitely. However, we preached one sermon in the camp at Sr. Williams' tent. We enjoyed our sojourn with the saints while there. There are only three families of them, and they are all young in the work; but I am glad to say their zeal and courage are commendable.

From here we went to Alba, another mining camp, and commenced meetings. It was a hard matter to get the people out. However, we closed last Sunday night with a fair audience. The first night a gentleman took us to the boarding house, paid our way, and invited us to call on his family next morning. Our visit with them was grand; for over two hours they listened to the angel's message with gladness. One night while preaching at this place, I am sorry to say we slept (?) in the schoolhouse. It rained so hard there were but a few out, young men principally, and we were left to rest in the schoolhouse or walk four miles through mud and rain to Bro. Albert Davis' home. We preferred the former. If Bro. Phillips notices this, I know he will sympathize with us.

While at Hell's Neck we made the acquaintance of one Mr. Near, an old gentleman, who is now investigating this latter-day work. Mr. Near is a man of extraordinary intelligence. He has read the Bible for 10, these many years, and believed it as it is written. So he kept himself aloof from all denominations, although he was offered many inducements by different churches—a good salary as a preacher—if he would only accept their creed. He preaches occasionally now, but not for any denomination. He promised us while there to investigate this latter-day work. We left him literature—tracts, Ensigns, etc., and Bro. Davis was going to get a copy of "The Book of Mormon Vindicated." Let us pray for him, saints, that he may be led into the fold of Christ.

This gospel work grows brighter when we walk in wisdom's way, always trying to do that which is right. May the Lord help us who have nothing to consecrate (earthly possessions) to consecrate ourselves. This should be the hope of all saints—the redemption of Zion, the abolishment of poverty and distress caused by financial depression. Let us labor faithfully till the Master comes.

In gospel bonds,

BELL GROVE, W. Va., April 17.

Editors Herald.—I have been confined at home for six weeks on account of sickness of my daughter. She passed over the river on the 12th inst.

I wish to say to the saints of the West Virginia district, through the Herald, that I will resume my missionary work in a few days; just as soon as I can get my family consoled under our sore affliction.

In bonds,
G. H. GODBEY.

GUY, O. T., April 17.

Editors Herald.—I am at Bro. L. A. Wells', where I have preached four evenings. House crowded last night. Preached at noon yesterday in hall at Seiling five miles south, new town starting here; large audience. Go home this morning, from there east thirty-five miles to preach over Sunday, thence to Oak Grove branch one hundred and fifty miles east preaching on the way at Kingfisher and elsewhere. I want to reach there by May 5. Twenty-five families of saints have homes here now and many more coming in, as they write to me and others. Bro. C. R. Duncan has just left here.

There is much beautiful, good land here, much inferior in the jack oaks. Many of the saints have got fine prairie farms. Bro. Frank Durfee from Iowa has settled in Seiling, in business there. We have the hall there each fourth Sunday; nice Union Sunday school where saints take a prominent part, and will soon have to organize a branch there, as it is too far from Guy where saints now meet. Near half of them are from near Seiling.

In gospel bonds,
D. S. CRAWLEY.

MINATARE, Neb., April 19.

Editors Herald.—To respond to requests from saints situated in Cheyenne and Scotts Bluffs counties, Nebraska, I arrived at Alliance at four a. m., and on Friday, March 31, was met by Bro. J. L. Dietrich and W. Roberts, and by the latter was taken in a topless buggy to Bayard, Cheyenne County, forty or fifty miles over the western plains, arriving at Bro. R's private residence just before sundown, and on invitation did what I considered ample justice to an evening meal.

Up to date in Cheyenne and Scotts Bluff counties have preached at three different points; preached twenty-one sermons. The points are more than several street blocks apart reached by electric street cars; yes, several miles could be reached by pony shanks, but I have found willing brethren ready to hitch up teams and escort me from point to point in the best conveyance they have. Who would demand or expect more?

In a general way congregations have been meager; some increase on Sunday evenings, but so far as my observations have gone but few evince interest. And now, by the way grim and cold, and the long winter is though slowly giving way for the dawn of spring, and farmers are getting busy, and then, too, some excitement is seen over the fact of two railroads being built here, the B. and M. and the U. P. 'Tis said that the good people of Cheyenne and Scotts Bluff counties, etc., have been waiting in feverish expectation for the dawn of a railroad era for twelve years, evidence of which now appears; the B. and M. having several camps, grading having begun; some therefore are jubilant, others less so, but all endeavoring to benefit by the prosecution of the project; and with many, such projects are considered firstly, and the vital question of religion secondly. So move the masses.

Were two energetic, zealous young brethren available, having sufficient gospel grit, endurance, and patience to prosecute gospel work, here, within a radius of fifty miles in a systematic manner for four or six months, evidence of interest might evince leading to seeking church fellowship, or evidence made visible that all interest if at all existed had died out, in which event they would be justified in seeking new fields for labor.

I am informed that a most effective effort was made here in 1888, a few sermons given to overflowing houses of attentive listeners; but after a few sermons; there was a cessation of labor, while the interest was at fever heat, and subsequent efforts to revive have proved abortive. What a pity! But so it is. Nor is it the first place in which prospects for the work have been blighted, attributable to desultory and nonsystematic preaching, which together with the laxity in the advocacy and enforcing of given and accepted law, militates against the progress of the work.

I find in Cheyenne and Scotts Bluffs counties some zealous and Godfearing saints, ready to cooperate with missionaries to the full extent of their abilities; anxious to know what is required of them. In view of instruction, that all are to stand in the office appointed, etc., and that all are to teach ac-according to the office appointed, that all may be active according to the gifts and callings of God unto them, if lacking zeal might be admonished, if overzealous might be corrected; for on the hypothesis that given an accepted law makes plain the duties of all officials, a failure in duty, or maladministration by any, would be just as visible, the remedy for which would not be accusation before the wrong is pointed out; but labor, etc., to convince the erring one of his error, granting time and space for repentance, and if a failure in the latter, then further action as the law directs, that the fair fame of the church may be fostered, the innocent vindicated, and the guilty punished. If this is not the purpose and object of God's method of adjudication, I have not yet learned it. There is, I think, a difference in tearing one down and in laboring to show him the error of his way.

The cherishing a desire to do good by preaching the gospel is laudable; but it would not disqualify one for the work by a due consideration as to the responsibility. As there is quite a difference in adapting ourselves to changes, etc., incident to the life of a traveling elder, going where and doing as we please, any kind of discipline placing us under any kind of restraint may be objectionable. But law, human or divine, forasmuch as it is mandatory and restrictive, of necessity is more or less arbitrary. If I therefore wanted to be free from any and every kind of restraint, I would go out from under the everlasting gospel.

In gospel bonds,

"HEAL THE SICK."

In all the instructions our Savior gave to his ministry, no three words appeal more grandly to every impulse of the heart than do these; in and out of the church, wherever the messengers of the restored gospel tell the glad news that we preach the "gospel of the kingdom" with the same graces and gifts as heralded by Jesus and his apostles of nearly nineteen hundred years ago, over the hills and vales of Palestine. "These signs shall follow them that believe." Is there a single messenger of the "new covenant" on the roll of active workers whose heart does not plead for that purity and faith that in whosoever behalf they plead before the throne of the Highest, may be granted the "healing balm" to cleanse and heal as freely as the magic words of the Master, who so freely "bare our sicknesses"? This morning I felt a special impulse to write on this topic; not that my pen is to be more potent to waken thought and desire in the hearts of those "called to be saints," than others more able than mine. Long before I was able to comprehend the import of this "old sweet story—story of the cross" in its saving, all-hallowing influence with these "temples of the Holy Ghost," I thought what a God-given privilege it would be to hold the fervency of the Spirit's healing power, to always bless in the name of the Lord with every blessing God should put in my heart to ask for, or whatsoever the saints asked at my hands. God has indeed been most gracious to me in confirming the work "with signs following," insomuch that it is marvelous why he continued these manifestations when I was so slow to profit by them, as he warned me many times. I only write of incidents in my own life to show that the Lord is not slow to give testimony of our calling, or to confirm his work, if we are only honest at heart, though we may seem very slow to step boldly to the task assigned us. I always felt so weak or unqualified, inefficient, and timid.

Since obeying the gospel under the hands of E. C. Brand, in 1870, on various occasions while at my daily avocations, the Spirit has startled me by asking in clear, distinct words when I was going to fulfill the work assigned me at the water's side by prophecy. I have been so overcome at times by its pleading, that to get ease I would go in secret prayer, where I always received peace and assurance. In my heart I longed to fulfill all the good pleasure of the Lord; yet while the spirit was willing the flesh was weak.

On at least three separate occasions, forever and indelibly impressed in my mind came the query, What testimony was yet needed to confirm my faith in my calling, or the truth of the gospel,—what would I ask in the heavens or on the earth? and in quick succession each time came the thought of what would be given. Once the snow was falling so gracefully, and the Spirit said, "If the storm shall cease all of a sudden and the sun appear brightly, will you accept that as a token?" Now in my heart I quickly said, "Yes." As if by magic the snow ceased to fall and the sunlight broke through the clouds, and how lovely all nature appeared. At another time an exact repetition of this occurred, except rain was the element.

On another occasion, a snowstorm was raging and night was casting its shadows over the land, and I had extra chores to do, owing to the weather. My cows in the field needed extra care, and I thought I must go over and see to the small calves, at least, but as I was about ready to do so, the Spirit said, "Trust your cattle to my care, for the storm shall stay, and a summer's calm shall rule the night." I said, "What a precious promise is this from the mouth of the gracious Lord!" I could only look upward and say with all my heart, "Dear Lord, how good and kind thou canst be!" How loving and true I should be. Well, never before had I noticed such a model night for the season of the year. The storm soon ceased and all nature seemed sitting at ease. I lay musing over it till far in the night, for I had been giving myself to fasting and prayer for favor with the Lord, and my little woman often asked what I starved myself so much for; but she too felt the efficacy of those seasons, as she was troubled much with bodily pain. Sometimes as I would sit in the house reading from the Scriptures, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants, she would often say she felt so much better, and she would come out to the garden and ask me to talk of these books, for she said there was an influence came to her that was so easing and soothing to her body. She always wanted to be administered to if very unwell, and always said she felt better. Still she was very skeptical in many ways.

One more incident and I will look after the text. I learned very early the magic power of "fasting and prayer." In the winter of 1886, I think, my eldest daughter had been sick for several days, during which I had eaten very little, (not on her account, though,) and on the night I refer to she was growing worse with a high fever. My wife always nursed the sick, as she was a natural nurse, but she knew my remedy, so she never called for any interference on my part if it could be avoided, but she seemed at a standstill this night, and as we sat in the parlor about nine p. m. she said, "Charley, there must be something done for Mary." I knew this would always come when her wisdom failed. I said, I will go and pray by her. As I kneeled by her bedside, and while praying, she fell asleep and slept till morning, and then got up and appeared as well as though nothing had troubled her. Now these are a few instances in which my faith has been wonderfully strengthened by testimony; and they are memories most sweet to me.

These are a few of my reasons for saying I am in for the war; that I am just getting thoroughly interested in this, the grandest conflict in which man can engage. If I shall be privileged by the grace of the Highest to fulfill the pleasure of the Lord in the manner he has promised, then indeed mankind will have abundant reason to know that God lives as a mighty, wonder-working God. Mankind by nature are attuned to earthly things. By the transforming agency of the Holy Ghost, by the new birth, and by the development of the new creature in Christ, we take on the energy of divine power. How very careful we should be to exclude, by abiding in the spirit of prayer and supplication, all idle and sinful thoughts, that the new birth and growth may not be hindered. Verily the power of the priesthood of the Son of God will be felt to the joy of all the faithful; but to the utter dismay and shame of all who "know not God." This is heaven's labor of love in which we are engaged, and his charge to "heal the sick" carries with it a most solemn admonition to purify ourselves, and sanctify the Lord of glory in our hearts, that he alone shall rule and reign in us, fulfilling all his good pleasure for the spread of his truth. If we be purified from all sin, we shall ask what we please and it shall be granted; yet, as we will be wholly directed by the Spirit, it will name all we shall ask for. This is what we labor, watch, and pray for.

"The disciple is not above his master: but everyone that is perfect shall be as his master." "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." This is the key to the whole situation. If we do not keep the commandments, the love of the Father will not abide with us, therefore we shall walk in darkness. Do not let us be beguiled by the adversary, that God will wink at a little sin, and finally save us in his own blessed abode. I have no authority to weaken what may seem the stringency of the commands of the Lord. We are to be doers of the whole counsel of God. The only reason why any of us shall seem to come short of reaping a full reward, will be because we fail to lovingly live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God. In that case we are worse off than what we call sectarians, as we claim to know our Lord's will, and so must be "beaten with many stripes." What we have the least doubt of being approved of the Lord, let us give him all the benefit of the doubt; anticipate his pleasure, but never presume on his clemency. Said that guileless child, ("This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear ye him,") "I know that his commandment is life everlasting." So may his commandments be to us. They are to all who are truly "born of God." All his words bear the impressive thought that they came from a mind fully in earnest in all he said or did; nothing light or trivial in any of them. Without sin, yet he zealously sought to faithfully "fulfill all righteousness," seeking by self-denial of his own bodily comfort; by fasting and prayer; a memorable fast of forty days; and getting up before dawn, and in a solitary place seeking needed favor and grace of the Father's love. Again, he tarried alone all night on the mount, in prayer to God. These incidents were not written for naught, but the "learning and profit" of those who want to learn the secret of success, even if their bones do stare at them or their knees be weak with fasting. "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." Yet the Master needed no such special preparation.

The ordinances of the Lord's house should be complied with in all cases where it can well be done, rather than merely ask prayers for the sick. The Lord loves faithful, confiding trust in his ordinances. Yet where this cannot well be done, the prayer of faith will be heard without respect to distance; if we live pure and holy lives we have all assurance at a throne of grace. It is most pleasing in the sight of our heavenly Father that we comply with the law. (James 5; D. C. 42:12.) I never feel right before the Lord to ask his blessing, if the law is evaded in the least. Our success as a people must and will depend on a loyal adherence to the whole counsel of the Lord; never evading, but fully complying with unfeigned faith and fidelity to the laws of God. Less than this will bring us rebuke instead of favor. This shall be the prevailing thought with my dealings with these matters. Requests via Prayer Circle should be lovingly complied with, but let us all beware how we in anywise use these means as an excuse for a noncompliance with the spirit and letter of Heaven's law. I have been healed at various times by my own petition, and I know the conditions of my mind at the time. The more I see of "this gospel of the kingdom" committed to man in our day, the more fully am I convinced, earth can be made at least "heaven's border land" if we learn this very important lesson, that God means just what his laws say, or the Lord means just what he says. Word these matters as we please, yet the Lord is ever faithful, and if failure results, it is our fault. I know, too, that the Lord is indeed merciful, but fully as well I know it is not good to presume on his clemency in disregarding his laws if we know his expressed will on any given matter. Sometimes he calls, and we will not hear, then it soon comes our turn to call, and then he is slow to hear, and foolish man says his promises are not fulfilled. The gift of healing was never intended as any remedy for willfully violating the laws of our physical or spiritual welfare. Let us treat the Lord as our senior partner, in all the affairs of life. Let us conclude by reason of his wisdom he knows best how to manage all the affairs of life. Prove him in all our ways and see how soon earth life hath joys and pleasures never known before. When we call he will say, "Here I am." Often before we call we will know the Lord is indeed by us. This is the heritage of the children of the Lord; cease from every appearance of evil, our delight in the law of the Lord. Then we will be heard, and the oil of gladness will flow to us, as the inflowing of the tide. Who that has ever been healed by the Spirit of the Lord will ever forget how easy and light they felt; perfect ease came as by magic, as the words of the Master, "Peace, be still," to the troubled winds and waves on the sea of Galilee. It was so easy to say those graceful words, but they did not come till the disciples said, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?"

God bless the people with eyesalve, and prompt them to use it. There is a balm in Gilead. Our possibilities, lawfully directed, point to the highest summit, over which gleams celestial sunlight. Yours loyally, for Zion's weal,

CHARLES ALBERTSON.

THE MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

The present age is noted for daring steps towards universal unbelief. Not only are these taken by the professed unbelievers, but the more covert and dangerous ones by those who profess belief. Any departure from primitive Christianity, either in organization, doctrines, or blessings, should be regarded as a step towards point blank unbelief. If we discard a part of what God placed in the church, we certainly are preparing our minds and the minds of those who follow in our footsteps, to discard the whole. One step taken, it is easy and natural to take another in the same direction; and the result is the completion of the journey toward the dark and cheerless land of atheism.

No more daring step in this direction has ever been taken than that taken when it is said that there is a more excellent way than the exercise of the best gifts God ever placed in his church. This position says in fact, that though the Holy Ghost is one of the highest, holiest, and most powerful agents that has ever blessed the souls of men, yet the state of the church when it directly communicated with it was low and barren, as compared with that more excellent state when this holy agent ceased to act directly upon the souls of men; and when if it acts at all, it is so indirectly that it scarcely affects the recipient at all. It says that while the full blaze of sunlight is poured upon the world, it is dark and almost lifeless; but when that sun becomes obscured that it cannot be seen, and the effects of its rays indirectly reaching the world are so feeble that they can scarcely be noted, then the world is in its palmy days, teeming with the varied forms of animal and vegetable life.

The theory referred to is based upon the thirty-first verse of the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians, which reads:—

Seek earnestly the best gifts, and yet show I unto you a more excellent way.

The apostle is here pointing out without question a way more excellent than some other way. The force of the declaration we do not seek to avoid. But what we object to is the substitution of the word "state" or "things" for the word "way," making the the apostle say, "I show unto you a more excellent" state of the church, or "I show unto you more excellent" things, than the spiritual gifts. The theory is obliged to substitute one word for another, violating every known rule of just and honorable warfare, before it can make headway at all; for the apostle is manifestly referring to the "way," that is, manner or style of doing something, not to a condition or state. The apostle just preceding the language spoken, had written, "Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Do all speak with tongues? Do all interpret?" Then without answering these questions says, "Seek earnestly the best gifts, and yet show I unto you a more excellent way." That is, "yet," notwithstanding, all do not speak with tongues, all do not prophesy, etc., I show, I do now show unto you a more excellent way, which is the exercise by each one of his own proper gift. The apostle does not say I will show unto you a more excellent way, but I show, I do now show unto you a more excellent way, which more excellent way is more clearly pointed out in the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians.

To the position that the apostle means a more excellent way than the exercise of the best spiritual gifts, we oppose the following objections: There can be nothing better than the best; to say that by descending from the best to a "better way," we improve our condition, is only to do violence to the plain meaning of simple words. In the realm of spiritual power and moral influence, nothing better, nobler, or more efficacious has ever been brought to bear upon the souls of men, than the Holy Ghost; there can then be nothing better than its gifts.

Paul compares the church with all the gifts which God had set in it to a perfectly organized body, capable of the highest and most complete spiritual development; therefore, inasmuch as taking away from that which is perfect always renders it imperfect, taking away from the church any of the gifts which God placed in it, instead of changing it from imperfection to perfection, would change it from perfection to imperfection.

Three of the gifts included in the language, "Seek earnestly the best gifts," are faith, wisdom, and knowledge. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." "To know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent," is "life eternal." Then to banish these three gifts from the church is to cut off the hope of salvation, which, though it may be in the estimation of unbelievers a more excellent way, in the estimation of all true believers is a less excellent way. It will not do here to interpolate the word "miraculous," and make the apostle say, miraculous faith, miraculous wisdom, miraculous knowledge; for this is a bold attempt at perversion. The apostle says no such thing; and whoever attempts to put such language into his mouth, boldly attempts to pervert the word of God. If it is said that this is what the apostle means, and therefore we have the right to supply the word miraculous, we answer it is not what he means, for it is not what he says. Moreover, the working of miracles is a separate gift mentioned separately by the apostle; showing that he did not mean to be understood that the faith, knowledge, and wisdom he spoke of were to be regarded as miraculous, any more than all of God's manifestations and blessings to the world are miraculous, that is wonderful, to those who do not believe.

Unless a dead man is more perfect than a live one, the church is not more perfect without these inspirational gifts than it was with them. As noted already, the apostle compares the church as organized with inspired officers and the gifts of the Spirit, to a perfectly organized body. Therefore, inasmuch as the taking away of the members of a body, disorganizes and kills it, so the taking away of the gifts of the Spirit and the inspired officers of the church would kill the church; therefore the lifeless trunk, moldering to dust, is not to the believer a more excellent body, than that with all its limbs and joints acting as the all-wise organizer, God, intended they should act, presenting a body capable of the highest and best attainments. In this connection we quote the vigorous language of William Howitt in his "History of the Supernatural," volume 1, page 230:—

How is it that those who contend for the cessation of miracles, do not see the argument and feel the logic of St. Paul? If his illustration be worth anything, then a church which has not for its members, persons possessed of all these varied gifts, is no more a Church of Christ than a body is a human body without its members. A Christian, living church, must have members qualified and endowed from the Spirit, with all these gifts, or it is destitute of its members. They are no more living, real members, than a wooden leg, or an artificial hand, or a glass eye is a real member of the human body. A church must have its spiritual members, living and complete, or it is no body of Christ. It may call itself what it will, but that will not make it any more a church.

John Wesley in his notes on the New Testament, when treating of the twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth chapters of first Corinthians, says:—

He describes first the unity of the body, verses 1-27; second, the variety of members and officers, verses 27-30; third, the way of exercising gifts rightly; namely, by love, verse 31, and chapter 13 throughout; and adds fourth, a comparison of several of the gifts with each other, 14th chapter.

It will be noticed that Mr. Wesley held that the thirty-first verse of the twelfth chapter, referred to a way of exercising the gifts, not to a way of conducting the affairs of the church without them.

In the Quarterly Review of April, 1884, we find an article from the pen of J. H. Garrison, in which occurs the following in regard to the illustration used by St. Paul in the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians:—

The whole tenor of the chapter in which the illustration occurs is to show the unity of aim in all the diverse operations of the same Spirit. Just as the members of the human body, animated and controlled by the human spirit, make one body, so the various members of Christ's body, animated and controlled by the Holy Spirit, are one spiritual body.

If the apostle meant that he would after the writing of the thirty-first verse of the twelfth chapter, point out a more excellent way, he never fulfilled his promise. He never did afterwards point out a more excellent way. It is argued that he fulfilled his promise in the thirteenth chapter; but upon examination it is seen, that while he points out a more excellent state of the believers than the one they occupy in this life, he nowhere points out a more excellent way, style, method of exercising or doing anything. He says:—

Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies they shall fail; whether there be tongues they shall cease; whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away.—1 Cor. 13:8.

From this it is clear that the passage to the more excellent state referred to, involves as well the vanishing away of knowledge, as the cessation of tongues and prophecies; and unless it be claimed, either that the church knows nothing, or knows all things, then it cannot be maintained that it is in that more perfect state; for the vanishing away of knowledge can only mean one of two things; the cessation of knowledge altogether, or the reception of such complete knowledge that an incomplete or partial knowledge is swallowed up therein. It will be difficult for any church to maintain the position that it possesses a fullness of knowledge; and it will be equally as difficult to prevail upon any church to acknowledge that it is without knowledge altogether; so no church can maintain the position that it is in the more perfect state.

That the apostle referred to states of believers here and hereafter, is evident from the fact that he states that he occupied the imperfect state when writing, and should occupy the perfect state in the future.

For now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part, but then I shall know even as also I am known.—1 Cor. 13:12.

Paul could not have inherited the two states of the church supposed by the theory in question; for he being an inspired apostle, and having direct communion with God, angels, and Jesus Christ, his very presence would obstruct the wheels of progress, and prevent the ushering in of that glorious day when direct communion with God should cease, and the perfect church should appear. The apostle clearly shows that he refers to a time when partial and imperfect things shall be exchanged for those which are full and perfect. A variety of imperfect languages will be exchanged for a pure and perfect language. Prophecy, foretelling future events, will no longer be needed, because the future as well as past will be before the all-comprehensive vision of the glorified saints. The partial knowledge which we now possess shall be swallowed up in the fullness of knowledge which we shall then receive. As the partial light which the stars and moon provide for us at night is swallowed up and vanishes away before the full light of the morning sun; so the partial things enjoyed by the Saints in their imperfect state of mortality, will be swallowed up and vanish away in their perfect state of immortality.

Now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face.

If the apostle's language was a prophecy that the church when the spiritual gifts ceased should enjoy a more excellent state, we demand to know when that prophecy was fulfilled. The theory in question proceeds upon the supposition that the passing away of that which is imperfect is caused by the coming of that which is perfect; hence, we should look for perfection just in proportion as apostolic inspiration and primitive gifts passed away. Just in proportion as direct communion with God ceased, in just such proportion according to this theory we should look for the perfect state of the church to be inaugurated. A shift, however, is here made, and we are told that it is not the church that is to be perfect, but the law of the gospel. This assumption, however, fails to remedy the defect complained of; for the apostle places the coming "of that which is perfect," and the seeing "face to face," as cotemporaneous events, the latter being the inevitable result of the former. So the coming of that which is perfect spoken of by the apostle, will be attended by that condition of the saints in which they no longer see through a glass darkly, but "face to face." Three things are inseparably connected by the apostle;

the passing away of imperfection, the coming of perfection, and the seeing "face to face." This seeing face to face is manifestly a perfect seeing, as is shown by the imperfect seeing being compared to seeing "through a glass darkly." If the facts of history show, that instead of light and unity increasing in the church as the spiritual gifts were withdrawn, darkness and disunity increased, accompanied with all kinds of blasphemous heresies, the theory in question fails. What are the facts of history in this regard?

After the year 220, from thence to 250, the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit did decrease and grow less in comparison of the time preceding. And at the latter end of that period, Origen acquaints us, that though in his age the gift of prophesying still remained, yet it was decreased, and not in the same measure as in the foregoing age.

In Waddington's Church History, Vol. 1, page 209, we find the following:

But it was an error to confound the three earliest with the three following centuries; as if the same had been the government, spirit, and discipline of the church from the age of Saint Clement to Saint Gregory. We find the first of these periods was somewhat removed from apostolical perfection; but in the second the distance is incalculably multiplied, and that, not only according to the customary progress of unreformed abuses, but also through changing the principles in the administration of the church, which preceded every other cause.

Constantine, though not yet baptized, called himself "the external bishop of the church," (without any protest from the Catholic bishops, not even the bishop of Rome,) and changed its whole constitution to conform it to the new constitution of the state. This baleful union of the Catholic Church with the state, is the true origin of the Roman Catholic Church; but its apostolical and holy character, as the Church of Christ, perished. The glory was departed.

Of commentators' views we have only room to offer a few extracts. First Newton:—

The Empire was idolatrous under the heathen Emperors, and then ceased to be so under the Christian Emperors, and then became so again under the Roman Pontiffs, and hath so continued ever since.—Cause and Cure of Infidelity, p. 144.

John Fleetwood, speaking of the fore part of the second century, says:—

The Christian world of this period, was fast forgetting those apostolic cautions, and drifting away into a darkness that might be felt.—Life of Christ, p. 636.

James Challin:—

Surely there is something in Christianity higher and deeper than the exhibition of it now known. The results as they appear to our eyes cannot be what its author designed only to reach.—Elements of the Gospel, p. 67.

Barton W. Stone:—

Sectarianism, which is only another name for heresy, sprung out of the apostasy, and the parties named themselves according to their own fancy.

Alexander Campbell:—

The Lord Jesus will judge that adulterous brood, and give them over to the burning flame, who have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant, and formed alliances with the governments of the earth. The meaning of this institution, or covenant, has been buried under the rubbish of human tradition for hundreds of years; it was lost in the dark ages, and has never been until recently disinterred, and, since the grand apostasy was completed, to the present generation, the gospel of Jesus Christ has not been laid open to mankind in its original plainness and simplicity. A veil in reading the New Covenant has been upon the hearts of Christians, as the apostle declared it was upon the hearts of the Jews in reading the old covenant at the close of that economy.—Christian System, p. 189.

A "grand apostasy completed," and a veil over the eyes of the people in reading the terms of the New Covenant, do not bear much resemblance to seeing "face to face."

If it is claimed that Paul's prophecy has been fulfilled in the work of the Reformers, we say first, that the Reformation came too late for such fulfillment; for as shown before, the passing away of that which is imperfect, which this theory supposes to be the state of the church when it enjoyed direct communion with God, was to be immediately followed by the coming of that which is perfect. No lapse of hundreds of years between the two events was contemplated. This is a sufficient answer to this assumption. But, if the position is still adhered to, we ask which one of the Reformers fulfilled the prophecy of the apostle. Which one of them established a church, which is either possessed of all knowledge or of no knowledge at all? Almost all the Reformers, except Alexander Campbell, believed in the miraculous manifestation of God's power, and deplored the loss by the church of the spiritual gifts. If Alexander Campbell's work was a realization of the fulfillment of Paul's supposed prophecy that the church should enter a more excellent state when deprived of the spiritual gifts, a double interest should center upon the facts connected with the present state of that work. In an article headed, "Can We Divide," written by J. H. Garrison, a representative man of the Disciples, or Christians, published in the Quarterly Review for April, 1884, a representative paper of that movement, the following interesting language is used:—

The time has come, however, in our own history, when the principles we have been so zealously urging upon others, must submit to the supreme test of self-application. If they do not stand this test—if they fail to prevent division in the ranks of their own advocates under circumstances similar to those which have caused division among others—they will stand convicted of impracticability, if nothing worse, at the bar of public sentiment. A ship may cross the Atlantic in fair weather and on a smooth sea, and yet be fatally defective in some essential point of seaworthiness. But when the faithful vessel has plowed its way through mountain billows whipped into fury by the dark wing of the tempest, and engines, pumps, propeller, rudder, hull, masts, rigging, compass—all have stood the test of the storm-king's fury, and have landed the precious cargo safely at the desired haven, then, and not till then, does it command the full confidence of sailors and ocean voyagers.

It cannot be denied that we are now on trial before the world, and before God, on this fundamental feature of our religious movement. Our failure at this point would be a grievous blow to the growing sentiment in favor of Christian unity throughout the religious world. Nay more; it would send back into cheerless infidelity many who have been groping their way out of the tangled maze of doubt by the light which our position has thrown upon their path.

The sum of these extracts is this: The Disciple Church is a mere experiment, and if it proves successful, it will live to do good; but if it proves unsuccessful, it will be a great injury. What it will result in, is a matter for the future, and that alone, to determine. This from the best of authority, settles the question under consideration against the Disciples. I will, however, offer one more quotation, from the pen of Clark Braden, in the same number of the Review:—

Will our papers stop falsifying the teaching of the Bible, the plain declarations of the Son of God, and all sense, and stop jabbering the stuff about "pieces of days being counted for whole days," and cease retailing this papal falsehood that Jesus was crucified on Friday, and lay in the tomb thirty hours?

No other church having had the audacity to make the claim in question, no other need be considered.

There is a logic superior to all other logic, the logic of events. When facts and theories stand opposed to each other, theories must fail. Theories do well enough as playthings for the would-be wise; but when exploded by facts and still adhered to, they become the "heritage of fools." The theory in question supposes, and the supposition is vital to its existence, that the spiritual gifts and miraculous manifestations attending the gospel in the days of the apostles, were to cease when the apostles and those to whom they communicated these blessings were dead. If, therefore, the facts are that these gifts did not cease at the time supposed, but continued for a long time thereafter, the theory wanting support in evidence, falls to the ground.

Irenæus, who lived at the end of the second century, says:—

Far are they—the churches—from raising the dead in the manner the Lord and his apostles did, by prayer; yet even among the brethren, frequently in a case of necessity, when a whole church has united in much fasting and prayer, the spirit has returned to the ex-animated body, and the man has been granted to the prayers of the saints.—Eusebius, p. 214.

Irenæus says again:—

Some most certainly and truly cast out demons, so that frequently those persons themselves that were cleansed from wicked spirits, believed and were received into the church. Others have the knowledge of things to come, as also visions and prophetic communications. Others heal the sick by the imposition of hands, and restore them to health. And moreover, as we said above, even the dead have been raised, and continued with us many years. And why should we say more? It is impossible to tell the number of gifts which the church throughout the world received from God, and the deeds performed in the name of Jesus Christ, who was crucified under Pontius Pilate, and this too every day for the benefit of the heathen, without receiving any, or exacting any money.

He says again:—

We hear of many of the brethren in the church who have prophetic gifts, and who speak in all tongues through the Spirit, and who also bring to light the secret things of men for their benefit, and who expound the mysteries of God.—Eusebius p. 215.

Tertullian, who lived in the latter part of the second century, in his work "De Anima," says:—

We had a right after what was said by St. John to expect prophesyings; and we not only acknowledged these spiritual gifts, but we are permitted to enjoy the gifts of a prophetess.

Let some one be brought forward here at the foot of your judgment seat, who it is agreed is possessed of a demon. When commanded by any Christian to speak, that spirit shall as truly call itself a demon, as elsewhere falsely a god.—Apology, 23.

St. Cyprian, who was a pupil of Tertullian, and who suffered martyrdom in A. D. 258, says:—

There is no measure or rule in the dispensation of the gifts of heaven, as in those of the gifts of earth. The Spirit is poured forth liberally, without limits or barriers. It flows without stop, it overflows without stint.

He invited Demetrius, proconsul of Africa, to witness the exorcism of demons.

You may see them by our voice, and through the operation of the unseen majesty, lashed with stripes and scorched with fire, stretched out under the increase of their multiplying penalty, shrieking, groaning, entreating, confessing from which they came, even in the hearing of their own worshipers, and either leaping out suddenly, or gradually vanishing, as faith in the sufferer aids, or grace in the healer conspires.—Life of Cyprian's Deacon Pontius, 17.

Origen was contemporary with Cyprian and says:—

There are no longer any prophets, nor any miracles amongst the Jews, of which there are large vestiges amongst the Christians.

He argues against Celsus thus:—

By the use of the name alone of God and Jesus, we too have seen many set free from severe complaints; from loss of mind, from madness, and numberless such other evils, which neither man nor devils had cured.—Book 3, 24.

Eusebius in the commencement of the fourth century, says:—

Who is he who knows not how delightful it is to us that through the name of our Savior, coupled with prayers that are pure, we cast out every kind of demon? And thus the word of our Savior, and the doctrine which is from him, have made us all to be greatly superior to the power which is invisible, and impervious to inquiry.—Eusebius, p. 340.

St. Ambrose, who lived to the end of the fourth century, in his fourth epistle, says:—

You know, ye yourselves saw that many were cleansed from evil spirits, very many on touching with their hands the garments of the saints, were delivered from the afflictions which oppressed them. The miracles of the old time are come again, when by the advent of the Lord Jesus a fuller grace was shed on earth.

St. Augustine, who lived to near the middle of the fifth century (430), bears ample testimony to the continuation of the miraculous powers in the church then.—Hist. Supernatural, vol. 1, p. 448.

St. Jerome, also living in the fifth century, relates numerous miracles, such as the restoration of the sight of a woman who had been blind for ten years, the instant cure of the bites of serpents, of paralytic persons, of the casting out of devils, etc. Sulpicius, in his dialogues and life of St. Martin in the fifth century, relates a number of miracles, which he professes to have seen himself.—Ibid., p. 448.

This line of evidence is strengthened and enforced by all the early historians of the church, who had a much better opportunity to judge of the weight that should be given to the testimony of the Fathers referred to. We have a series of five historians of the church, reaching from the apostolic times to the end of the six century, Eusebius, Socrates, Scholasticus, Sozomen, Theodoret, and Evagrius. Eusebius quotes Hegisippus, and Papias, who went before him; Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret, all treat of nearly the same period of time, from about A. D. 300, to A. D. 445; Evagrius advances from 431 to 594 A. D.; yet all maintain the same great doctrine of the copious existence and free exercise of the miraculous power in the church during those six centuries.

Grotius, the great jurist, John Locke, the great moral philosopher, and Dr. Ralph Cudworth, were perfectly satisfied of the historical authenticity of the miracles recorded by the early Fathers.

When this array of testimony is presented, nothing is opposed to it but an unsupported denial. What does such a denial mean? 1. That the evidence submitted cannot be met and overcome by any contradictory evidence. 2. That the witnesses cannot be shown to bear false testimony. 3. That the case in favor of the continuance of miracles long after the theory in question supposes them to have ceased, is made, and cannot be in any way overcome. 4. It asserts that the very historians upon whom we rely for the canon of Scripture that these same theorists assert is absolutely perfect, are not only unreliable, but absolute falsifiers. When two parties enter court, one affirming and the other denying certain things, and the affirmative offers a host of witnesses to prove his position, whose veracity is unimpeached by any evidence, and the negative offers no evidence whatever, it does not take a very astute judge, nor one very extensively learned in the law, to tell which way the case should be decided.

Miracles, then, did not cease at the time this objection affirms they were to cease. Facts well attested and absolutely impregnable, are opposed to this theory. It is therefore as false in fact as we have before seen it is in logic. If we should say to a man, "You are not able to raise a hundred pounds from the earth," and he immediately steps to a substance of that weight and raises it, how much is our bare assertion worth? The theory in question says that miracles ceased with the apostles and those upon whom they laid their hands; the facts are that they did not so cease. How worthless then the theory.

There is however an attempt made to bolster up the falling fabric, by the assumption that the twelve apostles were called by Christ, and endowed with miraculous power, in order to the giving through them to the world of a perfect law, the law of the gospel; and that when this perfect law should have been given, then inspiration was to cease, because it had done its work. This supposition will be found, however, upon examination to only make the matter worse. It is erroneous in the following respects:—

The supposition that the giving of a perfect law to the world was the work of the apostles, is untrue. In the last chapter of Matthew the Savior gives the apostles their commission:—

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen. —Matt. 28: 19, 20.

Just what the apostles were commanded to teach and introduce to the world as the doctrine of Christ is here pointed out; namely, "all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Jesus then had already given the full and perfect law of the gospel; and the work of the apostles was to teach that law to the nations of the earth. If then the object of inspiration was the giving of this perfect law, it should have ceased with Christ.

The twelve apostles chosen by Christ were Simon, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James, Simon called Zelotes, Judas the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot. After Judas Iscariot's traitorous act, Matthias was chosen to take his place. The twelve above enumerated, then, with Matthias in the place of Judas Iscariot, were sent forth to give to the world a perfect law. Let us note carefully their work. Of this twelve we have writings from Peter, John, James, and Jude; but not a word of either preaching or writing from any one of the others. If Christ chose twelve men to do a certain work, he evidently designed that each of those twelve should do a certain part of it; else his wisdom in selecting so great a number is at fault. If that work which those twelve men were to do was the giving to the world of a perfect law in the form of the New Testament Scriptures, then all the preaching and all the writing of every one of those twelve inspired men must be preserved and given to the world in order to the accomplishment of the work designed. If the object of inspiration is the communication to the world and the perpetuation in the world of a perfect law, then whenever inspiration operated upon any one of those apostles in preaching, writing, counseling, or advising, whether in public or in private, such preaching, writing, counseling, or advising, must be preserved and given to the world, or the work will not be accomplished. If this position be true, the object in inspiring the twelve apostles, was to produce through each one of them a certain effect, the sum of all these effects to be the perfected gospel. Inasmuch then as nothing is perfect if any of its parts are lacking, if any of the inspirational writings, preaching, counseling, advising, or exhorting of these twelve apostles is not found in the New Testament Scriptures, such New Testament Scriptures, according to this theory, do not contain the perfected law of the gospel. To illustrate: Suppose twelve men are called to build a certain building, each one being assigned to a certain portion thereof. A fragment of the work of four of these men is preserved, and not one particle of the work of the other eight; would anyone but a modern theologian tell us that such a building is perfect, even as perfect as God himself could make it?

If the communications through these twelve were to constitute a perfect law, then any addition from any other source would make such law imperfect; for either adding to or taking from that which is perfect, renders it imperfect. In the New Testament we have the epistles of St. Paul, who was not one of the original twelve whom Jesus called to give the perfect law of the gospel to the world. There is no account of his being called to fill the place of a transgressor, and the fair presumption is that he was called to fill the place of one who had done the work which Christ designed he should do, and had fallen asleep. Clearly then according to the position under review, the writings of Paul are an addition to the perfect law of God given through the original twelve. His writings then should at once be rejected. The great building of heavenly truth was completed by other hands. Did this perfect building need another story, an addition on the top of its roof, or a side room or two after its completion according to the design of the all-wise Architect? There is also no proper place for the inspiration of the Apostle Barnabas; no chance for the exercise of the inspirational gift which Paul exhorted Timothy to exercise; no opportunity for the exercise of the inspirational gifts that were in the church; these would all be unwarranted usurpations, or useless plays; attempts to stand in the shoes of the first twelve apostles, and in their stead add beauty and completeness to the great building of God's truth. Such are the absurdities to which false theories lead; such the vanity of trifling with the plain promises of God.

We enforce our objections to the theory in question; that is, the cessation of the spiritual gifts, by the promise of Christ in the sixteenth chapter of Mark:—

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe, etc.

Every attempt has been made to get rid of this passage of scripture; every excuse originated for regarding it as spurious. Yet the late revisers of the New Testament, upon a thorough and scholastic review and comparison of all the manuscripts of the gospel of St. Mark, concluded it was genuine.

In this passage of scripture three distinct promises are made by the Savior, into which one and the same element enters:—

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe.

The same kind of belief essential to salvation, will cause the signs to follow; the same kind of unbelief which is damning in its tendency, will cause the signs not to follow. He that believeth with a proper belief and is baptized, may be saved; he that does not believe with this same kind of belief, shall be damned; and these signs shall follow those who believe with this same kind of belief. The promise of these blessings here occurs in such a connection, that to avoid its force and applicability, we must also avoid the force and applicability of the promise of salvation. If one is general, the other is also; if one is limited as to time or place, the other is also; if the promise of the signs following the believers was applicable only to the apostles, the promise of salvation upon the terms set forth, was applicable only to the apostles. Any attempt to separate these three promises, and make one of any broader application than the other, is arbitrary and unwarranted.

Thus we see that the attempt to avoid the force of St. Paul's reasoning destroys the church by lopping off its members; the attempt to confine inspiration to the twelve apostles destroys the validity of the New Testament, for not even a majority of the twelve lawgivers is heard therein; and the attempt to avoid the force of Christ's promise that the signs should follow the believers, destroys the hope of salvation. Thus this theory proceeds, abandoning the plain promises of God, and leading the way to absolute unbelief.

THOUGHTS CONCERNING THE GATHERING.

Bro. Hilliard's article upon the subject of gathering seems to have thrilled the whole body more or less, and all along the line comes the evidences that the sound has struck chords both responsive and otherwise. Many of the sober thinking ones, however, are bringing forth good strong evidences that there should be a preparation in the minds of the saints for an authoritative message in the matter. That there should appear an opposing element is no evidence of the untruthfulness of the position taken by the writer, although we grant that it is possible the position may be incorrect. A difference of opinion upon such matters, to my mind, proves that a more thorough education is in demand.

It is evidently a live subject, and one that should be considered well by every Latter Day Saint. The wail, "God forbid that we should fall into the mistakes of the first organization," is not without significance. Yet it is just as pertinent to cry God forbid that we should be found in cob-webbed, moss-covered ruts, so thoroughly "established" that the Divine Leader must need seek elsewhere for material through which to manifest his omnipotence.

To wait for a direct command from heaven before giving the matter consideration is not only injudicious but positively dangerous. For who knows his degree of faith in God enough to foretell just how he would treat such a command so out of harmony with what the world and creedology thinks of such things, unless he has first intelligently considered the matter, and is living somewhat in a state of expectancy.

Considering past history, I think the good Lord knows human nature, even modified by gospel influences, too well to trust the redemption of the church to such an injudicious course as to command saints without first acquainting them somewhat concerning the nature and design of the commandment.

True there may be test cases in which God commands without first instructing, and it would be a blissful condition of things were we all so full of faith and trust that such could be a successful modus operandi now; but dealing with things as they are, and dealing with things as we hope they will be, is not altogether one thing.

It appears that God would operate upon the principle of intellectual expansion as well as that of humble trust. Thus we discover that in this matter he has not left us in the dark, but has already informed us that he would not spring a command upon us unawares, but that there should be a preparation.

It becomes the duty, therefore, of every saint to enter into investigation preparatory to preparation.

If I am truly a Latter Day Saint, of course I am an indorser of the Doctrine and Covenants. If so, I must believe that for us, so far as locality is concerned, Jackson County, Missouri, United States, is Zion. (Section 98:9, and other places.) And most assuredly it is the design of the Almighty to gather his people in one place, sometime, for their good.

When that sometime is may not be so readily discovered; but whenever it may be, this much is certain, the people must be prepared as well as the way. And as God has also arranged the organization of the church with its "apostles and prophets," etc., for the "edifying of the body," I hail with gladness all that may come lawfully from them upon this subject.

The thought that there is to be a place of comparative safety and rest this side the "narrow house" for the poor, downtrodden, oppressed, and suffering meek of the earth is inspiring of itself, and appeals to the sympathetic heart with a tenacity that cannot be easily shaken off. But the success of an undertaking of such magnitude can only be accomplished by divine wisdom, and by that alone do I wish to be actuated in the matter.

One thing, however, is evident,—that if Zion is to be "lovely," a place of peace, and happy prosperity, a desirable place for the "pure in heart,"—it must be other than a dumping ground for selfishness, anarchy, human vagaries, and a host of other accomplishments (?) possessed by mortality not altogether conquered by grace in latter-day Israel.

This means preparation in the very "alpha" of the matter.

Every saint should consider that he must contribute to Zion just what he is himself as well as what he possesses of financial acquirements, not that he should necessarily be dispossessed of them, as I understand it. But he takes with him his ability or inability to labor either by hands or brain for the welfare of himself and all the great family. If he is an idler, then he must prepare for Zion. If quarrelsome, selfish, envious, backbiter, jealous, dishonest, miserly, filthy, or in any way disqualified from being an ornament to society and a benefactor to humanity, then Zion is no place for him, or rather he is no fit subject for Zion.

The saint that cannot live at peace with his brethren scattered over the earth will not likely do much better in Zion. All this calls for thought and preparation.

And as all preparation for Zion only better fits us for whatever position we may hold wherever we are in a moral sense at least, we are impressed with the divinity of its origin and feel indeed that the time has come that we should be taught concerning the matter, that in all things we may be "children of light."

H. J. DAVISON.

FOOLISH TALKING AND JESTING.

In Paul's letter to the saints at Ephesus he tells them that neither "foolish talking nor jesting" is to be once named among them. Now if Paul's advice to the saints at Ephesus is applicable to the saints of to-day, then many of the saints of to-day are breaking the law of God by foolish talking and jesting. The term foolish talking means talking in such a way that no real benefit is derived from the conversation in which such talk is used. Foolish talking and jesting are usually connected together—that is where one engages in one he usually engages in the other also. We are told in Matthew 12:36 and that too by our Savior "that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."

Brethren and sisters too often speak idle words—words that are of no profit whatever, hence such should be avoided. Some one in writing on the Sunday school work said, "carelessness in one thing leads to carelessness in another," which is true; hence the necessity of us being careful in the selection and use of our language. Good and proper language tends both to morality and spirituality, while its abuse is detrimental to the formation of good character. Jesus says:—

Let your communication be Yea, yea; Nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.—Matt. 5:39, I. T.

Some have jested so long that it has become habitual, and they conclude that life would be dull without it. Now this is a mistake, provided they put in the time in useful conversation that is now spent in jesting and idle talk. Using proper language, and conversing on proper subjects, soon become wearisome to some. The reason for this is evident; it is because that so few of us are used to hearing such conversation. In fact many of us converse so seldom that we are awkward in handling the subjects on which we speak. When persons talk in a jesting manner much of the time when they do begin to converse on some subject of importance, they often change both the tone and key of the voice so much that it is not pleasant.

If we saints will converse more on subjects of importance with each other we will be greatly benefited, and our influence for good with the world will be increased. If we do what we can to engage in useful and pleasant conversation, and then ask God to help us where we fail, he will do so. I don't mean by this that we are to talk all the time when we are not alone; there is a time for all things; a time to talk and a time to keep silent,—and we should learn when each is to be had. When I say that we as saints should converse freely with each other and the world, and that without jesting or joking, I do not mean by that that we are to confine the subject of conversation to the Bible alone; yet we should converse on no subject except that by which we may honor and glorify God.

Taking this view then of topics for conversation, we see it gives us a very wide range of thought, and gives us the privilege of talking on a very great variety of subjects, which indeed is necessary to the proper development of character. The ministry in the church should set the proper example in these things. Elders sometimes jest so much when among the saints, that they fail to teach them their duties, and so the saints drift out into worldliness and associate among the giddy and the gay, and are likely to lose their soul,—the elders being largely responsible for it.

In 1832, December 27, the Lord said through his chosen prophet:—

Therefore cease from all your light speeches, from all laughter, from all your lustful desires, from all your pride and light-mindedness, and from all your wicked doings.—D. C. 85:37.

This is plain enough, and should be heeded by us as a people. Now how is this state of things to be brought about? It will only be by the saints giving heed to the teaching of Christ touching this matter. It will not be done at once, but by individual and continued effort it may be finally brought about.

Some reading this article may believe the writer believes in being long faced and sad, and continually looking as if some of his friends were dead. I believe just the opposite. I acknowledge, however, that I do sometimes look sad when I see people so light-minded and jocular. It is a very pleasant sight to see two or more of the saints pleasantly conversing on some topic of interest while their countenances beam with joy and satisfaction because of the mutual benefit so obtained. To participate in such a scene is of much more benefit, as the writer believes, than that to be obtained in a dull prayer meeting. So we see one may be cheerful and pleasant and not light-minded. In proof of this see Doctrine and Covenants:—

Elders and men of the church should be of cheerful heart and countenance among themselves and in their intercourse with their neighbors and men of the world; yet they must be without blame in word and deed.—119:3.

Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

ORA V. HOLMES, Sec.

No. 123 Sutton Street, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Miscellaneous Department.

RELIGIO.

HOME CLASS DEPARTMENT.

Every once in awhile we hear from a young person who says, "I wish I lived where I could have the advantages of the Religio." We have wondered what might be done for these isolated and scattered ones that they might not have to fall behind their brothers and sisters more favorably situated, but that they might have a part in, and derive of the benefits of this movement.

The opportunity of a Home Class Department is now offered you, whereby you may become a member of the General Association, take up its course of study work, and receive the help and encouragement the society could give you. Your names will be enrolled under this head by the General Secretary so that we may know who you are and where, and may find out your needs.

Not having the advantages of being able to discuss lesson points with numbers of others, as in a society, your questions and perplexities will be answered and explained in Autumn Leaves; any light you need for a clearer understanding of what you study as you go along will, so far as possible, be given. You will not feel yourselves so isolated when there is a band, constituted of others like yourself, working to a common end. It will establish a sympathy between you, and isolated ones may become acquainted with one another. The home work idea is not a new one; it has been tried successfully, and there are circles having large membership in other societies. It throws a silken cord around, drawing lonely, distant ones nearer together, in closer association with one another, and gives the brightness and exhilaration of feeling you are one of those whose motto is "Onward and Upward."

A home class may consist of one, a family, two or three young persons who can meet together, a few neighbors.

All that you would need is a Book of Mormon, and it would be well for you to have the Archaeology Committee's Report, (it is only fifty cents,) because it gives all the maps for geographical and archaeological study in connection with the Book of Mormon which the societies testify adds much to the attractiveness and clearness of the study proper, as it certainly is of profit, for it is required of us to make ourselves enlightened in all ways in regard to the "marvelous work and a wonder," that we may be better prepared to convince others, and to bring about the blessed conditions of Zion which is to be built up by a people who will "come higher." Autumn Leaves furnishes the archaeological readings, the lesson outlines and programs, and any helps or comments on the lesson necessary.

Your financial obligations, for of course you understand that the Lord's work, or any branch of it must have temporal support; you cannot enjoy privileges without contributing to the means that is necessary to carry on the work; so your share to the General Association would be an initiation fee of five cents when you send your name to the Secretary to be enrolled as a member of the Home Class Department, and a small sum annually, about twenty-five cents.

Every earnest, progressive young man or woman who is not situated so that he may belong to a society should want to keep in touch with the general progress. There is no time for delay in this matter. The review of the Book of Mormon begins with the May programs in April number of Leaves. Do not wait for others; push right out; send in your name. You commence, then tell others you have joined, and ask them to unite with you. Pause not, wait for none. There are lots of folks in this world that just want some one to make the start to give them courage and enable them to make up their minds. Your prompt action will give incentive to others.

Write to any of us. Send your name to General Secretary, J. C. Hitchcock, 2507 Slattery Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Realizing, as we do, the good to come from a careful study of the Book of Mormon, we feel justified in urging upon the attention of the young people the advisability of joining in this good work.

And will not the brethren of the ministry please bear it in mind, and advise with scattered members and new converts upon this important matter? There can certainly be no question of the utility of such a systematic course of study on archaeology and Book of Mormon as we are presenting.

Praying the Lord to aid and bless this feature of our work as he has others, and as it may merit, we are, for improvement,

ZION'S RELIGIO-LITERARY SOCIETY,

On hearing the angel's message, and being convinced of the truth, he was baptized in Bay City, twelve years ago last September; died December 13, 1898. At the time of his death he was 66 years, 4 months, and 7 days old. He had been a great sufferer for near eleven years. Elder Hugill preached his funeral sermon. He leaves a sorrowing wife and nine children to mourn.

On February 16, 1844, he was married to Miss Mary Ann Baker. There were born unto them seven sons and seven daughters, and he leaves a wife, four sons, five daughters, thirty-five grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. He leaves to the community the memory of an honest man, who discharged faithfully all the duties which fell to his lot, and endured uncomplainingly the hardships of pioneer life; to his relatives the recollection of a loving husband and indulgent father. HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

NEW STYLE OF TESTAMENT.

VOLUME WITH MARKED PASSAGES TO BE PUBLISHED.

A novel edition of the New Testament is soon to be off the press. It is to be called "The Marked New Testament." Its text is to be the same as that of the "authorized version of King James" Testament. The novelty of it is to be in the marking. Passages in it are underscored and some of them, which are regarded more desirable to be read, are to be made conspicuous by wide lines of red ink. The intention is to present a copy of the New Testament for the greater convenience of busy people and those who are systematic students of the Scriptures.

The author of the idea and the constructor of the new edition is Mrs. Stephen Menzies. The particular markings made by Mrs. Menzies have been submitted to and approved by fourteen clergymen of England and an equal number in the United States representing the evangelical denominations. The line of biblical thought followed by Dwight L. Moody has been followed and it has his endorsement.

These emphatic marks have been placed against two hundred passages with the view of presenting what is called "Christ's plan of salvation." All controversial doctrines are sought to be avoided. If any controversy is presented it would be on the judgment of the editor who has marked so few passages when there are so many that appeal to the Bible student for emphasis as "containing the breath of life itself."

Advance sheets of the book show that it will be as attractive to the eye as it is novel to the student. The markings have the odd semblance of penstrokes. The recurrent notes of these passages are "Christ," "faith," "belief," "atonement," and "redemption." The verse that has been made most conspicuous by marks is John 3:16.

Another novelty in the way of an edition of the New Testament is in course of preparation and it is to be called the "Twentieth Century Testament." The editor of this is W. T. Stead, of London, who will be assisted by William Hudson Harper, of the University of Chicago. The novelty of it is to be in the fact that it is to be rewritten into plain, correct, but vernacular English—the English of good writers of to-day as distinguished from the archaic style of the Bible as it now appears in English.

In the meantime, however, the marked edition is soon to appear and it is promised it will cause a sensation. It will be issued in Chicago and sold for ten cents a copy. From the advance sheets of it some of the passages marked to attract most attention are given as follows:—

FROM MATTHEW'S GOSPEL.

Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy: son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.—9: 2.

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—11: 28.

And besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment; and as many as touched were made perfectly whole.—14: 36.

O, woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.—15: 28.

Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.—18: 3.

And the door was shut.—25: 10. [Parable of the foolish virgins.]

And they crucified him.—27: 35.

He saved others; himself he cannot save.—27: 42.

Why hast thou forsaken me?—27: 46.

Truly this was the Son of God.—27: 54.

FROM MARK'S GOSPEL.

If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean.—1: 40, 41.

When Jesus saw their faith he said unto the sick of the palsy: Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.—2: 5.

I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.—2: 17.

Be not afraid, only believe.—5: 36.

They . . . besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment; and as many as touched him were made whole.—6: 56.

For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul.—8: 36.

Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.—9: 24.

Crucify him. Then Pilate said unto them, why, what evil hath he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, crucify him.—15: 13, 14.

And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith: And he was numbered with the transgressors.—15: 28.

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—16: 15.

FROM LUKE'S GOSPEL.

I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance.—5: 32.

(Parable of the house built upon the rock, and of the house built upon the earth)—6: 48, 49.

(Creditor having two debtors.) And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both.—7: 42.

(Woman of the box of ointment.) Thy sins are forgiven. Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.—7: 48, 49, 50.

Go thy way: Thy faith hath made thee whole.—17: 19.

Thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations.—20: 46, 47.

FROM JOHN'S GOSPEL.

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.—1: 12.

Ye must be born again.—3: 7.

For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—3: 16.

He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.—3: 18.

He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.—3: 35.

Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.—6: 37.

If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.—8: 24.

It is finished.—19: 30.

PASSAGES FROM THE ACTS.

Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven, given among men whereby we must be saved.—4: 12.

To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.—10: 42, 43.

What must I do to be saved? And they said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."—16: 30, 31.

PASSAGES FROM ROMANS.

For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.—1: 16.

All the world may become guilty before God. Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight.—3: 19, 20.

Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.—3: 27.

For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.—6: 23.

There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus.—8: 1.

FROM 1 CORINTHIANS.

For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.—3: 11.

The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—6: 56, 57.

Not long ago Mr. Moody fortified himself for the numerous requests that come to him for a loan of his Bible from persons who wish to mark theirs as he has marked his by having twenty copies similarly marked. The "Marked New Testament" will satisfy those who wish to follow the particular course of Bible study set down in this novel edition.—Chicago Tribune, April 23, 1899.

DIVORCES IN VARIOUS STATES.

With the enactment of the law requiring one year's residence in North Dakota before a divorce can be granted, another State has joined the decent majority of those which are not inclined to make things easy for people who wish to be separated from wife or husband.

Oklahoma is now the only State or Territory in which only ninety days' residence is required.

The term of residence now required in other states is as follows:—

Six months: Arizona, Idaho, Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas, and Wyoming.

One year: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia, Washington, and Wisconsin.

Two years: Florida, Indiana, Maryland, North Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont.

Three years: Connecticut, New Jersey.

Five years: Massachusetts (unless parties are residents at the time of marriage). . . —Chicago Tribune, April, '99.

SPLIT ON EVANGELICAL ISSUE.

Anderson, Indiana, April 15.—Early in the week the Young Men's Christian Association had an election of directors. Several Catholic and other nonevangelical members were disfranchised. The association officials said the rules of the association forbade any but members of evangelical churches to cast ballots. Father Mulcahy, Catholic, and the Rev. Mr. Tinck, a Lutheran minister, vigorously objected. Much defining of the word evangelical was resorted to. The association contended it was settled at Portland, Maine, in 1869.

The Catholic members are declaring they will withdraw from the association. Father Mulcahy says they went into the association without consulting him.

It developed to-day that the father of one of the rejected voters is a Mason.

The point raised here is up for the first time in several years, and it is feared that it will cause the association the loss of many members. The National Board will be urged to act on this matter at once.—Chicago Tribune, April 16, 1899.

THE MANNA OF THE BIBLE.

In a recent number of La Nature there is an interesting note by M. Henry Castrey on the manna of the desert, which played such an important part in the history of the Jews. At the present day Arabs who are compelled to traverse the sandy desert wastes of Arabia not only feed their camels upon this little known food, but also consume it themselves. The "manna" is really a fungus, the thallophyte, either Canova esculenta or Lichen esculentus. The fungus is very abundant and is found upon the sand after every rain, sometimes in great mounds or heaps. It is of a gray color and is about the size of a pea, and it breaks with a mealy fracture, and the taste is rather agreeable and somewhat sweet. When eaten it acts as a laxative, and the analysis shows that the fungus has the following composition:—

	Per cent.
Water	16
Nitrogenous matter.....	14
Non-nitrogenous matter.....	29
Carbohydrates	32
Fat	4
Mineral matter.....	5

This analysis demonstrates the fact that the manna, while not a complete food in the strict sense of the term, is still rich in certain kinds of food material and is capable of sustaining life for a time.—Scientific American, April 22, 1899.

UNOCCUPIED PUBLIC LANDS IN OLD STATES.

There still remain in some of the older States large areas of public lands that have been taken up, but most of them are practically worthless. In Alabama there are 522,373 acres, in Arkansas 3,696,990 acres, in Florida 1,757,275 acres, Kansas 1,060,883, Louisiana 755,545, Michigan 505,895, Minnesota 5,720,326, Mississippi 383,950, Missouri 445,911, and Wisconsin 413,799. The largest area of unoccupied public land is in Montana, where there are over 71,000,000 acres, more than four-fifths of the entire territory. In North and South Dakota only half the land is occupied; in Oregon only one-third of it. In Utah, out of a total of 52,000,000 acres, only 3,000,000 are occupied.

MORMON CHURCH BURNED IN KENTUCKY.

A church building five miles northwest of Vanceburg, Lewis County, Kentucky, belonging to the Utah Mormon Church, was burned last fall, and it was rumored in some of the newspapers that the "Josephites," meaning the Reorganized Church, had burned it.

Bro. Heman C. Smith, one of our corresponding editors, wrote to Mr. Ben E. Rich, in charge of the Southern States' mission, at Chattanooga, Tennessee, asking him whether his people charged the burning of that church near Vanceburg, Kentucky, to the "Josephites." We give his answer below:—

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.,
Feb. 17, 1899.

MR. HEMAN C. SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Sir:—Some days since we were in receipt of your favor of the 10th inst., which was referred to the president of the East Kentucky conference, which embraced the branch of the church where the meeting house was burned last fall, and have only just received his reply to our questions. We herewith quote the words of President Mendenhall: "Since the 'Josephites' came here during the fall of 1897, persecution has been increasing against us. We do not suspect them as the ones who burnt the church house. The house burned was located about four miles northwest of Vanceburg, Lewis County, Kentucky."

Trusting that this will be satisfactory to you, I remain,

Very truly yours,

BEN E. RICH.

We hope that no member of the "Josephites," the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will be guilty of anything so dastardly mean and low as to resort to the burning of property, public or private, or to any sort of personal violence, as a measure of opposition to the church in Utah, or any other church or denomination whatever. There is nothing creditable to men or devils in such work.

We are pleased that Elder Rich exonerates our people from the charge of burning the church; notwithstanding he states that since our elders went into that region in 1897 persecution had increased against them in their work.

The fact that the Reorganized Church does oppose the missionaries sent out from Utah, may possibly make their mission work more arduous and difficult; we should be decidedly sorry if it did not. But that such opposition is persecution, we fail to see.

It is also possible that in some of the places where the elders of the "Josephites" meet the elders from the church in Utah, the people where they meet may reject the message which the Utah men bring and refuse to hear or entertain them; but we see no reason why our opposition should cause persecution.

We deprecate violence of any sort, and have persistently urged it upon the elders of the church that vituperation, abuse, the calling of names and the use of "unsavory epithets" are not argument, nor essential to the presentation and defense of truth.

It appears, however, that there are still some of our force who have not yet learned this lesson by experience, and think it to be a mark of personal independence and manliness not to "obey counsel;" and prefer to follow the bent of their own minds in argumentation.

The Reorganized Church began its opposition to the doctrine and practice of plural or polygamous marriage, and other wrong doctrines and teaching in 1852, and we see no reason why we should cease such opposition. We joined issue squarely and took for the basis and support of our contention the word of God, which our Utah antagonists so recklessly abandoned under the lead and teaching of President Brigham Young, and we shall fight it out on these lines if it takes until the summer of the resurrection to win the victory. So elders of the faith, meet and oppose error and wrong teaching wherever you find it, but in doing it be courteous and manly as well as courageous. Do not stoop to mean, contemptible, or vicious ways of speech, argument, or deed.

A CORRECTION.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 23, 1899.

Editors of the Herald; Dear Brethren:—Pardon me for calling your attention to a few historical errors which have somehow crept into your leading editorial for the last issue of the Herald, which article appears under the caption of "Who is the Church?"

In referring to Wesley and Watson, of the Methodist Church, you call them "Bishops," whereas the truth is, I believe, they were never ordained to that office. Moreover, Watson was only about ten years old when Wesley died; and he did not figure as a minister in the Methodist Church, until many years after the formation of the Methodist Society. He was, it is true, an eminent minister and author, but was not accepted by his brethren as specially representative. Indeed, he was declared to be heterodox for years, by many of his brethren, the pressure of which caused him to leave the Wesley Methodists and unite with the "New Movement," with which body he remained for some years.

Again; you represent Sidney Rigdon and Oliver Cowdery as having been "severed" from the church "by disruption and division," about the same time that Joseph and Hyrum Smith were "severed by death." Is it not a fact, as shown by the history, that Oliver Cowdery was expelled from the church in 1838?

Believing that correct historical statement is important, I have felt that I ought to kindly call your attention to the above, and I trust it will be kindly received.

Your brother,

J. R. LAMBERT.

We are quite willing to be corrected by our brethren where wrong, and so cheerfully agree to the brother's correction. But we may be pardoned possibly a word in explanation.

We were writing in general terms and referring to a statement we saw in the current issue of the newspapers at the time Dr. Thomas was being tried for heresy by the M. E. Church, and upon which he was deposed from the ministry. The elder claimed that he was a Methodist, but the prosecution showed that he taught differently from the so-called founders of the church. The expression used, as we remember it, was that Methodism was the faith of the Methodist Church as expounded by Bishops Wesley and Watson. We were not proposing to state that either Wesley or Watson was ordained to be a bishop.

Further. The dictionary states that a bishop is "an overseer; a spiritual superintendent, ruler, or director." John Wesley was all of these.

The dictionary further states:—

Both the Greek and Latin fathers do, with one consent, declare that bishops were called presbyters, and presbyters bishops, in apostolic times, the name being then common.

In a sketch of Mr. Wesley, found in the American Encyclopedia, No.—Z. Y. M., page 558, this statement occurs:—

Since Wesley had for years been satisfied that the orders of bishop and presbyter in the primitive church were essentially the same, in 1784, with the assistance of others, he ordained Thomas Coke superintendent or bishop of the Methodist societies in America, and empowered him to confer the like office in Francis Asbury.

Wesley was a presbyter, and acting on his understanding that a presbyter was a bishop, he acted as a bishop and ordained a bishop and authorized another to do it.

We used the term in a similar sense that we would the term elders as applied to apostles, seventy, high priests, and elders in the sentence, The elders of the church assembled in conference to do business for the church.

The encyclopedia states that Richard Watson joined the Methodists when he was fifteen, and began preaching and was ordained in 1800, afterward united with the Methodist New Connection, was for some time editor of the Liverpool Courier, returned to the Wesleyan connection, and in 1817 was appointed one of the secretaries of the missionary society in London. He was a prominent advocate of emancipation. His chief works are: "A Defence of the Wesleyan Methodist Missions in the West Indies" (1817); "Theological Institutes, or a View of the Evidences, Doctrines, Morals, and Institutions of Christianity" (6 parts, 1823-28), which is a standard text-book of theology among Methodists."

Whether Watson was thought by many of his brethren to be heterodox or otherwise, the article on Methodism in the Encyclopedia says of him in relation to the Methodist Church:—

The substance of its doctrines is to be found in the writings of John Wesley, John Fletcher, Richard Watson, and others, and in the generally uniform teachings of the Methodist pulpit. (Article Methodism, American Encyclopedia, p. 450.)

On page 452, same article, this is found, treating of the work of the Methodist Church:—

It laid broad the foundations of its educational system, and wonderfully developed its literary and theological character by the works of Thomas Coke, Jabez Bunting, Adam Clarke, Robert Newton, Joseph Benson, Richard Watson, Thomas Jackson, and many others.

Joseph and Hyrum Smith were cotemporary to 1844; their connection with the church was severed by death. Sidney Rigdon was cotemporary with them until their death, from the date of which event his connection with the church ceased by the disruption that ensued. Oliver Cowdery's connection with the church during the lifetime of Joseph Smith ceased in April, 1838, he having been expelled by a Bishop's court at that time. Of this the history also states:—

It has been urged in the cases of Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and others, that there is no record that their cases were ever presented to the church, or that the church ever lifted up their hands against them, as provided in the law; and it is further urged that neither the High Council nor the Bishop's Council have authority to take final action in expelling members; hence that they were not legally expelled from the church.

Oliver Cowdery returned to the faith, if he ever really left it, and united with the church under President Young and died in 1850, it is to be presumed in the faith. He was not a polygamist and did not go to Utah. He evidently tried to undo, so far as he could, the errors of his departure, as it appeared to him to be practicable.

We used the term "connection with the church was severed by division and disruption," regarding Sidney Rigdon and Oliver Cowdery with the thought in mind as to the general fact of the cessation of their labors as representatives of the faith of the church, and not with the idea of being specifically correct as to the date, cause, and manner of their separation from church work.

Thanking the brother for his correction of our error in historical statement we call the attention of the HERALD readers to it that no wrong conception of history may be perpetuated by our mistake.

"NEW STYLE OF TESTAMENT."

Those familiar with the letter and peculiar spirit of Mr. Moody's work will appreciate the scope of the cover article of this number of HERALD, which appears under the heading given above. Mrs. Menzies has submitted the "particular markings" to fourteen American and fourteen English clergymen of the "Evangelical" school. "The line of biblical thought followed by Dwight L. Moody has been followed, and it has his indorsement."

That "line of thought," as many if not all our readers know, presents the "evangelical" conception of Christ, a very limited one indeed. It is represented by the idea of nominal belief that Christ is the Son of God, and omits recognition of or obedience to the "principles of the gospel of Christ," such as baptism, laying on of hands, church organization, authority, and other features of "the doctrine of Christ." It presents Christ without his gospel—if such may be called a presentation of the Christ.

This is another popular "fad," and will run its course, will have its day. Men limited to a few special ideas, whose conceptions of the religious duty of man are based upon a nominal acceptance of Christ, and who are limited to such traditional limitations, necessarily ignore or pass by much of the word of God, and which he has not commissioned anyone to withhold.

It will not do to put the whole for a part; to make a specialty of a small portion of the written word to an ignoring of the remainder. Whence comes the authority to "take from" "the word of God"? If God has not spoken since the days of the apostles, by what authority do men ignore or abrogate what he then declared? The men who object to the principle of present revelation, who practically resent the proposition that God be permitted to speak openly to man by revelation, as in the past, do not hesitate to take from or ignore, according to their fancy, what may to them be objectionable or useless in the revealed word.

This is the logical, the natural result of such ignoring of the word. Men who do not heed what God has declared in the present age, reject much of what was declared by him in other ages; men who base their faith upon what suits them of past revelations, will not hesitate to ignore those of present times. In fact, men are married to their own systems, joined to their idols. They serve such in preference to the true and living God. It is because of such procedure that men are losing faith in even their own systems and drifting out into the unknown, into greater darkness and unbelief.

"SEES DECLINE OF RELIGION."

IN FAST DAY PROCLAMATION DRAWS A GLOOMY PICTURE.

Concord, N. H., April 6.—The fast day proclamation of Governor Frank W. Rollins, which has just been issued, is attracting much attention on account of its unusual language. The Governor says:—

"The decline of the Christian religion, particularly in our rural communities, is a marked feature of the times, and steps should be taken to remedy it.

"I suggest that, as far as possible, on fast day union meetings be held, made up of all shades of belief; including all who are interested in the welfare of our State, and that in your prayers and other devotions and in your mutual counsels you remember and consider the problem of the condition of religion in the rural communities.

"There are towns where no church bell sends forth its solemn call from January to January; there are villages where children grow to manhood unchristened; there are communities where the dead are laid away without the benison of the name of Christ and where marriages are solemnized only by justices of the peace.

"This is a matter worthy of your thoughtful consideration, citizens of New Hampshire. It does not augur well for the future."

Governor Rollins said that it is his opinion that something should be done to awaken the religious atmosphere in the rural towns, not only in his own State, but also throughout Maine and Vermont.

He says he would like to revive the Puritan spirit of worship.

It is a significant and noteworthy matter that the Governor of a State, and that State one of the New England States, should find it necessary to call the attention of his people to "the decline of the Christian religion," and suggest steps to remedy said condition. It is also significant that the Governor mentions the States of Maine and Vermont, which with New Hampshire, include three of the oldest commonwealths of the United States, and portions of sturdy New England, in the conditions named by the Governor.

New England has been famed, not only in America but abroad, as the home of the sturdy Puritan, the land in which the Pilgrims set up their altars of religious devotion, and from which the missionary spirit and religious strength and fervor of the Pilgrim has been diffused throughout large portions of the continent. It has been the home of consecrated religious wealth and effort, the center from which much of the religious and moral force of the country has been radiated. Why, then, this present condition, in which "the decline of the Christian religion, particularly in our rural communities, is a marked feature of the times," in which "there are towns where no church bell sends forth its solemn call from January to January," "villages where children grow to manhood unchristened," "communities where the dead are laid away without the benison of the name of Christ and where marriages are solemnized only by justices of the peace"? In the language of Governor Rollins, "This is a matter worthy of . . . thoughtful consideration. . . . It does not augur well for the future." "Something should be done to awaken the religious atmosphere in the rural towns, not only in his own State, but also throughout Maine and Vermont." "He would like to revive the Puritan spirit of worship."

These are matters of solemn import. No spectacle can scarcely be more solemn than the decline of the devotional spirit among a people; and when it is considered that under such spirit the people of New England arose to such heights of moral grandeur and citizenship, and did so much for home, for liberty, for country, and for humanity in general, it is a matter of serious concern and of no ordinary signification that the people are drifting away from and becoming indifferent to the religious spirit that in the past inspired their fathers to worship and to serve God. It is not a matter upon which they are to be congratulated, but a cause for serious regret; for more than that, for it means that the people are becoming indifferent to their highest interests; that the idea of religious sentiment pervading the concerns of life is largely being lost sight of; and bids fair to disappear altogether from human concerns, if it is to be considered at all as pertaining to the future life. It is certain that when a people do not regard God and the religious spirit as essential elements, as foundation principles in the concerns of life here, there is little or no probability of their having much of concern in a belief of a future life.

This means very much to the people mentioned in the Governor's proclamation, and to all other people. States have their influence upon the great masses of the people, and religious dearth in one section affects all others. However, the condition complained of by the Governor is not confined to any one section; it is a general condition. Indeed, it is commonly accepted as true in fact that the population of our Western States have less interest in the religious spirit and manifest less activity in church work than in the East. The proportion of the population connected with church membership is generally recognized as much larger in the Middle and Eastern States than in the Rocky Mountain districts and the Pacific Slope. Some have tried to explain the decadence of religion in New England on the ground of extensive emigration to the West. But the West with the East shows a general decline; hence it is a general condition of indifference to religion that is affecting the people. Something is separating the people from their former association with the religious life. The faith and zeal of the fathers is dying out, and the children of the present generation, raised in an atmosphere of religious indifference, are unconcerned, largely so, in regard to religious activity and church connections.

This condition has been brought about in the face of the constant labors of the ministry of the churches. What is wrong? Why have those men not been able to stem the tide of unbelief? Has God not been with them? Have they given proof of their ministry, or has it been a dead form upon their part which has not been potent enough to affect the people?

There is no reason to doubt that the early Pilgrim Fathers on down to the early years of the present century enjoyed much of divine approval and were blessed in living up to the light they had. God undoubtedly blessed those good and sturdy souls, and in many of the churches where faithful devotion to God was coupled with the spirit of earnestness and simplicity men and women were blessed in their endeavors to do right. The history of many sainted men and women proves this to be true. However, when truth was restored to earth and men began to deny and refused to accept the light, from that time there has been a religious decline among the organizations of sectarianism. God approved them to a degree in their efforts to live up to what light they had; but when they rejected the greater light and refused to obey the truth, he began to withdraw and has ever since been withdrawing his Spirit "from the inhabitants of the earth." In contrast to the dearth of sectarianism, however, he has blessed his people; has given proof of his acceptance of those who have "obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered" in ancient and in modern times for the salvation of man—the ancient, "unchangeable," and "restored" gospel revealed and preached in these last days.

The creeds have been and are "wrong"—the truth of God is right. The old bottles or formulas of sectarianism could not hold the new wine. For this reason the Lord rejected the systems of men—the heritages of apostasy and the Dark Ages—and restored the truth, and which men rejecting, fall into darkness and grope in confusion and error, the blind leading the blind. It is noticeable, significant, that while opposition to the creeds, war upon sectarianism, has come from sectarian ministers themselves, their departures and changes have taken them farther and farther from the truth, until now the popular theology rejects much of what principles of truth the world had intermingled with its creeds. The tendency is that, finding their creeds wrong and vain, the people depart almost if not altogether from the foundations of religious belief. Such are the results, the consequences of being led by men "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof;" who are "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." The Apostle Paul admonished, "From such turn away." They who have heeded his admonition have accepted the gospel and have found light; those who reject it wander in darkness and are threatened with continued doubt and final loss of faith. "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" His query, and the present driftings of the people, indicate that faith will be the exception, by no means the rule, among the people of "Christendom," those classed as "christianized," when the Savior comes.

In harmony with Governor Rollins' statement we republish the following:—

INDIFFERENCE TO RELIGION.

Some of the clergymen in England and America have been discussing what they consider an ominous indifference to religion on the part of people in general, especially the laboring classes. One eminent gentleman considers this indifference a sign of self-righteousness, another thinks it betokens deep-seated hostility to the churches, and another sees in it only a general apathetic tolerance. None of them, however, seems to be able to discover the cause or to suggest a remedy.—Washington Times.

ENGLAND'S CHURCH WAR.

Here is another extract from one of the parish magazines. The writer is a Southampton vicar:—

"Primitive and apostolic Christianity was a cross-bearing, suffering, troublesome, self-denying, enduring, costly thing. For instance, one could scarcely imagine Jesus Christ smoking a pipe with his friend Lazarus, or St. Paul and Lydia dancing a waltz together, or St. John and St. Peter spending hours over 'three-penny nap!' But how many so-called Christians of to-day would rather abandon Christianity altogether than abandon these 'innocent indulgences!' This means that the 'innocent indulgences' are our master."—London Truth.

They also speak of the religious apathy and love of the world of the people, one writer mentioning the people of both England and America. This is also in evidence of the fact that the spirit of piety, which once characterized the fathers, has been displaced by a spirit of irreligion.

The question arises in the thoughtful mind, What reasonable ground is there for the hope of true and permanent development of any race, of any nation, of any people without God and truth as the active basis of its action? If "righteousness exalteth a nation," what of the people who forget God, the Author and sustainer of truth and right?

Intelligent consideration of present conditions will suggest and reveal much to the thoughtful, candid, and logical mind. It is the privilege if not the duty of the children of light to be so enlightened, through willingness and desire to know, to understand the religious and the general conditions of the world. We should not ignore what an intelligent study of any phase of human interest, human trend, and human development, may reveal to us. We should not close our eyes to the facts as they appear, but open them and learn real conditions, actual situations, that we may comprehend the trouble and aid to apply the remedy, so far as possible; for God provides a remedy for every wrong condition, either through human agency, or by direct interposition; but, most generally, if not always, through human coöperation with him.

When men and women—the race as a whole by individual development—are sufficiently willing to be governed by truth, to lay aside all conceptions, intents, and methods not strictly in harmony with truth, there will be a "healing of the nations," a right adjustment of all affairs, an uplifting, the redemption of humanity. But until men learn not to ignore truth in any phase of life whatever, they will doubtless be obliged to learn, as our ancestors have learned, "by the things they suffer."

Truly light and truth are educational, and revealers of character and policies. The truth is "the savor of life unto life, or of death unto death." Let us accept truth and apply it, in everything by which we think, live, and act.

ARE HOG PRODUCTS FIT FOR FOOD?

Dear Sisters:—Will you kindly bear with me while I present a few thoughts upon the use of pork as food? I dearly love it, and think a dish of thinly sliced ham a most tempting sight; but for five years I have not tasted pork, or any of its products. And now I want to give my reasons, in the hope that some who read may be benefited.

I had heard several times that pigs were not good to eat, but never paid particular attention to it, until I happened to read an article by a prominent physician—one who had made a special study of the effects of various foods upon the body—in which he made the statement that among the Hebrews, who do not use pork, he had never found one case of cancer or tapeworm; and moreover, he had spoken to a number of his brother physicians upon the subject, and as far as they could remember, their experience tallied with his own. Isn't that rather a startling statement? I thought so when I read it at first, and began to call to mind those of my acquaintances who had died of that awful disease—cancer. I remembered four women, three of whom I knew to have been users of pork and its products; the fourth I did not know whether she used it or not.

I talked with my husband about it, and we agreed to look the subject up more fully, but continued using pork, for we easily found excuses such as this: "What if those three women, before-mentioned, did eat pork, that was no evidence that it caused their cancers, for they might also have all used beef, mutton, or anything else." Though we used it ourselves, we agreed that we dared not give it to our two dear little ones, for if it was dangerous food, it would never do to risk such a thing with them; and of course the time soon came when we realized that we must give it up ourselves, while the children were babies, if we wished to keep it from them. We have had cause to be thankful that we made and kept that resolution, for the more we studied and observed, the more we became convinced that we had acted for our own good.

I wish I could give the whole chapter in Dr. Foote's "Medical Common Sense," from which I will quote a few extracts. He says: "One of the most common causes of blood impurities is the use of pork. As an article of diet it exerts a most pernicious influence upon the blood, loading it with carbonic acid gas, and filling it with scrofula. From the earliest history of swine, they have been regarded as more subject to scrofula than any other animal. This disease, so peculiar to the hog, before it received a name, so far antedated the same disease in the human family, that when it did make its appearance in the latter, it was named after the Greek name of swine, as best expressing its character. Now it is apparent that when scrofula may be communicated simply by habitual contact with a scrofulous person, the contact of scrofulous food with the mouth and stomach must inevitably inoculate the system of the imprudent eater."

Think of it, sisters! How can we risk the use of food that may have the taint of such a frightful disease? True, you may raise your own hogs, and be certain in your own minds that they are healthful, still there is a risk, or it seems so to me.

I have no doubt that many, if not all, who read this article, could call attention to acquaintances of theirs who have used this kind of food all their lives, "and it has not hurt them a bit." I know of many myself who eat of it freely with no apparent evil effect, but I have also seen persons who seem to be healthy and strong, yet whose blood is so impure that a trifling accident will cause them great suffering. I heard recently of a man, who while in a grocery store, knocked his hand against the counter accidentally, and broke the skin from one of his knuckles. That seemed like a trifling accident, but he said it cost him one hundred dollars to get it cured. We hear of another perhaps, upon whose arm appears a tiny pimple, he scratches it, and it develops into a malignant sore. A splinter of wood in the finger, or a cut on the hand cause some people trouble, while others whose blood is pure would scarcely be inconvenienced at all by the same accident. Of course there are cases where a cut or scratch may be made by some poisonous object, and that would cause trouble; but Dr. Foote, from whom above quotations are made, says that the excessive use of pork makes the blood in just this inflammable condition, that even a slight accident is dangerous, and the whole system is rendered susceptible to contagious and other diseases.

I do not by any means want it to be understood that I would say that every sufferer from cancer, or other disease, has used pork excessively. I would not dare make such an assertion; but this I do want to say, that if anyone will honestly study this question, he can hardly fail to be convinced that the hog, to say the least of it, is an unhealthy animal, and consequently unfit for food. So with the rich abundance of pure food from which we may select, can we not afford to dispense with that which may be injurious to our bodies? If our bodies are to be the temples of God's Holy Spirit, ought we not try to build them up by the use of pure food? I am satisfied that God will bless our efforts in this direction, that it is one means by which we shall be enabled to obey the command to "come up higher;" also by which the Lord will fulfill his promise, that the destroying angel shall pass us by in times of pestilence.

SISTER CLARA.

Dear Sister Walker:—As I think it is my duty to write to some one, I thought I would write to you upon a subject that is very important to the saints. I have been thinking there should be a little leaflet printed and put into circulation about the duty of a parent toward their sons and daughters, as they are becoming men and women, and we wish them to keep themselves pure. There have been pieces in the Herald, but all saints do not take it. If such a leaflet could be got up, in very plain language, it might save somebody from suffering almost beyond their strength. Children are so ignorant and thoughtless, and scattered saints are more or less in the company of associates that are not fit for them to go with, but their parents do not find it out until it is too late. Everything must be told when trouble comes; better by far tell them before it comes. The world is getting so bad, there must be some way of warning the careless. Every mother wishes to do her duty, but it is no easy task, and it is put off until it is too late. Better by far lay your child in the cold grave than have her or him bring disgrace on God's work, their parents, and themselves.

A SISTER.

Let the Daughters of Zion not grow weary in well doing, neither be alarmed by the many who have condemned their cause without so much as a hearing. The times demand it, and God himself is bringing home this conviction to thousands of his saints. Have we our armor on?—ED.

In a recent letter from a friend, fears were entertained of our taking the leprosy, that is somewhat prevalent in these islands. Fearing that others may be alarmed, I give the following testimony:—

There are two in this branch of Taronia who are thus afflicted—a woman and a boy. The woman, Tatchau, is now quite bad. She has been the leading singer for a long time, and the sisters feel sorry for her in her affliction and do not wish to add to it by removing her, so they sustain her each time the officers are sustained; consequently she feels it her duty to attend every meeting. Yet all feel a little afraid, and none will sit on the same seat with her, nor on the one in front of her.

Joseph and I sit in chairs up by, or at the side of the stand; still it is in front of her.

One evening, while she was singing, I was thinking what a dreadful thing it would be if by her breath coming towards me I should take the dreadful disease and be compelled to remain in the islands all my miserable life. It never occurred to me that Joseph would take it. As soon as meeting was dismissed, Joseph turned to me and said, "While they were singing, the Spirit told me to say to you, Though you pass through the shadow of death, it shall not harm you." And I felt confident it was given in answer to my anxious thoughts, and thank the Lord for the assurance.

This leprosy is not that that turns white, it makes the victims look darker and swollen. It twists their features, more especially their face, out of shape, and causes the fingers and toes to drop off. The people here call it the "King's evil;" and that the king, when alive, had power to heal them, by throwing his mantle over them. They tell us that Metuaore was once thus afflicted, and the king threw his mantle over him, and the disease left. His mouth still remains drawn down at one side.

"ELIGIBILITY AND DUTY OF SCHOOL SECRETARY AND DISTRICT SECRETARY."

The idea is very prevalent that anyone who can read and write is competent to the Sunday school secretary. This, however, is a mistaken idea. The aim is to bring the standard of the school as high as it is possible to do; therefore, the best material that can be found should be chosen to fill each of the offices. The one who holds the office of secretary should possess certain to be a success and benefit to the school. First he should not be a child in age, and should be one so circumstanced that it will seldom be necessary for him to be absent from his post of duty. He must be bright and energetic; one neat and accurate in his work. The handwriting must be plain, legible, and not too small, that it may be read without hesitation, thereby being more readily understood and consequently more interesting.

The voice should be clear and of sufficient volume to permit those in all parts of the room to hear what is being read, as all are alike interested in the report and progress of the school. Inaudible reading creates lack of interest, and the result is restlessness and often whispering, among the children especially. The work of the

is of somewhat different character from that of the school secretary. He should be willing as well as competent to do all of the work required of that office. He must possess force of character that will be felt by all connected with the work. Our greatest need is enthusiasm, and this can be created only by example and force of character.

He should be one not slothful in discharging his duties, sitting down with folded hands waiting for his work to come upon him; but rather, one possessing a progressive spirit and inventive mind, watching for and inventing new plans and methods to arouse and maintain interest in the various schools.

He should be familiar with parliamentary rules and the constitution and by-laws, also the condition of the work in the district; a good counselor, one to whom the school secretaries may look for legal advice. He should be systematic in his work in connection with the schools, as much more work may be accomplished in a given time if a definite plan is had and followed, than otherwise.

THE SCHOOL SECRETARY

attends to calling the roll, also takes general charge of the class books, to see that they are properly filled out. When these are left for the teachers to take home and fill out at their pleasure, the result is sometimes an absent class book when needed in the recitation. If the books are passed by the secretary at the beginning of each session and filled out by the teachers at the opening of the class work, they are then ready for the secretary to collect and use in preparing the report to be read at the close of session.

A correct account of the collections should be kept by the secretary and frequently be compared with that of the treasurer; two records are always better than one, and when compared in this way both are less liable to mistakes. The secretary should be prompt as well as accurate in reporting to the district, as the report of the district to the General Association is made from the school reports, and from the district reports the general secretary makes report of the standing of the General Association. The little makes up the great. One deficient spoke weakens the whole wheel, hence one school failing to report makes the general report incomplete.

The district secretary has charge of the books and papers of the district association. As a member of the program committee he assists in preparing training work for the district convention. It is his duty to write the minutes at the convention and prepare them for publication; also to prepare minutes to be read at the district conference following the convention.

These duties, as in all other work for the Master, should be both prayerfully and carefully performed.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

The following is an outline developed in the course of a normal lesson by the general superintendent at the reunion at Woodbine, Iowa.

1. Qualifications.

- Should be a Latter Day Saint.
- One who loves the work.
- A natural leader.
- Punctual.
- A live energetic man.

Modern and progressive.
Cheerful and kind.
A praying man.
Temperate.
A lover of children.
One that attends conventions, etc.

2. Duties.

To prepare for the work.
To study to improve both himself and school.
To move out and learn from others.
To counsel with his assistant.
To hold teachers' meetings.
To visit teachers and pupils at their homes.
To conduct a Sunday school.
To be punctual and always there.
To conduct the general review.
To see that other officers are in the line of duty.

By looking carefully over these points you can see the necessity for them all; it may be difficult to find one who can pass for a superintendent under this criterion. There are those who can, but they are few. If you cannot fill your office with such an one, take the next best.

How may we keep a class of boys quiet during the opening and closing exercises? Do not try. Give them some part and responsibility in making these exercises a real success. Do not work for the boys but work with them.

Shall we teach in the old lines that others have followed or shall we bring in the new discoveries? Adapt your methods to present needs. Never discard the old because it is old and never accept the new because it is new. Keep awake. Be progressive.

"New occasions teach new duties.
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still and onward
Who would keep abreast of truth."

—Selected.

In reviewing don't do all the work yourself. Those that do the work receive the pay, and when you do all, you are stealing the pay that rightfully belongs to the school.

GREAT TENACITY OF LIFE.

The extremely great tenacity of life possessed by micro-organisms is demonstrated by the following experiments of the French savant M. Miquel:—

He took from a public park a sample of earth, dried it for two days at a temperature of 30° C. and powdered it. The earth thus obtained he filled into sterilized glass vessels, which were sealed and kept in a place not reached by the light. The freshly dug out soil contained 6,500,000 bacteria per gramme which were reduced to 3,900,000 by the pulverizing and drying. After sixteen years the glass tubes were opened and there were still found to be 3,580,000 micro-organisms in a gramme of earth. Inoculated on a porpoise, they produced after two days the characteristic symptoms of tetanus attending wounds.

SAN JOSE, Cal., April 20.

Editors Herald:—Your readers, some of whom have asked me why I don't write more, may be interested in hearing from this State. Well, we are alive out here. As our forefathers expressed it in their prayers, "we are still on this side of the grave and great eternity."

I left Fort Bidwell in Modoc County the 2d inst. I had been there since the 11th of last August except two months. I preached an Easter sermon just before taking the stage that carried me away. My stay there embraced many pleasant incidents. I left with a feeling of sadness.

I reached Sacramento, the place to which I was enroute, on the 7th. I stopped two days in the vicinity of Auburn while on the way. I found the saints of the capital city physically and spiritually well. I preached three sermons while there. On the 11th I went to the metropolis. Since "variety is the spice of life," I concluded to go by water instead of by rail as I had formerly done. The scenery along the Sacramento River was grand, sublime. The climatic conditions contrasted strangely with the country from which I had but recently come. There, winter was hanging in the lap of spring. To say I enjoyed the trip is putting it mildly.

I reached the city late in the night and hid myself away to Bro. C. A. Parkin's, where I found "Jots" in bed instead of "by the wayside." I tarried with Bro. Parkin two days. Although I had been away thirteen months, I found him and his excellent wife the same old Romans. During my stay in the city I attended a very spiritual prayer meeting at Bro. Saxe's. It was indeed a time of refreshing.

On the 13th I came in company with Bro. Chatburn to this city to attend the Central California district conference which convened from the 14th to the 16th. It was the best one I have attended in the State. I had the pleasure of meeting Brn. F. M. Sheehy, Thomas Daley, and E. Keeler, of the traveling ministry, and so many of the pastoral force, that lack of space forbids the mention of their names. The membership of said district manifested in this conference their progressive character.

For the church in this city I have only words of commendation. It has done well under the circumstances. It is not quite six years old and numbers but fifty-eight communicants. It has not as yet any church house to meet in, but worships in a hall. However, all the members are in line. There is no backbiting among themselves nor friction between them and those without. They are keeping the even tenor of their way, which is a laudable thing in these days when every man is trying as much as he can to attend to every other man's business. This is a lovely city. It is considered by some the prettiest place in the State.

In closing I embrace this as my opportunity to tell all whom it may concern that I have at present no intention of going back

East soon. My mother, although she would like to see me, is not anxious to have me do so. I have therefore decided to stay as long as necessary or those in charge may require. If I stay until my mission ends I will have been away from home more than three years. Hoping that God's blessings may rest upon all, I am,

Yours in the conflict,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

NEWTON, Iowa, April 24.

Editors Herald:—I notice in the Herald and other papers that the sectarian ministers of New York, as well as in Chicago and other cities, are on the verge of a deliberation that means the elimination of certain Bible stories, such as relate to miraculous events; as, Daniel in the lions' den; the Hebrews in the fiery furnace; Jonah in the bowels of the whale; Noah and the flood; and all others of like character, starting with those in the Old Testament.

Who can tell where this expulsion and rejection will end? The immaculate conception of the Christ, together with his resurrection and the declaration of his mouth, "These signs shall follow them that believe;" also the miraculous demonstration of the Holy Spirit, all so necessary in knowing God and his Christ, the confirmation of faithful adherents,—all will share in the unholy and ruthless slaughter of the Bible.

So when the tentacles of this mighty octopus, "sectarianism," shall have drawn the very life-power from the word of God, as it swiftly hastens on to the climax, we then can realize the extremity of Gentile times; when that mist of darkness over the eyes of old Israel must clear away, and in the effulgence of the gospel of the risen Christ his face shall no longer wear the paleness of death, but resume the brightness of Israel's golden days. Could we but see the pictures these evil seducers are painting on the pages of history, so vividly reflecting their designs and characters, with a clearer vision, I apprehend, we would cry out to God, "Lord, inspire our zeal, increase our strength."

Jesus said to the Jews who professed to believe in Moses and the prophets, that had they done so they would have believed in him, because Moses wrote of him. Apply the test to-day to the Gentile religion; they profess to believe in Christ and the apostles, but if they really do, why reject his doctrine? And then you will see the condition existing to-day, that obtained in consequence of the imprecation of the Jews, "Crucify him!" "His blood be upon us and our children!"

The revised version, that came to us in the year 1884, the work of eighty-two scholars fourteen years, has this to say in Hebrews 6:1: "Wherefore, let us cease to speak of the first principles of Christ, and press on unto perfection." Now we see that this ceasing to speak of the first principles of the doctrine of Christ, cannot be consistently carried out. Think of those who claim for their authority to preach the gospel the commission Christ gave to the apostles, which commission incorporates the injunction, "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," and then see if you can harmonize this injunction of Christ in Matthew 28:20 with the injunction of eighty-two scholars as found in Hebrews 6:1. Revised Version.

I apprehend that if those revisers can do such a thing along with their indorsers, that the day of miracles is yet here, superior to Christ's day of miracles. But alas! in this ceasing to speak, teach the pure and sublime principles of Christianity, the foundation is being laid for a final and complete rejection of Christ in his character of power.

So let the watchman on the picket guard against the suggestion to imbibe of this spirit of elimination—fullness of Gentile times.

PITTSFIELD, Ill., April 17.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a discussion with Elder Pickup of the Utah Church. We held it at the Center schoolhouse, five miles from Pittsfield, Illinois. We began April 10 and held five sessions, two hours each session. The way it came about was I met them in Pittsfield when on my way to Nebo, and in our conversation I asked Elder Pickup how he and Bro. J. R. Evans got along. He said they did not get along at all; that Evans would not meet him in public debate, and used considerable bombast; and, you know, that kind of warmed me up a little, so I said, "If you are smarting to get hold of one of us, I guess I will try and accommodate you." When he saw I was on hand he would not agree on any proposition. I told him I would meet him on church succession and teaching anywhere in this region of country he might choose, so he finally agreed to meet me or find some one who would, on the last day of March, at New Canton, Illinois; but he would write me at Nebo and let me know who was to meet me, himself or some one else. I told him I would be at Nebo a week or ten days and if I did not hear from him I would take it for granted that he would not meet me, so instead of staying a week or ten days, I was there nearly three weeks, and got no word from him.

In the meantime he slipped down to New Canton and went from house to house and told them that he and I were to hold a discussion there the 31st of March. I did not know he was there until April 1, when I received word that Elder Pickup was to meet me in a debate and I wanted to know why I failed to show up, and that they could not hold him any longer. The same day, April 1, I had sent a letter to Mr. Kenyon, who lives in the neighborhood where the fight took place, to announce meetings to begin on the 5th of April. Here is where Elder Pickup has been laboring all winter and had created quite an interest among the people, preaching nothing but the first principles of the gospel. So I commenced to show up Utahism a little, so the people got excited about that and went to Pittsfield and told Pickup he must go down and straighten things up, for I was tearing him all to pieces; so he came down on me like a thunder storm, and I could not back water, so it was either fish or cut bait.

At the close of the conflict a vote was taken and the entire congregation voted in my favor, with the exception of two. I there and then challenged him to meet me in New Canton, where he misrepresented me, but he refused to do so, in the presence of the congregation. I knew he would not.

I am satisfied it is over with Pickup and me till the judgment. I feel grateful for the divine aid given me. I also thank the Lord for Heman C. Smith's book. It did duty for me grandly; it is the right thing, and came along in the right time. My advice would be for all our missionary force to study and become thoroughly acquainted with it, for it will stay with you. I feel hopeful in the great conflict.

Your fellow laborer,
J. S. SNIVELY.

CANEY, Kan., April 22.

Editors Herald:—After preaching, hoping, and praying for ten years I have at last succeeded in wakening up old Satan to a fighting point. Last Sunday was set for preaching at eleven and baptizing two young men; but two of the directors, one an M. E. and the other an infidel, closed the house against us; so we baptized the two; but no preaching; and now I was politely notified not to baptize any more on the land where we baptized last Sunday, so when others offer themselves for baptism we will have to go farther for water. But we will continue to do all we can to get others if we have to go to Æaon for water. Some six more are ready and only waiting for the water to get warmer, when we expect to go to the water again.

The neighbors say they will have the schoolhouse open for us, as the two directors and the owner of the land where we baptized are all that are against us. This school district and surroundings are of a mixed people; most all denominations are represented here, and none of them strong enough to organize, and, all are friendly to us. So we will have the house again soon. We live five miles west of Caney. Any of the saints passing through will find a welcome at our house.

MANCHESTER, Eng., April 6.

Editors Herald:—The Manchester district conference convened in this city last Saturday, Sunday, and Monday; and the general verdict is that it was a complete success. I think it was the largest gathering of saints I have seen in this country. We were favored with two bands of music; one from Wigan, and the Concertina band, composed of saints of Manchester, who marched through the streets with a banner bearing the name of the church, followed by saints who distributed tracts. Sunday services were held in the town hall, a nice large room which was packed afternoon and evening, and nearly full in the morning. The music was excellent and most inspiring. Somebody certainly is entitled to great credit for labor performed along these lines. The singing is far ahead of what it was a year ago, and I think the same may be said of the spiritual condition of the district. At any rate there was a splendid spirit of unity and peace manifest throughout.

There are now five branches in the city of Manchester. These as represented in conference seem to be in fairly good condition. These five branches as now located are in line with plans arranged some four or five years ago, which plan we are told is now complete. This with their ministerial force and the younger element moving forward, bids fair to accomplish a great work. From this center we shall expect to see the ministry pushing out into new fields. In fact, this pushing out is already begun. We have a priest in Warrington who has been sowing the good seed. This brother is to be ordained an elder, and we hope will be the means in God's hands of raising up a branch there. He and his good wife are the only saints in that city at present. Another elder has moved up into Bradford, Yorkshire, and is letting his light shine there. Another elder is living at Stockport, and some others are talking of moving into new locations. If this can be done without weakening the present strongholds, it will work good in this land.

The good work accomplished in this district has not been without hard work and some severe trials, but these faithful workers now have the pleasure of looking back and seeing that their labor and trials were not in vain. This should and doubtless will stimulate the present workers to renewed diligence, as well as infuse life into the younger element who are coming into the church. I am not in a position, yet, to judge of the Sunday school work here, as it was not represented at our late conference, it having been decided to hold their convention later on at Whitsuntide, and consume the entire time in Sunday school work, instead of having it divided with other church business, as it is when held in connection with the conferences. We believe this to be a move in the right direction, and judging by the spirit of some of the workers here, we do not doubt it will be a success.

We hope the young people will soon see their way clear to take up the work of the "Religio." It is bound to come in time, for it is right in the line of progress.

The young people at Leicester expect to be organized this coming summer. I spent three weeks at Leicester last month and enjoyed myself. The saints are weak there, so far as numbers are concerned; but they have a good, faithful, presiding officer and some progressive workers, and as a result the work is onward. I had the pleasure of leading three young ladies into the waters of baptism, members of large families outside the church. Several others seem to be very near the kingdom. One would have been baptized, but parents objected, offering the excuse that she was too young, and yet the lady is about eighteen. When at Leicester a year ago I baptized two young men. I was glad to find them now not only firm in the faith, but active workers in the Sunday school. I do not claim credit, however, for those brought in at Leicester. I may have assisted, but others did most of the work before I arrived, and should have done the baptizing, as I told the officers I only performed the rite because urged to do so. In the majority of cases I think it is best for the local brethren to do the baptizing; it is encouraging to them to perform what they are able to do; and sometimes it is not a little discouraging when local brethren have worked hard and patiently to bring people into the church and the missionary comes along, preaches two or three sermons, and baptizes those already prepared, and then takes the credit to himself. We do not claim that this is often the case, yet we have known it to have been done. Of course all honor belongs to God anyway; but in that which is considered an honor, it is nice to prefer others to ourselves.

I left the good saints at Cardiff on the 11th of last month, feeling well and hopeful, and by letter I learn they are still pushing forward, though needing help. On the 27th of March I visited Nottingham and was kindly received by an aunt of Sr. Grace Johnson, of Chicago. I also found one who was at one time an able minister, so I am told, but who has been lying dormant more or less for some time. He reports himself strong in the faith. The Brighamites are reported to have had some success here. It is a fine city and I see no reason why a good work could not be done here. We will see, if we have opportunity. Sr. Pitt went to London soon after I left Cardiff and has been making her home there while I have been traveling about. Her health is a little better of late. I am almost ill with cold in the head, but trying to work it off. My throat is in bad condition. Hope the Lord will be merciful. Still hopeful.

In bonds,

F. G. PITT.

P. S.—People both in and out of the church write me to aid them in looking for money in Chancery. The following cutting from the London Mail under the heading of "Next-of-kin Frauds," may be of interest to some. Bear in mind there are sharpers over here as well as in America:—

"'NEXT-OF-KIN' FRAUDS.

"CONTEMPTIBLE SWINDLER FOUND GUILTY.

"The Bank of England secured the conviction at the Old Bailey yesterday of a young man named Frederick Turner Woodman, who has for a long time been defrauding poor people in connection with a next-of-kin agency which he carried on in an office in Chancery-lane.

"He advertised that immense fortunes were going begging, and that one hundred millions sterling was lying unclaimed in Chancery. This money, according to the advertisements, belonged to various persons, one hundred thousand of whom were ignorant of the fact that fortunes awaited them, left by relatives or unknown ancestors.

"It was stated that a register had been prepared of those persons, and that this could be purchased for 1s. 6d.

"The prisoners likewise offered to make inquiries and prepare pedigrees, for which a fee of a guinea was charged. Many persons sent him money and got nothing in return.

"The charge against the prisoner was that his register contained the names of cases in which he knew that the money had been claimed and paid. In one case in which he received a fee the money had been paid away as far back as 1863.

"The prisoner gave evidence on his own behalf. He spoke of the sources from which he obtained the names inserted in the register. In one instance he got the information at the Bank of England.

"The Recorder: Why did you not tell the people in regard to this advertisement that the money had been claimed?

"The prisoner did not reply.

"The jury found the prisoner guilty, and sentence was deferred until next sessions."

NEW ALBANY, Ind., April 22.

Editors Herald:—I am still in the faith, and hopeful of the triumphs of Zion's cause. I cannot say that the work is progressing like it should, but I feel like we are doing much in the way of allaying prejudice and showing the difference between the gospel as restored by the angel to Joseph the prophet and the doctrines taught by the representatives of Salt Lake.

There have been six missionaries advocating the doctrine of Brigham Young and making a house-to-house canvass in city and surrounding country since October, 1898; Elders Wilcox, Zundel, Hibbert, Crocket who presides over the mission, and others too numerous to mention. They have done very little preaching, but have been baptizing some in the eastern part of the city. They left the impression that they were the same as us of the Reorganization, but on last Friday eve, at Bro. G. B. Miller's, in the presence of more than a dozen who had come in we showed the difference, to their shame. Their mouths were shut, and they were confounded because they could not answer pertinent questions pertaining to the true succession. I showed a revelation in their own book, given only ten months after the church was organized, to the elders of the church that they might "not be deceived." The language is that there had been one appointed to receive revelations and commandments. (See D. C. 43:1, 2.) I also gave statements made by Brigham Young, August 8, 1844, a few weeks after the death of the prophet, wherein he says to the saints in an assembly: "You cannot fill the office of prophet, seer, and revelator; God must do this. You are like children without a father and sheep without a shepherd. You must not appoint any man at your head; if you should the twelve must ordain him." "I again repeat, no man can stand at our head except God reveal it from the heavens."—History of Brigham Young, p. 113. This shows that Brigham Young knew that there had been a commandment given touching the question of succession. I also referred to the revelation of January 19, 1841. (Doctrine and Covenants 107: 18.) This shows that Joseph's posterity were to receive the blessing that entitled them to hold the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom of God. I also quoted "young Joseph," James Whitehead, and others on the subject.

We gave them an abundance of evidence in support of all the claims of the Reorganized Church. All they could give were their own feelings or testimony in support of their flimsy craft. I also met two at Bro. J. Eulett's yesterday and gave their celestial marriage revelation an airing; but they refused in the presence of a dozen to meet the issue publicly. They had many excuses.

I must shortly bring my letter to a close by admonishing our members to study and whenever they have a chance to expose the deception of their abominable doctrine, to do so; for I never felt the power of God more than I did yesterday in defense of the doctrine of Jesus Christ.

Father M. R. Scott is holding meetings at Palmyra, Indiana, at the seat of the Demy and Jenkins affray. Good interest; some will come in. Interest good in Louisville, but the Devil is working also. A Methodist minister has introduced a book of about three hundred pages against the saints, published by the Pentecostal Publishing Company, and they are scattering it broadcast and doing us injury. Our ministers appointed to work there should look after this. May the Lord prosper Zion's cause and keep us in the straight and narrow way that will bring life and immortality to the true and faithful saints. Amen.

JOHN T. SCOTT.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 21.

Editors Herald:—Permit me to thank you for editorial of March 22, entitled, "Reflections on Study, Work, and Growth." Many times I have keenly suffered as a result of the misconception on the part of too many as to the disposition a minister should make of his time. Many seem to consider a traveling elder as a seeming refuse box in which they can dump their bundle of earthly woes, yet expect him to come up smiling after every encounter. Others think it our duty when out of the stand to while away the hours in the common chitchat of every-day life. I am sorry that occasion has been given for above conclusions. Some of our elders may be content with one continual round of feasting and superficial, idle gossip; but no man can spend his time thus and continue efficient in pulpit or pastoral work. Systematic study for several hours each day is the only salvation from stagnation and fossil formation.

Was much encouraged over the results of my San Bernardino meetings. I never had more intense interest anywhere. Ordinarily the church is very comfortably seated. In addition thereto, we borrowed about one hundred and seventy-five chairs, and even then we could not accommodate the crowds, numbers being turned away. Conspicuous among the audience were doctors, lawyers, and school teachers, with an occasional minister. Many came to me stating that they had not been inside of a church for years. Held twenty-six services and baptized seven. I spoke in the large pavilion the last Sunday at three p. m., under the auspices of a local labor organization; subject, "The Ethics of Christianity." A conservative estimate of the attendance was five hundred.

It will take a revolution in the lives of most of us ere we are eligible for citizenship in Zion. We are as illy prepared as Israel was for Canaan before her forty years of wandering. But it's only child's play to say, "Don't talk gathering; we are not ready for it." We never will be unless we talk about it. I do not expect to see the gathering into Zion for many years to come; at least, not in a general, divinely conducted sense; and unless there is more coöperation, union, harmony, and love, with a repudiation of the ways of the world and "business methods" which are at variance with God and his law, I question whether a promiscuous gathering in the regions round about will be profitable in a spiritual sense.

Physical gathering is not alone the goal for which we strive; a spiritual compact is the ultimate aim of the gospel. Ignorance is the wilderness in which we wander. If we knew more we would be better. Ere God can safely counsel gathering we must learn to live peaceably and kindly together, in our present scattered condition, else difficulties would be intensified if we were brought into closer relationship. Politics and financial supremacy will do much to engender strife, and so long as saints in the large centers permit partisan politics to come between them, or business interests to overwhelm the golden rule, just so long will devils continue to laugh and angels weep.

When we can present a clean bill of health in the light of present revelations, I believe that God will decisively speak on the gathering and other vexed questions, with but half the fasting and prayer necessary hitherto to secure his "mind and will." What the saints all over the world most need is not so much time spent in speculating on pre-existence or future consciousness, election, foreordination, horns, hoofs, beasts, etc., nor perorations and rhetorical composition which dazzle their intellect, yet does not feed their souls; but plain, every-day talks on how to live now. Such are in demand, while those on how we will live hereafter can afford to wait. What hope have we of Eternity if we make shipwreck of Time? We have developed an abnormal growth. The missionary and first-principle departments of church work have been pushed forward at the expense of the social, moral, and ethical side of our religion. Let's spend more time in having the sheep already in the fold present a healthy appearance, rather than to increase the number at the expense of the quality of each. If I owned sheep, I would prefer to have five hundred clean, fat, sleek, perfect looking ones than five thousand poorly fed, scabby, scrawny specimens. Make the standard of living high. Watch the flock to see that all are kept free from blemish. Single out the diseased, and heal them if possible; if not, isolate them from the sheepfold. Better expel a few than all die of contagion.

Selfishness must be outgrown, the strife for personal interests overcome. Mutual good must supplant individual ambition; service must supersede satisfaction or self-gratification. Modesty and purity must dethrone haughtiness and pride.

In the light of the gathering your editorial, "Pleasant Chat," of August 15, 1869, means volumes now as then: "For our own part, we would by far prefer to be a lonely but faithful sentinel upon the walls, a vidette upon a distant outpost of Zion unredeemed, than to be an unredeemed and unregenerate citizen of Zion redeemed."

The cover article in Herald of April 5, being an extract from the Canada News-Record of March 16, was by the correspondent in question appropriated from my "Sharps and Flats" in Ensign of February 23. They are perfectly welcome but modesty would suggest that they credit extract to the Ensign.

Ever yours for right,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

DEKALB, Texas, April 25.

Editors Herald:—I've just closed a meeting at Sylvan, Texas; four baptisms, making ten members in all at that place. I went there last September and opened up the work. They tried to rotten egg me, but the eggs missed me and hit the young ladies, making them very mad. The Devil is raging and the people imagining vain things. One merchant's wife in Blossom, Texas, is about convinced of the work and sent for me to come and administer to her according to James 5:14, which I did, and the Lord blessed her and she speedily recovered from her illness. She told me she had prayed for the truth for years. She wants to understand it more fully. I hope she will soon obey the gospel, but she will have a struggle to do so.

I've been shut out of two towns in Texas of late—Clarksville and Blossom. Every church and schoolhouse is closed against me. There are hundreds of towns and cities in Texas that never had the gospel preached in them, our missionaries confining their labors to the country and small villages. The only chance I see for us is to go out on the streets and offer it to them, and in private houses. Suppose we try this, brethren.

I hear of Bro. I. P. Baggerly dodging around in the woods, baptizing some nice people. His labor is greatly needed, and if he can't do big things, may he continue to do little things.

I am here preaching. We have this place captured. Since Bro. Kent and I came here last fall the sects have abandoned it to us. We have some nice saints here, a pretty good house to preach in. I commenced meetings last night with fair prospects of baptizing some before I leave.

The world is ripe for the gospel and I will continue to find fault until I see missionaries, those sent out and supported by the church, doing their duty. Why not? What do we want to waste precious time uselessly for and allow golden opportunities to slip? Work while it is day. Bro. J. W. Jackson is a fine man. May his usefulness continue. I will be at Cove, Arkansas, the second Sunday in May.

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

WIRT, Ind., April 26.

Editors Herald:—I drop a line to let the readers of the Herald know something of my movements. I left home December 27, 1898; went to Lamoni, Iowa, to attend to some business in connection with the Bishop. January 6, 1899, went to Minneapolis, Minnesota, and remained there until the 9th, then to Hudson, Wisconsin, to look after some matters of business. Bro. I. N. Roberts accompanied me to Hudson.

I returned to Lamoni, Iowa, January 11, remaining until the 22d. I then went to Burlington, Iowa, and from there on to Kirtland, Ohio, arriving there the 24th in the night, in company with Brn. Heman C. Smith and J. W. Wight. Remained at Kirtland until February 6, then on to Cleveland, remaining there until the 10th; then to Akron until the 14th; then to Youngstown, Ohio, remaining until the 17th; and on to Sharon, Pennsylvania, remaining there until the 21st; then to Conneautville until the 28th. I then went back to Akron and remained until March 2; then to Kirtland to the district conference; remained at Kirtland until the 7th; then in company with Brn. Bond, Etzenhouser, Parsons, and Ebeling went to Akron to attend to some unpleasant business that sometimes comes to elders in the performance of duty.

On the 9th went to New Philadelphia, Ohio, and the 11th went to Wheeling to attend the district conference. I had the company and assistance of Bro. Ebeling from Sharon, Pennsylvania, to Wheeling, West Virginia. March 15 went to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where I remained until the 23d; then to Fayette City until the 27th, and then back to Pittsburg. I had the company and assistance of Bro. J. F. McDowell at Fayette City.

Remained at Pittsburg until the 30th, then went to Creola, Ohio, in the Southern district. I remained at Creola until April 3; then went to Vales Mills, remained until the 10th. I then went to Bierly or Pine Branch, near Jackson, Ohio, where I remained until the 14th; and then went to Limerick, Ohio. Leaving there on the 17th, I went to Sinking Springs, Highland County; remained with the Highland branch until the 21st; then on to Middletown, Ohio, where I stayed until the 24th, when I came to this place—Wirt, Indiana.

In all the places I have been the district and branch officers have rendered me all the assistance possible; and all the saints and others have treated me kindly and made me comfortable, and are anxious to have me come again. I go from this (Union branch) to the New Marion branch, the 28th, and back here May 1; then to New Albany, the 2d; Louisville, Kentucky, the 3d and 4th; Byrneville, Indiana, 5th to 8th. This is as far as I have my appointments out at present; but will visit some other branches in Indiana, then on to Southern Illinois, Kentucky, and Tennessee. Indian Territory and Texas will have to be patient; I will get there as soon as I can. If I could fill half a dozen places at once, there would still be calls and places wanting preaching. I am sorry I cannot stay longer in each place, but there is so much to do in our line of work I cannot stop to do missionary work.

I hear some complaint in places about missionaries being at home too much, and in some cases I fear this is true. This ought not to be. It keeps finances from coming into the church treasury for elders that receive help for their families to neglect their work, or unnecessarily run home, or too much from place to place, spending money unwisely. And our time should be wholly occupied in our ministerial duties when we agree to go, of course allowing reasonable time to visit the family when not too far away from home; and a man who cannot stay away from home six or twelve months, if necessary, had better not take a general mission, but labor as circumstances permit, in my opinion. I have no objections to them going home more frequently when they can do so without too much expense or loss of time. The saints have a right to complain if the moneys they pay in are wasted. This will not apply to elders who faithfully do their duty; and if any are hit they can cry out, and we will listen.

Praying God to bless the labors and efforts of all his people, in every department of the work, also to prosper them in every righteous undertaking, thereby putting means in their hands and the disposition in their hearts to use their substance to carry on the great work intrusted to us all, I am as ever,

Hopeful and at work,

G. H. HILLIARD.

COIN, Iowa, April 26.

Editors Herald:—Elder Isaac M. Smith's work on the atonement is a grand work. We heard him preach three sermons on that subject last January, at Coin; and it was the first preaching that had been done here, except a few sermons in a private house; and it seems people won't come out to hear as well in a private house as in a hall or church.

Bro. Smith has created quite a stir in the minds of the people here. Quite a few are investigating. Some are reading who did not hear him preach, but got their curiosity aroused by hearing those talk who attended the meetings.

We hope Bro. Smith will come back this fall or summer and bring the tent, as there are only the two families of us saints here. We are very anxious to have more join in with us so we can have meetings. We go occasionally to Shenandoah, but as it is fourteen miles and we are poor in this world's goods, can't go as often as we would like.

Your sister,

ELLA M. KUYKENDALL.

DOWNES, O. T., April 21.

Editors Herald:—We are still in the faith. Bro. Macrae closed a two-weeks' meeting here the last Sunday in March, assisted two nights by Bro. R. W. Davis. He had an extra good interest; so much so that the "Christian Church" have been distributing anti-Mormon tracts written by a Rev. Neal, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which Bro. Davis will look after in the near future.

We attended the two-days' meeting at Nicely, which was very good. The attendance should have been larger, I think. It did good to the cause. One young man, Clyde Smith, was added by baptism on Sunday, the 9th. Brn. Macrae and Davis expect to pitch the tent in Kingfisher to-morrow, the 22d. Saints of Oklahoma, the "tent season" is here, and do you know that it requires money as well as the elders to keep it going, and that we ought, every one, to make an extra exertion to increase the tent fund so that those with it will not have to live on wind, as they did last summer? If we all do what we can then things will go along all right. Very few of us realize what it is to try and run the tent in a strange town without money or friends.

Bro. Duncan and wife were here and stayed over last Sunday, and he preached Sunday night. Glad to see him feeling so much better than when we saw him last.

Yours in the faith,

GEO. M. HILES.

NAHUM'S CHARIOTS.

Having read and heard so much about Nahum's chariots in the last few years, I am greatly surprised at the manner in which the second chapter of the prophet is interpreted by quite a number of our elders and laymen, until it almost seems to be an accepted interpretation by the church. How would it be if we would analyze truly the whole prophecy of Nahum, and see if a wrong interpretation is not made of the second chapter? I must candidly confess that I could never see, nor understand, neither comprehend that the words of the prophet had any allusion to railroad cars in our days.

When we elders present the gospel to the world, and some try to contradict the principles we advance by bringing forth just a single passage without connecting it with others to get a clearer understanding, we answer them, "Why don't you read the passage before that?" or, "Why don't you read a little further?" Now if we try to give advice to others how to understand scripture, would it not be well for our own selves to first take this advice home, and not advance a theory or bring forth a private interpretation of a prophecy which if clearly investigated will not hold good?

The headlines of the first chapter of the prophet read thus:—

The majesty of God in goodness to his people, and severity against his enemies.

The burden of Nineveh. The book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.—Verse 1.

The prophet tries here to portray the goodness of God to his people, and that he is a jealous God, and that he revenges and takes vengeance on his adversaries. He describes the power of the Almighty, and how he has a hand, or has his way in the whirlwind, in the storm, has power over the sea, the rivers; and how the mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burned in his presence; yea, the world and all things therein. In fine, the majesty, the goodness towards his people; the power, his wrath, his anger against his enemies, are here portrayed by the prophet.

Now in those days the Assyrian Empire was the ruling power of the then known world, laying heavy tribute on the conquered provinces. Palestine or Israel did not escape their conquering armies and plundering invasions, paying highly for peace. History tells us how Shalmaneser, the Assyrian monarch, carried the nine and a half tribes across the waters (River Euphrates). See also what a tribute Sennacherib laid on Hezekiah, king of Judah; three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold. (A talent is one hundred pounds.) Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the Lord and in the treasury of the king's house, and he cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the Lord and from the pillars, and gave it to the king of Assyria. (2 Kings 18.)

Now please read Isaiah 8: 7, 8:—

Now therefore, behold, the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, even the king of Assyria, and all his glory: and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks: and he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach even to the neck; and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel.

In chapter 10 the same prophet describes the Assyrian tyrants and predicts the destruction of that wicked empire which robbed and spoiled nations, especially Israel and Judah; but before their time of destruction came the Lord used the Assyrians as a rod of his anger to chastise other nations for their wickedness.

O Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, and the staff in their hand is mine indignation. I will send him against a hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge, to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets.—Verses 5, 6.

Verses 7-11 show the boasting spirit of Assyria. Verse 12 shows that when the Lord has performed his whole work upon Mount Zion and upon Jerusalem, then he will turn and punish the king of Assyria and the glory of his high looks. In reading the whole chapter you will find that the Lord would break the rod of Assyria and do with him as he did unto others. (Verses 24-26.) Verse 27 reads:—

And it shall come to pass in that day [in the day that Assyria shall be broken], that his burden shall be taken away from off thy [Judah's] shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck.

Take this in connection with Nahum 1: 13, 15:—

O Judah, keep thy solemn feasts, perform thy vows: for the wicked [the Assyrian] shall no more pass through thee; he is utterly cut off.

In chapter 2, verse 2, we see that "the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel." Israel was marched away into captivity by the Assyrians; those Assyrians emptied Israel out and "marred their vine branches."

Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away: first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones. . . . Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.—Jer. 50: 17, 18.

Now Assyria was the head kingdom before the kingdom of Babylon had its sway. God raises up one nation as an instrument in his hand to chastise and punish others for their wickedness and evil ways; and then when that nation exalts herself above all others in pride, wickedness, and abomination, then her time is come and her doom sealed; another nation is raised up to punish her also. The wicked shall slay the wicked. And some of those kings have a certain destiny to fulfill the plans and purposes of God Almighty, as for instance Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Alexander, Napoleon, and a host of others.

The headlines of the second chapter of the Prophet Nahum read:—

The victorious armies against Nineveh.

He that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face.—Verse 1.

Who does the prophet mean? Certainly Nebuchadnezzar with his army. Against what face? Why, the city of Nineveh. The prophet addresses here the people of Nineveh, the capital city of the Assyrian Empire, telling them that he that dasheth in pieces is come up before their face, and instructs them to "keep the munition" (to have the materials for war ready), to "watch the way" (to keep watch of every pathway which leads into the city, keep the gates well closed), "make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily" (fortify, strengthen the walls, the towers, and fortifications). Now the Lord is going to take vengeance on the Assyrians, and uses Nebuchadnezzar with his army as an instrument in his hand to destroy the Assyrian Empire and lay desolate their capital city, Nineveh; therefore those warriors are called his mighty men in one sense of the word, and in another sense they are the mighty men of the king of Babylon.

The shield of his mighty men is made red.—Verse 3.

Now what shield? Anyone who is acquainted with history knows that in former times every soldier was armed with a shield and a sword or spear and bow. The shield was buckled or fastened on his left arm, which, by watching the movements of the strokes of the enemy, enabled him to ward off the blows and arrows with the movement of the shield. With the weapon (sword or spear) in his right hand he fought. Now, then, the shield is made red. Of what? Why, of the blood of the slain.

The valiant men are in scarlet.—Verse 3.

Could not the warriors in former times be dressed in red uniforms just as well as the British soldiers in our day? I think we find in Bible history that scarlet mantles, cloaks, and garments were abundantly worn and used in olden times more than in these later generations. And indeed the British had nothing to do with the city of Nineveh. There were no British in existence then; neither do the British soldiers carry any shields.

The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation.—Verse 3.

What preparation? Why, of course, the preparation to destroy the proud city of Nineveh. I could never see nor comprehend that this means the preparation of the coming of the Lord in the latter days. The prophet actually describes in this chapter and in the next, the war, the siege of the Chaldean army, which is there the Lord's army fulfilling his purposes to chastise and overthrow the Assyrian monarchy and to lay desolate their capital city.

"Well," say some, "the chariots shall be with flaming torches. Surely that's the cars. Those headlights are the torches."

Let us see if those chariots before the walls of the city of Nineveh and in her broad ways (streets) did not have torches. I think everybody ought to know what a torch is. Why, a firebrand of some combustible stuff, either of some kind of splinters of wood, easy to ignite and giving a big flame (fir, pitch, pine roots), or some other manufactured stuff mixed and soaked with some pitchy, tarry substance, attached to a staff, rod, stick, or pole,—that's a torch. The headlight of an engine is no torch, it is a kind of lantern. Now those chariots were two-wheeled chariots of massive iron, very heavy, with powerful horses (more powerful than the horses in our days) to draw them. The chariots were fixed so that several men besides the driver could occupy them. In the nighttime they needed light. Some carried those flaming torches, others shields, swords, and spears. "Hold on," some may say, "in the next verse it says they shall seem like torches." All right, the verse before says they are flaming torches. Now which comes closer to the description of a torch, the one I described, or the headlight of a locomotive? But if it is insisted that it don't mean torches, they seem like torches, then let us have it that way and see: Every carriage drawn by horses in our days used to have on the front one lantern (headlight, you may call it) attached on each side. Then could it not be possible that those chariots in those times had headlights attached, so that they could see where to drive? But does it not look more reasonable that those torches were such lights as I first described?

The fir trees shall be terribly shaken.—Verse 3.

"Why," some say, "that's the ties, where the rails are laid on, and when the cars pass over them, why of course they are shaken." Others say, "No, it don't mean that; it means when a road is built through a swampy place that is full of timber, why, it shakes them when the train rolls by." And another says, "No, it means because the railroad companies need so many ties to make their roads that the trees are cut down by the millions and cutting them shakes them."

I can hardly keep from smiling in hearing such explanations. The prophet says, "The fir trees." Now let me see if the railroads use only the fir tree tie, or if they use others just as much. I have not seen many fir trees yet used for that purpose. In the Northern States I see they use hemlock, cedar, and white oak, if they can get them. In the Southern and Western States where white oak grows, they use the white oak, and I think they prefer them to others. I suppose, then, the hemlock, cedar, and oak are not shaken, only the fir, and as not many firs are used, so not many are shaken; and by and by they will abandon all those ties and will manufacture steel ties.

Now be consistent. The prophet said, "The fir trees." Now all the trees get a shaking when the wind blows, and sometimes a terrible one, and when they are cut down they get a shaking, no matter if they are used for ties, or sawed into lumber, or are hewed, or cut up and burned. The forests in those eastern countries were mostly composed of fir. Cedar was also abounding in some localities, like the mountains of Lebanon. Those ancient cities were all walled and fortified, and when such a city was besieged, and the besiegers saw that such a city could not be taken without spending a very long time to do it, they raised forts against it, ramparts, walls, towers, all mostly of wood, as to build them of stone, brick, and mortar would have been too costly and taken too long a time to do it. Consequently as the surrounding country of Nineveh was very well wooded, and as history tells us, mostly fir,—which also can be easily handled, easy to cut, long slender stems, not many branches,—those forests were cut down to build those forts, ramparts, towers, and walls to correspond with the height of the besieged city walls and towers. And so in this way the warfare was carried on, so that the attacking force had an equal chance in fighting as well as the besieged. So then the fir trees got terribly shaken when Nebuchadnezzar raised forts, walls, and towers against the city, which city was in the days of Jonah sixty miles in circumference, built in square blocks, with very wide roads and pathways. Damascus, the capital city of the Syrians, was built more closely, with very narrow and crooked streets, but Nineveh and Babylon in square blocks and wide roads.

And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, both soul and body: and they shall be as when a standardbearer fainteth. And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be few, that a child may write them.—Isa. 10:18, 19.

See how Isaiah prophesies here how his forest shall be destroyed; and Nahum tells how those fir trees shall be shaken.

The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle against one another in the broad ways.—Nahum 2:4.

Shall they rage on the narrow railroad track? Are those tracks streets? No, indeed, they are not streets, they are narrow tracks. "O, but you see how they justle against one another!" Yes, only when they are coupling some together, as the freight cars mostly do, but they don't rage then, they do it carefully as possible. It is not their desire to destroy and to kill, and if ever anything like that happens it is done by carelessness or accident. The prophet says, "In the broad ways" (streets), not narrow track, where they shall justle against one another in rage (fury). Why, it is war. They who are on those chariots want to destroy, demolish, kill. "They shall rage." What means rage? To be furious with anger. (The driver drives furiously. "The driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi, for he driveth furiously."—2 Kings 9:20.) To be exasperated with anger; to be violently agitated with passion; to be violent and tumultuous; to be violently driven or agitated; to act or move furiously, as the raging sea or wind. Why do the heathen rage? The mad designing wheels of brazen chariots rage; dire was the noise. To ravage, to prevail without restraint, or with destruction, or fatal effect. Now here we have the word rage explained, I think, in full. Those chariots are drawn by powerful horses, those horses are driven by without restraint; they are driven to madness, so to say, to go to battle, to destroy, to kill, to confuse the enemy. There is an extra soldier to drive them; on the chariots are the fighting soldiers; they run over everything, over the living, dead, and wounded; they are in rage, in fury; they rattle in the broad ways (streets) of the highway to the city; they rattle and rage in the broad ways (streets) in the city. It is war, it is destruction, it is death and desolation. What a noise so many thousands of chariots of iron and brass, with the prancing horses before them, driven by the drivers to madness, the noise of the whip (see Nahum 3:2), and the rattling of the wheels, and the jumping chariots. "The horseman lifteth up both the bright sword and the glittering spear: and there is a multitude of slain, . . . and there is none end of their corpses." (Verse 3.) Compare this with chapter 2, verse 5, "they stumble in their walk." (In the railroad car?) O pshaw! what nonsense! They stumble over the dead corpses!

"O but, you see, they ran like the lightnings. Why, they must be our railroad and electric street cars."

Those railroad and electric cars are peaceable institutions. They don't justle against one another in the broad ways. They have their narrow track, and those engineers are very careful to keep them on the track, or they would demolish one another. They have to be handled carefully to avoid accident. Those others don't. They run against each other to kill, to destroy. Those soldiers get to close combat with their swords, spears, and bows. They run like lightning; why, a figurative expression, as we use in general, to convey to the mind the force of the meaning (description of anything seen or heard, to give a vivid and clearer understanding of a thing), as we would say of a horse team running away, "Why, it was awful and fearful how they ran; they ran like lightning." Also in describing a horse race, similar expression might be used.

But let us see if we can find similar expressions in the great Book which also tells us how those ancient nations depended in times of war on the number and strength of their chariots.

And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt. . . . The Egyptians pursued after them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and his horsemen, and his army. . . . And they were sore afraid; and the children of Israel cried out unto the Lord.—Ex. 14: 7-10.

And the children of Israel cried unto the Lord: for he [Sisera] had nine hundred chariots of iron; and twenty years he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.—Judges 4: 3.

And the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight with Israel, thirty thousand chariots, and six thousand horsemen, and people as the sand which is on the sea shore in multitude.—1 Sam. 13: 5; also 2 Samuel 8: 4; 10: 18; 1 Kings 10: 26.

Isaiah 22 describes a battle composed of chariots of men, horsemen, and the breaking down of walls and fortifications.

By thy servants hast thou reproached the Lord, and hast said, By the multitude of my chariots am I come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon; and I will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof: and I will enter into the height of his border, and the forest of his Carmel.—Isa. 37: 24.

The whole city shall flee for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen; they shall go into thickets, and climb up upon the rocks: every city shall be forsaken, and not a man dwell therein.—Jer. 4: 29.

Behold, a people cometh from the north country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth. They shall lay hold on bow and spear; they are cruel, and have no mercy; their voice roareth like the sea [mark the expression]; and they ride upon horses, set in array as men for war against thee, O daughter of Zion.—Jer. 6: 22, 23.

Now, reader, read and compare Jeremiah 46 with Nahum 2 and 3 carefully, and see if you cannot find a similarity in them, both prophets describing a battle between nations. Jeremiah describes the overthrow of Pharaoh's army and entire conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar:—

Order ye the buckler and shield, and draw near to battle [Nahum 2: 3]. Harness the horses; and get up, ye horsemen, and stand forth with your helmets; furbish the spears, and put on the brigandines. Wherefore have I seen them dismayed and turned away back? and their mighty ones are beaten down, and are fled apace, and look not back: for fear was round about, saith the Lord [Nahum 2: 8]. Let not the swift flee away, nor the mighty man escape; they shall stumble, and fall toward the north by the river Euphrates [Nahum 2: 5]. Who is this that cometh up as a flood, whose waters are moved as the rivers? Egypt riseth up like a flood, and his waters are moved like the rivers; and he saith, I will go up, and will cover the earth; I will destroy the city and the inhabitants thereof. Come up, ye horses; and rage, ye chariots [Nahum 2: 4]; and let the mighty men come forth; the Ethiopians and the Lybians, that handle the shield; and the Lydians, that handle and bend the bow [Nahum 2: 3]. For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries [Nahum 1: 2]. . . . The nations have heard of thy shame, and thy cry hath filled the land: for the mighty man hath stumbled against the mighty, and they are fallen both together [in the war; Nahum 2: 5 and 3: 3]. . . . Stand fast, and prepare thee. . . . Why are thy valiant men swept away? they stood not, because the Lord did drive them [Nahum 2: 1, 8]. He made many to fall, yea, one fell upon another [Nahum 2: 5 and 3: 3].

They stumbled, being wounded and killed in battle; others running away, backward, forward, stumble over the wounded and dead lying around.

They . . . fled away together: they did not stand, because the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation. The voice thereof shall go like a serpent: for they shall . . . come against her with axes, as hewers of wood. They shall cut down her forest.

Now is not the description of this battle between the king of Egypt and the king of Babylon, which was fought in the north by the River Euphrates and which was the final overthrow of the Egyptian dynasty, similar to the description given by Nahum of the battle between the Assyrians and Chaldeans in overthrowing that monarchy and the destruction of their capital city? Notice also how the Lord speaks comforting words to Israel on those occasions through his prophets in Jeremiah 46: 27, 28, and in Nahum 1: 15.

The king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships.—Dan. 11: 40.

Now a whirlwind sometimes travels faster than a railroad train. It is known that whirlwinds travel sometimes sixty or seventy miles an hour and more. I believe, if I am not mistaken, that I read once of a cyclone that made one hundred miles an hour. That beats cars, does it not? Well, now, if cars have to run like lightning, if we take the expression just as it is, then in the twinkling of an eye they ought to make from one hundred to five hundred miles. Consequently let us take and understand the scripture in a reasonable and sensible way.

Again read Daniel 7: 6. Notice the figurative expression which is used in describing the Grecian Empire in its conquering area:—

After this I beheld, and lo another [beast], like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads.

As a leopard itself is a beast of great swiftness, as swift or swifter than a horse, still to add to his swiftness was given him four wings. Why, a bird has only two wings, and how swift is a bird; how swift is an eagle; yea, there are birds that outfly any railroad train or single locomotive. But here to this swift beast the prophet gives four wings to illustrate the swiftness of his armies as they would go forth from conquering to conquer; figurative language to impress upon the mind of the prophet and the people by way of illustration. Now the swiftness of this beast would be many times swifter than any car.

He shall recount his worthies.—Nahum 2: 5.

Passengers in the railroad car, and he the conductor? What silly imaginations! This expression is similar and means surely the same personage as in verse 3, "his mighty men," which I explained before.

They shall stumble in their walk.—Verse 5.

Which I explained also, and which is very clearly set forth in chapter 3: 2, 3, as stumbling over their corpses.

They shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defence shall be prepared.—Verse 5.

What wall? Some say, "The ocean; there those cars stop." Why, indeed it is worth smiling. Those chariots, those horses, warriors, horsemen, footmen, all the whole army are making haste to the wall of the ocean?

No! to the wall of the city of Nineveh, and there is the defense prepared, the Assyrian army ready to receive them. The walls are full of soldiers; the towers are well manned; their chariots are also ready, and so the battle begins. The Chaldeans see that the Assyrians have the advantage in the fight, hurling their deadly missiles from the top of their walls and towers, so the Chaldeans go and cut down the fir trees all around, the principal tree in those regions, and build a wall equal in height to the city walls, to equalize the fight, so those fir trees got "terribly shaken."

The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved.—Verse 6.

Nineveh was built on the east side of the River Tigris and on the west side of one of the tributary rivers to the Tigris; so the city lay between two rivers, just where they join together, and consequently there must have been many gates by the two rivers which led into the city.

Now if you read Isaiah 45: 1-3 you will learn something of what the prophet means when he says "the gates of the rivers shall be opened":—

Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut: . . . I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron; and I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places.

Now history tells us Cyrus turned the waters of the river into the channel, (which was built by Nebuchadnezzar to feed an artificial lake,) so the army of Cyrus was enabled to walk in the bed of the river into the heart of the city; then as they came to the gates of the river they were not locked, because the Lord made the gate keepers forget their duty to lock them in the night when King Belshazzar had that famous feast, where the handwriting on the wall appeared; and Cyrus with his army marched at midnight into the proud capital city of the Chaldeans, and their king was slain. The gates of the two rivers of Nineveh got opened, the Chaldeans captured the city, and the mighty palace, Nineveh, was destroyed.

Nineveh is of old like a pool of water: yet they shall flee away. Stand, stand, shall they cry; but none shall look back.—Nahum 2: 8.

Notwithstanding the captains of the Assyrians are trying to encourage their soldiers to stand and fight, they turn their backs and run away and look not around.

Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the pleasant furniture.—Verse 9.

Now, then, as the Lord promised Cyrus the spoil of Babylon, so here the Chaldeans took the spoil of Nineveh; there the treasures of the nations were stored up.

And my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people; and as one gathereth eggs that are left, have I gathered all the earth; and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped.—Isa. 10: 14.

Those treasures were then carried from Nineveh to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar. Nahum 2:10 tells that the city is now empty, and how there is anguish and pain and fear among the people who survived the war. Verses 11-13 describe how the lions, the young lions, and the old lion and her whelps lost their dwelling place; as Assyria was compared with the lion, now there was to be made an end of him together with all his whelps. As the lion had torn in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, therefore the Lord of hosts was against Assyria, and would burn her chariots in the smoke, and the sword should devour thy young lions, which Nebuchadnezzar with his army performed.

The headline of the third chapter of Nahum reads:—

The miserable ruin of Nineveh.

Reader, please read now this whole chapter through, and you will find it a continuation and explanation of the war which was carried on between the two armies. Verses 2 and 3 explain more fully verses 3, 4, and 5 in chapter 2. Verse 6 was exactly fulfilled also: the ruins of the city could no more be found, so that many disbelieved the record of the Bible about it and the history of the Prophet Jonah. Still it was discovered and brought to light in this century, hidden under "abominable filth." Verse 12 explains also the shaking of all her strongholds: when they are shaken they shall be like fig trees with the first ripe figs. There was plenty of fir timber in those strongholds, ramparts, and towers. Verse 13 explains and repeats verse 6 in chapter 2, also verse 8, where instead of fighting manfully, they flee; they are considered, not men of valor, but woman. Verse 14 is a repetition of verse 1 in chapter 2. The end of the chapter tells there is no healing of his bruise, and that they cease to exist as a nation, in comparison with verse 13, chapter 2.

Another illustration and description of a war is also given in Habakkuk 1: 6-10:—

For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling places that are not theirs. They are terrible and dreadful: their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves. Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more fierce than the evening wolves: and their horsemen shall spread themselves, and their horsemen shall come from far; they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat. [Mark the illustration, they, the horses, shall fly as the eagle, that hasteth to eat.] They shall come all for violence: their faces shall sup up as the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand. And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them; they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it.

Zephaniah also prophesied the destruction of Nineveh:—

And he will stretch out his hand against the north, and destroy Assyria; and will make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness. And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all the beasts of the nations: both the cormorant and the bittern shall lodge in the upper lintels of it; their voice shall sing in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds: for he shall uncover the cedar work. This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am, and there is none besides me: how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! every one that passeth by her shall hiss, and wag his hand.—Zeph. 2: 13-15.

Everything is literally fulfilled.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

The Board of Publication met at the Herald Publishing House, on March 29, 1899, at 9:30 a. m.; the following named members being present: E. L. Kelley, Frank Criley, and F. B. Blair. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, a letter from Elder Joseph Luff, the absent member of the board, to Bishop Kelley, was read.

On motion, Frank Criley was chosen treasurer until new board is chosen at the next General Conference.

On motion, the editorial force was continued until next General Conference, without change.

On separate motions, all of the officers of the board were sustained.

Pursuant to the action of General Conference referring the matter of the purchase of the Ensign property to the Board of Publication, the work of the committee, E. L. Kelley and Frank Criley, in purchasing the same was duly placed before the board and endorsed by it.

On motion the purchase of a stapling machine was authorized.

On all the foregoing matters Elder Joseph Luff expressed his approval by letter to the president of the board.

A communication from R. S. Salyards, the assistant editor of the Herald, making suggestions looking to more room to accommodate the contributors and patrons of the Herald was received; and it was resolved that hereafter the large or long primer and brevier type in editorial, original, and selected articles should be set unledged; also the miscellaneous department.

On motion the board adjourned subject to the call of the president.

E. L. KELLEY, President Board.
F. B. BLAIR, Secretary Board.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 25, 1899.

PASTORAL.

As another "conference year" is before us, I take this means to commune with the missionaries and saints of the Rocky Mountain mission.

Of the missionaries I request that you report to me on the first days of July, October, January, and March, and that such reports itemize sermons, baptisms, confirmations, ordinations, and new openings. If you wish to itemize marriages, blessings, and administrations, all right; but the five named I especially wish. It will be well to make a memoranda of this just as soon as you read it, and be sure to start your reports by the first day of the months named. Please remember that the first of March should be an annual and not a quarterly report.

Brn. Moore and Reese will labor in Montana; Brn. Anthony, Condit, and Albertson in Idaho, the two former in charge of the tent; Brn. Parker and D. W. Wight will labor with the tent in Utah; and Bro. E. A. Davis will likely have charge in Salt Lake City. Individually, I hope to reach, as far as possible, every part of the mission. All wishing labor performed will please address me at Fairfield, Pleasant Grove, or 1509 Washington Avenue, Ogden, Utah, as most convenient for the writers. The missionaries will all report to me as last year. There is already in hand ten dollars to start the Utah tent, and the saints will kindly remember that to pay for the use of lumber, lights, and transportation, all means expenses, and by donation act accordingly. The Idaho tent fund is in debt to Bro. Condit, and the saints of that State will please act accordingly.

I expect to be in the mission for the conference, at Malad, the 20th of May, and hope to spend the whole year in uninterrupted work. I will be glad to hear from every saint in the mission who may desire labor done. Let all remember that "we are laborers together with God."

J. W. WIGHT.

P. S.—We expect to have a new church building in Provo by fall, and will likely have our reunion there. Make up your minds now to be at the dedication and reunion, and come prepared to camp in your wagons and tents. Look for the date.

INSTITUTE NOTICE.

Owing to the change of the time of dedicating the new church at Fulton, Iowa, it will be necessary to change the time of the institute also, as it was to meet the day following the dedication. The time will therefore be changed from May 28 to June 5. All the priesthood are invited to attend, not to air a hobby, but to learn and counsel together. Such matters will be discussed that are by majority vote agreed upon, together with subjects already in hand.

J. W. PETERSON.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints in Utah: I am pleased that in tithes and offerings you did much better last than the previous year. I will be very glad to give you receipts for a still greater amount during the year before us. Where you send money by mail, and it is convenient for you to do so, I prefer express to post office orders. You can also hand to D. W. Wight for this purpose where it is more convenient.

J. W. WIGHT, Bishop's Agent.

NOTICES.

Brethren of the Second Quorum of Seventy, please forward to the secretary of quorum brief statistical report of labors for the year ending March 1, 1899. State whether presiding, and in what capacity; also prospects for the future, and the outlook of the work in your respective fields of labor. We trust that faithfulness, diligence, and humility may characterize all, ever keeping in memory that God's work must be done in God's appointed way. Address T. W. Williams, 830 Bartlett Street, Los Angeles, California.

C. SCOTT, Pres. Quorum.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Clinton district conference will convene at Coal Hill chapel, five miles east of El Dorado Springs, Missouri, and two and a half west of Lebeck, at ten a. m., May 20. Ministerial and branch reports should be sent to Lebeck, Missouri, instead of Verdella if sent after May 12.

D. C. WHITE, Pres.

ELLA MILLER, Clerk.

Conference of Northern Nebraska district will meet at the saints' church, Fremont, Nebraska, May 27, at 9:30 a. m. It is requested that branches send representative delegates, as officers are to be elected, and especially a president. Action is to be taken on request of Sunday school convention to change the time of meeting of conference. Address reports, notices, and communications to James Huff, Fremont, Nebraska, in care of J. P. Ogard.

JAMES HUFF, Sec.

Conference of Southeastern Illinois district will convene at the saints' chapel in Brush Creek branch, on Saturday, June 24, at ten a. m. Branch clerks please make out statistical reports and forward to J. D. Stead in care of I. A. Morris, Zenith. A written report from all the brethren of the priesthood will be expected. Everybody is invited to come, and bring their baskets well filled, and remain on the ground that they may derive the benefits of all the services that may be held during conference.

I. A. MORRIS, Pres.

J. D. STEAD, Clerk.

DIED.

TEASDALE.—Bro. John Teasdale died at his home in Coalville, Iowa, March 25, 1899, aged 68 years. He united with the church in an early day and went to Utah; becoming disgusted with the corruption visible in the Utah Church, he accepted the claims of the Reorganization and returned to the States, and has been a resident of Coalville for twenty odd years. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn. Bro. Teasdale suffered much in his last illness, though he bore it patiently. It is thought that he had a view of his eternal reward, as he paused while conversing with his family and Elder Samuel Jordison, and said, "O how beautiful! O how nice! O how sweet! and it is all for me." Funeral services were held in the Swede church, Elder Samuel Jordison preaching the discourse. The remains were laid to rest in the Otho cemetery to await the morning of the first resurrection.

Following its annual custom, the Review of Reviews for May publishes a forecast of the great national conventions, summer schools, and other gatherings of general interest for the present year.

Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

DR. DE COSTA PREDICTS A BIBLE CRISIS.

The Rev. Dr. Benjamin F. De Costa, rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, took occasion in his sermon yesterday, to attack the school of higher criticism of the Bible, and express himself against the ordination of the Rev. Charles A. Briggs as an Episcopal clergyman. Dr. Briggs has already been made a deacon in the Episcopal church, and is to be ordained a priest on Sunday, May 14, in St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, in Westchester.

He has recently published a book entitled "A General Introduction to the Study of Holy Scripture," in which higher criticism is used in a way of which Dr. De Costa does not approve.

From the latter's sermon yesterday it appeared that he does not think Dr. Briggs sufficiently sound in his theology to take orders in the Episcopal Church.

"The Episcopal Church," he said, "Will soon reach a genuine Bible crisis, and decide whether or not it is in the future to become a safe harbor for every form of doubt."—N. Y. cor. Chicago Tribune, April 24, 1899.

RAINSFORD DEFENDS DR. BRIGGS.

Dr. William S. Rainsford, rector of St. George's Church, when questioned to-day as to his opinion of the controversy over the ordination of Dr. Briggs, said: "The whole thing is bosh and poppycock. Because a little country parson attempts to arraign a broad and liberal-minded man's idea of religion the public takes it up and tries to make a controversy out of it, and, further than that, to create a disaffection in the church.

"Any person connected with the Protestant Episcopal Church in this diocese knows that the sentiment of the ablest and most consequential members of the priesthood is directly in line with the teachings of Dr. Briggs.

"As for the announcement that a self-constituted committee of the leading opponents of Dr. Briggs' ordination has met for the purpose of examining into the religious theories of Dr. Briggs with the idea of contrasting them with the canonical law of the church and thereby convicting him of such heresy as would unfit him to become a member of the priesthood—that is absurd."

Bishop Potter still maintained to-day the same reticence that had previously marked his favorable attitude on the ordination of Dr. Briggs.

It was said to-day some of the opposing ministers would challenge Dr. Briggs at the altar.—N. Y. cor. Chicago Tribune, May 3, 1899.

DR. BRIGGS' TROUBLES.

Is there not a place where Dr. Briggs may rest the soles of his weary feet? It is about ten years since the doctor, a professor in Union Theological Seminary, convulsed the Presbyterian Church by his unorthodox writings and his heretical higher criticism. The church moved for his trial, which he escaped by withdrawing from it. Then he embraced Episcopalianism and under the auspices of Bishop Potter was made a deacon. Having passed the tests of the Bishop's examining chaplains and the standing committee of the diocese of New York, he has sought ordination as priest, only to meet with the protest of the Rev. P. M. Clendenin, rector of St. Peter's, Westchester, in which subsequently several other Episcopal clergymen have joined. Dr. Clendenin and his associates arraign him as a destroyer of the inspiration of the Bible and are particularly incensed because he has declared that "the church needs a greater reformation than it has ever yet enjoyed." Dr. Clendenin is of opinion that the church is good enough as it stands and with his friends is appealing to the Bishop to withdraw the ordination. If he should not Dr. Briggs' priesthood may be a storm center in the Episcopalian Church, as it was some years ago in the Presbyterian Church. Can he afford to disturb that church, which so long has been free from wrangling, theological technicalities, and heresy hunting? It is questionable whether he ought to do it if he feels so inclined. There are other churches which he can join and in which he can maintain his present views with not even ruffling the surface. It would be better for him not to disturb any church which has well defined creeds, but to make his connection where his presence will not create a disturbance and where he can serenely wait that good time coming when the heretic of yesterday will become the defender of the faith.—Chicago Tribune, May 3, 1899.

REMOVING THE ANTIQUITIES.

The recent removal of the ban upon Roger Williams by the General Court of Massachusetts is bearing good fruit by inducing the people to clean out more of their antiquities. A few weeks ago the deacons of the Old South Church met together and decided to lay aside the confession of faith which was adopted by the church in 1680, though few of the present members knew there was such a creed, it not having been in use since 1855. The old creed had many cheerful provisions, such as the following:—

"By the decree of God for the manifestation of his glory, some men and angels are predestinated unto everlasting life and others are foreordained to everlasting death.

"These angels and men thus predestinated and foreordained are particularly and unchangeably designed and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished.

"Neither are any other redeemed by Christ or effectually called, justified, adopted, sanctified, and saved but the elect only.

"The rest of mankind God was pleased, according to the unsearchable counsel of his own will, whereby he extendeth or withholdeth mercy as he pleaseth for the glory of his sovereign power over his creatures, to pass by, and to ordain them to dishonor and wrath for their sin, to the praise of his glorious justice."

This, however, is no longer a creed that binds. It has been dead for some time, and now it is buried so deep there is no danger of its being used as a test of membership. The next move, it is intimated, will be in the direction of wiping out some of the blue laws which still remain on the statute books.—Chicago Tribune, May 4, 1899.

POSSIBILITIES OF LIQUID AIR.

Ira Remsen, the distinguished professor of chemistry in the Johns Hopkins University, contributes a paper to the May issue of the Popular Science Monthly in which he discusses "liquid air," which has now become easily procurable, owing to the efforts of Tripler, who has reduced the cost from $500 for a half pint to $20 for five gallons. The most interesting part of Professor Remsen's article is that in which he indicates the practical applications of Tripler's experiments, for he believes that liquid air will soon pass through the plaything stage. Four of these applications he indicates, as follows: First, the use of the liquid as a cooling agent; second, as a source of power in motors, owing to its enormous power of expansion; third, in the preparation of explosives; and fourth, for the purpose of getting oxygen from the air, which has a commercial value, cheap oxygen being a desideratum in many branches of industry. It is Professor Remsen's belief that liquid air will prove itself a useful substance, and as work with it is now being carried on in three countries important developments may be expected in the near future.

NEW RAILWAY FOR THE HOLY LAND.

Secretary Hay has received details of the new railroad which is to cross the Holy Land. The proposed capital is $50,000,000, but no shares will be put on the market, so it is said, until the line is completed as far as Nazareth. The road will run from Haifa, a seaport town seventy-five miles south of Beirut, to Damascus, a distance of 142 miles, and the project includes an extension from Damascus to Bagdad and the Persian Gulf.

While the Jaffa-Jerusalem, the Beirut-Damascus-Hauran, and the Lebanon tramways are narrow gauge concerns the Haffa-Damascus railway will be of standard width. It is primarily intended to tap the great Hauran wheat regions, which are only partly developed, being still under the sway of Bedouins and Druze tribes, and to afford another outlet for the growing trade of Damascus, the largest city in Asiatic Turkey.

Active operations commenced last month on the division between Haifa and the Jordan, and the line is to be completed in less than two years as far as Damascus. The Thames iron works being crowded with orders it is likely rails, locomotives, and other material will be bought in the United States.—Washington cor. Chicago Tribune, May 6, 1899.

The South Dakota Legislature is working on a law making medical examinations obligatory upon those about to marry.

COST OF WAR.

Statisticians are at work getting up figures for the international disarmament conference which meets in Holland on May 18. The wars of the last half of the century have been expensive. Their direct cost is estimated as follows: The Crimean war, $1,700,000,000; the Italian war of 1858, $253,000,000; the Austro-Prussian war, $330,000,000; the Franco-German war, $2,533,400,000; and the Russo-Turkish war, $1,290,000,000, a total of over $6,000,000,000 for the five great European wars. The American civil war cost $5,000,000,000, and $1,000,000,000 in loss of property. If big figures are convincing, the congress at The Hague will not be long in reaching a conclusion.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

M. R. Hutchison, a young electrical engineer and graduate of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, has placed on exhibition an instrument he calls the "Akoulallian," which enabled two young men born totally deaf to hear sounds which they repeated as far as they were able. On the same electrical principle employed in the larger apparatus by which an instructor can communicate speech to any number of pupils at one time without confusion.

Hutchison has put together a portable instrument by means of which a deaf mute was enabled to hear the playing of a piano at a distance of sixty feet and to distinguish a voice in ordinary conversation.—Mobile Dispatch.

The most important news in the current foreign dispatches is the announcement that the British and Russian governments have signed an agreement defining their respective spheres of influence in China, thus removing any danger of hostility from a clash of interests. By this agreement Great Britain will control in the Yang-tse-Kiang Valley, while Russia will dominate Northern China.

Dr. Seton writes the leading article in the Catholic World Magazine for May, and in it sketches the progress of science during the nineteenth century. This century has been called by many names, but the title it deserves the best of all is the "Age of Science." It is only necessary for one to recount the marvelous inventions and discoveries to realize how true this title is. Dr. Seton does this in an all too cursory way, which only shows that with his grasp of the matter he might have said as much about each of the sciences as he has said of all the sciences in general.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

College Commencement Exercises, it is understood, will be held as follows: Friday, June 9, Literary Society; Saturday, June 10, Oratorical Department; Sunday, June 11, Baccalaureate Sermon, President E. L. Kelley; Monday, June 12, Department of Music; Tuesday, June 13, Commencement Day—Commercial Department; Wednesday, June 14, College Commencement Day. Exercises on Sunday commence at 11 a. m.; on the Wednesday, 10 a. m.; other days at 7:30 p. m. The minds of our Graduating Class are seriously fixed upon the orations they have in hand, and we, who are privileged to attend the exercises, ought to hear some good things.

With the opening up of warm weather outdoor sports are becoming generally patronized by Graceland students, and base ball is especially popular among the male element. We are anxiously looking forward to the time when the Graces will have a fine Gymnasium of their own, built near the College and equipped with everything that tends to make the body strong. Shall we err in thinking that our alumni, past and present, will agitate this matter?

Two new students were enrolled last week, both from sunny Alabama. Which is going to be the next State to send a student for the first time? Every branch in the United States, over fifty in membership, ought to send one student at least. Now let us start with a hundred students next Fall Term.

We have been patiently waiting for some of our saints in certain States of the Union to send subscriptions or take up scholarships, but so far our patience has been in vain. Are these States determined to be silent? Are they unwilling to help forward education except they are taxed by law, and, if so, is this liberality, is it generosity? Do they believe that the liberty of this land is cradled at the altar and nurtured in the school, or is it all make-believe?

Chapel talks have been quite varied of late, and much matter of interest has been discussed: the general information, culled by the students from the same ought to be valuable to them. Our Typewriting Department is now running several typewriters, all of the Remington and Smith-Premier type. The Pitman-Dement system of Shorthand, lately adopted by our Shorthand Department, is giving general satisfaction.

DECADENCE IN RELIGION AND CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

Hon. Zenas H. Gurley, Deputy Warden at the penitentiary at Anamosa, Iowa, Daily Republican, for April 21, from which we take the following editorial; and a notice from Zion's Herald. The Republican says:—

DECADENCE OF CHURCHES.

Attention has been called to what is called the fading faith of New England by a recent state paper issued by Governor Rollins, of New Hampshire. But for this state paper and its subject matter the name of the governor of that State would have remained in obscurity. In the paper in question he says that "the decline of the Christian religion, especially in our rural communities, is a marked feature of the times." He says that there are towns in which no church bell is heard from one year to another. "There are communities in which the dead are laid away without the benison of the name of Christ, and where marriages are solemnized only by justices of the peace." The comments that have been called out by these gubernatorial statements show that that condition of things is not confined to New Hampshire, but that it is more or less true of all New England. There are various reasons assigned for this decadence of religion all of which are more or less competent. Some abuse what they call New England culture, which some have sought to substitute for religion. The literary school which graced New England when Emerson and his compeers in letters were writing was composed of advanced thinkers, the majority of them had left Congregationalism, which was the evolution of New England Presbyterianism, and had become Universalists or Unitarians or mere Transcendentalists. A transcendental religion is all right for persons with high comprehending powers, but it loses its effectiveness as soon as it is transmitted to men and women with lesser minds and weaker morals. They need a more tangible religion.

But the conditions described by the governor of New Hampshire are not confined to that part of the Union. They are more or less widespread. They obtain in Iowa also. In this State there has been an unmistakable decadence of religion. Throughout Iowa there are empty meeting houses or meeting houses in which the interest is hardly sufficient to keep up the audiences. It is hard to say just what the church lacks, but it lacks something and it falls often short of that prayerful potency which once characterized it. The "higher criticism" may gradually be undermining the faith of the people in the religion which was once their all. There is to be, to say the least, a realignment of the religious forces. This is an evolutionary age. May the people come out of it with a potent religion of some kind; for without such an anchorage, life, for most human beings, is a drifting that is beset with dissatisfaction and and that ends in disappointment.

DECLINE OF RELIGION IN NEW ENGLAND.

Zion's Herald: The moribund church official may express great surprise at the allegations of the Governor of New Hampshire and question their accuracy, but any one who is at all familiar with the actual situation in the Granite State knows that a steady and appalling declension in the religious life of the villages has been going on for years.

It is equal and painfully true of the other New England States. The writer has served as pastor in three of them, has critically studied the situation for twenty years, and writes, therefore, from personal and practical knowledge of the facts and conditions. The rural sections of New England are fast becoming missionary ground. The causes are many, but chief among them have been the degeneracy in the native population, the introduction of a large foreign element, and the rivalry of churches in an effort to magnify denominationalism.

It is worthy of notice, that the more what is called "the higher criticism" is driving the Bible into the background, the more marked becomes this decadence in interest in and attendance at denominational Christian churches and services.

Whether the cause is the strife to "magnify denominationalism," which means simply a rivalry in securing the largest accession of numbers, so strongly characteristic of the average individual church as suggested by Zion's Herald, or is to be traced to the almost universal policy of the preachers to avoid the preaching of doctrinal tenets, so characteristic of the primitive church under Christ and his apostles, through fear to disrupt the relations existing between the several so-called evangelical churches understood to be the basis of unity as being the Church of Christ as a whole though made up of many separate and directly antagonizing parts, both in theory and practice.

Which of these, or whether both are coexistent causes, combining with the love of wealth, place, and power existing among the people, and the attacks of spiritism as an organization, and individual unbelievers and image smashers as a class, to dethrone the Bible and bring Christianity into disrepute among the masses, may be open to inquiry; however, this result is following in places.

"When the Son of Man cometh, will he find faith on the earth?" was a pertinent question, many years ago. And as history repeats itself frequently in minor things so it will most likely be in this much more than ordinarily important matter; and the time looked for so long and so earnestly by many of the saints of the past and present time, when there will be but the two grand divisions, those of the faith in God and his Son and those who are without faith and unbelieving.

One thing is hastening on to a solution, the recognition of the condition that these churches claiming to be orthodox (according to the word) and to be integral portions of the Church of Christ in a Christ-acknowledged union of body, are but man-made institutions, following closely in John Wesley's Deed of Declaration:—

In this instrument 100 preachers named by Wesley were declared to be the legal conference, and their character and powers were clearly defined. . . . By the enrollment of this document in the high court of chancery the conference secured a corporate existence and legal standing. The provisions of this deed have remained substantially the same to this day.

This was in 1784; seven years after Wesley died. From man-made organizations only, to individual and collective efforts without organization, is but a step, and the consequent result of ascribing to every religious development a heavenly origin. These things should warn all classes of Latter Day Saints to better diligence of faith and greater purity of personal life, that we may answer this repeated question: Yes, when the Son of Man cometh he shall find faith on the earth.

CONGRESS AND PETITIONS TO IT.

The Congress of the United States will meet about the first week in December next; and, those districts, and branches not in districts, which may wish a representation before that body of lawmakers, on the B. H. Roberts case, will need to be on the alert and secure the presentation and adoption of such resolutions expressive of their views as will represent them in the councils of congress if they are read there.

We advise that whatever the action of either district or branch not in a district may be, that the preamble and resolution be in as few words as practicable to convey the meaning of the makers, and as clear cut in terms as may be.

We advise further that as soon after the district or branch has taken action, that a copy of preamble and resolution, with a statement of what district or branch it comes from, with date and place of adoption, properly signed by the president and secretary of conference or president and clerk of branch in cases where branch is not in a district, be lodged in the hands of the representative in congress of the congressional district in which the district or branch is located; together with a short note to the representative that he will present the same when the case of B. H. Roberts' right to a seat in congress is taken up, in its proper time.

Branches not in a district may take the same action, but branches in districts should be content with district action.

We hope every district in the United States will feel sufficient interest to take action. And we shall have no objection should districts outside of the Republic adopt similar resolutions as their sister districts in the United States. If they do, and will send them to the Secretary of the church, Bro. R. S. Salyards, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, he will see that they are sent to such member of the House as will be likely to use them.

We suggest no form, as we would wish the districts and branches to be left free to form their own resolutions; we having no desire to assume to dictate.

THE SEARCHLIGHT.

The Searchlight, published in Independence, Missouri, by the "Church of Christ," for April, 1899, reaches us this month. From it we quote the following:—

The Saints' Herald some time ago prematurely announced that the Searchlight would suspend. Will the Herald be kind enough to announce the fact that the Searchlight is still and will continue to run for the present year at least.

Certainly, Bro. Haldeman; the HERALD will state that the Searchlight is running and will continue to run for the present year at least.

In the HERALD for September 21, last year, we quoted from the current number of the Searchlight an editorial, headed "Searchlight may suspend." Said editorial began thus: "The Searchlight will probably be discontinued after publishing the next four numbers;" and closes thus: "So it seems that in justice to those who have to bear the financial burdens of the church we should discontinue publication, and such will doubtless be the case unless we receive timely aid from some unexpected quarter."

So, if we published that the "Searchlight would suspend," we did so upon the statement by the editor himself that such would likely be the case. Our notice was headed thus:—

The following from the Searchlight, published by the Hedrickite brethren, indicates that the publication of that paper will be suspended.

It would appear that aid from "some unexpected quarter" came in time. We congratulate our neighbor on its success.

THE summary of the weather and crop service for Iowa for the week ending May 1, is as follows:—

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 2, 1899.

The past week was warmer than usual, the daily excess of temperature ranging from 6° to 12°. Nearly all parts of the State received copious showers, giving an abundance of needed moisture.

All conditions have been very favorable for the growth of vegetation; and rapid progress was made in farm operations except in portions of the southern districts where work was retarded by excessive rains. Grass has started nicely, and in many sections pasturage is sufficient for the support of stock. Spring wheat, oats, and barley germinated quickly, and generally show a good stand.

In some of the northwestern counties very high winds caused dust storms on the 28th, and some injury resulted to recently sown fields of small grain.

Active preparations are in progress in all sections for planting corn, and with favorable weather a good beginning will be made during the first week in May. Reports indicate a probable increase in the acreage of corn compared with last year, in consequence of winter-killing of wheat and clover and the unfavorable conditions for early seeding of small grain.

The spring pig crop is likely to be much lighter than usual.

BRO. FRED B. BLAIR, was called home from his California field of labor because of the dangerous sickness of his mother, Sister Elizabeth Blair, a mother in Israel surely. Sr. Blair was very sick indeed, her life being despaired of; she was "given up to die." Her son Frederick was sent for, and Sr. Blair only desired to live to see him. He arrived home on January 27 and found his mother living notwithstanding the fears of relatives and friends. A great appeal was offered in her behalf and in a day or two after Bro. Frederick's return she began to amend.

As soon as her recovery was thought to be fairly in prospect, Bro. Frederick, anxious to be busy, and thinking it to be unwise to be idle, began labor at different points round Lamoni, where he could find openings and be within call in case his mother's sickness should turn for the worse.

By consultation with proper officers he held a month's series of meetings at Davis City, the results of which were an awakening of interest and the baptism of some fourteen.

After a short interval for recuperation and needed rest of both speaker and hearers, Bro. Blair held another series of meetings at the same place, resulting in the baptizing of some five others, making a total of nineteen.

During these meetings some help was given Bro. "Fred B." by a few of the brethren, but the burden of the work was his, and great credit is due him; both for the manner in which he performed his labor; and for the fact that he felt it to be unwise and uncalled for to remain idle at home when there was so much need of labor and so good an opportunity for it as was presented at Davis City. He has made a lasting impression at the city where his work was done and is sure of a welcome when he may choose to return to that field of his labor and his success.

Bro. Blair left for his California field last Saturday, April 29, via St. Joseph, Missouri, thence to Los Angeles, California, thence to San Francisco and his field. He is accompanied by Bro. David Anderson, a young Lamoni brother, who takes the field for the first time, and who, it is believed, will make his mark. We bespeak for them a field and a chance to work.

The example of Bro. "Fred B." while waiting the slow processes of his mother's recovery, may be profitable to contemplate and follow under the injunction, "Go thou and do likewise."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Sunday school workers of Lamoni, of the Star of Bethlehem school, recently gave a "chicken pie" social, which was largely attended and appreciably patronized. The proceeds, $67.75, will be devoted to papering, carpeting, and renovating lower rooms of the local church used by the school.

Some of Lamoni's young people celebrated May Day in a manner that reflected credit upon themselves and made the occasion one of unusual pleasure to the aged occupants of the Saints' Home. They went, in the evening of the 1st inst., to the Home, taking the traditional May baskets, one for each occupant, having filled them with candy and flowers. They were gladly received and the mutual spirit of good cheer of visitors and visited made the occasion unusually pleasant throughout. All of Lamoni's people, young and older ones, think well of the Home.

The HERALD does not always mention "arrivals and departures" of the ministry or others, unless there is some item of general interest therewith sufficient to justify presenting to our readers. A number of the missionary force have made visits "home" of late, equivalent to the annual homecoming of the past when General Conferences were annual gatherings. The missionary, like others of his fellows, desires and is entitled to see and look after loved ones at home—wife and children—and they are entitled to see and desire the privilege of seeing and looking after him. The man who does not love his family, could there be such an one among the elders, is not fit to preach the gospel, but is "worse than an infidel." A judicious amount of homecoming is necessary and right; it is the extreme only that is open to criticism. The demands of duty at home and abroad are both regarded in the Divine law. The happy medium which avoids extremes is the point of harmony with "the law of the Spirit of life;" and "love is the fulfilling of the law"—true, loyal love to God, to family, to the church, and to fellow man; the rendering of the service due to each.

The Lamoni public schools gave a free public entertainment at the saints' church on the evening of Friday, the 5th inst., under the direction of Superintendent G. N. Briggs and assistant teachers. The programme consisted of music, vocal and instrumental, recitations, dialogues, cantatas, delicate exhibitions, drills, etc., and was well rendered throughout. The work entire was creditable both to the schools and the faculty and pupils whose talents and efforts appeared in the programme. A public exhibition of school work in detail will be given, according to the regular custom of providing annual exhibitions of work accomplished, in a few weeks. The regular closing graduating exercises, in June, will close the work of the present school year.

The Milwaukee Health Commissioner will submit a plan for the operation of a municipal dairy with a view to supplying pure milk for small children. A professional nurse will be placed at public distributing stations to examine health conditions of children brought there. This plan, designed to check infant mortality, is already in operation at Rochester, New York. The age is being distinguished by the application of scientific principles to life. Let the good work go on until every phase of life—social, moral, religious, political, economical, etc., is based upon and in harmony with true principles. We shall then have a more abundant, a broader, a complete life, or that which will be the basis of and guarantee such a life in the time to come. The gospel spirit and law comprehend all of this; no less. As a people we need to apply ourselves to a definiteness of purpose, a clearness of action in the spiritual life, that we be prepared to meet the demands now pressing upon us for service. The application of clear, definite, progressive principles to all phases of life will not be lost sight of by those who profess to be and who are in fact under the influences of the Spirit of truth. Real, true spirituality is distinguished by intelligence, goodness, development in every feature of the earthly economy. It means much of responsibility and of personal satisfaction to be a disciple of Him who is "the life and the light of men," and who applied truth in all his words and actions in his relationship to man's estate.

The National Industrial Commission has been investigating the sweat shop system of Chicago, under which thousands of people, including little children are made to toil under conditions of filth, ignorance, and poverty that breed misery, immorality, ignorance, crime. Godspeed to all good movements. We are in sympathy, warm sympathy, with every movement designed to emancipate humanity. The Christ was touched with sympathy and moved with "compassion" whenever he beheld suffering, darkness, misery, or other evil. He was interested in as he was, we believe, the prompter of every inspiration that had or has in view the redemption of man past, present, or future. The faith and the spirit of Christ will prompt his people to recognize and to sustain every movement in harmony with him; that designed to proclaim deliverance to the downtrodden, the oppressed, the suffering, of every land. As God reigns, oppression must finally cease and evil pass away. Let us labor to aid, in every way we can, the reign of right and the suppression of wrong.

"Ring out the old, ring in the new, Ring out the false, ring in the true."

Lamoni orchards and gardens are aglow and alive with plum, cherry, and apple trees in bloom, also gooseberry and currant bushes blossoming, with fair prospects for strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, etc. A late State report indicated a large percentage of fruit damaged or destroyed by the late cold winter. While such may be correct in general in the State, this section bids fair to have a reasonable supply. So far this region has enjoyed plenty and to spare, of food products, as a rule.

A Burlington, Iowa, item of the 3d inst. states that the report of the Educational Committee recommended the passage by the State Legislature "of a compulsory education law requiring the attendance at school for a fixed number of months each year of all children in the State from seven to fourteen years of age. This report was the subject of earnest discussion, and was unanimously indorsed," at the late biennial session of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs. Good for those fellow laborers who are seeking to promote the welfare of the rising generation. The day is yet to come when not only in present enlightened lands, but in every land, it will not be possible for any man or combination of men to deny even a little child his rights, but when all shall be placed under conditions essential and designed to educate, elevate, and ennoble. Every man and woman in whose bosoms burn the love of truth, the inspiration of justice have reason to "lift up" their heads and be glad in the many influences operating in the world to redeem the race. The consciousness and evidences that God lives and reigns, that justice and judgment are the habitations of his throne, are inspiring to those who labor with him to promote the welfare of "every creature." God's faithful people will discern the many significant signs of the times, both of good and of evil, will realize the necessity of discriminating closely and correctly, and of arraying themselves on the side of right, in all things. The children of the light need not and should not be deceived in anything. The Spirit of truth, theirs by promise, will lead into "all truth," if followed. If ignored or unheeded, danger and darkness ensue.

Bro. Daniel MacGregor, Chatham, Ontario, May 1: "We are having splendid times here, seeking to build up this branch in spirituality. At present the saints are busy making a tent 20 x 40, which we expect to set up on our church lot and start a series of meetings. All goes well."

French delegates to the Czar's disarmament congress have decided to "adopt an attitude of courteous deference to Russia, but on no pretext whatever will they consent to renounce the use in time of war of any scientific invention."

The Thames Iron company, now building the Cape Central railway, has contracted to complete a railway line from Haiffa to Damascus (about 120 miles), crossing the Jordan by a stone bridge, and skirting lake Tiberius. Damascus has about 300,000 inhabitants and lies in an oasis fed by two streams from Lebanon. The line will later on go on to Bagdad, and will form part of a trunk route to India. A narrow gauge line from Beyroot already reaches Damascus.

Always distinguish between misdemeanors and crimes. A thoughtless child will do a great many things which are vexatious, but not, in themselves, criminal. For example: he may litter up the floor with his whittlings and thus cause the tidy housewife more trouble and vexation than if he told a lie; the moral character of the two actions is entirely different and requires different treatment if we would not dull the child's perceptions of right and wrong. He should be taught not to litter the floor because it makes trouble for others; he should be made to feel that the lie is a sin against God. Cure his heedlessness by making him clear up the muss he made in whittling; meanwhile, draw out his better nature by appealing to his love for his mother whose work is increased by his carelessness. Show him the selfishness of doing, for his own pleasure, that which adds to her labors, or those of any one; in short, bring his conduct to the test of the golden rule. "If you were in mamma's place would you like to have your little boy do so?" Are you doing to your brothers and sisters exactly as you wish them to do to you? These questions will bring out clearly in his mind, the dividing line between right and wrong.

If he has told a lie, the case is more serious. Whatever the age of the offender, do not fail to make it clearly understood that it is a matter to be settled between his own soul and God, that it is his heavenly Father's law he has broken, and that he can be forgiven only through Christ, his dear elder brother. Let your sinning child see in you and through you, in his heavenly Father, grief for his sin, not anger at its consequences. And be sure you do not give him the impression that God does not love him when he sins. This is an unscriptural view. "For God so loved the world that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." The old Romans had a proverb, "Be at peace with men, at war with their vices." If heathens could separate the sinner from his sin, surely our Father can love us, while reprobating our sin.

What incentives shall we place before children to influence their conduct? There are improper incentives, mischievous in their results; there are proper incentives which tend to draw out the good and repress the evil within. Every appeal to an improper motive has a tendency to deaden moral perceptions; every appeal to noble ones draws us to a higher plane of thought and action. Among improper incentives we rank bribery, ridicule, rivalry, shame, and all appeals to the lower, selfish nature. Hiring children to be good has made many a man a rascal. It trains them to estimate goodness by how much it will bring. Children thus trained are apt to grow into people of whom it can truthfully be said: "Each one has his price." If the child has been good and you choose to reward that goodness by a gift without any previous promise, all right; but do not say to him, "Now, if you will be good I will give you some candy." This makes a bargain and sale affair of right doing by bribing him to do what he ought to be trained to do from principle.

Ridicule is a weapon which should be very sparingly, if indeed ever used. When we remember how sensitive children are to it, how defenseless against it, and what a brood of evil passions it arouses, we doubt if it can ever be used to good advantage with them. With older people it may be different.

We may sometimes shame a child out of doing a mean thing, but we doubt the advisability of so doing. It tends to deaden his self-respect, and when this is lost all is lost. Appeals to such motives bring into prominent exercise the worst elements of his character, instead of the best; and though, for the time, they may deter from wrong doing, their effect is far from elevating.

You cannot be too careful in regard to cultivating self-respect in your child. Help him to respect himself so much that he will scorn to do anything unworthy. Never mortify him in the presence of others. A wise mother made it a rule never to reprove her children publicly. One day when she had company, her little boy behaved badly at table. Rebuke, entreaty, warning were telegraphed from her eye to his, but without effect, as the very spirit of mischief seemed to have possession of him. Presently she said, in a perfectly easy and natural tone, "Oh, Charley, come here a minute; I want to tell you something." No one at the table supposed that it had anything to do with his bad behavior. She did not intend that they should. As she whispered to him, I alone saw his cheek flush, and that he looked quickly and imploringly into her face; I alone saw that tears were almost in her eyes. But she shook her head, and he went back to his seat with a manful but very red little face. In a few moments he laid down his knife and fork, and said, "Mamma, will you please to excuse me?" "Certainly, my dear," said she. Nobody but I understood it, or observed that the little fellow had to run very fast to get out of the room without crying. Afterward she told me that she never sent a child away from the table in any other way. "But what would you do," said I, "if he were to refuse to ask to be excused?" Then the tears stood full in her eyes. "Do you think he could," she replied, "when he sees that I am only trying to save him from pain?" In the evening, Charley sat in my lap, and was very sober. At last he whispered to me, "I'll tell you an awful secret, if you won't tell. Did you think I had done my dinner this afternoon when I got excused? Well, I hadn't. Mamma made me, because I acted so. That's the way she always does. But I haven't had to have it done to me before for ever so long—not since I was a little fellow" (he was eight now); "and I don't believe I ever shall again till I'm a man." Then he added, reflectively, "Mary brought me all the rest of my dinner upstairs; but I wouldn't touch it, only a little bit of the ice cream. I don't think I deserved any at all; do you?"

Among proper incentives we rank, desire for approbation, emulation—taking care to distinguish it from rivalry—the right public spirit pervading the home, love to parents and fear of grieving them, the approbation of conscience, love to God and desire for his approbation. As we have seen, desire of approbation proves a powerful and proper incentive when approval always follows well doing, and is withheld from everything wrong. Of course you must take care not to allow it to become a feeder of self-conceit.

Emulation implies strong desire and striving to excel in qualities we think desirable; it is distinguished from rivalry, whose essential element is desire to excel others, in that it seeks to excel our own former selves, thus ever reaching after something better and nobler. To become better and nobler is surely a worthy motive. Rightly used it may, through life, be a lodestone, ever drawing us to a higher plane of right and duty. Arouse noble emulation by keeping before your children examples of the wise and good; bring into play the imagination to make vivid and real the biographies of men and women you would have your children emulate; acquaint them with living examples which teach more forcibly than books can do.

The right public spirit in the home is a great aid in family government—that spirit which scorns to do wrong when the parents are out of sight; to take any mean advantage of brother or sister; which values truth, purity, honor, above every selfish consideration; which crushes out selfishness by loving words and deeds; in short, the spirit of the golden rule. Such a public spirit in the home, includes the next incentive on our list, love to parents and fear of grieving them. Where this prevails, the love of each child to the other, and of all to the parents, prove powerful incentives for good, and stepping-stones to the highest of all incentives—doing right because it is right, thus winning the approval of conscience, love to God and desire for his approval.—Childhood: its Care and Culture.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. A. E. Hanna desires the prayers of the Prayer Union that if it be God's will she be restored to health. She has been sick for two months, and wishes to live and bring up her child, and be of some use to the church.

I. J. Peirce, an aged Latter Day Saint, requests the Prayer Union to pray that he may be restored to health.

"Coleridge says the Gospel by John is the sublimest composition by man."

"A good lesson, like a good meal, must be salted and peppered in the preparation."

The Ninth International (Fourteenth National) Sunday school convention representing the United States, the British North American possessions and Mexico, will be held (D. V.) in the city of Atlanta, Georgia, April 27 to 30, 1899. A very large gathering is anticipated.

Mr. Warren Randolph in his "Reminiscences of the International Lesson Committee" in the International Evangel said: "When the committee came to the choice of a secretary, and I was named, I begged the gentlemen of the committee to excuse me. And this I did not with any simulated modesty, nor for the purpose of having the office pressed upon me. I said frankly to the committee, I was not yet convinced that the scheme was feasible. 'My soul hath it still in remembrance and is humbled within me.' I had not yet come to see the greatness nor the grandeur of the opportunity. But I shall never cease to be glad that others saw better than I did, and that with loving constraint they then pressed me into a service which proved to be the joy of my life."

(How very often is this the case with our own workers. They are loath to undertake work which is afterward the joy of their lives.—Ed.)

THE IDEAL SUPERINTENDENT.

As a matter of course much depends upon the superintendent. The ideal superintendent should be a man, of course, who knows how to superintend a Sunday school. This does not mean superintending on Sunday alone, but seven days in the week, and if he has the Sunday school on his heart, as an ideal Sunday school must be on the heart of its superintendent, he will give many night hours, thinking and planning—possibly hours that he ought to be asleep but cannot—in his anxiety to increase the attendance and interest in the school. He did not take the Sunday school just because he was elected superintendent, but because he was impressed that God had called him to the work. He must be a man filled with the Holy Spirit, wise in biblical lore, pure in practice, faithful in duty, enthusiastic and zealous in his work, ever seeking to improve his methods and to keep out of ruts.—Mrs. Helen M. Thomas, in International Evangel.

The time for the reunions of 1899 is fast approaching. Are the several committees at work preparing for the Sabbath school work thereat? Are the district officers of both Sunday school and Religio watching for opportunities to do some good and effective work during the course of the reunion? Where a reunion passes without the Sunday school and Religio work being well represented, a mistake is being made. Opportunity for doing great good is being passed unused. We trust that the officers of the district Sunday school association wherein the reunion is to be held will take the necessary steps to secure the privilege and prepare for the work in time. Those wishing the assistance of some one of the officers of the General Sunday School Association should apply as soon as the dates are known, as many are now asking for dates that are yet open. Let us hear from you.

UNDER date of March 3, we have the report of the Oklahoma district, made and sent by the secretary, Bro. Stephen Smith. From this and a letter from Bro. W. S. Macrae, district superintendent, we learn that the work is growing there in spite of the scattered condition of the branches and fewness in numbers, as well as many other obstacles not encountered by the districts of the Central States. We have watched with interest the progress of the Sabbath school work in that section of the country, and have been made to feel that much of determination must have characterized the work there as well as zeal and knowledge. To our certain knowledge there has been as much advancement there as has been in some districts far more favorably situated and circumstanced than is that new district in a new and somewhat sparsely settled country. May their love for the work continue and increase. May they be supported by all, lay member and minister alike. And may He "who doeth all things well" attend their every effort for good, giving needed strength, wisdom, and love for the work. We would like to publish the report, but space will not admit it.

A CORRECTION.

In publishing the Newspaper of the St. Louis district in Herald of April 12, a slight error exists in placing the name "S. A. Burgess" at the close instead of after the paragraph headed "Unity of Thought." It is all the work of the editor except the poetry and the above accredited paragraph.

A MODERN SABBATH SCHOOL.

Condensed from a paper by Sr. Allie Thorburn.

We have the school organized with all its officers and members, and we are all ready to go to work. Sunday morning arrives and we wend our way to the Sabbath school with prayerful hearts. The superintendent steps into the schoolroom with a smile on his face, and a kind good morning for all who arrive. All officers and scholars arrive fifteen minutes before school is taken up for song service. All join in singing those beautiful songs that have been previously selected. . . . The librarian passes all books before song service begins. We are then in a good spiritual condition to receive divine favor and instruction. Then the superintendent and assistant should take their places on the rostrum. The superintendent should by all means consult previously the one whom he desires to offer prayer, and have him also sit on the rostrum. If all are full of life, energy, and the Spirit, they may all be able to perform their work gloriously and triumphantly. And I will assure you that school will honor God and his work. The superintendent now calls the school to order by saying, "The chorister will announce the opening song." The superintendent shall say, "Brother or Sister — will lead us in prayer. After which the school will, in concert, repeat the Lord's prayer, and as we do so, let our minds be centered upon the beautiful prayer that Jesus taught his disciples." . . . The chorister will announce the second song. In the meantime the secretary is at his desk, after which the superintendent announces that the secretary will call the roll of officers and teachers. The roll should be called in a loud and clear tone, so as to be heard all over the room. The secretary should see to all the business of the school, also, to passing the collection envelopes before the class work begins, so that teachers may take up the collection without disturbing class work. The superintendent should then ask the school, "Will some one please tell me where the responsive reading is found?" You might change the form every two or three Sundays, and say, "The responsive reading is found;"—but you see the former plan will tend to make them prepare themselves with a knowledge as to where the lesson is. Then the superintendent will read verses alternately with the school, the assistant superintendent reading with the school. After which the superintendent will state that the classes will now take their places, all marching to their different places while a song is sung or a march played.

They are now in readiness to begin their work. Then as the teachers have attended the teachers' meeting, and all decide on what are the most important points in the lesson, and all teach the same points, we shall then comprehend and see the grandeur and harmony in uniformity of thought and mind, as well as the grandeur of uniformity of texts. . . . They must study to bring out the most central thoughts of the lesson, and agree upon what they shall teach the next Sunday morning.

But we will return to the class work again. Let us enter into our work as though we had some life and spirit about us, remembering that we must teach the points we have agreed upon in the teachers' meeting. While the class work is going on, the librarian will fold and count the papers for each class. . . .

At the close of the lesson, two bells should tap about two minutes apart. All should be in readiness for the review which should begin as soon as the classes have marched back to their places. Now comes the and it should be a nice, short, spicy review, right to the point that has been studied at the teachers' meeting and on Sunday morning by the teachers in their class work. Only, of course, the blackboard should be used in as simple a way as you can possibly do it. And if the superintendent desires to have the review in charge of the assistant superintendent, they should be so informed the Sunday preceding, so that ample opportunity may be given to prepare therefor. Now our short, spicy, blackboard review has been given, and all are in a good spirit, the superintendent announces that we will now hear the secretary's report read, all listening earnestly to see if it is correct.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY

keeping in touch with the work, always being prepared to assist in absence of the secretary. Also should be a good reliable person, who is able to count and recount all collections and keep record of the same; also make out a report at each meeting of the school. Last of all is a good

who will be alive to their work, and who will make all feel that they are no more strangers and pilgrims, but fellow citizens in the house of God. Not forgetting the who has charge of the singing, and has quite an important part in this great drama of life. The organist and assistant will help to cheer and encourage in this great warfare. The chorister now announces the closing hymn. Benediction. . . .

London, April 15.—According to special dispatches from Paris a monster pilgrimage to Lourdes will leave various points in France on Monday. About 50,000 pilgrims will embark on fifty-three trains and will arrive at Lourdes on Tuesday.

London, April 13.—The steamer Arcturus arrived to-day at Hull with 350 passengers from Finland. A week ago 220 emigrants arrived. All are bound for America. Thousands of Finns are preparing to leave their native country to escape conscription.

Letter Department.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 28.

Editors Herald:—As I am unavoidably sojourning at home and feel restless to be about my Father's business, I will ask space to air the cogitations of my brain.

Lately I spent a few days at Lucas, and preached four times, was blessed of the Spirit, and kindly treated by the people. After an absence of a year it was gratifying to find I had so many friends both in and out of the church, and it was a little hard to refuse the request of some: "Come and preach for us," and especially when I take pleasure in telling the "old, old story of Jesus and his love."

Two Utah elders having taken up headquarters at Chariton are fulfilling 2 Timothy 3:6; they do no public preaching. Is this applicable? "And it cometh every man who hath been warned, to warn his neighbor."—D. C. 85:22.

This is a late spring, and there was more snow fell during the closing days of March and the first days of April than all the rest of winter.

I noticed something new and strange in the Wabash train service, they have a conductor, collector, and brakeman on each passenger train, and at once the suggestion came, a great corporation trying to keep their employees honest. Strikes among coal miners have not always proved the best thing for the miners, for many of them are homeless, and the mine owners, with company stores can so arrange the work that the miner has to live from hand to mouth, with no opportunity to lay up a dollar against a "rainy day," and the outlook has no rainbow of promise for the man that digs.

At Bevier it is somewhat better than I have seen it elsewhere, as a majority of the saints are the owners of their homes. All men should own their homes. We visit the homes of many saints and see upon the center table political, society, and fashion papers, but no church literature, and oftentimes they excuse themselves because they cannot afford to take and pay for church papers. How people expect to keep up with the progress of the work and prepare themselves for the full fruition of eternal life without reading is more than I can comprehend. I thirst for knowledge.

Although there was no assembling of General Conference this spring, I observe that many of the missionaries took their annual vacation; and this is as it should be, for the man who is unworthy of a vacation once a year, is hardly the right kind of a man for the church to send out as representative.

The Ensign being now nominally a church paper, and many of the members take both the Herald and the Ensign, I suggest would it not be wise for to discontinue duplicate publication.

What the final results of my labor for the conference year shall prove to be I will have to await till eternity declares it. But the results as they appear to me are no disappointment, for it was under most trying and adverse circumstances that I made the effort to fulfill my appointment, and on the occasion of my first two visits to my field I was painfully discouraged and somewhat afflicted with the b-l-u-e-s. I might have been partially responsible for my mental condition and conclusions, but I could not drive from me the feeling that there was to a degree a lack of confidence upon the part of some of the saints, and that my ability as a minister for Christ was being animadverted upon. To meet and overcome this real or imaginary state of affairs I determined to walk in the valley of humility and faithfully discharge my duties as a minister for God and the church, and to diligently eschew taking part or sides with any in their local trouble or misunderstanding with each other. And I have reason to believe the policy chosen was both right and wise, for upon my last visits to the district the saints manifested quite a different feeling, and were kind to me in the time of illness and helpful in their aiding in the work, and not neglectful of my individual necessities, and the saints and friends at Bevier were so mindful that they watch(ed) me. For prudential reasons I cannot mention individual acts of kindness, but to one and all return my unfeigned thanks. The past winter has proved unfavorable to missionary work, the weather was so changeable; either it was bitter cold or else the roads were so muddy that they were almost impassable, hence our work was chiefly confined to the town.

On leaving one place in the midst of the heaviest snowstorm of all winter, a brother made inquiry in the most kindly and friendly manner: "Is there anything I can do for you; is there anything you stand in need of?" This revived an experience of long ago, that I have not written. In May, 1879, closed one night a series of a ten days' effort, the Bishop's agent, one of the wealthy men of the church, asked me: "Bro. Elvin, have you money enough to pay your way to your next stopping place?" I was nettled at the question, and with some degree of asperity, answered: Yes, sir! Now for my experience: To be near the depot to take the early morning train, I rode on a board in a lumber wagon some five miles after night meeting, the brother I went home with handed me a lamp and told me to go up stairs, that they were crowded, but that I would find a bed with one man in it, and I could sleep with him. Up I went, and to my astonishment found five or six beds full of railroad construction hands, and I was not favorably impressed with my new associates. It was midnight! There was no help for me, so I turned in. Sleep! not much!! The longer I lay there the more uncomfortable I became, so before the meadow lark had piped his morning call I arose, pulled on my clothes, and with shoes in hand, slipped down those stairs as quietly as any mouse, out the kitchen door, put on my shoes; and off to the depot, which I found locked. I had no overcoat, and the morning was cold with an east wind and mist that would wet a Scotchman to the hide. At last the agent let me in. I had one big round dollar, and he took nine tenths of it for a ticket. When I arrived at my stopping place it was raining as if the Lord had forgotten his promise to Noah. There was no street car; a ride in a hack was fifty cents, and as that was forty cents over and above my pile, I concluded to remain in the depot till it quit raining. In this I was woefully disappointed, for the agent ordered me out. A walk of a mile, and my clothes were soaking wet. I was not only wet but sleepy, tired, hungry, and sick; but best of all, my pride had been most fearfully punctured by this experience.

Notwithstanding the timely and wholesome advice and instruction in the first editorial of the Herald for March 22, all of which I most heartily indorse; nevertheless, I have done considerable visiting of the saints, not in the capacity as is required of the branch elder, priest, and teacher, but in a social way, and this seems to be a necessity and unavoidable. Permit me a few words of indorsement of the Herald cover articles, I have been both interested and instructed in the reading of said articles. Let the good work go on.

While preaching at Bevier I had the aid of Bro. W. T. Maitland with his artistical illuminations on the blackboard. With this help I was able to reach the people both by eye and ear. I am fully satisfied that the time is ripe for the ministry of the church to keep before the people that the saints to obtain the desideratum of their heart they must become Zion—the pure in heart. This means much to each individual member of the church, and there is no time to be wasted with the follies or sin-practice of the world.

I was constrained to write the above from a condition brought to light upon the change of branch officers, who at once set to work to discharge their duties, visiting from house to house, and it was strange to learn of the long intervals between these official visits, and more astonishing of how few are the families that observe family worship. No wonder so many are careless and lukewarm in the church. Neglect of duty will surely bring a loss of interest, and also a loss of the Spirit, and a love of pleasure and a desire for worldly things will take the place of church work. It cannot be otherwise, and we might ask, "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Some time ago I was in a prayer meeting and a sister spoke in unknown tongues; there were three distinct languages. The first was that of the people of the Society Islands, the third was an Indian tongue, but the second was indeed unknown. Prayer was offered to obtain what was said, and the interpretation came in Welsh, and was still tongues to many of us. Elder John T. Williams gave an epitomized explanation of what was said to cheer, comfort, and strengthen the saints.

I do not wish to be a fault-finder, but it appears to me there is a growing unwritten ritualism in the church in conducting prayer meetings; namely, the presiding officer exhorts the saints and outlines the service; first prayers, then testimonies. The organic law of the church says "The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God." (D. C. 17: 9.) My opinion is that the same liberty and untrammelled freedom granted to the elders should be extended to the membership, and if any proviso be made it should only be, "Let all things be done decently and in order." (1 Cor. 14: 40.) Let every one occupy in their place and calling with the utmost liberty; for the more of rule enforced, the less Holy Spirit will prevail. Those who are guided by the Holy Spirit will be most law abiding and the most helpful in the cause of Christ. Not long since in a prayer meeting there was a brother illustrating the manner of looking at things. He made reference to the use of the telescope, and I thought how true, for many have a telescopic method in constant use, and it is hung on a swivel, and if they possess a favorable opinion of an individual they turn the magnifying glass to their eye, and they are magnetized by the beauty and grandeur of the view; but if the individual who is to pass under their scrutiny be looked upon with a degree of suspicion, the telescope is whapped around end for end, and the eye peeps in at the microscopic end, and whatever of good the individual possesses is dwarfed and made to look microsthenic, and their supposed faults, though mere mole hills, are made to appear like mountains.

The first week in April I spent at the district court, and took interest in the way lawyers attempt to juggle and manipulate testimony; indeed diplomacy is the art to deceive.

At the General Conference of 1894 the President of the church said in effect that Satan was about to change his tactics; whereas he had sought to create misunderstanding, friction, and contention among the ministry, he would now seek to distress the membership. For one I am amply satisfied that the statement was prophetic, and is having a distressing fulfillment. For the past two years or more I have observed there is quite an increase of our membership who are uniting with the many societies of our times, and I am frequently asked what I think about our church members joining them. As it is rather a delicate topic to discuss, and usually a personal subject, I try to present the truth without wounding the feelings of the party. I cite the Book of Covenants 46: 9, "And again I say unto you, All things must be done in the name of Christ;" and I then ask if the name of Christ is used in any lodge room. It is not used in any that I am aware of; it must therefore be logically clear to every saint that they cannot comply with the command of God within the lodge room, and while in the lodge room are unclothed of their protection promised in the commandments, which "are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled."

The following of fashion is a heavy tax upon the saints, and just a little out of line with—"thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands" (D. C. 42: 12), with "Men of God, who bear the vessels of the Lord, be ye clean in your bodies and your clothing; let your garments be of a sober character and free from excess of ornamentation."—D. C. 119: 3.

I seek not for riches, and ask not for fame. Desiring true fame that I may remain worthy the gospel covenant, its blessings obtain,

In bonds,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 28.

Editors Herald:—The long talked of debate that was to have taken place in St. Louis between the Utah Church and the Reorganization seemingly has collapsed. It may be interesting to the readers of the Herald to know something of how the issue came up and then so ignominiously failed to materialize. Sometime during the month of October, 1898, Bro. O. C. Huddleson, of New Canton, Illinois, wrote to Elder G. M. Pickup, of the Utah Church, in regard to the legality of their claims. Elder Pickup answered, October 21, from Pittsfield, Illinois, and said: "I would prefer a public discussion, as we are to do it for the purpose mentioned [of bringing to light the truths of this unsolved problem—succession]." This was referred to Bro. F. M. Weld. Bro. Weld wrote Elder Pickup, November 2, and inclosed two propositions involving the two churches upon "legal succession;" placing the Reorganization first, and Utah Church second, in arranging propositions. Elder Pickup forwarded this to Elder Melvin J. Ballard, of St. Louis, his superior. Elder Ballard replied November 7, saying: "In the main I have no fault to find with them [the propositions]." He forms two other propositions similar and says: "I forward you propositions on which we will meet you" changing the "order" putting the Utah Church first. Bro. Weld replied, November 10, accepting the change in the "order," but not Ballard's propositions. Ballard replied, November 14, saying: "I cannot accept yours [propositions]." Ballard asks that the debate commence as early as November 20, as he expected to be released from his mission about December 1. Bro. Weld replied, November 16, stating it would be impossible to arrange all the preliminaries by the 20th; also, "It is not you as an individual we are anxious to meet. It is this great question of succession and the difference between the two organizations we desire to discuss, and are anxious and willing to meet any of your representative men in public debate." "Now if you can't come [to New Canton or vicinity], you can surely send some one in your place."

In this reply Bro. Weld asked Elder Ballard to make both propositions read alike as to "president" and "successor" and he would accept his propositions. Elder Ballard answered, November 18, saying: "I suggest, however, that you leave the matter with your elders at New Canton and Elder Pickup our representative in that county." He further stated he thought they would accept the change suggested by Bro. Weld in propositions.

Time passed and Bro. Weld heard from parties at New Canton, stating the Utahs would not "stand fire after so much talk and fear we would not meet you," etc. This Bro. Weld wrote to Elder Ballard on December 8, and asked: "Now will you meet us on the last propositions in St. Louis?" This letter fell into the hands of Elder M. M. Stookey, Ballard's successor, and on December 23, he writes Bro. Weld favoring a debate at St. Louis sometime during the month of January and inclosed two propositions which will appear later in this article.

On December 27, Bro. Weld informed Elder Stookey that the whole matter would now be turned over to I. N. White, of Independence, Missouri, general missionary in charge of the work in St. Louis, since the proposed debate is now moved out of his field. On the same date Bro. Weld wrote me and soon after forwarded the entire correspondence, propositions, etc. On receipt of this matter I wrote Elder M. M. Stookey, of St. Louis, the following note: "Independence, Missouri, December 29, 1898. Elder M. M. Stookey; Dear Sir: Elder F. M. Weld, of Lamoni, Iowa, sends me a challenge and propositions from you for debate; this debate to be held in St. Louis. In behalf of the Reorganized Church of J. C. of L. D. S., I accept the challenge and propositions, and also obligate myself to furnish a man to do the debating for the Reorganization. I also concur with text books to be used in the debate; and also that the debate shall be conducted in a respectful, cordial manner. For 'time,' sometime in January will do—can arrange that later.

"Yours very respectfully,

"I. N. WHITE."

"P. S.—Propositions inclosed; please acknowledge by return mail and oblige.

"I. N. W."

All the reply I got to this note was the return of propositions with Elder Stookey's signature attached as follows: "Resolved, that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, over which Brigham Young presided, is the only true and rightful continuation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints organized in 1830. Affirmative, M. M. Stookey, in behalf of the Church of J. C. of L. D. S. Negative, I. N. White, in behalf of Reorganized Church of J. C. of L. D. S."

"Resolved, that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, over which Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, presides, is the only true and rightful continuation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints organized in 1830. Affirmative, I. N. White, in behalf of Reorganized Church of J. C. of L. D. S. Negative, M. M. Stookey, in behalf of the Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S."

On January 7 I made it a point to call at St. Louis and at once sent Elder Stookey word to meet me on the 9th at nine o'clock at Bro. Hitchcock's. The hour came and Elders Stookey and Crawford met me and Elder J. D. White at place named. We remained in session till three p. m., trying to effect an agreement as to who should do the debating and how they should be indorsed, etc. It was apparent from the opening of this meeting that Mr. Stookey intended to dodge the whole issue by keeping the authorities of his church out of the fight, if at all possible. I was determined if he did, it would be after I had given him every opportunity to put himself upon record, in black and white, obligating themselves as a church to indorse their man to speak by "authority" in such a noted debate as this was liable to be; and that more especially since their First Presidency had issued a "Card to the Elders," published in the Deseret News for June 1, 1894, in which "card," they forbade their elders debating with ours upon the very issue now before us; which issue we had both, as individuals, obligated our respective churches to furnish a man to debate.

At last the following agreement was agreed upon, being the nearest thing bordering upon a business way of entering into such a debate that I could secure: "St. Louis, Missouri, January 9, 1899. To all whom it may concern:—This is to certify that the following stipulations and agreements have this day been entered into by and between Elder I. N. White representing 'The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' and Elder M. M. Stookey representing 'The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints' for a public debate involving their respective churches upon the two propositions attached. Said debate to be held sometime in the month of February next, (the exact date to be mutually agreed upon later,) in the city of St. Louis, Missouri, provided the necessary arrangements can be made and the necessary indorsements obtained. The length of the debate upon each proposition is not to exceed five days or less than three days. Sessions shall be two hours each. It is further agreed that the representative furnished by the said Elder I. N. White shall be officially indorsed by the First Presidency or some member of the Quorum of Twelve of said Reorganized Church, unless such representative shall be a member of one of those two quorums, then his official standing in the church shall be a sufficient indorsement for the occasion. Also it is further agreed that the representative furnished by the said Elder M. M. Stookey shall be officially indorsed by the First Presidency or some member of the Quorum of Twelve of said church which said Elder M. M. Stookey represents, unless such representative shall be a member of one of these two quorums, or the President of the Northern States mission, or B. H. Roberts, then his official standing in his church shall be a sufficient indorsement for the occasion.

"[Signed]

"I. N. WHITE.

"M. M. STOOKEY."

The propositions before written, were here attached. It was then personally agreed that each party set to at once and secure his man and have him properly indorsed in harmony with the written agreement for the debate. I wrote at once to Apostle Heman C. Smith, and secured his services for the Reorganized Church in the coming debate. I withheld his name from the other party till I could hear from them. Presently I received a letter from Elder Stookey, dated January 14, saying:—

"Elder I. N. White; Dear Sir:—I have just received answer from President Kelsch with respect to your question—official indorsement. His position may be seen from the following quotation from his letter: 'Now all this red tape business is nonsense in the extreme. If they desire to debate with the elders of St. Louis there are enough there to defend every truth of the gospel and your position as elder should be sufficient indorsement without bothering First Presidency, Twelve Apostles, or B. H. Roberts; and if they are not willing to accept you as an officially indorsed representative of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, they can go without, for the above-named parties have not the time to bother with matters of that kind, having many other matters more important to occupy their time.'

Being on the move it was some days before this letter fell into my hands. I wrote him on January 30, as follows: "Elder M. M. Stookey; Dear Sir:—Yours of 14th inst. before me. Replying say: I cannot accept anything short of a compliance with the written agreement you entered into with me on the 9th inst. I am not dealing with Elder Kelsch; therefore his objections raised against 'bothering the First Presidency,' etc., cut no figure with me. I am dealing with a 'written document' signed by yourself, obligating your church to furnish a man for this debate fully indorsed for the occasion by the First Presidency or Twelve, etc. No amount of pettifogging indulged in by Elder Kelsch or yourself about 'red tape,' 'bothering First Presidency,' etc., can move me from the written agreement signed by yourself to have your man officially indorsed for the occasion, since the heads of your church have put themselves on record forbidding your elders to engage in debate with the elders of the Reorganization. I hope there will be no further attempt on the part of your church to dodge the issue by a repeated refusal to have your man properly indorsed in strict compliance with the official document you have entered into with me. Standing in defense of the truth, I am,

"Respectfully,

"I. N. WHITE."

To this letter I received no reply; and on March 2, I sent the following note on a postal card: "Elder M. M. Stookey; Dear Sir:—I call your attention to my letter to you, of January 30, as I have received no reply to date. Shall I consider your written agreement with me to have a man indorsed for the St. Louis debate by your First Presidency or Twelve of no vital force? What can I depend upon? Waiting an early reply, I am

Yours respectfully,

"I. N. WHITE."

To this I received a card dated March 4, saying: "Your card came to hand yesterday. As you well know our stipulations and agreements were conditional; i. e., provided that the necessary arrangements and indorsements can be effected. All the necessary arrangements and indorsements might have been effected the day I met you in St. Louis, in fact all necessary indorsements were then at hand, but you for some reason best known to yourself refused to debate, and insisted upon an unnecessary indorsement which as I told you then only surrounded the proposed debate with uncertainty which has resulted just as I feared it would. President Kelsch has stated plainly that the indorsements which you insisted upon as being necessary are entirely unnecessary and contrary to our rules and practice and therefore could not be obtained. You have refused to debate without them, thus making it impossible for the debate to take place just as I told you it might when you refused to debate with me.

"Yours respectfully,

"M. M. STOOKEY."

On March 8 I replied: "Dear Sir:—Your card of 4th inst. to hand and contents noted. Your statement is not true, that I refused to debate without your man being indorsed and thus made the debate impossible to take place. I refused to debate with you, and others of like note of your church unless they were properly indorsed by your First Presidency or the Twelve to speak officially for your church. The wisdom of such a refusal is now made apparent, since your official standing seems not to be of sufficient weight with the heads of your church to induce them to honor your written agreement wherein you have obligated your church to an honorable debate with the Josephites. Further; our written agreement states emphatically, If your representative is a member of the First Presidency or the Twelve, or the President of the Northern States mission, or B. H. Roberts, his official standing in his church shall be a sufficient indorsement for the occasion. Thus, I have not only given you seven-teen chances to make the debate possible without a single indorsement, but as many chances for the leading men of your church to show to the public that they stand ready and willing—yes, anxious to attempt to prove in an official debate with the Reorganization, that the church which Brigham Young presided over is the only true and rightful continuation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints organized in 1830; and to attempt to defeat the claims of the Reorganization to that claim. Will they attempt it? Dare they attempt it? The Reorganization stands ready to comply with the written agreement, not only in furnishing a man to hold a debate in St. Louis, but to repeat it at Independence in the Stone Church, and then in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City. Can we rely upon you and your church to make good your agreement, and accept the extended challenge to repeat the debate at places named? Yours, not fearing the truth,

"I. N. WHITE."

I waited up to March 27 for a reply and received none and wrote Elder Stookey again as follows: "Dear sir: I wrote you on the 8th inst., asking you some important questions in regard to the proposed debate your written agreement with me calls for; but at this date have had no answer. My church stands ready to honor the agreement fully; not only ready to hold it at St. Louis, but to repeat it at Independence, and also in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City. Please send me an immediate reply—one I can rely upon —one indorsed by the heads of your church, as I understand you are now in Utah, having been called home for reasons better known to yourself. Hence you are now where you can press your official (?) claims to make your 'agreement' stick. Respectfully,

"I. N. WHITE."

This is now April 28, more than a month since my last to Elder Stookey, and no reply to it, nor the one before this. He must have received them readily, or they would have been returned to me in ten days. It has been reported that Elder Stookey left St. Louis very suddenly for Utah, presumably to take an additional "course" under the First Presidency, in order to carry out more successfully the advice given in that "card to the elders" where it says: "We take this public method of saying to all of our elders that we consider it entirely unnecessary for the vindication of the church, or to prove the authority of the priesthood and presiding authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, to resort to any such method [public debates with the Josephites] for their vindication."

Certainly, Elders Pickup, Ballard, and Stookey understood all of this before their pretended bravery was manifested of "wanting," (?) "preferring" (?) "a public discussion, as we are to do it for the purpose mentioned" — "of bringing to light the truths of this unsolved problem"—the succession. Their intentions, no doubt, from the very beginning, were to hide and skulk away behind the advice given in this "card to the elders," should they get crowded into a debate. This very thing they have done. Elder Stookey now while in his last ditch admits that to be indorsed to debate with the Josephites is, "contrary to our rules and practice, and therefore could not be obtained." Why all of this? Because that "card" says: "It is our counsel, therefore, that any elder who may have received and accepted such a challenge [to debate, "Was Brigham Young the lawful and legitimate successor of Joseph Smith, the Seer, to the prophetic office and presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?"] take no steps whatever towards meeting his challengers, but that he leave them severely alone."

This is the very thing that these Utah elders are attempting to do in regard to this debate. Their pretensions of wanting a debate to settle "this unsolved problem," was fraudulent from the beginning. They want nothing of the kind; but desire to be "let severely alone." The First Presidency of the Utah Church in their "card to the elders" say: "Such responsibilities [of the debates the elders have gotten into with the Josephites] we freely assume." This is the very thing that Elder Stookey, their missionary to St. Louis, whom President Kelsch says is "an officially indorsed representative of the church" from Utah, has obligated the First Presidency of his church to do. "Responsibility," Webster says, is, "The state of being accountable or answerable." "Assume," is, "In law, to take upon one's self an obligation." Will this First Presidency now step to the front and "assume" and take upon themselves the "responsibility" that Elder Stookey, their "official representative," has "obligated" them to do? That is the very thing the "written agreement" entered into by Elder Stookey, their representative, contemplates, when interpreted in the light of that "card to the elders."

I have now in this controversy, given the Utah Church every honorable opportunity known to the law of jurisprudence to enter into official debate in order to prove to the public, that the church over which Brigham Young presided, is the only true and rightful continuation of the church organized in 1830; or to disprove the claims of the Reorganization. Will they accept this golden opportunity? Now, inasmuch as the First Presidency of the Utah Church, has agreed to "assume" the "obligations" made and entered into by their elders with the Josephite elders in regard to debates upon the question of "succession," I now, as one of the representatives of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, invite them to "assume" the "responsibility" that Elder Stookey took upon himself in obligating his church to furnish—indorse a man for this debate. Will they do it?

Respectfully,

I. N. WHITE.

SPRINGERTON, Ill., April 29.

Editors Herald.—Bro. J. F. Henson and I are holding meetings here. One gave her name for baptism last evening. The people are busy; the crowds are not large. I have seen better interest manifested here than now.

Bro. Slover passed through town yesterday on his way to Tunnel Hill. The missionaries in this district are busy, despite the busy time of year; lots to do and so few to do it.

In hope, in the Spirit, I feel well in the work,

J. D. STEAD.

TEMPLE, Ohio, April 28.

Editors Herald.—I have just returned from New York State, where I spent four weeks preaching in the Christian church. I had large crowds the most of the time, and quite a good many interested. The preacher, who is quite jealous, was jealous of me; so he said quite a good many bad things in public that were reflective upon me and the ones who went the second time to hear me preach. So on account of these things the tide is rather going against him and in our favor, so much so that one man said he would open the Methodist church at Rexville for me.

I suppose Bro. I. M. Smith will be pleased to learn I baptized two very fine sisters, Mrs. Merrill Stephens and Mrs. Burton. They have been believing the gospel for some time, and were very anxious to obey. All of those sick had recovered when I left, except Sr. Cora Osmin; she had not fully recovered, but we have hopes of her full restoration to health.

I had a good time while there among saints and outsiders, and they seemed to want me to stay longer; but I wanted to put in some garden this spring, so I thought best to come home for a short time, and return some time again. Wife seems anxious to have the heater turned out and some other work done, so when we get the garden done and the house straight, I am ready to start for the field again; and I think it will be about the 1st of May.

I saw two Brighamite elders while at Greenwood; did not get a chance to speak to them. They tried to get a place at Rexville to preach, and were utterly refused; while I have the promise of the church there, and by a man of influence. Surely we are gaining "favor in the eyes of the people." Firm in the faith, I am,

Yours in bonds,

F. C. SMITH.

GREENLEAFTON, Minn., April 16.

Editors Herald.—About the middle of January Elder Eli Hayer began to hold meetings here, preaching three times in Prairie Queen schoolhouse and four times in Bristol Grove schoolhouse, which was the first we had heard since 1893, when Elder J. Arthur Davis was with us. Bro. Hayer then went to Illinois to attend the funeral of his uncle.

He came again about the middle of March, having created quite a stir the first time among the Brethren or Dunkards, so they thought best not to let us have the use of Prairie Queen schoolhouse. However, seven more meetings were held in the other schoolhouse with fair crowds and good attention. The absence of the Brethren this time was noticeable. "What shall the harvest be," we do not know. One of the opposition said it would make people read the Bible more. We hope so.

On March 22 the writer took Bro. Hayer over roads hitherto unknown to us toward Chatfield, Minnesota, landing about noon at the home of Sr. Butts, where we fed the team and had a good dinner. Sr. Butts, though one of the isolated, has had the Herald and other papers for many years, and evidently the Comforter leading to a goodly understanding of the truth. Mr. Butts, aged and somewhat feeble, enjoyed talking about the gospel. I soon had to bid good bye to the preacher and the other good people and home to chores. With a desire for more such associations we close this our first letter to the Herald hoping for the success and final triumph of the work, and thankful for the privilege of reading the many able contributions of others to our church literature.

In gospel bonds,

THOMAS MORRIS.

KIT, Dallas Co., Texas, May 2.

Editors Herald.—Please announce in the Herald that my mission address is Beaver, Wichita County, Texas, and that I would be pleased to correspond and keep in touch with all the missionary force in the State.

For the last six weeks I have been laboring in the northwest part of the State, part of the time in company with Bro. A. J. Moore, separating at Fort Worth; he going to San Antonio and I to Dallas.

I find a noble little band of saints at this place (Kit), and am being blessed in presenting the gospel every night to good congregations of attentive hearers. There is no branch of the church at this place as yet, but splendid prospects for one in the near future, providing the saints who are here become permanently located.

One hardship we meet in this part of the mission is that too many of the saints are not permanently located, and are inclined to drift. The question of the gathering, as has been agitated by some of the writers in Herald and Ensign has caused some to possess a restlessness of mind that I believe will work harm to all who take extreme views in regard to the subject. My advice to all in this mission is, if you are in a locality where you can make a living for your families and keep out of debt, be content and do so. You can do much good to the work of truth in your homes and communities by living the gospel, talking the gospel, and causing doors to be opened for the preaching of the gospel to your neighbors, hence be instrumental in the hands of God in spreading and advancing the work of truth in the land. God is just as able to protect you and bless you in Texas as he is in the far distant isles of the sea. Let us live so as to be entitled to a home in Zion, and our inheritances will be reserved for us, and will not be occupied by others.

May God bless us with wisdom that we may not take extreme views on anything, but lead a meek and quiet life, leaving all things in the hands of him who is able to direct his own work.

Yours for truth and development in the gospel,
T. J. SHEPPARD.

SHALL WE ANOINT?

As the church established by Joseph Smith has been foremost in its advocacy of the gospel formula for treating disease, it serves our purpose to secure and compile any information that tends to confirm or strengthen this position. James says:—

Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.—James 5: 13.

Here we discover that the anointing of oil was a necessary adjunct in the eradication of disease and the securing of health. The Lord never instituted the anointing of oil merely as a matter of form; for in all his provisions each was for a practical and useful end. In Mark 6: 13 we read that they anointed with oil many that were sick and healed them. We need offer no proof from Scripture as to the character of the oil used, for it is a universally known fact that Palestine was the home of the olive, and olive oil was a household commodity in common use by many of them. While I have, with regret, noticed a general tendency in the church among many to urge the use of different methods in the treatment of disease, I am more and more convinced that the Lord knows best and that the plan devised by him is the most specific and trustworthy. In reading the comments of some of our brethren in laudation of earthly innovations, claiming that they are specific for cholera, consumption, and a host of other ailments, I have arrived at the following conclusion: If the prophetic character of Joseph Smith remains unquestioned, then cholera is a scourge which was to follow from time to time so long as men would reject the gospel. If A. Wilford Hall or any other man has found an antidote for every ill, and especially for cholera, then we have very little use for the provisions of the gospel for the eradication of and exemption from disease; for assuredly the gospel is not a cure-all but only promises relief when we comply with its specifications, and when it is compatible with the will of God. But according to the theory of the water curists they have a panacea that will go farther than that. I do not believe it, and the experience of many who have trusted in this to the exclusion of the gospel plan confirms me in it. I wish to state, however, that I do not repudiate the claims made by water curists in behalf of cold or warm water applied either externally or internally, but it does not possess that intrinsic power that we can safely and at all times rely upon it. All things being favorable, it undoubtedly can augment a cure, but living in a day, as we believe and teach, when scourges and pestilences are upon the increase, and are to fall heavily upon the heads of the wicked, it shows conclusively that we must have a more effectual weapon to combat disease than merely a human one.

In the Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord says:—

And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me. . . . And again, it shall come to pass, that he that hath faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed.—D. C. 42: 12, 13.

Here the Lord specifically places the ordinance of the gospel first, and all earthly agencies second. In case one has not the requisite faith to secure the blessing, provision is made that they shall be nourished, and the manner of their nourishment is specifically stated. Now, what policy should God's people pursue? If the water treatment as portrayed by A. Wilford Hall and some others is a reliable specific and cure-all, then we do not have to trust in God or his plans at all for health. If it is not, and facts so warrant, it becomes of secondary consideration and only a makeshift, when that which is better cannot be secured. I think some of our brethren make a grave mistake (not intentionally however) when they urge saints to adopt certain kinds of treatment and plans of cure. The saints of to-day have not any too much faith as it is, and it becomes us as ministers to increase that faith. This we cannot do if we are constantly urging upon them something else as an antidote to their ills other than the gospel plan. There is no warrant in the law for the ministry to teach or advise any other course of treatment than that specified in the law. "To the law and the testimony," is an infallible guide in this as in all other matters. I am also assured that the patent medicine advertisements sometimes appearing in the papers do not strengthen faith, not in God's plan at least.

A query is often made, "Why does the Lord require the sick to be anointed?" There may be several reasons adduced. One, at least, we will present; that is, it is efficacious. Among the Jews the practice of anointing the body was a time-honored custom, for they realized that the oil in itself possessed considerable healing properties. As to the quality and nature of the oil used, it passes without question that Christ and the apostles used olive oil. This was demanded under the Mosaic administration. The ointment which was used in the tabernacle for anointing its contents as well as for the priests contained olive oil. (See Exodus 27: 20; 30: 24-33; Leviticus 24: 2.)

A question which has been controverted locally, if not generally, is the part of the body to be anointed. Some invariably contend that the top of the head is the place to anoint, and adhere solely to this plan without regard to the location and nature of the disease. If I had a sore hand and would call the elders to administer to me I would prefer that they anoint the hand rather than the head. Cases are recorded in this church where no relief was found after repeated anointings upon the head, but when upon anointing the particular part affected immediate relief followed. If it is an internal pain or affection the oil should be given internally in connection with the external application. To prove my position I cite you to the case of the blind man where Christ took clay and anointed the eyes, not the head. I venture the opinion (for what it is worth) that the reason Christ used clay was because he did not have the oil. I do not, however, disparage the anointing of the head.

Olive oil has many remedial properties in itself and this should be much enhanced when the blessing of God is invoked upon it. Some Latter Day Saints pay no attention to the quality of the oil, just so it purports to be olive oil, and some try to get the cheapest in the market, and when one remonstrates with them about it they say, "O well, when it is consecrated it will be pure!" While I do not question God's power to cleanse anything, I do question the policy of knowingly taking an impure oil to the Lord and asking him to make it pure when we have it within our power to get the pure in the start.

If Latter Day Saints would use more olive oil, and herbs, and mild food, as nourishing elements, and not eat gross and unwholesome food and follow with a dose of gross rank weeds, or poisonous minerals, as an antidote to the gross feeding, it would be much better for them.

The medical fraternity are awakening to the medicinal virtues of olive oil. We append a few statements from leading writers. Senor Barzelotte says:—

Olive oil is used in Italy as follows:—

1. The anointing of babies' bodies in Italy with oil is a very extensive and common practice, as through it they get an impermeable condition which can fortify the epidermis and make it not too susceptible to the weather.

2. It is also prescribed to cure all burns, especially when caused by scalding water.

3. It is also adopted to cure wounds produced from some friction when the epidermis is not broken.

4. In all irritations of the skin when overheated, from the sun, fire, or blood, the prescription of pure olive oil is also common.

5. In cases of erythema, erysipelas, and other diseases of this kind, oil is used to soften the skin ache.

6. Considerable use is also made of oil with tumors and diseases of the glands of the throat.

7. For friction in rheumatic diseases.

8. Oil is also used for swelling about the ears.

He further says:—

Olive oil is considered the best medicament for colics of the stomach and intestines, and it acts as an operative and lenitive. Formerly castor oil was used for these diseases, but now the very pure olive oil is substituted entirely for these other oils. It is always prescribed for inflammation of the mucous membranes, and it softens these irritations better than any other.

D. E. Osborne, M. D. Ph. D., Superintendent of Home for Care and Training of Feeble-minded Children, Santa Clara, California, says:—

The use of the oil [olive] in medicine has scarcely yet become formulated. Notwithstanding that it has been known for years to possess nutrient, emollient, demulcent, and laxative properties . . . nature has long held out the olive branch, not alone as the symbol of peace, but significantly also as the symbol of healing. Nearly all our patients come to us sickly in body and impoverished in tissue as well as feeble in mind. To begin any treatment we must necessarily adopt the motto "Mens sana in corpore sana" (or a sound mind in a sound body), and direct our attention quite as much to the physical condition as to the mental. All sources of nervous irritation must be removed if possible to do so. Faulty digestion must be corrected; anæmic conditions overcome; defective circulation, especially of the cutaneous capillaries stimulated to healthier action, local congestions dispersed, errors of the emunctories righted, and the hungry tissues of body and brain steadily and rationally fed. With enriched pabulum we may look for awakening mentality, but not without. There is no other one article that will so well subserve all these conditions as pure olive oil. In the wide range of its application it might well be called a panacea. In its prompt and reliable upbuilding of tissue and the correction of some intestinal affections it approaches a specific. To the properties already ascribed to it by others I would add still another: that of being a reconstructive.

The following cases taken at random, will show our use of the oil in this institution. I assure you the results are not overdrawn. I could not afford to exaggerate them, even if I possessed the inclination to do so:—

No. 1. Two years ago measles swept through the institution. Over sixty patients were down at the same time. As a rule in this disease there is considerable nausea, and a sense of dryness and of pain until the eruption is fully "out." Then during the eruption, unless special measures be taken to prevent it, a draught may produce a chill, causing the eruption to "go in," and followed perhaps by congestion of the lungs, or of the kidneys, or of both. Most of the fatal cases terminate in this way. The thirst is always severe, and the danger to the eyesight and hearing following continued congestion very considerable and annoying. Lacking the proper hospital facilities, I recognized that my patients were most unfavorably situated, as we were obliged to treat them in their regular sleeping dormitories just as they happened to be taken. My invariable treatment was to take them as fast as they showed signs of the disease, give them a thorough hot water sponging from head to foot, followed immediately, and repeated at intervals of every few hours, with copious inunctions of warm olive oil, well rubbed in. Mucilaginous drinks and a generous diet completed the treatment. According to the amount of oil used there was absence of the persistent thirst, the eruption "came out" several hours earlier than is usual, afforded no particular sense of pain, and was attended with no undue congestion; all recovered nicely, notwithstanding the extreme delicate condition of many previously. The mainstay of the treatment was the oil (no drugs being used), and its application was repeated ad libitum day and night. Whenever the skin became dry and hot the oil relieved it, and brought to the patient a sense of relief, usually followed by sleep, from which they awoke refreshed. In scarlet fever the frequent inunctions of hot olive oil are peculiarly effective in sustaining the patient, and obviating many dangerous complications. From personal trials, details of which would be tedious here, I am convinced that of any single remedy in this disease olive oil is the most valuable and potent, which, I am aware, is saying a great deal, and more than I expect will be believed by anyone unfamiliar with its virtues.

No. 2. Case of an idio-imbecile boy, six years old; contracted pneumonia; both lungs involved, and disease stubborn from onset. Previous history bad, a strong syphilitic taint being well rooted in a serofulous constitution. Owing to individual idiosyncracies, diet previously had been limited to bread and milk and a little of well-cooked potato. Digestion always weak, and power of assimilation correspondingly poor. In addition to usual treatment gave olive oil internally (on bread and well salted), and externally to body and limbs by hand rubbing, afterwards followed by wrapping in oiled cloths. He recovered from the pneumonia, but soon broke down with consumption, which steadily progressed to a fatal termination. All other forms failing, he was sustained for over seven months on olive oil alone—excepting, if you please, a few tablespoonfuls now and then of milk and of broths. The last few months the oil alone kept him alive, and that was applied externally. Little or no nutrient matter could be retained in the stomach, but the application of the oil always revived, allayed the sense of hunger, and restored vitality to the tissues not already infested with tubercles. So marked were the features of this case, that those who were not aware of the destructive process his lungs were undergoing easily imagined he would recover. This case will be recalled by Mr. E. E. Goodrich, of the Quito olive farm, to whom I exhibited the boy, and reported the progress of the case. Other tests have demonstrated the superiority of olive over cod liver oil in consumption, which, again, I am aware, is saying a great deal with a few strokes of the pen. But cod liver oil must not be mistaken for a medicine. Whenever or wherever it is of value, it is so as a food—as a nutrient to wasted or wasting tissues. It disgusts the palate, cloyes the stomach, overtaxes the digestive juices to emulsify it, and lastly, is again an animal product, generally of filthy manufacture, and so adulterated with chemical "what nots," under various sophistries, that we say with a meaning: "God help the wretch who takes the ordinary article as it is found in the market."

No. 3. High grade imbecile youth of eighteen years of age. Has a malarious history, and for some years has shown signs of passive hyperæmia of the liver. Appetite very capricious, and diet correspondingly self-limited. Under no circumstances whatever can he be prevailed upon to take fruit in any form. Two months ago he began to walk stiffly; complexion rapidly assumed a dirty, coffee-ground color, particularly in patches. Complained of pain in the limbs, particularly the knee joints. On examination, hard, nodulous swellings were discovered on knees and on shin bones, afterward appearing erratically on back, arms, and ankles. In a short time almost any movement caused him distress, and I detected hallucinations of sight and hearing. Altogether, it made a remarkably interesting case, with recovery doubtful. Emaciation was rapid and pronounced. Medication with medicines proper was of little avail, so I fell back upon the use of olive oil, hoping that if only as a nutrient it would afford some relief—I did not expect a cure. I had the fellow oil-massaged from head to foot twice or more a day, and then rolled in blankets literally reeking in oil, and kept warm. Long and refreshing sleeps followed; then came increased movements of the limbs. All medicines were finally withheld, and the oil alone persevered in. The nodules slowly disappeared; the skin began to clear; in a week or so he could wriggle out of bed, became gradually more and more cheerful in mind, and at the expiration of a week he could stand on his feet sufficiently long for the attendant to rub him down; then his appetite improved, and considerable nourishment was taken with apparent relish. All pain left him; he began to take on flesh, steadily improved, and is now preparing to take a trip home to the southern part of the State. Although practically fully recovered, he has a slight oil massage every night on retiring. The most significant fact about the case is that the biliary secretions seemed to be immediately influenced by the oil, and that the urine, which in the beginning indicated kidney complication, cleared up at once.

No. 4. A poor, little, misshapen, and horribly neglected idio-imbecile boy of probably seven years of age, found existing (it could hardly be termed living) in the Mojave Desert, with a partially demented father alone. Charitable people took him, clothed him, and sent him up to the institution, and placed the father, an ex-soldier, in the Home at Santa Monica, where he recently died of brain trouble. The boy, in the two years that he has been with us, has progressed remarkably well, but is very delicate. His is a failure to assimilate the imperfectly digested food, and to make good, rich, red blood corpuscles.

Like so many of our patients he, too, possesses a capricious appetite; only a certain few articles of light diet can be retained, and lately these have failed to give him strength or check the progress of the general atrophy that threatens him. A short time ago he began to sink rapidly, and recourse was had as a last resort to olive oil. It was supplied and continued much as in the preceding case. The results have been most favorable, so that now I confidently expect him to again get about, at least for awhile. I do not look for a permanent cure, as the nature of his affliction precludes the possibility of that. I wish that I could portray to you the absolute relief and comfort that the oil has given by absorption to this poor little sufferer.

Leaving out of consideration its emollient, demulcent, and laxative properties as before enumerated, our experience warrants us in giving it precedence as a reconstructive and to assume the following conclusions:—

First. It stands unrivaled as an element of natural food.

Second. It is unsurpassed as a remedy in most, and probably in all wasting diseases, where it relieves the stomach, rests overtaxed digestive organs, lubricates inflamed, alimentary tracts and arrests their further congestion, satisfies most all demands of the system for a concentrated heat-producing food, and restores to a worn out or broken-down tissue just such elements of repair as its reconstruction demands.

Third. It possesses a direct alterative effect in constitutional diseases.

Fourth. It exerts a distinctive influence upon the liver, and apparently, also, upon the kidneys. The benefits to be derived from olive oil in liver derangements are not at all chimerical.

Fifth. Its reconstructive properties follow its external application quite as readily as when given internally, and in some cases the former seems to be preferred.

P. C. Remondino, M. D., of San Diego, says:—

There is no doubt but that that disease known as American nervousness, so graphically described by Beard, as well as the great prevalence of what might also be termed our American consumption, and the still wider spread condition known as American dyspepsia, would all be greatly lessened by a proper use of olive oil and a proper appreciation of the facts set out by Brakenridge. The writer has no doubt that had the old round-headed, broad-brimmed-hatted, long-visaged, and blunder-buss-carrying Puritans used more olive oil and less unwholesome slaps and apple dumplings, America would to-day be less affected with that leaven of pessimism which is such a prolific source of ill health, moral and mental, as well as physical.

Olive oil inunctions will relieve an infant of its exasperating peevishness and liken him to one of Raphael's Holy Family in countenance or disposition. Olive oil has the same effects upon adults.

Children are often affected by a persistent, harassing, debilitating diarrhoea, due to the agglutination of some shred of tomato, grape, or other fruit skin to the mucus lining of the intestines. The cause is here a simple mechanical irritation alone, to be removed by the judicious but persistent use of olive oil.

AS A VERMIFUGE.

Olive oil is one of our safest vermifuges in the cases of children. It should be given in ounce doses, and frequently repeated. It is harmless, as it does not provoke active purging, and if the child's stomach does not reject it, it will often do its work without any additional drug. In cases of tapeworm, it has often carried away the head, tail, and body, simply by its weight and volume.

IN BLADDER AND KIDNEY AFFECTIONS.

In case of severe pains located in the region of the kidneys, olive oil taken internally, in medium doses, has often proved beneficial in granting prompt relief. It has also been used with success in cases of painful urination, strangury, and in cases of what is popularly termed gravelly urine.

IN INTESTINAL AFFECTIONS.

Simple diarrhoea, dysentery, colicky pains, flatulence, or constipation, have all been relieved by the prompt and generous use of olive oil. These diseases in children are peculiarly manageable with olive oil. There is nothing that will act more energetically in a case of imprisoned intestinal gases, accumulation of fæces or in some cases of hernia or rupture, than a large dose of olive oil mixed with a small portion of glycerine and a few drops of turpentine; if the latter are not obtainable, then the oil should be given singly.

IN GENERAL DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Teething children should always be oiled, the oil being applied at least twice daily. Nervous, fretful, peevish children obtain great relief by a warm water sponging and an oiling. Rickety children, suffering from poor assimilation, will improve wonderfully on sweet oil inunction. Children suffering with fever and a high degree of temperature can be relieved by a tepid sponge bath and an oiling. Cases of scarlet fever I always oil, and keep on oiling from first to last; especially during convalescence is this oiling a great safeguard. Olive oil, taken both internally and by inunction, has often given great results in cases of dropsy, either abdominal or general. In Europe it has been used with signal benefit in epidemics of yellow fever, and in Asia and Africa it has been used with equal benefit in the plague. In cases of neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, chronic skin diseases, in fact with diseases in general which are liable to result or originate in malassimilation, malnutrition, or imperfect blood depuration, olive oil has often afforded signal relief. In the fevers of adults it is equally of great value, being useful in reducing the temperature and nervous excitement.

LOCAL USES.

Olive oil, in connection with an equal part of lime water, makes an excellent application to burned surfaces; it relieves pain and promotes repair. I have used it so mixed in burns, scalds, powder wounds, and in skin abrasions. In powder accidents involving the eyes, this makes a soothing and protective application. I have used the same mixture repeatedly in cases of smallpox, both in America and in France. In the epidemic that swept over the north of France during the Franco-Prussian war, I used it with great benefit, both in army and in civil practice. In conjunction with turpentine, it is an unequalled application to the tense and tender abdomen that at times accompanies typhoid fever.

AS AN ANTIDOTE TO POISON.

Olive oil has been given with success in cases of mushroom poisoning, being liberally mixed with powdered charcoal. In general, it may be said that olive oil is a safe and efficacious antidote in most cases of poisoning, with the exception of phosphorus, where it should not be used.

Dr. Osburn further says:—

In malarial fever a vegetable diet in which the oil can be freely used . . . and the inunctions of the oil are followed in due time by relief because of the relief that this treatment brings to the jaded liver. In typhoid fever thorough rubbing in of as much oil as the skin will take at periods properly preceding the diurnal rises of temperature, will do more good, is more grateful, less troublesome to apply, and rationally more scientific than the treatment by cold water packs or the immersion of the whole body in a bath tub filled with water.

We might continue to adduce proof of the virtues of olive oil, but let the foregoing suffice. It is passing strange that the world who do not believe Christ and his word are seeking and finding out the efficacy of one of the means in his plan for securing health, and that many saints do not appreciate, but are seeking for some other method. I believe in the anointing of the sick and the laying on of hands for the securement of health, and feel that the time is not far distant when none will be safe who do not rely thereon.

Yours for truth,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, January 3, 1894.

EVERY SUPERNATURAL MANIFESTATION NOT OF GOD.

Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.—1 John 4:1.

The above instruction was given nearly two thousand years ago, and is confirmatory of the teachings of Jesus previously given, as found in Matthew 7:15, also in Matthew 24; and the experience of the people of God, in all ages, has proven the wisdom and divinity of the warning. There is such an aptitude among men to accept everything that seems to be of a supernatural order as divine, except that which is truly divine, and this in spite of the fact that the world professes to believe that whatever may have been in ages past, the miraculous and supernatural is forever done away.

The spirit of deception commenced its work in the morning of time, and our first parents fell victims to its cunning, and it has got in its work in every age. I propose to notice a few instances of the workings of these false spirits, as given in the records of truth. They obtained a powerful sway in the antediluvian age; the terrible consequences were seen in the flood. Moses had them to contend with in Egypt, and afterward among the chosen people of God, in the wilderness; and in the thirteenth and eighteenth chapters of Deuteronomy he warns Israel that if a "prophet, or a dreamer of dreams," shall work a "sign or a wonder" to lead them from the true God; or if a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, "if the thing follow not, nor come to pass," they were not to follow nor be afraid of such prophets. In the first book of Kings, thirteenth chapter, we read of a prophet who was commanded of God to do a certain thing, and to avoid a certain other thing, the first part of the command he obeyed; but another professed prophet claimed to have authority from God to take him home with him and feed him. The prophet of God was deceived by the lying prophet, and it cost him his life, because he went contrary to the word of God. Here we may learn the necessity of strictly adhering to the word of the Lord. Again, in 1 Kings 22, we read that because of the wickedness of a king of Israel, God permitted lying spirits to deceive him, and lead him on to destruction; thus emphasizing the truth as told in Ezekiel 14, when certain of the elders of Israel sat before that prophet, to inquire the word of the Lord, while at the same time they had set up their "idols" in their hearts, and put the "stumblingblock" of their "iniquity" before their face; "I the Lord will answer him that cometh, according to the multitude of his idols."

This teaches us that when we come before the Lord our motives must be pure, and our hearts and minds must be submissive to his will in all things, otherwise God may "send strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness" (2 Thess. 2). As evidence that every supernatural manifestation is not of God, please read Matthew 7:15; Matthew 24:4, 11, 24; 2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 13; Rev. 16:13, 14; Rev. 19:20.

It has always been the plan of the Evil One to imitate as closely as he can the work of God, in order to draw mankind into his net. The writer does not presume that he is able to point out a rule by which every false manifestation may be detected, but he is desirous of urging upon all saints to study diligently the word of God, both the spirit and the letter of the same, and know assuredly that the operations of the Spirit of God will always be in harmony with the word; hence, if we see a manifestation that is not in harmony with that word, we may know it is not of God. God has revealed to his church the order by which it must be governed, and it is our duty to learn that order. The knowledge of this is our safeguard, and should be sought for by officers and members. In the Doctrine and Covenants we read:—

Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called: behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, and have all things right before me.—41: 1.

In order that we may be lawabiding citizens it is essential that we as members should understand that law so that by an intelligent comprehension of our duties we may faithfully observe it, and thus aid those whom God has called to direct.

That there were false spirits manifest in the days of the apostles is evident from the warning quoted at the head of this article. Also, in 2 Corinthians we read:—

be transformed as the ministers of righteousness.—2 Cor. 11: 13-15.

The same evil power has manifested itself in these last days.

Here it may be remarked that manifestations of power may accompany the deceptive revelation, as well as the divine revelation, as in the case of the Egyptian magicians in opposition to the power of God through Moses, hence it does not follow that because a person may be operated upon in a powerful and supernatural manner that it is necessarily a divine power that actuates him; nor does it follow that because there is some truth uttered that it comes from God. The father of lies can tell truth when that is the only method by which his deception can be imposed upon those whom he seeks to destroy. He understands too well the human nature and the safeguards God has placed around his children to make the mistake that naked falsehood will be accepted as a bait. He will disguise that falsehood with some truth, and here lies the danger, and here comes the necessity of a thorough acquaintance with God's word and order, and the further necessity of bringing everything "to the law and to the testimony," for "if they speak not according to this word, it is because they have no light in them."

In the early day of the church, one Hyrum Page was made a victim of Satan's cunning. It would appear that he had presumed to give commandments to the church, when he had not been appointed to that work. God had his own chosen mouthpiece, and no other could stand in his place while he lived.

Behold, verily, verily I say unto thee, No one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jr. . . . Thou shalt not command him who is at thy head. . . . Neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants.—D. C. 27: 2, 4.

This being the rule that God has established, it extends to every department of the church; hence, whomsoever God has appointed to the charge of any department of the work, he is amenable only to the power above him, and no subordinate has any authority to command or to give instructions for the guidance of the one in charge. In Doctrine and Covenants the Lord says:—

Again I say, hearken ye elders of my church whom I have appointed: ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my Spirit; and ye are to be taught from on high.—D. C. 43: 4.

From this we learn that if any spirit leads anyone, not set apart to the duty of directing the elders in their duties, to command those servants whom God has appointed to do any work, such spirit is not of God.

There is a wide difference between foretelling future blessings and duties, which God has in store for an individual, and the calling of such individual to the occupation thereof. No man will be called of God contrary to the order he has given in his word.

Paragraph 12, of section 17, says:—

Every elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him.—D. C. 17: 12.

Does not this language indicate that God has set apart certain officials, upon whom the responsibility of calling and ordaining of the several officers in the church shall rest? Does it not also make it obligatory upon them to consider the natural gifts and callings; or in other words, talents and adaptability for the work to be performed by those to be ordained? Thus it becomes absolutely necessary that these officials shall so live that they may receive the guidance of the Holy Spirit to enable them to select such to the several offices whom God shall approve. There are different offices in the church, because of different duties to be performed, and the peculiar fitness of men for these several duties must be duly considered. All are not qualified for the apostleship, neither are all qualified to be elders. There is also a peculiar adaptedness for the work of a priest that every one does not possess; also for the teacher and deacon. And while these offices may seem to men of ambitious aspirations to be small and insignificant, they are among the most important offices in the church, and require the direction of the Holy Spirit to enable their occupants to fill them acceptably before God. Those who occupy them should be men of sterling integrity and genuine piety,—teaching the saints their duty in all things, and living up to that which they teach. They must be humble men, who in patience possess their souls,—merciful men, who can bear long with the weakness of the flock to whom they feed the bread of life; and yet not swerve from the proper execution of God's law.

Whenever a spirit is manifest that causes any officer to be discontented with his office and calling, because it does not satisfy his ambitious desires, that spirit is not of God. God will never call a man to a higher office or to a greater responsibility, who has not and does not properly honor the one to which he has already been called; and if any spirit tells him he is called to the higher office, that spirit is not of God. It is the humble soul that God delights to bless. Some men claim they are called to do "a great work"—the humble office of a priest, teacher, or deacon is not sufficient for their ambitious desires; such are led by a false spirit, and unless they cease to follow its lead it will cause their destruction. When a spirit teaches us that everybody is in error but ourselves, that spirit is sent by him who is the accuser of the brethren, and who accused the Lord of life and glory, and our piety (?) partakes of the nature of that of the Pharisees and scribes, and Christ has told us to "beware of the leaven of the Pharisees." The lay member of the church may do "a great work" if he keeps the covenant he has made with God. "A great work" is not confined to the officials of the church; but if we occupy the talents God has given us, by using every opportunity given to us in the station we are placed in, whether officer or member, we shall have done a great work indeed, and our reward will be great.

Ordination to office does not make us better men, it adds to our responsibility; but there will come as great salvation to the lay member who does his duty in all things as to the official, and far more than to that officer who does not honor the calling to which he is ordained, but aspires to that which God has not called him.

In spite of the warnings found in the three records respecting the use of the gifts of the Spirit, and the advice to "covet earnestly the best gifts," there are many among us who seem to neglect this advice; and because some gifts are conspicuous,—or open in their manifestations, and have a tendency to make their possessors conspicuous,—there seems to be a great craving after them, while those gifts which do not expose themselves to the public gaze are neglected and not sought for so earnestly as they should be; at least such condition appears to the mind of the writer, and it is believed that such condition existed in the days of the apostles, which called forth the injunction, "covet earnestly the best gifts."

Our beloved president has frequently reminded us that out of the nine spiritual gifts four, at least, are not seen by the natural eye,—such as wisdom, knowledge (of things divine), faith, and spiritual discernment, and these are among "the best gifts," for without the possession of these, the others would likely be used to our disadvantage, and to the dishonor of the great Giver. But with the possession of "these best gifts,"—the gifts of miracles, prophecy, tongues, and interpretation will be of incalculable benefit to the individual and the church. Every member of the body militant, from the head to the feet, needs wisdom from on high, knowledge of the things of God, faith by which we may approach the divine presence, and stand unshaken amid all the trials and temptations that may await us, and the power to discern between the evil and the good, between the true and the false; then we shall be prepared to use the rest of the gifts which God has promised, in their proper time and place. It may not be necessary for us to be always speaking in tongues, or prophesying, or working miracles; but wisdom, knowledge, faith, and discernment are always necessary, lest we be imposed upon by the enemy.

I close with the divine injunctions, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God." "Covet earnestly the best gifts." "Get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding." May God supply our every lack, and help us to use his precious gifts to his glory, is the earnest prayer of

CHARLES DERRY.

LAYING ON OF HANDS.

But for the light radiating from modern revelations I would have known nothing of the laying on of hands; but as it is, I think it too sacred to trifle with. In commissioning his disciples Christ declared, "And these signs shall follow them that believe" (Mark 16). And if this contained the sum total of Christ's teaching, relative to spiritual gifts, the inference that any and all members might have laid on hands, might have been permissible. But the axiom I believe is good, that the right and immunity established by one law would be subverted by subsequent and contrary law. Therefore, forasmuch as Christ appointed apostles and seventies (Matt. 10; Luke 10), to whom he gave power to heal the sick, cast out devils, etc, the laity was thereby prevented from acting in that sacred work. Therefore, to insist that any and all members might lay on hands would be subversive of the law Christ established, in limiting the right to lay on hands to seventies and apostles.

And they (the apostles) went out and preached that all men should repent. And they (the apostles) cast out devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them (Mark 6). Thus is the fact established that Christ at the inception of his ministerial work authorized the above officials with the right and power to minister to the sick. Moreover James, after Christ's departure, taught the saints when sick to call for the elders of the church (James 5: 14, 15).

In legal cases decisions are reached in the light of the preponderance of evidence. So are scriptural questions. So in harmony with James, latter-day revelations teach:—

And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them.—D. C. 42: 12.

Thus we have a twofold testimony to establish the fact of the authorization of the elders to lay on hands, while in the three books a deathlike silence exists as to the fact of the laity being authorized to lay on hands. Still further:—

And this according to the commandment which he has given, that by keeping the commandments they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power.—D. C. 76: 5.

Thus the fact is conspicuous that the power to lay on hands for the healing of the sick, confirming, etc., is given to those of the Melchisedec priesthood. And nothing is to "be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants" and articles. (D. C., pages 114, 123, 142, 145, 165, 360.)

King Saul being very solicitous for the wellbeing of the people so forced himself and offered a burnt offering, but a Samuel was about his Master's business, and charged the zealous saint with having done foolishly. (Sam. 12: 13). Ah, yes! Saul thought it terrible to see the people scattered, but his zeal, not according to knowledge, led him into difficulty. Another evidence of human folly or assumption is narrated for our benefit. (See Acts 19: 13-16.) Let us study and be wise, especially should Latter Day Saints study to acquire a proficiency to discriminate between natural impulses, undue sensationalism, and spirit impression; for Joseph Smith was more explicit in his revelation as to the probability of the intrusion of false spirits and the manner of their detection than some of his predecessors in the prophetic office, which fact we ought not to overlook. For extremes are only avoided by finding out the golden mean, which is only apparent to those who want to avoid extremes, and keep a God-imposed gospel equilibrium in view, with constant effort to aspire to and practically observe it, lest we find ourselves inveigled in confusion worse than that of modern Babylon attributable to a universal apostasy. But such advice to those allowing themselves to be carried away with the idea that spirit manifestations are the one proof needful, may construe this advice to mean a denial of spirit manifestation. And such overzealousness, or a zeal not according to knowledge, may be fostered, while he who dares advocate and enforce given and accepted law, fearing God rather than man, may become a prey.

So far as I understand I am not aware that Joseph Smith, from the inception to the termination of his ministerial work, by precept or example, encouraged the practice of the laity laying on of hands. If the church has made no provision for its practice but rather ruled against it, and in no way sanctioned it, under what pretext, or by what precedent, rule of logic, or line of argument then is any one member justified in promulgating and enforcing the practice, berating and stigmatizing those who oppose it? If so, what purpose does God's revealed method of adjudication serve—who will tell? Has the time come for those who wish may kiss the hand of the enemy? And those working to the best of their ability to foster the fair fame of the church to be spurned? If so, ought not the church to be apprised of this? Heaven forbid that I should sit in judgment on men's motives. But do not my acts bespeak the motive prompting the act? If not, will God judge me for deeds done without motive or design? If not, then why should I attribute good to man when by his deeds he violates given and accepted law? If there is no difference between loyalty and disloyalty, how shall the former be known and some one be justified thereby?

If our gospel be good, its precepts therefore are good; their practice yielding the peaceful fruits of righteousness. How can one be doing good who violates its precepts? If those recognized as church representatives close their eyes to acts bringing division in the church, what significance has the injunction: "The elders shall see that my [Christ's] law is kept."

I accepted the gospel as a verity. When I think otherwise, I hope at least to be consistent in myself.

I don't believe that any member, from president down, is justified in teaching in public or private, contrary to the accepted doctrines or ruling of the church. But I would censure none for making misgivings known at a proper time and place if they have any; but for one to profess to represent the church, and yet scheming to bring confusion and contention in the body, by using every opportunity available to inculcate something which collides with church rule and order,—with corresponding efforts to establish his own righteousness and correspondingly strive to prove others base and wicked,—comes nearer savoring of Satanic influence than any other trickery I now think of. And if dignity, manliness, or godliness, consists in covering over such diabolical deeds, I confess I am, and expect to remain, godless. And if I unite or cooperate with others to foster the fair fame of the church, and meet with disfavor, I shall act the best I know how.

This seeming loss is accounted for by:—

1. Depreciation in machinery.
2. Transfer of editorial library to general church library.
3. Reduction in value of "Harmony" stereotype plates from $1,550, estimated in 1897, to $50, this being the actual value of metal in them.
4. By reducing estimate of real estate $431.91.

By an examination of the mailing lists of the Herald, Hope, and Autumn Leaves, we find the present subscriptions not in as satisfactory shape as they ought to be, and on the delinquent lists running back over twenty years we find in round numbers an indebtedness of $24,000. From time to time the subscribers, who are delinquent, are sending in remittances to balance their old indebtedness, although the aggregate indebtedness is increasing by reason of new delinquencies.

NOTICE OF SILENCE.

To Whom it May Concern:—This is to certify that on the evening of the 28th of March, 1899, in a branch meeting of the Shelton branch, Nebraska, I announced that on and after said date, Joseph S. Lee would be silenced as an elder of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This decision was made subsequent to his being advised to desist from preaching adversely to the ruling and teachings of the church, and railing against the authorities, until the conference of 1900, when he might lay the matter before the body, and be heard. This he peremptorily refused to do, unless every other elder was also stopped; declaring that he would walk out of the church, or Reorganization.

The said Elder Joseph S. Lee is a member of no district, nor to my knowledge is he enrolled in any quorum. I, therefore, as missionary in charge, hereby inform the church of this act, which is subject to proper inquiry and investigation.

JAMES CAFFALL,
Missionary in Charge.

Done at Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 1, 1899.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

DR. BRIGGS AND THE BIBLE.

The New York Sun has taken the pains to analyze the latest volume of Dr. Charles A. Briggs, "The Study of Holy Scripture," and catalogue the myths, legends, fictions, and narratives of imagination which the professor has discovered in its pages. Generally speaking, Dr. Briggs finds that many of the books of the Bible are anonymous, others are pseudonymous, while still others, like the Pentateuch, are but compilations of historical and traditional legends.

Coming to particulars, Dr. Briggs declares that the intermarriage of the daughters of men with the angels, and the adventures of Samson are pure myths. The stories of Ruth, Jonah, Esther, and Daniel are works of the imagination. The reported repentance of Nineveh, he says is incredible, and the whole Book of Daniel was "written as historic fiction in 168-165 B. C., with the use of various earlier documents." The deluge, he says, is "an ancient legend describing a prehistoric event," for "there is no indication that since men appeared upon the earth any universal and simultaneous inundation of so extraordinary a character as to overwhelm the highest mountain peaks has ever occurred and so vast an accumulation of water over all the terrestrial globe would be in itself a physical impossibility." Dr. Briggs, in fact, looking upon biblical history as a whole, describes its primitive sources as "mythologies, legends, poems, laws, and historical documents, and the use of the historical imagination." The danger line to which such a characterization logically leads him is clearly defined in the following extract:—

"The virgin birth of our Lord, and the story of the incarnation as cited in the gospel of the infancy in Matthew and Luke, are more exposed to the mythical hypothesis than any others in the Gospels. It is represented that the virgin birth is unknown to the primitive gospels of St. Mark and the logia of St. Matthew; or to the epistles, even when they urge the doctrine of the incarnation; or to the Gospel of John; that the sources used by our Matthew and Luke are poetic in form and in content, and of unknown origin; that the description of the virgin birth as given by them conflicts with physical science and psychology; and that their story resembles the myths of other ancient religions."

That the Presbyterian Church should have forced out of its communion a man holding and uttering publicly such views as these is not remarkable. It is remarkable, however, that he should have secured ordination to the diaconate of the Episcopal Church, and that he should be now applying for ordination to the priesthood of the same church, with the approval of its most prominent Bishops. How can a professedly orthodox church, whose creed is based upon the scriptures, elevate a man to its priesthood who deliberately transforms theology into mythology and makes the foundation of all churches the work of human hands? The Tribune, being a layman, solely engaged with sublunary affairs, would not presume to affirm or deny the higher and quite distinctive criticism as set forth by the learned professor. He may be right, but, whether right or wrong, his place would appear to be outside of the church. A man with such a sailing chart might be a dangerous pilot.—
Chicago Tribune, May 7, 1899.

FARRAR ON THE DIVORCE EVIL.

London, May 6. — Dean Farrar, whose attention was drawn to the Sloane divorce case and the increase of divorces in high life both in America and England, has given the following signed statement:—

"You ask me to express my opinion about divorces and the question of whether their increasing frequency involves danger to the national welfare. Whether divorces are becoming more numerous in England and America than they were a few years ago I cannot say, but I feel no hesitation whatever in stating in the strongest possible terms my conviction that the strength and prosperity of a nation depend more on the indis-soluble sacredness attached to the marriage bond than to any other conditions.

"A great man has said that the 'foundation stone of the republic is the hearthstone.' Certainly happiness in every individual life depends more on the tender sanctity of the home affections than upon other circumstances. This is the testimony of all history and all human experience. The grandeur of ancient Rome was built to a great extent upon the faithfulness to the marriage tie, and when the shameful day came in which the satiric historian could say that many women no longer reckoned the years by the names of the Consuls, but by the names of the husbands whom they had divorced, then the freedom and glory of Rome became more and more overshadowed until—

'Rome herself was bane unto herself—
She whom the mightiest kingdom curtsied to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway
Did shameful execution on herself.

"And this must always be the inevitable consequence, for nations are composed of individuals, and if custom is so lax as to destroy in the case of individuals the choicest and purest of earthly blessings, then the country in which this state of things becomes chronic will soon wander everywhere 'in search of air unpoisoned by herself.' The unit in a nation is the family, and if the ties of the family be lax, the cohesion of the whole nation must suffer. It is the duty of a nation to impress on the minds of all people the sacramental dignity of wedded life. This must be the main element of human happiness. The pictures which the Scriptures give of happy homes, the peaceful tent of Abraham under rustling boughs of oak; of Mamre, the home to which Isaac took the wife of his youth; the home into which Boaz led the sweet woman of Moab; the home of Jesse, with his strong sons, of which the youngest, the ruddy shepherd boy, grew up to be the sweet psalmist of Israel; and above all, that home at Nazareth, in which the Son of Man grew up like a flower or roses in the spring of the year and like the lilies by the water courses.

"An Eastern legend tells us that when Adam was expelled from paradise he was allowed to carry with him a single rose in order that each man might breathe its odor and so be able to believe in heaven. That rose is the rose of holy matrimony; it is one of those main events of life which are great natural blessings, common to all. Into the true home the demon of divorce can hardly enter. It is safe from those carpings which are 'the gusts of vexatious, lawless, fretful passions; vain and overshadowing, discontented and lamenting, meager and insane spirits of wasted energy and wandering disease and unappeased famine and unsatisfied hope.' But true and pure marriage is 'the queen of friendships.'

"How can I adequately describe a nation in which the happy sanctity of the home and primeval mystery of the marriage bond is kept inviolable? A nation which suffers the marriage to lapse into a loose and easily terminable union is doomed sooner or later to perish by its own inward decay.

CHURCH BUILT ON NEW LINES.

An "up-to-date" church is the First Baptist Temple of Columbus, Ohio. It has been built on lines suggested by the pastor, the Rev. H. H. Barbour, who is a native of Connecticut, has been a reporter and a lawyer, is now what is termed an "advanced" clergyman, and who apparently thought that the theater should not have a monopoly, among buildings for public gatherings, of all the accessories of comfort and convenience. Churches long ago borrowed from the theater the idea of circular rows of seats on an inclined floor, but the Columbus pastor has taken about all that the theater has in the way of construction except the shifting scenery and the footlights. As told in a Columbus paper, the visitor to this church, instead of entering through a small vestibule, steps through the gorgeously carved Gothic portal into a long corridor, on either side of which are offices, lecture-rooms, nursery, parlors, and similar rooms accessory to modern churches. The corridor is wainscoted in white marble and has the appearance of a theater lobby. At either side, near the end of the lobby, beautiful carved staircases lead to the balcony above. The end of the lobby leads directly into the main auditorium, exactly as the lobby of a theater. From the wide aisle which runs around the rear of the room under the circular balcony a good view is had of the commodious stage which the Baptist minister is to use for his pulpit, and where are located the great organ and the seats for the choir. The proscenium arch is elaborately decorated and lacks only the drop curtain and the flies to carry out the stage effect. On either side of the stage-pulpit are a series of boxes, designed to be used for the deacons of the church instead of the traditional "amen corner." The pitched floor, with its circular seats, the circular balcony, the boxes, and the stage, with their rich ornamentation and brilliant frescoing, give the beholder the impression of being in a pretty little theater rather than in a "Hardshell Baptist Church."—New York Evening Post.

CHURCH CRISIS IN PARLIAMENT.

London May 10.—A great crowd was present in Parliament to-day at the debate over the church discipline bill. The crowd has been equaled in size recently only by that present on budget night. Evidently the church crisis is regarded as of some importance by the public.

The present bill is intended, first, to take away the Bishops' veto in ecclesiastical trials, and bring a defaulting clergy before a lay court, consisting of a judge of the high court, and, secondly, to enable the court to deprive a culprit of holy orders.

At present a clergyman may commit any offense, and may be imprisoned, but he cannot be deprived of his orders. He is always a clergyman, whatever crime he may commit.

The important result of the debate is the determination of the government to resort to legislation in the near future, unless the Bishops do something to remove the ritualistic abuses.

The bill under consideration will not be passed because it is too stringent, but something was gained by driving the government to action.—Chicago Tribune, May 11, 1899.

SABBATH SHIFTS EACH YEAR.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 9.—The Rev. Mr. Kilbourne of the Congregational Church of Milwaukee read a paper before the Congregational Ministers' association to-day in which he attacked the belief in a stationary Sabbath day. He said that in the light of modern researches the Sabbath was merely a shifting institution, happening each year on the seventh day from the first day of the year, and so continuing for the rest of the year until the new year came when a new start was made. He pointed out, among other things, that in several instances contained in the Bible that the Sabbath fell on the same day on successive years, which of itself was sufficient to break the continuity of the seventh day.—Chicago Tribune, May 10, 1899.

COLLEGE SONG.

(Air, "Marching Through Georgia.")

Join our ranks ye happy youths in learning's noble sphere,
Let us sing a song of praise for her we hold so dear;
E'en though Calliope should smile 'twill please her still to hear
As we sing in rude meter together.

CHORUS.

Hurrah, burrah, come join our college glee!
Hurrah, hurrah, with joyful hearts and free!
Let us here increase in strength and sing forever more,
Graceland, our college, we'll honor.

Through the fruits of toil and prayer of earnest hearts and true,
May thy zeal transcending on thy children e'er renew
All the hope of loyalty thy growing childhood knew,
While we are toiling together.

When in coming future days our mem'ries backward glide,
Recalling all the happy hours we passed here side by side,
We'll think of thee with gratitude, we'll think of thee with pride,
As we toil onward together.

May the sturdy walls for aye resist the northern blast,
May thy great heart throb and beat in friendship as we pass,
May the gold and navy blue be with thee to the last,

CONSTITUTIONAL POLYGAMY.

The following from the Deseret News for May 3 disposes of our contention in regard to the laws of Utah, providing for the punishment of polygamy.

We publish for two reasons. One, that the readers of the HERALD may know what the official paper of the Utah Church has to say of our statement and argument; the other, that the difference between the meaning of the word polygamy as defined by our lexicographers and commonly understood by people outside of Utah, and the legal meaning of the term as defined in the Enabling Act of Congress under which Utah became a State, the Constitution of Utah framed in accord with such Enabling Act, as stated by the News:—

VERACITY OR LAW?

Under the heading of "A question of veracity," the Lamoni, Iowa, Herald discusses a matter in dispute with the Deseret News. The Herald, which is the organ of the so-called "Reorganized" church, published this statement concerning Utah:—

"The Legislature of which State has purposely enacted no law by which its citizens may be compelled to live in accord with the provision in the act under which Utah became a state, 'polygamy is forever prohibited' or to suffer punishment if they fail to do it."

The Deseret News copied this, and proceeded to prove from the State Constitution that not only had the requirements of the Enabling Act of Congress been fully complied with, but that an additional provision had been placed in the State Constitution, by which the penalties against polygamy imposed by the act of February 4, 1892, were made part of the supreme law of the State. We quoted article xxiv., sec. 2, and also the text of the law thus continued in force.

In an attempted reply to this, the Lamoni Herald takes up a labored argument to prove that polygamy means the having or living with a plurality of wives, and after spending much time and space over it states:—

"This is the sort of polygamy that the Herald referred to and meant when it stated that the Legislature of Utah had purposely enacted no law to prevent or punish polygamy."

First, let us make clear the meaning of the terms employed in this question of "veracity," as it is put by the Herald, but which started as a question of law. What is meant by the language of the State Constitution, and what is required by the Enabling act? The term polygamy in the law was not defined by the people of Utah, but by act of Congress, the author of which was Senator George F. Edmunds, whom the Herald cites as an authority. The Edmunds Act of March 22, 1882, fixed its legal definition in the United States. It was made to be the act of marrying a wife or husband by a person having a living and undivorced wife or husband. This was made punishable by a maximum fine of five hundred dollars, and imprisonment not more than five years. The offense of living with a plurality of wives was called unlawful cohabitation, made a misdemeanor, and punished by six months' imprisonment and a fine of three hundred dollars as maximum penalties.

In all the controversies before the courts on this matter these terms have been employed. The offenses are different and distinct. It does not matter what Webster, or Worcester, or any other lexicographer may have to say, when a legal definition is wanted we go to the law for it if it is a legal question.

But this controversy goes a little further than that. In order that there might be no mistake as to what Congress required of Utah as a condition precedent to her admission into the Union, the term polygamy was not used at all. The language of the Enabling Act is:—

"Provided that polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited."

Dissertations over the philological signification of the term "polygamy" are wasted, then. Utah inserted this provision in her State Constitution as required, using the same language. The Lamoni Herald's sarcasms about the "shrewd cunning of 'Mormon' neighbors" and "pretty piece of political trickery," and the rest of it, are thrown away. So are its essays on the alleged "stipulation" in the Enabling Act that in the State Constitution "polygamy should be forever prohibited, polygamy as defined by Webster . . . was the thing intended to be prohibited."

The Enabling Act did not provide any such thing, nor intend any such definition, but performed that "piece of political trickery"—if there was any such thing—which the Lamoni Herald attributes to the "shrewd cunning" of the "Mormons."

And now, to close up the argument, if the Herald people will turn to chapter 24 of the Utah penal code in Revised Statutes of 1898 they will find all the punishments and penalties that they want and that they still declare the Utah Legislature purposely enacted no law about. After they have read all the provisions against polygamy and unlawful cohabitation contained therein, perhaps they will acknowledge they were wrong in their first assertion and also in their last. As to their schoolboy jangle about the dictionary, it cuts no figure in the question of what is or is not in the law, and what is the legal signification of the terms which the law employs. If this is a question of "veracity" the Herald is equally at fault. However, we shall be surprised if it makes that "open confession" which is said to be "good for the soul."

We sent to Utah nearly two months ago for a copy of the statutes of that State, and later for a copy of the laws of 1898, but have not as yet received them. When they are received we shall turn to the chapter of the Utah penal code to which the News cites us and verify the statement the News makes concerning the punishment of polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. If upon examination we find that we misstated the situation we shall certainly make correction of our wrong.

In the meantime, we concede that where the meaning of a term or word is defined by law, that is the meaning which applies to the word or term within the jurisdiction of the law. So, when the HERALD used the term polygamy to mean "the having and living with a plurality of wives," as applied to Utah, the HERALD was in error, as the word in Utah legally means "the act of marrying a wife or husband by a person having a living and undivorced wife or husband," and does not apply to men and women who may be living with two, or more wives, or husbands as the case may be.

We hope that the News will not be so "surprised" that it will not give us credit for acknowledging our error.

DEBATES NOT IN ORDER. (?)

Some little while ago an agreement was reached between Bro. S. D. Condit, a missionary in the Utah field, and Elder S. W. Jenkinson, of the Utah Church, for a discussion. We give the agreement and propositions to be examined, and a letter disposing of the matter, below:—

Propositions for discussions to take place at Smithfield, Utah, April —, 1899.

1. Is the church known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and presided over by Joseph Smith the legal successor to the church organized by Joseph Smith, Jr., on April 6, 1830?

Affirmative, S. D. Condit.

Negative, S. W. Jenkinson.

2. Is the church known as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and presided over by Lorenzo Snow the legal successor to the church organized by Joseph Smith, Jr., on April 6, 1830?

Affirmative, S. W. Jenkinson.

Negative, S. D. Condit.

Above discussion to take place in Smithfield beginning April —, 1899.

To occupy ten nights of two hours each, five nights to each proposition. Each speaker allowed two speeches of thirty minutes each evening. Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants as put out before 1844 to be standard in evidence; other matter not to be barred.

SMITHFIELD, 4-6, 1899.

ELDER J. W. WIGHT;

Dear Sir:—You must excuse me for not answering your letter before this, for circumstances over which I had no control have caused the long delay. I would say in answer to your communication that it will be impossible for this discussion to take place at the present time. Firstly, I find that the presiding officers of this stake are not in harmony with these discussions, and if this one took place it would be without their sanction or consent.

Secondly, our tabernacle in Smithfield is undergoing some repairs which would make it impossible for us to have the use of that building. In fact, I think it would be impossible, knowing the mind and will of the authorities, to get the use of this building for the purpose of discussion, and there is no other building suitable in our town. When I made arrangements with Brother S. D. Condit, respecting this controversy it was with the very best of faith, but under existing circumstances it will be impossible for me to proceed any further in this matter. Hoping this will be satisfactory to you I remain,

Yours most truly,
S. W. JENKINSON.

THE Chicago Tribune, April 5, 1899, referring to the church and work of a prominent "advanced" Chicago minister, has this to say, which will be understood by those who note the modern trend to follow men largely because they please the people, though their teachings fail to reflect "the truth" taught by the Master and his apostles. The sentiment of such movements or tendencies was well expressed of late by another Chicago minister who declared that a "substitute for orthodoxy" must be found:—

A church like the one of which . . . is the head exists not because of its creed, but because of the personality of the preacher. Men like to hear his sermons. They look on him not as a man occupying a sacerdotal position, but as an excellent teacher of ethics. They do not look upon him as endowed with divine wisdom.

CURRENT RELIGIOUS AGITATION.

DR. NICHOLS' CHANGE OF FAITH.

The Rev. C. W. DeLyon Nichols, formerly rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Staten Island, and until recently assistant rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, has given up the Episcopal faith for the Roman Catholic. He was yesterday received into St. Stephen's Church, on East Twenty-ninth Street, by Father Charles H. Colton, and he has sent a letter to Bishop Henry C. Potter announcing his withdrawal from the Episcopal Church.—N. Y. cor. Chicago Tribune, May 13, '99.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST DISSENSION.

Louisville, Ky., May 12.—There is now greater danger of a split in the Southern Baptist Church than at any time in the history of the controversy, caused by the action of the Rev. W. H. Whitsitt, D. D., in contributing a chapter on Baptist history to Johnson's Encyclopedia, in which he contended that baptism by immersion was invented by the English Baptists in 1644, having been ignored throughout the dark ages.

The serious phase of the situation was reached when the Board of Trustees of the Southern Baptist Seminary, elected by the General Baptist Association, accepted Dr. Whitsitt's resignation, both as President and as Professor of Church History. The vote on the Presidency is announced to have been overwhelming and on the history chair 22 to 20.

The members of the faculty, it is said, called for Dr. Whitsitt's resignation through fear of losing their places, owing to threats from the opposition faction to withdraw its support. A general shaking up in the faculty is expected.—Chicago Tribune, May 13.

New York, May 12.—The following announcement was made by Bishop Potter to-day through the Churchman, the official organ of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this city:—

"The Rev. Dr. Briggs and the Rev. Charles H. Snedeker will be ordained on the day officially appointed by the Bishop of New York, May 14, at the Pro-Cathedral, Stanton Street, this city, at 10:45 o'clock.—Chicago Tribune, May 13, 1899.

Widespread dissatisfaction exists, because of the acceptance of Dr. Briggs into the ministerial ranks of the Episcopal Church. It is thought by some that his ordination will result in such differences of opinion as will seriously threaten the Episcopal Church in the United States.

It seems that there is no rest for modern sectarianism. It is being shaken to the center and seems destined to pass away with everything that can "be shaken." "Every plant which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up," is the Master's declaration, being fulfilled in our own times as in the past.

Evidences of the wisdom manifested in the establishment of the great latter-day work multiply as time develops the character of all religious conceptions. "The foundation of God standeth sure" amid the wreck of creeds and the passing of all things earthly. The church restored, re-established is indeed the light and the hope of the world. Those who comprehend the truth have constantly increasing reasons to appreciate the great work which God has brought forth in these latter days for the salvation of the race.

The manifest wisdom of God in the restored gospel shines out in clear and massive contrast to the darkened and bewildered condition of the modern religious world.

IS THE WISH FATHER TO THE THOUGHT.

In one of our exchanges, a journal of one of the popular churches, we read and excerpted the following:—

The Western Recorder says the official figures for the M. E. Church, South, show a net loss for 1898, of 8,300, as compared with the year previous. In view of the marvelous amount of hustling and noise the Methodists have been making, this report becomes astounding. But it is a patent fact, to be seen by any observer, that the Methodists have been gradually declining for some time past. Their system of church organization and government is not adapted to staid and settled communities and conditions. It serves a passable purpose in frontier sections and amongst backwoods people. But it must inevitably decline as education and general enlightenment advance. The very breath of this nation is a breath of liberty and of equality, and no system of religion that exalts one man above another, and makes the churches subservient to the will of a college of clericals, can long prosper. Catholicism, Episcopacy, and even the Episcopal tendencies amongst some Baptists, are all feeling the rising spirit of self-assertion that refuses to bow the neck to the self-constituted yoke of those who would fain be lords over God's heritage. Methodism must necessarily share in this decline more and more as the years go by. She has been trying to anticipate it and prepare for it, by admitting lay representation into the councils of the denomination, but that don't go far enough.

Our contemporary seems to think that from the vigor and noise of the demonstration of war on the general enemy which the M. E. Church (South, we presume) is making, there ought to be a corresponding accession of membership; but this wanting is taken as a decadence in the vitalizing force of the spirit that should be with the church inherent in itself.

We are not prepared to concede to our exchange the correctness of the statement that the M. E. Church has been preparing for a decline by admitting lay representation in her councils, for the reason that we are of the opinion that this measure has been forced by the advancing sentiment of justice to the element outside of the ministry. The Deed of Declaration made by Mr. Wesley, may have become inadequate to meet the necessities of the church government; and if so, then new measures should be adopted to fit the church for its work. And, why not?

The origin was a thing of human development, and no divine rule would be broken if new measures should be instituted. Let the work of emancipation go on.

BRO. EBEN MILLER, Cleveland, Ohio, sends us a clipping from the Cleveland Press, of April 14, from which it appears that Willoughby (two miles and a half from Kirtland) and the surrounding country are being built up. We reproduce said clipping, as follows:—

Willoughby, Lake County, is to have a million-dollar training school for girls. The money has been willed by Wallace C. Andrews, the millionaire New Yorker who, with his wife, was burned to death, last week. Willoughby is a suburb of Cleveland, although not as well known to Clevelanders as other suburbs.

Willoughby is not only on the map, but is one of the most beautiful villages in Ohio. Although its population, according to the recent railroad guides, is only 1,243, Willoughby assumes electric lights, water works, street cars, and other metropolitan airs. Next to Painesville, it is the largest village in Lake County. It is nineteen miles east of Cleveland and is on the line of the Lake Shore and Nickle plate roads, and is also reached by both the main and shore lines of the C., P. and E. electric lines.

The beautiful Chagrin River flows through the village, reaching the lake three miles to the north. From Willoughby it is a three-mile drive over the hills to the historic Mormon temple in Kirtland. The Garfield homestead in Mentor is four miles to the east on the Euclid road, which runs through the center of Willoughby, forming its main street. A few miles to the north and west is Willow Beach, a pretty summer retreat. Little Mountain, another delightful resort, is about the same distance to the south and east. The village is compactly built and the streets are cleanly kept.

Scores of Cleveland's business men have their summer homes in Willoughby or on the lake front two or three miles north of the town. The beautiful St. John residence, once the home of the wife of the dead millionaire, stands on the west side of the main street, occupying with its spacious yards and orchards, an entire block. It is now the home of Rev. Dr. Keene, rector of the Episcopal Church of the village. The schools and churches of the village are of modern architecture. The Penfield brick machine factory is the largest industry. The power house of the C., P. and E. electric road is also located here. There are a dozen superb sites for the new training school. It will quite likely be built on the high ground west of the village and east of the famous Belle Vernon farm, owned by J. A. Beidler.

WE call attention to a communication in this HERALD, headed "Colonization," by Sr. M. A. Atwell.

It is published at Sr. Atwell's request; and we do not by its insertion either endorse or condemn the scheme. Its success or failure lies with those who engage in it, the effort being one of those that are covered by the statement,

Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves.

Of the working details of the plan we are not informed, but presume that those who will take part in the effort will duly inform themselves before becoming too deeply involved.

We wish the effort due success.

GIFTS RECEIVED AT THE SAINTS' HOME.

Sister Alice Dancer, the Matron in charge of the Home at Lamon, requests us to announce the following excellent gifts for the use and comfort of the inmates under her charge.

From Dunlap, Iowa, sent by Sister Elinor Brown, aged 82, a quilt, the work of her hands.

Sr. Elinor Shafer was born March 19, 1816, at Arcadia, Wayne County, New York; was married to W. W. Reed, August 17, 1836, at Decatur, Illinois; and after his death to W. L. Brown, April 6, 1871.

Brief of biography sent with the quilt.

From Independence, Missouri, a quilt, sent by Sr. Davison, aged 84. Sr. Davison is the mother of Sr. Emma Burton, now with her husband, Joseph F. Burton, in the Tahitian mission, and Bro. Holmes J. Davison, of Nova Scotia, preaching there.

From Burlington, Kansas, sent by Bro. and Sr. P. Cadwell, a quilt, the work of Sr. Cadwell, aged 70.

This quilt was sent to Bro. and Sr. Joseph Smith, to be by them delivered in person at the Home. This was done May 5, when a favorable opportunity occurred for them to visit the Home, take dinner at the Matron's table, and enjoy a brief chat with the aged saints, citizens of the commonwealth of Israel and dwellers together in the Home. It was a pleasant visit, seemingly enjoyed by all.

Sr. Dancer extends to the donors before-named on behalf of the Home, thanks for the favors sent, and assures those aged sisters who have wrought so faithfully to make and embellish their pleasant and useful articles, by which the inmates of the Home may be made comfortable and happy, that those labors are appreciated.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Elder T. J. Sheppard, Dallas, Texas, May 6:—

I am continuing my meeting near this place every night, with increasing attendance and interest. Bro. Frank Renfro, of the missionary force, will join me here in a few days, and together we expect to attack a nest of Brighamites who have been doing some proselyting in one corner of this county, where we were requested by the people to come last year, but could not reach it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. J. B. Graham, West Plains, Missouri, requests prayer for the recovery of Bro. C. M. Bootman, to whom he refers as an able expounder of the word, who labors in that region of country.

Bro. G. H. Wells, Atlantic, Cass County, Iowa, requests elders and brethren to call on him. He lives about four miles northwest of Atlantic, on the Curtis farm. He has good openings for preaching the word and desires help, to reach the people.

"Toledo, Ohio, May 6.—Superintendent J. J. Stranahan, of the government fish hatchery at Put-in Bay, has forwarded a report of a remarkable tidal wave which took place there on Friday. The water rose fully twenty inches, and after it receded fishing boats were left high and dry on the beach. Steamboat men are unable to account for the unusual occurrence."

Bishop Kelley returned from Western Iowa points, where he had been over Sunday, the 7th inst., on Wednesday, the 10th.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, left home for the East, on Saturday, the 13th.

The National Armenian Relief Committee, composed of people of national reputation and standing in the country, is sending out pamphlets which graphically describe the terrible ordeals through which the persecuted Armenians have passed in the bloody massacres perpetrated among them by the fanatical Turks. Pamphlets issued describe the sad condition of the people—the aged, widows, and orphans, bereft of their natural protectors—and recite what good work the voluntary contributions of generous Americans is enabling them to do. Many orphan children remain to be provided for and the aged also to be looked after. The plan is based upon the principle of industry and self-help. Brown Brothers, 59 Wall Street, New York, are treasurers of the fund; Rev. Geo. P. Knapp, Barre, Massachusetts, secretary, will supply descriptive pamphlets free of cost.

Bro. G. W. Edwards, Philadelphai, sends us a clipping from the Bulletin, that city, to the effect that Utah elders, after a lengthy effort, had left the city of brotherly love, giving up the effort to proselyte there. It is refreshing to note that the newspaper writer in this instance refers to said elders as disciples of "John Smith and Brigham Young." Poor John Smith, whoever that indefinite individual may be, gets it this time. For once Joseph Smith is not credited with the peculiarities of the Utah faith.

The HERALD readers will notice some changes in the style and makeup of the paper, in the present issue. The long primer and brevier type have been set "solid" or unleaded in the Cover, Editorial, and Communication departments, with solid brevier also in the Miscellaneous Department. This gives us more room; nevertheless we request that "necessary brevity" be not forgotten by our writers, in the interest of the HERALD and their own literary style. The Home Column and Sunday School departments have been placed after the three leading or older departments, thus throwing the general reading more closely together.

"London, May 13.—The Russian government has decided upon exceptional measures against the Jews. The first anti-Jewish measure was promulgated yesterday, when the stay of all—even foreign—Jews is prohibited in St. Petersburg. No exemption will be made, even in the case of French Jews. There have been serious outbreaks against the Jews at Nicolaieff in connection with the Easter festivities of the Greek Church. Jews were captured or killed, houses and shops wrecked, graves desecrated. Rioters dispersed only by armed force.

Original Poetry.

LIFE'S DREAMING.

Dreaming, dreaming, am I dreaming?
Is my living all unreal?
Is it only seeming, seeming
That I do, or think, or feel?
Oft in Slumber's arms reclining
Things so real seemed to me;
Things of gladness, or repining,
That my waking stole from me;
That I think my life's rejoicings,
And the griefs that come to me,
Are no more than silent voicings
Of the things I think to be.

Am I only dreaming, dreaming?
What shall my awaking be?
If there's nothing now but seeming,
What shall real being be?

In the dawning of that morrow,
Shall I pure enjoyment see?
Shall I wake alone to sorrow?
Tell me, prophet, what 'twill be.
Shall my waking prove that neither
Pain, nor pleasure is divine;
But between, and not with either,
I my final rest may find?

Surely, I am dreaming, dreaming,
Yet, not all my life is dreams;
Light of truth upon me gleaming,
Shows with that which only seems,
That which is, and is eternal,
Springing from that higher sphere
Of the life sublime, supernal,
Which is but suggested here.
I am living, moving, doing;
Real is this world of sense,
But the thoughts I am pursuing,
Often are but sheer pretense.

Pleasure that hath self as center,
Is a fancy, idle, vain;
Grief that in my soul doth enter,
Bringing there a hopeless pain;
All that doth my soul dis sever
From my God, to live alone;
Are but dreams that fade forever,
When the night of life is done.

All my sorrow that forgets not
God, and hopeful faith in him;
All my pleasure, if it sets not
My affections on the dim
And unstable of the present,
But the future holds in view;
Those belong to life incessant,
Those are real they are true.
I am dreaming, dreaming, dreaming,
Waken me, O, heavenly light!
Let the real drive the seeming
Far beyond my spirit's sight.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 4.

Editors Herald.—One year of my ministry in St. Joseph has passed, and during that time I have not contributed to the Herald. Some have thought I have made a mistake in this regard, and perhaps I have. As I look back over the year I can see that it has been a year of earnest desire to accomplish much for the Master's cause, and I have tried to do what I could, and believe I have accomplished something, though not as much as I would like to have done; but we become impatient sometimes and desire to walk before we can stand alone; but unless we aim high we are not apt to accomplish much in this life.

I found a noble band of saints in this place, and my first impressions have grown with my year's acquaintance with them; and it was good to hear them in the beginning of my ministry offer up the earnest prayer for the new pastor who had come into their midst; and it is good to-day to listen to the same earnest appeal from hearts who love the work of the Master, and to receive words of encouragement in commendation of the advancement made. City work is not all sunshine, by any means. The duties are arduous and exacting. Conditions are different than in the country. Attractions are more numerous and various. All of these conditions must be met, kindly but firmly, and it taxes one's patience and resources sometimes to the utmost. A pastor of a church such as we have here is expected to visit the saints often, to occupy the pulpit twice on Sunday, attend the Sunday school, prayer services, Religio, choir practices, and sustain two or three missions in various parts of the city, be prepared to present something new in his sermons each time he appears in public, and yet if he visited as often as he is expected to and attends all the services, he has but little time to read and meditate, especially when he has, in addition to the duties named above, a family to look after and an allowance so small that he has to spend almost half his time cudgeling his brains to know how he can make one dollar do the work of two. I would not care to change places with a salaried minister who gets two or three thousand a year for preaching what he does not believe, but I would like to try just for one year at least to use what money I could in the promulgation of the true gospel.

There seems to be no power in earth or hell but what one has to contend with in a city. It is lodges and theaters in the winter time and parks and summer resorts in the warm weather, and almost an impossibility to get the young, especially, to see the necessity of giving up these things, at all times, for the sake of the church work. I do not believe that there can be any safe compromise between the church and the world, and the sooner in life we are brought to understand this, better it will be for our peace of mind and our advancement in the life that leads to the divine.

Much of my time and effort since I have been here have been spent in an endeavor to benefit the young, and I know that my work has not been fruitless, but a marked improvement has been made. The young people's prayer meetings on the first Tuesday evening of each month are getting to be a decided success, and the young are coming to the front all along the line. Much of the future of this branch now depends upon the young as it does almost everywhere. I saw this when I first came here and laid my plans accordingly, and am thankful to say that the young people are justifying my expectations. If as much improvement is made in the year to come as in the year that is past, St. Joseph will have a Religio society that the church may well be proud of; and I trust that from its ranks may come, as there has in the past, some grand worker for the Master. I have never realized, as I have since I came to St. Joseph, the importance of the command of the Master, "Feed my lambs," "Feed my sheep." Too much effort has been made in the past to develop men for the field and not enough for the branch and local work, really the most important of all. If a man develops a little talent as a speaker, he is at once sent out as a missionary, and the flock left to famish at home.

My work has been spent almost entirely in the St. Joseph branch and I have never felt any other way than justified in doing so; and I expect that the future year or years to be just as devotedly, or more so, spent in the same way, as long as I shall be sustained in my present mission.

My experience in Utah came in nicely this last winter in refuting the claims made by the Utah elders and in defeating their purposes in trying to establish their erroneous doctrines in this place. We had five of them all winter and six of them part of the time. I granted them the use of both the church buildings controlled by us in the city, and reviewed them in both places to the entire satisfaction of the saints, and think we will have but little trouble with them in future. They sprung a new dodge on me here, something that I had never had to meet before in regard to Joseph Smith's seed or posterity. They said it did not mean his offspring or fruit of his loins, but those who believed in his divine mission. I showed the absurdity of this in the statement, "Let my servant Joseph" and his posterity have "place" therein; viz., the Nauvoo House. Their interpretation is a manifest absurdity; that all the thousands and possibly millions would have a place in that house. The papers here treated us nicely and a very fair presentation of our case and the differences was given. They agreed to pay the expense of lighting and heating the church for the three nights they occupied it, but never came near me to offer to pay. They probably thought we got more out of it than they did, and I am sure we are satisfied with the result. I am more and more convinced as I meet them from time to time that they are the most complete fulfillment of Christ's description of wolves in sheep's clothing that I know anything about. They go about among the people with a long face and dressed in ministerial garb and pretend to be very pious and reverent. They became wonderfully indignant because the people applauded me in the church here one night because of a very pointed question I asked them and reminded the people that they were in a house dedicated to the worship of God and that they should refrain from anything of the kind, which would have been all right and consistent coming from almost any other class of ministers; but when I remembered my experience in Utah the exhortation lost all its force. In a little town called Wellington, in Castle Valley, Utah, I went to the bishop for the key, as the church had been promised me for three nights. He handed me the key and pointed out the church to me and I went over and unlocked the door and went in, and lo, there were not pews, only a row of fixed seats around the walls. I looked out in the street and there were the pews piled up out there. I asked some one the meaning of it and they told they had held a dance in the church the night before. In Southern Idaho I obtained the use of their church in a small town in the Goose Creek country. A heavy curtain shut off a large alcove at the rear of the church and I contracted a severe cold standing at the foot of the curtain and preaching to the people for an hour. I asked the meaning of the curtain and alcove, and they told me that it was a stage with scenery and all the paraphernalia of a theater and the curtain simply hid these things from the eyes of the congregation. Every last day of the public country schools in Mormon communities is celebrated with a dance for the children in the afternoon and for the parents in the evening. I expect they went from here and told that I did not treat them very well and that I was a little harsh, but I put it at them as mildly as I could considering the magnitude of the errors they have and are teaching. Men who make rough roads must expect to be jolted when they are driven over them. I get tired of their cant about being persecuted and slandered by the "Josephites" as they call us, you cannot tell those people the truth without, in their estimation, slandering them.

Brn. Etzenhouser, F. B. Blair, and David Wight have occupied the pulpit quite acceptably recently, and I extend a cordial invitation to any of the ministry passing through St. Joseph to call and speak for us. Try and make it a point brethren to be with us over Sunday, and if you will drop me a card before coming I will see that you are well advertised. The latchstring is out at 1343 Buchanan Avenue.

Yours, strong in the faith,

H. O. SMITH.

BEAVER, Mo., May 2.

Editors Herald:—This finds me at the above place among the mountains and valleys of the great Ozarks, at the home of Bro. Jacob E. Swigart, and most noble family, located on what I would call a good one hundred and sixty acre stock farm, part of it being clothed with a fine growth of clover and timothy; and to all appearances the soil of Southwest Missouri, whether on hill or dale, is well adapted for clover and fruits, no matter how stony or rough. Joining Bro. Swigart, is a forty of good land for this country that can be homesteaded, and another forty joining that can be bought cheap, if looked after at once; but make no application till you go and see it for yourself. Saints who contemplate moving to South Missouri, should remember that flat lands that are free from stone or gravel are, as a general thing, sour and sad, and will run together and bake after every rain and not near so rich and productive as the stony or gravelly hills and valleys that can be worked and planted much earlier in the spring as well as after a rain; and remember too that northern horses as a general thing will not do well in this climate the first year or two, and if put to work are liable to die on your hands; hence the best plan would be to buy here or make some exchanges on the way. And by all means do not move to South Missouri with the expectation of finding no drawbacks, for we have plenty of them, as in all other countries that I have both seen and read of; for all I think there is no State like Missouri. And my advice to saints who have got homes and have them paid for within her borders is to hold fast to them, and not trouble yourselves about the gathering or the Temple Lot, nor yet the building of the Temple; for as the Lord lives all will be brought about in God's own due time. The main issue with us as saints of God is and should be to be ready at his call. Zion might have been redeemed even now, but for our stiffneckedness and unfitness. Zion proper is the pure in heart.

Are we pure? Have we added to our faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance (in all things), patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity? Have we complied with the Word of Wisdom? Have we broken loose from all oath-bound societies? Have we paid our tithings and acted honorably in all our dealings with God and men as far as lies in our power? If so, we may at any time or in the near future hear the welcome cry, Gather yourselves together that ye be not partakers of the plagues that I am about to pour out upon the wicked; but until that time, let us comply with the word of the Lord, where he says, "to gather" "into the regions round about" (not scatter); that is so far as it may be agreeable with the minds of the people; and to that end I shall labor on, preparing a people for God.

I have been preaching at Bruner, John's Mills, and Union chapel the past three weeks, the interest being splendid, and as a reward four souls were added to the church, and others standing on the brink of the water. The Bruner branch has a noble band of saints, remembering also that the preacher cannot live on "God bless you" alone, but provided my team with a new round of shoes. Another said "God bless you in your labors of love" by dropping a wheel into my hand, and from a letter just received from home, I learn that the wife received a box of goods and some cash, from the same place. Well, may God reward them for their love and kindness; and I herewith extend my heartfelt thanks to both God and the saints; and I shall ever try to live so as not to betray their trust in me, God being my helper.

At times it looks as if I was compelled to return home, but when I look out upon the wide and extended ripe harvest field with the cry from here and there to come at once and thrust in my sickle, I am at a loss to know just what to do, and more so when I know that the laborers are so few; but as long as the Lord will provide I shall continue to reap the golden grain, and in due time respond to the calls from the ones in need of help.

COLONIZATION.

RICH HILL, Mo.

Dear Saints:—I will state through the Herald, if it is desirable, that we will organize our colony the 12th day of May, 1899. I will say that we wish to know who of all of those to whom I have written letters and those who have written to me concerning the land will join in with us. We can get the land by paying one third down, one third in two years more, and the balance on five years time at seven per cent. We want to get as many as twenty families.

Should we purchase the eighty acres joining the fourteen forties, we would have to pay for it outright, which would require forty-nine dollars from each family of twenty. I am in favor of buying the eighty. Those that are not can pay their twenty-four dollars and have an equal share in the fourteen forties. The land will be divided equally. Should all help to pay for the eighty, all would get equal shares in it. If we buy the eighty, each family would have two or more acres already in cultivation. E. T. Atwell has made preparations for a post office; the papers have been sent to Washington and are all signed; the name will be Cumorah, Missouri; therefore our town or colony will be Cumorah.

All provisions will be provided in the by-laws as equally as can be. Those that cannot raise all of their third will be looked after; perhaps some can raise more. If so, it will be kept an account of, and the former can either work theirs out in the colony, or pay cash when able. The church has nothing to do with this colony.

Let us hear from all who wish to assist, soon as possible. In bonds,

MRS. M. A. ATWELL.

DELHI, Ont., May 1.

Editors Herald:—I arrived at Wingham from Kincardine, April 14, feeling somewhat better in health. I went to Zettland, secured the schoolhouse for three nights. Had very good attendance. Wednesday, the 19th, I returned to Wingham to receive the sad news that my barn was burnt; cause unknown, believed to have been caused by a spark from stovepipe. Our loss is about three hundred dollars. This is the third time I have been burnt out since entering into this great latter-day work. In the spring of 1888 our house and contents were all burnt; and in the fall of 1890 our barn and fall wheat and barley were all burnt, and no insurance. Our losses then would run close to one thousand dollars. I struggled along through many a hard trial.

In the fall of '92 I was called through Elder Lake to the office of an elder; and in the spring of '93 received an appointment from the church to labor as a missionary. I sold my farm and moved into the town of St. Marys, Ontario, and got along very well; but the family growing up, and the boys not able to get work in the winter months, would get us in debt, and when I would return home my heart has often been made sad to see conditions of things at home. Feeling to better their circumstances in the fall of '97 I purchased about fifty acres near this village; moved my family here the 16th of March, '98. We got along very well last year, as my mission field was in the same county and I could get home often to see after things myself. By the voice of the Spirit at the October conference held in Stratford my field was changed northward. I obeyed and labored hard, four long months without returning home; then to return only to have a sad and heavy heart seems almost to discourage me. Yet I cannot mistrust my heavenly Father. His own dear Son, who did no sin, had to learn obedience through the things he suffered. It seems every time I go into any other work but the gospel I suffer loss. I have fully resolved never to tie myself up with the things of the world again, and to get rid of this place as soon as possible, as the boys have not the experience required to run a farm, and I do not feel to leave my Master's work to gain the riches of this world, as I am impressed the time is very short, and the gathering close at hand. This has pressed itself upon my mind for the last four months.

I do hope and pray that I and my family will be in a condition to live and be permitted to gather with the pure in heart in Zion; for none but the pure in heart can dwell there. Zion is God's people pure in heart. Nothing unclean can or will be worthy. It seems to me we must be clean not only in heart, but in person, clean in the domestic circle. Do saints expect to be permitted to dwell in Zion who are slothful, untidy, and filthy around their homes; causing pain and sorrow to the hearts of those who are of a different disposition? If they do, I am afraid they will be sadly disappointed. God says nothing unclean shall enter his city. O, may God help us to get ready for the blessed call to Zion and for the coming of Christ. I feel like uttering the words of John on the isle of Patmos, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

From Wingham I went to Seaforth and McKillop; held five meetings and baptized four, and administered to the sick. One, Sr. Bell, was crippled in her back so bad that she could scarcely move around. I administered to her on the 24th, returned on the 26th, and found her no better. She was discouraged and going to try the doctor. I said, "Sister, I feel impressed somehow that you should not go to the doctor, that this is a trial of your faith;" and persuaded her to wait until the following day and if no better, then do as she pleased. I administered again that evening after the baptisms and confirmations, and the good Lord through his Spirit rebuked the unbelieving spirit, and the next morning she was completely healed and flew around like a young girl. Those things are very cheering to us all. Well might the poet say, "O for a greater faith." I often think of the saying, "Lord, help thou mine unbelief."

Yours in gospel work,

ELDER S. W. TOMLINSON.

IRVING COLLEGE, Tenn., April 26.

Editors Herald:—I am sometimes discouraged, but am now encouraged, for there are some developments that have taken place lately that justify it. I have just preached at a number of places to good turnouts and interest. Some seem to be near the kingdom. There are more places open for us to preach in this section than I can occupy for a long while. We feel like giving the Macedonian cry. There is enough to do here for a number of good preachers.

I am hopeful of getting some of the Brighamites out of the dilemma they are in by reason of the false doctrines of Utahism. The members of the Utah Church here tell me their elders do not teach a single thing about polygamy, Adam-God, blood-atonement, etc., before they baptize them; they just teach them the first principles of the gospel as we do and upon this they baptize them and afterward they teach them the doctrine of polygamy, etc., by letting them read their books. In fact, some of their members in this section did not know until I read it to them that their elders believed the doctrine of polygamy. Nearly all of their members here are disgusted with Utahism.

Taken as a whole I believe there are some honest men among the Utah Mormons, and I also believe they will be gathered out in the due time of the good Lord. I also believe a great many of them are grand hypocrites and liars. "By their fruits ye shall know them;" and they prove that they are by their fruits in this section.

We have to bear a great deal of persecution on their account. I show them up by their books in their true colors to the people. I am opening the people's eyes here. May God help all our brethren in the ministry everywhere they find them to show the true character of the faith.

A Brighamite elder told me they intended to put twice as many missionaries in the field this year as they had last, and that all their male members were preachers. But no difference to us; we by the help of God can meet them all successfully; so let them come and meet us, but they won't do it, but just sneak and whine around and say they are not allowed to debate.

Yours in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 8.

Editors Herald:—Leaving home on the 14th ult. I called on Bro. D. Archibald, of Centerville, Iowa, stopping with him and his kind family over one night. I found them contending for the faith under trying circumstances.

My next stop was at Pollock, Missouri; stayed there ten days, preaching there and at Fairview church to small congregations. Found the saints there alive in the work of the Lord. On leaving there I went to Bevier, Missouri, and while there I preached a number of times and by request of the parents and in harmony with branch officials baptized six lovely young Sunday school children. Calling at Macon I found Bro. Palfrey's family still in the faith, and I enjoyed the visit with them very much. May the Lord bless them for their kindness to the missionaries.

My next call was at Bro. Burgess' in St. Louis. While there I visited some and made the necessary arrangements to come here. I learned while there that the young saints were progressing very well and that the older ones were abiding in the truth. It is pleasant indeed to learn that the few saints in so large a city with so many worldly attractions are living so they are light unto the world.

On the 6th inst. I arrived here, in the evening, and had the privilege of hearing the Rev. Sam Jones preach. One statement he made was a little peculiar. He said he never preached on regeneration for the reason that he did not know how; then tried to look wise and concluded his sermon by a death-bed story.

We held three meetings here yesterday, in company with Bro. J. M. Scott and the few lively saints here. Our meetings were very spiritual and I feel to thank God for raising up his standard here; and to see how well the little band of saints here are progressing under the labors of Bro. Scott makes me rejoice. We have given notice that next Thursday we will meet with them for the purpose of organizing them into a branch. The good Lord designated to me the one who should be ordained as their presiding elder, one who if faithful will be useful to the work here. There now are a few who are seeking after the truth here who will soon unite with the church and thus be a help to the work. I am still hopeful and rejoicing in the truth.

MINATARE, NEB., May 6.

Editors Herald:—May it please you: In second paragraph of my letter published in Herald for April 26, I am made to say of points visited: "The points are more than several street blocks apart, reached by electric street cars, etc.," which should read, "not reached by electric cars." For it would indeed be a strange phenomenon to see electric cars dashing along over hills and through dales, up and down Platte Valley.

Referring to the introduction of the work here, in 1888, paragraph 4, it should read 1898.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, May 8.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday, saints of the Pilot Rock branch, who hold their services seven miles south of this place, provided a basket dinner and held Sunday school services at ten a. m., sacrament services at eleven a. m., and preaching at two p. m., at all of which they enjoyed the blessing of God in the presence and assistance and comforting influence of the Spirit. At the morning services Bro. James O. Sheldon, who has been presiding over the branch for some time, though only holding the office of deacon, was ordained to the office of elder by the writer and Elder A. R. Crippen, which will leave the branch in a better working condition, I believe. The ordination was authorized by a call manifested by the Spirit, the indorsement by vote of the branch and of the general missionaries in charge, Elders J. R. Lambert and Heman C. Smith. The Spirit bore testimony to the writer while ordaining the brother that his ordination was in harmony with the mind and will of the Spirit. This course of procedure was had not only because it is in harmony with the provisions of the law, but because that to wait for the district conference to authorize and provide for said ordination, it would, perhaps, have been some months before the ordination could have been attended to.

It is indeed encouraging to know that God is the author of our work and that Jesus Christ by the Holy Spirit is the directing power in the church, and will continue to be, so long as she remains pure and loyal to her Lord.

No pleasures known to this world can compare with the joy and peace enjoyed by the true disciple of Christ in the discharge of his duties and the fellowship with the saints as he communes with God and Christ by the power of the Spirit. No wonder Paul wrote: "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." No, indeed; it is not the meat and drink that perish, which are so necessary to the life, vigor, and continuation of the body; but in the kingdom of God is found that spiritual meat and drink so needful to the life, health, development, and perpetuity of the soul in a state of peace and happiness, and without which there can be no such thing as the enjoyment of eternal life in the presence of God and Christ. A healthy spiritual condition gives us an earnest longing for a development in the things of God, without which we cannot and will not be satisfied. For this reason we are glad to make every needful sacrifice, and perform every necessary work, or bear patiently every required burden and endure afflictions patiently, in order to secure the longed for spiritual food and drink. For our encouragement no doubt it is written: "And blessed are all they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled with the Holy Ghost." Hopefully,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

ENGLEVALE, Kan., April 8.

Editors Herald:—My husband and I are the only saints around here, and have lived here about one and a half years. Over a year ago Bro. W. C. Cather preached for us about two weeks, the first preaching in this vicinity. He made some friends, and, as usual, a great many opposed the work. Last August Bro. J. M. Richards preached one sermon, at which time I was baptized. My husband had been in the church just one year. We have had no preaching since then, and are getting very anxious to hear more of the true gospel. We are expecting Brn. Baker and Beebe here sometime this summer.

I have been sick for some time. Brn. Richards and Davis came up yesterday and administered to me, and am feeling much better, and hope by God's help soon to be able to do my work again.

We attend Sunday school at Englevalle, held by the Church of God (Winebrennarians) people, most of them are very prejudiced. How we long for a good saints' Sunday school.

A few nights ago I had a dream I would like some one to interpret. I dreamed it was about sunset and that my oldest sister (who is not a saint) and family and myself and family were standing at the west end of the house talking. It was somewhat cloudy, and as the sun came out from behind the clouds it seemed to rock and shake in the sky, and suddenly there came something over it, round just like the sun, but having the appearance of blood, and at each side were little suns. It passed off just as suddenly as it came and the sun was again natural. As it passed from sight there was a girle formed around the north and west that had a silver lining and this was beset with many stars. It was a beautiful sight and I thought I turned to my sister and said, "This is surely a sign of the near coming of our dear Savior."

At another time while we were bowed in evening prayer, before retiring, my husband was leading in prayer, and I saw a beautiful cross and a messenger of light carrying it. It came before me with a bright silver light. The messenger was clothed in a pure white robe and it kept vanishing until it passed from my sight.

I am so thankful to God that he has given me this testimony of this great work. I know it is of God, and ask for the prayers of all the saints that I may be a faithful worker in the cause of Christ.

Yours in the one faith,
CORA M. CHRISTIE.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 9.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a protracted meeting which I started March 12 and closed April 30. Three were added to our number, one April 3, and a lady and gentleman May 6, heads of families. We feel led to rejoice in our God and Christ for his kindness towards our race. May 6 in the evening was beautiful sunshine and the lake water calm. Our missionary, J. M. Terry, was on the shore and William Strange was present and offered prayer, and a few others to witness the scene. Dear saints, the Lord is remembering Zion and bringing her comfort once more. Let us anchor our barks in the center and not be wrecked on the shore. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion.

Your brother in Christ,
G. H. GRAVES.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 5.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you some months ago I have been preaching in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and have been blessed in presenting the gospel message most of the time. While at Dennisport last February I received a very acceptable present of a new suit of clothes. The spirit that moves saints and friends to do acts of kindness to the traveling minister is of far more worth to him than the actual value of the gift received.

Our district conference at Providence, Rhode Island, April 29, was attended by a large number of saints, and they certainly were a good looking company. The work in the district does not show an increase as far as numbers are concerned, but there is an increase, we believe, in spiritual understanding that will tell in time to come.

Tuesday last I said good-bye to Annie and the little ones and took the Fall River boat for New York. "Rocked in the cradle of the deep;" thinking thus I fell asleep and awoke in New York. Same old town; hurry, slam, bustle. Two or three hours in New York, then on to Philadelphia. Quite a change; staid, quiet, time enough to breathe; good old Quaker town. Some changes, however, since the days of good old Penn. I hear that the Brighamites hold forth in the south end of this city (we are in the north end). I hope they are nice fellows; must visit them and see; too bad to leave them all alone (only eight of them I believe) in one end of such a big city.

I go to Baldwin, Maryland, to-day to attend the Sunday school convention, and trust we may have a good time. I am at Bro. Christy's, No. 2810 Mervine Street. When we convert the city of Philadelphia we will have 1,087,964 in the church. In hope,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

P. S.—Later. The Sunday school convention at Baldwin was a success and a very enjoyable time. Have just heard that the Mormon elders (Brighamites) have left Philadelphia.

WAYNE COURTHOUSE,
W. Va., May 9.

Editors Herald:—I see in Herald of May 3, 1899, a correspondence between Elder Heman C. Smith, of the Reorganized Church, and Elder Ben E. Rich, of the Utah Church, in regard to a church house that belonged to the Mormon Church, that was burned near Vanceburg, Louis County, Kentucky; Bro. Heman C. Smith asking Elder Rich if they accused the Josephites of burning said church as some of the papers intimated.

I am very glad that Elder Rich answered no, for I would hate to be accused of houseburning or being accessory thereto. Myself and Elder W. R. Odell, of Centerville, West Virginia, were the elders who were at Vanceburg, Kentucky, in 1897. I learned that Utah Mormonism was spreading there rapidly, and it being part of my mission field, I made up my mind to check it if I could; so I wrote to Bro. Joseph to send me literature to expose Utah Mormonism, and we went to Vanceburg and out to their place of worship, which was a schoolhouse (for they had no church in 1897) and appointed meeting for the next night, and when the time came the house was crowded to overflowing with Mormons, thinking we were new preachers from Utah; and when I began to draw the line of distinction they looked very straight down their noses, so we appointed meeting for the next night, and when the time came we had about half a dozen hearers; and at the close of meeting had no invitation any where to stay all night, so we had to either lie out or go and call up some nonmember of the church.

When they refused to hear me expose the deception in which they had been caught, I had to resort to some other means of stopping its spread, so I flooded the neighborhood with tracts exposing plural marriage, Adam-God worship, blood-atonement, and Christ not being begotten by the Holy Ghost; and H. O. Smith's tract on the "Necessity for a Reorganization," and gave a bundle of tracts to the editor of the county paper and asked him to write an article in his paper from some one of them every week; and I wrote the following affirmation and got the editor to publish it: "Resolved, that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. with young Joseph at its head, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, is the Church of Christ, and all other sects calling themselves Latter Day Saints are apostates from the Church." I sent this affirmation after it was published to Bro. G. T. Griffiths, president of mission, and asked him to send some single elder there to stay; but I guess he did not have one to send.

I feel thankful to the good Father that he blessed my labors and enabled me to stop the spread of Utah abominations in that county, though it did make it hot for its propagators. It was error that we went there to fight, not men and church houses. If it is the Lord's will we will go there in June and reap the fruit of our labors. It is not more than eighty miles from the place of this writing.

I came here 29th of April; preached every night except two and twice on Sunday; baptized a very promising young man and his wife on the 6th inst. at this place, and others will be baptized before I leave.

I am going to start to Lawrence County, Kentucky, to-morrow, and after a week will return here for a time, and then go to Vanceburg, Kentucky. The work seems to be onward in this part of the State, and I am expecting to baptize quite a number before leaving this end of the State. The saints are well and hopeful.

Your brother in the faith of the gospel,

SMITHLAND, Iowa, April 26.

Editors Herald:—Ever since I came into the church I have been a strong believer in the doctrine of tithing, as has my husband also. When we were married we decided that we would pay our tithing promptly, but in spite of our decision it was four years before the first tithing was paid.

During the first year we counted up and found we owed twelve dollars. This was before we began keeping house, and this has been considerably increased since. It was always a source of worry to me when I thought of our unpaid tithing; but like many others, I allowed myself to think we were excusable because we had no surplus, and would often say that the Lord knew we would be only too glad to pay tithing if we had anything to spare; but I felt sure that there had never been any money on hand we did not positively have to have.

In March of this year, however, we had been studying the law of tithing, when we read a letter by a brother, in the Ensign, in which he told his experience on the tithing question, and added that he had resolved that he would send in twenty-five cents each month if he could do no more. After reading this aloud I turned to my husband and said: "If we don't try some plan like that we will never get any tithing paid." So after some talk we resolved that even if it did take sacrifice we would send in at least a dollar each month.

In a very few days we sent the dollar on its way, and I felt much relieved, although there had been a number of long-felt wants clamoring loudly for that dollar; for the winter had been a hard one on men who depend on daily labor for sustenance, the weather having been so disagreeable that very little work was to be had. Yet I cannot say we missed the money much, and am sure that in a short time we were as well off as though we had spent it for our own needs; in fact, I think we were better off, as the fact that we had done our duty gave us more satisfaction than any other investment.

Before the next month's installment had been sent in we changed or amended our resolution to this effect: that while we would cling to the resolve to send a dollar each month, we would also add as much to it as we could reasonably spare, until all our back tithing was paid, which we hope to do this year; so the April installment was over one dollar.

I do not write this to boast of what we are doing, but to help others, as the brother's letter helped us. I hope many will make like resolutions. Make the amount as large as your income will allow; not that I would discourage those who can send only twenty-five cents, no, indeed; a dime is better than nothing if it is the best you can do; but don't break a dollar to get it and spend the rest for your own pleasure.

Praying daily for the advance of Zion,
Your sister,

Editors Herald:—A Methodist preacher by name of Jaratt, of Mansfield, Louisiana, is coming out here on the first Sunday in June, to villify "the Mormons." He will have a large turnout; he has had all other appointments called in, to give all the people a chance to hear him.

I do wish some of our elders could be there and reply to him. I expect to be there, the Lord being willing. It is nine miles from Logansport and eleven from Mansfield, on the Mansfield and Logansport road. I live two miles from Hickory Grove, where the service is to be.

I asked you all to pray with me; now I am ready to ask you to rejoice with me. It has pleased God to answer our prayers in restoring to me my boy. I have him now; to God be all the praise forever. I can say of a truth that blessings gained or rather received through severe trials are bright gems, and I praise God that I know that others were blessed as well as myself through my tribulations.

I have done my best to get the doctrine before the people. I got our Presbyterian preacher to distribute quite a number of Ensigns and Heralds for me at the church; he had been reading some, and he said, "If you want to get something good to read, come and get some of those papers." I close by asking an interest in your prayers.

SOUTHWEST MISSOURI THE LAND OF THE "BIG RED APPLE."

A number of letters of inquiry lately have been addressed to me. Each correspondent has asked a variety of questions about this part of country. Being a resident, perhaps I am much more able to intelligently answer these questions than others who have only visited or traveled through this locality. The essential advantages of any country are climate, water, fuel, fertility, market, and I shall treat this subject under these heads.

CLIMATE.—So far as my experience goes, I have never suffered more with heat here than I have in Iowa and Nebraska. The winters are much milder than in the above states. Occasionally, perhaps on an average of once in fifteen years, the mercury runs down to thirty-three degrees, but generally the thermometer gets no lower than twelve to fifteen degrees. Through the summer one is always insured a good sleep, for the dews are heavy, and the atmosphere cool and refreshing. I claim our climate is second to none in the United States.

WATER.—Water is of first importance everywhere, for without good water health cannot be insured to anyone. Beautiful, pure, refreshing springs abound in all parts of this country, and I have failed to yet find a well that furnishes poor water.

FUEL.—This is another very important factor, and one in which southwest Missouri is fully supplied. Families living here in the country can get all the fuel wanted for the hauling, and town residents can get good wood in the small villages at one dollar per cord delivered.

FERTILITY.—About the first question asked by parties who write with a view of coming here is: How much corn, wheat, etc., can I raise? Average crops here make about as follows, and seasons generally insure this amount: Corn yields from five to thirty bushels to the acre, owing to when it is planted, how cultivated, and how the soil has been managed. The natural average yield is about fifteen bushels per acre. Wheat yields from ten to twenty-three bushels per acre. Timothy hay makes from one to two tons of hay per acre. All kinds of grass does very well here, and good pastures can be made in every canyon, and on every hillside and plateau. Irish potatoes produce from seventy-five to two hundred bushels per acre, and we can compare with any place on the growing of sweet potatoes, grapes, strawberries, and all kinds of small fruit. Garden vegetables all do well.

MARKET.—Farmers who are able to hold products until spring can get the following cash prices at home market: Corn forty cents, wheat forty to sixty cents, hay seven to ten dollars per ton. Irish potatoes forty to fifty cents, sweet potatoes fifty to seventy-five cents; other things in proportion. Sheep and cattle bring good prices, hogs market at about four to five cents dressed.

ADAPTABILITY.—This is a fair country for cattle, sheep, and poultry. It is a poor country for hogs, horses, and grain raising, when compared with northern States, but is almost unsurpassed for fruit growing; good health, and easy ways to live.

COST OF LAND.—Well improved farms here near small towns are held at twenty five to forty dollars per acre, while near large town it sells from forty to one hundred dollars. Small farms with poor improvements can be bought at two to ten dollars per acre. Unimproved land at one to two dollars and fifty cents per acre. Pretty good homes—good enough to suit the average man—can be got for four hundred to five hundred dollars per eighty acres, smaller and larger farms at about the same proportion.

CHARACTER AND LAY OF THE LAND.—This part of the country is largely composed of ridges, canyons, valleys, plateaus; known as the Ozark Range, and in most places is covered with small flint rock. These rock have the appearance of having been broken into fragments by some terrific explosion. Ridge and valley land here is very productive; plateau, or what is commonly known as flat land, as a rule is free from stone, and consists of a sandy-clay soil, which retains moisture well, and by proper crop rotation and fertilization can be made to grow fine crops of anything.

WHAT IT WAS AND WHAT IT IS TODAY.—Fifteen years ago, I came to this country, and after a stay of two years I left the wilderness, and at that time would not have taken the best unimproved quarter section of land as a gift. I can now show farms in my locality which have been under cultivation for six years that were purchased for fifty cents to one dollar per acre, and set in fruit trees that homeseekers have made a cash offer on of forty dollars per acre, and then couldn't buy it. There is many a poor farm here, and there are many of them in Iowa, Nebraska, Dakota, and all other states. I have noticed in a number of cases small log huts, twelve to fifteen fruit trees, and a field of five to twenty acres, which after being purchased by some fellow who was not afraid of work, soon presented a neat home. The native people here, as a class, seem to be satisfied with just enough farming ground to raise corn for corn bread, hominy, and pork; and right by the side of these folks, who seem to have nothing, some Iowa, Pennsylvania, or Illinois family will settle, and in the course of a few years will have plenty of ground opened up, fair frame house and barns, a start in stock, and things will present a prosperous appearance. Wherever this country has been settled with people from the north, who possess vigor, patience, and industry, it favorably compares with many other places.

COMPARED.—Glance backward to the shores of the Atlantic and view the landscape as it spread out before the colonists in the early settlement of this hemisphere, contrast it then with the blooming fields of to-day. Turn your eye towards the magnificent homes, visit yonder cities with their beautiful streets, paved walks, and towering structures; listen to the voices of multitudes, and you will get an idea of the strength and power of industry. Likewise, the deserts of the west have been changed into golden fields and pleasure resorts. The untiring hand of industry can produce similar results in southwest Missouri. The trouble with the average class is they wait too long—delay till men of more courage have "broken the ice," cut the first tree, plowed the first furrow, planted the first crop; then it's too late, the opportunity has been lost. I know men with large families who work in the cities for good wages, and who are regularly paid in cash, almost broken down physically by being slaves to circumstances. Some of these men, though honest at heart, are unable to meet each month's obligations, and are left in debt for groceries, house rent, etc., who, if they had said family out among our southwest Missouri "good for nothing" hills, rocks, and canyons, could live fully as well, pay their debts, and not be obliged to work half so hard.

A POOR MAN'S COUNTRY.—The main reason this is called "a poor man's country" is because so many are poor here. A corn bread and hominy living is about all the native people of this country care for, and they seem to be satisfied with just that, and care for no more. This mainly accounts for so many slug-gard-looking places. But every country has its share of poor people, and I fail to see the difference between living in a well to do country and looking at pretty places and things that belong to somebody else, and living in the back woods, seeing but little, and having a share of this world's comforts, unless the latter is much preferable.

COMING TO THIS COUNTRY.—I have a neighbor, one mile north of me, who came from Virginia four years ago.

He informs me that he had but one dollar and fifty cents in cash, and everything they possessed outside of that amount they had packed in a four by four foot box. His family consists of himself, wife, and four small children; still in this short period he has accumulated a little money, two horses, one cow, a few chickens; geese, and hogs, and has his family well clothed, and enough provisions ahead for one year's supply.

There are others to whom I could refer who have done as well, some worse, and some much better. Many come here, are dissatisfied, and leave; while many others who have lived in a number of states think southwest Missouri is the easiest and most pleasant place they have yet found. I know a number of well to do families who moved into this country six, ten, and fifteen years ago, who could have moved out at any time, but they are here yet and insist on staying. But all this being considered, I advise each one to come and thoroughly examine for himself. Do not come here and then blame some one for misleading you. This country is good enough for me, but it may not suit you. If you move here without first coming to look over this country, don't fail to come with enough cash to buy you a small place and enough for provisions for two years. I'll say five hundred to one thousand dollars. Work here is scarce and wages very low.

FREE BOOKS AND PAPERS.—Send for copies of "Missouri and Kansas Farmer," Kansas City, Missouri. It will tell you a great deal about southwest Missouri. If you wish to obtain a few illustrated pages filled with facts about this country, write to J. E. Lockwood, Kansas City, Missouri, and instruct him to send you all the information he has at hand. This country has the largest apple, peach, pear, cherry, quince, and grape and berry orchards in the world. Remember land is now from one to forty dollars per acre, and plenty of it at two fifty to ten dollars; but it can't stay there long, and my advice is to get your home now if you wish to live here. I am no real estate agent. I have eight hundred acres of land, but none to sell; so don't think that I have a "hoe to grind." In conclusion I will say, however, if you want the best climate, purest water, most pleasant summer nights, plenty of fruit, a healthy locality, and an easy place to live, come to the Ozarks. Any party writing to me must enclose ten cents in stamps to pay for stationery, postage, time, and trouble. My business now necessitates the writing of fifty letters each week, and I cannot give outside correspondence attention unless paid for it.

CLAIMS OF DISCIPLEISM NOT VALID.

The claims of Discipleism to being a restoration of Christianity after the long night of apostasy are no more valid than those of other reform movements that arose out of that apostasy, and with which it is now compromising and thereby rapidly losing its original identity. It denies its own identity with original gospel Christianity, by restricting the original gospel form of church organization to the apostolic age. That had apostles, prophets, and other divinely called and inspired officers, for its ministry (Eph. 4:8-13). Its pastors and deacons, "helps and governments," were "set in the church" by divine power as well.

Ancient gospel Christianity as a grand organism lived and moved, wrought and accomplished, because animated by the Holy Ghost, in actual gifts (1 Cor. 12) and office work. (See John 7:37-39; 14:15-17, 26; 15:26, 27; 16:12-14.) But these gifts and this office work of the Holy Ghost is by all Disciple ministers restricted to the ancient apostolic age. If, therefore, the Disciple Church is neither the organization nor the spirit composing ancient Christianity, what is it? Body and spirit was the sum total of the ancient gospel church. If modern Discipleism is neither that body nor that spirit, how can it be that restored? By this "restrictive" argument modern Disciples defeat their own claim to being the restoration of ancient gospel Christianity.

The office work of the Holy Ghost was to "preach" (Acts 1:4; Mark 16:15; 1 Cor. 2:1-5; John 16:13; 1 Pet. 1:10-12); to foretell future events, to reveal the things of God, to call the ministry. (Acts 13:1-5; 1 Cor. 7:17; 2 Tim. 1:13, 14, 6; Heb. 5:4, 5; Rev. 22:17.) "Let him that heareth," the Spirit, "say, Come," or preach. To heal the sick (James 5:14, 15); to advocate God's cause. (John 14:26; 16:8-10.) Its office work is to give life to the body and enable all the officers, members, to fulfill their designs, as the human spirit does the physical body and its members.

As the human body cannot live and act without the human spirit, no more can the church, Christ's mystic body, without the Holy Spirit. The word of God alone will no more make alive the church and enable it to fulfill its lawful offices than his word alone, or human language alone, will animate a corpse, and make it live and act out its design, without the human spirit. (See Gen. 2:7; 1 Kings 17:21, 22; James 1:26.)

If modern Discipleism could evolve an organic body resembling in full, in form, the church organism of ancient days, if done independent of and apart from an act of God authorizing such organism, it would not be ancient Christianity restored, any more than any other unauthorized imitation; and until animated by the Holy Ghost would be but a human production, an unauthorized corpse.

Now any such thing as an act of God, a divine interposition, or a new revelation, a grant, or commission, by which the church could be reproduced, organized, or restored,—all such commission or act is by Discipleism restricted to the apostolic age.

So here they are admitting the apostasy and consequent disorganization of the anciently organized church, and at the same time claiming to be that church restored; and yet denying all commission from God to restore, denying all new revelation from God, the only medium through which a commission could reach them!

They are not the ones to whom the original commission was given. And at the same time (and if they did claim to be doing a work identical in character as that the New Testament ministry were authorized to do, they are not doing it) they deny the right of themselves or any other church to be the same in organization as the original church. Also, they deny that the same Holy Ghost in its office work is necessary now.

Now since, according to their own claim, they are neither in body, spirit, nor commission identical with that described in the New Testament, what are they religiously?

They could not be a "succession" of the original New Testament Church and be so dissimilar to it in every cardinal point and principle. In all the points herein mentioned modern Discipleism disclaims either similarity or identity. They must of necessity therefore be a branch from some other vine than ancient Christianity.

A change in organic form and power, if legitimate, of an original organism, implies a change in the constitutional law of such organism. This is a necessary truth. Try it in the case of any government, either physical, political, or religious. All thinkers recognize this truth. Did not original Disciple reformers condemn every single form of church organization then existing because they did not, as they asserted, agree in spirit and letter with the Bible? Only the power that ordains a constitution can legally change it for any reason. Men have taken liberties with the gospel law that they dare not take with the law and Constitution of our country. If this statement is not true, why are there so many forms of church government existing, no two of which are alike, and none of them in the least resembling the one described in the gospel word? It is no wonder that Samuel Fallows, Episcopal Bishop, in looking over the field of church forms of governments religious, as existing to-day, declared in a sermon delivered by himself recently, "The church must not be confounded with Christianity. The latter is infinitely grander than the former." This statement is as true as any truth can be. But why is Christianity "infinitely grander than" the church? Just because God is the author of the gospel—Christianity—while finite man, poor dying puny man, is the author of those churches.

God's Church (Matt. 16:18; Acts 2:47; 1 Cor. 12:27, 28), with every member set in the body as it pleases him, with its apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, bishops, teachers, deacons, helps and governments, and the members walking in the light of the divine law and endowed with the gifts of the Holy Ghost, is just as "infinitely" grand, as the infinitely grand gospel Christianity in which it is founded, lives, moves, and has its being; the church being the divinely grand outgrowth of the principles of that gospel, the legitimate outgrowth or result of its operation.

The product of a constitution legitimately cannot be less grand than the principles from which it is produced. Is the United States in legitimate operation less grand than its Constitution?

It is not putting the proposition too strong to state that Discipleism, as an organism, is no higher nor diviner in origin than the Baptists or Episcopalianism. Discipleism has no more divine commission than they. All had equal access to the Bible. It commissions the ministry of all other denominations from the Catholic down through all other classes and churches, as truly as it does their ministry. To the ministers of all other churches it says: "Go ye and preach," as truly as it says so to Disciple ministers. If not, why not? Have Disciples an exclusive patent, or grant on the Bible? When and where did they get this exclusive right? If they have not the exclusive right to the Bible to the other denominations, and as all others have access to it equally with them, they have no superiority over any of the other denominations, either in origin, divinity, authority, or organization. If all the others are purely human organizations, since the authority of all, being from the same book, are all from the same source, then the Disciples are a purely human organization also.

Disciples have no escape from these conclusions.

They do not as an organism antedate A. D. 1828. Their organization as a church is nowhere found in the Bible—in outline description. They claimed no new commission at that date from God to organize anew. The membership of their church prior to that date and on August, 1828, were members and had been of the Baptist Church. What was the new organization? Congregational; each congregation having elders and deacons. What was the Baptist organization? Congregational, each congregation has elders and deacons. What was and is the difference between the Disciple and Baptist Church organizations? There was and is really no difference. Had not the elders of the Baptist Church just as much right to baptize as the Disciple elders? Oh! but they do not baptize "for the remission of sin," while the Disciple elders do (Acts 2:38)! Then those baptized by Baptist elders do not receive the remission of their sins? Yes! (?) Then, what is the difference between those baptized by the two classes of elders in the outcome? All get saved? Yes. Then why the division and continual contention between the two churches, as all are saved finally? Have the Disciples a different and grander salvation in the finality than the Baptists?

The authority, the organization, and the final salvation of both churches is the same; why, and where is there a difference? The morality of the Baptists is just as high as that of the Disciples. But the idea continually reverts in the mind of the Disciple, the Baptist does not baptize "for the remission of sins." But he is bound to concede that the Baptists receive the remission of their sins, or else the Baptist Church is a mighty host of sinners and will be damned! For we all believe that sinners cannot be saved in their sins. What more validity, then, is there in the claims of the Disciples to be the restoration of original Christianity than there is in the claims of any other modern church? No more authority than the Baptists or others.

The church of the New Testament, was organized by the supervision of the Holy Ghost direct. (See Matt. 16:18; Eph. 4:8-13.) It was "framed" by the Savior of the body. (Eph. 2:20-22.) Each minister received divine and individual commission. (See Matt. 10:5; John 5:44; Acts 13:1-5; 20:17-28; 1 Tim. 1:18; 2 Tim. 1:6; Heb. 5:4, 5.) That church was a unity—was one, in commission, in faith, in hope, in spirit, in organization; it was a "house," a "body," a divine temple, the bride of Christ; hence an organic head on the earth (See Rev. 12:1, 2); "a crown of twelve stars" on the "head" of the woman—bride, composed of local congregations, yet all actuated by the one Spirit, the highest local authority an elder, or "high priest" (See Heb. 5:1-5), "after the order of" or like Melchisedec, who presided over the righteous people of God in Abraham's day, (verse 10 and Heb. 7:1-4.) And above these local priests and elders was a divine threefold bond of unity binding the whole together in one, and centralizing in Christ. This threefold bond was composed of evangelists, prophets, and apostles; these three classes of officers sustaining a relation to the whole body or church in general, somewhat as the United States legislative, judicial, and executive, constitute the bond of ministerial unity in the government. And as without this bond of unity in the government, each State would be an independent sovereignty with itself, and be without organic unity with the other States; so in the church, without the threefold bond of unity, each congregation would be an independent and sovereign church within itself, and there would be as many complete, independent churches of, or bodies of Christ, as there would be congregations. But one head for so many bodies would be an anomaly! And if God so organized he would manifest less order and wisdom than is manifest in the governments of men! God recognized this order, this official channel of authority, when giving a revelation to the seven Asiatic churches. God gave the revelation to his Son Jesus Christ; Jesus passed it on to John the apostle, and John the apostle to the angels, elders or presidents of the churches, and through them to their charges respectively. (See Rev. chapters 1, 2, 3.)

To remove the threefold bond of organic unity—the legislative, judicial, and executive departments from the body politic—would be to disorganize our republic, and reduce it to a number of separate, distinct, and independent sovereignties; and in like manner would it be with the church as described in the New Testament, to take away its threefold bond of organic unity—evangelists, prophets, and apostles—as "set in the church," constitutionally (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:8-13), would be to disorganize the church and reduce it to separate, distinct, and petty local and independent sovereignties.

And this illustrates precisely what our Disciple friends are doing, and their advanced ideas of church building for God. But their imperfectly organized church, offered as a substitute for the original New Testament organization, is about on a par with a man attempting to show that a petty sovereignty, patterned after one of our State Constitutions, is the United States government; and when you would show him the constitution, ask him where the threefold bond of organic unity is, where is the executive, legislative, and judicial departments, and he would wisely answer, of course,

"Oh, they are done away, because no longer needed!" "They were the builders of the government." "That once accomplished, they are no longer necessary, you see." "They were the builders of the church, and not parts of the building." "Not parts of the building."

Yes; I see! God did not set apostles, prophets, and evangelists in the church as a part of it; they were only the scaffolding, and tools that God used while building.

"Yes; that's it."

And when he got it finished he laid these things all aside as no longer necessary.

Yes. The building was "completed," "finished" at the end of the apostolic age, and of course will never need any more repairs, even.

And were the pastors, bishops, and deacons that God used as builders then just scaffolding and tools also? (See Eph. 4:11, 12; Phil. 1:1.)

God "set" the apostles, prophets, and evangelists "in the church," just as much as he set the elders and bishops, helps, governments, and deacons "in the church." Why not restrict these last mentioned officers also to the apostolic age? Where did God say either class of officers he set in his church was to be restricted to the apostolic age? Just nowhere. Never!

Now the facts in the case are these. Several classes of officers, from apostles to deacons, were set in the church as parts of the building; as the eyes, ears, mouth, nose, hands, and feet are set in the human body as necessary parts of that organism. And Paul's entire argument setting forth God's "more excellent way," than man's way of building his church, as found in the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians, and in Romans, is based wholly upon this divine immutable truth. God is the builder in the case of both church and human body. And it is divine and infinite wisdom that determines in both cases what shall be the constituent and constitutional members and parts of the great whole; and when men begin to differ from God about the church organization, seeking to change or improve on it, they simply get ridiculous.

Another favorite dodge of my Disciple friends, when attempting to evade the Bible plan of church organization, is to assume that the spiritual gifts and church officers as set in the Lord's church, and with which its members are endowed, as set forth in the Bible (see 1 Cor. chapters 12, 13, 14; Eph. chap. 4), are the things necessary for the church only during the apostolic age; and that they are the "childish things" referred to in 1 Corinthians, thirteenth chapter, verse eleven. That these "childish things" are not necessary now, because the church is no longer a child. It is now a man! Yes; its got to be several men, has it not? Several hundred pretty good sized organizations now existing claim to be it! Are not all these claimants equally valid in their claims?

The assumption at the base of this argument is, that the condition of perfection referred to there by Paul has arrived, that the church has attained to the manhood state there referred to. Suppose that we admit for argument sake that the assumption be true. We then ask, Is a child born with any members that it does not need when it attains to manhood? If so, Why seek to supply an unfortunate loss of a member or members by the substitutes of wooden or cork limbs, or glass eyes? Why not count it a good fortune, rather than a misfortune, to dispose of these members of the human body, just as you do about the members God set in the church anciently, and do without them entirely in the former as in the latter case? Now the truth in this argument is, the apostle in above citation uses an illustration, and in the illustration, the members of the body are not the "childish things" there referred to. The little child when laying aside the playthings is not laying aside his members at all! He does not necessarily cut off hands and feet, when laying aside the toy and hatchet for the ax, plow, and hoe! He does not lay aside his head or eye because as "a man" he sees through clearly, what he only partially comprehended when a little child! Paul here contrasts the church, mortal, imperfect in knowledge, with all the spiritual gifts, both the official and lay, with the immortal, triumphant state of the church after the coming in glory of our Savior; and knowledge "in part" gives way to, or is swallowed up in perfect knowledge after the resurrection. Hence, Paul says, "But then shall I know even as also I am known." Until that transcendent period and state arrives we need the "childish things" of the Spirit and kingdom of God. Here, as on other points, this restrictive sophistication of Discipleism fails utterly.

In the apostolic age the church had more law or scripture than it has today. We now have but two out of the "many" gospels that were written anciently, or three (Luke 1:1); namely, Matthew, Mark, and Luke.* They had three epistles of Paul to the Corinthians; we have but two (1 Cor. 5:9). They had two epistles of Paul to the Ephesians; we but one (Eph. 3:3, 4). They had two to the Colossians; we but one (Col. 4:16, 17). And they had Jude's epistle on the common salvation (Jude 3), and the prophecy of Enoch, (Jude 14), which we have not. They had seven official gifts of the Holy Ghost and nine inspirational lay gifts of the Spirit, which we have not. (Eph. 4:8-14; Phil. 1:1; 1 Cor. 12:1-11.) All these officers of the church, and the membership, were actuated by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, in his office work, as portrayed by the Savior in John, chapters 14, 15, and 16. And these the popular religious institutions have not now, and it is argued with all ability that they can command that all these gifts and inspirational powers are restricted to the apostolic age.

Now, if this be true, and the church then with a more perfect, more fully revealed will of God, more scripture than we have, with a greater number of divinely commissioned and inspired officers, and with all the spiritual gifts, wisdom, faith, knowledge, tongues, interpretation of tongues, discerning of spirits, healings, prophecy, and miracles, visions, dreams, and angelic ministrations, if the church with Jesus Christ thus walking with and in the midst of her (Rev. 1:13-18), if, with all these, she only knew "in part" and prophesied "in part," only saw "through a glass darkly" (1 Cor. 13), do those not having this divine aid see even "through a glass darkly?" Can we without these endowments see at all, in the sense in which the ancients saw? No. The degree of inspiration they had, with all their gifts and scriptures, constituted the darkened glass. Are we better off then without this darkened glass? Can you look directly into the face of the sun, shining in all his brightness undimmed by mists, with the naked eye? Can we behold the glories and brightness of the immortal state and "see" the glories of the immortalized saints, the redeemed hosts without any degree of divine inspiration whatever? Can anyone see God without inspiration? No. Gifts of the Holy Ghost and inspiration are but the results of gospel faith (see Mark 9:18, 19; 16:14-18; Acts 2:38, 39; 10:44, 45; 11:15-17; Rom. 12:6; Heb. 11:4-6, 32-39), and this being true, as all these scriptures prove, we may logically and without presumption conclude that where these gospel results are not, the gospel in its original simplicity, fullness, and power is not taught or in operation.

A partial cause will not produce full results.

It was by a degree of the inspiration of revelation that the Apostle Peter was able to declare of our Savior, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God (Matt. 16:16), and Jesus there tells Peter that it was on the "rock," or principle, by which he became "God manifest," or "revealed" "in the flesh" (1 Tim. 3:16; John 14:8-11), that he would build his church.

The power of the Omnipotent Deity, by which he reveals himself to man's comprehension by Jesus Christ in his character and attributes, including the God revealed in the flesh, and all the gospel principles, graces, and virtues, and including the office work of the Holy Ghost, and which of necessity embraces ever present revelation, is that rock on which the foundation of the church is laid, and is that against which even "the gates of hell" prevailed not, when Jesus by his keys of priesthood authority went and invaded that realm, and offered thereby gospel liberty to the prisoners there. (See 1 Peter 3:18-20; 4:5, 6; John 5:29; Isa. 49:8, 9; Ezek. 32:21; Rev. 1:18.)

It was by virtue of that spiritual power of revelation that Peter, like other prophets, made that great declaration, and had the truth of Christ's messiahship revealed to him, and only those who obtain a like revelation can make a like declaration. Peter here declared a fundamental truth. He did it by direct revelation from the Father.

Discipleism assumes that Peter's declaration is a "confession" only; and on the assumption asserts that the church is builded on the confession of Peter. And it expects all who enter the church to do so by making the same confession. But are they willing to say to each convert, "Blessed art thou," "for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee,"—no former prophet or apostle, no modern minister, but the Father?

Any truth must be revealed and declared before it is believed and confessed. All must agree to this. Can anyone believe or confess the gospel before it is revealed and declared?

The righteousness of God is revealed in the gospel from faith to faith; it is therefore a divine fountain from which, to the humble obedient follower of Christ, there ever flows the divine truth and light essential to their well-being. For the gospel is not "in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance" (1 Thess. 1:5).

Since the Holy Ghost is one of the cardinal elements of the gospel, and since it is the chief mission of the Holy Ghost to reveal the will of God, both as it relates to his general redemptive work, and as it relates to the salvation and spiritual growth, development, and perfection of individuals, it logically follows that where continued revelation from God is not, there the gospel is not.

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.—John 14:21.

But God hath revealed them [things of God] unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.—1 Cor. 2:10.

Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth

Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. . . . But the manifestation [revelation C. S.] of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal. . . . For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit."—1 Cor. 12: 3, 7, 13.

The gospel conditions are "keep my commandments," and the unfailing promise is, "I will manifest myself unto him." Therefore, where the Spirit of revelation is not restored, ancient Christianity is not restored. We would know it now by knowing what it was as originally existing.

Discipleism is getting so it questions the propriety of its advocates debating with the Latter Day Saint ministry on what it deems Bible questions, at least as the saints view them. Some few months ago the Christian Register, published in Missouri, editorially instructed Disciple ministers, and at some length, as to what questions they should debate with our elders on; and to be very careful not to discuss the saints' views of Bible questions, but force us to the issues of the prophetic calling and claims of Joseph Smith, and the origin and claims to divinity of the record known as the Book of Mormon.

Disciples do not seem to realize that the gospel, and the Bible itself, depend on the validity of the prophetic claims of Jesus and all the other prophets whose writings compose, largely, the Bible record.

Was Jesus Christ, and is he the greatest of all prophets? Latter Day Saints say, Yes. Is he a living prophet or witness to-day? Does he yet hold and magnify his office of prophet? If Disciples believe he is, and does so magnify his office, they believe in a living prophet, and on principle are one in faith with the Latter Day Saints. But if they do not believe Jesus magnifies his prophetic office now, they lower the claims and office of our Savior by their faith and profession! Now to those who believe that Jesus does magnify his office of Prophet, Priest, and King, his official office is a reality; that is, to them. Jesus prophesies, for them he intercedes, now, and over them he rules now by his word, and through the Holy Ghost by new revelation. Jesus magnified his prophetic office, as also his office of creator, during the ages preceding his first advent into the world as well as since his incarnation. And it is by virtue of his active administration in his prophetic office that other men acted in the prophetic office subordinately to him.

Thus all the prophets from "righteous Abel unto" Zechariah and Malachi, prophesied by "the spirit of Christ which was in them." (1 Peter

1:11; Matt. 23:35.) Moses, the typical mediator of Israel (Deut. 18:15), chose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God," out in the land of Midian, rather than occupy the palaces of Egyptian royalty (Ex. 2:21), esteeming the reproach of Christ (did anyone ever suffer the reproach of Christ except they espoused his cause?) greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward (Heb. 11:25, 26). All those holy men, seers, revelators, saints, and prophets, had their prophetic eye on our Savior (Matt. 13:17; John 8:56; Acts 2:25, 26; Acts 7:52.) Even the heathen king of Babylon knew "the Son of God," as he attended his tried ones (Dan. 3:25). He is the one who "formed the earth, and made it," and who "declared" from the ancient time, and who foretold the things that should be; the one also to whom "every knee shall" yet bow and "confess" him to be the prophet, as well as ruler, king. (Isa. 45:17-23; Phil. 2:10, 11.)

From Christ all those prophets from Abel through all the ages were commissioned. And during the days of his humility he continued to exercise his prophetic office. And after his ascension to glory, he still continued to occupy that infinitely important function, so that all the prophetic passages found in the New Testament, as revealed to the saints on the Eastern Continent, and those found in the Book of Mormon, as given to the people of the Lord anciently in America, some of which are now in process of fulfillment, owe their existence to his prophetic foreknowledge. He is "the Apostle and High Priest of our profession" (Heb. 3:1); therefore, being "a son over his own house," body, or church, holds the right to set in his church apostles and high priests to minister among men in his name. (Heb. 5:1-4; 1 Cor. 12:28, 29; Acts 13:1-5; 14:14.)

By virtue of being "a prophet" (Matt. 13:57), after ascending "on high, he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men." "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors; and teachers." And the permanency of the offices and officers, as thus ordained to be the official constituents of the one body or church of Christ, members of it, and their divine purpose and continuance, is thus declared by divine statement to be:—

For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.—Eph. 4:12, 13.

Apostles and prophets are essential constitutional parts of original Christianity, and their office work in the church are essential "till," Paul says, the day of perfection has been attained by the saints. Surely to attain to "the measure of the stature of the fulness of" resurrected, immortalized Christ, will not be attained to till the resurrection day!

To refuse to believe in prophets in the church, therefore, is to deny the gospel faith on this point—to deny that Christ now exercises one of the chief functions of his divine and glorious office, and, consequently, to affirm that his glory has decreased since his exaltation in heaven! But when John the Revelator was on the lonely island, the heavens were opened unto him and revealed the fact that Jesus was yet occupying in the great calling of prophet, God the Father was opening the future to his Son Jesus Christ (Rev. 1:1); was yet communicating to his suffering children prophetic consolation, and reproof to the unfaithful ones, and no man will be permitted under penalty (chapter 22:18) to add to that prophecy then given, by denying that Jesus is still magnifying his prophetic office now, by setting prophets in his church as formerly. So that in all things Jesus has the preëminence—this prophetic as well—and that in this as in other respects, we can with the Apostle Paul, write: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to day, and for ever." Immutably a prophet; nay, The Prophet. His preëminent office as prophet implies other prophets. It always has (see the entire Bible). His presidency over his body—the church—implies this, just as his presiding office of "chief shepherd" (Heb. 13:20; 1 Pet. 2:25; 5:4) imply subordinate shepherds, or his bishopric, that of bishops. Therefore if these officers cease to exist in the church when it exists, it implies that his office in those regards has become inoperative, and run out.

Prophets as parts of the official organism of the church of God is cardinal—is a living issue with all the children of our Prophet, Priest, and King—Jesus; and the Latter Day Saints are on the loyal side of the subject as it relates to our faith in Jesus Christ.

We "are complete in Him."

Now, Mr. Editor, I had not intended to write at such length, when beginning this letter, but it is sometimes profitable to develop as evolution is in process, and it may be so in this case.

Nor must you consider that this is too personal in character for publication, seeing the Christian Index, the Register, and the Evangelist have recently been seeking to throw the Latter Day Saints onto the defensive regarding their religious faith. And further, they scruple somewhat as to the propriety of allowing both sides of the questions of difference between us to appear in their columns.

They usually have room for what is said against our position, but seldom have space for our defense.

For justice and truth,

C. SCOTT.

CHURCH GRIEVANCES.

What a disagreeable thing it is to visit, or be compelled to remain in a house where the children quarrel; and tenfold worse when the parents enter into the wrangle, and one or the other call upon you to side with them in the issue. Still worse when the children of Christ—members of his body, will allow themselves to pander to the delight of the adversary of souls, by entering into the spirit of warfare and strife with each other. Oh! the cruel wounds, the torturing heartaches, and the bitter tears that are sure to follow. Oh! what delicious food for the Devil; while angels, sympathizing angels, look on and mourn. Mourn for the injured one, whose heart is being torn, and spirit grieved. Mourn for the injuring one, because of the anguish and remorse that must follow. Mourn for the young associates, whose tender minds become bewildered, and hearts embittered, and faith weakened. Mourn for those out of the fold, who sickening of the world with all its sorrow, disappointments, and degradation, are searching for a place in which they can find peace, joy, and rest for their souls. And well they might mourn, for no worse thing can befall the household of faith.

Temptation may overtake and overcome a member, and he may fall. The body will grieve; but remember, it was Jesus that said, Go thy way and sin no more. Persecution may clamor loudly, and injuries rain upon us from without; but this can be utilized for the strengthening of character. Poverty may lay his lean, scrawny hand upon us; but we can remember that "He hath not where to lay his head," and an opportunity is given for the "cup of cold water" and that "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least," etc., "ye have done it unto me." Sickness may make a heavy demand upon our sympathies, and perhaps upon our physical endurance; but with it comes the beautiful angel-watcher, and the sweetness of the joy of the foretaste of the life to come may accompany the burning fever and the throbbing pain. Death itself may come, and with cruel, icy hand snatch from our midst the most talented, or the most beloved; yet in so doing, the avenues may be opened for greater usefulness for the living, and a drawing nigh unto God. But when bitterness and strife enter the hearts of the members, then the prayer meetings may gather, but it is sounding brass and tinkling cymbals. The bread and wine may be passed, but it is condemnation. Long prayers may be made, but it is hypocrisy. Paul may preach, but Apollos cannot water, because God cannot give any increase. Bitterness and strife among the members is the dry rot in the potato field; the weavel in the wheat; the cankerworm in the orchard. The end thereof is corruption, ruin, and death.

I read in a late Herald of a branch that is evolving from the ruins of an internal difficulty. Let me rejoice with you. Let me congratulate you, on having some one that is great among you, for some one has ruled his or her own spirit, and such are greater than those who take a city. Think not that it is a sign of weakness to make a concession. It matters not who is most to be blamed, or in the greater wrong. The best, the noblest, the most lovable one will give in first every time. We care not a straw who "began it," or who said and did the most. The one who first sought to make peace, and offer and ask for forgiveness, is the one who captures the hearts of all but bulldogs and prize fighters. Neither one of which is a Christian, for except we have the Spirit of Christ we are none of his.

A SONG OF PRAISE.

In the multitude of my thoughts within me thy comforts delight my soul.—Psalm 94:19.

"O, how I love Thy law," one sang of old,

"It is my meditation day and night."

To-day its truths in majesty unfold,

Opening their comforts to our wondering sight;

Through the wild maze of things, and rush of strife,

A prophet's voice the surging tumult braves,

The everlasting gospel breathes its life,

And o'er earth's babel scenes its banner waves.

Glad tidings for the meek, the poor, we hear,
Redress for wrongs and woes, for toil and pain;

The restoration of all good is near,

For Christ is coming back to earth again.

His heralds spread the joyful news abroad,

Nor shall their voice of love and warning cease

Until the world has heard the gracious word—
Harmonious prelude to the reign of peace.

Then Israel Messiah shall behold

All in the past,—their exile, blood, and tears;

They see the gospel mysteries unfold,

With the glad dawning of millennial years;
Still onward through the ages then to come,

Deep in the spirit mansions of the dead, (a)
"The word of faith" shall penetrate their gloom,

And bid the pensive prisoners forth be led.

For yet shall every son of Adam's race

Confess Jesus is Lord, and bow the knee, (b)
Bringing with their glad songs of thankful praise,

Harvests of glory, gracious God, to Thee!
Behold, how vast the wisdom and the love

That framed a plan, compassing every one,
Reaching all depth beneath, all height above,

And blending with the songs nearest his throne.

This treasure is in earthen vessels here,

To shepherds angels sang its Author's birth,

And men of humblest rank he chose to bear
His name to every kindred of the earth.

The word, in the beginning, was with God;

In heaven's high councils the grand plan was wrought;

Speak not of nonessentials in this code,

But joyfully obey what Jesus taught.

Faith and repentance, thus the word begins,

With earnest love the heaven-sent teacher stands;

Be baptized for remission of your sins,

Receive the Holy Ghost under their hands;
Then shall you know the message is from heaven—

Then shall you feel the gospel's gifts and power,

Joint heirs with Christ, the holy earnest given,

The riches of eternity are yours.

A heavenly guide to give you light and strength,

The world's dark frown and bitter scorn to bear,

And through all tribulation bring at length,
To dwell with Christ, and in his blessings share.

His blessings! O how gently steals the sound
O'er that mute woe which had no tears-to shed,

For in his plan the welding link is found (c)
Between the living and their kindred dead.

Hail! sovereign balm for every breaking heart;

Hail! end of all perplexing doubts and fears,
The earthborn clouds which veiled his purpose, part,

And life's solved problem his bright impress bears.

Then "come ye weary," thus your Savior spoke,

Stumble not over creeds men have compiled,

(b) Philippians 2: verses 10, 11; 1 Corinthians, chapter 15; Doctrine and Covenants, section 92, old edition.

CHARTER OAK.

Dear Sisters:—I enjoy the Home Column very much. Such good advice! I have been strengthened by reading the many good letters. I am one of the isolated ones, being about seventeen miles from a branch. While reading some of the letters, I have said to myself, I will do likewise! I believe if we live the best we can, and try to teach our children the gospel, God will recognize our work and reward us accordingly.

I also believe in telling our children the truth whenever they ask about things. When my little daughter asks me about things I cannot make plain to her, I tell her to wait until she is older, then I will tell her all about it, and she is satisfied.

I have two little daughters intrusted to my care, and I desire to be a good mother, teaching them that which is right at all times, and set them a good example. But oh! I fall short of doing this so many times, that I become almost discouraged. Then it is that I long for church and Sunday school privileges. But I am thankful that the Lord will strengthen and bless the isolated saints whenever they live worthy of that blessing, and ask him. I am determined, by the help of God, to live better in the future than I have in the past.

Please remember me in your prayers. I ask you to especially pray for my dear husband, who is not in the church, that he may seek after the truth, and feel the necessity of obeying the gospel. Dear sisters, I ask you to make this a special subject of prayer. I do so desire that he should obey the gospel.

Your sister in Christ,

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Please remember an earnest request for prayer in behalf of Sr. Sarah Weldon, that she may be restored to health if it is God's will, for she has the great responsibility of a large family and an afflicted husband. Remember her, is the earnest request of Sr. M. Young.

CLEARWATER.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I feel impressed to write to you. I was greatly impressed this morning with the thought of turning the hearts of the children to the fathers, and the hearts of the fathers to the children, and this thought came to me. If a child asks for a favor, and it could be given it, and it is not hurtful to it, the favor should be cheerfully granted; for if we as parents do not cheerfully what we can, it will after awhile chill the love of our children, and so turn their hearts away.

So, dear sisters, let us keep the love of our children by doing cheerfully what we can without going too far in that direction. If we scold and fret at what we do, the children will hunt a more cheerful countenance and so turn away from us.

I appreciate the letters of the Home Column so much, but do not myself write as often as I should, but I do not feel justified in enjoying the letters of others without adding my own few words at times. I am yours in the one true faith,

SR. M. J. FLOWERS.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Southeastern Mission, Greeting:—Another conference year is past, and the things we have done are recorded, as well as the things we have neglected to do. We cannot recall the past; but if we arouse ourselves to diligence, and repent of our sins and do our duties faithfully in the future, we can be forgiven the wrongs of the past, and feel again the glorious influence of the Holy Spirit guiding us on to more noble deeds from day to day.

Owing to the poor health of Elder J. C. Clapp and his wife, I deemed it best to grant him his request to be released from labor here, and the elders laboring in Kentucky and Tennessee will please take notice, and send their quarterly reports to me the first of July, October, January, and March respectively. On account of the release of Bro. Clapp I will have to give more of my time to the work in Kentucky and Tennessee, and I hope the elders who can labor will give to Bro. D. E. Tucker—who is in charge of the work in Alabama, Florida, and Mississippi—all the assistance they can. Brethren, do not be hearers of the word, but doers of it too, so when we stand before the judgment we will rejoice in the reward given us for our works.

Will the elders and isolated saints keep me posted as to the needs of the work in their localities. Address me No. 624 Myrtle Street, Louisville, Kentucky.

M. M. TURPEN.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

The saints of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district who may have money in their hands for which they wish to have credit in our next conference report, please send it in by the 20th of this month, as the money is getting low in the treasury. Let all awake to a sense of duty, and send in tithes and offerings as God has blessed them.

SAMUEL STROH, Bishop's Agent.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

To the Saints of London District, Canada; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Conference is drawing near. We look for a good time and a large attendance; but we also desire that the business part of conference should be all that the law of God and the ruling of the church demand. We therefore ask that each branch secretary shall see to it at once that he has on hand a blank statistical report, so that when conference time arrives, June 17 and 18, there will be a report present from each branch, and none will say, "We thought we had a blank report, but when we went to get it to make out our report we found we had none." We will also expect reports from branch elders, priests, teachers, and deacons to be sent in good time. Delegates coming from branches will please be sure to bring their certificates with them, as conference by resolution determined to not receive as delegates any who had not certificates with them. We trust that all who can will come with their hearts set to worship God and draw near to him, and laying selfishness aside, will seek each to make conference pleasant and profitable to those around us, and thus we will learn that in sacrificing for the work comes the greater blessings, and that they who prefer one another in honor are themselves reaping benefits from the hand that rules the universe. We hope to meet many of you at conference, which meets with Garafra branch on the third Saturday and Sunday in June, and would suggest that even if you have to sacrifice to get there that you will be there if possible.

MAGGIE MACGREGOR.

ARTHUR, Ontario, May 3.

Galland's Grove district will convene in conference in the saints' chapel, Harlan, Iowa, Saturday, June 3, 1899, at ten o'clock, continuing over Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH, } Presidents.
J. M. BAKER, }

Conference of Northern Wisconsin district will convene at Porcupine, Pepin County, Wisconsin, June 17 and 18, at 10:30 a. m. Please send or bring branch reports; see that they are correct. We hope to have a good turn out, and a good time.

A. L. WHITEAKER, Pres.
A. V. CLOSSON, Clerk.

Decatur district conference will convene at Lucas, Iowa, Friday evening, June 23. Branch presidents will please see that their branch reports are in the hands of district secretary, B. M. Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa, before the 20th of June. All who have done ministerial labor in the district since last conference will be expected to report in writing. Come out, brethren and sisters, and let us have a good attendance and time.

F. M. WELD, Pres.
B. M. ANDERSON, Sec.

Conference of Northeastern Illinois district will convene at Mission, at 10:30 a. m., June 10. As this is the first conference held in this district for a number of months, there will be considerable business to transact, and it is hoped that each one will make an extra effort to attend. Make your plans now so that you will be able to attend without fail. Mission is about the same distance from Seneca, on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific R. R., or Sheridan on the C. B. and Q. R. R., and those coming by rail will please notify Elder Thomas Hougas, Stavanger, Illinois, four or five days in advance, stating just what train they will come on, etc., so that arrangements can be made to meet them with teams. Come, and let us have a time of rejoicing together.

HENRY SOUTHWICK, Pres.

Having consulted with the missionaries in charge and the saints at Keb, relative to the best time to hold the Nauvoo district conference, it is agreed that June 17 and 18 will be the most appropriate. Therefore, Nauvoo district conference will be held at Keb, Iowa, June 17 and 18. Sunday school will convene on the 16th.

JOHN R. EVANS.

Conference of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district will convene at Clear Lake, Indiana, May 27 to 29, at ten o'clock. It is fondly expected that the representation will be large, and reports, branch and ministerial, complete and promptly on hand. The election of delegates previous to conference date is hereby a reminder. All written reports will be received by May 25, sent to Bro. Otto Storey, Fremont, Indiana. Come one; come all!

S. W. L. SCOTT, Pres.

Conference of Little Sioux district will meet at Magnolia, Iowa, Saturday, June 17, at ten a. m. We wish to dispatch business pertaining to same as promptly as possible, and devote the remainder of time to a ministerial or priesthood conference. We therefore urge all to report to conference, attending if possible, that we may confer together, learn our duty, and do it, if found necessary. Will continue on Monday, 19th.

BORN.

MOFFET.—To Bro. and Sr. J. J. Moffet, of Pleasanton, Iowa, a daughter, born March 10, 1899. Blessed April 13, by Elder M. M. Turpen, and named Jean Marie.

MARRIED.

PROUTY—MCKENZIE.—Mr. Shirley B. Prouty and Sr. Grace E. McKenzie, were married May 3, 1899, at the beautiful home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. Robert McKenzie, of Council Bluffs, Iowa. There were gathered neighbors, friends, and relatives in goodly numbers, all bent upon making it one of the happy occasions of life, and they met a hearty response from the bride and groom. Formality was laid to one side, and a truly enjoyable time was had. Elder F. A. Smith took his place, and during the soft, sweet strains of the orchestra, the few words necessary were said which made the happy couple husband and wife. Congratulations over, a fine lap supper was served, when the bride and groom started on their journey to St. Louis, Missouri, amidst a veritable shower of rice, violets, and good wishes. May God bless them, and their life ever be as happy as their wedding day.

LINNELL—LINNELL.—In Dennisport, Massachusetts, April 27, 1899, at the residence of Elder Nathan C. Eldredge, Dean S. Linnell and Eunice H. Linnell both of Orleans, Massachusetts, were united in marriage by Elder Nathan C. Eldredge.

DIED.

HUNT.—Lilay May Hunt, infant daughter of Bro. and Sr. Alexander Hunt, born August 31, 1896; died April 9, 1898, near Woodbine, Iowa.

STUBBART.—Matthew Stubbart, died April 23, 1899, at his residence, near Octavia, Nebraska. He was born in Nova Scotia, June 26, 1826. He came to the United States when about eighteen years of age, and has resided in Illinois, California, Iowa, and Nebraska. He left a wife and eight children to mourn. All were present at his death except one daughter. He died strong in the faith, bearing a good testimony. Funeral services by Elder G. W. Galley.

GIBSON.—William L. Gibson, born May 23, 1829, at Springfield, Monroe County, West Virginia; baptized March 29, 1881, at Pattonsville, Ohio; died January 31, 1899, firm in the faith of the latter day work. Funeral sermon by Elder T. J. Beatty, at the house of deceased, to a good congregation.

ANDERSON.—Joseph Vernon Anderson, infant son of Bro. Myron and Sr. Olive Anderson, born November 12, 1898, at Bermidji, Minnesota; died March 23, 1899, aged 4 months and 11 days.

Sad the parting was to us
When he crossed the silent shore,
When they took him from our arms,
And they said, He is no more.

May the Savior guide our feet
Ever toward that radiant shore,
Till our loved one we shall meet—
Meet in heaven to part no more.

WATSON.—On April 24, 1899, at her home, Omaha, Nebraska, Mrs. Mary Louise, wife of I. N. Watson. Brought up in the church, she was a believer in the eleventh hour message; but had not obeyed its demands. She leaves a husband and daughter to mourn. Born June 17, 1875, she was nearly 24 years old at the time of her departure. Elder M. H. Forscutt conducted the funeral services and preached the sermon at the saints' chapel. A densely packed house bore witness to the esteem and sympathy of many for the living and the dead.

A dear one has passed from earth scenes away,
She left us to join with the loved gone before;
It is only her body—that cold, lifeless clay
We have buried from sight—we shall see it no more.

SEELEY.—Sarah E. Seeley was born January 7, 1864, at Galland's Grove, Iowa; married F. J. Seeley May 9, 1881. She united with the church about 1887, and passed away April 28, 1899, after a lingering illness. She leaves husband, father, and three daughters. She was a loving wife, a true Latter Day Saint. Funeral sermon at saints' church, Magnolia, by Elder A. M. Fyrando.

BOWMAN.—Sr. Isabella, wife of William Bowman, passed peacefully away at the home of her son, in Montague County, Texas, January 17, 1899. All that kind hands and medical skill could do for her relief was done, but the Lord willed otherwise. A kind husband, six sons, and one daughter mourn the loss of a companion and mother. May her departure from this life only increase in the hearts of those who mourn a greater desire for a complete family reunion in that condition where there is no death. Funeral sermon by Elder T. J. Sheppard, April 9.

CULVER.—At his home in Chicago, Illinois, March 31, 1899, Bro. Elisha Gould Culver breathed out his life in peaceful death at the goodly age of 79 years and 11 days. Father Culver was raised in Vermont, where he married Miss O. Dexter, to whom were born eight children—six of whom remain and were present at the funeral. He was baptized in Plano, Illinois, by Pres. Joseph Smith, and confirmed by him and Pres. W. W. Blair, April 6, 1873. "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season," was the very appropriate text used at his funeral. Sermon by Elder J. M. Terry, assisted by Bro. F. M. Pitt. Prayer by Elder S. C. Goode. Father Culver loved the gospel and the church.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

POPE DECREES YEAR OF PEACE.

Rome, May 13.—This is a translation of the Pope's bull, ordering a year of jubilee to celebrate the close of the nineteenth century:—

“Leo, to the Bishops and servants of God; To All Faithful Christians Salutation and Benediction:—

“The proximity of the end of the century which, through the grace of God, we have nearly passed, has decided us to order action which will serve toward the salvation of Christian people, and perhaps be the last act of our ministry.

“We wish to declare that grand jubilee, instituted since ancient time, and which has come to us under the name of holy year, whether because it ought to be accompanied by numerous holy ceremonies, or, above all, because it furnishes a greater means for correcting morals and leading souls to holiness. We have seen many benefits arising from the last jubilee under the pontificate of Leo XII. At that epoch religious manifestations occurred in Rome, making the city the veritable ground of God.

“In spirit let us recall the crowd of pilgrims, the multitude of the faithful visiting the temples in processions, the sacred orators who spoke to the public, the Pontiff himself surrounded by Cardinals, giving examples of piety and charity.

“Alas, these thoughts carry with them grief, seeing the present time so different. The former solemnities cannot be renewed to-day, because the condition in Rome is so changed. Let us hope, however, that God will grant success for this, our celebration, undertaken only for his glory, wherein we desire nothing other than to facilitate that eternal salvation provided for the diseases of the soul in the remedies Jesus has placed in our hands. That is the duty of our office and the necessity of the time.

“One cannot say this century has been sterile in good works and Christian virtues. On the contrary, by the grace of God, we have an abundance of illustrious examples. There are no exalted virtues in which many men have not signalized themselves, because the Christian religion has obtained from God continued fruition of these virtues.

“At the same time what blind errors have prevailed. How many people are running toward eternal ruin. What grief for our heart to see how many Christians, seduced by license of thought, are losing every day the great gift of faith. It is difficult to express what injury these habits of thought have inflicted upon the foundation of society.

“Religious souls, full of bad tendencies and cupidities, are taking part in a dangerous and dreadful struggle, without law, aiming to seize the goods of this world.

“It is necessary then to recall to men their duties, to succor perishing souls, to recall the thought of eternal salvation to those who at every hour run the danger of losing the heavenly portion offered to them. This is the aim of the holy year. As a tender mother, the church will try during this period to discipline souls and to teach them expiation through penitence.

“With this principle she will multiply her prayers to the calm outraged majesty of heaven to obtain the abundance of heavenly gifts. In opening the treasures of indulgences whereof it is the dispenser, the church invites the whole of Christendom to the hope of pardon.

“Why ought we not to hope for good results if the people prepare themselves spontaneously to honor Christ by celebrating the end of the century?

“We cannot propose anything holier or more salutary for men, or more of what man ought to desire, aspire, and hope for, than to ask Jesus throughout this holy year that salvation found in his resurrection, and in abandoning which men go to perdition.

“Alas, many men refuse with contempt this saving mercy. We have seen in these latter times a renewal of the Arian heresy regarding the divinity of Jesus.

“But have courage, and let us to our work.

“Let all Christians contribute to these proposals by examples of piety, joining in teaching to the people what is necessary, detesting every form of impiety against the divine majesty of Jesus.

“Raising our eyes to God, with his help and with the approbation of the Cardinals, we order a universal jubilee, to commence in this sacred City of Rome with the first vespers of Christmas, 1899, and to cease on the same day in 1900.

“During the jubilee year we concede full indulgence and pardon of sins to all Christians truly repentant, who confess their sins and partake of communion, and who will visit the basilicas of St. Peter's, St. Paul's, St. John's, or that Ste. Maria Maggiore, in Rome, at least once a day during twenty days, if having domicile in Rome, or, for pilgrims, during ten days.

“All ought to pray for the exaltation of the church, for the extirpation of heresies, for the concord of Catholic Princes, and for the salvation of Christian peoples.

“Those who, through sickness or other legitimate cause, cannot visit the Roman basilicas, if they confess and communicate, may also benefit in the indulgence.

“To Rome we invite you, with love, sons of the church throughout the world. At the same time good Catholics ought, during this period, to renounce all spectacles of a profane character. Divine Rome will inspire you. Jesus has chosen Rome as the center of the highest action. Here is empire. Here under his will is the immovable seat of his vicar on earth. Here is guarded the truth. From here spreads light to all the world.

“Whoso removes himself from Rome removes himself from Jesus. Religious monuments, majestic temples, the tombs of the apostles, the catacombs of the martyrs, all add to the sanctity of Rome.”—Chicago Tribune, May 14, 1899.

THE MODERN BABYLON.

The press of New York is discussing more in anger than in sorrow the recent case in which “a society woman” was divorced for “the statutory cause,” which is also “the only cause” recognized by the canons of the Episcopal Church, of which she was a member. The woman was remarried on the same day, as the reporters delight to say, to a “prominent club and society man.” It would be a good sign were the pulpit of that church to condemn such proceedings with as much vigor as the press does. It would require some courage on the part of the Protestant Episcopal clergy to do this, as the society in which divorces of this kind are now common for the most part belongs to and supports that church. The ultra-fashionable society of New York refuses to be governed by the laws of the State, and it treats the canons of the church with contempt whenever they interfere with its wishes or its lax morals. If it be true, as is alleged, that church dignitaries give social countenance to divorcees of this kind and recognize their rehabilitation in society, then they are striking a dangerous blow at the sanctity of legal marriage and recognizing marriages which are forbidden by State law and declared abhorrent by their own canons.

The cause of this lax condition of morals is easily determined. A correspondent of the New York Evening Post points it out pungently thus:—

The representative thing in New York is wealth, and the representative social diversions solely those which wealth can bring. "Society" does not even go to the art exhibitions or the philharmonic, or any other music which does not involve expensive boxes and the glory of Solomon. When it is not engaged in dancing, horse racing, rabbit coursing, pigeon shooting, and similar diversions; and even when it is, its members have few broad interests and little intellectuality to make life spicy; and so they are going more and more to baser condiments.

There is no general diffusion of interests in New York such as may be found in other large American cities where distinction is based upon merit and men and women are estimated more for what they do than for the money they have. There are in New York many persons of wealth who do not gauge everything by money and whose lives are not spent in the enjoyment of questionable pleasures purchased with that money, but it is in what is known as the "fashionable set" of New York that this laxity of morals prevails. It has no standard but money. The old standards of gentle blood and good breeding, of personal merit and accomplishments, and of the sterling record of life and character, such as marked the old Knickerbocker gentlemen and gentlewomen, have given way to those of wealth—not acquired by the present owners of it, but handed down to them by prudent and thrifty forbears and wantonly spent by their degenerate descendants. Hence we have the spectacle of New York society agitated to the outmost edge of the circle by no higher question than how to bridge the chasm between members of its set who are innocent and those who are avowedly guilty under State laws and canonical regulations.—Chicago Tribune, May 14, 1899.

GERMAN WAR ON THE CORSET.

Berlin, May 3.—The Minister of Education of Saxony issued a decree to-day that hereafter all girls and young women who attended the public schools and colleges of Saxony shall discard corsets and stays.

The decree is the result of vigorous agitation in the press and public lectures of the medical fraternity. Physicians have been unanimous in their denunciations of the alarming increase of tight lacing, especially in Dresden and other large cities of Saxony. The practice has become so prevalent that children of the age of ten and twelve years have become addicted to tight lacing, and it is feared that the continuance of the custom will prove fatal to posterity.

Though girls and their mothers strongly protest against the new measure, some going so far as to threaten to boycott the schools, the preponderance of public opinion approves of the Minister's action.

TO BANISH JEWS IN RUSSIA.

London, May 13.—The Russian government has decided upon exceptional measures against the Jews. The first anti-Jewish measure was promulgated yesterday, when the stay of all—even foreign—Jews is prohibited in St. Petersburg. No exemption will be made, even in the case of French Jews.

There have been serious outbreaks against the Jews at Nicolaieff in connection with the Easter festivities of the Greek Church. The Jews there number 30,000 out of a total population of 100,000. The rioters who were mostly laborers, numbered 5,000. They wrecked hundreds of Jewish houses and shops, desecrated Jewish graves, and killed and captured a large number.

About 400 of the rioters were arrested after several conflicts with cosacks, several of whom, it is reported, were stoned or beaten to death with heavily weighted slings, with which the rioters attacked the police.

The Presbyterian Assembly, which meets in Minneapolis next Thursday, will congratulate itself, in view of the stir the ordination of Dr. Briggs to the Episcopal priesthood is making in that church, that it is through with the Briggs controversy. As to Dr. McGiffert, that is another story. Will the assembly at Minneapolis make another candidate for the Episcopal priesthood?

The effects of training upon Harvard athletes are now being studied scientifically, and the results of these studies will be awaited with interest by all other institutions of learning. With scientific data at hand bearing upon the question of college athletics, it will be easier than at present to assign them their proper place in a course of education designed to fit men physically and mentally for life.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS.

If the success of the past in this department is an index of the future, young men and women desiring to fit themselves for business will make no mistake in coming to Graceland. A large per cent of our graduates are holding good positions, and the demand for competent, trustworthy young people for clerical positions is steadily increasing. We do not guarantee positions, but agree to aid competent and worthy students in securing good employment.

Our methods are up to date; our facilities good; and our instructors kind and obliging, making the student's interest their own; our terms reasonable.

We have three terms, commencing September, January, and April. Students entering at any term can find classes suitable.

Those registering for regular diploma course can take the course in about nine months, if well prepared in the common branches; but those who have not had the equivalent of a grammar school education; that is, that are not prepared on the common branches, will have the privilege of a preparatory course to prepare for the business course proper, such preparatory work covering nine months, more or less, according to the needs of the case.

The Athenian Literary Society affords excellent advantages to Graceland students, being a flourishing organization adding life and animation to college work. Business students who desire it may substitute work in this society for Debating and Parliamentary Law as provided in the regular course of study.

Our course affords both theory and practice. The Business Practice Department provides both office work and individual ventures, so that the widest experience is given the students in putting into actual practice the principles of business transactions.

Examine our course of study in Catalogue, page 28, see the thoroughness of its character. If you have not our catalogue, address a card to the college asking for one.

We hope to be able, very soon, to give our readers the details of the various exercises of Commencement Week, which week, we trust, is destined to be a time of educational and mental enjoyment.

If our information be correct, there will be several graduates from the Collegiate, Commercial, and Short-hand departments, also from the Elocution department, and quite a number of diplomas are to be presented by the Athenian Literary Society.

JUSTICE TO WHOM JUSTICE IS DUE.

UTAH STATE LEGISLATION ON MARRIAGE, POLYGAMY, ETC., ETC.

We have now lying before us a copy of the Revised Statutes of Utah.

From a reading of those enactments which relate to the questions of the marriage relation, polygamy, unlawful cohabitation, and crimes against the virtue and honor of womankind, we conclude that they are good and all that sticklers for morality outside of the State of Utah could have expected or asked for of the Mormon people. Chapter 1, under title 29:—

Marriages between parents and children, ancestors and descendants of every degree, brothers and sisters of the half as well as of the whole blood, uncles and nieces, aunts and nephews, or between any persons related to each other within and not including the fourth degree of consanguinity, computed according to the rules of civil law, are incestuous and void from the beginning, whether the relationship is legitimate or illegitimate.

Marriage is prohibited and declared void:—

1. With an idiot or lunatic.
 2. When there is a husband or wife living from whom the person marrying has not been divorced.
 3. When not solemnized by an authorized person, except as provided in section eleven hundred and eighty-seven.
 4. When at the time of marriage the male is under sixteen or the female is under fourteen years of age.
 5. Between a negro and a white person.
 6. Between a mongolian and a white person.
- When a marriage is contracted in good faith and with the belief of the parties that a former husband or wife, then living and not legally divorced, was dead or legally divorced, the issue of such marriage, born or begotten before notice of the mistake, shall be the legitimate issue of both parents.

Marriages solemnized in any other country, state, or territory, if valid where solemnized, are valid here.

No marriage solemnized before any person professing to have authority therefor, shall be invalid for want of such authority, if it is consummated with the belief of the parties, or either of them, that he had authority and that they have been lawfully married.

Marriages shall be solemnized by the following persons only:—

1. Ministers of the gospel or priests of any denomination, in regular communion with any religious society.
2. Justices of the peace, mayors of cities, and judges of the district and supreme courts.

No marriage shall be solemnized without a license therefor, issued by the county clerk of the county in which the female resides at the time; provided, that when she is of full age or a widow, and it is issued on her application in person or by writing signed by her, it may be issued by the clerk of any county.

Consent of the parents or guardian is required where the male is under twenty-one or the female under eighteen. When the parties are unknown to the clerk, the person applying must file affidavit showing that the parties have lawful right to contract in marriage. License with certificate of marriage is to be returned to clerk of court by person solemnizing it, and be filed and recorded by the clerk.

Causes for divorce are: First, impotence at the time of marriage; second, adultery, committed after marriage; third, willful desertion for more than one year; willful neglect to provide the common necessities of life; fifth, habitual drunkenness; sixth, conviction for felony; seventh, cruel treatment causing great bodily injury or great mental distress.

Title 75, chapter 24:—

Every person who has a husband or wife living, who hereafter marries another, whether married or single, and any man who hereafter simultaneously, or on the same day, marries more than one woman, is guilty of polygamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and by imprisonment in the state prison for a term of not more than five years.

If any male person hereafter cohabits with more than one woman, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six months, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

The same chapter contains enactments defining adultery, incest, and fornication, and providing for adequate penalties in punishment therefor, ranging from imprisonment in the county jail, or fine of one hundred dollars, for fornication to imprisonment in State prison not exceeding three years for adultery, to fifteen years in State prison for incest.

By the provisions of title 75, chapter 25, the crime of rape is defined and five years imprisonment in the State prison made the penalty for its commission.

It is further provided:—

Any person who shall carnally and unlawfully know any female over the age of thirteen and under the age of eighteen years, shall be guilty of a felony.

The penalty for a felony where the law does not specifically state it is imprisonment in State prison for a period not to exceed five years.

There are other enactments against immoral acts and practices, which make the laws of Utah as good and in some instances better than laws for similar cases in Iowa or Illinois, with the statute laws of which States we are somewhat familiar.

These statute laws were revised, annotated, and published by the authority of the Legislature by Richard W. Young, Grant H. Smith, and William A. Lee, code commissioners, and are declared to be in force January 1, 1898.

We have read these laws of Utah upon the marriage question, polygamy, unlawful cohabitation, and other crimes against morality, public decency, and such other acts usually legislated against as offenses, and concede them to be good; and if enforced all that could perhaps be asked of the legislators of the new State to establish the statement made by the church press of Utah that the people had acted in good faith with the government in making the laws of the State to conform to the requirements imposed to secure statehood.

We make this concession freely, and hope that so far as any of the elders of the "Josephites" church may have formed their estimate of the laws of Utah, or the lack of law in that State, from what we have heretofore written on the subject, they will now take notice of what we now write and do the Utah people due justice in the matter.

If it should hereafter appear that violations of these laws of Utah are not enforced it will not reflect discredit upon the lawmakers, but will be the fault of the people whose business it is to see the laws applied; the same as in Iowa, Missouri, or other States where laws are disregarded.

Will the Deseret News please notice?

STUDENTS FOR GRACELAND.

Students from distant branches are beginning to come to Graceland, which is quite encouraging. Some from the sunny South are testing the realities of this northern climate; and, so far as we learn, are quite able to stand the rigors of our wet, rainy springtime.

We shall soon be looking for Bro. Joseph F. Burton to send us two, four, or six of his host of Society Island young men to see life in a prairie State, where no seas surround, but endless waves of solid land are on every side. It would be a fitting tribute to the worth and interest of the college work to have scholars from over the sea to graduate from Graceland. What say you, Bro. Joseph?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Brother A. J. Keck, writing from Plano, Illinois, May 10:—

There is no special news about Plano. We are still alive, and our present effort is to make the name of Latter Day Saint honorable in these parts. Our watchword is, "Sin must get out, if it takes the sinner with it."

Bro. C. J. Spurlock, Hartville, Missouri, May 14:—

Brother Henry Sparling, of Springfield, and myself are to begin meeting Monday night at this place, the use of the courthouse having been secured for that purpose. Elder Sparling has not yet arrived, but I am here waiting hopefully. I have not been associated with a missionary in so long that truly I feel the need of such companionship. It seems quite a while till next General Conference, but remembering the old adage,

"Love the truth and shun the wrong,
Then no day will seem too long,"

I watch and wait.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Paris, May 15.—L'Univers publishes to-night a decree of the Emperor of China containing five separate articles recognizing officially the Roman Catholic religion in the empire and giving official grades to all Catholic missionaries who in the future assimilate with the mandarins. The French religious protectorate is equally recognized with accompanying privileges.

Interpellations in the Chamber of Deputies regarding the Jewish question in Algiers show the subject is becoming one of vital importance there and must soon reach a crisis if something is not done to remedy it. For the last three years, it is said, there have been numerous business failures there owing to the financial insecurity of the country directly resulting from the violent anti-Jewish crusades.

"In Anglican places of worship in England and Wales it is stated that no less than 5,185 masses were said in one year to extricate souls from purgatory."

"Some one has said one of the characterizations of a Christian faith is its positiveness. It does not deal in peradventures. It has no use for question marks. So far as it goes at all, it is sure of its ground." There is sense and good sense in this remark from a secular journalist. The truth does not deal with or is not based upon guesswork or mere speculation. "The foundation of God standeth sure."

The Presbyterian General Assembly, which will hold its one hundred and eleventh annual meeting at Minneapolis, Minnesota, beginning on Thursday, May 18, "will face big issues," it is said. Among the important topics to be discussed is the theological standing of Rev. A. C. McGiffert, Professor of Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York, who one year ago published "A History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age"; which is objected to by the conservative element, but hailed with satisfaction by the "liberals." "No book of recent years," say the former, "not even the one which caused the trial for heresy of Dr. Briggs with its verdict of suspension from the ministry, has been deemed more harmful." Another item will be a renewal of effort to unite the Presbyterian Churches, "North" and "South," which failed last year.

The recent "understanding" between Russia and England on the Chinese question, which was hailed as a strong factor for peace, has been succeeded by another Russian "demand" upon China, for important railway concessions and other privileges which granted would give Russia complete strategic control of Peking and seriously injure British interests elsewhere. The common feeling is that the scheme was already arranged when the recent understanding between Russia and Great Britain was arrived at. "The whole incident is particularly deplored by those who were really hoping for practical results from the peace conference." This whole affair is a significant indication of conditions as they exist in fact, and reveal clearly the truth that there is no substantial ground of hope for "peace" among the great powers of the world, under present conditions.

A "Syrian junta," including young Syrians, Armenians, and Turks themselves, having in view the deliverance of Syria from Turkish rule, has been organized in New York. Syrians in Chicago and at other points are allied to the movement. Is this another factor looking to disturbances as shall eventuate in the deliverance of Palestine and other oppressed lands from Moslem rule?

George D. Scott, a business man at Tarrytown, New York, committed suicide May 15, as a result of "irritation of the brain." "He smoked, on an average, seventeen cigars a day."

The Czar of Russia recently presided at a meeting of the council called to discuss the question of abolishing transportation to Siberia on the ground that it had become prejudicial to the interests of the country and a serious obstacle to the progress of Siberia. The Czar ordered a commission to be provided to consider the substitution of some other penalty for transportation to the Siberian mines.

In our opening lines to the statement of Mr. Smith Bunker in HERALD for April 26, we stated Mr. Bunker had resided at Kirtland, Ohio. Bro. R. Etzenhouser corrects us in our misunderstanding. Mr. Bunker resided on the road over which the saints passed to and from Kirtland, not many miles away, but not in the town.

Letter Department.

HENDERSON, W. Va., May 12.

Editors Herald:—This is report of my work and whereabouts in the great harvest field. I am laboring on the outskirts and ragged edge of West Virginia district. I came here May 1, and have preached every night; three times in schoolhouse at Henderson, and the rest of the time in the Christian church on Salt Creek, near the town. This town is situated on the great Kanawha River, near its junction with the Ohio, opposite the old historic town of Point Pleasant, called about here, "the Point."

In September of last year we opened up the work here for the first time, being permitted to speak in the Salt Creek Christian church, then in the town schoolhouse. We aroused quite an interest generally, and particularly among the so-called Christian people, who entered no protest or opposition whatever, but "searched the Scriptures daily to see whether these things be true." I baptized Deacon John Robbins, who is now thoroughly confirmed. Bro. James W. Moore and family, and his son, Bro. Joseph Moore and family, have moved here, furnishing comfortable lodging places in the town, as well as in the country.

I spoke Thursday night in the schoolhouse on the subject of the divine order of salvation as set forth in the New Testament. There were present in the audience Elder Harkins of the A. Campbell-Disciple Church of Christ faction, and a Rev. Mr. Firebaugh of the B. W. Stone-Christian-Christian-Order Church. That being our last night in the house for the time, Mr. Harkins arose, and after indorsing our discourse, gravely announced meeting there the next evening. Certain friends who heard him, say that he criticised our sermon, saying it was partly unscriptural.

On Saturday morning it is said the Christian minister, Firebaugh, came to this disciple of Campbell Church of Christ minister to be baptized of him. Some, who best knew the parties, imagined that, the Rev. Harkins might have said to the Rev. Firebaugh, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" But supposing the case. The penitent informed the minister that he had only been baptized unto John's baptism, "then he suffered him." And thus it occurs that Rev. Firebaugh, the Christian, and Mr. Harkins the reformer, unite, and the good work which began in Pennsylvania in 1832, continues for "if we have authority to preach, we have authority to baptize." "Preachers baptized one another, and crowds came and were baptized."

But on this occasion they are said to have gone down alone behind the willows to the water, "and he baptized him," saying, "If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." Then of course the Spirit, which also means the Word in Campbellism, caught away the minister, "and the eunuch went on his way rejoicing."

But there was no use at all in their seeking a secluded retreat behind those willows. Many good people, on both sides, would have gladly exposed themselves to the sparkling dewdrop on the weeds, the slippery mud on the shore, or the scorching rays of the May sunbeam, in order to have witnessed the sacred interment—the putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ (Col. 2: 11).

After this came to us the regular challenge to debate, so characteristic of Campbellism. Rev. Harkins said he would take the negative if I would affirm my teaching on the divine order of salvation, as preached on Thursday evening. We accepted, and formulated the following, which the gentleman signed: "Resolved that the divine order of salvation, as set forth in the New Testament, including living apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, for the work of the ministry, is still essential as in former times."

This debate is to commence on the 24th inst., in the town of Henderson, West Virginia, my present mission address. I may continue here till some few days after the battle, and if not rendered hors de combat, will march into the county of Jackson. Many openings offered me, and houses open. "The harvest truly is great and the laborers few."

Yours truly,

JEWETTA, Cal., May 11.

Editors Herald:—Since my last communication to Herald I attended a two-days' meeting at Garden Grove, April 8 and 9. We had a glorious time, good turnout of saints and friends. The Spirit of the Lord was present to a marked degree, cheering and infusing new life into the saints. Many strong testimonies were borne under its sweet and divine influence. How true are the sentiments expressed in our hymn,

"Sweet the time, exceeding sweet,
When the saints together meet."

Yes, when the Comforter meets with them. The ministry were greatly blessed in dispensing the words of life. Brn. Harris, Dana, Holt, Gibson, Carmichael, and many others were in attendance.

On April 12, I went to El Toro and held three meetings there. We have only a few members there and they are scattered over a considerable territory. They were very anxious to be organized into a branch, but I did not feel that it was an opportune time; but with the consent of the president of the district I gave them the right to hold regular meetings and to administer the sacrament; hence they have given them all the rights and privileges enjoyed by an organized branch. William Thompson and the priest are in charge of affairs. We hope the time is not far distant when an organization can be affected there.

On Sunday, the 16th, I again occupied the rostrum at Garden Grove. I was heartily supported by the officers and kindly cared for by the saints during my sojourn among them; neither did they forget the fact that the elders cannot travel on the railroads by faith alone. I spent a few days at San Bernardino. I got there just in time to attend their Sunday school picnic, which was held at the Hot Springs. An enjoyable time was had, especially at the dinner table, where roasted and fried chicken abounded on every hand. Of course preachers are, on such occasions, right at home. Bathing and other innocent amusements were indulged in. All seemed to enjoy themselves, and I know the writer did.

On Sunday, the 7th inst., we met with the saints in Los Angeles, which day was the Sunday set apart as a day of fasting and prayer for the Pacific Slope Mission. It was made apparent to the saints at our prayer and sacramental service that our fasting was acceptable to our heavenly Father. Brn. Fred B. Blair and D. A. Anderson were present and participated in the services of the day. The former delivered an excellent discourse in the evening, and left the same night for the Northern district to fill appointments there. Bro. Anderson will labor in company with myself for some weeks to come.

The saints of the Los Angeles branch are contemplating building a new church house, which is in great demand. They meet at present in an out-of-the-way hall over a livery stable, which is not a very attractive place to invite strangers to, in a large and lovely city like Los Angeles. We have a fine list of members there and they are putting forth a determined effort both to sacrifice and gather means to secure an acceptable place of worship; and the ministry who are acquainted with their circumstances are heartily in favor of the movement and promise to do all they can to help along the project.

I herewith desire to give notice to the saints of Oregon and Washington that Bro. D. L. Harris has been appointed by me to labor in those States. We hope that the saints in said territory will supplement his efforts. I take great pleasure in recommending him as a faithful and able minister for Christ, a man highly respected and beloved by the people of his home district. Also Bro. Thos. Daley has been appointed to labor in Nevada, Bro. T. W. Chatburn to labor in the Southern district of California after June 1. The brethren herein named have been consulted and they agree to the changes made.

The temperature is only about 112° to 115° to-day; however, Bro. Anderson and I are standing the heat quite well. We hope it won't get any hotter or we'll have to seek the seacoast.

With love to all of God's people,

Yours in gospel bonds,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

P. S.—I baptized six at San Bernardino, the result of other men's labor, and ordained Bro. George Wixom to the office of priest.

G. T. G.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 12.

Editors Herald:—I inclose you extract of letter from J. C. Clapp. The sermon referred to was the first one I preached in the southern mission in January, 1874. Bro. Clapp informs me since his return that the man and his wife were both convinced by this sermon, but neither one told the other until just before they were baptized by him.

How comforting these cases are to those who see no immediate fruit from their labor; my preaching in this place I thought was "love's labor lost." May God be with these and all his saints.

J. H. HANSEN.

"FARMINGTON, Kentucky, —.

"We baptized a man recently that said he was converted by your preaching twenty-five years ago, when you and I were at the Oliver Perry schoolhouse—a clear case of the bread that is cast upon the water returning after many days.

J. C. C."

COALVILLE, Iowa, May 18.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday there were eleven additions to the church at this place by baptism. Those baptized range in age from nine to about twenty-four, all children of saints, with one exception. Parental influence, Sunday school teaching and influence, together with the efforts of local ministers and missionaries, and the blessing and assistance of the Holy Spirit were the means of effecting the conversions. The Holy Spirit was present at the baptism and confirmation services. The saints rejoice, and we feel that God giveth the increase.

Yours in bonds,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

SAVANNA, Ill., May 13.

Editors Herald:—Since engaging in the work of an active missionary, it seems I have been sorely distressed. Several times called home to be with the sick, and finally being compelled to part with a loving father in this life. However, I have no inclination to murmur, for in the hours of trial the Father of all blessed us abundantly. Oh, how blessed are the hopes and assurances of the gospel!

After arranging some matters of a temporal nature, I left home the last of April, and now find myself again in the harness. In company with Bro. J. W. Adams, a series of meetings were held in Carbon Cliff, about ten miles east of Rock Island. We found that the seed sown in this neighborhood last winter had not all "fallen on stony ground." Two were lately baptized, and more are fully convinced if they only have courage. May God help them.

Just before leaving this place we were considerably disturbed by a certain element, and the citizens succeeded in capturing two of their leaders in the belfry, where one said he was "trying to catch some sparrows." Think we got the "sparrows." They "flew" on the midnight train. When the comrades of these two men learned of the capture, several appeared on the scene with shotguns. When asked what they were going to do with the guns, replied they had been to a charivari. Anyway, the sight of the guns about them was not the most pleasing.

From there we came to Savanna, stopping at Clinton, Iowa, where we had a short visit with Elder J. W. Peterson and wife; who, we were informed, are making arrangements to go to the islands. We are sorry, we must lose Bro. Peterson, as he is one of those live, active, and able workers that are so much needed in this country. May the richest blessings attend his efforts!

The saints here have succeeded in renting a neat hall for their place of meeting, for which effort they are to be commended. A Sunday school was organized last Sunday, with Bro. John Crawford, teacher, as superintendent. While the saints here feel incapable and inexperienced, yet much good will be done if the present interest continues. Our people were greatly misrepresented a short time ago in a lecture by a "Rev." Moore, of the Presbyterian Church. A gentleman who heard the lecture, not a member of our church, asked him if he would talk with an elder on the subject. This he refused to do, saying he did not need to be enlightened, as he knew whereof he spake. Oh, the bigotry! Elder L. E. Hills replied to the lecture, through one of the city papers, asking that a distinction be made. Mr. Moore remains silent. We prepared another article, which will be printed to-day, in which we asked the "Rev." to acknowledge his error or openly defend his position in presence of the citizens of Savanna and ourselves. What the outcome will be we are unable to surmise. Though but "boys" in the work, we will endeavor to stand our ground.

In bonds,

F. A. RUSSELL.

LADD, Ill., May 15.

Editors Herald:—On the 12th inst. Bro. F. M. Cooper and myself closed a series of twenty-four meetings in the city of Streator. I began the work April 21, holding forth in private houses at first, but afterward rented a vacant Free Methodist church, and was joined by Bro. Cooper April 29. We worked together, doing what we could to get the truth before the people. While at no time we had large attendance, yet quite a number, altogether, of outsiders heard the word. We found most of the saints here asleep, and apparently indifferent to the work; some few, however, seemed willing to help the work along. We were materially aided by Sr. Tibbetts, Bro. John Ahlgreen, Bro. and Sr. Perry, Mr. and Sr. Boswell, Bro. Turner, and Bro. Lamb.

On the evening of the 12th inst., three were baptized, and confirmed later at the meeting. Thus we have some hopes of seeing the work revived in Streator. We made application for three other churches, but failed to secure them. One man, an aged United Brethren minister, seemed to very much regret that the present pastor would not consent for us to use their church. He attended our last meeting, and when called upon to dismiss the congregation, prayed the Lord to bless us, and that if we had a work to do in Streator, to open up the way for us; he said, "You can do it, Lord, you have the power, and we leave it with you." He moreover thanked God for the "sweet Spirit" that he found in our midst. Those baptized were John Lamb, Philip Turner, and Hattie Boswell.

On the 13th we came to this place, and expect to remain here for some time, working here and in the surrounding country. We expect to attend the Northeast Illinois district conference to be held at Mission, June 10 and 11, if all goes well. Yesterday we went with a party of saints to Dover, an inland town about twelve miles distant, for the purpose of holding meeting, but were disappointed owing to the facts that the proper arrangements had not been made, and that a cold rain set in, continuing all day. However, we were not entirely baffled, so we repaired to the home of Father Fitzpatrick, and held two services, and spent the intervening time pleasantly in conversation and singing the songs of Zion, etc.

Returning to Ladd at evening, we attend the M. E. meeting at the Union church, but the preacher did not appear; so we were requested to occupy the hour, which we endeavored to do. We will remain in and about this place as long as we can do any good. Our address for about three weeks, will be Ladd, Illinois.

MAGGIE MACGREGOR.

BORN.

TANNER.—To Bro. and Sr. J. A. Tanner, of Bevier, Missouri, a daughter, born March 10, 1899. Blessed April 30, by Elders M. M. Turpen and J. T. Williams, and named Martha Elizabeth.

ANDERSON.—To Bro. J. E. and Sr. H. M. Anderson, at Lamoni, Iowa, February 10, 1899, a son; blessed May 7, by Elders E. C. Briggs, A. H. Smith, and F. M. Weld, and named George Leslie.

DIED.

KINGHORN.—Three miles southwest of Auburn, Nebraska, May 11, 1899, George Kinghorn died. He was born at Holytown, Scotland, August 27, 1836. Thirty-nine years last September he was married to Miss Sarah A. Woods at Belleville, Illinois. To this union were born four sons and three daughters, all of whom are now grown. George Kinghorn was baptized over eight years ago. Was taken sick in November last, with cancer of the stomach, and from that time has been almost a constant sufferer. He lived a devoted follower of Christ, with the blessed hope of a glorious resurrection. He was loved and respected by all. Funeral services conducted by Elder J. W. Waldsmith.

STUBBS.—Eliza Stubbs, born December 2, 1823, in Nottingham, England; was baptized into the Utah Church and reached Salt Lake City in 1862. Like thousands of others met sore disappointment and removed to St. Louis, Missouri, two years later and soon joined the Reorganization. She died April 30, 1899. Her last testimony was that the church is true. Funeral sermon by Elder J. D. White from saints' church, St. Louis, Missouri.

DAVIS.—Frankie Leroy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis. Born July 6, 1895; blessed by Elder J. B. Roush. Died at Maquoketa, Iowa, April 22, 1899. Funeral in charge of Elder John Heide, sermon by Elder J. B. Roush. Frankie had been afflicted from infancy, and death was a blessing.

BOOTMAN.—At her home, near West Plains, Missouri, April 17, 1899, Sr. Mary Elizabeth Bootman, aged 60 years, 7 months, 14 days. She was baptized at Lawrence, Michigan. At times Sr. Bootman was remarkably blessed with the gifts of the gospel. Bro. Charles M. Bootman and Sr. Mary Elizabeth were married in Michigan, June 6, 1854; as the fruits of this union eight sons and two daughters and many grandchildren survive her. The funeral services were conducted by Elder J. B. Graham.

MEYER.—April 29, 1899, Bro. Walter A., son of Bro. and Sr. Christian Meyer. Deceased was born March 30, 1878, and was 21 years and 30 days old when he left us for his future home. He was baptized November 28, 1897, and thenceforth lived so as to command the confidence and esteem not only of the household of faith, but of all his associates. Feeling premonitions of the coming event, though previously in good health, he left his place of business for home and shortly became unconscious, and practically remained so for three days; then the struggle ended, and the spirit was set free. Elder M. H. Forscutt conducted the funeral ceremonies and preached the sermon. His burial was in Wyuka cemetery; a large audience bearing witness to the standing of deceased among men. He leaves father, mother, two brothers, and a sister to mourn. He will be missed from church, Sunday school, and Religio gatherings.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

(Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

NINETY PER CENT OF OUR FOOD IS ADULTERATED.

At least ninety per cent of the food or drink manufactured and sold in the United States is adulterated. So says Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief Chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture. During the seventeen years that Dr. Wiley has held his position in the department he has examined almost every article of food and drink bought or sold in the country. Last week he was called to testify before the Senatorial Pure Food Investigating committee, in session in this city. His disclosures were startling. The public is habitually defrauded. Milk and milk products are robbed of their natural fat and other fats are substituted; they are artificially colored, and milk is "doctored" with chemicals in order that it may not sour; honey is not only extensively adulterated with glucose, but much so-called honey is manufactured of articles not one particle of which has seen bee or hive; cottonseed and sunflower oil masquerade as pure olive oil; lard is manufactured of vegetable oils instead of the fat of the hog; ground coffee is "filled" with chicory, carrots, caramel, date seeds, and peanut shells, while damaged flour, crackers, or cereals are molded with molasses and colored to simulate the coffee bean; mustard is nearly always mixed with flour, which has been colored with tumeric; and spices are often more than three-fourths cracker dust. Fully seventy per cent of the beer is made of hominy grits, rice, and grape sugar or other substitutes for malt, and jellies and preserves are often almost entirely composed of gelatine or kindred substances, artificially colored and flavored. In short, not one article of food can be relied upon to be what it seems.

Professor Wiley's sensational announcement is confirmed by the many investigations that have been made by government chemists and those of the various State officials charged with the enforcement of pure food laws.

MANY DEATHS CAUSED.

Most of the adulterations are of such a character as to injure the pocket of the consumer rather than the health. Commercial fraud, according to the testimony of the national and State government officials, is chiefly the result, but wholesale loss of life has occurred. In a report made by A. J. Wedderburn, a special agent of the Agricultural Department, he calls attention to many cases of death. The deleterious substances are usually used through ignorance; one case of record being that in which death resulted from the use of chrome yellow, not only to the customer, but also to the vender and the members of his family.

Coffee is, perhaps, the most extensively adulterated article, and most of the spurious coffee is a fraud. Consumers do not take the trouble to find out whether their coffee is genuine or not. Artificial coffee beans used to be manufactured with consummate care, but nowadays many producers do not attempt to imitate the beans except in color and size. Spurious coffee beans were formerly imported from Germany in large quantities and to some extent from France. But American manufacturers, realizing the profit to be made in the trade, entered the field and now make better imitations than any that are to be imported. Flour or almost any cereal is mixed with molasses and molded to resemble the bean, and then roasted and colored. Sometimes chicory or burnt sugar forms a part of the compound, which, although almost worthless, is not harmful when composed of such simple substances, but if mineral matter be added the product is often poisonous to some degree. A few years ago in France the government seized a factory which employed sulphate of iron in its mixture.

Imitation coffee beans can be distinguished easily from the genuine by a careful examination. . . . Manufacturers sell to dealers tons of artificial coffee which is accepted unquestioningly as the genuine article.

Both manufacturers and retail grocers make enormous profits, for their fraudulent coffee can be made for as little as three or four cents a pound. Often the flour, crackers, or cereals which enter into its composition are so badly damaged that they could be utilized in no other way. There is, besides, much huckstering in real coffees, and lower grades are frequently mixed with the higher. Thus Maracaibo and La Guayra coffees are mixed with Java and Mocha coffee and the mixtures sold for pure Java or pure Mocha.

Cheap cream of tartar has been proved to be composed largely of tartaric acid and terra alba. This terra alba, or white earth, imported from the shores of the Mediterranean, has been used as a food adulterant to a fearful degree. It is, when pulverized, a white and almost impalpable powder, tasteless, and looking like a fine starch. Its presence is frequently detected in powdered sugar, which may account for the fact that housekeepers do not find powdered sugar altogether satisfactory for cooking purposes. Pure cream of tartar will dissolve in hot water, but terra alba will not; therefore to test it put a teaspoonful into a tumbler of hot water, allow it to stand for a few moments, and then see whether there is any sediment. If the sediment is large, terra alba is probably present. If it does not dissolve, leaving the water clear, add a few drops of tincture of iodine to the water. If pure, the color will remain unchanged; but if starch is present the water will turn bright blue.

The usual adulterants of tea are "spent" or exhausted tea leaves, leaves of other plants, lie tea, sand, and various materials used for coloring the leaves. Coloring is common and is called "facing." It generally consists in coating the leaves with powdered soapstone, with lead, or plumbago, if they are to be black, or with the powdered soapstone with indigo or Prussian blue if they are to be green. Often the facing adds materially to the weight of the tea. In England the use of exhausted leaves is much larger than it is in this country. Spent leaves are bought up from hotels and coffee houses at merely nominal prices, and are dried and faced before being resold. They are easily detected by their frayed and irregular appearance and by the small proportion of soluble matter remaining in them.

The substitution of other leaves for those of the tea plant is also more common in England than in the United States. Yet even in this country it is well-known that foreign leaves can easily be detected by spreading out a few of the leaves from the bottom of the teapot. The lanceolate, spearheadlike shape of the tea leaf, together with its serrated margin, distinguish it from that of any plant used to counterfeit it. As a rule, facings can be detected only by chemical tests. Green teas are oftener adulterated than black teas. Tea is often colored, and if the decoction made by the housekeeper becomes highly colored after being boiled a few minutes adulteration may be suspected.

MAKE ALL KINDS OF LIQUORS.

The list of articles adulterated and their adulterations is practically unlimited, as was stated by Professor Wiley in his testimony before the Congressional committee. The adulteration of coffee and tea will serve as types. It is stated that most of the spices sold are wholly fraudulent, as are most of the jellies. Perhaps half of the alcoholic liquors are prepared from neutral spirits doctored and colored to have the taste and appearance of the liquor demanded by the consumer. A type of this adulteration is the recipe given for "pure country cider." It is: To each gallon of water add one-half pound of granulated sugar, acidulate with tartaric acid, and flavor with oil of apple, previously put in alcohol, color with caramel, and to twenty gallons of the mixture add two gallons of genuine country cider.

In the accompanying tables are given the names of some of the articles in most common use, with their deleterious and their fraudulent adulterations. There are also given simple tests by which some of the adulterations may be detected, although there are many that baffle the chemists. Microscopic examination will often enable adulterations to be detected and illustrations to this article serve to show typical differences between the real and the adulterated article.

Frequent cases have been reported of late years of sickness arising from the use of canned meats. The cause seems mainly to have been improper methods of canning or the use of meat that was tainted before being canned. According to A. J. Wedderburn of the United States Department of Agriculture but little risk will be run by the purchaser who carefully examines the outside of the cans which he buys. The heads of the cans should be slightly concave, which shows that they were hot when sealed. If the heads are convex it shows that decomposition has commenced in the can.

The total value of the food supply of the United States has been estimated at $5,000,000,000. According to Dr. Wiley's estimate 90 per cent of this is adulterated, or $4,500,000,000. According to the American Grocer's figures, which are the most favorable, not more than 10 per cent of the adulteration is harmful or injurious to the health. Taking these statements the result shows that there is $450,000,000 worth of poisonous food products put annually on the country and $4,550,000,000 of fraudulent products.—Chicago Tribune, May 7, '99.

UNKNOWN DRUGS IN FOOD.

Freezene, preservaline, freezeem, rosaline, and laktone are things few people know of, but that they take these adulterants into their stomachs, was shown by Professor A. S. Mitchell, analytical chemist of the Dairy and Food commission of Wisconsin to the Senatorial Committee on Pure Food Investigation yesterday. Professor Mitchell gave the committee some important information. As a result Senator Mason has had several manufacturers subpoenaed and they will be called on to-day probably to tell the committee something about their compounds.

"The use of antiseptics as preservatives," said Professor Mitchell, "has become alarmingly great. They are used as coloring and to stop the development of germs in dairy products; also in chopped meats, bulk oysters, fish, hams, and possibly corned beef. Any antiseptic is deleterious because it stops the digestive process. Freezene, which is claimed to take the place of ice, is a solution of formaldehyde and is a deleterious preservative."

The speaker gave the committee a bottle of this compound. Another package, marked preservaline, was an antiseptic for preserving meat, and Professor Mitchell said it contained sulphite of sodium and should have no part in foods. Rosaline, he said, was used in coloring sausage and was a mixture of niter, salt, and borax. Freezeem was used, he said, for chipped beef and contained sulphite of sodium and coloring matter. He also showed another preservative compound which contained salicylic acid. This was used in preserving fruits and was not sold but was given to anyone who purchased the process. He further stated that antiseptics were used in some bottled beer.

Professor Mitchell said the public should be informed when buying baking powder that it is sold under deceptive labels. It was a question, he said, if the consumer was not injured by eating it. As to its wholesomeness, the speaker thought the tendency to be deleterious.

He also said there should be a national law prohibiting the coloring of oleomargarine, because it increased its use. He said filled cheese should be inhibited. He showed how spices were adulterated with ground cocoanut shells, buckwheat middlings, and other substances; they were all deleterious to health he thought. The subject of extracts were then gone into extensively and the adulterants used. Some extract of lemon, he said, was made from ribbon grass and other substances were used as substitutes for vanilla extracts. . . .

George W. Smith, of Jefferson Park, showed how pancake flour was mixed and adulterated with cheaper grades. Professor Hallberg, who testified on Monday on alum baking powders, was allowed to explain his position, by qualifying that the form of alum left in finished bread was in the aluminol hydrate. Chemist George C. Rew followed, and reiterated much of what he had said the day previous. . . . [Syrups and jellies were also treated of.]

The ingredients used mainly in preserving foods were alcohol, sugar, salt, and vinegar. Under the laws of the other countries any other ingredients for preservatives were forbidden. These laws are stringent in Germany and France, although he thought the English law was better, because it makes provision regarding foods manufactured there and those imported and exported.

Mr. Lewis suggested that a national law governing pure food and drink was of great importance both to the consumers in general and the manufacturers of this country who desire to carry on a legitimate business without having to compete with foreigners, who resort to fraudulent methods in adulteration and misrepresentation. To make such a law felt and to have it enforced, he suggested a commission, whose duty would be to prevent the marketing of any articles of food or drink, domestic or imported, that were misrepresented. His idea was not to inhibit the adulteration of food, but to make the manufacturers label it as adulterated. He would let the commission say to what extent the articles should be adulterated, and after the process had been completed it should be certified to and be stamped with the government's stamp.

Dr. Wiley then resumed his testimony and gave further information relative to articles of adulterated food sold in this country. . . . He classed adulteration under two heads—coloring and preserving. He cited the method used in coloring vegetables, such as green peas with salt of zinc or copper, which is poisonous.

SHORTHAND.

The most important prerequisite for becoming a speedy writer is that the system selected shall be capable of high speed. The ordinary stenographic student cannot afford to apply himself to the study of an inferior system. The safe rule is to select a system which is written by a large number of practical reporters, and the text-books of which emanate from practical men. Especially should the student beware of systems which are offered as "new and easy."

The system used at Graceland College is the Graham or Pitmanic system, and the text-book is the one written by Isaac S. Dement, the world's fastest shorthand writer, who, by the use of shorthand as there set forth, has amply demonstrated its speed qualities. This style of shorthand is written, without serious modification, by more than one half the stenographers of the United States.

The many decided advantages gained to one possessing a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting, either as a part of his education, or as a means of livelihood, are so self-evident as to require no stating and no young persons should fail to complete this part of their education before entering upon a business career. We know of no profession offering more flattering inducements in the way of congenial employment for the young man or woman, and there are certainly few lines of work which yield more bountiful returns, either financially or as a means of advancement.

TYPEWRITING.

Too great attention cannot be paid to the acquirement of accuracy and speed in typewriting. The typewriting machine is so simple and easy of construction, and so easy to understand, that any ordinary individual can write words and sentences after a few minutes' study of the machine, but to gain speed and accuracy much practice is necessary. The salary paid to a stenographer is in direct ratio to the amount and quality of the work done in a certain time, and it is evident that the operator who can write two thousand words per hour can command a larger salary than the one who can write only one thousand words in the same time. Realizing this fact, more than usual attention is paid to the acquirement of speed and accuracy in the operation of the typewriter.

The Board of Trustees have recently purchased a number of new typewriters, both the Remington and the Smith-Premier, standard machines, and this department is now fully equipped. It is comparatively a new thing to many that the student can be taught to write on the machine without looking at the keyboard, but experiments have demonstrated the fact that "typewriting by touch" is the only correct method. The advantages of this method are obvious, as the operator is enabled to keep his eyes on his notes, instead of being forced to glance continually from the note book to the machine, and from the machine back to the note book. To operate the typewriter entirely by the "touch" method is taught here with the first lesson. In connection with this course special attention is paid to punctuation, paragraphing, folding letters, addressing envelopes, the transcription of shorthand notes, and all that is required of a modern high grade operator.

BRO. R. J. ANTHONY DEAD.

Brother Robert J. Anthony, one of the Seven Presidents of Seventy, died at Elsinore, Utah, in his mission field, at eleven a. m., on Friday, May 26. This we learn from a telegram sent by Bro. David W. Wight, who was with Bro. Anthony during his recent illness and at his death. Instructions were forwarded to Bro. Wight to send the remains to Lamoni for burial from the home of the family.

Bro. Anthony died at his post of duty in the field, a veteran in the service, having entered the ministry as an active missionary in the ranks of the Seventy in February, 1877. He has labored in the Southern mission, in Iowa and Nebraska, but mostly in the Rocky Mountain mission. He was well known to the ministry and the saints, among whom he was esteemed for his extended labors and kindly disposition. He has passed on to his reward.

His death came a sudden and severe visitation to Sister Anthony and her children. They have the sincere sympathy of saints and friends in their sore bereavement.

SOCIETY ISLANDS MISSIONARIES.

Bro. and Sr. J. W. Peterson, of late laboring in the Eastern Iowa district and residing at Clinton, Iowa, left Lamoni on Friday, the 26th inst., to take up missionary labor in the Society Islands under general church appointment.

They go via St. Joseph and Independence, Missouri, Salt Lake City, Utah, and San Francisco, and expect to sail from the Pacific coast some time in June, stopping off a few days at Honolulu, Hawaii, if practicable.

Bro. and Sr. Peterson have done missionary work in the field in Wisconsin and Iowa, also in other localities, hence they enter upon their work with some degree of experience in the arduous duties they are to share with Bro. and Sr. Burton and others of the mission force in the islands. They go believing they have been appointed by divine direction, and while anticipating new experiences requiring courage, endurance, and added patience, they enter upon their work cheerfully, believing that He who called will sustain and bless and strengthen for the conflict and extra demands required under the new conditions to be met.

In evidence of mutual interest and good will a company of Lamoni saints called at the home of Bro. and Sr. Samuel Ackerly, parents of Sr. Peterson, to wish the missionaries God speed, and to leave a token of their good will. Bishop Kelley was in charge of the informal gathering, and in response to his invitation a number of appropriate addresses were made by sisters and brethren. Bro. J. R. Lambert, on behalf of the company, presented an album, and expressed the good wishes of friends in behalf of the recipients.

A good spirit was present and all felt that Bro. and Sr. Peterson entered upon their long journey and labors under reasonably favorable auspices. They go with the hearty good wishes and prayers of fellow saints in the bonds of mutual faith and love. We commend them to Bro. and Sr. Burton and to the native saints, by whom they will be gladly welcomed.

May God bless them with success to the good of his cause and, in due time, a safe return to home and native land. The work undertaken is not ordinary, in some respects, but work, appointed by the Master is also not ordinary in the line of privilege. It is an honor, a blessing, to anyone to render service for God and humanity; and they who give their lives in service to the cause of Christ shall share with him as fellow heirs of eternal life and its glory in the kingdom of God.

BRIGHAMITE IGNORANCE OR DISHONESTY.

During our recent visit in St. Joseph, Missouri, we learned that Elders C. C. Steffensen, and F. H. Nolder of Utah had represented there that President Joseph Smith had taught that when a man united with any of the factions of the church other than the Reorganization he by that act lost all the authority he had hitherto held under Joseph the Seer. In proof of this they carried with them a copy of the following quotation from SAINTS' HERALD, vol. 4, p. 158:—

The President then (in substance) made the following remarks. All official acts of any elder, while acting under the authority of the old church, are recognized by us as valid; but the acts of those elders who received their authority from any of the factious organizations, such as Brigham's, Brewster's, Strang's, etc., are not recognized by us as valid; for whenever any of these factions were organized, each member received his authority from that faction; hence whenever individuals, claiming authority under the church as organized by the first Joseph, became members of any faction, they immediately became divested of all authority except that received from the faction to which they had joined themselves.

These wily emissaries of Utah reason that this being the position of President Smith, and William Marks having united with Strang, and subsequently having ordained President Smith, the authority of his own ordination is thus repudiated. To the uninformed it seems that they have scored a point. But what are the facts? The above quotation, stated with so much assurance by these men, is taken from the minutes of a "Special Conference" held at Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 25, 26, 1863, over which John A. McIntosh presided; and O. E. Holcomb, Sr. and Nathan Lindsey were clerks. The minutes are signed at close by these parties as president and clerks.

The name of Joseph Smith does not occur in the minutes from beginning to end, and there is no evidence of his presence at the conference. It was then President McIntosh and not President Smith who is reported to have made these remarks. There would have been some excuse for Elders Steffensen and Nolder presenting this as the opinion of Elder McIntosh, but even this admits of doubt, as the report does not claim to give the words, but only the substance of what was said, and in such reports mistakes and misunderstandings easily occur.

But for these elders to present this as the sentiment of President Smith, when the document from which they copied is signed "John A. McIntosh, President," looks suspicious to say the least. These fellows may be trying this deception elsewhere. Look out for them. "Evil communications corrupt good manners."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

JEPHTHAH'S DAUGHTER.

Did Jephthah the Gileadite offer up his daughter as a burnt offering?

The account given of the occurrence goes to show that Jephthah made a vow, in the following words:—

And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering. — Judges 11:30, 31.

He was successful against the children of Ammon, returned to his house, and his daughter met him as he so returned. He was sorrowful because of her meeting him, but said:—

I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back.—Verse 35.

His daughter acquiesced in the vow, and said:—

Do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth.—Verse 36.

And after she had bewailed her fate for two months she returned to her father, "who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed." (V. 39.)

If he did according to the vow, he offered her as a burnt offering.

HISTORICAL BUILDING AT DES MOINES, IOWA.

Early last week the Editor received an invitation from Mr. Charles Aldrich, Curator and Secretary for the Historical Department of Iowa, to visit the capital city on May 17, and attend the ceremonies of the laying of the corner stone of the Historical Building, for which the State Legislature has made appropriation of some $50,000.

In response to this invitation Bishop E. L. Kelley and the Editor went to Des Moines on Tuesday, the 16th, to be on time for the services set for two p. m. on the 17th.

On the morning of the 17th we visited the capitol and found Curator Charles Aldrich at his post. He kindly left his work and took us to the site where the building is located. A wing only is being built now, some 68 x 68 feet in size; the main building to be hereafter erected. We returned to the capitol when Mr. Aldrich introduced us to the Governor, Leslie M. Shaw, the Secretary of State, and a number of others; some local men connected with the State government, others from other parts of the State, senators, representatives, judges, newspaper men, and others.

We found the Governor and the array of goodly notable men affable and kind. We were much impressed with the air of cheerful comradeship and the spirit of good fellowship noticeable in the treatment of visitors by these gentlemen of State affairs.

It had rained during the night and early morning, and the air was chill, so much so that the masters of ceremonies had decided to arrange for the exercises to be held in the rotunda of the capitol building, where a stand and chairs had been provided.

At 2:30 p. m. Governor Leslie M. Shaw, in the presence of several hundreds, perhaps thousands, of citizens, many of them men distinguished for long and faithful service for the State at home and abroad, notably Hon. John A. Kasson, ex-Senator and a noted diplomat; Hon. Wm. B. Allison, and Hon. John H. Gear, now Senators from Iowa; Hon. James M. Harlan, and others; laid, officially, the corner stone of the Historical Building; the ceremony occupying but a few brief minutes of time.

It was but a little ways to the capitol, and in a moment the crowd swarmed over the grassy grounds, and up the steps into the building, each seemingly intent on getting a "good place." A number to whom tickets had been given for "reserved seats," took it more leisurely, thinking that their tickets would secure them seats. But this was a mistake, for the populace, the democratic multitude, preempted the seats as they reached them, tickets or no tickets, so that those who proceeded leisurely, had the privilege of keeping their tickets as souvenirs, and to stand during the exercises.

The exercises were full of interest, for the reasons that they were a part of the event which marked an epoch in the history of Iowa, and that the men who bore the principal burdens were men who had grown up with the State, and were now aged men, whose last appearances on the stage of human action might be heralded at any moment.

The call to order was made by Hon. Azro B. F. Hildreth, of Charles City, the oldest newspaper publisher in the State. The invocation was offered by Rev. William Salter, of Burlington, the oldest Congregationalist pastor in the State. The president of the day was Hon. James M. Harlan, the first Commissioner of Public Instruction in the State. The address was by Hon. John A. Kasson, who has almost spent a lifetime in the public service of the State, as representative, senator, United States commissioner and ambassador, one of the best known and most trusted of the men of the State. His address was the crowning feature of the exercises, and being published will long be read with interest by the Iowan, and those not of the State.

Hon. Theodore S. Parvin, the surviving member of the first territorial legislature, now eighty-two years of age, but still hale, gave a short speech on the history of Iowa, and the struggle for statehood. And then Charles Aldrich, the Curator and Secretary of the Historical Department, read a paper setting forth the long and difficult labors of himself and a few others to get the people of Iowa and its legislature to see and feel the necessity for the building which was now an assured fact.

The benediction was a model of brief commendation and appeal to God, offered by a long time friend of Curator Aldrich, Rev. Father B. C. Lenehan, of the Catholic Church, Boone, Iowa.

The Governor issued invitations to five hundred persons to meet Messrs. Harlan, Kasson, and Allison at a reception held in the Savery House, the principal hotel of the place, in the evening; and of course the Editor and his comrade, Bishop Kelley, were present, to see how such things are done.

We report that we were treated well by the gentlemen whom we met at the capital; and enjoyed the occasion, in which we saw and heard so much that was pleasing and instructive.

The people of Iowa have reason to feel a deep sense of pleasure at the success which follows the efforts of her indefatigable servant, Hon. Charles Aldrich.

A noticeable feature of the occasion was the fact that on the small stand from which the exercises were conducted, there were one acting Governor, and four ex-Governors: Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, present incumbent; W. S. Larrabee, J. H. Gear, F. M. Drake, and Frank Jackson, a thing that may not occur again during the history of the State.

ADULTERATED FOODS.

Our cover article, "Ninety Per Cent of Our Food Adulterated," is presented for two reasons; viz., as a warning to our readers against such deleterious articles, and as showing the striking fulfillment of the word of the Lord revealed to the church in the Word of Wisdom.

In 1833, while building the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, it is said that the question of foods and proper beverages came up for discussion. Following such discussion the Word of Wisdom was revealed through the Prophet, Joseph Smith, and from which we quote the following significant statement:—

Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation.—D. C. 86:1.

The whole revelation contains a code designed to insure the physical and to promote the moral and spiritual salvation of the people.

It was little thought in that early day of simplicity and of practical pioneer life that the time would come when the selfish commercial spirit would put upon the market such general supplies of inferior and adulterated foods as now are offered the people and readily preferred by many to the wholesome products Nature has provided. But the far-seeing prescience of the Revealer of this hygienic code has been emphasized by modern developments, of which we have but a partial statement in the articles republished on the HERALD cover.

The Word of Wisdom has not been studied or appreciated as it should have been and should be studied and lived by. It is a great blessing, a means of incalculable good to the people of God, and those who are wise will include a strict observance of its provisions among the commands or injunctions to "live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God."

Modern systems of hygiene and other health-promoting and moral-promoting theories by which the world is being benefited are practically based upon the Word of Wisdom. It is common, in the Babylonish spirit of the times, to follow after fads and gaudy and inferior substitutes, in religion, in morals, in dress, in food—in everything; such is the unsubstantial character of the world's inspirations and drifting.

The people of God, if we understand correctly, are called to apply truth—sound and correct principles—to all phases of life; to social, to physical, to moral, to spiritual life, that in them there may be a realization and demonstration of the power of truth—actually, really, practically.

As we view it, there is no ground for halting "between two opinions;" but there should be a prompt recognition and application of truth to all divisions and phases of life. When there is, results will be commensurate with the Divine will, otherwise there cannot be a realization of our hopes as a people.

Salvation results from divine and human cooperation. It has been well said that man cannot do God's part in the execution of the work, neither can God do man's part. There must be a union of the two; the one responsive and obedient to the other, to save the race.

The recent investigations made under government auspices, of the celebrated embalmed beef industry, and now being conducted to other lines of food supplies, together with the passage of "pure food" bills, the appointment of food inspectors, the importation of foreign adulterations, the existence of the "National Pure Food Association," etc., etc., are significant in this connection.

Many of our people are seeking to observe the Word of Wisdom, in full or in part. This is encouraging. The truth remains, however, that it should have been studied, understood, and put in practice from the beginning right on until now.

The faithful observers of the Mosaic code of hygiene and morals are pointed out to-day in the good-conditioned Jews who have been practically immuned from the scourges that have repeatedly decimated the millions of other peoples in Asia and Europe.

Why not the Latter Day Saints be distinguished in a similar way? Why not be known as a people in whom is manifest all the conditions and results designed in their calling? Why not distinguished, not only by belief in "doctrine," but by compliance with all that has proceeded from the mouth of God?

Is it saying too much to state that in the individual and collective character of the people of God there should be an exposition of morality, health, intelligence, goodness—"all things that pertain to life and godliness," in harmony with the divine command to "be ye perfect"? If so, will someone point out which one of the virtues we may safely dispense with, what principle of truth could consistently be ignored or improved upon.

It is necessary to have correct ideals, true standards; if we would attain unto the Christlike stature we must "aim high." Let the world be careless and drift from God and truth if it will persist in so doing; the people of God cannot be true to God, to posterity and fellow man, and to themselves, by hesitation, by indifference, by carelessness or drowsiness. The times demand prayerful, studious alertness if we are to be among the wise virgins.

WHO IS IT?

The following dialogue with accompanying explanatory remarks, comes to us sent by an elder who must have been where he saw conduct that seemed reckless, or foolishly careless:—

This dialogue is not an imaginary picture, but one that pained the heart of more than one. In publishing it it may enable some to "see themselves as others see them," and possibly call a halt along lines dangerous to the ministry.

A DIALOGUE.

"Hello! Who have we here?"
 "Which? Those people down there on the walk?"
 "Yes."
 "O, those are Mormons, here for an outing."
 "Is that so? You have Mormons here, do you? Humph! Well, there are some fine looking girls among them. Say, there is one fellow that seems to be in demand among the girls—that fat fellow that always eats his three meals a day, with a girl on each arm there now. Who do you suppose he is?"
 "O, he is some big man; a bishop or an apostle."
 "Say, I wouldn't mind being an apostle myself in that crowd. Say, that fellow is onto his job, ain't he? Those girls take to him like flies to a cabbage."
 Who were they?

AN OBSERVER.

LAMONI'S PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The public schools of Lamoni made a creditable exhibition of the work of the pupils, at the public school building of the East Side, on Friday, the 26th inst. Exhibits in kindergarten work, in writing, mathematics, drawing, map molding, of nature studies, composition work, etc., etc., filled the three rooms of the second floor and were inspected by patrons of the schools. The occasion was marked by a display of unusual interest by the public and served to bring the schools and their patrons into closer touch and rapport.

The good work of the scholars and the evidences of improvement constantly being made in educational work are gratifying. Such exhibits are missionaries in the good cause of progress in educational lines, and deserve substantial, hearty encouragement. Methods, like men, are links in the development of the times. The past is creditable to those who lived in and made up its record, so far as they did their best; but to assert that the present and future should halt contented with the attainments of the past, is to fail to move forward in the progressive march of the general economy of nature. The children of to-day will be called upon to meet new issues and to answer to demands differing from the problems solved by their fathers and mothers, as succeeding generations will meet other problems in the new phases of life constantly opening to the race. It is our work, as it will be theirs, to meet whatever issues present themselves for solution, that every link in the chain of human development may be properly welded into the great whole, in harmony with the divine economy.

Educational work is an important part of the divine work; divine work means development and attainment. Children should be well trained and as fully qualified as possible for the responsibilities and privileges of present and future life, both of which are really one in the life and welfare of humanity.

It will be well for the race when parents and all having interest in the rising and risen generation shall recognize the necessity of applying the broad spirit and principles of education—light and truth—to all the phases and problems of life. In proportion as this is done, individuals, families, the race, move forward; in proportion as neglected, there is failure to so move, and resultant loss.

When men and women learn to look carefully for truth and exercise conscientious care to apply it in all their thoughts, policies, and acts, there will be a steady forward redemption of the race from moral, social, religious, and other evils; and until there is such application there is little or no ground for hope of a better day. However, the manifest diffusion of light in the world encourages the hope of ultimate overrulings to the deliverance of humanity from existing evils.

Success to the cause of education, not simply in the scholastic sense, but in the broad sense in which it comprehends all truth—all principles having in view the emancipation of the world.

A FINANCIAL PROPHECY.

Berlin, May 18.—The Vossische Zeitung to-day prints a solemn warning for Wall Street. It says the death of Roswell P. Flower missed by a hair occasioning a fearful crash. It asserts no insolvencies resulted because the New York banks, heeding good advice, exercised due caution. Industrial stocks it declares, were sustained only because the Rockefellers and Vanderbilts leaped into the breach. Yet, despite the fact hundreds of millions of dollars were offered freely to calm the market, all explanations cannot conceal the fact a panic reigned on Wall Street last Saturday.

The storm is undoubtedly past, says the Vossische Zeitung, but possibly the skies have cleared only temporarily. Unprejudiced, calm observers claim the market will long remain weak.

The Zeitung concludes with the dismal prophecy that "the monumental collapse may, thanks to the exertions of the millionaires, be distant, but unquestionably a day of reckoning for the commercial sins being committed in America will come."

About six weeks ago a "slump" or fall in prices affecting the whole list of stocks, occurred in Wall Street. Careful observers see in the present conditions and methods that which must finally end in crash and disaster. Those who comprehend the present erroneous and speculative system which forms the basis of present financial and business methods, and those who in the light of the word look for "perilous times," "distress of nations," are not looking for permanent financial prosperity. The Vossische Zeitung is among the discerning ones, in financial and industrial matters at least. Its statements and prediction are strikingly in harmony with other predictions of an authoritative character. The present and absorbing thought of the financial world is "to get gain;" the almighty dollar is worshipped to the exclusion of higher ideals. God is forgotten and humanity largely trodden under foot in the mad rush for wealth and power and pleasure. Such a spirit does not build upon true, permanent foundation principles, hence must fail and fall and pass away with its work in due time.

As we approach the time of the end, the reign of right under Christ, and of which the great latter-day work is the harbinger, the erroneous and selfish and temporary character of human systems—not only religious systems—but financial, economical, and social systems—appears, is emphasized, and made apparent. That there will not be true and equitable regulations of the social and industrial world until "He reigns whose right it is," becomes patent to the careful observer. All passing events are portents of his coming and reign—the reign of right principles in him and by him under God.

THE JEW IN EUROPE AND AFRICA.

Considerable anti-Jewish sentiment continues to manifest itself among the French people and in the national legislature itself. The Algerian debate in the Chamber of Deputies shows a stronger growth of the agitation. However, there are also strong forces at work in behalf of the Jews and against the "anti-Semites," as the following extracts indicate:—

Paris, May 19.—The Algerian debate occupied the Chamber of Deputies to-day. The anti-Jew agitation is growing stronger daily. Max Regis' statement that the Jews of Algeria to-day resembled the Jews of Egypt of old and like them should be driven out, has spread with pernicious effect. Regis' acquittal shows the hostility to the Jews all over France outside of Paris.

On the other hand, the opponents of Regis are not slow in expressing their anger. After his acquittal last night an angry crowd followed him through the streets leading to the railway station, and he had to call on the soldiers for protection.

The mob hooted the soldiers, and when an attempt was made to disperse the crowd it defended itself with stones and clubs, injuring several officers and policemen.

At Algeria, where Regis was once the Mayor, the news of his acquittal prompted a mob to raid the Jewish quarter. The military was summoned and lodged fifty of the rioters in jail.

A resumption of the discussion on the 24th resulted in an attack on the anti-Semites, which ended in a disgraceful uproar, amid cries of "Down with the Jews," and which rendered it necessary to separate belligerents and clear the chamber.

What the ultimate may be remains to be seen. We believe, however, that the present anti-Jewish sentiment in both Russia and France will ultimate in good to the people of Israel. The reaction in favor of Dreyfus, the Jewish soldier of France whose case has become one of international interest and concern in Europe, seems destined to have a decided bearing upon the future of the Jews of France and of Europe entire.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Columbus Scott, Fraser, Iowa, May 20:—

After preaching eight times at Boonesboro I came to this place yesterday and opened up last night. If we get a hearing will be here for some days. Bro. George Thorburn is here and aids in the work. But, it rains, and it rains, and it rains! How long! And it remains so cool! But we try to be hopeful.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

President Joseph Smith, wife, and baby—Richard Clark Smith—also Patriarch A. H. Smith and Elder R. M. Elvin, were passengers to Independence from Lamoni on the 26th inst. All expected to spend "Rally Day" with the Independence saints on Sunday, the 28th, after which President Smith goes to Denver, Colorado, Bro. Elvin to his field, and the others will return home.

A sad visitation of death came upon the people of Lamoni on Saturday, the 27th inst., which though confined to one family is felt deeply by the entire community. Two little sons of Bro. and Sr. Alma Bennett, Alvin and Frederick, aged about thirteen and nine, bright boys and the only sons of the family, were drowned in a pond, not far from the town. The older boy was bathing and got beyond his depth and the younger lost his life in a brave and manly effort to rescue his brother. The sad affair has plunged the family and the entire community into mourning. Bro. and Sr. Bennett and remaining children have the sincere sympathy of saints and all other citizens of Lamoni.

Decoration Day Memorial exercises were introduced by the usual Memorial sermon of the Sunday preceding, on the 28th, at the saints' church, under the auspices of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, including volunteers of the Spanish-American war. Comrade H. A. Stebbins delivered an excellent sermon, prayer being offered by Comrade J. C. Clapp. The usual Decoration Day services will be held at the cemeteries on the 30th inst.

As an indication of the effective work being done in Graceland College, Bishop Kelley reports that Brn. W. D. Bullard, Virgil Scott, Mark Smith, and E. L. Kelley, Jr., students in the Commercial Department, have aided him much of late in taking letters at his dictation, in shorthand, and transcribing them on the typewriter. The work was well done, and stands in evidence of the good work being done by both faculty and students. It was such as would pass muster in any business establishment.

Bishop Kelley has received, through the courtesy of Bro. T. W. Chatburn, a box of rare and valuable geological specimens, collected and arranged by an expert miner in the West. They were forwarded for presentation to the Museum of Graceland.

Bro. D. S. Crawley writes from Sumner, Oklahoma, May 22. He has been from home about a month preaching the word at various places and aiding Brn. R. W. Davis and W. S. Macrae intent work. Eight had been baptized at Morrison, with good interest continuing. He commends the preaching of Bro. James Yates, a young priest who has of late begun to preach according to his calling.

Emilio Castelar, the distinguished Spanish republican orator and statesman, died at Murcia, Spain, May 25. Castelar was prominent in Spain and in Europe as a friend of the people and opposed to the traditions of the Spanish monarchy. He did much as a politician, a journalist, and an educator, to disseminate republican political ideas. He was a patriot, an advocate of the rights of man universal.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard wrote from Jeffersonville, Illinois, the 26th inst., where he was preaching "every night." He was enroute to Tennessee, but expected to visit Lamoni on church business about the middle of June.

Elders Robert Oehring and Frank Steffe, appointed to missionary work in Germany and Switzerland by the General Conference of 1898, expect to sail June 3 for Hamburg from Boston. Success to the brethren in their work in foreign lands.

Original Articles.

"WHY PEOPLE DO NOT GO TO CHURCH."

In the Herald of April 19 I noticed an article under the above caption, which to my mind comes far short of answering the question, or giving the reason why people absent themselves from church. I indorse what is said in the article as to the qualifications of the ministry. I believe in a ministry that is progressive, and an honor and a credit to the cause they represent. But there are two sides to this question. First, what is it that causes us to have a desire to go to church? If our desires are properly educated we go to church because we love to associated with our brethren, and we want to see the work prosper; and we are always anxious for an opportunity to say or do something in its defense.

If we are alive in the work, we don't stop to ask, Who is going to preach to-day; but we go to church feeling that it is our duty, and a great privilege, and because we love to do our Father's will; neither does it matter to us whether the sermon is delivered in grammatical terms or not; but we consider the spirit in which it is given, and we glean from it some precious gem of truth that is worth treasuring up in the storehouse of knowledge, that in due time it may bring forth fruit unto righteousness. And if, perchance, the sermon is delivered in an unbecoming or uncouth manner, if we have the spirit of the work, we will quietly and gently suggest to the elder wherein he could improve in his mode of presenting the truth instead of absenting ourselves from church, thereby starving ourselves and injuring the work.

If we absent ourselves from church it is just as difficult to convince an unbeliever that we are sincere in what we profess as it is for others who fall short of fulfilling the law in other matters.

There are no just reasons why a member should absent himself from church.

In my experience with the work, as a rule, I have noticed where members have grown cold and indifferent, they try to shift the responsibility, and blame the ministry for their neglect of duty; and I hear some of the following charges made: The ministry are either too proud, or too extravagant, or dishonest, or too aggressive, or too smooth, or too ignorant, or depend too much on their education, and don't preach with the Spirit, and a host of other faults; and these same members will generally tell you that they don't propose to move an inch until these matters are rectified, but they will not raise a finger to help rectify them.

If all the above charges were true, would we be justified in absenting ourselves from church? I answer, No; our presence would be needed the more. Suppose we reverse matters. We will say that an elder goes to a certain locality to preach, and in the course of his sermons he shows from the sacred record wherein all other churches are in error, and tells of the signs following the believer, and of the blessed condition we will attain to by and by from our having been identified with a church that is in strict accord with God's law. And he tells the people, "By their fruits ye shall know them," and of the gifts and blessings of the Spirit, and when he has finished, an unbeliever steps up and says, Well, elder, that is good doctrine; but the people who profess that kind of doctrine, in too many instances, their lives do not correspond with your preaching; for some get drunk, and some gamble, and some lie and swear, and some are dishonest, and they quarrel much among themselves, and hardly ever attend their own meetings, and I have also heard some of them slander their own preachers just awful.

Now, I ask, would the elder be justified under those conditions in withdrawing from the ministry, because all professing to be saints did not supplement his teaching by a godly walk? If the layman is justified in absenting himself from church because some of the ministry do not do right or do not suit him, the elder might on the same ground be justified in withdrawing his help and labor because some of the saints' conduct is not in line with his preaching. The ministry are expected to feed the sheep; but suppose some of the sheep bunt him out of the pen, then it is rather a difficult matter to feed them.

We are told that a minister, in order to be successful, must be above reproach. Yes; his life should be such that no one could truthfully say aught against him; but the church has never had a ministry but what the tongue of scandal has had an abundance to say about them, and has tried to destroy the elders' influence for good. In Luke it is recorded that Jesus admonished his disciples thus:—

And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.— Luke 21:34, 35.

Jesus surely knew the last days would be days of care. Yes; it is a day of unrighteous cares. It is a day of pride and sinful pleasures; people are so burdened with cares that they have no time to be bothered with religion and preachers; they must keep up with the procession at any cost.

Again, the same thought is presented in Luke 14:18, in the parable of the supper: "And they all with one consent began to make excuse." One had "bought a piece of ground;" another had traded for "five yoke of oxen;" another had "married a wife."

It is the same to-day. I have seen Latter Day Saints who make a loud profession, so busy on Sunday that they could spare no time to go to church, and would even pass the place of worship when meeting was in session, carrying on their common business affairs of life. I wonder if the elder's conduct had anything to do with the individual being so busy on that particular time? I think not.

In Doctrine and Covenants the Lord has given this commandment:—

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day.—59:2.

Please notice the object of going to the house of prayer is that we may more fully keep ourselves "unspotted from the world." No one can be a true saint and ignore the social feature of the gospel.

I will now try to show why people do not go to church. First, the preacher, in order to be successful, must be a sensational preacher. Second, some get offended and allow the offense to grow into envy and hatred, until it has cankered their souls. The good book says: "He that hateth his brother is a murderer, and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." The individual who suffers himself to get into this condition has committed suicide, in a spiritual sense. Third, some become so involved with the cares of this life that they lose their desire to attend church; they have lost the spirit of the work, hence are not in harmony with it. Fourth, others like the seed that fell on stony ground, "they have no root in themselves," and are tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine.

Is the preacher responsible for these conditions? If anyone loses his desire to go to church, no one is to blame but himself. I believe if the majority of the saints did their duty the ministry would have more time to devote to educating themselves up to the proper standard. If we have the spirit of the work there is nothing that will cause us to absent ourselves from church.

The ministry should be examples to the flock; but on the other hand the flock should honor them in their calling, and help sustain them. We should not seek to make a scapegoat of the ministry, or anyone else. In short, men have become lovers of pleasure and self, more than lovers of God, hence have no desire to go to church.

BOZEMAN, Montana, April 22.

"WHY PEOPLE DO NOT COME TO CHURCH."

In the Herald for April 19 the above subject was treated upon, and I fear too much truth expressed in the reasons given; but if we have any representing the church as traveling ministers as pictured out in that article, there is a wrong somewhere. Hands have been laid on "suddenly" by some one, and the instruction that "every elder, priest, teacher, and deacon are to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him" is neglected, or the one ordained has neglected to cultivate his gifts, and failed to honor his calling. In either case greater care should be used both by those whose duty it is to ordain and the ones ordained. The brother is right in saying, the minister "must have a message of interest." Surely the gospel is that message of the greatest interest to mankind, and when delivered under the influence of the Spirit of God will always interest those who are seeking the truth, even though it be not clothed in learned terms.

The Apostles Peter and John were enabled to interest the people in their day, but they "perceived" that these apostles "were unlearned and ignorant men," and they "marveled" and "took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." (Acts 4:13.) Paul says:—

I came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom [men's wisdom], declaring unto you the testimony of God. . . . And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power.—1 Cor. 2:1, 4.

There is the grand secret of success in preaching the gospel, and every minister may possess it; and it is his duty to possess that power, and possessing that he need not be under the necessity either of boasting of or pleading for his ignorance.

I do not present these examples to justify our remaining in ignorance, nor yet boasting of our ignorance; but I believe it is the privilege and duty of every one, minister or layman to cultivate our talents and apply ourselves to the study of all truth, and seek to become wise and learned in the things of God, that we may be workmen that need not to be ashamed.

But I fear the brother has not told all the causes "why people do not come to church," nor shall I pretend to unfold them all, but I will point out a few. It has been foretold that men would be "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." The time has come that people want entertainment; they are not so very anxious to learn truth, and the man or men who can supply that want are the ones they will flock to hear. I once announced a series of meetings; the citizens inquired of some of the saints what kind of a speaker the preacher was, as, with profanity, they declared they "did not care what he talked about, if he was only a good speaker." They had itching ears, and they wanted them tickled; and I am sorry to say this itching is not altogether confined to the world; but it is one of the causes why some professed Latter Day Saints do not come to church.

The grand object for which we should go to church is to worship God, and to learn more perfectly his will, and to hold sweet communion with the people of God under the influence of the Holy Spirit, that we may be advanced in the divine life. And when this is our united purpose, I care not how unlearned they may be who break the bread of life, we shall be instructed, because God will be with both speaker and hearer in preaching meetings or in prayer and testimony meetings, and we shall never return empty, nor yet without being royally entertained.

It is very discouraging for a minister, young or old, when he takes his place at the sacred desk to realize that he is not the person some present want to hear, but being called there he must endeavor to do his duty, although he is conscious that those who do not want to hear him will not uphold him by their prayers of faith. I once made a visit to one of our city branches and was told by a veteran in the cause that he heard a young lady member, who was looked upon as a prominent worker in some department, express her desire for young preachers; she did not like to hear old men with cracked voices.

I love to hear the young preachers, and rejoice to know that the Lord is raising up an army of young men to take the place of these old veterans who have spent a life in the service and are still willing to lift up those voices which have been "cracked" by incessant labor and numberless privations and hardships; and I trust the young will be just as courageous and true to the cause as the worn out, "cracked voiced" veterans have been, and more abundantly. But some will think that the young lady above mentioned had other motives in desiring to hear "young preachers" than that of a deep and fervent desire to worship God and learn his will. These are some of the things that have caused a lack of zeal and a lethargy in some portions of the church. It is not all with the ministry. A spirit of indifference has enveloped the world, so far as religion is concerned, and it would be more than miraculous of the Church of Christ was not more ir less affected by it.

In looking over my journal the other day I found the following recorded, but which had passed from my memory. It was on the 19th of May, 1896, as we sat at the breakfast table, wife related to me what she had experienced during the silent watches of the night, as follows: "In the night I was awakened by a voice telling me not to give way to evil, for that was the work of the adversary, and it was his business to try to lead us from God; and many were presented before me who were giving way and growing careless, not caring for God or his truth; and I was told that it was our duty to live day by day as though it was our last. I prayed to God for strength that I might resist the power of the adversary. This made such an impression upon my mind that I could not sleep for a long time, and I thought of the church and the members thereof, and I prayed that all might have strength to resist the adversary, for I felt that many were careless and indifferent, for I saw them pass before me, but I did not seem to recognize who they were."

When my wife told me this she was deeply in earnest, and the tears welled into her eyes, for she realized it was from God. I was satisfied that it was a divine warning, and in our next prayer meeting I read it to the saints, who also felt the divinity of it. Since that time I have realized that a state of lethargy and carelessness has been creeping over officers and members in various parts, though I had forgotten all about the manifestation until I saw the record of it in my journal the other day. Branch officers shrink from their duties; the saints are rarely visited; many church seats are empty; prayer meetings are neglected, and it is no wonder if the faithful preacher is discouraged, and his sermons dry and uninteresting to those who "are lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." But thank God, the faithful few rejoice in the fellowship of the Holy Spirit, and are growing in grace and looking forward full of hope to the Master's coming, which is near at hand.

THE MYSTERY SOLVED.

Our Advocate and Redeemer solved the mystery of godliness by his immaculate conception and birth. To the lofty Jews it was most disgraceful and humiliating. They had not thought that a king could come to them in that humble way. They supposed that a king must come in pomp and grandeur. They had not learned the secret of power, which is humility, meekness, long-suffering, self-denying, and mercy. And it does seem strange, to this day, after all the teachings of the Bible and the example of the Savior, that we are so slow to learn, and most always seem to be climbing up some other way. When will we keep the commands of God, by "doing unto others as we would have them do to us," and loving our neighbor as ourself.

We go to meeting and boast of a restored gospel coming through the instrumentality of a humble youth, who confidently asked God what he should do; and because of his confidence and trust in God he was told what to do, and to him great mysteries were unfolded, and new light was brought again to earth. As a people we acknowledge that light, and profess to receive it as coming from the Most High.

It is an old saying, and a true one I believe, that God helps those who help themselves. If that is so, we have only to go to work in earnest, acting up to what light we have, or else the light will go out and we shall be groveling in darkness. All men are created equal, says the glorious Constitution, and the Bible says, let the poor rejoice that he is exalted, and the rich that he is brought low. It is a truth that the poor have always supported the rich, and this is the reason why Jesus came in that lowly way to preach the gospel to the poor, to elevate them to equal rights and privileges. That command that we should submit ourselves one to another, as in the fear of God, implies equality. If I submit myself to you and become a learner, and you do not submit yourself to me as a learner, I am a gainer and you are a loser. There is a tremendous amount of capital in the hearts and lives of the poor, which if the pressure of poverty was removed could be utilized to the benefit of the wealthy, the want of which makes them destitute. I long to see the dawn of that new day when selfishness and partiality will step aside and benevolence will reign.

This may be done by each one taking hold with a determination to obey the commands of the Master and counseling together concerning temporal as well as spiritual matters. We may stagger and fall like a child just beginning to walk, but we consider that the work must be done, and will get up and try again. "He that will not plow because of the cold shall beg in harvest and have nothing." We have lived long enough in this beggarly way. Let all those who will and can, commence, if need be, in a small way. Only be helpers one of another, with "hearts to God and hands to the work." Every stroke will count, if made in the right direction. Of course there must be a system which is lawful, and without reproach, and without display. I have noticed that those who go quietly about their work accomplish the most. I have great confidence in humanity, and much faith that what has been said of late on the gathering to Zion will be brought into execution at no distant period. Let our motto be, "Upward and onward." It is the only way to work out our salvation.

Editors Herald:—I have just read Bro. Williams' "Shall we anoint?" It is interesting to learn of so much medicinal virtue in olive oil, but may I state why I do not believe that the Lord commanded anointing because of this natural value of the oil? The language used by James 5:15, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick," in connection with the only New Testament injunction to anoint, is significant. If the prayer of faith saves the sick, it is evident that the natural virtue of the oil does not; the virtue is in the prayer, not in the oil. Modern revelation also agrees with this. "Whoso shall ask it in my name, in faith, . . . they shall heal the sick." (D. C. 34:3.) Again: "It shall come to pass, that he that hath faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed." (D. C. 42:13.) And "To some it is given to have faith to be healed, and to others it is given to have faith to heal." (D. C. 46:7.)

In the case of the centurion's servant, Jesus healed without anointing, touching, or even approaching the sick one. The wonderful faith of the centurion did it. The woman "touched the hem of his garment," and he said, "thy faith hath made thee whole." Candidly, I think the use of consecrated oil with any thought of natural value in it tends to cripple faith in it as a means of supernatural help through faith.

Read Isaiah: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek" (61:1). Here is indicated a connection between "anointing" and the "Spirit of the Lord." 2 Corinthians 1:21, 22: "Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God; who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts," expresses a similar connection. "But ye have an unction [or anointing] from the Holy One, and ye know all things. . . . But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you."—1 John 2:20, 27.

Evidently the anointing, or unction, here referred to is the great Teacher—the Spirit. From these scriptures, and the general principle of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, I conclude that the anointing with laying on of hands is a symbol of the outpouring of the Spirit on the one anointed. The consecrated oil may also be a means of conveying divine healing, as was the hem of Jesus' garment, and kerchiefs carried from the apostles. In hope of increased spiritual blessing,

Your brother,

ADAM J. KECK.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 13.

Editors Herald:—Believing that it may be of interest to the saints to know how the cause of the Master is faring in this city, we take this opportunity of relating the conditions and feelings of the saints here, as they appear to us. In looking back over the past year we can notice a slight growth, both numerically and spiritually.

Elder A. N. Bishop, who has been in charge here for the past two years, and who during that period has labored earnestly and diligently in the cause of righteousness, has, we are sorry to say, taken his departure from here, together with his family, to make their home in Cardiff, South Wales.

On the last Saturday evening that Bro. Bishop spent in Scranton he baptized Sr. Lenora Jones and Bro. Clinton Hedgelin; he also confirmed them on the following Sunday morning. Bro. Bishop and family and Sr. William R. Jones and son Roy, left here on the 9th inst., and were to sail on the Britannic at noon on the following day. Sister Jones expecting to return in about three months. It is a severe set back for the saints of this city to lose Bro. Bishop at this time, for it leaves them in a very sad condition, inasmuch as they have no organization and are now left without any officer of the church.

Bro. Bishop has endeared himself to the people of Scranton, both those who are in the church and others that are not, by his strict adherence to the truth in all its phases, and under all circumstances. While few persons might have differed from him on some questions, yet they could not but admire him for his uprightness and for the Christlike spirit he always exhibited in his dealings with his fellowmen.

We feel inclined to envy the saints of Cardiff in their being so fortunate as to secure such a valuable acquisition to their number as Bro. Bishop and his family will undoubtedly prove to be. May the God of heaven and earth be with them in their new home, to prosper and comfort them always, is our earnest desire.

Elder John T. Davies, who has been here laboring faithfully for the past three months, left on the 2d inst. Bro. Davies, who is a very earnest and conscientious worker, made many friends while here, and left favorable impressions of the truthfulness of the gospel on the minds of some. We hope and trust that he may yet be able to look back to the occasion of his visit to this city and behold some fruit brought forth by the labor he performed here. Our love and admiration go out to Bro. Davies because of his uprightness, conscientious devotion, and his long service in the cause of righteousness. May his lot be happiness and peace and a rich reward for his loyalty and devotion.

We shall now miss the ever welcome sound of the gospel, and for a time be deprived of the many privileges that it contains. We rejoice in its teachings and in the humane as well as the divine principles which it embraces. May we have the determination and strength to live our religion pure and undefiled, and in our daily walk and conversation manifest those Christ-like virtues that are becoming to every true Latter Day Saint; and that are essential that we should manifest, in order that we may realize the life-giving power that is in the gospel of our Savior. To this end we ask an interest in the prayers of our beloved brethren and sisters who may read these few lines.

Although we are left without any official of the church, we shall continue to hold our Sunday school in the hall where we have been worshiping for the last twenty one months. Through the necessity of dispensing with our Sunday evening service we have had the rent of the hall reduced to one half the former rate. This was an act of kindness on the part of the landlord, and was sincerely appreciated by the saints here. Should any elder visit us, we have the privilege of occupying on Sunday evenings again. May it soon be our privilege to have an elder among us again to proclaim the glad tidings of the gospel to all who may have a desire to hear it, and to keep the banner of Christ unfurled in our midst.

Your brother on behalf of the saints of Scranton.

SWEET HOME, Oregon, May 13.

Editors Herald:—I am again in my field; left home the latter part of last month, after a visit of a little over a month, and am now in the land of clouds and mud. Elder D. L. Harris, who is to labor this conference year in this mission, came with me as far as San Francisco. We stopped and held meetings at Tulare, Oakland, and San Francisco; it was a pleasure indeed to meet the saints of those places that we have worshiped with in years ago. Bro. Harris took boat for Marshfield to join Bro. Chase at Dora, and help him in a debate there with an Adventist, after which Bro. Harris will go over east of the mountains in Oregon, and perhaps eastern Washington. Elder Harris will be appreciated among saints and friends as a pleasant and able defender of our cause, and we bespeak for him a hearty welcome.

I came on by rail; arrived at Sacramento at eight p. m.; was met by Bro. George Daley, who informed me that Bro. T. W. Chatburn was holding meetings on the street, so we hurried to the center of the city. On drawing near two crowds of people, our ears caught the sound of the gospel as it fell from the lips of Bro. Chatburn and a Brighamite elder, one on each corner. It was an interesting scene to me. I have often listened to men preaching on the street, but never before to one of our own. I listened to first one and then the other. The Mormon was trying to explain the mysteries of baptism for the dead, while Bro. Chatburn was contending for the majesty of the law to a crowd of perhaps two hundred, our Utah brother to about two dozen. Both congregations seemed well pleased. At the close of Bro. Chatburn's remarks I stepped into the ring, taking care not to get in too soon, not until the speaking was all over. I was warmly greeted by Bro. Chatburn.

The next day we heard that the Utah men were angry because Bro. Chatburn had got their corner, and that they intended to have it back. Night came and a band of mission people took possession of the coveted corner for a short while. Bro. Chatburn staked out his claim by putting his satchel on the ground he intended to stand on, and then stood quietly watching it and the Mormon elders who stood close at hand, seven in number, ready to move forward the moment the others closed. All was expectation. The crowd was gathering rapidly, seemingly knowing that something of an unusual nature was coming; and it was, for Bro. Chatburn was there and ready for business.

Presently the Holiness people began to move away, when the Mormons, without waiting to get into position, gave out their intentions of holding the corner. Instantly Bro. Chatburn stepped to the front, while his voice rang out in no uncertain tones his intentions. By this time things looked a little mixed. It was Babel indeed. Along side of Bro. Chatburn stood Brn. Daley and Joehnk. It began to look as if the police would have to take a hand in it. I thought it best for me to remain on the sidewalk to write up the affair. When the Mormons saw they could not out talk Bro. Chatburn they began to sing; but strange to say, broke completely down, which Bro. Chatburn promptly took advantage of, telling the people that it was because they were in the wrong, which caused the people to laugh and jeer them.

Then Bro. Chatburn sang out that he was an American, and had fought for his rights once in the army, and proposed to do so now, which brought loud cheers from the crowd that now numbered between five and six hundred. He said that if these men would preach a sermon on blood atonement or polygamy, he would listen; otherwise he would put it to vote and abide the decision. Another cheer went up. The Brighamites replied that such was not their teaching now, and that blood atonement never had been, and wisely wanted the vote to be taken, knowing that it would go against them, but that it would give them a chance to get away, which they were now very anxious to do. But that was just what Bro. Chatburn did not want. He told them he would put the vote as soon as he had replied to their denial, which he did in a most masterly manner, reading from their own book. He was greeted with cheer after cheer as he would make his points.

The Utah men stood it for about an hour, Bro. Chatburn letting them talk by turn. When it got too warm they broke ranks and fled.

During the battle a man stepped up behind Bro. Chatburn, nudged him, and then opened his coat, revealing his star, and in a low voice said, "Stand by your rights; I will see you through." But the Master was standing by him, and he knew it, and felt his power which was far better than policemen. It was a grand effort, and I felt proud of our brother as he stood there so nobly defending our cause. May he live long to help roll it forward.

And now a word to the people of this mission. On looking over the work of the past year we feel well satisfied, and assured that the Lord was our helper all along the line of march, as also the saints, the most of whom did well in helping with their means. Now a new year lies before us, bringing with it new opportunities; let us all step forward together, each one doing his or her part. We of the ministry will try our best to do ours, and if assisted by you of the laity, will surely do a good year's work, that will stand to the credit of all in the great day of reckoning.

In the past two years Bro. Chase and I have preached eight hundred and fifty sermons, and baptized over seventy persons, and this has been largely due to the help we have received from the saints. Let us push things this summer; we will have more help this year than last.

Bro. Harris will devote his time to the eastern part of the mission. Bro. Chase and myself in the southern part. We will also have Bro. G. T. Griffiths with us awhile, perhaps at our reunion, to be held sometime somewhere on the "sound."

Bro. Chase and I will be ready to start the tent the first of June; have not fully decided where we will use it this summer. Let us hear from saints who want it. Sr. Chase will also assist in tent work. And now please remember that it requires some means to handle the tent. Trusting that heaven will help us all to do our duty, and that Christ will soon come, I remain as ever,

Editors Herald:—We are living in a fast age, and about all men think of is self. It is a very covetous and selfish people, prejudiced against anything not just in keeping with their views, especially their religious beliefs. When the truth is presented as recorded in God's word, about the first thing we hear is, I don't believe in running down other churches; we are all working for the same place; we ought to go together. Are we all working for the same place? If we are, are we working in a legitimate way? or are we working according to our traditions? Are we working in God's appointed way? or are we in a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death? (Prov. 14: 12.) God has given but one way to come to him; but I have a statistical report that says there are in the United States one hundred and forty-eight different churches, all differing from the other in doctrine. Is it any wonder that people do not know which way to go? Is it anything surprising that people are prejudiced against this work? I have sympathy for them, for I remember when I first heard this work, I was as prejudiced as there is any need to be; but I would go and hear. I knew I did not have to believe anything if it was not right. I wanted to hear, as it was something I had never heard of before.

After reading the Bible and much prayer, I joined the Christian Church. I believe I wanted to do right; yet, we believed all others to be wrong. But I must confess I did not receive the blessings promised, they said all such were done away. I could not even bear testimony in their prayer meetings, although I attended regularly all preaching and prayer meetings. I can see now that something better awaited me, that I had not dreamed of. I was not the best boy in the world, and am not now; but always had a desire to do right. I feel that the Lord must have been mindful of me, for many times I have been protected and restrained from doing evil. I have often wondered why it was; it must be that God had something more for me to do. From a boy, when alone, I would be thinking and meditating upon the Bible, and preaching in my mind; but I little thought I would be where I am. I did not think I ever could speak in public, for I was too bashful even to speak a piece in school. I remember the first time I was called on to speak. I spoke about thirty minutes, and then noticed several in tears. That was too much for me—I quit. After that I was called on, and could not say anything; but the Lord has blessed me wonderfully since.

I had no encouragement to enter the work as far as my kin is concerned, for none of them will even listen to the doctrine; but I feel there is one with me greater than all. So in time I heard the restored gospel, and I believe the Lord put it into my heart to obey. The blessings came, and trials also. Now I first began to see and realize there was some power I had not known of before. In the Disciple Church I could not say a word or pray in public; but the first Sunday I attended the saints' meeting I could not keep my seat; I had to testify. I know there was a power working with me; it has continued until I am where I am, leading me step by step. Then came spiritual manifestations, and in other ways showing me things to come, and his will convincing my mind. He showed me when I first came into the church that I would travel and carry the message of peace, and showed me the responsibility resting on the watchman on the tower. The Lord showed me Ezekiel 33: 1-10, and the consequence of not doing what is there commanded, to warn the people of their sins. If I am strict sometimes it is because the Lord requires it of me. I never asked anything of the people, only according to the law and the testimony. When I accepted ordination it was not because some man said so; but because called from a higher source. I am sorry to see so much lightness in this direction to-day. I assisted now and then until the Lord's full time had come for me to take the field. I remember my first experience. I felt awkward; was among strangers, but they were kind and good. I cannot forget their kindness. One Baptist brother came the first night after meeting and gave me some words of encouragement. I think he saw I needed encouraging. Always give a word of encouragement whenever we can. By so doing we do not know how much good we are doing.

I labored in this place about one week and then Bro. I. N. W. Cooper joined me, and we labored together for three weeks or more and baptized six. I have a kind recollection of that labor. I can see that the work has been blessed and prospered. I can see some growth in most places where I have labored. A sleepy condition exists in the church in places, and it is hard to arouse them. The Lord wants his people to be diligent, vigilant, and energetic in his work. If we expect to receive anything we must expect to work for it, for the Lord only helps those who try to help themselves. If we want blessings we must live for them; this has been my experience thus far.

The work seems to increase slowly in Eastern Iowa district, but I hope it is a permanent growth. This field is a hard field to work in, the roads are in such a shape, it is hard to get from place to place. I have baptized a few precious souls in the district, and hope to baptize others. I think there are some near. Brothers and sisters, let us look up; the day of redemption draweth nigh. May we draw near to the Lord, that he will draw near us. How often do we wish for some of the blessings. I have heard it remarked, Why do we not receive the gifts of the gospel in this branch? We never have had one of the gifts manifested in this branch. Sometimes there are reasons why we do not. First, he gives to whomsoever he will, dividing to every one as seemeth him good. Second, they are given when and where they will do good, and where they meet often together and speak one with another, and pray publicly as well as secretly. Do we meet together often as is commanded of God? I understand it as in John 14: 15-17, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." If we do this we have the promise that we shall have the Spirit of truth, which the world cannot receive. By that Spirit does the gifts of the gospel come. Do we speak in saints' meetings? Do we pray in prayer meetings? Do we do all we can to make them a success, and make the meetings profitable? Or do we go and sit idly and silently during the services, and not give the Lord a chance to bless us? We ought to think of these things; we must all take an active part in our social meetings if we want to be blessed. Do not think the presiding officer must make the whole meeting himself; he must have some help. The oftener we help, the easier it is to help. How can God manifest his gifts when we all close our lips and will not let him use them? He has sometimes spoken when they are not quite so faithful as they ought to be, to warn them of what may follow if not more faithful. I am sure we would not like that. We would rather hear that we are approved of him. That would be encouraging. If we can become alive in the work, and get into the spirit of the work, all will be well. Then we will not worry about the outward manifestations. It is better that the whole body be infused with the Spirit and love of God than to have one or more have the outward gifts. By right living and doing we will receive all that is for us. It is good to receive them. When I came into the church, only a few days had elapsed when there was a prophecy given over my head by Elder I. N. White, of trials that would come. They have come thick and fast, and the end is not yet. But the promise was if you prove faithful you shall overcome. When I think of this it gives me strength to labor on. I have been able to overcome so far. I have received many bright testimonies of the work. The work seems brighter to me each year as I go along, and am determined to hold to the rod of iron, by the help of God, through all the jangling and contentions that I see. This is an individual work. I must live for myself, not for some other one. I feel the need of the prayers of God's people, that I may never grow weary in well doing. May the Lord bless us all in doing right is my earnest prayer.

CENTRALIA, Kan., May 16.

Editors Herald:—My soul has been delighted in reading the articles of Bro. Charles Albertson, and though we may never meet this side of the tomb, yet I can heartily wish him God speed. I thank the Lord for a knowledge of the restored gospel. I am a humble believer in the claims of Joseph Smith the prophet, seer, and revelator, notwithstanding the scoffs and frowns of the world. Jesus said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15: 18, 19. The longer I live the more joy, comfort, peace, and satisfaction I derive from the religion of the Christ. "Religion," as one great man has defined it, "is the relationship of man with the invisible reality." The reason so few truly worship the invisible God in these stirring times is because they do not know nor understand God. To many, to be religious is something obnoxious and distasteful; whilst to the meek of the earth it is the joy and pride of their lives. Really, I cannot afford to feel ashamed to "own my Lord," for I am in good company when I serve and worship my heavenly Father; when I remember that the angels and archangels continually bow in humble submission before him who sitteth upon the throne on high.

Dear saints, when we were buried with Christ in baptism we covenanted to serve God the remainder of our days. Have we been doing this in the true sense of the term? Or have we been serving our own selves and subscribing to our own wishes and desires? To serve the Lord is to be thoroughly devoted to the cause of Christ, not our own will and pleasure, but the will of God be done should be our motto. Well did Joshua of old exclaim, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord." Too often we fail to give to our religious work the enthusiasm we expend upon our secular undertakings. If I mistake not, this world is fast ripening for destruction, and its only remedy is in the divine injunction once uttered by the stainless one, "Repent, and believe the gospel." In the decalogue is recorded the words, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." That being true, how wicked this world is! Nor is that the only sin the nations are guilty of. Sabbath desecration is a grievous sin so prevalent in this age. Then we need not wonder at God being "angry with the wicked every day."

Elder Frank Lofty, our esteemed district president, paid us a visit recently. And it is to be hoped that his sermons and wise counsel will yet be heeded by saint and sinner. I am sorry to say that the work is at a low ebb at this place. If "my children" will but heed the pleadings of the Spirit given on a recent date in our little meeting, prosperity will surely follow in the wake; otherwise there is to be punishment meted out. Are not the words of the ancient prophet timely, wherein he wrote: "Doubt not, but be believing, and begin as in times of old, and come unto the Lord with all your heart, and work out your own salvation with fear and trembling before him. Be wise in the days of your probation."—B. of M. 4: 84, 85.

May the great God move upon his people everywhere to be up and doing now, that they may obtain the riches of eternity.

For, oh! we stand on Jordan's strand,
Our friends are passing over;
And just before, the shining shore
We may almost discover.

With the harness on, and in the conflict, I hope to labor on. FRANK J. PIERCE.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, March 16.

Editors Herald:—Last evening while listening to Elder Roo, of Rairoa, as he delivered his discourse, I thought perhaps your readers would like to know something of the manner of the elders out here in preaching to the people, so I got notes, and what follows is about what the elder preached, excepting he enlarged a little upon each one of the questions, or rather answers, more than I have given; but this will be a fair representation of their preaching—of course they do not always use parables. They rarely make any preliminary remarks, and as rarely make any "application;" they tell their story and stop short off. This sermon was about fifteen minutes in delivery. Their sermons are from five minutes—rarely so short as that—to twenty-five minutes; probably eighteen or twenty minutes would be a fair average, although occasionally we have an extra long-winded preacher who nears the hour before he will quit. Tehopea and Wiriamu and the missionary from America are among these.

This is the elder's sermon:—

Brothers and Sisters: I will explain to you this evening a parable of the church. The church may be compared to two things; that is, a house or a ship. But this evening I will not speak of the church as a house, but as a ship; and our first question is:—

What is the Church of Jesus Christ like? It is like a ship.

Who is the captain of that ship? Jesus: "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings."—Heb. 2: 10. Therefore, Jesus is the captain of the ship.

Through whom does Jesus give his commands to the boatswain? "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12: 28. These then are the officers from captain to boatswain.

Who are the cook, steward, and sailors? "Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation; he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness."—Rom. 12: 6-8. These are the sailors in the ship, who are directed in all their work by the officers, who receive their orders or commands from Jesus the captain.

What is the chart? "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."—Rom. 15: 4. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works."—2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.

What is the compass? "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel" (Psalms 73: 24), and the counsel of God is the gospel. How many points in that compass? Six: Faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment, as may be seen by reading Hebrews 6: 1, 2.

What course does the ship steer? "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ."—1 Cor. 11: 1. That is obey the gospel as the apostle obeyed Christ.

Of what kind of cloth or canvas are her sails made? "And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."—Rev. 19: 8.

What is the wind that fills her sails, and makes her move? "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting."—Acts 2: 2.

To what port is the ship going? "And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. . . . And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it."—Rev. 21: 2, 26.

Thus the ship is the true church of Jesus Christ. The captain is Jesus. The officers which he commands are apostles, prophets, sevens, high priests, bishop, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. The sailors, cook, and steward are the true saints. The chart is the true word of God. The compass is the truth, that is, the gospel. The points of the compass are the first principles of the gospel. The sails are made of fine linen, which is the righteousness of the true saints. And the wind or power which moves the ship is the Holy Spirit. And the ship is sailing to the new Jerusalem. Tirara ia parau (there is no more to be said). Amen.

Mr. Editor: You will perceive that the "i" in the middle word of that sentence in Tahitian is accented, and without that accented letter the sentence would be changed in its meaning and pronunciation. This principle is more marked in this sentence—Ia ia i'a ia ai? which being translated is—the fish cooked which was eaten? which sentence in Tahitian would be meaningless without the accented letters. We have sent for some accented letters, and when we resume our printing after conference, we will be able to do better work than heretofore.

Peace be with you all, and all the Israel of God.

Papeete, April 15.—Yesterday we arrived here from our conference in Rairoa; there were about 850 present, 200 of them being nonmembers. We had an excellent conference; and as we were there several days before conference, we met in counsel with the elders, and prepared our work, so that we got through on Monday, the 10th, and on Wednesday I left for here on a schooner of fifty tons with about one hundred natives on board. We arrived last evening, and I had quite a spell of cholera, but this morning am all right again.

Our next conference will be here in Papeete, and our conference has sent an invitation to President Joseph Smith to visit us and attend our conference in Taron (Sharon), on April 6, 1900.

We will at once begin work again on the Te Orometua (The Instructor). They are not to be sent out monthly, but retained until the end of the year and then bound in board covers. We enjoyed the most spiritual meeting on Sunday preceding the conference that I have ever witnessed in these islands. These eight hundred natives seemed to be very much impressed with the pleasing influences of the Holy Spirit throughout the whole of the sacrament meeting, and when Sister Burton spoke in tongues and the interpretation was given, a calm and holy influence pervaded the whole assembly. Visions were received by the natives and related, and prophecies were uttered. It was an excellent meeting, and we all felt that our heavenly Father was counseling us by his Spirit to keep humble and faithful, and in the spirit of gentleness seek to do our conference work, and he would bless us. Peace be with you all. I write in haste, as the mail will soon close. In bonds of faith and love,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

AUBURN, Neb., May 16.

Editors Herald:—I still love the work; am endeavoring in my feeble way to let my light shine. For some time have been trying to secure an opening here for our elders, and believe I have at last succeeded. A gentleman here, interested in the Dowle movement of Chicago, having been refused the churches, opened meetings in a hall, but has now completed a meetinghouse very favorably located. Judging from his experience and my conversation with him, we are very likely to secure his permission to occupy for a series of meetings, and regularly also if necessary at very small expense. Our Utah brethren have thoroughly canvassed the town, and it seems this would be a very opportune time for us.

Please give me Bro. Peak's address, or one in authority in the district, who could come, so I can correspond. Not being independent, could not wholly care for a brother, but could assist, also in meetings.

A brother, Mr. George Kinghorn, has heretofore domiciled our brethren, but he has just been called to his reward. Though a farmer, his was one of the few very large funerals held in or near Auburn, the remains being followed to the cemetery by a number of vehicles, estimated between sixty and eighty, thus showing the esteem in which he was held. Would like to hear from Bro. Self of Nebraska City in regard to holding meetings. Yours in gospel bonds,

A. L. LIGHTFOOT.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 22.

Editors Herald:—Bro. George H. Hilliard visited this city of late and spoke three times and did good. Glad he called here; Bro. M. M. Turpen is with me. He and I organized a branch of the church here with seventeen members, all heads of families, with elder, priest, teacher, and deacon. I baptize three more on Wednesday eve.

The work is moving slowly but surely. The Mormon elders are going to operate here, as I learn. This leaves all well and feeling well.

In bonds,

JAMES M. SCOTT.

LARISSA, Mo., May 14.

Editors Herald:—Bro. J. C. Chrestensen preached eleven sermons here with no uncertain sound, and you know that was enough to make Satan rage. We had from three to five preachers out every night, and had good attention; and also had threats of spoiled eggs. But the trouble ended with the threat. Bro. C. did credit to the work; I wish we had more such men here helping us. The last night of the meeting he got a notice to leave; but we are here yet, and by the help of the Lord intend to remain.

Bro. Chrestensen baptized one, our daughter's little boy, and two of the preachers referred to are searching the Scriptures more than ever before. Some are very near the fold; we hope to see them come in soon. The ministers say Bro. C. has taught them much. There were from sixty to seventy-five people out the last few nights; rain kept many from the earlier meetings. They came over the mountains, rocks, and in the wet to hear the wonders of the gospel. One minister said it was the first gospel sermon he ever heard; he had never heard such preaching before. He is a fine man. Another, who owned the house, said the doctrine could not be shot against. Said we might have the house ten years if we wanted it. We think they are honest-hearted men and that good has been done.

The people feel very bad about the threats made against us, and tell us so. May God help them to see the true way. May God also bless Bro. Chrestensen and keep him from harm. He talked to the people after reading the notice, and some wept. It was an ugly thing, couched in bitter and coarse language. He left many friends. We ask prayers that we may do our duty.

As some may want to learn something of this country, I will try and tell of some of the good parts. There is plenty of timber, rock, and mountain, and the best water in the world, I think; and a good country to raise fruit. The winters are mild. But, don't come here on anyone's recommendation; and don't come unless you have a good supply of the qualities of courage, patience, and determination not to become discouraged or homesick. And, above all, make up your mind to be satisfied, and you will do all right here.

We can raise anything here that can be raised in other countries. People coming from a level country will be apt to dislike it here at first; but it is a good place for a poor man. Land is cheap here.

We want a good mill here; there is plenty of timber to keep a mill running a long time—a steam or water mill.

PEMBINA, Ark., May 19.

Editors Herald:—I have made no converts here yet; don't know whether I will ever be able to teach anybody successfully the way of truth in this part of the State or not. I am preaching as circumstances permit, and have good hearings. I am making a good impression if nothing more. The Utah elders are making a thorough canvass of Arkansas; they report fourteen missionaries in this State; they go from house to house leaving tracts and other printed matter. Some of them are shrewd and aggressive, while others can't "preach a lick in the road." They tell the people that there is but very little difference between them and us; that the Reorganization is destitute of authority to preach and administer the gospel ordinances, thereby taking advantage of the good impression we have made among strangers. I expect to point out the difference between the Utah Church and the Reorganized Church as time and circumstances will permit. They are visiting our members wherever they find them, and teach them that the Reorganization is the apostate church, that we have departed from Joseph's teaching on temple building, gathering, baptizing for the dead, sealing for eternity, and many other points, and refer to Doctrine and Covenants to prove it.

They also attack the Inspired Translation of the scriptures. One of them told me that he thought the manuscript that Joseph the Seer was commanded to make was in the vault of the temple in Salt Lake City. He claimed that if the Inspired Translation as published by the Reorganization was genuine, that many things would have been recorded in its pages that do not appear, and especially in Matthew 24, and refers to Doctrine and Covenants 45: 1-11 (our edition) for proof. I hear that they have baptized some of our members further south in this State.

I do not wish to be accused of attempting to dictate what others should do, but I do believe that if some of our able writers would through the Herald and Ensign show why the points referred to in Doctrine and Covenants are not put in practice by the true succession, that a cloud would be lifted from the minds of many who are isolated from church privileges, and have a tendency to fortify themselves for the conflict when Utah elders visit them. I know that our members in the south need encouragement along the line of succession; as they are constantly coming in contact with missionaries from Utah, and as we have only one missionary laboring in Arkansas, and in some States none at all, I know of no better way to help them than through the church papers. Now if this suggestion meets the approval of the editor, who will volunteer. I would be glad if all the honest at heart could hear, believe, and obey the truth, and then be able to stay with it. Your brother in bonds,

JOSEPH WARD.

SARGENT, Mo., May 23.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Spurlock and I are here. We have just closed a meeting in the courthouse at Hartville; the sheriff was very kind in letting us have the use of the building, and said, Come again. We did not have quite as large a turn-out as we would like, owing no doubt to the fact that it has rained so much of late, and the farmers are so much behind with their work. Bro. Spurlock will go to Woodside from here, while I shall try and preach in these parts and around Cabool, Mt. Grove, and south until after conference, which convenes full moon in June; trust we shall meet many of the saints whom we have not seen for some time.

In reading the letter of Bro. and Sr. Atwell in regard to that colony, I believe in the colony plan, and I am more in favor of that plan where the saints can organize in proper manner and ship their produce together, and thereby the strong will help the weak, and fill the Golden Rule in part, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Bro. J. R. Wedlock is also getting up a colony for Polk County, Texas, and offering nice inducements to the saints. Several went down and saw his land, and came back full of praise for that part, traded out, and have gone down there to live. There is already eight families of saints living there, and seem well pleased. While some would prefer Missouri, you see others prefer somewhere else. Colonizing the saints is a good thing, if they make good laws and live to them. If saints cannot live in small colonies in harmony, I do not think the same could live under the gathering law. But do not think that only Missouri is Zion. I understand Kirtland is a stake, and Texas is nearer to Independence by five hundred miles. Why could not it be a stake "sometime," saints. Those that think you would like Missouri, why come, there is lots of cheap lands to sell. But you will find quite a difference in quality and soil in different parts of this country. I have traveled it for eight years, and I think I am able to tell you where the good land is. But I can say this, that it will never pay you to buy unimproved land if you have a little money to buy improved. These farms that the saints are leaving here are for sale cheap, some in a good branch of the saints. I understand that the colony in Texas will either trade for city property or farms, or sell on very easy terms.

I will say by way of advice, do as Bro. Atwell says, Go and see for yourselves before buying, for I know it is hard work for any two persons to give a description of this country alike.

God bless the effort of both these brethren. I believe they are good ones, and if I can be of any service to any saint in giving information, I shall be glad to do so, if you only send me a stamp for reply.

To the saints in South Missouri district, remember I am still Bishop's agent, and I would like to see all have their names on my books before I make my quarterly report. Remember we have over four hundred saints in the district, and I have not collected an average of ten cents per head for the last five months. My address is still No. 1862 Springfield Avenue, Springfield, Missouri.

Editors Herald:—There were six members added to the church at this place to-day by baptism, all of whom are children of parents who belong to the branch here. These with the eleven whose baptisms were reported to you a few days ago make seventeen in all added of late.

Saints are well and happy and rejoicing in the Lord and his truth.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, May 26.

Editors Herald:—Your truth-laden pages reach us Thursday of each week, and as we read and reread of the growth and success of the work in other parts, we thought it might not be amiss to speak of the work in this vicinity. During the fall and winter we have been greatly assisted, aided, and strengthened by the labors of Brn. Short, W. J. Adams, F. A. Russell, D. C. Smith, J. W. Peterson, W. A. Smith, J. S. Patterson, and lastly but not leastly, Bro. W. H. Kelley stopped on his way to the East and was to have been with us Sunday, the 14th, but it succeeded in raining all day, so we were disappointed in not having his valuable services. Bro. Kelley seems to think we do not lack for rain around here. We had a very pleasant gathering at the home of Sr. J. Houghton, where Bro. Kelley spoke to a few of the saints and friends, also blessed the infant son of Sr. Houghton.

The branch in Rock Island, composed of saints from Rock Island, Davenport, Moline, and Milan, is in a very fair condition; several have been baptized through the faithful, untiring efforts of Brn. Adams and Russell, and we think the saints generally are trying to live more faithful. I am convinced that success in city work only follows a personal, united, prolonged effort upon the part of each individual; and it seems to me there is more opportunity for every one to work in the city than anywhere else.

We have a very nice Sabbath school; Sr. Strang, of Rock Island, is the superintendent; it is getting along wonderfully well under her management. We have also lately organized a Religio, with Miss Lulu B. Suman of Moline as president, and Miss Clara Johnson of Rock Island as secretary. We have only just started, and hope success may attend. The Book of Mormon study we think is a very commendable feature of the work. This is a great, grand cause we are engaged in; worthy of our zeal and ambition. Let us each one put on the whole armor of God, and fight manfully as soldiers of the cross. I remain as ever your brother in the everlasting covenant, WM. EARL LA RUE.

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo., May 23.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since I reported to you; my health being quite poorly last winter, and the severe cold weather made war against me. I did not accomplish the good I otherwise would, nevertheless I did the best I could under the circumstances. I find as the years go by, and age coming on, with ill health and the various changes for the past twenty-nine years I have made, it tells against me; but I feel like keeping my powder dry and shoot away, and help tell of the peace on earth, and good will to man. We meet with opposition within and without the church; but all must know that God will have his day appear, when he will judge every one according to what he has done. Some sit on the stool of do nothing, and shoot away in their weak judgment at those who are trying to advance the Zion of God. It's about time that such professors pick up themselves and get out of the path of God's judgments, and live so to be entitled to present and future blessings. Not every one that says Lord, Lord, will enter the promised rest.

The Sunday school convention and conference, at Coal Hill, last Friday to Sunday evening was a grand success. Our noble sister, Miller, who presides over the Sabbath school department was present, and acted well her part. We think Doctor Miller is acting well his part to help the sick ones, while his saintly wife is doing such a noble missionary work in trying to promote the interest of the Sunday school, and educate the little ones in the things of the kingdom. It should be remembered that the Doctor belongs to the kingdom himself. Sister Miller left for home on Monday feeling happy and cheerful as a bee well loaded with honey for the hive. Sr. Miller has as her associate, Sr. Lucy Wright; a fine little helper she is, not afraid to speak when necessary, and her words tell like the bell in the steeple. May the blessings of God visit the merry workers in the Sunday school.

Brother I. N. White was present and presided over the conference. The writer addressed the full house on Saturday evening. Alfred White on Sunday at eleven, and Pres. I. N. White in the evening. I heard many remark, it's the best conference we've attended in this district. Bro. Abner Lloyd was chosen president of the district, and G. W. Beebe recommended as Bishop's agent. These men are worthy elders, noble men of God, who will with ability fill well their calling.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

THANKSGIVING.

My God, I thank thee, who hast made
The earth so bright;
So full of splendor and of joy,
Beauty, and light;
So many glorious things are here
Noble and right.

I thank thee, too, that thou hast made
Joy to abound;
So many thoughts and deeds
Circling us round,
That in the dreariest spot on earth
Some love is found.

I thank thee more that all our joy
Is touched with pain;
That shadows fall on brightest hours,
That thorns remain;
So that earth's bliss may be our guide,
And not our chain.

For thou who knowest, Lord, how soon
Our weak heart clings,
Hast given us joys, tender and true,
Yet all with wings;
So that we see, gleaming on high,
Diviner things.

I thank thee, Lord, that thou hast kept
The best in store;
We have enough, yet not too much
To long for more,
A yearning for a deeper peace
Not known before.

I thank thee, Lord, that here our souls,
Though amply blest,
Can never find, although they seek,
A perfect rest;
Nor ever shall until they lean
On Jesus' breast.

"SAILOR BOY."

Soldier's Home, WASHINGTON, Nov. 1898. †

SMITHLAND, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—It is some time since I have written anything for our column, but during that time I have been eagerly reading everything written by other sisters; and it is a great help to me in caring for my children, and in planning for their future, as the oldest is only a little over three years old. Sisters, when do you consider the best time to begin teaching a child to pray? I began to teach my little girl to pray when she was about twenty-two months old. As soon as she could repeat the little prayer after me, a word at a time, adding to it as she grew older, until at present she will kneel and offer her prayer unassisted, and seems to understand the meaning of them. She has great faith in prayer, and will often kneel unasked to ask for relief when hurt; also praying for any of the rest of us who may be ailing. And I am sure God hears and answers her simple petitions. This may seem impossible to you who have not tried it as I have. They must also, of course, be taught by the example of the parents. You cannot expect small children to learn easily to pray unless they see others do so.

Another thing which I think should be more general, is the use of consecrated oil, instead of a great array of medicine—a separate kind for each ailment. Replace all by a bottle of pure olive oil, and accompanied by proper faith, healing will follow. I could give many instances in our family, but will only relate one or two. During the winter I was unpacking a trunk, and the babies wanted to assist. Something called my attention an instant and baby slipped and pulled the lid down on his hand. It was a very heavy lid, beside there were a number of things piled on it and I feared his hand might be broken. His papa came to the rescue, and while I held the poor little fellow, Papa anointed his hand with oil and offered a short prayer. Before the prayer was ended baby stopped crying, and putting the little hand to my face, lisped, "Don't c'y! don't c'y!" And he never acted as though it hurt him afterward, although this was less than five minutes after it was hurt. I had a much lighter lid fall on my hand not long before, with the result that it was sore for several weeks. It seems to me that I have read and heard more instances of healing of late than ever before. Surely the Lord is drawing very near to us, if we will only draw near to him.

We are watching with much interest the articles and letters regarding the gathering, and only wish we had things in such a shape that we could move Zionward, although we were told by a brother to-day that where we now are is included in the regions round about; but we feel that we would prefer to be nearer the center.

I wish to give you a poem given by the Spirit to Bro. Cohrt, when writing me while away during the winter. It was written I think November 4, last, and is as follows:—

God knoweth best we cannot sail
To heaven on flowery beds of ease;
But we must toil and labor on,
And sail life's stormy seas.

Then when we reach the farther shore,
Glance back and view our journey o'er,
'Twas all for me, he then will say,
Now rest in peace and perfect day.

Enjoy the rest that thou hast bought,
By journeying in thy Master's lot.
Farewell to tears and trials of earth,
Enjoy the fruits of heavenly birth.

O'er victories which thou there didst win,
O'er Satan and enticing sin;
Be ruler over this, my son,
Thy joy has only just begun.

Through endless ages, countless years,
Thou wilt forget of grief and tears,
Enwrap in joy which thou hast bought
By following thy Savior's lot.

This was a great comfort to me and to him also, for it made us feel the Lord's presence, and I thought it too good to be simply laid away without "passing it on." The work here at present is not advancing as we would like to see it, but we must be patient. One more sister left us about a month ago, and now resides at Moorhead, Iowa. This sister, Mary E. Turman, left us to become the wife of Bro. E. C. Outhouse; and although we miss her, we know her church privileges there are much better than could be expected here for some time at least. Ever praying for the advance of the work in all departments, I remain your sister in bonds of love,

TEACH THE CHILDREN TO PLAY.

If mothers would take the time they spend in telling their children to "run away," or "not to do that," or to "leave that alone," in showing their children how to play and what to play with, they would find the results not only astounding but gratifying. Ten minutes' instruction in a new play or occupation would mean hours of quiet and happy pleasure for the children and rest and freedom for the mother. Play is the child's work, and he should early be shown the way to make the best use of it. More grows out of play than we are apt to realize. If the nursery is untidy the future mother's house or father's office will be the same. If the play is destructive, and results in the mutilation of many toys, the little men and women will be careless of beautiful books, pictures, and bric-à-brac in later years. Teach them how to play properly and they will soon learn how to work properly.—Sel.

SOUTH BOARDMAN.

Dear Mothers of the Home Column:—As I have received so much comfort and instruction in reading the letters from others, I wish to add my mite to the rest in regard to corset wearing. I heartily agree with Sister Mary, and believe a great many of our ailments and bad feelings arise from wearing tight clothing. The first few years of my married life I wore corsets, but when our first baby was a year old I bought Tokology. I had just gotten a new electric corset, but when I read the book I began to practice its teachings. I burned my corset, wore broad toed and low heeled shoes, and changed my way of living generally. I now have five healthy children. We have called on the doctor but three or four times for them. I not only practice but I preach this to my friends. It seems a wonder to them how I get along so with the children and have so little sickness. Purity and simplicity in everything is what God would have. We cannot cling to worldly ways and keep his laws also. I am yours in the faith,

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Send communications for this department to the Editor.
Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa."

SR. DORA YOUNG, librarian of Galland's Grove district Sunday school association, sent us a copy of a circular letter which she sent to all the local librarians of the district. We insert it in full, except the list of books, which we are obliged to omit for want of space. This seems to us as getting at the work in a practical and effective way. In this library work, as well as in every other phase of church work, we must reach the individuals, and reach them with something specific and practical. Vague generalities, given in a general way, seldom reach anyone unless it be the very studious person. Better give them just one scrap of specific directions than a volume of generalities.

We hope that the points contained in the letter, together with the points to be gotten by the mode of reaching the workers, will be thoroughly absorbed. We have tried the circular letter work, and find it a success. You can reach individuals in this way that are not reached otherwise, because you cannot get them out to conventions and institutes. Try it.

"DOW CITY, Iowa, April, 1899.

"To the Local Librarian:—With pleasure I take this opportunity to extend to you a cordial greeting, and to express my interest in you and your work. Recently, I received such an instructive letter from our General Superintendent, T. A. Hougas, on the duties of local librarians. Wishing you to receive the benefit from it also, I quote from it as follows:—

"There is a broad field for the local librarian, if he will only move out and occupy. The simple care of the books of the school—the distributing and gathering them up—is but a small part of the work. But what there is aside from that is what puzzles many a willing librarian.

"THE MOST IMPORTANT PART of the library work is the selecting of the books. This may be done by the librarian, or it may be by a committee appointed by the school. We prefer the latter. But in that case it might be well to make the librarian one of that committee. The selecting of books is a task that should be intrusted to none but persons of known ability, both as to literary taste and good judgment. It is not the work of a child or even a youth, but of a mature mind. He should have a liking for good literature and a knowledge of it, too. But, since this is the work of the library committee, we pass it and take up the immediate work of the librarian.

"There is a duty that is commonly conceded to the librarian; namely, the care of the books in the session. He may make the work of passing the books profitable, by placing them where they will be used and enjoyed. If I enter late (as many visitors do), I would be very glad to have the one handing me a book to show me where the song or lesson may be. I may have missed the announcement, or the first stanza of the song. If so, I would much enjoy being shown the place. Not only the ability to sing or read at once with the crowd would be appreciated, but the interest shown in me would be felt throughout the session or longer. Possibly some visitor can read only large print. Get him the large print Bible. Any mark of interest, great or small, will produce good results. Again,

"SONG BOOKS AND BIBLES are usually scarce. The librarian may induce the members of the school to procure books for themselves, or to bring those they now have; or they may devise some way of raising means with which to procure a few more books for the school. A school that is at all short on song books or Bibles is laboring under one serious disadvantage, at least. He may find a book with

"A TORN OR LOOSE COVER, or with a loose leaf. A few moments time and a little paste made of flour (for such the bookbinders use) will mend several books and double their useful days. Ten cents' worth of time may save or prevent the destruction of $10 worth of books.

"Some one may get too warm and need to use a book for a fan. They were not made for that purpose, and consequently they do not last well thus used. Have a few palm leaf fans to hand to one when you see signs of their need. Many points might be mentioned, but these will suffice to put one on the right track. T. A. HOUGAS."

"I also send a list of books, which I hope will aid in selecting literature for your Sunday school library, which we hope you are planning to start as soon as possible. If there is any help I can give you on this line I shall be glad to respond. Being anxious to have this library movement pressed forward rapidly, I ask that these matters may receive your prompt attention, so that we may 'come up higher.' Your sincere coworker,

"DORA YOUNG,

"District Librarian."

The list divides the books into classes, giving nine "historical," ten "poetical," eight "scientific," six of "travel," the remainder "miscellaneous." We are acquainted with many of the works named, and consider them all first class. We presume Sr. Young, whose address is Dow City, Iowa, could furnish anyone with copy of the list.

"WHAT grand companionships await us as we turn from the noise and turmoil of life, and sit down for an evening amongst our books. Kings of thought of every age stand in serried ranks waiting to our bidding. Poets of elder time, and of these later years—Homer and Milton and Pope, Longfellow and the Brownings and Lowell—sing at our bidding their immortal songs. Historians repeat for us the deeds of other days. Philosophers dig deep for us about the roots of knowledge. Shakespeare unveils for us the workings of heart and mind, and laughs or weeps, or fights or dies for us, just as we desire. Great students with dreams on fire with God, offer us the results of their life-long studies. The men of science probe nature's very heart for secrets, and lay their trophies at our feet. These are the grand and silent fellowships that wait for us. They have hoarded their genius to the uttermost, and made us 'Heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time.'"—Selected.

Conference Minutes.

OKLAHOMA.

Conference met with Oak Grove branch, May 13 and 14; R. M. Maloney in the chair, S. Smith secretary. The present number on district roll is 86. Owing to neglect many of the saints have not united with nearest or most convenient branch, as two former resolutions required, and three of the branches did not send a report at all, thus making a hindrance in making out report. Three committees reported: one in regard to the obtaining of a tombstone to be placed at the grave of Bro. Shupe, another in regard to the petitioning of Congress and State Legislature against B. H. Roberts, and another for the purpose of making Elder D. S. Crawley a General Conference appointee and to collect offerings to sustain him in this field. Last committee was discharged. Report of the tabernacle fund accepted: Total received $11.49; expenditures $8.05; on hand $3.44. Report of Bishop's agent: Received since August 29, 1897, in tithes and offerings $687.12; paid out for missionaries' families $652.27; balance on hand $5.85. Both reports examined and found correct. Report of the Sunday school of this mission field, from February 11, 1898, to May 12, 1899: Two conventions have been held; five schools have been organized, and two became inactive. Total enrollment about 80. Canadian Central branch reported; report returned for correction. Elders reporting: C. R. Duncan, D. S. Crawley, R. W. Davis, W. S. Macrae, H. C. Hughes, W. Vickery, S. J. Hinkle, R. M. Maloney, and T. J. Smith; Priests A. J. Bly and H. Bivens. All expressed a good feeling for the work, and a desire to promote its welfare. A suggestion was offered in regard to the ordination of S. Smith to the office of priest, and referred to branch for approval. Resolutions passed: That we as a district desire to express our appreciation of the labors, counsel, and assistance of our missionary in charge, Bro. C. R. Duncan, and very much regret poor health makes it necessary for him to seek a more healthful altitude. That Bro. W. Vickery be invited to extend his work in this field. That a camp meeting be held with the saints in Dewey County in the light of the moon in August. That our next conference be held at the place of our coming reunion in October. Sunday school on Sunday morning. Preaching by Elder R. W. Davis. Two were baptized in the afternoon. Sacrament and social meeting in charge of Elders Vickery and Crawley to the encouragement of all present. Adjourned to meet with the saints at Stillwater branch in October.

Reports audited and found correct. A communication was received from Joseph R. Lambert, Heman, C. Smith, and F. M. Weld, presenting J. R. Evans as their first choice for district president. The nominations were: J. R. Evans, J. S. Snively, and J. S. Roth. The latter declined. The vote stood: J. R. Evans 22, J. S. Snively 14. On motion of J. S. Snively the election of J. R. Evans was made unanimous. R. Warnock was reelected district secretary, and James L. Wright district treasurer. G. P. Lambert was sustained Bishop's agent. Branch reports: Burlington 110. KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.

Conference convened with Sedalia branch April 8. P. B. Seaton president pro tem., C. L. Snow assistant. Branch reports: Eagle Creek 35, Haley 37, Foundry Hill 57, High Hill 56, Sedalia 84. Elders reporting: John F. Henson baptized 7, C. L. Snow, D. W. Cook, J. H. Adair, P. B. Seaton baptized 3. Priests: E. P. Cook, R. N. Warren. Teacher A. S. Snow. At the request of Bishop's agent, a committee was appointed to audit his books. Found correct and a balance of $8.07 due church. D. W. Cook elected president, A. J. Myers reelected secretary. Whereas, Doctrine and Covenants, section 17, verse 16, declares that "no person is to be ordained to any office in this church, where there is a regularly organized branch of the same, without the vote of that church;" and whereas, this part of the law has been ignored, by one of the elders of this church "having ordained a teacher and a priest in Eagle Creek branch;" and whereas, said ordination has done harm; therefore, be it resolved, that we declare said ordination illegal. Carried. Whereas, a number of the missionaries have been lying around the old branches and devoting most all their time to the branches; and whereas, such missionaries draw support for themselves and families from the church; therefore, be it resolved, that we ask those having charge of missionary labor to release all such missionaries from duty, and appoint such as are willing not only to say but do according to that which is written, to push their work in new fields now widening before them, that confidence may be restored and peace and good will come to the people of God. Carried. Whereas, some that have been ordained to the priesthood in this district have not taken the admonition to study the word, that they might know how to rightly divide the same; therefore be it resolved, that we ask all the officers in the district to study the three books, that they may be able to teach others. Carried. Preaching by R. N. Warren, P. B. Seaton, and D. W. Cook. Prayer meeting in charge of D. W. Cook. Adjourned to Foundry Hill, July 22.

Statistics have been taken in France of the spread of the habit of smoking, and it has been discovered that within the last year the cigarette and even, astonishing as it may appear, the pipe have found an enormous increase in their female votaries.

Sunday School Associations.

PHILADELPHIA.

District Sunday school association convened at Baldwin, Maryland, May 6 and 7; Superintendent O. T. Christy presiding, E. B. Hull secretary. Superintendent and associate reported that recommendations had been sent to the schools advising them to work more in harmony with the rules of the association. Philadelphia school reported an enrollment of 60, with an average attendance of 40; Baldwin enrollment 15. Adjourned to meet six months from date, place left to district superintendent.

OKLAHOMA.

Sunday school convention opened at ten a. m., May 11, at Oak Grove branch; W. S. Macrae in charge, S. Smith secretary. Our organization is young, we have had many things to contend with, and not a few difficulties still lie across our pathway to success, but we have made a fair showing considering everything. Two conventions have been held; five schools have been organized; two of which have become inactive. We have three live and progressive schools now, which will be heard from hereafter, at Oak Grove, another at Nicely, and Canadian Central; total membership about 80. Opening remarks in the convention by W. S. Macrae, showing the condition of the district in general, and a brighter outlook for the future. Oak Grove and Canadian Central schools reported, showing good condition. Following resolutions passed: That a district librarian be had. That it is the opinion of this body that leaflets containing single lessons should be published for those not in regular attendance. That a paper be edited for the next convention. Quite a lengthy discussion upon the advisability of publishing the entire lesson in the Quarterly was had. Sr. H. C. Hughes, Sr. T. McGeorge, Bro. H. C. Hughes and Bro. C. R. Duncan expressed themselves not in favor. Brn. R. W. Davis and W. S. Macrae bringing out good points for the opposite. In the afternoon session the question box was opened, and the contents thoroughly digested. Some of the questions discussed were: Should the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants be used with equal note in the Sunday school? Should the gospel be taught in the Sunday school? What particular advantage has a Latter Day Saint Sunday school over other Sunday schools? Is it proper to have literary entertainments connected with conventions? Should non-members teach in our Sunday schools? What the qualifications of a superintendent should be, was discussed, and also the question of teachers' meeting. Sr. T. McGeorge was elected librarian for this year. A paper on Sunday school matters was read by S. Smith; principal subject: Needs of our district. In the evening session a good program was rendered. Two excellent papers were read, Sr. H. C. Hughes and a Mr. Budsworth. S. Smith and L. E. Aylor were appointed to edit the paper for the coming convention at next conference. Next convention to be held at Stillwater branch in October.

G. W. SHUTE MONUMENT FUND.

Acting upon the suggestion of missionary in charge, Elder C. R. Duncan, the Oklahoma district conference appointed a committee to solicit funds for the erection of a monument to mark the last resting place of our esteemed and worthy brother, G. W. Shute, who was called from earthly cares while at his post of duty in the Oklahoma mission in 1895. We believe his many friends would not be satisfied for this work to be done unless they could assist, therefore we extend this opportunity to you to contribute to this fund. The monument will be erected and unveiled with appropriate ceremonies at time of our mission reunion in October, which will be held near the cemetery. We desire to have all money in by August 1. Send same to Sr. S. J. Hinkle, Stillwater, Oklahoma.

South Missouri district conference will convene in saints' chapel, Pomona, at ten a. m., June 24. We look for a large delegation as the question of dividing the district will come up, hence each branch is requested to appoint delegates and empower them to cast the full vote, who must be sure to bring their certificates with them. Branch presidents are requested to report the condition of their respective branches; all other officers are not required to report their labors to conference unless they have done said labor outside of branches and forget not that quarterly collection of $1.00 (or more if you wish) as per resolution. Blank statistical reports will be forwarded to each branch in due time. Presidents and clerks will please see that they are properly filled out, and passed upon about two weeks or ten days before conference, and have them and all other communications, reports, and certificates forwarded to me at Pomona, in care of Elder John B. Graham.

J. C. CHESTENSEN, Pres.

The next conference of the European mission will be held in Manchester, August 5, 6, and 7. The business sessions will be held in South Manchester meeting room, and Sunday services in Hulme vestry hall, Stretford Road, Manchester. At the close of business sessions on Monday evening a fellowship meeting will be held, to which all will be invited. Brethren attending conference must be prepared to pay their own railway fares, as the treasury may not permit us to pay half fares as heretofore. All intending visitors will please notify the secretary at least fourteen days before the sitting of conference. The following brethren are a committee of arrangements: J. Dewsnup, Sen., J. Baty, Sen., and H. Greenwood.

Nor did he forget the injurious effect of poisonous matter used in canned goods.

He said the chemicals used in preservatives were by far the most injurious to health, and that the most common of them was salicylic acid, which he said was cheap. This he declared was used more generally for a fruit preservative than any other. No food containing preservatives of this character, he said, was fit to eat. He spoke of other adulterants used in preparing food and drink that were injurious, alum being one.—Chicago Tribune, May, '99.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. E. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.)

Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

RATIONAL BELIEF IN THE BIBLE.

In a sermon on "A Rational Belief in the Bible," the Rev. R. A. White said yesterday at the Stewart Avenue Universalist Church:—

"The higher criticism is a red rag to the traditionalist. To many it seems purely and maliciously destructive. In fact, it is not pledged to destroy the Bible, but to find whatever is really and permanently true about it and in it. In the long run the Bible will gain by it. What is false will be discovered, what is true will be made more clearly manifest. Whatever is true in and about the Bible will not be harmed. Its real value will be enhanced by a rational understanding of its origin and nature."

After reviewing the great historical and literary value of the Bible, the minister concluded:—

"Nor does the higher criticism detract from the great ethical teachings and forces of the Bible. Many things we could not now tolerate, to be sure; stories that could not be read in the pulpit. But all deductions made, where is there a collection of books that runs the entire gamut of human sins and human aspirations for righteousness, all in such dramatic or tragic settings as the Bible? We have not yet attained to the sublime ethics of the ten commandments. They are fundamentals in modern law, and thread the ethical needs of every phase of social life. The Old Testament is the great drama of righteousness finding consummation in the light of the New.

"Equally will the Bible respond to the devotional requisites of human nature. So long as human nature has spiritual aspirations and man sends his soul into the invisible, so long will the Psalms, themselves the breathings of many devout souls, continue to minister to the profound devotional needs of man."—Chicago Tribune, April 24, 1899.

TWO VIEWS OF RATIONALISM.

The Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson, preaching yesterday at the First Baptist Church, on "The Irrationality of Rationalism," said:—

"The rationalist spurns religion because its teachings transcend his finite faculties. He is bound to rid the world of ghosts and priests. The ghosts have gone, and the priests are going. What he can grasp—that is substance; what he can't grasp—that is ghost. A power in nature, vast, pervasive, invincible—that he can understand or thinks he can, but a personal God—omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent—that to him is incomprehensible, and therefore incredible.

"And yet how utterly irrational it is to refuse to believe a thing because it is incomprehensible? Who can comprehend anything? Who can pluck the heart out of the mystery that lies hidden in a flower, or a star, or a drop of water? A microbe rising to the surface of a drop of water that is its world and peering out and imagining that it is looking over the rim of the universe, and insisting upon believing nothing which it cannot understand—this is the irrational rationalist.

"And yet there is a rational rationalism that is greatly to be commended. The Lord's complaint of his creatures is not that they use their reason too much, but that they do not use it enough. 'Come now and let us reason together' is his gracious invitation.

"A blind and brainless force accounts for nothing. The so-called laws of nature explain nothing. A law never did anything and never will—at least, in Chicago.

"It is rational, then, to believe in a great first cause. And it is rational to believe in the reality and immortality of the human soul. It is rational to believe that the author of our being would give us light for the proper conduct of our being. And it is rational to believe in Jesus Christ and the religion of which he is the center and the soul—a religion which has been avouched by indubitable credentials, and which, notwithstanding all that may be said of its decadence, has still the mightiest grip of power of anything below the stars."—Chicago Tribune, April 24, 1899.

CONFERENCE ON TUBERCULOSIS.

The international conference at Berlin on tuberculosis is one of several such conferences which have been held within the last few years. It is impressive not only from its constituency, drawn from both sides of the water, but likewise from the subject upon which it is convened.

In dealing with war the peace conference at The Hague is concerned with a minor cause of death compared to the bacillus tuberculosis. This bacillus, whose primary home is in brute animals, especially cows, has a longer pedigree even than the human race and was at its work of destruction before human warfare began. Its victims also far exceed those of war. As against the few thousand deaths in the Spanish-American war the annual deaths in the United States from tuberculosis are approximately 150,000, and one in seven of all deaths in the civilized world is due to this cause. More than a million people are alleged to have this disease in this country on any given day. Nearly half of the entire population have it at some time and in some form during their lives, though some die of other causes and some recover. In Philadelphia the annual deaths from this cause are about 2,800. In New York State nearly 11 per cent of all deaths are of the same sort. In Chicago in 1896 the deaths from tuberculosis were 2,667, or 12 per cent of all deaths. Last year the deaths in this city from pulmonary tuberculosis alone were practically 10 per cent of the total death rate.

The ravages of this "Great White Plague," which attacks not alone the lungs, but the brain, joints, and other parts of the body, are much greater than from cholera, smallpox, or any other single disease. In Italy, between 1865 and 1893, 214,651 people perished from cholera and about 2,000,000 from tuberculosis. Other diseases are often more feared popularly than this one. The reason is that in the case of the latter transmission is less speedy and less easily identified. The danger of communication of tuberculosis, however, is

SECOND ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT

GRACELAND COLLEGE, LAMONI, IOWA,
BRICK CHURCH.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON, Sunday, June 11, at 11 a. m., by Bishop E. L. KELLEY, of Lamoni, Iowa.

now recognized as not only great but as widespread. Patients are about in society in all stages of the disease. They work over our foods in grocery stores and butcher shops; they make, wash, and iron our clothing; they walk, sit, and travel with the public in the streets, public halls, and conveyances. Their sneezings and coughings are deposited upon the things over which they work, and their dried sputum is thrown into the air or caught up from the floors or sidewalks and wafted into the lungs of their fellows. The Health Officer of Buffalo lately made tests of fifty examples of expectoration in street cars and found the bacillus tuberculosis in four of them.

Aside from these ways of communication milk is the great source of the disease, especially in the case of young children. A considerable fraction of cattle slaughtered are tubercular, and, as Dr. Virchow said before the conference, not only "sterilizing the milk" but "the slaughter of the infected animals" is imperative. Some few milkmen in this city furnish their customers with certificates that their herds have been examined and that all tubercular animals have been killed. "But," as Dr. Virchow added, "the intervention of legislation is certainly necessary." There is, however, no regular public inspection of this sort applied to the milk supply of Chicago and the great mass of the people are defenseless.

Little is done in this city to cope with this disease. Except in rare cases patients are not admitted to any of the hospitals, and those who finally yield to the inevitable and go to Dunning go there to die. Hence patients are scattered everywhere through the community. Some physicians boldly advocate the strict isolation of these patients in institutions or colonies and the transportation of less advanced cases to outdoor life in high altitudes. A society to take up the subject in general in Chicago was organized some months ago and its activity is at present awaiting the direction of the Commissioner of Health.

To spread information about the prevalence and communicability of this disease and to prepare the way thus for more thoroughgoing means of coping with it is an important function of such congresses as that at Berlin.—Chicago Tribune, May 29, 1899.

"Don't crush out the zeal of the young members. Remember that you cannot afford to cut off the branches you are standing upon. If their zeal is not characterized by a superabundance of wisdom, it denotes life and activity, and it is yours to shape and guide it into proper channels—to 'incline the twig' but never to quench the spirit of progression lest they become disheartened and die out, or step into ranks that will permit of development which may not terminate in their best good."

PATIENCE.

"Let patience have her perfect work," wrote the apostle, and perhaps there is no injunction of the Scriptures which is oftener on the tongue and less proportionately revealed in the lives of saints. It is so natural for us to draw lines and expect the Lord to work to them, that we frequently invite disappointment upon ourselves and grow restless in spirit because of the seeming indifference of our heavenly Father, towards the care and anxiety we have shown in so doing.

From the standpoint of our calculation everything looks at times as if the promises of God bound him to an open and visible sanction of what we have done and to an immediate revelation of that approval. With wistful eyes we watch to witness the descent of the fire to consume the sacrifice we have laid upon the altar. Its failure to materialize when, where, and in the manner we have figured upon, often fills the mind with disappointment and sometimes the heart with distrust.

We have thought sometimes, while listening to the utterances of a few saints, that if their interpretation of the promises and their exposition of the sayings of the Scriptures were correct in the absolute sense, it would only be a matter of time till the order of divine procedure would need to be changed. Man would be the master, and God, Christ, the angels, and the Spirit would be the servants. It would simply be for man to define and declare the necessities and for heaven to meet the showing thus made with the supplies demanded. Human impatience and insistence would be the criterion of divine obligation, and at their exhibition the heavens must make obeisance and lavishly turn loose her treasures upon the world.

Stated in this way, this idea may provoke criticism and denial by even the most ardent contenders for miraculous grace and interposition; but what other conclusion is reachable regarding persons who nominally admit the wisdom, love, and power of God, and yet so interpret his promises as to find ground for complaint and bitterness of spirit when he does not see fit to honor the fractions in their mathematical calculations as to data of fulfillment.

If wisdom be an attribute of God, its exercise must be expected in ordering all the details of his economy, whether relating to collective or individual necessities, and his love or mercy should not be questioned when he refuses to respect the measurement of his obligations by the line of human reason.

Many of the most loving and generous among us make mistakes, more or less serious, in our attempts to exercise these endowments for the benefit of others. Is it to be wondered at, then, that we should also make mistakes in fixing data for the dispensing of divine benefactions? Frequently we injure what we designed to help, either from a lack of discernment as to the real character of seeming necessities or from premature or irregular attempts to supply them, and often we are chagrined over the outcome of our venture; yet who among us would relish the insinuation that we were lacking in affection or were indifferent to suffering or need because of this. We simply lack wisdom. We are not sufficiently high in the realm of understanding or spiritual discernment to take in the whole area which the influence of our actions will traverse, hence the results of some of our well-intended services are a surprise to us.

God is as wise as he is powerful; he is as just as he is generous; his discernment is as deep as his mercy, and his exercises are harmonious in the blending of these attributes; but who that is frequently making mistakes in the employment of his or her own few excellent qualities can expect to fully comprehend and rightly appreciate such a God in all the movements of his grace. Is not the fact that he acts unlike our expectations a possible argument that his method is better, inasmuch as ours have proven themselves wanting. In the words of one of our hymns:—

"Shall foolish, weak, shortsighted man
Beyond archangels go—
The great almighty God explain
And his perfections know?
His attributes divinely soar
Above the creature's sight
And prostrate seraphim adore
The glorious Infinite."

In the confession of this is the admission of our need of patience. Impatience blocks the wheels of our spiritual education, in that it keeps us in an unreceptive condition of mind

—a condition under which the Spirit that sanctifies and by crucible-born experiences educates, cannot rapidly work out its plans. It is the soul that welcomes disappointment and cheerfully abides whatsoever the wise Father ordains or permits that will soonest graduate in the college of the kingdom. "The trial of your faith," which is elsewhere said to be "more precious than of gold," "worketh patience;" but "let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing," is the counsel of the Spirit through the Apostle James (see James 1:3, 4); with which agrees also the statement of Paul (see Romans 5:3, 4): "Tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed."

If "tribulation worketh patience," and we are to let "patience have her perfect work," with a view to our being made "perfect and entire, wanting nothing," then surely we cannot accomplish this by decrying the processes that chafe, nor by arraignment God in our complaints for his failure to meet the exactions of our finite interpretations of his infinite plan. Nor can we hope by dodging the "tribulation" that "worketh patience," to be among the number of the saints who are to secure a place nearest the throne, because they "came up out of great tribulation."

Some of us have lived to partially learn that disappointment and sorrow over unrealized anticipations have produced humility in proportion as they have been allowed to mortify the flesh and crucify the inclination to reconcile God to our ideas of necessity. Thus patience has been developed and with its development has come a better qualification to penetrate the seeming mysteries of providential delays, and we have been constrained with Peter to say of a truth, "God is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness."

That part of our character which cannot be reached and developed, after the godly intent, by prosperity, miraculous responses to our appeals, and by delightful experiences, must, if thus developed at all, be reached and rounded out by some other kind of experiences, and if disappointment and mortification of spirit can produce the needed transformation, there must occur in our lives that which will disappoint and mortify. Do we desire the development which is to present us "perfect and entire, wanting nothing," as a finality? If so, why complain at the "tribulation" designed in infinite wisdom to produce it?

Who is to be the judge as to real necessities among us—we who are being bewildered by the atmosphere they create around us and by association with those who share this condition with us, or He who is above and has a clearer and more comprehensive view of the entire area over which the influence of a movement will extend? There is but one answer to this, and as our hearts indite it upon our lips, it commits us to the other great truth; viz.,—that as God is higher and sees farther, so must his decisions and his thoughts and ways be higher also, and in that proportion will they be beyond our correct interpretation so long as we fail to allow the educational experiences they ordain to operate freely within us. Hence, until patience in us has had "her perfect work," and "experience" under it has brought us the power and wisdom to better discern those "higher ways" in the light of the development of their purpose in us, let us "cast not away, therefore our confidence, which hath great recompense of reward;" but let us humbly and resignedly abide the conditions divinely permitted, and, like Paul, even "glory in tribulation," that we may present at last, as evidence of our trust in God's supreme wisdom, the fact that we bear in our bodies the marks of the Lord Jesus.

CHURCH CONFORMING TO THE WORLD.

UNDISGUISED BOXING AND WRESTLING MATCHES HELD WITH SANCTION OF DR. BRIGGS' FUTURE CHARGE.

New York, May 28.—[Special.]—The idea of special features to attract young people to church, which has gone so far as dancing classes in several places, went a step farther Saturday in the Protestant Episcopal Pro-Cathedral at 130 Stanton Street, of which the Rev. Dr. Charles Briggs is to have charge.

Boxing matches and a wrestling bout were introduced with the approval of the authorities of the pro-cathedral and under the eye of the Rev. Mr. Paddock, the vicar, who seemed to enjoy them. The contests were held in the basement for the Young Men's Club, one of the many organizations of the pro-cathedral. There was a smoker, music, and recitations. Then a ring was improvised.

At the opening "Kid" Rowling of Buffalo and "Kid" Floss of Avenue A boxed three tame rounds, and a draw was the decision. The boys carried out the customs of the ring-side, and vociferous cheers, hisses, and cat-calls filled the large room.

Then came the real event of the evening. "Fellows," said Announcer Gambert, "I now introduce to you with great pleasure Dick Wunderlick, ex-champion welter-weight, and Phil Kelly, the coming welter-weight. They will box three rounds, and in the last introduce their original 'knockout,' which has been imitated by many, but successfully copied by none." Three strictly professional rounds followed, and in the last round Kelly delivered the realistic "knockout" blow.

The wrestling match was between Mike Zimmer and George Burke, the instructor of the gymnasium attached to the church.

The Rev. Mr. Paddock said that doubtless many people would not approve of such amusements in such a place, but he said the aim was to hold the young men's interest and keep them off the street.

The foregoing from the Chicago Tribune of May 29, is not pleasant reading, but is among the items that are necessary to keep track of in this age of "going on to perfection" in worldly foolishness and wickedness. If people want such nonsense in the guise of religion, we suppose there is no civil law to prevent them becoming a law unto themselves in such respects.

The liberal Doctor Briggs may find himself outdone in liberality, so-called, when he returns from Europe to assume charge of the church named above. Perhaps he may find more of myth and the fanciful in such inventions and systems than he and his school have claimed to be in early historical events narrated in the Bible, and which furnish much of the ground of his contention against its credibility.

The religious world, with the secular world looking on as spectators, is having a test of liberal doctrines and methods, and the spectacle is an interesting though a sad one to the thoughtful onlooker. Men of ordinary sense and judgment note with apprehension and alarm the effect of such loose ideas as prevail in the so-called liberalism in the religion of the day, and already are wondering what the harvest shall be. They see in the growing dissemination of discredit of and disbelief in the credibility of the Bible a like growth of disbelief in God and in the morals and other principles taught in the Scriptures, and note with alarm the increasing spirit of indifference toward religious belief and interest in the future life.

It is patent that the materialism that carried the world down into darkness and destruction in antediluvian times, in which men forsook and defied the Creator, is rapidly developing in our own times. And we may well study the import of the Savior's declaration that, "As it was in the days of Noah, so it shall be also at the coming of the Son of Man." (Matt. 24.)

The portents of the times reveal anew the prescience of the Master, who so clearly foresaw and so minutely depicted the prevailing spirit of the "latter days." The faithful follower of the Christ may well renew his faith in God and in that sense "watch and pray" and "lift up" his head "and rejoice" that the end of the world's age of iniquity and the redemption of the earth and of man "draweth nigh."

It behooves the disciples, all who claim so to be, not to forget the admonition of the Master, uttered for the especial benefit of his followers, to "watch" lest we be overcome in the time of the world's sleeping, and feasting, and its drunkenness—the drowsiness caused by the "wine" peculiar to this Babylonish age and time. The Lord has said concerning those who heed his voice in observing what he has admonished, "Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

The disciple of the Christ, the child of light, is supposed to be awake and alert, wise in his observations and firm in his confidence and dependence upon God. There is no doubt but what the faith of many will be tried in the "shaking" and in the "sleeping" time; that "because iniquity shall abound the love of men [including saints who knew and obeyed the truth] shall wax cold; but he that shall not be overcome, the same shall be saved." We, as a people, are deeply concerned, either for weal or for woe, in every general development in the world to-day. We are living in a time when because of wickedness God is "withdrawing his Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth;" and if we retain the Spirit that shall keep us against the evil day, it will be because we are wise to "understand" and faithful to observe the truth, careful to discern the conditions of the times. Our faith must be in God and in his truth, because men will at times come short of righteous doing; for so God has declared by his own voice to the church. If a people begin to allow discouragement or lethargy to creep over and possess them because men do wrong, even among their brethren, they will fail to endure and thus miss the mark of their high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We must not forget that the shaking times upon us include the shaking of individuals as well as of religious doctrines and churches and other systems in the world. It signifies the remaining only of those things which cannot be shaken. We are therefore concerned in all the signs and developments of the latter days, hence should not rest in indifference or fancied security.

The results of the extreme liberalism and radical revolutionary teachings of Doctor Briggs and his school will doubtless astonish both him and his associates ere the results are made to fully appear. It is easier to start an avalanche than to stop it. One of the latest claims made is that in the Alps the vibrations of air caused by the human voice have been sufficient to start the masses of ice and snow that have buried many of the inhabitants. Dr.

Briggs et al. seem to have verified this claim; and if the Doctor and his school are not themselves appalled when the results of their work are revealed, it will be a strange thing.

The avalanche of the higher criticism has been gaining in speed as its development has accelerated. It is not difficult to see the finale in the fall and ruin to rise no more of much of the theology of the times. It forms part of and is to go with Babylon whose present tottering emphasizes to the Christ believer the necessity of the coming reign of peace under the reign of the Prince of Peace. Loss of faith in faulty human institutions but tends to deepen faith in the divine economy.

RALLY DAY AT INDEPENDENCE.

The saints at Independence regard Sunday, May 28, as a "red letter day," in their experience.

Bro. Orville L. James, chorister, conceived the idea of the branch having a Rally Day, to compensate in a measure for the absence of the Annual Conference experiences. In mentioning the idea to others, it met with favor; preliminaries were had, and the plan decided upon.

Bro. James worked faithfully, and succeeded in rousing an interest in the song service to the extent that a hundred voices were in training and the owners of them took part loyally in the services during the day.

The editor received an invitation to be present with his wife; and "Uncle Alexander" Smith was also an invited guest.

The scene on the occasion of the morning service was a very pleasing and instructive one. The auditorium was full, including the gallery. The platform was occupied by a number of the leading officers, Bro. George E. Harrington presiding. The singers' recess behind the platform was filled, so that all available space was occupied.

Prayer was offered by Elder Rudolph Etzenhouser; the preacher was introduced and spoke from Paul's answer before Agrippa, occupying the hour in a good degree of liberty.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith was the speaker in the afternoon, and Bro. Joseph Smith again in the evening.

The choral service was excellent, Bro. Orville James having occasion to be pleased with his organist, Bro. Ralph G. Smith, and his attendant band of singers. One of the city papers signaled the song service as the best ever rendered in Independence by a local organization.

Of the day the editor has this to say: The efforts made to serve the Lord in full purpose of heart were evidently pleasing to the Master, for the Spirit gave aid to all.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. U. W. Greene wrote from Honolulu, Hawaii, the 16th ult., that there being no immediate prospect of an ingathering among the white people in Honolulu, after months of labor in their behalf the brethren felt to turn their attention to the native Hawaiians. They had already made their first opening for missionary work and it promised success. From a point two hundred miles distant there had come a cry for the gospel. It was difficult to reach the white people of the capital, a center of pride, social caste, wealth, and pleasure seeking.

The political crisis arising out of the Ausgleich, the agreement under which the cost of the administration of common affairs in the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is borne by both parties in the proportion agreed upon from time to time between the two Parliaments, is intense, and both the Austrian and Hungarian Cabinets are expected to resign next week.

An appalling famine continues to prevail in Eastern Russia. Princess Lieven writes from the distressed Christopol district: "You cannot imagine what they eat. Anything is looked upon as good enough to fill the stomach. Bad typhoid fever and scurvy in the most virulent form are the natural results of the bad and insufficient food. There is constant bleeding from the roof of the mouth, which is swollen, and the gums also bleed when touched. The teeth get loose in their sockets. Open sores appear on the feet. Death comes from internal hemorrhage. About 70 cents is sufficient to buy food to keep up the strength of a man during a month. So little money goes a long way. But thousands are to be fed and speedy help is needed, for people's lives are at stake."

The Presbyterian General Assembly at Minneapolis took action against the seating of B. H. Roberts and demanding a constitutional amendment making polygamy a crime and defining legal marriage to be monogamic. Good; now let the Presbyterian Assembly provide that hereafter no polygamist converts in India or elsewhere be received into the bosom and fellowship of the Presbyterian Church, and that such converts already received be labored with and corrected or disfellowshipped.

On May 26 a Swedish expedition sailed from Helsingborg for Greenland, in search of Andree, the polar explorer who attempted to reach the pole by balloon. The U. S. Revenue Cutter Bear recently sailed north from San Francisco with a number of oak casks which will be set adrift in Arctic waters, on ice floes, or drifts, in order to find a possible means of reaching the pole by placing vessels in such ice packs. It is expected that the casks will drift through the Arctic region and return to Greenland or other points, after a time.

The Rev. Dr. Howard S. Bliss, former pastor of Plymouth Church under Dr. Lyman Abbott, at present pastor of a Congregational church at Upper Mount Clair, New Jersey, is preparing to bring before the Congregational International Council, which meets at Boston, September 20, a proposition to do away entirely with infant baptism in the church, substituting an impressive service of dedication. The proposition is exciting wide interest among the Congregationalist laity and is receiving hearty indorsement from many ministers.

THE MINIMUM AND THE MAXIMUM.

The spirit and genius of the world, especially of the present age, and the nature of which the true follower of the Lamb is made partaker, differ as widely from each other as do the terms used in the above caption. Therefore, it is not strange or marvelous that the words, "Except ye have the Spirit of Christ ye are none of his," should strike the thoughtful mind with startling force when their import is grasped, for here is a test, very simple but extremely decisive, by which we may know ourselves—an honest mirror that presents a true reflection—an instrument that rings with no uncertain sound.

The man of this world deals largely in minima in the way of expenditures, and looks for the maxima in return. That is to say, for the little that he may be forced to expend he requires the very largest possible amount in return. And he who can reduce this principle to a successful practice is the man who cuts his name high up in the limestone rocks of worldly fame, and sways the masses by the power of his presence. But the immaculate Son of God who prefaced the story of the future world and laid the foundations for millennial felicity for us in his life upon earth, wrought upon principles altogether different.

Jesus, the maximum of fatherly gifts, did not say, How little can I do and still retain the Sonship and respect of my Father, and all the celestial hosts? How little need I give of life and service and still be the Savior of the world? How little need I suffer at the hands of my enemies and still be the Redeemer of man? But with a soul overflowing with the deepest love and heart yearning for fallen humanity, he thus proclaims his position: "I do always those things that please him;" "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up;" "The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."

The maximum of all that is good, grand, and noble; and nothing withheld. And what does he require at the hands of his Father for all this? O how we poor, selfish mortals hang our heads, and blush before such a reversal of our adopted methods! Hear him, as he prays, "Father, glorify me with the glory that I had with thee before the world was." Not a thing in advance. Only prays for the return of that which he had already possessed. The maximum in expenditure—the minimum in return.

When we find ourselves endeavoring to govern our actions in spiritual matters according to the principles adopted by the world, we may know of a surety that we are yet too much in and of this world to be pleasing to God or helpful to mankind. While we find ourselves debating the questions: How little may I do of the commandments of God and still be numbered with his people? How little of my time, talent, and energy may I devote to his cause and still be beneficial to the brotherhood and influential among those who are seeking good? How little can I pay upon my property and not come under the ban of robbing God? How little of what God has given us of his word can I study and accept, and still be saved? We are still barren trees in God's vineyard, who cumber the ground and are in danger of being hewn down. So long as we deal in minima on this side of the question, so long there is need of conversion, that our hearts may be open to drink in and be governed by the true Spirit of Christ, which never says how little may I, but how much can I? The one is the language of a groveling, selfish, wicked world; the other is the pulsation of an overflowing heart, renovated by the indwelling of the divine Spirit. There is no mistaking or confounding the two. The question of, How little, need never be answered; for whether it be much or little, it matters not. It is displeasing to God while we question, and our offering is not accepted, because given or suffered grudgingly.

The Father of light, love, and mercy deals with us in maxima. Why should his children seek to deal with him upon the opposite extreme? How low an estimate we must put upon his continual goodness. What a mean and meager degree of appreciation of a redemption from a world of misery; what a faint, barren conception of the promised glories, that would permit us to figure how close we can come to nothing in return for all this, and still make a claim upon God for the maximum of his eternal riches!

As ye mete, so shall it be measured to you again, is a principle of old, and heralded through the ages of all time, and is sternly true to-day. "Abundant entrance, "fullness of joy," "blessed forever," and such expressions, partake not of the minimum, but belong to the celestial kingdom, where the maximum blessings of the God of unlimited resources are enjoyed.

Think you those enjoyments come as a result of a life spent in minima?

Then arise, O we who have named his name, and have enlisted in the glorious cause, into higher spheres, and upon nobler plains, into the heritage of the true saint, and count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, and be found in him, not having our own righteousness which is of the law of this world, but that which is through the faith of Christ; that we may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death to sin; if by any means we might attain to the resurrection of the just.

A TRAVELING ELDER.

THOUGHTS BY A PRACTICAL MILLER.

As there have been several articles in the Herald on "whole wheat flour," Graham, etc., and as few know exactly how these articles are prepared for the market, an explanation may be profitable to many.

"Graham flour," when first introduced, we do not know; but when it was first called Graham can be easily found out. It consisted of the wheat well cleaned, and ground fine on a burr, thus containing all that nature ever put into a wheat berry.

"Whole wheat flour," that is much talked about nowadays as a health diet, is a fad. It is made according to the idea or hobby of the miller that makes it. The demand calls for an article that is coarser than the "patent flour" (so called), and this demand gives the miller a chance to fix up an article. One was fixed up on this wise. The coarse shorts, fine shorts, and some low grade flour were mixed and bolted through a buckwheat reel; this reel took out the particles of bran that was in the shorts. The low grade flour whitened the mixture, so that it had a presentable appearance. The customer said it was all right, and made sweeter bread than the fine white flour. I will here explain, partly, why it was sweeter. The germ of all grains is the sweetest portion, and also is the most difficult to grind, as it is tougher and softer; and as it passes through the burr or rolls, it is flattened or broken, so it will not all pass through the bolting cloth, and a portion "tails over" into the shorts bin. The low grade flour being coarse, also gets a portion of the germ, and by mixing the two you will naturally get a sweet loaf. There is also a small portion of the germ in the "patent flours." The following is an analysis of the wheat berry, by "Richardson, 1885, Am. Chem. J., Vol. 6, p. 396." Average percentage of four lots of Minnesota wheat. The flour is "patent" roller process: water, 9.07; proteids, 14.35; starch, 70.37; fat, 2.74; fiber, 1.68; ash, 1.79. "Patent flour": water, 12.59; proteids, 11.07; starch, 74.59; fat, 1.12; Fiber, 0.26; ash, 0.37. By comparison you will observe that the percentage of "water and starch" is in excess in the flour, and that the proteids, fat, fiber, and ash exceed water and starch in the wheat berry.

After the wheat passes through the mill we have a "pile of bran," and we pick up a handful and say, "not much in it"? No! But here is an analysis by the same authority: Water 10.91; proteids, 16.28; starch, 56.21; fat, 5.03; fiber, 5.98; ash, 5.59.

Farmers! Why does bran mash make the old cow give more and better milk? When your horses "get off their feed," why does a good "bran mash" get them back again? And why (?) does regular feeding of bran and shorts (more shorts the better) make the pigs grow? Think you there is nothing in the bran?

Consult the analysis given above, and if there is anything in the bran that is so good to keep our stock in a healthy condition, why not we eat a little, as an experiment of course, for "no one eats bran nowadays." "That's cow feed."

I read something like this: "All grain is good for the food of man. . . . Nevertheless, wheat for man, and corn for the ox, and oats for the horse," etc. How do you read? Does this say wheat or any part of it is cow feed? Another passage reads: "All grain is ordained for the use of man and of beasts," etc.; but this first quotation classifies the grain, and says what is best for man, what for the ox, the horse, swine, fowls, etc. As "the books" contain instructions for our guidance to a temporal as well as spiritual salvation, I think the nearer we follow them the better we will be, and I do not know of any scripture instructing us to eat a part of the grain, fruit, or vegetables, and discard a part. Do you?

Some years ago an Englishman interested in the rice trade, remarked to us his surprise that rice entered so little into general consumption here in America, and he considered the fact all the more remarkable as rice can be grown in our Southern States. . . . Americans take naturally to starchy foods, largely to their own detriment. . . . Cracked wheat is the indicated substitute for rice. It is cheaper, costing about a third as much. It satisfies the craving for starch, and is nevertheless a laxative. . . . Many people have to cultivate a taste for oatmeal; but cracked wheat is palatable to a great majority. Cracked wheat, rolled wheat, or even whole wheat, (though there are culinary objections to the latter, as it requires cooking for a long time,) are better suited than rice for general consumption in this country. . . . They are superior to the vaunted health flours, and little opportunity exists for deception. . . . An honest article only need be made from well cleaned, sound, plump wheat."—Extract from editorial, American Miller.

A contributor to the American Miller, signing himself "Mac," says:—

The fate of all cereals put up in packages is much the same, that is, it becomes stale and wormy. If cracked wheat is properly made from good, clean, hard winter wheat, and properly cooked, it is by far the best breakfast food on the market. The only proper way to cook this cereal is to soak it over night, as you would beans or hominy; then cook thoroughly next morning. . . . By soaking over night, it will cook in about one hour," etc.

I will add to the above, and say that a little salt while cooking, and cream and sugar while being served, will make the dish more palatable, and one that very few will refuse. Try it!

My hobby is, and it works very well when tried: Take your wheat, clean it thoroughly, and have it ground fine. Don't sieve it; but if you think there is too much bran, get a sack of white flour and mix it half and half. I think this makes the best bread possible. If you can't bear to eat bran, take your coarse sieve and sieve out the bran; then you have nearest to a "whole wheat flour" of anything that I could describe. Can you eat the bran? Did you ever try it when it was left in the proportions in which it grew? We millers can only get from about nine to thirteen pounds of bran per bushel of wheat, and if we get less than ten pounds we are grinding close indeed. So you see that about one sixth of the wheat is bran, and referring to the analysis you can see what there is in it.

I believe there are but very few, indeed, whose digestive organs are so weak that they cannot assimilate the nutrition contained in the bran. Why! The instruction is: "Given for a principle, with promise; adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints."

Now I will tell you what one of the weak saints (one with a weak stomach) did. Got married! Yes. And her husband started to mill, and said: "Wife, how much Graham flour shall I get?"

"All you want for yourself. I don't want any. My stomach can't stand bran."

So every time he went to mill he got some Graham for himself, and at the end of two years the grist was always half and half. Always take two to be one; so the flour and Graham were united equally; and husband, wife, and three children all eat of the same loaf; and to partake of a meal now without the Graham loaf is more of a disappointment than it was to learn to like it.

The quotation from American Miller says that bran is a laxative, and this is the greatest reason why more people should eat more bran. Then they would have no reason to consult the doctor just to get a box of pills. Here I am reminded of two eminent physicians of the old country; each of them had a large volume, in which was recorded their own rules of health. When they passed away, their heirs expected to find valuable formulas for all diseases. They searched these volumes, and turned blank and white page after page. In one volume they found this prescription: "Keep the head cool, feet warm, and bowels regular;" in the other was written: "Keep in the fear of the Lord and the bowels regular."

It is without doubt the most important matter of health, or rather to maintain health. The regularity of the movement of the bowels is of so much importance that everyone should so diet themselves and accustom their habits as to produce one movement in each twenty-four hours at a certain hour. This can be done by following the directions given by our Master and Creator:—

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen. —Doc. and Cov. 86:3.

This article is not written with the expectation of having anyone do as I say, but with the hope and intent that some one may be benefited and God be glorified.

I have attempted to show that good health is what we need, and how we may in a degree get it. Now I will try and give a few thoughts on economy. At present wheat is selling at 55c. to 60c. per bushel, and flour $2.25 to $2.50 per hundred pounds. Figuring wheat at one cent per pound, and flour at two and a half cents per pound, one bushel of wheat will buy twenty-four pounds of flour. Take your wheat to the mill and you will get on an average thirty pounds flour and ten pounds bran per bushel (the bran don't count—feed it to the cow), which is a little better than selling your wheat and buying flour; considering that you get same grade of flour.

Next clean your wheat and have it ground fine. Tell the miller to toll it, and if he be an honest miller (all ought to be) he will only take a fifth or sixth in Iowa, giving you forty-eight or fifty pounds to the bushel. You sieve out the bran, and then you will have thirty-eight to forty pounds of whole wheat flour. If you don't want to trust the miller, tell him that you want to pay for the grinding, and he will charge about ten cents per hundred pounds, or six cents per bushel, and you will have fifty-five to sixty pounds per bushel to take home. Make it into gems or Graham loaf, and you have a bread that will build up muscle, bone, sinew, teeth, and keep the bowels regular: doing away with the pill box on the mantel, and making the physicians hunt for new patients.

I don't believe that cracked wheat, Graham, or whole wheat flour alone will make us healthy; but I do believe it is one of the means to the end, and when we can keep all the commandments, we can then expect to be healthy.

Our youngest child was troubled with constipation from the time of birth until she was old enough to eat solid food; we then fed her the Graham bread containing the bran, and so long as that was her regular diet, constipation was unknown, and occurred only when the Graham diet was dispensed with and fine flour substituted. She is now four years old, and a healthier child can not be found. Graham alone did not do the work, but was one of the prime factors.

Better writers can treat this subject more clearly than I, so will leave farther consideration to them.

MORE ABOUT OLIVE OIL.

I note that you have republished my communication written in 1894 in relation to the medicinal virtues of pure olive oil. Since coming to California I have investigated the matter more fully and am convinced that the olive oil users of America are being terribly imposed upon. Much of what is being sold as olive oil has little if any, of the pure fruit of the olive in it. It is a mixture of all of the abominable stuff that our present commercial depravity leads men to palm off on the credulous for gain.

The Los Angeles Times of May 19, says:—

Apart from the question of success or failure in the cultivation of the olive tree, there is no doubt that one of the chief drawbacks to the industry at present is the general sale of adulterated olive oil, or oils that are not made from the olive at all. It is safe to say that not one per cent of the oil sold as olive oil throughout the United States is the pure product of the olive. So-called oil is made from cotton seed, peanuts, lard, and other cheap products. This of course can be sold at a very much lower price than pure olive oil.

The Chicago Times-Herald, in referring to the evidence on food adulteration recently given before Senator Mason, says:—

We may illustrate by a reference to the case of olive oil. This oil is one of the most important food products of the Mediterranean countries, and in the pure state is so wholesome that physicians constantly advise its use as an article of diet. The demand for it has resulted in the planting of thousands of olive orchards in California and adjacent States. But neither the native oil nor the foreign has any chance in our markets, because they are flooded with the cotton seed oil that is shipped abroad, bottled, labeled as olive oil, and returned to us "imported." This stuff is cheap, and may be sold at a small price, which would knock all the profits out of olive oil. As a consequence the California orchardists are discouraged before they have half begun. Experts are even now advising them that the struggle is hopeless; that no more trees should be planted, and that many of those which have been planted should be cut down.

Meanwhile where does the purchasing public stand? The qualities of olive oil are not contained in cotton seed, so that this is not merely a question of price with the consumer. He might want the olive oil at double the price of the other, but like the California olive grower, he is at the mercy of the fraudulent label. He cannot buy, the grower cannot sell. There is an unjust and inexcusable prohibition upon both of these, which to the grower means ruin. Such a wrong should not be tolerated, and it is to be hoped that the senate's pure food commission will discover some way of preventing it through legislation.

I am satisfied that much of the oil used by the saints throughout the country is nothing more than hog lard, wormy nuts, and other cheap grease so doctored as to give a semblance to olive oil. But there is no comparison between the two. Pure olive oil has a sweet, nutty taste. It can be eaten with bread, or other food, with relish. It is neither rancid nor greasy.

Michael Conroy, F. C. S., in reading a paper before the Liverpool chemist's association, said:—

While I was engaged in the shipping business in the city of New York, our firm had one telegraph order for one thousand tierces of hog's lard to go to the Mediterranean to adulterate olive oil. One year's exports of cotton seed oil from New Orleans to the Mediterranean was sufficient in quantity to fill fifteen million ordinary oil bottles, the cost of the oil in each bottle being less than ten cents. So long as our people are willing to pay a dollar for what is not worth anything, and which costs less than ten cents, so long will hog's lard and cotton seed, under false labels, be consumed by them as olive oil.

Oils advertised to sell for less than four dollars per gallon are not pure olive oil. Most if not all oil sold in bulk is more or less adulterated. In fact, according to governmental reports, it is practically impossible to get pure oil in bulk. Out of fifty samples examined by our governmental experts of foreign oils at the port of entry, only three were found to be pure.

The following test will be found to be reliable in determining the relative value of the different grades of oil:—

Mix thoroughly one part of strong nitric acid (sp. gr. 1.42) with nine parts of the oil to be tested, and pour the mixture into a white porcelain dish, capable of holding at least ten times the quantity. Apply heat gently until action between the acid and the oil is fairly set up, then remove the source of heat and stir well with a glass rod until the action is over.

Pure olive oil thus treated and allowed to cool, sets into a pale, straw-colored hard mass in an hour or two, while cotton seed and other seed oils assume a deep orange red color, and do not set like olive oil.

In hot weather it is necessary to artificially cool the sample, so as to promote the setting; but to a practical eye the setting is quite unnecessary, the color being sufficiently distinct without.

A simpler test will test some of the best brands imported. Put in a refrigerator, where the temperature is as low as 35 degrees Fahrenheit, and leave twelve hours. Serious adulteration will be developed.

In view of the foregoing, I would recommend to the saints that they avoid the foreign or imported oils. There are two or three of the California brands that are absolutely pure and, though costing more, are much cheaper in the end.

Olive oil is used in a holy ceremony, which is instituted to secure health. We should have the best that the market can afford. It will not do to argue that, even if one does buy poor oil, God will make it pure when it is consecrated. God does nothing of the kind, and I think it is bordering on sacrilege to knowingly buy cheap oil and then ask the Lord to purify for our use rancid nut products mixed with hog's lard. God could destroy the deleterious effects of adulteration, but we have no recorded instance where his miraculous interposition has converted animal fat into a vegetable or fruit extract. Poor oil, even when consecrated, becomes rancid. Pure oil if kept in a dark, cool place will not become rancid, though held for a long time.

The Ellwood Cooper brand of oil is undoubtedly the best in the market today. It has taken the premium in every contest. Mr. Cooper challenges the world to prove that there is aught else but the juice of the olive in this oil. It comes in two sized bottles, containing the stamp of the manufacturer blown in the bottle, as well as stamped on the tin foil which encloses the cork. The large bottles should retail for one dollar and the small for fifty cents. Insist on your druggist supplying you with this brand. If he charges you more, or you cannot secure it from him, then drop me a card and I'll put you in a position to secure it straight from the manufacturer.

Most of the druggists do not care to handle this oil, and inasmuch as they are in the business for their own profit and not your health, they will carry the cheap article, and thus impair rather than benefit your health, if you will permit them to do so. You cannot blame them. In all probability you would do likewise were you in their position.

What a terrible curse this profit system is to the world anyway! It makes men, otherwise big-hearted and generous, oftentimes unprincipled rogues. Let us as saints consecrate our lives to the upturning of the present order of things and the institution of the cooperative commonwealth—outlined in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants—on this land, where all the means of production and distribution shall be owned and operated by all the people for all the people, and there will be no incentive to adulterate anything, for then, doing business for profit will no more exist, and the adulterator would profit nothing, and men seldom if ever do wrong save for profit or personal gratification.

So long as men's interests clash, so long will dishonesty dominate in all the ramifications of business life. Make men's interests identical, and you have solved the social problem and cancelled nine tenths of the sins to which man is heir. Most of the crime of the world is not done from choice, but from real or imaginary necessity. Remove the incentive to sin and you destroy sin.

In the question of adulteration we see the effects, but seldom question as to the cause. The profit system is the cause. So long as men can make twice as much by adulterating an article as by selling it pure, so long will adulteration continue, all laws to the contrary notwithstanding. Destroy the possibility of profit, institute the cooperative commonwealth, and the cause being removed the effects immediately vanish.

Nothing short of the gospel plan of social life, as depicted in the Doctrine and Covenants, will save this nation from dissolution; and I think the time ripe for the saints and ministry to acquaint themselves with the remedy God has outlined for our present social malady, and call on the world to adopt it. The trouble is, most of our people are as ignorant of the cause of our trouble and the remedy prescribed as the world.

Hoping and working for a brighter day, ever your brother in Christ,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

LAY ADMINISTRATION.

One of the precious promises made by the Savior to the believer was:—

They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover.—Mark 16: 18.

There can be no question who are "they" who are to recover; but in the religious world there is much question as to who are "they" who are to lay on hands. Formerly I supposed that Latter Day Saints were a unit in believing that only those bearing the Melchisedek priesthood (elders) could legally so administer, but I have found that some do not so hold. I have known three members of the church, in three widely severed localities, who claimed the right to administer to the sick without holding any office in the church. All of these claimed the authority of a command from God to do such work, and two of them point to the result of miraculous healing as proof of divine approval of their action.

I cannot see that such course is consistent with God's law, and take this method of expressing my views, and what I believe to be the position of the church. If wrong, I hope to be corrected and "instructed more perfectly."

The position seems to be taken that lay administration in these cases was justified by direct command of God, and confirmed by the healing that followed. If the command of God to an individual is to be accepted without being judged by the law to the church, and the healing of the body as proof of the lawfulness of the proceeding, then personal experience interprets the law instead of the law interpreting the experience, and every man becomes a law to himself. Hence I appeal to the law, and leave each one to take care of his own experience.

In the statement already quoted (Mark 16:18), we are not told who shall lay on hands, only that it is "them that believe." Shall we jump to the conclusion that the right appertains to any believer? Let us go back of the text a little.

And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. . . . These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.—Matt. 10:1, 5-8.

In this scripture we learn that the ministry hitherto borne by Jesus alone was now to be shared by the twelve whom he ordained and named apostles. Healing the sick seems to have been as much a part of their official work as casting out of devils and preaching the kingdom at hand. The records of Mark and Luke give a very similar account.

And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils.—Mark 3:14, 15.

Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.—Luke 9:1, 2.

The commission given in Mark 16:16-18 is a renewal of this first commission with a little variation. It is evident then that the expression "they shall lay hands on the sick" refers to the ministry. Paul, speaking of the bestowal of spiritual gifts says, "To another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit." (1 Cor. 12:9.) We may admit the gift of healing without authority to lay on hands; but we know of no New Testament record of healing by the hands of others than the ministry—that is by laying on of hands. We cannot deny the right of any to pray for the sick, but laying on of hands is an ordinance pertaining to those divinely called and authorized to so act.

Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord.—James 5:14.

This makes it plain who the Lord intended to be called. Is not the anointing "in the name of the Lord" done by the same authority as baptism in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost? A layman would hardly assume to do the latter. Note the similar expression, "in my name," namely, by my authority in this.

And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me.—D. C. 42:12.

Latter-day revelation makes clearer definitions of official duties in the church than we have in the ancient scriptures, as in the following:—

An apostle is an elder, and it is his calling to baptize, and to ordain other elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, . . . and to confirm those who are baptized into the church, by the laying on of hands for the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost. . . . The priest's duty is to . . . ordain other priests, teachers, and deacons [by laying on of hands]. . . . But neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands.—D. C. 17:8, 10, 11.

From this we learn that the laying on of hands belongs to elders; the priest may do so in ordaining, but neither teachers nor deacons may. And we cannot think that lay members can possess authority that is denied those officers.

ADAM J. KECK.

THE GATHERING—ARE WE READY?

Since the issue of the Saints' Herald of January 4, in which some of the views of G. H. Hilliard on the subject of the gathering were given, the minds of the saints have been agitated on that important subject, till much has been said and some written upon it, thus reflecting the fact that unity of sentiment on the matter has been reached by but few, if any. I believe it is true the saints agree that the time for the gathering into the "regions round about," as mentioned in the revelation of 1873, is now here; but as to the ways and means and the laws required of those so gathering, a perfect unity of sentiment is not yet attained. How to reach this unity and to put the law touching this matter into practical effect is the thing now to be considered by us as a church. Inasmuch as the subject of the gathering is a very important one, much counsel on it is necessary.

Where no counsel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counselors there is safety.—Prov. 11:14.

So we have a Bible warrant for counseling on this or other matters of importance. The objector might say it will hardly do to agitate the subject of the gathering, as the saints were driven from Independence in 1833; and should we gather "in the regions round about," we might be driven out again. It is well enough to have objectors sometimes, so that as Bro. M. H. Bond says, both sides may be thoroughly canvassed. But I believe both the saints and the people of the world are in some respects different to what they were in 1833. The work of the saints was not so well understood by the world as it is now; and besides there is not so much intolerance and religious bigotry among them now as then existed. More than this, the saints did not keep the commandments in things of grave importance at all times. For instance, the Lord says, in 1832:—

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which is written.—D. C. 83:8.

As the whole church was under condemnation in September, 1832, it is not likely that they were living as they should in 1833.

My people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer.—D. C. 102:2.

The saints in early days suffered, and we are suffering to-day for lack of obedience. Saints, are we not suffering to-day by reason of our scattered condition, and because we have not learned as individuals and as a body to live by every word of God? It is true we keep the laws of the land very well; but the perfect law of liberty is sometimes neglected by us. No need of our saying we keep the whole law when we don't; in that case we would lie. What we need is to know the worst of our condition and provide for it. The work of colonizing by the Salvation Army is looked on as a commendable enterprise; while the work of God, as engaged in by us, is not so popular as the work of the Salvation Army, yet when our people buy a body of land, settle upon it in "the regions round about," either north, east, south, or west of the central gathering place of the saints, and there keep both the laws of God and the laws of man, they are not likely to be molested.

I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand.—D. C. 85: 21.

As we have so little time to “teach one another diligently” at General Conference in quorum work, we must do what we can on this line by means of the church publications.

Let the privileges of the lands be made known, from time to time, by the bishop or the agent of the church; and let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.—D. C. sec. 58: 12.

From the above citation of law we see that the “privileges of the lands” are to “be made known, from time to time, by the Bishop, or the agent of the church.” If this part of the law has been complied with either by the Bishop or church agent the writer is not aware of it; however, I do not say it has not been done. From this revelation it appears that the “Bishop or agent of the church,” is to view out the land in “the regions round about,” and state to the elders the character of the soil, the price of the land, and such other things as are necessary for elders to know; then they are to counsel together at the conferences over the matter, till a proper understanding is had, so that they can instruct the saints where to locate. Should the writer be asked the price of land in Jackson or adjoining counties, I could not tell. Should I as an elder be asked if the people in “the regions round about” were willing to have the saints gather there I could not answer positively. Many other elders however are doubtless better informed on this subject, at least I hope so. The subject of the gathering should be kept before us till our duty in that regard is performed. If an individual member or branch of the church should neglect their duty, they would need to have their duty pointed out to them in a lawful way, and the same is true of the church as a body. The knowledge that a number have gathered to Zion and “the regions round about” is encouraging to the ministry and laity who are scattered abroad. This aids much, no doubt, in preventing the top of the tree from becoming too heavy for the root. We need to watch this matter very carefully, and see that the root is sufficiently strong to support the top, that the whole tree may have a healthy and a steady growth; so that it may be strong and well rooted, that it may not be blown down by the storms, as they are not all passed over yet. Acknowledging my own errors, yet desiring to come up higher, I remain your brother in Christ and colaborer in the cause of truth,

C. J. SPURLOCK.

ARE WE KEEPING OUR PART OF THE COVENANT?

The above is the headline of an article which appeared in the Herald of May 20, 1896, and to which we have given a little time and thought since reading; but before that time we let our teachers do our thinking for us on this point (a thing which we are too apt to do), and the result was that we have felt that the Lord does not require much of us—when we are trying to be very economical in our living and our increase is scarcely perceptible—that is, increase as we had previously understood it. But taking up our Bible and Doctrine and Covenants we can find nothing to bear us out in our former understanding of the law of tithing. Abram gave tithes of all to Melchisedek (Gen. 14: 20). “Jacob vowed a vow” to God that he would give a tenth to him (Gen. 28: 20–22).

And the Lord spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them. . . . I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.—Num. 18: 20, 21.

And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord.—Lev. 27: 30.

The Lord said to Israel:—

Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year.—Deut. 14: 22.

Not a tithe of what was left after living, but of what grew in the field. Hezekiah

Commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give the portion of the priests and the Levites, that they might be encouraged in the law of the Lord. And as soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the firstfruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.—2 Chron. 31: 4, 5.

We see by all the foregoing scriptures that Israel of old was under strict charge by command from God to give a tenth of all for the support of those who ministered for them, and when they failed in this, and the Levites received not their portion, every one fled to his field; thus was “the house of God forsaken” by them (Neh. 13: 11).

Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.—1 Cor. 9: 14.

We turn now to Doctrine and Covenants to find what is given to the church in these latter days.

Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning; this is speaking after the manner of the Lord.—D. C. 64: 5.

We now come to the direct question and answer:—

In answer to the question, O Lord, show unto thy servants how much thou requirest of the properties of thy people for a tithing? Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying of the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord. Verily I say unto you, It shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, If my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, It shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen.—D. C. 106.

Surplus: Excess beyond what is prescribed or wanted.—Webster.

This we believe to be generally so understood. The question hinges on the word “interest.” Webster says:—

Interest, noun. 1. Concern; sympathy. 2. Excitement of feeling, especially of gratified feeling. 3. Share; part. 4. Advantage. 5. Premium paid for the use of money.

It seems to be very evident that the third definition is the one intended of the Lord in his answer to the question, How much dost thou require of the properties of thy people? for I venture the assertion that there would be very few elders on the tenth of money received by the saints for the use of money which they have loaned. I think we would be safe in saying that nine tenths of us would not come under the law of tithing at all, and those who did would not overstock the treasury with one tenth of their interest!

Now when the cry is going forth throughout the land: “Come over and help us;” “Cannot an elder come this way and preach for us;” “there are some in this part who are anxious to hear the gospel;” and such calls for the servants of our God, and these cries are continually ascending to him because of lack of means to send forth enough ministers to reach them, who will be held to account?

Are God's servants to occupy the back seats, and come up for their share after the lay members are clothed and fed, or shall we not rather trust him wherein he says:—

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of hosts.—Mal. 3:10-12.

Does not this look like sanctifying the land, that it may be a land of Zion unto us?
J. W. MARTIN.

FAIRPOINT, Ohio, June 14, 1896.

THE POPULAR CHURCH.

The building is of costly material, and built after the most recent and approved style of architecture. Its windows of stained glass are cathedral in style, grand in appearance, and costly in price. Its portals are wide and swing on noiseless hinges, and the vestibule is large and roomy. And as we pass into the auditorium we observe the interior decorations are of the finest, and in keeping with the tastes of the most fastidious. The chandeliers are sparkling with cut glass and crystal, and all of the modern appliances for light and heat, and all that tends to make the place attractive and worship a luxury, are found within.

We see the great pipe organ with its double bank of keys, and its salaried performer with a "Prof." hitched to his name, (all of which costs enough to feed the poor of the city for one year;) this indispensable piece of church furniture is discoursing ear-ravishing music, while the congregation—which represent the wealth and elite of the city in rustling silk and in the sheen of satin, decked with gold and precious stones—are taking their respective and, in many instances, individual seats, bought with a price, and perhaps labeled with the owner's name.

When the music with a grand flourish has ceased, and the pealing bell has sounded its last stroke, a momentary hush falls on the assembly, and then with regular drill precision the salaried choir march to their places and remain standing until their drill-master lifts his baton, at which signal they are seated; then a voluntary is sung, which no one is expected to understand; after which the services are opened in regular ritualistic order, with invocation and Gloria Patri.

A hymn is announced and sung, a chapter read, followed by a prayer rich in adjectives, but devoid of the Spirit. Then an opera solo is sung in a high soprano voice, susceptible of all the modern variations; this is followed by the regular offerings; and again the organ discourses sweet melody, while we listen to the jingle of silver as it drops into the collection baskets. Another hymn, and then some learned Dr. D. D. is introduced as the speaker, and for perhaps thirty minutes we listen to the reading of a very elaborately written essay, in which some secular theme or some principle of moral ethics is discussed in well-chosen expressions and nicely rounded sentences. Another short prayer; another solo; another hymn by the choir; the benediction; and while the organ peals forth its sweet melody, we leave our velvet cushioned pew, tread the richly carpeted aisle to the ample vestibule, where noiseless doors are held open by the polite ushers who conducted us to our seat when we entered. And it is all over, and we can go home satisfied, for we have been to church to-day.

Dear reader, do you think the picture overdrawn? if you do, just read as follows, which I clip from the Appleton daily Post of January 28, 1899:—

- Postlude..... Henry Smart.

And permit us to tell you we have passed through the very experience above described; and amid all this display, pomp, and splendor, which is the present characteristic of modern forms of worship, not one gospel note was sounded; not one word was spoken which could possibly be construed to answer the all-important question, "What must I do to be saved."

No wonder the servants of God, having their spiritual eyes opened by the inspiring power of the Holy Spirit, could see sufficient to enable them to say, "the time would come when they would not endure sound doctrine;" but would be "turned to fables;" to know that in the last days perilous times would come, when men, and I guess women too, would be "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

But thanks be to an allwise God, whose unerring wisdom has not left us in the dark in regard to these things, though he has warned the world of this state of things, he has also said that when these conditions obtained he would again display his power and proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder among this very people; a work which would be fatal to their human wisdom, and disastrous to their human creeds and systems of worship, by the angelic recommitment to earth of the everlasting gospel, which every human heart must eventually know is his power unto salvation.

A PRAYER.

BY I. B. LA RUE.

We bow in thy presence, our Father,
Incline thou thine ear to our prayer,
Give strength in the day of temptation,
And deliver from doubt and despair;
And help us thy law to obey,
That we at thy kingdom and coming
May not be found going astray.

O Lord, in thy mercy remember
The weakest of all that are thine,
When thou in thy kingdom and glory,
In righteousness comest to reign;
When all thy dear children are gathered,
And Satan with fetters is bound,
And peace, like a river, is flowing
To the nations of earth all around.

We ask for a place in thy kingdom,
When trials and conflicts are o'er,
When sickness and sorrow and sighing
Are not felt, neither feared, any more;
But there in thy glorified presence
Forever ineffably blest;
Rejoice in our triumphant Savior,
And partake of that heavenly rest.

INTEMPERANCE.

What does it mean? Webster says, "An excessive use of intoxicating beverages." On every hand we can see the evil effects of intemperance, and its degradation of mankind. In Ephesians we are commanded to be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit. How strange it is that man should spend his money for that which does him no good. For there certainly can be nothing but evil returns from overindulgence of strong drink, for it is ruinous to health of body and mind.

There could certainly be no one in worse bondage than he who gives himself up entirely to the debasing appetites. Alcohol does not nourish the body, but injures the system, for it cannot be converted into brain, muscle, or blood. As soon as alcohol is taken into the system nature sets to work to cast it out. The lungs throw it out in the breath, the stomach rebels and often makes one very sick. We can readily understand that it will hinder digestion, when we stop to think that articles are bottled in it to keep from changing. Chemists say four hogsheads of beer is not equal in nourishment to one loaf of bread.

We have also been told in the divine word, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Can we in the face of this statement, and living in the age that we do, say that the saloon and intemperance are a benefit to mankind? But rather, does not everything in life go to show its detriment and its use toward that of pauperism, disgrace, crime, and the gallows. Go with me if you will to our almshouses, insane asylums, and missionary homes, ask the keepers the cause of such crowded houses. Come back and we will sum up the answers, and I am sure we will be safe in saying, at least two thirds have been brought there, directly or indirectly, by the drink habit. In fact crime and the saloon are as closely connected as that of our Sunday school and church.

Think of the thousands to-day who are spending their money and time to feed their appetite with the fiery fiend rather than earning food for the nourishment of their body. Not only themselves, but leaving their children to be cared for (if they have any care) by strangers. Would it surprise you if in a short time these children should be found in some missionary home, or following the footsteps of their parents? It is therefore a matter of grave importance the kind of example we set before childhood.

Cannot we as Sunday school workers stretch forth a willing hand to the youth of to-day, and by kind word and good example draw them into our ranks, that they may find food for the mind and soul. Not only boys whose parents have been drunkards before them, but boys with the best of homes and loving parents have been led astray by the bright lights, charming music, and evil devices of the saloon, step in perhaps, not thinking where they were going; but once inside the door, there is always plenty of men (yet it seems a disgrace to the name to call them such) who are always ready and anxious to induce young men to take their first glass.

But beware! We have been told, "Touch not, taste not, handle not" that which giveth its color in the cup, for at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. And how much better if we practice total abstinence. The first glass taken, how much easier to take the second, and yet they will say: O pshaw! it won't hurt me, I know enough to drink, or let it alone; but don't be too sure of this, perhaps you may. Many an honest-hearted man has been foiled in the attempt, for we are all differently constituted, and some have not the power to do this, however much they desire it. You may drink moderately at first, but after a few years go to excess and sacrifice home, father, mother, character, and name, spending everything that comes in your reach, no matter whether obtained honestly or not, for the sake of satisfying that craving appetite. Manhood and reason so far gone that you would rather spend your last nickel in the saloon with boon companions than provide for the loved ones at home.

My heart to-night goes out in sympathy to the young, who are surrounded with the evils of intemperance, and I can say as said the poet,

"That I do abhor the bowl,
Feelings of disgust, arouseth Hatred in my inmost soul."

Let us then as Sunday school workers not drift carelessly along, but think of others who perhaps are less fortunate than ourselves; and while we have youth and strength, and perhaps a long life to devote to the Master, begin to scatter good seeds that will bring us a harvest of rare flowers in summer.

ARVILLIA CRICHTON.

We are admonished to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling. God has a great variety of work to be performed in his kingdom that is adapted to the abilities of his people, so that none need be idle. There is resident within us latent powers, which if called to action will enable us to perform certain kinds of work. The Spirit will indicate what that is, and direct us in it if we will heed its promptings. While God has not measured out to all mankind equal talents, yet he commands us to improve upon or use those he has given, and we must render an account unto God for the use we make of them.

God has given to Joseph Smith the wisdom and power to govern in the highest position in the church, yet it does not detract anything from us, but adds strength and pleasure. We can be just as able to do our work, and teach the simpler truths that are just as necessary, as he is to teach the deeper and more advanced truths. We are all workers together in building up the kingdom of God. This great work that has been performed is the sum total of individual effort. Let us not be discouraged because our lot is lowly. Let us strive to assist those whom God has seen fit to place the burden of governing his people upon. They need our assistance and encouragement. Jesus could not do all the work when he came to this earth; he set men to work, and they in turn set others to work. He calls every one to work in some capacity or other. We feel not the grave responsibilities resting upon those in high authority, neither could we bear their burden; but we can help by standing by them, aiding, strengthening, and encouraging them in this holy conflict. We are the privates and must stand by the officers until the work is accomplished.

Let us move forward cheerfully, faithfully, and carefully, that success may crown our efforts. Let us be wise in this day and generation, that the world will not have the advantage over us. Let us keep in mind the promises we have made to the Lord and fulfil them in righteousness, that we may come off more than conquerors in the end of the race, and receive the rewards of the faithful.

WHAT SHOULD OUR YOUNG PEOPLE READ?

In considering what young folks should and should not do, we must not forget that they are young folks, and have not old heads on their shoulders, and that we were once young. For is there not a time to dance, a time to sing, a time to be merry, a time to be sad, and I will add a time to be young, and a time to be old? And who shall strike out these times from the lives of others, because they themselves have grown beyond these things, and think they see the folly of youthful pastime. But they need not say that because they are young they must sow a certain amount of wild oats, for "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." No passage of scripture is truer than this. If we plant pure thoughts we will reap a harvest of words and deeds to correspond.

THE MIND BEGINS TO GROW

and grasp the ideas received from books. If from the time a child learns to read "a cat has a rat," the child is allowed to think it is funny that the cat has the rat, and it makes no difference how much the rat suffers so it is amusing to the cat, just such ideas will grow and such tastes for literature will be cultivated until in older years the detective stories, terrible adventures with Indians, thieves, and robbers, will be the literature enjoyed.

A guidance is needed from the beginning, to mould their tastes. And this guidance must be entrusted to the parents. Then if they be careless and do not provide for and look after what their children are reading, 'twill be of little use for others to try to direct in later years.

In order to develop taste for good, pure literature, the child must be closely looked after in other particulars. Their associates must not be the low, vulgar street urchin, with every vile word on his tongue and low thought in his mind. If children are allowed to grow up with such associates, their minds will become corrupted, until they will have no inclination for pure thoughts expressed in good books. Good books are good company. A child should never be allowed any other kind. Books can be lively and funny and yet be refined. Children like stories, but they can be harmless ones. Young folks like romance, but let it be of the higher order. E. P. Roe's novels will hurt no one. Because we have a little romance in our lives, we need not leave out the solid substantial part. Let us encourage, not the one alone, neither the other alone.

All the church books should not only be read, but studied (and I fear that we older ones neglect that too much). They should be taught the child as a part of his lesson while growing up, and there would not be such an indifference and dropping off of our young folks as there sometimes is. The lessons and what we read in childhood and youth will come to us in old age, when much that has occurred between has passed from our minds. There are so and so cheap, we need have none but the best. Let the literature be clean and pure, something to elevate the mind both in language and thought. Books with slang expressions, though by popular authors, will certainly not have the best influence. If there is a question as to whether a book is fit to be in the home, leave it out, keep on the safe side. To be a scholar we must read extensively, and from Mother Goose to Paradise Lost we can pick our way with care. Leave the slippery, treacherous stones to one side, and step only on what will afford a sure footing.

I would say, read history, read biography, read fiction, read travels, read the Bible. But let everything be of the highest intellectual standard as compared with Jesus' sayings. He taught purity in all things.

THE PRIMARY CLASS.

That the Primary Class requires the most skillful teaching is an idea that is fast gaining ground in our schools. This is progressive, and should obtain in every school. The delicate plant, just peeping from the ground, requires proper conditions, care and attention to develop it into the hardy vine, shrub, or tree, according to its nature. So with the child mind, it must be properly directed and instructed if we expect it to develop to its fullest capacity. To whom then shall this important duty be assigned? Not to the careless and indifferent. No, if you would build up the Lord's work, intrust this duty to one only who is prayerful, loving, and studious.

PRAYERFUL,

because without the presence of the Holy Spirit one would be unfit and inadequate for the work. . . .

LOVING,

because one cannot reach the heart and affections of the little ones without possessing this heaven-born qualification. She must not only love the children, but love the Lord and the work. The heart must be in the work.

STUDIOUS,

because one must first know before she can impart to others. One must not be content to hastily glance over the lesson a few moments before going to class; but make a deep, prayerful study of it, to enable her to know what to present and how to present it to the class. She must study more than just the lesson, she must be prepared on all subjects that bear upon it.

PATIENT,

careful work is required to impress new ideas on the minds of the little ones. They do not reason abstractly. Their knowledge comes to them gradually, step by step, from the known to the unknown. If one wishes to present a new idea and have the child comprehend it, she must connect it with something already known, or some experience in child life. Great care in the selections of subjects must be exercised. The Primary Quarterly is an excellent guide for subjects, but to be successful one must judge for herself just how much of the lesson to use, and not be confined to it exclusively.

Having determined what to teach, the next thought is

HOW TO TEACH IT.

In this class one must use simple child language. The ideas or truths must be conveyed through the channels nature has provided—the senses. The eye and ear are the best channels through which to reach the child mind. Color is particularly attractive to children. Much, therefore, can be done by associating the simple lesson story with pretty cards, pictures, and

OBJECTS.

These serve to attract and hold the attention, as well as to fasten the truth upon the mind. Another effective method is to employ the blackboard. The drawings and designs need not necessarily be accurate; no matter how crude they may appear, the child's imagination will transform them into pictures of importance. He associates them with the lesson story. The truth is thus conveyed to the mind, and the memory assisted to retain it.

A VARIETY.

At times the little ones might be allowed to represent personages, days, or other things in the lesson. This will please and interest them. At all times one should strive to make a personal application of the truth to the lives of the children. If she fails in this she has failed in one of the most important parts of the work.

Teachers should lose no opportunity to gain from every source ways and means by which to improve their methods and systems of teaching. Some of these opportunities are: visiting other schools, reading reference books, teachers' journals, Sunday School Department in the Herald, and notes on the lesson in the Quarterly, studying child nature, etc. The teacher needs all the help possible to be obtained; needs a mind well stored with knowledge. The child mind is thirsting for knowledge, the teacher must be prepared to satisfy the desire.

Teachers, if you would be successful in the discharge of your duty toward immortal souls, be prayerful, be loving, be studious.

Don't think you can stop your Herald and be a live, active, up-to-date saint, and less than that is not profitable either for you or the church."

SOMERVILLE, Mass., May 29.

Editors Herald:—I have been with the Boston saints, attending to service in their new place of worship here in Somerville for the last three Sundays, and with meetings at Roxbury and Arlington during the week. The chapel has been neatly fitted up and presents a far more acceptable and appropriate appearance as a place for religious worship than the halls heretofore occupied. We have had more strangers with us also since I have been here, or since coming to the chapel, than have been present or the aggregate total of visitors to our meetings in Boston heretofore for years, and there are some evidently already headed toward our church door.

Brn. Luff and Bullard are still in Connecticut, as we suppose. It being their counsel that I should look after this part of the mission while they were there.

The conference at Providence was a success; large attendance, two baptisms following, and witnessed by the Spirit in power both at baptism and confirmation.

There is a fine band of young people here in Boston, who are zealous in the work of gospel training and discipline, and the church may rest assured that God is working with us, and that a growth of wonderful and satisfactory proportions is being had by many young men and women in this Massachusetts district, and of whom the church will yet be proud, in my opinion. Bro. Myron Fisher has ably presided and with other brethren cheerfully and wisely aided our effort while among them.

We have been courteously received and treated by the press here in Somerville while trying to get our work before the public, and we have reason to believe that much prejudice has been allayed and misunderstanding removed.

I think I ought to speak of our Sunday school district convention at Plainville. The signal approval of God, the presence of the Spirit during its sessions that I was privileged to attend was surely of a convincing character to those present of the importance of this part of our church work.

Two-days' meeting at Plymouth next Saturday and Sunday. Expect to be there unless duties call me elsewhere.

In the faith,

M. H. BOND.

HOWELL, Mich., May.

Editors Herald:—I am one of the isolated ones, and I feel doubly so of late, since Bro. and Sr. Wilhelm have moved away. She is my only sister, and we have never lived more than three miles apart before; it makes me wish so much that I lived in a community of saints, as I feel the need of their love and care more than ever now; but alas! I often wonder why God in his great plan ever made it necessary for loved ones to part; perhaps it was to strengthen that love, which it surely does when it is pure and true. Yet where'er I be I feel that Father's kind and loving watchcare is ever near. During the terrible hail and wind storm of May 16, when large trees were uprooted all around me, and many buildings demolished, my little home was spared as a covering, though the roof came near going.

My daughter and self would be glad to go to Independence, Missouri, if we could be sure of getting work to make a living and knew just how to go. I am patiently waiting to see where the appointments for the two-days' meeting will be, as it is my desire to attend the one nearest our place, if Father is willing.

Praying for the welfare of all,

Your sister,

HENDERSON, W. Va., May 27.

Editors Herald:—I was called here by Bro. D. L. Shinn to act as moderator for him in a debate which he had with a Campbellite minister by the name of Herkins. Proposition, "Resolved that the divine plan of salvation of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, and deacons, is essential as in New Testament times."

The debate commenced on the 25th inst. and lasted two days. The congregations were not large owing to the busy season of the year. I will not tax your columns with the outlines of the argument presented; but assure you that the truth was sustained by Bro. Shinn. The Campbellites are gone and we still hold the town and preached last night to a crowded house. Bro. Shinn's health seems to be failing very fast, but he is strong in the cause of Christ and this latter-day work.

I returned to Wayne, West Virginia, on the 15th inst. from Kentucky; preached six times, baptized one, and started for this place on the 23d. Will return to Wayne on the 29th, as my work is not done there.

The work is onward and I am hopeful and happy in it.

Your brother,

G. H. GODBEY.

COVE, Ark., May 22.

Editors Herald:—I closed a fine meeting here last night to a full house. One Dr. W. B. Toney quit the church and is writing articles against Joseph Smith as prophet, seer, and revelator, to the Baptist Signal, published at Ardmore, Indian Territory. Some people living here being chagrined over our success at this place have been scattering them over the town among the people.

I came in and found what was going on and Bro. A. L. Newton preserved or kept the articles for me. I took them one by one and answered them for two nights to a packed house. I next proceeded to examine the Baptist Church that W. B. Toney claims to represent, and O, how some did squirm! But Bro. Arthur Gillen pronounced it the finest thing ever delivered in Cove. The saints all seemed well pleased; but our Baptist friends seemed to look sad over the matter. One Baptist lady said she was sorry Toney ever joined their church for he would injure the cause. They wired to Dr. W. B. Toney to come, so I hear; but he failed to come up to date.

One objection Dr. Toney urges against Joseph is that Joseph Smith prophesied that Brigham Young would lead the church to hell. Either the church is in hell or Joe Smith was a false prophet. Which horn of the dilemma will they take? Again, the Lord commanded the saints to build a boarding house for Joseph Smith to live in. Joe always had to have the crackers and cheese. Again, Luke 13:33; no prophet can perish out of Jerusalem. Joseph Smith did perish out of Jerusalem, therefore a false prophet. Now anyone who will read the verse will see at a glance that Christ referred to himself and no one else. Again, he uses one entire article to prove the Book of Mormon the Spalding Romance, the same old stale lies that have been told for years and years. But a drowned man will grab at straws.

Dr. Toney said if the saints did not pay him to preach he proposed to roll pills and quit preaching for them. I wonder how much money he expects to get from the Baptist Church. "The love of money is the root of all evil." (John.) Yes, the root of all lies against Joseph Smith and the saints, and causing men to preach false and corrupt doctrine that they don't believe themselves.

But I have never heard of anyone making a fortune fighting Joseph Smith yet. They may get a pretty fair salary for humbugging the people with their false doctrine, but what will that amount to if they lose their souls? If I wanted to make money and get rich I would resort to the business avocations of life, and not humbug the people on religion.

I am having very fine meetings every place.

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

SAN GABRIEL CANYON, Cal., May 22.

Editors Herald:—"Master, where dwellest thou?" "Come and see." Away among the mountains high, near the highest in Southern California, is where I dwell, away from the multitude of the world. But not away from God; the blessed Master dwells within my heart, and I rejoice in him every day and night.

I was baptized and made a member of this church three years ago, by Elder Griffin, just coming from the islands; and I am sorry that I cannot attend church meetings, for I do love this work. The Spirit of the Lord tells me it is the right church. I thank the good Lord for leading me into it, and my prayers are to be steadfast and endure to the end, that I may inherit the celestial glory which was prepared for me before the foundation of the world.

I love the church papers, for they cheer me anew and strengthen me in faith. I am not a subscriber, as we have no mail delivery here, and are not burdened with the riches of this world. I pay my tithes with joy, and the good Lord blesses me for his own.

But what of the Utah Church? Mrs. Roberts says polygamy is character building, but it must be one of hatred to her nearest of kin.

I was one night on the street of Santa Monica, when I heard on the other end of the block some one preaching. I hurried to the place, when I saw two men there, preaching the gospel of Christ, the first I ever heard of the kind; for the good Spirit told me they were Mormon elders, not of my people. I paid good attention to the end, closing with a hymn and prayer, when I took the hand of the last preacher with the remark: "Your preaching is all very good, brother," looking him in the face, "but do you practice what you preach?" "Yes, sir," says he. "Well," says I, "I suppose you are honest enough at heart to admit that you are still a believer in polygamy?" He looked at me saying, "Well, don't you believe the Bible? We believe it is the true and proper way to live. Look at Abraham, Jacob, David, and others." "Why," says I, "surely I do believe the Bible; but you cannot show me in it where God commands or even sanctioned it; and then you call yourself Mormon. Why, you are nothing but apostates. The Book of Mormon says distinctly that man shall have but one wife," etc.

That man is worthy of a better cause, and honest at heart. He may be saved, though his works may be burned. May my heavenly Father bless and help me to walk in all righteousness before him, to overcome every temptation that may assail me, and that I may be a good example for the cause of Christ unto others.

We have a good branch in Los Angeles where I belong. May the Lord bless it.

Yours in Christ,

TULARE, Cal., May 28.

Editors Herald:—Elder Thomas Daley left here April 12 to attend the conference at San Jose, then to his new field of labor—Nevada. May our loss be gain to Nevada. Brn. D. L. Harris and Hiram Holt made us a short visit on their way to Oregon; preached for us April 28, and on the 29th the saints gave them a cool reception, consisting of ice cream and cake, after which we went to the depot to see them off.

Arrangements were made to hold a two-days' meeting the 6th and 7th, as we were expecting a visit from the district president, J. M. Putney, accompanied by Eugene Holt. Sickness prevented their coming, which was a disappointment; but disappointments often result in good, as this one did. It was the means of bringing out the talent from the land of "Jack rabbits" that might have been a surprise to some of our missionaries could they have heard it. Brn. Joseph Florey and E. S. Burton were the speakers (the latter a brother to Joseph Burton). A Methodist made the remark that if Burton would preach for them he could get a salary of fifteen hundred dollars a year. Another said it was the best sermon he ever heard. We felt the Spirit's presence at the sacrament meeting and believe some who have been afflicted for years will be healed. Our branch is scattered over considerable territory and we think it no trouble to travel ten to thirty miles to attend a prayer meeting.

On the 19th inst., David Anderson, of Lamoni, made us a visit, staying over Sunday, then going to San Francisco. On Saturday evening he spoke to a small congregation in the Lakeside church, seventeen miles west of Tulare, and on Sunday afternoon in a private house eight miles from the church, which was filled to overflowing. Mr. Abbott is not a member of the church, but his large country residence is open to any of our ministers. Bro. Anderson's earnest, sincere manner of presenting the gospel won the admiration of all who heard him. This was his first effort in California, and the eighth or ninth sermon he has preached. He is a bright young man, just starting out on his first mission. We believe there will be a bright record for him in the near future in the church.

We are expecting Bro. Griffiths to come in July and hold a two-days' meeting.

MARY A. TWADDLE.

WOODSIDE, Mo., May 29.

Editors Herald:—I am a local elder, the only officer in the Woodside branch. The work is in a reasonable condition. My labor has been with the branch and in other places; viz., Cave Spring, Shiloh, Spring Creek, Fairview. The work is moving along nicely and the people are anxious to hear more of the gospel, and are not willing to persecute the work as they once did. May God add his blessings to the honest in heart everywhere.

Yours for truth,

ALONZO M. D. MCGUIRE.

CLAYTON, Okla., May 29.

Editors Herald:—Our late district conference near Sumner was encouraging and strengthening to the saints. Brn. R. W. Davis and W. S. Macrae, G. M. Hiles, S. S. Smith brought the tabernacle, and the conference was held in it Saturday night and Sunday. Two were baptized on Sunday by Bro. Davis; the confirmation meeting in the afternoon was a good one. The brethren continued the meeting in the tabernacle a week or two, Bro. D. S. Crawley and the writer assisting. On the following Sunday six more faithful souls made a covenant with the Lord by baptism, Bro. Davis officiating.

We were greatly blessed; the Spirit of the Lord was present in power. The Oak Grove branch is strengthened, and the saints rejoice to have eight more added to their number. Others were near the kingdom, and we would not be surprised to hear of as many more yielding to the influence of the gospel of Christ before the brethren leave them.

The writer left the tent workers at Morrison and came to this place, where I commenced meeting last Friday night. The attendance was small Friday and Saturday nights, but yesterday morning and evening the house was well filled. The people here are very kind and seem willing to hear; they manifest a friendly spirit. I have been urged to return to western Oklahoma to look after branch affairs, but the opportunities for preaching are too many and too favorable to leave now.

When will the time come when saints will live as becometh saints? I most heartily endorse the "watchword," as given in Herald by Bro. A. J. Keck—"Sin must get out if it takes the sinner with it." It is time that the church everywhere take action against those who claim to be of us but whose works militate against the advancement of the cause of Christ and whose conduct in the church destroys the influence of the church. I repeat again, that inspiration comes from two sources, and we should know them by their workings—by their manifestations. Slander, evil speaking, jealousy, envy, strife, malice, contention, speaking evil of church authorities, dancing, etc., are in fact not the promptings of God's Spirit, but they are of the Devil, and saints who expect salvation in the kingdom of God should feel these things.

R. M. MALONEY.

GRAVE TROUBLES FOR SECTS.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 29.

Editors Herald:—The Rev. F. A. Noble, pastor Union Park Congregational Church, of Chicago, took for his theme, Sunday evening, May 28, "Why conversions in our churches are so few." This topic had been discussed at a ministers' meeting the week previous. I have to repeat from a few notes and memory, so am sorry I cannot send you a copy verbatim; however, in part he said:—

That the aggregation of all denominations are far below what they should be, and especially the Congregational, Baptist, and Episcopal churches. The sum total or net gain of the Congregationalists for one year is less than half a convert per each church edifice, and that it takes two hundred sixty-six members to bring one convert into their fold, notwithstanding all the aid of their various organizations connected with said church. They show a net loss of $552,405 in benevolence; that their home expenses are $72,832, and total expenditures to the sum of $6,725,919, making a cost of $2,925 for every new member or convert brought into their fold. Also, a net loss in attendance to Sunday schools and missions. He realized that there was just as much need for souls to be saved as ever, and that many lives were consecrated to the great work; but with "all our forces, methods, plans, opportunities, Christian endeavors," etc., have accomplished so little. In this space of time, he pointed out, the world had made rapid progress in political, social, and industrial lines. "This calls for explanation."

One reason he said was the human heart, which is the same as in the days of Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joshua, Jesus Christ, and the Dark Ages—that the human heart is desperately wicked and will not surrender. Another reason: Dr. Noble had occasion to walk Sunday afternoon on Madison Street, and what he saw "shocked" his senses. Wide open saloons and dens of vice, where he counted thousands of men coming out and going in by the threes, fives, and tens. He said it was this criminal element who are in direct opposition to the two hundred churches in Chicago, who say, "We can get along without the churches," and who would like to see every church razed to the ground. Outsiders are alike indifferent as to the welfare of churches or their souls. Another reason is to be found, "That those calling themselves Christians," are "church indifferent;" that "some influence is in the churches" causing the members to love the world and indulge in pleasures; that many loved the theater better than the pew, the dance than the Sunday school, and loved a progressive euchre party better than the church communion. The majority of members care nothing about spiritual matters, and have "little sympathy and less activity" in any church work or those spiritually inclined, and on whom fall the burdens.

Another reason is that the mind has become "confused" by debates and wranglings, and by picking flaws from the Bible concerning its validity and authenticity; also Christ, his teachings, and man's destiny. That the rich and aristocratic members who have had a smattering of science are given over to skepticism (meaning universal doubt); too many are led astray by the conflicting views and opinions they find in the daily editorials and magazines; others want no Puritanism or check to their desires. Another reason is because outsiders say, "Your church is not heated enough," and others say, "not light enough," "poor singing," or "poor seats," "don't feel welcomed," "no place for the poor," "poor sermons," or members cold toward strangers," etc., etc. But Dr. Noble says these excuses are a "pack of lies," and he hoped no member would hold to such a wrong impression; that the one great reason, and main reason, is because men are "under the bonds of sin and the clutches of Satan," and "don't take the truth of Jesus Christ, because they don't want it." Ministers cannot preach to criminals. Summing up, he "wished the ministry was ideal," and the "laity more humble;" but in the whole, the blame is thrown on the poor sinner.

Now the question comes to me, Is Christ then to stand helpless, in the midst of his work, while Satan carries the masses in triumph down to perdition? No. You are weighed in the balances and found wanting. Think you not that if all who call themselves "orthodox" of many shades of belief, or rather unbelief, could not have long ago cast the ballot that would have closed the rum maker and seller, and every other blotch or blight that has happened to the tree of denominational Christianity? if they were the legitimate offspring of God. Says Christ, "Feed my sheep." "My sheep hear my voice," a stranger will they not heed. The poor sinner or non-church member hears so many uncertain sounds, Confusion, mystery, Babylon, that he is afraid of a wolf, a roaring lion, a serpent, or an hireling with bogus gifts to offer.

It would be well for the Rev. Dr. Noble, D. D., and all theological seminary giants to remember that, there is a spirit in man, and the Lord Almighty giveth him understanding and having this understanding may explain in part one of the reasons why conversions are so few. People who are led by any sect or priestcraft for a few generations, and are not allowed liberty of speech larger than the creed or accepted confession of faith, are apt to be far more dull of understanding than the man, be he sinner or heathen, who stands under the rays and liberties of heaven; who, moreover, is not bound by fear, and stands looking on at the passing passions around him, very much as one would look into the arena of a circus.

Let your rich and proud and arrogant get rid of their surplus, by buying farms and building factories and irrigating arid lands in this great land, and give it to those who have labored for you, and are the direct means of your riches. Then preach the simple doctrine of Christ unto them, and I guarantee there will be an improved State, Church, and Home. Great words of bombast, the rustle of silk, the great social functions, the Y. M. C. A., etc., may have a nice tinkling sound to the full and well ones; but a little wheat from your bursting elevators, a little coin from your overflowing coffers, a few acres of God's blessed earth, and a few of his created creatures will be of more avail than ten thousand sermons. Churches are benevolent, but not enough; and the very facts that so confront them as to the woeful conditions above-mentioned is plain proof that your institutions are wholly human, and it is high time for divines to step down and out, and let the God of the widow, the orphan, the downtrodden and oppressed of men take charge of affairs.

The facts that there are slums in London, New York, Chicago, and all large cities cannot be denied; but the most callous and degraded heart of either man or woman is in some degree susceptible to sunshine, however faint. Social conditions will radically change before the ideal is reached. When that change comes there will be influences and powers far greater than the little cares marked out as bad by Mr. Stead and others, affected; well hidden now, but to be dragged out into the light by the processes at work.

God forbid that I should judge anything; but surely God will judge, and judge very righteously and exactly; and I know that any good work done by individual members of churches, clans, tribes, or nations, will be fully rewarded; but many will come under great condemnation when light has come into the world and men love darkness instead, and worship the image of their own heart, and are removed far from the truth.

Of charity it is written:—

"Hoping ever, failing never,
Though deceived, believing still;
Long abiding, all confiding
To thy heavenly Father's will;
Never weary of well-doing,
Never fearful of the end;
Claiming all mankind as brothers,
Thou dost all alike befriend."

ARTHUR W. GORBUTT.

PORCUPINE, Wis., May 31.

Editors Herald:—The gospel work in northern Wisconsin is onward, although we have some opposition. The M. E. minister of Arkansaw, Wisconsin, became angry because the saints were having such success in these parts, so he went to circulating tracts written by R. B. Neal, of Grayson County, Kentucky, associating our people with the followers of Brigham Young.

I will show you some of Neal's style of argument. In order to prove Joseph Smith a false prophet, he quotes from the revelation on the Rebellion, and in order to prove it false he tries to show that it did not "fit," as follows: "The war was not a strict warfare between North and South;" while history says it was. Again, he says: "Slaves did not rise up against their masters." Had Joseph predicted that slaves would rise up with their masters, fight by their sides, and stand by them till death, this writer would have confirmed his prediction; while history reads as follows: "When constitutional difficulties were overcome 178,975 patriotic negroes, with one hand throttling national prejudice and a musket in the other, marched upon the field of civil strife, to help redeem the nation from the curse of slavery. The gallant blacks figured in 449 engagements, during which 38,847 gave their blood for freedom and the preservation of this union."

After Neal tried to show that it did not "fit," he says: "It was not till after the war, long after it, yea, even till now, that the American public generally knew anything of the revelation. It seems to be open to suspicion of trying to predict a thing that had come to pass—to make the boy fit the hat, instead of the hat fit the boy." The foregoing is a sample of Neal's stock in trade. The tracts did more good than harm for our people.

I tried to get into a discussion with the M. E. minister, but he would not meet the issue, so I replied for two evenings to the tracts circulated, with good crowds out to hear; then the M. E. people were angry because they let me have the tracts. One party since that loaned a tract to Bro. Shedd, and told him he could read it if he would "not let Preacher Closson see it;" so I guess it is as thin as the others I have seen, which are full of contradictions and lies. It made them angry when I showed them up, but the saints are rejoicing in the work and seem more united than ever, and we look for a grand time at our next conference, the 17th and 18th of June, which will be held here.

I baptized one in Pierce County, April 23, and one here at Porcupine, May 21, and one May 26. Others say they will be baptized soon. Next Sunday the saints will celebrate Children's Day here, under the auspices of Sr. Mary A. White, who is superintendent of the Sunday school. They are making arrangements for a grand time.

Bro. I. N. Roberts was here awhile this spring and gave us some splendid sermons, and truly the Lord was with him. Come again, Bro. Roberts. I also want to mention Bro. Leonard Houghton, of Grant County, who labored in Pepin and Pierce counties this winter. He made two new openings, where I think a number will be gathered in the future. Bro. Houghton is a worthy young man and well liked in these parts.

I have been holding forth at the following-named places lately: Ono, Brasington, and Maple Ridge, and the interest is good at all those places. I am thankful we are finding "favor in the eyes of the people," and that the Lord is blessing his saints.

In gospel bonds,

A. V. CLOSSON,

Sunday School Associations.

OLINTON.

The above Sunday school convention convened with Coal Hill saints, near Lebeck, Missouri, May 19. All the district officers and many others interested in Sunday school work were in attendance, and the convention was pronounced by many as being the best held in the district. The first Sunday school institute in the district was held at Walker, Missouri, in February, and although the attendance was small, it resulted in the convention voting to hold one between the conventions hereafter. The interest here is splendid, and we hope to see the Sunday school make rapid progress in the future.

PASTORAL.

Permit me to say to the ministry and members of Southwestern mission that I feel thankful to our heavenly Father for the blessings of the past year, and I appreciate the work being done by the saints in this mission. There seems to be a brighter day ahead of God's people, and a glimpse of the light is being seen through the clouds. The awakening time is near at hand when our work for the Master will be crowned with greater success.

Bro. Duncan has labored under trying circumstances, and his last letter informed me that he was trying to get consent of the Presidency to allow him the privilege of changing fields. If the change is made he will be missed in this mission, as he has the ability of doing much good. Should he remain in Oklahoma he will have charge of the same territory he had last year.

Bro. T. J. Sheppard will be associated with the writer, and all reports of the missionaries will be sent to T. J. Sheppard, Beaver, Texas, unless Bro. Duncan's health will permit him to remain in this mission; and if so, those laboring in Oklahoma and Indian Territory will report to him, and he will report to Bro. Sheppard. Brethren, be prompt in reporting.

Bro. E. A. Erwin will labor eight months during this year, and I trust that Bro. Ed Hensen may be in the field in a short time.

May the good Lord bless us all in our work. My advice to the saints is, if you are in a healthy country, where you can make a living, do not move around so often—don't have any fears that the Lord will overlook you in the gathering day. Let us try and become pure in heart and build up the work. (See section 122 of Doctrine and Covenants, verse 7.)

AMOS J. MOORE,

In charge of Southwestern mission.

REUNION NOTICES.

The annual mission reunion of Oklahoma will be held in the beautiful grove on Elder S. J. Hinkle's farm, seven miles southeast of Stillwater, Payne County, Oklahoma, October 6 to 15. This will be the third reunion of the mission, and let us make the "third time the charm." We believe the greatest incentive which should prompt the saints to attend these meetings should be the love of the work, desiring to see it advance.

The grove is ample to accommodate a large gathering; wood in abundance; Stillwater Creek is near by; good water will be supplied for camp use; all other necessities will be furnished to make the meeting a success.

Those wishing tents will address Elder W. S. Macrae; he will make known his address through Herald and Ensign.

Saints, let us rally and make a special effort this year for the advancement of the restored gospel in Oklahoma; let us be "coworkers with God" for the great latter-day work. Manage your farm work and other business so you can be free from the toils of life, and attend the reunion. Whatever sacrifice we make in the interest of God's work we shall in "nowise lose our reward." We are anxious for a spiritual time and a glorious reunion. Let our watchword be: Rally to the reunion.

As a matter of course we expect Bro. A. J. Moore to be with us, and it is rumored that Bishop G. H. Hilliard will favor us with his presence, though we do not state it for sure. Elders of the Southwestern mission are all kindly invited to be with us, also all others who can. Remember this is the general reunion of Oklahoma mission and all the saints in the field should prepare to attend. Let us all labor and pray for its success. Don't forget the watchword: Rally to the reunion! October 6 to 15. Those coming by rail should correspond with Elder S. J. Hinkle, Stillwater, Oklahoma.

R. M. MALONEY.

CAMP MEETING.

Oklahoma district conference held at Oak Grove branch, May 13 and 14, voted to have a camp meeting in Dewey County, light of moon in August. It is not intended that this camp meeting shall in any sense detract from or take the place of the annual reunion. However, it is urged that as many of the saints as can will attend the camp meeting. We expect the missionary force of Oklahoma to be present, and also hope that our missionary in charge, Bro. A. J. Moore, can arrange to be with us. We expect to have the gospel tabernacle there, if possible, and we hope to see a good attendance. A united effort, a faithful walk, complying with the teachings of Christ will guarantee our success in church work and crown us with eternal life.

Let us labor with a will for the advancement of righteousness and truth. Come to the camp meeting. Meeting will commence August 11. Location given later.

R. M. MALONEY, Pres.

TWO-DAYS' MEETINGS.

There will be a two-days' meeting at Nashville, Barton County, Missouri, commencing Saturday afternoon, June 17. Saints living near, please take notice and come with baskets, prepared to stay until Monday morning. We expect our missionary in charge and district president, F. C. Keck and O. P. Sutherland, to be present. Come with a good portion of the Spirit.

A. M. BAKER.

FRANK LOFTY, Pres.

Far West district conference will convene Saturday and Sunday, June 17 and 18, with Stewartville branch. We would be pleased to have a good representation from all the branches. Will secretaries of the several branches send branch reports so they will reach the secretary by the 15th of June.

C. P. FAUL, Sec.

She had for years failed in health, and about March first came from her home in Oklahoma to visit her parents and to be cared for by her mother. Though she did not give up all hope of recovery until near the end, yet the disease developed rapidly during the last month, until there was no longer hope. She suffered greatly and became reconciled to go. By loving parents, sisters, brother, and friends, all was done for her that could be to make her comfortable while waiting the close of life. The sermon was preached by Elder H. A. Stebbins; the prayer was offered by Elder Heman C. Smith.

He labored extensively in the mission field in the Middle Western and Southern States, but principally in the Rocky Mountain mission—Utah, Idaho, Montana, and Western Wyoming. He died while engaged in his missionary work, on duty in the field. He was known for his integrity and kindness of heart. He was mentally well balanced, and wise in his administration of church affairs. His sickness was brief and his death an unexpected shock to his family, especially to his afflicted wife. He leaves a wife and a number of sons and daughters and grandchildren to mourn. The remains were forwarded to Lamoni, Iowa, his home, where services were conducted on Wednesday, May 31, at the house by Elders J. H. Hansen, J. C. Clapp, and E. L. Kelley; and at the saints' church by Elders E. L. Kelley, J. W. Wight, and J. R. Lambert, Elder R. S. Salyards being in charge. The remains were laid to rest in Rose Hill cemetery, where they await, with many others who have fallen asleep in Christ, the resurrection of the just.

JEFFRIES.—James Jeffries died May 22, 1899. He was born January 31, 1821; being at the time of his death 78 years, 3 months, 22 days. He had been ill for some time before, but was always doing some work. He went out to cut hay, and mowed one round; his daughter standing by saw him about to fall from the machine, took hold of him, and he expired immediately, as one going to sleep. He leaves a wife, four daughters, and one son. He was baptized in Tulare County, California, in 1875. He died in faith of enjoying a part in the first resurrection. Funeral sermon in Beaumont Presbyterian church by William M. Gibson.

LITTLE.—At his home in Wilmington, Illinois, May 24, 1899, Bro. Robert J. Little passed peacefully away after an illness of but three days. Robert was a good boy, and often comforted his widowed mother by saying he would take care of her when he was older. He was baptized last August. His probation was but 11 years, 2 months, 17 days, but in that short time he made sure his title to an everlasting inheritance with the pure and good. Funeral at the house by Elder J. M. Terry of Chicago, Illinois. Prayer by Bro. Walrath.

JACKSON.—Elizabeth, wife of Marion Jackson, died in Omaha, Nebraska, April 27, 1899, aged 67 years, 1 month, and 15 days. She was born in Cass County, Illinois, March 12, 1832. Married March 11, 1852; and their married life covered a period of over forty-seven years. Two children were born to them. Sr. Jackson joined the church in 1882; her death was hastened by a severe burn; she was a great sufferer for twenty-seven weeks, but the gospel brought much of comfort to her. Funeral services at saints' church, Elder S. F. Cushman officiating.

HART.—At his home, Broughton, Kansas, May 10, 1899, Elder Henry Hart. He was born February 4, 1829, at Boonville, New York; married June 13, 1847, to Miss Sarah Robinson. Eight children were born unto them; four of whom remain; three were present at the time of his death. He was baptized April 8, 1866, at Fox, Illinois, by Pres. Joseph Smith; ordained an elder March 20, 1869, by Elders A. H. Smith and Isaac Sheen. When quite young moved with his parents to Kendall County, Illinois, where he resided for thirty-six years. In 1887 he moved to Clay County, Kansas, where he has lived a consistent Christian life until the final summons came, when he peacefully fell asleep in Christ to await a glorious resurrection. Funeral sermon by Elder V. F. Rogers; interment in Idylwild cemetery.

CREIGHTON.—Sr. Amenia Louisa Creighton was born February 21, 1831, at Amherst, Ohio; died May 20, 1899, after several months of suffering, aged 68 years, 3 months, 6 days. She united with the church about the year 1842, baptism being administered by her father, Judy Griffiths. She stood firm till death, in hope of a glorious resurrection. Our sister leaves to mourn an aged husband and four daughters. Funeral sermon conducted by Elder S. V. Roberts, assisted by J. B. Cline.

KNOWLES.—Sr. Hannah Knowles, familiarly called "Grandma Knowles," died at the home of her daughter in Centerville, Iowa, May 3, 1899, after five days' illness, aged 73 years and 10 months. She was baptized at St. Louis, Missouri, April 3, 1864, and remained faithful to her covenant, and in death realized the promise of its sweetness. Being conscious to the last, she crossed her hands over her breast and passed away as peacefully as it could seem possible for death to come. Funeral conducted by David Archibald.

BODEN.—Mr. John Boden, husband of Sr. Ann Boden, died at his home in Centerville, Iowa, April 22, 1899, after an illness of ten days, aged 56 years. He was a kind husband and father, "an honest man," though not a member of the church. Funeral sermon by Elder M. D. Lewis, who endeavored to show that every man would be rewarded according to his works.

A GOOD RULE.

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold.

Three narrow gates—first, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer; and the next
Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"

And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result of speech may be.

The signs of the times on the industrial and business horizon are outlined in the June number of the American Monthly Review of Reviews. In the department of "The Progress of the world" the editor discusses the new era of prosperity, the restored wages of labor, the tendency toward the consolidation of capital, railroad amalgamation, the relation of modern monopolies to the heaping up of great fortunes, the value of franchises and proposed tax reforms, and other conditions and problems of the day in the business world. Mr. Byron W. Holt contributes an article on "Trusts—The Rush to Industrial Monopoly," in which he sets forth the facts in connection with the recent startling development of the trust-forming mania, as it is beginning to be called. A feature of Mr. Holt's article is a carefully prepared list of more than one hundred and twenty-five industrial combinations now operating in this country, each of which is capitalized at not less than $10,000,000. This list was revised to May 20, and includes the concerns formed during the past few months.

Some of the Western and Southern churches are taking action against liquor selling by excluding members who are in any way connected with that business.

The number of ministerial crimes is rapidly increasing. We hesitate to say it, because of the use made of it by malignant opponents of religion; but it is undeniable, and the rate of progress is rapid.—Christian Advocate.

"Don't condemn all the advice and counsel of the older members as old fogyism. There are some things that the older ones know better than the young, although they may not have acquired their education in quite so progressive an age; yet the counsel and advice of older members and officers of the church, who do not own the books of the church nor take any of the papers thereof, is not to be considered of such value that we should not question it. A man must keep abreast of the work to be authoritative. It's the horse that keeps his shoulders hard up to the collar that we rely upon when we wish anything to move."

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

TO QUIT INFANT BAPTISM.

The Rev. Dr. Howard S. Bliss former assistant pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, under Dr. Lyman Abbott, and at present pastor of a Congregational church at Upper Mount Clair, New Jersey, is preparing to bring before the Congregational International Council, which meets at Boston on September 20, a proposition to do away entirely with infant baptism in the church, substituting an impressive service of dedication.

This proposition of Dr. Bliss is exciting wide interest among the members of the Congregational Church and is receiving hearty indorsement from many ministers. Dr. Bliss argues that baptism should take place only in the case of adults and at the time of uniting with the church. Just what form the dedication should take he leaves for the council to decide. A question has arisen whether the International Council has jurisdiction over this matter, which hardly will be settled until the body convenes. In the meantime Dr. Bliss is drawing up a form of service to be submitted in case the matter can be taken up by the council.

The Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus speaks highly of Dr. Bliss, and looks with favor on the innovation he proposes for Congregationalism. The Rev. Dr. J. W. Fifield of the Warren Avenue Congregational Church says he is much interested in the movement and will watch its course with a kindly feeling. E. W. Blatchford, who is a member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, said last night Dr. Bliss had written him of a most favorable reception on the part of the clergy to the proposed change in the service.

Dr. Gunsaulus said yesterday: "Infant baptism is only a service of dedication anyhow, therefore it cannot mean a great revolution. To make it more impressive is simply to body forth in some beautiful form the idea that a child, who has earthly parents, is given back to God by these earthly parents, and that the child's life is to be the life of a child of the Infinite One.

"The whole mission of Jesus was to reveal the fact that just as he, while a child of Joseph and Mary, was also a child of God, so every human being can claim his childhood unto the Eternal Father.

"What the International Council may do with the subject is almost as important as what the American Academy of Science would do with the law of gravitation. No blunder it possibly could make would have any serious influence on the truth."

Dr. Fifield said: "It is true there has been more or less discussion in the church regarding a service or dedication in place of formal baptism of children, yet as a denomination we have favored infant baptism. Baptism is not a saving ordinance, and in the case of children it is now largely a service of dedication.

"Not all the Congregational people have their children baptized. Those who have felt that baptism should follow only repentance of sin of course do not. But baptism is more than repentance, for it includes dedication to Almighty God, and we feel that many in the New Testament time doubtless had their children baptized."

Dr. Hugh M. Scott, who holds the chair of history at the Chicago Theological Seminary, said the plan of Dr. Bliss, as far as he had heard of it, hardly met with his ideas.

"This matter of trying to substitute a dedication service for infant baptism," said Dr. Scott, "was fought out in the early ages, with the result that it was decided in favor of baptism. I presume Dr. Bliss' position is to take up a dedication service similar to the Lutheran and Episcopal, with the exception that infant baptism is given up. Personally, I do not favor doing away with infant baptism. It is a usage that has been in the church from its earliest days, and most Christians hold that it comes from the time of the apostles."

"Personally I have looked on infant baptism," said the Rev. Dr. George R. Wallace, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Englewood, "as a consecration by parents of their children, and I see no reason, from Bible experience, why parents should cease consecrating their children and teaching them to go to Sunday school and grow up in the church. In our present service there is a solemn covenant of dedication, which is used on new members being received into the church. Regarding infant baptism, I have left it to the wishes of parents although I favor it."

"There has been a movement for some time," said the Rev. Willard B. Thorpe, pastor of the South Congregational Church, "to make an alternate form of service for our church. This movement as I understand it, is in entire harmony with the spirit of liberality of the Congregational Church. While the matter may be brought before the International Council by Dr. Bliss or any other minister, I cannot see how any action it may take will have any effect. The pastor of any Congregational Church has it in his power to make such a change as proposed independently if he desires to do so, and at any time."

Dr. Bliss' father was a missionary, stationed for many years in the Holy Land, and the son spent several years of his youth there. He was educated for the ministry at Amherst College, and is also a graduate of Union Theological Seminary. He is thirty-five years old.—Chicago Tribune, June 5, 1899.

VIRCHOW ON DARWIN.

The following excellent article was extensively circulated early in the '80's or thereabouts—during the early discussions of the Darwinian theory. Dr. Virchow is still living, and maintains an eminent position among biologists. The article is republished for the benefit of those not in possession of it.

The second article, a so-called scientific reconstruction of a human head and face, with a skull for a basis, of a woman who lived "30,000 years ago," is a recent item. It will be seen from both these sources of "scientific opinion" that man is practically as when created, with the same capacity of intellect; that the theory of evolution from other forms of life does not find the support necessary to give it intelligent credence:—

VIRCHOW ON DARWIN.

HE SAYS THAT THE PROOF OF HIS THEORY IS STILL LACKING.

Some sensation has been caused at the recent Anthropological Congress in Vienna by the speech of the great Berlin biologist, Professor Virchow. About a year ago Virchow, on a similar occasion, made a severe attack on the Darwinian position, and this year he is similarly outspoken. We make the following extracts from his long address to the congress:—

“Twenty years ago, when we met at Innsbruck, it was precisely the moment when the Darwinian theory had made its first victorious mark throughout the world. My friend Vogt at once rushed into the ranks of the champions of this doctrine. We have since in vain sought for the intermediate stages, which were supposed to connect man with the apes; the proto-man, the pro-anthropos, is not yet discovered. For anthropological science the pro-anthropos is not even a subject of discussion. The anthropologist may, perhaps, see him in a dream, but as soon as he awakes he cannot say that he has made any approach toward him. At that time in Innsbruck the prospect was, apparently, that the course of the descent from ape to man would be reconstructed all at once; but now we cannot even prove the descent of the separate races from one another. At this moment we are able to say that among the peoples of antiquity no single one was any nearer to the apes than we are. At this moment I can affirm that there is not upon earth any absolutely unknown race of men. The least known of all are the people of the central mountainous districts of the Malay peninsula, but otherwise we know the people of Terra del Fuego quite as well as the Eskimo, Bashkirs, Polynesians, and Lapps. Nay, we know more of many of these races than we do of certain European tribes; I need only mention the Albanians. Every living race is still human; no single one has yet been found that we can designate as Simian or quasi-Simian. Even when in certain ones phenomena appear which are characteristic of the apes; e. g., the peculiar apelike projections of the skull in certain races, still we cannot on that account alone say that these men are apelike. As regards the lake dwellings, I have been able to submit to comparative examination nearly every single skull that has been found. The result has been that we have certainly met with opposite characteristics among various races; but of all these there is not one that lies outside of the boundaries of our present population. It can thus be positively demonstrated that in the course of five thousand years no change of type worthy of mention has taken place. If you ask me whether the first man was white or black I can only say, I don't know.”

Professor Virchow summed up the question as to what anthropological science during the last forty years has gained, and whether, as many contend, it has gone forward or backward. “Twenty years ago the leaders of our science asserted that they knew many things which, as a matter of fact, they did not know. Nowadays we know what we know. I can only reckon up our accounts in so far as to say that we have made no debts; that is, we have made no loan from hypotheses; we are in no danger of seeing that which we know overturned in the course of the next moment. We have leveled the ground so that the coming generation may make abundant use of the material at their disposition. As an attainable objective of the next twenty years, we must look to the anthropology of the European nationalities.”

PORTRAIT OF A WOMAN WHO LIVED 30,000 YEARS AGO.

Professor Kohlmann, the German archæologist, working with the sculptor Buechly, has just completed a plaster portrait bust of a woman who lived 30,000 years ago. Professor Kohlmann found recently fragments of a human female skull imbedded deep in the rocks on the shores of Lake Neufchatel, in Switzerland. Putting them together he found that he had almost a perfect skull. Figuring from the estimated age of the strata in which the fragments were found he determined that the woman must have lived 30,000 years ago, in the latter part of the Pleistocene era.

Using the reconstructed skull as a basis, and after carefully examining all the available data on the subject, Professor Kohlmann, with the aid of the sculptor, has built up a portrait bust in plaster, which convinces him that the women of that far off epoch had a striking resemblance to their sisters of to-day — Chicago Tribune, April 19, 1899.

PET ANIMALS AS CAUSES OF DISEASE.

Papers presented last summer at the French Congress for Tuberculosis at Paris demonstrate, says the Medical News, what has hitherto been very doubtful, that aviary and human tuberculosis are essentially the same pathologic process due to the same germ modified by a cultural environment, but convertible under favorable circumstances one into the other. An Englishman has found that more than ten per cent of canaries and other song birds that die in captivity succumb to tuberculosis, and parrots have come in for a share of condemnation in this connection. By far the larger number of monkeys who die in captivity are carried off by tuberculosis, and while, fortunately, the keeping of monkeys as house pets is not very general, at the same time there is some danger of contagion. Nocard, the greatest living authority on tuberculosis in animals, and the man to whom we owe the best culture methods for the tubercle bacillus, found in a series of autopsies on dogs that out of 200 successive autopsies on unselected dogs that died at the great veterinary school at Alfort, near Paris, in more than one half the cases there were tubercular lesions, and in many of them the lesions were of such a character as to make them facile and plenteous disseminators of infective tuberculous materials.

Parrots are known to be susceptible to a disease peculiar to themselves, and a number of fatal cases in human beings of what was at first supposed to be malignant influenza pneumonia was traced to the bacillus which is thought to be the cause of the parrot disease. Cats are known to sometimes have tuberculosis, and that they have in many cases been carriers of diphtheria, and other ordinary infections is more than suspected. There is not at present any great need for a crusade on sanitary grounds against the keeping of pet animals, but they are multiplying more and more, and it does not seem unreasonable that greater care in the matter of determining the first signs of disease should be demanded of their owners, and then so guarding them as to prevent their being a source of contagion to human beings. Attention should be paid to this warning as regards children, as animals play more freely with them and the children are more apt to be infected. — Scientific American.

A correspondent living in the state of New Jersey wrote us some time ago asking for information relative to a proper substitute for leather. He stated that he was a vegetarian and wished to supply all his needs without the necessity of killing any innocent creature. He said: “I found out how to satisfy my needs inside of the vegetable kingdom and desire to supply the outside needs from the same source, where it can be done easily, and by little extra effort. Perhaps you may not know that there is one farm in the State of New Jersey which does not raise animals to kill and eat. There are ten of us on this farm. We find in grains, fruits, vegetables, and nuts a substance giving greater health and better strength physically and mentally than when we formerly dined on flesh years ago. We are endeavoring to enlighten the minds of people hereabout on this subject, in the hope that they may be induced to go and do likewise some day, and thereby be free from the diseases which inflict many of them by reason of indulging in chewing the bodies of their fellow creatures.” This letter is dated “From the Lord's Farm.”

THE EDITOR AT WRAY, COLORADO.

The editor was one of a coterie of elders who met at the two-days' meeting at Wray, Colorado, the present residence of that able young elder, John B. Roush.

With the consent of the editor Bro. Roush had arranged for a series of two-days' meetings in the Eastern Colorado district, beginning at Wray, June 3 and 4, and issued an invitation to the editor to be present and share in the services.

The use of the public school building was secured, and at eleven a. m. of the 3d the services began, Bro. Roush leading the force in an opening sermon which laid the foundation deep and strong for the work to come after. This was followed by an effort by the editor in the evening, to an audience fair in size and attention.

Sunday was the busy day. The M. E. Sunday school held its service at ten, and was barely adjourned when, after appropriate song, the editor addressed a house full of saints and citizens, upon the subject of the doctrine of Christ, the means of salvation.

At 2:30, Bro. O. B. Thomas, gave an excellent dissertation upon the cause for an atonement, what it was, the remedy for sin, and its application. It was a happy effort, bristling full of points of instruction and interest.

After the afternoon service, two of the children of Bro. and Sr. E. Curtis, of Eldorado Springs, were baptized, by Bro. E. D. Bullard, in one of the many beautiful pools in the cavern near the village. These were confirmed at a sacrament, prayer, and testimony meeting held at six p. m. and which merged in the preaching service at eight after a twenty minutes' intermission. The editor again was the speaker. The house was full, the attention and interest good; except on the part of a few young men and maidens, to whom the service was an occasion for small talk and badinage. On the whole the service was a success.

The prayer and testimony service was above the average both in interest and effect. The Spirit gave much assurance and encouragement.

Wray is a little hamlet lying between the hills whence from springs hidden in the canyons the waters of the Republican River seek the surface and start on their journey eastward and southward to the sea.

Bro. Caffall once essayed an effort here, but did not meet with merited success. However, seed was sown and a name planted like a "nail driven in a sure place" by the master of ceremonies; from which fruitage and harvest must result.

Bro. E. D. Bullard, with a number of others live here and in the adjacent county, zealous and full of faith. These gathered to the call and formed a nucleus round which the congregation gathered to nearly a hundred of the faith to cheer and sustain one another in their work.

Bro. Roush has now located here with his wife, the daughter of Sr. Bullard, a widow and mother in Israel, whose kindly ministrations and unflagging cheerfulness give encouragement to all. Bro. Roush and Bro. Orlin B. Thomas are live, zealous, and wise laborers, whose motto is to build solidly rather than showily. The work seems to be safe in their hands. Some of those in attendance came from ten to fifty miles and more, bringing their cheer with them; poor in this world's goods it may be, but rich in faith. God bless them all.

The editor met with some known in other fields, and renewed association with pleasure. One Bro. Parsons and wife, whom the saints of Rock Creek branch will remember, another Sr. McPherson, of Haigler, desires the prayers of the saints in behalf of her husband, that he may be led to obey the gospel.

But time and space forbid the naming of all. Suffice it to write that Wray will remain a green spot in the memory of the few of the Lord's host who met there on these pleasant days of June, as it is a veritable oasis in the almost desert-like plain, where verdure lends pleasantness to the eye and heart of men.

Long may the work flourish there.

WILL NOT DEBATE.

Bro. E. W. Nunley wrote from Irving College, Tennessee, June 6. He felt well in the work in the field, though having many obstacles to meet. Chief among them he finds the teaching of the Utah elders, who present the principles of the gospel and publicly represent that there is little difference between them and the Reorganization except on the question of succession in the Presidency; though they privately teach the objectionable distinguishing feature of their faith. Bro. Nunley writes that he gets a good hearing notwithstanding the opposition created against the faith.

He sends a letter from Elders H. L. Payne and Eli M. Lee, of the Southern States mission of the Utah Church, in which they decline to discuss on the ground that they are required to obey counsel in the matter, which we give for the information of the HERALD readers:—

Southern States Mission, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Headquarters, P. O. Box 103, Chattanooga, Tenn. Chattanooga Conference. Conference Address—

ALTAMONT, Tenn., May 23, 1899.

REV. E. NUNLEY, Beersheba Springs.

Dear Sir:—We have just received word from headquarters—we were reminded that debating is against the council of the church, therefor as we are here to obey council we do not feel like taking the responsibility of accepting your challenge to debate, but we feel to bear our testimony to you that the gifts and blessings and power of the Priesthood is with the church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints commonly called Mormons located in the Rocky Mountains to which we bear witness in the name of the Lord

very respectfully

MODERN RELIGIOUS AGITATION.

It is evident that unrest and change are characteristic of present conditions of the world in this the "shaking" and the "hastening" time. Things that are wrong are being shaken preparatory to being moved; things that are right are being assailed and tested, necessarily so in the trying times in which worldly elements are passing in review before the scathing criticism and wearing processes everywhere active in the world.

Men, in ages past and in the present, good and bad, have felt the influences that have moved the race to disobedience, hence to departure from fellowship and association and communion with God, from his guidance and directings; hence human inventions in political, in social, and in religious science have largely been followed out through the long ages of light and darkness that have marked the lines of human progress and retrogression. The Creator has directed and sought to perfect the race, and will overrule finally as he has to some extent watched over its movements; but it is evident that he has permitted the creature man to occupy the world in harmony with the great principle of moral agency, and to learn through experience—by the things he suffers. This, briefly stated, as we view it, accounts largely, if not in detail, for the rise and fall of humanity in every age.

Whenever conditions are sufficiently understood it is apparent that well defined and clearly existing causes have influenced the rise and decline of nations and institutions—religious institutions and all are subject to the same scientific principles that govern all the realm of human life and progress for weal or woe—in mental, moral, social, and religious states of being.

To those who have studied the past and present religious development of the Christian world the attitude of religious organizations is not perplexing. Recognizing the existence and consequences of "the apostasy" from primitive Christianity, the subsequent driftings and agitations of Protestantism are not strange to them. Believing that they who build a spiritual house labor in vain without direction as revelation from God, to them it is no strange thing that sectarianism, which looks to the principle of past revelation and ignores and objects to present revelations from God to the church, should be left to drift at will, like Israel of old when every man did what was right "in his own eyes," according to his limited and darkened conceptions.

Compliance with divine directions has necessarily, unerringly brought order out of confusion and harmony and good in the Church of Christ in every age where God has been honored as Father and Creator. As Father of the world his acts brought order out of chaos and set in motion the forces designed to promote and perfect life. How any people can intelligently look for good here or hereafter while refusing or neglecting to comply with the divine will, must to the candid conscientious mind appear strange. However, to the enlightened student of world matters, religious and secular, it is not strange to see religious organizations departing from the revealments of God communicated in past ages of the world; for clinging to the idea that God would not speak in the present they misconstrued what he had given in the past, because lacking the present inspiration necessary to comprehend it. They therefore are ready to lose even the past, what limited hold upon it they once had; hence the errors of "higher criticism" falsely so-called, under which men professing to revere God are ready to ignore and treat the word of the past as practically null and void.

With this hasty and imperfect introduction we call attention to some of the later developments in the present agitations in popular religious bodies. The ordination of Dr. C. A.

Briggs, performed of late by Bishop Potter, of New York, continues to cause much dissatisfaction, which threatens to ultimate in a division if not a disruption of the Episcopal Church in America. Prominent ministers of the church who are dissatisfied have already agreed upon a discussion of the question with a view to ultimate definite action, while many others are unopposed to his views and to his reception in an official capacity. The question is being closely investigated, and his religious attitude seems destined to bear fruit in a general going into the case at the next general session of the Protestant Episcopal Church. And Doctor Briggs may find that having met such an experience in the Presbyterian General Assembly, he has simply jumped from a Presbyterian frying pan into an Episcopal fire; that he has by no means got rid of his troubles.

Doctor Decosta, of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, New York, referring to the admission of Dr. Briggs, said in a public sermon:—

This system of doubt and denial has entered the Episcopal Church, and its chief advocate has been deliberately received into the ministry. It is known as the "higher criticism." This is revolution. (See New York correspondence, Chicago Tribune, May 22, 1899.)

This is a strong statement, but a true one nevertheless. The tendencies of Protestant churches to break away from errors in their creeds, the misconceptions and inheritances of the Dark Ages, have been followed by revolutionary tendencies that are leading them to treat lightly, even to deny the word of God; in fact, and it is with extreme reluctance we write it, to deny the teachings of, hence to deny "their Lord that bought them."

The late divorce of prominent, wealthy New York people by the court and the remarriage of the woman on the day the divorce was granted, contrary to the strict decree of the court of the State where said divorce was granted, and by a prominent Episcopal minister, though afterwards he professed ignorance of the status of the case, is another cause of agitation; this time, however, in the form of a demand for higher ground on the marriage question, a commendable and necessary movement, which has taken on the form of an emphatic protest against indiscriminate divorce, which is to be made by the standing Committee on Marriage and Divorce of the Protestant Episcopal Church, of which the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix is chairman. Although the members of said committee have declined to give out any information concerning its sittings, it is stated that the late Sloane-Belmont marriage in New York, referred to above as having been celebrated on the same day the first husband obtained a divorce from the courts, and the numerous divorce cases of recent notoriety, have been the active cause in awakening that church "to consider officially the peril that confronts its morale." "It is unofficially intimated that the committee considered the advisability of making more stringent the penalties for persons who violate the canons upon discipline."

That our readers may obtain something of a comprehensive view of the prevailing condition of the social-religious status of many in the ranks of the ultra wealthy and fashionable world, in the metropolis and in other cities of the country, we append the following comments which, made from different points of view, bring out the main features under consideration.

"President Patton of Princeton College," of the Presbyterian Church, referring to the case cited, in a Sunday afternoon address to visitors and students on May 14, spoke of the present state of our marriage and divorce laws as "a disgrace to our Christian civilization," and with reference to the particular case before cited said that it was "simply disgusting." The Boston Watchman says it "is one of the events that throw a gruesome light upon certain phases of our modern civilization."

The Congregationalist, of Boston, briefly notes the same event, and reciting some of the facts says:—

Again, contemplation of the facts suggests whether clergymen of churches other than the Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal have not some duties they owe to society when asked to marry people who are strangers to them, but whose civil credentials are irreproachable, as no doubt they were in this case. Do they always look at the problem from the point of view of the state, of the family—as an institution—as well as from the point of view of the real or alleged happiness of the two who came to them asking their professional service? We cannot believe that the clergyman in this case was cognizant of the history of the people he remarried. But if not, why not—unless they deceived him.

The Sacred Heart Review, Roman Catholic, Boston, quotes the foregoing and comments as follows:—

We are glad that our esteemed Protestant contemporary is so outspoken in its condemnation of one of the crying evils of our time. Too many fashionable people are mere animals in the gratification of their passions, as has been proved again and again. Their so-called refinement is but a thin veneering that only conceals the most brutal desires, and when they have sinned and been found out, the divorce court helps them to pose as respectable members of society, when they are really worse at heart than the poor outcasts of the street.

The Reform Advocate, Jewish, Chicago, refers to the "recent occurrence in upper tendom," "to emphasize the need of a uniform law on marriage and divorce in the United States":—

In the meantime it is clear that above all others the ministers of religion might do much to create a healthy feeling of reverence for marriage and its responsibilities if they would refuse to officiate at such unions as for one reason or another conflict with common decency or are in open contravention of the higher law of morality. But how many ministers are there who seem to feel the least responsibility in this regard? Eloping couples always find willing hands to consecrate their union, and paramours experience but little difficulty in securing the blessing of the church even when the neighboring State in which the original divorce was granted prohibits most strenuously the remarriage of the guilty party. Boys that run away from home secure without the least trouble the services of clergymen, though it is known to them that if the parents were apprised of the intended marriage they would have serious objections, and for the very best of reasons in the world.

The New York Sun publishes a lengthy editorial on the subject and takes the ground that because the parties were "notoriously rich," on account of their social prestige, a freer view of divorce will result. It concludes as follows:—

It cannot be denied that so far as the influence of the society of which we are speaking extends, the sanctity of marriage, as held and taught by the church, has received a heavy blow. Nor can it be denied that this blow has been dealt in the very face of high Episcopal authority, and even with its social countenance, for it has been dealt most boldly and defiantly in the very social circle frequented by high ecclesiastical dignitaries, and apparently without rebuke from them. If there had been such rebuke administered emphatically and officially and strengthened by uniform and absolute refusal to tolerate association with the individuals who defied the injunctions of the church regarding the sanctity of marriage, would not that society have quailed before the anathema? Has not the Episcopal Church in New York made itself to some degree responsible for the moral laxity of a society composed almost wholly of its own communicants, or of people who would suffer most seriously from its condemnation? If that church, through its bishop and all its clergy, should visit all violations of its law of marriage and divorce with the penalty of its sharp and public reprobation, would it not soon make them unfashionable? This last defiance of it may force it to arouse from its inaction, and may also awaken the society of fashion to the necessity of self-preservation, of requiring in its members stricter regard for the sanctity of the marriage relation.

Cardinal Gibbons of the Roman Catholic Church, at the request of the New York World has set forth the traditional view of the marriage question. It is significant in itself and possibly may have a decided bearing upon the present strong tendency of the Episcopal Church to respect the authority of and to drift toward the "mother church." After reciting the position of the Roman Catholic Church in regarding marriage as an indissoluble bond he states:—

From the figures I have quoted it is painfully manifest that the cancer of divorce is rapidly spreading over the community and poisoning the fountains of the nation. Unless the evil is checked by some speedy and heroic remedy, the very existence of family life is imperiled. How can we call ourselves a Christian people if we violate a fundamental law of Christianity? And if the sanctity and indissolubility of marriage do not constitute a cardinal principle of the Christian religion, I am at a loss to know what does,

Let the imagination picture to itself the fearful wrecks daily caused by this rock of scandal and the number of families that are cast adrift on the ocean of life. Great stress is justly laid by moralists on the observance of the Sunday. But what a mockery is the external repose of the Christian Sabbath to homes from which domestic peace is banished by intestine war, where the mother's heart is broken, the father's spirit crushed, and where the children cannot cling to one of their parents without exciting the jealousy or hatred of the other!

And these melancholy scenes are followed by the final act in the drama when the family ties are dissolved, and hearts that had vowed eternal love and union are separated to meet no more.

This social plague calls for a radical cure; and the remedy can be found only in the abolition of our mischievous legislation regarding divorce and in an honest application of the teachings of the gospel. If persons contemplating marriage were persuaded that once united they were legally debarred from entering into second wedlock, they would be more circumspect before marriage in the choice of a life partner, and would be more patient afterward in bearing the yoke and in tolerating each other's infirmities.

Such is the widespread and varied comment upon this late action in Episcopal Church circles, probably the most formal, exclusive, wealthy, and fashionable in the Protestant world in America and England. It presents a significant and clear indication of the spirit of the times. It proves that the prevailing spirit in the world—religious as well as secular—is strongly, distinctly, distinguishably worldly in its spirit and character; that the general drift of religious movements and social tendencies is toward the earthly, that which tends to satisfy and gratify the mere carnal human inclinations, tastes, tendencies, and comforts. The present trend of our civilization is largely, strongly materialistic. From much of the university training down through most all the avenues of practical life the education and trend is material and scientific—that designed mostly to qualify for the material utilities, regarded now as the chief end and aim of human endeavor, to a practical ignoring of the higher ideals which are essential to a proper regulation of the material and which, with the material or utilitarian, balance and form a perfect union in the development of the race.

We repeat, we are living in a period of time when men are looking down upon the earthly substances and developing means of increasing wealth and material comfort, more than they are looking upward through the works of the Creator to him. Employing freely his gifts, the Creator is ignored, largely so, in harmony with the prediction of the Apostle Paul, who wrote of our times, that men would become lovers of earthly pleasures more than lovers of God, etc. In this the world is approaching a crisis similar to what it has passed through in other ages.

Paul, the enlightened, inspired reviewer of history, has furnished a striking portraiture of such culminations of past culminative periods of human history in his epistle to the Romans; see chapter 1, in which the drift of carnal, human nature separate from God is illustrated. A reading of it will be found instructive, though painful in many respects. Will our own age, increasing in wealth and progressing in mechanics, arts, and other departments of temporal civilization and departing from God—will it repeat to a greater or lesser degree the follies of the past? The questions suggested by a study of the religious and general movements of the times together with the predictions of increase in ungodliness, emphasize belief in the predictions that Babylon must finally fall; hence also tend to increase faith in the provisions of the gospel restored for the warning of the unbelieving and rebellious and the gathering out of the honest in heart.

Of the gospel and its restoration in these last days, every development in human affairs, every phase of the world's movements, intelligently considered, emphasizes the manifest divinity of our message, and the necessity that it be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations before the second coming of our Lord and the purification of the earth by fire that is to consume its wickedness and refine and prepare it for the reign of righteousness under Christ.

CONGREGATIONALISTS AND INFANT BAPTISM.

Our readers will note the significant points in our present cover article entitled, "To Quit Infant Baptism," and in which is given an account of the efforts of one Dr. Bliss, of the Congregational Church, who will endeavor to induce that organization to substitute a service of "dedication" for baptism of infants, thus leaving the ordinance of baptism for administration to adults only.

From the inception of the latter-day work, in 1830, the elders, being so instructed, taught the world in their ministrations at home and abroad that infant baptism was out of harmony with the word of God; that it was a human institution, a doctrine bequeathed to and fastened upon the churches of the day as a result, an inheritance of the spirit of darkness and apostasy which corrupted the church in early ages, after the apostles fell asleep. The elders of the latter-day work pointed out that Christ and the apostles indicated little children as innocent and pure, worthy subjects of the kingdom of heaven, types of the purity and innocence that should exist in all the adult members of the church. Even the then and now despised Book of Mormon condemned the prevailing doctrine that unbaptized infants were subjects of eternal wrath and doomed to banishment from the Divine presence; and the revelations to the church, given through the Prophet Joseph Smith, instructed the church that little children should be blessed by the elders, thus "dedicated" to the Lord by parents, who were to teach them to be baptized when eight years of age—when able to understand their relationship and duty to God.

The popular churches have in a number of instances amended their creeds in conformity to the teachings of the latter-day work. If Congregationalism, said to be the outgrowth of staid sober New England Puritanism, has been slow, it has nevertheless begun to show signs of necessary change, in this late movement of one of its ministers to substitute a service of dedication for infant baptism. If it would go a step further and substitute immersion for sprinkling it would be nearer right—in the form of the ordinance at least—though it requires an authoritative administration of the rite to constitute a legal, a valid baptism.

Dr. Gunsaulus states truly that, in effect, should the International Council of the Congregational Church blunder in its doctrinal conclusions, "no blunder it possibly could make would have any serious influence on the truth." The blunders of any men, religious or secular, do not alter the truth. It endures and rises triumphant over the wrecks and ruins of error.

Doctor Fifield, discussing the question says "Baptism is not a saving ordinance." The Doctor places himself by this statement among those who intimate that the Master when upon earth simply put in his time trifling with the people when he taught baptism as an ordinance in the spiritual economy and yielded obedience to it.

Doctor Scott states in effect that baptism of infants is a tradition, and while he holds to it he joins the advocates of the practice in his failure to cite one of the apostles or a scriptural passage in favor of the dogma.

Rev. Thorpe is quoted as stating, "The pastor of any Congregational church has it in his power to make such a change as proposed [in the service of baptism of children] independently if he desires to do so, and at any time." This "in entire harmony with the spirit of liberality of the Congregational Church."

Is the Congregational Church so flexible in its organization that its ministers are at liberty to believe and teach what they please? If so, what is the basis of cohesion in the organization, and where will such liberality carry its adherents?

These points with many more will probably occur to most or at least many of our readers. We trust the cover article will be found useful to all those in whose possession we place it.

We have reason to be grateful that God has spoken in this age of Babylonish confusion, in which things religious, political, social, and general are drifting and changing. It seems, to the writer at least, that our people, with the light revealed and the mission of teaching it to the world, should exercise care to guard against any tendency to drift from the truth or to be careless in efforts to exemplify it.

The doctrine of Christ demands a high line of general life in all its phases, in order to make its precepts effective. In Christ the teacher was exhibited a life consistent in practice with the high character of the code set forth in his teaching. The fact that he demands godliness in practice is in evidence of his demands that his disciples shall be living epistles of his truth.

CONFIDENCE.

"Let brotherly love continue"—don't let it die out. Our conduct should be such as to form a just basis for confidence and esteem. There is something wrong when results are otherwise. We are either guilty of carelessness or wrong doing or are grossly misunderstood if brotherly love does not continue.

The people of God who live up to the requirements of life and duty, live in the bonds of a perfect fraternal union. The basis of their friendship is sound and true and exalted and eternal in its character.

There should be nothing among them contrary to the principles of eternal friendship. "The truth" is comprehensive; it includes and requires "all things that pertain to life and godliness," hence demands such an exhibition thereof as shall do away with or practically neutralize and destroy the elements of mistrust and division.

Let each of us set a worthy example, by careful scrupulous right-doing, by manifestation of a high sense of principle, in all our walks in life, and there will be abundant unreserved, judicious confidence in our personal and general integrity.

The honest true man or woman does not ask that confidence be reposed in him beyond the measure to which he is entitled to it. It is the careless easy-going individual whose methods and deeds will not bear close inspection, who asks the repose in him of an unquestioning confidence.

It is the intelligent confidence that is based upon test, analysis, and just, judicious criticism. Jesus Christ, the Master and Master-friend of the race asked such confidence only: "If I speak the truth, why do ye not believe it?" "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" are among the sentiments uttered by him and upon which he based the worth of his personality and the saving power of his personal life and mission.

He who asks or would obtain confidence upon any other basis than the true one illustrated in the teachings of the Christ, is out of harmony with him.

We need confidence, but only the right kind—that based upon the principles of eternal, unalloyed truth—that and only that which can form the basis of eternal friendship, the fraternal spirit of the children and the kingdom of God. We challenge the proof and basis of all religious doctrines in our investigations of faiths. We prove or disprove in our first steps in entering or preparing to enter the Church of Christ. We also urge such course of procedure upon the world, as just, as essential, as furnishing the only safeguard against deception. Why should we depart from the first principle—the exercise of a discriminating faith based upon proper investigation—in our subsequent work?

We repeat the query, Why should we hesitate to or become careless in omitting to exercise proper discrimination in reposing confidence in any individual or in any principle? We preach that we cannot ignore or set aside "first principles" and go on to perfection. Having learned the truth through the exercise of intelligent, questioning, judicious discrimination, shall we depart from and do violence to that truth by neglecting to exercise the principle of analysis by which an intelligent judgment is formed? If we do so, shall we reach correct conclusions, shall we occupy safe or dangerous ground? We know the more of the character of the Christ by a careful study of the various exhibitions of it. The more we inspect the more we see to admire, the greater our confidence, the greater our desire to imitate and partake of the exalted divine nature. We know more of others, know the better to appreciate their good and to avoid their weaknesses and defects, as we discriminate in our just judgment of men and women, hence should judge a righteous judgment. Without so doing we are unable to appreciate their capacity for usefulness or their incapacity and unsuitability for work in the various lines of labor demanded in the service of the Master.

We plead the necessity for confidence, for the rights of all concerned to demand a high character of principle upon the part of teacher and professor, that there may be a just and righteous basis for confidence; otherwise confidence is misplaced and so reposed forms a dangerous and deceptive weapon for evil.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. Keeler, San Benito, California, June 1:—

I am doing fairly well. Am not baptizing as many as some others, but what I do, they understand the gospel law and are paying their tithing. I have a good interest near here in what is called Bear Valley. Expect to baptize some there, but can't tell how soon. They are spoiled for anything else. We have twenty-one members at Monterey now, and had only three to begin with last fall. But I have been looked out at one place; it was a place where they have had no preaching of any kind for two years. I find Bro. J. C. Clapp's tracks wherever I go. He is well spoken of here.

Bro. John Smith, Dennisport, Massachusetts, June 7:—

Am now out in the great gospel harvest field endeavoring to work for the Master. Am enjoying good liberty in the service. The weather is oppressively hot, and traveling very unpleasant because of the dusty condition of the roads. The general cry here is for rain, but the "cloud no larger than a man's hand" is not seen yet.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The faculty and students of Graceland, together with others of their friends, presented to Bro. E. R. Dewsnup, as President of Graceland College, a gold watch and chain, in evidence of friendship and appreciation of his services for the past year as head of the faculty of that institution. The presentation speech was made by Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, also a member of the College faculty, and was to the effect that though retiring from the College service and returning to his native land, Bro. Dewsnup would be watched and chained by the token presented and the friendship prompting the gift.

The sisters of the Lamoni Mite Society served a supper to Bro. and Sr. Dewsnup at their building, on Monday evening the 5th inst., at which, after a pleasant social chat, they were presented with a quilt, the handiwork of the faithful mothers in Israel who make up that worthy society. Bro. D. F. Lambert was spokesman, his remarks being responded to by Bro. Dewsnup, followed by others. Bro. and Sr. Dewsnup return to England with the sincere good will of many saints and friends in Lamoni and elsewhere. They expect to sail from Montreal, some time in July. Bro. Dewsnup addressed the saints of Lamoni in a farewell effort on the evening of Sunday, the 11th. The HERALD extends best wishes for a pleasant voyage and for future usefulness and success among the Israel of God.

The Lamoni public schools celebrated the graduating exercises of the class of '99, at the saints' church, in charge of Principal G. N. Briggs, on Thursday evening, the 8th inst. The high school graduates, six in number, were Misses Martha Lester, Silvia Vandel, Ethel Banta, Samuella Bailey and Messrs. Frank White and William Conover. The orations were good and delivered with a composure that illustrated the mental and morale of the school regime and discipline. A good high school is strict and valuable necessity to any large community of saints. It is a power for good that should be cultivated and brought up to the highest possible standard of effectiveness. Lamoni is blessed with good schools, and results are yearly seen in the excellent attainments of some of the rising generation.

Bro. Ellis Short, of Independence, Missouri, claimed also by the saints of the Choctaw district, was at Lamoni from the 7th to the 9th insts. Bro. Short is a member of the College Board of Trustees and is interested in church and educational work in general, and to which he devotes considerable time in addition to the demands of a large business.

Correspondents, of the church and not of it, will please bear in mind that the HERALD does not publish anonymous communications. Articles may be published without the name of the writer in print, or signed with a nom de plume—an assumed name; but the editors must have the name of the writer.

The HERALD does not advertise the private business of any individual or business firm or corporation, in its editorial or other regular columns. Advertisements must appear in the advertising columns, subject to rules and rates of the Business Department.

When you send the editors a paper, please put a big conspicuous mark on the article you wish them to see. It takes time to run through an unmarked paper and time is more than money in these busy times.

Bro. F. L. Powers writes from Maine, Minnesota, giving some reasons why he thinks people do not go to church, among which he mentions is late rising on Sunday mornings. He urges all to attend, regularly and promptly, all services provided for the good of the body.

Late arrivals include Patriarch A. H. Smith, from Independence, and Bishop E. L. Kelley, from Western Iowa.

Bro. G. F. Edwards, Philadelphia, reports that Bro. G. W. Robley returned from Philadelphia to Providence, on the 6th inst., in very poor health.

By telegram from Bro. Roderick May, President of Independence district, received just as we go to press, we learn that forty-two were baptized at Independence and Kansas City, on Sunday, the 11th inst., five of whom were former members of the Utah Church. Good, Bro. May, and thanks for the news. The workers of the Independence district are evidently alive.

The commencement exercises of Graceland College are not completed as we go to press. The Athenian Literary Society and the School of Elocution have rendered their programs and conferred their degrees, as announced in the published exercises. Particulars or fuller account in next week's issue of HERALD.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, reached Lamoni on Sunday, the 11th inst. He came in the interest of church and college work, and left on the 14th for Chicago.

A PATTERN.

"Search the Scriptures" is a divine injunction imposed by Christ, rendered more formidable by him in a practical sense to the termination of his ministerial work. And all along the line of his triumphal march the watchword was heard, Follow thou me, with declaring none were to enter the kingdom of heaven but those doing the will of his Father. And in conformity with this, he assured his disciples that unless their righteousness should exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, they in no wise should enter the kingdom of heaven, and in plain and positive language imposed a high moral rectitude on them. "Ye are the salt of the earth," he said, "but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted?" etc. "Ye are the light of the world." "Let your light so shine," etc. (Matt. 5:13-16.) Surely we assume a grave responsibility in es-saying to follow Christ.

In the inception of the latter-day dispensation we are confronted with the injunction to "search these commandments," etc., finding a stimulus in the assurance that God has spoken to his servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding. This, I believe, is alike imperative on priest and people, that the former may not deceive the latter. (D. C. 1:5, 7.)

The pattern is given as a preventive to the church being deceived:—

And, behold, he that is faithful shall be made ruler over many things. And again, I will give unto you a pattern in all things, that ye may not be deceived; for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations; wherefore he that prayeth whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me, if he obey mine ordinances. He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek, and edifieth, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances. And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise, and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you. And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me; wherefore by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases, under the whole heavens.—D. C. 52: 4, 5.

The conception of more plain and positive language for the revelation of a given purpose would be difficult. But I do not understand that this tolerates sitting in judgment on men's motives, for that were despicable. But I do understand we are to refuse whatever is taught or by whoever taught, that is not in harmony with the truth God has given, which beautifully harmonizes with Christ's instruction in Matthew 7, when speaking of false and true prophets, "by their fruits" or teachings "ye shall know them." Therefore one who would stultify his manhood by deciding to follow man because of position or talent would be of no good to himself nor the church. Would he not despise God's proffered grace? Latter Day Saints do not so learn of Christ. Therefore if we allow ourselves to be deceived, our God is clear and we shall know we have brought ourselves under condemnation. For such explicitness cannot be treated lightly.

But verily I say unto you, Teach one another according to the office wherewith I have appointed you, and let every man esteem his brother as himself, etc.—D. C. 38: 5.

He is most effective in fostering the rights of others who studies to understand his own duties and faithfully and fearlessly performs them, for he never dreams of having men's persons in admiration or taking advantage of anyone because of position or talent. He will never transcend his dignity to curry favor, nor will he advocate and enforce law to please friends or vex foes. He will rather let his moderation be known among men, diligently striving to pursue an even tenor.

The necessity to study and practice this pattern is seen in the fact that many have acquired a great proficiency to evade plain and simple truth in a lawyerlike manner, substituting in lieu thereof some kind of a theory more fascinating because of present advantage. But the everlasting gospel leads us to contemplate a future, with the assurance of having to face, for weal or woe, the reality of eternity. So as we sow, we shall reap. Now is the sowing time. What shall the harvest be?

Then we need study this pattern, as it promises help to know or discern the spirits in all cases. I therefore incline to the opinion that if we have settled down under the conviction that the mere fact of having obeyed the gospel will be a sufficient guaranty of preservation against all other spirits which are abroad, without striving to acquire some discernment, we may find we have made a mistake, possibly when too late, if we are not sufficiently alive to our own interest. A due study of paragraph 7, section 46, Doctrine and Covenants, may be beneficial. First, the gifts of the Spirit are enumerated. Second, the officials are named who are to have it given unto them (if studying and living for it) to discern all these gifts, lest there be any professing and yet not be of God. Now if it be a fact that our mere acceptance of the gospel prevents all influences save that of the good Spirit having control, some one has made a mistake. For certain it is that power to discern all these gifts, lest there should be any professing and yet not be of God, makes the intrusion by false spirits possible.

And grieve not the Holy Spirit, etc.—Eph. 4: 30.

Quench not the Spirit.—1 Thess. 5: 19.

These injunctions afford a warrant for belief that those to whom the Spirit was promised should know when they were actuated thereby.

Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.—1 John 4: 1.

Wherefore, it shall come to pass, that if you behold a spirit manifested that you cannot understand, and you receive not that spirit, ye shall ask of the Father, in the name of Jesus, and if he give not unto you that spirit, that you may know that it is not of God; and it shall be given unto you power over that spirit, and you shall proclaim against that spirit with a loud voice, that it is not of God; not with railing accusation, that ye be not overcome; neither with boasting, nor rejoicing, lest you be seized therewith.—D. C. 50: 7.

See also paragraph 1, which gives valuable instruction touching false spirits; that Satan had sought to deceive the saints to whom the instructions were given. Surely we ought to believe and practice what our own book teaches. We should study to discriminate between natural impulses and the impression of the Holy Spirit, and free ourselves from vain ambitions, cultivating humility, with a perfect resignation, remembering that God dispenses his gifts as he will, ever feeling anxious to practically demonstrate our appreciation of the earnest of the Spirit, or the testimony of Jesus through the Spirit of prophecy.

I read of the earnest of the Spirit (2 Cor. 1: 22; 5: 5; Eph. 1: 13, 14); of the manifestations of the Spirit (1 Cor. 12: 7-11); of the fruits of the Spirit (Gal. 5: 22-26). The earnest of the Spirit, after believing the gospel of our salvation, is given to every man, and by the inspiration of this earnest we should (or so I believe) ever be striving to give practical evidence of showing forth the fruits of the Spirit, consisting of "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Yes, I believe that from the last baptized member to the President, we should be constantly striving to evidence in our lives the blessed effects of the fruits of the Spirit. Thus battling in this spiritual realm, we will always be in a condition to receive and properly use any manifestation of the Spirit it may please God to give. But by an indifference as to this important matter we subject ourselves to the power of the adversary. For "that which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same," etc. (See D. C. 85: 7-10.)

To make the promise of signs following an inducement to the acceptance of the gospel is a grave mistake. And in view of the teachings found in the Doctrine and Covenants on the gifts, the possibility of Satanic intrusion, I have ever thought the injunction found in Doctrine and Covenants 17:18 of the highest importance. For if there is one more opportune time than another to make lasting impressions on the mind of an individual, it is immediately after baptism. Hence it is said, "The elders or priests are to have a sufficient time to expound all things" to the newly baptized members, "previous to their partaking of the sacrament, and being confirmed by the laying on of the hands of the elders." Yes, then is the time to so instruct relative to God's promises as a preventive to their becoming too sanguine touching manifestations. For nothing is more effective in producing disorder than a misconception of any part of God's divine saving method, especially that of the signs following. But for some reason this important work is too frequently overlooked, as is Doctrine and Covenants 17:7. Surely custom is most effective in eliminating the force and verity of law, so that he who persists in its advocacy is liable to become a prey. I at _____ saw it requisite to offer some instructions, which God's law warranted, touching spiritual manifestations, which I have reasons to believe subjected me to considerable and not the kindest sort of criticism. But having been bought with a price, I have neither sold myself to the devil or man. But heaven forbid that I should prostitute the power committed by the church to unholy purposes, or make myself a cringing sycophant to curry favor. I by God's grace essay to avoid these extremes and seek the golden mean, and correspondingly strive to govern myself by principle. Shall I fail in this, as I may, I must suffer loss. Whether I survive or perish, the assurance of a time for a righteous retribution is always stimulating.

Turning again to the consideration of the fruits of the Spirit, it will be seen those possessing them are above the law, or against such there is no law, therefore sin cannot be imputed to them. It then seems possible, however improbable it may be, to live without sin. But while we settle down under the conviction that we cannot live without sin, we may remain slaves thereto, for man is largely, if not altogether, what he desires to be. But since the word as above assures us there is no law against those who show forth the fruits of the Spirit, and further, that sin is the transgression of the law, we should follow the pattern, ever aspiring to the lofty plane of justification by so far subjugating ourselves to the divine law as to show forth the fruits of the Spirit in our natural life, so talk less about coming up higher, and practically demonstrate our spiritual flight.

Yes, we ought to render ourselves familiar with the pattern God has given, because it enlightens us on all matters of a spiritual nature. In the light radiating therefrom, leading to the study of other scriptures, we learn the body or church of Christ consists in integral parts; that the divine law reveals the duties of these several integral parts, therefore that law is just as luminous in showing any maladministration by any one of these integral parts. And whoever may be injured by such maladministrations, the pattern will teach them how to proceed for redress. And they will learn that all are innocent until proven guilty. Yes, and it will teach them that guilt is only proven by a due course or legitimate procedure, as the law or pattern reflects. And it will also teach them to keep their tongues in subjection as to the innocence or guilt of the accused until a decision is given by those who by law are authorized to decide. And with this studiousness and caution, those thinking themselves injured, whether real or imaginary, will be prevented rushing into print, making themselves accusers of somebody, with corresponding efforts to establish their own righteousness. For these and many other reasons we should study the pattern, showing ourselves a peculiar people, zealous of good works. The poet says:—

There is a river that always is flowing;
It is leaving your life boat and mine
On its mystic and fathomless bosom,
And we call it the river of time.

Puzzled as we may be as to this mystic and fathomless bosom, a proper utilization of time, talent, and earthly substance will bring to us a great and grand finality. But we ought to know that the consumption of time for illegitimate purposes will militate against our spiritual development. Paul so believed, so gave most excellent advice found in Titus

2, which may be frequently studied with profit. And if in addition to be keepers at home, etc., there were corresponding efforts to stay the tide of idle gossip, it would be very effective for good. In bonds,

INTERPRETATION OF REVELATION 13.

The first beast described is the Catholic Church, and is not necessary to notice except verse 3:—

And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.

Charles V., emperor of Roman empire, sent his army and took Rome and imprisoned the Pope and kept him a prisoner until he agreed to do the emperor's bidding, and then he restored him to his throne, and all the world wondered after the Pope during the struggle. This occurred in 1525. The next to notice is verse 11:—

And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

This second beast is the kingdom of England in the time of Henry VIII. The king did a great many wicked things by the authority of law and in the name of religion as the representative of Christ.

Verse 12: And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast whose deadly wound was healed.

The king espoused the cause of the Pope against Luther, and caused his people to worship the Catholic Church, and wrote a book in Latin on the subject and sent the Pope a copy. And the Pope issued a Papal Bull in reply, naming him "the defender of the faith."

Verse 13: And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men.

The Catholic and Episcopal Churches both burn a taper on their altar, and believe and teach that it is holy fire from heaven.

Verse 14: And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword and did live.

The "miracles" as above described is the doctrine of transubstantiation, which converts the bread and wine into the actual body and blood of Christ. The "image" is the Episcopal Church. It is the very image of the Catholic Church.

Verse 15: And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image to the beast should both speak and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

The Church of England was given life by acts of Parliament, and a great many of the people were killed because they would not worship in the Church of England. The king first persecuted his people because they would not worship in the Catholic Church, and then afterwards persecuted them because they would not desert the Catholic and worship in the Church of England.

Verse 16: And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads.

The communicant puts his right hand in his left, in the form of a cross, and the Rector drops the bread in the right hand and then is raised both together to the mouth and the bread is eaten. That is the mark in the right hand. Baptism is performed by dipping the hand of the Rector in water and then placing it on the forehead of the candidate and then a cross is made in the forehead with the water, and that is the mark in the forehead.

Verse 17: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

The king caused all the great estates that belonged to the Catholic Church to be confiscated. These were divided among the nobility and gentry, and his friends and adherents among the merchants were given monopolies in trade, and the entire trade of the nation was carried on through the adherents of the church. Verse 18. On the base of the Pope's crown is an inscription in Latin, which when counted by Roman numerals shows 666, which we think identifies this remarkable vision.

M. L. SORY.

THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

And thou shalt be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name.—Isaiah 62:2.

Our Christian or Campbellite friends put great stress on this scripture and claim that the "new name" prophesied of, is the name "Christian," for "the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch."—Acts 11:26.

We have not the least objection to the name or to any people calling themselves Christians if they choose to, but when they thrust it upon the world and consign to the regions below everybody that does not accept it as the only lawful name by which the people of God are to be known, it becomes time to examine it in the light of truth and see what there is in it. As Prof. McGarvey, one of the brightest scholars in the school of Alexander Campbell, says in his commentary,

This question demands the most solemn and trembling consideration of this generation.

Mr. A. M. Collins in his "Name Christian," page 37, says:—

This is the only name that will possess any value in the great and final day. Our entrance at last into the eternal city of celestial delights will be determined by whether we are entitled to this heavenly name or not. . . .

If God's people are ever united it must be upon the name Christian. It is the only appellation that is universally acceptable to all of God's people—and all that is necessary to effect a union of the forces of Christendom upon this name is to induce all those who are wearing human names and unauthorized titles to throw them aside and be satisfied with the name God has given his church.

I cannot understand why anyone should select this one name from the many names that God from time to time has called his people and make it indispensable to man's salvation.

The word or name Christian occurs but three times in the Bible, but God or inspiration is not the author of it either time; but "saint," "disciple," "brethren," "little flock," and such names are used by inspiration all through the scriptures.

Isaiah 62:2 has no reference to what the church should be called. He is speaking of the return of Israel to their own land to build the old waste cities. The Lord will then take delight in them and says they shall be called Hephzi-bah, the meaning of which is, In whom I delight. If the fulfillment of Isaiah's prediction had been left for the people of Antioch and they had called them Hephzi-bah instead of Christian, then we could make no objection to it; but the way it is harped by our friends the Campbellites it is but a tempest in a teapot.

That the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch we admit, so far as the New Testament record is concerned; but the question to be considered is, Who gave the name to them? The saints certainly did not give it to themselves, for if it was a name that they chose for themselves they would have used it instead of the many other names they made use of so frequently.

Paul in all of his thirteen epistles does not mention the name at all. Peter mentions it but once, and then in such a way as not to indicate that he had any particular reverence for it, and yet the disciples were called Christians forty years before all the New Testament was written. It seems absurd that the apostles of our Lord should have a name given them by divine authority and they be so ungrateful that they would not even so much as mention it.

The fact is, as I believe, the name was given to the saints by their enemies out of derision. It was a nickname, just as some societies are nicknamed now. The Latter Day Saints are often called Mormons, and we do not always object to the people calling us that, still we do not acknowledge the name. The Disciples are called Campbellites, the regular Baptists are called Hardshells, but none of them think it a proper name just because their opponents in belief choose to call them that.

God's people anciently were called

Nazarenes, Galileans, etc., by their enemies, but that was no reason that they should adopt that as the only lawful name for them, and then try to block everybody out of the kingdom of God that did not adopt it.

De Wette, quoted by Comprehensive Commentary, says:—

Beyond all controversy the name was given by the Gentiles, perhaps by the Romans, as the very form of it suggests.

Dr. Smith in his Bible Dictionary says:—

It is clear that the appellation "Christian" was one which could not have been assumed by the Christians themselves. . . . To the contemptuous Jew they were Nazarenes and Galileans, names which carried with them the infamy and turbulence of the places whence they sprung, and from whence nothing good . . . might come. . . . It must, therefore, have been imposed upon them by the Gentile world, and no place could have so appropriately given rise to it as Antioch. . . . Its inhabitants were celebrated for their wit and propensity for conferring nicknames.

Chrysostom, who preached in the city of Antioch, said of the people:—

Although they had invented the Christian name, they left others to practice Christian virtues.

That the people of Antioch were expert in ridicule and giving names of derision, see Coneybeare and Hobson, also Dr. Watson's Bible Dictionary. I might refer to many other men of learning and deep research as evidence that neither God nor his people had anything to do in calling the disciples Christians at Antioch. The very mention of it in Acts 11:26 is sufficient to establish my position, for it says, "The disciples were called Christians," etc. It does not say that their name was changed from disciple to Christian, but that they were called that, and the fact that the inspired writer used the name disciple shows that he recognized that name as a proper one.

Acts 26: 28 is often used in support of the Christian name, but to my mind it is about such proof as it would be if one of our Campbellite friends was in an argument with an unbeliever and the unbeliever should find himself a little overmatched and should say, "Alexander, thou almost persuadedest me to be a Campbellite." Would that prove that Campbellite was the proper name for them to go by? It makes no difference what you call a thing, it does not change the character of it. But listen to Paul's answer:—

I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds.

He did not say, I wish you were all Christians, for he did not recognize the name, but no doubt if he had believed the name was of divine origin he would have rejoiced in it, although it might have brought him afflictions and bonds.

I next quote 1 Peter 4: 16. This is the very citadel of those that make so much noise about "the name."

Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf.

I answer, If Peter's glorifying God depended on this name, is it not a little strange that he only uses the name once in his writings or his speeches so far as we have any knowledge, and that in a way not to afford any evidence that he had any reverence for it whatever? The fact is, Peter knew it was a name of reproach, and as a faithful servant of his divine Master he must suffer reproach and even death, which he did. If the name Christian was right because Peter could glorify God in it, then all of his sufferings were also right. On the 27th day of June in the year 67 (so says history) Peter was crucified in Rome. In this he glorified God (see John 21: 19), but did that cruel act, on the part of those wicked hands that put him to death, prove that it was right? By no means. It was right for Peter to be resigned to his fate and to trust to God to avenge him, if vengeance was to be meted out. Ridicule, slander, and all kinds of affliction have been the common lot of all of God's servants in all ages, and they are perhaps the crucible in which God refines them and prepares them for that "New name" spoken of in the Revelation.

Paul says Jesus is coming "to be glorified in his saints" (2 Thess. 1: 10), but he does not say anything about being glorified in his Christians.

But says one, "Is not Christ the Bridegroom, and does not the bride (the church) take the name of her husband?" Very true, but the Bridegroom (Jesus) is called by no less than one hundred and four names in the Bible. Which name shall the bride take to the exclusion of all others? The angel of the Lord said, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." (Matt. 1: 21.) So if the people are to be called by his personal name, the Jesuits are more consistent than our Christian friends.

As the followers of Mr. Alexander Campbell are such sticklers for "the name," I will here introduce a little testimony from their great leader. Mr. Campbell says in Millennial Harbinger, volume 2, page 394:—

I am bold to affirm that there is not the least authority in the word here used (Chrematizo) for concluding that the name Christian came from God—any more than from Antiochus Epiphanes. . . . And recollect it was fifty years and more from the time they were first called Christians before all the New Testament was written. They were called disciples, saints, believers, etc., but never once addressed under the name Christians.

Again, Millennial Harbinger, volume 4, page 366:—

The moment any man proves to me that Paul and Barnabas by divine oracle called the disciples Christians, no matter where they did first or last, I yield to that name as the exclusive name of the followers of Christ. I will wear no other; and I will contend for one name as for one faith, one Lord, and one baptism, although Paul forgot it in his letter to the Ephesians.

See also page 378:—

It is however but an earthly name—there are no Christians in heaven, no Jews in heaven, no divine names in heaven, but there are saints in heaven, holy brethren, and other designations of great age and of unquestionable divine authority. Abraham and Moses, though no Christians, were saints.

Thus writes the man who "speaks where the Bible speaks and is silent where the Bible is silent."

It is true that Mr. Campbell wrote differently in later years, but I suppose as he was a "restorer" he had a right to change until he got the thing to suit him. Mr. Moody, of the Baptist Gleamer, says in a tract on the subject,

Mr. C. hotly discussed the subject for several years before he consented to swap with Barton Stone baptism remission for the name Christian.

Now as I said in the beginning, I have no objection to the name, and only write to rebuke the braggadocio of those who claim that the name Christian is the only security that men and women can have of a place in the kingdom of God.

Our Campbellite friends take great exceptions to the saints. One told me that to claim such a name was the "worst kind of blasphemy." Said he, "You have got name enough to load a camel." I answered, "I don't know about it being a load for a camel, but it seems to be a big load for a Campbellite."

The name saint occurs over a hundred times in the Bible as a noun applied to the people of God, and the Latter Day Saints use it in the same light that the saints of Bible days used it, and if it is blasphemy for a church or people to call themselves saints now it must have been blasphemy then.

Paul, who never used the name Christian in all of his writing, says in his Corinthian letter (1 Cor. 1: 2) they are "called to be saints, with all them that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord." So if Paul's testimony is of any value, the saints are in harmony with the scriptures, whether they are with the Campbellites or not.

Again, Romans 1: 7:—

To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints.

"Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints—whew!" said a minister to me; "What a name!" Our only apology for the name is that church means an assembly, a congregation, and if such congregation is established or sanctioned by Jesus Christ, it is his congregation or church, and if his he has a right to say what it shall be called. (See Eph. 3: 15.) Now if we are saints, or called to be, and are organized as a congregation, recognized by Jesus Christ, bearing the name that he has said we should bear, the gentleman's camel is loaded with truth,—God's word,—quite a valuable cargo, we think.

But the "Latter Day" part of it is very objectionable to our friends. This is letting in a little too much light. It is equivalent to saying that God's work—his gospel and his church or kingdom—had been taken from the earth and that it had been restored in these latter days, and it gives Alexander Campbell no credit as being a coworker in the great restoration.

But as this letter has already reached proportions that were not intended when it was begun, I will close by testifying that the gospel of Jesus Christ has been restored to the earth, that the church or kingdom of God has been reestablished, and that the nations are now being warned by divine authority. And as we live in latter, not former days, and Jesus Christ is the author of the work, it is quite proper to speak of the church or assembly or body that the latter-day message has gathered unto Christ as The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Only let us live worthy of the name.
J. C. CLAPP.

WILL SINCERITY SAVE US?

Dear readers, we are living in a peculiar age. People can secure most anything they desire, religiously, from the true gospel of Christ down to sanctified holiness, spiritualism, skepticism, and infidelity.

The Christian world is confused and troubled with a spirit of unrest, caused by the present divided condition of religion. This has caused men to think and study. Especially since the angel has flown to earth with the everlasting gospel. Prior to this time "sectarians" were bitter against one another in maintaining and defending their respective creeds, and inflicted upon each other many severe wounds. But since this gospel message is being delivered to the inhabitants of the earth, these petty differences have been laid aside. Theologians have discovered that the creeds of men are like potter's clay when compared with the teachings of the Savior, and they have seen the necessity of pulling together. They have stepped upon the broad platform of Charity(?); have united their forces and are endeavoring to come "to a unity of the faith" in order to retard the progress of this great latter-day work. The healing balm has been applied to their wounds, viz.,

"It don't make any difference what one believes, just so he is sincere and has a clear conscience."

This is a world-wide doctrine, and inasmuch as it is different from the doctrine Paul and his associates taught, its advocates will come under condemnation. (Gal. 1: 8.)

I believe the world should strive to become a unit on the question of salvation; but we should take the "word of God as the man of our counsel." At present the unity that characterizes the religious element teaches that men will be anchored on the shores of eternal bliss, by believing anything they want to, just so it is branded with the name—Jesus Christ. But is this scriptural? Is it in harmony with the teachings of the humble Nazarene?

Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth unto destruction, and many there be which go in thereat. Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.—Matt 7: 13, 14.

Christ was a teacher of the narrow way. (John 3: 5; Mark 16: 16.) The servants of God have taught the doctrine of "exclusive salvation" in all ages of the world. Father Adam could have remained in Eden's garden had he not transgressed. Noah and his family were saved by the one plan. Health and cure would not be given to the children of Israel until they looked upon the brazen serpent. Peter declared on the day of Pentecost:—

Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

This doctrine of sincerity and conscience will never save any one; because it is not in harmony with the system of truth that Christ established. Its origin will have to be traced to some other fountain than that of divine truth.

What is conscience? We will consult Webster for a definition of this term; he says: "Conscience is the faculty within us that decides on the right or wrong of our actions." Thus it is a creature of education. Our conscience is what we make it. Instructions in the Christian religion will develop good thought, and the natural consequences will be "good action." For action is nothing more than thought executed. On the other hand a total disregard of God's law and a constant association with the evils of the world will engender evil thought, and the consequences will be "evil deeds." And owing to the extreme wickedness of the present generation, we have what we might call "natural liars," "natural thieves," and "natural murderers." Conscience tells them it's right to perpetrate these evil deeds. Is it a sufficient guide morally or spiritually? If so, the mission of Christ is a failure. Man is fallible and we need something more than human wisdom to direct the mind, for "no man knows the things of God, save by the Spirit of God." For this reason Christ went away and sent the Comforter; which will "reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness," and "will guide us into all truth; and show us things to come." (John 16: 8, 13.)

Now we begin to see that it does make a difference what we believe. We must be born again, and live by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God; for the Savior said:—

Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth.—John 17: 17.

Yours for truth,

A. M. BAKER.

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

As an individual I am surrounded by individuals; as a mortal, by mortals; as a creature fashioned in the divine image of God, by creatures of like fashion. We are of alike passions. We only differ in intensity as the warmth of our natures differ in degrees. We love and hate in proportion to our depth of character. We sin also in the same ratio; and we forgive as we love. You have looked down into very deep water as you glided silently over its smooth surface. You have taken some of it up in your hand and found it to be colorless, yet as you looked down into its depths you were sure it was a bluish green. The great depth caused it to apparently take that color. Our natures, I think, are similar. Those natures which resemble most nearly the intenseness of very deep water can love or hate to a greater degree than the shallower ones; but ah, they can also forgive the most. They possess to a greater degree the divine nature. So as individuals molded after the same pattern, possessing the same traits of character, the same hopes and fears, striving to reach the same goal, our lives are intermingled.

We cannot separate ourselves from our fellows, however much we may try. We have duties and pleasures in common. However distant we may sometimes appear to be, the streams of our lives will come in contact. We meet in unexpected places. We run up against the sharp corners in each other's lives. It was to be so. The Creator intended just that. He meant that we should know one another, that we might the better help each other. "Bear ye one another's burdens" was said by him who bore all burdens for us; bore them with that dreadful cross up the hill calvary; bore them when great drops of blood dropped from his white, sinless brow; bore them in his great loving heart, until he had completed the sacrifice and could say, "It is finished."

Who was his neighbor? A chosen few? His love reached out broad as the universe. All mankind were sinners. Then all mankind were his neighbors. Who is our neighbor? A few select ones? How many need our help? Do we not all need help? Are we not all poor and weak? Are we not all liable to err—fallible by nature? Even love, that Godlike attribute, sometimes leads us into sin. Is there one of us that can live perfectly independent of others? Then who is my neighbor? Ask and answer for yourselves. Our Lord reached down to help the sinful Magdalene. Are we any better, any purer than he?

Suppose a young man or woman becomes enamored of the pleasures of the world for a short time, and leaves the beaten track in search of them. Is it our duty to shun them; to hold aside our skirts with a "stand aside, I am holier than thou" air; or is it our duty, as neighbors and friends, to take them by the hand, and by gentle means endeavor to draw them back again? Our hearts may answer for us. I appeal to the older ones; be gentle with the young. Their natures are sensitive and proud. Don't arouse their hatred by harshness. You cannot drive them into right. You may seemingly compel them for a time; but their hearts will rebel. Lead them by the gentle cords of love, and you will win them by and by. Love is the true locksmith. Nothing can withstand him. He finds a key to fit every door,—a passage into every heart.

Suppose a man through his appetite, inherited or otherwise, is cursed by the drink habit. In all other respects he is a true specimen of manhood. He is a kind and noble son, brother, husband, father; but his love for drink is too strong, his reliance in God too weak, and he falls from his high estate and becomes that most degraded thing—a drunkard; the image of his Creator debased to the low estate of the beast. You will say, "He should know better than to allow himself to become so low."

"Put yourself in his place." Suppose you meet him after the drunken debauch is over. He feels so humiliated, he is in the depths of despair. He is too weak to make another attempt for right, alone. He needs your help. He is our neighbor. Shall we pass by on the other side, or shall we prove ourself the good Samaritan, and give him a helping hand; let him see that we are willing to overlook his fault, if he will only try once more to be a man. If you have ever sinned, and felt the awful remorse of it, and then have felt the blessed peace steal over you when you knew that those you loved the most had forgiven you, and were trusting you once yet, you can realize somewhat the feelings of your neighbor, when by your words and actions you show him that you pity and forgive him; that you feel, oh, so keenly,—you, yourself are a sinner. "Let he that is without sin cast the first stone."

Suppose your neighbor, in a moment of passion, has made unkind remarks about you. Should you retaliate and make the fire brighter and fiercer, by throwing more kindling thereon? It is human, I admit; but is it Christlike? When "he was smitten upon one cheek he turned the other also;" and "when he was reviled, he reviled not again." It is easy to draw upon one's imagination, and bring up illustrations to show our responsibilities to our neighbors; but it is not so easy to put into practice duties incurred by those responsibilities. It is very hard for one who lives a conscientious life to be even friendly with one whose daily life is a blot upon nature, nevertheless kindness on our part may lead such an one to walk in purer ways. At least we will have the satisfaction of knowing we have done our duty, and that we will receive our reward. It is said that a book of remembrance is kept above, and that our good and bad deeds are written there by the recording angel. It is also said that one day the Judge will sit in judgment, and that then the books will be opened, among them this book of remembrance. We shall all stand before that august presence, to listen to the judgment pronounced upon our works in this life, and receive the reward our deeds have merited. We cannot escape it. When the book of life is opened, and our names are read, how fearful will be our condition, if no unselfish act is found recorded there; no kind word or deed done to some one in distress, and we hear that dread command: "Depart from me; I never knew you." "Inasmuch as ye did it not to these my little ones, ye did it not to me." But if, although the record may be woefully blotted, unselfish thoughts and deeds are found recorded there, and it is found that we have tried to love our neighbor, how different will be our feelings when we hear, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto these, ye have done it unto me." Shall we have our names written there? Shall we try to weave pure thoughts, good deeds, gentle words into our web of life? Life to all is so thorny, so full of unhappiness, that a little word of love brightens our paths so much. Let us remember that we live for one another, that God made of one blood all the nations of the earth, that Christ so loved us that he gave himself a sacrifice that we might have eternal life.

DANCING AND DANCERS.

Dancing is an ancient custom. I presume David, Saul, and Solomon enjoyed dancing even more than we of the latter days. It is said that David danced before the Lord. I believe it was one of their forms of worship. In heathen countries to-day they dance before their idols.

The modern way and object of dancing is very different. It is never as a form of worship or of thanksgiving to the great Giver of all good. I doubt if the God of heaven is ever thought of by our children while dancing, either in the dance hall or at home. Dancing to-day, whether on the waxed floor of a grand hall, or among the friendly neighbors in their beautifully arranged parlors, or upon a well-swept barn floor, is done more to gratify the lustful passions of our nature, than for religious worship. It fosters pride and vanity, and an excessive love of dress, which causes us to love and seek for admiration and praise. These light, fairy-like costumes, in the heated room, often engender cold and disease which terminate in an early grave, or long years of suffering. Many will say, "Will not other evils produce the same effect?" Yes, surely there are other evils that should be put aside, but now we are speaking of the evil of dancing.

When I was about twelve years of age and my sister two years older, we were invited to our first dancing party. We were proud of the neat little billet of invitation, and joyously went to mother asking for her permission. The party was to be composed of some of our most favored and beloved schoolmates. Mother's first question was, who will be there? and how will they spend the time? We told her there was to be dancing, games and card playing. She said, "Well, my dear children, I will not say yes or no, until you first go to your separate rooms for secret, earnest prayer, and the reading of a chapter in your Bible. Ask God all about it and see if you can take Christ with you. After doing as she requested, I went to mother, kissed her and said, "Mother, I am not going. I am a child of God, and feel that I can't take Christ with me." I am now sixty-three years old, and I never attended a place of dancing. When young we had many social parties at home, but dancing and card playing were never introduced; our motto was, "Shun the very appearance of evil."

Dancing leads us into evil and worldly company. I remember one of my young friends, who was very fond of dancing, and could not see any wrong in it. I often urged her to give it up and turn to be a Christian. At last she promised she would after going to one more ball. So as I was helping her to dress for the evening dance, she said, "Addie, I will go to just this one and then stop and be a Christian. She bade me good-by with a kiss, laughingly saying, this is my last ball. At twelve o'clock as she was waltzing with her lover, she fell to the floor dead. She was called to give an account to the great Judge. Her body, robed in her last ball dress, was taken home to her poor widowed mother. Early the next morning I was sent for to see if I could rouse the mother from her great grief, but no, with a broken heart she passed to an early grave, and was laid beside her daughter.

Is there no harm in dancing? Oh! that my voice could ring loud enough, or my pen write as words of fire against it, warning all the young against modern dancing. My parents were born in Somersetshire, England, and were brought up in the Church of England. Father was a dancing master and thus earned his living, but at an early age they both joined the Methodists, and father became an acceptable minister. Thus, after taking Christ for his friend and companion, dancing was cast aside; he could not keep hold of the hand of Jesus and dance.

There are many other points, which might be noticed as against dancing. One is, it leads us into company which at other times we would not choose for our children or for ourselves. It often brings us into close contact with those who use the worst of all beverages, whisky or beer.

But I think, as this is my first effort on this subject, and feeling myself a stranger to most of you, I will close, only repeating the motto, "Shun the very appearance of evil." Yours in the bonds of the gospel of Christ,
ADDIE V. HOXIE.

MINNEAPOLIS, Kan., June 3. □

Editors Herald:—I have recently closed a week's meeting at Idylwild, Clay County, with fair interest and attendance. I believe some good may result from the effort, especially among the saints, who feel their individual responsibility as members of the church and the need of shaking off the coals from their garments and arising in the strength of the Lord, that they may be worthy of spiritual and temporal blessings. The Lord has promised that "the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion." From this I am persuaded, that an individual effort must be made if any blessings are obtained; that faith and works must agree.

None can afford to allow himself to fall into a sort of don't care, neither cold nor hot, faultfinding condition. The Spirit of the Lord may become grieved and take its departure forever. The Lord says, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." Activity is therefore needed on the part of every one in this great work. Our warfare is not against carnal weapons, but against principalities and powers of an unseen foe, who constantly seeks to invade the soul and blight it for all eternity.

Dear saints, it is a question of eternal happiness or misery—which shall it be?

May God speed the right, and love and union prevail among his people.

AGENCY, Mo., June 3.

Editors Herald:—I have been laid up with rheumatism for a month; cannot walk yet without a cane or crutch, and that only a few steps. Still I am improving, but very slowly. Hard to tell if I will be able to do any work at all this summer. Some of my neighbors got me up some wood and planted my potatoes, and an acre of corn. I would like to get a boy old enough to plow a little with one horse, and do some hoeing and chores around the premises. If anyone would like to come, he can write to me, but no one need to apply who is not willing to work and mind.

I had a visit a short time ago from two Utah elders (the same mentioned in Herald May 31). They were in this neighborhood last fall, but they would not come near me then. I gave them the benefit of my personal experiences in Utah, as their conversation led up to it.

Ever praying for the advancement of God's kingdom, I am,

Yours in the everlasting covenant,

J. L. BEAR.

ELMONT, Kan., May 21.

Editors Herald:—I am preaching once a month in Topeka and other places as my labor at home permits. I enjoy the Spirit of the Lord every day. I have been afflicted this spring so that I could hardly walk around, let alone work. At my last appointment in Topeka I was so bad I could not put on my shoes. Through persuasion I went to a doctor and he said he could cure me for twenty-five dollars; I told him I would come back and get the medicine after my appointment. The next day I asked the saints to pray for me, and I felt better, but did not get well, but well enough to walk from Elmont, six miles, the next day.

The saints advised me not to get the medicine. One brother said he had the impression that if I would be faithful I would get better. After I got home I was sitting and studying what to do for myself; I had prayed to the Lord to put into my mind some remedy to cure me, and the thought came, Why don't you use burdock? My wife went and dug some burdock roots and put them in a pitcher and filled it with water, and I drink that when I am around the house; and now I am almost well; and I thank God for the relief.

And now, dear saints, I want to tell you a dream I had last week, concerning hell. I have always thought that I did not believe in a literal fire in hell. I always thought it was the mind that would be tormented, knowing what we will miss by not living faithful. My dream was to that effect. I was lying on the lounge at noon. I fell asleep and dreamed I was in that prison house or hell. I was put into a room by myself and had a place to lie down, and while I was lying down I thought what I had missed by not living faithful. And now, dear saints, I cannot begin to tell you the torment my mind was in, but what a relief it was when I awoke. Let me tell you, I don't want to go there.

Dear saints, let us be faithful, do our duty and pay our tithing and help build up Zion. I own but forty acres of land and I owe eight hundred dollars on it, and I have paid five dollars a year tithing, besides freewill offerings, and I know that God will help me pay my debt.

Yours in Christ,

N. S. DUNNINGTON.

WOODBINE, Iowa, June 6.

Editors Herald:—I see in Herald of 31st ult. that Bro. Ward wishes certain debatable points between us and the Utah Church cleared up.

As to the claim of these elders that the Inspired Translation fails to fulfill the words of promise in Doctrine and Covenants 45:11: "And now, behold, I say unto you, It shall not be given unto you to know any further concerning this chapter until the New Testament be translated, and in it all these things shall be made known;" it seems to me that theirs must be a desperate cause to have need to bolster it in such a way. The chapter in the Inspired Translation makes clear the two distinctive periods—the overthrow and dispersion of the Jews (A. D. 70) and the end of the world, or destruction of the wicked, and has then "made known" a much controverted point and one which infidels have long used. Verse 35 especially defines and fulfills the promise of the Doctrine and Covenants completely.

As to the points in controversy:—

1. We do believe in temple building, but not without a command from God. In section 107:12 we have: "my holy house, which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name." The people in Utah interpret this to be a perpetual command. To do so they have to distort the plain rendering of the word, however, which clearly shows that God's people have no right to build before being commanded to do so. The Lord in this same paragraph, and speaking of the tabernacle, says: "For, for this cause I commanded Moses." In fact so far as historical data is concerned, we know of no instance where the people of God ever built without such command. Take the temples at Jerusalem, Kirtland, the dedicating of the ground at Independence, and in every instance God commanded before the people moved. The very fact, then, of the people in Utah building their four temples without any command from God shows their departure from the faith. In the 10th paragraph the Lord says: "But I command you, all ye my saints, to build a house unto me." In the 11th we are told that if all these things were not done at "the end of the appointment, ye shall be rejected as a church with your dead."

2. As to "gathering;" after all we have written on the subject and in its favor and never declared against it, it seems a little strange that these Utah elders could so misrepresent. Why, we are "returning" with "songs of everlasting joy" and are rebuilding the "waste places" and are gathering right back to Jackson County. And when right in the same paragraph from which these last quotations are taken—98:4—the Lord says, "There is none other place appointed than that which I have appointed, neither shall there be any other place appointed than that which I have appointed for the work of the gathering of my saints, until the day cometh when there is found no more room for them"—in the light of the above our Utah elders might tell us why they established Utah as a place of gathering, and at the same time cease their falsifying as to our belief on this important subject. Why, in Utah they have tried to tell me we did not believe in tithing. I only needed to call their attention to the revelation of '61.

3. As to baptizing for the dead. When the Lord commands us to do so we stand ready to comply therewith. Just how the Utah Church can claim the right to so baptize when the Lord said that unless the temple in Nauvoo was finished by a given time (and it was NEVER finished) they should "be rejected as a church with their dead," is peculiar, to say the least. Baptizing the "rejected" dead has about as much effect on their salvation as shooting green peas against the walls of Gibraltar would have on those impregnable heights!

4. Sealing for eternity. Every person entering the church and who receives the "seal of their adoption" is sealed up unto eternal life and will retain such "seal" by "enduring to the end." The methods in Utah of sealing a man and woman to each other as husband and wife after both parties are dead, other women to a man than his own wife to be his wives in eternity, etc., etc., etc., have no warrant in the word of God anywhere and are but evidences of their departure from the faith.

WINTHROP, Ark., June 5.

Editors Herald:—I am now laboring here. I just returned from the State of Louisiana. I went there by special call. Sr. McCurry living at Antrim, Louisiana, was visited by two of the Brighamite elders, and of course they claimed to be the true church in succession and that we were apostates without authority; and as to polygamy, they no longer taught or practiced it, and that it was a dead issue and should not be held against them. However, I visited Hughes' Spur, where they had converted three, and while there was invited to preach for them; so I set forth the difference.

One of their members had got hold of the Doctrine and Covenants, Utah edition, and found in it Brigham Young's (purporting to be Joseph's Smith's) revelation on plural or celestial marriage. One of their members believed the revelation, the others claimed not to believe in it. The outsiders got hold of it. Quite a few were wanting baptism; so when they heard of this revelation they refused to be baptized, so they made inquiry into the matter.

One of the elders testified that Brigham Young was a true prophet of God and that said revelation he believed was of God. The other elder said the reason they could not receive said revelation was because of their sin; they did not have religion enough to go into celestial marriage.

They were the elders who told Sr. McCurry they did not believe, teach, or practice polygamy any longer. So, after I set forth the difference, "I'm a Josephite," "I'm a Josephite," went from tongue to tongue; so good was accomplished both at Antrim and Hughes' Spur.

The trouble is to get the people out to preaching in Louisiana. I got a good hearing yesterday at Piney, Arkansas. Since last writing I have labored at ten different places, with some success. Calls ahead more than I can meet soon. Hopefully,

J. W. JACKSON.

CHARTER OAK, Iowa, June 4.

Editors Herald:—We have Bro. W. H. Kephart laboring with us, and as this is a new field, we think he is the right man in the right place. The prospects are bright for the future. He has made a grand opening here. We feel to thank God for such noble men called and set apart to fulfill the great commission of our Savior when he told his disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel, not a gospel, but the gospel; and the promise is that he would be with them even to the end of the world. This is being fulfilled in this place.

The people are very much interested in the work here; that is, the generality of the people. Of course there are a few not very friendly; and we find them to be members of other churches, and not particularly outsiders. Bro. Kephart has made many kind friends here. Instead of, "We don't want to hear you" they say, "Come and show us the true light." He has been with us about eleven weeks and has preached fifty-three sermons, and the results are he has baptized eight, all grown up people, and more are investigating the work, who we think will obey the gospel pretty soon. There has been no preaching done here before Bro. Kephart came. He has done a noble work. The people are astonished at the doctrine. They say they never heard such preaching before; that it is all Bible and, "What can we do with it? we must either accept or reject it." We are holding our meetings in the school-house here, having been denied the use of the churches in Eddyville. We would like to get the tent and also Bro. C. Scott to help storm the stronghold of sin there. We think a good work can be done. We have a few friends there that stand by us.

We have established a Sunday school here, to be known as the Charter Oak Sunday school. We had forty-six in attendance. We had a glorious time; impressions were made that we hope will not soon be forgotten. The good seed that is being sown is taking a deep root and by and by the blade will appear and then the full corn in the ear. There are those in our midst who are trying to sow tares among the wheat, but by and by the harvest will come and the wheat will be gathered out; but the tares will be burned.

And now, dear saints, I would like to say to you, This is God's work, and the more we do for him the greater will be our reward, if we are faithful to the end. There is no standing still in this work, no time to lose. This is his hastening time; the enemy is all around us, trying to get in among the flock, that he may destroy the work. Let us put on the whole armor that we may meet him and thwart his desire. Let us pray for one another, and for the Spirit to guide us in all we say and do. Your brother,

GEORGE LONGDEN.

SEMINOLE, Ala., May 28.

Editors Herald:—I enjoy reading the letters in your pages very much, and as I seldom see any from this place, I thought I would write a short letter.

I am still holding on to the rod of iron. I have been a member of this latter-day work for twenty-three years, and I never have regretted the time I embraced the gospel. I know that when we hold out humble and obedient we will be blessed. I oftentimes feel blessed when reading of what Jesus told the Samaritan woman, that he that drinketh of the water that he giveth would never thirst, but in him would be a well of water springing up unto everlasting life.

I have enjoyed oftentimes the blessed reading the letters of sisters and brethren, and this being the first letter I have written, I hope it will be of some consolation to some of them.

Dear saints, as becometh saints, I oftentimes feel that we do not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. I ask the prayers of all the sisters and brethren that I may endeavor to hold out faithful to the end and gain the crown that God has promised to all those that meekly bear the cross.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
TABITHA COOPER.

WRAY, Colo., June 5.

Editors Herald:—Your many readers will be pleased to know that we have just held a very pleasant two-days' meeting at this place. We were favored to have Bro. Joseph Smith with us, whose acquaintance and labor among us were very much appreciated by all the saints and many others.

Through the solicitation of Brn. E. D. Bullard and J. B. Roush we were kindly granted the use of a commodious room in the village schoolhouse, and a goodly number of the people were in attendance at all the preaching services, except the 10:30 service on Saturday, which is the busy day of the week for business men.

Most of the saints of the Laird branch reside from nine to eleven miles southeast of Wray, the families of Brn. E. D. Bullard and J. B. Roush being the only ones living in town, at whose homes, including the residences of Mr. Charles Bullard and M. Lewis, were domiciled saints and others from a distance. Brn. A. E. Tabor, William Willis, F. D. and Freeman Bullard, and Joseph Weller, with their families from the country, assisted in bearing the burden.

Bro. E. D. Bullard and his brother Albert (deceased) moved to these parts from near Creston, Iowa, some twelve years ago, also Bro. Willis. These brethren with their families laid the foundation of the latter-day work here.

From the Highland branch, fifty miles south, organized nearly two years since, came Brn. Houston, James, Crawford, Colpitts, and Johnson with their wives. Sr. Huddleson and two daughters, Sr. Colpitts and daughter, Bro. Ackleson, and one young man seeking the truth. From Haigler, Sr. McPherson and Bro. and Sr. Plymate were present, also Bro. and Sr. Ness, from St. Francis, Kansas. The latter four are members of the Laird branch. The saints enjoyed the season richly and others seemed interested.

O. B. THOMAS.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., May 9.

Editors Herald:—I herewith send you a sketch of the moon as she appeared April 24, '99, at Molong, two hundred and sixteen miles west of Sydney. The Sydney Daily Telegraph of the 26th of April had the following:—

"CELESTIAL PHENOMENON.

"Molong, Tuesday.—A peculiar phenomenon was observable here last night at about six o'clock. When the moon was some fifteen degrees above the horizon, two semi-circular black bands appeared on the surface. They were each about an inch and a half wide. The band on the northern side extended from the top to the bottom, and that on the south about two-thirds of the distance, giving the moon the appearance of being encircled by a broken ring of light. The sky was cloudless. As the moon arose, the black bands became more pronounced, until towards eight o'clock when they commenced to disappear by gradually fading away at the ends. The phenomenon was watched with interest by many persons."

I immediately wrote to Molong for a confirmation of the above, and received an answer from a very intelligent gentleman, who is editor of the Molong Express, Mr. George England Hooke. He confirmed the report and furnished me with the following sketch:—

He further informed me that the mountains of the moon, as contrasted with the black, opaque-looking bands, had a lighter or gray-blue appearance. So there is no room for the idea that the bands were only the mountains appearing plainer than usual. He also wrote that the same thing was observable two nights later, only the bands were not so well defined and the moon of a deeper hue—more yellow. The first night it was at its full, "looked like a silver disk," and was slightly paler than usual, though the volume of light did not seem perceptibly less.

Coming on to New Castle, and relating the above in a prayer meeting, two brethren (who had not seen the Telegraph nor been spoken to on the matter) arose and stated that at the same time while coming home together they had seen the same thing (Brn. E. J. Haworth and Thomas Gregory).

The signs seen in my native land, and published in Ensign, I have in chart form; but have not used them much on account of the same having been (apparently) seen by Americans only. I had been wanting something seen in Australia, and now I am furnished. You know the average "Yankee" has the reputation of telling some "tall ones," and to the average Australian our unique movement is peculiarly American in flavor. So we think the above worth mentioning. I have been more prolix in my account to the Ensign, but as it costs fifteen cents postage to send it I could not afford to send you a copy, so have been shorter, which is, no doubt, more suitable to your requirements.

Yours faithfully,

GOMER R. WELLS.

HUNTINGTON, Oregon, June 7.

Editors Herald:—I am still in the faith and my hope grows brighter for this glorious work. Last February Brother Chase came here. Not being able to procure a house to speak in, he went to Malheur, where he held a good meeting. Four noble souls came in through the door, and quite a number are investigating, and I am confident if the work is looked after there will be a lively branch there as there are some very good people who are believing. There is also opposition; the M. E. people are very much opposed.

I was given a dream four years ago, showing me that the Lord had a people there, and I rejoice that some of the seed sown has taken root. There is also an old man who lives in the mountain who is in favor of our faith, although he has never heard a sermon; but I have got him to reading.

We like Bro. Chase very much and think he is just the one for this mission. We wish there were a few more to help him. If the tent could come here there are some in Huntington who would be with us if they could hear the word, and I do pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth reapers. For some reason I have not received my Herald this week and I am very lonely. I cannot do without it. I have no other meetings to rely on and give the food necessary to spiritual growth.

I will say to all the saints, Press on, and build with good morals and all the grace required of us, preparing our characters that we may be able to live in harmony with one another and the law, for the hastening time is here and we must each do our part.

Sr. Emma Burton has my prayers and sympathy, and all the noble ones who have done so much with their pens to help us lonely ones on. We often keep silent, thinking there are others who are more able to interest, but our prayers are ever ascending to the throne in behalf of those who are in the front of the battle. We each have a part; let us do it with whole-heartedness. Although like the daisy under the bush, we know there is One who seeth and is able to reward. I remain, one of the weak ones striving to enter in.

MEDITATIONS.

It has been revealed in this latter age that there are many worlds or planets like this earth that are inhabited; and of all the worlds that exist in space, this is the worst, and the only one that Satan, with all his hosts that fell with him, has power to tempt and entice the inhabitants of to do evil; and the only world so wicked as to persecute and put to death the Son of God. Therefore, it is a hard struggle for any, especially those who are feeble-minded and of small capacity, easily confused, and void of knowledge, to stem the current, to advance in righteousness, in short as a poet expressed, "Through faith in Jesus' name conquer Satan's power."

INFERIOR.

As we read the above we felt very sensibly the truthfulness of it, and there also came to us the words of this beatitude, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." We knew the meekness and humility of the writer; and while "Inferior" is signed to his "Meditations," we know that he was often wiser in his humility than many who deem themselves among the wise men of the earth. "God resists the proud, but gives grace to the humble." Is it not this grace, which as children of God, we sorely need? Why should any mortal, especially any saint of God be proud? Inspiration reveals to us that "Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall."

MUSINGS.

I am weary to-night of this quiet life; this life of humdrum care, of darning of stockings and patching of pants—there are always holes to mend. Only a life of little things, yet requiring all my physical energy in the doing.

To my rebellious mind comes the thought—though conscience chides—"Can the Master have placed me in that situation where the best talents he has given me can be used? Where every hour I feel a lack of physical strength, without time to use my mental, which has seldom tired in its school days of busiest work? Are my longings and aspirations never to be fulfilled?"

Swiftly comes the answer, as though an angel-spirit communed with mine, "Is the work you are doing now well done? Are the humdrum little cares faithfully performed in the very best way you know how and can study out?"

I looked at the hole I had mended. It was well done. I thought of the work of the day. It was done as well as I possibly could every little thing.

"Then so surely as you are unswervingly faithful in these little things, so surely will the Master give you the great things to do."

"In this life?" I questioned. It matters not, "You will have your desire in God's time."

And as I know that God's time is the very best of times I rest content.

APRIL.

HE KNOWS.

Just why I suffer loss
I cannot know;
I only know my Father
Wills it so.

He leads me in paths I cannot understand;
But all the way I know is wisely planned.

My life is only mine
That I may use
The gifts he lendeth me
As he may choose.

And if in love some boon he doth recall,
I know that unto him belongeth all.

I am his child, and I
Can safely trust;
He loves me, and I know
That he is just;

Within his love I can securely rest,
Assured that what he does for me is best.

WALNUT CREEK, Cal.

Dear Sister Frances:—I have been a deaf mute from infancy. I knew nothing about heaven, God, his Son Jesus, the Holy Spirit, the angels, or the commandments of God; neither did I know anything about Satan and the evils in the world until I was about eighteen years of age. My parents sent me to a deaf and dumb school at Jackson, Mississippi. My teachers—Miss Mollie Head, Professor Saunders, and others—taught me to believe in the Bible, in God, and in his Son Jesus.

I believe it was the Spirit of God that led a man by the name of Martin to my father's house, and made arrangements for me to go to school. O those blessed days in which I was taught to read and write, and to converse intelligently with my hands and facial expressions! Those days indeed were the bright spot of my life's history, being made still brighter by the revelation of the gospel restored to Joseph Smith by the angel, and taught to me by my two sisters-in-law, from about 1887 to 1894, when I was baptized by Bro. J. H. Lawn at Santa Cruz. Up to that time I was much prejudiced, having been wrongfully taught by those who knew not the truth. Now I rejoice all the day long that I have obeyed the commandments of my Savior. I believe his words in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants.

I love to pray and think on all good things. I am happy. I want all my sins washed away, and to be delivered from all evil. I love to study the Bible, and will try in meekness to calmly submit to all of God's will in afflictions or whatever trials he sees fit to prove me with.

I would like to talk and teach little children to be truly good, and obey God in all things, and then they would be wise. I would also love to talk and tell all my neighbors about the gospel. I pray that the Holy Spirit will lead some of God's ministers to Walnut Creek to preach the gospel in its purity to all of our friends, and also all sinners here.

I feel to weep that wicked men martyred Joseph Smith. I feel and believe that he was a man sent from God to teach the truth.

I also love Bro. and Sr. Burton, who are now in the islands. I am waiting patiently for their safe return to us again. How long will it be? I am also waiting for the coming of our Savior, Jesus, to be our king. I hope he will come soon. I pray for all the Lord's people, and love them all.

NANCY E. SMITH.

While meditating upon the gospel theme, my thoughts seem drawn to the parable of the talents, especially where the Savior says, "But from him that hath not obtained other talents, shall be taken away even that which he hath received."—I. T.

When I realize what a noble work we are engaged in, I feel a great desire to assist in this work, and also to impress upon the minds of others interested in the gospel not to put off until too late that which the Spirit whispers is your duty, lest that which you have been taken away; for you know not the many hearts you may lighten with new courage to go onward in this great strife.

When I read the Mother's Home Column my heart saddens because my mother did not have such good instructions. How earnestly we should give what little assistance we can to the furtherance of this gospel work! I feel as though I will be well repaid for this effort should it be the means of arousing another to action.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

Your sister,

F. M. WELDON.

"HOW LONG, O, HOW LONG?"

Will people write upon both sides of the paper for publication? This may seem like an unimportant question; but when the editor is tired out with correcting and otherwise revising an illegible manuscript, and finds that to use the article means to copy a half of it, you may be assured that it is of some special merit if it does not find its way into the waste basket. We have before us four manuscripts that we would like very much to use, but to do so would require some hours of copying. This we do not have the time to do at the present time. We will file them away and wait for a more propitious time. Never write on both sides of your paper for either reading or publication.

"USE AND ABUSE OF REPORTS."

Long experience has taught us that reports in the Sabbath school cannot be dispensed with successfully. We find this feature in all Sabbath schools, both progressive and nonprogressive. Most persons realize the fact that reports are useful, but what their uses are and the extent of their usefulness many have taken no thought upon.

We will first consider the benefit to the local school derived from them. The activity in our schools, the amount of interest, and the real life therein is indicated by the reports. Hence a report is a history. It serves as an incentive to do more work and better work; it induces the irregular attendant to become regular, while some in the school are animated to use their influence in securing new members. Thus the Sunday school is enlarged and we are enabled to reach a greater number of persons. How proudly we look upon the history of our school if that history is one which shows the school to be in a stage attained to by faithful labor and is still progressing. On the other hand, should it show signs of retrogression, do we fold our hands and sit down discouraged? No. It only increases our determination to be successful, and we begin anew with the zeal and energy which cannot but be fruitful.

In our district convention we view the history of each of the local schools. Intuitively we compare each of these with our own. The thoughtful Sunday school worker will carry the effect of this comparison home with him, and there it will be productive. But to the local school and to the district association the service of reports is not confined. The benefit derived by the General Association is quite evident. But reports like all other useful things can be abused and are abused. The largest part of this abuse they receive from none other than the secretary. He gets them up in such an uninteresting form, and then follows that same old form Sabbath after Sabbath the whole year round. Then perhaps when he reads the report his voice is inaudible to half the persons in the room. It may be that he reads so indistinctly that those who do chance to be within reach of his voice can only with the greatest difficulty catch the meaning contained therein. All this creates in the hearer a lack of interest and attention. Of course there are always a few dull, listless ones in the room whom, the secretary, be he ever so well qualified for his office, cannot hope to reach. But the majority the wide-awake secretary will not permit to abuse his reports by non attention. He will force the attention of the audience by his personal magnetism and individuality.

WHICH ARE YOU?

No; the two kinds of people on earth I mean, Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

Wherever you go you will find the world's masses

Are always divided in just these two classes.

And oddly enough, you will find, too, I ween, There is only one lifter to twenty who lean.

In which class are you? Are you easing the load

Of overtaxed lifters who toil down the road?

Or are you a leaner, who lets others bear

Your portion of labor, and worry, and care?

WANTED.—A beautiful breastplate for the prophet and priest we call the Sabbath school teacher. It must have three precious gems in it. 1. A deepset and immeasurable sense of personal responsibility. 2. A burning enthusiasm for Bible study. 3. An undimmed passion to win souls.

We sometimes meet a person who is above being influenced. He thinks only weak persons yield to outside influences. He imagines he is developing an independent manhood, when in reality he is petrifying an undeveloped man. We should endeavor to be master of our surroundings, but to properly do so we must receive the greatest possible good from them. It is important that we learn the art of yielding ourselves up to good influences as to resisting evil influences.

LETTING SELF GO.

There is no greater source of misery than being occupied with one's self. The habit develops an excessive sensitiveness to every breath of opinion and comment, and a suspiciousness of such comment where none is uttered. The mind comes to such a state like that of the body in which every prick of a pin festers, and turns to a sore. Nothing is a more wholesome cure for this than the power and practice of getting outside of self, and becoming interested in the men and women around us. It is one of the great uses that childhood renders us, that it gives us human beings of wonderful interest, who awaken in us no false sensitiveness, and charm us into forgetfulness of our claims, our sores, our private griefs. The world is kept young by having this fresh life poured into its bosom, that we may forget our selfishness and our grievances. The man whose interests are with those around him has no time nor opportunity for selfish misery.

Thus we have a balance in the treasury of about $240. The time of the annual conference was changed from Easter to Christmas time. The total membership of the district stands at 442, a net gain of 8, which is not bad considering one branch alone expelled 10 of its members during the year. Election of officers: President, Walter J. Haworth; vice president, Gomer R. Wells; secretary, Claude S. McLaren; assistant secretary, W. H. Broadway. A vote of confidence in Bro. J. Wright, Bishop's agent, was passed. Two appeal cases were referred to a committee; on said committee's recommendation one was dismissed, that of Bro. Alex. McKay; and the other Sr. F. Reed upheld, and the matter referred back to the branch. In the latter case the decision of the branch was reversed. Preaching Saturday evening by Elder J. G. Dickinson, assisted by Bro. Joseph W. Smith. Prayer and testimony Sunday morning, in charge of G. R. Wells and Alex. Seaberg. Forenoon preaching by G. R. Wells, assisted by W. H. Broadway. Sacrament and testimony meeting in the afternoon, in charge of W. J. Haworth and H. Broadway. Conference was brought to a close with a sermon by Elder John Kaler, assisted by W. J. Haworth. The attendance was large and attentive all through, and the conference was a success beyond the expectation of the most sanguine. Adjourned to meet December 31, 1899, and January 1, 1900, at Balmain, Sydney.

Report of James Huff in regard to court of elders in case of C. D. Stevens against Lake Shore branch, to the effect that no action had been taken on account of the death of the other member of the court. James Huff was continued a member of the court, with D. M. Rudd as the other member. Auditing committee on the report and books of Bishop's agent, reported: Receipts $191.63; paid out $123.52; balance on hand $68.11. We also find that the names of four persons who have paid tithing do not appear on the record. Resignation of J. M. Stubbart as Bishop's agent received, and accepted with vote of thanks for his services. The following resolutions duly passed: Whereas, it has been the will of Almighty God to remove from our midst Bro. Nelson Brown, who at the time of his decease was our district president; and whereas, we recognize the fact that in the death of said brother the district has lost a worthy and devoted member and faithful officer, and the family a loving husband and father; therefore, be it resolved, that we extend our sympathies to the relatives and friends of our deceased brother in this time of their bereavement, and pray that God's blessing may rest upon them in the hour of need; and be it further resolved, that these resolutions shall be spread at length on the records of this district, and that a copy be sent to the widow and family of the deceased. Sunday school convention granted Saturday afternoon for the meeting of the convention. Elder S. F. Cushman requested to labor in the district under direction of the district president and the missionary in charge. Elder J. E. Butts elected district president, James Huff secretary. NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints and Friends of Northern Nebraska District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:—Please take notice that the former agent of the Bishopric in and for Northern Nebraska district of said church, Elder J. M. Stubbart, has removed from the district and resigned his position as agent of the same, and that upon the recommendation of the conference of said district, Elder James Huff of Omaha, Nebraska, has been appointed agent in his stead.

The Bishopric desire to extend special thanks to Bro Stubbart for the faithful manner in which he has discharged his duty to the work in the district while acting as agent, and shall hope that in his new field he may have ample opportunity to perform good work in the interest of the cause of truth.

Commending Bro. Huff to the saints, and asking that they sustain him and the work, so that the cause of truth may be greatly aided thereby, I am in bonds of gospel hope, yours,

E. L. KELLEY.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 9, 1899.

AN APPEAL.

Creola, Ohio, has always been considered headquarters for the missionaries in Ohio district. We have a nice little branch, and not to my knowledge has any one of our members ever brought disgrace on the work or himself, or herself. We are poor in worldly goods, but we have decided to build us a church. We are now at work on it. We have it up to the square, and under the skillful supervision of Bro. H. R. Harder, Jr., it will soon be finished if—but there is where we need you.

Will Brn. W. H. Kelley, G. T. Griffiths, R. Etzenhouser, M. T. Short, T. W. Williams, I. M. Smith, L. R. Devore, A. Haws, F. C. Smith, J. T. Davis, G. H. Hilliard, H. R. Harder, and others who have been here and know our situation, please aid us with voice and otherwise in their respective fields?

I know that each branch and district has its own expenses, but we should "bear one another's burdens." We here have tried to do that in the past, and will continue in the future. From the building of our little chapel in Salt Lake City down to the "chain gang" system for Graceland, you will find our name for our proportionate part.

Send your contributions to A. B. Kirken-dall, Creola, Vinton County, Ohio.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Those coming by rail to convention and district conference at Keb, June 16, 17, 18, buy tickets to Ottumwa. You will be met at union depot by conveyances that will carry you to Keb, a distance of five miles. Those authorized to meet you will wear blue ribbon. Come if possible no later than the 17th, as conveyances are expensive.

JOHN JERVIS.

BORN.

BARROWS.—To Bro. and Sr. C. H. Barrows, at Lamoni, Iowa, January 30, 1899, a son. Blessed May 7, by Elders F. M. Weld, E. C. Briggs, and A. H. Smith, and named Sidney Carlton.

GARRETT.—Helen C., daughter of Bro. E. H. and Sr. A. W. Garrett, of Cleveland, Ohio, was blessed May 28, 1899, by Elders A. H. Parsons and E. H. Garrett.

L'HOMMEDIEU.—At Colo, Iowa, November 6, 1898, to Bro. Frank and Sr. Nellie L'Homedieu, a son, named Ira Lyle. Blessed April 23, by Elders J. S. Roth and W. C. Nirk.

ORTLEB.—At Keokuk, Iowa, May 6, 1899, to Mr. George and Mrs. Hannah Ortleb, a son. Blessed June 2, by Elder J. S. Roth, and named Arthur George.

LUFF.—At Independence, Missouri, January 21, 1899, to Bro. John W. and Sr. Mary A. Luff, a daughter. Blessed June 4, 1899, by Grandfather R. M. Elvin and Elder M. T. Short, and named Agnes Emeline.

STOLBERG.—At Lamoni, Iowa, September 16, 1898, to Bro. John and Sr. Louisa Stolberg a son; blessed May 28, 1899, by Elders R. S. Salyards, J. W. Wight, and H. A. Stebbins, and named John Burton.

DIED.

CHAPMAN.—At the residence of Sr. S. P. Chambers, George F., son of Bro. and Sr. John Chapman, aged 1 year, 11 months, 28 days. Blessed by Elders O. B. Thomas and J. W. Gilbert.

OWENS.—William T. Owens was born January 27, 1877, near Golden, Burt County, Nebraska; died June 1, 1899, at the same place. He was baptized October 8, 1892; ordained a priest at Fremont, Nebraska. He was sick for near a year past, but it was all the more sad by reason of his being young in years; he was highly respected, as was evidenced by the goodly number out to the funeral service, which through the kindness of the Methodist people was held in their church at Decatur, Nebraska, Elder F. A. Smith delivering the sermon.

CAHOON.—At East Dennis, Massachusetts, June 4, 1899, Sr. Olive May Cahoon, aged 23 years and 4 months. Funeral services by Elder John Smith, at the home of her parents. As we looked upon her in the casket, in the cold embrace of death, with a sweet, heavenly peace upon her face, it hardly seemed possible that she was dead. Her rest is glorious. The separation is sad, because there are four children, between the ages of six months and six years, left without a mother's affection and tender care.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

(Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

THE RESIGNATION OF DR. WHITSITT.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Kentucky, on May 11, the resignation of Rev. Dr. W. H. Whitsitt as president of the seminary and as professor of church history therein was accepted, and Rev. Dr. John P. Greene was elected to these positions in his stead. In accepting the resignation the trustees adopted resolutions expressing their recognition of the exalted Christian character, rare ability, and scholarly attainments of Dr. Whitsitt, and their appreciation of "the extended and multiform services he has rendered to our denomination and the cause of common Christianity." Thus came to an end, it is now believed, a case which has provoked a long and unhappy controversy in the Southern Baptist church, noted at various times in the Literary Digest. This controversy turned mainly, as will be remembered, on a point in Baptist church history; namely, whether the independents in England, who afterward became known as Baptists, practiced immersion before 1641. Dr. Whitsitt asserted in a cyclopaedia article that they did not. Members of the Baptist denomination who hold that the historical continuity of the practice of immersion is requisite to orthodoxy in that communion took emphatic issue with Dr. Whitsitt.

The Baptist papers generally express great relief over the termination of the dispute. Thus the Religious Herald (Richmond), which has supported Dr. Whitsitt, says:—

"Twenty-five years hence, when those who are now young will have grown old, and when the sons and daughters of those who are now old will come into the knowledge of what has gone on among Southern Baptists over this issue from 1896 to 1899, what judgment will they form? Something like this: There will be a feeling of amazement that so small a matter as an opinion about a period of ecclesiastical history, or the use of an unfortunate phrase or two, or an unwise method of promulgating his views, should have excited so many of their fathers to the point of fury. And will not the future historian of Southern Baptists — if, indeed, we shall then have learned to let our church historians tell the truth—when he gathers up the materials for the history of these three years, find abundant evidence that, in tithing the mint and anise and cummin, many good men among us have neglected the weightier matters of the law? Dr. Whitsitt goes into retirement with the distinction of having been more abused, more persistently misquoted, more cruelly dealt with by a large number of his brethren than any other man who has lived and labored among us for a century past. So far as these men have brought about this result, they are welcome to their triumph."

The Western Recorder (Baptist, Louisville) is happy over the outcome, as the following extract shows:—

"We all rejoice in the happy issue of this most unfortunate controversy, and we hope it will long be the last among Southern Baptists. Not that we suppose for a moment that all differences of view among our brethren will immediately vanish. There will still be such variations among Baptists as are inevitable with a free and widely scattered people. Nor do we expect any of the brethren to surrender one jot of their freedom of thought or of speech; but we suggest that now is a good time for all the brethren to exercise a wise discretion in giving utterance to anything to which others are likely to object."

In a report of the proceedings of the Southern Baptist convention at which the resignation of Dr. Whitsitt was announced the Baptist and Reflector (Nashville) says:—

"But the question of deepest interest which was in the mind of every one was the Whitsitt matter. Before the meeting of the convention the clouds gathered pretty black and thick, and from them the lightnings leaped and the thunders rolled. At a distance we fought earnestly—we had almost said bitterly. But when we came together we found that we are brethren. There was an earnest desire to find some way out of the difficulty. But no one could suggest what it should be. Things looked dark. At that juncture the Lord's Spirit came in and guided the minds of the brethren to what was universally recognized as a happy solution of the difficulty. Every one seemed not only satisfied, but delighted."

For a view of the matter from another denominational basis, we have the following from the Christian Observer (Presbyterian, Louisville). After expressing its belief in the soundness of Dr. Whitsitt's contention and reciting the proceedings which led up to his resignation, it says:—

"The victory lies with Dr. Whitsitt and his friends; and Dr. Whitsitt, whose humble and sincere piety all admire, may feel that he has not lived and suffered in vain. Nor need his friends regret that they have stood by him and by the principles which they represent. We say this, not because we believe that Dr. Whitsitt and his friends are ready to give up any of the distinctive principles held by the Baptists. They hold them, we are ready to admit, as firmly as their opponents, but they hold them on the true Protestant basis of the word of God and that alone. To have gained this victory for a great Protestant principle, as against one essentially Romish, is well worth all that it has cost. Not for many years has this vital issue come up so clearly among the Baptists, and never again, we believe, will the orthodoxy of any Baptist minister be made to depend on his acceptance or rejection of an external historical immersionist succession. This, in the judgment of those who hold by the word of God as the source of all truth and the basis of all authority in matters of religion, must be regarded as the great service which this controversy has rendered."

In the opinion of the Central Christian Advocate (Meth. Episc., St. Louis) Dr. Whitsitt is the victim of an unwarranted persecution. He committed no offense against the statutes of his church, it says, but was driven from his place by men of narrow, violent, and uncharitable views. It concludes as follows:—

"Of course in the long run Dr. Whitsitt will win, if he lives long enough. In the eyes of Protestantism he appears as a courageous, manly, and honest scholar, who has sought only to find and declare the truth. Like many an investigator in former ages he has had to suffer for truth's sake, but he can afford to do so."—Literary Digest, June 3, 1899.

ISRAEL AMONG THE NATIONS.

The best known Jews of to-day are Dreyfus and Nordau. At the time when Dreyfus is about to return to France Nordau contributes a vigorous article to the June number of the North American Review entitled, "Israel Among the Nations." It will be remembered about fifteen months ago Count Esterhazy said in an interview: "If Dreyfus were ever to set foot in France again there would be one hundred thousand corpses of Jews on the soil." Evidently Nordau regards this foolish threat of a modern St. Bartholomew's massacre with the contempt it deserves, for his paper is manly and outspoken to the point of aggressiveness. He denounces the cowardice of the Jewish Deputies on the continent who neglect to look after specifically Jewish interests and grow pale at the thought that their Judaism may be noticed. He ridicules the assimilationists who desire to wipe out all differences between themselves and the Christian majority by intermarriage and conversion to Christianity. He praises the Anglo-Jewish members of Parliament who "have grown manly, frank, and magnanimous evidently by reason of their Anglo-Saxon training."

He seeks to trace the psychological roots of the prejudice against the Jews, and while admitting that fraudulent bankruptcy and deception are practiced by the Jews "to a larger extent than their percentage to the population would indicate," he claims that they are involved in these professional misdemeanors "to a less extent than their percentage to the trading class." He asserts, contrary to the usual belief, that the Jews have no special faculty for trade, their present predominance therein being due to bitter necessity during the middle ages, when they were told to "barter or starve." On the other hand, he holds that the Jews, while not specially fitted for trade, have a special aptitude for politics. What was called Lord Beaconsfield's "Oriental imagination" was really an almost prophetic depth of penetration—he foresaw the present expansionist policy of all nations twenty years in advance of his contemporaries. In conclusion he holds that those Jews who have attained to equal rights, being usually assimilationists, are too morbidly desirous to demonstrate to their Christian compatriots that they are citizens of the country—simply and nothing but that. On the other hand, those Jews who have not acquired equal rights are usually Zionists and wish to return to Palestine, where, being in a majority, they may be able to develop along their own lines and enjoy life as do other nations.—Chicago Tribune, June 6, 1899.

THE NEBRASKA CYCLONE.

On a somewhat smaller scale the cyclone at Herman, Nebraska, repeats the fatal results of that of the day before at New Richmond, Wisconsin. The deaths are reported at ten and the injured number about twenty-five. The latest figures place the casualties of the New Richmond disaster at 115 dead and 320 injured. Smaller casualties at neighboring Wisconsin villages bring the total of killed and wounded to nearly 500. These figures may vary slightly one way or the other as the wreckage heaps once known as New Richmond and Herman are cleared away and all the bodies recovered. These cyclones are not the worst on record, but that in Wisconsin has rarely been surpassed in fury and murderous results. The loss of that unfortunate community cannot be recovered from in a generation. The calamity to the smaller Nebraska village is almost equally serious. There was a curious and fatal similarity in the action of the two storms. They came at the same minute of the afternoon, though on succeeding days, and that in New Richmond left the Catholic and Baptist churches standing, while that in Herman left the Methodist church and the schoolhouse. In both cases the main part of the town was an indistinguishable wreck, with human victims crushed and dead beneath the debris. The cyclone is as terrible as it is mysterious in its goings and comings.—Chicago Tribune, June 15, 1899.

COMMENCEMENTS.

Commencements have begun and the colleges and high schools of the country are on the point of holding their memorable annual festivals. While the term "commencement" as an academic phrase is of English origin, where, as in Cambridge, one is said to "commence to be" a master of arts, a bachelor of arts, or a doctor of laws, it has been mainly in use in this country, and it is in America that college commencement occasions have been so conspicuous a feature of our higher educational life. And it is a praiseworthy phase of the American character, which, at the close of each academic year, is brought to light by these public commencement demonstrations.

Throughout the country at some time during the month of June commencement days have been great events in the life of the more aspiring classes of the American people. Which have been more influenced by them, parents or their children, it would not be easy to say. In no other country of the world is there so firm a popular enthusiasm for education as here. Rich and poor, home born and foreign born, are alike affected by it. The true American democracy is in evidence on these occasions and at its finest and best. It is the smallest-hearted and surliest of taxpayers who on a commencement day can begrudge what the schools have cost. When, for instance, at Berea College, 3,000 saddle horses are hitched about the campus, it shows what college commencement means to the whole mountain people of that part of Kentucky, and what beginnings of new ideals of life are being wakened into purpose and power.

The number of colleges and universities for both sexes in the United States is 485, with about 160,000 students and 12,000 professors and instructors. The number of enrolled pupils in the public schools is 21,000,000. How many of these will "commence" to be bachelor of arts and graduate into some of the higher departments of intellectual culture and enterprise no one can say; but it is certain to be a much larger number than it would be if it were not for the influences—direct and indirect—of these delightful and expectant commencement occasions.—Chicago Tribune, June 12, 1899.

WILL OPEN ON TIME.

It is very likely that the period has been reached where there are no longer any doubts entertained that there is to be a Greater America Exposition. Even those with whom the wish was father to the thought can hardly longer give utterance to their doleful misgivings. They are not only convinced that there is going to be an Exposition this year at Omaha, but that it is going to open July 1, on time to the hour and minute, and are forced to acknowledge that it is being prepared and built on a scale of magnificence that has won confidence for the project in spite of the widely concerted opposition. It is gratifying to note that the opposition has practically vanished. The railways, upon which much of the success of the enterprise depended, have silenced the prediction that they would prove unfriendly and have shown their favor for the enterprise by granting a much better rate for the opening events than was secured during the early stages of the Trans-Mississippi. Even the Omaha jobbers, realizing the uselessness of further opposition, have recognized that the Exposition is destined to be an overwhelming success and have concluded to render it every assistance.

GRACELAND COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

The annual commencement exercises, the second in the history of Graceland, and incident to the close of the college year, were held at Lamoni, Iowa, in the saints' church, beginning on Friday evening June 9, and closing with the session of Wednesday morning, the 14th inst.; though the Lamoni High School commencement of Thursday, the 8th, was so closely in touch with the college exercises that the sessions seemed as one, from the 8th to the 14th, as the interests of both schools are one; the former preparing for and making possible the higher education of college work.

The exercises were opened by a rendition of program prepared by the Athenian Literary Society, composed of college students. The colors of the society, Nile green, were tastefully arranged with the general decorations and floral accompaniments, and the stage or platform presented a handsome, attractive appearance. After a suitable invocation followed by a piano and a vocal solo, Mr. V. R. McGinnis, an attorney, of Leon, Iowa, the county seat, delivered an appropriate and interesting address. The speaker dwelt largely upon the cultivation of qualities essential to the makeup of high character in men and women and urged the cultivation of the good and the true with the intellectual with a view to usefulness in life. The address was timely and was well received.

A feature of the evening's exercises was the presentation of the diplomas to the graduating members of the society, by Sr. Ella F. Rich, of the college faculty. Her address was excellent and was well delivered. It was followed by remarks in the form of personal admonition and encouragement directed to each of the students. The Athenian graduates were also graduates of some other department of the college. They were H. C. Nicholson, W. B. Kelley, E. L. Kelley, Jr., W. D. Gillen, Mark Smith, Nellie M. Anderson, Lena Lambert, Birdie Graham, Cloe Hawley.

The exercises of the School of Elocution and Oratory were in charge of Sr. Ruth L. Smith, of the college faculty, instructor in that department of college work. New colors—lemon and pale blue, the chosen school colors—adorned the newly arranged redecorated platform, giving variety and new combinations that pleased the eye and gratified the sense of those who appreciated the beautiful. "All true work is sacred," was the motto selected by the school, and its flower, in keeping with purity of its sentiment, the white rose. Piano duets and vocal solos by local talent introduced and were interspersed in the program proper, which consisted of recitations, in ordinary and in special costumes, a duologue, a monologue, pantomimes including attitudes, emotions, and Indian club drill.

The results of the two-years' course of training were apparent in the demeanor of the pupils, in voice, gesture, attitude, and rendering of selections. Diplomas were presented to the outgoing graduates, by President E. R. Dewsnup, of the college, who delivered an eloquent address upon the subject of elocution and oratory, in which he pictured its place and usefulness in the work and culture of men and women past and present. The speaker's plea was for a sensible and sound development of those lines of culture and a consecration and use of them to just and true purposes, as all powers and gifts should be used. The benediction closed the exercises of the evening.

With the exception of the Sunday afternoon social service of prayer and testimony—the saints' meeting—the Sunday morning and evening exercises were largely collegiate in tone and flavor, though not lacking in the religious spirit. Bishop Kelley delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduates, assisted by Pres. E. R. Dewsnup and William Anderson, the latter Treasurer of the Board of Trustees. Members of the Boards of Directors and Trustees, and of the faculty, occupied seats adjacent to the platform, with the graduates immediately in front of the audience.

The theme of the speaker was "The True Light," in which he depicted the superiority and manifest divinity of the Christ, in contrast to the lights of the heathen or semi-heathen world, demonstrating that the Christ is the true light of the race entire and worthy of the exalted station in which he is recognized by Christianity. The speaker also referred briefly to the errors of the higher critics and the lack of harmony among geologists in their claims concerning the time of man's appearance upon the earth. The effort was listened to with attention and interest by a large audience that filled both the auditorium and the gallery.

The evening sermon as announced was a farewell address by President E. R. Dewsnup, incident to the departure of himself and wife for Manchester, England, their home.

The effort was a plea for toleration in matters involving general and personal conclusions affecting attitudes assumed toward questions and persons. The speaker expressed the pleasure of himself and wife with their reception by friends in Lamoni and elsewhere, and voiced their kindly sentiments toward the friends made in this country. At the speaker's request the audience sang the hymn "America." At the close of the service many availed themselves of the opportunity to bid Bro. Dewsnup and wife good-bye and to wish them a safe voyage, etc., etc.

Monday evening's exercises were occupied by the program provided by the School of Music, in charge of Bro. A. H. Mills, Instructor in Instrumental Music. The instrumental and vocal numbers were rendered by pupils of the school. Two recitations by pupils of the School of Elocution added variety to the exercises. Professor Mills has taught many pupils in Lamoni and the results of his work were apparent in the renditions of his pupils. The audience was instructed and pleased by the attainments of the pupils. The taste for good music has been considerably cultivated and extended in this vicinity, through the work of the college's music department. Sr. Viola Blair, former Instructor of Vocal Music in Graceland, was present during the entire commencement exercises and rendered a number of vocal solos, thus contributing to the musical features of the programs. Her pupils are also to be included in the list of those who manifest the fruits of cultivation in vocal music.

The Commercial Department of Graceland, which includes the School of Business and Shorthand, followed on Tuesday evening with its portion of the general program. "Swifter than we look," the class motto, appeared in newly arranged decorations of the class colors: Business, lavender; Shorthand, white; prettily arranged by the decorators. A piano solo, "Graceland March," was rendered by Mr. I. W. Allender, of Lamoni, one of the College Board of Directors. The invocation by Bro. G. H. Hilliard, member of the College Boards, was followed by a quartet, "Iowa, beautiful land," rendered by Brn. B. M. Anderson and F. E. Cochran, and Sr. Audentia Anderson and Miss Myne, daughter of P. P. Kelley, Esq., deceased. The leading number of the exercises was an address by Judge H. M. Towner, of Corning, Iowa. His subject was "Lincoln," whom he presented as a development of the highest manhood of the people and the savior of his country, from among the lowliest walks and opportunities of pioneer life. At the close of his formal address Judge Towner followed it with an extemporaneous address to his audience, in which he exhorted all to diligence in personal improvement of time and opportunity. He advised against idle habits, perverse gossip and vanity, and urged preparation for the important responsibilities of men and women to life. His timely remarks were received with evident favor.

A piano solo by Mrs. W. E. Myers, a former resident of Lamoni, was followed by the formal presentation of the diplomas by a member of the Board of Directors, in which the speaker pointed out the personal advantages and opportunities of the trained accountant or amanuensis, his confidential relations with and usefulness to his employers, his opportunities of rising, and the field of usefulness for good in the business world. The necessity of probity, integrity, and temperateness, were pointed out as necessary adjuncts to success, reliable service, and the fostering of sound business policies; also the importance of men of sound judgment in the lead and in the service of the business world.

The graduates were, Miss Birdie Graham of the Business Department, Messrs. Virgil Scott, Mark Smith, Walter Bullard, and E. L. Kelley, Jr., of the School of Shorthand and Type-writing.

The commencement exercises closed with the formal graduating exercises of the collegiate department proper, on Wednesday, the 14th, at ten o'clock a. m. Again had the platform been redecorated by Elder Frank Criley, formerly a professional decorator, to whose able and laborious efforts all who witnessed the pleasing varieties of his tasteful arrangements are indebted. Cardinal was the color chosen by the graduates and was in evidence throughout.

A piano solo by Prof. A. H. Mills, an invocation by Elder G. H. Hilliard, followed by a vocal solo by Sr. Viola Blair, introduced the final exercises, the orations of the graduates: They were Wilber D. Gillen and Winfred B. Kelley, of the Classical department, and Miss Nellie M. Anderson and Mr. Harry C. Nicholson, of the Scientific.

Bro. Gillen's oration, "Forty centuries look down upon us," was an eloquent cursory review of the rise, progress, and fall of each succeeding age of the historical period. It closed with a brief statement of the rise and progress of Anglo-Saxon civilization, and expressed hope for the development and emancipation of man universal.

Bro. Kelley's oration, "The Classics," was a review of Latin and Greek civilization and what a study of their language and literature implied. The advantages of language study were pointed out in the accurate mental drill and trained powers of concentration and thought, resulting in accurate, prompt formation of judgment and power of expression. A knowledge of the originals was superior to English translations of the classics, from obvious reasons. Perceptive and reflective faculties were harmoniously developed by such study.

Bro. Nicholson's subject was "The Wandering Jew." God's providence in providing for the spiritual development of the race was sketched in the call of Abraham, the Chaldean, and the selection of his race as the chosen people. Their transgressions and leading vicissitudes and the dealings of God with them were sketched, and the moral and ethical excellence and lofty spiritual ideals of the Jewish Scriptures presented in suitable comment. The position of the Jew as an outcast, a pariah and upon the other hand as the king of finance were also outlined, and a plea made for recognition of his worth upon the common equality of merit and as brother man. The future gave promise of such recognition with the passing of Jewish exclusiveness and long-existing Christian hatred and prejudice. The Jew, with the race, would share in the reign of liberty and right to be ushered in by the returning Jew and world-Redeemer, the Christ.

Sr. Anderson's oration was entitled, "No one lives for self alone," a womanly text and well developed. Life was not made up alone of the more prominent features upon the stage of action, but running through all its minor and major activities were opportunities of doing good. Not by its years but by its deeds, was the true rule by which to measure its accomplishments. Love to God is shown in sympathy and help rendered to his creatures. The life of Miss Clara Barton, the ministering angel of the battlefield, was briefly sketched, in evidence of an exalted career based upon the spirit of the subject.

Sr. Alta Mather, a member of the Lamoni branch choir, then rendered a vocal number entitled, "Meditation," following which Pres. E. R. Dewsnup delivered an excellent valedictory. He formally certified that the graduates were duly entitled to receive the degrees conferred by the Board of Directors for having completed the four years' course—the classical to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, the scientific to that of Bachelor of Sciences.

Dr. J. H. Hansen, of the Directors then formally addressed the students and conferred the degrees in the presentation of the diplomas. In substance the speaker traced the beginnings of education in the development of the earliest civilization in Egypt, its various and particular phases in the various historic periods, down to the rich accumulations of our own times, which broadened the scope of learning represented in our modern system. Education never ceased in the life of the individual but was progressive and cumulative. The graduates were indebted to the sacrifices and anxieties of parents especially, and the labors of others, for their opportunities to acquire the development called their education. He charged them to repeat the example of those who had made sacrifice that they too might benefit the world.

A cornet solo, by Mr. J. J. Black, a citizen of Lamoni, was received with pleasure by the audience. We omitted due credit to Mr. Black, whose several efforts on cornet and violin contributed no little to the series of programs.

Following the order above Pres. E. R. Dewsnup again addressed the assembly, at the suggestion of Bishop E. L. Kelley, chairman of the meeting and President of the Board of Trustees. He referred to the difficulties met and surmounted by the faculty. The relations of students and faculty were those of nearness and friendship and would ever remain those based upon true friendship. Though separated by the various circumstances controlling, the interest of all in one another and in the work of the college would ever continue. He believed the graduates would exercise such influence in the world as to reflect credit upon their alma mater. Professor Dewsnup also addressed the general audience much in the line of his Sunday evening's farewell incident to his departure.

In response to a statement by the chairman President Dewsnup stated that he had concluded to defer final action on his resignation as President of Graceland College until his return to England; that there was a possibility of his returning to the college as its President. The benediction was then pronounced by Elder R. S. Salyards and the year's commencement exercises were brought to a close.

The proceedings throughout were characterized by manifest attention and interest upon the part of the large audiences present. Citizens of Lamoni and the surrounding neighborhoods, besides saints from various branches of adjoining States were present in evidence of the widespread interest. It is hoped and believed that the exercises would diffuse the educational spirit among the people, and result in a more general interest in progressive development according to correct spiritual, moral, and intellectual standards.

The Boards of Directors and Trustees held several separate sessions and one joint session during the commencement week, according to the regulations of the College Articles and By-laws.

The substance of the business transacted by the Board of Directors is as follows:—

President E. R. Dewsnup was retained as President and one of the resident professors of Graceland College for the coming year, with permission to go abroad.

Miss Eleanore Hatch, of Iowa City, Iowa, was retained as Professor of Ancient and Modern Languages.

Mr. Frederick M. Smith was selected as Instructor in Physics and Mathematics.

J. A. Gunsolley, Principal of Commercial Department for the past several years, was retained. He will take up additional course of special preparation with a view to keeping the commercial work of Graceland up to the progress of the times. He expects to attend one of the leading commercial colleges in the United States and to visit others, during the summer.

Miss Ella F. Rich, of Boston, Instructor in Shorthand and Typewriting was retained.

Mrs. Ruth Lyman Smith was retained as Instructor in Elocution and Physical Culture.

Prof. A. H. Mills was continued in charge of the Department of Instrumental Music.

Mrs. Viola Blair was reëngaged as Instructor in Vocal Music.

J. A. Gunsolley was also continued as Librarian.

Provision was also made for the sending out of solicitors in behalf of Graceland.

A new catalogue will soon be issued from the press. It now is in the printer's hands and will be mailed at an early date.

Those desiring copies should address Graceland College or the Secretary of the college, at Lamoni, Iowa.

Catalogues sent on application.

The college being erected by action of General Conference, we have given a fairly full outline for the benefit of the HERALD readers.

THE EDITOR AT DENVER, COLORADO.

Of course, all HERALD readers are interested in the work everywhere; and to be found earnestly engaged in the good cause is to be contented.

The Editor reached Denver, Colorado, the "Queen City of the West," June 8, and found at the Union Station Brn. E. F. Shupe, J. W. Gilbert, of the Denver force, and Bro. J. W. Peterson, wife and father and mother. Bro. J. W. and his wife were on their way to the "Islands of the Sea," pursuant to appointment. They had intended to stay in Denver over Sunday, the 11th, but, securing better rates of travel by excursion on limited tickets, the little party of four did not tarry by the way, but went on their way the evening the Editor arrived.

By arrangement the Editor was made the guest of Mr. Frank I. Lewis and his genial wife, Sister Blanche, who is the daughter of Bro. Joseph and Sr. L. A. Schmutz, formerly of Kansas City, Missouri. Sr. Lewis is one of several daughters, and has been a resident of Denver for almost two decades. Her home, with those of her sisters, Srs. Charles E. Everett and J. W. Gilbert, are pleasantly located on one of the avenues for which Denver, like the national capital city, is noted, opposite and south of the Episcopal St. Luke's Hospital. The stay of the Editor with the faithful people was made pleasant by their unflinching courtesy and Christian kindness.

Arriving before the date of appointment, opportunity was afforded for a day's rest and getting into rapport with the surroundings, which was appreciated.

The meetings in Denver began at 10:30 Saturday morning, June 10, and were opened by the veteran, Elder James W. Gillen, whose topic, the gospel and its restoration, was well presented and strongly sustained by proofs "strong as holy writ."

In the evening the Editor undertook to tell the audience what the gospel was, under the advertised heads, "The Gospel—What is it?" A fair audience filled the little church, corner of Twenty-second Avenue and Arapahoe Street, a convenient and easily reached locality.

Among those attending were Elders Ensign, Wooley, and four or five others of the Utah Church missionary force, Elder Ensign, as a counselor of Apostle Taylor being in charge. He is an excellent singer and we were pleased to see and hear him take part in the song service. It gave the Editor some pleasure to meet these gentlemen and make an acquaintance with them, notwithstanding the difference of opinion existing between us.

On Sunday the advertised theme, "The Marriage Relation—Is it Monogamous?" brought out a good audience, whose attention was unrelaxed during the sermon. It is not needful to repeat the things said, as it was but an affirmation of the stand taken by the Reorganized Church upon the subject as derived from the revelations of God to the church in Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. Both the leading papers of Denver, the Republican and News, contained a digest of the discourse; the News in due western fairness putting the sermons of the Editor and Elder Wooley, of Utah, in side by side in the upper left corner of the page.

The afternoon service was devoted to the prayer, testimony, sacrament, blessing of children, and administering to the sick phases of the faith and practice of the church.

This session was a specially good one, and comfort and encouragement came to all.

None of the elders from Utah were in attendance at the morning service to hear the discussion of the marriage subject, although the Editor gave Elder Ensign and his fellow laborers a direct and special invitation to be present. It is possible one may have been, to take notes—can't say.

The evening service was occupied by the Editor on the topic: "Is there a Church of Christ?"

The attendance at these meetings was fair under the conditions, but only fair; the attention all that could be asked, both of the saints and of those outside.

Bro. John B. Roush arrived late Saturday night, the train having been delayed; so upon consultation, it was decided to continue the meeting during the week until Thursday. Bro. Roush occupied on Monday evening, the Editor Tuesday and Wednesday; congregations small, but attentive.

The saints in Denver are widely scattered in various parts of the city, some of them miles apart. They are a band of bright, persistent people, strongly bent on keeping the work going. More in our next.

JOSEPH SMITH, Editor.

DENVER, Colorado, June 15, 1899.

FINDS PREHISTORIC CAVE.

St. Paul, Minn., June 15.—Jose Herannda, a Mexican sheep herder in the employ of McLeod Bros., while rounding up horses in the Sweetgrass Hills, twenty miles north of Columbus, Montana, discovered a large cave, the opening of which had been concealed by heavy underbrush.

The cave, seventy feet in length, thirty-five in width, and ten in height, had been cut partly out of solid rock.

In the center, lying side by side, were the well preserved skeletons of five human beings. These skeletons measure from seven to seven and a half feet in length.

Three knife blades, evidently made of hardened copper, two bowls hollowed out of granite blocks, two stone hammer heads, and some broken fragments of pottery were also found in the cave.

The foregoing from the Chicago Tribune, of June 16, may prove useful to some of our specialists in American archæology.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH AT DENVER.

President Joseph Smith has been meeting with a friendly reception in the city of Denver, Colorado, judging from the tone of the public press in announcing his efforts. The Rocky Mountain News of Friday, June 9, has the following double-column announcement of his arrival, printed in large heading type and placed conspicuously on the first page:—

JOSEPH SMITH HEAD OF THE LATTER DAY SAINTS.

Joseph Smith, the acknowledged head of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, a strong opponent to the doctrine and practices of polygamy, arrived in this city last evening and is stopping at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gilbert, 520 Nineteenth Avenue. He will spend but a month in this State, his purpose being to visit the mission of Colorado and infuse new life into it, should it be found lacking the necessary spirit.

He is the son of Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet, who was born in Sharon, Vermont, in 1805, and who, with his brother Hiram were assassinated in 1844. The son held aloof from the religion until he reached his twenty-fourth year, when he put himself at the head of the "reorganized" branch. He resides at Lamoni, Iowa.

The Denver Republican, June 10, inserts the following:—

SMITH WILL ATTACK POLYGAMY.

PRESIDENT OF THE REORGANIZED MORMON CHURCH WILL PREACH TO-NIGHT.

President Joseph Smith of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which vigorously opposes polygamy, has come to Denver from Lamoni, Iowa, headquarters of the church, to preach against polygamy and arouse local interest.

He will speak at the church at the corner of Twenty-second and Arapahoe streets to-night, on "The Gospel; What is it?" Sunday morning on "The Marriage Relation; Is It Polygamy?" Sunday night's subject will be "Is There a Church of Christ?"

A later issue of the News gives a lengthy account of President Smith's sermon on the marriage question.

All this is good and timely and ought to help the elders and the work, as it serves to widely disseminate a better understanding of the respective attitudes of the two churches. The Denver press has wide circulation in the West, hence the good to be anticipated from its comments.

President Smith's efforts, as advertised, are in affirmation of truth on the marriage question, in negation of the perversion of marriage as taught in Utah, and in affirmation of the general "principles of the doctrine of Christ." His good work East and West will prove helpful to the cause everywhere.

If any of the readers of the HERALD would like a collection of shells and other ocean curios, here is a chance:—

BEAUTIFUL SEASHELLS.

Everyone admires them. Since coming south I have received numerous inquiries from northern people for seashells, and now I am prepared to answer yes. I can send you shells, for I have made quite a collection of lovely shells, both from our own coast, the coral reefs, and some beautiful ones from the West India Islands. I will mail a dozen or more different kinds, no two alike, to anyone who sends a stamp for postage.

MRS. F. A. WARNER.

JACKSONVILLE, Florida.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. C. E. Miller, presiding elder of the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, branch, writes that he had "a three sessions debate" with a Utah elder on Sunday, the 4th inst. His opponent floundered helplessly, while he enjoyed light and liberty. He has been confirmed in the faith of the Reorganized Church by this experience.

The HERALD is indebted to Sr. Pauline Higgins, Salt Lake City, for a "Souvenir of Utah and Utah Interests," to which is added a "Sketch of Utah and Mormonism," by O. F. Whitney. From the sketch we quote as follows: "As early as 1862 Congress had legislated upon the subject of polygamy, the plural marriage system of the saints, practiced by Joseph Smith and other Mormon leaders at Nauvoo, but never publicly promulgated by the church until 1852. Never at any time did more than two per cent of the Mormon people practice plural marriage, though all or most of them believed the principle to be divine. . . . To the saints it was a key to the celestial kingdom—the highest degree of heavenly glory," etc. According to this statement, but two per cent of the Mormon people availed themselves of the "key to the celestial kingdom—the highest degree of heavenly glory." There was, in fact, to the masses of the people something repugnant in the doctrine; even the great mass of the Mormon people couldn't go polygamy and preferred to risk a lower state of being rather than take up the odious principle in practice. Nature is often prescient and unerring in her judgment. She was right in the instances named. It is not necessary here to refute the statement that Joseph Smith practiced polygamy.

Something of the spirit of the times may be gained from an item published in connection with the late pugilistic encounter in which one Jeffries, the son of a Los Angeles clergyman, defeated Robert Fitzsimmons, the former pugilistic champion. The press account had this item: "Jeffries had the good wishes of his clergyman father out at Los Angeles, California. This wire was placed in his hands as he reached the ring: 'Jim: We know you will win. Keep good spirits. Be confident of our blessing.'" All such attitudes of clergymen are having their due effect upon the people, and the trend is rapid toward the sensational and popular drift for pleasures, questionable such may be. The Rev. Jeffries is evidently a "liberal" minister, of a new stripe of liberality, so called.

Bro. D. W. Wight writes in this HERALD, some of the particulars concerning the late sickness and death of Bro. R. J. Anthony. He mentions, among other items, the kindness of Bishop Jensen, of the Utah Church, at Elsinore, Utah, and which the HERALD also acknowledges, with gratitude. It is comforting to read of the Spirit's presence in administration during Bro. Anthony's illness, as stated by Bro. Wight. It is in evidence of God's recognition and nearness to the faithful soldier, at his post of duty and whose life has been given to the Redeemer's cause. We note that several Utah papers make friendly mention of the illness and death of Bro. Anthony.

Bro. J. C. Hitchcock, writing from St. Louis, Missouri, June 17, says: "Bro. Arthur P. Burgess, son of Bro. S. R. Burgess, graduated from the St. Louis High School last evening with a brilliant record. There were one hundred thirteen in the graduating class, fifty-three of which were young men. Five of the young men out of the fifty-three were to be chosen by the faculty to deliver orations at the commencement last night at Music Hall. We are pleased to say that Bro. Arthur had made such a record as entitled him to be chosen one of the five. Between four and five thousand were present at the commencement, and he acquitted himself with credit to all concerned. You will please pardon us for being just a little proud of our St. Louis boy. His subject was, 'The Shekinah of Liberty.'"

Bro. Criley, Business Manager of the Herald Office, requests that attention be called to the common practice of sending money in unregistered letters. A number of Herald Office patrons have lost sums of money by remitting in that manner. The office does not hold itself responsible for money sent otherwise than by money order, draft, express, or registered letter. The mail robber is not yet dead, hence it is necessary to guard against him. Considerable complaint arises from such repeated losses, against which we cannot protect our patrons; they must protect themselves.

ROMAN CATHOLIC DENUNCIATIONS.
NO. I.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

HERETICS TO BE KILLED.

A man who has been excommunicated by the Pope may be killed anywhere, as Escobar and Deaux teach, because the Pope has an indirect jurisdiction over the whole world, even in temporal things, as all the Catholics maintain, and as Suarez proves against the King of England.—Busembaum—Lacroi, Theologica Moralis, 1757.

The Catholic historian of the Jesuits, Cratineau Joly, in his vol. 2, p. 435, approvingly says:—

Father Guivard, writing about Henry IV., King of France, says: "If he cannot be deposed, let us make war, and if we cannot make war, let him be killed."

Dens, of Roman Catholic theological fame, puts to himself the question:—

Are heretics justly punished with death? And answers:—St. Thomas says: "Yes! 22, question 2, art. 3. Because forgers of money, or other disturbers of the state, are justly punished with death; therefore, all heretics who are forgers of faith, and, as experience testifies, grievously disturb the state."

This is confirmed, because God, in the Old Testament, ordered the false prophets to be slain; and in Deuteronomy it is decreed that if anyone will act proudly, and will not obey the commands of the priests, let him be put to death.

The same is proved from the condemnation of the fourteenth article of John Huss, in the Council of Constance.—Dens, p. 88, Tome II., Dublin, 1834.

It is of faith that the Pope has the right of deposing heretical and rebel kings. Monarchs, so deposed by the Pope, are converted into notorious tyrants, and may be killed by the first who can reach them.

If the public cause cannot meet with its defense in the death of a tyrant, it is lawful for the first who arrives to assassinate him.—Suarez, Defencio Tidei; Book VI., chap. 4, Nos. 13, 14.

Lord Acton, a Roman Catholic peer of England, reproaching her anti-social laws to his own church, wrote:—

Pope Gregory VII. decided it was no murder to kill excommunicated persons. This rule was incorporated in the canon law. During the revision of the code, which took place in the sixteenth century, and which produced a whole volume of corrections, the passage was allowed to stand. It appears in every reprint of the Corpus Turis. It has been for seven hundred years, and continues to be, part of the ecclesiastical law. Far from being a dead letter, it obtained a new application in the days of the Inquisition, and one of the later Popes has declared that the murder of a Protestant is so good a deed that it atones, and more than atones for the murder of a Catholic.—London Times, July 20, 1872.

NEGROES.

The Roman Catholic Chief Justice Tany, in his Dred-Scott decision, said:—

Negroes have no rights which the white man is bound to respect.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The Catholic Columbian, edited by the Right Rev. Bishop of Columbus, Ohio, says:—

Secular [government] schools are unfit for Catholic children. Catholic parents cannot be allowed the sacraments who choose to send their children to them, when they could make use of the Catholic schools.

Father Hecker, referring to the future of the Catholics in the United States, says:—

Education must be controlled by Catholic authorities, and under education the opinions of the individual and the utterances of the priest are included, and many opinions are to be forbidden by the secular arm, under the authority of the church even to war and bloodshed.—Catholic World, July, 1870.

The Western Tablet, official paper of Bishop of Chicago, says:—

If your son or daughter is attending a state school you are violating your duty as a Catholic parent, and conducting to the everlasting anguish and despair of your child. Take him away. Take him away; if you do not wish your deathbed to be tormented with the specter of a soul which God has given you as a sacred trust, surrendered to the great enemy of mankind. Take him away, rather than incur the wrath of his God, and the loss of his soul.

It will be a glorious day for the Catholics in this country when, under the blows of justice and morality, our school system will be shivered to pieces.—Catholic Telegraph, Cincinnati.

The Vicar General of Boston, in a public lecture, March 12, 1879, said:—

The attitude of the Catholic Church toward the public schools of this country, as far as we can determine from papal documents, the decrees of the Council of Baltimore, and the pastorals of the several bishops, is one of non-approval of the system itself, of censure of the manner of conducting them that prevails in most places, and of solemn admonition to pastors and parents to guard against the dangers to faith and morals arising from frequenting them.

Papal Encyclical XLV.:—

The Romish Church has a right to interfere in the discipline of the public schools, and in the arrangement of the studies of the public schools, and in the choice of the teachers for these schools.

Papal Encyclical XLVII.:—

Public schools open to all children for the education of the young should be under the control of the Romish Church, and should not be subject to the civil power, nor made to conform to the opinions of the age.

Let the public school system go to where it came from—the Devil.—Freeman's Journal.

READING THE BIBLE.

No Bible shall be held or read except by priests. No Bible shall be sold without a license, except upon the pains and penalties of that mortal sin that is neither to be forgiven in this world or the next.—Council of Trent.

Moreover we confirm and renew the decrees recited above, delivered in former times by apostolic authority, against the publication, distribution, reading, and possession of books of the Holy Scriptures translated into the vulgar tongue.—Pope Gregory XVI.

LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE, ETC.

Pope Pius IX., Encyclical Letter of August 15, 1854, says:—

The absurd and erroneous doctrines or ravings in defense of liberty of conscience are a most pestilential error—a pest, of all others, most to be dreaded in a state.

In an Encyclical Letter of August 15, 1854, Pope Pius anathematized

"Those who assert the liberty of conscience and of religious worship."

If the Pope should err by enjoining vices or forbidding virtues, the church would be obliged to believe vices to be good, and virtues bad, unless it would sin against conscience.—Cardinal Bellarmine.

Archbishop Manning puts the following words in the mouth of the Pope:—

I acknowledge no civil power; I am the subject of no prince; and I claim more than this. I claim to be the supreme judge and director of the consciences of men. Of the peasants that till the fields, and of the prince that sits upon the throne; of the household that lives in the shade of privacy, and the legislator that makes laws for kingdoms. I am sole, last, supreme judge of what is right and wrong. Moreover, we declare, affirm, define, and pronounce it to be necessary to salvation to every human creature to be subject to the Roman Pontiff!"—Tablet, October 9, 1864.

Pope Gregory XVI., in an Encyclical Letter, August 15, 1832, said:—

If the Holy Church so requires, let us sacrifice our own opinions, our knowledge, our intelligence, the splendid dreams of our imagination and the sublime attainments of human understanding.

Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuits, in Spiritual Exercises, said:—

As for holy obedience, this virtue must be perfect in every point,—in execution, in will, in intellect,—doing which is enjoined with all celerity, spiritual joy, and perseverance; persuading ourselves that everything is just, suppressing every repugnant thought and judgment of one's own, in a certain obedience, should be moved and directed under divine providence, by his superior, just as if he were a corpse which allows itself to be moved and led in every direction.

That we may, in all things, attain the truth. That we may not err in anything, we ought ever to hold, as a fixed principle, that what I see to be white, I believe to be black, if the superior authorities of the church define it to be so.

GALILEO, AND THE EARTH'S MOTION.

Decree of Pope Urbain XIII., signed by Cardinals Telia, Guido, Desiderio, Antonio, Belligero, Fabricius.

In the name and by the authority of Jesus Christ, the plenitude of which resides in his vicar, the Pope, we declare that the teaching that the earth is not the center of the world, and that it moves with a diurnal motion, is absurd, philosophically false, and erroneous in faith.

In consequence of that decree, Galileo, in order to escape death, was obliged to fall on his knees and submit his signature to the following declaration on June 22, 1663:—

I abjure, curse, and detest the error and heresy of the motion of the earth around the sun.

In obedience to the same decree, two learned Jesuit astronomers, Lesueur and Jacquier, in Rome, during the present century, made the following declaration:—

Newton assumes, in his third book, the hypothesis of the earth moving around the sun. The proposition of that author could not be explained, except through the same hypothesis; we have, therefore, been forced to act a character not our own. But we declare our entire submission to the decrees of the supreme Pontiff of Rome against the motion of the earth.—Newton's Principia, by Fathers Lesueur and Jacquier, vol. 3, p. 450.

PERJURY, DECEPTION, AND FALSEHOOD.

Liguori, in his treatise on oaths, says:—

A culprit, or a witness, questioned by a judge, but in an illegal manner, may swear that he knows nothing of the crime about which he is questioned, though he knows it well; mentally meaning that he knows nothing in such a manner as to answer.

Again:—

He may swear that he knows nothing, when he knows that the person who committed the crime committed it without malice (as affir. Salm. to c. 2, No. 259, and Elb., No. 145); or again, if he knows the crime, but secretly, and that there has been no scandal (as we are assured by Card., No. 51). When a crime is well concealed, the witness, and even the criminal, may and even must swear that the crime has not been committed. The guilty party may yet do likewise, when a half proof cannot be brought against him.

Liguori asks himself (Quest. 2):—

If an accused, legally interrogated by a judge, may deny his crime under oath, when the confession of the crime might cause his condemnation, and be disadvantageous to him? and he answers: It is altogether probable that when the accused fears a sentence of death, or of being sent to prison, or exiled, he may deny his crime under oath, understanding that he has not committed this crime in such a manner as to be obliged to confess it.

He who has sworn to keep a secret is not obliged to keep his oath, if any consequential injury to him or to others is thereby caused.

If anyone has sworn before a judge to keep the truth, he is not obliged to say secret things. (Less, Bonar, Trall, etc.)

Liguori asks whether a woman, accused of the crime of adultery, which she has really committed, may deny it under oath? He answers:—

Yes; provided she has been to confess, and received the absolution; for then the sin has been pardoned, and has really ceased to exist.

As for an oath made for a good and legitimate object, it seems that there should be no power capable of annulling it. However, when it is for the good of the public, a matter which comes under the immediate jurisdiction of the Pope, who has the supreme power over the church, the Pope has full power to release from that oath.—St. Thomas, Quest. 89, art. 9, vol. 4.

ROBBERY, FORNICATION, AND STEALING.

Liguori says:—

There are many opinions about the amount which may be stolen to constitute a mortal sin. Navar has said, too scrupulously, that to steal a half piece of gold is a mortal sin; while others, too lax, hold that to steal less than ten pieces of gold cannot be a serious sin. But Tol, Mech, Less, etc., have more wisely ruled that to steal two pieces of gold constitutes a mortal sin.

Is it a crime to steal a small piece of a relic? There is no doubt its being a sin in the district of Rome, since Clement VII. and Paul V. have excommunicated those who committed such thefts. But this theft is not a serious thing when committed outside the district of Rome, unless it be a very rare and precious relic, as the wood of the holy cross, or some of the hair of the virgin Mary!

Dubium 3, Liguori:—

If anyone steals small sums at different times, either from the same or from different persons, not having the intention of stealing large sums, nor of causing great damage, his sin is not mortal; particularly if the thief is poor, and if he has the intention to give back what he has stolen.

Question 2, N. 536:—

If several persons steal from the same master, in small quantities, each in such a manner as not to commit a mortal sin, though each one knows that all these little thefts together cause a considerable damage to their master; yet no one of them commits a mortal sin, even when they steal at the same time.

Liguori, speaking of children who steal from their parents, says:—

Salas, cited by Croix, maintains that a son does not commit a mortal sin when he steals only twenty or thirty pieces of gold from a father who has an income of one hundred and fifty pieces of gold; and Lugo approves of that doctrine. Less and other theologians say that it is not a mortal sin for a child to steal two or three pieces of gold from a rich father; Baunex maintains that to commit a mortal sin a child must steal not less than fifty pieces of gold from a rich father; but Lacroix rejects that doctrine, except the father is a prince.

Liguori says:—

It is right to advise anyone to commit a robbery or a fornication in order to avoid a murder.

Questions 3 and 2, Liguori:—

May a servant open the door for a prostitute? Croix denies it, but Liguori affirms it. May a servant bring a ladder and help his master to go up and commit adultery? Buss and others think that he may do it, and I am of the same opinion.

EATING VOMIT.

In one of the most sacred books of the laws and regulations of the Church of Rome, we read:—

If the priest after the communion vomit, and that in the vomited matter the consecrated bread appears, let him swallow what he has vomited. But if he feels too much repugnance to swallow it, let him separate the body of Christ [the consecrated bread], from the vomited matter, till it be entirely corrupted, and then throw it into the sacarium.

UNITED STATES AIMED AT.

The man to-day is living who will see a majority of the people of the American continent Roman Catholics.—Boston Pilot.

There is ere long to be a state religion in this country, and that state religion is to be Roman Catholic.—Father Hecker, 1870.

Effectual plans are in operation to give us the complete majority over protestantism.—A former Bishop of Cincinnati.

Within thirty years the Protestant heresy will come to an end.—Bishop of Charleston.

The Catholic Church numbers one third the American population; and if its membership shall increase, for the next thirty years, as it has the thirty years past, in 1900, Rome will have a majority, and be bound to take this country and keep it.—Father Hecker, Catholic World, July, 1870.

Undoubtedly it is the intention of the Pope to possess this country. In this intention he is aided by the Jesuits, and all the Catholic prelates and priests.—Brownson's Review, May, 1864.

HOW TO TREAT HERETICS.

Though heretics must not be tolerated because they deserve it, we must bear with them, till, by a second admonition, they may be brought back to the faith of the church. But those who after a second admonition, remain obstinate in their errors, must not only be excommunicated but they must be delivered to the secular power to be exterminated.—St. Thomas Aquinas Summa Theologia, vol. 4, p. 90.

The council of Lateran formed the following decree in the year 1215:—

We excommunicate and anathematize every heresy that exalts itself against the holy orthodox and Catholic faith, condemning all heretics, by whatever name they may be known, for though their faces differ, they are tied together by their toils. Such as are condemned are to be delivered over to the existing secular powers to receive due punishment. If laymen, their goods must be confiscated. If priests, they shall be degraded from their respective orders, and their property applied to the church in which they officiated. Secular powers of all ranks and degrees are to be warned, induced, and, if necessary, compelled by ecclesiastical censure, to swear that they will exert themselves to the utmost in the defense of the faith, and extirpate all heretics denounced by the church, who shall be found in their territories. And whenever any person shall assume government, whether it be spiritual or temporal, he shall be bound to abide by this decree.

If any temporal lord, after having been admonished and required by the church, shall neglect to clear his territory of heretical depravity, the Metropolitan and Bishop of the Province shall unite in excommunicating him. Should he remain contumacious a whole year, the fact shall be signified by the Supreme Pontiff, who will declare his vassals released from their allegiance from that time, and will bestow his territory on Catholics, to be occupied by them, on condition of exterminating the heretics and preserving the said territory in the faith.

Catholics who shall assume the cross for the extermination of heretics, shall enjoy the same indulgence, and be protected by the same privileges as are granted to those who go to the help of the Holy Land. We decree further that all those who have dealings with heretics, and especially such as receive, defend, and encourage them, shall be excommunicated. He shall not be eligible to any public office. He shall not be admitted as a witness. He shall neither have the power to bequeath his property by will, nor to succeed to any inheritance. He shall not bring any action against any person; but anyone can bring action against him. Should he be a judge, his decision shall have no force, nor shall any cause be brought before him. Should he be a lawyer no instruments made by him shall be held valid, but shall be condemned and their authors.

The Council of Constance, held in 1414, declared:—

That any person who has promised security to heretics shall not be obliged to keep his promise, by whatever he may be engaged.

The Archbishop of St. Louis said:—

Heresy and unbelief are crimes; and in Christian countries, as in Italy and Spain, for instance, where all the people are Catholics, and where the Catholic religion is an essential part of the law of the land, they are punished as other crimes.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND INTOLERANCE.

Bishop O'Connor, Bishop of Pittsburgh, said:—

Religious liberty is merely endured until the opposite can be carried into effect without peril to the Catholic world.

The Catholic Review, June, 1865:—

Protestantism of every form, has not, and never can have, any right where catholicity is triumphant.

The Rambler, a Catholic paper of London, says:—

Religious liberty, in the sense of a liberty possessed by every man to choose his religion, is one of the most wicked delusions ever foisted upon this age by the father of all deceit. The very name of liberty—except in the sense of a permission to do certain definite acts—ought to be banished from the domain of religion. It is neither more nor less than falsehood. No man has a right to choose his religion. None but an atheist can uphold the principles of religious liberty. Shall I foster that damnable doctrine, that socialism, and Calvinism and Anglicanism, and Judaism, are not every one of them mortal sins, like murder and adultery? Shall I hold out hopes to my erring Protestant brother, that I will not meddle with his creed if he will not meddle with mine? Shall I tempt him to forget that he has no more right to his religious views than he has to my purse, to my horse, or to my life blood? No; Catholicism is the most intolerant of creeds. It is intolerant itself; for it is the truth itself.

In the issue of September, 1851, of the same paper, we read:—

You ask if the Pope were lord of this land [England] and you were in a minority, what he would do to you? That, we say, would entirely depend on circumstances. If it would benefit the cause of Catholicism, he would tolerate you; if expedient, he would imprison, banish you; probably he might even hang you. But be assured of one thing, he would never tolerate you for the sake of your glorious principles of civil and religious liberty.

In the allocution of September, 1851, Pope Pius IX. said:—

That he had taken that principle for a basis: That the Catholic religion, with all its votes, ought to be exclusively dominant in such sort that every other worship shall be banished and interdicted.

The Shepherd of the Valley, official journal of Bishop of St. Louis, Missouri, November 23, 1851, says:—

The church is of necessity intolerant. Heresy she endures when and where she must; but she hates it, and directs all her energies to destroy it. If Catholics ever gain a sufficient numerical majority in this country, religious freedom is at an end. So our enemies say; so we believe.

Father Phelan, of St. Louis, who edits a Catholic paper, was asked in a circular letter from the Methodist ministers' association to aid in securing from Peru, Bolivia, and Ecuador the same religious liberty for Protestants that are enjoyed by Catholics in this country. To this he made the following reply:—

We hold it as a part of enlightened statesmanship for them to protect the religious unity of their peoples, and to prevent the preaching of any non-Catholic faith by foreigners. Instead of enacting laws making the public exercise of an imported non-Catholic religion possible, they should take effectual measures to suppress it whenever it makes its offensive appearance, and to quarantine against it as they would against smallpox and yellow fever.—Kansas City Star, 1898.

The New York Freeman, official journal of Bishop Hughes, January 26, 1852, says:—

No man has a right to choose his religion. Catholicism is the most intolerant of creeds. It is intolerance itself. We might as rationally maintain that two and two does not make four, as the theory of religious liberty. Its impiety is only equalled by its absurdity.

THE INQUISITION.

The Boston Pilot, official organ of the Bishop, says:—

No good government can exist without religion, and there can be no religion without an inquisition, which is wisely designed for the protection and promotion of the true faith.

CATHOLIC VOTES AND VOTERS.

You should do all in your power to carry out the intentions of his holiness, the Pope. Where you have the electoral franchise, give your votes to none but those who assist you in so holy a struggle.—Daniel O'Connell.

Bishop Vaughan in an address to the Catholic Club at Salford, England, January 2, 1873, said:—

Catholic votes should be solidly cast for the democracy at the next election. It is the only possible hope to break down the school system.—Catholic Review, Toledo.

Would he [the priest] be warranted in withholding any sacrament of the church from a man by reason of his preferring one candidate to the other! Absolutely speaking, he would; because a priest is not only warranted, but bound to withhold the sacraments from a man who is disposed to commit a mortal sin!!

The Univers, the official Catholic paper of the Bishops of France, March 28, 1868, says:—

A Catholic should never attach himself to any political party composed of heretics. No one who is truly at heart a thorough and complete Catholic can give his entire adhesion to a Protestant leader; for in so doing he divides his allegiance which he owes entirely to the church.

DR. BELCHER'S BOOK EXAMINED.

"THE RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES."

Herewith I send the Johnstown Democrat, which contains an advertisement of a book entitled, "The Mormon Prophet," by Miss Lily Dougall. I thought it might be of interest to the Herald readers. If her narrative is true, all will be well; if false, it will be nothing new, for there are many who have undertaken to give the true (?) history of the church, but have for some reason known to themselves, ignominiously misrepresented it, though they claim that their "zeal for the truth" has caused them to thus write, and that the truth may be defended and people saved from error and delusion; but they have proved themselves to be of those "that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter;" "that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight;" and that "justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him."

I have before me a book entitled, "The Religious Denominations in the United States," by Dr. Joseph Belcher. By examining it I find that "to point out the particular doctrines of each religious sect and to give their history and present condition has been the province of this book" and that the "design" was "to describe the leading tenets of the several religions of our own country," and that "the publications of each denomination has been its authorities, and where these have failed to be fully satisfactory, the information sought for was gained by direct correspondence with some of its members." Therefore, it is claimed that "the book thus stands on the broad foundation of universal brotherhood, having no sectarian ends of its own to accomplish, but giving each society a fair, impartial, and reliable hearing." The author of the book claims that the "want of genuine moderation towards those who differ from us, in religious opinions seems to be the most unaccountable thing in the world. . . . It is a virtue, alas! much talked of—little understood—and less practiced."

Any honest person after reading such statements as the above, concerning that which was contained in the book, would reasonably believe that the book fairly represented each sect or denomination under consideration, especially so when the author claims to be a "truth bearer"—"a preacher of righteousness." But, alas! when we read the "History of the Latter Day Saints," as set forth in the above-mentioned book, we find that it falls short of its claims, for though it states that "the Mormon bible affirms the trinity, the atonement, the Lord's supper, baptism, repentance, faith, the gift of prophecy, and the laying on of hands;" and that it acknowledges the inspiration of the "Christian scriptures," and that "it claims that the days of miracles and revelation are not yet over, that it is itself a proof of the last; that other revelations may be expected, and are, indeed, continually occurring among the saints—its believers." And though it also states that in the Book of Mormon, "Honesty, chastity, temperance, benevolence, and every other virtue is inculcated; while vice of all kinds is emphatically denounced." It states in contradiction to all this that "the peculiar tenets of the Mormons rendered them objects of suspicion and prejudice to the great body of the people of Illinois; nor were there wanting facts, industriously circulated, to substantiate, as it was thought, the most grave accusations."

Being that the Latter Day Saints believed in the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and in the atonement, and taught faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, inspiration of the "Christian Scriptures," etc., and that in that "faith, honesty, chastity, temperance, benevolence, and every other virtue is inculcated; while vice of all kinds is emphatically denounced," I would ask every candid and fair-minded person, What were the "peculiar tenets" that "rendered" the saints "objects of suspicion and prejudice"? Inasmuch as "to point out the particular doctrine of each" religious society "has been the province of this book," why not "point out" the "peculiar tenets" that "rendered" the saints such "objects of suspicion and prejudice" to their civilized and Christian neighbors? Certainly such tenets as these were worthy of being "pointed out," and more especially so when we learn this was "the province of the book."

Again he says:—

At about eighteen the younger Joseph, though of very small talents and of less education, became very thoughtful, and soon after began to whisper that he held communion with angels, who had informed him that God had raised him up as a very eminent reformer.

However "small" his "talents" may have been, they were large enough to comprehend the fact that "God is not the author of confusion," even when he was only fourteen years old—a fact the Christian world have failed to comprehend, with all its boasted learning and wisdom, even to this day. I think it would be well if our author, before penning the above, had taken the Bible and read Matthew 11: 25, 26, and Luke 10: 21, where it is written:—

Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

In 1 Corinthians 1: 27 we read:—

God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty.

Perhaps it would enable him to manifest the spirit of "universal brotherhood." Had he strictly adhered to the maxim, "universal brotherhood," he would have made the publications of the Church of Latter Day Saints his authorities, as well as he did other religious societies; but instead of this, when he came to give the history of the Church of Latter Day Saints he made "idle tales" and "hearsay" his authorities, therefore, we find in his history of the church that Joseph Smith was told by the angel "that God had raised him up as a very eminent reformer"—that "by the help of a man named Rigdon, Smith printed" the Book of Mormon. That Joseph Smith, "no longer satisfied with establishing a church, aspired to found a theocratic community." And that from a "desire of a wider scope of authority," he "published a revelation commanding him that the elders should go forth, two and two, in imitation of the disciples whom Christ had sent out without staff and scrip," and many other things too ignominious to mention.

Such is the "fair, impartial, and reliable hearing" given to the Church of Latter Day Saints. But when we turn to the histories of other religious societies, as set forth in this book, we find some manifestation of the "universal brotherhood" that is supposed to characterize the whole book—that a fair, impartial, and reliable hearing "has been given them"—that their publications, not "hearsay," has been his authorities. This is manifest from the following testimonies:—

While there are so many different sects, and so many controversies about them, we can hardly appreciate the importance of a book like this. It is a fair, thorough, and impartial statement of the History, Doctrines, and Practices of every Denomination in the United States. It is thus especially valuable for general reading and reference among those who are desirous to know what is the definite position and faith of every denomination.—Rockland Gazette.

In the volume before us, he gives well-written sketches of the rise and progress of the denominations in this country.—Christian Observer.

So far as concerns independence of vision, there can be no question, as Dr. Belcher surveys each sect with the same dispassionate impartiality.—Episcopal Recorder.

In the account given of the Denominations, he is fair, and allows them to speak for themselves, as to their history and institutions.—Christian Advocate and Journal.

He allows the different sects to expound their own tenets and give their reasons for adopting them, and treats every man as a friend and a brother.—North American.

Judging from the work, it would be difficult to say what are the religious views of the editor,—so fairly, so dispassionately, so charitably has he treated each and every sect. It is plain that a noble love for the truth has animated the writer.—City Item.

Its title gives promise of a fair, accurate, and impartial exhibition of the history, doctrines, governments of the religious denominations of the United States.—Presbyterian Magazine.

Every religious sect, however small, has met with a fair and impartial history at his hands.—Christian Secretary.

From the foregoing testimonies it is evident that the book is generally accepted as a true history of every religious society in the United States. But for all that we find, as far as the history of the church is concerned, it falls short of its claims, and that by a long way too. But this only goes to verify the words of the Lord when he said, "the world would love his own;" and so it is every time. When we read such opprobrious histories we are not at all surprised that the world is so much prejudiced against the church. Nevertheless, it is nothing new; it has been the truth's portion from time immemorial. Such was the case in the days of Christ, and those who professed to be believers in Moses and the prophets were the very ones that published all manner of evil against the church. This caused our Savior at one time to exclaim:—

But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.—Matt. 23: 13.

Thus it is that history repeats itself all along the line of time, whenever God has sent forth his "servants the prophets" to declare his will and cry repentance unto the inhabitants of the earth; and I suppose that thus it will be, and that no man who has been called of God to establish his righteousness on earth is to expect anything better until the angel shall sound his trump, saying, It is finished! it is finished! the Lamb of God hath overcome and "trodden the wine press alone." May God bless all that have known and will yet come to know the truth with strength to overcome, and be worthy to stand on that day with the redeemed on Mount Zion.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa.

ON PRESIDING.

The question has been asked, Who shall preside? If we turn to section 120, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, we read: "A branch may be presided over by a high priest, an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, chosen and sustained by vote of the branch."

This is said to be all right when elders are chosen, but out of order if a priest, teacher, or deacon is so chosen. Is there not some misunderstanding by some of the elders? Have they ever considered the question?

The facts have long since been admitted, that an elder may be a good preacher, and yet have no wisdom to preside; as it has oftentimes been said of an elder, "Yes, just keep him out preaching, he is all right; but let him have anything to do with a branch, and he will soon have it all strife and confusion."

I have seen an elder presiding in a saints' meeting, and he would keep calling, "Now, be brief; be brief;" till, as the saints afterwards said, he just spoiled the meeting. Have heard of another who spent fifteen minutes telling the saints how to be brief. Another arose and spent twenty minutes in talking about the same thing. If those elders were wise they did not show their wisdom then, not if the saints' word was to be taken for facts.

I have seen a presiding elder arise in a saints' meeting, and tell them that there was a rule in the branch he did not want to obey; therefore in the future he would ignore that rule. It was afterwards discussed at a council meeting, and all but him said it was a rule that had done much good for the branch. He said that he did not care, he would ignore it, and ever afterwards did.

I have known an elder to preach some things he knew by the Spirit. When told that those things were not in accord with the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, he said it was not he but Joseph Smith who was mistaken. This and much more could be written to show that all elders are not wise, and that it would be good for all of them to read Doctrine and Covenants, 119: 2, 3, study and give heed to the advice therein. "All things shall be done by common consent in the church." That is right. So, then, if it is the common consent of the branch that the priest should preside, why not let them so choose? All people who desire law and order in their meetings have the right to elect an officer who shall keep order; and that is the duty of him who is called to preside; to see that all things are done in order, in harmony with the law and rule of the body. He is not a dictator, or lawmaker, as some elders think. It is the presiding officer who can say to the member, You are out of order; can remind him of the law or rule, that the body has said shall be their guide in the meetings.

There are two kinds of meetings in the church: saints' meetings and preaching meetings. The saints in their meetings claim the right to pray, sing, or speak one to another of the blessings of God to them, and their joy in the light of revealed truth. Preaching is forbidden. The presiding officer may give a few words of exhortation. It is he who must be brief here. An elder is only a saint in a meeting of this kind.

But the elders are to "conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Spirit," according to the commandments and revelations of God? That is right. He is to take the lead. Yes, but to take the lead and to preside are not one and the same thing. To preside is to direct; to take the lead is to go first. Let the elders take the lead in preaching, teaching, and expounding, let the people say who shall preside, since they, and not the elders, have the right of choice. Then when there is an elder present he must preach. The priest may preside, or in other words may keep order while the elder preaches; thus it is the elder, an elder, has always to be in the lead. Who shall say, Nay?

THE THINGS IN THE LITTLE DRAWER.

There are scraps of paper and pieces of string,
 There are slippers which no feet wear,
 There are bits of ribbon and broken rings,
 And tresses of auburn hair;
 There are little doll clothes folded away—
 Out of the light of the sunny day.
 There are dainty jackets that never are worn,
 There are toys and geranium slips,
 There are books and pictures all faded and torn,
 And marked by the finger tips
 Of dimpled hands, that have fallen to dust,
 Yet I strive to think that the Lord is just.

But a feeling of bitterness fills my soul,
 Sometimes, when I try to pray,
 That the Reaper has spared so many flowers,
 And has taken mine away.
 And I almost doubt that the Lord doth know
 My aching heart can love her so.

Some wander far in distant climes,
 They perish by fire and flood,
 And their hands are black with the direst crimes,
 That kindle the wrath of God.
 Yet a mother's song has soothed them to rest,
 She has lulled them to slumber upon her breast.

And when I think of my daring child,—
 My "Mamie" that never grows old,
 And know she is waiting and watching for me,
 In the city with streets of gold.
 Safe, safe from the cares of the weary years,
 From sorrow and sin and war.
 I thank my God with falling tears,
 For the things in the little drawer.

PALERMO, N. Y., June 12.

Editors Herald:—I am at Palermo, New York, at this writing. Have preached twice and have meetings announced for over Sunday. There is a little band of saints here, and a number friendly to the cause. The opposition is rife, however; ridicule, misrepresentation, slander, and downright lying are resorted to, to injure the cause; the old stock in trade.

I rode quite a ways yesterday to hear a Baptist give us an airing, but he concluded discretion to be the better part of valor, so was too tame to draw our fire.

Bro. W. W. Blanchard has been laboring here during the winter and spring and has made friends for himself and the cause. He returned home the day on which I arrived. We need an efficient laborer here all the time. But where is he?

May 13 I left Lamoni for the East. Stopped a few days at Davenport, Iowa, but it rained most of the time, and I did but little. Preached but once, blessed one babe. Met some good saints and was kindly cared for at the home of Mr. Hortons, and assisted by Bro. Clow and young Bro. La Rue. Tarried over Sunday at Detroit, Michigan; preached twice for the saints in their pleasant hall on Grand River Avenue. There was a good attendance, especially at evening, and all seemed to enjoy the service. Young Bro. Blackmore is in charge of the services there and is esteemed by the saints. There is no apparent reason why they should not move along most successfully in Detroit.

Guided by Bro. Shippy, I was introduced at midnight at Bro. Hager's, where I received a kindly welcome. Stayed one night with Bro. and Sr. Lyddy, or Mr. and Sr. Lyddy, as the fates may decree. Anyway my visit was a pleasant one. I now know more of Mat and he of me, and neither less Irish than before.

The 27th, I went to Toledo and was entertained at Bro. Kimball's. Preached once the next day at the house of Bro. Smith, Bro. W. J. Smith assisting. It was a pleasant audience and attentive. Visited at Bro. Jeffries' in the afternoon, in company with Bro. Kimball. The following evening preached in the house of Bro. Kimball, to a small audience, Bro. W. J. Smith making the opening. It looked some like taking a backward step here in the saints giving up their hall, but the private house seemed to draw. Then they contemplate getting another with demand. The waters are not so smooth and tranquil here as could be desired, but there are signs of improvement.

At Kirtland the saints were engaged in renovating the temple, under the guidance of Bro. A. H. Parsons. Bro. Parsons seemed to be adjusting himself to the demands on the historic hill. I met Bro. Oehring here. He and Bro. Steffe were anxious to get off on their mission to Germany. They are the kind of men that do not wait for something to "turn up," but want to get right to business.

After consulting with collaborators, we have about concluded not to run the tent this season—no proper ones to go with it and take care of other demands. From here to Scranton, Pennsylvania, and East Pharsalia, New York.

WM. H. KELLEY.

SYLVAN, Texas, June 11.

Editors Herald:—The gospel is making some progress in these parts. I came to Texas seven years ago from Tennessee. I am an apostate Mormon, or rather, I was caught in the Utah trap about nine years ago, and started for Utah; but the good Lord, seeing I was earnestly desiring the truth, in his own way and for some purpose sidetracked me here, where I could hear the truth; and I thank God that it is so. I am thankful I can see that his hand has been in this whole affair. While probably Satan thought to capture me, his scheme only led to my release and deliverance from captivity, out of darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the children of God.

I have been somewhat of a close observer of the teachings of the Bible, especially of the teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles, and I never could understand why it was that the same doctrines and practices should not be taught and practiced still. About twenty-five years ago I joined the Baptist Church, at the age of nineteen years. Finally I became disgusted with everything I knew anything about, and renounced it all and decided that the true church or kingdom of Christ did not exist on earth, and often expressed myself that way; when the Utah elders came along, presenting the claims of Joseph Smith concerning the restoration. And seeing the necessity of such a restoration and that all they taught that I knew anything about, except polygamy, was in perfect accord with the teaching of the New Testament, and going as they did to the old Scriptures to prove their polygamous stuff, and making it appear to me that Joseph Smith received revelation to the effect that polygamy or plurality of wives was also restored in these last days—after hearing them preach and reading after them for eight years, and not knowing anything about the Reorganized Church, like many others, no doubt, I was deceived and misled, and so started to Utah. But, thanks be to God, all things work together for good to them who love his holy name. He stopped me here where I could have a chance to see my mistake and hear and know the truth. A little over a year ago I met with Bro. J. D. Erwin. Last September he came and preached near two weeks, during which time myself and wife and one son obeyed the gospel. Although Bro. Erwin was treated to a dose of eggs on his first visit, he has been back and preached several times since, and has done much good here. There are now seven of my family that have obeyed the gospel and three of another family, in this community.

I am glad I can say I know this latter-day work is of God. Men may apostatize and rebel against God and his laws, write books and articles against Joseph Smith, but no weapon formed against the truth shall prosper.

Yours for truth,

P. B. BUSSELL.

OGDEN, Utah, June 14.

Editors Herald:—I write to inform you more particularly concerning the last illness and death of Bro. R. J. Anthony. I received the news of his sickness May 17, through Bro. H. B. Sterrett, and immediately recalled further appointments and went the next day to Elsinore, where he was lying sick at the home of Bro. Lorensen, who with his family cared for him kindly during his entire illness.

It appears that he had gone south to get his team, preparatory to reaching Idaho for summer work, and was on his way north to Malad conference, when he was taken sick at Bro. Lorensen's. He had been unwell for some months, and had had an especially hard campaign during the past winter, being too severely exposed to the elements on his last trip.

Immediately after my arrival he was administered to, receiving instantaneous relief and great blessing. The signal presence of the Spirit in both anointing and confirmation bore witness to his acceptance with God. For a day or two he seemed much better and we conversed freely in regard to church affairs, mostly from the standpoint of this mission. He soon began to grow weaker, however, and what the physician pronounced a bilious-typhoid set in, from the effects of which he died May 26, at eleven a. m.

During his entire illness he had the best medical care to be obtained, and all was done that could be done under the circumstances to make his last hours comfortable.

Although he expressed a desire to live, he did not seem to fear death, and met his last enemy very quietly. He said but little during the last day or two, and in fact was unable to talk very much for some hours before his death; and though his mind wandered slightly at times as a result of the fever, he seemed conscious, most of the time, to the last.

In conversation with the writer he expressed himself as being as well satisfied with the last year's work as any he had ever done.

Earnest effort was made to keep relatives and friends informed of his condition, but owing to our isolated position it was difficult to do as we would have wished in everything.

I wish to give due credit to Bishop Jensen, of Elsinore, who proved a friend in need, and furnished all necessary funds for a reasonable length of time. To many of the saints in Utah thanks are also due for their assistance in a financial way.

The writer, together with the saints in Utah, who were greatly endeared to Bro. Anthony for his long years of service in this mission, extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved.

He fell at the post of duty, fearlessly battling against the powers of darkness, which seem to be making such strong attempts just now to overthrow the work here.

O that each of us might be enabled to finish our work as well, so that when the silent messenger calls we shall be found faithfully at work, and ready to go!

In bonds,

HAMBURG, Iowa, June 9.

Editors Herald:—Not being able to do any other work in the Master's cause except to distribute the written word, among other things distributed I have sent to friends in Nebraska the Book of Mormon, Presidency and Priesthood, with other books and tracts; they in turn have loaned them to their neighbors and friends, until they have created quite an interest there. They are very anxious to have an elder sent there as soon as possible; any of the elders will be met at the station, and entertained by Edward E. Bassett, Abby, Grant County, Nebraska.

I remain as ever your colaborer,

POMONA, Mo., June 11.

Editors Herald:—The branch here is still living, although it has been in a very bad condition for the past few years; but to-day she has had added to her ranks some precious souls.

Instead of gathering at the church to-day at the usual hour for prayer meeting, we met at the house of Elder J. B. Graham, and after a short season of talking and prayer all present walked to a large pond and there we witnessed Elder Graham baptize one promising young man who will surely make a mark in this church. His grandfather is often mentioned in the second volume of the History of the Church and came through much of the persecution which the old-time saints had to pass through in this State. His sister also, a young lady, followed the example; then came eight more bright Hopes, who were also buried in baptism and took upon them the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Bro. Graham's face beamed with joy, and it looked to the writer as though he would have liked to have baptized all not of the church who were present. It was a time of rejoicing for us all.

Elder Graham came here from Colorado about two years ago. Shortly after arriving he was elected president of the branch, and through the faithful performance of his duty and the interest he has taken in Sunday school work, he has endeared himself to every true Latter Day Saint in this neighborhood, and has the respect and esteem of the outside world who know him; and if he continues to get the help he has had in the past few weeks from such men as Brn. Spurlock and Chrestensen, I feel sure by what I can hear that some of the honest in heart in this neighborhood, who have looked upon the church in the past with scorn through the unchristianlike conduct of some of the saints, are beginning to look upon us in a different light; and I pray that God will give us strength that we as Latter Day Saints may ever let our light shine that we may never become a stumbling-block to our neighbors. And now if we continue to keep our shoulders to the wheel we shall receive the promise that God has given us: that the branch will continue to grow if the saints will only do their duty.

Yours for the truth,

W. R. STEELE.

BYER, Ohio, June 14.

Editors Herald:—I have not been in the field since the beginning of April, owing to home demands. I have been writing in the Jackson Sun a sort of running discussion with a so-called Rev. Evans, until recently, when we were shut off by the editor, and after being promised "fair play; and equal rights." We wanted to know why we were not allowed them, and were told that his members were kicking and the discussion was doing injury to his church.

I was called to assist at funeral of our aged sister, Sarah Calvin, at Vales Mills, Ohio. I do not know just when I can return to the ministerial field; probably not till October, as several matters are hindrances not necessary to mention. I just received a letter from Bro. James Moler, who is spinning through the district almost alone at this time. There are some new openings, or at least requests in new places for preaching, which I would like to fill if I could get away from home.

May the good Master bless the labors of my brethren in the field that they may be able to reap an abundant harvest, is my sincere desire.

Yours in the true faith,

J. L. GOODRICH.

CANTON, Ill., June 9.

Editors Herald:—As we are living in these the last days and all around us we can see such evil things transpiring, it grieves my heart. No matter how much this beautiful gospel is proclaimed in some regions of country, the people will not heed the sound of the trumpet, but idly pass it by. Houses of different amusements will be sought for rather than the house of prayer, and especially among the young. It seems that every effort is being made throughout the world to-day to draw the minds of the young from the house of prayer. Even among we young Latter Day Saints, how careful and observant we have got to be, because our daily walks and conversations are noticed by the people of the world. So let us throughout our lives endeavor to keep the commandments of God, and by so doing we may be the means of bringing some honest-hearted soul out of darkness into the pure and precious truth. So let our lights be brilliant that others may be guided by them. Temptation after temptation is placed before the saints of God to test their faith, but I know that God will not suffer us to be tempted beyond endurance. We all know the human flesh is weak and prone to wander, especially when trouble is lurking nigh, but think of these words:—

"When dark clouds of trouble hang o'er us
And threaten our peace to destroy,
There is hope smiling brightly before us,
And we know that deliv'rance is nigh."

When I read in the Herald, what great work some are doing towards the spread of this great gospel, my work looks so little, it seems in comparison to that of a great and mighty mountain down to a mere grain of mustard seed. But I live in hopes as my days pass by that my works will increase. As we all know that little things are starting points to greater things, so I hope not one saint will refuse to unfurl the banner of King Emanuel whenever an opportunity occurs.

A sister in the faith,

IDA L. JONES.

COVE, Ark., June 12.

Editors Herald.—Closed a fine meeting here last night. Will begin a debate June 18 at this place, to last eight nights, with one Mr. Parkins, Church of God man.

I wish to give notice to all interested: My debate with G. W. Leonard is fixed for September 4, 1899, at Maysville, Arkansas. Saints, please take notice. My debate with Dr. Brown will begin July 24, 1899, near Ingleside, Faulkner County, Arkansas. These debates are arranged in harmony with all concerned.

I am ready to defend this work at all times when necessary to do so.

STRATFORDVILLE, Ont., June 9.

Editors Herald.—Since coming home from the north, I have been laboring at King's Lake, where I opened up the work over a year ago. Since that time there has been a nice branch organized there with nineteen members, which is getting along nicely, presided over by Elder Beemer, who is but young in the work, but is progressing very fast; two heads of families have been added to their number since my return there.

I am now holding forth in this place, in the town hall. I got the hall free, provided we furnish our own oil for lights. Several are becoming interested in the gospel of Christ. Although this is a very busy season of the year, we get a fair hearing every night. Last Monday I took a short walk of six miles to the village of Vienna, called to see Mr. Balcom, who was so kind to me whilst laboring there two years ago. There I met Mrs. Almeda Willimson for the first time, and secured the inclosed testimony concerning the prophet Joseph Smith. If thought to be of use to the readers of the Herald please publish it. This lady has been an extensive traveler; she has been through most all the states of America, and is apparently well read. She has read the Book of Mormon through. She says, "As to its moral teachings, it is superior to the Bible." She says she would love to read it again; but as far as I could learn, she has had many losses financially; one of her greatest losses was the loss of her husband. And under these circumstances she does not see her way clear to buy a Book of Mormon. Could or would the church make her a present of one. I don't think the church would lose by it, as she seems not to be ashamed to express her views to others concerning the book.

Hoping and praying for the welfare of Zion, I am,

Yours in bonds,

S. W. TOMLINSON.

VIENNA, June 6, 1899.

I, Almeda Willimson, of the town of Almer, Ontario, do certify that I resided in Fulton City, Illinois, in the year of our Lord 1856, and have lived in the house where the Prophet Joseph Smith resided in the early days of the church, and was acquainted with many of the citizens of that city who lived there in the days of the prophet, and never heard any speak disrespectfully of Mr. Smith's character; and as to whatever differences of opinion there might have been as to his claims as a prophet, there were no differences as to his teachings being strictly moral in ever respect; and that the said Joseph Smith and his followers did not teach nor practice polygamy as taught and practiced by Brigham Young in after years.

LOGAN, Utah, June 12.

Editors Herald.—We are still in the faith and desirous to be more active in the great cause we have espoused; but calls for preaching are not numerous in these regions.

A little girl came last Friday to be company for the missionary's wife. They are getting along nicely and already are fast friends. The same evening we filled an appointment at Providence, in the stone church. Perhaps Bro. William Kelley will remember having prophesied that it would yet be used by us. Sr. Larson says it was on returning to Logan from a meeting in the house of Bro. Hirth, some twenty years ago.

We spent an hour or more on the question of Succession with the aid of the Spirit, while some of the old veterans impatiently awaited an opportunity to bear their testimony and repeat some of the usual old wives fables that never seem to grow old. We stood a pretty severe catechising, but had our share of the enjoyment.

The faith of some here has been tried a little by the absconding stake president, Orson Smith. The people of the valley entrusted thousands of bushels of wheat with him, which was stored in California, and now they are perhaps two hundred thousand dollars poorer, while the Klondike is supposed to be one man ahead. Two wives are bereft of a husband. Three families of a head, a post office short of a post master, an implement house without a manager, a college board less a president, and sixteen thousand people minus a stake president. All through the lust for money. I am not posted as to other positions of trust Mr. Smith may have held, neither if he had other families.

In regard to the Smithfield debate, I asked Smith if he had called it off. He said he understood a man was coming from the East to discuss, and he had written Jenkinson it did not meet his approval. We didn't have a chance to talk more as he retreated, only to say if they could afford to challenge and then go back on the propositions, we could stand it, but it placed them in a bad light. We were left in the dark as to whether the remark of "the man coming from the East" cut any figure in the arrangements or not.

We felt encouraged in the work at our district conference, it being one of the best we have had. All feel to mourn the loss of Bro. Anthony and to sympathize with his bereaved family. The papers here noticed the account.

In bonds,

CARSON, Iowa, June 12.

Editors Herald.—We are moving along slowly, but we hope surely, in this mission field. We left Shenandoah about one month ago. Preached a few times west of Tabor with good liberty, and on to Egypt and Bartlett, from thence to Glenwood for two nights. Found the few faithful ones there that are always trying their best to let the light of the gospel shine. In weakness we tried to build them up in the faith, by way of encouragement, to press on in the good cause they have espoused.

Went on to Council Bluffs; preached with fair liberty on the Sabbath, attended their prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, and visited quite a number of the members, doing them all the good possible, and, we trust, no harm.

On April 26 we left, in company with Bro. Strain, for Underwood, to attend the Sunday school convention and conference of this district. We had a fair attendance and a good, enjoyable time. Met Bro. Derry with quite a number of the elders and saints of long ago. Found all rejoicing in the truth, strong in the faith and the hope of eternal life. Bro. Derry and myself continued meetings a few nights. Had a very good turnout considering the busy time with the farmers.

I left for Hazel Dell, and Bro. Derry for Harlan. Bro. Joshua Carlile and wife accompanied me to Hazel Dell on Wednesday night of June 3, and God blessed us abundantly with his Holy Spirit, and all present were made to rejoice in the goodness of God. I remained with these dear saints until the following Tuesday. Had excellent liberty in preaching the word, and the sacrament and testimony meetings on Sunday were just grand. Truly our heavenly Father owned us as his children, and spoke peace to our souls.

In company with Bro. H. N. Hansen we administered to some sick ones with good effect. Went with H. N. on the 9th inst. to administer to Bro. McQuen's daughter, some twelve miles from his place, after which he took me to Bro. John Carlile's place, where he and his amiable wife left for their pleasant home. Next day I visited Bro. Thomas Scott and family; enjoyed myself hugely with them in singing the sweet songs of Zion.

In the afternoon rode into Underwood with Bro. Thomas on a load of wheat, and remained that night, with Mr. George Fisher and his wife, Sister Fisher. Was treated very kindly by all these saints and friends, and they did not forget to send me on the way by helping me with means to amply pay my expense on the railroad. May the merciful Father bless them for their kindness to me, heal their loved ones, and save all in his eternal kingdom.

I came to this place (Carson) last Thursday. Have preached three times, shall move on to Wheeler next Thursday; from thence to Farm Creek. The saints here are in the faith and their works correspond. They are the most of them anxious to see the work more thoroughly established in this place.

I have heard that the Fremont district conference, held at the saints' church near Henderson, was first class; a good representation from the different branches; all felt well and satisfied with what was done.

Let me say to all the ministry and membership of these two districts, let us not slacken our hands nor relax our energy in this work, but push on with alacrity, faithfully to the end, that we may gain the prize.

We hope all will remember our reunion on the beautiful grounds of Bro. D. Hougas, to be held commencing on the 17th of August, holding over two Sundays. Let all who possibly can come make a strong effort, with prayerful hearts, to the end that God will be with us. Come and enjoy a spiritual feast, and be the better prepared for the duties of another year. We shall have some of the best preachers obtainable, and some of the best of saints, and honest friends to listen. Come one, and come all. May God bless all of his willing workers in this field. There are many who are doing all they can, using the powers of body and mind and means that God has blessed them with, for the advancement of this great work. May we all have power to endure to the end and be saved in the kingdom of our Master.

Your brother and colaborer in bonds,
HENRY KEMP.

CLIFFORD, N. D., June 9.

Editors Herald:—As there has been no word in the Herald from this part of the Lord's field, I will try and let you know how we are getting along. Bro. Sparling has again left us on May 14. He baptized three, all young people, and then he went to Bismarck and baptized two, then he returned to baptize four more and perform the marriage ceremony of Bro. William Leitch, Jr., to a Miss Isabel McDonnell; so you can see about what things are doing here.

We miss Bro. Sparling here very much, as he has been here among us so long and done all in his power to advance the cause of Christ. May the Lord bless him, is my prayer. We would be pleased to have Bro. Swenson or anyone he might send about the 1st of July. Our annual meeting is July 14. Although things are not as I would wish in our branch, still it is improving spiritually as well as in numbers. I ask all to pray for me that I may perform my duty in a way that will be an honor to the cause of Christ.

Yours in Christ,

A. E. CROWL.

LONE ROCK, Oregon, June 4.

Editors Herald:—We are all alive in this part, and the saints generally are striving to do their duty amidst the many false stories being circulated by the enemies to truth. We have just come home from meeting in the village schoolhouse; the two churches, the M. E's. and Baptist's, having been closed against us. The Baptists not being satisfied with closing their doors, have had six different preachers here within the last three months, and succeeded in making one convert, and one of the last was egged on to abuse Latter Day Saints, which he did in full Clark Braden style. Your writer being away from town, they drafted certain propositions for discussion, which are as follows:—

1. Resolved, that the so-called Reorganized Latter Day Saints are the same in doctrine and practice as the Utah Mormons.

2. Resolved, that the regular Baptist Church is the church of the Lord Jesus Christ in gospel practice and teaching.

They signed my name on the negative, and sent them to me. And as I do not have to affirm anything, I do not think we can suffer much. The debate is set for June 26, to continue four days.

When Bro. Holt was here last winter, some one took nearly all our singing books out of the church and destroyed them; but to-day men and women came forward and gave me money enough to buy more, for which you will find an order inclosed. We hope to hold a two-days' meeting about the 17th and 18th of this month, and ask for your prayers that the cause we love so well may be ably defended and its interests advanced. A goodly number are very near now.

Your brother in the faith,

ELDER W. A. GOODWIN.

MILLBANK, S. D., June 8.

Editors Herald:—I have long felt to write and thank, through the columns of the Herald, those who so kindly send me the paper from week to week. I enjoy reading it very much and receive aid and comfort on my journey heavenward. I am one of the isolated ones, there being no other saints near here that I know of.

When I get the Ensign and Herald I always turn to the letters first to see if there are any from Dakota. I hope the restored gospel may yet be preached in these parts, that any who may have a desire to know the truth may hear it and obey. I struggle on in the hope that when my race is run, the victory I'll have won. Ever desiring the welfare of Zion, I remain,

In the faith,

CLARA LINSE.

MYRTLE POINT, Oregon, June 8.

Editors Herald:—I am still in the land of the living, and hard at work. As I feel much encouraged I thought I might help some other saint to rejoice by telling "good news."

Last December I parted company with Bro. H. L. Holt, and while he took his trip with Bro. Goodwin, to the John Day country, I struck out alone. At Mayville, Oregon, (Gilliam County,) I held a series of meetings (about two weeks I believe) and baptized one. While here I received a challenge from a Rev. Badger, styling himself a "Disciple." As it was my business to defend the work, I met this gentleman in a ten-nights' effort to make the truth manifest. I feel that the Master helped me. This was held at Condon, Gilliam County, Oregon.

Christmas was spent at Castle Rock with loved ones, but was not idle, as while there for one week I preached three times and administered to several.

From Condon I went to Grand Round Valley, near Summerville. I made my home with Bro. and Sr. Elmer—H. H.—and during one week, while the thermometer ranged from 14° to 28° below zero, rode three miles and back and preached every night. My next move took me to Malheur City, Malheur County, Oregon, where I commenced preaching to entire strangers. Bro. Charles Weise, who was at work in a quartz mine there, provided for the inner man at first, and then friends were raised up to the cause, who aided, and the immediate result of twenty-one sermons was five "born again" and as many more very near the kingdom. I should not neglect to say, however, that Bro. Holt had spent about ten days there some years previous and made many friends and sowed the seed.

While here I made a short call at Bridgeport, and preached three times. I feel that friends were made there for the work. My next stop was at Owyhee. Here Bro. Tremblay—Paul—lives and is the genial post master. He and his family were sick with la grippe and a neighbor—Mr. Pullen by name and a minister of the Progressive Dunkard Church—took me in in the true Christian spirit, and as there was a neighborhood row on hand and the schoolhouse was closed against all denominations (a result of efforts on the part of the Methodists to control it), furnished his front room with seats, and helped advertise my meetings, and assisted me while I preached every night for one week. Of course we did not always agree and often—with Bible in hand—would spend the entire forenoon in comparison of what we understood as truth. I enjoyed my stay there and wish the number of such men, or men of that spirit, were many times greater than it is.

Returning from there I held a few services in Pleasant Valley, Oregon, and The Dalles, where I found my cousin and companion of boyhood, Bro. George Clark and family. Returning home I reached Castle Rock about the 23d of March. Here I put in the time until the 10th of April, preaching here and at Lank schoolhouse. While here I baptized two. The 10th inst. I turned my face southward to do some work in Southwest Oregon, part of that work being to accommodate a Seventh-Day Adventist at Gravel Ford, Coos County, who was, seemingly, spoiling for a discussion on the Sabbath question. I had a pleasant visit of about two days with saints and friends in Portland and then my next call was at Dallas, where we (Bro. C. W. Butler and myself) secured the use of the S. D. A. church for "four nights only." Quite good audiences were greeted here, and one—Sr. J. C. Proctor—was baptized.

From here I went to Hudson, stopping over with Bro. William Taylor and preaching once, then on to this point. My first opening after getting in to this valley was at Bandon. Here I commenced meetings the 28th of April, preaching here until the 10th of May, when I had to go to attend to the discussion. Elder D. L. Harris joined me at Gravel Ford and assisted me there. We think the cause did not suffer.

Returning to Bandon the 18th, together we held services here from the 18th to the 21st and baptized five, four of whom had given their names at the close of my first service there. Next we had to go to Dora (or I did while Bro. Harris went out to "Enchanted Prairie"). I held a few services near Dora, but the weather was very bad, raining nearly all the time. The interest was so intense at Bandon that we had promised to return when our appointments were satisfied at Dora and elsewhere, so the 30th found us both back at work there. We put in the time here until the 7th of June, baptizing four more, preaching ten more sermons, and organizing a Latter Day Saint Sunday school.

Elder Harris and the writer are still together, and since commencing to write this have traveled as far as Dora, where we are now (the 9th) engaged holding services, and where we will probably continue until Monday, the 11th, when we will start by team for Looking Glass. I expect to soon join the wife and children at Castle Rock, Washington, and then, if the weather permits, will take up the tent work for the season. This we look forward to with pleasure, as it will enable us to have a little home life, even though it be in a tent. "Home is where the heart is."

I find Elder Harris an able and very pleasant companion, and shall regret separating from him. Of course it has not all been plain sailing, but there has been much to encourage us; and when we look back we like to remember the bright side. The saints have been very kind and many friends have I found in the prosecution of the work. While I have been pushing out and doing what I could this way, my wife has been at Castle Rock looking after the home interests while the little ones attended school, and doing what her hands and head found to do for the work among the saints there, and elsewhere by correspondence. If I have been busy she has been none the less so. I feel that her help has been as timely for the work as mine, and know that the Master has given his help to us both or we could not have met the demands.

Still desiring to labor for the cause of truth, and feeling well therein, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

A. M. CHASE.

SENECA, Ill., June 14.

Editors Herald:—On Sunday night the conference of the Northeastern Illinois district, held with the Mission branch, was closed. There was quite a good representation present from different parts of the district. Everything passed off peacefully and quietly, and a goodly degree of the Spirit was present from beginning to end.

Friday, the 9th, was devoted to Religion and Sunday school work. Conference business was transacted Saturday, the 10th; Brn. Lake, Southwick, and Terry having been chosen as associate presidents. Henry Southwick was reelected district president and Adam J. Keck vice president. Bro. E. E. Johnson continued as secretary. Money was raised for the purchasing of a folding organ for the use of the district tent.

On Sunday the tent and grounds were literally crowded with people who came in vehicles from all parts of the surrounding country. In the prayer service a lengthy prophecy was given through Sr. J. M. Terry, gently and kindly admonishing the saints to be more devoted to the work, to "cease jesting and using light speeches," to "converse more about the gospel," and "to deal with those who become dead members;" that while we "should use patience and forbearance, dead branches should be cut off, for if permitted to remain would only injure and drag down the live branches." It also acknowledged that God was pleased with the assembling of the saints, and with their worship. It came so forcibly that many were moved to tears.

Two were confirmed at the morning prayer service, who had been baptized in the early morning; viz., Brn. William H. Bell and Prof. John C. Deemser. The preaching during the conference was by Brn. J. H. Lake, A. J. Keck, J. M. Terry, and the writer.

While the attendance was large, the saints of the Mission branch saw to it that all were cared for and made comfortable. It was a meeting long to be remembered, and at the close of the conference it was with regret that the saints bade one another good-bye. The absence of Bro. F. M. Cooper, our missionary in charge, who was detained from conference by other church matters, was regretted by many.

I go to Streator on the 15th inst. and will likely remain over the following Sunday; then I expect to make a brief visit to points south of Piper City, Ford County, where I introduced the work during the winter. Letters may be sent to me at Piper City for two weeks. My mission address, Plano, Illinois, care Box 142. Yours in the work,

H. E. MOLER.

ABOUT LITTLE TOTS.

What is the best way to impress little tots with religious thought? If our children are to be ready for baptism at the age of eight years, as the law of God requires, then we as mothers (and the fathers as well) must study the best method of impressing little minds with a knowledge of God and Christ his Son. I am of the opinion that this cannot be done too soon. As soon as baby can repeat words it should be taught to repeat a little prayer each night. My little daughter did this before she was two years old, and now at a little over three she seems to understand perfectly the meaning of prayer, and to have perfect faith in God's power to answer her prayers; and I can bear witness that he does hear and answer her innocent petitions.

Stories of the Bible and instructive child stories help a great deal; but I have decided that in the case of my little girl, at least, the best medium through which I can introduce the desired ideas is song. I was always a great hand to sing while about my work, and have always sung a great deal when rocking the babies to sleep; and now I find that my little girl grasps ideas much more quickly in this way than any other. She will take the Hope, look at the picture of Jesus and the lamb, and sing, "I am Jesus' little lamb," so nicely. She also sings, "Jesus loves me, this I know," and "I am so glad that our Father in heaven," and with a very little help sings, "What can little hands do?" from Winnowed Songs, and many snatches from other songs and hymns. And if you never tried it, you have no idea how easy it is to get a child to understand all that is meant by such simple hymns. How I do wish we had more of them, that would be appropriate; it seems too bad we have so few songs that will illustrate our own faith. I mean of course songs suitable for little ones. I have often longed for the time when our own Sunday school song book will be published, but it seems to come very slowly. Well, perhaps it will be all the better appreciated when it does come. But anyway if you can sing at all, sing to your little ones; they enjoy it, and it will help you more than you can guess in teaching them of sacred things.

I once had a lady (a member of the Christian Church) tell me that she had entirely stopped teaching her little girl (aged five) religious things, as it made her nervous and excitable to such an extent that she would often express a wish to die and go to heaven to be with Jesus. "Now," the mother added, "I have to forbid her talking of such things, and never teach her except the Sunday school lesson and send her to Sunday school." She warned me that if I continued teaching my little girl I would find how it would turn out; but I already had the keynote of her failure—as well as the failure of the Sunday school teacher—they had been teaching the child how to die instead of how to live. Let us teach our children how to live the gospel, and then they will not need to be taught how to die. Nor will we see any bad results from teaching the gospel in its purity to little ones as soon as they can understand it.

I think my first impressions of the gospel were received while listening to my mother sing the church hymns. Being very fond of music, I would listen attentively to every word; and being of an inquiring turn of mind, I would ask explanations of whatever they contained which was not easily understood. Thus I gained a knowledge of the gospel, which made me eager, when opportunity presented itself, to listen to a fuller explanation of it by our elders. So it will be seen that I have a twofold reason for urging the use of songs in teaching the little minds.

I hope to hear from other mothers on this subject, that by exchanging views we may all improve our methods.

BABY'S HOUR.

There's a time at twilight that's baby's hour,
When the moonlight softly gleams
Through the window pane, and a soothing power
Seems to fill the air with dreams.

With her closely clasped in a fond embrace,
Her form to my heart I press,
She, placing her hands on her mother's face
With a loving, sweet caress.

Then my thoughts speed on o'er the years to come,

When my darling's feet will stray
To another love and another home,
From her mother's side away.

Ah, me! will the pathway be always steep
Where my loved one's feet have trod?
Will the tears of anguish and sorrow weep,
As she bends beneath the rod?

Would I then shield her from every ill
Which life in this world must bring,
Would I line her pathway with roses still,
Would I that she'd always sing?

Nay, Jesus has told us that we must bear
Our cross if with him we'd go;
If we'd be perfect we must not fear
This world with its pain and woe.

Dear Father, I pray thee to give her strength,
Whatever her life may be;
To walk on the roses or thorns at length,
That she may cling close to thee.

Pray give her as much of the sunshine, too,
And roses as she can bear,
And still to herself and her God be true,
Be loving and sweet and fair.

There's a time at twilight that's baby's hour,
When the moonlight softly gleams
Through the window pane, and a soothing
power
Seems to fill the air with dreams.

I dream of the future which He'll bestow
With a loving, tender hand;
No more of sorrow, or of joy, I know,
Than my darling's heart can stand.

MINA PERKINS KEARNEY.

WOMAN'S NOBLEST VOCATION.

Good housekeeping is easy housekeeping, and if a woman wears herself into shreds and tatters keeping house the case is proven against her. It is precisely in her ability to guard against this contingency that the housewife shows herself not only a good executive officer but as well a woman with ideals and a sense of proportion—one who does not forget that housekeeping is a means to home-making, not an end in itself—that the most perfect administration of domestic matters will not make a family happy in whom the love and spirit of home do not dwell. Home—not only a place to eat and sleep and work in, but a place to be happy in, a place to rest in and to be soothed, a place in which to love and be loved, a place for confidences, and counsel, and strengthening words, and hope, and heartening. It is a good thing, and a noble thing, and a satisfying thing to be a good housekeeper; there is no profession of which and in which a woman can be so proud, and when so blessed in head and heart and hand as to be able to make and keep one of those real homes which is a "little sunny spot of green in the great desert of the world"—if there is anything better than this in life I have not yet found it.—Sel.

DISAPPOINTED.

O, I am so disappointed! I have tried and tried, times without number, to do works of love, regardless of self-sacrifice. We never built glittering castles of success—merely a fair show. We tried to lay a good foundation, as we thought, for those under our supervision to build on, and did the work not for a name, but because we loved to do it. Our aim was to confer a blessing on those we loved, that they might make the world better by being in it. As they advanced in youth, our influence seemed to run out, or lose its hold, and we learned that an evil influence of a deep dye had been thrown around the objects of our affections, and they became enveloped and almost sealed against our efforts.

What a shock to our ambition, our zeal, and to our love. A heavy stroke, but such has been the experience of many. All those attributes seemed to be paralyzed. The brain was unsteady, the heart sank within, and it seemed as though that would be the last labor of love that we ever could perform. It must be the last act in a series of similar ones. We could never, never more attempt to labor in the field of good. We had not received one armful of the much desired fruit, only a little bunch of blossoms, and now they had withered and faded. What then was the use of trying? We did not want to labor in a field of evil, we could not; but what were we doing while thus reasoning? Dwarfing our spirit, shriveling the brain, weakening the nerves, and consequently the physical powers. That is just as sure as the spirit is expanded, the brain developed, and the physical strengthened; by an opposite course, we gain a firm hold on faith and trust. Happy are they who have such a possession. They cannot long remain in the dark valley of disappointments and wrongs.

When the farmer places his seed in the earth he does not receive his fruit at once; but he labors and watches the plants with care, and waits till God who is guarding him and his labor gives the increase. In like manner he watches over all our labors for good, and though they may not seem to us to be appreciated in the present, God is watching over it all, and every seed must in time bear fruit after its kind. It is just as sure in good works as in vegetation; and in like manner some works require a longer time for development than others.

There is some encouragement in the following thought: Every act performed leaves its impression on the soul of the performer, consequently every Christlike work makes the worker Christlike, whether the one we desire to benefit himself by the favor or not. If the latter is the case, we must necessarily be drawn closer to the Master, for he knows, as no other can know, the trials of such a situation, and can succor as no other can. We are weak, shortsighted children, looking on the surface, impatient to know the results of our labors, and thereby we retard their progress and unfit ourselves for present duties. But if we, like good children, patiently work on, trusting in our Parent's supervision, all will be well—all must be well.

If we so live as to receive the welcome plaudit: "Well done thou good and faithful," etc., our joy will be full; and probably much of it will spring from our blighted hopes and bitter disappointments. Just as a stream of water may be lost to sight, and yet be running on and on, under ground, to gush out in purity and splendor. If we received our desired reward daily, there would be nothing our due in the reckoning day, and besides we might take the honor to self, instead of giving it to whom it is due. O then, may we be blessed with all the necessary requirements.

Many have been our disappointments, but the Spirit whispers peace, above them all.

OBJECTIVE TEACHING.

The qualified teacher ought to understand something about the divine methods of teaching. The teaching should be for the whole man, appealing to the intellect, the affections, and the will. God in the word teaches not so much by definition as by person. He would teach a lesson on faith: so he embodies faith in a man we call Abraham. He would teach repentance: so the lesson of the prodigal son is placed before us. He would teach a lesson on love: so he brings before us Mary and the box of costly ointment. He would teach a lesson on giving: the widow casting in her mite is placed in the sacred word. He would teach a lesson on meekness: Moses is introduced to us. So you see he teaches through a person, making the person the embodiment of the lesson he would teach. Finally, we are led to Jesus Christ, the perfection of all teaching, presenting truth for the intellect, love for the affections, and authority for the will. Jesus Christ is King, and we are to bow to him. In this idea you see progress, growth, for time and for eternity.—Selected.

ACTIVITY IS BETTER THAN INDOLENCE.

No doubt all will readily agree that activity is better than indolence, yet how many of us prefer idleness to activity? If there is a work for each of us, and one or more of us is too indolent to perform our part, a greater responsibility will necessarily rest upon the active ones, for they will have their own work and the work of the slothful ones as well to perform.

But, says one, I do not wish to be indolent; but I do not feel as competent, as capable, as I know others to be. Fear of the consequences is no excuse for our refusing to do the best we can. There is not one but has felt their inability to perform certain duties when called upon, and has felt to shrink; but did not Moses feel that he could not do the work he was called upon to perform? And did not the Lord sustain him when he made the attempt, and did what he was capable of doing himself? Then if God is the same to-day, yesterday, and forever, and no respecter of persons, he will aid us inasmuch as we put forth as much effort and serve him as meekly.—Selected.

INDEPENDENCE AND OBSTINACY.

Independence is one thing, and obstinacy is quite another thing. Independence is standing all by one's self, without being dependent on another. Obstinacy is standing out against others, resisting all attempt to be swayed by others. An independent man as a rule is not an obstinate man. He hears readily both sides, and willingly considers them. He may even adopt the view of another which differs from his former inclination, but he does so because he of his own mind accepts that view without being controlled by anybody else. An obstinate man is ordinarily not an independent man. He sticks to his own opinion so closely that he cannot fairly consider any other, in order to see if it is better than his own. An independent man is an open-minded man. An obstinate man is not. Independence is quite consistent with positiveness of nature and manner in expressing present views, even though these views may be changed by the reasoning of the very next hour. Stubborn, unreasoning, blind obstinacy is never independent, although the man who is bound by it often deludes himself by thinking that he has independence.—Selected.

DISCOURAGEMENT.

Since the work of the Sabbath school was first advocated, there have lived thousands of persons who may well be termed cold water pourers, whose mission in life seems to be to prevent advancement in any good cause. They endeavor to accomplish their purpose by means of discouragements, small or great.

Those who discourage the Sunday school work are still to be found in our community. Yes, in some of our homes, and even in the pulpit. They work with a system or without a system, but always with the same object, the impediment of the work. And, why? For the same reason that the early Christians were persecuted; for the same reason that every good work has been similarly treated since the days of Adam. It is simply the trespass award which his satanic majesty gives to all who tread his territory unbidden. Often his majesty does not choose those who at heart oppose God's work to administer this discouragement to the earnest, but those who would do, but procrastinate, or the negligent, or the one who does not duly weigh his words. Discouragement where we feel we ought to receive encouragement is often the hardest to overcome. But let us continue the strife, and as long as we meet this resistance, rejoice; for when we cease to meet it, we shall know we have ceased to displease Satan, and our work is vain.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan District:—Having been selected as president of above district, I embrace this opportunity to address you through the church paper. As a servant of God anxious for the peace and happiness of this district, and eager to promote its welfare and greatness, and to see all its saints laboring together in unity, I request your hearty cooperation, that the work intrusted to all now before us to perform may be accomplished in that peace that follows works done according to law and order. In entering on the duties before us, it is most gratifying that we can do so with brightened hopes and assured confidence in the justice of our cause, that the truth borne by us is indeed the message of peace and glad tidings borne to man from Christ the Lord. In view of this, those who are in charge of branches will find it of great benefit in their labors of love that they shall avoid hasty or harsh expressions, so that in all their ministrations they shall be kindly disposed and considerate of the feelings of all, even of those who need to be chided for folly, or those whose acts have to be rebuked for sinful actions.

Those having the watchcare of branches will seek to be diligent and self-sacrificing in providing for all the regular meetings, and see that proper persons who are prompt, faithful, and spiritual, are in charge, and that the household of faith shall be fully instructed in all the principles of the gospel; and that they should be examples of purity and cleanliness, for be ye clean that minister in the Lord's house, in body, in mind, in conversation, and in act; be ye angry and sin not; let not the sun go down on your wrath.

Should any of the saints or friends wish preaching in their neighborhood, I shall be glad to correspond with them regarding the matter. I trust our district may not come behind in the accomplishment of good by reason of the limited number of church appointees, but let the local ministers labor harder and make up the deficiency.

Will the saints remember the Bishop's agent, Bro. Samuel Stroh, of Coldwater, Michigan, who is anxious to place your names on his books for tithing, freewill offerings, or mites, and by this means place in the field all the laborers God has called, then pray the Lord of the harvest that He will call more laborers, and I think he will. Let us all remember God works by law, and we must abide law and order in everything, or suffer the consequences. May God bless us all together for good is my prayer.

Prompt attention to these instructions will greatly aid the committee in their work, and prevent unnecessary trouble. A spiritual feast is anticipated. Let each one bring with them the spirit of peace, and contribute their portion of good, and thus gain our Father's blessing. Committee: S. W. Ashton, John Smith, and R. Bullard.

R. BULLARD, Dist. Pres.

Arrangements have been made for holding St. Louis district reunion July 21 to 31 inclusive. We have secured elegant grounds in beautiful Ramona Park. This park is about twelve miles west from St. Louis, located on the Suburban electric line, and our grounds are situated on a high elevation. There is plenty of shade, and a good spring of water on the grounds. The location is all the heart could desire for reunion purposes.

Tents for camping may be had at the following rates: 9½ x 12, $1.50 for the ten days; 12 x 14 $2 for the ten days. This includes putting them up and taking them down. All you have to do is to move in, keep in good humor, and move out at the conclusion of the reunion. Those desiring tents, who have not already arranged for them, will please communicate with J. C. Hitchcock, 2507 Slattery Street, St. Louis, Missouri, as early as possible, as we wish to know definitely about how many tents will be required early in July. We have contracted for a large tent that will seat about fifteen hundred people, for holding public services, and it is hoped that every saint in the district who can, by making a reasonable sacrifice, attend this reunion, will do so. It is our first reunion in this district, and every reasonable effort is being made on the part of the committee to make it a complete success, and the indications are decidedly favorable at present. If you will come with the intention of helping to make the meeting a success, and a prayerful spirit, we would feel entirely safe in giving you a guarantee that it would prove to you a successful time.

Among the speakers who are expected to be present are: Elders I. N. White, Heman C. Smith, John D. White, George F. Barraclough, and possibly others.

Special arrangements are being made on behalf of the Sunday school and Religio to have their part of our work properly represented. Sr. Edith Palfrey of Macon, Missouri, will be present, and an effort is being made to have Bro. T. A. Hougas, General Superintendent of the Sunday school also.

If you are so situated that you cannot take an entire tent, possibly only one member of the family able to go, write us, as we can doubtless arrange for your having a tent with some one else. If you think it at all possible for you to attend, let us hear from you, and possibly we can help remove some little obstacles. Remember this reunion is being given for the benefit of the saints, and for strengthening them spiritually, and for converting the honest in heart.

Don't forget the dates. Commence preparing now.

BENNETT.—At Lamoni, Iowa, May 27, 1899, Alvin E. and Frederick D., the only sons of Bro. Alma and Sr. Mary J. Bennett, were drowned in a pond where they were bathing. The younger went to help his brother when he heard him cry that he was drowning, and both went down together. Alvin was 11 years, 9 months, and 19 days old, and Fred's age was 8 years and 4 months. It was a terrible blow to the parents, and all the town sympathized with them. The public donated and purchased beautiful caskets in which they were laid to rest. Three daughters remain. Funeral sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Brn. R. S. Salyards and E. C. Briggs.

CALVIN.—Sarah Calvin was born December 21, 1819, in Pennsylvania. Married Woody Wells in 1838, who left her a widow after a married life of thirty-four years, with a family of six children. She again married in 1881, John Calvin, who died in 1897, after which she made her home with her daughter, at Richland Furnace, Ohio, where she died March 17, 1899. She was a member of the United Brethren Church for several years, and about two years before her death she heard the latter-day message, as brought by the angel, and yielded obedience to its demands, and died in the faith, saying, a short time before her departure, that she hoped to be able to again bear her testimony to its truth. J. L. Goodrich, assisted by Adon Cecil, delivered the sermon.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.)

Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844,—to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

INSPIRATION'S FIRST SENTENCE.

[Mr Austin Bierbower, the writer of this article, is a lawyer; but the New York Independent, from the columns of which we copy it, says that it contains a dozen sermons.]—Review and Herald.

The opening sentence of the Bible, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," contains five great universal terms, and speaks of as many boundless totalities—God, heaven, earth, creation, and the beginning. It is, perhaps, the most weighty sentence ever uttered, having the most gigantic members. In its comprehensive sweep it takes in all past time, all conceivable space, all known things, all power and intelligence, and the most comprehensive act of that intelligence and power. It gives a theory of the origin of things, names the originator, states the time of their origin, and makes all stand together in one system. This sentence is a declaration on nearly all the great problems now exercising scientists and philosophers—God, creation, the whole, eternity, cause, time, space, infinity, force, design, intelligence, will, destiny, and, in general, universality. There is in it the germ of the whole Bible, as of the whole of philosophy and the sciences.

This sentence is worthy of a God, and fit for the first utterance of a revelation. Did the world meet to hear the Deity speak, it could conceive of nothing greater that he should say; and the fact that the Bible commences with this sentence is a proof that it is from God. Man never uttered a greater proposition, and he cannot conceive that a greater could be uttered. In speaking his first words to earth, God spoke in terms worthy of Heaven. The thunder might have been a fit voice to utter this sentence, and infinite minds fit intelligences to hear it. God did not, in speaking to man, commence by telling how to cut a priest's coat or swing a censer. He spoke of the greatest things there are, and in their greatest relations. The Bible opens big, and in its commencement, at least, is worthy of God. He who begins will read on, if he is a thinker; for, though he can find nothing greater as he proceeds, it is proof enough of divinity if the dimensions found at the beginning are kept up. The author here spoke what has ever since seemed the first word of history; for we can go no further back than this utterance, and think of nothing beyond what it relates. He spoke the first word of philosophy; for we cannot go beyond the beginning in tracing causality, or think of any force behind creation. He spoke the first word of science; for we cannot go beyond the formation of the heavens and the earth. This is a sentence, therefore, of great beginnings—the beginning of the world, the beginning of history, the beginning of force, the beginning of revelation, the beginning of religion, the beginning of science; the beginning, in short, of the whole course of things which has come down to the present. God spoke of the commencement, and spoke of the whole, and spoke of what will continue to the end. His utterance concerned things that reach from everlasting to everlasting, and that spread over all space. It was, in short, an infinitely great utterance, worthy of the great speaker and of the great subjects of which he spoke. It was God speaking of infinity and eternity—Omni-science talking of universality.

Let us specify what is here said in this pregnant sentence so full of the speaker and of the subject. This sentence declares that there is a God, and so is a negating of atheism. On one of the greatest questions of the day—the question of theism, it gives an answer. The universe, it declares, is not all. Beyond matter and beyond the minds of which we have experience there is something else. God is represented as outside of nature; something distinct from matter, or from the insentient universe which has (according to nebular hypothesis) been developed from chaos.

This sentence also declares an intelgence precedes development, and does not merely follow in its train as an effect. It stands at the beginning of the world's career. This sentence, in denying the origin of the world by chance or insentient law, negatives the idea that force and matter—the materials of the world—are eternal. It claims absolute origination by God, teaching that power is greater than things, and has produced them. God is represented as excepted from the laws of Nature. Having made them, instead of being made or regulated by them, he is not to be judged by them.

It teaches, also, the freedom of the will, or power of intelligence to originate. Thought is at the beginning of the chain of cause and effect, and not a middle link. God created, and did not act as one compelled by an anterior force. Cause has a beginning, and does not run back infinitely. There are starters of forces, and not merely communicators. Instead of all being fated, and proceeding by necessity, there are breaks in the line of causality. For if God creates, the principle of absolute origination is established, and we need but one case of free will to be able to believe more.

This first utterance of the Bible also teaches the unity of God, saying that, "in the beginning God created the heaven and the earth," not "the gods" or "a god." As God created all—heaven and earth—there is nothing else in which a second deity could exercise supremacy; so that Jehovah has control of the whole universe. This thought, though trite now, because it is generally believed, was singularly new when uttered, and has powerfully influenced history.

It teaches, likewise, as a corollary of this, the unity of nature. All things—heaven and earth—are created by one power, and created together, so that they stand related in one system. There is here a foundation for the universality of law, for the complete harmony of things, and for reasoning from analogy and induction. An acquaintance with a part raises a presumption that the rest is like it, because it springs from the same source and is a part of the same plan.

This sentence also teaches the reality of design. The heavens and the earth being the work of intention, the adaptations which suggest wisdom and benevolence are the results of purpose, and not accidental. This utterance, if accepted, settles the question of the anteriority of design; that it is a cause and not an effect, going, like volition, with the real origin, instead of being a mere consciousness accompanying a result. There is here a foundation for the goodness of God, and for our reliance that things, being designed, will work out desirable ends.

We are taught in this same first utterance of Scripture the antiquity of the earth. It was created in the beginning, along with the heavens, and is coeval with the whole, as one system. Instead of being produced 6,000 years ago, or produced as a separate work, it appeared along with the universe, and has run as a part of the same history. The earth as well as the heavens came down from eternity, or from whatever we conceive the "beginning" to be. We should study the earth along with the other planets to know its history, and we should never forget the unity of cause or similarity of construction. There is a foundation here for the resemblances in the atmosphere, light, and elements of the different planets, as revealed by the spectrum, just as there is for the like application to all worlds of gravity and the other natural laws.

And so I might show in this first sentence of the Bible a declaration on all the other great questions mentioned—the question of the distinction between mind and matter, of intelligence and unintelligent force, of the natural and supernatural, of a control by intelligence, of a purpose in the movements and properties of things, of a planned destiny for the world and man, of a comprehension of all things in intelligence, and of many others which can be deduced from these. This sentence is a philosophy in itself; and one has but to believe the first line in the Bible to be able to accept nearly all the rest; so that, had the revelation closed after the first sentence, man would not have been without a revelation, and a comprehensive one at that. The scientific world are still engaged on the first verse of the Bible, which furnishes nearly all their current problems. Though they have from the very dawn of philosophy been working on this verse, they have not yet, in the nineteenth century, got any further. If they get over this sentence they will enter the whole field of creation, and be at one with revelation. When God here spake, he spake problems for all time, and men are now working them. For, though he spake so clearly that all can understand, he spake so greatly that none can fully comprehend.

RELIGIOUS TIDE OUT.

MR. ATCHISON NOTES THE EBB.

That the Methodist Church in cities had ceased to grow in membership; that the Christian church at large was passing through a revolution, and was face to face with a crisis; that religious themes no longer interested men, and that ministers, as such, were no longer revered, were some of the statements made by Rev. H. D. Atchison of Wilmette yesterday morning in a paper which he read before the Methodist preachers' meeting. A heated discussion followed, but the correctness of his statements was not questioned.

The meeting was held at the Englewood First Church, as a part of the program of the board of examination. Mr. Atchison's theme was "Church Life in the Twentieth Century—Not a Prophecy, but an Appeal," and his paper, which was both long and able, was listened to with deep and painful interest.

The Methodist Church, he said, was face to face with a crisis, and during the twentieth century would undergo startling changes. Of course, he said, the time limit on pastorates would be removed, and the presiding eldership would be abolished, but these were trifles. Other changes were impending which threatened the very life of the church. It might just as well be confessed that the church was not now winning men as it had done in the past, that it was failing to meet the spirit of the age, that the preachers were no longer revered for the sake of their office, and that multitudes of its members were dropping out and identifying themselves with literary societies or with Christian Science.

OTHER SECTS AFFECTED AS WELL.

He said the indifference was not confined to the Methodist Church, but extended to all the leading denominations. There was a time when Colonel Ingersoll divided with Christianity the interest of the masses of the people. But the time had come when the people felt so little interest in religion that they had lost all interest in Ingersoll's attacks on it also. Themes that once used to set the world aflame no longer attracted attention. Revivals were few and spasmodic, and as Froude said, "their spasmodic character was symptomatic of death."

Of these facts, the speaker, said, every pastor before him had the evidence in his own church. He knew that his church contained mighty little vital Christianity, that even after he got men converted it was hard to get them into the church, and that if he got them in it was hard work to keep them from falling out. If they ever moved away it would take a whole detective agency to watch one of them and get him to join a church in the place to which he went. The consequence was that in the Methodist churches in seven cities of over 500,000 inhabitants in this country last year there was a net gain of only 635 members, and that in the Methodist churches of all the cities in the country last year there was a net gain of only one-half of one per cent.

Mr. Atchison said there had been an effort to account for this condition of things by referring it to a universal pruning of church rolls. But the question then arose: How came the church rolls to contain so much driftwood? He was willing to admit that the world, the flesh and the devil had been at work, but he was afraid the trouble was in the attitude of the church. Had not the church narrowed the door too much by departing from John Wesley's formula for admission, "a desire to flee the wrath to come?"

DOCTRINES DO NOT ATTRACT.

In the twentieth century, he said, the church would pay less attention to nonessentials and more to essentials. Doctrinal preaching was no longer useful, for ministers who still pounded the Bible and preached the old doctrines could no longer make an impression. The emphasis hereafter will be laid on the ethical and spiritual teachings of Jesus. Certainly some new source of inspiration and enthusiasm must be found. The time had come when it was the mission of every man to rediscover Christianity. In the twentieth century there will be a tremendous reassertion of the essentials of Christianity.

In the discussion of the paper Rev. T. W. Strobridge admitted that for Christianity "the tide is out," and that the liberals had captured the field by proving that there was no need for any church. He thought the doctrine of hell ought to be preached more. Rev. W. E. Tilroe admitted that a revolution was in progress in the Christian church, and said its movement was toward Christ. Rev. C. H. Zimmerman said it was true "the tide was out," and the reason was the church was shedding no light on the social and economical problems of the day. Rev. John Nate said the mistake was that the doctrine of the Holy Spirit was not preached.

At 8:30 a. m. to-day the examination of candidates for the ministry on their studies for the last six months will be begun.—Chicago Times-Herald, March 25, 1899.

PASSING REFLECTIONS.

Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, President of the Religio organization, reports a marked improvement in the general growth of Religio work throughout the church, both in point of increase of numbers and of interest. A number of new societies have been organized of late and the attendance at the older organizations is better. A notable increase in interest and spirituality has followed the substitution of the Book of Mormon as a study, in lieu of the former programs.

This is encouraging and is also in evidence of the necessity and propriety of such course of study being followed. A close study of the three books is necessary to the information, spirituality, and general advancement of our people, young and old. The young people are studying the standard books in the Sunday school and in the Religio departments.

It ought to be fair to presume that every member of the church has studied and is yet engaged in a careful, discriminating study of the word, in harmony with the admonition so to do; but that such is the course pursued by all, we will not attempt to state.

An educated, well posted laity means greater demands upon and a better appreciation of the work of the ministry. It is useless for men to utter truths that cannot be comprehended—the Spirit will not move upon men to teach principles for which the people are unprepared. Jesus himself had many things to express which his disciples were not able to bear. The democratic spirit of the times under the institutions of which the church was organized, together with the general dissemination of knowledge among "the people," is in harmony with the manifest opportunity and destiny of the masses as a whole, to attain higher conditions. Higher conditions cannot be reached without knowledge—knowledge digested, comprehended, intelligently applied. All authority and special prerogatives are bestowed for the benefit of the people—to teach their rights and privileges and to execute and administer to their development and welfare. In harmony with this principle every official is but a servant privileged to labor in behalf of fellow men, in the spirit of the Christ, the servant of all. It is therefore in harmony with his Spirit, his example, his strict injunctions, that the welfare of the masses—"the common people," be kept in view, and that they be constantly impressed with the equality, the oneness of nature and destiny, hence with the unity of development common to all. The manifestation of such a spirit of common, fraternal, humble brotherhood, the diffusing of it among the people, will encourage them to rise to an understanding and use of the exalted character of their privileges, and hence prepare them for an intelligent, careful exercise of their duties and prerogatives under the law of "common consent," the principle God has permitted all his children to work by as coworkers with him.

The Almighty has dignified his children by such recognition of their rights and powers for good. He has made appeal to the race as intelligent beings—his offspring. It is evident therefore that high ground, high character, is demanded of those who assume the name of and seek for an inheritance with the Christ in the kingdom of God. "Our citizenship is in heaven," is the rendering by some translators of Philippians 3:20. Other statements of the word are equivalent to such rendering, because the ancient worthies are placed upon record (Hebrews 11) as seeking for a better and truer citizenship than that derived from human standards, ideals, and conditions.

Our young people are doing well to study the word; to continue in it. And those who have studied it, however closely, should continue its study. There is a fundamental, an intermediate, and an advanced knowledge of any branch of learning. The fundamental must first be obtained to insure further added attainment. The learner should pass beyond the range of the fundamental and intermediate and reach the higher, the comprehensive, advanced degree of knowledge, if he would think and live satisfactorily in his spiritual life, if he would be as useful as he or she ought to be in the economy of the church and in general life.

A desire to study the word, to obtain knowledge of any useful branch of learning necessary to personal usefulness, is a divine impulse that should be cultivated. He who develops capacity to think correctly and to act for the general good, is training himself to walk with the Master, whose life was a development in right thinking and right doing.

It ought to be patent to us as a people, by this time, that every injunction of the revelations of God should be put into practice. The follies and sufferings of ancient Israel, and of modern Israel as well, should be sufficient. There is no need that their errors be repeated by few or many. We should be able, with so many examples past and present, to apply the principle of intelligence to all the conditions of life. It is apparent that we must do so if we are to obtain temporal, physical, moral, and a spiritual salvation—the comprehensive salvation taught in the word of God.

We teach, as a people, in contrast to the sectarian world, that God's promises of spiritual blessing are not confined to the present, earthly life—that God has promised to bless with manifestations of his Spirit to men while in their earthly estate; that such are needed now in order to prepare for the future condition of bliss and exaltation. The same principle holds good in its application to character—men and women who expect to enter the realm of the redeemed in the presence of God should begin now to take on the character necessary to such a condition. The mere act of death will not change from a condition of carnality to one of holiness; nor can any unrighteous characteristics be exchanged for those pertaining to holiness, in the mere transition from mortality in death. Neither nature nor grace can perform such an instantaneous transformation; it is contrary to all the manifestations of divine law, natural and spiritual. The human character is qualified for change by gradual, steady, progressive methods of growth. The divine is so far superior to it that no one need entertain the hope of assuming it by sudden leaps or bounds. We are made partakers of the divine nature by the slow processes of righteous, careful, sacrifice of carnal nature with its miseducated, blind, limited ideals, by the daily aid of the divine Spirit, which "helpeth our infirmities."

The faithful disciple on receiving the gift of the Holy Spirit and realizing its demands, begins to sense something of the vast difference between his own and the divine nature. He is deeply impressed with the great gulf that intervenes, and intelligently recognizes the necessity of careful, steady, unceasing progress, if he is to attain where God and Christ are—where God's people, the pure in heart are to be, those who "overcome."

The experiences of the race, including that of the church in every age—not overlooking our own present conditions—emphasize the necessity of sober, intelligent study and application of what is written for the guidance of the people of God, individually and collectively.

Those who have attained may lead others in the progressive march, as examples to their children and the rising generation who shall follow, that both, old and young, may be an inspiration for good to each and to all.

THE EDITOR IN DENVER, COLORADO.

We held the last meeting at Denver, yesternight, with an audience perceptibly larger than either of the other week night meetings; which, of itself, was encouraging.

The Editor again essayed the rôle of speaker, the topic being the facts and logic of the Reorganization. The effort was well received.

Denver is in the exciting condition caused by the going into effect of a late law enacted by the State legislature declaring eight hours as a day's labor, in underground work, and such industries connected with mining and separating the metals from the ores as are known to be destructive to health, and the difficulties arising between employers and employees in fixing the prices of labor in the mines, mills, and smelting works because of the law; the employees seeking to secure better wages and the employers to keep the rates as low as possible with a view to the profits to be derived from the labor of those employed.

The result of the contest is that all the smelters in the State which are owned and controlled by a combination of capital known as the Trust have shut down, and the men who had been employed by them are out of work. Independent mines, mills, and separating works are yet running, while an effort is being made to secure such an adjustment and agreement between the men and their employers as shall be possible to keep the plants running. The agents of the Trust decline to treat with the agents of the Labor Union, or Confederation of Labor Unions, stating that they are willing to confer with their employees only, and do not recognize either the federation or their right to interfere. Both parties are anxious to avoid infractions of the eight-hour law; but while the workmen claim to be satisfied with the law, the employers seem to believe the law to be unconstitutional and desire to have it tested in the supreme court.

What the outcome will be it is not known. It is certain, however, that the strike will greatly affect many of the trades and industries of the State. Every class of tradespeople, grocers, gardeners, provision dealers, and a host of retail concerns which derived their custom and support from the army of men employed in the mining industries and their families will suffer, some of them be driven out of business, if the stagnation is long continued.

The Trust lays the blame of the strike at the door of the workingmen, and the representative men of the confederated workmen replace it at the door of the Trust, with emphasis.

So far there has been no violence, and both parties seem anxious that there shall be none. What a few weeks or a few months of enforced idleness may do is yet to be learned. As the situation now is, neither party to the contest is satisfied, and a little ill-natured work will precipitate an unhappy condition of affairs.

As it is understood that much of the money employed in the mining industry comes from sources outside of the State, there is a disposition on the part of some of the local business men to do away with the influence of foreign capital by the combining of home talent and means and the establishing of plants owned and controlled by local men, and thus get rid of the selfish, grasping dispositions of men from outside the State, who, while acquiring wealth and inordinate fortunes out of the natural resources, are totally indifferent to the welfare of the citizens and the success and prosperity of the State itself. It is to be hoped that the effort which these men of the State are essaying to do may be successful.

The new State offered an inviting field to foreign enterprise and the employment of foreign capital; but when that foreign element grows careless to the good of the State, it is time to call a halt.

It is not the province of the Editor to state an opinion which side of this contest is right, or which wrong; it is an unfortunate affair, let the immediate wrong be where it may. The incipient cause is the effort of one class of men to create wealth by the use of money without manual labor on their part; and the effort of another and more numerous class to secure a living, and if possible, competency by their labor. The result, a present conflict; the one class to cheapen the price of labor, the other to enhance its value.

By the kindness of Brn. Shupe, Gillen, Eye, and Roush, the Editor was enabled to see the city in several of its various parts, finishing by an ascent to the dome of the capitol, the base of which building is a mile or more above sea level. The sight from this elevation is on all sides charming. To the south, southwest, and west the mountain range shows Pike's and Long's and other named points, with the nearer ranges between. To the north and east the half desert plains present an endless view lost in the horizon. The city shows in a wondrous panorama, indicating what the needs, wants, and capabilities may, will, and have done.

The State has most excellent building material in unlimited supply; clays for brick of all sorts; stone, from sandstone to marble and granite, susceptible to the finest of dress and polish. The Statehouse is, we were told, made of all native material. It is an imposing and beautiful design, though appearing to be too low, like our national capitol, for its size otherwise. It is not yet finished inside; but what is done gives evidence of what it will be.

There are historical and archæological departments in the basement. In the former of these, the G. A. R. collection was open at the hour we visited the building. And there we saw a curious collection of war relics, and a sort of running history of the region, among them a pistol, revolver of large size that had lain in some pool of lime-charged water and had been completely encased in stone by the deposition of lime or other substance with which the water was charged. The rifle, powderhorn, shot pouch, and knife and sheath of the noted scout, Kit Carson, are here preserved. On the breech of the rifle are three rows of brass tacks, thirty-six in all, which the card attached states shows the number of Indians killed with the rifle, one tack for each life. The picture of the scout hanging on the west wall shows the face of a pleasant-faced, dark-eyed man, hair soft and smooth, yet with so alert, wide-awake an appearance that with the straight cut mouth and squared chin denote the man who was not to be trifled with, cheerful, alert, and full of courage, the stuff from which pioneers are made; a man of whom a friend might be proud, an enemy afraid.

The secular prospects at Denver are good. There will be no check on the prosperity of this Queen City, so far as worldly increase is concerned. Wealth and competence, profit and pleasure, are close neighbors to struggling poverty and toil-worn dependence. The conditions must needs continue—"How long, O Lord, how long?"

There are several large, fine churches in the city, and a number of the intermediate classes, from a little frame structure in North Denver, some sixteen feet wide by twenty-five or thirty in length, eight-foot posts, with only a transom window over the door, and a similar window in the rear, for either ventilation or light, up to the airy frame building and more showy brick structure of the Swedish M. E. lately erected. Among them is a little brick building, corner of Twenty-second Avenue and Arapahoe Street, seating about one hundred and twenty-five, where the saints have figuratively a place where to lay their ecclesiastical head. It is easy of approach, but attracts the very few only.

In the notes from Wray in HERALD for June 14, we notice that the sixth paragraph states that the baptisms of the children of Bro. Curtis were performed in a pool in a cavern. It ought to have been "canyon." We are inclined to fear that the printer and proof readers need to be drilled on editorial handwriting when the Editor is away from home.

JEW'S ACCEPT CHRIST AS A GREAT TEACHER.

WEINSTOCK BREAKS NEW GROUND.

HE ADDRESSES JEWS IN SACRAMENTO AND STOCKTON.

HIS PAPER READ IN THE SYNAGOGUES AND IS WELL RECEIVED.

H. Weinstock of Sacramento, has startled the orthodox members of his faith by a very remarkable paper which he read both at the synagogue at Sacramento and at Stockton. Mr. Weinstock is known as an original thinker, and has the courage of his convictions. He is one of the best read men in California, and for years has been the leader of the literary set in Sacramento, where his home is. His address is entitled, "Jesus the Jew," and the subject matter of it has been in his mind for a long time. It is here given in full:—

"Looking back into my early boyhood days, the picture is vividly brought to my mind of the old Rabbi under whose instruction I received my religious training.

"Though thirty odd years have since passed, I distinctly recall him as he sat at the head of the table surrounded by Jewish lads between the ages of seven and thirteen; his long flowing locks and white beard giving him the appearance of one of the Biblical patriarchs.

"I recall how innocent he was of all worldly knowledge, with what contempt he looked upon secular instruction, and how to him the sum of all human wisdom was confined to the Torah and the Talmud. The greatest living savant or philosopher, if unable to read Hebrew, was to him an ignoramus. All truth, all knowledge worth knowing, had, in his opinion, been uttered by the Hebrew prophets and the great Jewish Talmudists and commentators. To look elsewhere for wisdom or knowledge seemed to him a waste of time and energy and showed a lack of appreciation for Jewish thought and Jewish literature. The Talmud explains the saying in Joshua: 'The words of this Torah shall not cease from thy mouth and thou shalt meditate thereon day and night,' and to my old and pious religious teacher this injunction left no room for the study of anything but Jewish lore.

"I recall, upon one occasion, how one of the pupils, in some way, brought into the religious school a book containing the name of Jesus, I remember, when this was made known by some other lad who had noticed it, with what indignation the Rabbi spoke, and how he regarded the act as most sacrilegious and deserving of the severest censure. I further remember how he delivered an impassioned discourse to his pupils upon the centuries of suffering to which the Jews had been subjected because of Jesus.

"How the Jews had been made outcasts and wanderers over the face of the earth. How, for hundreds of years, they had been robbed and pillaged, tortured and plundered, how their beards had been torn from their roots, their teeth drawn from their jaws, their bodies cast into foul dungeons—how time and again they had been put on the rack, subjected to the thumbscrew and burned at the stake, all, all, on account of Jesus.

"I remember how aroused and impassioned he became while recounting the frightful sufferings and calamities which had been visited upon the Jews, for all of which, in his opinion, Jesus was primarily responsible. 'How, then,' he concluded, 'can any self-respecting, loyal Jew take into his hand even a book containing the name of Jesus? How could the name of Jesus be thought of without connecting it in the mind of the Jew with the centuries of inhuman outrage and persecution visited upon him by the followers of Jesus?'

"For many years these utterances and teachings clung to my mind, and doubtless had their influence in warping my thoughts and coloring my opinions. I could not but sympathize with the feelings and sentiments of my people, and, in common with my orthodox teacher, feel within my heart and soul that the badge of suffering had been placed upon the Jew by the words and acts of Jesus. All this I felt before I had had an opportunity to read and to think for myself, before the words and the deeds and the sentiments of the Nazarene were known to me. In time, the life of the man from Galilee became to me of profound interest; I read the story of his life as told in the New Testament; I read the conception of Jesus, as portrayed by some of the ablest modern Jewish and Christian scholars; I carefully studied his utterances as presented in the Gospels; and the picture of this great and wonderful character grew to me to be a very different one from that painted by my venerable and pious, but uninformed Hebrew teacher. I found that, according to New Testament traditions, Jesus was born a Jew, lived a Jew, died a Jew. I found that he preached nothing but Judaism in its purest and simplest form. I found that the thought of establishing a new belief or even a new sect, was farthest from his mind; that his aim was not to follow after the heathens, but to seek out the lost sheep of the house of Israel. I found that his mission seemed to be to uplift the lowly and to expose wickedness in high places. I found that he gave his heart, his soul, and his very being to the poor, to the sick, and to the needy. He said: 'I am not come to heal the sound; I have been sent unto the sick.' I found that he was a man of unbounded sympathies and of great moral courage; that he was simply striving to practice and to preach the moral code established by Moses and the prophets, and to literally put into practice in his daily life the great lawgiver's precept of 'love thy neighbor as thyself.' I found his teachings consisted chiefly in preaching:—

"Blessed are the poor in spirit.

"Blessed are they that mourn.

"Blessed are the meek.

"Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness.

"Blessed are the merciful.

"Blessed are the pure in heart.

"Blessed are the peacemakers.

"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake."

"I found these were all Jewish teachings, reduced to a clear and simple form, which the most orthodox and pious Jew could not but accept as a part of his own faith.

"Why, then, was it that, as the outcome of such ethical Jewish utterances, the Jew should have been so mistreated by the followers of Jesus, and Jesus so much contemned by the Jews?"

"Then followed, on my part, a study of Christianity and the causes which led to Jewish persecution. It took but little reading to learn that Paul, the Grecian Jew, and not Jesus, was the real founder of Christianity; that Paul was the man who conceived the idea of spreading Judaism among the heathens by preaching the God of Israel and the man Jesus, the Son of God. I found it was Paul's heroic qualities which enabled him, despite the severest persecution from Jew and Gentile, to surround himself with a large following, not of Jews alone but of heathens as well, who became believers in the Jewish God and worshipers of the Jewish carpenter, Jesus, whom they accepted as God's divinely begotten Son, sent upon earth to save the human family, 'hence begetting the new theology irreconcilable with the doctrines and discipline of the rabbis.'

"History tells how the followers of Paul were known as Jewish Christians, and how the Jews among them continued to observe all the Jewish forms and ceremonies and to lead Jewish lives, while the heathen converts, however, were not called upon to practice the Jewish forms or to observe the Jewish rites or dietary laws. A belief in God and in the teaching that Jesus was the Son of God made them eligible for membership.

"That the movement of Paul was contrary to the spirit of Jesus is not difficult of proof. Jesus said:—

"Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.

"For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled.

"Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven; but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

"I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

"Go not unto the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not, but go rather to the lost sheep of Israel."

"Despite these utterances on the part of Jesus, who himself observed all the Jewish forms and ceremonies, Paul, in his enthusiasm to proselyte and spread the belief in the Jewish God and in the Jewish teachings, did not hesitate to assume the right to abrogate and to modify many of the Jewish forms, rites, and ceremonies.

"Judaism never went out to proselyte among strangers. Its followers had so much faith in the truth which it taught that they patiently waited for strangers through their own convictions to come of their own accord and knock for admission at the doors of Judaism. Not so with Paul; his idea was to unite the whole human race under one belief. He soon realized, however, how hopeless the task, should he insist upon the observance on the part of the heathen of the severe and rigid ceremonialism of the Jew. To Paul the Spirit was all in all, the form nothing.

"Thus, from the very beginning do we find that much which was done by Paul and others in the name of Jesus was done of their own volition, against the manifest spirit and teachings of Jesus, and for which he should not be held responsible.

"As the Jewish Christian movement grew in numbers under the wonderful leadership of Paul it also grew in power, until it attained such proportions in Rome—the very heart of heathendom—that it greatly alarmed the authorities. One of the pastimes of Nero, the Roman Emperor, was the burning at the stake of numberless innocent Christians, simply because they were unwilling to forsake their faith.

"Thus has Christian, in common with Jew, had his fullest share of religious persecution. No sooner, however, did Constantine of Rome adopt Christianity and incorporate therein many heathenish customs and practices, and make it the state religion of the Roman world, when the Christians in turn became the persecutors, and during the long vista of centuries which has since passed they have sacrificed, in the name of Jesus, untold generations of innocent men, women, and children.

"How Jesus can be held responsible for such conduct on the part of his misguided followers seems inconceivable.

"The Jew of to-day resents the idea of being held responsible for the crucifixion of Jesus. The Jew of to-day must not, therefore, hold the memory of Jesus responsible for acts committed by his blinded followers after his death and in violence to his teachings of nonresistance.

"Imagine, if you can, this gentle teacher in Israel coming back to life and seeing his Catholic follower burning at the stake his Protestant follower, all in the name of Jesus. Or imagine him returned to earth and finding both his Catholic and Protestant worshippers persecuting in his name the members of the faith in which he was born and lived and died, what think you would be his feelings? Unless his spirit was very different from the one given him by his disciples, such scenes would rack and distract him. To feel himself the innocent cause for the shedding of innocent blood would make him cry out in the agony of his soul and to stretch out his hands in the attempt to stop the murderous work going on in his name. If he could come to life again and learn of the myriads of helpless men and women who, in his name, have been racked and tortured and put to horrible deaths, he would bemoan the hour that first gave him birth and feel himself to have been a blighting curse where he had hoped to be a blessing. If, restored to life, he were to learn of the endless and bloodthirsty religious wars which for decades were waged among themselves by his misguided followers, if he were to learn of the carnage and desolation, of the endless sorrow and suffering, of the countless generations of misery caused by his misinterpreted teachings, he would sit in sackcloth and ashes and yield himself to the anguish of a breaking heart.

"God, in his wisdom, has ordained that joy shall come from sorrow, that gain shall come from pain, that progress shall come from adversity, that prosperity shall come from misfortune, that tolerance shall come from persecution, that enlightenment shall come from ignorance and that love shall come from hatred.

"That God is all-wise and all-knowing is made manifest on all sides. That his ways, which seem to us so mysterious, are the ways of goodness and wisdom, is proven every day of our lives. That things which seem God's curses turn into blessings is shown us time and again."

"It has been truly said that God often communes with his children, and that when he has a message to convey he chooses his messenger and sends us his word in his own inscrutable way. When God felt the hour had come to reveal himself to man he chose for his messenger the Patriarch Abraham, and gave to him the courage to proclaim, in the midst of idolatry, the belief in an unknowable and unseeable God. When the Almighty felt the time was at hand to uplift his people he chose Moses as his messenger and touched him with the spark of divinity, and the children of Israel became the possessors of the immortal Ten Commandments. When the hour arrived for these commandments to be spread among the nations of the world Jesus was chosen, who, through his disciple Paul, became the herald of God's word, and thus brought to the benumbed and benighted minds of the heathen nations a moral joy and a spiritual bliss heretofore to them unknown.

"Had there been no Abraham there would have been no Moses. Had there been no Moses there would have been no Jesus. Had there been no Jesus there would have been no Paul. Had there been no Paul there would have been no Christianity. Had there been no Christianity there would have been no Luther. Had there been no Luther there would have been no Pilgrim Fathers to land on these shores with the Jewish Bible under their arms. Had there been no Pilgrim Fathers there would have been no civil or religious liberty. Had there been no civil or religious liberty, tyranny and despotism would still rule the earth and the human family would still live in mental, moral, and physical bondage.

"Had there been no Jesus and no Paul the God of Israel would still be the God of a handful, the God of a petty, obscure, and insignificant tribe of Jews. Had there been no Jesus and no Paul, the divine moral teachings of Moses would still be confined to the thinly-scattered believers in Judaism, and the great world of men and women would have been left so much the poorer because of their ignorance of these benign teachings.

"Let us, then, as Jews, be thankful that there was a Jesus and a Paul. Let us more keenly appreciate that through the wonderful influence of these heroic characters, the mission of the Jew is being better fulfilled and his teachings are being spread to the remotest nooks and corners of the world by Christianity, a religion by which millions have been, and still are, quickened and inspired. Let us not forget that, through the influence of Jesus and Paul, the Ten Commandments of Moses, the sublime utterances of Isaiah, of Micah, of Jeremiah, the Proverbs of Solomon, and the Psalms of David, have brought and are bringing, and will continue to bring, balm and comfort, joy and happiness, spiritual bliss and moral sunshine into untold millions of homes.

"Thus is the Christian, through Jesus and Paul, deeply indebted to the Jew; and thus is the Jew, also through Jesus and Paul, deeply indebted to the Christian. The Christian and Jew of to-day, each in his own way, is manfully striving to perform his part in preaching the belief in a God who is all-just, all-wise, and all-knowing; each is trying to do his share to fulfill his mission by spreading among his fellow men a love for morality and righteousness.

"May Jew and Christian continue to seek out the many beliefs they have in common, and to join hands in working together for common humanity.

"May the object lesson become multiplied a thousandfold the world over, which for years existed in our midst, of our own worthy rabbi working in the most perfect harmony with a Protestant ex-clergyman and a devout Catholic, for the common purpose of saving the youth in our midst from vice and degradation. What a glory and a joy it would be to the Nazarene were he now to return to life and find his Jewish brethren and his Christian followers living side by side in peace and in harmony and working together for a common good!

"May the Jew continue to cultivate a broad and liberal spirit; may he avoid the narrowness, the religious exclusiveness of the Pharisee and Saducee of old. May his sympathies continue to widen, his religious horizon to broaden, and may his spirit of tolerance become his crowning glory.

"May the Christian continue to preach and to practice the ethics of Judaism as set forth in the old, as well as in the New Testament. May he strive to eliminate from Christianity the elements of paganism, grafted into it during its earlier history, and may his doctrines become still more purified and brought back to the pure and simple belief taught by the humble carpenter from Galilee.

"May Jew and Christian thus be brought into still closer touch and into still greater harmony and fellowship."

"May each of us, in our own way strive to fulfill the noble teachings of our belief and to aim to live in accordance with the many lofty and beautiful truths imbibed at the breast of Judaism by the Nazarene and by Paul, which they gave back to the world clothed in a newer and brighter form.

"May we as Jews, in this spirit, learn to truly love our neighbors as ourselves, and, by example as well as by precept, become a nation of priests and a blessing to the human family."—San Francisco Evening Bulletin, June 11.

Bro. F. A. Severy sends us the foregoing article with the following statement:—

OAKLAND, Cal., June 11.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed find a clipping which I know will interest you. I am acquainted with Mr. Weinstock by reputation. He is an influential business man of Sacramento, a man that is considered well posted, a leader in society and, I think, an influence in politics. He is a representative man of Sacramento and, perhaps, of the State of California. I thank our Father that the way is opening for our Jewish brothers to accept our blessed Redeemer and that the time of the Gentiles is nearly expired; for I feel that with Hebrew help the gospel will be preached with greater results following than do now. I love the Jew; one reason is that he seems to understand the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. May God bless and enlighten him. I have never known a Jew to allow one of his own nationality to want for means to help himself, providing the one in want was worthy. Many good things can be learned from him.

Your brother in the cause of Jesus Christ,
F. A. SEVERY.

Our readers will remember the Jewish movement toward Christianity under the leadership of Joseph Rabinowitz, a Russian Jewish Rabbi, some years ago. Of that movement we have learned nothing of late. Christian ministers who made it a study agreed that it should be left to develop, free from any effort to sectarianize it in favor of any particular religious organization. That movement with others, in Palestine and elsewhere, is having a tendency to cause the Jewish people to regard Christianity with more liberality of spirit, save where, in countries like Russia, the narrow spirit and persecutions of the prevailing faith conduce to arousing the antipathy of the Jewish people. But in Europe, in the United States, and in Jerusalem itself, the intermixture of the Jew with his Gentile neighbors must certainly eventuate in a closer inspection of the life and character of Jesus the Messiah, the Jew of life to all races.

How far Mr. Weinstock may be influenced toward the acceptance of the Christ as a divine teacher and the Savior of the race, time must tell. The influence of his work in that direction must have its effect.

There is a time to come (and it must be near) when the ministry will be sent to the Jewish people with the gospel; for to them pertain the giving of the law and the promises past and present. We are interested in noting the signs of the times which now so strongly verify the teachings of holy writ.

WORLD ITEMS.

A Berlin dispatch to the Associated Press, dated June 17, contains the following:—

TO OFFER PRAYER A CRIME.

The highest court of Cassel has decided that a clergyman of a denomination not officially recognized by the government is considered a layman, and for such persons to offer public prayer is a crime. A clergyman named Wicke has been sent to jail for this offense.

This item indicates some of the difficulties that stand in the way of mission work in some portions of Europe. However, such conservatism cannot long continue, under the spirit of toleration that is everywhere being diffused. It may be that such cases as the one named may result in a reaction of sentiment against exclusiveness in favor of a state church. The day is passing when the consciences of the German or other peoples can be bound by the red tape of customs that have no other authority than the past and its precedents to do them reverence. It is to be hoped that Clergyman Wicke may gain the victory as did Luther in defiance of a conservative decree.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the well-informed Kreuz Zeitung claims an internal crisis in Russia is fast approaching, pointing out that the Russian labor troubles at Riga, the disturbances of the students, and the famine in various provinces are symptoms of the coming of greater trouble. The paper adds that it has inside information enabling it to say that perfect demoralization prevails in the upper government circles of Russia, owing to the opposing influence of the Czar on one side and his mother on the other. It cites recent incidents as proving this.

The same telegram contains the above. That Russia, one of the leading powers of the world, with her vast territory and millions of people, is not to feel the forces that are moving for the emancipation of the race, is not intelligently conceivable; and the present sufferings of the people, together with the many rigorous provisions and regulations of the government, under which the people are regarded largely as creatures subject to the whim and caprice of the crown, cannot much longer continue in the light of the closing nineteenth century. The influences of free peoples and free institutions is becoming known and the same freedom is desired by the masses of mankind everywhere. Let the leaven of liberty continue to work until all men are in fact "free and equal." The famine, mentioned below, adds to the gravity of the situation.

London, June 17.—The hopes that the dire famine prevailing in seven or eight governments of Russia, with a population upwards of 11,000,000, would be ameliorated by the new crops within a couple of months, are now dashed to the ground, as it is officially admitted the harvest is practically a failure. Owing to the protracted drought the crops have been scorched, and in large areas in the south they are not worth the cost of reaping, while the cold in the northern provinces has been almost equally damaging. To add to the misery of the situation there is no hay and few vegetables, and the beet root, the principal crop in the Province of Kieff, has been practically ruined. The whole situation promises to end in appalling disaster.

PASSING OF INFANT BAPTISM.

The following from the Chicago Tribune of June 12, '99, is a synopsis of a sermon, "Must Infant Baptism Go?" by Rev. J. H. O. Smith, the most recent image smasher that has come upon the stage of action. It is further in evidence of the statement of modern revelation that men have strayed from the ordinances of the gospel and thereby broken the everlasting covenant. We shall not be obliged to wait very long for further developments of a similar character. Change, sensation, is the order of the day.

"Must Infant Baptism Go?" was answered by the Rev. J. H. O. Smith in his sermon prelude last evening at the Union Christian church as follows:—

"If it can be shown that infant baptism was commanded or practiced by Christ or his apostles it will remain as long as the church stands, but if this cannot be shown sooner or later, it must go with other human innovations for which divine authority was claimed.

"We would not say one word against a possible dedication to the Lord that might comfort mothers' hearts and provide an occasional beautiful service for a church, but infant baptism is founded on the doctrine of original sin and baptism for the remission of sins. The doctrine of original sin confronts the statement of Christ that the kingdom of Christ is composed of such as are like little children. It is difficult for love to look into the serene eyes of infancy and believe the awful doctrine of total hereditary depravity. It is hard even for loving superstition to believe that an unbaptized infant will suffer endless punishment for the carelessness of its parents.

"Sweep away this diabolical doctrine and what excuse remains to baptize a helpless, passive child? 'Repent and be baptized,' said Peter. Sooner or later the Protestant church will refuse to anticipate and thus forbid the obedience of the adult by the enforced baptism of the child."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Elder James Moler, Creola, Ohio, June 15:—

The work is moving in our district as fast as we can expect with the few laborers. I recently baptized six in Lawrence County, Ohio; others are apparently near the kingdom.

Bro. R. M. Maloney, Guy, Oklahoma, June 15, writes:—

Prospects for the work in our field looking brighter; we have received new encouragement of late, which cheers us in the conflict. Crops in Oklahoma are fine; wheat harvest commences next week. I never saw a nicer prospect for corn. Health good and we are feeling well in the work.

On the 20th Bro. Maloney wrote from the same place:—

The condition of the work here is improving. We expect a reviving time at our camp meeting here in August. Will send notice soon so the people will know location. In Herald of June 7, on page 373, the last line of my letter should read "flee these things," instead of "feel these things."

Bro. W. H. Rhoads, Cordova, Illinois, June 13:—

Am on my way to Savanna, to open up new places for preaching; and being alone I ask the prayers of the saints that I may have the Spirit and the promises of God with me in the work. My mission address is, No. 69 N. Henderson Street, Galesburg, Illinois.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Catalogues of Graceland College are now ready and being mailed to all missionaries and branch presidents. All others who can use them to the advantage of Graceland will advance its interests by sending to the secretary, Bro. R. S. Salyards, Lamoni, Iowa, for one or more copies, as may be needed.

Bro. J. W. Wight returned to Lamoni on Sunday, the 18th inst., Bro. Heman C. Smith on the 19th, and Bro. I. N. White the 21st, all from Chicago, Illinois, where they had been in the interests of church work.

Bro. J. C. Clapp left for his new mission field, Eastern Iowa, on Saturday, June 17.

President Alex. H. Smith and quite a company of others, including Sunday school and Religio workers, went to Lucas, Iowa, the 22d inst. to attend Decatur district conference and convention, to be held the 22d to 25th.

Bro. A. L. Livings, McNeill, Mississippi, writes June 10, inclosing clipping from the Poplarville, Mississippi, Enterprise, of June 8. The clipping states that elders of the Utah Church at work in the State met at Jackson and concluded to abandon missionary efforts there. We note the item for whatever it may be worth. The item represents them as having met with an unfavorable reception in general in that State.

The present address of Elder Thomas W. Williams is No. 1014 Alpine Street, Los Angeles, California.

The ministry, general or local, to whom catalogues of Graceland College are now being mailed, are requested to use them in the interests of the college by showing them where they will advertise the institution. Should they learn of any wishing catalogues they are requested to forward names and address to "Secretary Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa."

Bro. D. W. Wight, writing from Plain City, Utah, June 21, reports having baptized fourteen and others about ready for baptism, since his late return to Utah. He also reports Sunday school work as developing among our people there.

ROMAN CATHOLIC DENUNCIATIONS.
NO. 2.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

THE BIBLE AND TRADITION.

The Catholic rule of faith, as I stated before, is not merely the written word of God, but the whole word of God, both written and unwritten; in other words, Scripture and Tradition, and these propounded and explained by the Catholic Church.—Right Reverend Doctor Milner, in "End of Controversy," Letter 10, p. 125.

The Catholic Church claims "the aid of God's Holy Spirit, to enable her to decide what her faith is, and has ever been in such articles as have been made known to her by Scripture and Tradition."—Ibid., Letter 12, p. 168.

In reference to the Papist churches we find on page 166 of the same work:—

It is a fundamental maxim with them all, never to admit of any tenet, but such as is believed by all the bishops, and was believed by their predecessors up to the apostles themselves.

Supposing the apostles had not left us the scriptures, ought we not still to have followed the ordinance of tradition, which they consigned to those to whom they committed the churches? It is this ordinance of tradition which many nations of barbarians, believing in Christ, follow, without the use of letters or ink.—Advers. Haeres., Letter 4, c. 64.

We begin, therefore, with laying it down as a maxim, that these men [opponents of their church] ought not to be allowed to argue at all from scripture. In fact these disputes about the sense of scripture, have generally no other effect than to disorder either the stomach or the brain. It is, therefore, the wrong method to appeal to the scriptures, since these afford either no decision, or, at most, only a doubtful one. And even, if this were not the case, still in appealing to scripture, the natural order of things requires that we should first inquire to whom the scriptures belong. From whom, and by whom, and on what occasion, and to whom that tradition was delivered by which we became Christians.—Praescrip. Advers. Haeres. edit. Rhenan, pp. 36, 37.

Joseph Mumford has said that the Catholic Church "pretends to no new revelations, but only to declare clearly what she finds to have before been revealed."—Question of Questions, Sec. 24, par. 14.

Now to see what the councils on their part are to do; I must tell you, that their chief business is to examine the points in controversy; hearing all that occurs for the one side and the other, and permitting several replies, if any remain, in due time to be made. After this diligence is used, they consider what seems most conformable to the word of God, and every one's vote is passed upon this particular. But here I must tell you, that by the word of God, all councils and orthodox believers have ever understood, not only God's written word, contained in scripture, but also his unwritten word made known to the Church ONLY by tradition, which tradition also is, and was ever accounted by the church the very best and surest interpreter of the scripture. The votes therefore of the fathers assembled in council are demanded, not only of what they think to be conformable to God's word written in scripture, but also how conformable such a point is, or is not, to that tradition which they have all received from the fathers of their church, as delivered to them from their fathers for God's word, by tradition committed to their forefathers as such, from the apostles themselves.—Ibid., sec. 19, par. 2.

This only, and nothing but this, the Catholic Church does do by the decrees of her council; that what before they had received only by tradition from their ancestors, that now they leave consigned in authentic writing to all posterity.—Ibid., sec. 19, par. 2.

If you fly to the tradition of the church only of the first four hundred years, remember that the Council of Carthage just after the end of those years, alleged the ancient tradition of their fathers, which they judged sufficient for defining our canon. They, who were so near those first four hundred years, knew far better the more universal tradition of that age, than we can twelve hundred years after it. True it is (nothing being defined till then), private doctors were free to follow what they judged to be truest; and as you find them varying from our canon, some in some books, and some in others; so you will find them varying from one another, and varying also from you [meaning the Protestant canon], for in those first four hundred years, Melitus and Nazianzen excluded the book of Esther, which you add. Origen doubts of the epistle to the Hebrews, of the second of St. Peter, of the first and second of St. John; St. Cyprian and Nazianzen, leave the Apocalypse or Revelation out of their canon. Eusebius doubts of it.

Elsewhere he says:—

All those holy fathers agreed ever in this, that such books were evidently God's word, which had evidently a sufficient tradition for them. Now in the days of those fathers who thus varied from one another, it was not by any infallible means made known to all, that those books about which their variance was, were recommended for God's infallible word, by a tradition clearly sufficient to ground belief; for the church had not as yet examined and defined, whether tradition did clearly enough show such and such books to be God's infallible word. But in the days of St. Austin, the third Council of Carthage, Anno 397, examined how sufficient or insufficient the tradition of the church was, which recommended those books for scripture, about which there was so much doubt and contrariety of opinions. They found all the books contained in our canon, of which you account so many apocryphal, to have been recommended by tradition, sufficient to ground faith upon. For on this ground (Can. 47) they proceeded in defining all the books in our canon to be canonical. Because, say they, we have received from our fathers that those books were to be read in the church. Pope Innocent the First, who lived Anno 402, being requested by Exuperius, bishop of Toulouse, to declare unto him which books were canonical, he answers, (Ep. 3,) that having examined what sufficient tradition did demonstrate, he sets down,—what books are received in the canon of the Holy Scriptures, in the end of his epistle, c. 7. To wit, just those which we now have in our canon: and though he rejects many other books, yet he rejects not one of these.—Ibid., sec. 3, pars. 4, 12.

The whole church through the whole world was governed by tradition only, for the first two thousand years.—Ibid., sec. 19, par. 8.

Dr. Milner says of the Catholic Church:—

She does not dictate an exposition of the whole Bible, because she has no tradition of a very great proportion of it, as for example, concerning the prophecy of Enoch, quoted by Jude 14; and the baptism for the dead of which St. Paul makes mention.—End of Controversy, Letter 12, p. 169.

CONFESSION.

The twenty-first canon of the fourth council of the Lateran, held A. D. 1215, at the instance of Pope Innocent III., makes auricular confession an article of faith. It reads:—

Every one of the faithful of both sexes, after he shall have reached years of discretion, shall by himself alone faithfully confess all his sins at least once a year to his own priest, and strive to perform according to his ability the penance imposed upon him, reverently partaking of the sacrament of the Eucharist at least at Easter—unless perhaps by the advice of his priest, for some reasonable cause he should judge that for a time he should abstain from partaking of it—otherwise let the living be hindered from entering the church and let the dead be deprived of Christian burial.

THE PRIEST PARDONS.

In the Catholic Catechism published with the official indorsement of Cardinals McClosky, Weisman, and Bishop Lynch, of Charleston, we find:—

What is the sacrament of Penance? It is a sacrament in which the priest, in the place of God, forgives sins, when the sinner is heartily sorry for them, sincerely confesses them, and is willing to perform the penance imposed upon him.

Does the priest truly remit the sins, or does he only declare that they are remitted? The priest does really and truly remit the sins, in virtue of the power given him by Christ.

But could we not also receive forgiveness of our sins by confessing them to God alone? By no means; or else the full power which Christ gave to the priest, of retaining or remitting them according to their judgment, would indeed, be vain and useless.

The Council of Trent teaches:—

Our sins are forgiven by the absolution of the priest. The voice of the priest is to be heard as the voice of Christ himself. . . . Unlike the authority given to the priest of the old law, the power with which the priests of the new law are invested is not simply to declare that priests are forgiven, but as the minister (or agent) of God really to absolve from sin.

In Father Damen's Lectures which I have before me the same doctrine is defended on pages 47-60, in the third lecture, delivered in the city of New York. Relating a circumstance where he absolved a sick woman who was being treated by a non-Catholic doctor, he says:—

"You do not pretend to forgive the sins, do you?" said the doctor. "Yes, sir, I do."

The following canons were issued by the Fathers of Trent.

If anyone shall say that sacramental absolution by a priest is not a judicial act, but a mere ministry to pronounce and declare that sins are remitted to the person making confession, provided that he only believes that he is absolved, even though the priest should not absolve seriously, but in a joke, let him be accursed!

If anyone shall say that priests who are in mortal sin have not the power of binding or loosing, or that priests are not the only ministers of absolution, let him be accursed.

Without multiplying quotations any further I shall conclude by referring the reader to Gury's and Peter Deus' Moral Theology. These are Catholic works and in them is to be found some of the most repulsive and unscriptural doctrines of that apostate church. Much of it is too obscene to be published in such a paper as the Herald. They do not, I believe, exist as a whole in the English language, and I only have access to translated portions.

CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS; OR,
"MYSTERY OF INIQUITY."—NO I.

BY ELDER C. SCOTT.

And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three-score days.—Rev. 12: 6.

No doubt the speculation that has been indulged in concerning this subject first and last would fill volumes. But this does not lessen its importance to those having a desire to understand the truth. This subject is one of divine revelation, and therefore demands the attention of all interested in the work of the Lord and his purposes concerning man. The fortunes, as well as the misfortunes, that have attended the Church of Jesus Christ, as established near nineteen hundred years ago; its rise, glory, continuance, and decline; its achievements, victories, and its failure, must ever be a subject of wonder and great and deep interest to the saints here. Divine in origin and development; glorious and divinely powerful in its endowment; spiritual and holy in character; infinite in design and purpose; its mission educational and administrative; its authority and its laws coming from God; its work among mankind paradoxical, at once that of "peace on earth," and yet war; its object, the salvation of man from sin and death; peace and salvation to all who abhor evil and hate sin; "a sword" because of man's obstinate, unregenerate resistance to its holy truth. "I came not to send peace but a sword." (Matt. 10: 34.) On God's part, "peace on earth;" on the part of man, his wicked opposition to that which is good, true, and holy, "a sword." A clash of arms between God, Christ, and holy men—saints—on one hand, and Satan-Dragon, Idolatrous Rome, and men who resist the truth on the other. A service of holiness to God on one side; a yielding to the devices of the wicked one on the other. The sword of the Spirit on one side, and carnal armor on the part of the opposition. Spiritual and divine light, judgment, and wisdom on Christ's part; man's evil, fallen, depraved, carnal propensities on the opposite side with man's agency as the dividing line, and the final decision as to man's condition left with himself, as to whether he will be saved and be holy, or remain forever on the side of evil and be unholy still, and remain unsaved, unredeemed.

Panoplied thus in the armor of light, of God, the church moved out on its mission of heavenly love, mercy, and truth near nineteen hundred years ago, adorned as a pure and holy virgin, the most appropriate symbol of love and uprightness and purity and fidelity to her troth, sustained by the promise of the Groom, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself," and ornamented with lustrous jewels, the Holy Ghost and its endowments; lighted up with the light, law, and wisdom of God, "as a city set on a hill," the light of the world, the example of righteousness to all the world.

This church had Jesus Christ as its king, lawgiver, commander, and leader. (Isa. 55: 4; John 12: 48-50; Matt. 28: 18-20.) He was its Savior; his law or gospel its law and guide; his called and authorized ministry its officers. They were: apostles, prophets, high priests, evangelists, pastors, teachers, bishops, deacons, helps, and governments. (Matt. 10: 2; 1 Cor. 12: 27-31; Eph. 4: 8-13; Phil. 1: 1; Ps. 132: 16; Isa. 61: 6; Joel 2: 15-17; Acts 6: 7; 1 Peter 2: 9.) The Holy Ghost, in all its office work and gifts and powers, constituted the breath of life, animation, strength, and glory of the church. Through the divine revealings of the Holy Spirit, the ministry were called, authorized, and by the gospel law and the Spirit directed in their ministerial labors and ministrations.

This bride of Christ, church, body of Christ, or kingdom of heaven, thus empowered, authorized, and endowed, was evidently the woman as seen by the Apostle John, as described in his book of Revelation, chapter 12, verses 1, 2:—

A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: and she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

The red dragon as evidently represents the idolatrous Roman government from the time of its organization, B. C. 756, to its submergence into Papal Rome, 540 A. D., including its seven general successive forms of governments, and the ten subdivisions occurring A. D. 360 to 500.

We think it quite certain that the dragon, Idolatrous Rome, usually called Infidel Rome, gave to Papal Rome "his power, and his seat, and great authority" (Rev. 13: 2), commencing with the work of Constantine the Great, when that emperor began remodeling the church in the fourth century, and by successive stages tendering to the church human greatness and riches till a climax was reached in the reign of Emperor Justinian, about A. D. 540, when he through the bishop at Rome, tendered his compliments to the church, through his chief military officer, Belisarius, who nominated Pontiff Vigi- lius, who succeeded Sylverius, who had been deposed and banished from Rome by General Belisarius!

Vigilius was the servile creature of the imperial court, and, except in one or two instances, always complied with its mandates. . . .

Justinian was fond of theological studies, and interfered much in the controversies of the church. A chief reason for his confirming the choice of Belisarius in making Vigilius a pope, was the expectation that so unprincipled a man would readily become an instrument for his own designs.—Lives of the Popes, p. 84.

Justinian was intent on fixing the orthodox faith according to a creed of his own. In a contest of strength of the church and the state, Justinian on one side, and Pope Vigilius on the other, relating to the question of the nature of the personality of Christ, Justinian and the state came out rather in the advance, and Vigilius and the church were found to be at the mercy of the state. And from the days of Justinian forward, the election of the popes, though done by the bishops and cardinals direct, was generally indirectly influenced by the imperial councils.

This union of church and state was effected by degrees. So we now return to the apostolic age, and note some events leading up to this date—540 A. D.

Soon after the founding of the church, corrupt men were found therein, whose influence weakened its energies, by teaching false and corrupt doctrines and laying the foundation for divisions. (2 Tim. 1: 15; 2: 17, 18; Rom. 16: 17.) Of these wicked men Paul wrote to the Corinthians saying:—

For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works.—2 Cor. 11: 13-15.

Paul prophesied in A. D. 50:—

For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn everyone night and day with tears.—Acts 20: 29-31.

How sad must have been the great heart of the apostle during those three years of warning, delivered as it was to the divinely authorized ministers, overseers of the church, those set to watch for its welfare. It was with the ministry the evils to the Church of God were to begin. They were to be willingly unfaithful to their sacred trust; speak "perverse things," false doctrine, "doctrines of devils," "speaking lies in hypocrisy," and with seared, hardened, unscrupulous consciences, bring "in damnable heresies,"—doctrines that damn instead of save those believing them,— and so rend the church for whom Christ died, into hating, contending parties, sects, spreading spiritual disease and death broadcast over the church like a pall of the night. Of this deathly work of ministers, false to their divinely imposed trust, Jesus prophesied:—

And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.—Matt. 24: 12.

Of the beginning of this reign of sin in the church of his own day Paul said:—

For the mystery [secret] of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let [or hinder], until he be taken out of the way.—2 Thess. 2: 7.

The divine authority, and the light of the Holy Ghost yet retained by the church and its loyal ministry, stood at the time this language was penned, in the way of, and hindered the more full development of this "mystery of iniquity." Christ had not yet vacated the temple to the occupancy of "the man of sin." But through the influence of "false teachers" (2 Peter 2), with "damnable heresies," "feigned words," "covetousness," who "walk after the flesh," "presumptuous," despising government, and walking in the lust of uncleanness; selfwilled, and not afraid to speak evil of dignities, counting "it pleasure to riot in the daytime," "having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: a heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children," speaking "great swelling words of vanity," alluring others "through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness," (sportiveness, licentiousness,) being servants of corruption, by all these evils enumerated by the inspired apostles was it foreseen and foretold that the temple of God was soon to be polluted, defiled, and desecrated, its visage marred, its purity corrupted, and its mission for good destroyed.

The flock was not to be spared!

These false teachers shall be among you, says Peter, and shall practice all these evils among you, addressing the church of his day! Prophecy of this date portrays a dark outlook for the church later along, and as time elapsed the clouds of error and wickedness would grow heavier and darker till the light of its earlier purity and divinity would be entirely hid to the world, and its influence for good gone.

This work was stage by stage and almost imperceptibly accomplished in the church, by its own ministry and membership, while the dragonic power was working against the church on the outside. The church was composed of fallible men and women. God did not by the gospel deprive them of their agency. They were susceptible to all surrounding influences as men are to-day. While all the deceptive evils and corruptions above-named were being carried on inside of the church, visions from the Devil on the outside (Matt. 4: 8) were being shown to bedazzle and blind and seduce. False teachers and prophets caused many to apostatize and depart from the faith, (Jude 19; 2 John 7-10; 1 John 2: 19,) and while "evil men and seducers" among the ministry waxed "worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived" (2 Tim. 3: 13), as the years and decades rolled by, it must not be forgotten that the relentless fires of persecution burned against the church in every conceivable way that could be incited by the dragonic spirit of Idolatrous Rome, and that, too, as instigated by the emperors in most instances for a period of over five centuries. Councils, judges, generals, and the populace of the empire, with fire and sword, prisons and banishments from home, confiscation of goods, with every torture which could be resorted to, was endured by the saints and the ministry, until martyrs were numbered by almost millions. At periods of rest from the bloody hands of its persecutors, the ministry of the church—many of them—engaged in controversies over doctrines, many of which convulsed the church from center to circumference, bringing darkness and divisions and spiritual death in their wake, and leading farther away from the simplicity of the gospel. Ministers sought power, honor, riches, and greatness, as through their "covetous practices" and lust of power they forgot the interests of the church and God. Their spiritual office was prostituted to get gain, "supposing that gain is godliness," prophesied Paul. And, remember, it is that church once apostolic that we are following. Wars without and fightings within are demoralizing and deathly, when honesty, purity, and integrity to God are left out of the problem as leading factors. And as time passed on, with the church this lamentable condition obtained more and more. "In unholy pride and unchristian desire of pre-eminence are to be found the root of the apostasy from the faith." The spirit of the man of sin who exalteth himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped, rapidly developed. Arrogance! Vanity! and Pride!

Let us here illustrate. We now move along down the age to the third century and look in on the scene as history presents:—

Even in the days of persecution, the churches in large cities began to accumulate wealth. Many who died in the faith bequeathed property to the Christian community which they had joined, for the relief of its poorer members, and for the general expenses of the church. As an avowal of faith in Christ generally excluded the convert from all intercourse with his pagan relatives, and as the regulations of the primitive churches rigorously exacted simplicity of life from all members, it was no uncommon thing for large sums of money to be thus dedicated to pious and charitable uses. About the year 150, as we learn from Tertullian, a Christian stranger coming from Asia Minor to reside in Rome, immediately made over his property, amounting to two hundred thousand sesterces, or about sixteen hundred pounds sterling, to the bishop of the Roman church for the benefit of his flock. Such gifts grew larger and more numerous when the laws of proscription were repealed, and the persecuting spirit of the imperial government gave place to a milder policy. In the year 259, the church of [at] Rome was in possession of buildings, cemeteries, and lands; and many churches had by that time erected splendid edifices for the worship of God. So abundant were the contributions poured into the treasury of the metropolitan church of Italy, that no fewer than fifteen hundred widows were supported out of its funds, besides the regular maintenance of its bishop, presbyters, and many other officers. The revenue of so large an establishment must even then have been very considerable, and so rapid was its increase, that, in a few years, the management of it became an object of avaricious cupidity and vehement unhalloved strife.

To the bishop in every church the control of its funds had been generally committed from early times, and these rulers would indeed have exhibited a wonderful exemption from the common frailties of humanity, if they had in every case continued proof against the temptations to personal aggrandizement which were thus strewn in their path. Accordingly, we find that when a long period of tranquillity had been enjoyed by the churches, a persecution was really beneficial, sifting them of ungodly professors, purifying the lives of their members, and awakening their bishops to the solemn responsibility of their office. Thus Cyprian, writing about the year 250, respecting the terrific persecution just begun by the emperor Decius, and which threatened apparently to exterminate Christianity from the earth, says, "The Lord would prove his people, and because the Divinely prescribed regimen of life has become disturbed in the long season of peace, a Divine judgment has been sent to reestablish our fallen, I might almost say, slumbering faith. Forgetting what believers did in the times of the apostles, and what they should always be doing, Christians have labored with insatiable desire to increase their earthly possessions, and many of the bishops, who, by precept and example, should have guided others, have neglected their Divine calling, to engage in worldly concerns."—Lives of the Popes, pp. 18-20.

Contrast the following picture of the third century with the condition of the church at Antioch in Paul's day, and note the change in the spirit of the ministry in so brief a period:—

[Of] Paul of Samosata, bishop of Antioch, . . . it is told, that he erected a throne in the midst of his church, on which he seated himself, with all the pomp of a magistrate, desiring to be considered a civil as much as a religious ruler. Sometimes he would screen himself with curtains from the gaze of the assembly, after the custom of the judicial officers, and on coming forth he expected, and even commanded the people to applaud him by clapping their hands, as they would an actor in the theater. In passing through the streets of Antioch he was always attended by a multitude of followers, and in every gesture and action discovered intolerable pride. Although born and reared in extreme poverty, Paul had contrived to amass enormous wealth, and constantly indulged in the most luxurious style of living.—Ibid., pp. 20, 21.

Events passed much more slowly in these times than modernly, changes were wrought less rapidly than now, and yet what mighty changes through evil doers, professed ministers of the lowly Nazarene, had been brought about and of so accursed effects to the once holy Church of God, in less than four centuries! Well may Peter prophecy, they "cannot cease from sin." The gospel was now corrupted with heathen and idolatrous philosophies, the form of church organization changed; its divinely appointed officers out of the world, their successors in a state of apostasy and corruption; the authority given of God, with the light of the Holy Ghost gone out. The church dignitaries parleying, gambling with earthly rulers for political official power and gain. Division, strife, contention, sedition, and every other evil prevailed. Emperors sometimes presided over the councils of the church, engaged in its controversies, nominated and confirmed in office its chief officers. Its bishops to whose charge in the early days of the church had been committed the moneys and properties and their management in the interests thereof, now assumed to direct the spiritual affairs of it, also, and converting church revenues from their legitimate channels, used them for secular purposes.

Their large revenues they employed, not merely for the welfare of the church, but also in such a way as to advance their own greatness, and diffuse around themselves an air of state and splendor. The vestments of the clergy were studiously and symbolically adorned with a variety of colors, and with large figures of the cross. The mode of conducting Divine worship no longer wore the aspect of primitive simplicity, but was burdened and made pompous with processions, priestly ceremonies and contrivances to produce effect. Lighted tapers, golden and silver vases, with other gaudy and imposing pageants, were introduced into the worship of God—sorry substitutes for that spiritual vitality which was so fast vanishing from the services of the church. With a like mixture of motive; the influence of the clergy over the laity was promoted by the establishment of hospitals and orphan-houses out of the funds of the church. Even buildings for public convenience, such as bridges, were sometimes undertaken by the bishop's direction, and at the church's expense. Not content with thus assuming to himself the character of a secular magistrate, rather than that of a spiritual guide, the ruler of the church too frequently vied with the first officers of state in the pomp of his equipage and the luxury of his table. Candidates for the Roman bishopric made unheard-of efforts to obtain it, "knowing," says a pagan writer of that day, "that this once obtained, they would overflow with gifts from the wealthy matrons, would ride in sumptuous carriages, be elegantly apparelled, and have banquets prepared for them surpassing the festivities of kings."—Lives of the Popes, pp. 27, 28.

These were the churches originally founded by the apostles of Christ, at Rome, in Asia Minor, Antioch, in Greece, and in Egypt, Palestine, and in Europe. But how changed in form and spirit. Surely the Devil had sowed the tares, the wheat had been choked out, and the church was driven "into the wilderness," with only a remnant of her seed left faithful to God, and with these the dragon was making war. The church as such, — organization, — had forfeited all right and claim to the guidance, light, and authority of Christ, and was left gying and "flirting" with the wicked and depraved kings of the earth. She no longer bore the name of the Bridegroom, Jesus Christ, but being spiritually allied with the earthly nobility, she took pride in saying, "I sit a queen," and though divorced from my former husband, I "am no widow," and as the insignia of my exalted station, I have inscribed on my ornamented and crowned forehead, "Mystery, Babylon the Great!" I am "the Mistress of nations." — I rule over all kings, and at my ipse dixit—royal demand—nations tremble, and their rulers worship and adore!

Christ, the "man child," forsook the unloyal church when she turned to "love the things of the world," and returned to his native realm of purity and bliss and glory, "and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne." (Rev. 12: 5.) He, after choosing his bride, promised to abide with her on condition of loyalty to her covenant with him only. (Matt. 28: 18, 19.) "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." This is the condition. The church did not do this, so Christ, represented in the church, by the divine authority of his ministry, and the power, light, and office work of the Holy Ghost, left his unfaithful spouse to her chosen lovers and her journey without him through the wilderness.

But, the man child is explained to be "the kingdom of God." Very good. Is not divine authority, administrative authority, one of the chief *elements—principles—*of the kingdom of God? And is not the Holy Ghost another, a second and almighty element of the kingdom? Separate these two elements from the kingdom of God and what has it left? Minus these two elements, and is the kingdom not absolutely inoperative? Is not the administrative, the executive authority that by which Christ will rule the nations? Let us look at a passage or two of scripture:—

For the kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.—Matt. 25: 14.

Placing the servants in charge of the affairs of the king, is as the kingdom of heaven. In this sense "the kingdom of God" was preached, and "men pressed into it," in the days of John Baptist, while as yet the organization of the church was not developed. (Luke 16: 16; Matt. 16: 18.) When Jesus sent the seventy out to preach, endowed with the power of the gospel, they were commanded to say, "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." (Luke 10: 9.)

The royalty that Christ has now gone to receive of his Father, and by which he will govern the kingdom when he comes again, is called "a kingdom." (Luke 19: 12.) As it relates to the church militant, the element of the kingdom called authority, is called "the kingdom of God." "For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power." (1 Cor. 4: 20.)

And speaking of the coming of the church out of the wilderness again, we have the language:—

Lift up your hearts and rejoice, for unto you the kingdom, or in other words, the keys of the church, have been given. Even so. Amen.

Again, that the Holy Ghost as a principal element of the kingdom is in Bible language referred to as "the kingdom of God," note the following:—

But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.—Matt. 12: 28.

For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.—Rom. 14: 17.

The laws of the kingdom are by this synecdochical rule of language (of putting a part for the whole, as is so common in Hebrew) called "the kingdom of God" by our Savior. (Compare Luke 4: 19 with verse 43.) Now if one of the elements of the kingdom may by this law of language be termed the kingdom, why may not the two together, the administrative authority and the Holy Ghost, by the Spirit he called "the kingdom of God"? The Holy Ghost is the life of the kingdom or Church of God, and the authority gives validity to all its official work.

And the Lord confirmed a priesthood also upon Aaron and his seed throughout all their generations, which priesthood also continueth and abideth forever, with the priesthood which is after the holiest order of God. And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.—D. C. 83: 3.

Priesthood is the authority with which God clothes his arbitration or peace commission sent to a sinful, unregenerate world of mankind. This commission is authorized to present the terms of peace and arbitrate in behalf of God and sign the articles of agreement. It is that authority through which man may approach God, come to him and obtain pardon, the Spirit of promise and the life in Christ. It is a mediatorial authority. Hence, Paul, who was one of the commissioners authorized of God, wrote:—

And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.—2 Cor. 5: 18-20.

This divine authority and the life power, the Holy Ghost, surely did not stay with the church in the days of its departure from God and his holy law and commandments, and when it walked in the ways of apostasy and human dogma and the doctrines of devils.

The church was originally, as a temple and spiritual house, designed for "a habitation of God through the Spirit" (Eph. 2: 19-22), and Christ, through his ministry in the church as his bride, was, before the days of her departure from him, with her, inviting poor, fallen, unsaved man to come unto him and partake of the waters of life freely. And in the sense set forth as above, Christ, the "man child," was yet with and in the church (for John saw him there and thus described him) at the time he received his revelation on the island of Patmos. He thus describes the son of the woman, the man child:—

And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks; and in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters. And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength. And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death. . . . The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches; and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.—Rev. 1: 12-18, 20.

How could the life power and the authority of the church or kingdom of God be more grandly and graphically represented to the mind or the vision than is set forth in this description given by the Revelator? Jesus Christ, his priesthood or authority, and the Holy Ghost are inseparable. Where the one is the others are represented.

It is early in the season, but the driest section of Illinois has been heard from. Not a town on the line of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy railway between Galesburg and Quincy will have saloons this year.

Anyone can distinguish a poisonous serpent from a harmless one, for a venomous snake invariably possesses a triangularly-shaped head and a blunt nose, while its tail is correspondingly blunt and stubby.

Chinese scholars claim that iron swords were in use in their country 4,000 years ago. It has been estimated that it would take a man 3,000 years to read all the standard works.

SEMINOLE, Ala., June 5.

Editors Herald:—Having been blessed with the Herald with its good news for a long time, with tidings of joy from all quarters of the earth concerning the great latter-day work, and being desirous to acknowledge the same, I write.

I have just returned home from a trip to Florida. I found religion at a very low ebb everywhere, especially in Baldwin County, Alabama. There are a few saints alive in the work and some dead spiritually, if they ever had the Spirit. We have had no traveling missionaries in this country since Bro. Turpen left.

I have been abundantly blessed in all my labors and feel fully satisfied to live in the work and to defend it. I remain, in hope of eternal life,

A brother,
JESSE REEDER.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 15.

Editors Herald:—Perhaps a word from this point would interest a great number of the saints who are contemplating making homes in Southern Missouri. I left home June 5 to look up this part of the country, in order to buy a home for my children and grandchildren, if I found it suited. I am too old myself, but I wished to see my children get homes, instead of having to hire out by the month or pay a big rent for land up in Iowa, where we live now.

I called in Lawrence County, and I there saw some, what I call, pretty good, cheap land. I next went to Springfield. I stopped at the Hotel Huston. I inquired before going to bed if they knew Bro. Sparling. Yes, they knew him well, and, as if by providence, Bro. Sparling called at the hotel about five o'clock next morning, on his way to quarterly conference. They informed him of my presence and he waited until I got up. It did not take us long to form an acquaintance, you may be sure, and for me to make known my desire to see the country. And, by the way, Bro. Sparling knows the country well, and can save saints much time and money. He knows where the best lands are, and the prices; so saints need not be afraid of getting tricked.

Well, we took train to Sparta, and I saw the places that saints have left, and many others. I was indeed surprised to find such land. It is far the best I have seen, and the nice homes these saints have left, and which I believe, with anything like old Iowa muscle and pluck they could do well upon. I don't see why a person would have to leave such a country. The land is far better than I expected to find, and you can get good improved places for $4.00 and $5.00 per acre and up to $10.00—fine places. And I should think it would be wise for saints that want homes to come and look this country over; and when they do, be wise and have things prepared beforehand.

Do not do like many of our saints have done, go down there without writing to some one of the saints. Some land agent will get hold of you and send you somewhere looking up a $1.50 or $2.00 per acre land, in the roughest part. As a result you get disgusted and go back home, and you have never seen the best of the country. You will save time and trouble by writing Bro. Sparling, and I find he is careful not to overestimate the land.

I expect I shall buy some land near Bruner, where I found some as good saints as I ever wish to find.

Yours in bonds,
G. W. SEWARD.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, June 11.

Editors Herald:—The Herald comes every week with such good news that it gives me much comfort, as I can read, but cannot hear very well. I am getting better.

My faith in the work is growing stronger as I look back and see the fulfillment of prophecy. I think oftentimes that my life has been spared, and I wonder what for, and think God has something for me to do. If I cannot preach I can help those who do, by paying tithes and offerings. Everyone can do a tithe and that is all that is required—to do what he can. Let every one study his duty and see that he does it according to the law, then we will be ready to gather and the commandment will be given in the time.

We must keep the law. It is the duty of every head of a family to pray in his family and ask God to bless what he gives us for food; also to give one cent out of every ten. Now, do we do that? If we do not, we are not doing as God has said.

I have found in the past that I have not done my duty and have suffered because of my neglect. I am trying now to do my duty. I do not want to try to do what is not my duty, however. As a priest I try to visit and exhort the families of the saints. I am weak, but am striving to overcome.

For sixteen years I have not done anything for the work until the last three years, in which I began to pay a little tithing and I find I have prospered; and instead of being bowed down I feel that God is with me; and where I thought every one was looking at me as unfaithful, I do not now feel that way.

May God help us all to do his will. Let us all look and see if we do as the Lord has said. If not, try and do the will of the Master.

Your brother,
F. T. DOBIE.

BARRON, Wis., June 14.

Editors Herald:—Although we do not get to see your pleasant pages very often while out on the frontier picket line battling against error and priestcraft, yet we know you are making your regular weekly visits, freighted with good news and counsel to the saints, and comfort and good cheer to the weary laborer in the Lord's vineyard.

Well do I remember when the first copy came to us—No. 1, Vol. 1. I have that very paper at home now as a souvenir. The little Herald—O how proud we felt then of our dear little paper! I feel proud of it still.

How we miss it and with what eagerness we peruse its, to us, sacred pages, when we get where they take the Herald. That No. 1, Vol. 1, was published in 1859—forty years years ago. What changes have taken place in these forty years! So many old faithful veterans of the cross, who bore the brunt of the battle, have passed on to their rewards; others, young, earnest, able men, have stepped forward and filled up the ranks; and so the work rolls on, breaking to pieces the teachings and doctrines of men wherever it comes in contact with them; and it will continue to spread until the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

We (Elder J. B. Wildermuth and I) are still battling for the truth as best we can. We reared our gospel tent here, four miles south of Barron, Barron County, Wisconsin, and began meetings a week ago to-night, June 7. The preaching was announced at the close of the school and with only so short a notice there were over seventy persons present at the first meeting. Our audience has increased in numbers and in interest, and so has the rain; such a wet, disagreeable season has never been known in this country. This state of weather finally culminated in a hurricane last Monday evening, the 12th inst., which did a great deal of damage, spreading over a large scope of country. Our large tent was partly blown down and torn clear across, from eave to eave in two places. Thank Providence, we have gotten it all mended and up again in good shape, ready for meetings. But it rains nearly every day and every night, so in the week that we have been here we have only been able to have five meetings, but we still hope for the best and for the final triumph of righteousness and peace.

In gospel bonds,

E. M. WILDERMUTH.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 12.

Editors Herald:—I have not done any missionary work since April. About the 1st of April I was taken down with a very severe attack of catarrh of the stomach, which has incapacitated me ever since. I have about recovered and hope to be at my post of duty in a week or so.

Although sorely afflicted, I feel a greater desire to get at it again than ever. It is sorrowful to hear the many calls for preaching and not be able to reach them.

I wish to say to those who are expecting reports from me that I will report to them soon.

F. J. EBELING.

MANCHESTER, Texas, June 14.

Editors Herald:—A few words from Northeastern Texas. We are still, by the help of God, battling away for the gospel of Jesus Christ, and happy to say it is spreading slowly over this country; and we have felt here of late that there is a great work to be done in this country in the near future. We were placed in the field about two months ago and have been preaching during that time as often as we could get hearers. Have had the pleasure of leading some noble men and women into the waters of baptism, and find quite a number of others about ready to obey the gospel.

If all the saints would only live faithful we would soon witness a great gathering into the church; but Oh! how sad it is to see saints trampling God's mercy under their feet. Brethren and sisters, let us pray that we may never bring reproach upon the gospel.

I feel proud of the noble men God has called in this great latter-day work. It makes me feel happy to think over the grand missionary force in this work; but we think we are standing greatly in need of more presiding men who will endeavor to do all they can to keep the saints alive, and try and get them to understand the importance of enduring unto the end; for such are the ones that will be saved. So let us pray that God may soon call men of great presiding qualities into the work.

The Northeastern Texas and Choctaw district conference convenes July 8. We want all to attend, also the elders. Quite a number of the saints in this country are very desirous to meet with Bro. Ellis Short; so, Bro. Short, attend if you can. We hope to have Bro. A. J. Moore with us. Parties coming by rail will get off at Douglass, where they will find a committee to carry them to Shawnee Prairie, where conference will be held. So come one, come all, and if God wills let us have a spiritual feast.

We will ask the several branches of the district to fast and pray with us on the first Sunday in July for God to bless our conference with the Spirit in power and gifts, that the saints may be lifted up higher in faith of the gospel to live a pure life. The gathering is close at hand, and let us be ready for it.

The secretaries of the several branches of the district will please have their reports on hand at conference.

Your brother in bonds,

E. A. ERWIN.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 15.

Editors Herald:—I was one of the delegates to Northern Illinois district conference which convened at Mission, Illinois, June 10 and 11, and it was one of the best I ever attended in my life. The Spirit of God met with us in great power. In tongues unknown God speaketh mysteries to his people and also prophesieth and edifieth his saints. I never enjoyed myself better among saints in my life than with the dear saints at Mission. May our heavenly Father pour out his blessings forever upon them, is my prayer.

The weather was splendid and the church could not hold one half of the people, nor could the tent. The people were gathered by hundreds. May God bless that country and all other countries where his saints gather together.

Yours in bonds,

G. H. GRAVES.

BOONESBORO, Iowa, June 20.

Editors Herald:—From the 11th of May to the 16th of June I was engaged in the preaching of the message of life eternal at Boonesboro, Milford, Fraser, and at Nevada, the three first named places being in Boone County, and the last in Story County. The word has been preached here for many years by a goodly number of the ministry, and many have, first and last, been baptized here, of whom some have fallen out by the way, some went to the Brighamites, and others are scattered, which keeps the branch rather small in actual attendance. Some of those who went to our western neighbors are not so well satisfied with their newly adopted relations, and will come East again when circumstances favor. This is as it should be. May they be wholly recovered. It is better to walk in the divine light than to grovel in darkness and uncertainty.

Bro. George Thorburn and wife, Sr. James Meehan, and Bro. William King, resident at Fraser, have organized and have in operation a nice Sunday school of some forty or more scholars. It is lively and interesting now, but labor troubles are brewing there which may result in disorganization through removal of many families to other places seeking employment, an experience similar to that had by many at Lucas, Iowa, some years ago. Truly this is a day of unrest, uncertainty, a day of scattering, trouble, and vexation. It is essentially a question of labor and capital as indicated by Malachi (3:4, 5) and James (5:1-8); an enmity between labor and capital, two elements that should be handmaids of each other. This is the disease. What is the remedy? Its symptoms are inordinate desire for gain, and to rule, and dishonesty. Those not actuated by these symptoms are victimized by those who are. It is to be hoped that these deadly symptoms will not invade the realms of the kingdom, for they produce as results, death to business and confidence, spiritual mistrust and paralysis. That which in anywise interferes with individual effort and lawful coöperation in things temporal and spiritual, is rebellion to creative and God-given right. Capital must no more make unjust demands than labor. Education up to the right, and thorough honesty on the part of both is the only deliverance from the condition now confronting the world, except destruction.

The Des Moines district conference held here June 17 and 18, we think was a success in most respects. The weather was very warm, but all exercised patience. The business of both conference and Sunday school convention was transacted quite harmoniously, and good will seemed to actuate all present. The preaching was spiritual, the social services fervent, and all were joyful and felt blessed in serving the Lord. Bro. William C. Nirk, who has served the district for quite a number of years, so ably and with so universal acceptance, and whose resignation was so reluctantly received, was succeeded in the office of president by Bro. J. W. Morgan, of Perry, Iowa. Five young persons were baptized, on Sunday, and confirmed at the social services, and Bro. Thomas Cook, of Des Moines, was ordained to the office of priest. A goodly number of strong spiritual testimonies to the truth of the work of God were borne. A committee on arrangements for holding a reunion in the district this fall, was appointed, and with power to act. Let the saints of the district, therefore, take notice, and arrange to attend. And all others who can, and so desire, are cordially invited to come and join in the reunion. Due notice of time and place of holding reunion will be given, "therefore watch"!

It is time that saints everywhere awake from their slumbers, trim their lamps, gird on the armor of righteousness, look to their spiritual interests, be on their watch tower. The days are evil, darkness hovers over the people, and daily, continued faithfulness is absolutely essential. Let God and his work be first and all the time over everything else. Is your title to the incorruptible inheritance proved? Is your crown of life secured? Are you sure the course of life you are pursuing is approved of God? If so, well. If not, then what? Remember, the days are evil. Wave after wave of sin pursues each other in rapid succession over the world. Is it not time that the church arise and deliver itself from bondage, temporal and spiritual, chase darkness from its borders, and walking in the liberty and light of the Lord, pursue diligently the fulfillment of its great mission (Matt. 28: 19) to the nations without further deviation?

Your brother,

C. SCOTT.

SHARON, Pa., June 21.

Editors Herald:—I send you clipping from Pittsburg Times of the 19th, which gives a general round-up of the B. H. Roberts case and credits us with the stand we have taken in the matter.

Bro. A. H. Parsons has beautified the Temple lawn at Kirtland with a gravel walk, on either side of which is one star-shaped and one moon-shaped flower bed. It is a delightful improvement and was specially noted by the Painsville press.

The Sunday schools of the township celebrate the Fourth conjointly. Large success to them.

The "parson" Parsons drills a class in music and is ingratiating himself with the community for good in general.

I am here at the suggestion of Bishop's agent, Bro. E. Miller, to witness the closing payment on church property. In 1893 it had almost lapsed back to the school board from whom it was purchased. Times were disheartening and the saints discouraged. It fell to my lot to wrestle with Lawyer Tanner to wrest the property from unfair hold conditions had placed it in. The property is now worth double its value then.

Bro. F. J. Ebeling has been hindered from duty by sickness. May he soon be fully recovered and in the ranks again. Bro. F. C. Smith and family take a short trip to Michigan. May they find an abundance of opportunity of doing good, and return refreshed to renew the conflict. Bro. Parsons being occupied necessarily at the Temple, our force to supply the varied demands is very limited. Will do our very best, however.

En route east I took a parting glance at the always liberal Middletown saints. Found the Akron saints slowly recovering from unfortunate conditions. The Cleveland branch, following a vacation (?) and expected change of place of services last summer, had a succession of experiences that, if not tending to unity, should fortify against inroads of the wily foe. Better conditions obtain there. We all have experience as we pass along. If the goading is all that results, we suffer to a disadvantage only. If our wisdom and knowledge is enlarged and used we are fortunate—that is God's purpose in suffering us to be tried, tempted, tossed, even by brethren. On the other hand, for one or more to be a continuous menace, a common nuisance, with whom forbearance ceases to be a virtue, as no change for improvement is manifest, is not heaven's purpose. Paul's admonition, "Let everything be done decently and in order," evidently includes that those who will not walk with the body should be provided with room outside.

Bro. Dewsnap's visit at Cleveland was appreciated, his work commended.

Bro. and Sr. Steffe are missed from Kirtland. May the mission be a good success.

Success to A. B. Kirkendall and the saints at Creola as per late appeal in Herald and Ensign for a church. I question if there is to be found a place where, according to the square inch of resources, more has been done for the work, local or general. The ministry have been well furnished there and exported duty prepaid. All ye who can, send something for the Creola church to A. B. Kirkendall, Creola, Ohio.

Demands for missionary work in Kirtland district and to the eastward I will try to supply when made known.

Address in care of Box 28, Cleveland, Ohio.

DETROIT, Mich., June 21.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Ypsilanti, where I had the pleasure of baptizing a young man into Christ Jesus. It having raised quite a breeze there, the Baptist minister came to see me. We spent nearly half the day in talking over the gospel themes. When through, he said to me, "Mr. Durand, I am pleased to meet with you; I had heard much of your people, but never had the pleasure of meeting any of them before." He expressed his willingness to learn, and was glad that we really were different than what he had been informed by others. The gospel was given to him in a straight, plain manner. The Book of Mormon was placed before him as a history of a people that lived on this continent before Christ. The Doctrine and Covenants was also placed in his hands as a book of revelations to the people of this day, as coming from God. A distinction was made between Utah Mormonism and Latter Day Saints proper. A copy of United States Court Records was shown him, taken from Books and Utah Mormonism in Contrast, by Elder R. Etzenhouser.

This we believe had the desired effect to convince him that we were not of the Utah faction or Utah apostasy. He seemed very much pleased to learn the truth of the matter. When we were through, he said to me, "Mr. Durand, I wish you would send me a sample copy of your leading paper."

Since I left him, I have learned that when he received a call to preach there that they offered $1,800 a year. After learning their situation, he said, "Brethren, I cannot afford to preach for that amount of money, but I will preach for you for $1,000 a year. You are not able to pay the $1,800, and I should feel as if I was doing not only you but the cause we represent an injustice."

I am truly yours in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ,
E. H. DURAND.

ARTHUR, Ont., June 21.

Editors Herald:—I expect to leave for British Columbia sometime in July, as a missionary for the truth. I would like to have the address of all saints in that far-off, unbroken field. Any knowing of such there, will please inform me at once.

Saints having friends or relatives in British Columbia who would like an elder to call on them, may also write me their address.

Begging an interest in the prayers of the faithful, I remain,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 22.

Editors Herald:—Please see inclosed letter, which is self-explanatory. Bro. Peter Adamson has been a staunch man in the defense of the work about Wilburton and has baptized about twenty-five around there. He is an elder, and assistant district president. Bro. Adamson, or rather his family, wired me to come to him at once. I could not get off that night, but we prayed earnestly for him at our home at just the hour he was healed—nine p. m., so as per his request I send this to you, and you can use as much of it as you think is directly to the point, and return same to me. Your brother,

ELLIS SHORT.

WILBURTON, I. T., June 11.

Editors Herald:—We were greatly shocked on the 9th inst. about half past one p. m. on hearing that Bro. Peter Adamson was killed while working in his coal mine, about one and one half miles east of town. We rushed to the mine as quickly as possible, but when we got there the men had him out of the mine and placed him on a spring cot near the entrance. The men that brought him out say that for the first ten minutes there was no life in him, but by the time I got there he had come to himself, so that he was becoming conscious.

He looked straight into my eyes for some time before he seemed to recognize me, then putting forth his hand, he took my hand in his and said: God bless you, my brother, I love you as dearly as I love my own life. Come near unto me and listen, for I want you to write my dying testimony; for I feel the pangs of death upon me now, and I want those people to know that the church that I belong to is the true Church of Jesus Christ, for the God of heaven has revealed it unto me. Yes, my dying testimony is that this work is true; and, my brother, I will meet you in the kingdom of God; I know that.

I have but a few minutes more unless the God of heaven spares my life, for I know that if I live it will be by the power of God, and not of man. Now, my brother, be faithful and see that Sr. Adamson is cared for.

By this time others came, and he talked some to them, then called me again and bore about the same testimony, and asked me where Bro. Dalby was. I told him he would be here as soon as possible. He said: "I want him to administer to me as soon as he comes, and if I become unconscious before he gets here, do not let the doctors give me any medicine; I will not take it. If I am saved it will be by the power of God."

Bro. Dalby came at last and found Bro. Adamson almost gone. He lost no time in administering to him and after the administration he whispered to Bro. Dalby; then Bro. Dalby raised up and said: "Saints and friends, Bro. Adamson says he believes the Lord will raise him up." And from that moment forward he began to mend and look better. So we carried him home on the cot, and the Company Doctor came and made an examination and found every rib broken on the left side but one, and some of them broken in two or three places, and one of them pressing down on his heart. When the doctor left the room he was heard to say he could not live over ten minutes at the most. Then he asked the saints to meet around his bedside and have a season of prayer for him, so in accordance we met and during prayers at about nine p. m. the blessing came in power and he was relieved of every pain, and we were all made to rejoice and praise the Lord for his loving kindness to his children.

June 13.—Since Bro. A. was brought home everybody is greatly surprised to see how well he is getting along; and I want to say, dear saints, there have been more than human eyes watching him; about half past nine this morning he sent for me, and I found him rejoicing indeed. He said: "My brother, the angels of God are hovering around me; yes, they say they are guarding and protecting me, and you do not know how happy I am. Yes, my brother, they have been with me for some time, and I can hardly realize that I have a body. I know that the Lord is pleased with me."

To-night he is in as good condition as we could ask and improving as fast as it seems possible. The doctors are amazed to see him getting along so well without medical aid whatever while we are rejoicing over the great goodness of God in sparing our brother. We did not realize how much we loved Bro. Adamson until we saw him in death's mighty grasp; then it was that we could realize that brotherly love indeed; yes, then it was that our hearts were united in earnest prayer to almighty God to spare our brother. And while going to the mine to see him, as I supposed, dead, was when my heart pled with the Lord with all the faith and power that was in me that he would not take our beloved brother from us; and I believe that every one of the saints poured forth the same petition from the bottom of their bleeding hearts. But now, my dear brethren and sisters, we can rejoice before the Lord; and we ask you one and all to pray with us and join us in praising the Lord for his tender mercies in answering our prayers in this great hour of need.

To think that the Lord would take our brother right from the very hands of death and give him back to us, is good reasons for rejoicing.

One of the doctors, while we were at the mine, shortly after we got there—one of them came to me and asked what was best to do? He said that Bro. Adamson would not take any of his medicine, and he would like to do something for him, and asked if it was not on account of his peculiar religious belief. I told him it was, that he was waiting for Bro. Dalby to come and administer to him, and he was heard to say that Dalby had better hurry up. He also told others that he could not live until sundown.

Now the slate that fell on him was about six feet long, and three feet wide, and six inches thick. He was lying on his right side, mining, and the rock struck him under the left shoulder and over right leg breaking and mangling all the ribs on left side but one and mashing him up in the hips and groins very badly so as to completely paralyze the lower limbs. This rock fell about six and one half feet.

And let us all try and live as Bro. Adamson so we know that the Lord is well pleased with us, is the earnest prayers of

Your humble servant and brother,
J. N. PERKINS.

CENTER JUNCTION, Iowa, June 20.

Editors Herald.—I have been in this part of the Eastern Iowa district for about two weeks, and I find the saints feeling spiritually alive. They miss the good counsel of Bro. J. W. Peterson, but our loss will be others' gain.

I find a noble lot of saints in this part of the district. Bro. and Sr. W. B. Thomas, Bro. and Sr. John Weir, and Bro. and Sr. J. R. Johnston, and the entire Green family have been very kind to me, and all the members of the Green Valley branch; and last Sunday the president of the branch, Bro. Daniel Durks; invited me to preach for them in the church in the afternoon and evening, and the good Lord was with us; and as I stood and looked upon those noble faces and saw them lit up by the Spirit of God, O how my heart was made to rejoice.

Last Thursday our missionary carriers, Bro. and Sr. W. B. Thomas, of this place, took me to Viola and we preached to them Thursday and Friday nights. There is a noble little band of saints there, Bro. Frank Potter is as a shepherd to the little flock, and he is working hard to have a church there, and I think he will succeed. Don't be discouraged, Bro. Frank.

I expect to start for the city of Muscatine to-night, to commence tent meetings there. We are going to have a new tent. The interest is good in that city.

Three weeks ago last Sunday I led three precious souls down into the waters of baptism, and they are rejoicing in the Spirit of the Lord. And when we set the tent there I expect to baptize others before we leave. So the work in this district is looking brighter. So, dear saints, let us press on and not be weary soldiers in the army of the Lord.

Your brother,
W. A. SMITH.

REQUIRED READING FOR JULY MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

FAMILY GOVERNMENT.—CONCLUDED.

Punishments; how and when administered? We can tell you one time when you must not fail to punish: that is when you have threatened to do so. Never break your word given your children, but be very careful about giving it. Threatening what you do not intend to perform and never do perform is subversive of all true discipline. It is largely the result of lack of self-control; and it cheapens your word in your children's estimation. It is an easy, and, permit me to say, a cowardly thing "to conquer a peace" with the unruly child by threatening future vengeance; but the peace thus conquered is short-lived, the resulting ill may be perpetual. Weigh well your words; never threaten anything you are not sure of performing, and, lest you fail in the performing, never threaten at all.

When not to punish: when you are angry. Not being master of yourself, you cannot hope to gain the mastery of your child. Then your judgment is not in a condition to decide how much and what kind of punishment should be inflicted. If the offense is an aggravating one, let a night intervene between its commission and its penalty, but let the child be just as sure that the penalty will come as he is that the sun will rise. The certainty of penalty, more than its severity, makes it effective. The intervening night not only gives opportunity for cooling down any heat of passion aroused in you or your child, and allowing his conscience and your judgment to act, it also gives opportunity for the bedtime talk and prayer, which is the grand alembic in which family troubles may be transmuted into gold.

What shall the punishment be? Varying offenses require various penalties; it takes a good supply of mother wit and consecrated common sense to decide what is the appropriate penalty to mete out to each offense. We give a few general principles which may help to guide you in this matter.

First: Guard against punishments liable to result in physical injury, like rough shakings or boxing the ears; even more carefully guard against bitter, cutting words that wound the spirit, and against degrading punishments.

Second: Punishment should seem to be, and be reformatory, not vindictive; administered not so much in retribution of the past offense as a safeguard against its recurrence.

Third: So far as possible the penalty should grow naturally out of the offense, or have some logical connection with it. For example: a child is cross and peevish at table, grumbling about his food; take it from him and give him only the plainest food till he learns to behave. There may be a hygienic principle involved here; his fretfulness may result from a stomach disordered by dainties, and plain food may restore it to healthy working. Aside from this, however, the moral effect of connecting fault-finding with deprivation of food is beneficial. Or he may be naughty and obstreperous at table, continually interrupting his elders in their conversation; condemn him to wait outside the dining-room till the others are done eating, and take his meals alone for a time; he will be pretty sure to behave better when he is again permitted to eat with the family.

Your daughter is cross to her playmates, or your son hectors the other children; deprive them of the companionship of the others till they are cured of these faults. Do not allow them to play with the other children, or even to talk to them, if the offense is an aggravated one, and they will soon mend their manners. Children are naturally gregarious; to be thus shut off from their kind, for even a little while, is a greater punishment than you might imagine. In the chapter on Behaving we saw how a pert miss was cured of her superciliousness by a wise mother; and elsewhere, how a wise father taught his young lady daughter early rising. If once you set your mind to the task, you will succeed in inventing penalties in accordance with the three fundamental principles mentioned.

How shall punishment be administered? So far as possible, let it be a matter between yourselves and the offenders alone. We say yourselves advisedly, for it must include both parents; there is no true family government in which both parents do not unite; the children must feel that you act as a unit. If the father, busied with his farm or his merchandise, throws the burden of government upon the mother; or if she weakly abrogates authority by confronting the young offender with, "If you don't behave better, I'll tell your father when he comes home, and then you'll catch it;" worse if one parent would shield when the other would punish, anarchy, not government, exists in the household. "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Circumstances must decide whether or not the other children should be cognizant of the punishment; it is certainly a matter with which a stranger should not intermeddle.

Whatever else you do, don't scold. As Jacob Abbott says, "It seldom does any good to those scolded, and it makes all the rest of the household unhappy." A scolding household is always poorly governed, besides being a very unpleasant abiding place. Be sure not to both scold and punish for the same offense; human nature cannot bear it. As the Chinaman says, "I can stand flogee, flogee, or preachee, preachee, but no flogee, flogee, and preachee, preachee both." We are glad to believe, as we do most thoroughly, that scolding mothers are much less common than formerly, a result directly traceable to the broadening sphere of woman. Scolding is the vice of a narrow mind, a mind centered on its own petty affairs and annoyances. Broaden the mind, engage it on noble themes, as the last two decades have engaged the minds of thousands of women in philanthropies, and the home will feel the blessed influence in a decrease of scolding.

We are free to confess that we believe there are times when it is well to be both dumb and blind to children's faults. To be sure, many people err in being thus altogether too often; still, there are times when it is safe and best not to notice a child's faults and peccadilloes, but pass them over in silence. For example: a tired, hungry child is cross—but so is a man under the same circumstances. Nobody thinks of taking the man to task for his crossness; much less should we do so with the child. As the child is more demonstrative than the man, he gives expression to his crossness in more outrageous fashion; but this is no sign he is a greater sinner. Courtesy demands that you pass over the man's crossness, especially if he be a visitor, in silence; be just as courteous to the child. Being weaker, he deserves your pity more; feed him and put him to bed; a good night's rest will straighten out all the tangles, and when he awakens in the morning his sunny face will make you glad that you did not send him to bed under the added cloud of your displeasure. As your children grow older, the eye-shutting process often proves a good one for both them and you. We have seen how there comes to our boys and young maidens, a time of moody introspection, of morbid sensitiveness and irritability; do not aggravate it by magnifying every molehill into a mountain, by marking every impertinent word or ungracious act. Whenever possible, pass them unnoticed; meanwhile doing all you can to build up the physical and spiritual strength of the offender and help him into a better humor. Napoleon said: "You must not fight too much with one enemy or you will teach him your arts of war." Parents, you must not be too stereotyped in your methods with your children, or they will learn all your "arts of war."

Govern by surprises sometimes. Meet the children on just the line they do not expect; outwit them, and they will often surrender at discretion, whereas against a regularly planned siege they would have held out indefinitely. Children often have a keen sense of the ludicrous, and will enjoy the joke of having papa "get ahead of them," if he does it in a cute way, even when the joke is against themselves and frustrates their mischievous designs. If you can succeed in turning a boy's laugh against himself and his own projects, you are much more sure to wean him from them than you could be by any amount of opposition. We know a couple of boys who were forever cured of the boy-passion for running off to sea, by a quick-witted father who discovered their project in time and managed to give a ludicrous turn to it.

On the other hand, it will not do for you to fall into any ambush your wide-awake children set for you. Eternal vigilance, albeit of the kindest sort, is the price of dominion in the kingdom of home.

"You never seem astonished at anything a child does," remarked a lady to whom childhood always remained an unexplored realm. "If that child should turn himself inside out before you, you would look as though it were the very thing you expected and wished him to do." The lady addressed was noted for her success in managing her big family of little children. She laughingly replied to her friend: "Of course I should; how could I ever keep my irrepressibles in any sort of order if once they learned they could outflank or surprise me? No matter to what ridiculous lengths they go, they must find me there before them." There was good philosophy in her laughing reply.

After all is said and done, family government resolves itself into the simple application of consecrated common sense to the domestic problem. Be what you would have your children be; control yourself; train them to obedience, truthfulness, industry, to love God and each other; to do right because it is right. Develop the good and repress the evil by setting before them only right motives of conduct; make punishment a means of grace and not an instrument of revenge; educate the conscience to be at once enlightened, sensitive, and controlling; enthrone the Golden Rule with its supreme love to God and equal love to man, as the law of your household, and your family will be well governed.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

WHY A SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY?

Why a Library? A Sunday school Library, a nucleus round which may cling the future destiny of many; within which is contained the embryo of love, goodness, duty, character, life.

The establishing of a library in a community, whether public or private, is an important event; for through it the spirit of progress is born and developed. It is a center of interest, the influence of which is salutary in every way, as well as a power morally, intellectually, and socially. Those who have had the advantages of an education feel the need of it, but to those who have had no opportunity for mind development, it is a positive necessity. It is the means by which they may be brought out of the narrowness of their individual lives into closer contact with the lives of others and the outside world.

The educational influence of good books is scarcely appreciated as it should be. Some one has said "Education is largely a process of selection, a cultivation of the faculty of discrimination." A plant selects from the soil the element requisite to its own growth. The particular plant requires special food. Minds likewise require suitable nourishment, and need an opportunity to make their own selection. Hence the necessity for the collection of books or library.

Many homes have no reading matter whatever suitable to the child mind, but their inquiring nature devours whatever it may find. Too many homes have nothing to read except the sensational newspaper. One of the greatest evils of the day is the reading of sensational literature. Pick up the popular newspaper and read over the headlines of a single page and you get a knowledge of enough crime to almost paralyze a Christian heart. You may peruse the dailies for a week and all the confidence in man, or love for God you gain you can shake in the shell of a mustard seed. Why are the children so afraid of the dark or to be left alone? is a question that is puzzling many minds. Listen for just one evening to the reading of the daily as it is either read aloud or its contents discussed in the homes, and how can you question. Even the good housewife who devours the newspapers keeps her doors locked in broad day, and is frightened to the cave at every shadow of a cloud. Again, comparatively few homes have even one standard magazine, and if asked the reason why, will say they can't afford it. The child mind must be fed. The immoral literature is so much the cheapest, that of a natural consequence it is the most likely to find its way into the homes of the poor. And it is the avenue through which his satanic majesty leads many a soul to a life of profligacy and intemperance, and the remedy is to supplant it with a taste for the better. A great many of the church members have nothing beyond the church periodicals and books, and a few not even them. To read only periodicals and books advocating one particular creed or method, whether it be religious, political, or social, closes the mind in a degree to the larger fields of thought, life, and progress. We need something fresh, vital, thought-provoking, to bring out and develop the reasoning faculties. We fully agree with an editor who said, "The book that makes a truthful, adequate presentation of some phase of thought or experience, that translates the real into the ideal, and evokes the ideal to give color and harmony to the real—such book, giving great thought and expressing it in the terms of everyday life, help to make life larger and better."

It is one thing to establish a library, and another to get people to read it. If the taste is formed for sensational reading it is like reforming the inebriate to get the mind to enjoy anything else. Hence the necessity of forming the right habit. Where outside of the home is better opportunity offered than in our Sunday schools? Here it is we take the children, many of them before they can read a word. Here it is we have the opportunity of supplying them with that which will instill in their minds a desire and love for that which is good, inspiring, elevating, and broadening. Shall we do it or shall we leave them to the mercy of illiterate and incompetent parents?

Were every home supplied with a library, and every child with educated and interested parents, we need not worry about a Sunday school library. Many parents who are competent are careless, but alas! how many are incapable of training their own children, had they the means with which to buy the books. How many of the parents have any taste for reading beyond our own church literature. But, says one, what more do we need? Cannot we learn enough in them to secure our soul salvation? Very well for the parent, but how about the child? The child has not yet acquired that taste, and unless rightly directed may never acquire it. He cannot read it for himself. If you read it to him he cannot understand it. What is he to do between now and the time he can read and comprehend it?

Sunday school workers, do you see the necessity? Do we comprehend the colossal magnitude of our opportunity? Thousands of children without one single book that will lead to higher things than those immediately surrounding them. Thousands of hungry little hearts and minds taking in the vices and sins which everywhere abound, simply because nothing better is provided. Shall we as Sunday school workers make one grand effort to establish a library in every school, that the little hungry hearts gathered in from the unfortunate homes may be started in right lines of thinking and living? The children come to school on Sunday, and while the surrounding influence is good, the children feel they would like to be always good, so they tell the teacher. We send them away with nothing except the lesson learned to occupy the mind till we meet again. They get back among old friends and the lesson is soon forgotten. But send them away with a little story they are to read to tell to the rest of the children, and every idle moment which was to have been spent in company with children of the back alley, going hunting birds' nests, or visiting some strawberry bed or melon patch, will be spent in finding out the rest of the story that the librarian told him was in the book. We all remember the old proverb about the idle mind. Keep the mind employed and there is little to fear. Many a man can trace his desire to be manly to the favorite book of his boyhood. Others trace their course downward from the reading of an evil book. The good book like the bad book lives long after the author is dead. The remembered sentiment of the written word may arrest the attention and transform the character, or may urge the young to deeds of shame and crime. It is within our power to direct the destiny of many.

The Sunday school is an organization for the bettering of mankind, and every avenue for doing good will not be silent to their tread.
