ARCHBISHOP IRELAND, M'KINLEY'S CHOICE AS AMERICAN PEACE ENVOY.

New York, Dec. 25.—A dispatch to the Journal from Washington says Archbishop Ireland will represent the United States at the Czar's peace congress. The President has had the subject under advisement for several weeks, and according to the best authority it may be said that a decision was recently reached, the Archbishop having agreed to accept this most important and honorable post. Ever since his induction into office the President has been anxious to testify his appreciation of Archbishop Ireland's Republicanism, which took the form of strong interviews and speeches during the campaign of 1896, and of his mental gifts and learning.

The Czar's call for an international peace congress, at which his proposed universal disarmament is to be discussed, has presented an exceptional opportunity to honor Archbishop Ireland in an illustrious manner.

As the representative of the United States in such an assemblage his position would comport with the dignity of his ecclesiastical office, while not interfering with its duties, owing to the temporary character of the political appointment.

Aside from the pleasant effect that such a designation would have upon a large proportion of the population of this country, it is assumed that the United States would gain prestige among the Catholic nations represented at this congress, as well as achieve for the President a reputation for good taste in selecting for a peaceful mission a professional messenger of peace and good will.

It is not yet known whether the Archbishop will be the sole representative of the United States or whether he will head a delegation of three or five representatives from this country.

ACTION AGAINST ANARCHISTS.

Rome, Dec. 27.—A delegate to-day stated the exact result of the Anarchist conference, the proceedings of which were kept secret.

An international bureau of police for surveillance of Anarchists is to be established in Berlin, consisting of nine members — German, Austrian, French, English, Italian, Russian, Swiss, Belgian, and Dutch. This bureau is to correspond with all the police departments of Europe, and will be represented in each country by special agents. All the states represented will contribute equally to the maintenance of the bureau.

The European governments are to negotiate for extradition treaties relating to Anarchists, who are defined as all those who make public profession of the anarchist faith, who are found in the possession of Anarchist publications, bombs, and letters of an anarchistic character, all members of Anarchist societies. Anarchists convicted of Anarchist crime are to be punished according to the law of the country where the crime is committed. Anarchist journals are to be placed under censor, their circulation interdicted, and their editors, printers, and distributors proceeded against as Anarchists. All proceedings against Anarchists will be conducted in camera.

These decisions were accepted by the delegates of Germany, Austria, Russia, Italy, Turkey, Spain, Portugal, Sweden, Denmark, Montenegro, Servia, and Roumania, but England, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, and Greece rejected them.

The conference also discussed the question whether Anarchist crimes should be punished with death. The proposition was rejected by a majority of votes.

The question whether Nihilists, Young Turks, Irridentists, and Fenians should be considered Anarchists, was decided in the negative.

None of these decisions is final, as they have to be ratified by the governments represented. It is probable the only ultimate upshot of the conference will be the establishment of an international police bureau.

DR. HALL ON CHRISTMAS.

Dr. Hall preached from the text:—"Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?"—Luke 7: 39.

The sermon was an eloquent appeal for a return to the ideals of Christ. . . .

"The Christmas season," said Dr. Hall, "emphasizes the contrasts of life. Joy and sorrow meet and pass one another. At the Christmas time hope and memory mingle. Sometimes it is saddened memory with hope will nigh away, and then again the infection of Christmas joy lends strength to hope and saddened memory is caught in its radiance and reflects its glory.

GLIMPSE OF COMING KINGDOM.

"The shortest day of the year is past, and the earth lies sleeping, dead, beneath its shroud of snow, but the sun shall rise in its strength again and summer and harvest shall have their place, and in the changes of ever varying human life the contrasts of Christmas are wholesome if the buoyant note of joy and confident expectation carry us out beyond ourselves and give us a glimpse of that coming kingdom of which we have read this morning.

"Our Christmas time is Christ's message to our hearts, the message of joy and peace that comes with the acceptance of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. He is come; we look not for another. His work is sufficient. His cross has crowned the centuries; his resurrection is to be our life. The glory of his life is our peace and our joy. Yet we look around at the stormy political horizon. With doubtful hearts we see the nations arming, and arming, and arming, until men groan under the pressure of the armor and wonder how long must these things be. We call ourselves Christians; we have tried to follow in his name and do his work, but we send at this Christmas time our message to the Christ, saying, 'Lord, how long shall these contrasts be?'

RELIGIOUS UNREST OF TO-DAY.

'This is our Christmas message. The world needs us. Messengers are to go from Christ to the religious unrest of the day. It is not peculiar, this unrest, to one country, to one clime, to one community. Men in the Roman communion are chafing and saying to their souls, 'I am not satisfied.' Men in divided Protestantism are saying to their souls, 'This cannot possibly be the final organization of God's church; let us seek something else.' Ours is the glorious privilege to go as the messengers of Christ, not with our arguments, but with our deeds, and with service and sacrifice, with new enthusiasm for humanity, make men know that indeed we may look for no other, for this man truly was a righteous man and the Son of God.

'How glorious a contrast is this Christmas hope to some of the hopes that are held out to us. Our Christmas hope is that the transfiguring and transforming and renewing spirit of Christ shall come, and that into strife, and conquest, and selfishness he will bring the tenderness and strength of renewed life. The old will become new, and there will be the peace that shall never pass away. He is come; we look for none other; and the glorious hope of the Christmas time is to light the dark places of the world, to strengthen broken hearts. This is the hope and joy of the resurrection from the dead things of selfishness unto the eternal things of service and sacrifice through the love of Jesus Christ.'—Chicago Tribune, Dec. 26.

PERILS OF RULERS.

It is estimated that the world has had 2,550 Kings or Emperors, of whom records are known, and who have reigned over seventy-four peoples. Of these rulers 300 were overthrown, sixty-four were forced to abdicate, twenty-eight committed suicide, twenty-three became mad or imbecile, 100 were killed in battle, 123 were captured by the enemy, twenty-five were tortured to death, 151 were assassinated, and 108 were executed.

A man named Smith in St. Paul in a lecture the other day disposed of Herbert Spencer by referring to him as "an old man in London, who has built up a system of philosophy which will shortly be forgotten."—Ex.

LIGHTNING'S RAVAGES IN ILLINOIS DURING 1898.

During the season from May 1 to November 1, there have been received by this office 201 reports of loss by lightning, which give an aggregate loss of $43,091.12, divided as follows: 122 buildings, consisting of barns, dwellings, churches, etc., with contents, damaged or consumed, to the value of $35,969; 221 head of stock killed, causing a loss of $6,608.82; and hay and oat stacks consumed to the value of $513.30. The reports received are probably but a small part of the losses actually sustained, as many were no doubt unreported.—Department of Agriculture, Illinois section.

EXPLOSION AMONG THE "IRVINGITES."

The sect of "Irvingites" has been rent in twain. The bone of contention is the "Apostolate." The "Original Twelve" in England having all died, a faction insisted on electing successors. Recently six have been set apart at Hamburg and two at Amsterdam, the latter assuming the names of "Ephraim" and "Juda." The conservatives resisted the idea of electing a second series.—Chicago Tribune, December 31, 1898.

Berlin, Dec. 26.—The Centrist leaders are confident the Bundesrath will shortly assent to the return of the Jesuits to Germany. The General of the order, who was recently here consulting the Centrists, has returned to Rome.

The Germans having been twitted of enlarging their army in spite of promises to cooperate in the Czar's disarmament proposal, point out that the Russian navy has been increased, the Finnish army reorganized on a larger scale, and the Russian artillery strengthened by an expenditure of nearly $100,000,000.

London, Dec. 27.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The conference based upon the disarmament proposal of Emperor Nicholas has been fixed for St. Petersburg about the beginning of May next, prior to which the Russian government will submit to the powers a definite plan of disarmament, in order to enable them to formulate modifications or counter suggestions."

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

The Appeal is still alive. St. Louis is filing up. Brethren W. T. Kyte and Samuel R. Burgess have headed the St. Louis list of $25 subscriptions, and others are making up their minds to follow the good example. "Go thou and do likewise." Bro. Fred A. Smith returned from Omaha the other day with a subscription from that well-known town, and prospects of several more. Council Bluffs has not written us as yet; they are evidently accumulating their subscriptions so as to surprise us. Bro. W. H. Kelley is still continuing his good work in the East, and we shall no doubt have good reports from him all the while. Canada should show up well in the list, and we are depending upon Bro. R. C. Evans to help on the good cause. This is a day of sacrifice, and let all zealous-hearted saints be prepared to divorce themselves from a luxury or two, if thereby they can help along a project—that assuredly is in harmony with the mind and will of God.

What about the College Museum that we are building up? We are still asking for antiquities, for maps, charts, books that will prove valuable in defense of the claims we put forth in respect to the history of this country. Also we shall be glad to accept any specimens of interesting animals, fowls, and so forth, also of minerals, plants, etc.

Bro. N. M. Gunsolley sent us this past week a fine specimen of a flying squirrel. Bro. Levi Atkinson, of Lamoni, has presented us some fine mineral specimens—gold, silver, and copper ores.

EUGENE YOUNG ON UTAH MOR-MONISM.

At a meeting of the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, held in New York City, Mr. Eugene Young, a grandson of Pres. Brigham Young, was present and made a speech. We give the incident and what is reported as said by Mr. Young:—

Mr. Dodge asked a cordial reception for the Rev. William R. Campbell, of Salt Lake City, for several years a Presbyterian missionary in Utah, who would introduce Mr. Eugene Young, a grandson of Brigham Young and Mrs. Fannie Stenhouse, who was well qualified to speak of the evils of Mormonism.

AN EXILE FROM UTAH.

Mr. Campbell explained that Mr. Young was born in Utah and had to leave that country because of his determination to speak his mind freely on political matters without the dictation of the Mormon Church.

"Though a grandson of Brigham Young, Mormon's greatest leader, Mr. Young stands squarely and uncompromisingly for the pure monogamic family, which is the corner stone of Christian civilization and republican institutions."

He said Mr. Young had inherited his hatred of tyranny and his preference for monogamy and Christianity from his Christian grandmother and mother, "who also found her way out of the perils of Mormon tyranny and polygamy to make a most splendid fight for her sisters, in worse than Egyptian bondage."

"BEWARE OF MORMON AMBITION."

"There seems to be a disposition in the East," said Mr. Young, "to treat the revival of the Mormon issue as a minor matter. There is an inclination to view the election to congress of B. H. Roberts—a three or fourply polygamist, still living in polygamy—as an unavoidable outcome of old conditions in Utah and a mere question of personal morality.

"What if Roberts is a polygamist?" says one. "He is no worse than dozens of men in congress."

"Let those who take such views beware of the awakening. Some day they will see, as those who know Mormon ambitions see now, that Mr. Roberts is a mere instrument, the representative of mighty forces. They will learn that through his election a people three hundred thousand strong have turned from American liberty and American morality and have taken the initial step toward the establishment of a hierarchy foreign to our institutions and our social laws in the midst of our republic."

We can have no possible objection to Mr. Eugene Young speaking for himself as against the "Mormonism" of his grandfather and Utah, the only phase of the faith known to the man, or which he has had any acquaintance sufficiently intimate to entitle him to speak. But he ought to be well enough informed to know that Utah Mormonism is nothing like so formidable as a dangerous factor in American politics as it was some few years ago, when there was considerably less disposition and opportunity for the open expression of opinions dissenting from the say of the leading men of the priesthood than there are now. Mr. Eugene Young stood in no danger of his life in Utah, though he may have held views adverse to leading men on either side of the party division, while there are men now living who bear scars from wounds received because they chose to differ from leading policies and dared to state what their convictions were. But as Paul was thankful that the gospel was preached though possibly from contention, we are thankful that a grandson of Pres. Brigham Young has the courage to speak his convictions in antagonism to the dogmas and practices of his grandfather. He may possibly be able to appreciate the position that the sons of the Prophet Joseph Smith have assumed regarding those same dogmas and practices; and be able and willing to give them credit for the stand they have taken. We hope so, any way. Mr. Eugene Young may be the forerunner to more of the grandsons of Utah's pioneer governor who will make it warm for those who choose to break the laws of the land under the plea of religion. We are sure they will find a field ready for occupancy.

UTAH CHURCH ISSUES BONDS.

It may be interesting to the saints to note that in this time of financial depression the Utah people have not prospered more than their neighbors, notwithstanding the boastful claims made abroad by their missionaries that they have been so wonderfully blessed in their mountain home. It has been reported that their total indebtedness would reach the three million dollar mark; but this, says the Salt Lake Tribune, is declared by "a prominent church official" to be in his belief "a most absurd figure," though he admits that, "As to the debts of the church, I have no figures at hand."

The following statement from President Snow, however, must be considered authentic:—

CHURCH BONDS.

In consequence of the financial condition of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, occasioned by the tedious and expensive litigation over the Church property, the difficulties which had to be contended with during the protracted prosecutions under the laws of Congress and the peculiar constructions of the courts in their enforcement, and other circumstances of an adverse nature, which for several years surrounded the Church, it has been compelled to borrow money from time to time, thus creating a debt which it is desirable as soon as possible to liquidate.

Money at a reasonable rate of interest has been offered to the Church from outside sources, but it was deemed better that an opportunity should be given to our own people to advance means for this purpose. This matter has been in contemplation for some time and has been carefully considered, with a view to the interest of the Church and the benefit of individuals.

The Presiding Authorities have therefore determined to issue bonds, running for a period of eleven years and bearing interest at 6 per cent per annum—fifteen hundred to be of the denomination of one hundred dollars each, numbered consecutively from one to fifteen hundred; two hundred of the denomination of five hundred dollars each, numbered consecutively from one to two hundred; and two hundred and fifty of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, numbered consecutively from one to two hundred and fifty, the whole issue aggregating five hundred thousand dollars, all bearing date of December 31, 1898.]

The security for the payment of these bonds and the interest thereon, will be the pledge of the Trustee-in-Trust for and in behalf of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, made to each of the holders of such bonds and also to Lewis S. Hills and David Eccles, who are constituted trustees to act for the said bondholders, that enough money to pay the interest on the bonds on the first days of July and January in each year after the first day of January, 1899, shall be deposited at the Deseret National Bank, and that at least fifty thousand dollars from the income of the said Church shall be deposited with the said trustees each year after the year 1900, to provide for the purchase of a portion of the bonds or to create a fund for their redemption. Thus arrangements will be effected by which the entire amount to pay for the principal and interest on the bonds will have been deposited in the term of eleven years. The bonds, however, will be subject to redemption in five years from the date thereof.

The Church has an income which will secure, undoubtedly, the payment of all its liabilities, including the interest on these bonds and the principal according to their face, and its assets at the present time are fully equal in value to its indebtedness, apart from its assured income. The Church has always been solvent, and the necessity for borrowing funds has been caused by the pressure of circumstances which were forced upon it.

The bonds, which will be offered on the first of January, 1899, may be purchased by any persons who desire to invest in them. They should be taken by residents of Utah. The Latter-day Saints who can purchase one or more of these bonds will find them a safe and profitable investment. Their issuance will enable the Trustee-in-Trust to settle liabilities carrying a heavy rate of interest, and this will make a considerable saving to the Church. The interest and principal will be paid in gold coin, and the Church, through its Trustee-in-Trust, will be full security for their redemption.

Application for the bonds should be made to LORENZO SNOW,
Trustee-in-Trust.

—Deseret Weekly News, Dec. 20, 1898.

The saddest comment to be made upon this condition of affairs is that the membership of the church must bear the burden of a $500,000 debt with $30,000 interest annually, as a consequence of their leaders opposing the laws of the land which God had admonished the church to respect.

Mr. Snow says:—

The necessity for borrowing funds has been caused by the pressure of circumstances which were forced upon it [the church].

It occurs to us that the leaders of the church in Utah are responsible for forcing this pressure upon the people. How easily it could have been avoided by heeding the following counsel of inspiration [given to the church in August, 1831:—

Let no man think that he is ruler, but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will; or, in other words, him that counseleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat. Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet. Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold them forth. Behold, here is wisdom.—D. C. 58: 5.

Those who sat upon the judgment seat in Utah were unwilling to be ruled by this counsel of God, but in their blindness and stupidity decided to contend against the laws of the land. The result was that after years of suffering and sacrifice they were compelled to yield by acknowledging the supremacy of the law; but not until they had entailed upon their followers a legacy of a bonded debt of $500,000 with $30,000 interest annually, in addition to current expenses.

Surely those affected by this mismanagement will see more clearly than ever before the significance of the closing words of the above quotation: "Behold, here is wisdom." Sometimes wisdom like other things, is seen by contrast; and here is an object lesson, which surely he who runs may read. And this is looking upon the burden placed upon the people in the most favorable light, without taking into consideration the possible failure of the church to meet its obligations.

It cannot be expected that the bonds will ever be at par on the market with no security behind them with but the pledge of the Trustee-in-Trust. The membership may have faith enough to take them up at face value; they may even be so enthusiastic as to pay a premium upon them; but if they are held at par the membership will have to carry them simply on the strength of their faith, and not upon business principles. Nor will business men outside be anxious for such security.

It occurs to us too that the faith that supports bonds may be somewhat weakened by the past record. The trouble and loss experienced in settling the affairs of Trustee Young must still be fresh in the memory of many now living. Those who care to look still farther back may be alarmed at the following resolution of repudiation adopted at this April Conference of 1845:—

On the subject of the old Church debts coming, it was moved and seconded that the debts of Kirtland, and Missouri, and the debts that are said to be accrued in consequence of purchasing the Galland tract in Iowa Territory, be dropt, and come up no more, and the Trustees shall be dunned for them no more for ever;—neither shall they be sold into the hands of the Gentiles. Carried unanimously.—Times and Seasons, Vol. 6, p. 870.

We are willing to concede that in this case the "Presiding Authorities" may be acting in good faith, and that every effort possible may be made to meet their obligations; but even then the burden upon the people, who must be expected to pay the bonds, is a heavy one; and what makes it more severe is the thought that it comes as a consequence of their leaders having disregarded both the laws of God and man.

Again, the people must pay these bonds, principal and interest, in gold coin, the principle against which the people of Utah have so emphatically protested at the polls ever since the money question has been an issue in politics.

FROM B. H. ROBERTS.

Congressman-elect B. H. Roberts has issued a personal statement for the information of the public, which we give to our readers herewith, without present comment, except to state, for any possibly unposted reader, that Joseph Smith's teachings, also the teachings of the Bible, condemn the practice of polygamy; also that according to the following statement credited to Mr. Roberts, polygamy is still believed in, but not practiced as extensively as heretofore, simply because "the hand of the Gentiles was laid so heavily upon the people" of the Utah Church who were in polygamy, etc. etc.:

CONGRESSMAN-ELECT ROBERTS RISES IN THE DEFENSE OF POLYGAMY.

Salt Lake, Utah, Dec. 28.—Congressman-elect B. H. Roberts to-day made the following statement:—

"If a time comes when it is necessary for me to defend myself I shall be there right on the spot and I appreciate that the members of Congress and the American people are more liberal, broad-minded, and generous than a few bigoted and contracted preachers of the Presbyterian Church, whose training, mode of life, and trend of thought tend to unfit them for practical life.

"Joseph Smith received a commandment from the Lord to introduce our order of marriage into the church and on the strength of that revelation and not by reasons of anything that is written in the Jewish Scriptures the Latter Day Saints practice plural marriage. Polygamy is not adultery, for were it so considered then Abraham, Jacob, and the prophets who practiced it would not be allowed a heritage in the kingdom of heaven, and if polygamy is not adultery, then it cannot be classed as a sin at all. It appears to me that modern Christians must either learn to tolerate polygamy or give up forever the glorious hope of resting in Abraham's bosom.

"That which God approves and so strikingly approves, must be not only not bad, but positively good, pure, and holy.

"Notwithstanding this, however, the hand of the Gentiles was laid so heavily upon the people of the Lord that, in his mercy, God permitted them to cease therefrom from expediency, and true to the pledges given by the church no polygamous marriages have since been celebrated by the church. But not even the church can take away from a man the wives it has already given him. They are his for time and for eternity, and I think the great, broad-minded, and just American people will not require a man to cast off the wives he has, with whom he has lived, nor to abandon his children."

At most, Mr. Roberts says, his offense is unlawful cohabitation, and he remarked: "I am here and the courts are open. If anyone wants to test the point the way is clear."

It has been urged by some that Roberts, owing to the operation of the Edmunds-Tucker act, which disfranchised all polygamists, is legally barred from taking his seat in Congress. In regard to this Mr. Roberts says he has had the best legal advice obtainable, which convinces him there are no legal obstacles in the way of his taking his seat.—Chicago Tribune, Dec. 29, 1898.

It is with regret that we chronicle the departure from this life of Parley P. Kelley, a brother of Bishop E. L. Kelley. He was the sixth son, though seventh born of the family. He was raised on the homestead near Macedonia, Iowa, and after attaining manhood studied law and was admitted to the bar, and at the time of his death was a practicing attorney of Mills County and adjoining counties in Iowa and Nebraska, since 1875. He died at his home, Glenwood, Iowa, Tuesday, December 27, of congestion of the brain. He was born June 23, 1848.

The notice of his demise will be of interest to the saints from the fact that he was one of the counsel for the church in the suit for the Temple

Lot, and wrought most faithfully to secure what the church claimed. He was not a member of the church, though believing.

He was at the time of his death one of the members of Graceland College Board, and took quite an active interest in the success of the college.

NEWS FROM HAWAII.

Bro. U. W. Greene is evidently preparing for an active campaign in mission work in Hawaii. He wrote from Honolulu, December 19, the following good word:—

Inclosed find order for copy of Bro. Heman Smith's work, "True Succession in Church Presidency." Several of the Utah elders attended my services last night, and, taking exceptions to my statements, asked permission to reply. I granted it on condition that I review the same night, and that they open their church building for me. The elder finally said he would consult the president of the mission and see. I await developments. They urged that never had a church in Utah been closed against any of our elders, and asked for dates, locations, etc. I was told last night they had 20,000 members in these islands. Send you copy of Bulletin showing our church advertisement for last Sunday and the prominent position given the subject. Also have notices in three other English dailies and one native paper. Audiences increasing. Expect to hold cottage meetings among natives after Christmas. Written questions are being presented and serve to show that some are seeking to learn.

The Evening Bulletin, to which Bro. Greene refers, is an eight-page paper with six columns to the page, issued daily except Sunday. Across the top of the entire first page and above the title of the paper appear these words in large bold type: "The Restoration of the Gospel by Angel Ministry in this Age." To the right of the title this: "This is Elder U. W. Greene's Theme for To-morrow Night." To the left this: "See Church Directory on this page for other services."

Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ.—Services in Millani Hall, rear of Opera House, next Sunday as follows: 10 a. m. Sunday School; preaching in Hawaiian at 11 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. Preaching in English at 7:30 p. m., by Elder U. W. Greene; subject, "The Restoration of the Gospel by Angel Ministry in This Age." All are cordially invited to come and hear.

We are not through yet. On page 5, top item of "Local and General" we read in display type, this:—

Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ will hold several services tomorrow. Preaching in English at 7:30 p. m., by Elder U. W. Greene. See Church Directory page 1.

We call that good advertising. It indicates that Brn. Waller, Greene, Ingham, et al., are in earnest and mean to build up the work, by the blessing of the Master and earnest endeavor. They deserve success and we earnestly pray they may have it. Their success is ours and ours is theirs; so of the faithful brethren who labor for the cause in every land.

TRUE SUCCESSION IN CHURCH PRESIDENCY.

One thousand copies of this valuable work, written by Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian, and in reply to B. H. Roberts, of the Utah Church, have been bound and are now on sale at the Herald Office.

The book contains 167 pages of valuable historical and general matter and is sold at the low price of 35 cents per copy—the mere cost of publication, that it may be given the widest possible circulation.

The Herald Office asks for orders for one thousand copies of this book. Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa.

HALL CAINE ON AMERICA.

Hall Caine, author of the Manx Man, has this to say of America:—

I love America because it is big, and because its bigness is constantly impressing the imagination and stimulating the heart. I love its people because they are free, with the freedom which the rest of the world takes as by stealth, and which they claim openly as their right. I love them because they are the most industrious, earnest, active, and ingenious people on earth; because they are most moral and religious; and, above all, the most sober people in the world; because, in spite of all the shallow judgments of superficial observers, they are the most childlike in national character, the easiest to move to laughter, the readiest to be touched to tears, the most absolutely true in their impulses, and the most generous in their applause.

JUSTICE, IF TARDY.

We notice by the Nebraska City News for December 23, sent us by Sr. Anna Nielsen, that Bro. Mark H. Forscutt has been granted a pension for service, of eight dollars per month.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. A. B. Pierce, Providence, Rhode Island, December 28:—

Bro. George Robley spoke at Auburn, Rhode Island, last Friday evening, and at Fiskville last Sunday. Elder Joseph Luff preached twice here last Sunday. He also preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Smith, wife of Bro. John Smith, at New Bedford, yesterday. Plainville Sunday school held Christmas exercises in their chapel Saturday eve with a crowded house. Providence school held theirs on Monday eve. The Bellevue Avenue Male Quartet sang at both places. They rendered a new hymn, words and music composed by Bro. James Mackinnon entitled "Crown the Savior." Bro. St. Elmo Coombs kindly assisted the quartet at the organ at both of these engagements. Elders M. H. Bond and George Robley are to dedicate the new chapel at Plymouth, Massachusetts, next Sunday, and hold a series of meetings there the following week.

Elder R. M. Elvin, Higbee, Missouri, December 26:—

Notwithstanding attractions of the holidays, have kept up meetings, and yesterday added six by baptism. Expect to close the protracted effort this evening.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Prof. J. T. Pence, formerly connected with Graceland College as a member of the faculty, and who for a time acted as Acting President of the college, severed his connection with that institution at the close of the fall term. Professor Pence goes to Washington, D. C., to enter upon legal studies in a law school. He goes from Graceland and Lamoni with the best wishes of our people. He has worked hard to assist in making Graceland a success. He is a capable, energetic worker, and is well and favorably known with pleasant memories by our people. His many friends wish him success in his new lines of endeavor.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard reached Lamoni from Independence on the 26th ult., to attend to various items of church and college work.

Bro. A. H. Mills, Professor of Instrumental Music in Graceland College, returned to Lamoni from Independence of late, to assume his duties as a member of the faculty, during the coming winter term, etc.

Bro. A. B. Pierce sends us a clipping from the Attleboro, Massachusetts, Chronicle for December 14, in which appears an account of an "entertainment and musicale" given at Providence, for the benefit of Graceland College. The item contains complimentary references to our people, to Graceland, and to Lamoni. Of the latter it says: "It is in a model town with no saloons where little or no police protection is needed."

Many years ago it was said of a people that the Lord had poured out on them the spirit of deep sleep, and for this reason they stumbled in their ways, being blinded by sleep. The present age seems to be a wide-awake one in most things, and yet there is a moral blindness over the people, showing its worst features in the leaders, who for the most part seem to be trying to see how little of the old-time faith and principle of belief in Christ they can teach to their followers and retain their places and prestige as leaders.

Word received from Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., at Correct, Indiana, states that he had been quite sick, but that he was mending and that in a few days he would be able to get home. He asks the prayers of the saints in his behalf.

The permanent mission address of Bro. A. C. Barmore is Alturas, Modoc County, California.

Subscriptions for the HERALD are always in order, but the new year is an especially good time to begin. Matters of much import to the work are treated in its columns, and saints should be well posted on all lines pertaining to the latter-day work. The Board of Publication would be pleased to see substantial additions to the HERALD'S list. We call attention to this matter in this the first issue of the new volume. The subscription price is $1.50 per year. The HERALD is an educator for good in the family circle.

The will of the present day is the key to the future, and moral character is eternal destiny.—Horatio Stebbins.

WILL THE HUSBAND ESCAPE?

Considerable has been written on the subject of which Sr. Almira wrote in Herald for June 1, but why is it always: "Woman, thou sinner," while man receives never a word of censure? Is not the husband often as much to blame as the wife, and sometimes more? There are men who through purely selfish motives will commit the horrible crime. There can be life before there is motion. If not, how could there be growth and development? Even when convinced that it is a crime, some will think of the care and work a babe would bring, of the fine dresses they couldn't wear, of the social and worldly pleasures in which they could not indulge; and so instead of saying, "Get behind me, Satan," they say, "Hush, conscience." And the little heart that might have beat with love for them; the little arms that might have clung around their neck in infancy, and have been their support in old age; the little feet that might have run at their bidding, and which they might have led in the paths of righteousness, and to the gates of eternal glory, are not developed. For such women I have no plea to make, and no accusation for the husband, unless he has encouraged the act.

A learned lady once said, "The greatest calamity that can befall a woman is never to have a child. The next greatest is to have but one."

A womanly woman will desire offspring. She will feel that her greatest happiness will be reached when she holds her own babe in her arms; she will love to see children growing up around her; she will be happy in the thought that she has furnished a body for some soul. A womanly woman will want to bear children, because the Father of all ordained marriage for that purpose. In this, as in every other duty and in all affairs of life, wisdom should be used, and no woman should be so much overburdened that her body is weakened and her nerves shattered; and one who would be a patient, loving mother is made irritable and unfit to have the care of little ones.

The Lord gave woman the means of supplying her child with nourishment until it is able to eat. When a toothless infant less than a year old is deprived of that nourishment, and the mother must endure the discomfort of pregnancy, and feel unfit to give it the care a mother's heart would delight in giving her babe, and the care of the child in her arms, and broken rest, make her unfit for her condition, and through having a double burden to bear her own body is weakened, isn't something wrong? Is wisdom shown there? If not, it is not the Lord's will. Tokology wisely says, "May the day soon arrive when men will learn that even passion should serve reason, and that gratification should at least not be sought at the expense of conjugal happiness and unwelcome children."

Amen, AMEN. And when they learn this, there will be less of this crime. Some men forget that a woman's muscles are not made of iron nor her nerves of steel, and so impose burdens upon her that a little thought for her, and forgetfulness of self, would save her.

The life of a woman with a family of small children, who is unable to hire help, is one round of toil, and full of care, worry, and petty annoyance, which are sometimes more wearing on nerves than heavy trials. When she finds another drop must be added to the cup already full, another burden laid on the shoulders now bending beneath the load, she looks about for some means of escape, and sees but one, and in her despondency, and I believe in some cases temporary insanity, she does that against which her soul may have revolted, and for which her life may be overshadowed with sorrow and regret. Will not the husband at least share in the punishment meted out for that crime? Any husband who suggests or encourages such an act will not escape, for God is just.

Wives, who shirk the duties of motherhood for comfort and pleasure, obey the admonition to "Come up higher." Husbands—who over burden your wives, let all the care of the little ones fall on them, and think only of your own comforts and desires—"Come up higher."

Let us all live so that we may be prepared for whatever may happen in 1905, or at any time. Let our lives be so pure and our hearts so ready to obey all of God's commands, that when Christ comes we may be ready to meet him. What is a few years of pleasure here compared with an eternity with God and Christ?

WEAVING.

Lo, I'm a weaver, and each day

The threads of life I spin;
And be the colors what they may,
I still must weave them in.

With morning light there comes the thought,

As I my task begin—
My Lord to me new threads has brought,
And bids me weave them in.

Sometimes he gives me threads of gold,
To brighten up the day;
Then somber tints, so bleak, so cold,
That change the gold to gray.

His love, alas! I oft forget,
When these dark threads I spin,
That cause me grief and pain, but yet
He bids me "weave them in."

And so my shuttle swiftly flies,
With threads both gold and gray,
And on I toil, till daylight dies,
And fades in night away.

And when my day of toil is o'er,
And I shall cease to spin,
He'll open wide my Father's door,
And bid me rest within.

There, safe at home in heavenly light,
How clearly I shall see,
That every thread—the dark, the bright, Surely had need to be.

—Selected.

THE wise man said, "There is nothing new under the sun;" and a little calm reflection will convince us of the truth of these words. The thought may be new and entirely original to us, to the extent that it was not imparted to us by another, either through the medium of social intercourse or of books, and yet it is not original to the extent of being first developed in our own brain, for thousands of years ago (as we often learn) this same thought dwelt in the brain of another, though it was clothed in language in some respects different from ours. But the great thinker, Emerson, makes this claim, "Thought is the property of him who can entertain it; and of him who can adequately place it. A certain awkwardness marks the use of borrowed thoughts, but as soon as we have learned what to do with them they become our own." Surely they are a part of God's best and freest gifts upon which the monopolizing hand may not be laid. Like the diffusive light of the sun, the health-giving air we breathe, they are the heritage of God to his earth-born sons and daughters, none the less precious because each may appropriate without let or hindrance.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Albert Beaver, New Market, Iowa, desires the prayers of the church, and of the Prayer Union, that he may be healed of his afflictions, and that he may not be compelled to give up his child to be raised by unbelievers.

A sister in London, England, who has been deaf for a number of years earnestly desires the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union, that if it is God's will he may restore her hearing. Her faith is strong in the power of God. She has been administered to without effect.

James W. Whitney, Toqua, Washington, severely afflicted with a gathering on his foot, wishes the prayers of all saints that he may be healed.

Sr. William Watson, Independence, Missouri, writes: "Dear sisters of the Prayer Union, I appeal to you for your earnest prayers in behalf of my baby boy, Gomer. He has been ailing for some months and sometimes he is very sick. I have faith in the Prayer Union, and if it is not asking too much, I would like a day set apart for fasting and prayer."

DISTRICT OFFICERS' WORK.

Many district officers are now seeking some method of keeping the workers of their districts awake and alive to the interests of the work. They realize that something needs to be done to prevent a falling away of interest, and consequently the extent of the work in their charge. But what that something is, or how to do it, is what often troubles them. They see the older workers one by one dropping out of line, and the newer ones enlisted do not make the necessary improvement to make them effective workers. They appoint conventions and there discuss the needs of their district, and of those workers; but alas! the very ones that most need the drill are not there. Some of them have never attended a convention or institute. How to reach and interest such ones as these is what we wish to discover. Bro. Joseph Roberts presents in the accompanying article one of the successful plans of overcoming the obstacles mentioned. We wish to call your attention especially to the parallel columns of "What is" and "What should be." It may seem at first thought that the "What should be" is too theoretical or not practical, but we believe from what we have observed of the workings of the plan set forth that it is a success.

The plan, briefly stated, is to send to each officer in the district a blank containing from three to a half dozen questions with space after each one for the answer to be written in. These are to be sent out just prior to the district conventions, and after being filled out, sent to the district superintendent. These are by him collected and presented to the convention for discussion.

You will note from the sample questions in the article that to answer these would require some little thought; considerable, in fact, if the person had not made it a previous study. A set of different questions is sent each time to the teachers of the district. Thus it is that "all" are reached. Try this plan then report of your success.

A WORK FOR DISTRICT CONVENTIONS.

The important relation which the local schools and district organization bear to each other should be recognized and understood. Our schools are districted for a purpose, and this purpose is to systematize and make stronger and better the local school. This necessitates activity, thoroughness, and efficiency on the part of those having the district work in charge, otherwise the organization is of little value.

It is largely through the conventions that the district organization finds opportunity for benefiting the local schools. With regard to the convention work—or more properly the institute work of the convention—we give in parallel contrast our idea of WHAT IS.

1. The question that district officers must meet is, How can we reach more of our local workers to benefit them?

2. For the purpose of instructing those who attend, institutes and conventions are instituted.

3. Those who have in charge the subjects to be considered at these gatherings reach only a part—and more frequently a very small part—of the workers.

4. The district officers require no special work from the teachers and local officers to prepare and present to the convention. Hence,

5. Few of the local workers prepare material for these conventions.

WHAT SHOULD BE.

1. The question that district officers must meet is, How can we reach all our local workers to benefit them?

2. For the purpose of benefiting all, whether in attendance or not, institutes and conventions are instituted.

3. Those who have in charge the subjects for consideration reach all the workers.

4. The district officers require individual work from each teacher and local officer to present to the convention. Hence,

5. All the local workers have a part to perform at these district gatherings.

There are many earnest, zealous teachers and officers who seldom or never attend the convention of their district association. They have reasons for not attending. These feel the need of being benefited as well as those who may attend. And for the purpose of reaching all through the district convention, the plan of providing the local workers with lists of normal questions to be filled out by them and forwarded to the convention is one that could profitably be considered.

The following are sample lists of normal questions that have been used, and that are to be used by the Fremont, Iowa, district association at the regular conventions.

NORMAL WORK FOR TEACHERS.

NO. 1. TEACHING.

1. Is telling necessarily teaching?
2. Is hearing a recitation necessarily teaching?
3. Is all so-called teaching really teaching?
4. Give a good definition for teaching.

NO. 2. ATTENTION.

1. Define attention.
2. Mention three ways by which attention may be secured.
3. Mention three ways in which attention may be lost.

NO. 3. REVIEWS.

1. How frequent should the teacher review her class?
2. At what part of the recitation should this review be given?
3. In what ways do reviews benefit the pupil?
4. Of what benefit are they to the teacher?
5. How may the blackboard, maps, charts, etc., be of value to the teacher in her class reviews?
6. Give a good reason why the teacher should make special preparation on reviews for presentation to her class.

The district officers provide lists of normal questions which are sent to the local workers prior to the regular convention of the district association. The local workers fill out these lists and forward to convention in due time. This material is then arranged by the convention in such a way that conclusions may be reached, and a well developed outline of the subject upon which the questions may be based is discussed and placed on blackboard.

Believing this plan of normal questioning is a progressive step, and one that may be taken through the district convention, we offer it by way of suggestion to those who may be benefited by it.

WOODBINE, Iowa, Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—As the year 1898 is fast rolling away, it occurs to me it will be well to let your readers know that I still live, although that is an item of little moment to any but myself and family; yet in connection with that fact is clustered my efforts, such as they be, for the spread of the truth; and the first fact that stares me in the face is that my usefulness is growing less, and my sphere is of necessity narrowing; not that my faith is weaker, my zeal cooler, or my desire to do something for the spread of the kingdom of God less than in former days; but my physical strength is waning, and I find myself incapable of great endurance or prolonged effort. The weight of nearly seventy-three years seems not so easy to carry as the days of my earlier manhood; but I keep plodding on, and try to bear the burden of the day until the task is done. Sometimes I seem to forget that I am no longer young; but when the brief task is accomplished, my relaxed powers bring the fact forcibly to my understanding that I am "one of the boys" no more. During the last year I have had considerable sickness, and at this writing I am far from being free; but I trust the Father will give me strength according to my day; I have no right to claim any more; and I am promised that.

I have labored some in Pottawattamie County, only in Crescent, however, and some in Galland's Grove district. I attended their last conference there, but was called away to assist at a funeral. I then attended the conference of the Little Sioux district, from which, by request, I went and preached in Mondamin, a place in which I performed considerable labor many years ago; and I was very kindly received, and treated with every consideration. I believe that my labors there, in the past, contributed toward the after success of the "Christian Church" there. I believe our presentation of the truth of the first principles of the gospel convinced many; but they not having the moral courage to embrace the gospel in its fullness, and cast their lot in with the despised Latter Day Saints—they were glad to stifle their consciences by accepting a partial truth, and continue to worship at the shrine of mammon; and that is what is the matter with thousands. Popularity is their God!

But at this visit I found a neat little church in possession of the saints, and a much interested congregation waiting to listen to the heavenly message. This church has since been dedicated to the Lord, as duly noticed in your columns. The success of the work in Mondamin and surrounding villages is due mainly to the incessant and indefatigable labors of Elder A. M. Fyrando, who through sunshine and storm, when his physical condition really demanded he should seek recuperation at home, left his comfortable home and threaded the weary miles in heat and cold, often returning at night to feed the flock of which he was immediate shepherd. God has owned his labors and crowned them with success. It is true other men have entered into his labors, your humble servant among the rest; but God and his saints there recognize the "boy" as the humble instrument who has continually toiled and prayed for the success of the work there. Those who have contributed their share to that success will not lose their reward.

It is a great comfort to me to know that in my brief visit there I was permitted to visit Elder Henry Garner in his last hours, and administer to him the consolation afforded in the gospel; and to find his faith unwavering, right in the face of death. He talked with me strongly and intelligently of the latter-day work, and of the certain approach of the departing hour. He could testify that he had embraced no "cunningly devised fable," but the unerring word and work of God. While the appearance of his wan face and wasted frame gave me pain, his spirit, buoyant with the hope of immortality and eternal life, afforded me joy. He passed away with the certainty that "all was well."

The Galland's Grove district authorities requested me to take charge of a two days' meeting in Galland's Grove, on the 17th and 18th of December. I was just starting to comply as a telegram came from Carroll County, summoning me to preach the funeral of Sr. Medora Kendall Phelps, who had been suffering for fifteen years. I complied with the summons, and on the 17th I preached her funeral sermon in the Methodist church at Benan, where I met a large audience of very attentive listeners, to whom I unfolded the gracious promises of the gospel of Christ to all true believers. The Spirit of God aided me in my effort; I hope it will result to the glory of God.

At the close Bro. William Carroll, from Auburn, requested me to go with him to Rockwell City, Calhoun County, to preach the funeral sermon of Mr. John Wallace, well and favorably known to all traveling elders in Galland's Grove district, because of his kindness in keeping for all the servants of God an open house, a free table, and a comfortable bed, and never forgetting that they needed means to forward them on their journey of love and faith. He died in the gospel faith, but unbaptized. He had believed the work and advocated it for years. He had desired baptism, but for some cause it had been postponed, and as the ministry only occasionally visited that part, when his sickness came upon him he was anxious to be baptized; but his death was too sudden. I preached his funeral in the Methodist church in Rockwell City, to a large audience not of our faith; but I was strengthened for the effort. Elder Carroll was in charge, and the M. E. pastor pronounced the benediction. The Baptist minister was also on the platform. The texts were Hebrews 9: 27 and Job 14: 14. At the close my physical powers seemed to give way, and after a night of pain I started on the return for home, having to go by train from Rockwell City to Jefferson, about thirty miles, thence home. Mrs. Wallace, the bereaved widow, kindly and abundantly aided me on my way, for which may God reward her, as he certainly will.

I have remained unfitted for further duties up to this writing, and find it necessary to avoid exposure and constant labor in the field; but shall continue to do what I can as strength returns. Fearing this long letter may be tedious, I close, wishing the Herald and all its readers, writers, printers, and editors a good, successful, and happy New Year.

CHARLES DERRY.

NORTH PLYMOUTH, Mass., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—For the last year we have made some progress in the work. The saints, but few in number, have made some effort, for we have built a chapel 20x30, a neat little place, with the assistance of the people in Plymouth; and for this I feel grateful to the Lord. It seems that the Lord must have been with us, for as soon as my wife proposed it, it met with the approval of the saints.

Our good brother, George Robley, was on hand to see that justice was done for the work; for he donned the blue and went in spade and shovel in hand. He has paid us a visit of late. I expect him to be on hand on New Year's Day for the dedication of the chapel. I hope there will always be means provided for him to be kept at his post or in the field, for we need just such men as he is, full of faith in the work, and I believe by precept and example that he is performing his part; and he seems to leave that influence behind that we want to say, "Come again, dear brother; you are welcome."

We have a young brother in the work, B. W. Leland by name, and he has worked night and day to finish the chapel. He will make his mark in the work if he is humble.

I should not do our sisters justice if I should leave them out, for they have a sewing circle, and through their help they intend to—well, I dare say, furnish the chapel with lights and carpets. So you see that the saints are awake here.

Your brother,
N. R. NICKERSON.

CLARKSVILLE, Texas, Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—"All's well that ends well." The foe has been met and the victory won at Mabry schoolhouse, by Bro. I. P. Baggerly. J. W. Chism with his ism and schism, the representative of the Church of God, Christ, Disciple, Christian—Campbellite Church was the foe. They met on Monday, December 5, and closed Saturday night, holding twelve sessions of two hours each; the propositions being the two churches.

Chism took the lead the first three days, and in showing up the organization of his church stated that baptism for the remission of sins was valid though administered by a devil. Some of his own brethren said if that was the way their church was organized they belonged to it no longer. Chism frequently charged Bro. Baggerly with lying either by saying it is false or coming out and saying it was a lie.

I think it was as complete a victory as could have been won by anybody. Of course time will tell what the result will be; I am satisfied it will be good.

We had very bad weather the last three days; and this with the death of a prominent woman diminished the attendance, although about all had heard Chism's affirmative argument and were pretty well convinced how it would end.

G. L. RATHBUN.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—Enough rain fell yesterday to lay the dust, and we but pray it is the precursor of a greater downpour which will do material good. It is as balmy as May today. The country is in sad need of rain, yet indications for a wet winter; so say the old prognosticators.

Let me say "amen" to your late editorial, "Is remonstrance available?" It is timely and to the point. Would it not be a good thing to let our remonstrance assume tangible form and, as a church, submit such a memorial to the House of Representatives, setting forth the facts in the case as we alone can, which would not only disclose our moral altitude, but would be an effectual means of enlightening the American public as to the marked difference between the two organizations? The various leading denominations are moving out in this matter, why not we?

Permit me to give hearty assent to Bro. J. C. Clapp's position as to public discussions. Public debate should be the court of final appeal; not that we are afraid of the outcome, when properly conducted; but, at best, it engenders much ill-will, which we can well afford to avoid when possible. Seldom, if ever, should we be the challenging parties. If our laymen throughout the church were kindly informed that the church will not hold herself responsible for any contract they may make, and if no agreement for discussion be perfected save by consent and coöperation of missionary in charge, mistakes would be obviated and perfect results always attained. Our adversaries have been so outdone hitherto that they are now determined to force us to defend our claims while they put nothing up. We should entirely ignore such cowardly attacks. He is a brave (?) warrior who insists that his opponent must be tied hand and foot ere the encounter begins. But as a burnt child dreads the fire, so these our opponents while blatantly asserting their prowess still reëntrench themselves more and more behind untenable and unjust propositions and rules. We can afford to stand on our dignity now that we have vindicated our ability to defend our claims. While we may unwittingly be led to discuss with ungentlemanly, dishonest demagogues, there is no necessity for constant repetition with our eyes open.

Truth should be the aim, and honor the watchword, in every encounter. To confound an antagonist and win a personal triumph is one thing; to impregnate the public with gospel truths and diffuse the cheer of God's Holy Spirit is quite another. To maintain that righteous equilibrium that one should were Christ the Judge, is sometimes quite difficult; and yet this should be our aim.

How my heart was cheered in reading the clear elucidation of the "one tenth" and "tithing proposition" in November Autumn Leaves by Bro. Duncan Campbell under "Current History." You have struck the keynote on this question, Bro. Campbell, and may it ring out until all God's children shall be attuned therewith, and respond with willing hearts. Your fearless and broad position on the social questions of the times will do a vast amount of good. We cannot afford to ignore the social ills and the rank injustice 'twixt man and man, which must be rectified, among saints at least, ere Christ shall come and reign.

Though not fully agreeing with Bro. W. H. Kelley on his "stone" position, let me congratulate him that having had his say, he was willing to let others do likewise, perfectly content to abide the decision of a critical but intelligent public without a protracted crossfire. Methinks it would be better to eliminate personality and personal utterances from controversy as much as possible, and deal with questions in their general rather than personal application.

Bro. Heman's article is as the "artillery of heaven." Now let every saint arm himself with a copy of the forthcoming book and see to it that his neighbor is likewise supplied, and especially those who may be blinded by Utah heresies.

Would that the many Eastern saints could spend the holidays 'mid sunshine and flowers with us. May the sunshine of heaven and the flowers of love and kindness bring gladness and cheer to all God's favored flock at this Christmastide.

Success to all this coming New Year.

Ever hopeful,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

No. 718 San Julian St., Los Angeles, Cal.

MOLEN, Utah, Dec. 20.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Emery, where we held a three-nights' discussion with Bishop Alonzo Brinkerhoff.

I met him in Ferron on the night of the 15th inst., and we there, after my meeting, made arrangements for the debate to begin the next evening. So on Friday morning Bro. A. R. Larson and I drove to Emery and put up with the Bishop; and by the way, I want to say he is one of the pleasantest men one could meet with in a day's travel.

At seven p. m. I led out, being in the affirmative on the succession. Before we began the Bishop told me he didn't want me to abuse him or his people, and said if I did he would go for me. I told him to wait and see; but I saw he was still suspicious and after a little more talk I told him although I was in his house I had my own peculiar way of presenting things, and no man could put fetters on or gag me.

Before we began he selected one of his members for chairman and timekeeper. I told him I would leave that to him, and I believed he would select a fair man; and so he proved to be.

Our agreement was to have four nights but after the second night the Bishop thought best to close on Sunday night, and I couldn't urge or insist on prolonging the debate, as I learned and was satisfied he had business matters pressing at the time. He proved the gentleman from start to finish and went right into Tullidge's history and did his best to show what he believed the inconsistencies and weaknesses of our position. He occupied the same ground as all whom I have met on the Reorganization, and he is the first one that I have met that didn't rely on "old wives' fables" and his own personal testimony, but made his arguments straight out; and although a young man who never had the advantages that many others have, yet he made as good a defense as anyone I have met.

Everything passed off pleasantly, and he frequently told his people he wanted them to treat Peter and me right. On the Sunday he fairly insisted on my going to Sunday school with him, but I begged off. At two p. m. he called on me to preach, and I did so with good liberty. At the close of our night session the moderator told the people that they had learned nothing; that he had a like experience with the Josephites in England; and that no good came from it; and said, "They are deceivers, wolves in sheep's clothing." I told him squaretoed that if they were sheep, I was not a wolf; for I had not put on their fleece. Immediately one man arose and said: "I move that we tender Mr. Anthony a vote of thanks for the information we have received during this discussion;" another man seconded the motion, when the vote was called and a forest of hands went up from the immense congregation. People had come fifteen and eighteen miles to hear the discussion. Then immediately another man arose and said: "I move we give the Bishop three cheers for the victory achieved over his opponent," and then the hip-hip hurrah filled the room. All this was done on the spur of the moment. The Bishop gathered himself together and mildly reproved them. He said: "Brother Anthony is here alone, and has proved himself a gentleman, and has presented his side fairly and honorably;" and said he very much regretted what they had done, and asked how they would like to see one of their missionaries treated the same way.

After the close several came to me and gave me a fraternal handshake, with "God bless you," and "Peace be with you;" and some expressed the hope that we might meet again. When men and women came to me with those expressions of kindness, wishing me God speed, I confess my heart was stirred and went out to them in all loving kindness, and my eyes were a fountain of tears, and I felt in my soul to say, Praise the Lord for all his goodness; what am I but a weak and unprofitable servant!

The Bishop and his good wife made our stay with them just as pleasant as our own people could do, and when we told them good-bye, they both gave us a pressing invitation to come again, that we should always be welcome there. The Bishop wanted me to stop a week longer and visit with him, and told me that any time I came I should have the meeting house to preach in. He has been on a two-years' mission in the Southern States, and like many others, and some of ours, was beaten with sticks for preaching the gospel as they believe it. I told a returned missionary last summer, at Lake Town, on Bear Lake, when he told me he always felt at home when he found a Josephite, that if I knew a Josephite that refused to feed and shelter one of their missionaries I wouldn't own him as a brother. He was in Florida and Alabama.

When I entered into the discussion I was just fairly recovering from a severe cold and grip, but I felt strong all the way through, and am feeling quite well now. I am to preach in Ferron next Thursday night. I have a number of places here to preach and expect to remain here for some time. I will, when I finish up here, move on south until I visit all the scattered members, as per request of Bro. J. W. Wight.

I will be pleased to have any of the saints who desire my services write me and direct to me at Ferron, Utah. That will be my address for some time yet. I feel better satisfied with this last debate than with any I ever held. The Spirit that prevailed was splendid, and we hope for good.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 23.

Editors Herald:—Sunday, December 18, I put in a pretty good day's work for a local. Got up at six a. m. and prepared to go to Santa Rosa; arrived there at eleven a. m., preached about forty-five minutes. We then had sacramental meeting until 2:15, at which I blessed two babies and administered to three. Then rode home fifty miles and preached at 7:30 p. m.

On the 20th I had the pleasure of leading a very estimable young woman into the waters of baptism. She is from Modoc County, and heard the word first through Brn. Barmore and Blair. We hear good reports from these brethren. I felt impressed Thursday, the 22d, to call on a sister, and when there I was asked by a lady not of our faith, to bless her baby, which I did.

Everybody is much rejoiced over good showers of rain which we have just had. The outlook for the work was never better, though there are some things we would rather were otherwise. Our faith grows stronger, and we want to be actively engaged in the glorious work. As far as I am personally concerned, I am in the "harness" all the time; if not in one way in another. As agent for the Bishop I find enough to keep me busy in connection with the pursuits of life. The enemy is strong to oppose, but our Father is stronger. I find there is a sweet peace in struggling to overcome the evil and do the right.

WESCOTT, Neb., Dec. 24.

Editors Herald:—The work is in a fairly good condition here, though we have not been favored with additions of late. During the past six months I have opened a few new places, and there is some interest manifested; in one of those places I have reason to believe some will obey when I visit them again. Bro. James Caffall came here November 10, and remained over a month, doing efficient work for the Master. His health was impaired from the effects of a heavy cold. But notwithstanding that, and the farther fact that he has advanced in age beyond the three score years and ten, when the grand old man stood before the people and "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," he was to look upon as a man in the prime of life. Long may he live to labor for the Master, and see the great work of God develop.

I noticed in the Kansas City Star, under date of 14th ult., almost a two column article, in which the people of God are put in their true light before the world in a general way, from the time the church was organized in 1830 until the Reorganization was developed; and while the article did not deal especially with the Utah problem, yet in giving the facts about the true church, herculean blows were dealt to that seven-headed monster. It is gratifying to know that such popular and powerful journals as the Star are heralding facts to the world in defense of the right, and thus puts its heavy hand on the wrong.

Cold weather has hindered us some in church work, but we expect to keep moving as fast as we can. I wish ye editor, Herald force, and all the dear saints everywhere a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, with souls dedicated to God.

In gospel bonds,

NEOSHO, Mo., Dec. 22.

Editors Herald:—As I have never written a letter for your valuable columns, I thought I would contribute a few items that may interest your many readers. A few weeks ago C. R. Duncan and family moved to this place, and as I make my home with them I came with them. Neosho is a town of about five thousand people. Plenty of "religion" and all kinds of society.

Several days ago my sister and I were agreeably surprised by a visit from the clergyman of the "old school Presbyterian" Church. He heard we were new comers and came to make our acquaintance. Our conversation finally drifted on the subject of religion, which ran about as follows:—

"What faith do you hold to?"

"Latter Day Saints."

"Has Mr. Duncan ever been to Utah?"

This led to explanations of the differences between the Reorganized Church and the Mormons of Utah. I handed him some tracts, and on examination he said,

"Well you believe in the Bible!" and seemed to be surprised. One question led to another until we introduced the subject of baptism. The minister said, "Baptism is not essential to salvation, and you can't find a place in the Bible that says it is for the remission of sins."

I replied, as poor a Bible student as I am, I can prove that it is necessary and it is for the remission of sins. We referred him to Acts 2:38, and he said it didn't mean that it was for the remission of sins, but it was simply a law taking the place of circumcision. Yet this man baptizes infants, and upon being asked the question "Why?" he replied, "because they are born in sin" (Adam's sin). We told him that Christ paid that debt, and took little children in his arms and blessed them, saying, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

About this time he began to reach for his hat, but we told him not to be in a hurry, we liked to talk on religious subjects. He said, "O, what we have been talking about isn't of any importance. It won't effect our salvation; all we need is faith in Christ." He then bade us good day, fully convinced that we believed in "woman's rights." All his Greek and Latin didn't embarrass us one bit, for we had the truth and the Lord stood by us in our effort to defend his work. We invited him to call again, and to-day an aged minister of the same faith called to converse on religious matters. Suffice it to say, the first one has never come back. We are few in number here, only Bro. and Sr. A. M. Baker, Bro. and Sr. Duncan, Bro. and Sr. Turner, and Sr. Brashear. We have prayer meetings on Thursday evenings and Bible Reading on Sunday. We desire to do all we can for the spread of the gospel.

In the faith,

LILLIE BAKER.

CANEY, Kan., Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—I am hammering away with the old gospel sledge hammer. I moved west of Caney about six weeks ago and began meetings in our schoolhouse, where I have been preaching occasionally for the last eight years. The results have moved mountains of prejudice and the people now say that I preach different doctrine from what I used to preach. But my wife says she can't see any difference; so I have concluded that the people have got different (unprejudiced) ears and hear differently, and think it is the preacher that has changed.

I have preached ten or twelve sermons on the first principles of the gospel, and all say they are Bible truths. Many are investigating and anxious for the meetings to continue. Last night a unanimous vote was taken in favor of my preaching every Sunday night for a year, and after dismissing the congregation I called for all who were desirous of joining a Bible class to come forward. About a dozen or fifteen came up. I explained to them the nature of the class I wished to organize. All agreed to meet on Wednesday night and adopt a constitution and by-laws and go to work. Many heads of families are anxious for this class to prosper, and say they will help to make a success of it. Many say now that the Latter Day Saints have the truth. Some say we are the only church, but as yet none have offered themselves for baptism. One lady said if she could see a case of healing she would believe. I told her she would not, even if she was healed herself. She declared she would; so about three or four days after the above conversation she came to our house suffering with a violent chronic headache. We gave her of all the restoratives we have in the house, to no effect. I was impressed to try the oil. I did so praying silently. The result was, she was healed in less than an hour. She acknowledged the source from whence the blessing came, but as yet has made no effort to obey. This same lady had her baby healed of whooping cough some four or five years ago, and she gave God the glory. There was another case of healing here with another of my neighbors. He says he got relief in less than an hour through administration. He too is holding off for some cause. Well, I will, by God's help, keep on preaching, and will plant, and if it is God's will that others shall water, I will be content, just so the seed takes root and grows, is all I care for; for if it grows there will be a harvest, and I will rejoice in the sheaves if any are gathered.

I look forward to an ingathering in the near future, as the Father has stood by me in every effort so far. This leads me to believe that God has a people in this neighborhood. I would send for some tracts, but hard times are upon me and I cannot spare the price of even a few to distribute. If any of the saints have a surplus of tracts, please send them to me, I will try to make good use of them.

In bonds,

W. F. CLARK.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Dec. —.

Editors Herald:—Last evening the writer preached in the Temple, assisted by Bro. Frank Steffe, to a good assembly of attentive listeners. The afternoon prayer service also, in charge of Brn. Gomer T. Griffiths and Frank Steffe, was well attended and a good spirit was manifest. We are having a cold spell of weather. Plenty of snow and good sleighing. Ice in abundance which is being rapidly stowed away for future use.

Along with other transpiring events, the year 1898 is drawing to a close—Christmas almost here—reminding us that it is the time for a general rounding up and adjustment of things preparatory to entering the year 1899, relieved as much as practicable of that which has taxed us in the past year so as to strike out comparatively unfettered into new duties that await us. A recent tour through parts of Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan brought me in contact with the saints at a number of places as follows: November 13 was at Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, and assisted Bro. Jacob Reese in organizing a branch at that place. Bro. William H. Forbes was chosen and ordained to the office of priest, and selected to preside; Sr. Forbes was chosen secretary. A good spirit prevailed at the meeting, and also at the evening preaching service. Afterward, visited saints at Pittsburg and talked up the college claims, etc. The 16th went to Irondale, Ohio. Was entertained at the house of Bro. David Lewis where the saints met for prayer service. A good interest was manifest in the evening meeting. Kind and earnest saints. Sunday, the 20th, was at Clear Lake, Indiana, and preached, morning and evening, to a large audience of interested listeners. Being one of the number that introduced the work here, years ago, it was a pleasure to note the increasing interest manifest. A large congregation and a commodious building in which to meet. Some have passed over the river to join the faithful on the other shore while others have grown up or have been added, to take their places. The reception was most cordial; a glowing expression of heartfelt friendship and esteem, which was mutual all around. The saints there are to be praised for the interest taken in their Sabbath school. There are too many entitled to commendation to undertake to mention by name, but can say, May their zeal and devotion not abate, and their usefulness increase and widen as the years go by. Thanks for friendship and kind words; and long may the gospel standard be uplifted to the breeze around Clear Lake to beckon on the truth-loving to its shrine, to find shelter and safety.

Thursday, the 24th, we met at the church in order to commemorate the traditional "Thanksgiving" Day, and duly respect the proclamation of the Chief Executive of this Great Nation, in which we all have such a deep and abiding interest. We sang, prayed, and praised God for past and present blessings; for a free country, free institutions, the right to worship without molestation, the bounties of earth and sky; indeed, for all that has contributed in the past or present to bless needy humanity, beautify, comfort, and make the world happier and better. Also invoked divine watchcare and guidance for the future, and all felt happier by reason of the service. At three p. m. a splendid repast was served at the residence of Bro. B. Teeters, a goodly number of the saints with sharpened appetites participating. The true significance of Thanksgiving, with the average person is best seen and appreciated through the physical emblems brought into ocular view—turkey or some other fowl, pumpkin pie, etc., than any other way. These are a kind of "outward signs of inward grace."

After this "feast of fat things" and communion with saints, Bro. George A. Smith, of pleasant memory, conveyed me to Fremont to receive a welcome over night at Bro. George Stroh's, and we passed the time pleasantly. Next evening found me at Coldwater, Michigan, in care of Bro. Star Corless and other Corlesses, Strohs, etc. In this community we still have Locks, Lockerbys, Grangers, Balls, Whaleys, Perrys, Sparks, Smiths, Reynolds, Scotts, and many others whose names do not occur to memory at this writing. Sunday following we met in the brick church built by the saints. It was a cold day, but a good turnout. The service was good, the singing excellent, in charge of Bro. L. W. Scott, who by the way has had the temerity to marry a Kelley girl here of late. He is the tall sycamore of Southern Indiana, the defender of the faith in these parts. May his zeal and usefulness continue. We were all just pleased to meet and see each other again. Warmest congratulations were extended all around as only saints can give.

On Wednesday evening following there was another meeting, and again on Sunday. The gospel has been planted here for many years, but it is an interesting theme yet. The picture about these parts was an impressive one. The youths had become full grown—changed beyond ready recognition; some married and have families. Some have succeeded in things of the world, some failed; others passed on before to the saints' intermediate rest. Here the writer spent some of his best days, in the strength of youth and manhood, and it was cheering to find a warm welcome, and staunch supporters of the faith.

During my stay, the Sisters Aid Society met at the residence of Sr. Elsie Lockerby. The day was spent pleasantly. They wanted a speech. We gave a short one on college building, and by consent the results of the meeting was contributed to aid the Lamoni college.

With many thanks and a prosperous New Year, Adieu.

Intending to visit other points in Michigan, a call from Kirtland effected a change in plan, so returned here, meeting with the saints on the way one evening at Toledo.

In the faith,

WM. H. KELLEY.

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—We have not seen anything from this city or vicinity for many months, and the last was from your humble servant. The health of the saints is usually good, or was when last heard from, except one, who has been ailing for some time, but is on the improve now.

We have not been holding regular meetings for over a year, but will try and get a room as soon as we can. We were made to rejoice to-day by having a young brother (John Price) call on us, who has lately moved into the city. He seems to be full of the latter-day spirit.

I do not believe that we should be idle in the Lord's work, for there is much to do, and the law says that they that loved the Lord met oft and talked of the goodness of God.

We feel as if the cold shoulder was turned to us sometimes, when we see how near an elder will come to us and then slip by or go back track, like the rabbit; but we will work, watch, and wait. Bro. Luff was the last elder who visited us, and he left us in better hope and spirits. It lifts the spirit of man to hear such men. We built up our hope on the prospect of getting to hear Bro. H. L. Holt this winter, but alas! our hopes were blighted, as the flower blooms and the cold ice of winter chills its bloom. Well, we hope on and pray on for a better day to come.

If there are any Latter Day Saints who think of coming to Spokane, the latchstring hangs on the outside and by addressing us at No. 929 West Second Avenue, Spokane, Washington, we would be glad to render such aid as we are capable of.

Yours in Christ,

J. MONROE HOOKER.

KEWANEE, Illinois, Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—Having been appointed since the sitting of General Conference to labor in Northern Illinois and Wisconsin mission, I have been in the field since the district conference at Buffalo Prairie in September last. After spending the first month with the tent, in company with Brn. F. A. Russell and M. T. Short, I went to Savanna, Illinois, where I found a band of mostly young saints, and also young in the work, and if faithful will be the means of doing much good in the future. After staying over three Sundays I returned to Rock Island, where I remained over the following Sunday, teaching the senior class in Sunday school, and listening to an excellent discourse in the evening by Bro. J. S. Patterson, which was instructive and edifying.

Leaving Rock Island I proceeded to Eliza, and was domiciled with our zealous and worthy district president for a couple of weeks, with whom I expect to labor in company with during the next month, or until our district conference the first Saturday in February, which convenes in Kewanee. The older I grow in this work the more I see the importance of keeping God's commandments, because there is no safety anywhere else; and if all the saints could realize this, how different we would deport ourselves in many instances among ourselves and in the world; among our fellowmen, showing that of a truth God is with us, and we have been with God, showing that we are his people in deed and in truth. O, may each one who has named the name of Christ be humble, that the Holy Spirit may distill upon our souls as the dews from heaven, that we may be bound closer together, and be in unity, that our influence for good in the world may be made effectual by our example.

In hope of eternal life,

W. H. RHODES.

THE STONE KINGDOM OF DANIEL 2: 45. WHAT IS IT?

Some writers to the Saints' Herald think it is the United States of America, others that it is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. As my views are different from either I would like to give them for the consideration of those interested.

Daniel says,

Thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands.—Dan. 2: 45.

To my mind the mountain is quite as important to be considered as the stone. The mountain and the stone evidently possess the same elements.

The mountain cannot be the United States of America, because that would make the United States of America the kingdom of God, a thing it is not. The stone cannot be the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, because it began by the laying on of hands. See Joseph the Seer, page 66, where the writer says the angel came down and laid his hands on their heads (Joseph and Oliver), ordaining them to the priesthood. This priesthood brought forth by the angel's hands was the life germ or the beginning of the latter-day work, and with the expansion of the priesthood, the work may assume proportions until it becomes the mountain from which the stone is cut out without hands. (Daniel 2: 34, 45.)

In Doctrine and Covenants section 65 we read:—

The keys [authorities or priesthoods] of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth, unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth.

Is it not possible that we become unauthorized monopolists when we apply the latter part of this quotation to the work of God on this continent, forgetting Jerusalem and her work to be done in the East?

This gospel kingdom and stone kingdom in my opinion are two special efforts to be inspired by the Lord of heaven for the emancipation of the race, and while they will be separate one from the other in their centers of operation, they will be in harmony in their organization and work, just as the stone and the mountain in Daniel 2: 45 must possess the same elements, the one being taken from the other.

In Romans 11: 25, 26, Paul says:—

I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, . . . that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. . . . As it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob.

Here then is the stone which shall revolutionize the oriental powers, and you notice that is the work of the stone kingdom. Zechariah seems to refer to this same man in chapter 8: 23:—

Thus saith the Lord of hosts; in those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.

Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem.—Verse 22.

But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.—Micah 4: 1, 2.

Here is Zion from which came the law and also the deliverer, and here is Jerusalem, the stone kingdom, yet to be a mighty center of righteousness where the word of God will be received.

The next verse says the nations shall beat their swords into ploughshares and not learn war any more. This to my mind is the breaking of the image or downfall of earthly governments. And so we say, Hold on, Dewey; hold on, Sampson; hold on, Schley. The Lord does not need your cannon, for his servants have a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth:—

Thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff. Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away [break the image].—Isa. 41: 15, 16.

And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. . . . Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.—Isa. 11: 12, 13.

I ask the reader to take his Bible and read the whole of above chapters quoted from Isaiah; that is, chapters 41 and 11.

Hoping that these thoughts may not be misunderstood I am, your brother in the gospel kingdom of Christ,

D. E. HOUGH.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS.

In a recent issue of the Herald, Bro. Crabb kindly attempts to throw light on the above subject, and perhaps does, but it is a little dim to me yet. He says:—

The church in the wilderness is composed of that class of people who exist in the world who would have obeyed the gospel if the gospel had been presented to them.

Then they did not obey it, and were not in the church. According to his further statement it includes little children, and mentally disabled people. Well, I think a wilderness was the best place for such a church as that, and that it was destitute of priesthood authority or in an unseen state so far as man could behold.

I believe the latter clause. It was indeed in an unseen state, for no mortal ever saw the "church of Christ" when it consisted of "little children" and demented people. Such a body—if body it could be called—must of necessity be without authority, for there would be no one that could exercise it.

But suppose we accept the idea of Bro. Crabb, that God did, during the time in question, accept of all good people and acknowledged them as members of his church, when there was no church and no authority to effect one, but that the church simply consisted or was comprised of good and harmless people among all classes; that whenever and wherever a good person was found a church member was found. If such is true, how can we take exception to the claims of the religious world to-day? This is precisely their position; that wherever we find a real good man we find a member of Christ's body.

If we admit that the church ever has existed without priesthood visible authority of any kind, then we should find no fault with the religious world for believing as they do, for what has been may still be in this regard. To my mind such a position is lame, the most lame I ever knew one of our elders to take; but perhaps not many take it.

The church in the days of John the Baptist is not a parallel one, for he held authority, and men were baptized by the authority of heaven. Our claims are that the church is the same in all ages; that it cannot and does not change in any respect. That is our bulwark, the foundation upon which we (of the working ministry anyway) stand; that it is a visible organization, not an invisible nothing. That it consists of a king, officers, laws, and subjects. Are we right to-day in taking this position? If it is true to-day, it always was. And a claim that the church did exist in the hearts of the people, without officers of any kind, is tantamount to a claim that it can so exist to-day which would destroy our position on the unchangeability of God's kingdom; to be consistent, we should abandon one claim or the other.

Desiring all the light I can get, I remain,

A fellow laborer,

HIRAM L. HOLT.

THE GATHERING.

This time is one looked forward to anxiously by all true Latter Day Saints. All that comprehend the work to be done in this dispensation, are watching, working and waiting to see the gathering an accomplished fact, Zion redeemed, and a people prepared for the coming Redeemer and King. And for this reason I offer a few thoughts on the subject.

And let all bear in mind this work cannot be done in haste, but must be carefully and systematically done, if we would not suffer disappointment, as others have done before. The Lord said in 1873,

Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me.—D. C. 117:11.

This instruction was given in 1873 to the Reorganized Church, and should be faithfully carried out, and strictly obeyed. But like tithing, it was not properly understood when it was given. The command to execute the law of tithing given in 1861 was not carried into effect for several years, evidently because the manner in which it should be done was not understood, not because the men so commanded were unwilling to obey at once. After some years the law of tithing was taught, and partially obeyed.

Diversity of views existed among the elders, as to the manner in which it should be obeyed; and each one presenting his view to the saints, kept them in an unsettled condition as to how they should comply with it, so that some complied in one way and some in another, and some refused to comply with it at all.

To my mind the cause of this condition of things existing, was because the leading quorums of the church failed to comply with the counsel of God as given in the commandments.

Also, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth. And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand.—D. C. 85:21.

If this law applies to the church, and we are the church; then if such teaching and counsel as herein contemplated was heeded, a unity of understanding might be reached, and a proper understanding be had on all things pertaining to the law and kingdom of God. And we need not be in the dark on any matter that the Lord commands us to do. A command to do anything carries with it the thought, that the ability to do as commanded exists in those so commanded; and if the conditions imposed are complied with, then the ability to accomplish the work required will be given; otherwise the one so requiring would be unreasonable; and we could not believe this of God.

In the text quoted the command is given to gather into the regions round about. The central place is Independence, Missouri; and the command to gather round about is in force. How shall it be done is what we want to know.

This knowledge might be obtained by the elders doing as directed in section 58:12:—

And let the privileges of the lands be made known, from time to time, by the bishop, or the agent of the church; and let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.

This clearly makes it the duty of the elders at the conferences to counsel together, and agree as to where the saints should locate, and the manner in which this should be done; for it is to be supposed that God would give light in such councils. And saints in their scattered condition are not supposed to know the privileges of the lands, as well as the elders whose duty it is to look after these things. When the Lord commanded a council to be held in 1894 at the conference; he said,

It should have been done before, but the adversary hath hindered, desiring to prevent the success of my work in the earth.—D. C. 122:13.

After the Lord speaking as he did in this revelation, it would seem like the chief quorums of the church would not wait to be commanded again to hold their councils at the conferences from time to time, so they might know how to instruct the saints for their best good, having first instructed, or taught, one another in the things as the law requires them to do; and especially when it is said in section 58: 6:—

And inasmuch as men do good, they shall in no wise lose their reward. But, he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned.

The command having been already given, the proper councils should be held, and the necessary instructions given, so the saints might know how to move understandingly, when they desire to change their location.

It seems to me there is enough already revealed to show that it is the duty of the saints to gather into the regions round about, buy up land, settle on it, form branches of the church, and keep the law of God on the land, that the land and also the saints, might be sanctified, as the Lord has promised:—

And let all my people who dwell in the regions round about, be very faithful, and prayerful, and humble before me, and reveal not the things which I have revealed unto them, until it is wisdom in me that they should be revealed. Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people: and, behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, Execute judgment and justice for us according to the law, and redress us of our wrongs. Now, behold, I say unto you, my friends, In this way you may find favor in the eyes of the people, until the army of Israel becomes very great; and I will soften the hearts of the people, as I did the heart of Pharaoh, from time to time, until my servant Baurak Ale, and Baneemy, whom I have appointed, shall have time to gather up the strength of my house, and to have sent wise men, to fulfill that which I have commanded concerning the purchasing of all the lands in Jackson County, that can be purchased, and in the adjoining counties round about; for it is my will that these lands should be purchased, and after they are purchased that my saints should possess them according to the laws of consecration which I have given.—D. C. 102: 7, 8.

And,

Again, verily I say unto you, I will show unto you wisdom in me concerning all the churches, inasmuch as they are willing to be guided in a right and proper way for their salvation, that the work of the gathering together of my saints may continue, that I may build them up unto my name upon holy places; for the time of harvest is come, and my word must needs be fulfilled. Therefore, I must gather together my people according to the parable of the wheat and the tares, that the wheat may be secured in the garner to possess eternal life, and be crowned with celestial glory when I shall come in the kingdom of my Father, to reward every man according as his work shall be; while the tares shall be bound in bundles, and their bands made strong, that they may be burned with unquenchable fire. Therefore, a commandment I give unto all the churches, that they shall continue to gather together unto the places which I have appointed; nevertheless, as I have said unto you in a former commandment, let not your gathering be in haste, nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you; and in order that all things be prepared before you, observe the commandments which I have given concerning these things, which saith, or teacheth, to purchase all the lands by money, which can be purchased for money, in the region round about the land which I have appointed to be the land of Zion, for the beginning of the gathering of my saints; all the land which can be purchased in Jackson County, and the counties round about, and leave the residue in mine hand. Now, verily I say unto you, Let all the churches gather together all their moneys; let these things be done in their time, be not in haste; and observe to have all things prepared before you. And let honorable men be appointed, even wise men, and send them to purchase these lands; and every church in the eastern countries when they are built up, if they will hearken unto this counsel, they may buy lands and gather together upon them, and in this way they may establish Zion. There is even now already in store a sufficient, yea, even abundance to redeem Zion, and establish her waste places, no more to be thrown down, were the churches, who call themselves after my name, willing to hearken to my voice.—D. C. 98: 9, 10.

Therefore, the law given to the church in section forty-two, over the meaning of some parts of which there has been so much controversy is as if it were given to day.—D. C. 122: 6.

The law as given in section forty-two being in force, and the salvation of the people being the same, it follows as a natural consequence that the commands given after that will apply to us in like manner. And if this be true, the instructions to the churches in the eastern countries to appoint wise men and send them to buy lands in the regions round about, are in force, and should be complied with. We need have no fear to call on the saints to send in their means for this purpose, if we go to work in the proper manner to settle the saints as God has directed according to the laws of consecration. In my judgment the time has come when the church, through its proper officers, should move in harmony with the instructions given in 1873, and do it in a practical way. There is no necessity to wait until a stake is appointed, for when that is necessary God will so command; but the command is now in force to gather into the regions round about. And we have been told how this should be done. We have seen that even a branch can do this. If the position taken in this article be correct, then it follows that consecrations should be called for, or all the surplus properties as taught.

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.—D. C. 42: 8.

And again,

Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the Presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord. Verily I say unto you, It shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, If my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, It shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen.—D. C. 106.

While this revelation is to be carried out in Zion and her stakes; yet the "surplus," being required for laying the foundation of Zion, and the buying of land and settling the saints on it, in the regions round about, according to the laws of consecration, being the way to establish Zion, it is legitimate and proper to call for the surplus for this purpose. That we may keep the command, "and Zion go forth in the regions round about." It may be said that the saints won't stand that! The true saint will. And that has nothing to do with the law, nor our duty under the law. And as all we do is voluntary on our part, no one is compelled to gather or comply with this surplus clause, but may abide with the world, and take the consequence, therefore our duty is clearly to call on the saints in all the world to comply with this law, and send in their moneys, that we may buy up lands in Jackson County, or the counties round about, as wisdom may direct, and our ability permit. And in this way obey the instruction given in 1873.

Instead of the saints moving every one their own way, they should be advised as to the best place to go; and then, of course, they would have the right to do as they liked about taking such counsel. And the branches in the East, instead of building church houses and staying there, let them gather their moneys together, and send wise men to buy land in the regions round about, and in this way establish Zion.

It may be said that the joint council in 1894 recommended that saints desiring to change location should confer with the Bishopric. True, but the bishop had no certain place to direct anyone to go to. He could only recommend in a general way, and the result in a practical sense amounted to nothing. Again it may be said they will not take the counsel of the Bishopric. Some might not, but many would gladly take their counsel, if the Bishopric would take the course indicated in the law and go to work in a way to help the poor get homes where they could have church privileges. And this course would inspire the saints with confidence, seeing a step taken forward by the church.

But you will have a job on your hands when you undertake that says another! Suppose we do; we are elected for that anyway, and if we cannot carry out the instructions given in the law for that purpose, we can demonstrate the necessity for the Lord and the church, to call other men that can carry the law into effect successfully; for it certainly can be done, or the Lord has required an impossibility at our hands.

Wait until we get divine guidance, we hear again! The command has come to gather into the regions round about, according to the commandments, and the counsel of the elders. The commandments say gather your moneys together and buy land and settle the saints upon it according to the laws of consecration. And by keeping the commands, even the land shall be sanctified, and if we don't do this it shall not be a land of Zion unto us, as the church failed before in their effort, because they did not hearken altogether unto the counsel given in the law, so we will fail without any effort; for want of moral courage and confidence in God to go to work after the command has been given. And I would rather fail in the effort to carry out the instruction given, than to fail to make the effort. And I fully believe that all the light and guidance needed will be given, when we do what we have already been commanded to do.

I thought you had built a home for the poor saints, says another! Yes, we have a Home; but that is only for those who have no means, nor ability, nor relatives to care for them, and will only accommodate a few.

What we want, is to move forward in the way set out in the law, and help the worthy poor that are able and willing to work, to get homes; so they may make a living for themselves, and also be able in time to turn over something into the treasury to help others. This is the true way to help the poor, and is the only way we can practically show our love for one another, and do as we would wish to be done by.

As has been indicated by the Spirit in the past (to the writer of this article), while the church at a general conference was seeking light by revelation, the reason the revelation was not given, was because we had received revelation with "doubtful heart, and kept it "with slothfulness." And it is just possible that the reason we receive no more light on the gathering, and how to carry out the law, is because we are so slothful and careless in carrying out what has been given for the benefit of the poor and needy in the church. It is wrong for the elders that spend all their time faithfully in the ministerial field to have to rent houses for their families, and have no home while there is an abundance in the hands of the members of the church, above what they really need, to supply them with homes, and no one feel the worse by it. And the worthy poor helped in this way, would do great good. And a forward move in the direction indicated in this article would (in the opinion of the writer) inspire the ministry with new courage, as also the poor, also give the rich and those who may have more than they need a chance to lend their surplus to the Lord, by giving it to help the poor. And soon we would have no poor among us, as it was in Book of Mormon times and must be again in our time, if we prove ourselves to be what we profess.

And, behold, it shall come to pass, that my servants shall be sent forth to the East, and to the West, to the North, and to the South; and even now, let him that goeth to the East, teach them that shall be converted to flee to the West; and this in consequence of that which is coming on the earth, and of secret combinations. Behold, thou shalt observe all these things, and great shall be thy reward; for unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, but unto the world it is not given to know them.—D. C. 42: 18.

Among the things here to be observed, is to teach those converted in the East to flee to the West. Of course this should be done in a systematic way, when all things are prepared. But this preparation should be made, as directed in the law. And when this is done, the labor problem will be solved, and the coöperative movement entered into, so far as we are concerned. This in my judgment is the necessary step now to be taken; and all the light we need for this is contained in the revelations already given; and as we go forward in the line of duty, more light will come as we may need it. I did not desire to press this subject until we could have had a council of the leading quorums of the church, and fully expected such a council would have been held at the last general conference; but as it was not so held, and the time set for the next conference being two years ahead, and a council not likely to be convened soon, I thought it needful to begin to educate the saints along those lines, that the times clearly indicate must be entered into, if we succeed in accomplishing the work committed to us. Otherwise it will be left for others to do, and we will be doomed to suffer disappointment.

That we may have the necessary light given to all concerned, and harmoniously work together, and obey the command given, to gather into the regions round about, buy all the land we can, and settle the saints on it, according to the laws of consecration, and in this way "establish Zion" and show our love for each other in a practical way, and our love to God by keeping his commandments, and thus prepare ourselves to stand in holy places while the judgments of God pass over the land, and finally be prepared to build the city of Zion, and the temple of our God, that Jesus may come and reign with his people gloriously, is my prayer. Amen.

ELIGIBLE TO MEMBERSHIP.

In Herald of October 26, and under the caption of "Preach the word," appeared an article, most of which I think is excellent, especially that part showing that our attitude toward other denominations should be that of conservativeness and liberality; also that part that admonishes us not to be continually seeking debates. Having the truth we can well afford to deal kindly with all churches, and not be over anxious to discuss propositions with those who differ from us. Also the idea conveyed by the writer that saints should not be fed on the errors of others, but on the milk of the word, is one that should be indelibly stamped on the mind of all saints. Notwithstanding the many good thoughts conveyed in the above named article, there is one expression made in it that I do not say I fully concur in, unless further explanation be made. It is this: "Some have thought that no person was eligible to membership in the Latter Day Saint Church who did not believe in Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. I was asked quite recently if this was the case, and I answered emphatically, No! Believe in Jesus Christ and the gospel, and you shall be saved, is the doctrine of the church as I understand it."

Now while I do not say positively that the brother is mistaken on this point, yet I do say that it is one on which there exists either a real or an apparent difference of opinion among us. The message that we have to bear to the nations of the earth is one of more than ordinary importance and the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith being a part of that message, it behooves the ministry to be a unit as to when and how to deliver this part of the message. We know that the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith is a stumbling-block to the world. Now the question is, should this stumbling-block be presented to people before or after they become members of the church?

I agree with the brother when he says that they may become members of the church without believing that Joseph Smith was a prophet, or that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin; but if Bro. C. means to convey the idea that this is the better plan (though I believe he does not), then I would differ from him. In teaching the truth we show what the church was eighteen hundred years ago, and the laws of the church; next we show from the Bible and from history that there was an apostasy from primitive Christianity. The next thing to be done is to prove that the gospel has been restored to the earth again. Should the writer or anyone else preach and get the people to believe that the gospel has been restored, and they believe it and are baptized, not knowing how it was restored, they are likely to stumble and even fall when they are afterward told that the gospel was restored to Joseph Smith by the hand of an angel. While it is a truth that the gospel was to be restored by an angel (Revelation 14: 6), and that angel was to deliver the message to a prophet, as "surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets" (Amos 3: 7), yet if one does not hear of the angel's visit to Joseph Smith till after baptism, he or she is likely to say, "I believe Joseph Smith to be an impostor and the Book of Mormon a fraud."

I believe that the evidence of the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith are so plain that the honest in heart will acknowledge it when they hear the evidence plainly presented; but if they do fail by reason of prejudice or some other reason to receive the evidence, it is better to reject before than after baptism. For instance, I know of persons who were baptized before they knew our belief in the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith, and they have made but little if any progress in the work.

In presenting the work of Joseph Smith one should of course do it in such a way as to show clearly that we do not believe in worshipping him or any other man, but that we worship God only. In presenting either this subject or that of the Book of Mormon in a new place, it is often best to speak as much as two times on each, as sometimes the first sermon will arouse more or less prejudice in the minds of the people; but it may be removed by one by reason of so much evidence being produced.

In regard to the time of presenting these subjects, or any other of the doctrine of Christ to an audience, one should invariably be guided by the spirit of wisdom. The Lord says, if "ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach." In speaking on any subject we should do so in such a way that our language will be meek and edifying, for the Lord says "that which doth not edify is not of God."

I have been thus frank and free to express my views on this subject, because I desire that the church know my views, so that if I should preach heresy I might be corrected by the powers ordained of God. I know I am fallible so I desire all the assistance I can get from the church and from God, that I may preach the truth, and thus sow good seed, believing that we will reap according to our sowing.

Selected Poetry.

A LAUGH IN CHURCH.

She sat on the sliding cushion,
The dear wee woman of four;
Her feet, in their shiny slippers,
Hung dangling over the floor.
She meant to be good; she had promised,
And so, with her big, brown eyes,
She stared at the meeting-house windows
And counted the crawling flies.
She looked far up at the preacher,
But she thought of the honey-bees
Droning away at the blossoms
That whitened the cherry trees.
She thought of a broken basket,
Where curled in a dusky heap,
Three sleek, round puppies, with fringy ears,
Lay snuggled and fast asleep.

Such soft, warm bodies to cuddle,
Such queer little hearts to beat,
Such swift, round tongues to kiss,
Such sprawling, cushiony feet;
She could feel in her clasping fingers
The touch of the satiny skin,
And a cold, wet nose exploring
The dimples under her chin.
Then a sudden ripple of laughter
Ran over the parted lips
So quick that she could not catch it
With her rosy finger-tips.
The people whispered, "Bless the child,"
As each one waked from a nap,
But the dear, wee woman hid her face
For shame in her mother's lap.

MARRIED.

JOHNSON—HINDERKS.—At the home of the bride's parent, Sr. Mary Hinderks, near Stewartville, Missouri, December 21, 1898, at six p. m., Bro. Henry H. Johnson and Sr. Anna Hinderks were united in marriage by Elder T. T. Hinderks. Many relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony and partake of the bountiful supper prepared for the occasion. The young people are well known in this part of the country, both are members of the German branch, and all wish them much joy and happiness. Many valuable presents were left by the relatives and friends. May the blessings of God crown their efforts with success, and fill their home with joy, peace, and love.

ATKINSON—CREWS.—Sr. Mary Crews of Moorhead, Iowa, and Bro. James Atkinson of Persia, Iowa, were united in matrimony, Bro. C. H. Belkham performing the ceremony. The wedding took place at the home of the bride, December 18, 1898. The Spirit of the Lord was felt in power, making us to know that God was recognizing the act. About twenty-five persons were in attendance, dinner was partaken of, and an enjoyable time was had. They are both well known and held in high esteem. The groom is a retired farmer and has a pleasant home three blocks from Persia church.

ROBERTS—BADHAM.—At high noon, December 25, 1898, at the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. A. Badham, near Henderson, Iowa, Sr. Clara Badham to Bro. Joseph Roberts, of Tabor, Iowa; Elder D. Hougas officiating, prayer being offered by Elder James Roberts of Shenandoah. About seventy guests witnessed the ceremony, and a pleasant day was spent by all. Many beautiful and useful presents were received, and many heartfelt wishes for the happiness and future welfare of the united pair were expressed. Sr. Clara and Bro. Joseph are two of God's noble young servants, and we wish them a long and useful life in this world and a happy entrance into the next.

ASHBAUGH—READ.—At Argentine, Kansas, on the evening of December 17, 1898, Bro. Charles W. Ashbaugh, and Miss Eva M. Read were joined in marriage, Elder F. C. Warnky officiating. The bridal party were neatly and becomingly attired, and the ceremony was impressive. All admit that Eva has secured an excellent husband, all agree that Charley has been especially fortunate in securing a jewel for a wife, and all unite in wishing them a long life in which to enjoy their new estate with heaven's blessings upon them.

DIED.

WILSON.—Eunice L. Beal, daughter of Bro. Dexter and Sr. Celia Beal, was born at Grove Hill, Iowa, April 27, 1869. November 13, 1889, became a member of the church; December 27, 1892, was married to C. E. Wilson; died December 19, 1898. She has been a great sufferer and was glad to go; made all arrangements for her burial and fell quietly asleep. She leaves father, three brothers, one sister, and two little daughters to mourn. Funeral at Grove Hill school-house, sermon by Elder J. R. Sutton.

STEDMAN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, December 26, 1898, Bro. Charles Stedman, aged 73 years, 10 months, and 2 days. For fourteen years he was a great sufferer with rheumatism, and at the last pneumonia set in and terminated his life. He was born in Suffolk County, England; came to Prince Edward's Island when he was eight years old, and when a young man labored in the New Brunswick pineries, rafting logs to the sea. He came to LaSalle County, Illinois, in 1850, and engaged in river work along the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, being the superintendent for a large ice company, and acting as mate and captain of tow boats on the rivers, in all thirty-four years, till disabled by rheumatism in 1884. He married Sr. Catherine Landers November 6, 1851. To them were born three sons and three daughters, all of whom attended the funeral of their father, their first meeting altogether for sixteen years. One of his daughters is Sr. Christiana Salyards, well known to the church. Bro. Stedman became convinced of the gospel message, was baptized by Bro. R. M. Elvin, February 21, 1894, at Lamoni, to which place he and Sr. Stedman removed in 1893. For many years he suffered greatly, but accepting the gospel he was made glad and happy in the truth, and by his trials was purified and chastened, prepared for a better world. It can be well said of Bro. Stedman that his whole life was one of honesty, integrity, unselfishness, and generosity, and that his end was peace. The funeral services were in charge of Bro. William Anderson, Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached the sermon, and Bro. G. H. Hilliard offered prayer.

GREENWOOD.—At Manchester, England, November 10, 1898, Sarah Emily, the beloved wife of Elder W. H. Greenwood, aged 30 years. She was baptized March 29, 1888. The circumstances attendant upon her death were of a very sad character. She died suddenly seven days after giving birth to a child which survives her. The deceased lived a consistent life. She was a devoted wife and a loving mother, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral services by Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sen.

BATY.—At Manchester, England, December 1, 1898, Jane, the widow of Robert Baty, aged 77 years. She was baptized in the old organization at Carlisle, Cumberland, May, 1853; joined the Reorganization March 7, 1878, at Manchester. She lived the life and died the death of a saint. Funeral services by Elder J. Dewsnup, Sen.

MILLER.—Sr. Polly Miller was born in the State of Pennsylvania, November 27, 1816; died at her home in Maquoketa, Iowa, December 19, 1898; she was baptized in 1881. Died firm in the faith of the gospel and in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral service in the M. E. church; sermon by Warren Turner. Remains laid to rest in Maquoketa cemetery.

SMITH.—At Plattsmouth, Nebraska, November 21, 1898, Elder William B. Smith in his seventy-fourth year. He united with the church in 1842 in London, England; with his wife located in Nauvoo in 1844; moved to St. Louis, thence to Burlington, Iowa. When the elders of the Reorganization came through Burlington and presented the original doctrine, they both joined the church and remained in the faith the remainder of their lives. Sr. Smith departed this life April 8, 1893. He died firm in the faith and in hope of a part in the resurrection of the just.

PETERS.—At Rego, Indiana, October 20, 1898, Bro. James S. Peters, aged 37 years. Was baptized September 1, 1895. Leaves a wife and five children to mourn. Funeral sermon will be preached next May at the Rego branch, by the elders of the church.

ZIRKELBACH.—At Fulton, Iowa, December 23, 1898, Charley Zirkelbach, aged 15 years. He was a good boy, but did not obey the gospel, as his parents are Lutherans; but he desired to be baptized near the end of his earthly life. Funeral sermon by Elder John Heide at the saints' church.

BENJAMIN.—At Princeville, Illinois, December 13, 1898, Sr. Amanda L. Benjamin, aged 67 years, 11 months, 6 days. She was born at Newton, Ohio; married to Bro. R. J. Benjamin, November 17, 1853. Sr. Benjamin united with the church in girlhood, during the life of Joseph, and never had any confidence in Brigham Young's assumed authority. She united with the Reorganization in 1860, and by word and deed always bore a faithful testimony to the truth of the latter-day work, and to the successorship of young Joseph. Always lived a faithful, consistent, pure life, and died firm in the faith. She was the mother of six children; two daughters, husband, one brother and sister and ten grandchildren mourn. Thus has passed to her eternal reward, as true and faithful a mother in Israel as ever made a home happy by her loving presence.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

History of the Spanish War

By Dr. ALBERT SHAW,

Editor of the REVIEW OF REVIEWS,

AND A LONG LIST OF NOTABLE CONTRIBUTORS.

Over 1,200 Pages and 500 Valuable Illustrations.

Three Beautiful Volumes in Half Morocco.

See special offer at bottom of this advertisement.

This Magnificent Edition for only ONE DOLLAR DOWN.

To the readers of this paper we make the following proposition to become members of the Review of Reviews History Club, and obtain the three volumes of

Our War in Two Hemispheres,

By ALBERT SHAW,

Editor of the "American Monthly Review of Reviews" and author of "Municipal Government in Great Britain," etc., and a number of prominent contributors.

EVERY American teacher possessing a library, and many that do not possess one, will be interested in the announcement of the history of the late war with Spain, now published by the REVIEW OF REVIEWS COMPANY. Much of the narrative was written by Dr. Albert Shaw during the actual fighting of the summer. This has been revised and amplified by him in the light of the official reports and documents, which have only become available after hostilities ceased. A free quotation from the critical Congressional debates and other public utterances at crucial periods aids in making this work what it is, the standard reference history of this decisive and successful struggle. But it is much more than a lively and comprehensive narrative. It goes back to the years of struggle in Cuba which prepared the way for the war; it discusses energetically all problems which confronted the United States after the war as to the Philippines, Cuba, and Porto Rico; and as a whole it forms a broadly conceived picture of the year which has seen America brought face to face with new world duties.

The important special and technical matters of the war period, generally dismissed by the historian with only slight and often insufficient discussion, are fully and authentically dealt with in contributed chapters, written by men who had unusual opportunities for studying their subjects. Thus, the lessons which the war has for us as to the relative efficiency of rifles and machine guns are in a carefully written chapter by Lieut. John H. Parker, of the United States army; the military movements of the Santiago and Porto Rican campaigns are analyzed by the editor of the Army and Navy Journal; the battle with Cervera is described by the novelist, Winston Churchill, who is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy; the actual condition of Cuba before the war and the facts which caused the war are described by eye-witnesses, Murat Halstead and Stephen Bonsal.

The illustration of the book is especially valuable in the hundreds of portraits, pictures of the navies, photographed scenes of the war, and the entertaining cartoons reproduced from the Spanish, French, German, and English papers, as well as from the American.

How to obtain the handsome edition by a payment of only ONE DOLLAR DOWN.

The three beautifully bound large octavo volumes and a year's subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS can be obtained by any of the readers of this paper by joining the Review of Reviews Club and paying one dollar. The volumes will be sent as soon as ready to those who remit the sum, and the purchase will be completed by the payment of one dollar per month for twelve months. The first volume will be ready early in December. The subscription to the magazine which goes with the offer can be dated from any month.

DISASTERS.

The following table gives the loss of life resulting from various disasters in the United States as reported to the Tribune by mail and telegraph:—

Fires.....1,670	Falling build'gs, etc..... 599
Drownings.....3,110	Cyclones, storms 502
Explosions..... 629	Lightning..... 255
Mines..... 580

RAILROAD DISASTERS.

The loss of life by railroad accidents of various kinds was 3,590 in 1898, as compared with 2,764 in 1897. The number of seriously injured was 2,616, as compared with 2,428 in 1897.

EPIDEMICS AND FAMINE.

The loss of life by epidemic and famine shows a gratifying decrease. Famine in the province of Kansu, China, has swept away 10,000 victims. The plague in India has destroyed over 11,000, and in China about 2,000 persons. Exact statistics of this kind are hard to procure, but the total is probably less than 25,000, as compared with 222,902 in 1897, 22,676 in 1896, 79,471 in 1895, and 171,910 in 1894.

WARS.

Notwithstanding the war between the United States and Spain, the loss of life upon the battlefield in 1898 has been smaller than for several years past. The total, roughly estimated, has been but about 65,000, as compared with 103,451 in 1897, 129,080 in 1896, 157,986 in 1895, and 82,750 in 1894. The loss was distributed about as follows:—

Egypt.....21,071	India..... 430
Spanish-American war..... 7,298	Madagascar... 106
Spanish-Cuban war..... 5,010	China.....22,500
Spanish-Philippine war.... 5,220	Formosa..... 1,500
	Africa..... 1,000
	Greece..... 300

MARINE DISASTERS.

The following list of wrecks and loss of life upon the ocean and on inland waters is approximately correct. It is not possible to make an absolutely accurate statement, as in some cases no record of the number of crews or passengers was left. The list shows 3,655 lives were lost upon the ocean and 75 on inland waters, a total of 3,730, as compared with 2,426 in 1897, 3,912 in 1896, 4,250 in 1895, and 6,881 in 1894.

SUMMARY OF DISASTERS.

As closely as can be estimated 3,655 lives have been lost upon the ocean, 75 upon inland waters, 3,590 by railroad accidents, 25,273 by disasters abroad, 7,337 by minor disasters in this country, 23,000 by epidemics and famine, and 65,000 by wars, making a total of 127,930, as compared with 389,017 in 1897, 246,546 in 1896, and 275,391 in 1895.

SUICIDES.

The total number of persons who have committed suicide in the United States during the year 1898, as reported by mail and telegraph to the Tribune, is 5,920, as compared with 6,600 in 1897, 6,520 in 1896, 5,759 in 1895, 4,912 in 1894, 4,436 in 1893, 3,860 in 1892, 3,531 in 1891, and 2,040 in 1890, the figures showing a decrease in the crime of self-murder in the last nine years. Of this number 4,586 were males and 1,634 females, this proportion being steadily kept up year by year. Among professional men physicians still lead the mournful list, 44 having taken their own lives, as compared with 41 in 1897, 47 in 1896, 59 in 1895, and 45 in 1894. During the year also 13 persons engaged in the banking business, 8 clergymen, 7 journalists, 6 attorneys, 2 actors, and 2 artists have committed suicide. The causes of suicide were as follows:—

Despondency....3,023	Domestic infelicity..... 197
Unknown.....1,500	Disappointed love..... 196
Insanity..... 438	Business losses.. 110
Liquor..... 168
Ill health..... 288

In these cases of suicide 2,126 persons took poison, 2,037 shot themselves, 787 hanged themselves, 452 cut their throats, 354 drowned themselves, 58 jumped from windows or housetops, 50 threw themselves in front of railroad trains, 26 burned themselves to death, 23 stabbed themselves, 4 starved themselves, and 3 blew themselves up with dynamite.

MURDERS.

The total number of murders committed in 1898 shows another gratifying decrease—a phenomenon often witnessed in a war year—being 7,840, as compared with 9,520 in 1897, 10,652 in 1896, 10,500 in 1895, 9,800 in 1894, 6,615 in 1893, 6,742 in 1892, 5,106 in 1891, and 4,290 in 1890. The causes of these murders may be roughly classified as follows:—

Quarrels.....3,867	Highwaymen killed..... 82
Unknown.....2,678	Insanity,.....89
Jealousy..... 205	Self defense.....33
Liquor..... 207	Strikes.....22
By highwaymen 222	Outrages..... 5
Infanticide..... 248	Riots.....25
Resisting arrest 147

FIRE LOSSES.

The losses by fire in the United States in 1898 aggregate $133,139,467, as compared with $129,001,737 in 1897, $111,856,067 in 1896, and $131,578,206 in 1895. Those where the loss in each case was $100,000 and upwards amount to $64,915,400, and the losses by smaller fires to $68,224,067.

The aggregate losses by fire for a series of years are as follows:—

Year.	Aggregate property loss.	Year.	Aggregate property loss.

HANGINGS.

The number of legal executions in 1898 was 109, as compared with 128 in 1897, 122 in 1896, 132 in 1895, 132 in 1894, 126 in 1893, and 107 in 1892. The executions in the several States and Territories were as follows:—

There were 72 hanged in the South and 37 in the North, of whom 60 were whites, 48 blacks, and 1 Chinese. The crimes for which they were executed were murder 100 and rape 9.

LYNCHINGS.

The criminal work of mob murderers throughout the country has decreased during 1898, as compared with 1897, being smaller than in any year since 1885, except 1890, when the number was the same. Judge Lynch has executed 127 persons during the year, 122 males and 5 females. The following table, showing the number of lynchings through a series of years, will be of interest at the present time, when this question of lynching is occupying the attention of legislators in several States:—

1886.....138	1893.....200
1887.....122	1894.....190

EMBEZZLEMENTS.

The record of embezzling, forgery, defaulting, and bank wreckage for 1898 shows a material and gratifying decrease, being but $5,851,253, as compared with $11,248,084 in 1897, being also much the smallest total since 1888.

Out of the total number of cases of embezzling reported 9 persons stole over $50,000 each, 9 over $100,000 each, 1 over $200,000, 1 over $300,000, 1 over $400,000, and two over $500,000 each. The losses are distributed as follows:—

In preparing these statistics the Tribune omits the individual items, though they have been carefully kept, for the obvious reason that an injustice might be done some person by publishing his name as an embezzler, even though he had been arrested. Now and then a person is acquitted of the charge months after his arrest, and to keep track of such an acquittal is difficult. These acquittals are so rare, however, that the figures are not materially affected.

CHARITIES.

The record of charity for 1898 keeps well up to the records of former years, and it is certainly an optimistic and encouraging outlook for the best that is in man and for the outreachings of charity and humanity that the dark record of official dishonesty elsewhere presented is so magnificently offset by the generous sums contributed by bequest or personal gift to churches, colleges, charities, museums, art galleries, and libraries amounting to $23,984,900, as compared with $33,612,814 in 1897, $33,670,129 in 1896, $28,943,549 in 1895, and $19,967,116 in 1894. In preparing these statistics no record has been kept of small donations, since to collect them all would be an impossibility. Of the total amount stated above there has been given to colleges the large sum of $13,086,150; to charities, $6,230,300; to churches, $2,029,950; to museums and art galleries, $1,472,000; to libraries, $1,166,500.—Condensed from the Chicago Tribune, December 31, 1898.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Winter Term opened January 3. Registration occupied the time till ten a. m., when the opening chapel services were held. Bishop Kelley addressed the assembled audience appropriately, and students with faculty seemed ready for energetic and successful work. Wednesday morning January 4, Lectures began, and all is now in full swing. Of our faculty, two familiar faces are missing: Professor Fitzpatrick, now devoting his time wholly to his editorial work, while Professor Pence has gone East to the Law School of Columbia University, of Washington fame. One new face appears. Miss Rich, late of Rome, New York, having taken up duties with the opening of the term. Under her supervision, the Shorthand and Typewriting Department is thriving. It is satisfactory to know that our church can provide such talent. The enrollment of students shows a substantial increase on that of last term, and altogether Graceland is on the move upwards. Mysterious sounds are heard occasionally from our Physico-Chemical Laboratory, and, to judge from the noise, our fair students in the Practical Physics Class must be putting in hard manual labor.

The Athenians are much perplexed ever the Philippine question, and still lovingly cling to it as a matter for debate. Our Literary Society is bound to succeed, and after further growth will throw off daughter societies of various kinds.

The Subscription List steadily grows. We are waiting to hear from the East; we feel convinced that some of our good brethren and sisters, in that part of the world will do all they can to help the great and good work that the church has assumed. Besides, the scholarship, attached to the $25 subscription, can be used to a good purpose by sending some poorer young man or woman, anxious, for higher education, to college. There are scores of such within the church, who are famishing for intellectual food, and if they could only obtain the same, would utilize it to the benefit of themselves, the church, and humanity. "Success when United."

REBAPTISM.

The following from the Deseret News for December 16, 1898, is an example of the desperate straits to which the Utah representatives are driven to make a point against the Reorganization:—

AS TO "REBAPTIZING."

STREATOR, Ill., Dec. 1, 1898.

To the Editor:—For some time I have been traveling among people who tell me that a great mistake was made by the "rebaptizing" done in Utah. No argument is produced to show it to be wrong, and in one case I met an "Elder" who said that he, as a member of the Reorganized Church had been rebaptized, but while he could see no harm in the course he had taken, he did not consider it necessary.

Brigham Young, we are informed, "rebaptized his co-associates with himself in the waters of Utah."

All who know anything about the baptizing done in Utah understand that the "rebaptizing" spoken of was simply as a renewal of covenants, and not because they had "departed from the faith," etc.

Those who are interested in the question can find a clear case of "rebaptizing" recorded in the Book of Mormon.

From III Nephi, 7 chapter, we learn that Nephi, ministering in the name of Jesus Christ, cast out devils and unclean spirits, raised his brother from the dead, preached repentance and remission of sins and baptized and ordained men unto the ministry. All who repented were baptized, and this we must remember was during the time when Christ was engaged in introducing the Gospel among the Jews.

The Book of Mormon tells of the great destruction on this continent at the time of the crucifixion and informs us that it was the more righteous people who were saved. (III Nephi 10: 12.)

The Son of Man said to the Jews: "Other sheep have I and they shall hear my voice;" so in fulfillment of that prediction He came to the Nephites soon after His resurrection, and "Nephi went down to the water, and was baptized;" then "he baptized all those whom Jesus had chosen." Here we have a righteous man who had been preaching repentance and remission of sins, being baptized; a careful reading of III Nephi will show that they must have been "rebaptizing; but there is something on the subject from the True Latter-day Saints' Herald and at that time Joseph Smith, of the Reorganized Church, was editor with M. W [H]. Forscutt as his assistant.

I quote from pp. 107, 108 of the Herald of Feb. 15, 1872:

"REBAPTISM."

"A reply to R. Smith's Question."

"I had intended to answer R. Smith's article on rebaptism at length; but sickness in our family has forced delay till an abler pen than mine undertook the task and rendered my efforts unnecessary. My grateful thanks to our worthy brother E. S.

"I will answer a direct question propounded by R. Smith, however.

"He says, first now Sister, have you known an Elder in the Reorganized Church to rebaptize anyone?"

"Second, did he say 'I baptize you or I rebaptize you?'"

"I answer, I have known a goodly number of persons rebaptized by Elders in the Reorganized Church,—rebaptized to all intents and purposes, because their former baptism was legal and true, and they had never been expelled from the church.

"Secondly, I did hear an Elder say 'I rebaptize you' and I have the oral testimony of three. It was in Fox River, Illinois, and the Elder officiating was our beloved and honored President Joseph Smith, time, August, 1863.

"Anything more, Brother R. S.?"

"PERLA WILD."

The above quotation shows what the Reorganizers have been doing and the following from the Times and Seasons, Vol. 3, p. 763, shows the practice of the church in the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

I quote from the minutes of a conference held at Nauvoo, April 7, 1842.

"Pres. Joseph Smith said—'Baptisms for the dead, and for the healing of the body must be in the font, those coming into the Church and those rebaptized may be done in the river. A box should be prepared for the use of the font, that the clerk may be paid, and a book procured by the monies to be put therein by those baptized, the remainder to go to the use of the Temple. Sing a hymn, ordinations to take place to-morrow morning, baptisms in the font also.'

Again from the same minutes of April 8th. "John Taylor preached a sermon while the ordinations and baptisms were going on."

This quotation shows that under Joseph's direction baptisms, with various objects in view, were being performed and that besides the rebaptizing, they were baptisms for the dead and for the "healing of the body" in the font of the Nauvoo Temple, which font had been dedicated Nov. 8, 1841.

There can be no objection raised to these minutes, for at that time Joseph Smith was editor of the Times and Seasons and had the conference clerk reported him incorrectly, he would have made the correction. The minutes are correct.

ELDER J. A. HULME.

Elder Hulme might have made his case even stronger by citing resolutions of the church requiring those legally expelled from the church to be rebaptized in order to be again admitted to fellowship. But he, as is usual with the Utah elders, misrepresents our position.

We do not claim that "a great mistake was made by the 'rebaptizing' done in Utah;" but that great mistakes were made that brought about conditions requiring rebaptism. We have not objected to rebaptism when necessary, but we have contended that when the leading men in Utah conceded that they needed to renew their covenant by baptism, that they thus admitted that the obligations taken upon themselves in the former baptism had been violated. Again, when they enjoined rebaptism upon all who came to those valleys, it was a virtual concession that those who went there thereby broke the former covenant.

It has always been a source of great satisfaction to us to realize that these men do not attempt to attack our position, but usually misrepresent our position before making the attack. There is nothing in the quotations from either the Herald or Times and Seasons indicating what the condition of those rebaptized parties were.

The case of Nephi, cited by Mr. Hulme, is a more plausible one, but when carefully considered does not sustain his theory. The question is one of the continuance of the covenant entered into. The preaching and baptizing first cited by Elder Hulme was before Christ visited the Nephites to establish the new and everlasting covenant. Though the mode of entrance was the same, the former covenant was not an everlasting one. These authorities in Utah had claimed that when first baptized they had accepted the new and everlasting covenant. But Elder Hulme now informs us that "the rebaptizing spoken of [in Utah] was simply as a renewal of covenants." Why renew that which is everlasting in its nature, unless one of the parties has violated the conditions of the covenant? If they have, then, and then only, is there a necessity for renewal.

ANOTHER BOOK OF ABRAHAM.

APOCALYPSE OF ABRAHAM.

Professor G. Nathaniel Bonwetsch, of the University of Goettingen, has just translated into German a remarkable work, "The Apocalypse of Abraham," an English version of which is made public here for the first time. He found it in a roll of parchment in the library at Moscow, Russia, written in old Slavic, the language from which Russian is derived. He has traced the story back to a manuscript of the fifth century, also in the Moscow library (No. 172).

Professor Bonwetsch says: "We have not been able to discover any version other than the old Slavic, but judging from its literary form it must go back to a Greek original not yet discovered." Other scholars hold that this apocalypse antedates Christianity in its original form, and therefore in it we have the very oldest specimen of apocalyptic literature that has been discovered.

Part of the translation which will show the style and kind of narrative, follows: "The book of the Revelation of Abraham, the son of Terah, the son of Nahor, son of Serug, the son of Roog, the son of Aaphaxad [Arphaxad?], the son of Shem, the son of Noah, the son of Lamech, the son of Methusaleh, the son of Enoch, the son of Arad.

"On the day when I polished the gods of Terah, and the gods of Nahor, his brother, when I thought, who is truly the strongest god, I, Abraham, at the time of my offering, when I had finished making the sacrifice of my father, Terah, to his gold, silver, brazen, and iron gods; going into their temple for service, I found the god called Marumath (made of hewn stone) fallen forward at the feet of Nahor's iron god.

"And it happened when I saw it, my heart trembled, and I thought that I was not able to lift him up to his place again; I, Abraham, alone, because he was heavy, made from a huge stone, and I went thence and informed my father. Then he went with me, and both of us together could hardly move it, to lift it up to its place. And its head by which I held it, fell off. And when my father saw that Marumath's head had fallen off, he said to me: 'Abraham,' and I answered: 'Here am I.' Then he said to me, 'Bring me the small hatchet from the house.' I brought it to him. Then he hewed another Marumath out of another stone, but without a head, and the head which had fallen off Marumath he put on it, and the rest of Marumath he threw away."—Chicago Tribune.

It will be remembered that Joseph Smith, the Seer, translated while at Kirtland, Ohio, some Egyptian manuscripts which purported to contain a record of the Patriarch Abraham, and that such translation has been ridiculed and criticised generally by opposers of the prophet and the latter-day work.

But here comes a veritable Book of Abraham, brought forth by the world itself, and the learned world too, at that; for Professor Bonwetsch, of the University of Goettingen, which is recognized as one of the highest standing seats of learning in Europe, traces the Moscow manuscript to the fifth century, and thinks it must be derived from an older Greek manuscript not yet discovered; and "other scholars hold that this apocalypse antedates Christianity in its original form, and therefore in it we have the very oldest specimen of apocalyptic literature that has been discovered." Hence it is that there appears, from their own standpoint, reason to believe there was and is such a record as the "Book of Abraham."

However, it should be remembered that Joseph Smith only translated the record as it came into his hands. He did not produce it as a work of which he was the author, or with whom its statements originated. Nor did the church ever indorse the work or its teachings. Upon this we quote from the History of the Church, Vol. 2, page 569, as follows:—

On this date [March 1, 1842] President Smith writes:—

"I commenced publishing my translation of the Book of Abraham, in the Times and Seasons."

These extracts, as we understand, are from a translation of a roll of manuscript found with some Egyptian mummies purchased of a traveler who visited Kirtland, Ohio, a few years before for the purpose of exhibiting the mummies. The church has never to our knowledge taken any action on this work, either to indorse or condemn; so it cannot be said to be a church publication; nor can the church be held to answer for the correctness of its teachings. Joseph Smith, as the translator, is committed of course to the correctness of the translation, but not necessarily to the indorsement of its historical or doctrinal contents.

The date of the Chicago Tribune from which the foregoing clipping was taken has not been preserved. The writer took it from that paper sometime during the spring or summer of 1898, and laid it by for future reference; but has since thought well to give it to the HERALD readers.

In this connection it may be well to give the HERALD readers an account of the final disposition of the Egyptian mummies and papyrus which came into the Seer's possession at Kirtland. We give the following statement prepared for the Church Historian, in answer to inquiry, by President Joseph Smith:—

LAMONI, Iowa, Oct. 24, 1898.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa.

In compliance with your request:—

The papyrus from which the Book of Abraham, was said to have been translated by Father, was with other portions found in a roll with some Egyptian mummies, pasted on either paper or linen and put into a small case of flat drawers, some dozen or sixteen in number. This case, with two cases of mummies containing five persons, one much smaller than the others, were in the keeping of Grandmother Lucy Smith, Father's mother, for some time before Father's death, and were still in her possession both at the time he was killed and after. She took them from our house, some time after Father's death, and had them at her daughter Lucy Millikin's, when they moved into Knox County, Illinois, not far from Galesburg. I cannot give you dates, but during a part of 1846-7 Mother and family were away from Nauvoo and Grandmother was at Lucy Millikin's. Grandmother finally came back to Nauvoo with Lucy's family, but came without the mummies and case of drawers. We learned that while living near Galesburg, Uncle William undertook a lecturing tour, and secured the mummies and case of records, as the papyrus was called, as an exhibit and aid to making his lectures more attractive and lucrative. Uncle William became stranded somewhere along the Illinois River, and sold the mummies and the records with the understanding that he might repurchase them. This he never did. Part of the stock, one case of mummies and part or all of the cases of drawers, found their way to Wood's Museum, Chicago, and a part to St. Louis, where, we never learned.

I personally, in company with Elder Elijah Banta, of Sandwich, Illinois, saw the mummies and case of drawers in the museum in Chicago, before the great fire, in 1871; in which they undoubtedly perished with the rest of the accumulated relics and curiosities.

Uncle William never accounted for the sale he made, except to state that he was obliged to sell them, but fully intended to repurchase them, but was never able, before the fire; and of course could not after they were burned.

So far as anything is known by us about the fate, or final disposition of the papyrus, the foregoing is correct, and I was knowing to the facts as they occurred; and saw the mummies and case of drawers in Wood's Museum, Chicago, not long before the fire of October, 1871. I was at the time living at Plano, Illinois, fifty-three miles west from Chicago, and did business in the city in behalf of our Publishing Department and Herald, and visited the city frequently.

Respectfully,

JOSEPH SMITH.

HIGH STANDARDS OF LIFE NECESSARY.

Monmouth, Illinois, December 27.—Monmouth United Presbyterian presbytery today considered the following overtures passed at the General Assembly: First, requiring members to pledge a systematic proportionate contribution, rejected 20 to 5; second, that the use of tobacco is sinful and therefore inconsistent with the Christian profession, unanimously rejected; third and fourth, that no nominated elder or deacon be ordained unless he promise to abstain from use of tobacco, lost 17 to 5.

A resolution was unanimously adopted protesting against the admission of Brigham H. Roberts, an avowed polygamist, to a seat in the Fifty-sixth Congress.

The foregoing is from the Chicago Record of the 28th ult. The Reorganized Church as early as 1851 declared against the innovation of polygamy; and in its acceptance of the three standard books of the church also accepted the precept that tobacco is "not good for man." In a later revelation the elders and membership are admonished thus: "Avoid the use of tobacco." (D. C. 119.) The General Conference will not send out as a missionary any man who uses tobacco; and some quorums have refused to include in their membership elders known to be addicted to its use. The Lamoni branch of the church some years ago passed a resolution declaring anyone given to the use of tobacco to be ineligible to office in said branch. Some districts and other branches have also taken action equivalent to that of the Lamoni branch; hence the tobacco-using elder or other official is regarded as occupying lower ground than that required by the law of God and the moral progress of the church.

It is gratifying to know that while many sectarians willfully or ignorantly refuse to recognize the distinctions between the faith of the saints and that of the Utah Mormons, the original faith, represented by the Reorganized Church, stands upon high ground, so high that it claims to be, through Christ, "the light of the world," and because the Christ and the Christ-standard in all phases of life, are revealed in it and demanded by it.

We repeat, there is reason for devout gratitude to our heavenly Father that the work brought to light proves itself to be above reproach and beyond criticism, in principles of faith and morality. A study of the principles revealed to the church through Joseph Smith the Martyr and his son, the present President and Seer, and which have been accepted by the councils and General Conferences of the church, will satisfy the candid and impartial student of the Christian economy that they are equal in moral and doctrinal worth to any revelations ever made to the human family. And this because they are not of human origin, but because they are the revelations of the Christ himself, the past and the present great Head of the church.

It is to be sincerely regretted that apostasy and evil have brought their legitimate fruits as seen in the history of the Utah departure from God. It is also a cause for sincere congratulation and thankfulness that though the enemy came in "like a flood," the Spirit of the Lord lifted up a standard against him. The Reorganization has made a consistent, a noble and a steadfast contention for truth and morality. Against the opposition of sectarianism without and the dire results of apostasy and moral transgression of those claiming to be of the faith, it has persistently and steadily maintained its stand for God and morality before the world.

Its record deserves the commendation and ought to receive the support of every lover of morality, to say the least. The Utah people themselves should see and recognize the consistency and high character of its efforts. Some of them do, as we know, and others will in due time, of the "honest in heart." The Master's sheep will hear his voice, whether they be in Utah or in other church organizations, in due time. Final victory is with God and truth—it cannot be otherwise. "As for truth, it endureth and is always strong; it liveth and conquereth forever more."—Esdras.

It becomes apparent that as the Utah Church recedes from its more open avowals of polygamy and enters upon a missionary crusade, also as sectarianism changes its form and fashion, the work of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is to increase in importance and magnitude. The faith of the gospel is to be maintained and declared in "all the world," in contrast and in opposition to the growing worldliness and Babylonish spirit of the times. The contention between light and darkness becomes stronger as the near approach of the coming of the Lord draws nigh. The contest between truth and error, right and wrong, between the spirit of oppression and that of liberty, becomes sharper and the lines of division more clearly defined. Sectarianism is manifesting more clearly its human character and origin. All things else, with it, are being shaken, and their real character is being revealed. This simplifies the contention and will tend to make the contrasts more apparent, hence more readily discernible; and in due time the position of the church as the contender for "the faith once delivered to the saints" as against the growing skepticism and inventions of theologians, so-called, will be plain to all who love the truth out of a pure heart.

Our success as a people can only be realized by an actual demonstration of the truth in us individually and collectively. The preaching of the word wrought out in personal character will prove us to be the church and people of God; otherwise our professions of faith will amount to little or nothing. The requirements of the Lord himself and the spirit of the times emphasize the necessity of a high line of moral, religious, and general life upon the part of the people of God. Causes of troubles must be removed by righteous example and conduct of all concerned, from highest official to the last member, everywhere and anywhere, and a unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace be attained and maintained, based on the Christ standard of morality, integrity, and honesty in all our dealings with one another, with the church, and with fellow man. God is pledged to grant his Spirit of grace and of power upon such conditions; but only upon such. It is useless for anyone to expect life here or hereafter, in favor with God, upon any other conditions. The faith that does not "work," and work "by love," through self-control, self-denial, and in the spirit of Christ, is not the faith of the gospel, however strong may be the claim of being a child of God. Baptism by immersion and the laying on of hands by church authority demands a manifestation of the "spirit of adoption," that the evidences of sonship may be made manifest in all the phases and conditions of practical life. A son or a daughter of God in truth will show forth the spirit of such adoption. The testimony of former day and latter-day revelation is one upon this point. In 2 Peter 1:1-12 we have a statement of the Christ standard of principle and attainment necessary to an "entrance" into the "everlasting kingdom," etc. In Galatians 5:13-26 we have a clear exposition of the contrasts between the "works of the flesh" and "the fruit of the Spirit," with the statement: "They that are Christ's have crucified [brought into subjection] the flesh with the affections and lusts." In latter-day revelations the personal and official acts of men are required to be "in all righteousness, in holiness and lowliness of heart, meekness and longsuffering, and in faith and virtue and knowledge; temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity, because the promise is, if these things abound in them, they shall not be unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord," etc.

These things, with other and specific prohibitions of immorality and other wrongs, were revealed to the church as positive rules of life and conduct, from its inception in 1830. The church was thus constituted an affirmative exponent of truth and made through conformity to principle the specific advocate and manifestation, through Christ, of truth to the world. Under these circumstances it is not strange that in the revelations of Jesus Christ to the church we find principles designed to reach and to correct every phase of evil existing among men; for revealed religion means applied religion—the substitution of right for wrong; of principle for policy; of justness for oppression; of morality for immorality; etc., etc., until, all along the line of human conduct and habit, there shall be such changes wrought as are necessary to bring humanity up from its low levels to the higher ways and methods ordained of God himself.

As the heavens are higher than the earth, so God's ways are higher than man's. As humanity has departed from God through transgression and weakness, return must be made through obedience and grace received from God. Hence the measure of attainment or advancement is seen through actual change wrought in the mind and conscience and conduct of those entering into covenant with God.

The Christian world to-day is startled at the prospective innovation of a polygamous congressman, and they call his innovation an exposition of Latter Day Saintism. It is ours, the work of the saints, to stem this tide of misconception, by showing forth the high standard required of those called to represent the great latter-day work. We can do it; we must do it, in every hamlet and locality where the work is presented through our profession of faith. Out of all the excitement caused by the present discussion of the attitude of Utah's representative and the general attitude of the dominant church in Utah, good will come through the overruling providences of God, who overrules, and who has decreed that his work shall be known and his name be glorified through "a pure people"—his church in these last days.

In doctrine, in moral principle, we stand on higher ground than does Utah Mormonism or shifting sectarianism. Consistency demands that our profession of faith be made effective and practical in our personal and collective example as individuals and as a people. Of this the Lord himself has said: "Ye shall observe the commandments which ye have received, and be faithful."—(Doctrine and Covenants.)

A CHAIN.

Business Manager Bro. F. Criley laid a letter on our desk, with the information that it was one of an endless chain in behalf of Graceland College, begun somewhere in middle or Northern Iowa, from which considerable benefit to the college was expected.

The one we have is from a sister at Woodbine to a sister in Dow City, and seems to be pretty well along in the chain.

The Manager to whom the dimes are to be sent is waiting the end which he hopes will be good.

A BENEFIT CONFERRED.

The saints of the London, Ontario, district, knowing that the labors of Bro. R. C. Evans in caring for the district required considerable travel by wagon or sleigh, and consequent exposure to the cold, raised a contribution for the purpose of providing a means of protection for "the elder." The result will be seen by reading below, a paper which we are requested to insert in HERALD:—

November 27, '98.

Dear Bro. R. C. Evans:—Inclosed you will find post office order for fifty dollars as a small token of the love and esteem with which you are held by the saints of the London district. They have thus tried to manifest a portion of that love by thus donating for the purpose of getting you a fur coat to protect you from the inclemency of our Canadian winters, to which you are constantly exposed. We trust you will be blessed with warmth therein and that our affection for you will also create a glow which time cannot erase nor eternity outlive. May you long be spared to minister to this people the words of eternal truth and to care for the work which God has kindly made you overseer over; and may grace and strength sufficient for the many and arduous tasks required at your hands be daily ministered unto you; and may we his people have a proper appreciation of your labors, and manifest the same by upholding your hands by our prayers of faith and works of righteousness.

Asking you to kindly accept of this token of our regard for you, we subscribe ourselves,

In behalf of the London district,

R. C. LONGHURST, President.

JOHN H. TAYLOR, Vice President.

MAGGIE MCGREGOR, Secretary.

[By note to us, Bro. Evans states that he secured a very good Persian lambskin coat at a bargain, because it was too small for a man's size. Bro. Evans good-naturedly adds, "Who wouldn't be a boy?"—ED.]

A CORRECTION—THADDEUS CUTLER'S DEATH.

We have the following from Bro. E. B. Webb, of Anthony, Kansas, correcting a mistake made in regard to the place where Thaddeus Cutler was living at the time of his death. We give the letter extract cheerfully in correction:—

I see by a letter from Emma L. Anderson in Herald for December 7th, that I said that Thaddeus Cutler was living with me when he died, which is a mistake. But I did say he was living with me when he had the interview with Lewis and Rawlins, of the Utah persuasion; and the statement I made then was correct. I sent the notice of their death in the same envelope with the letter I sent to President Joseph Smith.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, Swan, Kentucky, December 29:—

I am just able to be around; had two ribs broken about two weeks ago. Have been roughly treated by mob of late and also been sorely afflicted, but still the Lord has stood by me. Love to all.

Bro. Clapp, we understand, was thrown from a buggy, by which accident two of his ribs were broken. We trust he may pass safely through the period of difficulty which now is upon him.

The following note from Bro. H. Griffith, Sen., from Oak Vale, Australia, will suggest the need of some more help for that far off land.

We have had no preaching here now for nearly five years, as we are about two hundred and fifty miles away from Queensferry or Hastings branches. Would like if you could spare an elder after conference for this part of the vineyard; he could have two hundred square miles of a field to work in, so there would be no need for him to rust.

Florida friends are showing an interest in Graceland College, as the following from Bro. Stephen D. Allen will show:—

MILTON, Fla., Jan. 3, 1899.

ELDER E. L. KELLEY, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Brother:—I send, inclosed, the list of principal church buildings used by us here, to the best of my judgment, as to value, etc. I also send P. O. order for five dollars for Graceland College fund, and am sorry that it is not five hundred dollars. I feel a deep interest in the success of Graceland College, as I do in all our institutions, and my heart has gone out in sympathy for it, time and time again, as I would read in the Herald of the committee's struggles to complete it, and their appeals for assistance.

I hope all loyal saints will come up with all the assistance possible until Graceland is an assured success. I have some children that I wish to send there if I am ever blessed with the means to do so. Your brother,

S. D. ALLEN.

Those having correspondence with Bro. E. C. Briggs, of the Quorum of Twelve, may address him at Hartford, Van Buren County, Michigan, his present mission address.

Bro. Bertie White, Vinton, Iowa, writes some suggestions for good for the coming year. He regards the gift of faith as one to be treasured and prized.

Sr. Sarah Warburton, sister to Bro. William Street, formerly active in Sunday school interests, writes that she has volumes of Leaves, Hopes, and books, some belonging to her deceased brother, and requesting that we make mention of her wish to sell them. Possibly some of the school libraries might wish to purchase. Address her at Conshohocken, Pennsylvania.

The Lamoni branch, at its regular monthly business meeting, held on the 6th inst., passed resolutions against the seating of B. H. Roberts, Congressman-elect from Utah.

We shall begin soon an excellent article by Elder I. M. Smith entitled, "The Atonement of Christ and the Final destiny of Man." The theme is an important and inspiring one, and has been closely studied and carefully written upon by Bro. Smith. Other excellent matter will be given the HERALD readers, as rapidly as our allotted space permits.

The Utah Church is represented by an additional periodical in the journalistic field—"The Latter Day Saints' Southern Star," issued of late at Chattanooga, Tennessee, in the interests of the Southern States' mission of that body. The HERALD obtains it, with other Utah Church publications, including the Deseret News (the church organ) and the Juvenile Instructor; also the Enquirer, published at Provo, Utah, on exchange.

Bishop E. L. Kelley was called to St. Joseph, Missouri, on church business during the past week.

Late "Ministry addresses" will be published on request. All old ones have been discarded.

"To loving eyes alone they turn
The flowers of inward grace, that hide
Their beauty from the world outside."

IS THE HUMAN RACE DYING OUT?

If so, why? Are we as strong and robust as our ancestors were? Does not every generation seem to be weaker than the one before it? Why do we see so many prematurely old people? Why are our boys and girls gray-haired, and old looking and toothless, or nearly so, before they are twenty-five years old? Why do not people live now as long as they did in ancient days? If the evil continues, will not the human family have vanished from the earth in a few generations? What is the cause, and what is the cure?

It would require a volume to answer these questions properly, so I shall only give a few of the causes, hoping thereby to arouse the saints to the necessity of a change, and that they will seek for knowledge on this important subject from the best books, and strive to correct the evil. As we are to be the light of the earth, and are called to do a great and important work among the children of men, it is necessary for us to have strong bodies and minds, in order to do our work thoroughly; therefore I purpose to treat on the means of securing that robust health which seems to be so sadly lacking.

The Word of Wisdom teaches that the use of tobacco and strong drink is injurious, and when we come to study how injurious it is, we see the necessity for God's revealing this to his people, also the necessity for their obedience. These habits are so prevalent at the present time that very few persons are free from the injurious effects of one or both. They destroy the health of the body by impairing the digestion, wrecking the nerves, and making impure the blood, which is the life of the flesh. The food that we eat is not always of a kind to build up healthy muscles and nerves, but is often adulterated and impure. We do not know the quality of the meat we buy. The hog may have been diseased for all we know to the contrary, and we eat this diseased meat and take the germs of disease into our system. If we eat meat at all in warm weather we should eat it very sparingly; and God says that it is pleasing unto him that we should not use it all except in seasons of cold or famine. He has promised that all saints who remember these sayings to do them shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint, and shall find wisdom. If we willfully disobey his laws, can we expect to find wisdom or to be healed by the administration of the elders when we are sick?

It is said that very little of the flour we eat is pure, but is nearly all adulterated with chalk and other injurious substances; and even if it were pure there is very little nourishment in it, as only a little of the nourishing quality of it is left after it is bolted. We give the bone and brain and muscle making part of it to our cows and hogs, and keep the starchy, indigestible part for ourselves. This is one reason why the present generation has such poor teeth, also why we have so much dyspepsia.

Then we have the habit of wearing corsets and tight shoes, and these also do great harm. The sisters in their desire to be in the fashion (which is only another name for being like the world, and which is the same thing that caused ancient Israel to be rejected of the Lord) will compress their bodies in tight stays, and their feet in shoes about two numbers too small, and stunt and dwarf their bodies, which should be well developed, in order to be more useful to God and their fellow creatures. It is said that in the beginning God made man in his own image, male and female created he them; so woman and man must both have been in his image, and he pronounced his work very good. One would think from this statement that you only had to look at your fellow creatures to see how God looked, as man was made in God's image; but nature has been violated, and man's natural shape is so perverted that it is hard to tell whether man is in the image of God or not. You can depend upon it that woman is not, for she has followed the modern fashions until very few, if any, have their natural shape. It is considered a disgrace among some people for a woman to have her natural shape. O no; it is the fashion now to look like a "dirt dauber" or wasp, and you might as well be out of the world as out of the fashion. Exactly; and this is what Christ has commanded his disciples to do: "Come out of the world and be separate from them."

Can you disobey his commandments and be blest? We love to gratify the lust of the eyes too much. I see that the styles are to be ruffles and tucks and bustles. Allow me to say right here that these same things are as injurious as corsets, as they are an additional weight on the hips, which are already too heavily loaded with skirts; besides being so extremely warm in warm weather, unless one uses wire ones, and then the perspiration will cause them to rust and ruin the underclothing, and thus cause extra expense; besides they are in the way when you sit down, as you cannot rest your back comfortably. Ruffles and tucks call for a great amount of time and labor and money, which should be spent in God's service.

We love to wear too fine a quality of clothing, too much adornment and jewelry, and all these things take up our time and money, and turn our minds on wordly things, and thus we rob God, who says: "Let all thy garments be plain, and let their beauty be the beauty of the work of thine own hands." "Let not your adorning be that outward adorning of braiding the hair and wearing costly raiment, but seek to adorn yourselves with a meek spirit, for thus did the holy women of God adorn themselves." Plain means simple, not luxurious, not costly. Some people say that a dress worth twenty-five cents per yard is not costly; while some whose means are more limited, say that it is. How shall we know when we have a cheap dress? I will tell you? Let your dress be of such a cheap quality that the poorest sister in the church cannot call it costly. Plain calico, neatly and plainly made, is just fine enough; and let the money that might have been spent for the more costly dress be invested in good books, or given to the poor, or paid into the church treasury as tithes and offerings, that the Lord's storehouse may be full. And leave off corsets and tight shoes, and tobacco, tea and coffee, impure and unhealthful food, that the money which would be spent for these things, and the doctor's bills which will follow their use, may also be paid into the Lord's treasury. Try to abide by the whole law, and then if you get sick send for the elders and God will bless you with all needful things.

What does it matter if the world does turn the cold shoulder to us for doing these things? Is not eternal life worth some sacrifice? And does not the Savior say that "the disciple is not above his Lord, nor the servant above his master?" And we have still this consolation that God loves us and will bless us for our efforts to please him. And be not idle or seek your own ease, for God has no use for this kind of person. Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." "Seek in the best books for knowledge," and "ask of God who giveth liberally to all men and upbraideth not." By observing to do all these things we will hasten the redemption and building up of Zion, the spreading of the gospel over all the earth, the gathering of Israel, and the millennial reign. We are coworkers with God in accomplishing his purposes, and we shall be rewarded or punished according to our diligence or slothfulness.

I pray that God may cause his Holy Spirit to move upon the minds of his people, and cause us all to come up higher, and put ourselves more in harmony with his law, that we may "let our lights so shine, that others may see our good works and glorify our Father who is in heaven." If we would do this we could convert many, many of our friends and acquaintances, and cause them to be saved in the kingdom of heaven.

THE "committee of improvement on Sunday school work" have a notice elsewhere in this issue which you should not fail to note carefully. They are constantly on the lookout for that which will permanently improve our helps and our work and will gladly receive suggestions from anyone interested in the work.

Sr. Anna Stuart was recently elected librarian of the Little Sioux, Iowa, District Sunday School Association, and has introduced her work by an inquiry of each school as to whether or not they have an active librarian in their school, and what the condition of the books is, and especially those in use every time they meet, such as Winnowed Songs and Bibles. The results show that where there is an active librarian the books are in good condition, and where there is no librarian, or a dilatory one, the books are in very poor condition—many with covers off and leaves torn out. Sr. Stuart expects to report her findings to the district convention, that all may get the benefit of the conclusions that can readily be drawn therefrom.

The Inter-State Institute of Sunday School and Religio Work closed its third annual session Thursday evening, December 29, 1898, at Independence, Missouri. The session had continued for four days with three meetings per day, in all seven hours' solid work each day. The work was very heavy and the hours long, but the interest increased to the last. There were unmistakable marks of weariness upon the faces of all, but no lack of interest or signs of indifference were discernible. All who had come had come for work, and work they did.

As was announced in the published program, the work was suited to all classes, from the district officer to the laymember in the local school. Complete and systematic outlines of all the work done were placed on the blackboard as the work progressed, and were copied by a majority of those present, for future reference. The discussions were entered into freely by all and at times many waxed very interested therein. A spirit of unity and a desire to arrive at the truth seemed to actuate the efforts of every one present. And although we were not able at all times to dispose of the questions as we would have liked, yet many good points were developed, and from them, we trust, will come much of good to the work in the near future.

Though the attendance was not what we would have desired, there is no reason for serious complaint on that line. Ten district Sunday school associations were represented by those who had come especially for the Institute, and several other districts incidentally. We did not learn the exact number of those that were in attendance from abroad. The numbers consisted largely of officers and teachers. Thus it is to be presumed that what was gathered there will in turn be disseminated in the various schools and districts represented.

A report of the work done will be furnished the readers of the department from time to time by Bro. J. F. Mintun, assistant secretary and instructor in the institute. The work of the Religio will doubtless appear in the "Arena" in the Autumn Leaves, and the Sunday school work in the "Sunday school Department" in Saints' Herald.

While reading of the proceedings of the institute, do so with the thought in mind that the same work can be done in your district, and that it will be of much benefit to the workers thereof. Arrange for a district institute, and if necessary, one of the officers of the General Association will meet with you and assist you. Let us hear from you.

We here congratulate the workers of our sister society, The "Religio," upon the amount and quality of the work done. It is very evident that the Religio is fast emerging from the stage of "experiment" and becoming one of the established "organizations for good," and that its workers are plying their efforts in no uncertain way. We bid you "God speed." May it live long and fill its mission well.

INTERSTATE INSTITUTE.

The third session of the Interstate Institute of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints convened at Independence, Missouri, December 26, at 9:30 a. m.; the first session of which was a prayer meeting in charge of J. F. Mintun and J. A. Gunsolley, during which the melting influence of God's Holy Spirit was freely manifested. Then followed short but feeling addresses, by General Superintendent T. A. Hougas, in behalf of the Sunday school, and Sr. Louise Palfrey, Editor of the "Religio's Arena" in Autumn Leaves, in behalf of the Religio.

Following this the Religio occupied the time until Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. with work of the most instructive character, of which further mention will be made in the Arena of the Autumn Leaves.

The first actual institute work of the Sunday School Association was the consideration of the subject, "What is a Sunday school?" by T. A. Hougas, during the consideration of which the following outline was developed to which I append notes:—

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan. 1, 1899.

To all whom it may concern:—The Committee on Improvements for Sunday-School Work is Miss Louise Palfrey, Macon, Missouri. Mrs. B. C. Smith, Independence, Missouri; George W. Blair, Lamoni, Iowa; M. C. Fisher, 136 Greenwood Street, Boston; J. F. Mintun, Magnolia, Iowa.

This committee is ready and anxious to receive suggestions from any source that is thought to tend to the improvement of this department of church work.

Such suggestions which after a careful and prayerful consideration may be thought to have merit in them will be presented to the executive officers of the General Sunday School Association, with such conclusions as we may decide wise to give.

Hoping that all who have an interest in the improvement of this department of church work will give us such help by suggestions, or legitimate criticisms as they can. Here is a chance to satisfy the disposition to criticise legitimately exercised, which is to criticise for the object of improvement.

With a desire to see the work we have been specially appointed to serve hastily perfected we are

KAITANGATA, OTAGA,

New Zealand, Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—We write to let you know we are still in the faith and working for the Master as much as we can while it is day, for the night comes on when no man can work, or the time will come that I will have to give account of myself when I stand at the judgment bar of God.

We have striven to let the people in Kaitangata see the gospel, but they seem to cling to their man-made systems, although they say we have more gospel truth than they have; but a prophet is a stumblingblock in the way. So I have gone to Milton, a town twenty miles north, and opened the work to them, and they have opened their houses to me; praise God for his mercies to us in working on the hearts of the people to entertain his servant.

The people were quite astonished at the doctrine. Milton is a place where the Salt Lake people have been and made some converts to their faith; but they have no people there now. They sent them off to Salt Lake. One, a school-teacher, came back. I told the people the difference and showed them that Brigham Young had fulfilled Jeremiah 17: 5, 6. I never had more liberty.

I can devote more of my time to the work now. I am situated to travel with drogue, so I can work more for the Master in preaching the gospel and delivering truth. I will send for more tracts. How I wish some of the elders would come here. We will make them welcome to our home. If I had help now we could make progress, but we will do all we can till help comes. May God bless you and all your coworkers, is my prayer.

In gospel bonds,

THOMAS DIXON.

DOW CITY, Iowa, Dec. 30.

Editors Herald:—The year 1898 is dying with a sunny face, as though it was passing into eternity with a clear conscience because of its duty having been well performed. It has been an important and eventful year in the history of our nation, as well as one of spiritual development and fair growth of the Church of Jesus Christ.

Our hearts should go out in gratitude to Him who has ruled and overruled for the good of both the nation and the church. However, the sun has not shone all the while; for fathers, brothers, and lovers have gone down during our recent war with Spain, to be seen by loved ones no more until they meet before the "great white throne;" and many others have returned debilitated or crippled for life. How many noble men have cheerfully responded to their country's call, have toiled, marched, suffered, and died with a sunny face for the good of others! We as a nation and as individuals should appreciate the sacrifices made for our good while we enjoy the blessing of freedom and partake of the bounties furnished by the Father in this much favored land of Joseph—our America.

Death has been among our friends both in and out of the church and the elders will miss those who have passed into eternity, among whom were Sr. Catharine Buttler and Mr. John Wallace. Their homes were resting places for the ministers of Christ, and their liberalities in a financial way will long be remembered by the writer and others. They will receive a reward, for they have administered to the brethren of Christ. There are others too, though not mentioned in this letter, who will never be forgotten while life and consciousness remain. How sad the thought that if it were not for the fact that we form new acquaintances and make new friends as we pass along through life, we would soon be left to mourn alone. But it is pleasing to know that our friends and brethren die with a clear conscience and a smiling face, with confidence in the justice of God.

The old year is gone with its joys and sorrows, pleasures and pains, meetings and partings, births and deaths. It is a good time to settle up old accounts and turn over a new leaf and commence anew. Has the writer always done right? Well, he has tried though he may have failed. Has he made mistakes? Perhaps so, though not intentionally, for it is human to err, while God only is good. Father, pity our weakness, forgive our sins, overlook our mistakes, and give us wisdom and grace that we may do better in the future than in the past. If brethren, sisters, friends, or enemies have seen mistakes and been offended, they will please forgive.

The writer has been greatly blessed during the year in his ministerial work, and has, as he verily believes, enjoyed much of the Spirit, though his trials in some ways have been severe. It has been a strange mingling of mental sunshine and storm, joy and heart-ache, hope and despair, with the abiding testimony that the work is of God and salvation sure to those who endure in faith to the end. The lessons thus learned have been beneficial and may bring forth fruit in due time; "Praise the Lord, O my soul."

We all have our likes and dislikes. We have been differently reared; our natures and temperaments differ and our abilities are not all the same, therefore we need to exercise charity one for another while we are striving to discharge our duties in the fear of God and to develop the true Christ character. When all can fully comply with the requirements of the gospel and the law of Christ, we will succeed better, for the Spirit will shed abroad in our hearts the love of God, and we can dwell in peace and labor in unison. Then will the church increase, and Zion put on her beautiful garments, and a people be prepared to meet the coming Lord and the redeemed of earth. Lord hasten that glorious day.

"Then let us be pure as the lilies,
And joyous and glad as the rose,
So when Jesus selecteth his jewels,
In Zion we'll find our repose."

The work in Galland's Grove district is in a fair condition at this writing, though in places there is still room for improvement. Missionaries and the local ministers are doing well, all things considered; and, as a rule, branch officers are striving to discharge their duties. On account of the limited ministerial force we have and the poor health of some of these ministers we have not been able to make new openings, though all have tried to the best of their ability to hold all we have gained as well as to feed and nourish the Church of God.

The saints of Dow City had a Christmas tree on the evening of the 24th inst. and the entertainment given in connection therewith was good. All seemed to be cheerful and happy.

Yours in Christ,
CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

CANTON POINT, Maine, Dec. 26.

Editors Herald.—Realizing that your space is crowded weekly by excellent matter, I refrain from burdening your columns more frequently with notes from our field of labor.

Leaving the conference of Western Maine district at Lamoin I proceeded to New York State, spending one day with saints in Boston. Conference at Lamoin was something of a venture, as the work is comparatively new there. At present there are only three families of saints, but there are a host of warm-hearted people who are very friendly and understand how to make the stay of the stranger who tarries within their gates an event never to be forgotten by him. Conference was well attended. Preaching by Joseph Luff, E. L. and T. C. Kelley, and we need not add it was of excellent order.

We tried to repress the falling tear while we gave the parting hand to Bro. U. W. Greene. I have been associated with him long and have loved him well. He will be missed in the Pine Tree State; yet God has not forgotten the work in Maine. As we listened to the stirring discourses of T. C. Kelley, his successor, we felt that God "doeth all things well." Bro. Kelley will find some thorns among the roses, but if the saints rally around the banner of duty, success surely awaits them.

Urgent requests from Palermo, New York, caused me to hasten on. I arrived there September 2 to take up the work begun by Bro. Sheehy. His departure for other fields would have been borne more patiently by his many friends there had his mantle fallen, more obviously, upon his successor in ministerial work. Yet, withal, we are amply satisfied and feel that "the lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places." I have yet to find better facilities for advancing our work than in Oswego County. At Palermo the work is permanently established and will form a nucleus for future operations in this section. Present need is for pastoral labor, which I shall give as much of as is consistent with the needs of other places. We have met well defined opposition from the very first, yet with no results other than to confirm the statement, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Rev. E. E. Phillips, of the Free Baptist persuasion, felt it his duty to tell the people some things about the work we were doing, so improved an opportunity offered him through courtesy, as a former pastor of the place, to address my congregation one

Sunday night, to abuse the people, and in closing gave me a recommendation to which I can refer if ever I am in need of a favor from Satanic headquarters. He agreed to be present when I replied to his statements and later to debate church propositions, both of which he failed in doing. I was made to see how easily God can cause the wrath of man to work out his purpose. He did us more good by his effort to injure than I could have done in ten days' preaching.

It is a custom with some to extol the virtue of those whom they meet in ministerial work. This I cannot do; there are too many in Palermo and vicinity who are, in every respect, deserving of highest praise. "What can I say more beautiful than is?" I made my home at first with Mr. George Hills, later with G. D. Trimble, one of the stirring business men of Oswego County. My wants were all anticipated from the first. This is certainly appreciated by all missionaries. I made an opening at Seriba, a town nine miles from Palermo. Interest was excellent, if we can judge from the size of congregations. The saints of East Pharsalia have erected a neat little chapel, clear from debt and ready for dedication. We will attend to this, but have waited for some one to come who could by his presence lend dignity to the occasion and prestige to the work.

Those desiring labor in their location address me at Palermo, New York.

Yours in the service,
W. W. BLANCHARD.

ANTWERP, Ohio, Dec. 28.

Editors Herald.—I am still striving to live a consistent Latter Day Saint. And why should I not? I joined the church September 1, 1884, being baptized by Bro. Wm. H. Kelley, at Clear Lake, Indiana. Having been directed there by Ye Editor, some time previous to that time, with the instruction that I would find the saints at that place good people, which statement I have proven to my entire satisfaction, having visited them a number of times since that time; also at Coldwater, Michigan, with same results. My association with them has been pleasant, peaceful, and encouraging, and I have felt many times that I would like to live near them; but it seems to have been ordered differently.

The few saints left here are quite scattered, so that we have had no meetings as a branch for several years; and some seem to have lost all interest. Both churches and schoolhouses are closed against us in this immediate vicinity. We have been visited since Bro. W. H. Kelley preached here in September, 1884, by Columbus and Leonard Scott, Morris T. Short, Isaac Smith, G. H. Hilliard, Father Hiram Rathbun, Sr., and last but not least, G. A. Smith, whom we called here last month on account of sickness of our daughter, Mrs. Allshouse, who is yet ailing and for whom we would ask especial prayers, that if it be the Lord's will she may be healed. All the above-named brethren showed themselves workmen of whom we need not be ashamed.

Bro. Wm. H. Kelley will remember perhaps of making a prediction at the time he baptized me that I could not get either the United Brethren or M. E. church for him to preach in; also that he knew my neighbors better than I did. One of those churches is just one mile each way from my house and I had contributed as liberally as I felt able towards building both, and had been a member of the United Brethren for some years previous. I surely thought I would have no trouble in getting either or both if we should choose; but Bro. Kelley said, "No; you will not get either." Just imagine, if you can, my surprise when one after another of the trustees of those churches said, "No; No, No!" Finally one of them said, "I guess you can have the schoolhouse; you are one of the directors yourself, and I am one;" so Bro. Kelley occupied the schoolhouse for three nights with splendid discourses, which I shall never forget; also two nights in the hall at the town of Antwerp.

When Bro. Kelley left here and after I had remarked that I should be all the Latter Day Saint in the county, that there might be some living quite near, sure enough, before three months I found an old-time saint, Father John Keesler, who was baptized in 1831, who requested that I send obituary to the Herald when he died, and say that he died in the faith. He thought there might be some in the church who would remember him. I believe he claimed relationship with some of the Parsons'. Wishing you a happy new year, and ever praying for the good of Zion, and that I may ever be faithful to the end,

JOHN EETER.

WEST SURRY, Maine, Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—It may be that a word from "down east" might interest some of your readers. We are striving to achieve some good in building up the work of the Master in these parts, and hope to have a showing of good fruit, in the day of reckoning for our labor.

The visit to the field, by President A. H. Smith and Bishop Kelley, in September last, was of practical benefit to the work, as was also a visit by Bro. Joseph Luff at the same time, and also one by him during the present month. All these visits, however, were too short to accomplish the amount of good that a longer stay would have done. Bro. Luff left on the 16th and started for Boston, after preaching some excellent sermons which were very much needed and very much appreciated, so far as I could learn, by all who heard him. To take him by the hand and say "Good-bye" was like parting from a brother indeed. May God richly bless him wherever he goes.

The conference of the Western Maine district was held Saturday and Sunday the 26th and 27th of November. Everything was peaceful on Saturday, but on Sunday morning there was a storm raging, which for destructiveness on the waters and along the coast of New England has not been equalled, so says report, in all the past history of the country. It seems that the time has come when "no flesh shall be safe upon the waters," and things don't seem to be any too safe on land. The business of the conference was of the routine order only, and notwithstanding the storm of wind and snow on Sunday, a faithful few attended all the services, and in the afternoon and evening more were in attendance than the writer expected. Elder S. G. Cunningham, who has been faithfully serving as district president for some time past, was still sustained in his office, and Elder John Billings was elected vice president. I have faith that both these brethren will be blessed and that their ministrations will bless others also, if they faithfully discharge the duties by them assumed. So may it be. Bro. Ralph Farrel was reelected as district clerk.

Besides furnishing me with a good home and kind entertainment, the saints and friends of Stonington and other places on "Deer Island," including one brother who lives on "the main," without letting their right hand know what their left hand was about, slipped that left hand into their pockets, yes into their wallets, and took therefrom enough to buy a nice suit of clothes, and sent the same to me at Jonesport a short time after I reached said port. I should like to mention the donors by name, but there are so many of them I fear it would be an encroachment on your space; and I believe it was done for the hope of a better reward than personal mention in this way. May God reward each one, is my prayer.

Nor is this the only place where saints and friends have assisted with their means; all through the two districts, in Maine I have found kindhearted saints, who by their kindness in ministering to the needs of the missionary have made me think often of the statement: "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money."

At Bray's Mountain, Little Deer Isle, West Surry, West Ellsworth, Corea, South Gouldsboro, Lamoine, South Addison, Jonesboro, Beal's Island, Indian River, and last but not least, Jonesport, kindnesses have been received which places the writer under obligations which he cannot soon forget. God bless them all, is my prayer.

I cannot refrain from mentioning Sr. Lois Mansfield of Jonesport, who, besides making provision for several of my wants in other ways, on three separate occasions, for days at a time, gave me a good home and motherly care at the "Moosabec House," of which she is proprietress. Sr. Mansfield is nearing the fourscore mark, and yet she is "smart," (that is the Yankee way of saying that a person is well, or in good health,) and except for rheumatic troubles would be as active as the average woman of forty-five. The "Moosabec" is a popular house with the traveling public, and no wonder; such nice, substantial meals as are served on her table could not fail to be an advertisement that would "draw."

On the 4th day of the present month Sr. Lucy Norton completed her twenty-first year of service in this far-famed house, and still she holds her place. That shows that both Sr. Mansfield and Sr. Norton know a good thing when they try it.

On the 23d inst. I ordained Brn. Leeman Woodward and John Richardson to the office of priest; this by the counsel and direction of Bro. Joseph Luff. Bro. S. O. Foss assisted in the ordinations. Bro. Woodward was chosen as the presiding priest of the Jonesport branch, and Bro. Richardson was chosen as the branch deacon, there being no acting deacon in the branch, Bro. J. J. McKeowen having resigned and moved to Bar Harbor, forty miles away, and Bro. C. H. Hinkley being confined to the house with rheumatism. I am informed that each of these brethren has done faithful labor in the past. Bro. Hinkley's condition is a trying one indeed, especially for a man full of life as he naturally is. He was quite a help in other ways, as the Bishop's agent's book shows.

The branch at Jonesport now has a full complement of officers, and if jealousy, fault-finding, and strife will now cease ("whoso readeth let him understand"), and if all the officers are honored, each in his place, by the members, and if all of the rights of the members are recognized, and accorded to them by the officers, there will soon be seen a change in the condition of affairs there that will be gratifying indeed.

I expect to leave the first of the new year for Canton Point, Oxford County, Maine, which will be my address for a few weeks. All are invited to report to me there, anything in regard to the work in Maine. Specially would I like to know of any favorable opportunity to open up the work in new fields.

With Bro. U. M. Kelley presiding over the Eastern and Bro. S. G. Cunningham over the Western district, I feel that the work, so far as they can reach it, is in safe hands, and I wish now to give outside places a show. So please write me of any opportunities of which you may know.

In bonds,

T. C. KELLEY.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Oct. 29.

Editors Herald:—This Saturday evening is cool and pleasant, and finds us both in excellent health and good spirits. Joseph is sitting by his writing table, in white pants and shirt sleeves, preparing his Sunday discourse. To preach in this language requires more preparation and forethought than in his own language, seeing each discourse calls for a different line of thought and words, and he must find the Tahitian words to express them in. He has been leading this people out into pretty deep waters of late, but they seem to enjoy it. There are some pretty good preachers here; so says he who is called the Orometua.

It will be seen by the above date that we did not get off to Anaa when we expected to; were detained on account of the steamer having to go on the dry dock and undergo other repairs. She is now advertised to leave on the 9th of November, thus giving time to receive one more mail before we leave. Those mail periods are looked forward to with eager anticipation. Occasionally we experience a feeling of disappointment or dissatisfaction; do not know whether the fault is with ourselves in not being in harmony with certain elements that predominate, or whether in the element itself. But it was not so with the last mail (that of August); we enjoyed it very much. Bro. Williams made a remark in his letter, written in San Bernardino, August 9, that enlisted my curiosity—or rather interest, to hear more on the subject—of Nahum's Chariot. Is there something else, or has there ever been, that answers more completely to the prophet's description of what is generally believed to be the cars? If so, what is it? Won't you please write it up for the Herald, Bro. Williams? Preaching it will not do us scattered ones any good, and I for one am interested.

I am pleased to see of late, a more befitting tone in the Herald letters. Much good, I believe, has been obscured by the mantle of levity, embracing an overabundance of irrelevant metaphors being cast about circumstances and experiences in the gospel work, where levity was out of harmony with the dignity and importance of the subject. But we trust such has run its course and that the future will be marked by a more spiritual tenor, when treating of spiritual things. The dealings of God with his people are always interesting. Incidents of that nature woven in with labor performed in his service make letters both interesting and beneficial. There are always new members in the church who have those things to learn, and always older ones who have need to be put in remembrance of what they already know. Both classes look to the ministry, outside the pulpit as well as in, to instruct them in righteousness; and I have often thought if more would keep in mind—while writing—the many scattered ones who are hungering for spiritual food, and who have not church privileges, thoughts and principles would be expressed that would be food for the mind. I believe the Spirit of the Lord would not fail to prompt the things that are most needed, if those gentle promptings were always heeded.

It is a good work to make clear and plain the highway of spiritual life. Strong ones may pass steadily along over the natural obstructions in this highway; but those obstructions cause many an inexperienced one to stumble, or stay their progress for a time.

I think Bro. Barmore's letter in Herald, June 15, will be gladly received by many, because of the manner in which he explains the nonfulfillment of prophecy. I was edified by its calling to mind what I already knew. Doubtless there have been many blessings promised by the Spirit of the Lord that are never realized. God gave his Son to be the Savior of the world, but it is those who believe, obey, and endure to the end, who are saved; and I have no doubt other blessings are given on the same principle.

I know of a sister who has been promised a very great blessing, which blessing has been reiterated many times, and by different ones. One elder while in vision, saw her ascend a hill, enter the temple of God, as it appeared to him, and lay a gift on the altar—her all—and receive the blessing. That probably was the conditions under which she should receive that blessing. But she has not had courage to lay all on the altar yet, neither has she received the blessing.

Doubtless many genuine manifestations of the Spirit have been accounted spurious because of lack of knowledge of the attending circumstances under which promises made could be received. And again, prophecies relating to individuals, or otherwise may be misunderstood. Some years ago Elder Mills was speaking in prophecy to the writer concerning her future work with the "dark-skinned sisters of other nations," and said: "And thou shalt speak ["speak" is as I remembered it; another has rendered it "converse"] to them in their own language without having to learn it." He did not say it would be by the power of the Spirit; but I for one, and I think I can speak for all that heard, believed when that saying was fulfilled it would be by the gift and power of the Holy Spirit. No other way ever occurred to my mind until night before last while thinking on this same subject of which I am writing, and this instance came to my mind. I took into consideration the instance of speaking briefly in a testimony meeting by the aid of the Spirit; but I had learned previously the words that were used, though the Spirit brought them to my remembrance readily, and by its aid formed the sentences correctly, which I cannot do of myself. Still I concluded it could not be accepted as a fulfillment, for I did not speak especially to the sisters; and was about crossing over into dreamlands, carrying in my thought, "I wonder when it will be fulfilled?" when an inward voice worded itself in this wise: "You have already spoken to them several times in their own language through the Orometua." It was so distinct and such a surprise that all drowsiness fled and I was wide-awake for hours. It was true I did not have to learn what I wished to say to them. I wrote it in my own language and sent it to the translator; but when it went to the sisters it was in their language. This facility did not exist in this mission when the prophecy was given. Is it the fulfillment?

Again, I call to mind an instance of this nature that occurred in the "Newport branch" many years ago. Elders Burton and R. R. Dana were on the eve of going to Santa Barbara County in the interest of the gospel work. In a prayer meeting held the evening before they started—and a most excellent meeting it was—Elder Burton speaking by the inspiration of the Spirit uttered a prophecy, the leading features of which were as follows: Two would go out from that branch on a mission; they would go north, and during their mission four branches would be built up and one reestablished. All present thought it pertained to those two who were going to start off on the morrow, their course being north, and were greatly rejoiced because of the good work that was to be done.

It was while Mr. Burton was away on that trip that Dora was hurt by the roller, and because of that prophecy, and because I thought the powers of darkness had combined to thwart the work by bringing about an excuse for their speedy return, that I did not send for him to come home. But he came home reporting that the interest was not nearly so good as while on a former trip; none had been baptized, let alone branches built up. Not long afterward two others went preaching in a northerly direction and we thought perhaps they were the ones, but they had no better success than the former. Of course we as a branch were disappointed; but the rapid succession of events in their onward march caused the mind to turn to other things. It was not forgotten, but simply let alone as being among the things that we could not account for; saying if that was not spoken by the Spirit of the Lord we would never know what was. When we had been in Australia near three years, making between ten and eleven years after the prophecy had been uttered, Joseph received a letter from a brother in the which he referred to the above, saying in an off-hand, bantering style: "That was a mistake sure! and now what are you going to do with it?" The brother being an intimate friend and one who had regarded us in the light of foster parents, I too wrote him in answer to his letter. When I essayed to reply in regard to the prophecy I had more to write than I had anticipated; at least I was able to state that two had gone from that branch, if the writer could be counted as one, and gone north as far as San Francisco, and out on the sea on a mission, and during that mission four branches had been built up, the Hastings, Forster, Hamilton, and Geelong, and one reestablished—reorganized. Two others had received help and new members, but they were already branches. And I could see how shortsighted former construction had been in that it did not need the Spirit of prophecy to tell of what was already planned for; and further, that that trip was not going on a mission, but simply laboring in their already appointed field. Yet it may be that both of these prophecies, with many others, are still misunderstood. The people of God in all ages of the world have misunderstood prophecies.

The good work out here is moving slowly onward. The business world is at a standstill, no money, no shell, and very little bufo. A large portion of the merchants have discharged their clerks, and the Governor has done likewise, all to save expense.

A most shocking deed was perpetrated last night; a sepulcher containing the remains of the wife and two or three children of a merchant, Mr. Rowal, was broken into. The casket containing the wife which was under ground, was dug up and broken into, also those of the children which were on shelves in the sides of the sepulcher, and their bones scattered around. A gold necklace and band around the wrist were stolen. It is supposed to have been the Chinamen. Natives would not do such a thing, nor is it presumable that there are any white people here who would. Crimes of robbery or murder are very seldom heard of out here; one only of the kind since we came.

Preparations for Sunday school exercises at conference time are moving along nicely.

All are very much pleased with their lesson books.

Sunday evening, November 6.—I must add a few words to let you all know that we have had an unusually good day to-day. The two preaching services were good. I infer by the countenances of the saints that the ten o'clock service was very good. Representatives were present from several islands. Our Sunday school was interesting; it was review day. The review comes on the first Sunday of each month, which is also sacrament day. After Sunday school, which is held at the close of the ten o'clock meeting, all repaired to the beautiful placid ocean and Elder Burton led two into the waters of baptism, an old man, Apai's father, and a young boy, big Pai's boy. This afternoon was sacrament, confirmation, and testimony meeting; an unusually lively meeting—eighteen testimonies, three prayers, and some singing. Last Friday evening also was an unusually good meeting, the gift of tongues manifest.

No mail yet.

Hopefully,

SISTER BURTON.

HONOLULU, H. I., Dec. 19.

Editors Herald:—In October I bade farewell to loved ones at home and the friends among whom I had labored for years and started on my long journey across the continent to the "Paradise of the Pacific." Relatives, many of whom I had not seen for years, were visited in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. I also spoke at saints' meetings in Boston, Plainville, Attleboro, and Providence. The word of the Lord spoken to me while in the Massachusetts district was very comforting. With renewed courage I continued my journey on the 26th, accompanied by Bro. A. H. Smith as far as Chicago, joining the "Phillips-Judson excursion" there. I found a jolly crowd who helped while away the otherwise tedious hours.

At Independence the familiar faces of Bro. J. A. Robinson and family, including the darling babies. Knowing my weakness for good things to eat they provided enough to last to the coast; it was doubly appreciated when I discovered prices among the mountains.

On leaving Pueblo, Colorado, we encountered the beautiful scenery of the Rockies: Royal Gorge, Castle Gate, Cape Horn in California, were the most noticeable. Words are inadequate to describe them. In Leadville, made famous in boyhood stories as the resort of gamblers and general toughs, the ground was enveloped in a snowy mantle; we stretched our weary limbs and indulged in snowballing, until weak and light-headed in the rarefied air, at an elevation of 10,200 feet. The beautiful timbered mountains of California were a relief after crossing the desert of Nevada.

'Twas midnight when we landed in San Francisco and clasped the hand of Bro. F. M. Sheehy. Enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Anthony while in the city. A visit to the "Presidio" with Brn. F. M. Sheehy and James Kelley was enjoyed. Dress parade, inspection of camp, witnessing departure of U. S. Transport "Philadelphia;" "Sutro baths," Park, Zoo, Chinatown, and election, together with church duties, served to keep the time well employed. I met Bro. Chace in San Francisco, formerly of Eastern Maine. He is now rejoicing in the gospel light. It was indeed a pleasure.

Arrangements completed, the 10th ultimo found me on steamer "Rio de Janeiro." I draw a mantle over this trip: that experience must never be published. With the aid of doctor, stewardess, and saloonsman, I lived and reached the shore. My constant prayer is, that aerial navigation will be a success when I return.

Am agreeably surprised in Honolulu. Beautiful for situation, climate perfect, city modernized and up to date, the ideal spot for a home if you have plenty of money. Better not come here without. Bro. Waller is a thorough saint, ably assisted by Bro. Ingham. Hall for meetings centrally located.

Have no great report to make; we are doing all we can to become acquainted with the needs of the mission, and shall try hard to write success upon our efforts. Last Sunday evening several Utah people were present. One of their missionaries promised the information Bro. H. C. Smith sought to obtain from F. D. Richards, but in vain; that is, when, where, and by whom Young, Taylor, Woodruff, and Snow, were ordained Presidents of the High Priesthood. When furnished therewith will send it on, that all the world may know. He also said that an elder of this church "never was refused a church building to preach in, in Utah." Ye laborers there, how is that? He wants to discuss if consent of his missionary in charge can be obtained. Am not badly frightened at the prospect. The papers advertise our services nicely.

May blessings attend the Israel of God everywhere.

U. W. GREENE.

HOWELL, Mich., Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—Another year has rolled around with all its joy and sorrow, and Christmas has come and gone. I think Sr. Wilhelm and I can say what very few families are able to say; that for forty-four years not a Christmas has passed but that we have been together, and I hope that we may meet many more times on that day.

As I look back over the few years that are past, and remember the familiar faces of dear and loved relatives and very dear friends, whom we believed true and noble, who gathered with us at Christmas time, I wonder where they are to-day.

Many times has the family circle been broken by the angel of death, and we know that beloved ones are awaiting us on the other shore; but the dear loved friends, who made the Christmas so bright and happy, where are they? Are they walking in the by-paths of sin? If so, may Father help them to repent. My prayer shall be for God to bless and help them at all times to do right.

As I looked out on the bright Christmas morning and knew I was blessed with home and loved ones, my thoughts wandered to the poor, needy, and homeless ones, and how I wished I was rich in this world's goods that I might distribute it among them and make it a happy day for all, where all I could do was to ask Father to look down in pity and mercy upon them, and fill the hearts of those who have plenty with such a love for him that they would be willing to give to those who were in want, and brighten the hearts of little ones.

Praying for the welfare and upbuilding of Zion,

Your sister,

A. J. DALEY.

ROGERS, Texas, Jan. 1.

Editors Herald:—I would be glad if some of the elders would come this way, if convenient, and preach. It has been four years since I have heard any preaching. I will do all I can to get an audience. The elders could preach at my house. I am a renter, but I guess it would be all right with the landlord.

The Herald brings me such good news; it is a great help to us. I have been taking the Herald for about eight months.

Some think they charge too much for it, but I would not grumble if they charged five dollars for it. It is worth more than money to me. I think all the saints ought to be prompt in paying up their dues for the Herald, because it takes money to run the printing office. When I first subscribed for the Herald I had to ask the brethren to send it to me on time until I could get the money, and they were kind enough to do so; and I am very thankful for their kindness, and feel thankful to God that he has such people in the world; and I am going to try and keep it paid up if I have to sacrifice something else.

I am going to try to be more humble and serve God with all my might and strength, and I pray God to bless me in my effort; and I ask all the saints to pray for me and my family.

In gospel bonds,

W. A. HELMS.

MOSINEE, Wis., Dec. 31.

Editors Herald:—I am trying to learn to be a Christian, myself, and my husband too. We have a little family of four children, and are trying to learn to love the Lord and do his commandments. Pray for us that we may be faithful.

I wish the brothers and sisters of the church would help us in the line of prayer. We are out here all alone and none of our faith around us, and wish you all would help us gain our victory. I never have been baptized, nor my husband; but we lead the holy prayer in our home, and we know there will be a day prepared for us to be baptized. God knows our faith.

We are poor and we wish the brothers and sisters of the church would get together and send us a Bible and a hymn book, so we could learn the words of the Lord. My father was an old time saint; his name was Western Mosher, though he is dead and gone. God be with him. I remain,

A lover of the Lord,

MRS. IDA HURD.

Direct to Denis Hurd, Mosinee, Marathon County, Wisconsin.

COOK, La., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—I feel to praise the Lord that he has spared me to work in his vineyard. I have done all I could with what I had. I had some sermons and tracts; I have loaned them out to be read, this is three times this year, to people of influence. They like the sermons.

I loaned them to our Presbyterian preacher. He is very kind; said he and wife both read them and thought them splendid. This is seven times I am sure they have been read. I have loaned them until I have lost the better part; so they go as snowflakes.

Some four or five years ago the Herald was sent to me free, for which accept my many heartfelt thanks. I have thought oftentimes this year that I would ask the church to give me some of the church books and papers with which to work.

I have decided to ask the church, as it is my understanding that the church gives the gospel to the poor; so hoping you will not count me unworthy, I humbly ask you. I haven't any of the church works at all. I would be glad to get anything at all. I have been asked several times for my Mormon Bible. I showed them my Bible, but they said that was not it; so it is quite embarrassing to me to think I have nothing to work with.

I am the only one of our belief in this parish. The Utah elders tell me they have been throughout this parish. They say they are gaining friends and that prejudice is vanishing away. I close by asking you to pardon my begging letter. I could not stoop to ask for things of this world, for which I have no thirst, but for spiritual food my soul doth pant.

Your humble sister,

MRS. M. E. BUNYARD.

NORTH PLYMOUTH, Mass., Jan. 3.

Editors Herald:—I last wrote you from the vicinity of Greenville, Connecticut. I continued to labor in Connecticut until November 27, then went to Providence, stopping on the way at Danilson to see my sister and my nephew. The good people of the Congregational church where I was preaching in Connecticut remembered my temporal wants and kindly gave me thirteen dollars and fifty cents on leaving them. I trust their hearts were touched with the divine love.

Bro. Arthur Phillips and the writer tried to open the work in another place called Pachang, but the severe storm and other influences that came along just then prevented us from doing much. I have been laboring since then in Massachusetts and Rhode Island and at this writing I am at Plymouth. Bro. M. H. Bond is with me.

We came here to dedicate the new chapel the saints have just completed. It is a monument of faith in God, integrity of character, and pluck. The branch here numbers about thirty-two members, but, like most all branches, a comparative few carry the burdens. The church is practically paid for, as the small sum remaining is pledged by the saints. The working force here deserve great credit for their enterprise and some are worthy of special mention. Bro.

Ben Leland, a young man of promise, has worked long, faithfully, early, and late on the church building, and his handiwork is a credit to the town as well as to himself and the church. All this work has been given freely. Bro. Nickerson, seconded by his excellent wife and interesting family, has worked nobly for the enterprise. Brn. Peter Hanson and Henry Hemmerly have done exceedingly well in collecting money from friends of truth in the town. Many others we do not mention have also done their part toward helping along the work.

Sunday last, the day set apart for the dedication, the elements were a little contrary and a severe snowstorm was the order for the morning service, which was held in Bro. Nickerson's house, but about two o'clock the clouds dispersed and we had a good night, but very cold. The morning service was very spiritual. Bro. Bond spoke to us for a half hour, and the saints followed. The Holy Spirit was with us to a marked degree. We assembled at the chapel at 7:30 p. m. and although the audience was not as large as one might wish, all seemed interested. Sr. Addie Nickerson presided at the organ. Sr. Leland played the violin, and Bro. Leland on the cornet. An organ voluntary was given by Sr. Hemmerly. Bro. Bond read the Scriptures and offered the dedicatory prayer, which was full of life and good thought. The sermon was by the writer. We will be here for a few days or as interest may warrant us in staying.

I forgot to mention that a very neat and nice sounding church organ was presented to the church by the Sisters' Sewing Society.

In bonds,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

BEULAH, Fla., Jan. 2.

Editors Herald:—I have been busily engaged in the ministry, up to the Christmas holidays. I have preached in every house that I could get an audience, and I think that the work is progressing in this vicinity, and many set seriously to thinking, if not seeking the "straight" and "narrow" way.

The weather has been very unfavorable for travel, but I have kept to the front, and am encouraged to renew my efforts and continue the fight against wrong and evildoers.

Please continue to send the Herald, as I cannot afford to be without it, and I will send the money as soon as I get it. I have been abundantly blessed in my work, perhaps beyond my deserts, but nevertheless I am all alive to the work. I have often thought that I would signify my pleasure in reading the testimony of old veterans in the cause, that is frequently published in the Herald. There is nothing that gives me more pleasure than the perusal of such testimony. The testimony of the old veterans in this great work, and the evidence of the Spirit unto myself, make the testimony doubly prized.

There have been no traveling ministers in this part of the country since Bro. Tucker and I traveled together, except two of the Salt Lake people. I traveled with Bro. Tucker about one hundred days, and only separated from him on account of poverty, of which I was very sorry. I was only too sorry to hear of the bad treatment of Bro. Tucker, and hope he will be protected by the all-wise providence in the future as in the past, of which I have no doubt.

Yours in the faith,

JESSE REEDER, Sen.

THURMAN, Iowa, Jan. 3.

Editors Herald:—Our work is still on the move in this field. We have many calls for preaching, both by saints and friends and others. We are doing the best we can to accommodate all, and shall meet the requirements made on us as fast as possible; and we kindly ask all to be patient. Bro. I. M. Smith is in great demand. He is preaching all the time and doing good work; and we want him to do the best he can, and no more, for we hope he may live for many years to preach the word. The other brethren are walking right up to the mark, proclaiming the gospel in "power and in much assurance" "and in the Holy Ghost."

Our local brethren are always on the alert, watching for opportunities as they open up before them, in both of these districts, the Fremont and Pottawattamie, to present the word of life to the people in the different localities where they reside. "Honor to whom honor is due," is our motto. We have many good Godfearing men in this mission, presidents of branches and officers, who are doing what they can with alacrity to push on the work to victory; and the sisters are not one whit behind the "chief apostles" in their work of love for the Master's cause.

The sisters of the aid society in Shenandoah got up a social supper at the low rate of ten cents per head, and the leading business men with their families turned out and manifested their high esteem and best regards to them, thus enabling them to net over twenty-one dollars. I mention this just to show that those who live right and do the right are respected by God and man.

May God help all to let their light shine and their good deeds be manifest to the glory of God, is and shall be the prayer of,

Your humble servant for Christ's sake,

HENRY KEMP.

TREATMENT OF INEBRIATES IN GERMANY.

The sixth paragraph of the new code, which will come into operation in Germany in 1900, enacts compulsory treatment of habitual drunkards, involving their being placed under a curator, who will be empowered to put the individual anywhere for treatment until discharged from curatorship by the court. The exact description is, "He who, in consequence of inebriety, cannot provide for his affairs, or brings himself or his family into the danger of need or endangers the safety of others." This measure was first advocated in 1863 at a meeting at Hanover.—British Medical Journal.

It is said that the amended penal code for Japan does not contain any reference to the death penalty, which means that capital punishment is to be abolished at the same time as ex-territoriality.

Original Articles.

ARE THEY TRUTHFUL?

On every occasion in which I have held debate with ministers of the "Christian Church," they have always disavowed the use of any book as creed or guide in their worship, invariably stating: "We stand upon the Bible, and the Bible alone." This affirmation is usually made with much vehemence and seeming righteous indignation, so that many are led to believe that they, and they alone, are the custodians of the divinely appointed simplicity of the gospel.

Perhaps all your readers do not enjoy the opportunity to learn of the books in use by the said Christian Church as aids to their worship, I will therefore copy: "The Christian System. In reference to the Union of Christians, and a Restoration of Primitive Christianity, as Pleaded in the Current Reformation."

Without doubt this book was prepared and published to aid the membership in understanding the peculiar proclivity of their church polity. The book was written by their putative founder, Alexander Campbell.

They have next the Polymathis by N. E. Cory, which is "a work containing Essays on Pastoral Work, Scriptural Exegesis and Homilistics, with Briefs and Skeletons of Sermons by ministers of various religious bodies."

It would appear that they are both borrowing from and aping the older religious institution, and if they are not now the possessors of a creed, such an acquisition may be among the possibilities of the near future. J. H. Foy contributes the Christian Worker. "This is a Manual for Preachers and Church Officers, containing appropriate Scripture selections, Outlines of Sermons and Talks for all occasions, Forms and Ceremonies for Marriages, Baptisms, Ordinations, Dedications, Funerals, and other public occasions, and a complete summary of the Rules and Regulations Governing Deliberative Assemblies."

If they have no "creed," certainly they have in the foregoing an ample provision for what little church work they perform.

Next comes J. H. Garrison with his "Alone with God. A Manual of Devotions. Being a series of meditations and forms of prayer for private devotions, family worship and special occasions."

They have no "creed," but accepting their form of worship and using this "Manual" you may pray by NOTE. Let all the Christians (?) say, Hurrah for Garrison!

F. M. Green comes up to reinforce Mr. Garrison with his "Christian Minister's Manual. This Book is for the use of Church Officers in the various relations of Pastors, Bishops and Deacons."

Thus we have the whole work of the so-called Christian Church in a nutshell. They have no "creed." Ah me! a rose would smell as sweet by any other name.

To be equal with the Catholic John M. Heron writes up "The Pocket Manual. The writer's ready reference book for everyday use."

That is most handy, to have your religion in your pocket.

Another book is added by E. H. Kellar, bearing the title of: "Lessons in Soul Winning. With special reference to house-to-house visitations," with this catching "Motto: Fishers of Men."

As all these books are on sale by the "Christian Publishing Company," of St. Louis, Missouri, I suppose their authors to be ministers and members of the so-called Christian Church. It would seem to be about time for those who "stand upon the Bible and the Bible alone," to take in their sign and stop making wry faces at other honest and well meaning people.

On the lookout,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

CO-OPERATION.

As I peruse the different spicy articles written under the above caption by able scholars and profound Bible students, I am persuaded that the presumed possibility of such an organization within the pales of the church lingers only as a passing memory that is fast fading into the outlived and forgotten past, as the eve of an eventful possibility, that has merged into obscure night. Yea, and the morn of the day of its advent into actual, practical life, is dawning. The blazing sun of equal rights is casting a yellow gleam of golden light across the verdant plains from behind the low, gloomy horizon of individual wealth; and yet, as I look out upon this great, throbbing, pulsing world of humanity, and observe each man's mind following its own peculiar groove, and then open the Book of books and read there the "perfect law" of "life" I am wont to ask myself, Can the individuality of an indefinite number of men be grouped into the semblance of a single personality? And this "perfect law" within which is couched every principle of our faith, can it be improved upon? Much has been written favoring coöperation or socialism, but very little of the converse. Permit me, then, to very briefly express my views upon this very important topic.

Please do not misunderstand me, and think that I can find no principles in the coöperative plan, or motives within the minds of its promoters worthy of praise or emulation; for I believe the true and desired object is to solve the great problem of how to place every man upon a graduated financial basis, and make it possible for every child alike to acquire a wealth of knowledge, extending from the kindergarten to the classics. And, the zealous efforts of our brethren to further so noble a cause, cannot but awaken the admiration, and provoke the praise and commendation of all. For socialism, pure and simple, is the great common plain upon which God would that his people should stand. But your writer is pained to believe that it has become necessary for saints to place themselves under compact or mutual agreement, or, as it were, bond their brotherly-kindness that they might observe their Master's commandments, "For who maketh thee to differ one from another?" 1 Cor. 4: 7.

We are especially enjoined by our Lord to aid those who are in adverse circumstances; to at once relieve temporal and mental grievances, with an open purse and an open heart;—in short, to love our neighbor as ourselves. Thus it becomes us as true followers of our Lord and Savior, to heed this admonition, and when the time shall come that every saint who has been richly blessed with an abundance of this world's goods, even the luxuries of life, shall consider himself a miniature coöperative institution, and seeking out his brother, who, less fortunate than himself, is bravely struggling against the many odds and disadvantages of poverty, and furnish him, even though it be the bare comforts of life. Then the church shall have become an extensive social or coöperative body, with representatives in every land kissed by the mellow rays of heaven's brilliant orb.

Paul enjoins us to "follow after charity," and declares it to be the greatest of the three abiding principles. Peter reassures us by announcing it to be the last, hence the most important (for as we add one to another, we become more perfect) of the several graces, that by "giving all diligence" we add to our faith as we approach a higher plane of moral and spiritual existence. Then if we have not added to our faith and do not practice charity, we certainly cannot expect to acquire the highest degree of perfection that may otherwise be attained by a strict adherence to the divine commands. And to successfully accomplish this, we must necessarily forget self, and strive to please and assist others so long as the pleasure of the brother and the assistance rendered admits of a righteous purpose. Then, at the day of reckoning it will be said of such an one,

For I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me.—Matt. 25: 35, 36.

Saints, let us awaken to the sound of duty's command and redeem ourselves from this selfish condition into which we have so thoughtlessly ventured, and, heeding the Savior's command,

Take heed that you do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 6: 1.

But with a love one for another, born of a Christlike spirit, and with a desire to alleviate afflicted and suffering humanity, dispense the surplus of our possessions among the worthy poor. Then, too, to amass a large fortune is decidedly contrary to divine teaching of our Master. To accumulate a fortune may not necessarily be dishonorable, but to retain it, with the condition of others demanding assistance, is at once dishonorable and unchristlike; for, said he,

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . . for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.—Matt. 6: 19-21.

Then let us lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, for we could not expect to possess the earth while it is divided into kingdoms and republics; and though we should, what would it profit us? But if during this probationary existence we cultivate meekness and peace, when this mundane sphere shall have been purified by fire, and the one kingdom overruled by the one King, even the King of kings, we shall be called "the children of God," and "shall inherit the earth."

Your brother, in the hope of eternal life,

F. E. TAYLOR.

Selected Poetry.

NOT UNDERSTOOD.

Not understood; we move along asunder;

Our paths grow wider as the seasons creep,
Along the years, we marvel and we wonder
Why life is life and then we fall asleep,
Not understood.

Not understood; we gather false impressions
And hug them closer as the years go by.
Till virtues often seem to us transgressions.
And thus men rise and fall, and live and die,
Not understood.

Not understood, poor souls with stunted vision,
Oft measure giants by their narrow gauge.
'The poisoned shafts of falsehood and derision Art oft impelled 'gainst those who mold the age,
Not understood.

Not understood; how many hearts are aching
For lack of sympathy; ah, day by day,
How many cheerless, lonely hearts are breaking,
How many noble spirits pass away,
Not understood.

O God, that men would see a little clearer,
Or judge less harshly when they cannot see;
O God, that men would draw a little nearer
To one another, and be nearer thee,
And understood.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN INDIANA.

Conference convened with Byrnsville branch, December 17, 1898; Apostle E. C. Briggs presided, assisted by W. C. Marshall; John T. Scott secretary, assisted by G. Jenkins. Statistical reports received from West Fork, Union, Plainville, Leavenworth, Eden, Byrnsville, and Rego branches. Elders reporting;

G. Jenkins, M. R. Scott, Jr., W. H. Kelley, W. C. Marshall, M. R. Scott, Sen.; Priest J. T. Scott. Bishop's agent, W. C. Marshall, reported: On hand January 1, '98, $36.70, received since $182.30, total expenditures $210.80, due church, December 16, '98, $8.20. A resolution from Byrnsville branch recommending James P. Sappenfield to be ordained to the office of an elder, referred to missionary in charge. An epistle from E. L. Kelley read. Motion carried that said epistle be spread with minutes of conference. "I present this epistle of Bishop E. L. Kelley to the conference, as the utterance of one who has the gifts and calling of a judge in Israel to instruct the saints, and one who does know the spirit and genius of the Reorganization; and it breathes the true spirit that has prompted it from its inception until now. And I recommend it to all saints for their careful reading and study and ask that it may be published with the minutes of this conference.—E. C. Briggs, Byrnsville, Indiana, December 17, 1898."

"To President E. C. Briggs, and the saints of the Southern Indiana district; Dear Brethren:—I had fully expected to have had the pleasure of meeting with you during your conference, which I believe convenes the 17th inst.; but church business matters which I am compelled to look after forbid an extended trip at this time, and it seems to me to be wholly unwise to expend the money to reach your conference when I must immediately return. Under these circumstances I beg of you to excuse my failure of attendance and I assure you that when it shall be possible for me to make a trip into your district and visit the branches of the church, I shall be glad to do so. To my mind there has never been a time in our work when so much may be accomplished in the interest of the cause of truth as now, and it becomes each and every one, wherever he may be, to make the gospel work his own, so that we may as live members present a united and faithful people in opposition to the wickedness and infidelity of the age. I am also constrained to urge upon all the thought that our warfare should be directed against the enemy of the truth, not against each other. In the work of the Lord there is no room for jealousies, bickerings, or animosity, but a demand for everything that tends to the purifying and upholding of the cause of Christ. Minister and laymen should work in harmony and to one purpose, and sustain and maintain those who are striving to overcome the evil and wrest the church from the odium and disgrace often brought about by the evil and corrupt practices of faithless men.

The work demanded at our hands in aid of the cause financially is just as necessary, and when properly fulfilled, just as pleasing to the Master as any other part of gospel requirements; and instead of seeking excuses for nonfulfillment of duty in this, we ought to study and pray for the Lord to help us perform our whole duty so well that, whatever the sacrifices, we shall be able to affirm, as did Jesus when referring to this great work of sacrifice and love, I do always those things which please him [the Father]. Whatever may be said by those disposed to murmur or grumble to the contrary, it is a fact that the Reorganized Church is performing more and better work to-day than it has done in the past and its work in all lines betokens final success; but it must not be forgotten that the enemy is also on the alert and making all possible efforts to weaken and destroy. Let us then stand in "holy places" and trust confidently in the Lord, and prove ourselves truly heroes and heroines in the conflict for the truth, and let not the vile work of accusation or slander, nor the weakness or follies of men separate from the discharge of a single duty under the law, nor from the love of Christ. Bespeaking for you all a pleasant and profitable gathering, and in your labors the peace and blessing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, I am faithfully, in bonds yours, E. L. KELLEY.

William H. Kelley was chosen president, John T. Scott clerk. Preaching by E. C. Briggs and W. C. Marshall. Adjourned to Leavenworth, Crawford County, Indiana, light of moon in June, 1899.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference at Jonesport, December 3; Joseph Luff chosen to preside, A. S. Kelley clerk. Elders reporting: T. C. Kelley, S. O. Foss, E. C. Foss, U. M. Kelley; Priest J. N. Ames. Committee on district tent report accepted and committee continued. Agent for tract fund reported things remaining as at last report. Bishop's agent's report read and referred to auditing committee and found correct. U. M. Kelley sustained as district president, A. S. Kelley as clerk. T. C. Kelley to be our representative at the General Conference in the spring, if a conference is called. Preaching by Joseph Luff and T. C. Kelley was excellent, and we are led to wonder why cannot people understand when things are made so plain that a wayfaring man need not err. Adjourned to call of district president as to time and place.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Conference at Garden Grove, October 21; A. Carmichael president, D. L. Harris assisting; C. E. Crumley and J. Morris clerks. Elders reporting: A. Carmichael, R. R. Dana, W. P. Pickering, D. L. Harris, N. Van Fleet, C. W. Earle, A. E. Jones, J. Morris, C. E. Crumley. Priest N. J. Wixom reported; Teachers: S. Penfold and Jephtha Scott; Deacon G. W. Clark. Bishop's agent, C. Baly, reported and report referred to auditing committee. Committee's report showed receipts $1,380.42; expenditures $1,321.70; balance due church $58.72. Branch reports were received from San Bernardino, Los Angeles, and Newport; Santa Maria not reporting in time for conference. Number in three branches 745. Baptisms reported 19. Officers elected were: A. Carmichael president, N. Van Fleet assistant, C. E. Crumley secretary and treasurer. Secretary W. P. Pickering having left the State, resigned. A vote of thanks for very faithful service was tendered him. It was decided that hereafter the district conferences would be conducted under the delegate system, the details of which were considered. The event of the day, Sunday, was the dedication of the saints' church house at Garden Grove. Service was in charge of Elders D. L. Harris, A. Carmichael, and T. W. Williams. T. W. Williams preached the sermon and A. Carmichael offered the dedicatory prayer. The house was full to overflowing, and peace and satisfaction, which the Spirit brings, seemed to fill the place. Thus entered into the service of truth another house which saints can call their own, and where prejudice shall not reign. This house was built by the extraordinary zeal and willing sacrifice, both in money and labor, of as true-hearted saints as can be found on God's footstool—even though they do live in sun-baked California, where they are praying for rain. We have much to be thankful for, in that blizzards never come our way, and we can listen to the song-birds among the orange blossoms. The preaching of conference was by Elders Harris and Williams, to the edification of all. San Bernardino was chosen as the place for conference of 1899.

Miscellaneous Department.

NOTICES.

To the Saints in the Northern Nebraska District; Greeting:—

We need money! and take this method of appealing to you, as a coworker, for financial help to run the tent the coming summer.

It is best to get ready now, so we can start the tent as early in the spring as the season will permit, and keep it in continuous use all summer; we were sorely crippled the past season by lack of means to move the tent as we desired, and urge upon your attention that such a condition is not a creditable detriment to the work.

The northern and western parts of our district is in need of more work than has been bestowed upon them, and our desire is to introduce the gospel to those who have never heard it. You who have rejoiced to hear the glad tidings, good news of salvation, manifest your joy by helping it to others who are in the midst of doubt and unbelief.

You who testify of your love for God's work and humanity, manifest that love by helping us in a practical way, as servants of God, to get this glorious light to those who sit in the shadow of darkness.

You who pray for the honest in heart, and to send more laborers into the field, evidence the sincerity of your prayers by sacrificing of your means to loosen the hands of those who are in the field, and then will your rejoicings, and your testimonies, and your prayers, mingled with works that agree, come up into the ears of the God we love and serve, as a sweet savor and a pleasing sacrifice to him.

Then let us be workers together; you who labor in temporal things, sacrifice of your means; and the servants of God, who labor in spiritual things, their time, homes, and life; and in fervent prayer, without envy, malice, hatred, or strife, forward the work with all our might. Will you help us? Do not think your help will be too small; a small amount from each member in the district will run the tent all summer, and we do not believe there is one but what can do a little. Then Come all ye that love the Lord,

Let us sound his praise abroad.

Let us get down to work and make this district one in which the gospel is known everywhere, and our next year's work may be one we can point to with pride and joy, being filled with "sheaves of good, gathered from the field of sin." You know God has said we should have joy with one soul saved; let us have more than one; we have the tent, will you help us to use it successfully?

Don't treat this lightly or heedlessly, but send in your mites; and may the peace of our Lord and Master Jesus Christ be with you, and his Holy Spirit guide you into all truth and bless you with an everlasting reward in his glorious celestial kingdom, is the prayer of your brethren and coworkers in the gospel.

Make money orders payable to Nelson Brown, Waterloo, Nebraska. We suggest that when possible several offerings be put together and sent by postal order, being sure to send the names of all giving, with the amount of each.

LILLEY.—At Independence, Missouri, May 28, 1898, the adopted son of Bro. Thomas and Sr. Caroline Lilley. Blessed at Higbee, Missouri, January 1, 1899, by Elders Robert M. Elvin and Richard R. Jones, and named Joseph Luff.

ARCHIBALD.—St. Joseph, Missouri, November 5, 1898, to Bro. Coventry and Sr. Charlotte Archibald, a son, named Coventry Burlington. Blessed December 25, by Elders Russell Archibald, Sen., and William Lawrenson.

SMITH.—At Lamoni, Iowa, 9:45 p. m. December 26, 1898, to Pres. Joseph and Sister Ada Rachel Smith, a son, who will be known as Richard Clark Smith. Under the skillful watchcare of Sr. Dr. Bertha A. Greer, of Lamoni, and nurse Sr. Jane Baldwin, mother and son are doing well.

DIED.

TRIMBY.—At 350 Everett Avenue, Scranton, Pennsylvania, December 16, 1898, Bro. Edwin Trimby, from an accident received when following his daily occupation. Deceased was born in Somersetshire, England, and was 64 years of age. Funeral in charge of Elder A. N. Bishop.

SMITH.—At New Bedford, Massachusetts, December 23, 1898, of ailments entailed by la grippe, Sr. Mary A., wife of Elder John Smith. Deceased was born in Stockport, England, July 30, 1841, and united with the old church in her childhood. About the year 1859 she came to America, and on July 1, 1865, was married to John Smith, at Fall River, Massachusetts. She was one of the first to accept the message of the Reorganization in New England, and was baptized December 2, 1865, by Elder James W. Gillen and enrolled as one of the original members at the organization in Fall River. During the thirty-three years that have passed since then, she has held to her faith unwaveringly, and all who became acquainted with her became also acquainted with her religious location. She was a member and active worker in the Relief Corps of the G. A. R., composed of the wives of veterans, and at the funeral which was held at the residence on Tuesday the 27th inst., a delegation therefrom attended and conducted an appropriate service as they stood around the casket. At the conclusion of their service Elder Richard Bullard, of Boston, took charge of the exercises in behalf of the family and the church, offering an earnest prayer, which was both touching and tender. A quartet composed of Srs. Linney and Ashton, of Fall River, and two gentlemen who were not members of the church, sang three selections from the church hymn book. The sermon was preached by Elder Joseph Luff. The attendance was very large, and the procession of twenty or more carriages was preceded to the graveyard by a number of persons who walked there, that they might see the last on earth of one whom they had learned to love. At the grave an appropriate selection was rendered by the quartet, and a brief prayer was offered by Elder Luff. Thus closed a most solemn and impressive service. Sadness was profound, and was not confined to the family and the saints; it pervaded the entire realm of her acquaintance, and the magnificent floral designs which surrounded the casket and were placed wherever space in the death chamber would allow, were the contributions of friends from every direction, near and far, and betokened the esteem in which our sister was held by all. They were love's last tribute, and their voicing was unmistakably sweet and clear. The sympathies of the community go out to Bro. Smith in this hour of bereavement, and the saints of Massachusetts district, to whom he has especially endeared himself, join most profoundly therein. A son and daughter also survive the departed, and are sharers in the condolence so universally extended.

HACKING.—At Acushnet, near New Bedford, Massachusetts, December 18, 1898, in the seventy-second year of his age, James Hacking. Some years ago he was an active member of the church, and though standing for several of the last years of his life outside the pale of immediate fellowship, he never renounced the doctrine, but affirmed his confidence therein till the day of his death. The funeral which was held at the house of his daughter, at Acushnet, was conducted by Elder Richard Bullard, and the sermon was preached by Elder Joseph Luff. The deceased was the father-in-law of Elder Thomas Whiting, of Fall River, Massachusetts.

HACKING.—At the residence of her son-in-law, Elder Thomas Whiting, in Fall River, Massachusetts, December 28, 1898, in her seventy-ninth year, Sr. Jane, widow of James Hacking. She received the gospel in England and came to America to go to Utah, but remained in St. Louis because of what she saw and heard of the church in the West. Her husband went through the war, and at its close they moved to Fall River, where she accepted the Reorganization under the preaching of Elder James W. Gillen in 1865, and became one of the first members enrolled in New England. She was a faithful saint and passed away in death as one going to sleep. It is supposed that her departure was hastened by grief occasioned by the death of her husband, who preceded her only ten days. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder Joseph Luff at the residence of Elder Whiting, in Fall River, to a quite large gathering on the 30th, and on the following morning the remains were taken to New Bedford and interred by the side of those of her husband, to await the summons of the archangel. "Blessed are the dead" who die after such a life as hers.

CURTIS.—Elder H. P. Curtis was born February 1, 1864; ordained an elder August 20, 1893. He preached in Wisconsin, Kansas, and Texas. He spent about three years of labor at and near San Antonio, where he married Miss Cora McRey. They were both respected, and have done much good in San Antonio. Bro. Curtis died October 20, 1898, and was laid to rest in the city cemetery No. 1. Funeral discourse was preached by Elder A. J. Moore.

KEESLER.—Father John Keesler was born in Delaware County, New York, September 25, 1807. In 1829 he settled in Erie County, Ohio, near Brownhelm. He was married in the year 1830 to Susan Ewing, who bore him ten children. Became acquainted with the Latter Day Saints in 1831 through the preaching of Harvey Whitlock and Edison Fuller, being baptized by them (he did not remember which one baptized him) about the 25th of March, 1831. He was baptized into the Reorganization June 26, 1887, by Elder B. V. Springer, and died November 7, 1898, being a little over 91 years old. Funeral services conducted by the sanctified saints of the Gospel Trumpet stamp.

PERRY.—Near Andover, Missouri, January 1, 1899, George, son of Bro. William and Sr. Sarah Perry. He was born March 27, 1875, at Kewanee, Illinois. He leaves father, mother, three brothers and two sisters to mourn. Elder H. N. Snively conducted the funeral services at his home to a large gathering of relatives and friends. Interment in Rose Hill cemetery, Lamoni, Iowa.

TREHARNE.—At her home in Llanelly, Wales, December 7, 1898, Sr. Sarah Ann Treharne. Born December 3, 1870. She was baptized by Elder Gomer T. Griffiths, September 11, 1892, and remained an active member of the church, beloved by all who knew her. After a severe illness of fourteen days she fell asleep in Christ in full hope of a glorious resurrection, aged 28 years and 4 days. Funeral sermon by Elder F. G. Pitt.

Over 1,200 Pages and 500 Valuable Illustrations.
Three Beautiful Volumes in Half Morocco.

See special offer at bottom of this advertisement.

This Magnificent Edition for only ONE DOLLAR DOWN.

To the readers of this paper we make the following proposition to become members of the Review of Reviews History Club, and obtain the three volumes of

Our War in Two Hemispheres,

By ALBERT SHAW,

Editor of the "American Monthly Review of Reviews" and author of "Municipal Government in Great Britain," etc., and a number of prominent contributors.

EVERY American teacher possessing a library, and many that do not possess one, will be interested in the announcement of the history of the late war with Spain, now published by the REVIEW OF REVIEWS COMPANY. Much of the narrative was written by Dr. Albert Shaw during the actual fighting of the summer. This has been revised and amplified by him in the light of the official reports and documents, which have only become available after hostilities ceased. A free quotation from the critical Congressional debates and other public utterances at crucial periods aids in making this work what it is, the standard reference history of this decisive and successful struggle. But it is much more than a lively and comprehensive narrative. It goes back to the years of struggle in Cuba which prepared the way for the war; it discusses energetically all problems which confronted the United States after the war as to the Philippines, Cuba, and Porto Rico; and as a whole it forms a broadly conceived picture of the year which has seen America brought face to face with new world duties.

The important special and technical matters of the war period, generally dismissed by the historian with only slight and often insufficient discussion, are fully and authentically dealt with in contributed chapters, written by men who had unusual opportunities for studying their subjects. Thus, the lessons which the war has for us as to the relative efficiency of rifles and machine guns are in a carefully written chapter by Lieut. John H. Parker, of the United States army; the military movements of the Santiago and Porto Rican campaigns are analyzed by the editor of the Army and Navy Journal; the battle with Cervera is described by the novelist, Winston Churchill, who is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy; the actual condition of Cuba before the war and the facts which caused the war are described by eye-witnesses, Murat Halstead and Stephen Bonsal.

The illustration of the book is especially valuable in the hundreds of portraits, pictures of the navies, photographed scenes of the war, and the entertaining cartoons reproduced from the Spanish, French, German, and English papers, as well as from the American.

How to obtain the handsome edition by a payment of only ONE DOLLAR DOWN.

The three beautifully bound large octavo volumes and a year's subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS can be obtained by any of the readers of this paper by joining the Review of Reviews Club and paying one dollar. The volumes will be sent as soon as ready to those who remit the sum, and the purchase will be completed by the payment of one dollar per month for twelve months. The first volume will be ready early in December. The subscription to the magazine which goes with the offer can be dated from any month.

THE PROMISED LAND.

SULTAN, KAIZER, AND POPE TO SOLVE THE ZION PROBLEM.

RABBI WISE PREDICTS A NATION FOR ISRAEL'S TRIBES.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, the eminent Jewish minister of New York and honorary secretary of the American Federation of Zionists, has written an interesting paper on the subject of re-peopling Zion by the scions of its ancient dwellers, for the Herald, in which he says:—

Among the striking features of the late Zionist congress at Basle were the presence of a representative of the German Emperor and the receipt of a cordial message of good will from the Sultan, addressed to the President of the congress in response to the latter's felicitations. Furthermore, when the proposal of the Russian Czar looking to the convening of representatives of the powers for the purpose of considering the possibility of checking the universal spread of militarism was hailed with joyous acclaim by the peace loving and thoughtful Jews in Basle assembled, the wiser and calmer heads urged that to the formal congratulations of the congress be added an expression of the hope that the proposed international conference concern itself, in the spirit of wisdom and understanding, with the pressing Jewish question, and more especially with such solution thereof as looked to the re-peopling of Zion by the scions of its ancient dwellers.

Not long thereafter an extraordinary mass meeting of Jews was held in London in advocacy of the Zionist cause, at which Dr. Theodor Herzl thrilled his 7,000 hearers by declaring: "We are nearer success than people imagine." But a few weeks have gone since that memorable night for the Jewry of London, and within that brief time gigantic strides forward have been made by our leader and his chosen followers. To particularize, Herzl and a deputation of Zionists have been at Constantinople, Jerusalem, and Rome.

Even though it be true that Herzl was "playing at antechamber diplomacy,"—the contemptuous term employed by his opponents,—he might well have justified his seemingly dilatory policy by replying that a colossal scheme, affecting the interests of all nations in one way or another, could hardly be expected to be carried into effect in one day or in one year. To their honor be it said, the masses enrolled under the flag of Zion have been patient and uncomplaining, but the Jewish anti-Zionists—strange contradiction in terms—have asked with wearying persistence to be permitted to behold some practical, tangible issue as a result of the unprecedented activity of every kind within the Zionist camp. Not because of these unseemly taunts, and yet, as it were, in triumphant answer to them, Herzl has been doing great things for the cause of which he is the accredited spokesman in these weeks. November, 1898, will be writ large in the calendar of Zionist history.

The Jewish people the wide world over have been observing the festive celebration of the Chanuckah season, and abundant reason is at hand for a more joyous commemoration than has been the wont of the Jews for more than 1,800 years. The words of Zechariah, which are annually intoned as the keynote of the festival commemorative of the wresting of Judea from the hands of the Syrian rulers by the Maccabean heroes in the year 165 of the pre-Christian era, are about to be fulfilled, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit." The Maccabean victory was wrested from the jaws of defeat by the fearless might and the unconquerable power of the Jewish warriors. Our bloodless victory is to be achieved by "my Spirit"—the Spirit of God resting upon the leaders of Israel, the Spirit of God moving some of the great rulers of the earth to deal in equity and righteousness with a long-suffering and deeply wronged people.

Three men hold in the hollow of their hands such solution of the Jewish problem as is sought by the majority of the House of Israel—the Sultan, Emperor William, and the Pope. To begin, Herzl has lately been in Constantinople and has been decorated with the order of the Mejidie at the hands of the Sultan. It is surely needless to premise in this place that all the Zionist plans must utterly fail of realization unless the Turkish sovereign lend thereto his outspoken imperial sanction. Why should such sanction be withheld? For one thing, Abdul Hamid has been uniformly kind and well disposed toward his Jewish subjects. Again, a Jewish resettlement of Palestine would tend to build up the material resources and develop the heretofore undeveloped commercial activity of the Ottoman Empire. Aiming for no temporal power, the Jewish occupation of the Holy Land would at the same time call a truce to the conflicting and warring claims of such nations as have gained a slight foothold in the land.

Everywhere loyal and devoted to the interests of the country wherein they dwell, the Sultan is assuredly wise and far-sighted enough to know that he and his successors may forever count upon the unflinching loyalty of his Jewish subjects, to whom his good will had enabled to come again by their olden heritage. Finally, the Jewish Colonial Bank, which is being called into existence at this time, will be so largely funded by rich and poor Jews alike, whether settled in Palestine or continuing to sojourn in their present dwelling places, that its resources may safely be expected to furnish the means wherewith to touch into life the dormant commercial and industrial possibilities of the land.

Constantinople, however, was merely a halting place on the way to Jerusalem, where Herzl and the deputation of Zionists were formally received by the Kaizer. Even before the official reception of Herzl and his companions, the former had met and conversed with the Kaizer. It was on the way from Jaffa to Jerusalem, and near by a flourishing Jewish agricultural colony, that, while the Emperor and Empress were being welcomed by hundreds of children of the Rothschild school in classic Hebrew songs, the Emperor espied Herzl resting against a plow, symbol of the ennobling daily toil awaiting his people, and addressed him in friendly salutation. On the following day the Emperor and Empress made their formal entry into the Holy City. First, they halted before the triumphal arch erected in honor of their imperial Majesties by the 40,000 Jewish residents of Jerusalem; for a moment the royal personages paused, two aged rabbis, heads of the German and Portuguese communities of the city, approached, bearing the venerated scrolls of the law in their arms, recited the Hebrew benediction which law prescribes in the presence of kingly personages, and offered up a touching prayer in the Hebrew language for the continued well-being of the royal guests, to all of which the Kaizer replied in simple and well chosen speech.

A few days thereafter another meeting took place between the German King and some Jews. While standing in the presence of the venerable rabbis, Wilhelm may have bethought himself of the centuries-long tragedy of the people, incarnate in their priestly representatives, whose fathers had been the proud and fearless possessors of the land.

Upon the latter occasion he was faced by five men, typifying the holiest aspirations of the Jewish nation. Foremost among them stood Theodor Herzl, kinglier than a king, Tiglith-Pileser come to life, in the words of Zangwill, who briefly outlined the aims of Zionism. By the side of Herzl stood four other men, in nowise of the poor and benighted set which is declared by anti-Zionists to be the mainstay of the party—Bodenheimer, a distinguished lawyer of Cologne, President of the German Federation of Zionists; Schnirer, a famous physician of Vienna and Vice President of the International Zionist bureau; Seidner, an engineer of repute, who accompanied the party for the express purpose of investigating the sanitary conditions of the country; and Wolfsohn, a prosperous manufacturer in Germany, who is at the head of the Colonial Bank committee.

Sultan, Kaiser—and Pope! On his homeward way Herzl visited Rome. Whether he has succeeded in gaining the sympathy of the Pontiff of the Roman Church cannot be stated at this time. One year ago, soon after the former congress was held, the Pope was declared to be unalterably opposed to Zionism and to be prepared to bring the vast influence of his church to bear at the Sublime Porte against the cause. Official denial of this rumor was later made, and there is no reason for believing that the attitude of the Pope is one of unfriendliness. Being the spiritual head of many European governments and peoples, notably France, Austria, and Spain, the "benevolent sanction" of Leo XIII. is indispensable to the realization of Zionist aims, which make for the establishment of Jews in Palestine under the suzerainty of the Sultan and the protection of a concert of the European powers.

Why should such "benevolent sanction" as is sought be withheld? Rome entertains no ambition for the enlargement of her possessions in Palestine other than those of markedly sacred character. And if ambition there be, it must confess itself checked in the presence of the Turco-German alliance—despite the flattering gift of the Kaiser to his Roman Catholic subjects. On the other hand, Rome and every Christian nation would surely welcome the advent of Jews in large numbers into the "land of hallowed memory," seeing that this infiltration would bring about the gradual and peaceable withdrawal of the Mohammedan population. We do not ask that the holy places be committed to our exclusive keeping; let these remain as they are now, in the hands of those who guard and cherish them. Surely the Christian world requires no assurance on our part that every spot which Christians hold in reverence will be precious to us. The Jew shall not cease to honor true devotion to an ideal—least of all in the land which his past has hallowed for all time.

Not in vain do we place our reliance upon Kaiser and Sultan. Help and deliverance have come to us before through the grace of "stranger kings." Two historic instances recur to us of Israel marvelously saved and prospered with the help of reigning kings. In the year 538 of the pre-Christian era Cyrus took Babylon and graciously permitted the Babylonish exiles to return to their fatherland.

The momentous results which followed from the reestablishment of the Judean commonwealth are part of—and the largest part of—the world's history. A tree of two great branches flourished in time on the soil which the former captives by the rivers of Babylon began to cultivate with all the ardor and assiduity of their nature—two branches, the one the religion of Ezra and the latest prophets, of Hillel and the rabbis, the other the faith of Jesus, later become the Christianity of his countless followers. And all this came to pass, as Dr. Max Nordau has aptly pointed out, owing to the hardihood of a handful of the earliest Zionists, who, availing themselves of the rights accorded them by Cyrus the noble, chose to give up their peaceful and secure residence in Babylon in order to live and labor in Zion and rebuild its waste places. The second exile is soon to end. In the words of Josephine Lazarus, "once planted again upon native soil, 'taking root downward,' as Isaiah has it, who can tell what 'upward flower and fruit' the immortal branch may bear—what new birth of the spirit, the undying spirit of Israel, may give to the world?"

Another king there was, greater even than Cyrus, who, like him, befriended the Jews. In the course of his victorious marches Alexander visited Jerusalem in the year 332. Legends in great number have been woven around this visit, picturing the manner in which this youthful prince, who had come to scoff, remained to pray. Whether it be true, as rabbinic tale has it, that Alexander was so deeply impressed by the visage of the venerable High Priest Jaddua and the priestly train that he was moved to bow in humility and adoration before those whom he had set out to conquer, and that he even caused sacrifices to be offered up to the Most High in the temple of Jerusalem, we cannot tell. We do know, however, that this Macedonian ruler, far from despoiling and violating the shrine, as had been and continued to be the custom of earlier and later invading princes, openly befriended the Jews and treated them with the utmost consideration and generosity. Alas! Alexander died within a twelve-month of his entry into Jerusalem, and the benefits which doubtless would have accrued to the Jews were speedily annulled by his quarrelsome successors.

Zionism can and will be immeasurably furthered by the great ones of the earth in our time. What is this Zionism? Is Zionism "a vague scheme of to-day," a "dream of fantastic content," an "ideal impossible of realization," by all of which names it has been styled derisively? Zionism is nigh unto 2,000 years old, dating from the seventieth year of this era, which witnessed the fall of Judea into the power of Rome. Zionism is that for which Jews of all the world have prayed uninterruptedly ever since Titus laid ruthless hand upon the Holy of Holies—all the Jews, excepting, it is but fair to add, the comparatively small number comprising the reform party, who within the last one hundred years have abandoned the national ideal of Israel and have held with Moses Mendelssohn that Judaism stood for nothing more than a religious brotherhood.

Why, then, do some orthodox Jews seem to be arrayed against Zionism, especially in England, Germany, and Austria-Hungary? How account for such opposition, seeing that they daily pray for their reinstatement in control of Palestine? How account for this paradoxical state of affairs? Perhaps, after the fashion of an old Russian rabbi, who said to me at the Basle Congress with inimitable humor, "I do not venture to advocate Zionism from my pulpit, for if I did my hearers would make light of the whole matter and think that my advocacy was but another strained interpretation of a biblical text and another overpious attempt to explain away or excuse the apparent futility of our prayers in behalf of Zion." Has not Rabbi A. A. Green of London spoken wisely, who pleads for a whole-hearted support of the Zionist movement on the part of the Jewish nation, or else the effacement of every Zionist reference from the prayer book?

Is there not something pathetic, almost tragic, in the attitude of those who pray for a boon for which, being within reach, they will not even stretch forth their hands? Zionism must remain "a dream and a mirage," if these so decree. But are not these awe struck by the greatness of God's blessing, blinded by the nearness of the divine presence about to lead the children of Israel to their home? Shall the "great refusal" in truth come to pass? Not unless we will it. It cannot be. God hath willed otherwise for his well-beloved, the homeless are already on the way homeward.—From Chicago Tribune, January 1, 1899.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Subscriptions still coming in. Some of the unexpected ones are doing nobly, while some of the expected are not doing anything at all for the College Appeal. One ought to be ashamed to have his name off the Subscription List, but there are some of our brethren who could well afford to give a $1,000, but have not yet made a single step forward in the appeal matter. The Lord will exact his interest of that money. The College is assuredly the work of the Lord, and shall succeed, in fact, is succeeding. England is sharing in the honor of helping on the good cause, one brother, not a hundred miles from Birmingham, sent along $25, with hopes of doing more next year. We are waiting to hear from California, Honolulu, Australia, and many other places.

We are endeavoring to develop our Laboratory work in Physics and Chemistry, but we require more apparatus. We want a good electrical machine, an eight cell battery, an induction coil to give 1½" spark, a dynamo and motor, an Astatic galvanometer and several other pieces of apparatus. Now we have faith in the spontaneous generosity of Latter Day Saints, and we have faith to believe that just so soon as some of our brethren and sisters see this, they will write post haste to the President of the College, and request him to name the cost of some piece of desired apparatus, with which they will furnish the College.

The enrollment of students steadily increases, and prospects for our ultimate success is good. Students are now hard at work, and seem to enjoy the same. A large number of classes in various subjects are running, and those taking our work are thus able to make their own choice. Send along your boys and girls, we will give them as good an education as can be obtained anywhere.

Do not forget our requests for specimens of the archæology and natural history of this continent, also any books that you can spare; you will thereby do good to many.

LAMONI, IOWA, JAN. 18, 1899.

A STRIKING CONTRAST AND ARGUMENT; ROBERTS VS. THE SALOON.

There is a great deal of good hard common sense in the following editorial, taken from the Voice, a New York City Prohibition journal, for December 15, which we commend to the consideration of our readers; and, we would commend it to the attention of those half-rabid religionists, of various denominational names, who just now are making such a howl about the "awful" enormity of Mr. B. H. Roberts, congressman-elect from the new state of Utah, a polygamist, the husband of three wives, who is expecting to take a seat in the next congress.

The cry is that Mr. Roberts is a "Mormon," and "Mormonism is such a delusion," "such a menace to American institutions," such "a crime against society," that all good citizens should unite to repress it—Mormonism. Our religious neighbors, if we may be pardoned for calling them such, are quite too wild in their misguided zeal. There are plenty of "Mormons," so-called, even in Utah, who are not polygamists in practice, and many who are not so in belief either. The objection to Mr. Roberts is not that he is a Mormon, but that he is a polygamist in Utah, a bigamist in all others of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. If these quasi-moralists, half-rabid religionists, would make their protest against the seating of Mr. Roberts on the ground of the fact that he is in practice a lawbreaker living in actual defiance of the laws and the rules of society of all the States of the United States, except the State which he will represent in congress if seated; the legislature of which State has purposely enacted no law by which its citizens may be compelled to live in accord with the provision in the act under which Utah became a State, "polygamy is forever prohibited," or to suffer punishment if they fail to do it; then they would be making a protest on a good basis; but simply to object to him because he is a "Mormon" is decidedly lame.

The Voice put up a strong argument in favor of its own peculiar mission by contrasting the protest made against polygamist B. H. Roberts, and the attitude of the same public toward the policy which gives the saloons life and makes drunkenness and death facts as a result.

JACKALS AND TIGERS.

Much public interest has been excited and many editorial protests are being called forth by the election of a Mormon polygamist as a member of congress from Utah. Unquestionably the event has serious significance; Mormonism is a remarkable and perhaps a dangerous religious delusion, and polygamy is a social condition that menaces the home life of the republic. The election of Mr. Brigham H. Roberts to congress, considered together with the circumstances that attended his nomination and election, seems to be a deliberate expression of contempt for law such as is in itself a matter of grave importance. The protest, therefore, is timely. The sharp challenge of a people perpetually on guard for their moral interests is music to the ears of every lover of liberty.

But while the alarm rings so promptly on this occasion, why is it that it has been so tardy at the approach of other and graver perils? Mormon polygamy, as compared with the American saloon, is as far outclassed as a "cat's paw" compared with a tornado. The saloon system menaces the American home and the American nation with far more deadly menace than that that comes from the delusions or the fraud of Joseph Smith and Brigham Young. And yet the saloon power has had its representatives and its victims in every congress for half a century, and the protest has never gained the recognition of those journals that are burning oratorical powder like "ships-of-the-line" over the appearance of Roberts in congress.

Is Mormonism defiant of law? The saloon is a thousandfold more so, and the record of its daily lawbreaking would surpass that of the Mormon Church during its whole existence. Is there laid at the door of the "Church of the Latter Day Saints" the responsibility for deeds of cruelty and blood? The saloon has dipped its hands in the blood of its enemies times without number, and does so constantly upon provocation. Does Mormonism seek to destroy the Christian idea of the home? The saloon lives only as it sucks the blood from home life.

Mormonism has shown itself compatible with a fair degree of material development; the saloon is the opponent of material prosperity everywhere and always. Mormonism has not proved deadly even to the general morals of a community; the saloon, in the strongest centers of the Christian faith, amid the wealth of New York, the culture of Boston, the enterprise of Chicago, the respectability of Philadelphia, and the statesmanship of Washington, creates, fosters, and protects a condition of moral rotteness unsurpassed in spots by any heathenism in the world. What father would not rather see his daughter wedded to a sober man who had conscientiously married ten wives, than to see her bound to the finished product of the ginmill—a drunkard? What father would not rather see a daughter committed to all the wrongs that the bitterest opponent of Mormonism has ever pictured as the lot of the wife of the polygamist, rather than to see her doomed to a lifetime of bitter disgrace, hopeless misery, and shameful abuse such as is endured by hundreds of thousands of women because their husbands are drunkards? What father would not rather see a daughter mourn for a husband whose love had been alienated than to see her the mother of degenerate children forced upon her by drunken lust?

Away with Mormon polygamy! Let it follow its "twin relic" to oblivion! But let not a nation whose challenge comes hot and ready for the prowling jackal along its borders be dumb and nerveless when a ravenous tiger is seen in the midst of its homes.

IS BABYLON FALLING?

Presbyterianism is one of the oldest forms of Protestantism, ranking a close third with Lutheranism and the Quakers; so that it has age to make respectable as well as venerable, if age has anything to do with, or can make a religion sacred or worthy of consideration.

The following extracts from the Cincinnati Times-Star, for December 21, 1898, and the Herald and Presbyterian, will give the HERALD readers some idea of what this old-time institution is passing through:—

PRESBYTERIANISM IN NEW YORK.

Singularly enough on Sunday morning the Sun and Tribune had leading editorials on Presbyterianism in New York. There are at least six prominent Presbyterian churches in New York City without pastors. There has been no growth of the church for some time; no church extensions, no social settlements, nothing to indicate that the Presbyterian Church is alive. One Presbyterian elder says that "the Methodists, Baptists, Episcopalians, Congregationalists, and Roman Catholics are branching out—everybody is, except us. We are closing up our churches." Formerly the Presbyterian Church in New York was the strongest organization in the city. The recent doctrinal strife within the church appears to have taken the life out of it. Do the same conditions apply to other parts of the country? Is the trouble local only in New York or has the doctrinal controversy hoodooed Presbyterian efforts in all parts of the country?

The Times-Star cleverly asks whether "the doctrinal controversy" has "hoodooed Presbyterian efforts?" But, the question was not answered.

We cannot say whether the "doctrinal controversy" had anything to do with the decadence of the Presbyterian Church in New York, but see no reason why it should not. Indeed, it seems almost certain that when those darkened theological tenets which followed in the wake of the Reformers were adopted from the still darker creeds that preceded the breaking away from the Jesuitical-Catholicism, which used the thumbscrew and the rack to make converts and save souls from hell, are compelled to meet the advanced creeds of modern theologians, within the church, Theosophists, freethinkers, spiritists, iconoclasts and infidels, there is sure to be a loss to the ranks of the believers in the myths of medievalism. So, we do not wonder that the Presbyterian Church is losing ground in Gotham.

The Herald and Presbyter seems to emphasize the statement of the Times-Star, and confesses thus:—

The net gain to our Presbyterian Church membership last year was 14,966. Over one-third of this was made in Pennsylvania. New York records a net loss of 1,370. Michigan is smaller than last year by 192, and Indian Territory by 46. All the other Synods show a gain. In many instances it is very small, but it is an advance. South Dakota with 40; Catawba with 54; Minnesota with 68; Oregon with 79, and Indiana with 82, are the only Synods whose gain is less than one hundred. Atlantic has 702 more than last year; Baltimore, 326; California, 618; China, 708; Colorado, 687; Illinois, 1,196; India, 775; Iowa, 1,575; Kansas, 496; Kentucky, 172; Missouri, 228; Montana, 137; Nebraska, 722; New Jersey, 446; New Mexico, 140; North Dakota, 204; Ohio, 704; Tennessee, 272; Texas, 113; Utah, 140; Washington, 309, and Wisconsin, 362. These figures cannot be altogether satisfactory to us. With all the work of all the pastors and churches of a whole great State, it seems that there should be a greater gain in the number of those enrolled as followers of Christ. With the gain of but a few scores or hundreds in a whole year, it will take a long time to overtake the whole population. Why should not next year be a very great advance upon anything that has been seen in the past?

In looking through the figures for the Synod of Ohio we find that in making its net gain of 704 in its membership this year all the Presbyteries coöperated. Five of them, however, report a smaller number of communicants than a year ago. Lima has 131 less, Dayton 112, Columbus 29, Athens 93, and St. Clairsville 167. The other Presbyteries gain as follows: Bellefontaine, 145; Chillicothe, 68; Cincinnati, 9; Cleveland, 305; Huron, 22; Portsmouth, 9; Mahoning, 253; Marion, 76; Maumee, 154; Steubenville, 41; Wooster, 130, and Zanesville, 26. As Ohio has 647 churches, this is a net gain of only about one to each church. We believe that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is gaining, and is to gain ground, but we believe these figures show that the progress is very slow in some quarters.

"One to each church" in Ohio as a net gain in membership. Good for Ohio.

But, when the statement is made that "the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is gaining, and is to gain ground," made by the organ of Presbyterianism, is understood to mean the denominational dogmas and tenets and government of the Presbyterian Church, it opens the way for a "doctrinal controversy" again. For it will certainly puzzle the most astute theologian that church has in its rank to show beyond successful dispute that "the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ" is correctly represented by Presbyterianism.

It is a fitting thing with which to close this inquiry, the following taken from the same copy of the Herald and Presbyter, for October 5, 1898:—

THE LEAK IN THE CHURCH.

It has frequently been impressed upon our minds that the conversion of the entire world would be not many years away if each professed Christian were instrumental in bringing even one soul each year to a saving knowledge of Christ. If our Protestant Churches in the United States should double their membership each year, it would take only about two years for every person in our whole nation to be enrolled as followers of Christ.

At some time this whole world is to be brought to Christ. How far off this time is we do not and cannot know. As measured by the present progress of the Church, the time seems in the far distance. Should the church double each year, it would not be many years until every knee would bow and every tongue confess that Christ is Lord.

Between the ideal and real there is oftentimes a very painful difference, and we know of no place where it is more strikingly so than in the territory of this very subject. Our own great Presbyterian Church made a net gain last year of less than fifteen thousand. While we were hoping that by this time we would enroll a full million of communicants, we find ourselves short of it by nearly twenty-five thousand. Last year there was a net gain to the membership of only one and one half per cent., or a net gain of one member to about every seventy ministers and members already in the church. The additions by letter and on profession amounted to nearly ten per cent., but so many of these were lost to the church by death, dismissal, and lack of fidelity that a net gain of only the one and one half per cent. was made for the whole year. This is not satisfactory progress, and should bring the whole church to its knees. The figures for the Methodist Episcopal Church are no better.

It will be noted that the failures to increase in net membership is not the result of no additions, but is caused by the heavy losses. Those who are reported as "dismissed and dropped" almost exactly equal the number received on profession of faith. How does this come about? Has the world so large a hold on those who are members of the church that they fail to remain faithful to their obligations and are lost to religious life and the service of Christ? Is there a leak in the church almost equal to the income? Are pastors and sessions discharging their full duty in caring for those who are members of the church, giving them something to do and holding them in the steady grasp of a true and loving discipline? This question needs to be looked fully in the face, and each pastor may well lend his consecrated energies to holding and developing his people as well as to receiving them into membership.

Each pastor knows of large numbers of persons in his community who are members of the church in other places, but who do not bring their letters. They have various reasons for it, or say that they have. They absolve themselves from practical duties in the place of their residence, and do nothing for the church with which they say they are connected. In time of special revival these people send for their letters. They realize that they have not been doing right. They are probably on the "retired roll" of the churches in which they hold their membership, and it has been a grief to their own pastors that have not taken their letters to the churches where they now reside.

This is a restless land and age, and multitudes of people are continually changing their homes. In case of members of the church they should at once take their letters to the church in their new home. There should at least be one hundred and fifty thousands of additions to the church next year on certificate. A revival in this line is one of our great needs. If each pastor would set out in dead earnest to induce every one of his own absent members to take their letters and put them in where they reside, and at the same time secure the addition on certificate of all who should come into his own church, we would see a great increase of our net church membership next year.

We need revival. It is our supreme need. But it needs to be manifested not only in the conversion of souls, but in the loyalty, along the lines just indicated, of those who have already professed to love Christ.

ROMANCE IN THE FIELD.

Anyone who may think that the life of an elder in the field is a "lazy sinecure," an "August, summer picnic," or one entirely devoid of healthy spiritual life and romance, will find something in the following little story to cause them to drop their notion, and change their conclusions, as well as find something to indicate how the Master manages to look after his forces in trying circumstances.

The letter is from Odin, Modoc County, California, and dated January 1. Some will read it with moistened eyelids, or we miss the conclusion:—

I suppose you see the "jots" occasionally, and it will not be necessary to say anything of this country. Three feet of snow now, makes it laborious traveling and cold up here in the mountains. I want to go over the range into the Sacramento Valley soon.

Bro. Barmore is with me and we are having fine audiences. We came to Alturas, the county seat of this county; did not know a soul; went to the hotel. Next day got the consent of the M. E. Church folks to occupy. We preached a week; we only had seven dollars between us, and of course one week's board used up our means, and no friendly door opened for us. Bro. B. said we must go on fifty miles west to where the saints lived. Our interest was so good at the church I begged him to stay a few days longer; so we remained three days more; then he said we would pay up as far as we could and send the balance back when we found the agent of this district. But I said we could fast and pray that God would care for us and open the way; so we fasted and at prayer I felt to say, "Fear not, my servants; continue to sow with unsparing hands. Consider the lilies, they toil not, neither do they spin, ye are greater than they." We felt better. Three days more went by, and "B" got wonderfully uneasy, and said, "We must go." And I admit I did not like a fourteen dollar bill at the hotel and a half cord of wood at the church, and only seven dollars on hand.

That night I preached; took up the angel's message; the apostasy under Brigham; and Reorganization; winding up with my own twenty-nine years of experience, and your prophecy at Galland's Grove that you would live to see the name of a Latter Day Saint made honorable, etc., with the evidence of its entire fulfillment. I felt well and fully satisfied myself. At the close an old man came down the aisle with tears in his eyes, and said, "That's the old bell that I heard in my youth. I came to Salt Lake in '50,—became disgusted with it all. Came out here in these mountains to die. But for ten years I have been praying for God's servants to come here, that in my old age I could once more hear the gospel. This is what I have longed for, and I praise the Lord. I asked his name. He said, "John Allen Free." "Why," I said, "I am acquainted with and ordained one Absalom P. Free, of Joplin, Missouri, some seven or eight years ago." The old man's joy was unbounded, and he clapped his hands and said, "Absalom, my long lost brother! Thank the Lord." As they (his friends) took him away weeping, he said: "I will see you to-morrow."

On the morrow he came to our room. We had a fine visit with the old veteran. I was thinking of the "Fear not," yet I said nothing to him of our finances.

Before leaving he called the landlord in and said to him: "These brethren are here at my expense. Board them and care for them as long as they want to stay, and draw on me for the bills." You may imagine my feelings. We all wept for joy for the signal fulfillment of the "Fear not." He also sent word to the church to pay all we owed, and kept us in wood.

I have his items and he will be placed on the records; he was baptized in Nauvoo.

So we left there the old man rejoicing in the faith, and with our seven dollars in our pocket—all bills paid.

Pray for us and remember us often, that we may maintain our integrity, keep pure before God, and not fall into temptation, that we may have his Spirit to be with us.

I'm with you and yours in loving bonds,
T. W. CHATBURN.

ON the 21st day of April, 1900, an Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions will convene in New York City, and will continue in session for eleven days. This conference represents no single denomination, no one country, no one continent, but the whole world of Protestant Christendom. Every church and pastor of every name in the length and breadth of the land should awake to the fact that this conference is coming, take note of the time and place of the sessions, prepare for it, enter into it as far as may be, and gather from it impulse, and knowledge, and faith, and power."

The foregoing is from a circular sent us from "Congregational House," Boston, Massachusetts. We would like to see a representative of the restored gospel present at the conference. We do not know that he would be received, but think the opportunity ought to be given this gathering to hear a message designed for "every kindred, tongue, and people." Why not bear this congress in mind, whether they will hear, or forbear?

AGENCY AND SAFETY VS. WORLDLINESS.

The following account of a late "sideshow" in the interests of "St. Martha's Guild of Grace Episcopal Church," Galena, Illinois, appeared in the Chicago Tribune of December 30. We reproduce it for the benefit of our readers who are taking note of the progressive (?) spirit so apparent of late in modern religious circles. It serves to show how the spirit of the times is consecrating the energies of many to the service of the world, the flesh, and—to Babylon:—

GALENA SOCIETY GIRLS APPEAR AS NEGRO MINSTRELS.

THIRTY-FOUR OF THE YOUNG WOMEN OF THE ILLINOIS TOWN SING AND DO A CAKE WALK IN BLACK FACE AND SHORT SKIRTS, FOR CHARITY.

Galena, Illinois, December 29.—The minstrel show given by the young women of Galena to-night proved a distinct success.

Thirty-four young women popular in social circles appeared in black face, and the fact that their identity has been kept from the public served to add to the curiosity and interest of the audience. Mrs. Harriett Webb Crawford was chairman of the managers; Dr. George Blish, musical director; Miss Edith Ridd, pianist and accompanist. Wiley's Orchestra furnished music. The costumes consisted of full dress coats and vests, conspicuous neckties, curly wigs, short black skirts, and slippers.

Mrs. A. W. Glessner as interlocuter was perfect, her bright, witty, original jokes and conundrums calling forth rounds of applause. Mrs. C. B. Eastman and Mrs. Mary Sheean Ryan were the end men and rattled the bones equal to professionals. . . .

The entertainment concluded with a cakewalk, in which the following participated:

Jolly couple, . . . old couple, . . . dude couple, . . . cowboy couple, . . . bridal couple, . . . sporting couple.

The proceeds are to be donated to St. Martha's Guild of Grace Episcopal Church. The entertainment proved so successful that it will be repeated to-morrow night.

Such happenings, with all movements of like spirit, should also serve to warn the people of God against resort to anything of a worldly nature in their work. We are constantly reminded, by the developments of the world and the worldly-minded, that no one can build solidly who uses "hay, wood, or stubble" in any part of his work. We must build with "gold, silver, and precious stones," if our work is to abide the day of fiery trial that is to "try every man's work of what sort it is." The Apostle Paul, a

"masterbuilder," was in harmony in such declarations, with the revelations made in our own times; viz., that "Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer." (D. C. 102:2.)

God's people should bear these things in mind, and watch and pray, and guard the church and themselves against worldly influences and worldly measures. By so doing they will avoid mistakes and evils and save themselves much unnecessary suffering. Otherwise they too must suffer, as our fathers suffered, because of carelessness or wrongdoing. Let no one deceive himself that such deceptive things and measures will not be met all along the line of our work. Discernment is necessary and should be sought for and exercised, for evil and misleading devices are often presented in the garb of apparent innocence or harmlessness.

It is not always the open, apparent evil that does the harm; it is the subtle, deceptive influences and measures that are permitted to obtain because of a lack of watchfulness and discernment in the body.

The admonitions of the Master himself, "Watch and pray," and "Take heed that no man deceive you," are as applicable, right in our own times, as ever.

We believe it is unsafe to move in any measure without actual knowledge that one is right. It is one thing to move, and act, and vote, and support a measure, on a sort of "credit" or "belief" that it will be all right; but it is quite another thing to first know that what we support is right, before acting upon or supporting it. We believe the gospel and are baptized because such action is in strict harmony with the word of God. Such being our rule of action in our first steps in the service of God, why should we depart from said rule in any part of our work, either in our personal efforts, or in the giving of our support to any man or measure, while using our agency in the line of "common consent"? Is it safe so to do? Certainly not.

We have used the foregoing item to "point a moral and adorn a tale." And we cannot too strongly urge upon the saints the necessity of seeing to it that all their work is based upon an intelligent and conscientious use of their agency. It is a shame and a sin for anyone to act, or to be led, in the dark.

We believe it to be the duty of God's people to learn, to know the truth; to discern and understand where the light is, and to firmly adhere to it, in all faithfulness, not suffering anyone, high or low in influence, to turn them from such a course, through fear, flattery, blandishment, or hope of favor.

The saints must learn, as any people must learn, that "eternal vigilance is the price of safety"—of liberty, temporal or spiritual.

It is not safe to take anything for granted. We are all human and struggling against human weakness and evils, and blindness and folly, in addition to the work of Satan and his allies. We ought to know where we are, and what we are doing or are asked to do, all the time, and this in firmness without stubbornness; in wisdom and meekness without boastfulness or railing. Jesus Christ taught the people to know, and out of knowledge to act. He is not to-day nor will he ever be satisfied with easy-going followers who do not comprehend what they are doing. Let us strive earnestly (and if we strive as we ought we shall succeed) to become an intelligent, discerning, and capable body of people, that we may be prepared by being qualified with necessary knowledge, discernment, integrity, and faithfulness, in all our work.

There is no such thing as "coming up higher" without such qualifications possessed and exercised.

JASON W. BRIGGS DEAD.

By letter from Bro. P. H. Briggs, dated at Denver, Colorado, January 12, we learn with sadness and regret of the death of his father, Elder Jason W. Briggs, for so many years an able and fearless advocate of the faith, and a pioneer of the Reorganized Church.

He died of general debility on the evening of January 11, present month. Items next week.

A CHEERING LETTER.

A letter is handed us by Bro. Criley, Business Manager of the Herald Office, and one of the Board of Trustees of Graceland College.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Dec. 23.

Bro. Frank Criley:—I take this opportunity of writing you. We sympathize with you and all concerned in Graceland College; although sorry to see that the college is so much in debt. We think the general appeal is a just one, and trust that the majority of the saints will respond to same. We know that many blame the committee for running up the cost of the building, etc., still I, for one, believe that those who had the work in hand only did what they thought was for the best. Now it is for one and all of the saints to try and help in the matter, and stand by their brethren and the church. It is very well for people to point out where things could have been managed better, and trouble avoided, after a mishap; but I wonder what these clever people would do if they were to be put in a position to carry out some responsible work. Well, experience has taught me, watch these clever folks, and I have seen some of them make very big blunders; but they always try to have a get out and blame some one else.

I have great pleasure in sending £5 for the Graceland College fund, and wish I could see my way clear to send more. I cannot promise any more at present, for things have been very bad with us for the last year, but hope they will come round again and be better, then we shall have a delight and take the opportunity of sending a little more. I feel that if I had the money at my disposal, we would wipe the whole of the debt off. This is just our feelings. With well wishes and love to all the saints on your side of the pond. Sr. Meredith joins with me in sympathy.

Postal order on Chicago payable to Frank Criley, Lamoni, from John E. Meredith.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Eli T. Dobson, of St. Joseph, Missouri, writes us from Thomasville, Georgia, under date of January 2. He says:—

I am here for a change and rest. My health has been very poor the past six months. I am gaining some here and hope to get strong.

Bro. Dobson's many friends will rejoice to hear of his improved condition. He makes some valuable suggestions in connection with the book just issued, "True Succession in Church Presidency." We are sorry they came too late for service. He says:—

I praise the Lord for your admirable and powerful reply to Brigham H. Roberts on Succession. Both in matter and form it is excellent.

Bro. T. C. Kelley, writing from

Dixfield Center, Maine, January 5 says:—

I always knew the Brighamite's position was very weak, but you have brought out some things which show it to be even weaker than I thought.

Bro. W. E. Haden, Vinita, I. T., January 5:—

I suppose you will be surprised to hear of me being way down here, among the Lamanites. I am now laboring with Bro. Smart. We are opening up some new places here with good success. I preached to a full house of Indians night before last, I had fine liberty. It just seems to me that the Lord has blessed me with a greater degree of the Spirit ever since I came down here; I never felt better in the work in my life.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Springfield, Missouri, Republican, of January 8, contains a statement from the pen of Elder Henry Sparling, showing why the Reorganized Church is opposed to the seating of Congressman-elect Roberts, of Utah. Bro. Sparling takes solid ground and makes good points. A notice of church services also tends to place our people in proper light before the people of Springfield. Good, Bro. S.

A letter from Bro. James Kemp, Conifer, Colorado, informs us that his son Robert "met with a serious accident near Ellisville, while at work in a sawmill, being caught in a fly wheel, his right leg being broken near the hip and he cut and bruised in numerous places about the body; his clothing being nearly all torn off." Bro. Kemp says it made a sad Christmas for his family, but he is happy to say his son is not suffering pain, but doing as well as could be expected.

Bishop Kelley arrived home from St. Joseph, Missouri, and Council Bluffs and Glenwood, Iowa, on the 12th inst.

Bishop Hilliard came to Lamoni, on church business, on the 12th.

The present congress has nothing whatever to do with the seating or unseating of B. H. Roberts. It is the new congress, which comes into existence on the fourth day of March, to which congressmen-elect will present their credentials. This should be remembered by the numerous petitioners who are disposed to resist the seating of Brigham H. Roberts.

Graceland College is remembered by the Bellevue Avenue Male Quartet

Club, of Providence, Rhode Island, which sends in the net proceeds of their entertainment December 13 last, amounting to $13, by Mr. Herbert B. Johnson.

All matter intended for publication, including conference and other notices, obituaries, articles, and newspaper clippings of general interest, etc., etc., should be addressed to the HERALD editors, who have supervision of matter intended for the HERALD. The editors will not be responsible for delays occasioned by sending matter to other departments than their own; nor will they be answerable for the nonappearance of matter not addressed to them.

France is said to be on the verge of a revolutionary upheaval over the Dreyfus case. The army is said to be honeycombed with conspirators who favor the downfall of the republic and the reestablishment of the monarchy under Prince Louis Napoleon, now in the Russian army, and said to be favored in his pretensions by Russia.

Original Poetry.

THE CHILDREN GONE.

Alone! yes, all alone! just us three.
Mother's sweet but wrinkled face, hair so gray,

Telling of many years and anxious cares,
Of deepest sorrows and of earnest prayers,
And Alice with her sweet and patient face
In which so many lines of care I trace;
But that sweet care is for some other's good;
Her own has always in the background stood.
These two loved forms with my poor shattered own

Are all that's left—the children all are gone!
And we are all that's left, just us three;
Mother, Alice, and poor feeble me.

The silvery voices full of childish glee,
The pattering feet and faces fair to see;
The merry hearts that sorrow never crossed,
The sparkling eyes beaming with love and trust.

The children, best of our Father's earthly gifts—

Like rays of sunshine piercing through the rifts

Of clouds that hang o'er life's dark, stormy sea,

Chasing dull care from our old hearts away—
These, sweetest treasures, from our home have fled

And all is lonely, and life seems almost dead.
Yes, all is lonely, lonely! Just us three—
Mother, Alice, and poor feeble me.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY—CONCLUDED.

If they are giving to the Morning Star, show the children the picture of the ship; and tell them the beautiful story of her predecessors, carrying joy and gladness to the Islands of the Sea. If they go to establish Sabbath schools in our own land, put the children in communication with some of the children there. If their gifts bless the Foundlings' Home in a neighboring city, interest your own tenderly cared-for children in these little neglected ones. To children within reach of large towns or cities the Flower Mission affords a pleasant method of training them to care for others. In all large towns want and sickness and sin are found; ever since Christ bade us "consider the lilies," flowers seem to be endowed by him with wonderful power to touch and uplift sin-sick, sorrow-burdened hearts. In every city Christian women utilize this power by carrying fresh, fragrant flowers to the homes of want, the hospitals of sickness or the prisons of sin. With each bouquet goes usually a text of scripture, and gentle, tender words of sympathy and counsel. Children in the country can gather the flowers, learn how to pack them, and send them into the city for distribution. You who live amid green fields, under blue skies, can never know how much good a bunch of dewy violets may do to a homesick, heartsick dweller in a city tenement house. Oh! there are many beautiful ways of training children to give, and to give for love of the dear Savior.

Then there is the giving to one's own: the expression of household love, on birthdays, Christmas, and other anniversaries. We believe in celebrating these anniversaries, especially parents' birthdays, with appropriate gifts; it knits the family together. And do not forget grandfather and grandmother, they prize these tokens of affection more than children can know. Among the cherished treasures of many a white-haired saint are little gifts from her grandchildren, perhaps the first letters they wrote or printed, a soiled bookmark worked by chubby fingers, or some such memento, worthless in the estimation of strangers, but of priceless value to her. As far as possible let these be the children's own handiwork. They will be more highly prized by the recipient, and the educating influence upon the donor will be greater than if they are purchased ready made.

Among employments we mentioned marketing; this affords excellent training in spending money and in keeping accounts. We know of nothing better in this line; in the first place, it requires the exercise of judgment in selecting, then care and accuracy in making change and keeping accounts. Records should be carefully kept to account for every cent, or half the value of the lesson is lost. Of course, this is not work for little children, but girls from twelve to fourteen can be trained to do it admirably. Marketing is peculiarly women's work; they usually do it more economically than men. Understanding cooking as men do not, they know now to substitute something else for an article ordered, but not to be had. Men's attempts in this direction often result in laughable blunders, as they have very crude ideas concerning things that go well together in a menu.

A friend of mine living in the suburbs of a large city where he did business, had for years done the family marketing, giving the necessary orders as he went to his office. At last his wife proposed that she should do the marketing, and he willingly gave his consent, making therefor an appropriation equal to the amount he was accustomed to spend. He told me that she did the marketing on a third less than he was accustomed to expend, "and," he added; "we live much better; I do not know how she manages it, but she does." The secret was, she had been trained to do the marketing when she was a girl, and she trained her own daughter to do it. I once spent a month with them when the mother was sick. Fourteen-year-old Kitty, on her way to school each morning, made all the household purchases for the day; when she returned in the afternoon her account book showed how each cent had been expended. Kitty now has a beautiful home of her own, and is noted among all her circle for the sweet dignity with which she presides over it, and the perfection of her household management.

Mrs. Doremus, of New York, whose name calls out benedictions, not from America alone, but from Europe, Asia, Africa, and the Islands of the Sea, elevated marketing into a fine art, and encircled it with a brightness from heaven, as she did it for the Master and in his spirit. The wide circle of her charities included several hospitals and other institutions in her own city, to which she gave personal care. Knowing how much depended upon having their supplies well selected, she took upon herself the task of doing their entire marketing. For years she did this, never relinquishing the self-imposed labor till the Master called her to her reward. Even after she was seventy years of age, her slight figure, bowed with age, could be seen each morning in the cold gray dawn of winter, as well as in the balmy summer time, on her mission of love, going from market to market, buying supplies for the Woman's Hospital, the Children's Hospital, and other institutions of mercy. As Dr. Tyng says of her: "Nobody ever arose before she was out on her errand of love. You might go out in the sunshine or the storm, and she was there before you; in the morning she was traveling about making preparations for other people before you were in the street. Some may say she lived in the street, yet if you had gone to her home and seen her children, the care taken of them, the love for the mother which existed there, the blessedness of that mother's presence there, you would have said that the mother must have always lived at home, she is always here; and so it was. There was a kind of ubiquity about her. Every year she made the domestic life of her household more attractive by the exercise of a riper Christian maternal spirit."

There is an old Latin proverb, "Opportunity has hair on front; behind she is bald. If you seize her by the forelock you may hold her, but suffered to escape, not Jupiter himself can catch her again." Our children need to be trained to seize opportunities, and make the best possible use of them. To insure success in life they need training to business habits; to do things when and how they ought to be done; to earn money honestly and to spend it judiciously. Many brilliant geniuses have made utter failures because of a lack of good business sense. Few in any walk of life have been conspicuously successful without it. Washington is not more noted for his patriotism than for his practical sense, his thorough business ways and his honesty. Wellington was an excellent man of business; he neglected nothing, left nothing to chance. He was thoroughly honest and punctilious in the performance of every promise. He firmly believed that the path to success, in business and in war, was the path of common sense; and he also believed that it is not good for human nature to have the path of life made too smooth. He took delight in overcoming obstacles, and trained those under him to a like spirit. When a boy, Sir Humphrey Davy wrote in his notebook: "I have neither riches, nor power, nor birth to recommend me, yet if I live, I trust I shall not be of less service to mankind and my friends than if I possessed all these advantages." This was the actuating principle of his life, to make the most of himself for the interests of humanity. The thousands who have been benefited by his discoveries in science, the many miners whose lives have been saved by his invention of the safety lamp, testify how well he has succeeded in being of service to mankind.

Do you say we have wandered far from our topic, domestic economy? Not so. The same principles which actuated these noble men, and have enabled thousands of other men and women to achieve the highest type of success, are found in embryo in every home. We would have parents, recognizing the truth, strive to develop this embryo. We would have them feel that it is no trivial thing, the way their children get or use money, but that it is a vital factor in the formation of character. Above all would we have them realize the fact that both they and their children are God's stewards, entrusted by him with certain talents, be they gifts of purse, mind, or heart, to be used in his service, and to be accounted for to him; for "what have we that we have not received?" Not even ourselves, "For we are not our own, but are bought with a price."

After all has been said we shall find the secret of true economy is in the heartfelt recognition of our stewardship. Accustom children to look upon earthly goods as talents entrusted to them by the Master, for whose use we must give an account, and they will not be likely to become either misers or spendthrifts. — Childhood; its Cure and Culture.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.
Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

WE present in this issue a continuation of the report of the late Institute at Independence, Missouri. It will be remembered that these are only the outlines of the work done. They may not always be fully understood, because they are so condensed. But space forbids that anything like a full explanation be given. They will serve however to guide your thoughts into channels that others have found proper to continue in. When perusing them, do a little thinking at the same time. These subjects are those upon which every Sunday school worker should study. They enter into the makeup of every school large or small. And any worker who does not study on the matters connected with his work will not succeed as well as he otherwise might.

INTERSTATE INSTITUTE.

December 27, 7:30 p. m.

OBJECT LESSONS, BY T. A. HOUGAS.

1. Benefits of or reasons for having them.
 - a. To make the thought more clear.
 - b. To reach the mind through both ear and eye.
 - c. To impress the fact or lesson taught.
 - d. To gain and hold attention.
- Note.—a. Often a point in the lesson is not clear to the mind of the pupil. We can make it more clear by using an illustration, an object, a drawing or a picture, etc. b. We learn by hearing and we learn by seeing. Either one is often sufficient. But when we can learn a thing by both hearing and sight, we have a twofold chance of understanding and retaining it. c. Often we learn and fully understand the matter, but it has no effect upon us. A fitting object lesson will so impress it upon our minds that we are moved by it. d. Many persons are listless and indifferent to a plain statement of facts, but will give undivided attention when some illustration is being given or an object used to explain the matter.
2. Time and place for them.
 - a. While teaching.
 - b. While reviewing.
 - c. Attract attention whenever needed.
 3. Kind of object lessons to use.
 - a. Very simple.
 - b. Appropriate.
 - c. Illustration of main point.

Note.—Remember the object for using an illustration of any kind is to make plainer or to impress a truth, and anything that is not simple or appropriate will draw the mind off of the lesson and to the illustration and thus defeat the very object you sought to accomplish. This is the most common and the most serious of mistakes in using illustrations, object lessons, pictures, etc. Again, illustrate only the main point. Let the others pass without illustration.

4. Cautions.

a. Avoid egotism. Do not put too much of self into the illustration. That is, do not try to make a display or to show how well you can handle the objects. Remember, the aim is to help to teach the lesson and not to make a reputation. You should literally forget self in the work.

b. Do not "flustrate." Many illustrations instead of "making clearer" actually "flustrate" the mind. The object or illustration is not simple enough, inappropriate, or otherwise objectionable.

c. Do not illustrate too much or too often.

d. Do not be too profuse.

5. Materials, objects, etc.

a. True to nature. These are those objects that are actually in question; such as pictures true to life, a lemon to illustrate a lemon, a fig leaf to illustrate a fig leaf, etc.

b. Imaginary. In this class it becomes necessary to imagine the likeness or the appropriateness. A child will call a stick a horse; two or three blocks a train of cars, etc. A straight line may illustrate a straight character and a crooked line a crooked character. A straight stick and a crooked stick may represent a straight and a crooked life respectively, etc.

The subject was continued by Bro. J. F. Mintun, on the special phase of blackboard work.

BLACKBOARD WORK BY J. F. MINTUN.

a. Its use.

1. To make more clear.
2. To impress.
3. To gain attention.
4. To explain truth.
5. To condense thought.
6. To emphasize.
7. In reviewing.
8. Bulletin board.

Note. To announce next Sunday's lesson or some special feature of it; to announce special work; to give general notice, etc., etc.

b. Lessons to be presented.

1. The subject of lesson.
2. Main thoughts in golden text.
3. Spiritual truths.
4. Geography and history sometimes.

c. Where used.

1. In class.
2. In reviews.

(The blackboard illustrations given during the evening will be presented at another time. It will require some time to prepare the cuts therefor.—Ed.)

The subject of "cards, pictures, etc., as used in class work," will appear in a later issue. It was discussed by Sr. Louise Palfrey.

THE FURNISHINGS OF A CHURCH.

Sometimes differences arise over questions of the above character before a proper canvass is made of the subject, upon which, after a proper canvass is made, unity prevails. Whether I shall make what may be considered by all a proper canvass, yet I hope to enlighten some, and thus be helpful.

A church building is erected for the which to worship God, in which to pray, to preach, to seek instruction, and to offer our spiritual sacrifices to God. The movings of the Holy Spirit upon the faithful has resulted in the organization of many Sunday schools throughout the church, which local schools have been organized into district, and a General Association; which associations have spread the news of the good they are doing in the church, that no branch is thought to be in a good spiritual working order unless there is a Sunday school within its fold and under its fostering care. To carry on the work of the Sunday school the most effectually there must be assistance given it; the church building being as necessary as for preaching services, and such building so furnished as to make it the most convenient and helpful. A part of the work of the Sunday school necessary to make it the most effectual, is to begin and close on time, hence a clock would be helpful; and so is it helpful in preaching and prayer services, for the same reasons; to impress the thoughts presented to the ear, by illustrations that reach the mind through the eye, for which blackboards are very effectually used; and so are they used by many of the ministry for the same purpose, and hence should be one of the furnishings in every well-regulated church building. This fact has been very forcefully impressed in the last two Interstate Institutes; the one held at St. Joseph and the other at Independence, Missouri, where had been placed in those beautiful edifices a large blackboard by some thoughtful ones, the building committee or branch officials kindly consenting to their being placed therein, and seeing their effective service, no doubt are now proud of such wisdom as governed in placing them there. The pulpit, the organ, the table for sacramental uses and secretary work, the library, the chairs, pews, and stoves, with the hat and coat racks are equally useful to the Sunday school as the preaching or the prayer service; and whatever is seen to be useful for any department of the work of the Lord, and the ability is possessed to furnish it, it should be had as the necessary furnishings of the church. Use and not looks is that for which church buildings are erected, and never should usefulness be sacrificed for looks, and yet in all things should neatness be exercised, whether it be in the lamps, stove, pews, or blackboard.

For unity in our work, I am,

A WORKER.

The much-talked-of recent visit of Mr. W. T. Stead to the Czar of Russia is described in full for the first time in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for January by Mr. Stead himself. The significance of the interview with the young "Emperor of Peace" will be appreciated by all who have followed the discussion of the disarmament proposition. Mr. Stead's article has also a distinctly personal interest, which is heightened by the new portraits of the Czar, the Czarina, and their children, which compose the illustrations.

SUMNER, Ok., Jan. 6.

Editors Herald:—When I last wrote you I was just recovering from a severe attack of hemorrhage of the lungs. Since then I have not done a great amount of preaching. Have spent some time at home, but have been in my field a large share of the time trying to do what I could. While my general health is good, my lungs are decidedly poor, and preaching is hard work for me.

We are commanded not to complain of sickness, etc. This statement is not made by way of complaint, but for the information of those who are desirous of knowing what my condition is. I expect to be found at my post doing all that I can as long as I last, and when the time comes for me to move over to the other side, I shall try and do so cheerfully and without any fear as to what the future may contain.

If I know anything at all I know that God is in this work, and while I cannot relate so great things as some in a miraculous way, I can truly testify that the "still small voice" of the Holy Spirit has visited me in such peace and power as to remove all doubt as to where I stand and what I build upon. If I had my life to live over I could no doubt make many improvements, but reflection along this line will never change the past. The future will take care of itself if we improve the "sweet here and now." The more I see of this work the more I admire it, and rejoice to see the excellent advancement it is making; and it is certainly a great honor to be numbered among the little army who are sacrificing for its interests.

While there is much to cause one to rejoice, though afflicted, there is now and then a bitter cup to drink. It would seem that some have not yet learned that man is mortal; that he is subject to sickness to a greater or lesser extent in this life; that many inherit from their ancestors defects of body that cause them much difficulty in life and result in final death. It is a great mystery to some that an elder is not healed promptly of every affliction. It is even suggested at times that "there must be something wrong or he would be healed," the critic not realizing that the same rule applied to himself would condemn him, too, if he has any affliction whatever; and who can say that he has none? The very person indulging in such talk may be carrying a cancer or catarrh that will finally destroy his life.

I was once made very sad from a supposed revelation along the lines of the above mode of criticism. I thought in my heart, "If this is all the comfort I get for the years of toil and sacrifice, I may as well give up trying to obtain divine favor." While still laboring under the sting of the thought that affliction was an evidence of disfavor with Heaven, I had occasion to dedicate a new gospel tent for the Oklahoma mission. I had used the tent some before the day set for dedication and in a storm was compelled to let the tent down on the ground. The mixture of dust and rain and the stain from weeds and grass left some very ugly spots on the tent which I was unable to remove. I felt ashamed at first to present this tent to the Lord with these marks upon it, but while meditating along this line the still small voice of inspiration came calmly yet powerfully to me and said, "These are only marks of hard and honorable service obtained in line of duty and are acceptable; so also the marks of affliction that my servants bear in their bodies that have been received in like manner are honorable before me." This certainly removed a mountain. To me it meant much. It will comfort me as long as life lasts. If it proves a comfort to others, then I shall feel well paid for writing it. For my part I have no power to command the Lord. It is with him to bestow or to withhold. I want a faith that will take a denial cheerfully and without murmuring. The child who cries for what he wants, and don't get when he asks for it, may move a loving and sympathetic parent by his tears; but he generally succeeds in disgusting the rest of the family, and often the parent himself. Is our relationship with our heavenly Father correctly represented by the relationship between earthly parents and their children? If so a respectable and polite presentation of our wants certainly ought to suffice.

I had thought to say a few words concerning the work in this field. Many hindrances exist as do in other fields more or less. On the whole Oklahoma is a fine and promising field. The people as a rule are intelligent, industrious, and wide-awake. The country is certainly worthy to be called good, and contentment is the general rule. We meet with opposition at times, but we have learned to not waste time with every man who challenges us. The suggestion of Bro. Clapp along this line, in his article, "Preach the word," is certainly very timely. We can say, with "Bro. Jots," "Them's my sentiments." I might also say that I read with pleasure the article, "Is this Gospel?" by Bro. Montague. "True Succession in Church Presidency" by Bro. Heman C. Smith certainly fills the bill, if I am a competent judge.

A chapter of very interesting history might be written concerning our experience with Elder G. W. Leonard—Campbellite—at Maysville, Arkansas. Leonard visited the above place in August, lecturing against us and misrepresenting us and our books. I replied to him in three lectures and we entered into a written agreement to discuss the propositions debated by Mr. Leonard and Bro. I. N. White in their debate at Scammon, Kansas. I was to secure the services of Elder I. N. White if possible, otherwise I was to furnish a representative man. Bro. White could not respond, owing to other engagements, so by advice of Bro. Moore I selected Bro. J. D. Erwin, who consented to meet Mr. Leonard. An interesting correspondence followed, in which Mr. Leonard presented various excuses for delay, and finally a postal card came from him absolutely refusing to correspond farther on the question. I have learned from reliable sources that Mr. Leonard wrote to his friends at Maysville, informing them that unless they raised a certain sum of money there would be no debate. The money was not forthcoming, hence the action of Mr. L. as stated above. I have the papers to show that Mr. Leonard absolutely ignored his written agreement and backed out squarely. I thus place him on record so that all may know where he stands.

Yours in gospel bonds,
C. R. DUNCAN.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan 6.

Editors Herald:—On the 14th day of November I left Audubon, Minnesota, to take up the work in the city of Minneapolis. Have been busy visiting from house to house, praying and talking with the saints and others. It is having the desired effect; my meetings are fairly attended and I feel that good is being done.

Three Utah elders were out once to hear me speak. I had a short talk with one of them before service; he seemed to be a nice young man, but ignorant of many of the practices in Utah, or he did not want to acknowledge them. They baptized one young man here, by the name of Baker. He also heard me once, and at the close of service came to me and said there was more for me to learn. On Monday he called on me, desiring to know the difference between us. He further stated that the Utah men had deceived him and that he was done with them. He admitted that our claims were right according to the books; but I don't have very much faith in him. He is too easily convinced, and I think he is looking for an easy job. He told me he had been in three different churches but they were all wrong, and that he had been going on his own hook. Well, I thought he had better hang onto his own hook awhile yet, so I asked him to keep on investigating and not act until he knew what he was doing.

The first day of the new year was a day long to be remembered by us here. It was a day of fasting and prayer with us. There were twenty eight members present; all of them partook of the sacrament but two. Twenty-two spoke and eight prayers were offered. Truly we had a time of rejoicing. Parties met and gave each other a good handshake who had not spoken together for over twelve months. It was truly a day of great good to the work here. I can truly say the sick are healed and the saints here are awakening from the lethargy that has been over them so long.

I have just returned from St. Peter, where I was called to the sick. Was blessed in the administration; to God be the glory. We had a good prayer meeting last night, all present taking part. I am blessed in preaching the word and feel sure of a harvest of souls in the future. We are having a very good winter for this country, the coldest only 30° below, if I have been informed aright.

January ninth. — We were happily surprised to have Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, with us over Sunday, the 8th inst.; and to say he did well in presenting the truth to the saints and friends here is only putting it mildly. He hews to the line and only courts the friendship of his hearers by plain, simple, gospel truth.

He leaves us to-day for Wisconsin. The writer will go with him.

Come again, Bro. George; you are always welcome.
I. N. ROBERTS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Jan. 13, 1899.

Editors Herald:—Elder Hatton, of the Baptist Church, resident at Farmington, Iowa, recently went to Dumas, Clark County, Missouri, and made a public attack on the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, focalizing his efforts on Joseph Smith the Seer, his son Joseph, and the Book of Mormon. By direction of the missionaries in charge, J. R. Lambert and H. C. Smith, I went to Dumas, arriving on the 4th inst., to look after the efforts of Elder Hatton, and heard his lecture of that evening.

Bro. James McKiernan, of Farmington, Iowa, escorted me, and looked after the interests of the occasion in general, doing the janitor work, taking charge of and assisting in our services, and he made a full hand at his chosen part of the work. A union church has been built at Dumas, and such degree of liberality was manifest there as to permit Bro. Joseph Snively, our missionary to that field of labor, to hold a series of meetings there, and was met with favor by a majority. But two or three there, whose religious caliber for sectarianism was greater than for gospel truth, thought it good to have Elder Hatton come and give a rehash of the "old, old" stories that the older saints have become so familiar with, to counteract the good work of Bro. Snively.

Elder W. A. Hatton has compiled a pamphlet of 162 pages, with a brief supplement, entitled, "The Origin of the Book of Mormon; the Character of its Authors Examined, and Weighed in the Balance, and Found Wanting." "The Revelation on Polygamy and the Doctrine of the Latter Day Saints in conflict with the Bible."

The title of the pamphlet is altogether misleading, for instead of giving the origin of the Book of Mormon, it contains, almost in full, Clark Braden's edition of the Solomon Spalding Story—the story of the enemies of the Book of Mormon, as derived from Hurlbut, Howe, et al.

The pamphlet does not contain the purported polygamous document, only two or three brief extracts from it, nor a legitimate examination of its origin. It does not pretend to examine the character of those through whom the Book of Mormon was given to the world, save from the standpoint of their interested and religiously prejudiced opposers. And the reason why this pamphlet is entitled to the place of a compilation only, is because there is no new or original objections to the faith of the saints, or ideas in it.

Elder Hatton, Clark Braden-like, has a long series of perversions, misrepresentations, and objections grouped, and passes them to his auditors in a rapid manner, giving no time for an analysis of them; and he is a little gifted in ridicule, but has no true base for his pretended arguments.

I gave three evenings to the examination of the objections presented, in the presence of the same audience that heard Elder Hatton, and good feeling prevailed throughout. He heard us but one effort, and seemed to feel so wrought up that he left another appointment, promising to "tell a tale," giving the long sound of "a" with such emphasis as to render the phrase comic.

The objections contained in Elder Hatton's pamphlet, were met by Bro. Leonard Scott, in his debate with the elder at Farmington, Iowa, in 1892; and he says that the writing of his book grows out of that debate.

On Sunday, January 8, Bro. McKiernan and I went from Dumas to Sand Prairie, and by request I preached twice, being assisted in the services by Bro. McKiernan.

Mr. and Sr. Wheatly entertained us while at Dumas, and made us feel at home, in a truly saintly way.

In the faith,
C. SCOTT.

SWEETWATER, Texas, Jan. 4.

Editors Herald:—I am hammering along as best I can. Just now I am doing some manual labor as an assistant to my sustenance.

I received yesterday a challenge to defend the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, which I accepted, on condition that a proper agreement be put in writing and properly signed. The party is a preacher of the Christian faith, named Alexander, a son of H. B. Alexander. H. B. was baptized by Heman C. Smith, in Burnet County, Texas, some twelve years ago. I have told the young man that if he desired I would meet him; but if he chose to select some other one, I should claim the same privilege.

Yours in Christ,
L. L. WIGHT.

SOUTH GOULDSBORO, Maine, Jan. 15.

Editors Herald:—I have not troubled your pages for some time, but have busied myself in many ways. Have been interested in reading your pages; they are always freighted with useful thoughts.

I left my home the 1st of June for my mission field in Nova Scotia. Five months' time was spent in labor and travel in that province. Though we baptized none, we feel sure there were many friends made to the cause, and we hope the saints were benefited by our stay with them.

Our travels in that section extended from Digby to the antique city of Halifax, which boasts of having the best harbor in the world. This stretch is on the south arm of the peninsula. Our travels on the north arm were as far west as Parrsboro abreast of the famous Blomidon, that helps to form the Basin of Minas, that flows near the Grand Pre, the land of Evangeline. Do you ask, "Is it a beautiful country?" Well, wiser heads may answer differently, but we say, Nature has done a great deal towards beautifying that country in its formation, its mountain ranges abounding with little lakes of water, the outlets wending their way through deep gorges cut in the mountains, the water falling in some places a distance of forty to seventy feet like the famous Niagara.

One is quite compelled to stand with awe and look with wonder. Yes, to me it was imposing in appearance.

The soil in the valleys is very good and produces good crops, especially those through which large streams of water run as they are plowed every spring. Some of these valleys, especially the Annapolis, are noted for the abundance of fruit they bear, also for the fine flavor of their fruits. Eight hundred thousand barrels of apples is the report for Annapolis Valley the past year.

The blue noses with whom we associated we found to be a good class of people, not pompous in their demeanor. My labors were confined mostly to Lockhartville, Delhaven, and Perrow, in Kings County; Hillsdale, Newport, and South Rawdon, in Hants County; Waverly, in Halifax County; and Thompson River, Philips Center, Lakelands, Parrsboro, and Williamsdale, in Cumberland County.

At this late hour I express my appreciation to the saints and friends of that section for their kindly ministrations. We have called no names, as space would not allow me to mention them all.

Our labors will be confined to Central Maine for the winter. My home address is Wonsapac, Maine. I am yet hopeful and at work for the Zion of God.

S. O. FOSS.

ROSALIA, Wash., Jan. 1.

Editors Herald:—I wish you all a happy new year. I have belonged to this church about twenty years, and it is dearer to me every day. I love the glorious gospel, for it is the power of God unto all who obey. It is like an anchor to my soul; it reaches within the veil.

I am isolated far from the saints; I am the only Latter Day Saint here. The people here know nothing about the church and most of them are very much prejudiced, so much so they won't read our papers. The church publications are a great comfort to me in my lonely condition. I could not do without them.

I know this is the true church and that the signs follow the believer—I have seen the sick healed and have been healed myself by the power of God through his servants. A year ago last June I was taken very sick with black erysipelas, and thought my time had come. I was in Nebraska at the time, and sent for an elder. Bro. George Walters came and administered to me, and the pain and swelling left me. I know I was healed by the power of God. I have always felt that I should write and bear my testimony to it. I believe it is our duty to tell of the goodness of God to us.

I wish some of our elders would come here and preach. I think some would believe if they could only hear the word. I try to explain it as best I can. My sister here is anxious to hear some of the elders.

Pray for me, dear saints, that I may be ready always to do my duty, and that I may meet you all among the obedient children of God.

Your sister,
HANNAH F. JEWELL.

RED OAK, Iowa, Jan. 9.

Editors Herald:—Two Utah elders are here "tracting." They hired a room and announced intention of staying "all winter." We have met a few times exchanging views. I have tried to treat them kindly and have received kindness in return. They heard me last eve. I used the Christian Adventist church, and will continue. Fifty people heard me, I believe; text, "But what went ye out for to see?"—Luke 7: 25.

Wife of church proprietor said after service: "Brother, the only fault I found with your sermon is it wasn't long enough." After occupying forty-five minutes light left me, and I quit.

C. J. CARLSON.

FARWELL, Mich., Jan. 3.

Editors Herald:—The appeal in behalf of Graceland College we took to mean us; and so few of the saints here take the Herald, many of them did no know of the appeal; so I gave out that I had something to tell them, and requested all of the saints to be present at my house Thanksgiving evening. Nearly all came out; about fifty, big and little. After opening with singing and prayer, we stated the something we were going to tell them as best we could, having the "supplement" to the Herald, "Success When United," to appeal to.

We believe a better understanding concerning Graceland College is had here, for when asked if we would prove our thankfulness by assisting in so noble a cause, all hands went up; so a supper was voted to be had by the Gilmore branch and Sisters' Mite Society, proceeds for college fund.

It now is a thing of the past, and $7.37 was raised and will be forwarded herewith.

Bro. Walrath and family, of Fork, were here spending Thanksgiving with the writer. He was so well pleased with what he heard that he said he would see what their branch could do for Graceland. His daughter, Sr. Ruth, sent us a card saying they had a supper, proceeds $6.90; so goes the battle.

I am doing what I can to keep the camp fire blazing. Expect Bro. J. J. Cornish about the middle of this month. The saints are all waiting anxiously to see Bro. John.

Wishing success to Graceland and to every laudable effort put forth in the Master's cause,

R. B. CAMPBELL.

SPRINGFIELD, S. D., Jan. 7.

Editors Herald:—Joseph Smith, like the forerunner of the great Teacher, was a burning light; thousands have rejoiced in the truth he taught. While we mourn the death of such a man, let us be grateful that he was so much to his friends, his church, and his age. He was one of God's apostolic lights whose radiance death has neither quenched nor eclipsed, but only removed to shine under serener skies.

On December 25, 1898, there was a public debate held at Springfield, South Dakota, between Elder Warman Baldwin and W. H. Walling, each affirming his church. Baldwin is a Campbellite preacher, and well educated, and quite a fair man; but he was well done up. He had D. H. Bays' book on the dogmas of Mormonism, but he went down, and that forever, in this neighborhood.

With fondest wishes and still firm in the faith,
HUGH D. ALLEN.

PERSECUTION OF THE CAMPBELLS.

In an issue of the Herald for August I noticed a request from Bro. Alvin Knisley, asking for statements from good authority relative to the persecution of the Disciple Church for their religious belief. I have before me some works from their own pens, which I opine to be unquestioned authority, and from these I shall give a few quotations for his or any other's benefit.

In a tract written by Jerome A. Scott, entitled, "A Brief sketch of Alexander Campbell," page 6, is the following account of the bitter persecutions and unrelenting hatred to which he was subjected by his religious contemporaries:—

Soon after his father's arrival, he presented his credentials to the synod, and was assigned a position in Western Pennsylvania. Perceiving the party spirit that pervaded the minds of religionists in that section, he immediately began advocating Christian union on the "Bible alone" as the basis. Not long was he engaged in this, when his ministerial brethren began to look upon him with suspicion; they feared that the principles he advocated would relax their church rules, and promote feelings of friendship with parties, with whom they, with their party principles and party spirit, could not affiliate. These suspicions induced an investigation by the Presbytery, the decision of which was, that he, Thomas Campbell, deserved censure, on the grounds that he had not strictly adhered to the "Secession Testimony." He appealed his case to the Synod, but the action of the Presbytery was confirmed. Having a desire to maintain peace and good feeling, he endured the censure, hoping thereby to continue unmolested in the discharge of his duties, as he had learned from the Scriptures. He soon found himself mistaken. The opposition was more hostile than ever, resorting even to misrepresentation. A constant watch was kept over his proceedings; spies were employed to follow him, for the purpose of procuring fresh grounds for accusation. Perceiving their animosity [preachers, mind you.—F. J. E.], he was fully convinced that nothing but legal authority saved him from suffering at the hands of his enemies; or, as he expressed it, "Nothing but the law of the land kept my head upon my shoulders."

The italics are mine. This would be a splendid page of their own history to read just before entering a discussion with our elders, or heaping their abuse upon the moldering bones of Joseph Smith. You will notice in all these cases, those men were persecuted by so-called Christians.

Just as soon as Thomas Campbell—

really the founder of the Disciple Church—announced himself for a religion upon the "Bible alone," conformative to his conscience, just that soon he became the object of ministerial contempt and abuse. They raise a pitiful cry in referring to the abuse and persecution of the "Campbellites," but will readily unite in doing the same unchristian and unholy work to others who dare differ from them upon Bible points. We can prove that this church has suffered more by the vile persecutions and base misrepresentations at the hands of the followers of the persecuted Campbells than by any other Christians (?) in vogue.

Coming out boldly both in faith and practice he became the subject of much opposition, base misrepresentation became numerous, and through prejudice many injuries were sustained by Mr. Campbell and those associated with him. Discord reigned in the community; ties of friendship were severed; families were divorced; and friendly intercourse among neighbors weakened. Frequently slights and indignities were offered at public gatherings, frequently on baptismal occasions sticks and stones would be thrown into the water for the purpose of annoying Mr. Campbell, who was however, always calm and composed, performing his duty with great solemnity.—Ibid., p. 24.

Italics mine. The same writer, speaking of Alexander Campbell's experience in Edinburgh, Scotland, and the cruel treatment, even to imprisonment, he received at the hands of those modern Pharisees, on page 37, 38, says:—

The Scotch Anti-slavery Society having deputed three persons hostile to Mr. Campbell to elicit his views on the slavery question; they approached him in a friendly manner, and without stating their object, they obtained his views. In a short time they had posted in public places, placards, bearing the following inscription: "Citizens of Edinburgh—Beware! beware! The Rev. Alexander Campbell of Virginia, United States of America, has been a slave-holder himself and is still a defender of man stealers!"

The first statement was true, he had owned slaves but had set them at liberty. The second was false in that he had only conceded that the Scriptures did not expressly prohibit the holding of slaves, but on the other hand prescribed the duties of the slave to his master and of the master to the slave. Howbeit he denounced the institution of slavery and favored emancipation; yet he disapproved the course pursued by the "abolitionists" of Great Britain and America, in that their tendency seemed to favor rather than overthrow it. At his next meeting he informed the people that the statements were untrue, and appointed a time that he might present in full his position on the slavery question. Subsequent to this speech he found that he was pursued, or anticipated by the placards at all his appointments. Seeing that his enemies were determined to prejudice the people against him, while at Dundee he addressed a letter to the editor of the Edinburgh Journal stating his willingness "to meet in oral discussion on the question of American slavery, anyone, save the Rev. James Robertson—one of the investigators of the calumny incited against him [me.—Ed.], and who was once publicly censured and excluded from the Baptist Church for violating the fifth commandment in reference to his mother, of whom I have heard something in Dundee." This statement was quite repugnant to the person named therein and consequently he brought suit against the author for libel, and to prevent his escape from Scotland had Mr. Campbell arrested. Despite the many earnest appeals of friends who volunteered to go his bail, he gave himself into the hands of his persecutor and was confined. Concerning this he afterwards wrote: "I felt myself persecuted for righteousness' sake and I could not find it in my heart to buy myself off from imprisonment by tendering the required security. I thought it might be of great value to the cause of my Master if I should give myself into the hands of my persecutors and thus give them an opportunity of showing their love of liberty, of truth and of righteousness. I felt the idea of imprisonment in all its horrors—of being immured in a cell or cold dark dungeon for an indefinite period; thought of my appointments in Ireland and all that might be lost by not fulfilling them. I thought too of the dangers to my health, greatly impaired by one hundred days of incessant talking. But casting myself on the Lord, I said, 'I believe in all this I am persecuted for the truth's sake. I stand for the Bible doctrine in faith, piety, in morality and I am resolved to give no security. I will go to prison.' My liberty was taken away by liberty men. I libeled no man—I spoke the truth. There were three accusers, Rev. James Robertson in Edinburgh was one of them and he had been accused of insulting and abusing his mother. His exclusion from a church for that offense is a matter of record in Dundee. I did not specify any one of the three. Why did only one of them accuse himself by professing to be the man? Why did not the other two find cause for a libel? The truth is no libel in Scotland."

Does not the above account of Mr. Campbell's persecution run parallel with that of Joseph Smith's as far as it goes? He was imprisoned; so was Joseph Smith, but forty times to his once. He claimed he was persecuted for righteousness' sake; so was Joseph Smith. His persecution came from the religious class; so did Mr. Smith's.

Does it not seem a little strange that Mr. Campbell, who claimed to be a restorer of the ancient order of things, a preacher of the Bible and "Bible alone," and who so pitifully describes his suffering at the unclean hands of his enemies, by lies, calumny, vituperation, and imprisonment would resort to the same thing a few years later, as the following will prove?

In all parts of our country multitudes are inquiring after truth. So numerous are the calls that if the number of elders were three to every one they could not supply them. These facts are opening the eyes of some of the worst of our enemies, among whom is A. Campbell, of Millennial Harbinger memory. He has recently begun to howl most prodigiously, calling upon the people in great agony to read Mr. Howe's book as a sure antidote against delusion. . . .

Mr. Campbell has been invited to show himself a man of principle—after repeated insults to the Church of the "Latter Day Saints," and to exchange papers and cut a quill like a man; but seeing he dare not do it (for notwithstanding the confidence which his satellites have in him, he knows the weakness of his cause too well to hazard an investigation with an elder of the Church of the "Latter Day Saints"), we consider this effort of his in the same point of light which we do a whipped spaniel, when he is afraid to face his enemy he turns his hind parts and barks—so bark on, Alexander.—Church History, Vol. 1, p. 571.

It will be noticed here what kind of an "antidote" Mr. Campbell recommends "against delusion." Mr. Howe's book! A volume of lies and sworn falsehoods!! Mr. Campbell should remember this book was written by the worst enemy the saints had in those days, the same kind of characters against whom he had to contend while in Edinburgh. I presume Mr. Campbell held the Latter Day Saint elders in the same light in which he was held while in Europe; below his notice to meet them in public investigation. This is a plain case of the persecuted turning persecutor.

John F. Rowe, in a pamphlet, "The Disciples of Christ," page 22, says:—

It was not long until his Presbyterian ministerial brethren, actuated by envy and jealousy, arraigned him before the Presbytery for not preaching the gospel. He repelled their charges, but they refused to acquit him. He appealed to the Synod, and they, seeing that he was invincible in his fortress of truth reluctantly dismissed him as innocent of the charge. It was this persecution, from his own Presbyterian family, that induced him to sever his connection with the "Associated Synod of North America."

J. H. Garrison, editor of the Christian Evangelist, read a paper before the Baptist Ministerial Association of Boston, Massachusetts, entitled, "Our Movement; Its Origin and Aim." On pages 4 and 5, he says:—

In the first year of my ministry, while endeavoring to reach an appointment in the West by a Mississippi steamer, I fell in with a Baptist minister who happened to be going the same way. In the course of our conversation he referred to the Disciples by a nickname often applied to them in the West. When I asked him if he could tell me what those peculiar people believed, he replied, "Well, as far as I can learn, they deny the divinity of Christ, the personality of the Holy Spirit, and the necessity of regeneration, and teach water salvation."

These people of whom we write think it a terrible thing when they are persecuted and misrepresented, but will license and indorse the most unfair and unscrupulous of elders of their church in employing the same methods against the "Mormons," as they wish to call us.

The above is but an example of the many misconceptions the world has with regard to the teaching and belief of the Latter Day Saints. This man, of whom the editor writes, only knew of the teaching and belief of the Disciple Church as he got it second or third hand from enemies of their church. They very hastily reject this kind of evidence when militating against them, but just as readily receive it when laboring to make a case against the saints.

In a history copyrighted in 1897 by Thomas W. Grafton, page 90, it says:—

As was to be expected, the attitude of the Brush Run Church in becoming a body of immersed believers, awakened a storm of opposition from the Pedo-Baptist ranks, and its members became the subjects of no little persecution. Misrepresentations of all kinds freely circulated among the people. Family and friendship ties were broken, and the common civilities of society were denied to this new order of heretics. It is related that Alexander Campbell, returning after night from one of his appointments about this time, was overtaken by a violent storm. Calling at the home of a seceder lady, he sought shelter. Before granting his request she desired to know his name. Being informed that it was Alexander Campbell who sought her hospitality, she promptly refused him admittance, giving as her reason, her hostility to his religious views; so he was obliged to continue his journey in the face of a furious tempest, through an almost trackless forest, until he reached home.

Italics mine. Again on page 196, speaking of an extract from a journal in Scotland:—

tenancing a Rev. or Mr. A. Campbell of Virginia, U. S., who has announced a course of lectures in the Baptist chapel here. He is the apologist of man-stealing in its worst form—the advocate of all that is monstrous in that most monstrous of all systems—American slavery! Let the liberty loving, slave despising people of Paisley repel from their precincts with the scowl of their worst displeasure, the apologist of American murders, and let them show that they despise the advocate of man-stealing all the more because he comes clothed in the garb of sanctity."

I wonder how our Disciple friends would feel if we should quote the above to prove the character of Mr. Campbell? They would pretty soon say, "That is only newspaper talk from the enemies," yet they will unhesitatingly use the same stuff to prove Joseph Smith a false prophet, polygamist, horse thief, money digger, etc., etc. Mr. Campbell was called a manstealer, murderer, and refused shelter, not because of their high claims of liberty, but simply because he dared to advocate what he thought to be right, in opposition to the cherished dogmas of his day. Ye followers of this persecuted and misunderstood man, be careful you do not fall in with the spirit of to-day and persecute and misrepresent those who do not believe as you.

This same Thomas W. Grafton, who condemns the methods employed against the efforts of Mr. Campbell as "religious bigotry," has lowered himself to the same level, in indorsing Bays' book of incongruities in the following language:—

There is a timeliness in the appearance of this book which should win for it an extended circulation. The Mormon elder is compassing every foot of soil east of the Missouri River to secure adherents to his destructive dogmas. This book, written by one who knows whereof he speaks, if put in the hands of the people, will put an effective check upon this modern delusion. Mr. Bays has written in a clear and forcible style, and after allowing the Book of Mormon to state its own doctrines and positions, he has proven the falsity of its claims by facts and arguments unanswerable. The book should be put on the heels of every Mormon propagandist until further spread of this religion would be impossible among our nation.—Thomas W. Grafton, Rock Island, Illinois.

Here is a man who, while pleading for the persecuted of seventy years ago, who suffered by prejudiced bigots, steps in the very tracks of those he condemns by indorsing a book prejudicial to this "modern delusion." He should remember that Campbellism seventy or eighty years ago was as much a delusion as Mormonism is to-day.

A. Burns in his work, "The Church of Christ Identified," pages 64, 65, says:—

The struggle has been fierce and the war furious. Every mode of warfare except the fair and honorable was waged against the effort. For twenty years of their history, the twenty-second verse of the twenty-eighth chapter of the "Acts of Apostles" furnishes an excellent description.

The scripture referred to reads thus:—

But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, we know that every where it is spoken against.

We can say the same with reference to our people as Mr. Burns can of his, that "Every mode of warfare except the fair and honorable was waged against" the efforts of the advocates of this latter-day work, even to tar and feathers, by those professing to be followers of the meek and humble Christ, as the following will show from Mr. Smith's own pen:—

My friends spent the night in scraping and removing the tar, and washing and cleansing my body; so that by morning I was ready to be clothed again. This being Sabbath morning, the people assembled for meeting at the usual hour of worship, and among them came also the mobbers; viz.: Simonds Rider, a Campbellite preacher, and leader of the mob; one McClellie, son of a Campbellite minister; and Pelatiah Allen, Esq., who gave the mob a barrel of whisky to raise their spirits; and many others. With my flesh all scarified and defaced, I preached to the congregation as usual, and in the afternoon of the same day baptized three individuals. — Church History, Vol. 1, pages 242, 243.

Peradventure some may think Mr. Smith simply made this statement prejudicial to the sects, we shall add the statement of Mr. Bancroft, the acknowledged and eminent United States historian. Speaking of Mr. Smith's persecution he says:—

The same night Joseph was arrested by a constable on a charge of disorderly conduct, and for preaching the Book of Mormon. * * Again he was acquitted, and again escaped from the crowd outside the courthouse, whose purpose it was to tar and feather him, and ride him on a rail. These persecutions were instigated, it was said, chiefly by Presbyterians. While Joseph rested at his home at Harmony, further stories were circulated, damaging to his character, this time by the Methodists.

On the night of the 25th of March, 1832, Smith and Rigdon were seized by a mob, composed partly of the Campbellites, Methodists and Baptists of Hiram, twelve or fifteen being apostate Mormons.—From Palmyra to Independence, by R. Etzenhouser, p. 407.

From the very inception of the latter-day work to the present, persecution and misrepresentation have been the chief instruments used against it by its opponents, and to make it all the more shameful, done under the fair name of Christianity. This kind of Christianity makes infidelity a credit.

It seems passing strange how one can stand before the people and tersely describe their suffering, and commiserate the persecution of Jesus Christ and the apostles, who has been guilty of applying tar and feathers—at the very place where they were training men for the work of Christ (?)—to those humble servants who dare differ from them on the Bible, and stand for the right of conscience, turned out of schoolhouses and church buildings, laboring to make the innocent responsible for polygamy, plurality of gods, stealing, and even went so far as to put to death two of God's servants, etc. Over such religion the devils rejoice and hold high carnival. But in this, history is only repeating itself, and the words of Christ are having their fulfillment. For one of the signs preceding his second coming is,—

Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.—Matt. 24: 9.

They are a living illustration of the Savior's language in Matthew 23: 29-33:—

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, and say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets. Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

By the foregoing we learn some do always revere and honor the dead of thousands of years back, but if any of the living dare claim a similar mission they will be rejected and persecuted by the masses of to-day as they were in the days of Christ.

It is quite evident by the statement, "Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers," that those who condescend to engage in the unholy work of persecuting God's servants of today would have done the very same thing to Jesus Christ and his apostles. The principle is the same.

By the extracts quoted we learn that the Campbells were regarded as anything but good and honorable men, by those, however, who were jealous of their success, which we do not believe because coming from their enemies, neither do we believe that which is said and written against the instrumentalities of this latter-day work because coming from the same source. Why not our Disciple friends accord us the same courtesy?

Let me say in conclusion, that if we, the elders of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, cannot successfully meet our religious antagonists without dragging in the rehash or the screeds of their enemies, let us resign and engage in a more honorable pursuit.

CHRIST'S TRIUMPHANT KINGDOM.

In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.—Daniel 2: 44.

Who could contemplate this prophecy with indifference? Many, many have been the governments that men have built up: each in its time has wrestled with the great problems of political economy, human rights, and man's liberty. Measurable success has attended the efforts of many of them, but all have been tainted with error, and none have shown the quality of endurance: and we cannot point to one worldly government of the past or present and truthfully say: "Here is human liberty and human right absolutely secure; here is crime suppressed, and goodness rewarded." "There is none good but one," and he alone knows the secret of correct government; for government is instituted for the establishment and cultivation of good. Well may we yearn for the end of man's probation and the establishment of God's universal rule. And when we contemplate that, as a "consummation devoutly to be wished," we wonder what shall be the nature, form, and manner of that government. The intention of this article is to set forth some facts in relation to it, as revealed in the Scriptures.

In order to a better understanding of the triumphant kingdom let us take a view of the kingdom in its militant state. While John the Baptist was accomplishing his work, he said,

The kingdom of heaven is at hand.—Matt. 3:2.

Christ said,

I must preach the kingdom of God.—Luke 4:43.

And later he said,

If I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.—Matt. 12:28.

To the Pharisees he said,

The kingdom of God is already come unto you.—Luke 17:21, I. T.

The kingdom of God, then, became an established fact upon the earth in Christ's day.

Before Pilate Jesus acknowledged himself a king (John 18:36, 37 and Matthew 27:11), and before the same tribunal and also the chief priests as at many other times he adhered to his profession as the Son of God (Mark 14:61, 62; Luke 22:70). His apostles spoke of him as a "Prince and a Savior" (Acts 5:31.) From the foregoing we gather that Jesus came as the Father's ambassador to establish the kingdom and occupy the place of its king.

A king of necessity has associates in administering the affairs of his government—officers who share with him the authority and responsibility of the kingdom. So this king had no sooner begun his work here than he singled from his followers twelve, whom he named apostles (Mark 3:13-19; Matthew 10:1-5). As indicating their connection with his kingdom, we note that they were authorized to do miracles such as he did, to "preach the kingdom" as he had: and as he mentioned his power over devils, to cast them out by the Spirit of God, as a sign of the presence of the kingdom of God where he did such work, his commission to the apostles to cast out devils must certify to their authority in the same kingdom. To these he added "other seventy" to be "laborers in his vineyard" (Luke 10:1-17). Those also "preached the kingdom" and cast out devils (Luke 10:9, 17), showing thus that they partook of the same authority and power as the apostles. It was after this that the Lord said to the Pharisees, "The kingdom of God is already come unto you." It was indeed an organic thing, existing in their midst with at least eighty-three officers of three different grades, besides multitudes of other subjects. All who would submit to the authority of these officers of the kingdom would of course, be constituents of the kingdom, and all else would be essentially outside of its limits. These, the membership in general, were called by those who were chief in the affairs of that government, "saints" (Romans 8:27; Jude 3; Revelation 5:8, etc.).

Entrance into the kingdom is under the rule of the King according to the will of his father.

He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.—John 10:1.

I am the door.—John 10:9.

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 7:21.

Continuance in the kingdom and enjoying its benefits depend upon observing laws from the same source as evinced in the following:—

I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman.—John 15:1.

I am the vine and ye are the branches.—John 15:5.

Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.—John 15:2.

If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.—John 15:10.

Thus we see the supreme law of the kingdom is the will of the Father, committed to the Son and transmitted from him to each member of the kingdom.

Summing up the elements of the kingdom we find:—

1. A King—Jesus Christ.
2. Apostles as prominent officials, (the seventy being lesser apostles.)
3. Saints as the subjects of the kingdom.
4. God's will, the law.
5. Its rightful territory was evidently the whole world, for its ministers were commanded to "go into all the world." (Mark 16:15.)

It would be pleasant to record that this beautiful kingdom remained intact, and progressed without interruption to the fulfillment of its proper destiny; but history and Holy Writ both forbid such statement. The King himself said,

The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.—Matt. 11:12.

So it was; but a little time elapsed until the hand of violence was laid upon the kingdom at its very head and we see its king hanged upon a tree; and this because he dared to assert his character as God's Son and King. Then we learn that James, the Lord's brother, whom Paul in Galatians 1:19 calls an apostle, was killed (Acts 12:1-3), and Peter, another apostle, imprisoned. So the attack on the government proceeded from the King to his chief representatives. Nor did it stop here. One Saul of Tarsus obtained letters of authority from his chief to bind and bring to Jerusalem any who acknowledged the right of Jesus the King. (Acts 9:1,2.) Thus the whole fabric of the kingdom from chief officer to the least subject, felt the hand of violence that was to take the kingdom by force.

Did the kingdom suffer to the extent of being taken? Let us ask the question of the ages following, wherein no new word from the King is heard in the earth; when no living man bears the name of "apostle," and the name of "saint" in its original sense, is but a memory of the past; when there is nothing on earth similar in organization to that kingdom: and the silence of the centuries assents to the truth that the kingdom suffered extinction from the earth.

And the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them.—Daniel 7:21.

And shall wear out the saints of the Most High; . . . and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.—Daniel 7:25.

The italics in the above are, of course, mine, and are used to show how completely the violent "took" the kingdom. Is this the kingdom that Daniel said should never be thrown down? Or was Daniel mistaken in his estimate of the stability of that government? If what we have depicted is the end of God's effort to establish his kingdom on the earth, all our high hopes in that kingdom, begotten of prophecy and promise, are vain. We have read of the fabled bird that rose to life from its own ashes; and we think he is a poor God, whose kingdom does not possess as much vitality as this product of heathen imagination.

And the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.—Daniel 7: 21, 22.

Thus, the kingdom, taken from the saints is to be restored to them and then is when the triumph of the kingdom begins.

And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High: whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.—Dan. 7: 27.

One like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.—Dan. 7: 13, 14.

Here we find universal dominion ascribed to Christ the King at his coming, and to his subjects, "the saints." Well might Paul promise "rest" to the saints "when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven." Well might he say:—

He shall come to be glorified in his saints.—1 Thess. 7: 10.

Matthew 25: 31-46 represents the King judging all nations when he comes; then we read:—

And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.—Luke 22: 29, 30.

His apostles shall have part, as such officers, in administering the affairs of the triumphant kingdom.

Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?—1 Cor. 6: 2.

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.—Rev. 3: 21.

And hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation: and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.—Rev. 5: 9, 10.

The "redeemed" "saints" who "overcome" will "reign on the earth," and "judge the world."

And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the tops of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it; and many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.—Isaiah 2: 2, 3.

Thus all nations will acknowledge the "law" and the "word of the Lord" that shall go forth from Zion and Jerusalem.

The triumphant kingdom of God, then, contains:—

1. A King, Jesus Christ.
2. Apostles, and other ministers.
3. Saints, members of the kingdom.
4. The law, God's word.
5. Its territory, the world.

These features identify the kingdom as established by Christ when he came to earth with that which he will establish when he comes again. This must be the "little stone" that became a mountain and "filled the whole earth," because it fulfills all the conditions of that "stone kingdom."

It is sometimes argued that the conversion of one or all temporal governments to Christ will establish his kingdom universal. A large portion of earthly powers are comprehended in the toes of the image (most of Europe at least and some of Asia) and of them it is said that the stone shall "smite" them and "break in pieces and consume them;" that they are to become as "the chaff of the summer threshing floors: and the wind carried them away." (Dan. 2: 35.) These become Christ's kingdoms by destruction and absorption, losing their existence to form a part of his kingdom. It is but fair to suppose that the rest of the "kingdoms of this world" become the "kingdoms of our God and his Christ" in the same way. No higher conception of civil government ever found expression than that men "are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed." Now this church—kingdom triumphant—is better capable of accomplishing this ideal civil government than any other institution could be. Three departments are recognized as essential to civil government; legislative, executive, and judicial. Human foresight is never sufficient to legislate in such a way as to meet all requirements—cover perfectly the ground involved in its laws. Human power is inadequate to apprehend and punish all violators of law. Human justice is too narrow to always reach proper conclusions from evidence presented. For those reasons all three departments of human government are and always will be partial failures. God's government comprehends the divine in all those departments, and rises infinitely above all human institutions and actions. Scripture gives us examples of the manifestation of divine government of this character. Read 1 Kings 1: Elijah was up on the mountain. The king of Israel sent "a captain and his fifty" to take him: twice he did so and each time Elijah "called down fire from heaven and consumed them." Evidently here was a manifestation of executive power other than that of the state, and certainly God did not fail to send such power in harmony with his own law, and his own judgment. Again, read Acts 5: 1-11. For the simple sin of lying to God, Peter slew Ananias and Sapphira. Evidently he deprived them of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," so far as this life is concerned. The power to deprive of life is the extreme limit of power in temporal government. In the examples cited we see that the representatives of God's kingdom and of Christ's church may possess and exercise that power; and if they may exercise the extreme of the power of temporal governments, they may also use all the lesser powers.

One thing must be borne in mind in the contemplation of the triumph of this kingdom; its power is not in the arm of flesh, nor its strength in numbers. It must conquer by the power of the Holy Ghost as Peter, and Elijah, and all miracle workers under divine direction have done. Hence man must not put forth his hand in combat to forward that kingdom—he must not use physical force. He must wait for the moving of God who is legislative, executive, and judicial power of the kingdom. Men are only his instruments. Let the ministry of Christ attain to that sanctity that they may receive the Spirit without measure as Christ did, and no power of earth or hell can withstand them in the execution of God's will. Then they might regulate all the relations of man with man a hundredfold better than any human government. Hence this organic church—kingdom—is to become the only government on earth.

Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Northeastern Missouri district Sunday school convention will be held at Bevier, Missouri, commencing Friday evening, February 17, at 7:30 for teachers' meeting. Prayer meeting Saturday morning at 9:15. Business session at ten. Election of district officers takes place. Superintendents are requested to send in written reports of their schools as to the progress of their work, according to section 1, under article II. of By-laws for local schools in the Constitution. This does not interfere with the statistical report of the secretary. Schools will please remember that according to notice given at last convention, your reports and delegates' credentials must not be trusted to personal delivery, but sent through the mail, one week before the convention, to the district secretary, Bro. George A. Tryon, Huntsville, Missouri. Institute session commences at two in the afternoon. Topics for the improvement of the work and the workers will be discussed. Evening session at 7:30. Come provided with tablets and pencils to take notes. Let each school pray that a profitable time may be had at the convention, and as many teachers and workers as possible come to avail yourself of it.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the members of Nodaway District, Dear Brothers and Sisters:—As our quarterly conference convenes Saturday and Sunday, January 28 and 29, at Bedison, will you please come with your tithes and offerings, and you that can't come please send by some good brother or sister that that you may have to give to the Lord; for remember that it is all given of the Lord to us as his children here. He only claims one tenth part of what he has intrusted us with as his stewards; are we willing to divide with him? Are we willing to be tithed? Come, brethren, let us come up higher, and near the Master. Are we believers in the gospel of Christ? or do we rely on faith and faith alone? Now, dear saints, let us show our faith by our works, and let this be a part of our works, in paying our Savior his part of our earnings. Don't forget this notice when you go to conference. If I am not there you will find some one to receive all moneys.

Yours for the truth,

R. K. ROSS.

As we have just passed through another year with its scenes and changes, its pleasures and sorrows, and as the old year is passed and gone and the new year has made its appearance, our mind is carried back and find some have laid their armor down and have gone home; the day of preparation for them is passed, they must meet the record they have made, and as the year that has closed brings us one year nearer in time, I ask myself, Does it bring us one year nearer in preparation to meet the kind Father, the giver of all good? And as the year has been checkered with its pleasures and sorrows, I believe we have many things to be thankful for, and should lift up our heads and rejoice, and say this year shall be used more careful, and we as saints willing to make a greater sacrifice, that we may not feel in the day of judgment that we had held the hands still who would administered the word of life had we not withheld our means.

As I have just closed my yearly report, and find our district has done better than ever before to my knowledge, I feel thankful that one by one we are waking up to a sense of our duty. I have some new names on the book last year, which adds to our numbers, and makes a better showing in our report,

Now I kindly ask all that have had their names on the book last year not to fail to have it repeated this; don't think because you can't send as some others that your offering will not be noticed. No. God will not bless us according to the amount we give, but according to the effort we put forward to do our duty as he has blessed us. And I hope no parents will discourage their children from sending in their small amounts; but encourage them, and they will become interested and have a desire to save their pennies and place them where they will get value received. We should remember when we help the church it is not given away, nor like investing it in the things of this world that will perish by the using thereof; but it is a transfer of a portion of this world's goods for an interest over there. In Luke 16:9, Jesus says: "Make to yourselves friends of the Mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitation." How shall we do this? Is it by withholding our means from the Lord and to those from whom we expect the same in return? No; this could not be, for they do not possess this everlasting habitation, therefore could not receive us into something they themselves do not possess; but we can administer to the poor and needy, and comply with the laws that God has given us, and he can and will in his goodness when we fail here, or in other words when we have laid these bodies down in death receive us into an everlasting habitation.

I feel to thank the saints for the kind letters I have received from them, and for their willingness to aid me in trying to keep an accurate account of all moneys that come into my hands; and again ask all to join with me and try to encourage those who have not felt the need of helping in the financial question of the church, that the hands of God's servants may be loosed, and they go out and gather in the sheaves into the garner. My prayer is that we may see more names on the book this year than ever before. Let us take God at his word, and do our part, and he says he will open the windows of heaven and pour us out a blessing that there will not be room enough to receive it. (Malachi 3:8-10.)

I am as ever, your brother in Christ,

SAMUEL STROH,

Bishop's Agent.

DECATUR DISTRICT CONVENTION.

Friday, Feb. 10, two p. m. This session will be devoted to Zion's Religio-Literary Society work, which the program committee invited to join us in this convention, and which the society kindly consented to do. Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, president of the general society, probably assisted by some of the local workers, will have charge of work presented. The following subjects will be treated: "The place the Religio occupies in church work." "How to begin and how to continue." Opportunity will be given all to ask questions pertaining to any phase of the work.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Far West District:—Having been appointed missionary in charge of this district, exclusive of the city of St. Joseph and suburbs, I take this means of expressing my earnest desire for the cooperation of the saints. Please write to me from time to time, stating your wishes and needs, and pointing out what in your judgment would further the interests of the work in your respective vicinities. All communications will be thankfully received and promptly answered, and when possible I shall take pleasure in responding to calls for labor and assistance.

Let each one, officers and laymen, be ever watchful and awake to the welfare of Zion.

While we as individuals accomplish but little, comparatively, yet let us remember that our labors, taken all together, constitute and comprise the sum total of the great and important work of the church and kingdom of God in this dispensation.

When the great day of recounting comes, no one can be credited with all the labors performed, but each must be judged according to his or her deserts. Can you afford to neglect your part?

My permanent address is Spickard, Missouri.

Wishing and desiring to work for the upbuilding of God's church and his children, I am

Your colaborer in Christ,

FRANK J. CHATBURN.

MARRIED.

KINNEY—YONKER.—At noon on Christmas Day, 1898, at the residence of the bride, No. 212, Ninth Street, Traverse City, Michigan, Bro. Hiram M. Kinney, Jr., and Sr. Ruth Yonker were united in the holy bonds of matrimony; Priest James Davis officiated in the ceremony at the close of a spiritual testimony meeting. The Spirit of the Most High sanctioned the union. May the blessings of God crown their efforts with success, and fill their homes with joy and peace and love.

DIED.

NORTH.—In St. Luke's hospital, San Francisco, California, October 27, 1898, Bro. Constantine L. North. He was born May 17, 1871, in San Diego, California, being at time of his death 27 years of age. In February, 1898, was ordained a priest; was superintendent of Garden Grove Sunday school, and had made all arrangements and offered his services to do missionary labor with D. L. Harris; but when the call for volunteers came he enlisted in company L of the seventh regiment of California volunteers. Typhoid fever caused by exposure of camp life ended his life, after an illness of six weeks. He expressed himself as ready and willing to do what he could either on the battlefield in Manila or wherever he was cast, saying, "I am in the hands of the Lord and feel perfectly resigned." While he did not face the cannon's ball at Manila or the enemy at Santiago, he deserves as much honor; he gave his all, which was his life, for his country and the rights of oppressed humanity. He was respected by all who knew him; his captain spoke very highly of him as a soldier. His remains were interred in the city cemetery in San Bernardino. Funeral sermon by Elder T. W. Williams at the church, after which he was given in charge of Company K, and buried according to the custom of the soldiers.

NELSON.—Bro. Joseph Nelson of Nottingham, Pennsylvania, passed peacefully away December 26, 1898, in his fifty-third year. Funeral sermon in the Methodist church by Elder A. H. Parsons, to a large congregation. His home has been the home of all the ministry that traveled in that part. One daughter left to mourn. His wife passed away three years ago.

ORR.—At Hiteman, Iowa, January, 7, 1899, Bro. John Orr. He was born at Ironton, Ohio, December 19, 1864; was baptized September 14, 1893, at Hiteman, by Elder R. M. Elvin. Leaves a wife and three children to mourn their loss; also father, mother, two brothers, and two sisters. Funeral services in the opera house, in charge of Elder J. W. Loach, sermon by Elder W. H. Kephart.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Church History, Volumes 1 and 2,

BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH,
AND APOSTLE HEMAN C. SMITH.

THIS work is the most authentic and complete history of the church ever published. No effort has been spared to obtain information from every reliable source, and the information thus obtained has been impartially presented. It is therefore indispensable, not only to the membership of the church, but to all interested in obtaining reliable information concerning the thrilling events preceding and leading to the organization as well as the history of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which has attracted the attention of the world.

These two volumes cover a period of time including the events we have mention up to the death of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, June 27, 1844. These volumes contain a compilation of important and official documents never before published in so concise a form, many of which have been so rare and difficult to obtain that the public has not had access to them.

It is contemplated to publish a third volume by the same authors, containing the important and critical events transpiring after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, so soon as the sale of volumes 1 and 2 will justify. This will be the most interesting of all because it will contain the history of events from which issues arose that have resulted in rival organizations among Latter Day Saints. It will trace so clearly the causes leading to the great apostasy represented in Utah, that all who read can locate the responsibility for the result with unerring accuracy.

You cannot afford to do without this work, so if these volumes, or either of them, are not in your library, send us your order for volumes 1 and 2 at once. You could not make a more profitable present to a friend.

Price, $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

POINTS TO PUBLIC BLOTS.

JUDGE WATERMAN TALKS OF TRUSTS, LYNCHING, BRIBERY.

The Massachusetts Society celebrated Forefathers Day by a banquet last evening at the Grand Pacific Hotel. Fifty were present. Judge A. N. Waterman, who was the first speaker, responding to the toast "The Day We Celebrate," introduced his remarks by putting the question:—

"What would our Pilgrim Fathers say if they came here to-day among these surroundings?"

He referred to three conditions which he thought would excite their greatest amazement, mentioning the disregard of the laws against trusts, the disregard of law as evidenced by lynchings, and the disregard of the laws concerning bribery.

"If the Pilgrim Fathers could look in upon us to-night," he said, "they would think us degenerate descendants of noble ancestors. With all our beautiful decorations, brilliant colors, and floral display, they could not but think the birch rod is not used to-day as it ought to be. It seems that the time has come when the children do not obey their parents; that it is the task of the child to regulate the conduct of the father. During the years I have been on the bench in the Criminal Court I have noticed that a great majority of the burglaries committed are by boys under twenty years of age. There is not another country on the globe where the children are so lawless and degenerate.

"It is often said that the United States is the country in which laws are most easily made and most often violated. We seldom stop to think that there are over 150 lynchings in the United States every year and that there have been over 3,000 since the war, where no evidence of any sort that would be received by any court of justice was offered. Though a fact that we all know and understand, it excites no comment. I have known presidents of universities to take the platform to talk on tariff, but I have never known of any prominent educator speaking earnestly or decidedly on lynching.

"Governments are measured by the way they protect the weak and humble of the nation, and in that respect we fall far short of what the Pilgrim Fathers might expect of their children.

"We find our statute books full of laws forbidding the establishment of trusts and monopolies, but we cannot read a morning paper but we learn of the organization of gigantic trusts. We cannot eat, sleep, build a house, do anything without being patrons of these unlawful organizations. We have become so accustomed to it that we make laws against them and immediately violate them.

"Bribing is a common crime in our midst and we often know who does it. We feel great contempt for the man who receives the bribe, but extend a hearty welcome to the man who offers it. They are members of our best clubs and most prominent churches and we permit it without a murmur.

"Though the view I have presented to-night is a pessimistic one, I have great confidence in the American people, and fully believe that things will ultimately be made right."—Tribune, December 22, 1898.

STRENGTH OF RELIGIOUS SECTS.

The table of church statistics recently published by the New York Independent is full of interest, but it needs certain modifications and explanations in order to make it altogether a fair comparative showing between the two most numerous sects in the United States. The table places the total church membership in this country at 27,714,523, which is a net gain of 862,300 members for the year 1898. But the Roman Catholics are placed at the head of all the sects in point of numbers, whereas the Methodists are really entitled to that position.

The fault is not due to any error of the Independent's statistical editor, but to the different methods of counting membership in the Protestant and Catholic churches. The Catholic membership is placed at 8,395,178, an increase of 219,791. That of the Methodist Church is placed at 5,898,094, an increase of 162,196. This is an entirely misleading presentation of the comparative strength of the two denominations. The Methodist figures stand for active communicants—nearly all adults. The Catholic figures stand practically for the entire families of all who have ever been members of that church. Once a Catholic, always a Catholic, is the rule applied in compiling these membership statistics. The children, too, are counted down to a young age. Reckoning the Methodists by the same rule, they would number not less than 12,000,000 members.

The same thing is true of practically all the rest of the Protestant sects. They number fully twice as many members as they claim, if reckoned by the Catholic rule of inclusion. The Catholics are an influential, numerous, and powerful sect in the United States by reason of their nearly all living in the Northern cities and villages. The Methodists, on the other hand, live largely on farms and are widely scattered over the agricultural districts of the country. The same is also true to a great degree of the Presbyterians, Baptists, and Lutherans. Calling the total population of the United States 75,000,000, more than 60,000,000 may be broadly set down as coming within the Protestant scheme. The bulk of the remainder falls within the Catholic pale, while there remain several millions of outsiders.

There is a rapidly growing agnostic element in the United States, made up of individuals who no longer belong to any sect, and who may be called

"nothingarians," or people without definite religious dogmatic opinions. This element draws quite as large a proportion from the Catholic sphere of influence as from the Protestant, but the Catholic backsliders are not counted out, while the Protestant ones are. These explanations are necessary in order to make the Independent's tabulated statement a fair exhibit of the comparative strength of Protestantism and Catholicism in the United States.—Tribune.

NEBRASKA WINTERS.

A correspondent from Red Willow County, in Southwestern Nebraska, says:—

The winters out here are mild and short. On November 21 last, we had a blizzard that was so bad at times for a little while that I could scarcely see the schoolhouse, only a half a mile away. It let up in the afternoon so that a few teams were in the cornfields. I think it was the worst storm I have seen since I came, and I have lived here over seventeen years. Within two days after the storm the ground was bare and roads dry, and we have since had the finest kind of weather for picking corn, except a few cold days. We have not had two weeks of good sledding any winter since I came here, and none at all some winters. The ground is bare and the roads dry and smooth nearly all the time every winter. The sun shines nearly every day. Only three days last winter the sun was not seen. I have farmed here seventeen years, and seeding has commenced in January or February every year but one. I have not fed my cattle three months any winter and some winters none at all. I farmed in Iowa twenty-eight years, and I never saw finer weather there in October than we are having now. This is December 19, and I write this in the dooryard in my shirt sleeves. It is so pleasant that I went to sleep once. My peach trees were full this year. Trees planted out four years had a bushel to the tree.

ARMIES OF THE WORLD.

Few peaceable Americans realize to what an extent the world is under arms. A French statistician states that the total number of men permanently under arms is 4,250,000. If universal war broke out there would be 44,250,000 men ready to take up arms at once. Placed in one line the soldiers of the world could cover the equator right round the earth. To pass along the whole line one would need to ride an express train at sixty miles an hour for seventy days. If the soldiers received orders to exterminate the rest of the population, they would only have to kill thirty-three persons apiece.

WEALTH OF NATIONS.

The United States constitutes the richest nation on the globe. Mulhall furnishes these figures: United States, $81,750,000,000; Great Britain, $59,030,000,000; France, $47,950,000,000;

Germany, $40,260,000,000; Russia, $32,125,000,000; Austria, $22,560,000,000; Italy, $15,800,000,000; Spain, $11,300,000,000. These computations are based upon values as shown by real estate records, buildings, merchandise, and railways, as well as the circulating medium in each nation. As will be seen, our wealth is more than seven times greater than that of Spain, double that of Germany, two and one half times greater than that of Russia, nearly double that of France, equal to the combined wealth of Russia, Italy, Austria, and Spain, and $22,720,000,000 larger than that of Great Britain.

It is time that the Spiritualists were shown up. It is the old story of a body of people without authoritative teaching. They soon became a mere aggregation of fakirs, come-outers, charlatans, and cranks. The Catholic World Magazine for January publishes a story from a keen-eyed reporter who visited the great haunt of the Spiritualists at Lily Dale, New York, and it is worth reading to see the revelations he is able to make of their unregulated doings.

HOMEMADE GINGER ALE.

A simple way of making plain ginger ale is to boil fresh ginger root in water, an ounce of the root to each gallon of water. Just as you take it from the fire, and after it is quite spicy, add the grated yellow rind of half a lemon. When cold, strain; add to each gallon a pound of sugar and the juice of two lemons. Dissolve half a yeast cake, add it to the mixture, and let it ferment for about three hours. Bottle, cork, and tie down the corks.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

NUTRIMENT IN FOODS.

Following is a list of foods and the percentage of nutriment they contain: Cucumbers, 2; melons, 3; boiled turnips, 4½; milk, 7; cabbage, 7½; currants, 10; whipped eggs, 13; beets, 14; apples, 16; peaches, 20; boiled codfish, 21; broiled venison, 22; potatoes, 22½; fried veal, 24; roast pork, 24; roast poultry, 26; beef, 26; grapes, 27; plums, 29; broiled mutton, 30; oatmeal porridge, 75; rye bread, 79; boiled beans, 87; boiled rice, 88; barley bread, 88; wheat bread 90; baked corn bread, 91; boiled barley, 92; butter, 93; boiled peas, 93; raw oils, 94.

All previous records of lead and zinc production in southwestern Missouri were broken during 1898, the mineral output of the district having been in excess of $7,000,000, greater by over $2,000,000 than any previous year's output. The zinc output was ahead of any previous showing not only in the amount of the ore produced, but in the prices paid. Whereas $30 per ton was not long ago regarded as a high price for good ore, the best grade is now bringing $40.50.

Faneuil Hall has fallen into such a dilapidated condition that a guard has been stationed on the second floor of the building to warn visitors to keep away from the weak spots in the flooring and to keep them from leaning against the rotten posts that support the gallery. The building is soon to be reconstructed.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

GRACELAND is busy; the hum of steady work arises on all sides, for students realize that the Winter Term has really commenced in earnest. The senior class are looking with anxious eyes towards June, for then comes an end to their present arduous toil. After that—the struggle in the world for fame and honor. Our Faculty has been considerably strengthened by the addition of Miss Hatch, late of Iowa State University. We congratulate the Faculty upon such an acquisition.

The Departments of Music and Elocution combined together last week, and held a musicale. Quite a crowd was out, and a most enjoyable evening spent. We are anxiously awaiting the next. The Athenian held its usual session last Saturday and debated the question of Immigration. Who knows but that some of our young debaters are anticipating later efforts in the halls of Congress, or in the spiritual lists of righteousness against sin and error.

Under the management of Miss Rich, the Shorthand and Typewriting Department continues to develop. We teach the Pitman-Dement system of shorthand; the best and most generally adopted system in the country. If you wish your boys to enter the business world and reach the highest positions, send them to Graceland for a good general education and then place them in the Commercial Departments. The results will be eminently satisfactory and your boys (or girls) will, to their lives' end, bless you for having thus equipped them for the battle of existence. It is better to provide your offsprings with a good, sound education, the tools of life's success, than to give them a heritage of much silver and gold.

The name of Bro. Frank Swan, of Birmingham, England, has to be enrolled on Graceland's Roll of Honor, for he has heartily responded to the appeal. Read the following extract from his letter: "If I can do anything by influence or in other ways to help so good a cause, I shall esteem it a privilege so to do." Now, all the rest of the church, go ye and do likewise.

RELIGIOUS BABYLON FALLING.

The Chicago Tribune, of January 3, in an article headed, "New Modes in Churches," says:—

The beginning of the new year is marked by so many changes in ecclesiastical dogma, discipline, and policy that one might be led to think the entire body of Christian believers was in a state of ferment.

The article then proceeds to enumerate some of the innovations which have been introduced, to satiate the popular craving for things novel and sensational; among which he names the installation of surpliced choirs in Methodist churches, an old-fashioned revival in a Universalist church, the institution of Protestant Ministers' retreats, etc., etc.

One of the progressive pulpit statesmen is quoted as referring to the new "theological policy of expansion," in which is to be demonstrated their "ability to conquer the world, for the larger outlook rests in our abiding faith in the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, and the verities of righteousness;" while another gentleman of the cloth declared that, "the evolution of religion will be the retention of the essential truths contained in each particular branch, and the discarding of the nonessentials." Still another read a paper on "the creed of the twentieth century."

These gentlemen of the cloth ought to find substantial ground for the reflection that they are all at sea, and in the midst of a confused mixture of creeds and no creeds at all. From the times of Calvin and Melancthon et al., they have been groping in the dark, while every new departure takes them farther from the doctrines and methods of Christ and the apostles. Refusing the plain principles of the gospel, or ignoring them by the substitution of ordinances and precepts invented by them and their schools, they in times past have "made void the law" of the gospel by their traditions; hence like the Jews who rejected the Messiah and the apostles, these modern teachers refuse to hear, and reject the message of the restored gospel in these last days. And we fear that in their case, as in the first century, history will repeat itself in harmony with the axiom, "The same cause will produce the same effect in every age of the world." For as ancient Israel was rejected and scattered because of its rejection of the truth and "expanded" into all the world, these modern expansionists, rejecting the ancient landmarks, are drifting out upon unknown seas of church dogma, policy, and discipline, embarking upon unknown paths whither no pilot has preceded them to mark the reefs and rockbound shores that invite disaster and "final great loss and destruction."

So-called scientific rules of thought, based largely upon the theory of evolution as interpreted by the scientific teachings of the age, form the bases of these new and strange theological departures. Christ is eulogized but disregarded; professed but not followed; the rules and life of church building and general procedure are not those followed out by the great Leader and Commander, and in which he walked and worked in his life of instruction of and victory over the world; but are those of strange and uncertain way—uncertain and strange because unknown, speculative, beset with darkness and danger, and the end of which is inevitably remote and separate from God.

It is regrettable, but none the less true, that these men have come to such a pass that they are determined to have some new invention for a twentieth-century theology. The Jew, in some sense, held to what he had; the present tendency is to depart from the old creeds altogether. Surely much learning in the schools has supplanted the old-time faith in God and removed from many the idea that the God of the Bible should be sought for light and counsel in this evil day. The theological expansion bubble bids fair to burst and to scatter to the four winds the fragile elements of which it is composed, leaving its projectors scattered far and wide and each one left to walk in his own way, whithersoever his beclouded imaginations may lead him.

When the Son of Man cometh shall he find these men occupying as he commanded, imparting truth and light, or shall he find them with the great masses—without faith? It is apparent already that Babylon—religious and secular—is tottering to her fall, and that she shall fall to rise no more. The faithful children of God have abundant reason to "lift up" their "heads and rejoice" in the knowledge that before Babylon began to shake and totter preliminary to her fall, God introduced and began to build up his kingdom, which is to stand forever. They have additional reason to rejoice in the consciousness that as Babylon falls, Zion and Jerusalem are rising, to give light and hope to the nations of earth; to call them to the standard of truth and peace.

It must be that faulty earthly systems and conditions shall pass away. Human experiment and invention, appearing all along the ages in contrast and in opposition to the perfect plans of God, have been sufficiently tried and the climax appears in their culmination, their failure and downfall. He who presides in the midst of all things has decreed that the wrong shall fail, the right prevail; that "abomination" and error "shall not reign." It follows as a necessary sequence that misconception and other finite things must pass away, to the remaining of that which is sure, substantial, and eternal—the economy of God. It is necessary to the common good of the race, hence the decree that the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of God, and that all dominions shall serve and obey him.

With this substantial conception we labor in "the great latter-day work," basing our efforts upon the proposition that unless God build the house, they that labor, labor in vain. It is for this reason that we concur with an eminent coworker of a former dispensation in the thought "that other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ;" and that "the foundation of God standeth sure."

Upon that foundation alone can any one build permanently—for eternity.

GOVERNOR WELLS ON THE ROBERTS CASE.

There has been so much said regarding Brigham H. Roberts and his eligibility to a seat in the United States Congress, to which he has been elected by the people of Utah, the question has been discussed from so many standpoints, that we have refrained from reproducing the many theories because we had not room for all, and did not wish to give one more prominence than the others. But as the issues brought forward by the election of Mr. Roberts partake both of the religious and the political, and the Hon. Heber M. Wells is both an avowed Mormon and the political Governor of Utah, we reproduce his statement as furnished to the New York Journal as it appeared in the Provo Semi-Weekly Enquirer of January 6, 1899. It is as follows:—

Editor Journal:—Mormonism is alive and well, but polygamy is dead. Eastern people make the mistake always of associating the two together, as if they were synonymous. They are utterly distinct and separate. The Mormons have abandoned polygamy or plural marriage absolutely. Lorenzo Snow, the president of the church, is firm in his determination to uphold the manifesto of the former president discontinuing plural marriages. The laws of the church will not allow plural marriage without the sanction of the president and the president has declared that no such marriages have been contracted since 1890, and that none will be permitted in the future as long as while he is president. Mr. Snow is a very honorable man as well as a very resolute one and the American people may rely upon his word.

The war being waged against Mormonism is misdirected. Those engaged in it are poor marksmen. Their aim is as bad as the Spaniards. Mormonism did not elect Mr. Roberts. The Democratic party did it. Why doesn't the Journal put the responsibility where it belongs? Republican Mormons worked and voted against Mr. Roberts and they resent the accusation that it was Mormonism that electd him. The facts are that Mormon and Gentile Democrats nominated and elected him and Mormon and Gentile Republicans nominated and voted for Alma Eldredge, another Mormon but not a polygamist. Whatever glory attaches to Mr. Roberts' election belongs to those who voted for him and those who voted against him are not entitled to any share in it. As justly might it be charged that the New York newspapers, including the Journal, elected Mr. Roosevelt as that the Utah Mormons elected Mr. Roberts.

The Mormon people are not seeking to reestablish polygamy. It is wrong to force them as a people into a defensive position on that question when for eight years it has not been included either in their teachings or in their practices.

I think I am safe in saying as many polygamists voted against Mr. Roberts as voted for him. It is true that there are some men in Utah who had more wives than one at the time the manifesto of the former president was given and who have continued to live with their plural wives and support their families ever since rather than abandon them. Even taking this class, I do not believe any informed person will allege that more than 51 per cent of them voted for Roberts.

So that neither Mormonism, as such, nor polygamists, as such, are entitled to the credit or discredit of his election. It was Democrats, as such, that elected him. It is my opinion that the leaders of the Mormon church would have been pleased to see Mr. Roberts defeated after the Democratic convention nominated him, for the reason that they foresaw the result might be attributed to the church, but the leaders have been so frequently accused of interference in political matters, that they wisely remained entirely neutral, taking no part either for or against him. Some of the lesser leaders in church affairs, who are active Democrats, favored Mr. Roberts' candidacy, for the reason that they deemed it unjust that men who are qualified as Mr. Roberts is for political distinction should be debarred from office simply because he is discharging moral obligations to his family. This view is shared and is still held by a considerable number of Mormons. These are not seeking to rehabilitate polygamy, but they argue that men who were polygamists before it was inhibited and have remained such from motives of honor and self-respect and husbandly devotion, ought not to be precluded from office, and that to preclude them shuts out some of the ablest men in the State.

My own position is this: Being a Republican I was opposed to Mr. Roberts on political grounds, and being Governor of the State, I deemed it a duty to warn voters against the commission of an act which might be construed as a violation of those solemn pledges by virtue of which amnesty was granted to polygamists and Statehood was procured. I have never alleged and do not now believe that a covert plan exists to reestablish polygamy. I think Mr. Roberts' election was a great mistake and that the Democrats would have done the State more good and themselves less harm if they had nominated and elected some other good Democrat. I preferred that the people of Utah should settle the matter at home rather than that they should relegate it to Congress; that the political ambition of one man should be disappointed rather than that the vital interests of the State should be retarded by an agitation which seemed inevitable. But the majority of the voters have expressed their wills. Mr. Roberts has been fairly elected. The Democratic party has virtually said that it wants Congress to rule upon the question of Mr. Roberts' eligibility. Certainly the matter has passed out of any local control. It must now be determined by Congress. But the question to be presented should not be embarrassed with extraneous charges that are untrue and not pertinent to the issue. It should be considered fairly and without prejudice.

The question, as I understand it, is not whether polygamy is right or wrong, it is not whether the Mormon people are seeking to reestablish the plural marriage system. It is simply this: Is a man who is living and cohabiting with more than one woman as his wives eligible to a seat in congress?

Now that things have gone so far I see no solution of the problem except by decision of Congress. It is my earnest hope that the question, shorn of all prejudice and passion, will be settled on its merits."

Whether the Governor is correct in his theory of responsibility or not, he has certainly stated the issue concisely, clearly, and we think correctly when he says: "It is simply this: Is a man who is living and cohabiting with more than one woman as his wives eligible to a seat in Congress?" To make it clearer we would add, "When such a man has been disfranchised for this practice and has not placed himself within the provisions for amnesty? This is the issue, whether church or party is responsible, and the power that has brought the issue to the front should be made to feel the consequences."

For about forty-seven years the Reorganization has contended that polygamy was no part of "Mormonism;" that the two were "distinct and separate," that "Mormonism" had lived, can live, and will live without polygamy. We have further contended that the prosecution, imprisonment, disfranchisement, and loss of property in Utah for polygamy's sake was in no sense a persecution for the religion of "True Mormonism," but for something "distinct and separate" therefrom. It is then with much satisfaction that we note that so prominent and able a man as Governor

Wells, one too who has been brought up in Utah under the teaching of those who have tried to amalgamate "Mormonism" and polygamy, admits our contention. He says:—

MORMONISM IS ALIVE AND WELL, BUT POLYGYAMY IS DEAD. Eastern people make the mistake always of associating the two together, as if they were synonymous. THEY ARE UTTERLY DISTINCT AND SEPARATE.

Here is our hand, Governor, shake it heartily. When in connection with this we read the recent statement of President Lorenzo Snow that: "Mormonism, contrary to the popular notion, does not mean polygamy," we feel that our triumph is about complete, and even should Mr. Roberts be seated and retain his seat, the victory is ours; for the agitation caused by his election has forced our opponents to yield the main point in issue. However, should we feel called upon to use any influence against the seating, or in favor of the expulsion of Mr. Roberts, we hope to hear nothing more in regard to religious persecution; for we shall base our action upon our opposition to that "utterly distinct and separate" thing—polygamy.

In former days, when the church in Utah openly advocated the practice of polygamy, its representatives were constantly comparing that system with the social evils existing in our large cities, and saying, Which is the worse? as though either one or the other was necessary. They seemed incapable of rising to the high ground of denouncing both, and would represent those opposed to polygamy as being in favor of, or responsible for the other evil, which was utterly absurd. Now they represent every one who has a word to say against Mr. Roberts and others who had plural wives prior to the issuing of the manifesto, living and cohabiting with them, as being in favor of those wives being disowned, turned upon the streets as objects of public charity, etc. This is another absurdity, as neither extreme is necessary.

One writer represents that if Mr. Roberts had not married his wives he could have taken them to Washington, lived with them as mistresses, and his seat would not have been questioned. This is a slander. It may be that some members of Congress live with mistresses, but if they do, it is secretly, and not with the approval of society. When they are suspected they are ostracized, their reflection becomes doubtful, and if their guilt is fully established they are almost sure to be hurled from their seats, and disgraced forever. Nor are they permitted to turn their mistresses into the street and abandon the support of their children. The law will compel them to provide for their progeny. They are expected to cease their criminality, and yet they are held responsible for the support of those whom they have wronged.

The idea that the obligation to support his wives and children is inseparably connected with a continuation of criminal intimacy, is disgusting and absurd. Let Mr. Roberts be held responsible by society exactly as others are held responsible. We are not in favor of any distinction, either in his favor or against him. Then to contrast his condition with other congressmen who keep mistresses, is to make a distinction without a difference. If the law gives no sanction to the marriage of plural wives, then legally they are to him as though not married at all. Why then philosophize upon what would have been the result if he had not married them, when legally he has not married them? He stands in the same relation to them, before the law, as other men who keep mistresses without the pretense of a marriage. The only difference is that other congressmen when detected and convicted recognize their shame and punishment as merited, and confess that the act is a crime, while the polygamist impudently says: "To you it is a crime, but to me it is holy; for God told me to do it."

As our contention has been conceded that polygamy is no part of "Mormonism," but something "utterly distinct and separate," let this question be judged upon its own merits or demerits. Let polygamy and its advocates in the person of B. H. Roberts stand before Congress and the country stripped of all religious considerations (for no religious system claims the outcast now), and we will have no more interest than we had in the Breckenridge, or any other case of the kind; but undertake, as in the past, to connect it with "Mormonism," and we will be on hand with our protest, first, last, and all the time.

True, we have lawbreakers everywhere, and possibly they may occasionally get into Congress; but we should constantly seek to decrease the number there, not increase it. If in some sense we must tolerate lawbreakers let us place them under every possible limitation and restriction, and never consent to constitute them lawmakers.

A PLUCKY ELDER.

The following are extracts from a report of one of the young elders in the field and shows the right kind of grit for a minister for the truth:—

Since my last report, September 29, 1898, I have preached forty-three times, presided six times, and baptized two. I have been among strangers all of the time, except as I became acquainted. When I say strangers, I mean those who never heard the gospel before.

I have two openings; one at South Sioux City, where I baptized two, and left several near the kingdom, and one near Hartington, where several are interested. Bro. William Owens was with me at Hartington. He did a good work there. I have had to bear my own expenses to a great extent.

At South Sioux City I worked for my board and to get money to pay the rent of a hall to speak in, until I gained some friends who boarded me and paid the rent. I could hardly get away. I promised to go back, which I would like to do.

It was quite discouraging at times during the time I was north. I didn't even see a church paper while I was gone. I don't know anything about what the other brethren are doing.

There are some hard places up north; in some places I came near living on wind and rabbit tracks. It was good for me; I gained ten pounds while up there.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

The following, from Bro. Charles J. Hunt, dated Woodbine, Iowa, January 14, concerning a "chain" letter received by him; is handed to the editors, and which we publish herewith:—

Bro. Criley:—Let us figure a little. If I made four copies of this, the cost of mailing them, together with this letter to you, would be ten cents, saying nothing about the time and cost of the writing material. It would cost me or anyone else, about twelve cents to send ten cents to the college. I don't do business that way if I know it. If I remember correctly, the Herald, a few years ago opposed that kind of work, and I think they ought to declare against it again. To my mind it is an imposition, to say the least. See. I shall declare against "chains," except the one that is to bind Satan.

Yours for truth,

CHARLES J. HUNT.

P. S.—You have my permission to publish this letter if you wish. C. J. H.

Here is another, which is submitted without comment:—

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Jan. 19.

Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Brother:—How is chain letter business? Good I hope. We are having a high time. We all need stenographers now, each family here with from one to seven. I have to-day sent copies to States of Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Michigan, and Montana. I presume you are a silver bug now. I hope they will forge a silver "chain" around Graceland. What are you going to do with all the cash, if no breaks occur—have you figured it? Busted. With best wishes. ALMA.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. R. C. Evans writes us from London, Canada, under date of January 18. He reports two prayer meetings, thirteen sermons, and one branch organization with sixty-one members, also some baptizing; all in eleven days.

Bro. James Caffall writes under date of January 14 from Council Bluffs that he is detained at home for a season with measles in his family, among his grandchildren. He says: "Your work on Succession is well done, and I wonder what kind of defense Roberts and Penrose will make?"

Elder H. O. Smith, writing from St. Joseph, Missouri, January 13, says: "The work in St. Joseph is moving along finely. I must say that I think you have knocked out Mr. Roberts nicely."

Elder Henry C. Smith, writing from Orting, Washington, January 12, says of "True Succession in Church Presidency:" "I appreciate it highly for its value as a reference record and logical reasonings. I think it is timely and will be of great benefit to the church, and the history also." He adds: "I am not feeling at all well of late, and would like to be remembered in prayer." We hope the saints will consider this. Bro. Smith is a worthy man and if health would permit would be a man of great usefulness to the church.

"Unsettled questions have no pity for the repose of nations."

Bro. David Bowen, of Lamoni, has left with the editors about half an ear of "Jaredite corn," which he desires to have distributed among brethren in the vicinity who will plant and cultivate it with a view to introducing it in this region of country. The corn, he states, was raised in Oklahoma, the sample being of the third crop raised from eleven stalks which sprouted from about one gallon of seed corn taken from an ancient mound. Bro. Bowen says these statements of facts came to him from reliable parties. The corn is large of ear and grain, straight in the row on the ear, and of excellent quality, of a peculiar dark shade through the kernel. It is said to grow from three to four ears to the stalk and to run from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five bushels to the acre.

Bishop G. H. Hilliard left Lamoni on the 22d for the Kirtland district, where he will labor for a time.

Brn. Heman C. Smith and J. W. Wight, of the Twelve, departed from Lamoni for Kirtland, Ohio, on the 23d inst., in the interests of church business.

"A series of strong earthquakes early this morning (January 22) devastated three of the loveliest towns in the Peloponnesus. Many lives were lost. The destruction of property is appalling. Several small villages were almost completely destroyed, the houses rendered uninhabitable. Shock followed shock. The inhabitants fled from the towns and villages and are camping in the open country. Besides those who perished many were injured. No reliable estimate of the number of victims is yet obtainable."—Athens dispatch.

BRAIN FOOD.

Read before the Daughters of Zion at Independence, Missouri, December 21, 1898, by Clara M. Frick.

There is a great variety of opinions regarding the most nourishing food for the brain even among medical men, one claiming one kind to be best adapted to the building up of that organ and another something entirely different, so it seems we are left to depend to some extent upon our own common sense, experience, and observation in deciding this question for ourselves. Certainly we may read and in that way learn a great deal to benefit us, but we cannot depend blindly upon what every one thinks, for as I have said, nearly every one has a different opinion.

Dr. Steele, in his work upon Human Physiology, says that fish is considered a commendable brain food. Another celebrated medical authority informs us that "onions make a nerve tonic not to be despised. No other vegetable will so quickly relieve and tone up a worn-out system, and they should be eaten freely, particularly by brain workers and those suffering with blood and nervous diseases. Nothing will clear and beautify the complexion sooner than the eating of onions in some form." Among the vegetables peas also are an excellent brain food.

"From a medical point of view," says another, "the apple may be considered the most desirable fruit which can be placed upon our table. It is rich in phosphoric acid, is a splendid brain food, and a promoter of digestion."

Some ridicule the idea of any one particular food for the use of any one organ of the body, claiming that any food which is nutritious and healthful builds up each and every part of the body. This looks reasonable, provided the food used contains the necessary elements required by each organ. We can readily see that they do not all require the same; for instance, the teeth must have bone or enamel-forming material, while the brain, being composed of entirely different elements, could make no use of what is excellent food for making teeth, hair, or nails. Fortunately for us, we are not left to make our own choice of one special food for each part of our bodies, if we were I am afraid we would make a sad jumble of ourselves. An allwise Creator has ordained that each kind of food contains several elements necessary to the growth of man, and though no one food except milk can sustain life for any great length of time, we can by a little care and study select that which is best adapted to supply our own peculiar needs.

In the Ladies' Home Journal for October, Mrs. Rorer gives a bill of fare for the "overtaxed editor." I suppose editors are good examples of brain workers, so will give an extract from her article: "He may partake of a light breakfast composed of fruit, a bowl of some well-cooked cereal with cream, and a piece or two of pulled bread. For dinner, soup, beef, or mutton carefully cooked—never fried—a well baked potato, or boiled rice, and lettuce, cress, spinach, or chicory salad with French dressing, a wafer and bit of cheese. If his work continue far into the night, he may take a glass of koumys, buttermilk, hot milk, or a small saucer of junket, or a bit of chocolate to be placed in the mouth to melt and be slowly swallowed. Heavy food of any kind should be avoided at bedtime."

This looks like a very simple menu for a day's food; but from all I can learn, simple living seems to be the keynote for the successful brain worker. How often we learn of great men—those who have made their mark for good in the world—that they were spare eaters. The daughter of that great and good man, Charles Dickens, says her father was very abstemious in this respect, and though he loved to feast his friends, and often wrote of the pleasures of the table, he himself partook of only the plainest food. The same may be said of Wagner the musician, and I call to mind one of our most successful preachers who believes in this way of living, and if we may be allowed to humbly say so, his success is partly at least due to that fact.

But though the brain worker should eat simple food, he should not make the mistake of taking too little nourishment, for if the mind is continually at work, and does not receive sufficient to keep it properly nourished, it will draw its support from the body, which will soon become weak from the strain thus put upon it. However, there is more likelihood of our eating too much than too little.

Different kinds of food affect the brain differently. Professor Liebig tells us that "those nations which live chiefly upon vegetable food differ in disposition from those who live chiefly upon flesh." (We may see this fact illustrated among our friends and acquaintances to some extent.) He also speaks of the effect of different foods upon animals; speaking of a bear which was kept at the university, he says that as long as it was fed upon bread exclusively it exhibited a very gentle character, but a few days' feeding upon flesh rendered him savage and dangerous.

Overeating or eating improper food tends to clog the brain. In order to understand this more readily let us consider for a moment the way in which the food is appropriated by the body. We know that the body is composed of muscles, bones, skin, etc., and that each of these in turn is made up of the most minute cells; we are also familiar with the digestive process, how the food taken into the stomach goes through the various stages of digestion until it is transformed into a fluid capable of being carried by the blood to every part of the body; how each cell takes up the atom of nourishment which is best suited for the building up of that organ of which said cell forms a part. Now call to mind the fact that the brain requires one-fifth of the entire circulation of the blood, and it is easy to see how it may become clogged by too great a supply of even the best nourishment. We "feel stupid," we say, after a too hearty meal, and if we listen to a sermon after such an indulgence, we are apt to find it difficult to keep awake. Do not some of us remember reading of public speakers, musicians, etc., eating very sparingly or even omitting entirely the meal just previous to their performance, in order to have their minds clear?

A sufficient amount of sleep is very necessary to keep the brain well balanced and vigorous. Gladstone, whose mind even at his advanced age was strong and apparently unimpaired, was a great sleeper. Talmage declares that he has taught himself to sleep anywhere, and improves every idle moment by taking a nap. Our best friend who understands all the requirements of our minds as well as bodies advises us thus: "Retire to thy bed early, that thy body may be strengthened and thy mind invigorated." He also gives us the Word of Wisdom for our guidance in choosing appropriate food, and promises that if we observe his pleasure in this, he will bless us not only with health and endurance, but "wisdom" and "great treasures of knowledge." Does not this seem to indicate that the food we eat does to a certain extent influence our minds? True, God might thus bless us solely on account of our obedience, but everywhere men and women of thought and study are advising us along the same line, and those too outside of the church, who perhaps have never even heard of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Isaiah speaking of the coming Redeemer, says: "Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good." This possibly may not refer to literal food, but if it does it seems that even our Savior was to use such food as would develop body and mind in the right direction.

The brain is the seat of intelligence, and the Doctrine and Covenants tells us that all intelligence is of God; it is that part of us which is of kin to him. Then how very carefully we should care for these bodies of ours—the temples of the divine side of our natures—in order that his Spirit may find in us a fit dwelling place.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. V. R. Clarke, Grinnell, Iowa: "I send a special request that the saints pray in behalf of my father, Bro. L. P. Russell, that he may be restored to health, if it be the Father's good will. For four months he has been an intense sufferer."

I desire the prayers of the saints in behalf of my dear husband, that the Lord will deliver him; he is not of the fold.

INTERSTATE INSTITUTE.

December 28, nine a. m.; awaiting complete preparation for class drills, the following question was presented:—

Should applause be used in the church?

Answers: It is owing to the nature of the applause.

Should not applaud by stamping of feet, or clapping of hands as generally indulged in, neither by whistling or hissing.

An expressed appreciation wisely given is not objectionable, such as waving of handkerchiefs.

9:30 a. m.; primary class drill, by Louise Palfrey.

1. Class arranged in semicircle.
2. Teacher in center in front of class.
3. Picture cards and blocks ready for use.
4. Teacher greeted scholars.

What is a church for?

7. Various answers given.
8. Teacher approved of answers. (All were correct.)
9. Teacher told class that the Lord had told us what a church was for.
10. Circumstances, time, places, and persons connected with the lesson were referred to, and while doing so illustrated thoughts by pictures and blocks.

6. Faith in God gave them victory over enemy.

Note.—This was applied practically to class.

7. King took sick.
 - 1² Prayed.
 - 2² Got well.
 - 3² More interested in the worship of the true God.

Note.—This lesson was also made practical. 8. Several points were reviewed as new thoughts were introduced.

9. Time of class work thirty-one minutes. Model superintendent's review, by J. F. Mintun.

The two lessons being used in the class drills being different ones, yet there were a few thoughts in each in agreement, and these were used.

The following two formulas were used as the special review of the hour:—

My { house } is the { house } of prayer.
 { church } { place }
 Lord
 Solomon
 Hezekiah
 Everybody.

We { trust in } the Lord { in church }
 { pray to } { at home }
 { everywhere }
 Prevail.

The following were given as suggestive as to what might be used:—

- Holy place. Most holy place.
Holy place: Home. Prayer every day.
Most holy place: Church. Prayer at appointed times.

The body a holy place: Heart. Most holy place.

Crown: Reign. We will reign if we trust in the Lord and make his house a house of prayer.

11:35 a. m. The discussion upon the subject of classification was led by the General Superintendent. But we present but one part thereof; viz.,

ARRANGEMENT OF CLASSES.

One subject discussed in the Institute was the seating and positions of classes during lesson study. The discussion was confined to the needs of schools which have but one room for the entire school.

NUMBER IN CLASSES.

It was agreed that the numbers in the classes should be about as follows in order to insure the best results: Primary and intermediate classes, six to eight. Senior grade, eight to ten. Bible, not more than ten. Note. Some teachers may be able to handle classes a little larger. Again the difference in pupils' figures materially here. And sometimes circumstances compel us to place more in classes than we would otherwise. We cannot always get enough teachers to divide the school into small classes, but when it can be done, by all means do it.

POSITION IN THE ROOM.

This topic consists of cautions only. Do not place classes too close together. Do not place a primary next to a Bible class, or the former will be drowned out completely with the noise; or a class that attracts the attention of another class so they can be seen by the other class. You may find it necessary to occasionally change the places of some classes. The object is to have each class where it will do the best work.

FORM OF SEATING CLASSES.

Several forms of seating classes were then illustrated on the blackboard and the advantages and disadvantages of each considered (all classes considered upon a basis of eight pupils).

No. 1. A long row with teacher in front.

No. 2. A double row with teacher in front.

No. 3. A double row with pupils facing and the teacher at the opening.

No. 4. An angle or corner with teacher opposite.

No. 5. A semicircle with teacher at opening.

It was unanimously agreed that the semicircle (No. 5) is the first choice of form for a class. Many of our churches can arrange for one, two, or even three or more of the classes in this way. If you can, do it, and place the little folks there. They need it more than any other grade.

The next choice would be the angle or corner, (No. 4,) as it is very nearly the same thing. Practically it is the same. Many of our churches have a corner or two that can be used for classes. So with one or two semicircles that can be made with the chairs and a corner or two made with the pews or benches, you have three or four places of the very best form—possibly enough for your primary and intermediate classes.

Again, many of you can have a seat turned round and make the form number 3. The benefit of this over No. 2 is that the pupils face each other and can hear and understand one another better. The position of the teacher is very near, and therefore desirable. But if your seats are fastened to the floor, as many are, you cannot have form No. 3. The next best is No. 2. It has an advantage over No. 1 in that all pupils are within hearing of each other. To seat eight pupils on one long seat would require from nine to twelve feet according to size of pupil. In that case these at the ends could not hear each other and thus interest would be lost. There is no church that cannot have this form (No. 2) of seating. It simply requires that you use two seats instead of one.

No. 1 is used in many schools, and some actually prefer it to No. 2. If you are in doubt, try both ways and then take the one that suits you the best.

Thus the choice in order of preference would be: first, the semicircle; second, the angle or corner; third, the double row with pupils facing each other; fourth, the double row with teacher in front; last, the long row.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Jan. 14.

Editors Herald:—I am grateful to our merciful Father that I feel much improved in health. As he "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," so I seem to receive benefit from the warmer climate, and a respite from business cares. The wholesale firm that I am with at St. Joseph very kindly proposed that I take advantage of a winter sojourn in a climate less severe than at home, where I might be out in the fresh air and sunshine. There has been much rain and cloudy weather since we came. But the clear days are very agreeable, and to us seem like April or May.

The immense pine forests are beautiful. The magnolias and the holly trees, the live oaks, the verdure of creeping vines, the hanging moss, the hardier plants and flowers, all conspire to make this a congenial winter home.

Thomasville is twelve miles from the Florida line and about sixty miles from the gulf; altitude about three hundred and fifty feet; a heavy sand soil that does not blow nor wash. A population of about five thousand. One half, I should think, are colored people; a winter resort town where northern men like Mr. Mark Hanna build winter cottages, and bring or send their families to escape the cold weather. It has four large hotels that seem to the writer too large for the town, and some smaller ones; many boarding houses, and the residents who can spare any have rooms to rent. The writer has gained in weight and has a good appetite. Strength comes slowly. I feel grateful to my heavenly Father for his mercies, and for kind brethren who have remembered me by their sympathy and prayers. I hope to again be well and strong and to be fit for the Master's use.

If there are any of our people here I would be glad to have them call on me at 320 Jefferson Street. E. T. DOBSON.

CHETEK, Wis., Jan. 10.

Editors Herald:—We are getting along in the logging regions of Northern Wisconsin. Though the keen sharp winds from the west and the bitter cold weather, together with the drifting snow, are somewhat of a hindering cause, yet the people come out in good numbers to hear us as we preach the restored gospel, and listen with great interest. Some have given their names for baptism, and I think if this place is properly looked after several will obey the gospel in the future.

I began preaching here about a month ago, in company with Elder E. M. Wildermuth. We preached about seventeen sermons, and then E. M. W. went home to spend Christmas with his family and friends. I remained here a few days alone, and in the meantime went to the cities of Cameron and Barron and tried in those places to get a place to preach; but "my father's [or my mother's] religion is good enough for me," is the cry.

I spent Christmas with the saints of the Reed branch at Twin Lakes. Bro. F. Sanford joined me there and we held meetings at that place and at Tillinghast each evening between Christmas and New Year's Day. We then came back to this place, which is about five miles west of Chetek. There are several new places that we shall try and open up this winter, or as soon as possible. I am expecting Elder E. M. Wildermuth to join me in a short time.

Dear saints, we have a hard battle to fight, but let us strive to press onward in this grand struggle, and where duty calls be never wanting there. Though I sin daily, yet I am trying to do the work the Lord has for me to do, and not let anything hinder me. Last week I froze my face, on my right cheek, so badly that when I came in the warm room of W. H. Ross my face was soon swollen and blistered. Let us pray to God that we may be able to endure whatever may be our lot, that in the end we may receive a righteous reward. And the nearer the time is approaching let us pray more earnestly to our heavenly Father for his blessing; and no matter how hard the trials may be, "Keep the faith;" for in the END shall we find the reward.

Asking an interest in the prayers of the saints, I remain, in gospel bonds,

J. B. WILDERMUTH.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 14.

Editors Herald:—Some two or three weeks ago a lady called to my address here, in St. Louis, and not finding me home, left her name and address, with request to call. Accordingly I called at the address left, and found same to be the hospital department of "The St. Louis City [Refuge Home]." I met the lady who had requested me to call and learned she was employed as a nurse, and had held same position for two years. She stated—when first going there—her attention was attracted by a young lad about ten years of age. His conduct was commendable, was cheerful in disposition and extraordinarily intelligent. This boy was placed in the Home when between three and four years old. He is now twelve years old. During the eight years in the Home he has been schooled and has a fair education for one of his age. The Humane Society will not allow his mother to have him because she is a part of the slum of the earth.

Some six or eight months ago this lady nurse took the lad from the Home, thinking she could support him or perhaps find him a home with some worthy family. She sent him to Higbee, Missouri, and during the six months he was there he heard and obeyed the "gospel of Jesus Christ." He returned to the lady nurse a few weeks ago and was so earnest in his obedience to the gospel law, the impression was made upon the lady nurse "that to return the boy to the Home" would not be right, for he might drift with the tide—"Catholicism."

An effort to place him in a private family that wanted a boy of such smartness proved fatal upon learning he was a "Mormon." This family were Baptists.

The boy contending so earnestly to be placed in a home where he could live his religion caused the lady nurse to seek assistance from me as a minister of like faith. The lady is unable to provide for him longer on account of finances.

Who can give him a home? Particulars can be had by addressing,

SPRINGFIELD, S. D., Jan. 13.

Editors Herald:—Since my last letter things have changed some in the Pleasant Ridge vicinity. The Devil has shown himself at last. One lady of a certain church offered to furnish feathers, and thought a little tar mixed with them would be a better treatment for me than to get up a supper. However, the latter was a success as there were over seventy for supper.

Some thought I ought to be egged out of the country and went so far as to throw about eighteen, but as I was too small a target, none hit me. They attempted to break up the meeting one night, by throwing nails, burs, and hat hooks at me, but as I paid no attention to them, they soon quit. Then came one of those daring Campbellite ministers, very warm for a discussion, willing to sign most any kind of a proposition, so we struck a bargain. We held eight nights, of two hours each, thirty minutes' speeches. I affirmed the first four, he the last. He was an awfully surprised man, as I met him on every point. Finally he left the Bible entirely and went to the Utah Church for help; got the revelation on polygamy, but the more he picked at it the worse it got for him. Then he got the Braden-Kelley Debate and he would read out of it some of those speeches of Mr. Braden's, where he talked of God having flesh and blood, and said that was the teachings of the Book of Mormon. Then he quoted from the Doctrine and Covenants, Utah edition, section 130, to prove his statement. The poor man; how he did get tangled up! I felt sorry for him. The last night he almost cried; said he was not prepared for a debate. He made all kinds of excuses.

I don't think he will ever want anything to do with debating again. He is a man about fifty-five years of age; has preached for about thirty years; has been missionary for the State several years. He lives near Tyndall, county seat of Bon Homme County.

Here is a clipping which gives results of debate, from the Bon Homme County News, of Tyndall, South Dakota, January 11, '99. There are several here who are convinced of the truth and are willing to be called Latter Day Saints, so the good work goes on.

Yours for the spread of the gospel,
W. H. WALLING.

P. S.—I preached my farewell sermon Sunday evening to a good house, although there was a mob which declared there would be no preaching there that night; but when the school board came they made an entry through the window and opened the door from the inside, and the house was soon filled. We sang "America," which was appropriate to the occasion. After prayer the blessed Spirit of our Master filled the house and all felt its sweet influence, and many eyes were moistened with tears, and some said after the meeting, "Who could harm him after hearing such a good sermon as that!" To God we give the praise.

Yours,
W. H. W.

"A public debate, between Walling and Baldwin, which lasted eight evenings just closed. Baldwin represented the Christian or Church of Christ, and Walling the church as incorporated under the laws of the United States, known as the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. It may be a revelation to some to know that these people do not affiliate with the church of Utah, but cling to the original doctrines and tenets of the church believed and practiced under Joseph Smith. The general verdict was that Rev. Baldwin was outclassed. Elder Walling is a young intellectual saint of Glenwood, Iowa."

CENTRAL LAKE, Ind., Jan. 15.

Editors Herald:—The saints in Central Lake branch are getting along splendidly under the inconveniences of having a chance to get together. We are so badly scattered; we have about seventy in number. We have a teacher, two priests, and a Sunday school. It is well attended by saints and children. Bro. Morey is superintendent, and he is just the man for the place. The blessed Master is working with us in the Sunday school. Every branch ought to have a school. We are badly scattered here. The kind-hearted people let us have their schoolhouse, and we, with the help of the Lord, will fill it. Bro. G. D. Washburn is our president.

I have been with the branch as often as I could. I have only twelve miles to go to meet with the saints. I have preached seven times, led a number of prayer meetings, since ordained. I love this latter-day work. It is dear to me and I do love to talk about it. There are some investigating. O, may God help saints to live just what they profess; then the work will move, then the Lord's name will run and he will be glorified.

Yours in bonds,
G. W. THOMAS.

CARSON, Iowa, Jan. 6.

Editors Herald:—As the New Year with its varied duties lie before me, I wonder what the record will be that I shall make for the Master. Will it be made up of mistakes and failures, or shall I do some good for his cause? When I look around and see the masses in the religious world seeking for something to cling to that will bind them to the faith they claim, I wonder how long it will be, if ever, before they turn to the right way and accept the true gospel.

Then again I see so many of our own people resting on their oars when there is so much that could be done, even by the weakest of the saints. The day of trial of our faith is here, and we must either work or be counted out when he whose right it is to reign comes to make up his jewels.

In reading dear old Bro. Derry's letter in the Herald, my mind goes back to the days when he was well and strong, when no hardship was too great for him to endure for the gospel's sake; when we, my sisters and I, would gather around to hear him talk of the gospel and the many things he had passed through while striving to keep the law as revealed to young Joseph. It was his preaching and that of Bro. Blair, who now rests from his labors, that brought me to a knowledge of the truth, and I now bless them for it.

How can the saints in these days falter when they have the example of such brethren before them and know what they had to endure. And still they bore the same faithful testimony to the truth of the restored gospel, and to the end of their days, proclaiming the same. O, dear saints, let us wake up to a sense of our duty and do all in our power to help roll on this grand work. If it is but little, the littles make up the whole, and we are not expected to do more than we can. If it is to only warn our neighbor, we have done what we could, and God will bless the effort.

Let us teach our children, both by precept and practice, that they may be able to take up the work when we have laid it down and with more zeal go on in the good way.

May God help us so to live that it cannot be said of us, "She has left undone what might have been done."

Your sister,
MRS. AMENDA WOOD.

MT. GROVE, Mo., Jan. 17.

Editors Herald:—The branch at Mt. Grove is not prospering, but we still entertain hopes that it will; hence we work, watch, wait, and pray to that end. Have just closed a series of meetings here which did some good, as I believe. The Methodists and Baptists had been using a part of an old hotel building in which to hold weekly meetings, and they were kind enough to allow us to hold a meeting there, provided we would pay part of the rent, which we gladly did. Sickness prevented some of the saints from attending.

Expect to begin a meeting at Brushy Nob schoolhouse on the night of the 18th. The gospel has not been preached there, as it is a new opening, and I hope the saints will pray that God may bless me in this effort.

The article in a late Herald on The Gathering, by Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, presents things for the consideration of the saints that all should be interested in. Let us have a lawful and forward move in the work of the gathering. Let us not drop this subject, because of its importance, but let us continue to write on it, that unity of sentiment on that subject may be had in the quorums of the First Presidency, and in that of the Twelve, the Bishopric, the High Priests and so on, that Zion may be built up according to the principles of righteousness.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

CARBON CLIFF, Ill., Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—There are honest souls here seeking light. We are preaching in a schoolhouse seven miles east of Moline to large audiences every night. Began last Thursday night and our congregations are increasing. This is a new opening; the people are literally famishing for the gospel. We have preached but seven times and the Christian (?) people are being aroused, because they see their belief does not harmonize with the word of God.

There are no saints here, but never have we been in a community where we have received a more cordial welcome. There are many here who have been fed on trash so long, and now when the gospel is presented, thus presenting God as he is and his teachings as they are, they perceive the reasonableness of it all. Such expressions as these are constantly coming to us: "We never heard such a thing before!" "Why don't our preachers preach like that?" "We thought we had religion, but find we have been living in the 'Dark Ages.'" Skeptics are inviting the Christians to "come out and hear them talk Bible."

The Lord surely had a hand in sending us here; and the best of it all is, he has blessed us with such good liberty. Men who have not attended church for five to eight years tell us they would "sit for hours and listen to such preaching and not be tired." They say they "could never see any justice in the popular God."

People are anxious for us to call at their homes and when we get there we have no rest. Questions are poured in and the almost universal verdict is, "We never heard anything like it before. It is surely common sense." We now have engagements to visit at homes a long way ahead. Would that our laborers who have no place to stay could enjoy some of this hospitality!

One instance will serve to illustrate the spirit prompting a prominent Christian (?) man. He asked us "if the same power is now with the Church of Christ as in the days of our Savior." We told him "This same power is with his church wherever it might be found." He then, besides demanding a sign, said: "I know this authority and power is not with your church, or else the news would be published abroad." Then, in almost the next breath, he said he knew nothing about our church "only you two men."

Think you, all the listeners could not understand what he had done?

Even after services are dismissed many seem loth to leave, but will crowd around us and almost compel us to "tell us some more." The testimony of all is that never has Rock River Valley had such a shaking up; and even the professing Christians admit to their neighbors that they "have received new light." A member of the M. E. Church told his minister yesterday that if he thought his little flock in danger he had better "come down and investigate."

The Spirit of God is at work in this valley, and whether we shall reap the results we cannot say. Somebody will. We feel that God has directed us in our work here, and we believe it is because we are trying to keep ourselves humble. We believe that is the secret of the whole matter. Fellow laborers, arouse and go to work. The Lord has promised to prepare the way before us and let us remember that he has also said, "If ye do what I command you, then I am bound. Otherwise, ye have no promise." This is the hastening time, and God must direct, if we are to be successful.

We met with the saints in Rock Island and were glad to see evidences of greater spiritual strength. They are assisting what they can in these services. We ask the prayers of the saints in our behalf that we may continue faithful and that the circumstances which seem to be seeking to keep us from the field may be removed and we be allowed to go forth with the blessings of God attending our efforts.

Ever, for the truth,

J. W. ADAMS.

F. A. RUSSELL.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 17.

Editors Herald:—It has been over a year since I entered your columns, but since that time I have not been idle. My labors this conference year have been mostly in Michigan. During the month of June last I assisted Bro. E. K. Evans in a debate at Englishville, Michigan. His opponent was Rev. F. T. Porter, of the Christian Church. Our cause lost nothing in the debate, but it was the means of publishing the gospel to hundreds who otherwise might never have heard it.

I have made some new openings this year—Dutton, Ravenna, and lately a very important one at Allegan, Michigan. Bro. and Sr. Kirby and Bro. and Sr. Russell are the only members of the church who reside there. Their love and zeal for the latter-day cause is very commendable. They have been struggling and praying for quite awhile for the gospel to be preached there, and wrote to several of our missionaries to come, but were disappointed because they were unable to get there. When they wrote to me I sent them word I would come, thereupon they secured the opera house for preaching services, and I occupied there at 2:00 and 7:00 p. m. on Sunday last. The audiences at both meetings exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the brethren. In the afternoon I spoke on the principles of the gospel, and in the evening on the "signs of the times." At the evening service over three hundred were present, including the leading business men of the city. Members of other churches left their own services and came over to hear us. The people were well pleased with our efforts. At the close of the meetings many crowded around and each expressed his satisfaction, and said to me that that was what they had always believed. One lady said she had always been a member of the Presbyterian Church, but she had never believed in it, and was very anxious for me to return.

The proprietor of the opera house was also greatly interested, and began at that time to raise money from those who were also interested in the preaching, to pay for the use of the house the next Sunday. Bro. Robert Kenyon, of Freesoil, stopped off at Allegan and assisted me in the meetings with his able prayers. Bro. Herman Smith, of Hopkins, also rendered valuable assistance in leading the singing.

I believe Allegan to be the best opening that I have ever known in my experience in the church. The people are evidently tired of feeding on husks, and are hungering for the substantial things, judging from the eagerness, earnestness, and intense interest with which they received the truths of the gospel, which God blessed us in presenting. Surely among so many there are some sheep who will hear the Good Shepherd's voice, and with God's help we will try to gather them out.

I go down there again next Sunday to preach for them.

SHERIDAN, Nev., Jan. 10.

Editors Herald:—The church in Nevada is holding its own, considering the disadvantages we have here in our scattered condition, having no one but two or three very aged elders to labor with and for the church, and they a great distance apart. Many of the old saints have gone to their rest and the work has been left without traveling missionaries, and being scattered over several hundred miles of country, it is difficult work to visit all members.

Brn. J. A. Davis and E. B. Morgan and Bro. and Sr. R. W. Davis are not to be forgotten. They labored the best that could be done, visiting the saints, encouraging them and building up the church to the best of their ability. They staid by the work nobly. Sr. Davis did a splendid work in the Sunday school and taught vocal and instrumental music and made acquaintances among the young people, making friends that will never be forgotten. And the good work is still going on. The Sunday school is a difficult work in Nevada, because the saints are so scattered, with only one or two in a neighborhood, and they as a rule cannot agree with other denominations, and the children are left out of both, and run loose on Sunday, and eventually go into bad company.

The people of Nevada have been getting poorer and the silver mines have been closing down. The mines for the last five years have not worked ten per cent. of their capacity, and hundreds of men have had to hunt other employment. But now of late it is looking better, and work at Virginia City is starting, new machinery is being put up, and many will be employed in the camp, and that will revive business in Western Nevada. Politics have been running high this last election, and the silver party came out victorious, and the people are hopeful of a change in money matters, and that more silver will be put into circulation.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn came here last July. He is a strange man; if he sees a high mountain he will try to get on top; if he sees a band of wild horses he will try to catch some of them. He labored faithfully for a time and gave us all a good whipping, and then left the Nevada saints to take care of themselves, after we elected him to the presidency of the district. As a general rule it is more in harmony to labor with the branches and scattered members.

As a general rule the people of Nevada are hospitable and free in their way, except in obedience to the ordinances of the church. Many are believing, and I firmly believe that many will in time come into the kingdom.

Many strange and wonderful manifestations of the power of God have occurred at different times in Nevada, and strange to state, they are soon forgotten. It is now as in the days of the Savior; of the five thousand fed so miraculously but few were converted. But there are many good saints in Nevada, though it may appear otherwise to some. In days of old the prophet thought he was left alone, but the Lord informed him that he had reserved seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to Baal.

May God bless his people with his Spirit and lead us all to do our duty in all things.

D. R. JONES.

ZENITH, Ill., Jan. 17.

Editors Herald:—I am still striving to do my duty in the great work which was introduced to the world in this age through Joseph the Seer; and I pray that this letter may inspire the hearts of all who read it to still continue to live true and faithful to this great latter-day work. We are commanded by the Savior to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, and as fast as we can understand his word we should comply therewith in order that we may obtain the prize which is to be secured at the end of the race. We are told by Paul to run with patience the race that is set before us, and to so run that we may obtain. Final salvation is the great prize to be secured by every one who endureth unto the end, and if we so run this race as we are instructed we will have no time to quarrel, no time to lie and backbite or speak reproachfully of one another; and he that doeth these things is not in the race, and therefore he cannot obtain the prize.

This race is set before each of us, and in order for us to get the great reward we must run, which means to press forward, in the work: "For this ye know, that no whore-monger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts."

Bro. J. D. Stead and the writer have been busy here in the Brush Creek branch since the holidays, and will remain here as long as the interest may demand. So far we have baptized six, and there are others who seem almost ready to obey. Bro. J. F. Henson, having been detained at home from his mission in Tennessee and Kentucky, on account of severe sickness in his family, has aided in the work here as best as he could.

The saints in the Southeastern Illinois district should not forget the law of tithing and offerings, and that we have been appointed by the Bishop to collect the same. Remember that our address is Orchardville, Illinois. By looking over the Bishop's agent's book, and in making out our report to the Bishop for the year just past, I discovered that many names of our brethren were not written therein, which should have been. Dear brethren in Christ, you should make a special effort during the coming year to have your name written on our book by sending us your tithing. Remember that the law is plain, and whose readeth let him understand: "He that is tithed, shall not be burned at his coming." The judgments of the Almighty are in the earth, both on sea and land. Men's hearts are failing them for fear for looking after those things which are coming. A whirlwind of the Lord is gone forth in fury which shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked; and while the wicked are made to tremble, and are watching for those terrible things coming on the earth, let us as wise servants look for better things to come. Let us be looking for the day when the Son of man shall appear in the clouds of heaven with all the holy angels. Be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is. And if we understand his will and comply therewith we have the promise that he will rebuke the devourer and he shall not destroy, neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time. And as the devourer seems to be abroad, leaving death and destruction in its pathway, and while it is passing over by day and by night, let us as saints of God be prayerful and ever live faithful, with a watchful eye that we do not neglect our duty.

Let us all press forward in the work and labor together in unity and love for the accomplishment of the great work intrusted to all, that we may be prepared to abide the day of his coming and to stand before the Son of man when he shall come. My prayer is that God may inspire all to press onward and upward that the gospel of the kingdom may be preached in much assurance in all the world. "I the Lord am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." Darkness comes by treating lightly the things that God hath given us. We should read the history of the past and learn our duty and choose that good part which shall not be taken away from us.

Yours in the faith,

F. M. SLOVER.

GROVE HILL, Iowa, Jan. 16.

Editors Herald:—It has been over one year since I wrote a few lines to your valuable columns; one year, and oh! how short that year has seemed to me. Would I recall that year if I could? O, no. When the old year was soon to pass from the record of the present I thought, How grateful I am that my Father in heaven has spared my life to walk down time's vista one year nearer the day of Christ's second, glorious advent, and still found strong in faith of the angel's message.

The past year witnessed the greatest trials of my faith that it has ever fallen to my lot to endure; but while I have had these trials, I have also had confirmatory evidences of the truth of this work that have far eclipsed all former manifestations of the power of Christ in the gospel. I wonder, will the Father forgive me for being doubtful at times, after witnessing the sick, near death's door, restored to health and strength by administration, and those who were deaf made to hear by the power of Christ, under my own hands in administration? And while presenting the truth I have had the Spirit lighten my face and thrill my whole being, until the words that fell from my lips, seemed so God-given and powerful that I knew that they who were hearing must believe. And yet, can I doubt? Oh, as Paul said, while I stand I fear lest I fall.

During the early fall and winter I labored in the southern part of the district, in company with Elder W. A. Smith, whom I found to be an able minister for Christ. We labored hard, but seemed to accomplish but little for the work. People were so prejudiced they would not come to hear. While talking with an old gentleman (?) who belonged to the Methodist Church, and who was one of its trustees at Sweetland Center, he said: "I am not in favor of you using our church; for we have our own preacher, and he suits us, and we don't want to be disturbed." Bro. Smith asked him how that accorded with the Bible, which said to do as you wish to be done by. "Well," he said, "I hadn't thought of that." But like the mule he was stayed, and would kick up once in a while when probed with the truth. Well, we found that place to be anything but a Sweetland.

On my return from Muscatine County I stopped off at Andalusia and Rock Island, Illinois. At Andalusia, the home of old Sr. Reynolds, I preached one night in the Methodist church, and how different! After service some of the Methodist people came up to me and so friendly, requesting that should I come that way again to use their church, and just as long as I desired. I find that old Bro. and Sr. Reynolds were admirably spoken of by those who knew them.

At Rock Island I preached twice, administered to nine sick, and blessed one child, the son of Dr. Asay, whose wife was so miraculously healed last winter in administration. I was indeed surprised when they called upon me to bless their child. The doctor belongs to the Baptist Church, and his wife to the Christians. I am the weak instrument through whom God saw fit at that time to give so great evidence of the truth. And why is it, that after seeing as much as they have, they will still cling to the man-made churches?

I came here about two weeks before Christmas, and have since been quite busily engaged presenting the truth. On last Friday evening the saints and friends held a sociable at Mr. Ed Shippy's for my benefit, and from which the neat sum of $14.55 was realized.

I am now preaching in a schoolhouse in the northeast corner of Blackhawk County; good congregations and splendid liberty, with fair prospects, makes my pathway joyous. I am making my home at present with Bro. and Sr. McRae, of Fairbanks. Bro. Roy Shippy, of Grove Hill, has been very sick of late, but is now improving.

Your brother in Christ,

J. R. SUTTON.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 15.

Editors Herald:—This is the first I have written you since I opened a mission in this city, for I wanted to wait awhile and see how the work would go among the colored people in Chicago. There are about sixty thousand of them in this great city, enough for a small city itself without any white people, and that is lots for one poor colored preacher to handle; and I feel like Paul when he was opposed fighting with beasts at Ephesus.

I have put out about two hundred tracts, and am trying to show the right from the wrong, and my mission is beginning to be the town talk among the colored people, and the white people of course. He, Graves, is a Joe Smith Mormon preacher; he is a devil; let us catch him. And, Bro. Joseph, and to all the heads of the church, if it ever was a time in this world that a colored man wanted help it is now, both spiritually and temporally. In Doctrine and Covenants, section 116, verse 4 we read: "Be not hasty in ordaining men of the negro race to offices in my church, for verily I say unto you, All are not acceptable unto me as servants, nevertheless I will that all may be saved, but every man in his own order, and there are some who are chosen instruments to be ministers to their own race. Be ye content, I the Lord have spoken it." Now, brother, that injunction of scripture always seemed to me to be wrong. Could not God have spoken to the Indian as to the black man? "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons;" and if this be of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Latter Day Saints have not been hasty in ordaining to offices men of the negro race. This race has always been trodden under foot by other races, especially in the Southern States, by their terrible mob and lynch laws. The American history is not complete, and the negro is insulted.

My work here since last April has been a hard struggle for me to get the gospel before the people. The large majority of the colored people here are Baptists and shouting Episcopal Methodists. They break chairs and bruise limbs, and make a large job for furniture stores and undertakers.

It keeps me very busy to give all diligence, exhorting the people to earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints. I never felt better in the work in my life, and I do know the outlook is good, I think in the very near future, for a good harvest. I have baptized, since April 15, five, and one old mother in Zion. She was born in Canada, in 1833, three years after our church was organized. She is a grand saint.

Respectfully, for the truth,

G. H. GRAVES,

No. 1802 Armour Ave.

Editors Herald:—Baptized four in Schuyler County, Illinois, eight miles west of Rushville. Met three Utah Elders who refused to debate the difference between them and us as to succession and other church doctrines. I put in three nights just the same, it being by request, showing up the defects and deformities of "Brighamism." Yet I felt to pity the elders who were present, as it seemed to strike them like a "clap of thunder from a clear sky." I used extracts from Bro. R. Etzenhouser's work on "Utah Mormonism;" and it seemed that they were ignorant of the fact that Brigham Young should ever have made such statements; not only ignorant, but surprised, and were inclined to doubt the truthfulness of the same.

The one from Utah, who was no doubt acquainted with the statements as they exist in the books in their own possession and the products of their own hands, could stand the fire but one night; but the other two, one of whom hailed from old Mexico (and by the way seemed to be an honest man) stuck it out to the close.

The above elders are making some converts in that locality, and the way they do it is, they have a tract, entitled, "What we believe," with the name of Joseph Smith signed to it, claiming that it is just as Joseph Smith wrote it. It is similar to our Epitome of Faith except the clause on the one wife question being left entirely out of theirs, so that in place of preaching "Brighamism" they preach what Joseph Smith taught, and thus deceive the people, claiming that they are a continuation of the church. Will not the Herald print "What we believe" just as Joseph Smith wrote it, and have it certified to, so that the ministry may be prepared to meet these Utah representatives and refute their deception; in the event that they have not published the document referred to in full?

Those elders referred to seem to have the sticktuitiveness sufficient to stay in one locality and canvass from house to house; and the stayoutiveness sufficient to stay away from home until they are called in by their superiors.

May the good Lord give them a better understanding.

"THAT DEFIANCE DEBATE."—NO. 2.

In the HERALD for September 28, 1898, is contained my first article under the above caption. At the time I wrote it, I supposed that our correspondence was at an end; but in a short time Elder Bays' letter came along, as usual, and from that time till now we have been exchanging letters as we did before. It is hoped, however, that before this article is completed the controversy will be at an end.

In a letter dated September 16, Elder Bays writes as follows:—

You may close your eyes to the fact, and flatter yourself to believe that the matter will pass unheeded by the general public, yet the fact that you decline to repeat the discussion at Defiance under the Mondamin rules without change or modification, will certainly be construed to mean that you were not satisfied with the Mondamin debate, and that a repetition of it at Defiance would prove disastrous to the cause you represent and from the consequences of which you could not escape.

Let the reader carefully consider the above statements in the light of what has already been published and what is to follow. In the same letter Elder Bays makes an important concession, as follows:—

I have no complaint to offer—nor have I offered any in the past—as to fairness of the rules you propose, but I again urge that the rules as they stand—signed by Elder Williams and myself—are good enough and perfectly fair to all parties concerned, and, using your own language, "I challenge you to show wherein they are unjust or unfair."

In this paragraph, the fairness of my amendments to rules 2, 4, and 6, is conceded; and by implication, it is even conceded that, as worded by me, they are superior to the originals. But, says Elder Bays, the rules as "signed by Elder Williams and myself, are good enough and perfectly fair to all parties concerned," etc.

Reflection No. 1. Was I trying to evade a fair and honorable contest with Elder Bays, at Defiance, by submitting better worded rules, which are entirely fair to both sides?

Reflection No. 2. If Elder Bays and his people, at Defiance, were anxious for another contest with the Latter Day Saints, would they have refused to accept this better wording of "fair" rules, to govern the disputants while debating the same propositions?

Reflection No. 3. Elder Bays knew perfectly well, when he penned the above paragraph, that I did not claim that the rules, as originally worded, were "unjust or unfair;" but we did not understand them alike. Elder Bays did not understand rule 6 as it was understood by the chairman moderator, at Mondamin, hence the necessity of a better wording in order to remove all possible ambiguity.

I quote from my letter of September 22, as follows:—

Will you acknowledge, Elder Bays, that with the proposed amendments to three of the nine rules, you have little or no hope of success? And to meet you on your own favorite tramping ground, if you can win a victory with the proposed changes, why not sign the propositions and rules, and end the controversy at once? Now, I am not at all particular whether you say you can or cannot win a victory with the proposed changes, or whether you blame it all onto the people (your people) at Defiance. No matter which position you take, you are in a "hole."

I have repeatedly told you why I ask for a better wording, and have never claimed that, as worded before, the rules were "unjust or unfair." You talk like I was trying to fasten on you some different rules, which you know is not true. If, as originally worded, the rules are just and fair—and we both agree that they are—then why do you and your people at Defiance, object to having them so worded that both parties can understand them alike? Why?

In Elder Bays' letter of August 12, he had explained his positions as follows:—

It matters not what rules were "had in view" when the article of agreement was signed, the article binds us to be governed by the same rules that obtained at Mondamin.

We have never asked for other rules, more or less, but have contended that rules 2 and 6, be so worded that we can understand them alike, before entering into another discussion. And in order to bring about this unity of understanding, as will be seen more fully before we are through, I have expressed my willingness that they be so worded as to express just what Elder Bays says they mean.

In the same letter Elder Bays writes:—

At several places in your letter you ask why I object to the changes you urge. I will answer again once for all. It is because the people at Defiance insist that you stand up to the rack with the same amount of hay in it—no more and no less—that was in the manger at Defiance [Mondamin?—ED]. Will you do it?

To make Elder Bays' meaning still clearer, and more emphatic, I quote from his letter dated August 31:—

With the repeated declaration that no changes of any character, whatever, will be made," etc.

And still further in the same letter:—

I presume that this may be regarded as the "closing incident" in the proposed Defiance debate.

In this connection, I call the reader's attention to the article of agreement as published in Herald for September 28. It requires that the disputants "shall be subject to the same conditions, and governed by the same rules and standard of evidence as shall govern in the debate which is to commence at Mondamin, Iowa, May 9, '98."

There is not one thing in the "agreement" which forbids a different or better wording of the same rules. Moreover, the disputants are to be made subject to the same conditions in addition to being governed by the same rules. (The italics in the above quotation are mine.) Now, when I proposed to meet Elder Bays on his own grounds, and accommodate his people at Defiance by standing "up to the rack with the same amount of hay in it—no more and no less—that was in the manger at Mondamin," Bays began to wince, and dodge, and go back on his own positions. Evidently he had not thought that I would be willing to meet him on that ground.

I quote again from my letter of September 22:—

I have made no demand in violation of the article of agreement. We will meet you, at Defiance, on the same propositions, and with the same rules, with the slight changes in wording already submitted, which you now concede would be fair and just to both parties concerned. But as you refuse to do this, I have concluded to make another concession, as follows:—

We will meet you as set forth in the agreement, that is, at Defiance, Iowa, without any changes in the wording of rules 2, 4, and 6, provided you will now agree to be governed by the decisions of the chairman moderator on rules 2 and 6, as rendered at the Mondamin debate. Will you do it?

To this offer Elder Bays replied as follows, in his letter of October 7:—

Were I disposed to adopt the apostolic style of Joseph R. Lambert, of Lamoni, Iowa, I would answer this question in the strictly dignified and classical phraseology of that dignitary, saying, "What do you take me for, anyway?"

Do you suppose that I am so obtuse as not to see that to agree to what you here propose would be equivalent to adopting the changes in the rules for which you have been so earnestly contending? "Be not deceived; evil communications corrupt good manners."

Thank you, Elder Bays. The above being true, it follows that I have been contending for an exact repetition of the Mondamin debate, (save the wrangles and waste of time,) while Elder Bays and his Defiance people have been opposing it!

In my reply of October 11, is contained the following:—

More than this, I have offered to debate this proposition [Book of Mormon proposition] with the Bible alone as the standard of evidence, and you refuse to do it! I have signified my willingness to be bound by your interpretation of rule 6, or by ours, just which you please, so there is an understanding beforehand as to the meaning of the rule; but to both of these offers you say "no." I ask again, Who is it that does not want to debate at Defiance?

And the following from the same letter:—

Now we come to the main point in your letter. You utterly refuse to meet us on the same propositions which were debated at Mondamin, provided you are required to be governed by the same rules as interpreted by the president moderator! Why do you refuse? Were you defeated at Mondamin? If not, and you won a signal victory, as both you and your friends have claimed, why not repeat it at Defiance? "What have you to fear?" Why do you "hesitate to undertake a repetition of it at Defiance, and again cover yourselves all over with the glory of just such another victory?" This gives you away entirely. You do not want a repetition of the Mondamin debate, at Defiance. This is clear as noonday.

In Elder Bays' next letter, dated October 15, he tries to patch up his bad work, but, as the reader will see, it was a failure. I quote his words:—

Your offer to debate this proposition with the Bible alone, is but another effort to evade the force of the literary evidences against the Book of Mormon, and is nothing less than another intended infraction on the "written agreement"—an occult movement to evade the whole issue, and escape the inevitable consequences of a debate at Defiance.

Again in the same letter:—

I have refused, and I now again refuse, to permit the ruling of a previous chairman to govern me at Defiance, or in any other debate in the future, near or remote.

October 21, I replied, from which I extract the following:—

How can you say this, when my last offer is to debate this, and the other three propositions, just as they were debated at Mondamin? which offer, it appears, you did not "dare" to accept. When I made this offer, I had no thought of excluding anything but American archæology, (the very thing which you are determined shall not be admitted as evidence, at Defiance,) and I am willing to make it so read.

My next quotation from Elder Bays' letter of October 25, serves to show his helpless and desperate condition:—

Again you say: "You utterly refuse to come to an agreement with us as to the meaning of rules 2 and 6."

I have refused nothing of the kind, for I am not aware that there exists any disagreement between us respecting the "meaning of rules 2 and 6." I think we understand them exactly alike.

Still further:—

Thus far I have refrained from rushing into print over the matter as you have done, but when you shall have fully determined to "throw up the sponge," the public must know the exact ground upon which your refusal to abide the written agreement is based.

I first call attention to the last paragraph quoted. In a letter dated November 12, Elder Bays presents and approves a quotation from A. M. Haggard, their State Secretary, I believe, as published in the Christian Oracle, of September 15. From this quotation, furnished by Elder Bays, we learn; first, that at least one of my letters, to Elder Bays, had been placed in the hands of Elder Haggard, for he quotes from and misrepresents my letter of August 23; and, second, this article on the Lambert and Bays correspondence, was published thirteen days before mine appeared in the Saints' Herald. So far as the quotation shows, my letter of August 23 was the last and only one quoted, and in it is found parenthetical reading for which Haggard or Bays is responsible, which reading is not found in my letter! But in my article on "That Defiance Debate," is contained the article of agreement in full; my first letter to Elder Bays, in its entirety; the proposed changes in the wording of rules 2, 4, and 6, the last being given in full, also, as originally agreed upon; quotations from Elder Bays' letters of July 23, and August 12, together with a lengthy extract from my letter of September 9. Now, who is it that has "rushed into print" with a partial and misleading statement?

The other paragraph quoted from Elder Bays, is answered in my letter of November 3:—

Now, you gravely tell me that you are not aware that there exists any disagreement between us respecting "the meaning of rules 2 and 6." "I think we understand them exactly alike."

At Mondamin, as you know, we contended that rule 2 meant to exclude new evidence only. At two different times, and in the presence of witnesses, I told you plainly that I had always so understood it, and so had my opponents. You contended (and I believe the president moderator so decided) that it meant to exclude new argument as well as new evidence.

As to rule 6, we contended that the wording and meaning would admit of the use of American archaeology on proposition No. 3; while you contended, contrary to what you had previously written to Bro. Williams, that it would not admit of that kind of proof, and that the rule meant no such thing! Right here is where our disagreement has been all the way through. I have tried in every proper way known to me, to bring about an agreement on these rules, so that we could have a proper and honorable debate; but as I said before, "so say I now again," you have utterly refused "to come to an agreement with us on the meaning of rules 2 and 6." All this flagrant and gross misrepresentation is put into one paragraph of your letter, and it serves as a sample of much more that is contained in the same communication.

With reference to Elder Bays' statement about my rushing into print, I replied as follows, in the same letter from which I have last quoted:—

When I published my statement in the Herald, I supposed the correspondence was at an end; but if you had already given your version of it to "the people of Defiance," and "the people of Western Iowa" you were away ahead of me in advertising, and there was no necessity for you to "rush into print." However, I will make you one or two fair offers along this line and see what you will do with them.

1. If you will secure the publication of the article of agreement, the propositions, together with rules 2, 4, and 6, and the entire correspondence, in one of your church papers, without comment, I will gladly agree to it.

2. If you will permit me to finish my publication of the situation, up to date, I will permit you the same amount of space for a reply, provided the editors of the Herald will consent—as I believe they will. Provided, that you publish your version of the situation in one of your church organs, allowing me the same amount of space for a reply, in the same paper. This to be final. What say you?

In Elder Bays' next reply he made no allusion to these offers; but finally, when pressed upon this point, he made the following reply, under date of November 21:—

You complain that you have made me several "fair offers" concerning the publication of our entire correspondence, in our church papers, and that I have been "as silent about them as was Dagon before the ark of God." Yes, sir, it is true I have been silent about these "fair offers," and expect to remain so until you have said that you will or that you will not, debate the Mondamin propositions according to the terms of the written agreement.

I now go back to my letter of November 16, in order to bring before the reader the last offer made to Elder Bays:—

You say, "I will come directly to the point in issue," etc. All right, so will I. I wish you had been willing to come to and consider this point, long ago. However, it has been fully demonstrated, now, I think, that we, by ourselves, cannot reach a unity of understanding on the points of disagreement; I, therefore, make you the following offer:—

1. I am willing to refer all our material points of difference to a committee of three; one to be chosen by you, one by me, and they two to choose a third who shall not be a member of any church.

2. We to be governed by the decisions of this committee on the following points; namely: (1.) Do the letters of J. R. Lambert, written in correspondence with D. H. Bays, prove or indicate that he has been trying to evade the consequences of a public debate with D. H. Bays, at Defiance, Iowa? (2.) Do the letters of Elder Bays prove or indicate, that he has been trying to evade the consequences of a public debate with the Latter Day Saints, at Defiance, Iowa? (3.) In the debate to be held at Defiance, shall the rules which governed at Mondamin, last May, be subject to any changes, whatever, in wording? (4.) If so, what changes shall be made? If not, shall the decisions of the president moderator, as to the meaning of rules 2 and 6, rendered at Mondamin, last May, govern in the Defiance debate?

3. The correspondence had between us, which commenced last June; the article of agreement, signed by you and C. E. Butterworth; the propositions and rules of the Mondamin debate, together with the official decisions of the president moderator, on the rules referred to above, written by himself and approved by us, shall be the only data from which said decisions shall be made up.

November 21, Elder Bays replied as follows:—

Your very liberal offer, to submit our differences "to a committee of three," is very respectfully declined for the reason (among others) that I prefer to submit the whole controversy,—when you have decided finally to "throw up the sponge,"—to a much larger committee than the one you name. I prefer to have it decided in "committee of the whole,"—the public.

November 22 I replied, from which I quote as follows:—

The situation is this: I claim to be in harmony with the terms of the agreement. You claim the same thing; but we are in conflict with each other. I am willing, and have offered to settle our differences by arbitration, which is the fair and honorable way. You refuse. I am not surprised. It only confirms my former statement that you are unwilling to hold an honorable debate at Defiance.

In reply to another part of his letter I wrote as follows:—

For you to ask me to name our man and the date for debate to begin, before we come to a unity of understanding as to the meaning of rules 2 and 6, and while you utterly refuse to make any effort in that direction, (although you know that we had an unpleasant conflict and wrangle over them, at Mondamin,) is either a piece of bravado, or a piece of consummate folly! But I have offered, and do now offer, to meet you honorably, fairly, and squarely. Make the debate at Defiance an exact duplicate of what the debate was at Mondamin, or else so word rules 2 and 6 as to enable us to understand them alike. All this you refuse to do; and then, adding shame and insult to folly, you point blankly refuse to have our differences arbitrated, and continue to prate about "the article of agreement!"

Elder Bays' last letter, dated November 26, contains nothing new. I shall not answer it; but, by quotation, I herewith present the leading paragraph:—

Your favor of the 22d inst. reached me yesterday. "The situation is this:" While you "claim to be in harmony with the terms of the agreement," I have persistently urged that we have no right to "interpret" the terms of that agreement; but rather that we should go into the Defiance debate on the Mondamin propositions and rules, and then if a difference of opinion should arise during the debate, let the difference be settled by a ruling of the board of moderators, which is a part of the duty imposed upon such board by the rules. This would be "a repetition of the Mondamin debate in every particular," and for this I have contended from the beginning of this five months' correspondence, but to which you have uniformly objected.

If we have no right to interpret, then we are required to do what is impossible to be done; for the article of agreement requires; first, that the debate be held at Defiance, at some future time agreed upon, etc.; and, second, that the disputants "shall be subject to the same conditions, and governed by the same rules and standard of evidence as shall govern in the debate which is to commence at Mondamin, Iowa, May 9, '98." Now, the first rule which governed in the Mondamin debate provides that the debate be held at Mondamin, Iowa, May 9, 1898. When Elder Bays reads this rule as applied to the Defiance debate, does he interpret?

Further. When Elder Bays told me, as he did in the correspondence, that I had no right, under the agreement, to suggest any change, whatever, in the wording of rules, was he not putting his interpretation upon that provisional and last paragraph of the "agreement?" Moreover, when the original wording of rules 2 and 6 was found to be sufficiently ambiguous to admit of an unpleasant wrangle over their meaning, in the midst of the debate, was not that alone a sufficient reason why the disputants should agree upon an improved wording of these rules before entering into debate the second time? Would not proper and honorable controversy demand that it should be done?

Again; the original intention of those who frame or sign an instrument of writing, is a leading consideration in getting at the true meaning of it. When Bays and Butterworth signed the agreement they knew nothing of what the Mondamin debate would be only as they could learn it from the propositions and rules which had been agreed upon. In all this correspondence, as Elder Bays knows, I have not only signified my willingness to debate the same propositions, at Defiance, but have refused to consent to any changes in their wording, or in the order in which they were discussed at Mondamin. I have asked for sixteen sessions, while the original agreement called for fifteen. Then I asked Bays if he would accept fifteen, but he would not do it. I asked him to accept the word "evidence" instead of "matter," in rule 2, but he would not. I then asked him if I made it read "evidence and argument," the very thing which he claimed it meant, at Mondamin, if he would accept it; but he answered no.

I made rule 6 read so as to admit of the use of American archæology on the Book of Mormon proposition, but he indignantly rejected it. I then asked him if he would debate this proposition with the Bible alone as the standard of evidence, but he would not do it, claiming that I was only trying to evade the force of literary criticism against the Book of Mormon. I replied that I had no such intention, and was willing to so word it as to exclude only American archæology, the very thing which he was determined to exclude both at Mondamin and Defiance, but he would not accept my offer!

Now, if he won a signal victory at Mondamin, as he and his friends affirm, then his vigorous effort to exclude American archæology was a waste of energy and time, and there is now no necessity for its exclusion at Defiance.

After all these offers had been rejected by Elder Bays, without giving a single good reason for rejecting any one of them, I then met him on his own ground, and proposed to hold him to the most bold literalisms in which he had indulged. I proposed to make the debate at Defiance just what the debate actually was at Mondamin, save the wrangles over the meaning of rules 2 and 6; but this offer, likewise, he would not accept. How very anxious (?) Elder Bays must be to meet the Latter Day Saints, in debate, at Defiance! How very trying (?) to his belligerent soul it must be that we will give him no proper opportunity to turn himself loose, at Defiance, tear in pieces and devour the faith of the Latter Day Saints, as he did at Mondamin (?) last May!

Elder Bays rejects both of my propositions concerning the publication of our correspondence, in part, or as a whole. He rejects my offer to have our differences settled by arbitration. In fact, he rejects everything except his own narrow, technical interpretation of the agreement. And when he took his stand on that ground, he had already learned that we would not enter into a discussion at Defiance until we had first reached a mutual understanding as to the meaning of rules 2 and 6.

This, evidently, is the reason why Elder Bays has affected to be so bold. It was a cunning plot of Elder Bays and Co., and they have acted their part well.

Elder Bays talks about submitting "the whole controversy" to "the public." Why, then, did he not accept my offer to have the entire correspondence published in one of their papers "without comment?" I respectfully invite him to publish the entire correspondence to everybody, so far as practicable, and without comment. Will he do it? Let us watch and see. If he will not, what is the reason?

Elder Bays has repeatedly threatened me with the terrible weight of a public verdict on this correspondence. I have nothing to fear. I try to do what is right, never do violence to my conscience, and, therefore, I am fearing nothing that the Christian (?)

Church, or public, can or will do. When I can no longer leave myself in the hands of God, because of the position I occupy, I will quickly look for a safer place. I fully expect God and the right to prevail over every opposition.

J. R. LAMBERT.

N. B.—Since writing the above the following editorial statement of the Christian Index for December 29, 1898, has appeared. The Index is published in Des Moines, Iowa:—

"An Apostle?" J. R. Lambert, of Lamoni, will not debate with Bro. D. H. Bays. He has positively refused to discuss the question, as he agreed to, under the same rules. The "Mormons" claimed a great victory at Mondamin in the debate. Why not try it again on the same line? And why will people of Iowa board "Mormon Missionaries?"

Is this the fulfillment of Elder Bays' promise, to submit "the whole controversy" to the people? Comment is needless.

J. R. LAMBERT.

BOTH SIDES IN JUXTAPOSITION.

Editors Christian Index:—In your issue for December 29, 1898, appears the following editorial statement:—

"An Apostle?" J. R. Lambert, of Lamoni, will not debate with Bro. D. H. Bays. He has positively refused to discuss the question, as he agreed to, under the same rules. The "Mormons" claimed a great victory at Mondamin in the debate. Why not try it again on the same line? And why will people of Iowa board "Mormon Missionaries?"

Will you please say to the readers of the Index, that Elder Lambert is prepared to prove, not simply assert: First, that he never "agreed" to meet Elder Bays in public discussion, anywhere. Second, that the agreement entered into by Bays and Butterworth, last May, at Defiance, Iowa, was made subject to Elder Lambert's "approval or disapproval" in the following words:—

"The above agreement is to be subject to the approval or disapproval of Elder Joseph R. Lambert, of Lamoni, Iowa."

Elder Lambert has not violated that agreement as to propositions or rules. He has insisted upon debating the Mondamin propositions, without any change, and has asked for no new rule, nor for the abrogation of any one of the old ones.

Third, among a number of fair and liberal offers, made by Elder Lambert to Elder Bays, concerning public discussion, he offered (in behalf of the church) to meet him at Defiance, without any changes in the wording of rules or propositions, provided he would agree to be governed by the decisions of the president moderator, rendered at the Mondamin debate, on the true application of rules 2 and 6. This provision was asked for in order to avoid a repetition of wrangle and waste of time, in the midst of the debate, which occurred at Mondamin. This offer, Elder Bays "positively refused" to accept.

Fourth, if, as Elder Bays and his friends have affirmed, they won a glorious victory at Mondamin, why do they refuse this offer?

Fifth, at the close of the lengthy correspondence between Elder Bays and Elder Lambert, the latter offered to submit all their differences to a properly chosen committee of arbitration. That is, this committee was to decide on propositions, rules, and which, if either one, had refused to meet the other in debate, at Defiance, Iowa. This offer was likewise refused by Elder Bays!

Elder Lambert advises the good people of Iowa to take care of the Christian (?) ministers, and hear what they have to say.

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—Paul. Respectfully,

J. R. LAMBERT.

January 5, 1899.

The above communication, with the note of request which follows, was sent to the Christian Index, on January 6. The communication, but not the note of request, was promptly returned to me on January 9, and without one word of explanation. Last June, as has already been shown by the Herald, I sought to correct, in a gentlemanly manner, the misrepresentations and falsehood of Elder Mellinger, of Mondamin, Iowa, with similar results. At that time, I requested the Index to return my manuscript, at my expense, if rejected; but I never heard from them. Perhaps they did not care to risk a two-cent stamp on the mere promise of a Latter Day Saint elder. All this reveals clearly with what feeling, and in what manner, these Pharisaical gentlemen propose to oppose what they are pleased to call "Mormonism."

The brethren of the ministry will please take notice, so that when it is proper, and necessary, they may be prepared to expose this little, cruel, unjust policy, too widely practiced in the name of the Christian religion.

The following is the note of request, a copy of which, I kept:—

LAMONI, Iowa, January 6, 1899.

Editors Christian Index,

Des Moines, Iowa.

Gentlemen:—Inclosed find reply to your editorial note. I shall be pleased to learn that your sense of justice and liberality, will not permit you to reject it. However, should you conclude to reject it, please return copy to me at once. I inclose stamped and addressed envelope. Respectfully,

J. R. LAMBERT.

I am, as ever, your brother, with increased love for, and confidence in the purity, justice, and liberality of the Christian religion, as represented in the revelations of God in former and latter days.

IMPROVING THE TALENTS.

In the parable of the talents Jesus plainly indicates the fact that those to whom has been committed the work of the kingdom will be held to a strict account at the great judgment day for the way they employ their time and talents. It is a solemn trust that has been committed to the priesthood of the Church of Jesus Christ, and no one can plead as an excuse for neglecting to improve his talent that he only received one talent. It is required of him to add other talents to it, or at least put it where it will produce interest, whatever that means. To whom little is given, of them little is required; but that must be forthcoming. Everyone who has been set apart to the work of the ministry has accepted at the Master's hands one or more talents, with instructions to use until his return. How will the case stand with those who have accepted this all-important trust and have hid away their talents, and year by year have come up with the report, Done no preaching? And almost every form of excuse is given; but God will accept none of them except it be sickness. There are scores of men holding the authority of the priesthood who do not pretend to preach or exhort. Jesus told the man who hid his talent that he ought at least to have put it out at usury, given it to some one that would use it. Some offer as an excuse that they are in business and have no time, and others offer as an excuse that their entire time is taken up with their worldly occupation,—their talents buried, while all around men are perishing for want of the gospel. Some offer as an excuse that they are not encouraged to preach, and the branch don't think anyone can preach but a few of the missionaries. This, I am sorry to say, has a grain of truth in it, yet many of the local preachers neglect to study and store their minds with useful matter.

Nothing pleases me more than to see our bright young men manifest a desire to preach, and who are striving to gain knowledge to enable them to present the truth in an intelligent manner. But having been ordained, some at least seem to have concluded that they would be able at once to preach a systematic and well connected discourse, and because they did not come to their lofty ideal, they collapse, get discouraged, and quit trying to preach. God has not promised to do that for us that we can do ourselves, but will do that we cannot do, if we trust him. The candidate for ordination should seriously consider these matters, the most important of which is, Did God call me to this ministry? Is my soul burdened with the worth of souls? Am I conscious of the awful responsibility that must rest on me?

To be actuated by any other motive than the glory of God and the salvation of dying men is bringing condemnation to ourselves, and to place one in false position before the world. How shall we magnify our calling? Paul told Timothy to "study to show" himself approved of God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed;" and when about to go away, said, "Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." Again, Paul says to this young preacher, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

Take heed unto thyself, be natural, ape no one, be original as far as possible, don't reach too far, trust God but study hard. A workman that need be ashamed. It is not always the lack of knowledge or intelligence that makes men blush with shame, but the consciousness that some of our conduct has not been of that character to inspire respect and confidence. Such things not only affect the preacher, but they dull the edge of the finest argument. Precept and example must go hand in hand.

O brethren of the priesthood, how carefully we should walk, that we may be living epistles, living proofs of the power of the gospel, to elevate, refine, and purify. Brethren of the ministry, if every one of us would resolve to add at least one more talent to that we possess, and lead godly lives before men, the church would arouse from her present state of inertia and sinners would be born to God, tithes be paid, backsliders reclaimed, the gifts be enjoyed in abundant measure, and God's name be glorified. Shall we go to the Master empty-handed? No sheaves, no souls saved by our efforts, but with shame have to say, Master, I hid my gift; I spent my time at work for myself; I wasn't much of a preacher anyway. Think you the Master will accept our excuse?

God help us feel the awful responsibility that rests upon us is my prayer in Jesus' name.

JOHN HAY, Sec.

The morning session will be devoted to regular routine business and the election of officers. The evening program will probably consist of recitations, songs, essays, etc.

MRS. ETTA SPRINGER, Supt.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

To the Ministry of Kentucky, Tennessee, and North Alabama:—I have been requested by Elder M. M. Turpen to furnish a summary of all labor done in this part of the mission during the conference year, that it may be presented to the Church Historian. Now will you please make out a brief summary of your labors and forward to me at Sedalia, Kentucky, by the 5th of February, so I can present them to district conference, which will be held at New Bethel, on the second Saturday and Sunday in February, and then forward them to Elder Heman C. Smith. Now, brethren, let us be prompt in this matter, for hitherto our reports have come in only by scraps, and it has not been possible to make an intelligent report to the proper authority by such methods. Reports should not be too long, only let them contain the work actually done.

J. C. CLAPP.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The triannual conference of Eastern Iowa district will convene with Brush Creek branch, near Arlington, Iowa, Saturday, February 18. In connection with the conference it is thought advisable to hold a Minister's Institute, in harmony with the following instructions from the Lord. Doctrine and Covenants 43: 3: "And now, behold, I give unto you commandment, that when ye are assembled together, ye shall instruct and edify each other, that ye may know how to act and direct my church how to act upon the points of my law and commandments, which I have given; and thus ye shall become instructed in the law of my church, and be sanctified by that which ye have received." Doctrine and Covenants 85: 21: "And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God." So far as the spirit of this language may be applicable to district conferences we think but to prepare ourselves, so that in spirit and theory we may be more fully prepared to enter the school of the prophets. I have counseled with the missionaries in charge and also the president of the church concerning the matter, and have their consent. It is desired that so many of the ministry as can will be present to take part in the conference, as well as the institute. Bro. H. C. Smith has partly promised to be present, and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

J. W. PETERSON, Pres.

Galland's Grove district will convene in conference in the saints' chapel, Dow City, Iowa, Saturday, February 25, at ten o'clock, holding over Sunday. DIED.

MEFFERD.—At Indianola, Iowa, November 30, 1898, Mrs. Nathaniel Mefferd, aged 48 years, 7 months, and 22 days. Mrs. Melissa DeEtta Dewey Mefferd was born in Madison County, New York, March 8, 1850. She was married to Nathaniel Mefferd at Dunlap, Iowa, April 28, 1883. They immediately went to housekeeping on their farm near Woodbine, Iowa, where they lived until October, 1897, when she was compelled to undergo an operation at the M. E. hospital at Omaha for the removal of a tumor. The operation was a failure; after a few months she was advised by her physicians to go to Des Moines and again enter a hospital. After having received all the medical aid possible and kindness of friends and relatives, death came to relieve her sufferings. She was a faithful wife and a fond mother; and though for reasons unexplained she had not united with the church, her faith in the gospel as revealed in her last days was strong and abiding. From her childhood she was strongly inclined to righteousness and truth; this fact was manifested in her affliction to the moment of her departure. She left a husband and a son to mourn her departure; also a mother 86 years of age, living at the old home in New York, and six brothers. Her father and two sisters having gone before her. She was a relative of Admiral

Dewey. She was with her parents until she came west in 1881. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community. The funeral services were held at the church at Woodbine; the sermon was preached by Elder Charles Derry. The remains were laid at rest in Woodbine cemetery. A large concourse of old friends of the family were in attendance to show their respect to the deceased and sympathy with the bereaved.

FRITZ.—At Wheeling, West Virginia, December 23, 1898, in his fifty-second year, Bro. Edward Fritz. He was baptized by Elder L. R. Devore, July 6, 1898. He had long been known as a man of strict honesty and integrity, and the large concourse of people who attended his funeral on Christmas Day attested the esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. Funeral sermon by Elder John T. Davis. He was a kind husband and father and the loss sustained by Sr. Fritz and her children can be repaired only in the gospel hope of a glorious resurrection. Their loss is his gain. He is at rest with the just.

MOORE.—Charlotte Temple Moore was born in Lincoln County, Kentucky, May 15, 1809; married James W. Moore, May 11, 1836; united with the Baptists when eighteen years old, was a member in good standing until June 23, 1893, when she was baptized by Elder Henry Kemp; died December 4, 1898, aged 89 years, 7 months, 19 days. She investigated our claims thoroughly, became perfectly satisfied with the Book of Mormon and its divinity. She leaves five sons and one daughter. Interment in Thurman cemetery. Funeral sermon by Elder Henry Kemp in the saints' church at Plum Hollow.

DANIEL.—Isabell Loveall was born August, 1858; married to L. F. Daniel, July 1, 1880; died at West Pullman, Illinois, December 19, 1898. Sr. Daniel was baptized at Plainville, Indiana, and lived a consistent life in harmony with the covenant made in baptism, and was ever willing to and did sacrifice much for the gospel's sake. She was loved and respected by all who knew her, and we feel assured that she has gone to her rest to await with the righteous the reward that awaits her. She leaves husband, five children, and several stepchildren. Short funeral service at the home, by Elder Francis Earl; funeral sermon by Elder W. Vickery, at Plano, where she was buried.

BROWN.—At her home, near Sherwin, Kansas, January 9, 1899, Sr. Hilah P. Brown. She died in the hope of a glorious redemption. Born March 23, 1845, at Rochester, Ohio; was baptized July 19, 1875. She leaves a daughter, many friends and relatives to mourn her departure. Sermon by Elder A. M. Baker.

KNIGHT.—Maria Jane Knight, born January, 1859; married to E. O. Knight, March, 1878; united with the church in 1875; passed from earth life January 6, 1899. She leaves a husband, four sons, two daughters, one of the latter only six days old, with other relatives to mourn. A large and sympathetic congregation at saints' chapel, Magnolia, Iowa, tearfully witnessed their respect. Sermon by Elder Alma M. Pyrande, assisted by W. T. Fallon, TAYLOR.—At Sherwin, Kansas, Sophia Taylor, daughter of Bro. and Sr. W. S. Taylor. She was born in Linn County, Missouri, December 6, 1869; blessed by M. H. Forscutt, August 6, 1871, and subsequently united with the church; died December 30, 1898. She had been almost an invalid for several years, and was of a sweet and amiable disposition, and very faithful to her profession. She lived so that it was well with her in death. Funeral service at Sherwin church; sermon by John A. Davis, assisted by William Bath.

MEDLOCK.—Elder George Medlock was born into the new life at the opening of the new year, having lived on earth 77 years previously. While walking on the street, paralysis struck him a fearful blow, which terminated his earthly existence on the following day. On January 17, 1843, he married Miss C. Brown, by whom he became the father of one son and four daughters. His wife went before, on September 15, 1896. Two of his children preceded him also. The other three married, and made him grandfather of twelve more. The family emigrated to America in 1854, and after residing about a year in Cleveland, Ohio, removed to Omaha. From May, 1855 to the close of 1898, he was a resident of Omaha; he was then promoted to the higher life. No resident of earth avoids troubles, Brother George had his share; but is now beyond reach of the envenomed shafts. Peace to his dear ashes. At the opening of Prospect Hill cemetery he was made sexton, and filled that office about twenty-seven years. There, in lot 84, in the "home of the dead," made beautiful by his skill and care, rests all we saw, but by no means all we knew and loved of the dear old man now at rest. His friend, his brother of nearly half a century, Elder Mark H. Forscutt, preached his funeral sermon with a sweeter, fuller liberty than he had experienced for many years, and performed the obsequies at the grave. A well-filled chapel, notwithstanding the biting frost, and the cold penetrating wind that blew, was a silent but eloquent witness to the appreciation in which the departed was held.

No praise of those in rank, not quests, nor plots 'gainst those in file
Unjustly marked thy course, or elevated white-robed guile;
True to thyself and truth thou hated vice, wronged not brother's fame,
Nor cruelly distort, or cover love with cloak of shame;
Thou 'rt gone, dear George, we'll miss the form we loved on earth,
But truth reveals who knew thee best, knew best thy sterling worth. M.

CURRIE.—Martha Currie, born near Leeds, England, July 5, 1845; came to America with her parents in 1862, going to Utah the same year; married William Currie, January 24, 1863; left Utah in 1866, arriving at Crescent, Iowa, July of that year; united with the Reorganization September 23, 1888. She was the mother of seven sons and two daughters, seven of whom remain, with a kind husband, to mourn her departure, which occurred January 11, 1899. Sermon by Elder D. R. Chambers, assisted by John Evans. A large concourse of friends following the remains to their present resting place, near Crescent, Iowa.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

Church History, Volumes 1 and 2,

BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH,
 AND APOSTLE HEMAN C. SMITH.

THIS work is the most authentic and complete history of the church ever published. No effort has been spared to obtain information from every reliable source, and the information thus obtained has been impartially presented. It is therefore indispensable, not only to the membership of the church, but to all interested in obtaining reliable information concerning the thrilling events preceding and leading to the organization as well as the history of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which has attracted the attention of the world.

These two volumes cover a period of time including the events we have mention up to the death of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, June 27, 1844. These volumes contain a compilation of important and official documents never before published in so concise a form, many of which have been so rare and difficult to obtain that the public has not had access to them.

It is contemplated to publish a third volume by the same authors, containing the important and critical events transpiring after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, so soon as the sale of volumes 1 and 2 will justify. This will be the most interesting of all because it will contain the history of events from which issues arose that have resulted in rival organizations among Latter Day Saints. It will trace so clearly the causes leading to the great apostasy represented in Utah, that all who read can locate the responsibility for the result with unerring accuracy.

You cannot afford to do without this work, so if these volumes, or either of them, are not in your library, send us your order for volumes 1 and 2 at once. You could not make a more profitable present to a friend.

Price, $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. E. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

A COLONY THAT HAS FOUND SUCCESS.

"The success of the original colony, which is a year old this month, exceeds my expectation and fully justifies me in the belief that in the colonization plan lies the solution of the social problem," said Commander Booth-Tucker, of the Salvation Army, when questioned as to the results of his year's experiment with the colonization problem.

"The people we have taken there have given us almost no trouble, and have entered heart and soul into the spirit of the project, and are working with us to help themselves in a way that would seem astonishing to an outsider. The men are earnest, honest workers, and I want to put one hundred and fifty thousand such men in the Colorado Valley.

"No, the enthusiasm does not die out after a little. The men who have been on the colony a year are as anxiously interested and as grateful for the opportunity which has been given them to honorably help themselves as they were when they first put foot on the land. They are proving themselves worthy of the trust we have put in them, and they are laying the foundation for a humanitarian work of glorious and, as yet, undreamed of possibilities.

"It has not been all smooth sailing. We have had our drawbacks—such drawbacks as are inevitable in an enterprise of such a nature—but none of them has been in any way due to the colonists. For instance, we had a very large melon crop this year, from which we expected to make a profit of two or three thousand dollars. Although we had arranged to sell them to every reputable firm in the beginning of the season, at a certain figure, we were obliged to sell them at a very small profit, owing to a great slump in the melon market. These things, of course, are beyond our control.

"As for the people, they are happy and contented. It would do the doubting heart good to see the change a year has made in the faces of women and children. The weary haunted look seen in their eyes when they came, the drawn, hard lines of their faces, have all disappeared, and instead you see pink cheeks, quiet, smiling eyes, which bespeak well nourished bodies, steady nerves and a hopeful condition of mind.

"And all this is brought about, not by charity, but through a practical, common sense, businesslike venture, which is not only helpful in the best sense, but is as sound and secure as the land upon which it is founded."

From Commander Booth-Tucker and Lieutenant Colonel Holtz, the secretary, interesting facts concerning the workings of the several colonies were obtained.

The original colony, Fort Amity, lies 150 miles east of Denver, in the Arkansas Valley, and consist of 640 acres of rich, irrigated land. There are thirty-seven families, or 150 persons, upon the land. All have comfortable houses and barns, and each colonist is allowed from five to ten acres of land, the land being apportioned according to the man's needs and his ability to work it. The men, however are not altogether dependent upon the land for support. Work in the neighboring towns is secured for those whose tastes do not lead them to agriculture and for those who are not kept continually at work at their farms.

"There is no community scheme about it," said Lieutenant Colonel Holtz. "Each person is to be treated as an individual, and must work out his own destiny with the same advantages as his neighbors or give up.

While our plan is cooperative, it stops at the door of each man's home.

"It is purely a business proposition. We have a sort of bank, and when the head of a family comes on the land he is given credit for from $200 to $250, according to the number of his children. He is also given a house, barn, farming utensils, and usually ten acres of land under water for irrigation. He really owes the Salvation Army the money he has been given credit for, and he has the privilege of buying the house and land at what each cost. Until he has done so he is treated as if they really belonged to him.

"When a man moves into the colony and is located in his own house he has the privilege of drawing coin against his account. If a man is industrious he does not need to draw all the money for which he is given credit before he gets returns.

"Those who got to work last Christmas found their land to be almost self-supporting from the first. They planted alfalfa and kept a cow and a few pigs. There are also accommodations for keeping chickens, and vegetables were grown almost from the start. Besides this, each colonist had the privilege of putting in five acres of sugar beets, which will bring to those who availed themselves of it a profit of about $250 in October.

"Melons and cantaloupes are the great products of the colony, and most of the colonists put in crops of these, with the result that a slump in the market greatly diminished their profits.

"With such advantages there is no reason why honest people cannot earn a living. If a man can save $1.25 a week he can pay for his home within the time of our option to buy—ten years. When a man has paid for his home he will be given a clear title to it.

"There are no restrictions or obligations on any of the colonists. We have a store, but when a man draws his account he is given coin, and can spend it where he pleases. There is to be no charity fund. People who cannot support themselves must go to some one of our other institutions. The colony is a place for workers."

Fort Amity has a schoolhouse, a post office, a general store, a tailor shop, and a hall for religious services, lectures, literary entertainments, etc. There are no restrictions as to one's religion. The colonist may be of any faith, or none at all, so long as he is honest and faithful; but the Salvationists hold their services, and to these, of course, all are welcome.

Among the 150 persons who have gone to the Colorado colony only one has proved unfitted for the conditions of the place, and for this one work was immediately found in Denver by the governor of the colony. The colonists have among them fifty horses and much other valuable live stock.

The California colony holds 530 acres, 100 miles south of San Francisco, in the county of Monterey. Former Mayor Ellert, of San Francisco, contributed largely to the purchase price of the land, and he and many other influential residents of California are giving generous support to the enterprise.

There are twenty-three families, including ninety persons, upon the land, which is known as the Romie ranch. The land, when selected, was already under cultivation and had an orchard of twenty acres in full bearing.

The Romie colony was opened in January, and the reports from it are very favorable. The climate is excellent, and three crops a year may be produced. Sugar beets and potatoes are the chief products, and the soil is so rich they grow with little or no trouble.

Within six months after the founding of the Romie colony adjoining land increased very much in value. Land that was selling last January at $30 an acre, is now selling for $50 and $60 an acre, and the colonists are petitioning the Salvation Army to sell them the land at $60 an acre. Other land near the colony which the first of the year was offered for $50 an acre, is now selling at $75 to $90 an acre.

A third colony was established in July in Ohio, a few miles out of Cleveland. It is called Fort Herrick, in honor of one of its patrons, Colonel Myron T. Herrick, of Cleveland. James Parnell, a banker, also of Cleveland, is prominently connected with the Herrick colony.

There are ten families at Fort Herrick, and the same order and earnestness of purpose obtain among them as in the two older colonies. Fort Herrick has its post office, schoolhouse, and store, and the same conditions of payment and ownership prevail.

The colonists are married men with families, who come mainly from large cities. Some of them are foreigners, but about 75 per cent. are Americans. They are printers, carpenters, shoemakers, market gardeners, teachers, and clerks, and even a journalist from Chicago has asked to be allowed to become a colonist. The majority who have been accepted are from the East, but more than five thousand applications have been received recently from persons in all parts of the country.

There is a movement afoot in connection with which the name of Dr. C. Long, of Buffalo, appears, to found a colony for consumptives in Colorado, along the same lines and in connection with the Booth-Tucker scheme.

Commander Booth-Tucker believes he has demonstrated the feasibility of his plan, and he asserts that with $50,000, in addition to the capital which has already been subscribed, he can prove to a mathematical certainty that the scheme is socially and morally, as well as financially, safe.

Former Governor Flower, John E. Searles, and John E. Milholland are among those interested in the colonization scheme.—New York Herald, Dec. 25, 1898.

DAZED BY NATURE'S GENEROSITY.

It is a frozen fact which we state, and not a poetical fancy. It was in this State, and on poor land, that a man made 255 bushels of corn to the acre. It was in this State, as noted a few days ago by President Miller of the State Colored Agricultural College, that 130 barrels of Irish potatoes, "not country culls," were made on one acre. Also $1,500 worth of cucumbers; also 92 bushels of rice; also 180 bushels of oats; also 2,600 pounds of seed cotton, without the use of fertilizers; also ten cuttings of alfalfa in a year; also about $60 clear profit from an acre of Bermudas; several hundred dollars per acre from tobacco. Our Bennettsville correspondent added to the list yesterday that about the year 1885 the Rev. W. K. Breeden made 56 bushels of wheat on one acre in Marlboro County, and that 625 bushels of sweet potatoes were made by Mr. W. J. Stubbs this year on "a little more than one acre" in the same county.—Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

THE college is gradually accumulating a stock of apparatus for physical and chemical purposes. Forty dollars have already been contributed for that special purpose. This money had been gathered by Sr. Viola Blair, for kindergarten work, by means of entertainments. However, the money was not required, and so it was handed over to the President of the College as a donation towards the equipment of a laboratory.

We understand there are other sums in existence, collected for the same purpose but not required, and we suggest that our President could make good use of the money in the laboratory if it were handed over to him.

A well-known merchant of Lamoni is thinking of presenting Graceland with a wall clock. The gift will prove very acceptable, for we are in need of several timepieces.

The enrollment is still progressive and the final total of this term will probably be very encouraging. Our students are busily engaged with their work, for education at Graceland means something solid, requiring considerable energy to grasp and hold. Our aim is to give as profound instruction and as careful and accurate training as can be obtained in the best colleges of the land. Graceland is no second-rate institution, where students obtain an inferior education and worse culture. We believe in work—good, hard, steady, plodding industry, combined with refinement of manner, and purity of disposition.

We are still open for donations of books to our library, and of antiquities and specimens to our museum. Above any other institution Graceland should have a complete collection of American antiquities, and of works dealing with the same.

The "Success When United" list continues to grow, but there are many of our brethren and sisters who intend to help us but have not yet sent in their names. Do not delay! Now is the time to show your generosity, and at the same time your faith in church work.

A SEAT IN CONGRESS FOR B. H. ROBERTS.

Now that there is so much being said and printed in the journals of the day in regard to Utah politics and the right or wrong involved in the idea of Brigham H. Roberts, of Utah, lately elected to the House of Representatives, for that State, to take and occupy a seat in congress, it seems to be opportune for us to place a few facts and thoughts based on them before the readers of the HERALD.

Since Mr. Roberts' election, and the agitation of the public mind upon the subject of a polygamist being entitled to a seat in the halls of the nation's lawmakers as a member of that body, President Lorenzo Snow, now the acting President of the Mormon Church in Utah, is reported to have stated that "Mormonism, contrary to the popular notion, does not mean polygamy."

And Heber M. Wells, Governor of Utah, himself a Mormon, has stated, as reported, that "Mormonism is alive to-day, but polygamy is dead."

As published in the Salt Lake Tribune for December 30, 1898, President Snow is reported as saying,

When Utah became a State with the full understanding that polygamous marriages should be forever prohibited, a number of men found themselves in this position: They had two or more wives, who had been married to them under the most sacred covenants and obligations that people could enter into, by consent of all the parties interested. What were those men to do with their plural families? Cast them off? Repudiate their wives? Bastardize their children? Make them a common charge upon the community? or take care of them, provide for them; maintain their wives and support and educate the children? Is it possible that the Christian ladies of the United States, who have been wrought upon by fanatical or designing persons to raise their voices against the Mormon people, desire those men to turn their backs upon the wives and children who are as true and devoted as any in the land? Should not the Christian people of the United States consider the circumstances that surround those families, which are still in the relationship which is so objectionable to people so far off? Can they not see that with the complete cessation of plural marriages it is only a question of a little time when the relations that have grown out of the system will pass away, the system itself having become obsolete? The excitement that has been caused during the last few weeks is without reason, and it appears to me without excuse. I might trace it to its original source, and show how unworthy it is of the attention of thinking, just, and humane individuals. But I forbear. The sober second thought of the American people will succeed the present eruption, and when this violent sensation has subsided the intelligent, rational, and tolerant public will perceive that the Mormon people are acting in good faith, that the few among them who are in the condition described are simply performing a sacred duty, and that the nation has been needlessly alarmed. Mormonism, contrary to the common notion, does not mean polygamy.

We are pleased to learn that President Snow realizes that "Mormonism," so called, does not include the dogma of polygamy. This has so long been our contention, and we have been so bitterly denounced by the Utah people for the views we have advocated, that we can pleasantly welcome the truth coming from the aged lips of the venerable President of the church in Utah.

But when and how has this system become obsolete? Judge O. W. Powers, the able Utah Democratic orator who espoused and championed the candidacy for congress of Mr. Brigham H. Roberts, said in a political speech made in the Opera House, at Logan, Utah, that it was a known fact; or as he puts it in his own words, "We all know," that at the time of the passage of the Edmunds-Tucker Act "two thousand" men were in the practice of polygamy, having and living with more than one wife each. If that was true then, how many of the same two thousand men are still in the practice, notwithstanding the Edmunds-Tucker Law, the Amnesty Proclamations of both Presidents Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland, and the Enabling Act by which Utah was to be a State in which polygamy was to be "forever prohibited?"

Let the facts be compared. If there were two thousand men of the Utah Church in the practice of polygamy at the passage of the Edmunds-Tucker Law, and the cases of these two thousand were covered by the Amnesty Proclamations and were to be virtually condoned by Utah becoming a State of the Union, then the "intelligent tolerant public" of the United States is asked to shut its eyes to the fact that these "few"—two thousand—are still continuing in the practice, and are to be represented in congress by Brigham H. Roberts.

Mr. Charles W. Penrose, now on the staff of the Deseret News, and one of the leading men in the Utah Mormon Church, in a late letter published in the New York Journal, in its issue for January 5, 1899, among other things writes thus:—

After the Manifesto of President Woodruff, there were no more plural marriages permitted or solemnized in the Mormon Church.

They ceased in Utah. That you can rely upon. There is no intention of reviving polygamous marriages in this State. When the Enabling Act was passed by congress the only special provision in it, in addition to the ordinary requirements, was that the State Constitution should provide that polygamous or plural marriages should be forever prohibited.

The understanding was that men who had contracted such marriages previous to statehood would not be required to repudiate them, or cast them off, the idea being that if such marriages ceased to be solemnized, in a little while the system would become obsolete.

Mr. Roberts and a number of others who are supposed to have married plural wives previous to the issuing of the Manifesto, were elected delegates to that convention, and helped to frame the State Constitution. Apostle John Henry Smith was the president of the convention. C. C. Goodwin, Editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, was a member, and he with other prominent Gentiles understood the situation and helped to so frame the instrument that, while it provided against further polygamous marriages, it did not interfere with the full enjoyment of any right or privilege by persons who had already entered into such associations. Thus, it was thoroughly understood that the cessation of Mormon polygamous marriages was a settlement of the question politically.

Before taking up the points presented in the foregoing statements of President Snow, Hon. Heber M. Wells, and Editor C. W. Penrose, it is well to present what Mr. C. C. Goodwin says with reference to the understanding of himself and other Gentiles in regard to the cessation of plural or polygamous marriages.

In the January 6, 1899, issue of the Salt Lake Tribune, of which Mr. C. C. Goodwin is editor, that gentleman denies Mr. Penrose's statement, as follows:—

Elder Penrose has found his voice in the New York Journal. He writes that the editor of this paper, with other Gentiles, was in the Constitutional Convention, understood the situation and helped to frame the instrument, that while it provided against further polygamous marriages, it did not interfere with any right or privileges by persons who had already entered into such associations. Thus it was thoroughly understood that the cessation of Mormon polygamous marriages was a settlement of the question politically.

The answer to that is that the Constitution followed the direction of the Enabling Act; it was expressly stated in the convention that to make the command of the Constitution effective, it would have to be supplemented by legislation, which was done when the Legislature met. To say that there was any such understanding as is mentioned above, cannot be substantiated by any evidence, for there was no such thing. The sworn testimony of President Woodruff, the present President of the Church, Lorenzo Snow, and other high authorities of the church, was on record, declaring that the Manifesto covered every phase of polygamy and polygamous marriage, and was intended to put people who had been in polygamy in exact accord with the laws and the people of this nation, and that thought governed in the convention. The words of Elder Penrose are not only absolutely untrue, but they directly impeach the honor and truthfulness of the late President of the Church, the present Governor of this State, and are a great reproach to the Legislature of Utah which legitimized polygamous children up to a given date.

In order to emphasize what will follow, we state what the Lexicographer Webster defines polygamy to mean:—

Polygamist, n. a person who practices polygamy, or maintains its lawfulness.

Polygamous, a. living in polygamy. 1. Of, or appertaining to, polygamy. 2. Inclined to polygamy; having a plurality of wives.

Polygamy, n. a plurality of wives or husbands at the same time, or the having such plurality; usually, the condition of a man having more than one wife.

It is clear that when congress passed the Enabling Act and stipulated that in the constitution of the newly formed State "polygamy should be forever prohibited," polygamy, as defined by Webster and Worcester, and stated in the standard dictionaries, and understood by the citizens of the United States, and all other people who speak and write the English language, was the thing intended to be prohibited. The men who framed the bill under which Utah became a State, the men who formed the convention by which the constitution of the new State was framed and adopted, all alike, Gentile and Mormon, must have understood that it was the practice of "having" and living with "a plurality of wives" that was intended to be prohibited in the new State.

That President Woodruff so understood it is clear from the following questions and answers:—

Q.—Did you intend by that general statement of intention to make the application of existing conditions where the plural marriages already existed?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—As to living in the state of plural marriage?

A.—Yes, sir; that is, to the obeying of the law.

To further question as to its intended application.

A.—Yes, sir; I intended the proclamation to cover the ground to keep the laws—to obey the law myself, and expected the people to obey the law.

President Woodruff also advised the people, members of his church, that the polygamous relations formed, or entered into before the issuing of the Manifesto, should cease.

All this goes to show that the common and general understanding of the people who were at the time of the issuing the Manifesto citizens of the Territory of Utah and afterwards citizens of the State, was that the practice, or custom of polygamy, or plural marriage, the practice, or custom of living with a plurality of wives (or husbands), was to be stopped, and the people made citizens of the State of Utah by the act of admission to the Union should no longer continue in such polygamous practice.

In the light of the fact that the few—two thousand—few according to President Snow, two thousand, according to orator O. W. Powers, comprised all the leading men of the church, presidents, apostles, seventy, high priests, bishops, presidents of stakes, and of the further fact that this same few, to be the ones which Mr. Penrose states were left to the "exercise of the right" and to continue in polygamous relations just as they were before the Manifesto, and the adoption of the constitution, when did "the sytem" become obsolete? How long would the "intelligent, tolerant" people of the nation have to bear with so cunningly devised an evasion of the law, before the State of Utah should be clean from a practice repugnant to the national institutions while it was a Territory, and which the laws of congress punished as a crime?

It is a curious charge that Elder Penrose makes when he wrote that Editor "C. C. Goodwin, and other prominent Gentiles, understood the situation and helped to so frame the instrument (the constitution), that, while it provided against further polygamous marriages, it did not interfere with the full enjoyment of any right or privilege by persons who had already entered into such associations."

If Mr. Penrose is correct in this, then there was an assemblage of Gentiles in that convention who were either intellectually blind and deficient in common sense, and were practiced upon by their Mormon colleagues as dullards; or there was a deliberate truckling of that Gentile element to the shrewd cunning of their Mormon neighbors for ulterior reasons. Are those Gentiles willing for such a charge to stand unchallenged?

Were C. C. Goodwin, the hitherto wide-awake and vigilant editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, and his Gentile associate delegates, caught napping by John Henry Smith and his Mormon associate delegates, and hoodwinked into the perpetration of a pretty piece of political trickery, by which the unclean thing they had so long and so strenuously opposed was either legalized, or so canonized by claims of sanctity that it was to become lawless, when Utah became a State.

We ought, perhaps, to apologize for introducing the names of Messrs. Goodwin and John Henry Smith into this argument; but they were brought into the discussion by Mr. Penrose, a Mormon, and a friend of Mr. Roberts, whose right to a seat in congress is the subject matter in dispute.

Personally, we make no objection to Mr. Roberts taking a seat in congress because he is a Mormon in belief. We are opposed to his being permitted to take a seat in one of the lawmaking branches of the national government because he is a polygamist, living with a plurality of wives. Because that no matter when, where, nor how he became the putative husband of his plural wives, the ceremony by which the women supposed to be his wives became such wives has no standing in the statute books of the national laws, nor of the States of the Union, including the State of Utah, nor in any of the courts of the United States, and has not given him the right to live with them as his wives in the intent, purpose, and meaning of the laws of the nation and the States governing the domestic relation between the sexes known as the marriage laws. We are opposed to his occupying a seat in the National Legislature; for the further reason, that the church of which he is a member, and in accordance with one of the tenets of which he became a polygamist and married a plurality of wives, did in 1890, by virtue of a Manifesto issued by Wilford Woodruff, the then President of the Church, and which Manifesto was accepted by the church in solemn assembly, by vote, ostensibly abandon the practice of polygamy, or plural marriage, and directed the members of the church, Mr. Roberts included, to desist from said practice of polygamy.

And further; that in and during the time the citizens of the Territory of Utah were making the effort to induce congress to admit Utah into the Union as a State, representations were made by the public and leading men of the Territory, both in and out of the church, including Mr. Roberts, and by the public press as well, that should Utah be permitted to assume statehood, the dogma of polygamy in its practice should be forever prohibited. Mr. Roberts was a member of the convention which framed and adopted the constitution in pursuance of the Enabling Act, which act provided that in the constitution polygamy should be forever prohibited. Notwithstanding Mr. Roberts aided in creating the public sentiment which prepared the people for statehood; and helped to create the understanding at home and abroad that the practice of polygamy, plural marriage, was to cease; and was a member of the convention, helped to frame and adopt the constitution, he has, in violation of both an implied and specific agreement with the congress and the people, continued in the practice of polygamy, having and living with a plurality of wives. Because of his personal conduct thus stated, we believe that Mr. Brigham H. Roberts should not be allowed to sit as a member of the congress of the United States.

Let us now review some of the statements of Messrs. Snow, Wells, and Penrose.

President Snow states that "when Utah was admitted as a State, a number of men found themselves in this position:" "They had two or more wives," etc.

These wives these men had taken, as President Snow states, "under the most sacred covenants and obligations that people could enter into," etc.

The term "found themselves" in the position referred to, is suggestive. How came they to be in that condition at the time Utah became a State? It cannot be otherwise than that they had deliberately put themselves in such position, against the express stipulation, understood abroad, and we believe in Utah, that they would keep the virtual pledge of the church action, and obey the laws. This they did not do, hence, "found themselves" still transgressing the law. President Snow's plea is a very weak and pitiful one.

There had been an interval of some five years after the Manifesto of President Wilford Woodruff, President Snow's predecessor as President of the Church, had been ratified by the church; and it was supposed that the men, few or thousands, who had entered into the plural marriage relation, had in good faith obeyed the advice of President Woodruff and the church acceptance of the Manifesto, and had ceased to live in polygamous relations with their plural wives.

The courts of the United States, before which hundreds of polygamists had been prosecuted, found guilty, fined and imprisoned for the "crime of polygamy" or unlawful cohabitation, had not so construed the law as to prevent a husband from providing for the maintenance of the women whom he may have held as wives; but these courts did hold that marital relations between polygamous husbands and wives must cease. No matter how sacred the ceremony may have been held to be by the persons who were married in polygamy or plural marriage, the ceremony, if performed after the passage of the Edmunds-Tucker Law, was a violation of law, and punishable, if performed before the passage of said law, and the parties continued to live in the marital relation, it was still violation of the law and punishable; the supposed sacredness of the ceremony being held to give no right to the parties to disregard the mandate of the law. The judges interpreted the human law in the light of the mandate given of God to Abraham: "Cast out this bond-woman and her son," but did not ask that those women be sent into the desert with only a loaf and a jug.

It is not a little curious that should it be true that God spoke to Joseph Smith commanding plural marriage, the only revelation coming through and to the Utah authorities in regard to polygamy is strangely akin to the command, to Abraham.

It is possible that the Christian women of the United States do require that Mr. Roberts, and every man who is desecrating the institution of marriage as known to them through the word of God, the terrible fiat of fact in the equality in the number of the sexes born into the world, and the national recognition of monogamy, shall not only cease flaunting his advocacy of plural marriage in the faces of American citizens, but also himself cease to be a lawbreaker, a polygamist in practice, or keep out of the national council chambers as a lawmaker.

President Snow asks:—

Should not the Christian people of the United States consider the circumstances that surround those families, which are still in the relationship which is so objectionable to people so far off? . . .

That is just what the "Christian people of the United States" are doing.

What else is it that is creating such a stir? And whose fault is it? Did not the Mormon people tell that same "Christian people," that President Woodruff's Manifesto, was as the voice of the Lord to them, and that they would obey it, and keep the law of the land in the light of President Woodruff's application of it? Did not the Mormon people by its leaders assure the same "Christian people," and all ranks and conditions of United States citizens, that the Mormons were most earnest in their loyalty to the national government and were acting in good faith, in submitting to the law? Did they not endeavor to make people in Utah and out of it believe that the system of marriage, including its practice, which was "so objectionable," should cease to exist, should no longer embarrass the political relations between themselves and the people of the United States?

They certainly created that impression upon a lot of people east, west, north, and south of Utah, that the Mormons were going to put aside the cause of so much opposition and live in conditions such as obtained elsewhere in America under the ægis of American laws and institutions. We know decidedly that was the impression prevailing where we came into contact with the opinion of the people.

Hence, if the men of Utah continued in the practice of living in plural marriage after the Manifesto, and the admission of Utah into the Union of States, then the condition in which those women have been placed and now are, was the result of a breach of faith on the part of those men and the relations referred to imposed upon them by design; and the Mormon people are not "acting in good faith." If they had been or now were acting in good faith, there would have been no occasion for this agitation which the aged President deplures.

Can they not see that with the complete cessation of plural marriages it is only a question of a little time when the relations that have grown out of the system will pass away, the system itself having become obsolete?

The aged President asks this in apparent vexation of spirit; but the question is pertinent, nevertheless. The answer is clear, No, the "intelligent, liberal, tolerant public" cannot see the conclusion referred to. The conclusion with that public is clear; that if the "few"—"two thousand," men who "found themselves" in that very peculiar situation, in "the possession of two or more" plural wives, are to be returned to the status that they were in prior to the laws enacted against polygamy, and at the time the Manifesto was issued and before Utah became a State, then all the effort made to bring about the legal pacification of the vexing question in Utah was a vain one; all the terrible conflict is turned to a farce; and the courts of the United States, the judges thereof, marshals, and other officers, puppets on a farcical stage.

The intelligence of the people of the United States sees further than that. It sees that the election of Mr. B. H. Roberts, if he be allowed to assume and retain his seat in congress, is a yielding upon the part of the nation of all the ground thought to have been won against the practice of polygamy in the United States. And if it has not been the result of a set design to baffle and hoodwink congress, success will be eagerly seized as a triumph for polygamists in Utah, and the bars will be thrown down before them. If Mr. Roberts is admitted, seated, and allowed to remain in congress as a member thereof, it will be construed by the leading men of the Utah Church, members of the "two thousand" "few," of President Snow and O. W. Powers, as a triumph for the principle of polygamy, and not as a personal triumph of Mr. B. H. Roberts. This is what the intelligent people out of Utah see in the situation, and not the cessation of plural marriages, nor the system becoming obsolete. It could not become obsolete with two thousand men in the legalized practice of it.

With Mr. Roberts in congress, the State of Utah in the hands of a Mormon Legislature, with all the machinery for the execution of the laws in the hands of or subject to the dictation of the "few" "two thousand," whose practices were thus in a sense legalized, it would not be long until Governor Wells might say, "Mormonism is alive, to-day; and so is polygamy." We very sincerely doubt that congress can afford to take this risk.

Mr. Penrose admits, in his letter to the Journal above quoted, that the Enabling Act required that in the Constitution of Utah when it should become a State, there should be a provision in it by which "polygamous or plural marriages should be forever prohibited;" and then adds that the convention, composed of Mormons and Gentiles, so framed the instrument, that, while it provided against future polygamous marriages, it did not interfere with the full enjoyment of any right or privilege by persons who had already entered into such associations."

This is in effect to state, that notwithstanding the general understanding that polygamy, the having and living with two or more women as wives at the same time, was to cease in Utah, both Mormons and Gentiles engaged in a deliberate effort to frame the Constitution of the new State in such a way as to defeat the purpose and design of the people of the several States of the Union, expressed by their representatives in congress, and reinstitute practices contrary to the genius of the institutions of the Union and which had by action of the same congress been made unlawful.

If the statement of Mr. Penrose is correct, that no interference was to be made in the polygamous relations existing between men and women in Utah; and Mr. Roberts is allowed to become a national legislator, next March; it would seem to confirm the prediction of President Brigham Young, made August 29, 1852, the day when the alleged revelation first saw the light, and the first declaration of polygamy made at President Young's direction by Elder Orson Pratt, as follows:—

The principle spoken upon by Brother Pratt, this morning, we believe in. And I tell you,—for I know it—it will sail over, and ride triumphantly above all the prejudice and priestcraft of the day; it will be fostered and believed in by the more intelligent portions of the world, as one of the best doctrines ever proclaimed to any people.—Millennial Star, Vol. 15, page 31. Published in Liverpool, England, in 1853.

If the American people by their representatives in congress wish to help make President Brigham Young a true prophet, they can do so by giving to the congressman-elect from Utah a seat in the National Legislature; and reap the aftermath which is sure to follow.

For the reasons herein given we are of the opinion that Mr. B. H. Roberts should not be permitted to sit as a legislator in the congress of the United States. We believe further that our objections are based on legal grounds.

A NEW ANTHEM.

Messrs. Lyon and Healey, of Chicago, U. S. A., have sent us a copy of a new national song, entitled, "The Anthem of the Free;" words by Mrs. Charles Brockway Gibson, music by Walton Perkins. It is a felicitous, stirring poem set to suitable and catching music.

FRIENDLY NOTICE.

The Hay Springs, Nebraska, Leader, late date, has this to say of the preaching of Bro. D. M. Rudd:—

The meetings at the hall that have continued every evening for the past ten days have been quite well attended considering the amount of sickness and the numerous lodge attractions. Two things can be said of Elder Rudd's preaching. While, as one eminent divine has put it, he may be "preaching the Devil's own doctrine," he teaches Bible doctrine; the other thing is, he holds the undivided attention of his hearers for nearly an hour at each meeting; no furtive glances at the clock, snapping of watch cases, or suppressed sighs while he is preaching. Meetings will continue this week and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. J. Anthony, Ferron, Utah, January 22:—

Am arranging for another debate at Orangeville, with a young lawyer. He proposes to discuss the question of polygamy, he to affirm. I proposed to make it interesting by affirming succession. I suppose we will settle the question to-morrow or next day. Their elders seem to be on the war path, and of course we have on the war paint all the time. It seems rather strange for the prosecuting attorney of Emery County or any other to affirm the divinity of polygamy. He challenged me to discuss it with him first in private. I told him no, but if he would affirm it I would meet him in public. I think he will meet me. It may help B. H. Roberts or congress to see how the church regards Bro. R. I am preparing to meet the "dead issue" square in the face.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, Nebraska City, Nebraska, January 18:—

We met last Sabbath, the 15th, for Sunday school, and morning and evening for preaching service, for the first time in about seven weeks, on account of the quarantine, which was lifted on Saturday, the 14th. But one of our members had the contagion (smallpox); he was the presiding priest of the Nebraska City branch, Bro. C. L. Gouldsmith.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We notice that Bro. J. W. Peterson, of the Eastern Iowa district, proposes to hold what he calls a "Ministerial Institute," in February, the purpose of which is to secure a better acquaintance with and between the different members of the force in his district, and to aid each other in the effort to secure a unity of purpose and procedure in the field, to develop interest in both saints and the people among whom the ministers labor and so do better work. We believe the movement may be made to do good, and commend it.

The recent effort to establish unity between the Methodist churches North and South is said to have been a failure. Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"The doubts we vainly seek to solve,
The truths we know, are one;
The known and nameless stars revolve
Around the Central Sun."

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—The very sad statement was made to me yesterday by one of the brethren, that as a rule the children of the church were leaving it, especially those who were baptized at nine years of age according to the commandment given in Doctrine and Covenants. I must confess that before having my own children baptized I hesitated for this very reason, fearing that as they grew older they would lose interest and finally drop out altogether; but I continued to instruct them in the doctrine, prayed with and for them, and they both were very earnest in their desire to be baptized as soon as an opportunity could be found. They are both young yet, and time alone will tell whether they will with many others drop out, or whether they will remain in the faith.

Is it true that the children so baptized lose interest and drop out? Is not God's wisdom better than ours? and dare we neglect this commandment with less fear of the resulting chastisement than we would fear to violate any other commandment? I would like to see the sisters discuss this question in the Home Column.

If the children do drop out, is it not often the fault of the parents? Have they been faithful? Have they kept all the commandments? for surely one commandment is as binding as another. Is family worship observed? the blessing asked? the children taught to pray in secret and in the family circle? Are they taught to observe the Word of Wisdom and to tithe their little earnings, and to continue to do so as they grow to manhood and womanhood? Are they taught to "lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths" (Prov. 3: 5, 6).

Dear sisters; is it right to engage in a "raffle" for the purpose of raising money for the church? For one I believe it is not. We are commanded to avoid even the appearance of evil (1 Thess. 5: 22); and I know whereof I speak when I say that nonprofessors of religion laugh at the members of sectarian churches for doing this very thing, and contemptuously call it "religious gambling." Surely if the members of other churches meet with such criticism as this, the saints will not escape it.

But what makes it wrong to raffle? Well, when one raffles does he not take something for which he has not paid if he wins the chance? Are not the drawings conducted the same or very similar to those of the Louisiana lottery; the only difference being in the amount at stake? Can any saint afford to draw upon himself or herself, and more especially upon the true church of Christ, such criticism as I have just mentioned? and which I can assure you will follow as certainly as day and night succeed each other.

Casting lots is mentioned in the Bible only a few times, and was always a solemn appeal to God to decide some important matter. Solomon says, "The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord." When the choice for the apostleship lay between Justus and Matthias the disciples solemnly appealed to the Lord to show by lot which he had chosen (Acts 1: 24-26).

"Let not then your good be evil spoken of," wrote Paul in his epistle to the Romans (14: 16), and in our laudable desire to raise money for the church we should be especially careful that our methods are not such as to bring reproach upon ourselves or the church.

There is no necessity for a raffle. Articles can be disposed of in various ways, none of which are open to objection; and though we may not see any wrong in raffling, we should not even once do that which brings upon us the reproach of "religious gambling" by those who make no profession of religion at all.

And then, as a last thought, shall we offer to the Lord that which is laden with the reproaches of the world? Let us be sure our offerings are pure in the sight of God.

Lovingly, in the faith,

SISTER IDA.

Sr. Burton's address is Papeete, Tahiti, Oceanica.—ED.

It seems to be very easy for many people to fall into the habit of criticising. At a glance the imperfections of friend, neighbor, or casual acquaintances stand revealed to them; indeed so prominent are these that the virtues and good qualities of the individuals are entirely overlooked or effectually concealed. Not only is this an unwise and unjust practice, by which others are injured; but more than by almost any other habit is our own happiness destroyed, and all the higher aspirations of soul and spirit dwarfed and strangled at the beginning. Like a fountain into which impure matter has found its way, poisoning as it flows along every stream which empties into its bosom, so this habit menaces the purity and peace of mind of all who come in contact with its unhappy victim.

Dear Sister Frances:—The sisters in London, England, who have joined the Union have never organized, but we have had many testimonies of God's presence with us while observing the hour in our homes; and for myself I can say, I have had many prayers answered already concerning the members of my family, for which I thank my heavenly Father.

Your sister in the gospel of peace,

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sister Barbara A. Scott, wife of James G. Scott, of Borden, Indiana, who has been sorely afflicted with rheumatism and la grippe for the last four months, earnestly desires the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union and of the church (a day of fasting if possible), that she may be healed. Inasmuch as she has labored faithfully for the church, and washed and cooked and toiled, waiting on the elders, now she earnestly desires their faith and prayers. Her faith is strong in the power of God.

A SISTER writes us from "College," Kansas, to which we wish to reply, but there is no such post office in the State named. We wrote the reply and mailed it addressed to "College, Kansas," but in a few days it came back with, "No such P. O. in State named," stamped in red across the face. This is not the first instance of the kind. We have sent out many letters that returned to us because there was "No such P. O. in State named." People should be very careful in writing to use the name of the post office at which they receive their mail, either in the date line or make special mention thereof at the close. Names of settlements not having a post office are often used, but never should be. They are always confusing, to say the least for them. If the sister from "College, Kansas," will write us again giving her post office, we would like to write her yet.

THE USE OF QUARTERLIES.

For the Southern Nebraska district convention.

I believe the Quarterly to be a power for good, as an instructor; and yet I believe that it can be improved upon; and am positive it will be from time to time, as some of the best minds of the church are the authors and will not rest until it becomes as perfect an instructor as can be made.

There are some disadvantages to contend with. To receive thorough instructions in almost every lesson, each scholar, or family at least, should be in possession of Bible, both Inspired and King James' Translation, also Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. There are scholars outside the church that are not willing to accept evidence from the Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon as Bible truth. And, no doubt, in many instances the parents object on the same ground. I believe it the duty of every teacher, at least, to be in possession of the books mentioned, and to teach his scholars the beauty and harmony existing between the books.

It takes a great amount of study to determine what method to pursue to get the greatest amount of good out of the Quarterly as an instructor. SAM'L. BROLLIAR.

TO THE leading workers of the Fremont, Iowa, district association the idea of a newspaper occurred. In June, 1896, the program committee gave to it a place in the convention. Its usefulness was determined at this time, so that now it is a permanent feature of the district work.

It might be well to notice some of the uses this paper conserves, and thereby enable us to draw our own conclusions as to its worthiness:—

1. Matters that are of special moment to the workers are emphasized. 2. To touch briefly upon those subjects that do not get special notice in the convention programs. 3. To repeat in essence form some things that are worth repeating. 4. To encourage original thought, inspired by experience, on the part of all contributors, and thereby getting at the best thoughts of home talent. 5. By this medium every part of the district is in some way represented, which enables the officers to judge of the needs, talent, advancements, etc., of the schools. These are but a few of the uses the Sunday school newspaper conserves; yet it will suffice to suggest many more to you.

This brief history of the newspaper, as conceived of by the Fremont district superintendent is given to illustrate the plan and purposes thereof. We believe it to be worthy the consideration of many; for out of all the different phases of Sunday school work discussed by a properly arranged newspaper, he is an unprofitable servant indeed who does not glean one good thought that he may apply to himself, or take with him to his class, or that will not benefit his school.

SPRING AWAKENING.

Only a little while and spring will again be ushered in, bringing with it evidences of new life and renewed vigor. On every hand will be seen a wholesouled renewal of beauties long hidden by the ice and snow and activities long restrained by the winter's cold.

While this general upbuilding is going on we must not forget that our Sunday school could and should be increasing in strength and energy. How many of our schools have an active visiting committee whose duty it is to look after absent members and to secure, at every opportunity, new pupils? If not, why not? It is to be hoped that to our next convention may be reported the addition of one or more teachers in each school necessitated by their increase in attendance.

True, this may be a sort of "spasmodic" attendance, somewhat relaxed as the summer's heat becomes oppressive; but who can know the good that may be done even in so short a time? It is as bread cast upon the waters, which may not return for many years. But if we give nothing more to the pupils outside of our church who attend our schools, than such impressions, that the memory of them will prevent false prejudices against our church, we may feel well repaid.

Let every one consider himself a committee of one to further our Sunday school cause at every opportunity. Let our motto be: "Work! Work while the sun shines!"

GO THY WAY.

Go thy way, but let that way
Be ever worth the going;
Know thy way, and never stray
In ways not worth the knowing;
Leave the way that goes astray,
And seek a better path,
Straight and narrow all the way,
To realms unknown to sin and wrath,
Thus, "Go Thy Way."

AS WE VIEW IT.

Editors Saints' Herald:—By the kindness of some unknown friend, I have just received a copy of your paper containing a report of discussions between Elder W. E. Peak and myself, held at Lane and College View, Nebraska, in which he gives us a great scolding. We are sorry anything occurred to so deeply offend him. The Lord said "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." We are sorry that he allowed himself to use such expressions toward us, as "deceived," "Popery," "tyrannical," "narrowminded," and the like. "Out of the abundance of the heart," Christ says, "the mouth speaketh." Is it possible that such words are a true indication of his state of mind?

Although as a people we have our failings and are not perfect, yet we think Bro. Peak made a mistake in coming among us, partaking of our hospitality, and going his way and publishing our faults to the world; for the wise man said, "A talebearer revealeth secrets, but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter."—Prov. 11: 13. He has not only published our imperfections, but we think he has greatly magnified them, thereby doing us great injustice, leaving a wrong impression upon the minds of your readers. We hope by your Christian courtesy to be permitted to make a brief reply.

1. Bro. Peak will remember that he shouted, "Look out for tricks!" And when we went back a little way to see in whose track the tricks were to be found, he hid his past record behind a decision of the chair, under the plea that we were referring to a closed proposition.

2. Elder Hill did not arrange with his members to stop the discussion at Lane. If Bro. Peak will recall the events of that evening he will remember that the Adventists were as calm and serene as a summer morning, that it was a "Sunday keeper" who declared that he would resort to law if the discussion was continued in the schoolhouse. He will remember that this occurred after his failure to maintain Sunday sacredness by the Scriptures, having chased his, Sunday—first day—Lord's day, clear over onto Monday. Is it any wonder that at least some of the "Sunday keepers" had lost their interest in the discussion?

3. Adventists do not believe that Elder William Miller is or was, or ever will be an angel. They believe the angel of Revelation 14: 6 symbolizes a movement among men, in which Elder Miller took a prominent part.

4. He complains of his reception and entertainment at College View. I would gladly have entertained him all the time, but could not do so for the following reasons: We had lately buried our son, after a long illness, and Mrs. Hill was wearied and broken in health. Besides, we were moving and part of our household goods were in one house and part in another, so it was impossible for us to do for Bro. Peak as well as we wished to do; yet he and Elder Smith were, during the discussion of fourteen evenings, entertained free of charge by our people. If our Latter Day brethren will treat us as well when we go among them, we will be careful to thank them for their kind hospitality.

5. His complaint that there were no backs to the seats is somewhat inaccurate, as there were dozens of patent school desks with backs to them. Was his mind so confused as to forget this, or was he trying to make out a case? He came to us and we provided for him house, light, and entertainment free of charge, while he unfolded to us the fullness of the gospel as revealed by the angel Moroni—departed spirit—to his prophet, Joseph, and it seems to us that he ought to be the happiest Latter Day Saint in all the land, but it appears the unhappy spirit of fault-finding has taken full possession of him.

6. We knew nothing of that clap of thunder until we read of it in his report. We remember that he undertook to find a contradiction between the writings of Mrs. White and the Bible and failed, and that is all we know about it.

7. Yes, it is true, some thought the discussion was unprofitable because Elder Peak had agreed to take the Bible as standard in discussion, but when it was shown beyond controversy that his doctrine and the Bible did not agree, he promptly rejected it as false and refused to accept its positive testimony that the sin of David was forgiven, holding that a pretended inspired translation by one Joseph Smith which teaches, that David was not forgiven, is the truth. Is it any wonder that some thought discussion under such circumstances is unprofitable?

What seems to have displeased him most of all is, that we contended that he was on the wrong side, or Satan's side of the question. It was on this wise: The Lord said "Thou shalt surely die." Satan said, "Ye shall not surely die." Bro. Peak teaches the spirit—the inner man—the real man, is immortal and cannot die. Thus he takes Satan's side of the controversy, for it is evident if the real man never dies, Satan told the truth when he said "Ye shall not surely die;" and the Lord was mistaken when he said, Ye shall die. We did this to show him and all others that his doctrine was founded on Satan's falsehood and should be now and forever discarded.

9. I have had opportunity to speak to one of the persons referred to as having unfavorably criticized my efforts in the discussion, and he denies any knowledge of making such criticisms as reported. Hearsay is a very unreliable thing upon which to base a report. Even if evil things were said, perhaps it would be better not to repeat them. The divine counsel is, "Speak not evil of another, brethren."

10. Elder Hill's disgrace. He knew it would be so. By some means he got an inkling of it beforehand. Perhaps the angel Moroni, or some other departed spirit, suggested it to him; but we are admonished not to believe every spirit. Even if it were so, would it not have been more Christianlike—more in accordance with the golden rule—if he had said: My old brother feels badly enough about it already; I will not add to his grief by publishing his sad downfall to a cold and heartless world. "A talebearer revealeth secrets, but he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter," said the wise man. But again our brother has looked at this matter with distorted vision. Bro. Hill's condition is not nearly so sad as set forth in the report. He is rejoicing in the confidence of his brethren and the blessed truth was never dearer or brighter to him than now.

11. His two statements that the best people would not attend the discussion, and nine tenths of the people wanted it held in the church, do not harmonize well together. Such a skillful debater as Elder Peak claims to be ought not to leave such a wide gap in his logic as that. Many of our people are opposed to discussions, and to avoid friction I proposed to hold the discussion in the schoolhouse. I never asked for the church.

12. I was not present at the eventful interview between Elder Peak and the narrow-minded professors and the tyrannical Elder Johnson, but I am certain he had on his magnifying glasses when he made his report; for they are Christian gentleman, good and true and abundantly able to speak for themselves when necessary to do so.

13. We are sorry he represents us as so bigoted and narrowminded. We would indeed like to stand higher in his opinion, and he knows how we can be delivered from this thralldom—just point us to one "Thus saith the Lord" for Sunday keeping—one single line in all the Bible authorizing the sanctification of Sunday, and we will immediately come out into the broad expanse of the Latter Day Saint doctrine. If Elder Peak, or the editor of the Saints' Herald, or any other man will point to one line in the word of God where the first day is called the Sabbath, or where it was blessed, sanctified, or commanded to be kept holy, or where it is once stated that Christ, or the apostles, or any one of the apostles sacredly observed it in a single instance, we promise to keep Sunday the rest of our lives; but until this can be done, we propose by the grace of God to observe the day which God rested on, blessed, sanctified, and commanded us to keep holy; and it hurts us not to be called by the names bigot, narrowminded, and the like, for "great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." We bear these things with the greatest complacency, knowing our Savior bore much more for us.

14. We knew that at times our brother was unhappy during the discussion, but we disagree with him as to the cause of his unhappiness. He attributed it to the lack of ability and perverseness in his opponent. How he longed for an opponent who could follow him in his arguments; but we were hunting for deer and refused to run after a rabbit. His opponent did not present his side of the question to suit him at all, and he was sarcastic, etc.

Perhaps at times my language was too severe. In fact, I am convinced it was so; for which I am sorry and beg pardon. But we think the source of his unhappiness was deeper even than that. The applause seemed to irritate him, it did not suit him at all. He publicly found fault with it, but we thought it was timely and appropriate. His audience was not to his mind. He considered his arguments weighty and his logic invincible, but his audience did not see it that way and he laid it to their lack of intelligence; yet we thought he had an audience exceptionally intelligent in the Scriptures. He was lonesome. He cried out, "I am alone," "I am like Paul," "No man stood with me." We stood not with him because he was wrong. When he taught that the ten commandments were a yoke of bondage which he could not bear, not a man could be found to acknowledge that the commandments which say, "Thou shalt not steal," "Thou shalt not commit adultery," were a yoke of bondage to him. In this he stood alone. The people understood that it is the carnal mind that is enmity against God, is not subject to his law neither indeed can be, and that Paul delighted in the law of God after the inward man, after he was converted.

Also, when he taught that the Sabbath of the Lord is bondage, he stood alone; for the people knew the Lord had said, "Call the Sabbath a delight."—Isa. 58: 13. Yes, I repeat, Bro. Peak taught that to observe the Sabbath is bondage, while the Lord said, "Call the Sabbath a delight," and the people believed the Lord. Therefore he was left to stand alone, and no man stood with him. No doubt he was lonesome, yet we think the real cause of his unhappiness lay deeper than that; he was opposing the truth of God, "Thy law is the truth," and he hurled himself against the law of God, which is the rock of eternal truth; hence the unhappy results to him. "The wise in heart will receive commandments: but."—Prov. 10: 8.

Upon a careful perusal of the elder's report, it does not appear that his last discussion was conducive to the development of the Christian graces in his own mind, and we advise him not to be in haste to engage in another. Take time; count the cost well; and if again he should fall into hard lines, we hope he will bear his tribulations with more meekness and patience than he did this time. And remember that hurling opprobrious epithets at his opponents is not very convincing argument. How much better it would have been if instead of dealing in personalities he had in his report given us some of his invincible arguments by which he overthrew error and established truth, if indeed he had any such arguments to give. Personally, the elder has my best wishes for his highest and best good, both for this world and for that which is to come; and however severe we may be on each other's errors, let us treat each other with courtesy and kindness.

"Let brotherly love continue."

Yours truly,

W. B. HILL.

LINCOLN, Nebraska, October 11, 1898.

SOUTH PITTSBURG, Tenn., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—We are here again. We left December 26, and went to Higdon, Alabama, where one of my brothers live. I commenced preaching the night after we arrived, at his house. I preached five sermons to small but interested congregations, and left with good prospects for the cause and much prejudice removed.

I came back here on the 14th, staid one day, and then went to Sweetin's Cove; preached once and visited from house to house, and preached to the people privately. The interest seemed good here. I expect some to come into the church soon.

We expect to preach at Bro. Gross' house on Sunday night and leave here on Monday next for Tracy City, where we expect to stop for a week or two; then expect to go to Collins River, where I have done a good deal of preaching first and last. I have not yet filled nearly all the calls for preaching in that section. As a rule people turn out very well to hear me and give good attention. We hope for good results. I baptized a gentleman in the Tennessee River on Christmas Day; plenty cold water, for we have had a cold winter here; yet we have stood it very well so far.

I never felt better in the work. This is surely a marvelous work and a wonder. Oh, how slowly it moves though! I sometimes get in a hurry and worry—get impatient; yet I think and take fresh courage.

Yours in the faith,

E. W. NUNLEY.

MALLARD, Iowa, Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—As Bishop's agent for Galland's Grove, Iowa, district, I spent a week in November in Galland's Grove branch, visiting the saints in the interest of the law of tithes and offerings. Every family I visited treated me with true saintlike courtesy, while we discussed that branch of the church work without reserve, at times reading freely from "the law and the testimony." I found house-to-house preaching on tithing profitable, and feel confident that every Bishop's agent ought to visit every family or member in his district once a year besides the public sermons on temporalities.

About December 1, Bro. and Sr. T. C. Dobson took me in a sleigh from their home near Odebolt to Alta, a twenty-mile ride, stopping one night at the home of Mr. and Sr. C. A. Edson, near Schaller. The first weeks in December were spent in Cherokee County, where a self-sacrificing band of saints have won a name for honesty and integrity among their neighbors, which makes preaching the gospel in their vicinity easy. The names of Father and Mother Hayes and Father and Mother Bennett are and will be held in sacred memory by the Pilot Rock branch there as charter members, and for their unwavering faith. Surely a goodly reward will be theirs.

At Newell I called on Bro. and Sr. O. A. Rounds and family, four in all being members, together with a young brother from Missouri, who spends an hour on Sundays in song and social meeting at their home. Let others follow their example. Bro. Rounds furnished me a horse and buggy to drive nine miles into the country, where I called at the home of Sr. James M. Olson, whose husband is a Baptist. Bro. Olson being a close observer as to the way finances were conducted in his church, concluded their system was wrong and ours right. For more than a year he has been paying tithing, with his good wife, into the Latter Day Saints' Church. When he sees the necessity of obeying the gospel as taught by this church, I believe he will obey.

At Coalville I spent ten days, visiting and preaching to the saints and friends. Bro. Samuel Jordison is president of the branch, and Bro. William Jordison superintends the Sunday school work. This branch never fails to look after and supply the temporal needs of the missionary. By request of Bro. and Sr. N. Randall I preached two evenings at their home in Fort Dodge. The attendance was good for cottage meetings, while the attention was gratifying to the speaker and the saints.

January 4 found me in Gilmore City, where I was met by Bro. James C. Christenson, who took me to his home, four miles northwest of town. Bro. and Sr. C. left the Utah Church about two years ago, and were baptized into the Reorganization. By request of the Union branch and direction of District President C. E. Butterworth, I ordained Bro. Christenson a priest. Bro. C.'s Danish neighbors may now have an opportunity to hear the gospel. After holding a few meetings in a schoolhouse near by, I went to Rolfe, meeting with the kindhearted saints, preaching to them one evening at the home of Mr. and Sr. Hancher. Elder Ernest G. Taylor, of the Utah Church, was present. I had met him on a previous evening at this place, and while talking over the many points of difference between the two churches, I asked him if he would affirm the Utah Church to be the true church in succession from 1830. He answered no. Then in a good-natured way I told Mr. Taylor that I would give him or any other one man five hundred dollars ($500) who would succeed in getting the Presidency of the Utah Church to name and appoint an elder of their church to debate the questions of true succession in church presidency, etc., with an elder of the Reorganized Church named and recommended by the Presidency at Lamoni; twenty sessions of two hours each to be held in the tabernacle in Salt Lake City, Utah, then the same disputants to repeat the discussion for twenty sessions in the saints' church at Lamoni, Iowa. Mr. Editor, I mean what I say, and this offer will hold good for a year. Deseret News please copy.

I sold Elder Taylor Bro. H. C. Smith's work on "True Succession," and he departed for Des Moines.

Last Sunday I met with a good representation of Union branch, near Mallard, Palo Alto County. The day was pleasant and all seemed to enjoy the services, Bro. E. Ford is in charge of this noble band of saints.

In my labors and social intercourse with members and nonmembers, I never before received so much substantial encouragement; never knew prospects for church work to be brighter, in this district, than now. The meetings in Mallard are well attended; interest good. I hear words of commendation for the labor done here one year ago by Bro. W. W. Whiting, and of a more recent date by Elders C. E. Butterworth and W. A. Smith. I am staying at the pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. Joseph Fish, who with their family are laboring to make the meetings a success. The families of Brn. J. Cross, G. Feaster, and J. Truog are not less interested in getting their neighbors out to hear.

Dear saints, the Galland's Grove district conference convenes at Dow City, February 25. Let all be prompt with their tithes and offerings that our report may be a credit to us as gospel-loving members, and our good record be not broken.

Address me at Deloit, Crawford County, Iowa.
CHARLES J. HUNT.

HAY SPRINGS, Neb., Jan. 24.

Editors Herald.—It has been quite awhile since I have written you. I have kept on trying to do what I could. I lost almost the entire month of October from the field on account of sickness, and had but started into the work after regaining health sufficient to speak publicly, when I was called home, on account of sickness there, and did not get into the field again until the 3d inst., when I came here.

I began meetings on the evening of the 5th in Kelley Hall, the use of which we were given free of charge as long as we want it. There are no seats except a few long benches, but the Odd Fellows very kindly voted to donate the use of their chairs, which with the benches, gave us plenty of seating room. For the above-mentioned favors we feel especially indebted to Mr. Bowman, druggist, who has control of the hall; to Leviskey and Lipman, Jew merchants; and to Mr. Humphreys, Editor of the Leader; also for other favors. Mr. Leviskey will no doubt be remembered by Bro. I. McCord and family, with whom he spent one winter and attended school.

Although my meetings have not been largely attended, yet the attention has been the very best. Three have been baptized and more are fully convinced we have the truth, but have not yet decided to move into the kingdom of God at the present time.

While the good work has been going on here the opposition has not been sleeping. The M. E. preacher quoted from the so-called revelation on polygamy and said the Latter Day Saints believed the "shedding of innocent blood" was the only thing that would "send a man to hell," and applied the statement directly to us. He and the Congregationalist preacher would go around town and tell the people what the L. D. S. believe. They would not meet me and discuss the questions upon which we differed where some one could keep order, but last Friday they began their talk in a store, and I was invited in. The Utah Book of Covenants was introduced and the charge of polygamy made against Joseph Smith. War was declared against me, it seemed, and the battle lasted for five hours with quite a large crowd to hear. Truth lost nothing; men who were opposers before were very friendly to me after the storm was over.

If the membership of the church would live lives consistent with their profession they would in greater measure assist the missionary, even if not persistent talkers about the gospel, than by constantly talking the gospel and not living it. At different times my attention has been called to "so and so," "who is a member of your church," and he "borrowed from me and never paid back;" or "has owed me now for a long time and has never offered to settle," and many other charges. It is sometimes true that the party thus charged is an officer in the church and does a great deal of "talking religion." Such a party is often a hindrance to others, for people will look at the lives of those they are asked to associate with. The man who seeks to represent God to others ought to keep himself as near as possible in line with God's commands.

The teacher of others who uses tobacco should observe, "Avoid the use of tobacco" (D. C. 119:3) that their counsel to them may be effective. "Repent and be baptized," is a very plain statement, and we insist that others will take it as it was given by the Spirit of God; but it is no easier to be understood than the one quoted from the Doctrine and Covenants.

Give me the person who lives the gospel, rather than the one that talks but does not live it. I have exhausted my store of patience with some people who, when I preach a sermon on the "first principles," say, "That was good; I don't see how anyone can hear it made so plain and then stay out of the church; they surely believe it but haven't the moral courage to obey;" and when I have spoken concerning the life of a saint and how God wants us to keep ourselves pure—that tobacco "is not good for man," etc., the answer comes, "Yes, I know I ought not smoke or chew;" but he keeps right on in the same old way. I think and say "Why don't you use some of that 'moral courage' you think others lack?"

In hope of eternal life,

DAVID M. RUDD.

ARTHUR, Ont., Jan. 17.

Editors Herald.—We have been enjoying a visit in our branch from Brn. R. C. Evans and D. McGregor. They have gone from us to be on the path of Duty. We had a pleasant but short call from Bro. R. C., and truly we feel to make another struggle for life eternal, after hearing his lovely counsel. Surely God has as noble, able, wise, and spiritual men selected for the eleventh hour as ever graced this earth.

This dispensation, I count, is the most glorious of all dispensations to be laboring in. True, we often feel that we would like to have lived in Enoch's day, in Moses' day, or with the noble Daniel, Paul, or in the grand Reformer's time; or to have been with Jesus in his struggles through dark hours; and we long to meet with the finest prophet, to my mind, of all, Joseph the Martyr.

But we are enjoying the final wind up of the harvest, and are we all performing our little part in the field? To my mind each one has his or her work to perform, and no other can do it as well as we can. Our characters and dispositions just suit the work God has for us. Do we put ourselves in a condition to do it? I question if all do; possibly few, comparatively speaking, are willing to do and say each morning, "Lord, what wilt thou have us to do?"

I count myself happy to have a work to do in this dispensation. My heart leaps for joy at times when I think of it; my spirit swells within me; my zeal and love increase for this work. But it is not all sunshine; the clouds of discouragement come, and we feel them creeping over us, and think, "I am such a fool; I make such a fool of myself at times. I'll write no more, I'll preach no more, I'll do no more." But, thank God, we have One who ever lives to sympathize with us; who has gone through all those feelings; who was tested to the uttermost. He struggled till he could say, "I do always those things that please him"—the heavenly Father. O, what a rebuke to us! When Satan tries us we are so puny and weak in yielding to sin; but when God sees we have been tried enough, if needs be angels come, the sweet Spirit fills us with fresh zeal, and not till the trial is over do we see the wisdom of God in teaching us the lessons. The best and only experience to teach us is in actually coming through the battle.

Yours in hope,

GEO. BUSCHLEN.

HARLAN, Iowa, Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—We still live, and are working for the interest of the cause. I thought it would be well to let you know how we feel and what we are doing.

If we could all see the necessity of Graceland College we would all work together and soon meet the demands that have been made to get out of debt. The old saying is: "Out of debt is out of danger." I believe that is where the church should be. Just so long as we are in debt, we are in danger.

In talking to some about making a special effort to pay this debt and help lift the burden off the church, the reply is that the church made a mistake by building the college. If it was a mistake, we should be all the more anxious to make it right. As we look back we are made to see that often successes come through mistakes of others. We want our children to know more than we, and I believe it is better for them to get their knowledge in their own schools than in others. For this reason I believe all Latter Day Saints should work together and remove the burden. But I have noticed that the ones who do the most faultfinding are those who have the most money, and are most able to pay, and say that they will get no benefit from the college.

I believe when any parent that sends a child to college and that child comes out with high honors from that college, both child and parent have received a benefit. So let us go ahead and do all we can to bring our children up higher.

There is more than one way in which this burden can be lifted. On Friday evening, January 13, the Harlan Sunday school gave a general supper and cleared $51.70, which has been sent to the Bishop's agent of this district for the benefit of Graceland. The school took hold of this with a determination to make it a success, and the success was complete as evidenced by the receipts. Over two hundred persons ate at our tables, and it was acknowledged by every one present the finest supper that has ever been given by any church or society in Harlan. And so will our Graceland be acknowledged as the finest, if the saints will support it as they should.

We don't wish to boast over our success, nor take the honor to ourselves, as it belongs to God. I am satisfied he is pleased with the effort that is being made to educate the young of the church and bring them up higher; and our duty as saints is to give to Graceland success.

"United we stand; divided we fall."

May God bless his people that a great work may be accomplished.

Yours fraternally,

J. O. BOOTH.

BYRNEVILLE, Ind., Jan. 19.

Editors Herald:—The Southern Indiana district conference convened with us here. Business had accumulated and it took two full days to dispose of it. Some important matters came up for discussion, but everything seemed to be settled with the best of feeling. Apostle E. C. Briggs was with us, and he, being a very spiritual man, preached us some wonderful sermons. Taking all in all, we feel that we have been benefited. Bro. E. C., come again.

Our branch now numbers fifty members. It was organized ten years ago last June and we have lost only two outside of death. Our growth is slow, but we now feel we are moving on right lines. To further explain, will say that in the introduction of the work here some things were taught that we have learned, long since, do not belong to the church. One of them was when we come to partake of the Lord's supper, to make confession, and this was so understood to be required of each member to make him worthy; but we are glad we are getting on higher ground and in safer places.

The work here appears to be in a prosperous condition; many are investigating, but this work (not like any other thing) moves slowly; but we are glad to say that this great, grand, and wonderful gospel blaze is so bright that when the honest in heart get in condition for it to reflect upon them, then and there that little germ is imbedded or planted, although it may be years before you see the effects; but sooner or later it will develop and another one is born into the kingdom; so the work moves—but seemingly very slowly to us.

We have on our table what is known as Rev. S. Hobson's exposition of Mormonism. We will mail it to you and you can examine it, and if there is any defense necessary to make you can do it or make it. He (Hobson) has peddled this vulgar pamphlet all over this district and lectured in every church that would open to him.

Yours in bonds,

JAMES P. SAPPENFIELD.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—Of late I have been kept very busy, answering calls to preach funeral sermons, visiting the sick, etc. Have made several trips over in the Eastern Michigan district, "my old field of labor," and indeed it was very pleasant to the writer to renew old acquaintance of those with whom I had labored so long. The major part of those I came in contact with, who bear the name of saint, seem to vividly remember the promise made at the time of baptism, "that they would serve God to the best of their ability the remainder of their natural lives;" whilst others have fallen into a kind of stupor or spiritual sleep, and seem to be resting easy, unconcerned about the time of dissolution and the day of reckoning which awaits each and every one of us. But may God help us all to awake to greater diligence, and work while the day lasts, lest at the coming of Christ we shall be weighed in the balance "of a just and righteous judgment" and be found wanting.

I can see the need of a more careful and earnest study of the word of God and a closer observance of the same.

We have nothing very flattering to say of the work here in the Bay cities; just about holding our own. I will say, however, that the writer has been absent from the city most of the time for the last five months. This leaves Bro. Smith, "priest of the branch," to hold the fort alone. We anticipate renting a hall in a more central place, and if so we shall open up a series of meetings, and put forth a greater effort to more thoroughly establish the work here.

Last Sunday I preached a funeral sermon in the Presbyterian church, in Grindstone City, Huron County, Michigan, to a large attentive audience; and on Monday morning I baptized one, and took the afternoon train home.

Hopefully yours,

J. A. GRANT.

MAYSVILLE, Ark., Jan. 24.

Editors Herald:—I held a meeting at Ward's schoolhouse, Indian Territory; fine hearing, made many friends, good ones. I am not especially striving to get people into the church, but to educate them in the law of the kingdom of God.

Have just closed a meeting at Cherokee, Arkansas, preached twelve sermons; fine crowd to listen. While I told them the story of the angel's message to Joseph Smith, how they did listen, and how some did squirm, while others did rejoice. I commenced my meeting on Thursday eve; good crowd from the first. On Monday evening following, the Christian-Campbellites, Disciples of Christ, brought in a preacher and began services in their church to try to drown me out. The Baptists also called in one of their preachers and began meetings; so we had three meetings running at the same time; one in opposition to the other, and just about excitement enough to make it interesting. I held the crowd in spite of all both preachers could do, assisted as they were by a few who knew Joseph was a very bad man.

The stories on Joseph and the saints in an early day were all they dare to say. I kept my eye on them; I took the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the "Three Bibles Compared" and went on the street in the daytime and defended the work of Joseph and the doctrine of the church from 1830 to Joseph's death in 1844, to the perfect satisfaction of my friends and to the discomfort and shame of the opposers, and liars, and misrepresenters of the kingdom of God. I was greatly blessed in all my efforts.

The Campbellite preacher is a talented lawyer from Bentonville, county seat of Benton County. I met him in a store; he did not seem to want to talk to me, but was very busy talking to others for my benefit, of course, so I listened attentively. The preacher is of what I call the big blanket kind—everybody do as you feel like doing, and of course it will all be right; God will save us. I let them run until my time came. I told them they might be all right provided we had no Bible to go by. It hurt bad; I drew the line close. O, how sad and dark they did look! all they could do was to take up the old wornout yarns against Joseph. I was loaded for that lawyer-Campbellite-Christian-Disciple-Methodist-Baptist-big-blanket preacher. I drew out of my pocket the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants and by the help of God's Holy Spirit they were put to silence. The preacher tried to make a gap to crawl out at by saying all claims could be proven by the Bible and it was impossible to dis-prove Brigham's polygamic revelation by Bible. Then I roasted him good, and showed that in that case, even if Joseph and the church taught polygamy, it was right because the Bible did not condemn it. Bless you, I actually had to defend the Christian religion against polygamy. The preacher hung his head, the crowd was confounded at my defense for our claim and defense against the attack of the Bible.

I closed my meeting with a good feeling and many invitations to come again, which I aim to do by and by. May the Lord bless us all and hasten his work that it may shine through all those dark regions.

CLINTON, Iowa, Jan. 25.

Editors Herald.—After leaving Lamoni, December 29, I began the new year by commencing a series of sermons at the Green Valley schoolhouse, eight miles southwest of Muscatine; but as some of our former friends were away visiting in Kentucky, and there not being a very large turnout, I began two miles farther east on what is called Muscatine Island, the garden spot of Iowa. More melons and sweet potatoes are shipped from this island (which includes about two townships) than from all the rest of Iowa.

I found a very clever people there, willing to listen to our message; crowds increased each evening, as also the interest. I sold two Books of Mormon to two Methodist men, and furnished free reading matter to several. Fruitland is the only town on the island, excepting a suburb of Muscatine, and so far as I know there is only one church on the island. As these people are mostly gardeners they have plenty of time for attending church in winter, as they raise but little stock. I preached in the G. A. R. hall and was kindly treated both by the G. A. R's. and others.

The first evening a young man, who was working on the new railroad recently running through the town, asked me to go home with him. He took me to the hotel and entertained me royally, as did also the landlord, who did for me the next night as the young man had done. I also stopped with Mr. Joseph Fitzsimmons, an M. E. by profession, yet one of the progressive kind, and so far as I could see, not at all prejudiced. "Fitz," as he is sometimes called, says he has no sympathy with his namesake's hobby, so I was not afraid. He purchased a Book of Mormon and also persuaded his neighbor to buy one—I hope they will be benefited by a careful reading.

I could not remain as long as I wished, as our household effects were to have been shipped by my wife to Clinton, Iowa, about a week after I left; so I joined her at Muscatine and in due time we arrived here and are comfortably situated at No. 1205 Ninth Avenue.

Commenced meetings in our house as soon as we got settled; expect to continue over Sunday. On Monday evening next we have a general council meeting of the branch.

The Atonement of Christ and the Final Destiny of Man.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 1.

THE MISSION OF CHRIST—ITS OBJECT, DURATION, AND FINAL RESULTS.

THE Bible comes to us purporting to contain a revelation of God's will to man, and the first words which God spake, as recorded in that book, are:—

Let there be light.—Genesis 1:3.

And this harmonizes beautifully with the nature of our Creator, as described by the Apostle John:—

God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.—1 John 1:5.

Our Savior said, in speaking of himself and followers:—

I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.—John 8:12.

Light, then, both physical and spiritual, comes from God, the source of all light, as a blessing to man. And this being true, we conclude that the nearer we approach unto this divine light, "the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world," the more like God we become; and if we ever attain to a fullness of this light, then "we shall be like him."

We can hardly hope to attain unto a fullness of this great light of God, in all its effulgence, during this earth life of ours, for the inspired Paul has said:—

O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!—Romans 11:33.

But while we may not be able to comprehend all the light of God, it being "unsearchable" and "past finding out," so far as mortal man is concerned, yet our heavenly Father has been pleased to give unto us sufficient light to fill our hearts with "joy unspeakable and full of glory." And, from the rays of heavenly light which the Lord has been pleased to turn upon our pathway, we have learned, with gratitude and delight, that God's love for erring humanity is as unbounded and as far beyond the comprehension of finite minds as God's wisdom and knowledge are. Of this Paul says:—

That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge,* that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God.—Ephesians 3:17-19.

And the same apostle who tells us that "God is light" also tells us, "God is love."—1 John 4:8. So we see that notwithstanding God's wisdom, knowledge, judgments, and ways are "past finding out," his love is equally great, for it "passeth knowledge." Hence the plans and purposes of God, "which he hath purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Ephesians 3:11) for the salvation of the human family, must be characterized by Divine love; love so great in its height, in its depth, in its length, and in its breadth, that finite minds cannot fully comprehend its sublimity. And any theory that is lacking in this essential element we could not accept as coming from God.

Many theories have been advanced in regard to the final destiny of man; but, as a rule, those theories have been too narrow, and have limited either the power of God or his goodness. But for all that, they have done good, no doubt, by stimulating thought and causing people to investigate the Bible more closely than they had done before. And believing that free exchange of thought is calculated to help the masses reach correct conclusions, I feel to contribute my mite towards this end.

The final destiny of man is so closely connected with, and so dependent upon, the atonement made by the Savior, that I find it necessary to discuss the two subjects together, or what is better, perhaps, consider them as one subject. And in the investigation of this subject I shall appeal to the Scriptures, believing that they, if properly interpreted and rightly understood, will enlighten our minds in regard to the purposes of God, and enable us to reach correct conclusions in regard to the final destiny of the human family.

The Apostle Paul, one of the writers of the New Testament, says:—

For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope.—Romans 15: 4.

If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.—1 Corinthians 15: 19.

From the foregoing we learn that the Scriptures were written "for our learning," in order to give us "hope," and that if this "hope" is confined exclusively to "this life," it would make us the "most miserable" of "all men." Jesus said:—

Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.—John 5: 39.

And searching those Scriptures, both old and new, which "testify of me," we find that the mission of our Savior into this world is of such a character,—so comprehensive in its designs, so far-reaching in its final results,—as to warrant us in having "hope" for man, even after this earth life has ceased to be. And this "hope" is not confined to the few who have had the privilege of hearing and obeying the gospel in this life, but extends to the millions who have never been blessed with an opportunity of hearing the "glad tidings of great joy" during their earth life.

It is generally conceded by Bible believers that all things connected with this world, including man, were in some way created by Christ; but that they were created expressly for him and for his pleasure is not so universally believed. Many entertain the idea, seemingly at least, that a goodly portion of the human family were created for the Devil, and that instead of contributing to the pleasure of their Creator, their agony and hopeless despair will amuse, entertain, and gratify the pleasure of his satanic majesty during the long and tedious ages of a never-ending eternity. The men who wrote the Bible, however, seem to have gotten a different understanding of this matter; and as we believe them to have been inspired by the Spirit that guides into all truth, and the chosen instruments of the Almighty to declare his will unto man, we shall appeal to them for light on this subject. Paul, one of the inspired writers, tells us:—

For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him.—Col. 1: 16.

Again he tells us:—

For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things.—Heb. 2: 10.

If these texts teach us anything at all they teach us that all things were created for Christ, and that they are for him; and they teach us this just as clearly, and as positively as they teach us that all things were made by him. And, if I am to believe that they were created "by him," then I must believe that they were created "for him," and that they are "for him." The "all things" referred to here are evidently all created things—this heaven and this earth with all they contain; for we are told in another place:—

All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.—John 1: 3.

Some things, as the Father, and possibly the angels, were not created at all—had no beginning—and therefore are not to be included in the all things that were created by him and for him; but all those things that "were made" are certainly included. As to why he created all these things "for him," is revealed to us, in part, in the outburst of praise ascribed to the four and twenty elders:—

Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.—Rev. 4: 11.

They were created for God's pleasure. Now if we can learn from the inspired volume what his pleasure is, in regard to man, it will help us wonderfully in the further investigation of this subject. We are told by Ezekiel:—

As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live.—Ezekiel 33: 11.

As sure as God lives, dear reader, just that sure he has no pleasure in the death of even the wicked; but he does take pleasure in seeing them turn from their wicked ways and live. That his pleasure will be done is proven by the following:—

For I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, . . . saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure.—Isa. 46: 9, 10.

This tells us emphatically that he will do all his pleasure; and as his pleasure is in seeing the wicked turn from his way and live, and not in his death, we are certainly justified in believing that the time will come when all the wicked shall turn and do that which is right, that they may live. There is great rejoicing in heaven, we are told, over the repentance of even one sinner; and if the reformation of one causes such great joy among the angels, what a grand shout will go up from the heavenly host when "all the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord."—Ps. 22: 27. That this is his will, his "will" being the same as his "pleasure," we are told by the Apostle Peter:—

The Lord . . . is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.—2 Peter 3: 9.

It has been argued, however, that it is God's will that all men should be honest and truthful; and as they are not all honest and truthful, therefore God's will is not always done. Granted. His will is not always done now; but does that argue that it never will be done? Did not the Savior tell his disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven"? And believing that Jesus would not tell them to pray for that which is never to be realized, I am forced to believe that this prayer will sometime become a reality, and the testimony of Paul confirms me in this belief. Hear what he says:—

Being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will.—Eph. 1: 11.

This tells us that God works all things after the counsel of his own will; we are told to pray for his will to be done in the earth, and that he wills that all should come to repentance; and lest this should not be enough to convince some, it is made doubly emphatic in the following:—

For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior; who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.—1 Tim. 2: 3, 4.

Not only will God have them saved (they are saved while in infancy), but they must "come to the knowledge of the truth"; and they can do that only by obedience, for the Savior says:—

If any man will do his will [the will of the Father], he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.—John 7: 17.

And again:—

If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth.—John 8: 31, 32.

It is plain, therefore, that he will have all men saved by obedience to the truth, the will of the Father; for they are to be saved and brought to "the knowledge of the truth," and they can come to "the knowledge of the truth" only when they "do his will," or when they "continue in my word."

We are told further that his "eternal purpose" was "purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Eph. 3: 11), and that this same Christ Jesus "came down from heaven" to do "the will" of the Father (John 6: 38), and that he did those things that "please him" (John 8: 29); and having already learned what that "will" is, and what those things are that "please him," as regards the human family, we examine the mission of Christ and find it strictly in harmony with what we have already learned. Let us now turn and examine the mission of Christ into this world, remembering, as we do so, that the "purpose" of the Father is in him; and that the object of his mission is to bring about the "will" and "pleasure" of his Father in the earth. And, as we consider his own testimony of first importance, we will introduce it first, and that of his apostles afterward. He says:—

For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.—Matthew 18: 11.

For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them.—Luke 9: 56.

I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.—Luke 5: 32.

For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.—John 3: 17.

For I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.—John 12: 47.

The foregoing testimonies of the Savior tell us, first, what he came not to do, and then what he came to do. He came not to destroy men's lives, not to judge the world, not to condemn the world. He came to save men's lives, to save that which was lost, to save the world, to call sinners to repentance. How many? Just as many as the Father willed should come to repentance. Will he succeed? "Yes," says one, "he will succeed in calling all, but he will not succeed in getting all to repent." Query: If he came "to do the will" of his Father, and his Father wills that "all should come to repentance," can it truly be said that his work is a success, that he has fully succeeded in executing his Father's "will," until all are brought to the condition required in said "will?" And can it be said that the Father, whose "eternal purpose is in Christ Jesus," has succeeded in working "all things after the counsel of his own will," in the mission of Christ, if that mission fails to accomplish what was "purposed?" If so, I fail to see how. And there is nothing in the testimony of the apostles that will present this matter in a different light from the foregoing. They were inspired by the Spirit of God, and their testimony therefore is the same as that of the Master. Hear them:—

In due time Christ died for the ungodly.—Rom. 5: 6.

This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—1 Tim. 1: 15.

And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.—1 John 2: 2.

Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.—1 Tim. 2: 6.

He came, then, according to their testimony, to save sinners, to be the propitiation for the sins of the whole world, to be a ransom for all; and the Prophet Isaiah tells us:—

For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, . . . so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.—Isa. 55: 10, 11.

With this statement of Jehovah before us, in connection with the object of Christ's mission, we are compelled to come to the following conclusion: If the mission of Christ is not to be made "void," at least in part, but is to prosper so as to succeed in accomplishing that which the Father "pleases," then we may expect grand results from it in the "ages to come," ere the Son shall "deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father." I hardly think we should be considered heretics even if we should believe that he will succeed to such an extent as to have his Father's will "done in earth" as it is now done in heaven.

We all believe that God is infinite in wisdom, knowledge, power, love, mercy, and justice; and believing this, it is impossible for me to believe, at the same time, that he will permit the Devil to wrench from his hand those things which he created for his own Son, and for his own pleasure, and desecrate and set them apart to gratify the pleasure and hatred of his satanic majesty. Man may rebel against God after he is "saved" and brought to "the knowledge of the truth," but he must be brought to this condition, for the Lord hath so declared, and his word cannot "return void."

Having briefly examined the mission of Christ concerning man, we will now examine another part of his mission, that which relates to his enemies. His enemies? Are not the sinners, the wicked, the ungodly, his enemies? Yes, in a certain sense; but he came to reform them and make them his friends, to reconcile them to the will of his Father. Our children sometimes fail to understand why we require or forbid certain things of them, and rise up in open rebellion against us. They are then, apparently, our enemies; but by proper instruction, and chastisement if necessary, they are brought to see their error, repent of their sin, and become reconciled to obedience. Just so with sinners. They fail to understand why their heavenly Father requires certain acts of obedience or sacrifice, rebel against his law, and become, apparently, his enemies; but they are no more the real enemies of God than the rebellious child is the real enemy of its parent. True, they are in rebellion against God, and will have to learn obedience before they can be saved; but their rebellion is the result of their ignorance of God's law and will concerning them. If it should be argued that as the earthly parent sometimes fails to bring his rebellious child to terms of reconciliation, so our heavenly Father may fail in bringing some of his children to obedience, my answer is this: The earthly parent fails because he is finite, limited as to time, wisdom, and resources, and not able therefore to have his will done at all times; but our heavenly Father is infinite in all his attributes,—love, mercy, wisdom, power, etc.—unlimited in his resources, both as to time and means, and able therefore to work "all things after the counsel of his own will," and to do "all his pleasure." The wicked are in rebellion against God, but they are not his real enemies. His real enemies and their final doom are clearly set before us in his word. Christ did not come to save nor reconcile them. "For he must reign, until he hath put all enemies under his feet" (1 Cor. 15: 25), is the testimony of the inspired Paul.

Reader; let us now turn to the Bible and look for the enemies of God, and their final condition or doom:—

The enemy that sowed them [the tares] is the Devil.—Matt 13: 39.

The Son of Man, in this parable, is the sower of the good seed, and the Devil is his enemy.

Again:—

Because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour.—1 Pet. 5: 8.

Not only is he an enemy to God, but he is an adversary to God's people, and also to the whole human family, "seeking whom he may devour."

Is he one of the real enemies of God? The manner in which Christ's mission is to affect him will answer this question. Here it is:—

Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same: that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil.—Heb. 2: 14.

It seems from this that he is a real enemy; for while the mission of Christ was intended to save the sinner, we here learn that it was intended to have just the opposite effect upon the Devil, that is, destroy him. But Satan has already had a long run, and being very diligent, always on the alert, he has accomplished a great amount of work which has been very effective in causing men to rebel against God and thus to bring upon themselves misery and death. Now that he is to be destroyed, as we have learned from God's word, we turn our attention to his works and ask the Bible what is to become of them? Will they abide all through eternity, thus defeating the efforts of Christ to save those who have been led captive by the Devil's satanic treachery? Or will they have to share the same fate as their author? The Bible is very plain on this, so plain that it seems to me there is no room for misunderstanding. It says:—

For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.—1 John 3: 8.

For what purpose? For the purpose of destroying the works of the Devil. What are his works? The first work he did in this world, that we have any account of, was to persuade our foreparents to transgress the law of God; and as "sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John 3: 4), we conclude that the introduction of sin into this world is one of the works of the Devil. And the manner in which Christ's mission is to affect sin is very clearly stated by the Apostle Paul:—

But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.—Heb. 9: 26.

Christ appeared, then, for the purpose of putting away sin. But sin, like its author, has been getting in its work for the past six thousand years, and has left its dreadful effects upon a goodly portion of the human family, in fact upon all, to some extent. Would you like to know what effect sin has had and is having upon the human family? Let the record answer:—

Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin—Rom. 5: 12.

For the wages of sin is death.—Rom. 6: 23.

And sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.—James 1: 15.

Death, then, is the result or effect of sin. Sin is to be "put away" and its author destroyed. What is to be done with its effects? Let Paul answer:—

The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Now when sin is "put away," and its author (the Devil) and its effect (death) "destroyed," will the work be complete? No; there is something else, very closely connected with death, that must go too. It is called "hell," by the inspired writers, and is associated with death as follows:—

And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him.—Rev. 6: 8.

Death and hell, according to this, seem to go hand in hand, and we would therefore suppose that when the one (death) is destroyed the other could not survive. But we are not left to mere supposition, for the word of God informs us that they will go together. Here is what it says:—

And death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire.—Rev. 20: 13, 14.

Yes; they are to be destroyed together, but they must first deliver up their dead. There are at least two reasons for this. The first is that Christ was "manifest" to "deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage."—Heb. 2: 14, 15. This deliverance is to take place about the same time that he is to destroy the Devil. It does not refer to those who have loved him and kept his commandments in this life, for Jesus says of them:—

The truth shall make you free.—John 8: 32.

John says:—

There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear.—1 John 4: 18.

Those, therefore, who love God and keep his commandments in this life are not in "bondage through fear of death," for they are made free through obedience to the truth, and their perfect love for God has taken away that terrible dread or "fear of death." There are some, however, who are in bondage through fear of death, and that too "all their lifetime." They obey not the truth, but are dragged down to hell, where death shall reign over them until the time comes for death and hell to be destroyed, and then they are to be delivered from their bondage, as just quoted. The second reason for death and hell delivering up their dead at this time is: Death cannot be destroyed until it does deliver up its dead. So long as death holds in its icy embrace even one of Adam's posterity, so long it survives and reigns. Therefore, when you tell me that any portion of the human family will never be made free from the law of sin and death, you tell me that sin and death will never be destroyed, but that they will continue not only to exist but to reign all through eternity, and that the mission of Christ, so far as their destruction is concerned, is a failure. But it will not fail, for the Lord has said: "My word . . . shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." We believe, too, that his word concerning the destruction of sin and death will be just as prosperous and successful as his word concerning the salvation of those who believe and obey the gospel in this life.

We will now bring together the things already learned, so as to have them fresh in mind, and will then try to show that the so-called orthodox theory is just the opposite of that taught in the Bible, so far as relates to the work accomplished and the work to be accomplished by Christ for the human family. We have learned just what Christ came to save and just what he came to destroy. He came to "save that which was lost," to "save sinners," to "save men's lives," to "save the world," as a "ransom for all." He came to "destroy the Devil," to "destroy the works of the Devil," to "put away sin," to destroy death, and to cast "death and hell" "into the lake of fire." The orthodox creeds of the day not only make null and void the foregoing, but they reverse or transpose so as to make Christ destroy what he came to save, and save and perpetuate what he came to destroy. They teach us that all those who die in their sins, especially if they have had the gospel preached to them, will spend an endless eternity in hell, where they will be tortured and tormented continually by the Devil and his angels. One writer tells us that "by their repeated acts of sin in this life they get themselves in such a condition that they can never cease to sin." Others tell us there will be no end to their suffering, but that they will spend eternity cursing and blaspheming against God, and reproaching those who are sharing a like fate with themselves; that the Devil will be permitted to torment them all that his wicked ingenuity can devise, and that they cannot expire under his cruel torture, but must endure it worlds without end. Now if it be true that they can "never cease to sin," but must go on in sin and sinning all through eternity, then part of Christ's mission is a failure; for he came to "put away sin," and it would be impossible for anyone to go on in sin if he succeeds in putting away or destroying sin. Sin must remain until all are made free from sin; and so long as it remains, so long Christ's work is unfinished. And if those individuals spend eternity cursing and blaspheming God, then it cannot be true that "all thy works shall praise thee."—Ps. 145: 10. If the time ever comes that God's works all praise him, it will be after those wicked ones cease cursing and blaspheming—after they cease to sin and learn to love and obey their Creator.

We take the murderer whose hands are stained with the blood of his fellow man, whose coffers are well filled with ill-gotten wealth,—wealth obtained by oppression, falsehood, robbery, and murder; we look at this man in his sins, and pronounce him a hard case indeed. But if we should stop long enough to ask who made him, whose work he is, the answer is ready in that wonderful book, the Bible:—

And we all are the work of thy hand.—Isa. 64: 8.

God that made the world and all things therein, . . . hath made of one blood all nations of men.—Acts 17: 24-26.

If God made all things in the world, all nations of men, then this man whom we have just noticed was also made by him, and is, therefore, the work of God.

"But," says the objector, "while it is true that God made this man, it is not true that God made him a sinner." How then did he make him?

And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good.—Gen. 1: 31.

Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright.—Ecc. 7: 29.

This man, then, with everything else that God made, was good and upright when he came from the hands of his Creator. But now his heart is filled with evil thoughts and unholy lusts, such as murder, oppression, robbery, hatred, and adultery, and his whole life and character are stained and polluted by acts of violence and cruelty, making him the sinner that he is.

Do you ask who is the author of this sinful disposition? The Bible answers:—

The devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him.—John 13: 2.

And that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will.—2 Tim. 2: 26.

This makes it clear that it is the Devil who puts it into men's hearts to sin, and in this way leads them captive by his falsehoods and deceptive enticements. Now we have it clearly set before us that the sinner, the man, is the work of God; but the sin that now attaches to him, his sinful disposition, is the work of the Devil. Christ came to "save sinners" and to "put away sin." So you see if he hopelessly destroys the sinner, keeping him alive in sin, cursing and blaspheming against God, he destroys the very thing he came to save, the sinner, the work of God, while he saves and perpetuates the very thing he came to destroy, the sin, the work of the Devil. Are you prepared to accept it?

And what is true of "sin" is just as true of "death" and "hell." For if, instead of destroying death, instead of robbing it of its victory, by delivering "them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage;" if the Savior, instead of doing this, should decide to allow death to remain all through eternity, reigning over part of the human family, then he saves and perpetuates "death," which he came to "destroy," while he destroys the victims of death, whom he came to "deliver"—saves death, the work of the Devil; and destroys its victims, the work of God. But he will never do it. "Sin," "death," and "hell," are enemies: they must be "destroyed."

NEW REMEDY FOR CATARRH.

Having suffered for near fifty years with catarrh, often with severe cough, and having tried various celebrated remedies without any permanent relief; upon hearing Bro. M. Love say that he cured himself of colds by inhaling turpentine, putting it on his mustache, I concluded to make a more thorough application of it, by putting my finger in it and rubbing in my nostrils, and tasting it occasionally. At first it pained my nose; but soon healed it until it gave no pain. That was two years ago, and I have never been troubled with a cough since; and am cured of the catarrh. Whenever I take a slight cold I use it. I think it kills microbes that cause catarrh, la grippe, etc.

ETHEL TYSON, Dist. Sec.

BORN.

PERRY.—At Bevier, Missouri, December 3, 1898, to Bro. Thomas E. and Sr. Mary A. Perry, a daughter. Blessed January 22, 1899, by Elders Robt. M. Elvin and Charles Perry, and named Edith.

DAVIDSON.—Ruth Emeline, daughter of J. J. and Mary G. Davidson, born September 12, 1898. Blessed January 15, 1899, by Elder D. M. Rudd.

DAVIDSON.—Bertha Frances, daughter of Mr. Grant and Mrs. Rosa Davidson, born February 9, 1896. Blessed by D. M. Rudd and R. S. Mengel, January 26, 1899. Also Mabel Emeline, blessed same day by R. S. Mengel and D. M. Rudd. She was born July 17, 1898.

DIED.

BRIGGS.—Jason W. Briggs was born June 25, 1821, at Pompey, Onondaga County, New York; was baptized June 6, 1841, at Potosi, Grant County, Wisconsin, by William O. Clark. He died near Denver, Colorado, January 11, 1899, aged 77 years, 6 months, and 17 days. Was ill for several months, died of general debility. He was an elder by ordination prior to the death of Joseph Smith. He was present and chosen to preside over the conference that proved to be the initial one of the Reorganized Church, same being held in Newark Township, Rock County, Wisconsin, on June 12 and 13, 1852, when those assembled cast off the claims of all pretended leaders and, instead, made claim that in the seed of Joseph Smith was the right of presidency and leadership. In April, 1853, he was one of the seven men chosen and ordained apostles. Also had charge over the church as president pro tem. until April, 1860. Preached in Wisconsin chiefly. Went to England as a missionary, as appointed by the church, arriving in Liverpool, May 14, 1863. Returned in September, 1864. Went again in 1868. In 1874 went to Utah, returned in fall of 1875. In September, 1877, was not sustained by conference. Committees were appointed. April, 1885, action not to sustain. In 1886 he withdrew from the church with some others; but made no attack on the faith, or the people of the church. What his views in later life were we have not learned, though we have reason to believe that he cherished his faith in the gospel of Christ to the end of his life. His son Plutarch wrote as follows:—

"Dear Brother Joseph:—It is with a sad heart that I pen you this notice. Father died last evening at 7:40 p. m., after a lingering illness of many months. I had been away for some time, and he often wondered when I would return. Last evening I returned to the city, and caught the 5:15 train for Harris, six miles out of city, where they live. When I arrived at the house father shook my hand, talked to me a few minutes, and within twenty minutes after my arrival he began to fail, and in an hour and twenty minutes was a corpse. It seemed he had waited my coming, and when he saw me, was ready to go."

KRUCKER.—In Lamoni, Iowa, January 24, 1899, Sr. Louisa J., only daughter of Sr. Rebecca Krucker, aged 25 years, 5 months, and 21 days. Lingering consumption was the disease, but through it all she was meek and patient; and though wishing to recover, she was not unresigned to go. Conscious to the last she charged her three brothers to live good lives, kissed mother, brothers, and aunts farewell and fell asleep in Christ. And when prepared for the tomb the writer could but say that she was lovely in life, beautiful in death, as said all who gazed upon her face. Her parents and grandparents came from Oregon to Lamoni in 1881. At the age of ten she was baptized by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, who, by her request also preached her funeral sermon, Bro. R. S. Salyards assisting. She was a dutiful and obedient daughter, pure in her life and all its associations. The widowed mother is bereft of a great joy, but is resigned, and she looks forward to the resurrection of the just as the day of reunion.

GAULTER.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, January 1, 1899, there passed away an infant child, the son of Bro. Loren and Sr. Elizabeth Sumption Gaulter, aged a few hours more than four days. Services were held at the home of the parents by Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

YOST.—At Kirkman, Iowa, January 16, 1899, Sr. Eliza J. Yost born in Sterling, New York, July 21, 1851; married to Thomas Yost in Ottawa, Illinois. They moved to Iowa in March, 1879; was baptized October 12 of the same year. Funeral sermon by Elder J. W. Chatburn, in the Baptist church, was assisted by the minister. There was found pinned on her clothes a piece of paper with the twenty-seventh Psalm written on it which was read and used as a basis for his remarks. She leaves two sons and her husband to mourn.

PURCELL.—Elizabeth Brown Purcell, born November 26, 1824, in Hamilton County, Ohio; married Alexander Purcell, June 13, 1847; came to Harrison County, Iowa, in 1856; united with the church in 1894; sank peacefully to sleep January 8, 1899. Funeral services from saints' chapel, Logan, Iowa. Sermon by Elder Alma M. Fyrando.

Church History, Volumes 1 and 2,

BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH,
AND APOSTLE HEMAN C. SMITH.

This work is the most authentic and complete history of the church ever published. No effort has been spared to obtain information from every reliable source, and the information thus obtained has been impartially presented. It is therefore indispensable, not only to the membership of the church, but to all interested in obtaining reliable information concerning the thrilling events preceding and leading to the organization as well as the history of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which has attracted the attention of the world.

These two volumes cover a period of time including the events we have mention up to the death of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, June 27, 1844. These volumes contain a compilation of important and official documents never before published in so concise a form, many of which have been so rare and difficult to obtain that the public has not had access to them.

It is contemplated to publish a third volume by the same authors, containing the important and critical events transpiring after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, so soon as the sale of volumes 1 and 2 will justify. This will be the most interesting of all because it will contain the history of events from which issues arose that have resulted in rival organizations among Latter Day Saints. It will trace so clearly the causes leading to the great apostasy represented in Utah, that all who read can locate the responsibility for the result with unerring accuracy.

You cannot afford to do without this work, so if these volumes, or either of them, are not in your library, send us your order for volumes 1 and 2 at once. You could not make a more profitable present to a friend.

Price, $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50 per volume.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

BUILDING UP ZION.

A recent report made to the State department by the American Consul at Beirut gives some late and interesting information concerning the growth of the Jewish population of Palestine. Twenty years ago there were only about 14,000 Jews in the Holy Land. There are 40,000 now out of a total population of 200,000.

This great gain is due largely to "assisted immigration." There are now in Palestine about 5,000 Jews who inhabit the twenty-two colonies which have been founded during the last twenty years by European Jewish associations. Probably not one of those 5,000 souls would be in the Holy Land now but for the aid of co-religionists. These colonists are doing well. They grow grapes, olives, almonds, and cereals. Dairying is carried on profitably at one of the colonies. At another experiments have been made in tea planting. At another there is an excellent agricultural school.

Ignorant persons have asserted often that Jews would not take to farming, even if they had the opportunity to do so, which is denied them in countries like Russia. It has been contended that "the genius of the race" demanded other fields of action—that Jews must be merchants, large or small, or money-changers, or speculators. The success of these Palestine colonies ought to convince everybody that Jews will make good farmers and gardeners, even when the conditions are in some respects discouraging.

The government which these colonists have over them is a Turkish government. It is therefore necessarily and inevitably bad. Taxes are oppressive. Officials are corrupt and brutal. Protection for person and property is not always to be had. The Turkish officials dislike Jewish immigration. They do what they can to limit it, while it must be evident to them that immigration which makes waste vacant fields fertile must make the country more prosperous. Yet they have a fear, doubtless well founded, that if the Jewish population became greater than that of other elements, Turkish rule would come to an end.

It is unfortunate that there should be any check on the immigration of Jews who do not desire to crowd into cities like Jerusalem, where there is nothing for them to do, but who wish to "make the desert blossom like the rose," for there is a great deal of fertile land in Palestine untilled now, though it was once. There are extensive areas east of the Jordan once densely settled, but uninhabited now. There are no forests to be cleared and no savages to be subdued. There are tens of thousands of Jewish families in Russia and elsewhere in Europe who can be settled on those lands when Turkish permission is given, much more cheaply than on lands in Argentina.

And such is the strength of the Zionist feeling among Jews in Europe that, other things being equal, they would much rather go to Palestine than to Argentina. They may not have any clearly-defined ideas about setting up a Jewish government after the pattern of any of those described in the Old Testament, either priestly or regal. They may not have their hearts set on rebuilding the temple. But a sentiment causes them to look on the Holy Land as they look on no other country, as they cannot look on a country where they have been persecuted. So the greater the number who can get to Palestine to cultivate the ground and dwell under their own vines and fig trees, the better for them, and the better for Palestine.—Chicago Tribune, Jan. 29.

POPE'S PLEA TO NOBLES.

Rome, Jan. 28.—In granting the customary New Year's reception to the Roman nobility on Thursday the Pope, replying to Prince Colonna's address, took occasion to severely reprimand the nobility for the tendency toward corruption and immorality prevalent among the higher classes.

He began by thanking the patri- cians for the expressions of loyalty to the Holy See, and exhorting them to maintain intact the traditions and faith of their forefathers. He continued:—

"Faith is the foundation of all sal- vation and of every Christian virtue. It shines like a beacon amidst the world's tempest. Two enemies prin- cipally conspire against it—skepti- cism, fostered by intellectual vanity, and sensuality, bringing every base appetite in its train. The soul must be spotless to harbor God. If invaded by sensuality the divine principle re- tires, leaving man a prey to base in- stincts."

Leo reminded his hearers that when the abomination of desolation pene- trated the Temple of Jerusalem a mysterious voice from heaven cried: "God withdraws." He went on: "The same terrible words are applica- ble to the soul without faith, aban- doned to lust and wordly ambitions alone. See that by hearkening ex- clusively to the things of this world you lose not the next; that while first here you become not the last in the future.

"No age like the present has offered such blandishments towards perdition. Skepticism, immorality, lust, licen- tiousness in private and public, lewd publications, atheism—all are ram- pant. The nobles, instead of giving a bad example, should place them- selves at the head of a crusade against immorality. Like their glorious an- cestors, they should hold honor as a fragile and precious vase while traversing the dangerous and rocky paths."

He repeated the words of Paul to the Corinthians, "Watch and keep in the faith," and ended by bestowing the apostolic benediction on the nobles and their families.

The Pope's speech was read by Mgr. Miscitadio, Leo still being rather weak.

The Pope nodded energetically during the passages condemning modern immorality. When his keen eye fixed itself on certain fast patricians they winced perceptibly. All were greatly impressed.

After the ceremony the Pope's chief physician, Lapponi, emphatically contradicted the report that the Pope had an attack of the grip. The Pope's slight cold has now passed, leaving a weakness. Lapponi considers Leo's constitution marvelous and believes he will live to bless the twentieth century celebration.—Tribune.

RECORD BREAKING YEAR IN MINERAL PRODUCTION.

That last year was a record-breaker in mining operations is abundantly proven by a recent summary published in a mining journal. It gives the values of thirty-nine separate minerals, but there are over 100 minor ones which are reported in gross and not under specific classification. In all save five of these hundred odd mineral substances an increase in production over 1897 is shown.

The value of the output of some of the principal minerals is as follows: Coal, $210,263,953; iron, $111,858,254; gold, $64,300,000; copper, $64,244,326; petroleum, $49,277,000; silver, $37,321,356; coke, $31,920,000; lead, $16,410,265; zinc, $10,267,397.

Nearly three fourths of the total are included in this enumeration. The total production for the year was $810,050,023, as against $750,312,355 last year, an increase of $59,737,668.

Nearly every mineral of value is produced in the United States. This country produces two thirds of the copper of the world and has practical control of the market for this metal. The Latin-American markets, which formerly depended upon England, are being supplied from our mines. The pig iron production for the year—11,712,903 tons—was the largest on record, being an increase over 1897 of 21.2 per cent. About 72 per cent of the iron output was used in the manufacture of steel.

This showing indicates that the United States, in minerals as in manufactures and agricultural products, can both supply its own needs and compete successfully with the nations of the world.—St. Louis Republic.

GOOD ADVICE FROM THE GALLOWES.

Tom Salmon, the labor leader, who was hanged the other day at Helena, Montana, for killing a mine superintendent, refused to have any "minister, priest, or sky pilot to show him the road to heaven, but his last words could hardly be called those of a desperado. He said: "If any of you follow my body to the cemetery, do not uncover your heads and take chances on getting pneumonia. It is a barbarous custom, and I hope you will protect yourselves, for, by so doing, you will please me." Considering the present state of the thermometer this seems like peculiarly considerate and timely advice, even though its source can hardly be called unimpeachable. In all seriousness, the advice against the traditional custom of standing hatless through a long service in all sorts of weather might profitably be adopted by people who have much better passports to heaven than those whom Tom Salmon was addressing. There is little doubt that many fatal cases of illness are contracted every year by this same "barbarous custom." Reverence that defies common sense is foolish and impious, and the custom of standing hatless at funerals in midwinter is nothing more or less than "tempting Providence."—Chicago Tribune.

"The progress of the World," the editorial department of the Review of Reviews, deals this month with the new problems of colonial administration now confronting the country, with the Senatorial campaigns in the different States, with the polygamy question, with the question of army beef in its bearings on the reorganization of the War Department, with our recent industrial progress, protective tariffs, and the "trusts," and with the month's developments in foreign politics.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Three additional enrollments at college last week. Thus the list of students gradually increases: may it never cease its growth! Let every one that can send a student, do so without delay. Remember the old maxim, "Art is long, but time is fleeting." One can never learn too much. Much of the mischief, attributed to education, has been caused by miserable sciolists—hollow drums, loud-sounding but very little inside them—and not by those who have delved deep into the mysteries of mind and matter. True and complete education teaches man his own insignificance and the immensity of the Creator's wisdom. This kind of education cannot be obtained by spending six or nine months at some college or similar institution. The standard collegiate period of four years is none too long to acquire that knowledge, polish, and refinement, the union of which distinguishes the real scholar from the mere accumulator of facts. Then do not begrudge the time spent upon education. If you intend to send your boy or girl to college (Graceland, we hope), do not wait for the fall term of next September, but send him along for the spring term, commencing April 4. He will become accustomed to college life and to his fellow students, and when the fall term commences the regular course of studies, he will be better able to start right ahead with his work, and thus lose no time because of unfamiliarity with the institution.

Have you looked up the Subscription Lists lately? No? Then do so at once, and if you do not see your name therein, remember that you are indebted to the Lord and to the church college for a subscription proportionate to the means with which the Lord has blessed you. We intend to publish a list of the numerous subscriptions received from suppers, socials, and other sources. Watch the Herald closely for the same.

The embryonic Archæological and Natural History Museum still solicits specimens. The Library is not yet so full as to be compelled to refuse donations of books.

HEMAN C. SMITH, }
JOSEPH LUFF, } CORRESPONDING EDITORS.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEB. 8, 1899.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

We remind the patrons of the HERALD that the business affairs of the Herald Office are in charge of Bro. Frank Criley, and that all letters and notes on business should be directed to him.

And that the literary matters of every description—letters, communications, articles, etc., should be sent to Joseph Smith, or Editors Herald; they being in charge of the literary part of HERALD work.

Of late quite a lot of matter is finding its way to the Editors, being directed to Bro. Criley. Now while Bro. Criley is very kind and very willing to see that the editors get what may be so sent him, it is not his duty to look after such matter, and he may forget it, or neglect to hand it in, without laying himself subject to blame. The editors may quite safely ignore matters sent to them in that way, and not be justly blamed for so doing. Just so business letters sent to editors may get lost and the editors be not chargeable with blame.

Try to be consistent, brethren.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

STONINGTON, Maine, Jan. 5, 1899.

Editors Herald; Dear Brothers:—Will you kindly advise on the following subject: Some time ago the young saints of the Green's Landing branch started a young people's prayer and testimony meeting. These meetings were opened in the usual manner with song service, scriptural reading, and prayer. The leaders were young saints who did not hold any priesthood.

The question arose among some of the older saints, whether or not the young saints had the right to thus conduct meetings, so the advice of President Joseph Smith was sought and he replied that it was perfectly legitimate for young members to hold prayer meetings, and that they could be led by those who did not hold the priesthood.

Notwithstanding all this, there are some that persist that the young people are doing wrong.

Now will you please give this matter your careful attention and reply through the Herald—publishing this letter so the matter may be cleared up.

Your brother, with a desire to do what is right,
RALPH W. FARRELL.

We think that at the time the advice of Pres. Joseph Smith was sought in the matter submitted above President Smith expressed the opinion that the young people of the branch could so meet for the purpose of prayer and testimony, and that if there was no one present holding office in the church, anyone present could be selected by the others and take charge, opening by prayer and leading the meeting. President Smith holds the same opinion now.

We are not quite sure, but we think that at the same time President Smith suggested that should such meetings be objected to, that much more wrong would result from contention over them than the prayer meeting could possibly do; as it has usually been the rule of President Smith, to so advise in such cases.

We can see no good reason why that saints, old or young, may not meet in prayer or testimony meetings, at stated times and at convenient places, few or many, and there engage in worship, prayer, encouraging testimonies, and edifying of one another in the fellowship of fellow saints and the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, though there might not be anyone present holding office to preside; those present choosing one of their number to take charge.

We are commanded to meet together often, and to encourage each other in in our spiritual work. We are also commanded to pray often in secret and in public. We are told that there is a record kept wherein the names of those who are valiant in testimony are to be kept, that when the time for rewarding the faithful comes these may receive their reward. What harm can the prayers and testimonies of the saints, though they be young members, do the great cause. Is it not infinitely better for our young people to meet for prayer than to go to places where amusements of a doubtful character may engage their time and attention, and where no elder or priest ever thinks of going to see that they do not overstep the bounds of church rule. Is it true that the laymembers, the women, girls, men, boys, youths, and maidens of the church cannot be trusted to meet and pray and bear testimony with each other in a service known and recognized by the officers of the branch, without some man holding the priesthood is present to preside over them? Is it possible that the Lord does not hear the cries of his people, few or many, assembled for prayer, unless there is some officer present through whose superior excellence the others' prayers are offered? If so, what about the promise so often quoted "Where two or three are met together in my name, there will I be and that to bless"?

But, as it is not needful to reason at length on the subject, we give our advice as asked for. Notwithstanding we can see no good and sufficient reason why the young folks of the Green's Landing branch may not hold the meetings referred to, the time and place of holding them not interfering with the regular services of the branch, we advise the young people not to contend with the older people, or the officers of the branch, thereby causing contention, wrongdoing, and hard feelings as a result, but to submit, abandon their meetings, and until such time as a different feeling and spirit of toleration may prevail and the privilege be granted to renew such meeting. Or, in case the young people desire to continue the meetings, ask that some one of the younger officers be detailed to take charge, or one of their own number possessing the needed qualifications be called, chosen, and ordained to aid, and look after them in such meetings. It is better to have no meetings than to have bickering and contention in the branch.

Daniel was forbidden to pray, but he did. He was among strangers to God and had the right of it at the time; but when our friends forbid us to pray, how then?

We may be wrong, but it seems to us sometimes that the priesthood is a little too jealous of its prerogatives, and a little too restrictive of others.

We may be pardoned a word further. The editor of the HERALD, to whom the foregoing letter is addressed and whose advice is asked, is the same Pres. Joseph Smith whose opinion was sought when the Green's Landing young folks' prayer meeting was instituted. His advice now is of no more value than it was then; hence, it is somewhat out of the ordinary that the editor is asked for such advice; upon the idea that it would be heeded and everybody be satisfied.

The branch authorities have jurisdiction, and we have no disposition to counsel disrespect for, or a disregard of their right to control in the premises, whatever we may believe about the wrong, or the right of it. Paul advised, "Be subject to the powers that be;" and the Holy Scriptures has it that "the powers that be in the church are ordained of God." For these reasons we could not and do not advise the young folks of Green's Landing to disregard the authority of the officers of the branch.

APPLICATION AND EXECUTION.

Brn. J. C. Crabb and B. F. Ordway have been making a special and timely effort among the people of Peoria, Illinois, of late, of which the former wrote us under date of the 28th ult. See Bro. Crabb's letter and notice. The brethren asked of other ministers the courtesy of an announcement of their meetings from the pulpits of their churches.

That is right; if we do not ask we are not likely to receive. Judicious requests of this kind, and proper advertising of our efforts, are both legitimate and necessary. We must not only preach and work, but must study conditions to be met and seek to meet things as they are, to the best possible good of the cause and the people. We need as much development in judicious execution of our work as we do in ability to present it in word before the people. More study upon these lines in general would prove advantageous to us as a people and to the cause we have espoused to the salvation of men. Indeed, thoughtfulness, foresight, and good management, with other phases of intelligent consistency and goodness of life, in all the features and departments of our work, personal and general, are demanded of us and strictly essential upon the part of the children of God, in behalf of the work which he has graciously permitted us to represent in our official and personal characters and efforts.

There is need for more study and better execution upon these lines. Improvement—constant advancement—is the true order and spirit of the age, and nowhere are such lines of execution more necessary than in the kingdom of God—the church—the organization and people called to be and to be constituted in fact, the light of the world. Studious self-examination, self-abnegation, with intelligent study, and comprehension, and application of the principles of truth, the word of God, are necessary upon the part of all of God's people, ministry and laity, from highest officials and throughout the entire ranks of the laity, if success shall crown our efforts. We must be developed and united according to the law and union of the celestial kingdom, if we shall succeed in doing our part in establishing Zion amid the ruin and fall of Babylon, which Zion God has designed to establish through "a pure people."

This, we understand, is to be brought about by a high degree of development and execution upon the part of the church and was referred to by the Apostle Paul when he wrote (and which we persistently quote to the world): "But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body, fitly joined together and *compact*ed by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

Are we alive as we ought to be? is there effectual work being done by every part of the body? If not, something is wrong, and we have need to awaken to attainment or renewal of diligence, and to maintain it in steadiness of purpose and application, constantly to the end.

The spiritual sleep and accompanying death is abroad in the religious world. The saints need to guard against it. Effort—daily, prayerful, continuing effort—is the only means of insuring safety against its effects. The latter-day work is a work, not a respite, not a cessation from labor. Let us work, then, while it is called to-day. The Lord has said (D. C. 45 and 63) that "until the coming of the Son of Man there shall be foolish virgins among the wise;" that the wise were they who sought for and took the Holy Spirit for their guide, etc.

We may be faithful and careful masterbuilders in the kingdom of God, or may be slothful and unprofitable servants. It behooves all to be awake, and alive, and at work everywhere and in all departments, whether laity, branch, or district, or general officials, if we are to accomplish and attain as God has appointed.

While we are focusing our searchlights upon the world, and discerning its condition, we do so that we may study such conditions with a view to applying the remedy—the word and the fruit of the Spirit of God, as we receive from him. Let us not fail to turn the searching, penetrating rays as constantly upon ourselves, that we may see what and where we are, and also apply the needed correction faithfully, that our own defects may be removed, not covered up nor overlooked. God is "no respecter of persons;" and, his Spirit is the true "discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." We should be glad to receive not only its comforting influences, but also its searching rays, its correcting, cleansing, and purifying powers, that we may in all things become and remain just and true and approved of God.

The Lord has said this to the church in these last days:—

And we know that all men must repent and believe on the name of Jesus Christ and worship the Father in his name, and endure in faith on his name to the end, or they cannot be saved in the kingdom of God. And we know that justification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, is just and true; and we know, also, that sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their might, minds, and strength; but there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living God. Therefore let the church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptations; yea, and even let those who are sanctified, take heed also.—D. C. 17: 6.

Shall we not "take heed," and our destinies be with the Zion of God? or, shall we be "heedless," and blind, and indifferent, and stumble and fall with the ruin of Babylon, the world?

BABYLONISH TRUSTS.

The Standard Oil Company, true to its nature and instincts as a gigantic monopoly, has just effected another immense combination which is said to be next to the last step in the largest monopoly ever formed in the United States, not excepting Standard Oil itself. It has obtained control of sixty large whisky distilling plants in the State of Kentucky, under the name of the "Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company." This, with the "American Spirits Manufacturing Company," the "Standard Distilling and Distributing Company," and the "Spirits Distributing Company," each of which is a large combination under the Standard Oil Company's control, forms a vast trust capitalized at $98,500,000, having an annual capacity of 15,000,000 gallons, with a total income of $2,310,000, with dividends of 8½ per cent on common stock.

In addition to this item, the official reports of trusts formed and being formed is so large as to excite astonishment, even though the present decade has become accustomed to and tolerant of such systems of robbery and monopolies of commerce and manufactures.

Our readers will call to mind the plain condemnations of such immense corporate systems of "secret combinations" "to get gain," recorded in the Book of Mormon—the statements of inspired men who saw our day and realized, to some extent, our conditions.

Such combinations call vividly to mind the description of Babylon and her fall, clearly portrayed in Revelation chapter 18. Fifteen million gallons of alcoholic spirits—traffic in the "souls of men," in addition to the control of almost every branch of human industry and industrial economy—souls and bodies of men, is meant, no doubt. The language of James is also applicable: Read James 5: 1-6; also verses 6, 7. Surely such wealth is "cankered," and men are heaping "treasure together for the last days."

The trust is distinctively a Babylonish institution and contrary to the spirit of liberty religious, social, and political. The trust, its antecedents, methods, and work, past, present and future, is one of the manifest signs of the last days.

It is an octopus of Satanic origin, made possible by human lust of gain and power.

It becomes evident that the coming and reign of Christ the Lord is becoming an absolute necessity. No wonder it is written that to him every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess. The agnostic with an intelligent view of the economic situation, with the alarming portents of such conditions as are coming upon the world, ought now to be able, already to see the consistency of such a statement concerning the final reign of right. Men are indeed becoming subject to such conditions of control that "the reign of God" through Christ or in Christ becomes an absolute necessity, or this world of ours would land, if it does not yet land for a time, in a state of anarchy. But, God reigns, and there will be an end to such wickedness in due time. It is written of Christ, the restorer and deliver, the King, that "with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth;" also that the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel; "The Lord hath founded Zion, and the poor of his people shall trust in it."

Those whose faith is in God and who, like him, love humanity, will find comfort in these declarations.

The theme could be elaborated and made intensely interesting and confirming; we leave that to the reader, as we have time only for hurried brief mention. These "signs of the times" give clearer insight into the declarations of the Scriptures. They show that God is in them, and serve to renew faith and confidence in him and in his work.

Well may we give all our powers of body and of mind to the service of God in his kingdom in the great latter-day work, knowing that God has declared that "abomination shall not reign" and that "truth will prevail," while all things not in harmony with God shall "fail."

THE following is in evidence that the spirit of the fathers is actuating the sons of Israel to-day. It is plain that with Gentile decline, religious and otherwise, Israel feels the inspiration of the spiritual life by which God is awakening that nation with a view to again restoring it to favor and close communion with him. The sons and daughters of Israel rejoice when they see these things come to pass:—

PURPOSE TO BUY PALESTINE.
KNIGHTS OF ZION, ORGANIZED BY 800
YOUNG JEWS, TO ACQUIRE THE HOLY LAND BY PURCHASE.

Eight hundred young Jews have banded themselves together for the purpose of buying the holy land and establishing there a new Zion. The organization is known as the Knights of Zion. It has six branches, called "Gates," and others are being formed. The lodge hall, 209 West Twelfth Street, is known as Zion Hall. Parlors and library are provided, and the place is like a club. A woman's branch has been formed as an auxiliary. Gate No. 1 has 400 members. From the total membership the Zion guards have been formed, a uniformed body of thirty-five men. The officers of the parent lodge are:—

Master Zionish—B. Horwich.
Grand Recorder—Leon Zolutkeff.
Assistant Grand Recorder and Financial Secretary—Herman S. Wolf.
Treasurer—Leo Posyes.
Directors—M. Perlestein, E. Epstein, Dr. M. A. Regant, J. J. Cohen, B. Salk.—Chicago Tribune, Jan. 28, '99.

FROM HAWAII.

Bro. U. W. Greene sends us the following good word from our Hawaiian adjunct, State, Territory, Colony, or whatever it may yet turn out to be. He wrote from Box 504, Honolulu, January 17:—

Brethren:—I forward copy of church paper by this mail. Bro. Waller's generosity enables us to gratuitously distribute about eight hundred copies per month. Many of them go among the Brighamites, so we are improving the opportunity and giving them something to think of in connection with their errors. Bro. Smith's work is just the thing needed and just in time here. We are encouraged spiritually and pray God may open the way for an ingathering of souls.

The publication forwarded by Bro. Greene is the Ka Elele Evangelio, an eight-page paper with three columns to the page. The subject matter is printed in the Hawaiian language, and in which we can make out copious references to the three books and other church publications; also to Utah Church teachings and practices.

Last but not least the following appears at the top of first column: "U. W. Greene, Lunahooponopono." We suppose it means that Bro. Greene is the Editor. A notice also appears of Bro. J. F. Burton and his work in the Society Islands. Two church papers in the Pacific; a good showing. We will reach Japan and the Orient, including India and China, also the British, German, and other settlements of modern civilization in Africa, in due time, we hope.

FINDS THE ASHES OF CÆSAR.

New York, Jan. 29.—The ashes of Julius Cæsar have been found, is the announcement from Rome. The excavations on the site of the Forum of Augustus have resulted in this discovery. They are under the direction of Sig. Bacelli, the Italian Minister of Public Instruction.

While excavating the Forum the archæologists were greatly elated by the discovery of a magnificent column, which seemed to promise that they were delving into a region of great possibilities.

The column was eventually decided to be that erected by Augustus to the memory of Julius Cæsar. Near by was found a slab of marble. Upon this had stood a similar commemorative column raised by the Senate.

Then came the great discovery. Five feet beneath the soil, within the broken walls of what had doubtless been a tomb, was found an urn. Upon it were deciphered with difficulty mutilated inscriptions which showed that it was the urn of Cæsar. It contained a powder which could be none other than the ashes of Cæsar himself.—Chicago Tribune, January 30.

The figures above signify that Bro. Charles J. Hunt, Bishop's agent for the Galland's Grove district, sent to Bro. Frank Criley, January 21, 1899, that amount as the result of a supper given at the home of Sr. Bradley McCord, by the saints and Sunday school of Harlan, Iowa. Bro. Hunt wrote as follows:—

It is with pleasure I hand you, herewith, bank draft for $51.70 from the saints and Sunday school of Harlan, Iowa, for Graceland College, which is the proceeds of a supper held at the home of Sr. Bradley McCord, as is shown by the inclosed letter to me from Bro. Thomas N. Franklin. It is a grand good showing, and I suggest that favorable mention of it be made in the columns of the Herald. Success to Graceland.

Bro. Franklin's letter shows that the sum noted represents the gross receipts, the cash cost of the supper being paid by a donation raised for the purpose, and the care and work all being donated. Who beats this?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. F. A. Smith, Omaha, Nebraska, January 30:—

It has been very cold here the past few days. Our conference passed off very nicely; Father here. Much sickness now; they keep me on the go nearly all the time. Was called to the country twice; once for administration, once to a funeral. The smallpox scare doesn't amount to much as yet. Am feeling fairly well myself.

Bro. F. R. Tubb, London, England, January 19:—

I am requested to tell you that our London branch book agent is Bro. A. Lawrence, No. 46 Chisenhale Road, Old Ford, London, E.

Bro. J. C. Crabb, Peoria, Ill., Jan. 28:—

You will see by the within notice how we are trying to get our meetings advertised. We have sent by mail thirteen notices like the following to as many of the leading ministers of the city. We intended to have sent them in time for last Saturday's delivery, but Bro. B. F. O— delayed, hoping to have them delivered direct by some one in person. Meetings here in the North End have been fairly well attended. We try it in South End to-night and to-morrow night. Our conference meets at Kewanee next Saturday and Sunday. Hope you are well.

PEORIA, Ill., Jan. 26, 1899.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly announce the following notice in your meeting Wednesday evening: Elder J. C. Crabb will deliver a lecture in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. building, on Thursday evening, February 2, at eight o'clock. The speaker will give three reasons why Mr. B. H. Roberts, the polygamist, should not be allowed a seat in the United States Congress.

Bro. A. B. Pierce, Providence, Rhode Island, January 27:—

At present Elder Joseph Luff is laboring in this city; Elder R. Bullard at Plainville and Attleboro, Massachusetts; Elder George Robley at Dennisport, and of late at Fiskville, Rhode Island; Elder M. H. Bond at Boston.

Bro. J. M. Baggerly, Grand Rapids, Michigan, January 30:—

Just returned from Allegan. Spoke there yesterday in the opera house at two and seven p. m. The interest is still excellent. We expect quite a number will obey the gospel soon. I have occupied there for three consecutive Sundays, and will go back next Sunday.

Bro. A. J. Keck, Ritchey, Illinois, February 2:—

In my article in Herald of January 18, page 46, near bottom of second column, "Now this church—kingdom triumphant—is better capable," should read, "Now this church-kingdom triumphant is better capable," compounding the words "church" and "kingdom." Sickness and bad weather are militating against meetings here. Just held a ten days' meeting at Wesley M. E. church.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A letter from Bro. J. C. Clapp, dated Swan, Graves County, Kentucky, informs us that though poor in health he has been greatly blessed in Spirit in presenting the word. He is doing what he can in the face of apparently adverse conditions, rejoicing in the truth, and making some friends to the cause.

Bro. J. M. Terry writing from Chicago, January 31, states that the work is advancing. The Lang mission is being sustained in good form; and Bro. George H. Graves, is doing well among his colored brethren.

Since our note in last issue the editors have been flooded with requests for Jaredite corn. The supply is exhausted. While ready to accommodate the brethren with proper notices, we shall let others do the distributing hereafter, as we haven't time to run an agricultural or other bureau.

A good brother, writing an article for a late gathering of young people, refers to the "duel" nature of man. He probably meant the dual or two-fold nature. But he was not far wrong in describing some natures, for some men, and women too, have "duel" natures, judging from what one sees of human nature in the world. However, the practice of dueling is being frowned down upon. Even in the German army the Emperor has placed a ban upon the duello. Christians should certainly be above resort to such practice. Possession of the dual nature does not necessarily imply the duel nor the instincts thereof; this too whether in the single or dual relationship.

No one can be expected to do better than he knows, hence the necessity of "knowing." It is life to know and out of knowing "to do" the truth; it is death not to know and not to do. But—an indifferent, careless disciple will not know, nor will he do, in harmony with light and truth.

The Herald, published at Traverse City, Michigan, in its issue for January 19, contains an account of the miraculous healing of a Miss Hattie Parker, of Petoskey, Michigan, taken from the Petoskey Record. The lady, though not connected with any religious society, was healed, when very low and about to depart, in answer to prayer offered by a local pastor and other friends, none of whom were Christian Scientists, but who expressed faith in God, that he would and could heal and bless, as in past ages.

We need more space in the HERALD—there are so many good and important things that we desire to furnish our readers, matters having a bearing upon the important religious, social, economic, and general developments of the times, that all may be helped to comprehend the conditions and developments of the age in connection with the great latter-day work. We trust the HERALD readers will continue to add new subscribers to our lists, that the editors may be given additional space and other facilities requiring an additional outlay on the part of the Board of Publication. The Board is prepared to aid us in this respect just as soon as additional financial support is given. Friends of the cause are asked to aid the HERALD by working in its behalf, and thus work for the church and themselves.

The recent disgraceful lynchings in Indiana and the prosecution of the lynchers has resulted in the introduction of a bill in the State Legislature which provides infliction of the death penalty for lynching; also that relatives of the victim may sue a county for $5,000 damages when a case of lynching occurs. Our people will note these things in connection with the lawless acts against the Martyrs and the saints in the adjoining State of Illinois, in former days.

Dr. Parkhurst, the well-known reformer and head of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, is preparing, with his aids, to enter upon another crusade in behalf of reform in the city of Greater New York. It is claimed that since 1892, the year of previous reform, vast districts of the city have been practically monopolized by promoters of the social and other evils, including gambling houses and other resorts; also that the regular police force is a party to such evils, and upon which they levy a specific tribute, arranged by schedule, as hush money. Dr. Parkhurst states that "it is in the police department that all the profligacy and corruption of the 'wide open' town begins and ends."

"The principal agitation going on in England to-day is religious rather than political. There is a strong protest against the tendency of the Anglican Church to use the Roman Catholic ritual. The Pope has established a college in Rome, at a cost to himself of $100,000, to enable Anglican clergymen who have joined the Catholic Church to pursue their studies for the priesthood."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"O Englishmen!—in hope and creed,
In blood and tongue our brothers!
We too are heirs of Runnymede;
And Shakespeare's fame and Cromwell's deed
Are not alone our mother's."

COIN, Iowa, Nov. 24.

Dear Readers of the Home Column:—I feel to write of the glorious manifestation of the Spirit witnessed at our sacrament meeting in Shenandoah. Our branch president, Bro. Roberts, commenced speaking in tongues while presiding over the meeting and started down the aisle towards the congregation, and went from seat to seat to every one in the congregation, outsiders and all, speaking in tongues; and to the ministry he laid his hands on their heads. Then came right around again and went to them all, and spoke the interpretation in our language; and when through, raised his hands towards heaven and pronounced the benediction upon it. I seemed to see Solomon holding his hands heavenward and pronouncing the benediction upon the children of Israel at the dedication of the temple. It was the most glorious light I ever witnessed and must have lasted fifteen or twenty minutes. There were thirty persons in the congregation. The tongues to me was that my greatest trials were over with; that if faithful I should be blessed with perfect health and strength, and should be the means of helping to bring many into the church.

I can truly testify that I have grown stronger and stronger ever since, and my greatest desire is to bring others into the fold, where they can enjoy these great spiritual blessings with us. It is all I think of by day or dream of by night. I am always dreaming of going to our church and explaining our doctrine to others.

I have been sick most of the time for the last four or five years, and have thought many times that my day of usefulness was over; but I have a little girl six years old to raise yet, and I do so long to live where our church is, so that I can attend, and our little girl be brought up in the Sabbath school.

We have property here, and feel afraid to sell for fear we may not do any better by making a change. There is a nice house and lot for sale joining us for six hundred dollars. A very good home in every way; and the best lot in town is for sale joining on our lots on the other side, on the corner of the street. O how I wish some Latter Day Saint could buy it, then we might build up a church here. This is a town of one thousand inhabitants. A very rich and beautiful country surrounds it. It is in Page County and five miles from the Missouri line, and the best set of people I ever lived among. Come up to Coin ye faithful ones, and we will all help build up Zion in this place, for surely a lovelier country cannot be found. Bro. and Sr. Kuykendall from Shenandoah moved onto a farm one mile and a half from town last spring, and have done well, and like it here. My husband is a brick layer and there are two or three brick buildings going to be built next spring. With love and best wishes to all the saints. Your sister in the gospel, JOSEPHINE WOOD.

MONTMORENCI.

Dear Sisters:—Like many others I love to read the Home Column and endeavor to heed its wise counsel; and the articles are very strengthening. The Herald always brings something to lift me up when I am beginning to fall. I feel thankful the Prayer Union has been praying for me in my low circumstances, and I can truly say I have been wonderfully blessed. I have been working out this summer. I did not forget to take along a good supply of Heralds, Autumn Leaves, tracts, and Voice of Warning with me. When I could find a poor soul that would take a drink of the pure water of life I had it freely to give. When I got to my destination I found I had made a good selection. My nearest neighbors were a young couple newly married. The minister who married them is the leader of the Friends' Church, and he had given them the discipline of his faith and also a hymn book. I went over one evening and they were singing. I took part with them and they gave me the discipline to take home to read, and told me to be sure and come over to-morrow evening. I happened to have my hymn book in my collection and I took it with me. I showed them my book and they were highly pleased, so we sung together out of the Latter Day Saints' hymn book. They lived there about two months before they moved away. She copied some hymns from my book and I gave her some Zion's Hopes, tracts, and Heralds to keep. I told them that her discipline had rejected both baptism and the sacrament. I explained to them the mode of baptism, that the Latter Day Saints taught all the commandments that Jesus had commanded the apostles to obey. She wanted me to write for an elder to come and baptize them. I told her to read those pamphlets and study the Scripture prayerfully and the Lord would direct his servants to Onaway.

When they went away my nearest neighbor was about a mile and a half. I made them a visit. The woman was very glad to see me. I had my little boy with me and she had two children, so the children were delighted too. When dinner was over she asked me if I professed any religion, belonged to any church. I told her I did, and that I belonged to the Latter Day Saints Church. She said she had heard quite a lot about that church, but had never had the pleasure of seeing one before. She said she was an Advent. I suppose you know what Advent means. I did not know, and she said "Advent means last days—just before Christ comes." She got a big Bible and gave me another, and explained their mode of seventh day keeping from the ten commandments down to the time of Christ. I told her I had never studied the Sabbath question very much, but I would look it up and see what about it. She gave me some books and I took them and thanked her, saying, "I will bring you some of my books." "I hope you will," she said. I took her the Voice of Warning and some others. I looked up the Sabbath question. Told her from the New Testament certain passages of Scripture that the first day was the day the apostles kept, and they certainly knew which was right. She thanked me for what I had said. "You don't want to hide your talent, you want to let us know; I am glad for what you have said." When I came home in the fall I wrote six sheets of paper explaining the old and new covenants and sent it to her.

ELDER T. A. HUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

A BROTHER writes: "The — district Sunday school convention was held —, in connection with district conference. Friday evening was devoted to an entertainment, leaving only one and one-half hours for business and institute work (absurd idea, I think). But we could not help it under the circumstances. I hope the workers will awaken to the thought, 'come up higher.'" Further on in the letter he remarks: "The work in this district, I believe, is on the wane." We regret very much that such is the case, but it is about what we might expect if the convention above described is a sample of all they have had. Conventions are for the upbuilding of the work in the districts, and we cannot expect to build up on reports and entertainments alone. Reports are necessary and entertainments may sometimes do good, but to make them the entire program is a mistake. And when this is the routine for years, the error becomes the more serious. What is needed is some good solid work on some of the subjects that are necessary to be understood in the successful running of a live Sunday school. You can scarcely afford to spend even one session of your convention for an entertainment; and especially is this true when there are but two sessions in the convention. You need all your time for that which will improve your teachers and your officers in their work in the Sabbath school. It may be hard to break off from the custom of having an entertainment at the convention. The schools may expect it and be disappointed if they are not permitted to give it. This can very easily be provided for. If your convention is set for Friday, have your entertainment on Thursday evening; and even then it is well to have a paper or two on some pertinent Sabbath school question. Be sure that you have no irrelevant numbers, either of song or speech. Thus you may nicely drift out of the old track into the new and more needed work.

OTHER outlines and items of the Institute report will appear from time to time, notwithstanding the account of the closing is herewith given.

INTERSTATE INSTITUTE.

DISTRICT CONVENTIONS AND INSTITUTES; BY W. N. ROBINSON.

District Conventions.

A. Nature of Work.

1. Business.

- a. Reports of schools.
- b. Reports of district officers.
- c. Reports of supt. of schools.

2. Miscellaneous business.

3. Institute work.

B. Who shall prepare the program.

1. District officials.

1.¹ Supt., asst. supt., and sec.

2. A program committee appointed by convention, of which district superintendent is chairman.

Note.—In the above outline the institute work seems to be but a small part of the convention, since it is but one item out of three; but exactly the reverse is the case. The one item covers many times more ground than all the rest together, and should have a very large proportion of the time of every convention. Use no more time for routine business than is actually necessary to do it right. The institute work, if properly conducted, will be the life of your meeting in a little while.

6. Accustoming to systematic and regular action.

Note.—The above were the several answers given to the question, and then the 5th and 6th answers were selected as the first and second best.

B. Necessity for law, system, and order.

- a In nature.
- b In civil affairs.
- c In social affairs.

7.² Personal influence.

1. Give home receptions.
2. By expressions of wholeheartedness.

8.² Good classification.

D. Insist on obedience.

1. Visiting parents.

Note.—When scholar disobeys, and through kindness and the expenditure of all the tact that can be used in the school, and by personal influence of the teacher and superintendent the child is stubborn, then seek the cooperation of parents.

2. Judicious requirements,

- 1² Child should prepare lesson,
- 2² Should give attention to lesson during class,
- 3² Should give attention to general exercises.

E. To what extent can we enforce rules?

We can insist on the scholar complying with requests, or else be severed from right to membership in the school.

The Sunday school newspaper, by J. A. Gunsolley and Abbie Horton, editors, occupied nearly ninety minutes, and was full of good thought, sharp criticisms, pungent remarks, and poetic effusions relating to Sunday school and Religio work. Parts of this paper will be published in time.

It was thought that about thirty-five minutes was the proper length for a district Sunday school newspaper.

Short speeches were enjoyed from Brn. J. A. Gunsolley, J. F. Mintun, and T. A. Hougas, when closed a very profitable effort to build up the Religio and Sunday school departments of church work, destined to become prominent, not only in the church, but in the world.

XENIA, Ill., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—Since our November conference I have been very busy and quite successful in awakening an interest in the truth of the restored gospel, everywhere I have been.

While I was in Johnson County I visited a branch of Utah saints; met two of their elders, heard one of them preach and bear his testimony that he knew Brigham Young, John Taylor, and Wilford Woodruff were prophets of God; it had been revealed to him. The other one could not preach, so their members say, although he is one of their seventy. The branch numbers about thirty and has a neat little church built. They took me in and cared for me while there, and invited me to preach in their church; but I only occupied one evening in the church. When it was noised abroad that I was not a Utah elder I was invited to come and occupy the neighboring schoolhouse, which was a more commodious building, and with a view of reaching more at the schoolhouse, I accepted the invitation.

On my arrival, late in the afternoon they seemed to be very glad to meet me, as they had been anxious to hear some of our elders preach; and after the evening meal had been served and all seated around the old fireplace, insisted I should tell them some of the differences between the two churches. While it was my intention to do so before leaving them, I would have preferred to wait for a more convenient time, fearing if their elders heard I was prepared to meet them I would not get to discuss with them before the public; for I not only desired to do them good by way of exposing their pernicious ways, but wanted to reach their neighbors, of whom I found some believing. But before I was with them long they assured me they would meet any body of believers who differed from them, in open discussion, and would make me twist when they got a hold on me. From what I could learn their elders had been boasting that all others who differed from them would not meet them in discussion. They further told me, when I expressed myself as not believing their elders would meet me on the differences of the two churches, that they must, and if they did not they would give them a whipping. I told them not to be too hard on them, for if they got them to meet me they would have to force it on them. I talked to them in this way, hoping to get them to urge their men into a debate, but all in vain; they came out a couple of times and heard me preach, and then skipped out, knowing at the same time that I was there for the purpose of exposing them.

I had publicly announced when I would speak on the differences between us, and it was known to them. They told some of their members the reason they would not discuss with us was because we abused them so. We talked on the differences of the two churches for two evenings, reading extensively from their own publications. They denied that they were publishing the books I was reading from, but I showed them that B. H. Roberts made quotations from some of the same books. I was reading from his book on Succession, and if authority for Mr. Roberts, it would in this case be authority for a Josephite.

These people almost worshiped their elders and have all confidence in their testimony, overlooking the written word to the acceptance of the unwritten word. I do not know whether I succeeded in changing the minds of any or not, but there were some who were almost in the notion to go with them who expressed themselves as being glad I had come and laid things bare and would not have missed hearing what was said for money.

Since the 1st of January I have been laboring in Wayne County, in company with Bro. F. M. Slover. On the 7th we began a meeting in the Brush Creek branch, continuing it till over the 24th. Sixteen were baptized and many more near the kingdom. It was thought by some of the oldest members that there was the best interest manifest at this meeting there had been since the branch was organized.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 31.

Editors Herald.—After nearly four months outside of branches or seeing any of the ministry, it was pleasant to be received into the pleasant house of Bro. A. H. Parsons, and to cooperate with him in gospel work. It was an unalloyed pleasure too to meet with the congregation of saints. Added to these pleasures, the greater pleasure of meeting several families of my father's relatives awaited me. Association with them for a few brief days at their homes, their unceasing effort to so kindly entertain me, together with their attendance at services held, was to me supreme delight. My dear aunt, of seventy-nine years, appreciated meeting her preacher nephew who felt proud to be so honored.

Bro. Parsons and the saints bent every energy to have these dear relatives of mine comfortable at the places of worship, the hall, and the home of Bro. Christy. The relatives in turn appreciated association with the congregation. May this mutual good-will strengthen with the years and association become permanent. I had just revisited relatives on my mother's side whom I first met a year since, and in so doing occupied a sunny spot in life's pathway. The gospel seed sown among these relatives is growing. It was here, in 1847, that my parents were married. This, together with Independence Hall, where the Old Bell was cracked as it announced freedom, the scenes and memories dear to the patriotic and lover of the right wherever found, and my pleasant present associations, stirred my being more deeply than can be told by the excellent yet too cold process for printer's ink. I had touched the Old Bell at the World's Fair, but to do so where it filled the mission and gave its life for the cause it labored in, was another thing. Bro. Parsons was with me. With uncovered heads we trod where illustrious ones had immortalized themselves, enshrined their names in glory, establishing freedom to radiate while the centuries should roll by, making possible within the midst of the years the establishment by restoration the gospel.

The birthplace of Old Glory, Franklin's tomb, the Centennial Grounds, and other places of interest were visited and the opportunity appreciated.

Bro. Zimmerman showed me through the Philadelphia Tapestry Manufacturing Company's plant, he being one of the firm by whom several of our people are employed. This splendid plant and Bro. Zimmerman one of its proprietors impressed me with the not new thought that the gathering will make necessary manufacturing among other industries. Bro. Hilliard's late forcible article should stir up thought and action. In the council held at Lamoni, "which should have been" held "before" (or similar ones), but which had been "hindered," there is a subject for deep thought. Sixty-eight years, almost threescore and ten, have passed and that to be realized by gospel process in the interest of the poor is but little if any nearer to them than then. If in holding councils we have been "hindered," then all that might eventuate from them has been belated. With all respect to General Conferences and those severally who have made up those august assemblies, with their quorum meetings, etc., it is just possible that the most done and all done is far short of the possibilities. Conferences have been, yet councils "should have been" before the one had.

Are we ever to reach the General Assembly? When? What good will it and decisions of quorums by virtue of it be when the conflict is ended? What of the school of the prophets? If educational institution it be, why two generations of ministry have passed without its helpfulness being had? I hope the two-year adjournment will eventuate in assembling after such profound thought during the interval that will lead to clear action on all lines needed, and, the acceleration of the hastening process. I believe Bro. Hilliard's article should have the most careful consideration.

I have been out of my field a month, but will soon be back. Some pressing calls shall have early attention. Bro. L. R. Devore's attention is called to two points northward from Pittsburg on the Allegheny Railroad—Lindsey and Rathmel—practically new ground. They are in the Pittsburg district and in Jefferson County. Bro. Frank Beam of the first, and H. Winship of the latter, may be corresponded with. They liberally sustain the missionary.

There is to be a conference at Kirtland, March 4 and 5. Come ye missionaries in charge, the ministry one and all, so far as consistent with distance and conditions. Let the several branches and the scattered members come en masse. Let Bro. Luff make it a special point to be there if consistent. The Kirtland district people have not seen him except at General Conferences. Show up, Bro. Luff.

The tent matter is still on hand—will it be completed or abandoned? The Pittsburg tent made a short season last summer. Philadelphia tent work took an all-summer vacation. In a Michigan city a tent in the decrepitude of age and almost friendless awaited its change from under a brother's house all one summer. Tent work, like everything else, is variable, places and conditions considered. Wise expenditure of means and effort should concern all at the conference. It may be well to consider if any reunion work shall be attempted in 1899.

We hope after the conference to especially aid the branches. Let us know your needs, also scattered saints and friends. Get ready and come to the conference as lively stones in the spiritual structure, and under God's blessing let us make of it a success.

After a few more days 'mid these pleasant conditions I return westward.

In bonds,

R. ETZENHOUSER,
Care of Box 28, Cleveland, Ohio.

ADELL, Iowa, Jan. 25.

Editors Herald.—Since last addressing you I have labored in Grinnell, Rhodes, and south of Rhodes, in the Clear Creek branch. From there I came home, to Perry, where I was kept quite busy visiting sick saints. Grip seems to be the trouble.

After four days at home and with the saints I came to Des Moines and met in court capacity with Elders T. J. Sheldon and C. Scott. Hope I shall never again be called upon to assist in a like occurrence. Saints, honor Christ's law and be ye reconciled one to another. However, there is a brighter day dawning for the saints of the Des Moines branch; so be ye faithful.

From there I came here, to look after a certain Christian preacher, who told some of the saints that he wanted to meet some of our men in debate. I have not yet seen him on the subject. Have procured the court house and will begin services on the 28th inst. We have access to one of the city papers and have handed in a short article for this week's issue, wherein we extend the invitation to any person to show in public debate that the Book of Mormon teaches polygamy, as this pious Christian preacher has declared it does, giving us the reputation of being false teachers. He has also stated that I admitted to him that a clause on page 116 of the Book of Mormon could be rightly construed to teach polygamy. This charge is as false as their claim that Alexander Campbell restored the gospel. Those men seem to have a faculty of misconstruing things; but our little article challenges them, and the Brighamites also, to construe the Book of Mormon to teach this most pernicious and unscriptural doctrine. The doctrine of monogamy in the book is too positive and clear to be construed to teach otherwise. When will God be honored by these ministers telling the truth? Answer: When they will follow Christ.

On my journey, including this short ministerial tour, I have found many good, faithful saints and kind friends of the world, who did more than I expected to entertain and make me comfortable. I left some in Jasper County, near the Sibley schoolhouse, who I am persuaded will soon obey the gospel, also some in Colfax; but they will be the fruits of other men's labors. I was assisted at Grinnell by Bro. F. A. Russell, an honest and energetic young man who together with his sister Elsie, and Mrs. Clark, also a Sr. Harvey, in their indefatigable efforts have built up quite a thriving Sunday school, and have procured and nicely arranged a small but suitable hall, so situated that it can be opened to a larger hall. During our effort there I believe some became interested, and the saints were revived and encouraged. So I am still determined to battle for the victory, unsheathing the sword of the Spirit at every opportunity.

The Christian preacher here, who has so falsely accused us, received a serenading a few nights ago; the young men of the town pelted his domicile with stones, telling him that Swedes were all right in their place, but it was not in the pulpit. Now I like good Swedes just as well as good anybody else, and I appreciate and honor good Christian preachers just as I would honor good, honest ministers of any other church; but away with humbugs. Yours in bonds,

J. W. MORGAN.

STILLWATER, Ok., Jan. 30.

Editors Herald:—I recently visited Blackwell in company with Bro. Thomas N. Berry. We held five services at a schoolhouse three miles south of town; had fair attendance and interest. This was the first time the work was ever presented in Kay County. Bro. Berry has relatives and many old friends in that locality. Bro. and Sr. Bivens, formerly of Blue Rapids, Kansas, live in Blackwell, as also Bro. W. D. McKnight. Sr. Jennie Duncan, also of Blue Rapids, lives at Nardin, a small town ten miles west. This is a fine country and the people are certainly ready to hear the truth. We hope to do more there when conditions will permit. Bro. R. W. Davis will probably labor there in the near future.

Our district conference will be held February 17-19, near Mathewson P. O., in Canadian County. We hope that the saints, and especially the ministry, will make it a point to be present. There has been a light attendance at the former conferences and a seeming indifference on the part of some. Brethren, let us arouse and improve a little along this line. Make an earnest effort to be there.

I am preparing to write a history of the "True Followers of Christ," which movement had its origin with John N. Burton who was cut off from the Reorganized Church several years ago. Burton baptized David

T. McDonald and he built up the "Follower" church. I would like to correspond with those who knew Burton and heard him preach after he was cut off from the church; also with those who have seen Burton and McDonald traveling and preaching together. My permanent address is Neosho, Missouri.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Feb. 2.

Editors Herald:—On my arrival in this place the 24th ult. my mind was made up to be governed by what I actually saw and learned and not by the statements of others by which a prejudice might have been formed in the mind relative to the temple and its early history.

Having gone through and spoken in the temple, the conclusion is now fixed in my mind that the building of the temple and all connected therewith required a higher inspiration than that attainable by man outside the assistance of God.

Outside of the work for which I especially came I have enjoyed my association with the saints very well. The meetings held in the temple during our stay have been good, that of last Sunday p. m., in which confessions were made, moving the congregation to tears, being especially so. But the crowning one of all was that held at the home of Bro. G. T. Griffiths last evening, in which the singing of a tongue and its interpretation were had, the interpretation being written out, a copy of which will be presented to both Herald and Ensign for publication if desired. It was one of the most enjoyable meetings I ever attended.

Bro. J. H. Lake sang the tongue, and Sr. Hattie Griffiths sang the interpretation, which was also given to Bro. R. C. Evans. Bro. Heman and I start west to-day.

GIVEN BY THE SPIRIT IN KIRTLAND,
OHIO, FEBRUARY 1, 1899.

TUNE, "ORTONVILLE."

To you the children of Most High
The promises are given,
If you will be but humble now
Before the Lord of Heaven.

For unto you this day renewed
The promises of God,
The sick among you shall be healed
Through Jesus Christ your Lord.

No more unto the men of earth
Shall you in weakness bow,
But honor God, and he will bless
His children even now.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—I have, as an elder, not been preaching very much; but I am letting my light shine, so that those with whom I associate can get a glimpse of my love and work for the church; and will at least not find fault with those who are in the front of the battle. Will try and visit the brethren in Scranton, Pennsylvania, in a month or so.

I see every day something more precious in the union of the saints in the three established books of the church, and am looking anxiously forward to the time when I shall do more successful work for the church which I have chosen to live by, and to die by, if so called upon.

Yours very truly,

L. M. SOLLENBERGER.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 16.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since any harvesting has been done in this part of the vineyard. We are trying to keep the gospel banner flying. Although few in number, the Lord does remember us. Some that have been cold are returning, taking their places again. The Lord is softening the hearts of the people, and a better feeling toward us is taking the place of prejudice.

I know this work is of God and that which he has spoken will come to pass if we do our part. May we improve the opportunities given us that the Lord can add to those that are standing at the door.

WILLIAM F. FROST.

LAPEER, Michigan, Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—My wife, little son, and myself are the only members of the church in the locality where we reside. We belong to Five Lakes branch, eight miles from us; so we do not get there very often, and therefore feel we are of the scattered ones. Our neighbors are nearly all Methodists and do not accept our testimony, but it has been and will be given and we leave the result with God.

I find great pleasure in presenting the gospel to those who will listen, as God gives me of his Spirit so that I am able to explain it in such a manner that I am sometimes almost surprised. We do thank God for the knowledge of the gospel, and rejoice in it; and my prayer is, O Father, help us to live the lives of saints!

Brother Hilliard's article in the Herald of January 4, "The Gathering," was very interesting to me, as we are longing to be with God's people, and have been praying that he would direct us in this; so Bro. H's article came as a ray of light. This thought has often come to me, Why does not the church heed the counsel given to "gather into the regions around about?" And I have wondered why our beautiful College and Home were not located at the center place.

I have often been asked by my friends why I did not join some of the fraternal societies for the life insurance, that my family might be provided for in case of my death; but my reply has been that God had amply provided for his people. I pray that the people may be willing to do their part. I am going to strive, with God's help, to do my share.

Yours in the faith,

V. M. HASTINGS.

Many of the dervishes who fought against Kitchener had been prosperous farmers until pressed into the Khalifa's army. Now that they have been killed off or routed from the Nile Valley, the country around Khartum is greatly in need of settlers.

Khartum is to have a large modern hotel, and the city is recommended as a winter resort.

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 2.

THE POSSIBILITY OF REPENTANCE IN THE WORLD TO COME.—IS IT REASONABLE? IS IT SCRIPTURAL?

Having shown that the Devil and all his works; namely, sin, death, and hell are to be actually destroyed, and that the works of God, man included, are to be liberated from the grasp of Satan, and are to praise their Creator for that liberation, we are confronted with the popular doctrine that there is no repentance after death. The claim of Satan on the sinner is then established about as follows: Many do not repent and come to the knowledge of the truth in his life; there will be no opportunity or power to repent after this life; therefore there are thousands who never will repent. If this reasoning is correct, or rather if the premise is correct, then the will of God will never be accomplished and Christ will in the end fail to do what he came to do.

But let us examine this doctrine, or opinion, of no repentance after death; not at length, but only enough to show how unreasonable it is. Does the Bible say it is impossible to repent in the next world? Does the Bible inform us that God's love and mercy for man will cease as soon as man puts off or steps out of this mortal body? I think not. I have been quite a student of God's word for many years, and have given this subject some special attention, but I have never been able to find sufficient proof to satisfy my mind that man's probation is confined solely to this earth life. Believing as I do that man is of a twofold nature—body and spirit—I am fully satisfied that the spirit, the conscious, intelligent part of the man, survives the death of the body in a conscious condition, and that during what is known to us as the death state, opportunities of repentance and reformation will come to the spirits of men in "the pit" or "prison"—in what we sometimes call the "spirit world."

I cannot stop here to argue the dual nature of man at length, but shall digress sufficiently long to give a few brief proof texts supporting this position, and shall then proceed with the main line of thought.

The Savior is represented as saying to the woman of Samaria: "God is a Spirit."—John 4:24 (2 Cor. 3:17). And Elihu is represented as saying: "There is a spirit in man."—Job 32:8 (1 Cor. 2:11).

What is God? "A spirit."

What is it in man? "A spirit."

Now if God is indeed "a spirit," and if there is indeed within man "a spirit," then are they related the one to the other? And if so, how? The Bible answers:—

Furthermore, we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?—Heb. 12:9.

Notice here that our earthly fathers are called "fathers of our flesh," while God is represented as the "Father of spirits."

Moses and Aaron call upon the Lord thus:—

O God, the God of the spirits of all flesh.—Num. 16:22.

And at another time Moses speaks to the Lord in this way:—

Let the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation.—Num. 27:16.

"Spirits," in all these texts, is used in the plural number. He is not simply the Father of spirit, or the God of the spirit of all flesh; but he is "the Father of spirits"—"the spirits of all flesh." And as further evidence that the "spirit in man" is a real entity, and not simply a substance, we quote from Zechariah:—

The burden of the word of the Lord for Israel, saith the Lord, which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him.—Zech. 12:1.

God "formed man of the dust of the ground" (Gen. 2:7), and then "formeth the spirit of man within him;" and if forming the body gives to it an organization, it seems to me that forming the spirit (which is in the body) gives to it an organization too. And while the spirit remains in the body, the spirit and the body seem to be but one; but when dissolution takes place, the wise man says:—

Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.—Eccl. 12:7.

Remember that the body and the spirit were both formed by the same God; remember that the body goes to one place, "to the earth," at death, but the spirit goes to another place, "to God;" remember that the body goes back to dust and becomes "as it was," but that we are nowhere told that the spirit is to be disorganized and become "as it was;" and then remember that "the body without the spirit is dead" (Jas. 2:26), but we are nowhere told that the spirit without the body is dead. In fact Jesus says:—

Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul.—Matt. 10:28.

Hence the soul, or spirit, is something that came from God, and man cannot kill it. John said that he "saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God," and they were conscious and praying, and that "white robes" (the "righteousness of saints," Rev. 19:8) "were given unto every one of them" and they were told that "they should rest yet for a little season" (Rev. 6:9-11). These were souls of those who had been "slain;" men had killed their bodies, but their souls or spirits had returned to God, and he placed them in a condition to "rest" from their labors until the time of the resurrection. But "there is no rest for the wicked," hence the Savior says:—

Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell.—Luke 12:5.

The spirits of all men, then, return to God after the bodies are killed, and their bodies return to the earth; but as there are "many mansions" "in my Father's house," it is not to be supposed that the spirits of the righteous and the wicked will all be put in the same place. Those who have been "slain for the word of God" are to be clothed in "white robes" and permitted to "rest," while those who die in rebellion against God are to be "cast into hell." Now, as the souls of those who are righteous are to be permitted to "rest" till the first resurrection, and are then to live and reign "with Christ" (Rev. 20:4-6), we conclude that they will not be subjects of repentance, for they will have no sin. But not so with the other class, the sinners; they are dead in sin, they return to God in that condition, and are then "cast into hell." Will God care for those spirits then? Will he desire their salvation then? Will he do anything for them then? Let us see.

God now loves the soul or spirit of the sinner to that extent that all heaven would rejoice if he should at this moment repent; but if, while the sinner is pondering the matter in his heart, the assassin slips up and at one blow fells him lifeless to the earth, causing his spirit to step out of this house of clay and "return to God who gave it"—if this should occur, God's great love and mercy for this soul, according to the popular theory, suddenly turns to hatred and vengeance; and he now takes as much pleasure, apparently, in the misery and agony of this soul in hell as he would have taken in his conversion and eternal salvation one minute before the fatal blow was struck. Is it reasonable? If God is the Father of spirits, and he loves the spirit of man so dearly while in this body, why should we conclude that his love turns to hatred just as soon as the unconverted spirit leaves its earthly tabernacle? Why should he not now desire and labor for the salvation of that soul, for its redemption from the Devil, from sin, from death, and from hell, just as earnestly and with the same good will as when it was in the body? Does not the earthly parent love his erring son even after he is found guilty and shut up in prison? And is not God the Father of our spirits after they leave the body as much as while they are in the body? Is he not the "Father of spirits" even after they are shut up in prison—in hell? And is not his love for his children as strong and lasting as the love of an earthly parent? We are taught in the Bible that his love is much stronger and far more enduring than any earthly parent, or earthly being is capable of exercising, and we therefore contend that his love will follow the erring spirit into the spirit world, and that his work for man will continue until the Devil and all his works are destroyed, and until all the works of God shall be brought to praise and glorify his high and exalted name; until the time comes which was shown to John while on the isle of Patmos:—

And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.—Rev. 5: 13.

This, to my mind, is the same time and the same event to which the psalmist David refers when he says:—

All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord; and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.—Psalms 22: 27.

The same also to which he refers in the following:—

All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name.—Ps. 86: 9.

How many nations are to "come and worship" the Lord? "All nations whom thou hast made." And how many nations did the Lord make? Paul says he "hath made of one blood all nations of men" (Acts 17: 26). "All nations of men," then, with "all the kindreds of the nations," and "all the ends of the world," are to remember and "turn unto the Lord" and "come and worship thee." Will it not be true, then, that "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ" (Rev. 11: 15)? And is it not then that "All thy works shall praise thee" (Psalms 145: 10)?

Reader, if you cannot understand how all this is to be brought about, just ask the Apostle Paul. He says:—

And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.—Col. 1: 20.

God, then, is to do this "by him" (the Christ) "through the blood of his cross." The definition of the word "reconcile" is: "To conciliate anew; to restore to union and friendship; to bring back to harmony; to cause to be no longer at variance; to restore to friendship or favor after estrangement." Now man was "estranged" from God, "at variance" with him; but "through the blood of his cross" God has undertaken to "reconcile all things unto himself;" that is, "to restore to union and friendship," and "to bring back to harmony" with himself, all things "in earth" and "in heaven." And the next two verses show us that this is just the sense in which the apostle uses the word "reconcile" here:—

And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblamable and unprovable in his sight.—Col. 1: 21, 22.

Notice, now, that they were "alienated" from God, and had become "enemies;" but when they are "reconciled," restored "to friendship," and brought "back to harmony" with God, it makes them "holy and unblamable." Again, the same apostle says that God "hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ," and that "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them" (see 2 Cor. 5: 18-21). You see that when individuals are "reconciled to God," "their trespasses" are no longer imputed "unto them;" they are freed from sin. But will all men be "reconciled to God," and brought to this condition? The record says "all things," "whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." And the same apostle, speaking again of the work of Christ, its glorious consummation and complete success, and the honor to be accorded him for the same, says:—

Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.—Phil. 2: 9-11.

And the Lord said, years before this, through the Prophet Isaiah:—

Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else. I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall swear.—Isa. 45: 22, 23.

"Every knee" and "every tongue," evidently include, so far as man is concerned, the "all things" that "were created by him, and for him." These texts tell us that "every knee shall bow" to God, that "every tongue shall confess" him as Lord, and that "every tongue shall swear" to him—swear allegiance to him as their Savior and King. This confession, too, is to be "to the glory of God the Father," and if the glory of God is in the salvation of man, in saving those things which "were created by him, and for him," from the power of his "enemy," then we may expect this confession to be made when "all men" are "saved and come to the knowledge of the truth;" when he shall "reconcile all things unto himself," by bringing them back into "favor and friendship" with him; and not by some when they shall be cast out into "outer darkness, where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Reader, do you believe that "all things," both in heaven and in earth, "were created by him, and for him"? Do you believe that for his "pleasure" they "are and were created"? Do you believe that God has "no pleasure in the death of the wicked"? Do you believe that God takes pleasure in seeing "the wicked turn from his way and live"? Do you believe God when he says, "I will do all my pleasure"? Do you believe that he "willeth not the death of any, but that all should come to repentance"? And do you believe the Savior came to do "the will of him that sent" him, "and to finish his work"? Do you believe that "God so loved the world" that he sent his Son "to save the world"? Do you believe he will "reconcile all things unto himself," after "having made peace through the blood of his cross"? And do you believe that all men, when they become "reconciled to God," will bow the knee to him and confess that he "is Lord"? Do you believe all this?

Well, we have been taught that millions of God's creatures—all who do not obey the gospel in this life—will be driven out into the shoreless regions of dark despair, where neither hope nor mercy can ever reach them, and there, in unspeakable woe, in unutterable misery, in inconceivable torment and hopeless despair, spend a never-ending existence. And that in those dark regions of a never-ending doom they will raise their hopeless cry to heaven for mercy, confess that Jesus is the Christ, confess that they were taken captive by the Devil "at his will," and also confess the justice of God in dooming them to never-ending torture; but that their misery can never, never end. This, we are told, is the confession referred to in the above texts. Do you believe it?

If you do, please tell me how such a confession could be in any sense "to the glory of God the Father"? You may say it demonstrates the strict justice of God. I don't believe it. But suppose it did? Does it also demonstrate the love, the mercy, and the tender compassion of "Our Father which art in heaven"? Can you discern in that "the love of Christ which passeth knowledge"? "But," says one, "it is not God's fault that they are hopelessly lost. He wanted to save them, and did all he could to save them; but they would not be saved, nor could he bring them 'to repentance.'" This might be satisfactory to some, but not so to me. And in order to get this before your minds as I see it, I shall ask you to draw upon your imagination for a short time. Let us imagine ourselves in heaven, standing around the great white throne, and singing, "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created;" and as we sing the last words the veil between us and this place of torment is suddenly removed, revealing millions upon millions of our fellow beings, created "for thy pleasure," writhing in unspeakable misery. They cower in abject fear at the sight of God, and agony and woe are depicted on every countenance. And with their bloodshot eyes raised pleadingly to heaven, and with sorrow and penitence blended with every sound they utter, their parched lips and swollen tongues shriek into the ears of God, the angels, and all the redeemed, this soul-harrowing confession:—

O, God! unto thee do we bow. We confess that Jesus Christ is Lord. We confess thy justice in sending us to this place of torment. We confess that thy love is infinite, that it "passeth knowledge," and that thy goodness knows no bounds. Thou didst love all. Thou didst will "that all should come to repentance," and didst send thy Son to execute thy will, but he could not do it. He failed to bring "all to repentance." He wanted to bring "all to repentance," and tried to do so; but Satan blinded our minds and took us captive at his will, in spite of all that you, your Son, the angels, and thy people could do. Thy Son tried to destroy the Devil; but thou seest, O Lord, that the Devil still lives to torment us, the creatures whom thou didst create "for thy pleasure." The Savior tried to destroy the works of the Devil, our sinful nature, the sin which brought forth death in us; but thou seest, O Lord, that we are still the servants of sin, that sin still survives and reigns over us, and that we are still in "bondage through fear of death." Yea, Lord, thou didst try to destroy death; but thou seest that death still survives and "feeds upon" us; that he holds us in his power, and still reigns victorious over us. Lord, thou didst also try to destroy hell; but it is "the strong man's palace," the place where he keeps his captives, and Satan has prevented its destruction too, and it must be our abode all through eternity. Thou didst send thy Son "to save that which was lost," "to save the world," and "to save sinners;" but he saved only a few of them during their earth life, and now he is powerless so far as saving the others is concerned, for there is no repentance for man after his earth life ends. Many of us never heard the gospel during our earth life. Many of us were aiming to obey, but were cut down in youth, or in the prime of life, and failed to do so. And now, as there is no repentance after death, our final doom is to suffer a never-ending torment; and the mission of thy Son, so far as we are concerned, is a failure. Thou didst create us "for him," "for thy pleasure;" but Satan, thine "enemy," has thwarted thy purposes; and now, having wrenched from the hand of thy Son millions of thy creatures, reigns over us. O Lord, canst thou not even now destroy the "strong man" and deliver us from his power? Canst thou not deliver us from this terrible condition of suffering?

We pause and listen to the answer; it is something like this:—

You failed to come to me during your earth life, and now you cannot come. When billions of ages shall have come and gone, your suffering will be no nearer an end than it is now. I would be glad to save you and would do so if it was in my power, but I cannot.

Or suppose the answer should be: I could save you if I wished to do so; but I don't want to save you. I would rather see you suffer.

Reader, perhaps you can see how such a confession, with such an answer, would be "to the glory of God the Father;" but with my understanding of infinite love, mercy, justice, and power, I confess that I fail to see in the above confession the proper vindication of God's eternal goodness and power. It looks dark to me; and the longer I look at it the darker it gets. Let me ask you to draw upon your imagination just a little further in reviewing this picture. Suppose as you stand in the blazing sunlight of God's glory gazing upon this writhing, surging, seething mass of lost and suffering humanity, you recognize one as your own dear mother, another as your kind and indulgent father, then a brother and a sister are recognized; and lastly you recognize another as your ever faithful companion, or your own darling child—an only son, or perhaps an only daughter. You look upon those loved ones, misery and woe depicted in every expression of their countenances; you hear their piteous appeals for mercy; your mind reverts back to the many acts of kindness they have done for you, and the love they have bestowed upon you; and then, clothed in the radiant livery of heaven, you sing:—

"And not a wave of trouble roll Across my peaceful breast."

Could you do it? Would you feel like tuning your golden harp and to its heavenly music sing these words:—

"God is love! God is love!
All things whisper, God is love"?

Would you?

"But," says one, "when we get to heaven our happiness will be so perfect, so complete, our joy so unspeakably full; there will be such a fullness of the glory of God flood our souls, and we shall be so enwrapt with the glories of heaven that we can't feel any sorrow for those who are lost; nor will our minds be troubled in regard to the condemnation of our loved ones who have been so dear to us during this earth life. We shall never think anything about them."

Am I to understand from this that the more of the Spirit of God we receive the less sympathy we have for suffering humanity, and the less is our anxiety for their salvation? And am I to understand that when we receive a fullness of the Spirit of God it will so completely eradicate from our hearts all sympathy for those less fortunate than ourselves, all anxiety for their welfare, that we shall not care whether our own father, our own mother, our own brothers and sisters, and our own children, are in heaven or in hell?

Reader, the rich man in hell had a better heart within him than that, for he prayed to Father Abraham that Lazarus might be sent to his five brethren "that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment." He had an anxiety for the welfare of his brethren, even though he was in torment. Yet I am asked to believe that those who get to heaven will be so extremely happy that they will not think nor care anything about the suffering of their own children, should they happen to be among the lost. I do not believe it—I cannot believe it. But I do believe this:—

We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him.—1 John 3: 2.

And I also heartily indorse this:—

Let this [same] mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 2: 5.

Did the Savior ever get so happy that he forgot all about suffering humanity? Was his glory ever so great that he thought only of self? If so, I never heard of it. But I have read:—

For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly.—Rom. 5: 6.

And I have read:—

Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.—Luke 23: 34.

And I have also read this:—

And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it.—Luke 19: 41.

The city of Jerusalem had rejected him; the Jews had killed the prophets, and had rejected the message of life sent unto them, and for this they must suffer. But the Savior, when he looked forward and beheld the suffering of the people of that city, because of their wickedness too, he "wept over it." "Let this same mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." "We shall be like him." Surely, then, when we are "able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge" (Eph. 3: 18, 19), we shall feel towards erring humanity as he did. And if we do, we could not be unspeakably happy even in heaven, knowing that many of our loved ones were in never-ending torment.

"But," says one, "man can never be 'reconciled to God' only by obedience, by accepting the terms of 'agreement' which God has given." Yes, that is true; and I believe it with all my heart. And as all men do not "remember and turn to the Lord" in this life, I am compelled to believe that many will repent and come to him in the world to come, if John's prediction ever comes true:—

And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying,

Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.—Rev. 5: 13.

The Lord said to Abraham:—

And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.—Gen. 22: 18.

And this promise, in different forms, is repeated many times in the Bible. Paul, commenting upon it, says:—

Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.—Gal. 3: 16.

All nations, then, including the heathen, are to be blessed in Christ. But how?

And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen THROUGH FAITH.—Gal. 3: 8.

It is to be done "through faith." Ignorance does not save anyone who has intelligence enough to be held accountable. The Savior said:—

The truth shall make you free.—John 8: 32.

And it is when "you shall know the truth," not while you are ignorant of it, that it "shall make you free;" and you can know it "if ye continue in my word," said the Savior (John 8: 31).

Even the heathen are to be justified "through faith." And there is no other way, for Paul has said:—

Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Heb. 11: 6.

Now, there is only "one faith" (Eph. 4: 5), and that is "the faith of the gospel" (Phil. 1: 27), or "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3); hence it is through the faith of the gospel, and no other way, that men can come to God. But the heathen nations have not this "one faith," here upon the earth, and how can they ever get it? There is only one way:—

How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent? . . . So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.—Rom. 10: 14-17.

Now, "All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord: and all the kindreds of the nations shall come and worship before thee." All are to "come;" he that cometh to God "must believe;" they cannot believe till they have "heard," and they cannot hear "without a preacher;" so if the gospel is not preached to them in this life, it must be preached to them in the world to come, for the angel who brought to the shepherds the news of the Savior's birth, said:—

For, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.—Luke 2: 10, 11.

Mind you, the angel says this "good tidings" "shall be to all people." Do you believe it? One thing is sure: It does not reach all people in this life. But Paul says:—

For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.—1 Tim. 2: 5, 6.

The "good tidings of great joy" may not reach some in this life, but Christ gave himself "a ransom for all," and it must be "testified in due time." If it is not "testified" to all in this life, then it must be "testified" to some in the world to come, in the Lord's own "due time."

Perhaps the reader finds questions like the following arising in his mind: Does not the Bible say that "the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Ps. 9:17)? And does not the parable of Lazarus and the rich man teach us that when a man is once "turned into hell" he can never come out? Well, the Bible certainly teaches us that "the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God;" but I have never learned from the Bible that there is no possibility of their ever coming out. But as this parable of Lazarus and the rich man (found in Luke 16:19-31) is one of the strong proof texts of those who believe in the never-ending torment of those who do not come to Christ in this life, it will be best, perhaps, to examine it at some length. Those two men, when they died, went to different places. "The beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom" (v. 22). "The rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments" (vs. 22, 23). Then began this remarkable conversation between the rich man and Father Abraham. The rich man, in his agony, cried out: "Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame" (v. 24). Abraham reminds him that "in thy lifetime" thou "receivedst thy good things," "but now"—notice the two different times: "in thy lifetime" and "now." He was not in his "lifetime" when this conversation took place, but was in the death state. His body had returned "to the earth as it was," but "the spirit" had returned "to God who gave it," and He "after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell." Both Lazarus and the rich man were conscious after death, but they were in very different situations. And Father Abraham now proceeds to inform the rich man: "And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence" (v. 26).

This verse is thought by some to settle the condition of those who are "turned into hell," and that too for all time to come. Others, to avoid the conclusions thus drawn, have taken the position that this parable, if it is a parable, is intended to represent the condition of the Jews and Gentiles. The Jews, before the kingdom of God was taken from them, being represented as "a rich man," faring "sumptuously every day;" but the Gentiles, before this transfer of the kingdom, being represented as "a certain beggar." After this transfer of God's favor the two nations change conditions: The Jews are now represented as lifting up their eyes "in hell," while the Gentiles recline peacefully in "Abraham's bosom." But if this interpretation is correct, then there was "a great gulf fixed" between the Jews and Gentiles, making it impossible for "those who would" to pass from the one to the other. Has there ever been a time when "those who would," whether Jew or Gentile, were not allowed to repent and turn to God, just the same after the transfer of the kingdom as before? And if the Jews, "who would," may repent and come to God, and be accepted of him, then is there any such gulf as is described here existing between those two nationalities? If there is, I don't think either Peter or Paul knew anything of it. Peter says:—

And [hath] put no difference between us and them. . . . But we believe that through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.—Acts 15: 9, 11.

Peter understood then that "we," the Jews, would be saved "even as they," and that there was "no difference between us and them," so far as the plan of salvation is concerned. Again he says:—

Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but that in every nation [Jew or Gentile] he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.—Acts 10: 34, 35.

Paul says:—

For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.—Rom. 10: 12, 13.

Again he says:—

For he is our peace, who hath made both [Jews and Gentiles] one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us [the Jew and the Gentile]; . . . for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace: and that he might reconcile both [Jews and Gentiles] unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby. . . . For through him we both [Jew and Gentile] have access by one Spirit unto the Father.—Eph. 2: 14-18.

These texts are too plain to need any comment. They show beyond the shadow of a doubt that there is no "great gulf fixed" between the Jews and the Gentiles; but on the other hand that there is "no difference" between them, so far as being at liberty to come to God is concerned. The same gulf which exists between righteous Gentiles and wicked Jews exists between righteous Gentiles and wicked Jews; between righteous Jews and wicked Jews. Whatever "gulf is fixed" is "fixed" between the righteous and the wicked, without any regard to nationalities.

We are plainly told that both those men "died;" and they are therefore in the death state, at the time of this conversation between Father Abraham and the rich man, and are presented to us in this parable to represent the condition of the dead—the difference between the righteous and the wicked. That there will be a great difference between those who obey the gospel in this life and those who reject it, I verily believe. That they will be consigned to different places, and that those who reject the gospel here will not be permitted to come where the righteous dwell, in the world to come, I am not prepared to deny,—the Bible teaches that this will be the case. That this difference, and this being consigned to separate "mansions," may last to all eternity, I am not able to disprove—have no desire to disprove it. But that those who are "turned into hell with the nations that forget God" are so encircled by an impassable "gulf," so "fixed" and enduring that no one ever has been able, nor ever will be, to pass it and go to their relief, is certainly not in harmony with the teaching of God's word. It is true that, at that time, the inhabitants of those two places could not pass from one to the other. But we must keep in mind that this parable was spoken by the Savior before his death and resurrection; and that it presents to us the utter inability of man, however righteous he may be, to save his fellow man. And we must also keep in mind that it is "through death" that the Savior is to "destroy him that had the power of death," in order to make it possible for him to "deliver" those who are in "bondage" "through fear of death;" and that, in doing this, he must, in some way, either pass this gulf or destroy it.

That the rich man was in hell, that Lazarus was in Abraham's bosom, that there was "a great gulf fixed" between them, and that they could not pass from the one place to the other, the Bible clearly teaches; and that the time is to come when "all the ends of the world shall remember and turn to the Lord," when "all thy works shall praise thee," when "all nations shall come and worship thee," and when "all things" shall be "reconciled" to him, the Bible also teaches. I believe it all. Will it harmonize? Yes, if we take in its entirety; but if we set up a pet theory and cast aside part of the Bible, in order to establish our own theory, we shall soon find ourselves in the midst of difficulties innumerable.

Let us look first for the cause of those persons not being able to pass from the one place to the other.

While a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace; but when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armor wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.—Luke 11: 21, 22.

By reading the connection it is clearly seen that Satan is "the strong man." He is armed with sin and death. By sin he had slain his millions, and dragged many of them down to hell. They are "his spoils." He has "the power of death" and can, therefore, hold them in comparative peace, no man (not even Father Abraham) daring to invade his palace till he is disarmed. Who was able to do this? Was Lazarus or Father Abraham able to go into "the strong man's" palace, wrench from him his "armor," sin and death, and then administer relief to or set at liberty "his spoils," the captive spirits he had "taken captive at his will" and dragged down to hell? No; they were not able to go. "They which would pass from us to you cannot." It seems that some were willing to go—"would pass" if they could—but the "strong man" "keepeth his palace;" he is well armed, has "the power of death," and no one dares to venture into his realm on a mission of mercy unless it is some one who is "stronger than he," some one who has power over his own life to "lay it down," and also "power to take it again." Man did not possess this power, and man, therefore, could not do this work—not even Father Abraham. Who did possess this power? The Savior says:—

Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.—John 10: 17, 18.

He had the power to "lay down" his life and to "take it again," and he did "lay it down." But what for?

That through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the Devil; and deliver them, who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.—Heb. 2: 14, 15.

The "strong man" had the "power of death," and it was "through death" that this power was to be taken from him; "through death" that he is to be disarmed, "overcome," and finally destroyed. But death alone is not all that is necessary; it must be the death of some one who is able to grapple with the "strong man" in the death state. It must be the death of some one who is "stronger" than "him that had the power of death;" some one who, after he has lain down his life, has "power to take it again." Man might be willing to lay down his life for his fellow man, but as he has not the "power to take it again," his sacrifice would be useless. Hence the statement: "they that would pass from us to you cannot." But there is One who can pass within the dark regions of death itself, there "overcome" the "strong man," and then divide "his spoils." "Spoils" is "that which is taken from others by force;" hence the "strong man" has in his possession that which does not justly belong to him, that which he has "taken captive," "at his will;" this must all be divided. It seems clear to my mind that dividing "his spoils," after overcoming the "strong man," is the same as delivering "them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage," after having destroyed "him that had the power of death," and that it all points unmistakably to the glorious work of the Savior in the destruction of the Devil, and in the liberation of those things which "were created by him, and for him [Christ]," from the power of sin and death.

If the thought should enter your mind at this stage of the investigation that those whom Christ shall "deliver" at this time are perhaps the ones who obey the gospel and keep the commandments of God in this life, then please try to answer to your own satisfaction these two questions: Are those who obey God and serve him faithfully to the end of the race, "all their lifetime subject to bondage" "through fear of death"? Will they have to wait for deliverance from "bondage" until the destruction of Satan? Surely not. Anyway, the writers of the New Testament did not so understand. Paul says:—

Giving thanks unto the Father, . . . who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son.—Col. 1: 12, 13.

You see, when they obeyed the gospel they were then "delivered" from "bondage," and were made free citizens in the "kingdom of his dear Son." Hence the Savior well says: "The truth shall make you free" (John 8: 32).

And Paul says again:—

The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.—Rom. 8: 2.

And when they were made free, they then partook of the Spirit of freedom:—

For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear.—Rom. 8: 15.

They were not "subject to bondage" "through fear of death," for they were liberated from that feeling. John says:—

There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.—1 John 4: 18.

Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.—Gal. 5: 1.

To this we add the testimony of Paul in regard to his own death:—

For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ.—Phil. 1: 23.

Was he "in bondage" "through fear of death"? No; "the truth" had made him free, had "delivered him," even then; the "perfect love" of Christ within him had cast out all "fear of death," and he was not only willing but anxious to go just as soon as his work was done.

But there are some who are in bondage "all their lifetime." Who are they? The Savior tells us who they are:—

Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.—John 8: 34.

Paul tells us who they are:—

Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness.—Rom. 6: 16.

Peter also says:—

While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought into bondage.—2 Pet. 2: 19.

Those, then, who yield themselves "servants to obey" "sin unto death," and who are not "made free from the law of sin and death" by obedience to "the law of the Spirit of life," are the ones who are "brought in bondage," and are "all their lifetime subject to bondage," "through fear of death." Hence these are the ones whom Christ will deliver at the time he destroys "him that had the power of death." Hence they are to be delivered in the world to come. Will they be delivered without repenting? No; for he has willed that "all should come to repentance," and those referred to above are no exception to the rule. We conclude, therefore, that the possibility of repentance, even after death, is both reasonable and scriptural.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

ON PARADISE AND PURGATORY.

"The Intermediate State: Is it Paradise or Purgatory?" was the topic of the Rev. J. Q. A. Henry at the La Salle Avenue Baptist Church last evening. He said:—

"Many views are held concerning the state of the soul between death and the resurrection. When the Scripture speaks of death as a sleep it always refers to those who die in Christ, and may denote rest and peace from the conflicts of life. The New Testament dwells slightly on the brief interval between death and the resurrection; it teaches the continuous consciousness of the soul.

"Men are either happy or miserable between death and the resurrection. Do they go direct to hell or heaven, or is there an intermediate state, which may be characterized as purgatory for the wicked and paradise for the saved? The doctrine of purgatory is a comparatively modern dogma. It is a human invention, both unscriptural and dangerous; it discredits the sufficiency of the atonement of Christ and the influence of the Holy Spirit to secure perfect salvation; it encourages sin, delays repentance, and places a premium on moral remissness.

"There is no word in the Bible relating to such a state of purification. The impenitent go into a world of suffering and torment. The believing dead enter a realm of bliss and glory.

The evidence for this belief is wholly biblical. Reason and philosophy may suggest but the Scriptures alone can affirm a doctrine as to the future.

"There is no blank between death and the resurrection. The Bible meaning of death is not extinction of conscious being. The only difference between paradise and heaven, in its fullest sense, is that with the resurrection there will come added capacity to the soul through which higher joys and diviner ecstasy will be made possible. There is no middle state in which human souls are to have a second opportunity for repentance and faith. The rich man suffered torment in hades while his brother still lived on the earth, and previous to the resurrection no communication between hades and paradise was possible. The conduct of men here furnishes the material for their final sentence and eternal destiny."—Chicago Tribune, Jan. 30, 1899.

WAR ON RITUALISM.

When the history of the nineteenth century is written it will seem odd to read that its closing scenes were marked by fierce religious strife in England. Yet this appears to be more than probable. The war on ritualism is the leading social and political topic in that country, and the controversy waxes warmer day by day. Foreign complications and the Irish question have been forgotten nearly, while Harcourt's cohorts cheer him on to the attack. If Mr. Balfour's plan for a Catholic university at Dublin was intended either in whole or part as a diversion to draw public attention away from Harcourt's crusade, it was in this respect a failure.

The great meeting at Albert Hall in London on Tuesday night shows what a pitch the agitation has reached. Admission was by ticket only, 7,000 persons being present, 5,000 more being denied admission. Delegates from seventy-five provincial associations were present and expressions of sympathy were received from 110 peers and members of parliament. Lord Kinnaird, in describing the "ritualistic conspiracy," declared that it had been working secretly for years and now openly advocated a reunion with Rome. A telegram was sent to the Queen, praying her to direct Lord Salisbury to take legislative action to "suppress the Romish practices in vogue in thousands of churches," and to compel the Bishops to enforce obedience.

The Archbishop of York recently issued a pastoral letter complaining of Romish practices, specifying no less than twelve, which he says are condemned by the episcopate. These include unauthorized holy days, the use of incense, asperging, burning candles before pictures, invocation of angels or the Virgin, and habitual confession."

The Bishops held a protracted meeting at Lambeth, but there could be no compromise. The conclave was a bitter one and neither side would budge an inch. The Queen is said to have made a personal appeal to Lord Salisbury to formulate some plan for settling the controversy. It may be that he will assent to the suggestion to revive the church courts. All such disputes would then be brought first before a diocesan court, with the privilege of appeal to a provincial court, consisting of the Archbishop and six assessors, and as a last resort to the five lay judges appointed by the crown. But it is doubtful whether a settlement by force would not lead to open schism, and this would add immensely to the force of the demand for disestablishment. The Nonconformists are active and aggressive and ready to take advantage of every opportunity. The government dreads a fight of this sort and will do all it can to prevent it.

But Salisbury has Harcourt to reckon with. While John Kensit, who went around interrupting ritualistic services, was the leading figure in the agitation, it lacked coherency and force. But Harcourt is now in command. He has been writing philippics to the press that have stirred all England, and it is asserted that he resigned his leadership of the Liberal party in order to be untrammelled in this movement, the most notable since the one to which Oxford's name was given.—Chicago Tribune, January 31, 1899.

BOOK OF JOB A MASTERPIECE.

The Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, preaching at All Souls' Church on "The Book of Job," which he analyzed and described as one of the world's masterpieces, concluded his discourse in these words:—

"Clearer than this Oriental poet should we see that man must fit himself into the great cosmic relations of the universe, rather than the universe be adapted to his little schemes and petty needs. We are a part of this greater order of the universe, borne along by laws more far-reaching than our vision. More clearly than Elihu can we see that there is discipline in the severities of life, that the ruggedness of the universe makes stalwart souls, that sorrows refine, that it is not the religion that makes us feel most comfortable that is necessarily the most true. It takes a great soul to be capable of great pain. Alas for the soul that yields to that which it ought to resist, that is embittered by that which may refine, that is made sour by what ought to sweeten and strengthen.

"This far-off poem anticipates the highest gospel of sciences. It enforces the reverent humiliation of the student. Science to-day, as in the Book of Job, creates havoc with the theology of man, but it reinforces the religious awe of the human heart. It rebukes disputations, but encourages devotion. It does not solve the insolvable problems, but it enables us, like brave old Job, to 'hold fast to our integrity.'"—Tribune.

EPIGRAMS BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

"The idea of God is composed of two parts, that end of character we think we ought to be and that source of the authority we think we ought to obey.

"To the Greeks God was Beauty; to the Orientals, Mystery; to the Romans, Power; to our civilization, Happiness; but the real God is all of these and more.

"A right notion may be wrong because so intensely fragmentary.

"Accuracy is far from being truth.

"What is true is often vague.

"The principle of obedience is instinctive in man; take away from him the eternal God and he will make a little god of his own, even if he has to make it out of himself.

"Beware of worshiping your own prejudices, conceits, desires — and calling them God.

"There are two classes of sinners: one class acknowledges God, but neglects or defies him—there is some hope for such; the other class de-throne God and set up a god of their own who will let them do as they please—for such there is little hope.

"No man truly worships the eternal God who is not loyal to the deep, eternal moralities.

"The crime of the fashionable world is the guiltiest of all crimes — waste, waste of the riches of time, of culture, and of sympathy.

"It is a poor tin god that is the god of politics and of business custom.

"It is better to worship the devil than to deify your desires.

"There is something that is better than pleasure—it is discipline.

"In the heart of yielding there is happiness; but in the heart of self-denial there is joy.

"There is no God but God; there is no law but God's law; there is no peace save in love and service.

"An idle Sabbath is the pander to criminal week days."

COLONIES OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

The Salvation Army has established three colonies, one at Fort Amity, Colo.; one at Fort Herrick, near Cleveland; and one at Fort Pomie, Cal. In all three there are not quite 200 persons, all included. The cost of the experiment during the first year has been about $45,000, and Commander Booth-Tucker thinks that with $50,000 more he will be able to pull through another year.

THE ACQUIREMENT OF CORRECT SPEECH.

Correct speech is largely a matter of imitation. If the persons with whom a child constantly associates speak inelegantly the child will certainly do likewise. No amount of instruction in grammar, the theory of language, will avail to counteract the debasing effect of practical tuition in the wrong direction. There is no such word in the English language as "ain't." We may say "I'm not" because we merely eliminate the a in am, but "ain't" has no legitimate progenitor. The home is the true school of speech, and the mother the teacher whose influence will be the most lasting.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

College improvements are slowly progressing, and we hope to have, in time, as well equipped a college as can be found in the West. A new working bench has been placed in the laboratory, along with some shelves and drawers, on the former of which our re-agents and apparatus are displayed to the public gaze. Book shelves have been fixed in the President's room on the third floor, and quite a number of books, chiefly bearing on literature, fixed thereon.

We have received donations of several books lately, and are under obligations to the parties sending. Works on classics, mathematics, history, English language and literature, philosophy, natural science, antiquities, are always welcome. If every member of the church would only be considerate enough to send us one good book each, we should soon have a much finer library than we have now. Our library is for the public good. How much better it is to have your books in active use here than lying idle at home.

The photographer was around last week, and took views of the interior, in which faculty and students figured quite prominently. Photographs, 25 cents each, set of eight, $1.75. Postage will be prepaid in each case.

Lookout for the first financial report of the Appeal Committee, and see whether you have paid anything in yet. Some have responded quite well to the call, others are indifferent about it, still others have not thought about it. We trust their minds will be stirred up. In spite of the recent cold weather our students have maintained their customary regularity very meritoriously, which evinces a real desire for work, and energy to accomplish success. Lately we have had chapel talks on Department, Ambition, Slang, Enlargement of Vocabulary. Some day, perhaps, we shall have a college magazine, and then many of these interesting talks can be preserved.

DIFFERENCES OF FAITH—REORGANIZED AND UTAH CHURCH.

KIRKVILLE, Iowa, Jan. 25, 1899.

Editors Herald:—Being readers of the Herald and interested in church matters, we ask you to answer the following questions in the next issue of the Herald, as we are not in a position to learn otherwise.

First: Aside from polygamy is there any difference of doctrine between the Utah Mormons and the Latter Day Saints?

Second: Is there any marked difference between King James' Translation of the Bible and the Inspired Translation?

Third: What became of those plates that were found by Joseph Smith, after being translated?

Fourth: Are there any points of resemblance between the Spalding Romance and the Book of Mormon?

Fifth: Are there any known cases of healing by laying on of hands by elders of the Latter Day Saints' Church?

Sixth: Is the church governed by direct revelation from God through Joseph Smith?

If you will kindly answer in the next issue we will esteem it a great favor and will settle certain points on which we are in doubt.

Respectfully,

JOHN WILES.

L. W. MCMEEKIN.

1. Yes, there are shades of difference, some of which may be but outgrowths of plural marriage, or the polygamy, cited in the question. Plural marriage to have consistency involves the idea that marriages of the sort called plural or celestial derive their importance from the idea that persons thus married are mated not only for time; that is, for the ordinary purposes of marriage on the earth, but for a companionship in eternity as well; and that marriages not sanctioned and consummated under the priesthood here, will not be perpetuated hereafter. It was taught several years ago in President Brigham Young's time that the powers of the resurrection will attach to the priesthood, at least so far that the husband will hold the power to resurrect members of his own household, and that this applied to the plural wives of a man having taken them, so that if a wife so misbehaved herself as to fall under the displeasure of the husband while in the flesh, the husband could punish her by refusing or neglecting to raise her up at the first resurrection. In connection with this it was also taught that a person who should reach the height of possible advancement would become worthy to be sent out into space, by virtue of the authority of his priesthood to organize a world and people it, in a similar fashion as it is said Jesus Christ made or created and peopled this present world. One result of this teaching was that the more wives, the greater the family, the more numerous the adherents and subjects of this human-god-world-creator would be, and hence, the greater his glory and kingdom.

It involved also, the teaching of marriage, and sealing by proxy; that is, a living man could represent a dead man, and as an agent or proxy could participate as in the person or stead of a dead principal, and have sealed to the living proxy, for the dead man, a wife, or wives, while the same woman, or women might be and remain the wife or wives de facto, in polygamous or monogamous wedlock to other men on the earth. It involved, also, a sort of order, known as "the patriarchal order of adoption," by which individuals on the earth might by a principle of adoption be taken into and become parts of the family, tribe, or kingdom of another whom they might elect. This would if carried to an extent blot out and absorb the adopted element to the enlargement of the one adopting; and some few years ago President Woodruff and President Cannon discovered that they had been practicing this patriarchal adoption wrongly, and a change was introduced, which, while it did not discard the features of rule, and other things connected with the order to be administered hereafter, did restrict as to the proper persons who might rightfully exercise the privilege to be adopted; this right being reserved to the firstborn, or the legitimate ruling head of the family.

There is also a difference in doctrine in this: that the Mormons or Utah Church practice baptizing for the dead; the peculiarities of which doctrine we do not need to state; for the reason that the Latter Day Saints, (or Reorganized Church,) of the question, while believing in the doctrine, also believe it to have been a permissive rite, the privilege to practice which was forfeited by the church and has not as yet been restored by divine command.

There is a difference also, in doctrine concerning the Sonship of Christ; providing the statements of President Brigham Young as published in Journal of Discourses, can be taken as a declaration of belief. According to that Jesus was the offspring of God in the ordinary way of procreation; and not by immaculate conception as stated by Matthew.

By the same authority, President Brigham Young, the Father was once a man, and Christ by virtue of his worthy accomplishment of the mission assigned him would become a God like his Father and rule as such. And that so far as this world was concerned Adam was the God thereof, and the one to whom we of this earth's probation will have to answer.

These peculiarities of belief, if held by the Utah Church, as enunciated by President Young and others, leading men among them, and found in the Journal of Discourses, Millennial Star, public journals and organs of the church, the Latter Day Saints of the Reorganized Church do not accept; believing in the one God, the Father, and the Son Jesus Christ, Son according to the statement found in Matthew; believing further that God and Jesus Christ are the ones to whom men shall and must look for judgment, happiness, and glory, or punishment and infinite misery.

So far as the Utah Epitome of Faith conveys the beliefs of that church there is little if any difference, the one being the counterpart of the other in the main. The Latter Day Saints have placed in their epitome a statement in regard to marriage, and the location of Zion.

The Utah Mormons believe that the Bible teaching and history sustain the idea that God sanctioned polygamy, or plural marriage. The Reorganized Church does not so believe.

The Utah Church believes and teaches that God gave a revelation to the church through Joseph Smith, authorizing their plural marriage system. The Latter Day Saints do not so believe. The latter believe that God was not the author of the revelation on plural marriage; or that if the document purporting to be the revelation was ever given to Joseph Smith, it did not come from God, and was not delivered to the church by Joseph Smith, and never became a tenet during his lifetime; and was never accepted by the church in due form, as required by the structure and organic law of the church.

There is a difference between the two bodies in this, that while both believe in the building of temples, the Utah people have built temples in Utah without direct revelation from God to do so; while the Latter Day Saints believe that a temple built by human hands must first be commanded of God to be built or it will not be acceptable to God; and that no such command has been given since the expulsion from Illinois. The one believes that Utah is the place in which to build temples. The other does not.

2. Yes; there is a marked difference between the King James', the Common Version, and the Holy Scriptures or Inspired Translation.

3. So far as known to us the plates were returned to the keeping of the messenger from whom Joseph Smith received them. This is all we can state regarding them, as we have never seen or heard of any other disposition of them.

4. There are no points of resemblance between the Spalding Romance and the Book of Mormon; none whatever.

5. Yes, sir; many of them.

6. No, in the sense of each action or movement of the church being at the time directed by revelation; yes, in the sense of the governing rules of faith and conduct being based in and derived from the revealed word of God. The principle of direct communication between God and men is believed in; and in cases of perplexity and doubt, appeal is made to God for direction, and it is received. It is believed and understood that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants contain the word of God to the church, and in these are found rules, directions, and regulations by which the church is governed.

Individuals may and do receive revelations and directions from the Holy Spirit, for their own guidance, comfort, and establishment. All that comes with the claim of being revelation for the guidance of the church must pass certain tests of examination before being accepted or becoming rules of procedure, or items of faith or belief, no matter through whom they may come, Joseph Smith, or anybody else. Revelations which contravene or are contrary to the word of God already existent and accepted are rejected on the discovery of such contradiction. This is one reason why the Utah revelation on plural marriage is rejected by the Reorganized Church, because it does contravene, set aside, and contradict the word of God already given to the church.

President Brigham Young, and J. M. Grant, one of the apostolic quorum in Utah, both now dead, as both are reported in the Journal of Discourses, published by the church in Utah, taught what is called "blood-atonement;" which, in substance, is to the effect that there were sins which men might commit for which the blood of Jesus could not atone; and it would be necessary that their own blood should be shed in order that those sins might be expiated or remitted unto them. So far did Apostle Grant carry this teaching that on one occasion he stated that there were those whom he would advise to go to the President and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to them, in order that their blood might be spilled that they might be saved.

How far this dogma may have spread, by how many it was accepted, we do not know; but there was never a disavowal of it by the church that we have ever seen or heard of. Some of the elders whom the Reorganized Church meet from time to time in the field deny the statement that such doctrine was ever taught, and when confronted with the record made by the church itself, say, "O, well, we are not responsible for any wild notions taught by President Young or President Grant so long ago." This may be true, but, the teachings were had at the time that President Young's word was pretty good ecclesiastical law in Utah; and, if the elders of that church are not now bound to accept the dogmas formulated and expounded by President Brigham Young, Apostle Jedediah M. Grant, and other leading men, it is high time that there should be a revision of the creed and some of these damaging things disavowed by them in a formal and explicit manner.

The Reorganized Church disavows this "blood-atonement" theory; accepting the scriptural statement that "the blood of Jesus Christ . . . cleanseth us from all sin."

The Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints of the question, do not accept the dogma that Adam, the first man, is the God of this world, or earth; nor that men shall individually become each a god, to take up a creative role, sent into space to organize a material world such as the earth, to act the part of god to it, people it with their progeny and finally redeem it and rule over it as a kingdom.

Regarding Adam, the first man, as a man only, the first and leader of a dispensation, the Reorganized Church revere him as a man and a leader, but do not worship him, or any other man, believing that each must stand in his own lot, all subject to the one God, all answerable to that One, for the life and deeds of the flesh.

There are differences between the two churches, in regard to church laws and the rules of succession in the governmental departments of the church, and each claiming the right to the succession, the true order and perpetuity of church existence. Each claims, also, that the other is apostate and not authorized to act for Christ as his church.

HOLY SCRIPTURES FOR UTAH.

Bro. Frank Criley, Business Manager, informs us that he has just filled an order from George Q. Cannon and Sons, Publishers, Salt Lake City, Utah, for sixty-eight copies of the Holy Scriptures, (Inspired Translation.)

This is quite in contrast with the act of Pres. B. Young regarding that same book. At the time the book was published we sent a copy to Elder Orson Pratt, he having been associated with the Seer about the time the work of correcting and translating was done, and much interested in it. We heard nothing from the book until visiting Utah we called on Mrs. Sarah Pratt, wife and widow of Orson Pratt, and asked her if she knew whether her husband received the book. In answer she said that he did and that in the evening of the day he received it, he and she sat up until quite late examining the book and comparing it with the King James' Version; and when at last he reluctantly laid it down he remarked: "It is all right, Sarah. Those men have done their work faithfully; the translation is as the Prophet Joseph left it." He did not know who sent it. The next Sunday after receiving it he spoke in the ward meeting house, and referred to the translation, commended it, and advised those who might desire to send for it. At the close of the service Mrs. Pratt told him that he would have to retract what he had said about the Translation; that Pres. B. Young would make him take it back. But he thought not, as it was true. But on Tuesday morning, President Young sent for Elder Pratt to come to the office, which he did. As soon as he entered the office President Young directed him to return home, get the Scriptures, and bring it to the office. He returned to the house, took the book, and went back to President Young's office and offered to hand the book to President Young; but he refused to take it, and told Elder Pratt to give it to Bro. Wells, who took it. President Young then directed Elder Pratt to retract what he had stated the Sunday before in the ward house. To this Elder Pratt demurred, for the reason that he had only stated the truth; but President Young insisted, so the next Sunday he did retract.

We asked her if Elder Pratt ever received the book back again. She replied that he did not. That she often asked Elder Pratt why he did not request President Young to return it, but that he felt that it would be useless; and would likely annoy President Young for him to ever refer to it.

Now, after many years are passed, under a more liberal policy, the people are allowed to purchase the Holy Scriptures. It is a pleasing and hopeful indication.

Whatever else may happen to those men who composed the committee that looked after the work of publishing the Holy Scriptures, they will suffer neither censure nor condemnation for any degree of unfaithfulness in duty on their part regarding that work. They did their work honestly, and have no fear on that score.

GENTILE DECLINE; JEWISH RISE.

The following is in evidence that Gentile times have about reached the zenith and that "the last shall be first, and the first shall be last." For Israel scattered and peeled under the rise of Gentile influence and power, is approaching national unity under the banner and faith of the fathers, at Jerusalem.

CHURCHES WITH SMALL MEMBERSHIP.

The Rev. Dr. R. M. Patterson, after a study of reports, finds that more than half the Presbyterian churches of the country have a membership of less than 100 each. One seventh of the Presbyterian and one fifth of the Congregationalist have less than 25 each.

ZIONIST ASSOCIATIONS GROWING.

The first Zionist congress was held in 1897, the second in 1898. In the interval according to the Free Church of Scotland Monthly, the forty-two associations in Austria-Hungary have grown to 250; twenty-three in Russia to 373; twenty-seven in Roumania to 127; fourteen in Great Britain to twenty-six; ten in America to sixty. There were none in Germany, now there are twenty-five; none in France, now there are three; none in Italy, now there are twelve.

It is remarkable, this manifest and rapid growth of the Zion movement. One is reminded of the striking statements of the Apostle Paul in Romans, chapter 11, in which he predicts that all Israel shall be saved, at the time of the end of Gentile rule. We are not far from the day of the preaching of the gospel to Israel in their own land. The children of Ephraim in the West will soon begin the work of restoration among their brethren of Judah and Benjamin.

The prevailing skepticism of the age is rebuked by the manifest workings of Almighty God, whose hand is overturning human affairs preparatory to the ushering in of "everlasting righteousness." One is reminded of the words of the inspired apostle, recorded in Romans, chapter 11. The Gentile has naught to boast of against the Jew. The former represents passing, earthly ideals, things that are seen, the temporal. The Jew represents the eternal verities—God himself and abiding truth, God's kingdom over all.

THE spirit of the Roman Catholic hierarchy is manifest in the following edict, rescript, ukase, compulsory order, mandate, or whatever it may be termed. Will the young American Catholics of Dubuque bow to it? If so, the power of the Roman priesthood may be measured by such act of absolute domination of the human mind and conscience:—

DRAWS CHURCH LINE CLOSE.

Dubuque, Iowa, Feb. 6.—It was announced yesterday in St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church by Mons. Ryan, V. G., that hereafter Catholic young men will not be allowed to attend Y. M. C. A. meetings in this city and that Catholic singers will not be permitted to sing in Protestant churches or at non-Catholic funerals.

Several of the leading vocalists in Protestant churches are Catholics.

About one-third of the Y. M. C. A. members are Catholics. It was also declared to be wrong for a Catholic girl to be a bridesmaid at a Protestant wedding.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

We remind the patrons of the HERALD that the business affairs of the Herald Office are in charge of Bro. Frank Criley, and that all letters and notes on business should be directed to him.

And that the literary matters of every description—letters, communications, articles, etc., should be sent to Joseph Smith, or Editors Herald; they being in charge of the literary part of HERALD work.

Of late quite a lot of matter is finding its way to the Editors, being directed to Bro. Criley. Now while Bro. Criley is very kind, and very willing to see that the editors get what may be so sent him, it is not his duty to look after such matter, and he may forget it, or neglect to hand it in, without laying himself subject to blame. The editors may quite safely ignore matters sent to them in that way, and not be justly blamed for so doing. Just so business letters sent to editors may get lost and the editors be not chargeable with blame.

The Editors hereby give notice that they will not be responsible for the publication of matter not addressed direct to them; nor for delays.

Do not address matter for publication to "The Saints' Herald," or Herald Publishing House, but to the Editors, as requested.

Try to be consistent, brethren.

ELDERS' FINANCIAL REPORTS.

Bishop Kelley requests us to state that the financial reports of elders in the field should be made, to him, the same as formerly, for the year, even though there be no session of the General Conference this coming April.

All financial reports will be published just the same as if the General Conference convened annually.

Any who have not sent such financial report are requested to do so at once, addressing to Bishop Kelley, at Lamoni, Iowa.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, under date of February 2:—

The Grand Jury found true bills against six of the mob. They were the oldest and leaders, but I am of the opinion that nothing will be done with them. I got a letter from that country yesterday, and learn the mob are still threatening the saints and ordering them to leave the country, and have sworn eternal vengeance on me; but I am not intimidated in the least, but when I go down there I will not hold night meetings for they will shoot from the brush like cowards, as they are. Six inches of snow here yesterday, mercury 4° below zero.

Bro. A. B. Pierce, Attleboro, Massachusetts, January 29:—

Elder Joseph Luff preached a powerful sermon at Fiskville, Rhode Island, to-day. A number of outsiders present. The Bellevue Avenue Male Quartet, of Providence, sang several selections. Elder M. H. Bond speaks next Sunday. The Pawtuxet Valley Daily Times gave due notice of Bro. Luff's sermon, etc.

Bro. H. E. Moler, Piper City, Illinois, February 3:—

I have been quite busy during the last three weeks, preaching nearly every night and twice on Sundays. Have made two new openings, and am having fair interest. Will follow it up as long as the interest continues. Rough roads and unfavorable weather have been somewhat against us.

A correspondent sends us the following:—

How is this? Brigham said in 1852, in Salt Lake City: "Adam is our God and the only God with whom we have to do."—Journal of Discourses, page 51.

And Orson Pratt, said in his report with J. P. Newman in Salt Lake City in 1870, that Adam was a murderer and murdered the whole race, and said the crime of Cain and Lamech was nothing to be compared to that of Adam. "These be the gods that ye serve."—Apochrypha. J. C. C.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

It will be remembered that at the General Conference of 1898 action was taken calling attention to errors in statement concerning the faith, in "Shinn's School History of the American People," published by the American Book Company. Bro. H. R. Mills, of Independence, Missouri, writes us that he has succeeded in inducing the publishers to correct the erroneous statements in later editions of the work. Good; the public will generally respect such requests if we are alert in looking after our interests. Bro. Mills also sends us a clipping from the Independence Progress, a report of the Brighamite conference held at Independence, in which our people at Independence are reported as emphatically protesting against the seating of B. H. Roberts, etc., which evidences "the line of distinction" between the Reorganization and Brighamism.

Egypt exports live quails in great numbers.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard has appointments for the immediate future at the following points, exact dates not known: Akron, Youngstown, Ohio; Sharon, Conneautville, Pittsburg, Fayette City, Pennsylvania; Wheeling, West Virginia; afterwards in Southern Ohio.

The present address of Bro. M. H. Bond is No. 103 Chapin Avenue, Providence, Rhode Island.

Lamoni in common with the country in general has been passing through a season of severe cold weather, making the winter the coldest known in this region for years. The Herald Office force, however, is fortunate in having the services of a competent, faithful janitor, Bro. W. N. Ray, who faithfully makes his rounds and keeps a fairly even temperature. Our offices and rooms are always kept neat and clean and our wants anticipated. Such marked and voluntary attention to duty is noticeable and worthy of commendation and a great aid to us in our work. Would that in all branches of the service of the church everywhere there was as faithful and competent execution. Work tells, of "what sort it is."

Mary Lamonsky, a Chicago working-woman, intrusted her earnings of seventeen years (nine hundred dollars) to "Madame Cora," a spirit medium, under "a spell" which she said she could not get free from, and Madame Cora disappeared with the money. Beware of spiritualism and spirit mediums. Madame Cora may have communion with departed spirits, but Mary Lamonsky has not—with one at least.

Bro. Frank Swan, of Birmingham, England, reports having baptized one in the city of Glasgow, Scotland, January 14. We hope to see many yet enter the church, as in early days, in the land of the heather.

Miss Nannie Reeves, of Baltimore, a cultured favorite in Baltimore, Naragansett, and Philadelphia society, "has applied for the first vacancy in the Johns Hopkins Training School for Nurses with the intention of devoting herself exclusively to nursing the poor." Such example is worthy of strong commendation. The poor are with us always. Better be of practical service, by living in fact and doing good, than to bury oneself in the unnatural confines of cloister or convent, where nature is crucified and the soul starved and distorted by a false system.

Miamisburg, Ohio, reports the finding of a skeleton of a man eight feet tall, said to be a giant of prehistoric times.

Bro. I. N. White wrote from Kibbie, Illinois, February 8. He says, in effect, that the Roberts case all around is surely bringing to light that the Reorganization has from the beginning been telling the truth that polygamy is no part of Mormonism proper. He went to Kibbie, on the 28th ult. and had preached thirteen times. His visit seemed to have been timely and was crowned with good results—good attendance and much interest. He would remain for some time. He was well, and having greater liberty in presenting the word; the Lord had stood by him in a marked manner. There was much to do; he had been in the pulpit nearly every night since January 7. Bro. White sends us a clipping from the St. Louis Post Dispatch of February 5, which contains a reprint of the SAINTS' HERALD'S editorial of January 25, "Governor Wells on the Roberts case;" the article being brought to the publishers' attention by a committee of St. Louis brethren.

We omitted mention in last week's issue of the return of Pres. A. H. Smith, from Omaha, and of Brn. Herman C. Smith and J. W. Wight from Kirtland.

Bro. G. M. Moore writing from Pollock, Missouri, says that he has been "wonderfully blessed since making an effort to pay my tithing." This is in harmony with the experience of all who have moved forward in the performance of duty under the law with the just object of "fulfilling the law" and thereby honoring the Master who gave it.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Comrade with men, and suffer with thy kin,
If thou wouldst know the Father, and wouldst hear His voice speak through thy neighbor's true and clear.
Be friendly, and within thy friendships win
Rare souls that have some message to fulfil,
To do,—and so to teach the Father's will."

SPRING VALLEY, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—Many times I have felt impressed to write and tell how much comfort and strength I have received from your letters, but feeling there are so many abler writers, have always given way; yet I feel that our heavenly Father has something for each one to do, and that it would not please him for me to do as the foolish servant that received the one talent, to fold it up and hide it away until he comes, just because I can't do as much as some one else. I believe that God expects us to use the one talent to the best of our ability and no more, for let us remember that to whom much is given much is required of him. I am sometimes led to think the reason many of us do not write is because we are too proud to expose our ignorance before those who are more able than we are. I confess I have felt a little that way myself, but have been made to know that writing for the Home Column should not be done for our own honor, but to honor our heavenly Father's work, and with a desire and purpose of heart to do his will, by doing what we can to help others to see the way of right and truth.

I have been grieved to hear brethren and sisters say, "We don't take the Herald any more, because it is not as good as it used to be." O brothers and sisters, who is to blame? Is it the paper or the editors? or is it ourselves? Let us examine ourselves: before God have we done all in our power to make it good, or have we left all for some one else to do? Are we denying ourselves any comfort or pleasure to help those who are still weaker than we are, who are struggling hard to overcome the temptations and trials of this life? or do we say, "I have paid my money for it, and they must do the rest."

O, dear saints, I believe God is just, and he will require at our hand that which we are able to do. Then let us not seek to excuse ourselves and be deceived, but let us try to get better acquainted with our heavenly Father, and submit our will to him, because we love him, and I feel sure we will get his approval and receive blessings that will be more than we expected.

I was baptized five years ago last spring, and the light that has been given me of this work is proof that it is God's work, and that he is able to make the weakest strong. And since I have been in the church I have been made to bear some of the severest trials of my life. At times the burden seemed more than I could endure; but a loving Father has promised that he would not suffer us to be tempted above what we can bear; he knows just what it takes to purify the soul, and is always ready to help when we cry to him. And to-day I realize that by suffering those trials I have been made to see many of my faults and weaknesses which otherwise it seemed I could not see. So I thank God even for trials, as it has brought me nearer to him. I thank him for that Spirit that gives comfort and strength in weakness and trial. My heart's desire is that I may always have God's Spirit with me to help me train my children for him, and that I may be a help to my husband in the work that is intrusted to him.

Dear brethren and sisters, I feel there is much to do, and if we have a desire to do our part let us begin by watching ourselves and praying for strength to overcome every evil habit that may be a stumblingblock to others, and by putting our hand to do every little thing that is for good in any way, not waiting to do greater things which may not be for us to do. I believe if we do that with a desire to please God and help others, he will bless us and help us to do our part of the work. With a desire to be faithful, I am,

Your sister,

EMMA BLAKESLEY.

UNDERWOOD, Iowa, Nov. 18.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I am interested in the welfare of the young and desire to do what I can for them, for there are so many temptations in their way. I believe the boys are sometimes neglected by mothers and teachers. I have frequently heard teachers say, "Give me the girls, because the boys are so bad;" but I say, "Give me the boys." I love the girls too; but for some time have felt impressed to write in behalf of our boys. Very often parents are particular about sending their girls to Sunday school, but think little of the welfare of the boys. This should not be, for God loves the boys as much as the girls. I think we parents should take our children, when small, to church and Sunday school—not send them alone, but go with them; and then when they are grown to manhood and womanhood, I believe they will delight in going. I receive much instruction in the Home Column; it is the first I read upon receiving the Herald.

My heavenly Father has many times blessed me and mine; when in sickness and affliction we have sent for the elders we have received blessings and have been healed by the power of God, for which I am thankful. Only last week my daughter, Minnie, was taken suddenly, and was very sick four days. We asked her which she wanted, the doctor or the elders. She said, "I do not want a doctor; I want the elders." We sent for them and they prayed earnestly for her. God heard their prayers and she is now well. I rejoice in the glorious work of latter days.

When we see so many who are not in possession of the light that we have, we of all people ought to be thankful. Then, dear sisters, let us not be discouraged, though there be many things that are hard to pass through, for God will sustain us if we trust in him and him alone.

I have three boys and two girls; three belong to the church, and my prayer is that the others may unite; also that I may set an example before them worthy of imitation. I desire to be faithful and keep the commandments of God, that I with you may receive eternal life. CHRISTINA HANSON.

FOR THE PRIMARY WORKER.

THE "WILLING WORKERS" PRAYER.

(As the first lines are repeated let the class "fold" their hands in front of them, "bow" their heads, and "close" their eyes at the appropriate time, and so remain throughout the prayer. This is good for a class prayer or even for a special exercise.—ED.)

Our two hands we fold together
As our heads we humbly bow,
Softly close our eyes and whisper,
"Gentle Jesus, hear us now."

Thou wert once a busy worker
In this great world here below;
Thy work made all work more holy;
And by working we must grow.

May our hands be ever willing,
May our eyes thy beauty see;
May our feet follow thy footsteps,
Walk in light toward heaven and thee.
—M. C. Brown, in the International Evangel.

"SHORT lessons are necessary for young children."

"The memory will best retain what most interests."

"Whatever else the lesson is, it must be interesting."—J. F. M.

"A lesson must not interest for the sake of interesting alone, but for the sake of imparting and impressing religious truth."—J. F. M.

KNOW WHAT TO TEACH.

Goethe says: "Nothing is worse than a teacher who knows only as much as he wishes to make known to the scholar."

We cannot impart what we do not know, we cannot always impart all we do know; hence we should always know more than we wish to impart—study more than the immediate lesson.

"In order to teach a new truth, one must start from something already known, and through similarity or difference present the new thought."

"Children do not think abstractly. They can comprehend new truths and experience only by showing the connection of the new ideas with truths already familiar to them or with experiences in their own lives."

MAKE IT CLEAR.

Use simple language and appropriate illustrations.

Pass no point you have presented till you know it is understood.

"Eyes and ears are two broad highways to the child's mind."

"What the eye sees is more readily understood and remembered than what the ear hears." Use both, and you have a double chance of understanding and retaining the thought.

"Objects, stories, and pictures which really explain the lesson, should be used whenever possible, both to hold the attention and to reinforce the truth."

"When, in preparing the lesson, the questions 'what,' 'how,' and 'why' are answered; when the facts can be given in simple language; when the truth shines clearly as a vision; then the mind sees analogies, likenesses to more familiar truths and illustrations, which are so essential to the best teaching."

"Anyone who can write can draw enough for practical use in the primary class." This is true also of any other class or the general review. If you have a special figure which you wish exactly correct, draw it previously with a slate pencil or even with lead pencil. You can then easily trace the lines with crayon.

"Give the children a clue to the meaning of the poorest drawing, and their imagination will transform it into an interesting picture."—J. F.

"LAST BUT NOT LEAST."

Love the children; love your work; study and pray, and God will not leave you alone.

The above quotations are selected from a few "extracts of worth" sent us by Bro. J. F. Mintun, of which he remarks: "Some are original, but most are selections from the sayings of others."

At the late Institute at Independence, Missouri, one evening was devoted to the consideration of "object lessons." It was made to include the use of objects, blackboards, pictures, cards, drawings, etc. The part "cards, pictures, etc." was to have been treated by Sr. Louise Palfrey, but the other parts crowded it out, or nearly so. Being so limited as to time, justice could not be done the subject. Upon request she has furnished us a few notes upon the subject, which will be read with interest, especially by primary workers. We present it herewith.

PRIMARY teachers should use cards, pictures, etc., plentifully in their class work because—

1. All children like them.
2. They give brightness and attractiveness to the lesson.
3. A child is first taught through the eye; he can catch an idea better, if the idea is brought before his vision when he can see some illustration in connection with it.
4. The truth you would teach is impressed upon the child's memory by association with the picture.
5. Imagination is one of the most active faculties in the child's mind; it is the faculty that gives vividness and reality to that which we would convey to the understanding, hence the imagination would not be overlooked by the wise teacher in trying to appeal to the child; and pictures speak directly to this faculty.

In what features about a lesson may the teacher use pictures? Can an idea be shown in a picture?

Ideas may be suggested, only. They are so closely associated with material things that they are more readily comprehended when the latter is portrayed. Take lesson 1. "The Temple, in the Primary Quarterly. The idea you want to teach the child is that the Lord's house is a sacred place, a place in which to learn of God and to worship him. But you observe the lesson is taught by means of historical circumstances connected with the temple built by Solomon. Show the child a picture of King Solomon, found in any illustrated Bible; a picture of the temple. Then, with these pictures in his mind, you proceed to tell the child what the Lord told that king the temple was to be used for, and the child will remember the lesson because it was impressed—made real—by those pictures.

Take Lesson 5. Show the child a picture of the curtain in the temple. Most illustrated Bibles give some representation of it.

Lesson 8. Show a picture of a priest offering sacrifice.

From these few instances it is seen that pictures may be employed in describing the scenes, manners, customs, personages, etc., associated with the lesson, with the benefits that have been mentioned.

Louise Palfrey, at the Institute, at Independence, Missouri, 1898.

The question of workmen's old age pensions in Belgium is virtually settled. The government will have an act passed giving effect to the idea.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald.—Will you please convey the following Associated Press dispatch from London, of the 26th inst., to your many readers, and in case any of them are disposed to worship at Poison's shrine, or to swear by medical science, remind them that God is against the use of poison in the treatment of the human anatomy:—

"London, Jan. 26.—The Vienna correspondent of the Morning Leader says it has been discovered that the physicians in the free hospitals at Vienna systematically experiment upon their patients, especially newborn children, women who are enceinte, and persons who are dying. In one case a doctor injected the bacilli of an infectious disease from a decomposing corpse into three women and three newborn children. In another case a youth who was on the high road to recovery was inoculated, and he died within twenty-four hours. Many dying patients have been tortured by poisonous germs, and many men have been inoculated with contagious diseases. One doctor who had received an unlimited number of healthy children from a foundling hospital for experimental purposes, excused himself on the ground that they were cheaper than animals."

Science gone mad! Familiarity with the human anatomy makes some men mere butchers. Such acts eclipse the darkest days of savagery.

California has a barbarous vaccination law, and they are attempting enforcement on all school children. They shall not vaccinate mine, even though I'm forced to come to Zion to avoid being branded with the "mark of the beast." Possibly the same law obtains there?

I have joined the Anti-Vaccination League of this city, and since reading up on the subject, canvassing both sides, I am surprised to learn that according to reliable statistics vaccination has done more harm to the world than all the smallpox that ever existed!

Los Angeles is aroused o'er the matter, and the Board of Health is backing down in the face of a popular uprising. It is a mercenary affair, and medical men admit it. In this city alone it means from twenty to thirty thousand dollars for vaccination and a great deal more than this for after treatment. While the danger from blood poisoning and the transmission of the manifold blood diseases such as syphilis, eczema, itch, erysipelas, scrofula, and a general constitutional impairment is very great, yet it is in no sense a proof against smallpox, as statistics show that about two thirds of all the cases which are treated in city pesthouses, have from one to four vaccination scars on their arms. Saints, do not vaccinate your children, if you have any regard for their health. While there has been considerable smallpox here, the mortality has been light. Children are sick all over town from vaccination though, and some have died from its effects.

The Roberts persecution and prosecution is on, and indications are for an unseating.

Notwithstanding I deprecate the bigoted attacks of the sectarian press, still sympathy for Roberts and his constituents is largely minimized owing to their underhanded and equivocal methods. If a crushing blow is now dealt to polygamy it means much to us. Its entire extinction will be a blessing to all.

The time has come to judiciously teach "Gathering." With soulless trusts and financial conspiracies, corruption of politics and politicians in all the ramifications of government, with society largely a greed and lust incubator, it makes our present civilization but a shell, worm-eaten and holey—the meat nearly all extracted and of but little service to humanity. It is but the evolutionary process which is on in the world, and the saints must needs prepare for action when the crisis comes, for come it will, else our whole prophetic calendar has been misleading and deceptive. Combination and coöperation will control the future. It is a question whether the few will combine and own the many, instituting wage-slavery, towards which the world is tending as surely and rapidly as the rivulet trickles its way to the sea, or whether we, as God's freemen, shall combine our interests and, coöperating each with the other, make formidable our strength and, augmented by the divine approval erect an asylum to which all earth's unfortunates can come and find rest to their souls.

Bro. Hilliard is right, God bless him, fearless soul that he is, neither afraid of men nor devils, but consecrated and unswervingly devoted to truth as he understands it; who works not for policy, makes no concessions, swerves not to the right or left, ever hewing to the line. Would that there were ten thousand as fearless as he in the church!

The Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon are more explicit in treating the social problem than any other, and yet no general effort is being made to administer the remedy outlined there. It is time for an awakening. Let us cease quibbling over abstruse questions. Do not worry about whether you are going to live in a separate house with your wife and children in the millennium or not; do not waste breath over preëxistence; it is shrouded in mystery; salvation hangs not on its acceptance or rejection. There is not a living soul who knows what he was before he came here or the station he will fill after he leaves. Future happiness depends not upon past existence, but present action. Time spent midst the "horns and hoofs" of Daniel and Revelation very seldom has a moral, but frequently a bewildering effect. Let us solve the problems of the hour, leaving all these controversial problems for a "more convenient time." Thousands of our people are suffering in squalid poverty because of existing conditions. Many are living in unsanitary, dilapidated, and oftentimes filthy hovels, clad in rags, with hunger, gaunt hunger, gnawing at their vitals. Is it not time that action should obtain looking to permanent relief? There are enough of our people to relieve this distress if but shown their duty. Surplus now, and Consecration soon to follow, should be the watchword.

Those of our people who can farm should be assisted to secure land where the curse of rent and interest will not, octopus-like, consume their all. Landsharks and real estate boomers should be given a wide berth by all Latter Day Saints. This does not apply to the few who are trying to deal honestly with their patrons.

The church should be in a position now to place all who are homeless in a way to the securement of a permanent home. Inducements should be given to artisans, mechanics, and common laborers to migrate to "the regions round about."

Why do not Lamonians introduce means to invite such to locate in their midst? The Ruskin Colony, of Tennessee, have not had half the advantages of Latter Day Saints, and yet they have a prosperous coöperative colony built up in the past few years.

Many coöperative organizations have failed; not because the principle was at fault, but they had some peculiar moral or spiritual standard which became obnoxious, or unequal competition with outside forces wrought their ruin. Coöperation is clearly taught in the law. Why not start a coöperative general merchandise store, including all the producers or necessary elements of the community? Selling goods for profit is not God's plan of equality. The profit system is a leech on society. It will never obtain in Zion. Why not try to unloose its hold now?

If all the saints and friends in and around Lamoni would coöperate as much as possible it would be the first step to business prosperity. Then a coöperative steam laundry, owned by the whole people, and run at a minimum cost, would relieve the sisters of wash-day drudgery and insure cleanliness. A coöperative mill and bakery conducted on a hygienic basis, relegating white, all-starch flour to oblivion, would insure universal good bread, and largely lessen calls on the eldership for administration. Said concern could also manufacture all cereal foods free from adulterations and thus fulfill the provisions of the Word of Wisdom.

A coöperative meat market which would regulate the fattening and healthful selection of all animals used for food would be well. A public bath is a necessity in any town. Why not one in Lamoni? A coöperative creamery and cheese factory would insure pure butter and save the housewives again of another death-hastening task. Then a cannery, broom factory, etc., etc.

"Oh my," says one, "Bro. Williams has gone daft!" Possibly, but I stand in touch with the giant minds of the centuries, and, though much study may have made me mad, follow not me, but these heroes whose intelligence stands unquestioned. If the rich will but coöperate with the poor, and not invest money for personal returns, but general interest, we can commence the gathering. We must build up industry and as far as possible make our people self-sustaining. Now is the time for action. As to the methods by which such things will be brought about, I shall offer nothing now, and while entertaining pronounced views shall await farther agitation. Suffice to say that to insure success it must be under church guidance and patronage.

I am not in touch with this "supper-giving," and "chain-letter system" for furthering the work. In appealing to men's stomachs you may raise money, but it is not God's way. It encourages selfishness, and the gospel was instituted to overcome this and to educate men to contribute; not that interest or returns may come to them, but that good may accrue to others. He who performs a good (?) act for personal returns or glory knows not Christ nor his ways. "This chain-letter" affair savors of extortion, and I am surprised that there are any members of our church who will encourage it.

I would suggest to the college boards that now is a good time for philanthropic work. The Methodist Church makes it possible for indigent students to secure an education. They lend them a certain amount in tuition and sometimes board, with the understanding that when education is completed and a position secured they return the same in cash. Graceland is not overcrowded, and the same management could care for an influx of scholars, with a slight increase in the faculty. Why not say to all the young men of the church, who cannot attend otherwise, "Come! bring a certificate from branch or district officials, or both, certifying as to your good character and that your claims are just." Enroll them as members, give them an education, trusting to their honor to reimburse the college in due time. Such an act would in no way detract from the present income of the college, but would stimulate an increase. The enlarged enrollment would be a good advertisement. The Methodists educate the ministers' children for half price; we cannot afford to do less. Those of our ministers who are in comfortable conditions will not desire any favor; in fact they do not need it, and it should not be conferred; but where our missionaries' families are solely dependent on their monthly salary, the church should educate their children, tuition free, and if those so favored are able to reimburse the church, all well and good; failing, it should not be held against them.

I claim that the ministers' children as well as all children of the poor, have claims on the church till grown. It is the duty of the church to see that all her young are educated.

The salary paid our missionaries is insufficient for supplying a college course for the children, and let the church arise to the dignity of the occasion and make it possible that every Latter Day Saint boy or girl in the world, who desires an education, shall not be excluded from Graceland College. This policy pursued, e'en though the college is but a human institution, it will commend it for divine patronage. If such a course is not pursued, then "taxation without representation" is on us, and such a course was declared un-American a hundred years ago. All grades of church life have been voluntarily taxed to support the college; now let all be beneficiaries.

I am in favor of this institution, not alone for the good it may do now. O no! but America's future is darkening, and, if I read God's revelations aright the time is not far distant when "only in Zion and her stakes" will safety be; then we can fully appreciate the advantage of a college all our own. Let us do our best now to make it one of the foremost in the land, at a time when we will most need one. I cannot give any money, but I can work and pray that the impediments of the past may be overcome; and gaining experience by past mistakes, success be assured ere long.

Greeting and well-wishes to the many, many dear friends in the East and Middle West. True religion consists in those little kindnesses and attentions which many of us overlook. An awakening comes that possibly as ministers we become so accustomed to favors from others that we forget that we are pledged to coöperation in this as well as all else.

Consecrated to the good of Zion, though blundering on.

Yours in love and kindness,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

Editors Herald:—Sidetracked in the sand-hills of Eastern Oregon, a raging sandstorm blowing, and a seven-hours wait before me. O the joys of an elder and the pleasures he does have! Who wouldn't be one.

About two months ago Bro. Chase and the writer came into these parts from Washington, with the intention of working together this winter; but the calls were so many and so urgent that we concluded to separate, he to fill the calls in Eastern Oregon, I to go into Eastern Washington, to which I am enroute. Traveling alone is very difficult for me and a little dangerous, but I always think when I start that I will get there some way, and I always do; I have never been killed yet.

It is hard for us elders to turn a deaf ear to calls for preaching. When an elder of this church will not fill an urgent call for preaching, you may rest satisfied that the difficulties are great. Some say we ought not to travel so much; I believe we should be the best judges about that. An elder who would not travel when urged to do so, as we usually are, will never travel in the "New Jerusalem." Who could withstand such requests, "Brethren, do come and preach for us; it is two years since I have heard a sermon; I am hungry to hear the gospel;" "Don't go by us this year; it is fifteen years since I have heard the restored gospel; I am starving; we will pay your expenses; do come?" We—Bro. Chase and I—are out to "feed" the "sheep" as well as to make new ones, and as long as health is continued and means afforded, we intend to do so; rain, mud, snow, and ice will not prevent.

Bro. C. and I separated at Lone Rock, he going to Mayville, Bro. Goodwin and I to Wagner and then to John Day, a distance of about one hundred miles. Did I enjoy the ride? Well, now, if you think a well-raised Californian enjoys such a ride over these bleak, snow-clad hills, you are mistaken. We know too much for that. But we were made glad at meeting the saints there again, after an absence of ten years. We secured the use of the Advent hall, at John Day City, and held two weeks' meetings that were well attended, resulting in our baptizing three and leaving a number more almost persuaded. At Moon Creek we baptized two more, Mr. and Mrs. Harper; at Wagner, an infidel stronghold, we had a splendid interest; we were the guests of Mr. Warren Carsner, a leading infidel and wealthy rancher. Better treatment could not be given, his house being open and his purse also. I never felt prouder and better in laying our faith before a people. Surely it is a perfect system, for no man can read it. I think I love it better every year I teach it; and to me the greatest proof of its divinity is its justness. It extends to all classes in their varied conditions. Justice; it is founded in such, and is carried forward in love, our ministry and members working not for salaries, which is proof of their love for the people. Even the infidels cannot help admiring our faith. Several have told me they have no war with us, and have asked me to lecture for them at their college at Silverton. I may do so.

On our return to Lone Rock we commenced meeting again, intending to hold over Sunday and then go on; but the interest was so good and the request so earnest for us to continue that we held nine meetings and baptized two more, feeling well repaid. Then we left five almost at the water's edge, fine people. But Bro. Goodwin will soon lead them into the water, I trust.

Bro. Goodwin I found to be a real genial companion and a good, competent man. The most I have against him is his making me walk ten miles through three feet of snow without any dinner. Was I tired? No; I was just about dead.

I will not mention the saints who treated me kindly. I would have to mention them all and that would require too much space.

Well, I wish the train would come, but in patience we must possess our souls. What a splendid opportunity to cultivate that virtue!

As ever,

HIRAM L. HOLT.

Editors Herald:—I am well pleased to hear that our district president, Bro. J. C. Chrestensen, is visiting the branches in the district. We surely need a worthy man to travel almost continually over the district and instruct the saints. We believe Bro. Chrestensen is the right man in the right place.

Saints, let us all do what we can to assist the presiding officers, the district president and others, in moving on the cause of truth in the district. Let each of us keep the beam out of our eyes by doing our whole duty and then prosperity will follow.

Just closed a good meeting at Brushy Knob schoolhouse. Elder James McDiffitt assisted some. It was a new opening, but we made friends to the cause. Hope to see a good turn out at our next district conference at Bruner, Missouri, Saturday before the full moon in February.

DERBY, Ind., Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a protracted effort at the Millstone Free M. E. church; large audiences all through the meeting. Part of the time their minister was present. The very best of interest was manifested. Prospects are grand for a work to be done there. I will return March 8. I need an assortment of tracts to distribute. They will be of great help in that place as well as in other places.

There are so many places to preach at and so few to do the work, I am busy every day and night, preaching all the time, and then can't fill nearly all the calls. Bro. E. C. Briggs has been with me, but was called away to Kirtland, so it now leaves me alone in this part of the field. When I compare my insignificance with his ability, I cannot see how I can do without him as a companion in the Lord. He is ever willing to give advice and instructions to those who are seeking after truth and righteousness. How glad I am that the Lord has raised up such men as he is to be fathers in Israel. His zeal is untiring in the Lord. May his days be lengthened and his eye not grow dim nor his natural forces abated. We praise the Lord for raising up such servants as he is. May we of the younger ministers seek the counsel and advice of one who is competent to give it. Let us all remember to do our whole duty. Each one has his or her part of the work to perform. We should be so zealous in this work that we won't let one day pass without us doing something for the Lord. We are to receive a reward in proportion to what we do, and not for what we believe; so we cannot let a brother or a sister do it all, for if we do such will get all the reward. As we are starting a new year let us see how much more we can do this year than we did last year. Let the watchword be, "Build up Zion."

Your humble brother in the Lord,

G. JENKINS.

SCRANTON, Pa.

Editors Herald:—The outlook for Scranton never looked brighter or better. Our Sunday school is progressing splendidly, all taking great interest in lessons; the Book of Mormon class particularly so. The young people continue their meetings, and during my occasional visits there I have been surprised to hear the remarks and the manner in which they treat various subjects. There are certainly some young men here who, if humble and faithful, will make their mark in church work and will ultimately shine as bright lights. I have been invited by the young people and in their next meeting will give a discourse on "Prophecy in relation to the great latter-day work." Young saints as well as old should be well educated in this respect, as it has a tendency to make them more firm and steadfast in the faith.

We have no organized branch yet, but have what Apostle W. H. Kelley terms "a partial organization," very ably presided over by Elder A. N. Bishop. We still retain our commodious hall, and have increasing congregations each Sabbath evening. Elder Bishop has preached every Sunday during the past fifteen months with the exception of the three months occupied by Elder W. J. Smith; also preaching during the week at Taylor, Priceburg, Dunmore, and Providence. I may say that if I am any judge of preaching, or if I may give the verdict of the people in general, Elder Bishop has given some of the most eloquent historical and spiritual discourses that have ever been heard in this city. Two promising young men have requested baptism and we expect a glorious ingathering when the weather becomes warmer.

Scranton is a city of churches, and is noted for its choral singing. You will remember that this city sent two choirs to the World's Fair and carried off the chief choral prize. Fortunately I was one of the singers. Without egotism allow me to say that we were always par excellent in preaching but now we are also par excellence in music. We have the finest church orchestra in the city, composed of the following artists: First violins, Bro. A. Robertson and Mr. Archie Robertson; first cornet, Mr. George King; second violin, Bro. Ervin Williams; alto cornet, Mr. John King; base viol, Mr. Tom King; pianist, Sr. Lillie Bishop;—all very ably conducted by Professor Thomas King. The music of Sunday evenings is soul-inspiring. A choir has been formed and every Thursday evening Mr. King gives us an hour's or an hour and a half's instruction. It is pleasing to see our young men and maidens cultivating the gift of music, and they are repaid by the gratitude and appreciation of the audience. Many a time I have seen people gather in groups and listen to the melodious strains which floated from above. We expect Elder John T. Davis here, and I think he will be agreeably surprised with the music, which we hope will help inspire him to unfold gospel truths.

Ever praying that God's blessing may rest upon his faithful ones.

Your brother in bonds,

JOHN J. MORGANS.

NORMAN, Neb., Jan. 30.

Editors Herald:—New Year's Day found me near Cairo, Nebraska, beginning a series of meetings in the Bluff Center schoolhouse. I continued till the 22d, during which time I preached twenty-five sermons. The congregations were good from the beginning, and at times quite a number were standing on account of insufficient seating capacity, although the house was larger than the average. The few saints there are doing well considering their condition; they are scattered members of the Shelton branch. They have a Sunday school and regular appointments for prayer meetings. Several are talking of being baptized.

On the 23d Bro. L. Boodry brought me to Shelton and I began meetings that night in the Batterson schoolhouse. The saints here seem to be on the advance, although having quite a struggle in some respects. We must remember that perfection is a high condition to attain and cannot be reached at once.

I preached five sermons while there, and came here on the 28th with Bro. J. F. Lippencott. It was very cold and twenty-five miles distance. However, we were able to begin meetings in the Daneville schoolhouse yesterday. There is some interest, created principally by Bro. J. F. Lippencott, who has done considerable preaching here. He has just returned from a twelve-weeks' missionary tour in Southwestern Nebraska mission with Bro. S. D. Payne. This should be imitated by many other local officers. If we all make an effort to build up this glorious work, success is sure to follow.

I have been somewhat amused by the many comments on "Preach the Word" and the position taken concerning discussions. I have no doubt but what mistakes have been made, as to the time and manner in which the position occupied by the church concerning Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, has been presented, as well as the manner in which some debates have been arranged; but surely mistakes have been made on every other subject presented by man. No one is responsible for those mistakes but the ones who make them. It will not do to conclude that because some have made mistakes on the above-named subjects, that we all will.

If I follow the advice of "Preach the word," I will have to present what God has given me and that will include the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. From the tone of the article one would conclude that the heading should have been "Preach part of the word."

During my ministerial work in the church, which covers a little over thirteen years as a missionary, I have endeavored to learn the best policy to pursue, by observation as well as experience; and my conclusion is, that those who fearlessly present the truth as they feel led by the Spirit are the successful ministers. I sympathize with the writer of the above-named article for the ill treatment he has received of late, but it surely demonstrates that avoiding certain subjects will not make friends.

As to debates, it might do well to consider the following: "Now, behold, this is wisdom; whose readeth let him understand and receive also; for unto him that receiveth it shall be given more abundantly, even power; wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest. Wherefore let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord. Verily thus saith the Lord unto you, There is no weapon that is formed against you shall prosper; and if any man lift his voice against you, he shall be confounded in mine own due time," etc.—D. C. 71:2.

I believe the above, and expect to always proceed as I understand it. I have seen the promise made fulfilled.

I felt a pang of regret when the article on "Succession" closed in the Herald; not because the subject was not finished and all the arguments made by Roberts and Penrose answered, but it had been so interesting and instructive that it was like leaving a friend.

The article on "Gathering" by Bro. Hilliard was a step in the right direction. I have longed to see a series of articles on that subject, and I hope this will soon be realized. I have been interested on that subject for the last year or two more than ever before, and I find saints in the same condition. I am satisfied God is preparing the saints for that condition, and hope in a few years to see a number "organized" according to the "law," living on his "consecrated" land.

I am feeling well spiritually and temporarily, and am thankful to be a laborer for Zion.

LOVELAND, Iowa, Jan. 23.

Editors Herald:—I am trying to do what I can for the Master. I commenced the year's campaign at Honey Creek. Found the saints alive in the work, the majority. They are about to purchase the church building owned by the Advents. Have a nice Sunday school, Bro. Scott Baren as superintendent. Am satisfied of success if they stay with it.

Went from there to Boomer; found Bro. Parish at the helm and everything booming. Held meetings there that week; on account of sickness not a very large attendance. Those who came were interested. I believe good was done.

Came to Loveland the 23d. Bro. J. A. Currie had announced meetings for that week. Our outside friends furnished some splendid singing—Mr. and Mrs. Wight, Mr. and Mrs. Vriend, and others. We were thankful for their assistance. The work is moving along nicely in this district.

Yours for truth,

D. R. CHAMBERS.

A TESTIMONY; A VOICE. WAS IT OF GOD?

Editors Herald:—On New Year's Day I met with the saints to worship the God of our salvation. In the evening something came up in reference to the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, one man present saying he did not believe either. This so disturbed my peace of mind that I went straight home and cried to God in earnest prayer, telling him my trouble and asking wisdom to convince my fellow man of the truth of these blessed books, and also to give me a testimony by his Spirit of their truth, that I might go and declare to all men and know of a surety they are true. I also told the Lord I had always believed them true, but desired to see an angel in order that I might know from the angel's own lips.

After praying a long time and waiting awhile, I went to bed, putting my light out and then commenced to repeat to myself what I knew of the historical part of the Book of Mormon. While I was doing this, suddenly a light about the size of a dinner plate shone over me, and so exceeding bright was it that I have never seen anything like unto it. Instantly the thought flashed through me, "I am going to see an angel," which, strange to say, seemed to send a thrill of terror to my very soul, and at that moment the light went out. But lo! a voice was heard following this, a voice clear and audible, distinct and plain, but which I felt quite at home in hearing, though I have never heard anything like it before or since; and in words of soberness and truth I declare the words of the voice, which were as follows: "The voice of the Spirit unto you is thus: I am pleased, yea, my Spirit is exceeding glad, because you have thought in your heart the Lord would grant your desires. But, behold, thou canst not at this time receive this gift, for thou hast much to repent of; nevertheless, go thy way and testify to as many as thou wilt that the things which are in the Book of Mormon, and also in the Doctrine and Covenants, my holy revelations, are verily true. They are the words of God, and not of man. Therefore be faithful; pray always; for the day speedily cometh when all flesh shall know that I am the Lord, the God of Jacob. Amen."

These were the words I heard while I was yet awake and fully sensible, feeling at the same time the same power present as I have enjoyed so many times at saints' meetings; and therefore with boldness I declare the truths of the books are the words of God; for I know it; and no man can make me think different; thank God. I pray he will bless all my brothers and sisters in the gospel, and speed on his work that Christ may come.

Your brother in bonds,

COALVILLE, Iowa, Feb. 7.

Editors Herald:—The weather has been very cold here with us for two or three weeks, which has made it hard to secure a good hearing at services held week nights, though we have been able to do something.

On the 2d ult. the writer went to Carroll and held services at the home of Bro. Abel Reynolds for a week, having an average attendance of twenty-two persons, and some seemed to be interested and have commenced reading the Book of Mormon.

For two weeks I held services at Auburn, where meetings were quite well attended and excellent liberty enjoyed in presenting the word, though the speaker was far from being well. There is a good, kind people at Auburn, who always make a pleasant home and resting place for the missionaries who are fortunate enough to stop with them for a few days.

At Lake City I made my home with Mr. and Sr. John Byerly and preached eight discourses in their home to their friends and neighbors. Mr. Byerly is a member of the old Christian Church of his city, and notwithstanding revival services were being held at the time by his people, he remained at home and did all he could to make the elder's stay pleasant and his meetings a success. Sr. Byerly was baptized on the 2d of October last, and has a commendable zeal for the spread of the truth.

There are but four or five sisters in Lake City, yet they have organized a Sisters' Aid Society and hold their prayer services weekly. This society kindly gave the writer $1.50 to help him on his way, for which they have our thanks.

Here at Coalville is found a kindhearted band of saints who are always kind to those of the ministry who call upon them and in a financial way are usually a little too liberal considering their circumstances. They never give grudgingly. We are sorry to find our worthy Bro. John Teasdale in such poor health, though we trust it may please the Lord to permit him to remain with the saints for years yet to come.

Obedience to the gospel and a reasonable effort to live the religion of Jesus Christ brings rest, love, joy, and peace to the soul that cannot be found outside of Christ. Truly it is good to be a saint and to feel that one's manner of life is approved of God, yet there may be danger in being too charitable to oneself.

Though our hearts condemn us not, yet God is greater than our hearts and may see faults where we do not. It is indeed a nice thing to be able to render a righteous judgment, even on one's own life and work, for it is often the case that we do not see ourselves as others see us. If, however, those who think we are making mistakes or doing wrong would only be courageous and come and talk to us about it, much evil might be prevented and truer fellowship be enjoyed among the saints and more abiding confidence exist. Too often we are misunderstood and therefore misrepresented. He that offendeth not in word or deed is indeed a perfect man. The writer as well as others may have made mistakes when there was no intention of wrongdoing. If such has been the case and anyone feels that they have been in any way injured by him, if such will come to him and show him his mistake he will do all in his power to make satisfaction. We should try to build each other up and assist one another to stand, and not try to pull down that which Christ died to save.

Ever praying that God may bless and help each and all, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

Editors Herald:—I am here enroute to Anderson and Howell. Left Lansing this a. m. Saints usually well there and in good spirits under the circumstances. They have rented a hall for worship on the business street of city—Washington Avenue—in the Howe Real Estate Building, but like all of our points of interest, feel the late demand—lack of ministers. Surely in the universal demand there must be some supply even in the ministerial sphere of life.

Cold wave slightly relaxing.

Editors Herald:—Having nothing of special importance to communicate I have kept silence, but lest some may think I am either dead or asleep, I ask space to tell your readers that I am still in the faith and at work for the Master.

We are not "turning the world upside down," nor are we having the success in making converts that we could wish; but we feel that we are doing some little good for the cause and are trying to walk so as not to destroy the good our preaching may do by unwise conduct. To what extent we may succeed must be left for eternity to tell.

The work in Southwestern Iowa is not on a boom, just now, nor is there any very bright prospect of a great revival in the near future; but we have some good saints, and some splendid workers in the Sunday school cause. By the way, good Sunday school workers are usually good church workers, too. Anyway, I wish our people were all good Sunday school workers, or good workers in some other line of church work, for there is plenty for all to do.

Working for the welfare of Zion, I am, as ever,

BAXTER, Iowa, Jan. 29.

Editors Herald:—We are a small branch of saints here, trying to let our light shine so our neighbors and friends may see that the work we are engaged in is of God. Last fall the Des Moines district conference was held here, and it was a success. Brn. C. Scott and E. B. Morgan stopped a week and gave us some grand sermons. Come again, brethren, you are always welcome.

Brother J. W. Morgan was here this winter and gave some good sermons; so if we live as we have been taught we will gain the prize that awaits us. I know this great latter-day work is of God, though I have dark hours that come. I go to God in prayer and he has never turned me away.

I would just say that we would be pleased to have any of the elders come and preach for us.

THE TIME TO TRUST.

What is the time to trust?
Is it when all is calm?
When waves the victor's palm?
And life is one glad psalm
Of joy and praise?

Nay; but the time to trust
Is, when the waves beat high,
When storm clouds fill the sky.

When is the time to trust?
Is it when friends are true?
Is it when comforts woo?
And in all we say and do.

We meet but praise?
Nay; but the time to trust
Is, when we stand alone,
And summer birds have flown
And every prop is gone.

What is the time to trust?
Is it some future day,
When you have tried your way,
And learned to trust and pray
By bitter woe?

Nay; but the time to trust
Is in this moment's need,
Poor, broken, bruised reed!
Poor, troubled soul, make speed.

What is the time to trust?
Is it when hopes beat high,
When sunshine gilds the sky,
And joy and ecstasy
Fill all the heart?

Nay; but the time to trust
Is, when our joy is fled,
When sorrow bows the head
And all is cold and dead

All else but trust.—Mrs. S. E. Fry.

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 3.

THE WORK OF CHRIST IN HADES.

If the work of the Savior in man's behalf extended beyond this life, and beyond this world, the Scriptures will certainly make it known to us.

Stephen informs us that the ancient prophets "shewed before of the coming of the Just One" (Acts 7: 52).

Peter says that "the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand of the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow" (1 Pet. 1: 11).

Paul, as already quoted, says that "whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning" (Rom. 15: 4).

And the Savior says: "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5: 39).

You will notice that the above texts all refer us back to the writings of the prophets for evidence on the divinity of the Savior's mission, informing us that those Scriptures "testify" of his "coming," his "sufferings," and of "the glory that should follow" the completion of his work.

Let us now search those Scriptures—first the Old Testament and then the New—and see if we can find where the Spirit testified anything in regard to the deliverance of those who had gone down to hell, keeping in mind that "no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation" (2 Pet. 1: 20). The Prophet Isaiah, speaking of the time when "the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard," and when "it shall fall and not rise again;" and of the time when "the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously," says:—

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited.—Isa. 24: 21, 22.

At the time then when the earth shall "reel to and fro like a drunkard," and shall "be removed like a cottage;" when the "moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed;" and when "the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem;"—at this time the high and lofty ones of earth are to be judged, and being found wicked, are to be "gathered together as prisoners are gathered in the pit," and are to be "shut up in the prison." The Psalmist, speaking of the same event no doubt, says: "The wicked shall be turned into hell, with all the nations that forget God." One says they shall be "turned into hell," and the other says "they shall be shut up in the prison." But Isaiah adds: "And after many days shall they be visited." "AFTER MANY DAYS." Paul tells us (1 Thess. 4: 15-17) that the "dead in Christ" shall be raised from the dead when the Savior shall come, and that they shall "ever be with the Lord." We are also told by the Apostle John (Rev. 20: 5) that when "the first resurrection" shall take place, "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished."

I think we are safe in concluding that the

"many days" of Isaiah, and the "thousand years" of John, both refer to the length of time the wicked are to be "cast into hell," "shut up in prison;" but Isaiah says, "after many days shall they be visited;" and John says, "when the thousand years were expired," and Satan had been loosed out of his prison for a short time, "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God," and he says further, that they "were judged" "according to their works."

Now, has anything been done for those individuals, between the time they were "shut up in prison" and the time when they "stand before God" to be judged, that is to affect their salvation or condemnation? If we can learn from the Inspired Record who is to visit them, and why he is to visit them, we shall be better prepared to answer this question: "Search the Scriptures; . . . and they are they which testify of me." And as Isaiah has told us they are to be "visited," we shall ask him to tell us who is to visit them. Here is his answer:—

I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house.—Isa. 42: 6, 7.

Again, the same prophet says:—

And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth: . . . and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people; . . . that thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Show yourselves.—Isa. 49: 6-9.

They are to "be visited" then by the one who is to be "a light of the Gentiles." When the Savior was brought by his parents into the temple, Simeon, taking him into his arms, said by the Spirit:—

For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.—Luke 2: 30-32. (See also Acts 13: 47; 28: 28.)

The Savior said, "I am the light of the world" (John 8: 12). There can be no doubt then that the Savior is the One who is to be "my salvation," "a light to the Gentiles;" hence he is the one who is to visit "the prisoners" and bring them out of "the prison house;" the One who is to "say to the prisoners, Go forth, and to them that are in darkness, Show yourselves." And the same prophet, referring to this subject again, said:—

The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn.—Isa. 61: 1, 2.

You see from this that the Savior is to "proclaim liberty" to them when he visits them, and he is to "comfort all that mourn." He does not "comfort all that mourn" while they are in this world, for of some it is said that they are "through fear of death all their lifetime subject to bondage;" and if he ever comforts them, it must be after they quit this world: either in the death state or after their resurrection. Which will it be?

Again we appeal to those Scriptures which "testify" of the Savior and of his work for fallen man. The next witness is Ezekiel. He says, in chapter 31: 10-18:—

Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and his heart is lifted up in his height; I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen; he shall surely deal with him: I have driven him out for his wickedness.—Vs. 10, 11.

Take notice that it is because of "his wickedness" in lifting up his heart and exalting himself that the Lord deals with him in this manner, and then read the fourteenth verse:—

To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees stand up in their height, all that drink water: for they are all delivered unto death, to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.

Notice, they all are delivered "unto death," and are gone "down to the pit." That they are in the death state is further confirmed by the next verse:—

Thus saith the Lord God; In the day when he went down to the grave I caused a mourning . . . for him.

The next two verses say:—

I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him DOWN TO HELL with them that descend into the pit: and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, SHALL BE COMFORTED IN THE NETHER PARTS OF THE EARTH. They also went down INTO HELL with him, unto them that be slain with the sword.—Vs. 16, 17.

True, the Lord uses "great trees" with "thick boughs" to represent nations; but he is very careful to tell us whom those "trees" represent. Verse 2 says:—

Son of man, speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude; Whom art thou like in greatness?—Ezek. 31:2.

Then, of the Assyrian, he says:—

Behold, the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon with fair branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and of a high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs.—V. 3.

Please read in connection with this a part of the tenth verse again: "And he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs." This then is Assyria. Hence it was Assyria that was "delivered unto death," that went "down to the grave." It was Assyria that was "cast down to hell," that "went down into hell." But Assyria is not alone, for in verse 16, he says: "When I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit," while verse 17 says:—

They also went down into hell with him, unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his arm, that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen.

It is clear that Assyria is represented here by "his" and "him," but who is represented by "they" and "them"? "They" are the ones who "dwelt under his shadow;" so if we can find who "dwelt under the shadow" of Assyria, we shall know who is represented by "they" and "them." Here it is:—

And under his shadow dwelt all great nations.—V. 6.

The "great nations" then who dwelt under the "shadow" of Assyria, are the ones who "went down into hell with him," and they are the ones who are to be "comforted," with him, "in the nether parts of the earth." By reading the eighteenth verse we learn who one, at least, of those nations is.

To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth: thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword. THIS IS PHARAOH AND ALL HIS MULTITUDE, saith the Lord God.

Pharaoh and all his multitude are represented as being "among the trees of Eden," "with the trees of Eden," and it is declared that they shall all be "brought down" to the "nether parts of the earth," "with them that be slain by the sword"—in the death state. Assyria is represented as being "a cedar in Lebanon," with his "top among the thick boughs," and as being "exalted above all the trees of the field;" and he too is to be brought down "to the nether parts of the earth," "to the pit," "into hell," and is "delivered unto death"—is in the death state.

Now keep in mind that Pharaoh and his multitude are classed "among the trees of Eden;" that the Assyrian is the tall "cedar in Lebanon," towering "above all the trees of the field;" and then read again the latter part of verse 16: "All the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth." Surely then Assyria, Egypt, and all those heathen nations who, with them, were "cast down to hell," are to be comforted in the "pit" or "prison"—not here upon the earth, but down in the earth's "nether parts." As to how this is to be done, we may get additional light by reading Ezekiel 32:18-32.

In verse 18 he speaks of "the multitude of Egypt," and "the daughters of the famous nations;" and says to "wail for them," and to "cast them down" "unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit." Then in verse 21 he says of them again:—

The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell with them that help him: they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword.

Now those people are all dead, and the Lord carefully shows the contrast between their present condition ("in the nether parts of the earth," "in the pit") and their condition while they were "in the land of the living;" thus proving, beyond all cavil, that they are not now "in the land of the living;" but that they are "slain by the sword," among the dead, in the land of the dead, and in fact dead. For proof, please read carefully the following from the same chapter:—

They lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword.—V. 21.

All of them slain, fallen by the sword.—V. 22.

All of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused terror in the land of the living.—V. 23.

All of them slain, fallen by the sword, . . . which caused their terror in the land of the living.—V. 24.

All of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword: though their terror was caused in the land of the living.—V. 25.

All of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, though they caused their terror in the land of the living.—V. 26.

But their iniquities shall be upon their bones, though they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living.—V. 27.

Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword.—V. 31.

For I have caused my terror in the land of the living.—V. 32.

Seven times the prophet tells us, plainly too, that those people are dead—"slain by the sword;" and six times he refers, in contrast with their present condition, to what they had done while they were yet alive—"in the land of the living." Surely then they are in the death state. Are they absolutely unconscious? No; for he says:—

With their terror they are ashamed of their might.—V. 30.

If they were unconscious, they could not be ashamed. Then, too, he says:—

Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord God.—V. 31.

If people, who are "slain by the sword," can "see," can feel "ashamed," and can be "comforted," then we are certainly justified in taking the words of the Savior at their face value:—

Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul.—Matt. 10: 28.

And this, too:—

Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell.—Luke 12: 5.

Those people had been "killed," and then "cast into hell;" but they could still "see," still feel "ashamed," and be "comforted." Remember now that Isaiah says, "After many days shall they be visited;" and Ezekiel says, "The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell," and that they "shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth." But who is "the strong among the mighty"? The Psalmist says:—

Who is this King of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, The Lord mighty in battle.—Ps. 24: 8.

It is the "King of glory" who is "strong and mighty." It is he who is "stronger" than the "strong man." He alone has power to lay down his life, and "power to take it again," hence he alone is able to go into the "midst of hell," there "proclaim liberty to the captives," and "bring forth the prisoners out of the prison." Do you believe it? God has spoken: who can disbelieve? All this too is to be done "by the blood of thy covenant." Please read Zechariah 9: 9-11. In the ninth verse he says:—

Behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.

This makes it clear that he is speaking of the Savior.

In the tenth verse he says:—

And he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the end of the earth.

This is not all. It is consoling to know that his dominion shall be from sea to sea and extend to the end of the earth. But he will do even more than that. Listen:—

As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water.—V. 11.

Notice now that the Lord is to bring those prisoners out of the pit "by the blood of thy covenant," and then read again Hebrews 2: 14, 15:—

That THROUGH DEATH he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them, who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

Read again also Colossians 1: 20:—

And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself.

How is he to "reconcile all things unto himself"? Paul says it will be done "through the blood of his cross." How is he to deliver those who are in "bondage"? Paul says it will be done "through death." How is he to bring the prisoners "out of the pit wherein is no water"? Zechariah says it is to be done "through the blood of thy covenant." There is only one way to come to God, and that is through Christ. "No man cometh unto the Father but by me," said the Savior. People cannot "believe on him of whom they have not heard," hence it is that the "strong among the mighty" shall speak to those heathen nations "out of the midst of hell," and declare unto them the "good tidings of great joy" which the angel brought to the shepherds of Galilee, and "through the blood of thy covenant" bring them "out of the pit wherein is no water."

Now if those "prisoners" are in a pit "wherein is no water," they must be in the same place where the rich man was, "in hell;" for his prayer was: "Send Lazarus that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame." And as the mission of the Savior is to extend to that class of prisoners, and as he is to comfort and deliver them out of the pit, then I see no reason for supposing that even the "rich man" is beyond the cleansing power of the "blood of his cross."

So you see when we "search the Scriptures" which "were written for our learning," we learn from them that the Savior was to do something, even for the dead; that he is to speak to them "out of the midst of hell," and is to "comfort" those heathen nations who have been "shut up in prison" for "many days." And when the Savior came in the flesh, and commenced his ministry among men, he said:—

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—Matt. 5: 17.

And again he said, after his resurrection:—

These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.—Luke 24: 44.

Do you believe that all those prophecies concerning Christ's work for the dead, those "in the nether parts of the earth," are to be fulfilled? If I prove from the New Testament that the Savior did fulfill those prophecies in part, are you willing to trust him in regard to that part of them still pointing to the future? If so, please come with me and we will examine the testimony of those who were "eye witnesses of his majesty." Paul in speaking of the Savior's ascension into heaven, says:—

Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?—Eph. 4: 9.

Where did the Savior go before he "ascended up on high"? "Into the lower parts of the earth." But there is another class of people who go to the same place. David says:—

But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.—Ps. 63: 9.

According to this, it is the wicked who are sent down "into the lower parts of the earth." But the Savior went there too; and as he is righteous above all others, you would hardly be willing to take the position that he went there as a prisoner, the same as the wicked? And if he was not sent there as a prisoner, the same as those who tried to destroy David's soul, why did he go there at all? Peter answers:—

For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing.—1 Pet. 3: 18-20.

In the Revised Version of the New Testament it says, "which aforetime were disobedient," instead of "sometime."

He went down "into the lower parts of the earth" then to preach "unto the spirits in prison." But why should he preach to them? Here is the answer from the same apostle:—

For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they [the dead] might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the Spirit.—1 Pet. 4: 6.

The Revised Version renders this: "For unto this end was the gospel preached even to the dead."

The gospel then has been preached, by the Savior too, "even to the dead," "unto the spirits in prison;" and those "spirits in prison" are to be "judged according to men in the flesh;" that is, according to their works. So in reading those things which were written "concerning me," and concerning the work he should do, we learn that "the wicked shall be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God;" that they are to go "into the lower parts of the earth," "into the pit," away down in "the nether parts of the earth."

We learn also that "the strong among the mighty" is to speak to them "out of the midst of hell;" that he is to "comfort all that mourn," "proclaim liberty to the captives," open the prison doors and "bring out the prisoners from the prison;" that He is to comfort even those who "are delivered unto death," "slain by the sword," those who are gone down "in the nether parts of the earth;" and that, "by the blood of thy covenant," the prisoners are to be brought forth, even from that pit "wherein is no water."

The Savior says that those things must "all be fulfilled." Then the writers of the New Testament tell us that he did shed his blood, that he went down "into the lower parts of the earth," that he preached the gospel "even to the dead," to "the spirits in prison," and that too "that they might be judged according to men in the flesh." Just what the prophets said he would do, the New Testament writers say he did do. So you see it is not so hard to believe the Bible if you once get in the habit of doing so, and are willing to let the Bible speak for itself—allow the Lord to be "his own interpreter;" it is when men set up their own opinions of the Bible, and then insist upon everyone accepting those opinions, that the Bible becomes an enigma.

"But," says one, "you haven't shown us yet that the rich man is to ever get out of hell."

Are you sure he was in there?

"Why, yes; he was in there, of course."

But how do you know?

"Way, the Bible says he was there."

Very well; then we will let the Bible tell us whether he is to come out or not:—

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to his works.—Rev. 20: 12, 13.

Judged how? "According to their works," it says here. Peter says the "gospel was preached even to the dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh;" and as men in the flesh are to be "judged according to their works," we again find the Bible in harmony with itself. Hence we can see why it is that "the strong among the mighty" was to speak to some "out of the midst of hell;" why it is that He went and "preached to the spirits in prison," "even to the dead;" it is because hell must "deliver up the dead;" because they must be brought "out of prison," stand before God, and be "judged according to their works." And as the gospel is the "power of God unto salvation," and as the Savior said "the truth shall make you free," I believe that proclaiming "liberty to the captives," speaking to the nations "out of the midst of hell," and preaching the gospel "even to the dead," to the "spirits in prison," all refer to the same thing; and it seems clear too that the nations being "comforted in the nether parts of the earth," the "opening of the prison to them that are bound," the sending forth the prisoners "out of the pit wherein is no water," and "death and hell" delivering up "the dead which were in them," all refer to the same thing—all referring to the work of Christ for men, and the power of his gospel to save them, even after they have passed beyond this earth life into the spirit sphere; all referring to the reconciliation of all things unto God, the destruction of the last of his enemies, and his final triumph over Satan, sin, death, hell, and the grave.

And after the Savior had laid down his life, after he had gone down into the "lower parts of the earth" and preached the gospel to "them that are dead," and after he had risen triumphant over all, he appeared to John upon the isle of Patmos and said:—

I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, . . . and have the keys of hell and of death.—Rev. 1: 18.

Notice he says, "I was dead." It was by laying down his life, going down into the death state, and then taking his life again, rising again from the dead, that he gained the "keys [the power or authority] of death." And now, having possession of "the keys of death," he can command the dead to arise, and death is powerless to hold them longer.

Just so, when he went down "into the lower parts of the earth" and spake to the captive spirits "out of the midst of hell," hell having no power to hold him, he gained the victory over the "strong man," and came back from the "lower parts of the earth" with "the keys of hell." And now having "the keys" of the strong man's "palace," he can open the prison doors and command the captives to "go forth," and even hell itself must, obedient to his commands, deliver up its captive spirits.

It is sometimes claimed that this is a dangerous doctrine to preach; that it will cause men to go on in sin. But I turn to the Bible and there I read:—

Or despisest thou the richest of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?—Rom. 2: 4.

Is it the fear of hell, the fear of endless punishment, the fear of never-ending torment, that scares men to repentance? If it is, then I should feel like preaching that. But as it is "the goodness of God" that leads men to repentance, it seems to me that there is more good to be done by preaching "the goodness of God" than by preaching the fear of torment. And, what is more, a religion that is born of fear is not to be compared with the religion of Christ, which is born of love. Love for God, and love for our fellow man, is one of the leading basic principles of the Christian religion; hence it seems to me that presenting God to the people as a lovable being, instead of a cruel, merciless tyrant, is calculated to cause men to love God, because of his supreme goodness; and that presenting him in a different light would have just the opposite effect; that is, drive men away from him. Looking at it in this light, I shall persist in preaching "the goodness of God," believing, with the apostle, that:—

All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness.—2 Tim. 3: 16.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of Decatur District:—I trust none will forget their duties as regarding the law of tithes and offerings; there is perhaps a greater demand for means than ever before in the history of the church. While there may be some discouraging features, there are many encouraging ones; and to the live, wide-awake Latter Day Saint, those things that may disturb the minds of some, are added testimonies of the truthfulness of this work; simply demonstrating the weaknesses of men. This is God's work, and he will take care of it in his own way and time. Patience is the virtue we must cultivate. The Lord does not look upon time as we do; but will use men, people, and nations as he can, or as they will permit him. We know the gospel is true, and know also, individually, we will have to meet our own record, and that only in obedience to the whole law, or perfect law, brings us the celestial glory.

Now if I read the law correctly, tithes and offerings are a part, and as essential as any other, as baptism for the remission of sins, or the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, simply a part of that perfect law, to which nothing can be added, nor anything taken away, and still be perfect.

Saints; are we looking at this part of God's requirements as unbiased or unselfish as at the rest, and trying to do all we can; or are we allowing the riches of this world to darken our minds, and become covetous for the things that perisheth, and forget to "lay up treasures in heaven," which will bring us more good in this world and the one to come. I have canvassed the district as best I could so far, and talked to the membership individually, and find many who would like to pay tithes, but have not and think they cannot get the money to pay; but would like to pay in produce.

Now that all barriers of this sort may be removed, arrangements have been made that we can receive wood, posts, butter, eggs, hay, corn, oats, poultry, calves, young cattle, cows, thrifty shoats or hogs that will pay us to feed and turn into money. We will receipt for any of the above at market price.

Anyone desiring to bring wood, please take to Herald Office, and Bro. Frank Criley will measure and receipt for same.

All stock, posts, hay, corn, and oats, take to the barnyards at the Old Folks' Home (scales in the yard), and Bro. Kelley or I will receipt you.

Poultry, butter, eggs, and other produce, take to any of the stores in Lamoni, and get credit checks or due bill, which we will take and receipt you for. If I should be out of town in some other part of the district at work, Bro. Frank Criley or Sr. Clara Cochran Smith, at the Herald Office, will receive them for me and receipt you.

Ab! but says one; I would pay my tithing if it was only used right. This expression we have to meet too often. Brethren and sisters, will this kind of an excuse be sufficient to relieve us of our individual responsibility to God? Are you sure the means are not used as directed by the body in conference assembled? Are we sure we are not listening to "dame rumor," and don't know much about it? Are we not commanded "to do unto others as we would have them do unto us"? If so, won't we give brethren credit of right motives, although they might err in judgment?

I have wondered, sometimes, if those who claim to know thus and so, if they knew God would hold them responsible for not lodging the proper charges and information with the ones God has called to look after that part of the great work. Well; but they won't pay any attention to it! Then haven't we recourse before the body in conference? It is always harmful to talk these things on the street corners and among the enemies of the faith.

May God help us as his covenant children to be wise stewards and faithful to the gospel covenant is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

F. M. WELD, Bishop's Agent.

ELEFSON.—Olie H. Elefson was born July 18, 1827, Telemarken, Norway; was baptized June 7, 1868, at Mission, Illinois, by Elder Thomas Hougas; died January 19, 1899, at Riverside, California, aged 71 years, 6 months, and 1 day. Buried from the saints' church, Mission, Illinois, January 26. Funeral services in charge of Elder Thomas Hougas and David Anderson. Sermon by F. M. Cooper.

THOMAS.—Mrs. Jennie Thomas, born April 7, 1858, died January 26, 1899. She was a great sufferer from a cancer in her head, which finally caused her death. She was a niece of the late Elder Jerome Ruby, and called for the elders a number of times, and was granted the request to die in peace. Funeral sermon by Elder F. A. Smith. She expressed her belief in and desire to unite with the church before she died.

PRESTON.—Lorella Wainwright Preston was born September 11, 1875, at Big Run, Jefferson County, Pennsylvania. Died January 27, 1899, in Sarpy County, Nebraska; was married to Bro. Sidney J. Preston, December 25, 1893; was baptized September 18, 1895, at Council Bluffs, Iowa. She suffered from consumption, but through administration her last hours were made peaceful, and her request was granted for an easy death. She leaves a husband and two brothers, besides many warm friends to mourn. Funeral from the house; sermon by Elder F. A. Smith.

SHIPPY.—Benjamin Shippy, born March 8, 1818, in Canada; died January 21, 1899, aged 80 years, 10 months, 13 days. In December, 1853, he moved to Wisconsin, and afterwards to Fayette County, Iowa, where he died. In September, 1864, he heard the gospel and was baptized, after a membership of many years in the Baptist Church. He was twice married, and leaves a wife, seven children, four brothers, and one sister to mourn. Elder J. R. Sutton preached the funeral sermon. This death was more sad from the fact that his wife had the misfortune to break her limb a few days preceding his death, and could not see her husband after he died.

GANNAN.—Sr. Jennie Trowbridge was born at Flint, Indiana, October 25, 1875; died at her home in same place, January 12, 1899, aged 23 years, 2 months, 17 days. A husband and daughter survive her. She and her husband were baptized August 13, 1896. She remained a faithful, consistent, and honored member until the angel of death waved his scepter and bade her go hence. She was a faithful attendant at Sunday school, ever ready to perform every duty. She died with these words on her lips: "Holy, Holy! my tabernacle is prepared." We weep not as for those who die without hope. May the angel of peace attend her spirit home, and that she may come forth in the morning of the first resurrection. Funeral in the Methodist church by Elder G. A. Smith, assisted by the Methodist minister to a large congregation, which testifies of the respect in which she was held.

OWENS.—Sr. Mary Owens departed this life January 25, 1899, at the age of 75 years, 9 months, 25 days. She was born in Staffordshire, England, in 1823. She united with the saints' church in 1841, and lived a Christian life, believing in the latter-day work until death. She was a subscriber to the Herald from the time it started until her death. She leaves one daughter living at Bethalto, Illinois.

RUSH.—William Rush was born in Ohio in 1832. He moved to Brown County, Illinois, about 1855, where he married Celestine Hatcher, August 18, 1859. At Clearwater, Nebraska, he was called by the "pale messenger" on Tuesday evening, January 31, 1899. He was never a member of any church, but was favorable to the doctrine of the church. His wife has been an active member for years. Funeral sermon by Elder J. B. Williams.

EATON.—At his home, Deer Isle, Maine, December 14, 1898, Bro. William Eaton, aged 75 years and 3 months. He was baptized May 24, 1896, and lived a consistent life. He leaves a poor widow. Funeral at Congregational house, by J. J. Billings and others.

GOODENOUGH.—Calvin C. Goodenough was born March 22, 1824; united with the church September 13, 1887; died January 27, 1899; aged 74 years, 10 months, 5 days. Augusta C. Goodenough was born April 26, 1834; was baptized September 13, 1887; died January 24, 1899; aged 64 years, 8 months, 28 days. Funeral on Sunday, January 29; sermon by Elder John Schreur. They were both buried in one grave.

SMITH.—Sr. Harriet A. Smith died at her home, Marengo, Illinois, January 31, 1899, aged 74 years, 11 months, 2 days. Deceased was born at Waterford, New York, February 29, 1824. While a resident of Ohio, she lived in the house of John Brown, Jr., son of the famous abolitionist agitator. She joined the Reorganization about twenty-four years ago, lived a good life, and is now at rest. Funeral services conducted at the house, by Rev. Gardner, of the M. E. Church; sermon by Elder F. M. Cooper, of Plano, Illinois.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

THE FULLNESS OF THE GOSPEL.

No one can fail to be impressed in reading the New Testament with the high conception which the inspired writers possessed of the divine fullness and completeness of the Christian system. There is a wealth of language and imagery employed to exalt Christ and the fullness of salvation in Him that would seem, in our modern times, to border on the extravagant. To these writers it would seem that through Christ the very gates of heaven had been opened to men, and that those who accepted Him and His proffered salvation already had citizenship in heaven. They had fellowship with God the Father, Jesus Christ the Son, and with the Holy Spirit the Comforter. By means of prayer heaven's richest treasures were accessible, and in union with Christ the believer could accomplish all things.

It must be confessed that we have allowed this high ideal of Christianity to be modified, restricted and impoverished until it appears to be a very different thing from that which the first Christians enjoyed, described and commended to the world. In the first place, we have limited much of the divine power of which we read in the New Testament to the apostolic age, and have marked it "miraculous." In this way we have sought to harmonize the difference between the marvelous achievements wrought by the first generation of Christians and the meagerness of results now in the great body of the church. Another tendency has been to limit the scope of Christianity to a mere section of human interests, which we call spiritual, ruling out the whole realm of man's material wants as belonging to a different category. In the early age of the church this does not seem to have been the case. Christianity was supposed to be an antidote for every ill, and Christ was Savior of the bodies as well as of the souls of men. Another class of thinkers have sought to eliminate the supernatural from Christianity and reduce it to a purely human plane. As a result of all this philosophizing, tampering and trimming, we have an emasculated Christianity as it is received in the minds of a large number of the professed Christian people of to-day.

The result of this process is seen in the numberless substitutes or offshoots of Christianity which have sprung up in modern times to meet certain real or fancied needs, as sprouts grow up about the trunk of an unhealthy tree. We believe that many of these modern religious organizations, including the various schools of "divine healing," "faith cure," and "Christian science," are to be attributed to our impoverished and emasculated Christianity. Men instinctively feel that the Christianity as taught by the different divisions of the church does not meet the demands of the New Testament, nor answer to all the needs of the human heart and body, and they have sought to remedy this difficulty in such movements as those to which we have referred. No doubt many of the advocates of these movements carry their theories to hurtful extremes and give an undue emphasis to the healing of bodily ills as compared with the needs of the soul. And yet, it must be confessed that these needs are very real and that if Christianity has nothing to offer for them, we must not be surprised to see men looking elsewhere for relief. In our judgment, after much reflection upon the subject, the only remedy for these extreme theories and hurtful tendencies is a return to the fullness of divine life and power which Christianity possessed in its original purity.

Much more can be accomplished by prayer than many of us have yet dreamed of. We are in much closer connection with God and with the spiritual world than many seem to suppose. We have not a doubt that if Christians of to-day were to put away their worldliness, their skepticism, cleanse themselves from all impurities and consecrate themselves to the service of God, we should still see mighty wonders upon earth, and such marvels of power as would be most convincing to the skeptics of our day. As long as we are compelled to point men back 1900 years for unmistakable tokens of God's power and presence in the world, our Christian life will be lacking in evidential value. We believe God is working in the world to-day if we only had faith to discern it, and we believe he is able and willing to accomplish wonderful things through his church now if we would put away our carnality, our strife, our contentions, our idle speculations, and follow Jesus Christ in singleness of heart and purpose.

These are not words of fanaticism. We are not pleading for any new pretense or claim of modern miracle-working, nor are we seeking to apologize for any such movements that exist. We are pleading for the restoration of primitive Christianity in fact as well as in form, in power as well as in theory. We believe this is what the world needs. It is in the exact line of the historic plea of our fathers to restore to the world a purer, a simpler, a diviner, a more effective and resistless Christianity than that in the modern church. And this must be realized before the world is conquered for Christ.—St. Louis Christian Evangelist, February 9, 1899.

"Though grief may bide an evening guest,
Yet joy shall come with morning light."

MAIL IS TWO-THIRDS ENGLISH.

Two-thirds of all the letters which pass through the postoffices of the world are written by and sent to people who speak English.

There are substantially 500,000,000 persons speaking colloquially one or another of the ten or twelve chief modern languages, and of these about 25 per cent, or 125,000,000 persons, speak English. About 90,000,000 speak Russian, 75,000,000 German, 55,000,000 French, 45,000,000 Spanish, 35,000,000 Italian, and 12,000,000 Portuguese, and the balance Hungarian, Dutch, Polish, Flemish, Bohemian, Gaelic, Roumanian, Swedish, Finnish, Danish, and Norwegian.

Thus, with only one quarter of those who employ the facilities of the postal departments of civilized governments speaking as their native tongue English, two-thirds of those who correspond do so in the English language.

This situation arises from the fact that so large a share of the commercial business of the world is done in English, even among those who do not speak English as their native language.

There are, for instance, more than 20,000 postoffices in India, the business of which in letters and papers aggregates more than 300,000,000 parcels a year, and the business of these offices is done chiefly in English, though of India's total population, which is nearly 300,000,000, fewer than 300,000 persons either speak or understand English.

Though 90,000,000 speak or understand Russian, the business of the Russian post department is relatively small, the number of letters sent throughout the Czar's empire amounting to less than one-tenth the number mailed in Great Britain alone, though the population of Great Britain is considerably less than one half of the population of Russia in Europe.

The South and Central American countries in which either Spanish or Portuguese is spoken do comparatively little postoffice business, the total number of letters posted and collected in a year in all the countries of South and Central America and the West Indies being less than in Australia.

Chile and Argentina are, in fact, the only two South American countries in which any important postal business is done, and most of the letters received from or sent to foreign countries are not in Spanish, but in English, French, German, or Italian. —New York Herald.

It is impracticable to issue an almanac worthy of the name before the first of January, because there are certain important and necessary statistics which cannot be officially obtained before that date. The Kansas City Journal almanac for 1899, a copy of which lies before us, is one of the best ever issued, and contains a variety of new and interesting features. For a man who has occasion to refer in the course of a year, to some book of reference for public statistics, the platform of parties, the names and salaries of Government and State officials, and returns of the recent election in the several States and Territories, there is no more valuable source of correct information than the Kansas City Journal's Almanac. It also contains data of special interest to women. Among the new features we observe a complete History of the Cause and Progress of the War with Spain, showing every incident in battle, etc.; History of the annexation of Hawaii; Crane's maps of Missouri and Kansas in colors; United States Bankruptcy Law; Record of Current Events; War Tax; Athletics, Racing and General Sporting Record, and a thousand other things of equal interest which a business man has need of for quick and reliable information. Don't fail to send 25 cents to the publishers of the Kansas City Journal and get Journal Almanac for 1899.

WHEN A GIRL SHOULD LEARN TO UNLOVE.

There is a time, I believe, in love's first approach when it is not too hard to bar the door if there is reason why it should not stand ajar. A girl may not have to learn to love, but she can learn to unlove if she must. She herself must be the judge. If the man bring her weakness instead of strength, low ideals and not high ones; if he is indolent or intemperate, or unclean; if she feel that she will be mated down, and not on the sweet and wholesome level on which she lives, then if she is truly wise she draws the bar of the door gently but resolutely and holds it fast. And when her heart aches, as it doubtless will sometimes, half out of sheer pity for him and half because she so misses the sweet accustomedness of his presence, the little attentions, the flowers, the tender look that stirred her so strangely—when her heart aches because of what is gone out of her life, let her hold fast to her brave resolution; let her strong self whisper to her weak, pleading self, "I will be nobly mated, or not at all."—Helen Watterson Moody in the February Ladies' Home Journal.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

We feel thankful that so many of our brethren and sisters have remembered the "Success When United" Appeal. But while thankful for our success so far, we are desirous of obtaining still greater fruit for our labors. There are several well-known men and women in the church who can afford to help us; there are many branches that can reach out hands to steady the Church College; many Sunday schools, many Religios, many Mite Societies, and other such organizations, that ought to be in the vanguard of the contest. Do not neglect duty any longer; be prepared to show your love for the work by your sacrifice. Not everyone that says "Lord, Lord," shall find an entrance into the kingdom of heaven. A financial sacrifice is one that men are usually least ready to make, but there is a certain amount of truth in the old maxim that the depth of a man's religion is often tested by the depth of his pocket; the proviso always being allowed that the widow's mite is as acceptable to the Lord as the rich man's wealth.

We often proclaim the superior excellence of the gospel, and expatiate upon the grand and wonderful influence it exerts over the hearts of those that yield obedience to its principles; but how do our sacrifices, our love for the church, compare with the regard of the sectarian world for their churches, especially when we consider that they have not so much to be thankful for as we have. Our love for the gospel is no myth, our knowledge of its power no trick of the imagination, but we do sometimes get a little indifferent, and think that our brethren are animated by unwise and improper motives in their actions; so we refrain from stretching out the helping hand, and are quite prepared to let them go to the wall. Ah! is this saintlike, in obedience to "Let brotherly love continue?" Then what? "COME OVER (TO MACEDONIA) AND HELP US."

A QUESTION OF VERACITY.

The Deseret News, "organ of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," in Utah, "Lorenzo Snow Trustee in Trust," for January 31, contains the following stricture on the SAINTS' HERALD. This is our apology for so soon noticing the situation in Utah again:—

THE FACTS IN THE CASE.

The Saints' Herald (Josephite) adds to the sum of eastern misinformation concerning Utah by publishing that,

This State has purposely enacted no law by which its citizens may be compelled to live in accord with the provision in the act under which Utah became a State, "polygamy is forever prohibited," or to suffer punishment if they fail to do it.

The Herald people ought to know something on this greatly misrepresented subject, seeing that they have had so much to say about it, but it appears they are as ignorant as the people whom they attempt to enlighten. If not, then they are endeavoring to use the weapons of falsehood, of which they have to complain when attacked by their sectarian adversaries.

The Constitution of the State of Utah not only embodies the provision required in the act under which Utah became a State, but legislates directly to give that provision practical effect and provides for the punishment of those guilty of its violation. This is the clause:

"The act of the Governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah, entitled An Act to Punish Polygamy and other kindred offenses, approved Feb. 4, A. D. 1892, in so far as the same defines and imposes penalties for polygamy, is hereby declared to be in force in the State of Utah."—Article XXIV, Sec. 2.

The law referred to above provides that:

"Every person who has a husband or wife living, who hereafter marries another, whether married or single, and any man who hereafter simultaneously, or on the same day, marries more than one woman, is guilty of polygamy and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 and by imprisonment in the State prison for a term of not more than five years."

It will be seen from the foregoing that this statute for the punishment of persons committing the offense of polygamy has been in force in Utah for about seven years, and that it carries into practical effect the requirement of the Enabling Act. Therefore the statement of the Lamoni Herald that the State of Utah has "purposely enacted no such law" is false in toto. The Deseret News has not only published this law before, but has mentioned it and quoted from it editorially. The Herald has had the Deseret News to refer to, and its ignorance or worse on this question is deplorable to say nothing stronger. That paper has now an opportunity of setting this matter straight by acknowledging its error and endeavoring to make known the truth.

The crusade now being waged by certain religious sects against the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is largely based on the untruth which we have here exposed. Several public journals have given place to the falsehood here refuted, which has been set afloat by the ministers engaged in the present fight against the Mormons. We do not know of one that has been fair enough to give the facts after receiving proof that they were in error. This has been the difficulty in all the controversies on the Mormon question. One side only is given to the public by the pulpit and the press of the country, and the truth is purposely suppressed or concealed, and there have been no more biased and one-sided promulgators of error and concealers of the facts than those periodicals which claim to be religious and profess to be "Christian."

We are quite willing to set any misstatement of ours right, and to acknowledge our error when it is shown us. But before pleading ignorance in this case we propose to present it as it appears to us, and then if the News will show us an error, with proofs, we will make amends.

What we wrote was in reference to a sort of a religious warfare being urged against Mr. B. H. Roberts, because he is a Mormon; it was as follows:—

If these quasi-moralists, half-rabid religionists, would make their protest against the seating of Mr. Roberts on the ground of the fact that he is in practice a law breaker living in actual defiance of the laws and the rules of society of all the States of the United States, except the State which he will represent in congress, if seated; the legislature of which State has purposely enacted no law by which its citizens may be compelled to live in accord with the provision in the act under which Utah became a State, "polygamy is forever prohibited," or to suffer punishment if they fail to do it; then they would be making a protest on a good basis; but simply to object to him because he is a "Mormon" is decidedly lame.

The News quotes the article in the Constitution of the State of Utah which adopts a territorial law enacted in 1892; and then the law referred to as the one by which polygamy is to be punished. But anyone reading the latter quotation will see at a glance that our statement was substantially correct; for while the word "polygamy" occurs in the article unqualified, leaving the meaning to be attached to the term "polygamy" to be the one by which the having and living with a plurality of wives, is indicated, just as Webster gives it in the Dictionary, the law referred to as enacted by the legislature makes the word "polygamy" to mean the act of marrying, more than one woman, forbidding a man having a wife living from marrying another, and forbidding to marry two or more at the same time.

Our statement and contention were that the Legislature of Utah had failed to pass any law by which the "crime of polygamy," the living, cohabiting, consorting with two or more women as wives, is either forbidden, restricted, or punished.

The proper spirit and meaning of the word "polygamy," as used in the terms "polygamy is forever prohibited," are those stated; and Mr. Roberts and every other man in Utah who is now living and cohabiting with two or more women as wives, is guilty of the offense of polygamy, plain, substantial plurality of wives: "A plurality of wives or husbands at the same time, or the having such plurality; usually, the condition of a man having more than one wife." (See Webster.)

That we are not alone in the view we have taken in regard to this failure to enact laws punishing the practice of polygamy, we quote from a statement made by Ex-Senator George F. Edmunds, in the New York Journal. Mr. Edmunds stated:—

The only condition in the enabling act was that the Utah constitutional convention should provide by an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of Utah, that while religious liberty should be sacred, "polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited."

The constitutional convention held pursuant to this act adopted an ordinance in the very words of the requirement I have quoted, and the convention made all the territorial laws then in force a part of the State law.

But in respect to the territorial act of the 4th of February, 1892, defining and punishing polygamy, &c., the convention adopted that act only so far as it applied to polygamous marriages; the effect of which was, following the very words of the act of Congress, to punish only the crime of contracting a polygamous or plural marriage, the proof of which, owing to the peculiar methods of the hierarchy, it had been found almost impossible to make in prosecutions under the acts of congress. This difficulty had led Congress, in the acts I have referred to, to reach the evil by providing for the punishment of unlawful cohabitation.

The Constitution of Utah only prohibits the ceremony of making a polygamous or plural marriage. It does not prohibit the carrying on of polygamous relations. Nor do her laws go any farther, so far as I can ascertain.

If Mr. Roberts' polygamous marriages took place after the State was admitted, he would be guilty of violating the State law in contracting such marriages, but he would not be guilty of violating any State law in living as a husband with all his plural wives, for, so far as I am informed, there is no such law of Utah. In any case, as is true everywhere, statutes restraining crime are of no value unless there be a state of government, executive and judicial, willing and desirous to execute the law and bring offenders to punishment.

It would seem clear from what has transpired, that the government of Utah has no disposition to proceed in that direction.

We were decidedly correct, we believe, in stating that the State Legislature of Utah had enacted no law by which its citizens were compelled to live in accord with the rules of society of all the States of the United States, except Utah; and none to enforce the spirit and word of the act of congress, by which the intention, wish, will, and public sentiment and opinion of the people of the Union were expressed; and none to prevent or punish "the crime of polygamy," according to the common and general meaning of the word.

Incidentally Mr. Edmunds states in reference to the claim made by polygamists concerning supporting of their plural wives:—

The acts of Congress, while they punish cohabitation with plural wives, did not punish and were not intended to punish those who had been in the practice of polygamy for supporting those who had been their unlawful wives, but they did provide for punishing a continuance of the polygamous relation.

One of the standard pleas of polygamists who are now asked to cease polygamous practices, is that they are asked to "abandon their wives and children," to "turn them out," "cast them off," "make them a burden on community," etc. Mr. Edmunds states that such was neither the intention nor the effect of the United States laws enacted against polygamy.

That men who suffer themselves to transgress the rules of society and the laws that should govern in the domestic relation should prevent those whom they inveigle into transgression with them from becoming a public burden, is just and right, and nobody has expected Utah polygamists to be less than just; but it is an absurdity to permit the plea of a right to "support the wives and educate the children," to cover and justify the continuance of the wrongdoing. It would be about as logical for the man whom the law compels to provide for his illegitimate child in bastardy to plead that because he is under obligation to provide for such child and give a reasonable sum to the mother, he is for that reason to be permitted to continue his evil relations with the mother.

Polygamy, as the citizens of the United States understand the meaning of the word, is "a plurality of wives, or husbands at the same time; usually, the condition of a man having more than one wife." This is the sort of polygamy that the HERALD referred to and meant when it stated that the legislature of Utah had purposely enacted no law to prevent or punish polygamy. If the polygamy practiced in Utah is of a different sort than this known in the other States of the Union, then the HERALD may be wrong; but if the word means the same thing in Iowa and Illinois, and the rest of the States, including Utah, then the HERALD was right. And now, if the Deseret News will cite the law of Utah applicable to the practice of living in polygamy, giving the quotation, chapter and section, we will cheerfully lay it before the HERALD readers with the acknowledgment of our error of statement.

As it now stands, so far as can be seen by an outsider, a member of the Mormon Church in Utah who desires to enter into the practice of plural marriage or polygamy, may do so quite easily in this wise: he may visit Idaho, Montana, or New Mexico, and there enter into solemn contract in plural marriage with a woman, he being already married and having a wife living in Utah, or if he be unmarried, may contract with two or more women as plural wives, and at once returning to Utah, may live with the women so contracted with as wives and so continue in the practice of polygamy or plural marriage; for there are no laws on the statute book of Utah by which he could be punished for thus living in such practice. For, while President Snow has said that there have been no plural marriages performed or entered into in Utah, and cannot be without his consent, he does not say that none of the persons heretofore authorized to officiate in plural marriage ceremonies have not performed such marriages outside of Utah, with intended residence and domestic occupation in Utah where there are no laws to interfere.

If what was stated by President John Taylor, if we mistake not, when interrogated on the subject of records in the case of plural marriages, that no records of such marriages were kept, then just such a procedure as suggested above is a very easy process to evade the operation of national objection and laws concerning polygamous or plural marriages in Utah.

The people of the Mormon Church in Utah have professed great regard for the words of Joseph Smith, the Seer of Palmyra; and we think if they would now honor him by giving heed to some things he uttered, the causes for a misunderstanding with the nation would disappear. For instance, it is stated that Joseph Smith gave it as his opinion that congress was supreme as a lawmaking power in the United States; and he is on record as having written:—

In the United States the people are the government; and their united voice is the only sovereign that should rule, the only power that should be obeyed; and the only gentlemen that should be honored, at home and abroad, on the land and on the sea.

Adopting the language of another, he wrote also:—

I hold the surest pledges that, as on one side no local prejudices or attachments, no separate views or party animosities will misdirect the comprehensive and equal eye which ought to watch over this great assemblage of communities and interest, so, on another, that the foundations of our national policy will be laid in the pure and immutable principle of private morality; and the pre-eminence of free government, be exemplified by all the attributes which can win the affection of its citizens, and command the respect of the world.

The congress of the United States represents the people who are the sovereign government. The will of the people expressed through their representatives should be heeded by all the citizens. This is certainly what Joseph Smith meant.

The effort apparently being made in Utah to revive and continue a practice which congress has distinctly legislated against, and which was estopped by Presidential manifesto from the ecclesiastical head of the church, does not present that "private morality" of which Joseph Smith the Seer wrote; and such effort will not, cannot "command the respect of the world;" but will surely bring the name of Utah into still deeper and more open disrepute "at home and abroad," and the public opinion of good men will write "unworthy" opposite the names of those men who have violated the pledge made by the people of Utah to the nation and who persist in pursuing a practice obnoxious to the moral sense of the whole people.

TERRY OPPOSED TO ROBERTS.

MINISTER OF REORGANIZED CHURCH OF LATTER DAY SAINTS PREACHES AGAINST SEATING UTAH CONGRESSMAN.

The Rev. J. M. Terry of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints preached last evening at the church, 1267 North Halsted street, concerning the admission of Brigham H. Roberts to the Congress of the United States, deciding against the newly-elected member. The Rev. Terry represents in Chicago the branch of the Mormon Church which is not connected with the Utah organization.

Various reasons were brought forth against the admission of Mr. Roberts to Congress. Mr. Terry said it was in violation of the laws of the church and of the United States when the Territory was admitted to the Union. Passages from the Bible were quoted showing the attitude of that book on the question of polygamy, while the Book of Mormon was also produced to show the Utah branch of the church acted in opposition to the precepts of the inspired book.

The sermon ended with an appeal to those in authority to refuse the newly-elected member his seat in the national body.

The foregoing is from the Chicago Tribune of February 13, and is one among several notices of Bro. Terry's effort, published by Chicago papers. One report represented Bro. Terry as showing that Joseph Smith the Martyr was clear of any connection with the doctrine or practice of polygamy.

Peoria papers show that Bro. J. C. Crabb is doing good work in a similar line in that city. Other notices also reach us concerning efforts of the brethren to place the Reorganization directly on record against the seating of any polygamist.

The resolutions adopted by the Decatur district will be found in its conference minutes, this issue. It will be seen that they are offered upon moral and not upon sectarian grounds.

THE death rate from influenza has increased rapidly in Europe, and the disease has appeared in severer form in America. It should not be forgotten that "it is written," "The saints shall hardly escape;" also that, "The just shall live by faith." It will require a close walk with God if we are to be counted worthy to stand and the destroyer to pass by us, as stated in the Word of Wisdom. Query: Should God's people await punishment to whip them into subjection, into obedience to him, as did Israel of old? Or should our service be voluntary, because of the law "written upon the heart"? Are we under the covenant of death written upon tables of stone and its observance to be enforced by summary visitations upon the transgressors, as school children in the economy of God? Or are we the children of faith, called to be co-workers under the "new" and "better covenant"?

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

A reading and analysis of Hebrews, chapters 2 to 4, studied in connection with the experiences of modern Israel from 1830 to the present, would furnish us all a profitable theme for thought and action. When God's people rise to the occasion, God will move in behalf of our deliverance and that of Zion. All dispensations have had their times of opportunity. Ours is the present—the time for faithful action, that the future may be made secure in every respect, personally and collectively.

THE CONTENTION.

The Bishop of Manchester declares that religious services are not nearly so well attended as they were twenty years ago. Will the Church of England be disestablished and the High Churchmen rush into the Roman Catholic communion to find supposed security in her high claims to "authority," made effective to some by the mystery and pomp of her endless ceremonials and elaborate ritual? These things, with her antiquity and high claims to succession, give the Church of Rome advantage over decaying Protestantism, with many.

The people need the light. The restored gospel has appeared to point the path of safety and truth—the way to God and salvation. It will not surprise us if the Church of Christ stands face to face with Romanism in the conflict, the lines of which are daily narrowing and being simplified, in due time. Light and darkness have ever contended for supremacy, and it is scarcely probable that such severer aspects of the conflict as are referred to will not be upon us at no distant day. Protestantism has been met in a general sense for years—why not Catholicism, in its time? It is an earnest contender for supremacy as a system of faith in our modern civilization, and true to its instincts will make the contention.

The conflict has waged with increasing vigor and has been continued with augmenting force and skill since 1830. It is yet upon us, and, probably, its strongest forces remain to be marshalled. The enemy has not relinquished his hold or claim upon the spiritual and temporal empire of the world. It is his part to resist every purpose of the Christ and in so doing to marshal his hosts, seen and unseen, and to make use of methods at variance with the spirit and methods of Him who is "the truth." While the stone is smiting the image and the latter is to fall and fail, the work of smiting is to be and has been a progressive, a continuing work. It has been and is a war that calls for valor, also for every characteristic of the Christlike nature. We cannot succeed by employment of other agencies. We shall fail in proportion to our employment of contrary means. Every year, every day of our experiences, demonstrates the truth of what God has said concerning the upbuilding of his work and the establishment of Zion; viz.: "It must needs be done in mine own way." This because God's ways are "true, and righteous altogether."

DAMAGING, IF TRUE.

The Chicago Tribune, for February 11, '99, credits Mrs. Emeline Wells, of Salt Lake City, Utah, with a statement or two which are very damaging to the supporters of the plural marriage system:—

I presume I have a task ahead of me at Washington, in convincing the council that polygamy does not obtain in Utah to the extent many have been led to believe, and that it is being sternly discouraged by practically all the better element of the Mormon women. The truth is the people of Utah have kept the promises they made. It would be idle, of course, to deny that polygamy is not practiced, but it obtains to only a small extent, and is confined almost exclusively to the lower classes.

Congressman Roberts' case is responsible for most of the misunderstanding regarding the extent of polygamy. He is thought by many people to be living a polygamous life, but it is not true. He has more than one wife, it is true, but he lives with only one, and simply supports the others, whom he married under the old conditions. The Edmunds law does not provide for taking care of these wives, and Mr. Roberts, as is the case with many others, feels it his duty to maintain them.

How does Mrs. Wells know that Mr. Roberts lives with only one of his wives, if he has more than one?

It is pleasing to learn that polygamy is being discouraged by all the "better element of the Mormon women." It should be. Not one of them should ever have countenanced it a moment. It would have been better for any and all of them to have revolted as it is said in Utah that Emma, Joseph Smith's wife did. It would have saved the church much of evil that followed.

If as Mrs. Wells is reported to have said the practice is "confined almost exclusively to the lower classes," where do such men as are acknowledged polygamists and leaders in the church come in? Rather hard blow that, Mrs. Wells!

MORE WORLDLINESS IN CHURCH WORK.

A brother sends us the following with the suggestion that we make "some nice editorial comment" upon it.

Editors Herald:—I inclose a clipping from an Iowa paper which I think would make good reading for the Herald with some nice editorial comment added. It shows the trend of popular Christianity so-called. Will you kindly publish same:—

The dancing and card party given by Mrs. Duchack at the Delmonico Hotel Friday evening for the benefit of the St. Mark's Guild was pronounced by those who attended the most enjoyable event of the season. That it was a success, socially and financially, goes without saying. The music furnished by the Mandolin orchestra was of a high order, as was also the refreshments served by the ladies of the church. About $60 was realized from the enterprise, the side show, in which those heavenly infantile twins, 'Gene Cain and Fred Gregory, were exhibited to the vulgar gaze of the morbidly curious at five cents a gaze, alone netting six dollars. We did not learn the amount of the "rake-off" from the card tables. The church people are very grateful to Mrs. Duchack for her magnificent generosity, also to various other people, whose donations contributed largely to the success of the scheme. Some dissatisfaction is expressed about the orchestra's charge of $15, claiming that it is excessive; the boys aver, however, that it is moderate, and less than their regular price. However, this always happens after a dance where there is no iron-clad contract with the band. There is a certain class of people in town (the writer is in the class) which has old-fashioned notions concerning the propriety of churches conducting restaurants, raffles, and—and dances. These people believe that if there were less sensationalism in the pulpit—less politics and more of the gospel of Him who died on the cross—there would be no need of these catchpenny schemes to raise money for the purpose of putting a red carpet on the sanctuary floor, a pea-green dado on its wall, or a gilded weathercock on the spire. Such people are behind the times, but in due course of time they will become used to these things and will be in no manner perturbed over the announcement that the Epworth League will hold a grand tournament of crap-shooting (in emulation of the soldiers who shook dice for Christ's garments) or that the Christian Endeavor Society has concluded to give a three-days' race meeting at the fair ground, proceeds to be used in buying singing books for the Sunday school. It is merely a matter of how one looks at such things, and it's just possible that these people are suffering from astigmatism.—Jackson Republican, Maquoketa, Iowa, Jan. 24, '99.

We have nothing "nice" to say of such things. However, we may add that the article furnishes another object lesson in favor of the opinion that if legitimate lines of effort do not succeed, it is worse than useless to resort to illegitimate or "faddish" methods. It is regrettable, but nevertheless true, that even among some of our own people there is a disposition to invent or substitute experiments and unsound methods of a worldly character for sound and reliable policies. Success can only result from the application and development of sound principles. If we do not succeed in awakening interest and in maintaining it upon sound and legitimate lines, the fault is not with our principles, but results from a failure to work as we should. If people fail to work in harmony with sound policies, it is folly, if not childish, to say the least, to resort to mere expedients or to such methods as may "please the fancy" for a time.

Those who would build for God must build with sound materials—with truth in principle and in method. To build in any other way is to build with untempered mortar; to invite disaster, and thus injure ourselves and the cause.

Let us take warning and build solidly, or not at all. God will not approve nor set his seal upon the work of human folly. Latter Day Saints should have learned these lessons by this time; at least so we think.

NOTICING the subject matter of Bro. William Strange's letter, the action of the church as a body on the B. H. Roberts affair, we call the attention of the HERALD readers to the fact that there is to be no session of conference next April in which an action of the body could be had. And if there was, as Congress will be convened a full month before the conference would, it would be quite too late for action, even if there was to be a session. The subject is not of such importance as to justify a special session being called to meet early enough to act before congress sits.

Besides this, the HERALD has in several articles placed the position before the people; and the different branches and districts of the church are one by one passing resolutions and putting their members on record.

It seems to us that this is quite enough.

Another thing: if Ex-Senator G. F. Edmunds is correct in his view that Mr. Roberts cannot be legally prevented from taking his seat, because of constitutional provisions; and that he can only be expelled the House after being seated, the action of the branches and districts will be quite as effectual in showing congressmen and senators the temper and sentiments of their constituency as the action of the general body would be, and to our thinking more so; for the reason that the action of the general body would not seem to represent such a varied constituency as the action of the several congregations all over the land would.

For this reason we are not in favor of action by the body. It is impracticable.

On account of sickness and increasing disability from advancing years and physical infirmity, and by reason of his own request to that effect, Bro. Albert Haws now laboring in Missouri has been released from his field to return to his home in California. Those who may have been looking for his labors in localities will please take notice of his release and the reasons therefor.

Bro. F. G. Pitt writes forwarding an English newspaper with an old slander concerning early happenings, or things that never happened at Nauvoo, in which the name of Joseph Smith is mentioned in the manner in which the enemies of truth have become accustomed to misrepresent him. Bro. Pitt asks if we have the same story to meet in America. Yes, over and over again. It is an old one that has gone the rounds quite often and until the American public pays little or no attention to it. Bro. Pitt reports Brighamite elders to be "thick" in England. Bro. Heman C. Smith's reply to B. H. Roberts was timely and is proving helpful in meeting them. Be patient, Bro. Pitt, the present agitation will do much to place the work in its proper light before the world.

The Mount Ayr, Iowa, Record, in its issue of February 2, republishes a lengthy article from the Washington Post, written by Howard Tedford, a citizen of our neighboring city—Mount Ayr—and one of the proprietors of the Record, in which Mr. Tedford makes just reference to Lamoni and the faith of the Reorganized Church, especially its attitude toward the seating of B. H. Roberts as a Congressman. We thank the writer for his good words. Mr. Tedford says of the saints of Lamoni: "They are known as first-class citizens, and are respected all over the county."

Bro J. C. Clapp has been contending with lagrippe, blizzards, and perverse disputings of men, in Kentucky of late. He is doing what he can under such adverse conditions. We join him in looking forward with pleasure to the coming of spring.

A copy of the Youngstown, Ohio, Telegram, of February 17, reaches us, in which we find an account of an interview with Bro. G. H. Hilliard on the "main question" now agitating the public mind—Mormonism, so-called, and the dying struggles of the twin relic. Bro. Hilliard strikes stalwart blows in his statements to the reporter, as is usual with him. It certainly looks as if all not founded in truth must give way under the present strain and agitation. This is as it should be, and the Reorganized Church does not fear such an issue.

FAMILY GOVERNMENT.

A book upon the care and culture of children would scarcely be deemed complete without a chapter upon this topic. Yet one seems scarcely necessary. If the principles enunciated in the foregoing chapters are fully carried out there will be very little "governing," in its technical sense, to do.

But so long as it remains true that "to err is human," no principles will be perfectly put into practice; there is an immense amount of human nature, with its kinks and its foibles, in each of us, and children have their full share. They have a fashion of upsetting the most beautiful theories in most unexpected ways and places. In family life, as in the wider world outside, "it is the unexpected that happens;" to govern well we must be always ready for the unexpected, and not be thrown off our balance when our pet theories are overturned. Lay the foundation so broad and deep in principle that it cannot easily be shaken, then rest on this foundation, and do not worry if some of the fair superstructure you have builded thereon is pulled down by childish hands. And do not attempt to govern your children just as Mr. A. or Mrs. B. govern theirs. No two families, no two children, can be governed alike, for no two individuals are alike. Remember, "each human soul is a peculiar thought of God," destined to live its own life and develop its own individuality. Thank God for this individuality with its wondrous possibilities; trust him for help in developing it, and take courage in the work wherein you are laborers together with him.

It is said that the object of the true teacher is to render himself useless; that is, to lead his pupils up to a plane where they no longer need his services, because they have learned to go alone. A similar truth holds in the family. In true family government the highest end and aim is to enable children to govern themselves. Never forget this first principle, nor allow it to be contravened. A few short years measure the duration of your absolute control over the child; all his life, both in time and in eternity, he must govern himself, or be wretched and comparatively useless. Hence your constant aim should be to teach him to control himself, to order his own life in accordance with the law of right. In order to do this, his conscience must be educated to be quick in discerning the truth and authoritative in enforcing it; his will power must be strengthened and rightly directed, and his passions must be brought into subjection to conscience and will.

Keeping this foundation principle in view will prevent absolutism in family government, and will lead to that ideal home life of which Mrs. Jackson tells us, when the mother could truthfully say, "I never laid a command upon my child simply because I am his mother." Every command bore the impress "because it is right;" instead of the impress, borne by too many parental commands, "because I choose to have you acknowledge my authority." If all commands bear the sign manual of right, there will be no trouble about preserving authority; the child will never doubt nor deny it.

This summer I had the pleasure of spending a week or two at Hotel Irving, Lake Bluff, with "Pansy" (Mrs. Alden), her husband, and son. They slipped in very quietly, unannounced, seeking a few days' rest among strangers, where they thought themselves unknown. But they could not be hid; and the one thing that betrayed them more surely than any other, was the beautiful relation evidently existing between mother and son. It was just the sweetest chapters of the Pansy books lived out before our eyes. We no longer wondered that her books are such a blessing in every home into which they come. There was no ostentatious show of affection, but every look and word and act of Raymond showed his knightly devotion to her, his respect as well as admiration for the dainty "little mother" whose head came no higher than his shoulder. The beautiful family picture was completed by the presence of Dr. Alden, tall, stately, and learned; but not so stately and learned as to have grown beyond the height of his wife's heart and head, nor out of companionship with their noble boy. Raymond evidently obeyed them "in the Lord," not because he had been taught "implicit obedience" to arbitrary authority, but because he had been trained to do the right because it is right.

The first requisite for such government of children, is the ability to govern yourself. There is deep philosophy in the Wise Man's utterance, "He that ruleth his own spirit is better than he that taketh a city." Ruling one's own spirit is essential to the taking of any stronghold; emphatically is this true of the citadel of Home; here each failure to rule your own spirit is painfully manifest. It marks a weak spot in the barricade which the sharp eyes of children are sure to detect.

Many poorly governed households are so because of the parents' failure to govern their own spirits. The underlying causes of this failure are many and varied, sometimes hard to find. Often, lack of self-control is due to overwork or ill-health; with nerves all unstrung from either cause it is well-nigh impossible to "possess our soul in patience" amid vexations and the uncomfortable surprises of family life.

Again, the trouble often arises from or is intensified by, the use of alcoholics and tobacco by the father, or inordinate tea and coffee drinking by the mother, as these agents destroy the equipoise of nerve so essential to self-control. Or it may lie in your morbid sensitiveness; in common parlance, you are "too thin skinned." Petty things rasp and annoy you beyond your power of endurance; the sharp word springs to your lips; perhaps the unjust, stinging blow is struck which a moment after, you repent bitterly.

For this defect we know no better remedy than the one recommended by Hannah Whitall Smith: "Put on your rhinoceros' skin." The first step in the process is to feel your need of a thickened cuticle; to realize that your thin skin is a defect and not something of which to be proud. Anything is a defect which makes us irritable and unjust, and this certainly does; indeed, the same may be said of overwork and ill-health. And this super-sensitiveness, as we saw in a preceding chapter, is but etherialized selfishness. But how to be rid of it, and don the rhinoceros' skin, that is the question? Well, firmly resolve that with God's help you will not be annoyed by things that have no right to annoy you; when you do this, you will be astonished to find how many such things there are. Resolutely turn your mind away from these annoyances, instead of brooding over them, as we are apt to do. You may not, at first, be able to stop thinking about them, but if you stop talking about them, you will soon find yourself ceasing to think of them.

If your nerves are unstrung, and thus your equipoise disturbed, by any indulgence, look the fact squarely in the face, and do not flinch from the duty which is made plain to you. When you undertake to do this duty, do not give up in despair because success is not at once assured. You must not expect to become an angel at once upon giving up the hurtful indulgence; you will be anything but angelic while the struggle with appetite is going on. "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." The diseased nerves will torture you by their wild demands for their accustomed narcotic; and you will be sorely tempted to give up the fight; but persevere, and with God's help, the end will crown the work by giving you the mastery of yourself. This self-mastery will be an undreamed-of aid in governing your children; it will make them feel that you know how to sympathize with them in their struggles to overcome easily besetting sin, and will win their respect as for one that overcometh.

My father, at his conversion, gave up at once and forever, the use of tobacco as a habit unbecoming a Christian; this was years before my birth, but the story of his struggle and his triumph, as told me in my childhood, impressed me as scarcely anything else ever did; I gloried, and do glory, in the strength of character which thus triumphed, while I learned, as in no other way, the need of a Higher Power without which I was made to feel the victory would have been impossible.—Childhood: its Care and Culture.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Mary Clark desires the prayers of the Prayer Union. She has been a great sufferer for more than two months, part of the time very low, nigh unto death. I would like to be remembered also, as I have been afflicted for the past three months.

M. A. TWADDLE.

I desire the prayers of the Union in behalf of my afflicted husband, that he may be healed of dropsy. He has been healed once of the same disease of ten months' standing. He has been suffering very much from the second attack the past six months. Also that his feeble companion may receive strength to endure the great struggle.

INCLUDED in the report of the Commissioner of Education is a chapter of about seventy-five pages on the Sunday schools. It is bound in a separate form and may be had by addressing the Commissioner of Education, Washington, D. C. It is free. This report of 1896-7 is the first instance of our government making any report of the Sunday schools, although several pages of a previous report were devoted to parochial schools. We would like to see this report in the hands of many of our Sunday school workers. It is of exceptional value both for its numerous quotations from authorities, old and new, and its extensive citation of books, pamphlets, and articles on the subject. We were, and venture the assertion that many of our readers will be, surprised that so much has been written on the subject of religious instruction. It contains many points of great interest to those engaged in Sabbath school work. Many opinions as to what the various denominations think proper to teach and how to teach it are given. Plans for conducting the work in the various associations are described, and other items of equal value. Send for one.

A SISTER writes: "We have a class of eight children of from three to seven years of age, and all unable to read. Two methods have been suggested for their instruction: First, obtaining alphabetical books and teaching them to read, and in after time they will learn of the gospel for themselves. (The majority are on this side chiefly the elderly portion who were themselves taught to read in the Sunday school.) Second, teaching to be done orally, with the blackboard and such other objects as an apt teacher would obtain to appeal to the eyesight of the child. Drills, songs, and repetition collectively. This class has the privilege of a separate class room.

... Will you please to inform us which is best? Or could you give us another method?"

It seems there should be no room for doubt as to which would be the preferable method to follow. There is but little in favor of the former and everything in favor of the latter, with a possible modification or two. There is no time in the Sunday school to attempt to do what the public school should and will do. There was a time, when these "elderly people" were young, that the public school did not exist in many places. To them the acquiring of a little knowledge meant a great deal. But now they are few indeed who do not have easy access to public schools or kindergartens. These are the places to teach reading. Remember that the Sabbath school has but one-half hour one day in seven, hence cannot spend much time in anything but its own line of work.

The prime object of the Sabbath school is to teach the simple truths of the gospel with a view to the conversion and improving of the moral and spiritual being. Of other matter, only as much should be taught as is necessary to a proper understanding of the gospel.

The fact that a child cannot read is no serious "drawback" to the work of the teacher. Fully one-half of the infant classes or the lower primary classes of our whole association are made up chiefly of children who cannot read or read so little that it is practically the same. And the primary teachers all over the country are doing excellent work with the lessons of the Primary Quarterly. They realize the fact that in early childhood is the best time of life for righteous impressions to be made; and to waste this time in gaining knowledge that was purely worldly and which could be gotten better elsewhere, would surely be a mistake.

We do not know either the sister or the class, but we imagine from the brief and modest description of it that we should find there one of our model infant classes. Lessons taught orally, blackboard attractions, objects, drills, reviews, etc., etc., are some of the very important features of a model class and a separate room for recitation adds greatly to the success of the recitation. The sister uses the "model" plan. But has those around her that favor the former plan. We trust that they will see the better way and that she will continue as well as she has begun with such improvements as time and experience with prayerful determination will help her to make. And may the Lord bless them all.

THE Hon. William T. Harris L. L. D., in his Report of the Commissioner of Education says:—

"The true importance of religious instruction is coming to be better understood among scientific and philosophical thinkers.

"The secular institutions of man are organized as a family, civil society, and the State. They provide for education, the procurement of the necessities of life, and the establishment of justice. But all these presuppose a deeper ground in the ideal of the origin and destiny of man and nature.

"More than anything else the Sunday school has contributed to the sustenance of the church."

The above is worthy of thought by the church, and is it true that more and more are the secular schools excluding such education as relates to the "origin and destiny of man and nature," the more important to mankind becomes such institutions as give instruction upon these subjects; and as the church is the institution ordained of God through which this instruction is to be given to the world, and the Sunday school is the chief contributor to the sustenance of the church, how carefully should the church guard the interests of the Sunday school, and give it that encouragement possible, that its sustaining powers may be enhanced.

No time can be better employed in seeking to advance the interests of the church than to be actively engaged in Sunday school work. No leading church representative, either local or general, can more effectually discourage than to manifest an indifferent disposition to the Sunday school. No minister can more effectually use his time and influence than to be a practical Sunday school helper.

To say the Sunday school is a good thing, a great help to the church, and then not be seen in its sessions, taking a humble part, is destructive of his influence as a church worker, for the reason that it is decided that the church member who is always saying the church is a good thing and never in attendance at its services, is not consistent; and many even go further and say that the church member who does not take an active part in the services, although present most of the time at the services appointed, is on the background, cool, or indifferent, etc.

Consistency should characterize our efforts if we expect to do effective work.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Feb. 7.

Editors Herald:—While you are pent up with cold, I am here where grass grows and water runs even in midwinter. Have been here over two Sundays. We have the use of a chapel here, and I believe some hundred or more on the branch roll of names, but no elder to look after them. "Pastors!" "pastors!" seems to be the crying need for parts of California just now, not altogether in the sense though of having some able, eloquent, elder who may draw a crowd for Sunday; but a more thorough work on the part of local officers, such as priests, teachers, and deacons.

I am not in favor of the idea that some smart elder may be sent to do the work of all other officers in a branch. It is hardly the design of the law for one man to have on hand such an amount of "salt" that he can carry around and distribute to all the others. To have salt within themselves would temper the "body" much better. We don't want to follow the example of ancient Israel in order to be like other nations. They "must have a king;" so we don't want to be so much like others that we must have a pastor in the shape of an able preacher who is to do the work of all the other branch officers—do we?

Latterly we have been hearing such talk as this: "I can't visit because I have to work at my daily employment." "If my family was cared for and I had nothing else to occupy my mind and time with I could attend to my duty better," etc. I can look back to my home district to the time when all the men who lived in the district were spending their time at temporal labor, and it was only occasionally that a General Conference appointee came along. The work prospered and grew under the activity of the local laborers.

Have the provisions of the law in section 17, Doctrine and Covenants, become obsolete? Probably I better not say any more on this line or some stalwart will be after me.

Just now much is being said in the daily papers about Roberts, the polygamist, and the State Legislature has passed resolutions to be sent to the National Legislature protesting against his taking a seat in Congress. Your recent editorial on the subject is excellent and ought to be sent to the leading dailies, some of whom would doubtless publish it.

I notice in the Deseret News, of January 27, an editorial comment on you that might be looked after. [It is "looked after," see present Herald.—ED.] During the winter it became necessary for us to issue a public challenge in the San Francisco papers for the Utahites to meet us in public debate, but with characteristic cowardice they refused. I am about certain that consciousness of their weakness is the main cause why they evade the issue, for whenever they think they can make a point through some miss of ours they show great zeal and, bravely, spasmodically, as for instance: I delivered a discourse on their heresies in San Francisco, and among the things said was that Brigham Young taught that Jesus Christ was not begotten by the Holy Ghost, thereby making a flat contradiction with Matthew 1:18, 20. The reporter misapprehended me and made me to say that they did not believe in Christ. Elder Nye made a reply in their hall to what was said in the paper, but on the major part of my attack he said nothing. Some of us went to hear him, but when I reviewed him afterwards they were conspicuously absent. I was told by the young elders that he could clear up the Adam-God matter satisfactorily. My training as a genuine Latter Day Saint prompted me to hear both sides, (Their, as pseudo saints, causes them to only hear one side,) so I attended his meeting. Well, he cleared it up by garbling his text and entirely omitting his major premise; viz., "He is our Father and our God and the only God with whom we have to do." No wonder their work is called the "veiled gospel." Likely by the time the Roberts episode is over some of the crookedness will be revealed on the housetops.

Our work here in California is moving some, probably as well as elsewhere, considering the labor performed. "Some will heed, and some will scorn it;" can't expect grammar school results in a primary grade. The prize being at the end of the race, it is hard to tell who is going to get it.

There seems to be, among some, quite a spirit of gathering, an element I am not accustomed to, as the saints on the Eastern seaboard are not so much concerned about that subject, although if hard times continue and plutocracy increases we shall all be suffering the state of the proletariat until it becomes unbearable and will feel like saying:—

"O Zion, when I think of thee,
I long for pinions like the dove!"

Wonder if the pressure of the times will not act as a stimulus to make us feel sort-of Zionward subjectively as well as objectively?

Since I have been in this mission I have been confined somewhat to old beaten tracks, with the exception of a trip to Tolumne County, where at Jamestown, known among the miners as "Jintown," and also at Quartz, I preached some and baptized a few, among them Ira Phillips and wife, and some of the family of Bro. DeSallier and "Tom" Davis. They were the result of these local brethren's labors. "Jintown" is a typical mining town of the days of '49; about four stores and twenty-five rumshops.

A good work has been going on in the northern part of the State under Brn. Blair and Barmore. Now that Bro. Blair has gone east Bro. T. W. Chatburn is up there.

Say, do you remember of reading in "Jots by the wayside" how the jotter had received a present of a broncho pony and how gleeful was the jotter at the prospect of riding over hills and dales of his mission, and then he would "turn the broncho over to the Bishop as tithing?" The scene changes; broncho and jotter had an unpremeditated separation, a dent in Mother Earth caused by contact with the rider's anatomy, a couple of ribs put on the bias, broncho gone, saying, "No tithing for me." Moral: Missouri tenderfeet must not become too familiar with Rocky Mountain ponies!

We are anxiously awaiting the coming of Missionary-in-Chief, Bro. Griffiths. May the dove of health descend to his home ones so that he may be released therefrom.

With esteem for all Zion's busy workers, I am, most sincerely,

Yours in the conflict,

F. M. SHEEHY.

MACON, Mo., Feb. 12.

Editors Herald:—May I present the following remarks from the recent letter of one of our intelligent and observing young Religio correspondents?

"I notice that the young receive so little attention. Every sermon is preached to the older people, while the young are often the majority of the audience, and some will be inattentive, and perhaps a speaker will reprove them. Once a year, on Children's Day, we have a sermon to the children, and they crowd the house. One evening, a short time ago, a sermon was preached to our young people on the subject of the Book of Mormon [The subject the Religio is pursuing. L. P.] and it was unusually long, too. At the conclusion several of the young folks remarked to me how much they liked that sermon. So I think the young are not willfully averse to religious things, but they must be reached in a manner that appeals to them. If the good influence exerted towards them is the stronger, they will lean that way."

The question that will suggest itself is, Would it not argue more sagacious, far-seeing, effective solicitude for the growth and development of gospel conditions of some in priestly positions as teachers and shepherds to be more alert to the interests of the young? It might not be said as, sadly, there has been reason to say, as was quoted in the Herald columns some time since, that many of our young have wandered away from the church, often ones that were baptized at eight and nine years of age, too, if tender plants were not set out and then left to live or grow as best they may.

Once upon a time it was said, "Ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times." It is just possible to talk and pray about the coming of the millennium and then fail to perceive the Spirit of God moving among the young and prompting the organizations for them, the Sunday school, Daughters of Zion, Religio, all to the purpose of contributing towards the preparation of a people for Zion.

I was much impressed not long since, with the attention given to this important phase of spiritual culture by an evangelist who was conducting revival services at one of the churches. He was making the occasion a revival for the young people as well. Every evening in the hour before the regular service he met with them, and in the announcements before preaching he always gave out these meetings in a prominent manner.

It is very easy, and it is natural, to become absorbed in a particular channel; but if the traveling elder and the local priesthood will give a share of their time and efforts to the young, in encouraging and directing them, at least, there are great possibilities in directions in which some have been innocently thoughtless. These words from a recent editorial in an influential current periodical well express my feelings:—

"The fact is we begin too late in the culture of children for God and for Heaven. The world comes along in the April of a child's life and sows tares; the world comes along in the May of a young life and sows Canadian thistles. We wait until it is the latter part of August or the first of September then we come in the field with a great flutter and begin to scatter around the seed of God's word. Too late! The world is in time. We are too late. The ground is all occupied. The world, the flesh, and the Devil have taken full possession. O Church of God, down on your knees and pray for the eternal salvation of our youth. Then get up and work for the same object."

Sincerely, in the interests of the young,
LOUISE PALFREY.

HARLAN, Iowa, Jan. 30.

Editors Herald:—I received one of those chain letters, as they are called, lately, which I will enclose with this, which will explain itself, accompanied with a dollar. I wish to be released from this chain. I am willing to try and live up to God's laws and his system of taxation, but not up to this thing. My reasons for this are twofold: in the first place I am a traveling man; my home is in Des Moines, and I do not know the addresses of the saints there; and it seems as if the saints in this town have all the letters of this kind that they have use for. My second reason is that I do not approve of that way of obtaining money for our church or its college, for it is deceptive and lacks economy.

In the first place in all probability there would not be one in fifty persons who would stop to figure out how many letters it would require to be written if the chain was not broken, to run the letters up to No. 25, as is desired or requested, where they are quadrupled or multiplied by four each time; and the cost of sending the money to Lamoni, when figured out, it appears farcical, as it would require so many letters written that if the chain was not broken it would make so many numbers that we hardly have names in the English language to designate their denominations; and every letter calls for ten cents, which when letters No. 20 would be reached would call for over one hundred billions of dollars.

Now let us stop and think: Joe Jones says he has seen whole families that never "think a thought;" but it pays to stop and think, especially before we enter into a contract that we know it would be impossible to fulfill. It is claimed that we have less than two billions of dollars in the United States all told; gold, silver, and paper money, both in and out of circulation, and that we have about seventy billions of wealth all told, in lands, buildings, ships, and machinery; and so it becomes obvious to all, after a little thinking and figuring, how impracticable and impossible it would be to subtract or extract several hundreds of billions from or out of seventy billions. It puts me in mind of the man who smoked a glass to look through and said he was going to knock the spots off the sun with his rifle; it turns it all into a farce.

I have been a student of political economy for several years past and am watching the movements of parties and nations, and taxation is said to be one of the prime factors of political economy, or the science of government; but this chain system, if it can be called a system, eclipses everything I have seen in history. I look for our people to receive about fifteen hundred letters each and be obliged to write four times that many before they get through with this chain, if they do not want it broken to be fairly snowed under with letters.

FALSE ECONOMY.

For every five letters written it will require ten cents postage, besides the paper and envelopes and the time in writing them; so it becomes quite obvious that it will cost more than fifty per cent to get the money to Lamoni. We cannot afford to waste our money in that way. Of course the postmasters would be doing a land office business in selling stamps, but at our expense. After a pretty close observation and analysis of the workings of the fundamental principles of the governments of the earth I find that they are all manmade and all faulty. Some of them are fairly honeycombed with flaws; even our own Constitution is lacking in weight when put in God's balances, for it allows men to acquire wealth without limit, and forbids our people to be taxed by a system of direct taxation. The first principle will allow one man to own the whole of the United States and if he did not desire our company he could by law eject us into the ocean; and the other principle compels us to submit to a system of taxation which blindfolds, humbugs, and hoodoos us out of our money. But this fulfills the prediction of the great showman, P. T. Barnum, who said the American people liked to be humbugged. I predict that it will not be long under the marvelous growth of monopolies: and an iniquitous system of indirect high taxation before we proud Gentiles will long for a theocracy, a government of God with his divine Jubilee or a Christian commune, without monopolies and indirect humbug systems of taxation; but by a direct system of tithing.

Come now, my brethren, let us reason together. I am a new convert to the restored gospel, but I know that my Redeemer liveth and that to a certainty; for I have heard his voice with my own natural ears, in tongues, in prophecies, and in singing by the power of the Holy Spirit; and saw with my natural eyes God's children healed of human maladies by the laying on of hands and prayer. We have proved that his promises are true and that his laws are correct, absolutely correct and immutable. Now as he has given us his system of tithing and as we find it just, equitable, and in every way perfect, why not abide by it? Why should men seek after inventions of their own and think them superior to God's rules? I may be met with the reply that the college must be saved some way and if the members will not pay their tithes we must resort to some other way, though it cost the members more than twice as much as it would have done had they paid their tithes. Poor philosophy, poor economy! Christ asks a question, what would it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul. What would it profit us to save the college and lose our integrity before the God? I prize knowledge above every earthly gift, but wisdom is a long way ahead of it; that trait of heavenly or divine light. So to coincide with Christ's line of reasoning, we had better, far better, lose the college and all its appurtenances than to displease our heavenly Father; for if it is his will and pleasure that we as a church should have the college, he will provide a way for us to have it, if we keep his commandments; but if we do not, we do not have any assurance of holding it if we do get it paid for in an indirect way.

Now let us look at the records of Christ's Church from his ascension to the present, how persecution arose and overpowered it for 1,260 years, and during that time that there were fifty-one millions of martyrs slain, and as Paul said that the people would be led off from the true faith by damnable heresies, little by little these little heresies creep into the ranks of the church until they grow into monsters, and become freebooters, until they put their feet upon the necks of kings and grind the understrappers in the dust. Little by little our liberties ebb away until the people get sick of their foolishness and cry to God to come to their rescue and straighten things out for them again and again. It is history repeating itself; see how the history of our own church runs,—the one that I have lately been adopted into,—how the members flourished and were cared for just so long as they kept God's commandments; but when they did not how they were persecuted, routed, and rejected and scattered, and a very large number of them were led off by the heresies of Brigham Young until it put more stigma upon the church than any other has ever had. And the people had God's written laws with them all the while, but they did them no good if they did not read and obey them.

I think it is high time that we should take warning and profit by the mistakes of those that went before us. Let us by God's assistance purify ourselves; let us leave off all of our evil habits such as the use of tobacco, secret society fuss, etc., and what money that is usually spent in that way let it be turned over to God, and let all those that have children to send to school by all means patronize our own college; and let us all try and pay our tithes and a little more if possible; and then if we keep all the rest of God's laws we will prosper and Zion will be speedily built up, for God has promised it and of a surety his promises will come to pass or be fulfilled.

May God add his blessing to this epistle that these words may have power to do some good, and keep us in the right way.

I brought this matter before the branch here at Harlan, and a motion was made and carried that I write you my objections to the chain system and send them for publication. I think my sentiments voice the majority of the members of this branch, but I do not know for sure, as this chain took them by surprise.

Most respectfully your brother in the faith and very zealous for the prosperity of Zion,

H. T. WATSON.

ALBION, Idaho, Feb. 9.

Editors Herald:—Perusing your columns as you make your weekly visits, what meets the eye both pleases and fills us with sorrow, and often with shame. On page 62, January 25, you have an article which not only the priesthood can profit by, but every member of the church. This is not inferring that that is the only item worth heeding, or of great interest. "Improving the Talents" should commence in good earnest as soon as we renounce allegiance to the "powers of darkness," especially, as Bro. J. S. Strain says of those who have accepted an ordination to the ministry, however humble the sphere in which we serve.

I felt sorely the weight of the responsibility incurred at different times, therefore I have charity for those who do not step up to the work as Paul advised Timothy. No excuse is known to me why all should not turn fully to the Master's service and improve every opportunity, trial, or temptation as they beset us to perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord; and when we think seriously of the mighty impetus the work would receive if all would from the start stand as "living epistles" for Christ, with shame we turn our faces from the condition at the present.

The priesthood should be bright and burning lights unto the church and to the world. Many have sorely grieved the Holy Spirit while standing as teachers, while at the same time God was only present from the lips out. The sooner we learn to love the truth, and to attune every thought to the harmony of the heavenly music, then indeed will we strive zealously to improve on the talents we commence with and strive to become master-workmen. Standing in the congregation as a witness for Christ, while in rapport with the world, is only an annoyance to ourselves for we carry the inner consciousness that our hearts are not circumcised to the Lord. Bro. Strain, I commend your thoughts as genuine. May our desires all be enlisted fully in the "vineyard of the Lord."

For several weeks I have had the use of the M. E. church here in the forenoon and some evenings. The evening hour is the best for attendance. That our sins may be blotted out when the showers of refreshing descend from the presence of the Lord is my continual prayer.

Yours loyally,
CHARLES ALBERTSON.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Mass., Feb. 8.

Editors Herald:—It is some time since I wrote anything for your columns, but have been active in the Master's cause, although silent in this respect. My work has been among the branches of my district most of the time, trying to encourage and help the saints in their warfare, and to instruct them in things pertaining to their temporal as well as spiritual salvation. In this work I have been fairly successful, and have felt much of the joy and illuminating power of the Holy Spirit in my work. I am satisfied my work lies especially among the saints at present; and in presenting to them the law of tithing, gathering, equality, etc., I never felt more of the Spirit in confirmation of this being applicable to us and the saints everywhere than in my labors now; and light will be given to every child of God who seeks for it along these lines, with a desire to follow out what is given us in his law and a willingness to heed what further light comes through his servants, in harmony therewith.

Bishop Hilliard's article in Herald January 4, "The Gathering," is worth reading, re-reading, and the most prayerful consideration of every saint of God. It comes as a word to prepare for this grand provision of our Father against the perils that do and will exist among Babylon, in this the hour of his judgment upon her. Only those who stand in holy places, "who have made the Lord who is our refuge, even the Most High, our habitation," will be able to dwell in safety. And he has decreed, that Zion shall be the place, and the only place, of safety and protection for his saints. Its location has been named and marked out by the Most High, and he has promised that "Zion shall never be moved out of her place;" "and this is Zion—the pure in heart." If Zion is to be preserved, sanctified, and purified, it can only be brought about by the law of perfection becoming operative in its entirety, in the lives of all saints. And as the law of perfection is the law of God, and one of the provisions contained in this law is the gathering of the saints to Zion, we should be making every possible preparation for this event. "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice. And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge himself."—Psalm 50: 2-6.

These prophetic utterances of David, in expression of admiration, and praise while the beauty and safety of Zion was revealed to him, expresses the fact also, that its beauty and safety as a habitation for "saints," was to be brought about through the law of sacrifice, and through a covenant made to the Most High in this connection.

The only way we can manifest the love we are commanded to have one for another is the way God our heavenly Father has manifested his love for the world—by sacrifice. "He gave his only begotten Son." The Son freely gave his life for us. Through his life and atonement he has not only been able to bring about for us a condition of safety and peace here in Zion, and a law of equality to exist among his people, whereby there should be no poor among them; but has promised to come and dwell among us and be our King.

Now as Christ is coming to his own, it must be that they will have sufficient of his characteristics to form an affinity to make this meeting satisfactory to both him and those unto whom he comes. This can only be brought about through the spirit of love and sacrifice, a willingness on our part to establish the Zion principle, as outlined to us in the law of God.

In the carrying out of these precious truths given us, I fully appreciate the thought of "all things being prepared before us;" but why defer the work of preparation? Why not take advantage of every opportunity afforded us for this purpose. "Come up higher!" "Line up!" are each as trumpet blasts from the heavens to awaken us to a more perfect obedience to the means provided for our place and condition, in the kingdom of God among men. The time has not yet come for cities to be deserted by the saints, and servants of God. There is yet a work to be accomplished in these eastern cities. A few will be gathered out and more effectual means provided for the warning of these masses before we can lawfully and righteously shake off the dust of our feet as a testimony against these cities and their inhabitants; and as work can be better accomplished through organized methods, there yet remains a work for our branches in these cities. These are not our abiding places; our faces are Zionward; and with yearning and longing expectancy we look westward and towards our future home. But we are willing to labor here until the Spirit manifests otherwise. There are noble people here who will yet be weaned from Babylon and find shelter and rest in the Church of Jesus Christ.

The saints throughout the district, with few exceptions, are doing well, and many spiritual feasts are enjoyed by us. We have a force of workers in Brn. Joseph Luff, M. H. Bond, G. W. Robley, and others of local fame, who are doing grand work, building safely and well. May our heavenly Father bless these brethren in body as he is blessing them in spirit. Yours for Zion's welfare,

RICHARD BULLARD.

INGLESIDE, Ark., Feb. 7.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I labored with the brethren at Wilburton, Indian Territory, against opposition to rebuild the blown down church by a continued effort, and putting my own shoulder to the wheel we succeeded in getting it up in better condition than it was before.

I preached for two weeks, visited among the people, scattered tracts, lectured on Infidelity and Utah Mormonism. At times we had a crowded house, but I find coal miners to be a hard set to get to accept the gospel, and those that do accept it are about as hard to get to live it. We have some fine saints at Wilburton.

Receiving a letter from Bro. J. S. Moore at this place with five dollars to pay the railroad to bring me here I took train for Conway, Arkansas. One Dr. Brown, of the Campbellite order, has been aching for a debate for quite awhile. The saints getting tired of his harassing and knowing well that J. D. Erwin would freely accommodate him, sent for me to come. I began meeting on the 1st of February, continuing up until the 5th. The debate was fixed to commence the 6th of February to last for six days; but, lo, and behold, sleet and snow came upon us severely and the cold demurred against us. My opponent and others prevailed with me to defer until the fourth Monday in July, which I did. I have held two debates at this place; one with J. K. Jones, of the Campbellite order, after which I baptized four people; I also debated five days with S. F. Cayce, of Martin, Tennessee, the ablest man I have ever met in discussion.

I came to this place about six years ago and began meetings to large crowds for two weeks. Only two obeyed. Since that time about seventy-five members have been baptized into the church. Several have fallen away, but the work here is in a better condition than it ever has hitherto been. About four preachers have been raised up here:

Bro. James S. Moore, a noble man, Bro. James Smith, a missionary the church can feel proud of. Some young men have been raised up here who if humble and persevering will yet startle the world with their wisdom and eloquence. The branch has passed through its dark and trying time incident to all branches, and now will advance faster than ever before. There is a mighty work to be done in the south land and few men in the harness to do it. Cheer up, brethren, let us work together without jealousy or envy. I am in the work for life; neither apostates nor the Devil can root me out as long as I abide the law of God, that being the only security or safety for any of us.

I will leave next week for conference at Cove, Arkansas.

In bonds of peace and love,

J. D. ERWIN.

Editors Herald:—Inasmuch as hundreds of the ministers of the prominent religious bodies in this city are taking the initiative steps to enter their protests against the seating of the polygamist congressman-elect, B. H. Roberts, of Utah, to the congress of the United States, would it not seem proper for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, who have, since the establishment of polygamous practices in Utah, taken such active steps towards its abolition, to go on record as entering their protests, with this laudable object in view? The church may have already taken the initiative in the case, for ought we know. If so, we are in the rear, but on record just the same. Feeling that we want to keep abreast with the exigencies of the day in which we live, we offer the suggestion. By our taking such a step and letting it be well known, would it not wield an instrument that would allay much prejudice? We think so. We see no reason why we as a body should not lend our mite (perhaps in comparison with others) to aid them in forming an avalanche of power which when let loose from its moorings will forever sweep from under B. H. Roberts or any other polygamous aspirant any possible chance to occupy any legislative seat in the gift of such an intelligent congress as that of which the United States feels so proud today.

To say the least of it, it would very materially belittle the intelligence of the entire population of the United States, from the President to the humblest subject of the realm, to say nothing of the stigmatizing influence it would exert over her commercial relationship with other nations, because if he (Roberts) should become seated, by the virtue of that office he would then become a lawmaker, and at the same time he himself living in open and defiant violation of both the laws of God and man.

Polygamy has been since its establishment by Brigham Young in the Utah Church, and is to-day, a stigma, stench, and a reproach, and possibly as poisonous and deceptive as any power or influence, as can be found in the world to-day.

Personally, socially, and intellectually,

Mr. Roberts may be and doubtless is a very fine man; but there is herein a principle involved, in the defense of which every man should take a bold stand, that eventually is destined to mould not only the present but future generations.

Which way would we like to have it moulded? What do you think about it, brethren and sisters? Voice your sentiment; speak out in the matter, and let us hear what you think of it through Herald and Ensign. Let us give no uncertain sound by keeping quiet.

While it is true that it would be quite a task owing to our scattered condition as a body, it is also true that the task of formulating our protest by a vote of the entire church (by a proxy vote if permissible) would reduce the task to a minimum, the church to supply printed slips for that purpose through the mails.

Editors Herald:—We have no regular branch here, but are a part of the Auburn branch. There are no men in our little circle, so we ladies have our own say about matters.

We are few in numbers, but are trying to work for the Master. Our prayer meeting is held each Friday afternoon, at our several houses alternately, and after meeting we have our sewing society, just lately organized. Of course we have not done much, but we aim to persevere until perhaps sometime we may be organized into a branch, and have our husbands with us in this great work. Pray for us, saints, that our dear ones may be led to obey the gospel and join hands with us that much good may be accomplished.

Bro. Butterworth was with us a short time ago, and greatly encouraged us by his cheerful words and comforting promises. Any of God's servants will be welcome.

Yours in hope of future bliss,

EMMA ROOSA.

NANTYGLO, Wales, Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:—I have been a member of the church since December 20, 1897, and am glad to say that I have seen and heard great things. I have heard the gifts of tongues and the spirit of prophecy, and have seen them come to pass, because the Lord does not speak vain things to his people. But I have a greater testimony to bear to God's people, that I do know that God is able to heal the sick; not because I have seen God's power made manifest upon others, but because our God has made his power manifest upon me.

About seven months ago the writer was taken very bad. I was in awful pain, and I thought God was greater than man, and called on the elders to administer to me; and as they were talking over me I could feel the healing power of God coming upon me, and I was healed right there and then. And not only once or twice has this been done with me, but oftener, and to God I have given the glory and all praise. But we must not boast of these things, nor of great faith, to the world; because if they will not believe the gospel they will not believe the other.

We have a room to preach in and our elders are up in the front, delivering the angel's message to those that come. Sometimes we get some to listen, and sometimes not; but we are sure that some are convinced of the truth. But they have not courage to come out of Babylon and take upon them the name of saint. But he that is ashamed of Christ of him will Christ be ashamed before the Father.

So let all officers and members be ever watchful and awake to the welfare of God. While we as individuals accomplish but little comparatively, yet let us remember that our labor taken all together constitutes and comprises the sum total to the great and important work of the church in this dispensation.

Address, Mrs. A. E. Brown, Waterloo, Nebraska.

JAMES CAFFALL.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, Feb. 2.

Editors Herald:—I have not taken the Herald since 1877, as I have not been to the church for the past three years. I was so deaf I could not hear, and thought it no use to go. Three years ago one Sunday morning something seemed to say to me, "If you would go you would obey the law." And I went. I heard a very little, and I have gone ever since, when I could, and will go if I can't hear.

I have been under a cloud of darkness for sixteen years; then I got so bad—I always was a little hard of hearing since 1862. I went to the camp meetings three years; I never had time before, nor money to go with or to pay to the church. A sister said, "Pay your tithing." I thought, "How can I pay my tithing when I can't pay my debts?" I did not think I owed the Lord anything. But I paid a little to try, and I began to hear a little better, and got my debts paid until I was entirely out of debt, only the debt I owed the Lord; and that will always be coming due, as our taxes. I now have more than I ever had before, and I also paid more to the church in 1898 than ever before in my life; and I now have no trouble to make ends meet.

We cannot expect God to bless us if we do not obey his law. I have always thought I would hear again and would not take medicine from a doctor and pay for it if he could not cure me. I can hear one half better now, and the darkness that hung over me has gone. I felt before that I had no friend; now if I have an enemy besides the Devil, I do not know it.

In conclusion I want to say to those in debt, Consecrate one tenth to God and it will double. I did not believe it till I tried it. I have lost all but my life and been afflicted; now it is coming back. My faith in the work is so strong that if I had to die or deny it, I would yield up the ghost. Now let every one try and cast in his mite. May God bless all.

Your brother,

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 9.

Editors Herald:—This is the historic town of the flood of some ten years ago, when so many lost their lives by water. I just dropped off here to see a family that had lately moved in from Wales, and I find there are three families here of eight members all told—three elders. They are in good shape to maintain a branch organization; good singers, good preachers. They have occupied in several churches in town with good effect and seem to have the life and push to make their mission known. If the works will go so as to justify their staying here, proper parties would do well to see to this.

I am on my way to Scranton, Pennsylvania, by invitation, and also by instruction from W. H. Kelley, to aid the work there. As soon as I am through here in doing what I can I will move on for Scranton.

The object of this writing is to indicate to my many friends East and West where to find me. The following address will serve for some time: No. 825 South Main Avenue, Scranton, Pennsylvania.

I am just returning from the Ohio district, where I have labored very satisfactorily in connection with Bro. James Moler since December 29, '98. Shall be glad of your company again, Bro. James, when it is not quite so cold and muddy. All the friends made are kindly remembered. Since my arrival in the mission field in August, '98, I have divided my labors between the Kirtland and Pittsburg districts. Pleasant time with many friends made and my labors greatly appreciated.

In bonds,

HILL CITY, Kan., Feb. 8.

Editors Herald:—This is a large field for the few laborers. I look forward hopefully to the day when I can join the workers in this district. Brn. W. H. Mannering and J. M. Brown, of the missionary force in this field, have been here this winter and held some meetings in a schoolhouse with good liberty and interest. They went from here fifty miles south into Ness County. They expect to call again on their way back to Lenora, Norton County, to the quarterly conference to be held there February 25th.

We have had very cold weather here for two weeks, old settlers say the coldest ever known. My own family and Bro. N. A. Boyd's are all the saints here.

Hopefully yours,

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 4.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN—THE SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.

There is another text of scripture that seems, at first reading, to disagree with the leading thought of the preceding chapter, and it reads as follows:—

And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.—Rev. 20: 15.

And the cause of this seeming disagreement is: this occurs after "the thousand years are expired;" after Satan has been "loosed out of his prison;" after the last great battle, in which "the Devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone;" after the gospel has been preached "to them that are dead;" after "death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them;" and after "death and hell were cast into the lake of fire." After all this has been accomplished, there will still be some whose names are "not found written in the book of life," and they are to be "cast into the lake of fire."

Who are they? and why are not their names found "in the book of life"?

The Savior in speaking to the saints in the church at Sardis, says:—

He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life.—Rev. 3: 5.

It seems from this that their names were yet in "the book of life," but there was danger of their being "blotted out." And no wonder; for in the first verse of the same chapter he says of them, "thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead;" and in the second verse he says again:—

Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die.

Those saints had obeyed the gospel, had been saved, and their names recorded in the Lamb's "book of life;" but at the time the apostle was writing to them, some of them were already dead, and others were "ready to die." And when they become absolutely dead to God—dead to all righteousness, then, I understand, their names will be blotted "out of the book of life," and they "shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Rev. 21: 8).

You see they have been made alive from the first death, saved and brought "to the knowledge of the truth," alive in Christ, and their names recorded "in the book of life;" but when they become spiritually dead the second time, when God blots their names "out of the book of life," after it has been recorded there, and they are "cast into the lake of fire," with the Devil and his angels, this, I understand, "is the second death." And while we contend that God "will have all men to be saved" from the first death, we do not claim that he will save any, not even one, from "the second death." The Savior said:—

Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.—Matt. 12: 31, 32.

Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation.—Mark 3: 28, 29.

And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven.—Luke 12: 10.

There is one sin, and one only, that is absolutely unpardonable, and that is the sin against the Holy Ghost. All other sins may be forgiven unto the "sons of men;" but I should not like to take the position that all other sins may be forgiven unto "the sons of God," for the Apostle Paul says:—

For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?—Heb. 10: 26-29.

You will notice here that the apostle is speaking of those who have already "received the knowledge of the truth." Now, how do men receive "the knowledge of the truth"? Jesus answers:—

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 31, 32.

We know the truth then, if we continue in his word—obey the gospel. And when we "know the truth," it makes us "free." It also purifies us:—

Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth.—1 Pet. 1: 22.

And it sanctifies us too:—

Sanctify them through thy truth, . . . that they also might be sanctified through the truth.—John 17: 17, 19.

And in harmony with this is the saying of the Savior:—

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.—John 7: 17.

To "know of the doctrine" would be to "know the truth," and you can "know of the doctrine" if you "do his will," while you can "know the truth," he says, "if ye continue in my word." And if a man is made "free," "purified" and "sanctified," and "shall know the truth," he is saved, for the Savior says:—

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.—John 17: 3.

And John says:—

He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.—1 John 5: 12.

And now after a man is "saved" and has "come unto the knowledge of the truth" (1 Tim. 2: 4), has "received the knowledge of the truth" (Heb. 10: 26), he "is passed from death unto life" (John 5: 24), having been delivered "from the power of darkness" and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son (see Col. 1: 13). But after he has been "saved" and "received the knowledge of the truth," and after he has been "sanctified" by "the blood of the covenant," if he shall then "sin wilfully," count "the blood of the covenant" an "unholy thing," and shall trample "under foot the Son of God;" then, the apostle says, "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins."

God has saved him once, and gave him "the knowledge of truth;" but, if he "wilfully" rebels against God, after he "is passed from death unto life," and counts the sacrifice which God has made for him "an holy thing," then I don't understand that the Savior is going to die for him again. Nor do I understand that he can receive again the benefits of the first atonement, for Paul says:—

For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them AGAIN unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.—Heb. 6: 4-6.

They have been brought to repentance once, have been "reconciled to God" by "the blood of his cross," and have once "tasted of the heavenly gift" (and "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6: 23), "were made partakers of the Holy Ghost" once, have once "tasted the good word of God," and also "the powers of the world to come." And now, "if they shall fall away," "sin wilfully," after having received the full benefits of the atonement, it is "impossible to renew them again unto repentance," and "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." They then become like the Devil and his angels, and will, no doubt, share a similar fate. As proof that they become like the Devil, I wish to offer another thought on Hebrews 10: 29, latter part of the verse:—

And hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace.

The meaning of the word "despite," as used here, is "spite," "malice;" and it shows that the ones of whom Paul is speaking here not only "sin wilfully," but that they do it spitefully and maliciously—to show their "spite" or "malice" against God, and against his "Spirit of grace." And this, I understand, is why they can never be brought "again to repentance;" they "wilfully" rebel, and spitefully, maliciously, defy God and his power. Are they not like the Devil and his angels?

You may think that man would never commit this sin, after being enlightened. Well, he certainly could not commit it before he is enlightened, so if there is no possibility of his committing it afterward, I see no use of referring to it at all. But in proof of the possibility of man's committing this sin, even after he has been saved, I ask you to read this:—

For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment.—2 Pet. 2: 4.

And read this, too:—

And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day.—Jude 6.

If the angels could sin against God, leave "their own habitation," "fall from heaven" (Luke 10: 18), and be cast "down to hell," then I see no reason why "the sons of God" in the flesh should assume that they have passed beyond the possibility of a fall.

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Cor. 10: 12.

The Apostle John says:—

If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin not unto death. . . . I do not say that he shall pray for it.—1 John 5: 16.

"There is a sin unto death," and when a brother commits that sin, it is no use of praying for him, he will not repent.

So, while I believe, as the Bible teaches, that God "will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth;" I also believe that when they have come to this condition,—if they deliberately turn away, count the blood of their Savior an unholy thing, and willfully rebel against God,—they commit that sin which John says is "unto death." Hence I believe that the willful, deliberate, arrogant sin, which is done with the intention of doing "despite unto the Spirit of grace," with the intention of defying the power of God, "hath never forgiveness." Those who commit this sin will be "cast into the lake of fire" with the Devil and his angels, into "everlasting punishment." They will never repent, for they will never feel sorry for what they have done, "neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

Just what is meant by "the world to come," and how far into the future it may extend, I confess that I do not know; nor do I know what possibilities, if any at all, there may be for this class of sinners beyond that period known as "the world to come." The Bible shows that they have been saved, purified, and sanctified by the "blood of the covenant," and that they afterwards rebelled against God, willfully and maliciously. I have no theory to offer in regard to them, after they are "cast into the lake of fire." I simply leave them in the hands of God, believing that all will be ordered for the best.

To the Honorable Members of the Fifty-sixth Congress of the United States, Washington, D. C.;

Greeting:—At a meeting of a conference of the Decatur district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held at Lamoni, Iowa, and representing a local actual membership of about twenty-two hundred (2,200), the following Preamble and Resolutions were adopted and ordered forwarded to the National House of Representatives:—

Whereas, the State of Utah is reported to have elected a polygamist, in the person of B. H. Roberts, to represent it in the Congress of the United States.

Resolved, that we hereby earnestly protest against one guilty of the crime of polygamy, or plural marriage, or unlawful cohabitation, being seated and retained as a legislator in the House of Representatives of the United States.

Resolved further, that we have no contention against Mr. Roberts as a man, and believe that the mere question of his religious belief should not prejudice the case against him; and we hold that anything contrary to the code of good morals, or which is opposed to the laws of our country, should be held to be criminal, and should debar any aspirant who is compromised thereby from a seat in the National Congress.

Collection for district expenses was taken up, amounting to $466. Officers elected for the ensuing year: F. M. Weld president; Duncan Campbell assistant; B. M. Anderson secretary and treasurer; F. GRACELAND COLLEGE.

We are both gratified and encouraged in having so goodly a list for this second publication, to present, of those who have contributed to the establishment of a worthy institution of learning under the church patronage, which guarantees that those who wish to secure the benefits of an education, may do so without injury from the baneful influences of intolerance and prejudice so often felt in institutions of learning, and where every young man and young woman may safely be trusted by their parents or guardians, to attain a desirable classical, scientific, or business education, freed from the blighting evils of sectarianism of whatever narrow and selfish kind.

The fact that this institution is guaranteed by its articles of incorporation to be non-sectarian, ought to stimulate every lover of truth in this great country to offer a goodly gift to its aid. Truth may both be planted and discovered here under the most favorable auspices of nurture and development, where it can be examined and tested under the fullest and freest criticism; there is an opportunity presented by such an institution of bettering the world as well as a few. Who will take advantage of the opportunity and help the institution?

A few of the subscriptions presented in this list are not yet due, and have not been paid, but this applies to only a few, and these can be easily looked after. Any omissions for any cause from the list, will receive prompt attention upon notice; we submit the list, thanking the contributors, and trusting to hear from a few thousand before the date of publishing our third (3d) list.

Donations to Graceland College not heretofore reported, in addition to list reported and published on the 30th day of November, 1898, pp. 770-772.

F. CRILEY, Chairman of Com.

GENERAL CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

Since my Herald notice in December, the most of the then delinquent reports of branches have come in from the district officers, but the following are still behind:—

No reports have arrived from Northern California since those for March, 1897, and none from Central California since those for April, 1897, that is for two years past, nearly.

The Northeastern Texas and Choctaw reports for July and October, 1898, are not yet in. Nor Northern Minnesota for June and October, but expected. Spring River (Kansas), Northern Michigan, and Montana for October are still missing. Of Southern Missouri the reports of Bruner branch are in, but the other branches are needed for March, July, and November, 1898. These last are considered as being in good hands. No reports from the Nevada conferences, or officers, for either 1897 or 1898.

Since last notice nothing has been received from the branches, or conferences, of the four districts in England, namely the London, Birmingham, Sheffield, and Manchester districts, and no more from the two districts in Wales, as to the gain or loss in their branches.

The Victoria district, Australia, sends branch reports to the close of 1898.

The clerks of the Nodaway and the Northern Nebraska districts have sent in their January, 1899, reports. And the following districts hold conferences in February, namely:—

Mobile; Eastern Colorado; Kewanee; Navoo; Northeastern Texas and Choctaw; Decatur, Des Moines, Fremont, Galland's Grove, Pottawattamie, and Eastern Iowa; Northeastern and Northwestern and Spring River districts of Kansas; Kentucky and Tennessee; Northeastern and Southern Missouri; Central and Southern Nebraska; New York; Philadelphia; Central Texas; Oklahoma.

It is hoped that the officers of the above districts will be as prompt as possible about sending branch reports to this office.

The following districts give notices of conferences in March:—

Northern California, Far West, Saint Louis, Kirtland, Pittsburg, Southwestern Texas, and Little Sioux.

Other conferences adjourned to meet "on call", dates not yet given, whether to be held in February, March, or later months. But, as it is probable that the General Recorder will make an annual report this spring, the same as if a General Conference was to convene, therefore all district officers who receive reports of branches at the coming sessions of their districts, are kindly requested to forward them to me as soon after as may be convenient or possible.

Many letters written by me to branch and district officers remain unanswered. I need corrections of names, dates, and places asked for, also additional items that were lacking on branch reports. This because the Church Records should be perfected, and an agreement be had with branch and district books, in every detail.

The attention of all concerned, or who should be concerned, is hereby called to the above notice.

Your brother in the gospel,
H. A. STEBBINS,

General Church Recorder.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 15, 1899.

STATEMENT BY SR. KATHARINE SALISBURY.

To the Herald and to those to whom it may concern: This is to certify that I never signed my name to any document or paper testifying to the leadership of any man as leader of the Mormon Church, except Joseph Smith, Jr., the son of the prophet Joseph Smith.

MONTANA TENT FUND.

As there is an opposition to the purchasing of a tent for Montana, on account of the shortness of the tent season, and the fund is not being materially enlarged of late, will those already subscribing let me hear what I am to do with the amount in hand, in case enough is not obtained to purchase a tent. I am still of the opinion that a tent is needed for Montana, and it now remains to be seen as to whether the Montana saints will come forward with their donations. Immediate action is necessary, if the tent is purchased.

J. W. WIGHT.

NOTICES.

The elders of Southwestern mission are requested to hand in their reports for the year, so they may reach Brn. C. R. Duncan, T. J. Sheppard, and J. W. Jackson by the 5th of March. Do not send reports to me, as some have done in the past. I expect a full report from the above-named brethren by March 15. I am sorry to say that I have not been able to send in a full report on account of some not reporting in time. Will Brn. Duncan, Sheppard, and Jackson send their reports to me at San Antonio, Texas, South Flores Street, care of George Gifford.

AMOS J. MOORE.

DIED.

GIPSON.—In Middle Fork Township, Macon County, Missouri, February 3, 1899, Margaret Elizabeth, daughter of Bro. and Mrs. H. W. Gipson, aged 1 year and 25 days. Interred in the Thrutchly burying ground; services in charge of Elder J. A. Tanner.

BROWN.—Nelson Brown, born at Morpeth, Canada, January 16, 1838; died February 11, 1899. He has resided in Platte Valley, Nebraska, since 1874; was baptized the same year. He served two years in the civil war under the stars and stripes, receiving an honorable discharge. Shortly after his baptism he was ordained an elder, serving the church as branch and district president, and Bishop's agent. He was on a preaching tour in the northern part of the district, November, 1898, when taken sick, which obliged him to return home. Medical advice was sought, but of no avail save to afford temporary relief. Visitation and administration of the elders, prayers, and songs of the saints seemed cheering to him. He leaves a wife and nine children to mourn. Funeral sermon by Elder F. A. Smith. In charge of Elder Caffall.

BAKER.—At her home, St. Louis, Missouri, February 7, 1899, Sr. Mayme Smith Baker, wife of C. K. Baker. She was born at Bigelow, Missouri, May 26, 1877; united with the church at Independence, Missouri. Leaves husband and twin children about ten days old. Funeral services from residence, conducted by Elder J. C. Hitchcock.

STALEY.—Near Kiel, Oklahoma, February 2, 1899, Sr. Nancy, wife of Bro. L. S. Staley, aged 50 years, 8 months, and 4 days. She was formerly Nancy Woodbury; born at Shoal Creek, Cadwell County, Missouri, June 27, 1848. Was mother of thirteen children, ten of whom are living; was baptized March 24, 1875. She lived a consistent, Christian life for thirty-two years, eight of which were spent in another church, and died a faithful wife and devoted mother. Besides her husband and children, she leaves an aged mother, one brother, and three sisters, to mourn.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

WHAT SCHOLARS THINK OF CHRISTIANITY.

The assertion is made so often that modern scholarship has broken altogether with Christian principles that an impartial investigation as to the actual state of affairs in this regard is a matter of more than ordinary interest. Such an examination, on an extended scale, is made by Pastor Erich Foerster, of Frankfort-on-the-Main, and is published in the Zeitschrift fur Theologie und Kirche (Berlin), filling the entire 96 pages (vol. 9, No. 1) of that scholarly journal. The writer investigates the problem in three directions; namely, in the department of pure scholarship; in the world of statesmanship and politics; and thirdly in the leading belles lettres and literature of the day. The article is a "study," and is entitled "Das Christentum der Zeitgenossen," and on the whole makes a much better showing for the standing of Christianity among the leading men in the world of thought and action than supersurface indications would lead the casual reader to expect. The evidence is furnished in detail that, at least so far as Germany is concerned—and here the imagined rupture between Christianity and modern culture is more pronounced than in any other land—such a break has not occurred, no matter how many individual cases, especially in general literature and in journalism, may occur in which a pronounced antagonism to Christianity has found utterance. The first of the three parts of Foerster's investigations is by far the most interesting in itself and for non-German readers, and we accordingly extract some of its leading data:—

There is an old saying that "lawyers are poor Christians," yet the most brilliant and original representation of Christianity in our day has come from the pen of a jurist, namely, Rudolf Sohm, professor of law in the university and one of the compilers of the new Civil Law Book of the German empire. His book on "Kirchenrecht" is an exceptionally scholarly investigation of the character of original Christianity, on a positive and conservative basis. Kahl and Rieker, two other prominent jurists, have also published works appreciative of the character and claims of Christianity. As a representative in the department of political economy we draw attention to the lately deceased veteran authority, Professor Roscher, of Leipsic, among whose papers was found a special work on Christianity, entitled "Spiritual Thoughts of a Student of Political Economy." This work shows how closely the author studied the Gospels and how keenly he appreciated their contents. Other names of men in this department of research who have publicly given expression to their favor of Christianity are Karl Knies, Theodore von der Goltz, Adolf Wagner, Gustav Schmoller. All these have in their writings in the most positive manner emphasized particularly the moral motives of Christianity, especially for the solution of the social problems of the day. The younger school of specialists in this science, headed by Professor Brentano of Munich, and containing among its members such men as Walter Lotz, Max Weber, and Gerhard von Schulze, have really made it a part of their program to make the Christian church the final court of appeal for the settlement of the social contests of the day, as this has been done in a more practical way by the English Christian-

Socialists, such as Kingsley, Maurice, Ludlow, and Robertson.

Among the German historians of our generation the most marked representative was Leopold von Ranke, who in his work of universal history made Christianity the center of development, and in his masterly investigations of the history of the Reformation finds in this event the key to all modern history. The pupils who have gone out from his school all to a man give special prominence to Christianity as a factor and force in history. Examples of this we find in the keen analysis of the religious development of Luther from the pen of Max Lenz, or the biography of Coligny by Erich Marcks. The same is true of the historians of civilizations. Among others Moritz Carrière has published a special work entitled "Jesus Christ and the Scientific Research of the Day." Riehl, who is equally an authority in this line, has done the same, his book being entitled "Studies in Religion by a Child of the World." Among classical writers none stands more prominent in his acknowledgment of Christianity than Ernst Curtius, the famous Greek historian of the University of Berlin, especially in his high appreciation of the ideals of a Christian life. The political writer and historian Treitschke, also of the University of Berlin, was equally pronounced in recognizing in Christianity the basis for the welfare of a state.

The smallest appreciation of the claims of Christianity is naturally expected among the natural philosophers. But recently, Dr. Dennert, himself a leading scholar in this field, in reply to an assertion made by a social-democratic author that nearly all students of nature were unbelievers, has statistically proved that this is far from the truth. He has reached the surprising result that among modern specialists in the department of natural sciences the majority are pronounced adherents of positive Christianity, or at any rate of a theistic type of religious thought, and that the percentage of nonbelievers among this class of men is no larger than it is among the students of other sciences. In most cases Dennert is able to quote directly from the scholars in question.

Probably most surprising of all is the fact that even among the leaders of German philosophical thought, which is constantly charged with being the breeder of hypotheses antagonistic to Christianity, there has been in recent years particularly a turn in favor of its claims. A philosopher like Claus, of Erlangen, is half a theologian, and others, such as Wundt, Volkelt, Paulssen, and Eucken, of Jena, are adherents for the positive type of Christian faith.

An analysis of the relation sustained toward Christianity by these learned representatives of various branches of scholarly research reveals the fact that, while all are more or less favorable to Christianity, they do not all have the same understanding of this term. Foerster formulates three groups in this respect; namely, one, of which Carrière and Curtius are model representatives, who have no sympathy for the historic basis of Christianity or even special interest for the Founder, except as a teacher of morals, but see in Christianity only higher ideals of life realized which in Greek and classic culture were only formal expectations and longings; a second, of which Sohm and Roscher are pronounced types, who accept an orthodox interpretation of the Scriptures and of the doctrines of the church; and a third group, headed by Paulssen and Sohm, who aim at a reconstruction of original Christianity and recognize in this the realization of their ideal, but at the same time the opposite of modern culture and civilization in many respects. Eucken presents similar contrasts, but from a different point of view.—Translation made for the Literary Digest.

THE PERNICIOUS GRUMBLING HABIT.

Do not let your children acquire the habit of grumbling. Stop the first beginnings and it will never become a habit. If there is just cause of complaint, try to remedy it; if there is no possibility of improvement, teach that silent endurance is the best way to meet the inevitable. It is never wise to stay in a place and grumble. If the things you dislike cannot be altered, change your environment. If on reflection you decide that, balancing one thing with another you would rather bear the ills you know than fly to others that you know not of, bear them in silence.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

MONARCHS OUT OF A JOB.

There are at present no less than forty monarchs wandering about the world out of regal employment.

The chief reason is the annexation of their kingdoms by more powerful neighbors. Thus Sardinia has swallowed eleven of its weaker brethren—Genoa, Lombardy, Tuscany, Messina and Carrara, Modena, Parma, Piombino, Venice, the Two Sicilies, and the Papal States—and then, in trying to swallow Italy, got swallowed itself and is now merely a province of the "Kingdom of Italy."

Prussia comes next with regard to European subjects, having deprived five rulers of their kingdoms. But all save one—Leo XIII.—of those deposed monarchs have abdicated their rights and settled down quietly in other countries, and, having married the younger daughters of the reigning sovereigns, procured lucrative sinecures in their fathers-in-law's governments or household retinues.

If the French nation ever tires of a republic it will have to choose between five royal claimants, each of whose titles is as valid as the others.

The five uncrowned rulers are in this case, Louis and Philip Bonaparte, le Duc d'Orleans, the Empress Eugénie, and Don Carlos of Spanish renown.

Don Carlos is at present directing all his attention to Spanish affairs. His cause in Spain is, in fact, winning new adherents every hour, and it may not be long before he leaves the great army of the unemployed.

And France has Savoy and Madagascar in her pocket.—Pearson's.

TEACHING CHILDREN GOOD MANNERS.

Good manners cannot be learned in a moment. There are certain forms which society has agreed people must conform to if they wish to appear well bred, and these are often not at all what the natural inclination would prompt one to do under the circumstances. Children must be taught these conventions, and we must not be surprised if they are sometimes slow in learning them, nor despair if after much teaching they at times relapse into native barbarism. Patient perseverance in training them will at last produce the desired result. The constant repetition that seems so irksome, combined with the silent force of daily example, will effect the end in view—a well-bred child.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

The subscription lists published last week were encouraging, and we hope that many more may be induced to have their names on the next lists that are issued. Unity of action must bring success, and let us all resolve to have some share in the credit of that success. Some of our brethren and sisters may consider that the college is a burden at present, but it is also a help, and as we continue the burden must continue to grow less and less. There is no doubt that the saints generally are coming to realize the importance of the college movement. Those in charge both of the internal and the external affairs of the college may sometimes make mistakes, may not always give satisfaction to everybody; but then, who can? The wisest of us is but human, and at any time prone to err; it is a true if a hackneyed saying that we learn by our mistakes.

Quite a number of people seem to be interested in helping us to form an interesting museum and collection of curios, and by their help we hope to have soon a collection that will be worthy of Graceland. We understand that California, Iowa, and Montana are going to contribute to the same, and why should not every State in the Union do likewise? In subscription and other lists some people are noticeable by their presence, others equally so by their absence. Donations of books, too, ought to be quite frequent among a society of our intellectual caliber. This last month we had the pleasure of noticing that our Library had passed the one thousand mark, and so we are now looking ahead to the two thousand mark.

The college has still a number of catalogues on hand for distribution, and it is to be hoped that every interested party that has not received one will send at once for a copy.

Query? What science-loving brother or sister is going to honorably distinguish himself by helping to complete the equipping of our Laboratory?

A YOUNG MORMON.

The following from the Salt Lake Tribune, of February 7, needs but little comment. We reproduce it that our readers may be able to judge of all the forces at work in the solving of the Utah problem. It seems to us that the criticisms of "Young Mormon" on the attitude of the church organ should cause its managers to seriously consider. We shall watch with interest the development of sentiments which threaten to "make themselves felt, if necessary, with tremendous force."

THE CASE OF MR. ROBERTS.

IT IS INCONSISTENT FOR THE CHURCH TO SUSTAIN HIM.

Editor Tribune:—As there seems to be no end to the stir created by the election of and possible unseating of B. H. Roberts and the likelihood of the Mormon Church being drawn into politics, I hope you will give me space for a few words on the subject. Being a young Mormon I have some idea of the sentiment prevailing among them, and while I do not pretend to speak for the young Mormons throughout the whole State, I believe I can voice their sentiments in this locality.

There is no one who does not admire B. H. Roberts as a man and as an orator, and that he would be an excellent legislator no one doubts. But if the fact that he is living in the marriage relation with more than one wife promotes contention and disunion among the inhabitants of this State and creates in the minds of the people of the State and the country at large a distrust of Utah and her people and especially the Mormon Church, then his membership in Congress is hurtful to the best interests of the State. His oratory can never repair the harm the ill-will and hatred of the people of the country inflicts upon us and we pay too high a price for it. Oratory is valuable, but it is not worth the reputation of a State and a church. There are few people in this State, if any, who do not regret his election, notwithstanding they may now be supporting him, even in his own party. But what infinitely exceeds this regret is the fear that this agitation will bring back upon us the old conditions which prevailed before Statehood; conditions which will rack and rend this fair State. No man who remembers the past, and who loves the honor and integrity of his State and believes in the future of its people can look complacently upon the possible return to those old conditions.

The idea that such a return is possible will probably be scouted, but if the present attitude of certain papers is continued it will not long be an impossibility. Did not our troubles in the past arise from polygamy and the church being in politics? They are antagonistic to the principles of civil and political liberty. This has been recognized, conceded and from such convictions have arisen our improved conditions.

The authorities of the church have declared over their signatures time and time again that they do not and will not counsel or advise the members of the church in political matters; in other words, the church will forever keep out of politics. This was the basis upon which our peace was established. It was a sacred pledge given in all candor and sincerity. Upon it rests the future of the State. It must be kept at any price, and young Utah must sacredly guard it.

I do not wish to say that that pledge has been broken but I do wish to say that if the Deseret News continues its present course it soon will be. The News is now the property of the church; is managed and controlled by the presidency and the apostles; is the church organ. It should be independent, nonpartisan. This is what all church members would like to see it. It is the mouthpiece of the presidency; it speaks for the church. Its editor is supposed to speak, not his private opinions or convictions, but the spirit and policy of the church. Can it consistently support any candidate for a political office? Can it take sides with any political party and escape the imputation that it is in politics? Certainly it cannot. If it defends B. H. Roberts in all the attacks made upon him, is it not in fact his supporter, his organ? Is not its nonpartisan character gone? In its persistent defense of Roberts it diverts the attacks from him and his party, where they belong, to the church and thereby brings odium upon it and gives color to the charges that the church is in politics and that Roberts is its candidate. No other construction can be placed upon its attitude. The fact that the editor was a political enthusiast might excuse an occasional digression from nonpartisanship, but the continuance of such gives evidence of a firm and established policy.

The only consistent course for the News, in my opinion, is to treat with silence all attacks upon Roberts and leave them with him and his party who are responsible and not the church. This is the course all right-thinking people desire to see the News pursue. If we are to understand its policy from the tenor of its editorials, the only conclusion is that it is in politics and this is what young Utah and the future peace and security of the church and the State alike demand it shall not be. The endeavors of certain high officials to make a tool of it to further their personal political ends cannot be condemned in terms too strong and should receive the strongest rebuke from all lovers of the church. The only safety lies in an upright, independent, nonpartisan course before the people and a mud-slinging disposition is utterly beneath the dignity and imperative rectitude of a church paper. Anything of this sort is positively detestable and inexcusable.

This is a mild criticism of the News which I trust will prove beneficial and the sentiments herein expressed are not confined to myself nor to this locality, and I feel sure that sooner or later they will make themselves felt, if necessary, with tremendous force.

YOUNG MORMON.

PARSON, Utah, February 2.

PEAK-HILL DEBATE.

Not long after the HERALD published Bro. W. E. Peak's report of the debate at College View, Nebraska, Elder W. B. Hill wrote us and sent us his reply in an article headed, "As we view it."

We put this article on the "hooks" for insertion, biding its time. On January 18 Elder Hill wrote us inquiring after the fate of his article. It was at once inserted in HERALD.

In the time pending between the receipt of Elder Hill's article and its insertion in HERALD Elder Hill had published a pamphlet called "How Goes the Battle in the West, or Truth Invincible," in which the date of its issue does not appear. At the close of this little "booklet" of fifty-seven pages, is an appendix in which Elder Hill, referring to Elder Peak's report, states:—

He sent a report of it to his paper, The Saints' Herald, which he had a right to do. In that report he criticised our people at College View quite severely, and we sent a mild reply to the editor, requesting that if for any reason he did not see fit to publish our article, he would be kind enough to return it to us, with the reason why he refused to publish it, and sent stamps to pay for its return. For some reason or reasons he never noticed our article, and kept it stamps and all. So we send this little work to the world, and let everyone read and decide for himself.

On February 21, we received the following letter from Elder Hill, which will explain itself:—

SOUTH LANCASTER, Mass., Feb. 19, 1899.
MR. JOSEPH SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Brother:—I was absent from home when your kind letter arrived. I am now here attending the General Conference of our people. After waiting nearly four months for my reply to Bro. Peak to appear in your paper, I gave up all hopes of ever seeing it again; and so, in the pamphlet I wrote I stated that my reply was not published, which was the truth when my little book was written. I send you a copy of the booklet. Will you please to state in the Herald how I came to say so in my book?

I do not wish to even seem to do an injustice to any people. Many thanks. With kindest regards,
Yours truly,

W. B. HILL.

We hope that Elder W. B. Hill will so amend the appendix to his little book that it will show the fact that we published his reply to Bro. Peak, and returned the stamps sent to cover postage of article if it should be returned. Will he?

A review of the article of Elder Hill, "As we view it," has been received from Brn. W. E. Peak and F. A. Smith, which from its nature and our want of space we must decline and consider "the episode closed."

THE latest and probably the most effective action against admission of polygamists to Congress is reported in the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is to be hoped that it or a similar measure will obtain and thus forever prevent admission of a representative of so odious a principle. We quote from the Chicago Tribune, February 21:—

ACTION AGAINST POLYGAMISTS.
PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO PREVENT THEIR ELECTION TO EITHER BRANCH OF CONGRESS.

Washington, D. C. Feb. 20.—The proposed constitutional amendment against admitting polygamists to Congress was favorably acted on to-day by the House Committee on Election of President and Vice President. The joint resolution for this purpose was introduced by Mr. Capron, Rhode Island, who will make the report. The title of the resolution is as follows:—

"Proposing Amendments to the Constitution Prohibiting Polygamy Within the United States and All Places Subject to Their Jurisdiction, and Disqualifying Polygamists for Election as Senators or Representatives in Congress."

The resolution submits to the Legislatures of the several States an amendment to the sections of the constitution giving the age and other requirements of Senators and Representatives, so that polygamy shall be included as a bar to service. A new article of the constitution also is provided, as follows:

"Article XVI—Section 1. Polygamy shall never exist within the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

"Section 2. Congress shall have power to make all needful laws to enforce this article and punish its violation."

RELIGIOUS CONFUSION.

Some idea of the confusion that prevails in modern Babylon may be obtained, at least of the religious side of it, by reading the religious announcements in the large metropolitan newspapers. Here is a list taken from a late issue of the Chicago Tribune:—

First come the names of the "orthodox" or "evangelical" churches, with whose names we are familiar; viz.: "Baptist," "Christian," "Congregational," "Cumberland Presbyterian," "Episcopal," "Presbyterian," "English Lutheran," "Methodist," "Reformed Episcopal." Then follows a different line: "New Jerusalem," "Union," "Independent," (including the "People's Church," "All-Souls," "The First Society of Rosicrucinas," "Liberal Church," "Central Church," etc.)

Then follows the following medley, under "Miscellaneous": "Mental Science Club," Society of Anthropology, Church of the Star of Truth, Seaman's Floating Club, Spiritual Investigating Society, The Exodus Club, Society for Ethical Culture, Universal Brotherhood Organization and Theosophical Society in America. First, Second, and Third Church of Christ (Scientist), Primitive Baptist, Lake View Spiritual Union, The Church of the Soul, A-dwaitam Congregation Hindoo, Occult Science Services, Church of Unity, Prophet's School of the Brotherhood of Silence.

Here are some of the subjects as announced: "The unrest of the human soul;" "A bed too short and a covering too narrow;" "The pessimism of our age, its causes and cure;" "The supreme need;" "Who made the Devil?" "New wineskins for new wine;" "The Madonna in Art;" "Guiding stars in error's night;" "The sub and hyper states in consciousness;" "The new Bible and new pulpit;" "The unexplored remainders of life;" "Expansion according to Christ;"

"Christian unity;" "Idolatrous tradition;" "The power of united [?] effort;" "The world's crisis hour;" "Man robbed;" "Pure religion;" "Substitute for Christianity;" "The famished gods;" "Christ's winnowing fan;" "Concentration;" "The resources of Nature and their control;" "Unity as viewed by Emerson and Theosophy;" "The line of least resistance;" "The rationale of religion;" "Individualistic socialism;" "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

Just how this general mixture of religious conceptions would affect the "heathen" we cannot say, but it does not seem difficult to believe that he would not be impressed with the idea that unity of faith prevailed in Christendom—that part of the world supposed to be Christianized. Indeed, it would be surprising if he did not turn to the many gods worshiped by his fathers and ask that the differences between Pantheism and present-day aspects of progressive Christianity, so-called, be pointed out. He would doubtless note, too, that Hindooism and other Oriental and heathen conceptions of God and the future life were disputing with Christianity for a right of place in the religious life of the Occident and that under such guises as Theosophy, Christian Science, Spiritualism, Occultism, etc., were making fair headway, gaining many converts and building modern and costly temples in which to exploit the religion of the jungle and the mystic rites of the far East.

Turning to the acknowledged basis of Christianity, however, and studying it as it reveals the faith of Jesus Christ, the Oriental would find little or no difficulty in discovering the wide discrepancy between Christianity revealed and manifested by its author and Christianity which represents the traditions and concepts of men, of theologians of both the conservative and progressive school.

And, reading and noting the superiority and manifest divinity of the teachings and character of Jesus Christ, the heathen sage might well ask if such a perfect system could ever fail or die or become extinct; if its author, who is life and light and Father of the race, had not provided for its continuation, for the triumph of its principles, and therein ordained ways and means for the direction, perfection, and eternal life of man.

An intelligent and rational interpretation of the situation brings one face to face with this the natural and only reasonable solution of the situation; viz., that God, "our Father," cannot forget and has not forgotten humanity, but that above all human blindness and imperfection he reigns as the author and finisher of the faith, the truth, and designs that it shall triumph and be borne aloft and abroad, the guiding star and life of humanity.

Jesus Christ, the same yesterday and to-day and forever, the gospel that reveals him to the race as Creator, Redeemer, and God manifest in the flesh—the glad tidings of great joy unto all people, in which "the righteousness of God is revealed," "the power of God unto salvation" is proclaimed again in these last days to "lighten the way of the Gentiles" and the Jew, to guide the race into paths of life and peace.

It is the only substantial proclamation and system in the world to-day. Its scope includes all the adjuncts essential to a perfect life, as it provides for and is potent to bring about the immortality and eternal life of man. It will remain and endure and prevail universally, when the faulty inventions and foolish imaginations of man have run their course; when he shall regain whose right it is, in truth.

BRO. ARTHUR LEVERTON, of Zone, Ontario, was on Tuesday, January 24 last, elected by the county council, Warden for Kent County, for the year 1899.

The Chatham Planet for January 26, which some one was kind enough to send us, contains an account of the balloting, and a sketch of Bro. Leverton, which we give below. Good for Bro. Leverton:—

THE WARDEN-ELECT.

Warden Arthur Leverton, was born in Nottinghamshire, England, on September 7, 1844, and came to this country with his parents in '50, settling in Hamilton, but shortly removing to Komoka. Mr. Leverton took up his residence in the township of Zone in 1854, and has resided there continually since.

Mr. Leverton has had considerable municipal experience. He was elected to the council of Zone in '80 and sat for three years, when he retired, and was for two years auditor for the same township. He was first elected reeve in '92, and continued in this position until the change of the law in '96. He was elected to the county council in '97, and again in the present year. The warden is highly esteemed by all who know him.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Columbus Scott, Runnells, Iowa, February 20:—

Bro. Heman C. Smith is with us at Runnells, and is in full demand. Our Sunday school convention and district conference held here the 17th-19th were well attended; saints devoted and spiritual; one baptized; young saints well represented.

Bro. Isaac M. Smith, Shenandoah, Iowa, February 21:—

The Fremont district conference, held at this place, closed last evening. It was a success. A good feeling prevailed from the beginning of the Sunday school convention, on Thursday evening, to the close of the conference, on Sunday evening. The attendance was not large, but those who did attend were certainly blessed and strengthened. I feel that the saints of this district are making a commendable effort to "come up higher." May success crown their efforts, and the efforts of all God's people along the same line.

Bro. Henry Tabbiner, writing of work being done by the college committee, now and for some time past endeavoring to raise funds for Grace-land, says, from Stoke-on-Trent, February 8:—

The committee have my most sincere sympathy, having passed through something similar which then to me was a serious matter. However they who would sympathize should do so, practically, to whatever extent they can. I am pleased to see some names from England with practical sympathies attached; and I think—mind, I say I think—there could be a large demonstration of sympathy from England of the same kind. I do not know, but I think so.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. Silas D. Condit, writing from Logan, Utah, February 13, states that our people had been challenged and had arranged for a ten nights' discussion "to be held in Smithfield, with an elder named Samuel Jenkinson." He is looking for Bro. Wight to send him an elder to stand for our side of the controversy, he having so arranged that anyone whom Bro. Wight should send would be accepted. Bro. Condit looks for a good result from an open examination of the issues between the two peoples.

The HERALD has received a circular from the Anti-Vaccination Society of America, from which it appears certain that there are two sides to the vaccination question. Science, so called, makes high claims, some of which are manifestly based upon truth; but that some are founded upon fancy if not tradition, with little solid ground for credence, is claimed by some, among them our anti-vaccination friends. Certain it is that the medical fraternity has lost nothing by the stringent laws enacted which have required compulsory vaccination.

The office of light is to illuminate, to make plain; to dispel darkness and make clear, that stumbling may be avoided. It "cannot be hid," and will be seen if possessed by the child of God. And if possessed by the children of God will be apparent and be recognized by those whose minds are open to discern and accept the truth. It was evidently with this conception of the work of the follower of Christ that the Apostle Paul wrote: "That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." We wonder if the saints everywhere now are recognized as maintaining that attitude before the world. If not, will less than that justify us in the eyes of God, and can we succeed in our work under lower conditions? Not our own salvation alone, but the redemption and welfare of fellow man, the success of the cause, are included in the matter.

The address of Bro. T. W. Williams is No. 830 Bartlett St., Los Angeles, California.

Bro. J. W. Whitely, living at Toquia, Douglas County, Washington, reports himself as well satisfied with the divinity of the Reorganization. He is blessed in presenting the gospel, and asks help from the traveling ministry, to reach the people who are anxious to hear, and he thinks many would obey the gospel. He asks prayer for restoration to health. He lives eight miles below Bridgeport.

A full column article in the Attleboro, Massachusetts, Chronicle, February 10, from Bro. Joseph Luff, corrects erroneous statements concerning the true faith of the saints on the marriage question. Bro. Luff in characteristic clearness sets forth the high character of the position of the church and shows that it is unnecessary to attack true Latter Day Saintism in order to unseat Congressman-elect Roberts.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

' Winter is past, the heart of nature warms
Beneath the wrecks of unresisted storms;
Doubtful at first, suspected more than seen,
The southern slopes are fringed with tender green.'

Dear Sisters:—We are lonely here, as though we were scattered members, and I find the church papers a great comfort. We have a branch organized, but for some reason only three members attend. As saints of God we ought to live faithful, for great will be our reward. Trials and temptations are many, but we are promised aid if we ask. I have been a member of the church for over ten years, and can say I never regretted the step taken, although I have been tried almost in every way, but have always found help when I have humbled myself and asked God for it. But the great trial has come now when we don't have the privilege of attending meeting.

I have often been made to rejoice reading the Home Column. The good advice that is there given gives me strength to battle on. I often wish that I could have had such reading and advice when I was a girl growing up to womanhood. I think in many ways it would have been a great help to me. My mother died when I was four years old. I missed a great blessing, that is being instructed and trained as one that has a mother; but when looking over my past life I can see God's guiding hand over me, keeping me from the snares of the evil one, for which I feel thankful.

My desire is to be with the saints; and I daily pray that God will so help us that we may soon be where we can have the privilege of attending meeting once more, for it is a very lonely life to be away from God's people. I would ask the prayers of the sisters that I may live faithful, ever letting my light shine; also that I may have good health once more; as for eight years past I have been very poorly most of the time. I have often thought I would write to the Home Column, but for lack of confidence I have not; but this evening being lonely I have written these few lines. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

I am your sister,
MRS. AMELIA SELF.

AS THE TWIG IS BENT THE TREE'S INCLINED.

I strolled into a forest,
Where noble oak trees stood;
Graceful elms and stately ash,
In loving brotherhood.

Some stood as straight as arrows,
Outstretched their mighty arms,
Lifting up regal, towering heads,
Nor feared the wind's alarms.

The snows of many winters
Had fallen upon some,
While on the tender saplings,
Were many yet to come.

I gazed on Nature's children,
Who reared their lofty heads,
To greet the God of heaven,
From out their mossy beds.

But as I looked around me,
There came into my mind,
That old-time saying: "As the Twig is bent the tree's inclined."

For, throughout all that forest,
Was here and there a tree,
So warped and bent and crooked,
It seemed in misery.

Besides trees tall and stately,
The dwarfed and ugly stood,
All out of place appearing
Within that lovely wood.

On some, old, gnarled, and twisted,
The graceful vine grew wild,
As if kind Mother Nature
Now strove to shield her child.

My mind in meditation,
Back to the past then flew,
When these were tender saplings,
Before they ugly grew.

Who knows what adverse fortune
Had bent each slender stem;
Perhaps some careless footstep,
Had crushed and broken them.

And though they struggled onward,
They never were the same,
As their more handsome neighbors;
But were the trees to blame,

If, when, as twigs and saplings,
Within that lovely wood,
Some cruel wind had marred them,
And shaped them where they stood?

Dear Home Column:—I have thought of writing to the sisters a great many times, but have always felt my inability to do so. I am one of the isolated ones, but am trying by the help of God to live rightly. O! how many times I long for the fellowship of the saints. I am glad the mothers of the church have an organization through which they can receive help in training their children. Parents have a great responsibility placed upon them when they have the care of little ones. I have a little boy, and I pray that I may lead him in the straight and narrow way. Temptations and discouragements come to all of us, but if we go to God in the right spirit, we will receive help. I can say that when trials have come, which seemed almost too heavy to bear, I have prayed very earnestly for help, and have received it many times. O, let us be faithful.

A SISTER.

BATTLE GROUNDS OF ANCIENT AMERICANS.

For the use of Book of Mormon students in general, . . . I have been requested to write an article in defense of a certain claim made in my "Book of Mormon Lectures," pages 51 and 169. So I cheerfully take up the work and endeavor to present such evidences in support of the idea as I have at hand, or have knowledge of, giving extracts from the writings of learned men touching this point.

The claim was made in the "Lectures" that scientific discovery had brought to light conceded facts that are in harmony with, and that strongly corroborate, the history contained in the Book of Mormon, in its statement that south and southwest of the great lakes, Ontario, Erie, and Huron, that is directly in and north of the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, were fought the "last great battles" of the Jaredites, and, later, the final conflicts of the descendants of Lehi and his colony, and that those wars were, more or less, wars of extermination.

Therefore I seek to bring from able students and antiquarians that which they believe to be good proof that in Western New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and contiguous States, warring races fought in ancient times; that in those regions, and along those great valleys, offensive and defensive operations were carried on, and contending armies met in prolonged and bloody conflicts, resulting, in prehistoric ages, in the annihilation of the Mound Builders, and perhaps later in the destruction of other races. That in the portion of the United States above mentioned (more than in any other portions) have been found especial evidences of deadly and decisive struggles in times gone by.

From the New York weekly Tribune of August, 1868, I make the following extract from a telegraphic account of a meeting of the "American Science Association," held in Chicago that month. The first two paragraphs of the dispatch read as follows:—

"Chicago, August 11, 1868.—The morning session of the 7th, which was a general one of the Association, was entirely occupied with the reading and discussion of three papers on the antiquity of man, of which the following are the titles: 1. Abstract of the Geological Evidences of Man's Antiquity in the United States, by Charles Whittlesy. 2. The Antiquity of Man in North America, by J. W. Foster. 3. On the Vestiges of Prehistoric Races in California, by W. P. Blake.

"Col. Whittlesy enumerated several races which had flourished in America before the red men hunted in her forests. First, the Mound-Builders; second, a race in the territory which is now Wisconsin; third, a warlike race in the region south of lakes Ontario and Erie; and, fourth, a religious people in Mexico. How long those races flourished is uncertain, but it was certainly several thousand years before the Christian era."

The reader will here notice the claim that races existed in the northern part of the United States before the birth of Christ, including one that inhabited the region south of the great lakes, which race, these scientists say, is especially noted as having, at some period before its overthrow, engaged in war to a certain extent, of which fact they say traces and evidences still remain after more than two thousand years have elapsed since those wars occurred.

Probably it is not doubted by any student Latter Day Saint that the Jaredite nation of Book of Mormon history is identical with the people whom the antiquarians of our times have denominated the Mound Builders, this name having been given by reason of the numerous mounds they erected, so many and so extensive, even some of them wonderful and magnificent in size after the passing of thousands of years. Of their remains quite a complete knowledge can be gained by reading Prof. J. D. Baldwin's "Ancient America," pages 1 to 75. On page 32 Mr. Baldwin says:—

"This ancient race seems to have occupied nearly the whole basin of the Mississippi and its tributaries." Then he mentions their complete occupation of the valley of the Ohio, and from there to the Gulf of Mexico, and adds: "No other united people previous to our time can be supposed to have occupied so large an extent of territory in this part of North America."—Page 32.

As to the period when the Mound Builders dwelt in those parts we have seen that Col. Whittlesy states that a race lived south of the great lakes before the Christian era. So also Prof. Baldwin proves conclusively that the Mound Builders inhabited that region prior to Christ's birth. On page 49 he presents the fact of skeletons having been found in the dry and compact earth at the bottom of the great mounds, and, comparing with less favorable burial places in Europe, where bones have lain for near two thousand years, he decides their condition to be "an accurate measure of time," and adds:—

"It allows us to assume that these extremely decayed skeletons of the Mound-Builders are much more than two thousand years old."—Page 49.

So also, on page 73, Prof. Baldwin concludes from other evidences that "a very long period, far more than two thousand years, it may be, must have elapsed since they left the valley of the Ohio."

Now the question remains, why did they leave, or how did they cease their dwelling there, and what caused their entire disappearance from among the races of men, so that no posterity remained?

On this point Mr. Baldwin says, page 74: "Perhaps they . . . saw there [in the Ohio valley] but little of any other people until an irruption of warlike barbarians came upon them from the northwest." He mentions again that probably "an influx of barbarians" drove them out "after centuries of occupation." On page 50 Mr. Baldwin says:—

"And when, after many ages of such occupation, they finally left, or were driven away, a long period must have elapsed before the trees began to grow freely in and around their abandoned works."

And the more that we accept the conclusions of Gallatin, Baldwin, Whittlesy, Squier, and Foster that the Mound Builders composed a "dense agricultural population," that "their unity as a people, which is everywhere so manifest, must have been expressed in political organization," and that there "must have been settled life, with its accumulations, and an intelligently organized industry, fixed habits directed by intelligence," all of which, Baldwin says, "means civilization," the more we accept these findings the more we are forced to conclude that only great and urgent causes, powerful forces, could have brought to a complete end that mighty and wonderful empire, which men say must have had a "central government" and a "national name." Men say that that nation had cities where ours now stand, and that agriculture, manufactures, mining, and the arts were carried on to a marvelous degree, and all the region mentioned was filled by this great people. Now the history of the world shows that great nations are only overthrown, and mighty peoples are only brought to extinction, through war, either by foreign war or so-called civil war, those powerful forces at home or abroad that disrupt or lay waste empires and kingdoms. Hence we accept the evidences given by Col. Whittlesy, Prof. Baldwin, and others, that south of Lakes Ontario and Erie great wars were carried on, even as the Book of Mormon very fully sets forth in its pages.

The next extract submitted is from Col. C. G. Foster, as follows:—

"Ancient Works in the Ohio Valley.—The ancient earthworks in this valley have been so elaborately described by Squier and Davis that I shall only refer to their labors. . . . Not only are the banks of the Ohio, at frequent intervals, crowned by these structures, but those of the subordinate streams, such as the Wabash, the Scioto, the Miami, and the Muskingum, entering from the north, and those from the opposite side, such as the Kanawhas, the Cumberland, and Tennessee. The number of tumuli [mounds] in Ohio alone is estimated [by the authors referred to] at ten thousand, and the number of enclosures at from one thousand to fifteen hundred. . . . In many of these works we meet with a feature which impresses the beholder most forcibly as to the unity of design and the mathematical precision which have been carried out in their construction. I refer to the elaborately constructed walls of earth or stone with which the mounds are enclosed. In these walls the geometrical figures of the square, the circle, the octagon, and the rhomb are represented. There are gateways, parallel lines, outlooks, and other forms, the whole forming an intricate and yet harmonious system. . . . The most intricate, if not the most gigantic of all the Mound Builders' works, occur in the Licking valley, near Newark. They . . . are elevated from thirty to fifty feet above these water courses, and extend over an area of two square miles."—Prehistoric Races, pages 124-126.

Colonel Foster speaks of the whole as a "magnificent system of works." Of one part of it he says that it is a circle inclosing over thirty acres of ground. At the time of the description by himself and Colonel Whittlesy the embankment walls were twelve feet high and the base was fifty feet broad, with an interior ditch all around that was thirty-five feet wide and seven feet deep.

Of these and the many other great inclosures within walls of earth, or earth and stone, it can only be said that it is not certain nor proven that they were for defensive or warlike purposes. Concerning them Prof. J. D. Baldwin says:—

"Another class of these antiquities consists of enclosures formed by heavy embankments of earth and stone. There is nothing to explain these constructions so clearly as to leave no room for conjecture and speculation. It has been suggested that some of them may have been intended for defense, others for religious purposes. A portion of them, it may be, encircled villages or towns. In some cases the ditches or fosses were on the inside, in others on the outside."—Ancient America, pages 19, 20.

The above quotations are given without purpose to prove that such inclosures were all for use in time of war, but only to show what that people built, and the possibility that such inclosures, with great ditches along the walls, are likely to have been for use in defensive warfare. We may give more upon this point before closing.

I believe that the foregoing paragraphs are altogether descriptive of the Mound Builders, or Jaredites, and their desolating civil strife which occurred six to seven hundred years before Christ's birth, but what follows this I believe may include both, but that chiefly they describe the works erected during the Nephite-Lamanite war of extermination a thousand years later than the other.

On page 30 of "Ancient America," Professor Baldwin gives figure 10, a picture of what he calls "Fortified Hill, Butler County, Ohio," the fort being a defensive wall or embankment, along the edge of the precipice, high above the creek. On both the outside and the inside of the entry way are several extra lines of defense, short circles and straight lines of embankment, evidently for especial use in defending against attacks at the only entry there is to this fortified position.

So also figure 11 represents another stone inclosure that takes in 140 acres of high ground along Paint Creek, Ohio, all evidences being that it was used as a stone fortress, for defense by the people in possession. And these are but specimens of advantageous points and elevations upon which were placed well-built walls; also the approaches were guarded by advance works and still further protected by inner ones. All writers agree that much wisdom is shown to have been used in selecting advantageous places, as well as excellent skill in the manner of fortifying these elevations and defensive points.

Also it is plain that these ancient fighters provided for water to satisfy thirst when occupying these works. They constructed parallel walls from these forts to the rivers or creeks near them, so that carriers could convey water along under cover, and be defended while thus at work. Of such a fortress in Illinois, Col. Foster says:—

"According to the same authority [Prof. Cox] there is a high hill bordering the valley of the Saline River, in Illinois, on which there is a walled fort, the walls being from four to five feet high. . . . On the south side access is cut off by a precipitous descent, in the form of a cliff from forty to fifty feet in height, but on the north side the slope is gradual and very rocky. The walls conform to the crest of the hill, which is very narrow, and the form of the fortified position is that of an irregular square. . . . A narrow and zigzag passage, easily defended, leads down to the river. The inhabitants call this the Stone Fort."—Prehistoric Races, pages 131, 132.

The last four paragraphs I believe, as I said previously, refer to the works of the later colony, Nephite-Lamanite, and scientists agree that quite a difference exists in the character of the works throughout the States before-named, some having been built by a later people than the Mound Builders. This view, of course, agrees with Book of Mormon history. I quote again from Col. Foster:—

"Ancient works of Northern Ohio and Western New York.—The region adjacent to Lake Erie, comprehending Northern Ohio and Western New York, contains ancient earthworks which differ somewhat from those of the Ohio Valley. There is the same combination of mound and enclosure, but with the ditch invariably on the outside of the parapets. Squier was disposed to regard these works as much more recent than those of the true Mound Builders. Col. Whittlesey, however, claims for them as high an antiquity, but belonging to a different nation. He would classify the ancient works into three great divisions, and assign their construction to three distinct nations: 1. Those of the Ohio Valley, as the work of the Agricultural Nation; 2. Those of the Fort Builders on the Lakes, as those of the Military Nation; 3. Those between the Mississippi and Lake Michigan, as the works of the Effigy Nation."—Prehistoric Races, pages 144, 145.

Col. Foster says that he does not see the necessity for this assignment, because the Squier and Davis surveys show that the Fort-building people penetrated to the Ohio River. He says that Prof. E. B. Andrews, of Ohio, describes an earthwork as far south as Vinton County, which has the ditch "outside the parapet." Prof. Foster adds:—

"Recognizing these minor distinctions, it might be claimed that the earth-works of the Upper Mississippi were constructed by a different people, for the reason that all the mounds are destitute of enclosures; and that those of the Lower Mississippi were the work of still another people, because the truncated-pyramidal form predominates, and are rarely enclosed. In what may be called the frontier of the Mound Builders' empire, as I shall endeavor to show, it became necessary to fortify against sudden irruptions of the enemy, hence the enclosures; but, as we penetrate the heart of the empire, these structures disappear. If our country were to become a desolation, the future antiquary would find the sea coast studded with fortifications of a complex form, but, as he penetrated to the interior, they would disappear altogether."—Prehistoric Races, page 145.

Thus we see that the entire trend of the arguments of scientific men is to the end that the regions spoken of were the scenes of war in ancient days, both offensive and defensive, and that a nation or nations perished from the earth. The last quotation brings us back to a consideration of the Mound Builders, or Jaredites, again. In this connection I notice that Col. Foster mentions the multitude of mounds at the mouth of the Wabash River, and across the Ohio River in Kentucky. He quotes a letter from S. S. Lyon, who has seen the works of the Mound Builders in many States. He says:—

"If the mounds, ash-heaps, bone-beds, etc., are any evidence of a formerly populous and settled country, it is found here. In my examinations I find nearly one hundred mounds in an area of one hundred acres."—Prehistoric Races, page 132.

Foster says that, ascending the Wabash, the high banks of the river are crowned by these ancient works, and he mentions the removal of a mound in Vincennes, Indiana, in 1859. It was 66 feet across and 16 feet high, and the lower strata was found to be a bed of human bones, the skulls and all other bones being "promiscuously mingled as though a pile of bodies had been heaped up." The great number, and their mixed condition, caused Mr. William Pidgeon to name it the "Battle burial mound."

Of "the ancient works at Merom," Indiana, Col. Foster says (page 133) that the mounds there "have yielded a number of skulls of a peculiar conformation." He quotes Mr. F. W. Putnam, who writes about these works, saying:—

"The fort is situated on a plateau about 170 feet in height above low water. The bank is very steep on the river side, and [it] forms the western line of the fortification, while deep ravines add to its strength on the other sides, the weak points being strengthened by earth-works. . . . Looking at the natural advantages offered by this location, it is the one spot of the region that would be selected to-day for the erection of a fortification in that vicinity."—Prehistoric Races, 133, 136.

The following is an extract that I made, some twenty-five years ago, from Brownell's "Indian Races," page 46, and, so far as I can remember, it is descriptive of defensive works in North America. He says:—

"In many of these fortified places skill is evinced, angles, bastions, and curtains being frequently traceable. Says a traveler: 'Though much defaced by time, yet every angle was distinguishable, and appeared as regular, and fashioned with as much military skill, as if planned by Vauban himself.'"

I will close my quotations from Prof. Foster by the use of the following:—

"There can be little doubt that such works as those on the banks of both the Miamis in Ohio; on the bluffs of the Saline River in Illinois, and at other points, were erected for purely defensive purposes, and were selected in reference to military considerations. They are almost natural fortresses, which could only be approached by an enemy uncovering his front to the full force of such missiles as the besieged might employ. . . . Those works in Northern Ohio and Western New York, which exhibit the trenches on the outside of the parapets, are also classed as defensive. . . . These enclosures are the most conspicuous along what may be called the frontier of the Alleghanies. . . . A great line of defense, I think, is traceable all the way from Western New York to the Ohio River, and even beyond."—Prehistoric Races, pages 174, 175.

Then he quotes "Ancient Monuments" by Hon. E. G. Squier, who says:—

"There seems to have existed a system of defenses, extending from the sources of the Alleghany and Susquehanna [rivers], in New York, diagonally across the country, through Central and Northern Ohio, to the Wabash. Within this range, the works which are regarded as defensive are largest and most numerous. If an inference may be drawn from this fact, it is that the presence of hostilities was from the northeast; or that, if the tide of migration flowed from the south, it received its final check upon this line. On the other hypothesis . . . we may suppose that from this direction came the hostile savage hordes, before whose incessant attacks the less warlike Mound Builders gradually receded, or, beneath whose exterminating cruelty, those who occupied the frontier entirely disappeared, leaving these monuments only to attest their existence, and the extraordinary skill with which they defended their altars and their homes. Under either assumption it is clear that the contest was a protracted one."—Ancient Monuments, page 44.

So able are the conclusions of Mr. Squier, so clearly has he traced the evidences, that we are compelled to say that he has in this matter read history without the use of the books. How clearly his words describe the facts, where he says that if the "tide of emigration flowed from the south" then "upon this line" [Western New York to Indiana] it "received its final check;" for this is the very thing that history relates, both in the case of the Jaredites and that of the Nephite-Lamanite armies.

The differences between the peoples and their methods, which so puzzles the scientists, are plain to Book of Mormon students, and each reader can see the points without my calling attention to them separately.

Perhaps nothing more is needed to prove the ground taken in the aforesaid "Book of Mormon Lectures" on the point at issue, or upon which evidence was asked to its full establishment. However, if space would permit, there could be given lengthy quotations from Josiah Priest's "American Antiquities," in attestation of the things already given from Foster, Squier, Baldwin, Brownell, and other historians and scientists, in relation to the "Battle Grounds of Ancient Americans." As it does not seem to be necessary I forbear.—H. A. Stebbins, in Religio's Arena, Autumn Leaves for March, 1899.

BLAKES MILLS, Ohio, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—I came here yesterday by request of president of mission. It is so terribly cold that is hard to work or do anything in missionary work; 26° below zero this morning. It puts me in mind of Michigan weather. I believe I could have done more where people wanted me this cold winter weather, than I can down here on an old beaten track, where so many have been before me.

I have a good opening in Trumbull County, where people are very much interested in the work, and I believe some will come into the work there in the near future. I was with the Akron saints for three or four days and enjoyed myself while there. I administered to several. There seems to be lots of sickness around among the saints as well as in the world, everywhere.

The work is onward as far as I can learn.

Hopefully yours,

F. C. SMITH.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—The article in a late Herald, "The Gathering," by Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, presents good thoughts for the consideration of the saints. Now saints, arise from your slumber and heed the warning voice with no uncertain sound from the watchman upon the walls of Zion. The clouds seem to be gathering here and there. The storms are fast approaching, and we are scattered around too. Long years have I been waiting to hear the watchman's sound. What joy it brings to my soul, that the time is so near at hand that we can consecrate to the Lord and fulfill the great command. Dear brethren and sisters, let us shake off the coals from our garments and arise in the strength of the Lord, and break off the yoke of our bondage with the pleasures and frolics of this world, and press forward to that high and holy calling whereunto the Lord has called us, "Come out of her," O, ye my people, saith the Lord (D. and C.); prepare for the conflict before us. Buckle on the whole armor of righteousness that we may shine as bright as the sun at noonday. How many times has the Father said, "Come up higher, O ye my people, come up higher, by keeping the celestial law."

Let us pay our tithing and gather together, and consecrate of the property the Lord has intrusted to our care and be united as one family, that we may be able to call the blessings of heaven upon us both spiritual and temporal, as the Father has promised. "If ye are not one ye are not mine," saith the Lord. (D. and C.)

I have been in this church for over twenty years and this is my first letter for the pages of the Herald, and maybe this will be laid by in the waste basket. If so, all right; I shall write as I feel, for I am in this work for life. I have paid my tithing, I believe since 1881. The Lord chastised me for ceasing to pay for two years. I then retraced my steps, and paid my two years back tithing. O how happy I felt when I paid that two years of back tithing! I shall never forget that day, Saints. O, that sweet Spirit of Israel's God that rested upon me in that hour that I paid it! It brings tears of joy to my very soul at this writing that I complied with the dictates of the Spirit, at the same time I looked at myself and my family with but a little footwear and very little clothing to carry us through the cold winter, and but a little meal in the house and nearly an empty cellar, and I believe about three dollars left of the proceeds of stock that I sold for the purpose of paying the Father according to the law. O, that beautiful voice that said to me these words: "Now, you shall be blessed." How literally it is being fulfilled, though I have made many mistakes, but the Lord has been with me in all my trials and frustrated the wicked designs of men for my good, or my life would have been taken from the earth and my family scattered and my home taken.

We are living in perilous times, brethren and sisters, and if we do not come up to the standard of the law as laid down in the Doctrine and Covenants we shall suffer loss; and the time is not far distant. May the blessings of the Lord be with his saints.

Yours in gospel bonds,

WILLIAM LENTELL.

HARTINGTON, Neb., Feb. 16.

Editors Herald:—In your issue for January 25, we see an article headed, "A plucky elder." While reducing its contents we well remember that gathering corn days for board and to get money to pay hall rent, and preaching nights, has been our experience while in this part of the vineyard. As regards the "wind and rabbit tracks," there is sufficient of each. If any of the brethren begrudge me the "ten pounds" gained, and would like to have some experience along those lines, please make your application at next General Conference.

I know that I have been in Northern Nebraska, and that mercury was blown down to forty below, and need only refer to the peeled condition of my nose to prove it.

I left South Sioux City, Nebraska, Monday, the 13th, and came to this place, about eighteen miles southwest of Yankton, South Dakota. I found the Disciple preacher here holding meetings in the schoolhouse. He has been here four weeks, and my opinion is that he would stay until next August if by so doing he would prevent me holding meetings in the neighborhood. I received an invitation from an outsider living near the schoolhouse, to preach in his house. I am just mean enough to avail myself of all such privileges. I attended the Campbellite meeting and announced to his congregation that I would commence the following evening at Mr. Sinclair's. I also handed the minister a "Wrinkle" and invited him to come. I didn't get the minister out, but I got his congregation, except about six grown persons. The room, although large, would hardly accommodate the crowd that assembled at Mr. Sinclair's to hear us present the restored gospel. A number are near the kingdom at this place.

I have been greatly blessed while presenting the word during the past year. A number have been brought to a knowledge of the truth.

In gospel bonds,

I desire the prayers of God's people that I may overcome evil and keep his law and be saved with his people.

HILLSDALE, Wis., Feb. 8.

Editors Herald:—Notwithstanding the extreme cold weather which has been ranging from 45 to 55 degrees below zero for the last two weeks in this region, we have been preaching to large audiences of interested listeners, old and young and the middle-aged. Quite a number of old men who have never been known to go to church before have attended these meetings for three weeks, and have become interested in religion, and when we closed our meetings at the Grice schoolhouse last Sunday night these very men came up and bade us good-bye with a "God bless you," while the unbidden tear of sympathy trickled down the cheek. I tell you, brethren and collaborators in the Lord's vineyard, I believe that there are thousands of good honest-hearted souls in this broad land who have never heard the glad sound of the beautiful gospel, but who would obey could they have an opportunity of hearing. But oh! "how can they hear without a preacher; and how can he preach except he be sent?" "But," says one, "we send out lots of elders—missionaries." Yes, that is true, and many of these missionaries hang around the organized branches and do but very little real missionary work. This latter-day work will never move along as it might, and should, and as it did in the days of the Martyr, until the elders work in harmony with the order that the Lord has given in regard to the spreading of the work of God. When the seventies, who are the especial witnesses, will get out into the fields away from the branches and let the high priests and elders do the presiding and looking after the flocks at home, then the great work will begin to move forward and God will bless his people more abundantly.

Some one said to me, I thought boastfully, not long ago, that nearly every member of the Second Quorum of the Seventy were presiding, either as branch or district officers. Now I ask why not ordain these men to the office of high priest if you want them to preside and then select men for seventies who are willing to push out into the world and do the work of a seventy?

We have opened up three new places already, and in each place we have had a fine hearing so far. At each of the first two places some of them have said they would be baptized when the weather got warmer.

Elder J. B. Wildermuth, my nephew and associate, has already proved himself to be an efficient laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. I found him here all alone, and yet not alone, for the Lord was with him; besides he had raised up a host of friends, the large schoolhouse being filled every night, some coming for miles, notwithstanding the extreme cold weather. We expect to canvass this northern country from schoolhouse to schoolhouse until if possible the people may all have a chance to hear the restored gospel message. O, may the Lord bless his people and help each one to arise and do his duty. We are well, and happy and hopeful, looking forward to the ultimate triumph of Jesus Christ and all his great works.

Your collaborators,

E. M. and J. B. WILDERMUTH.

BELLAIR, Ill., Feb. 18.

Editors Herald:—I came here by advice of Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge of Southern Illinois. I am preaching in a hall and am having a goodly number of listeners each evening. Am feeling as well as usual in a spiritual way, and have no desire whatever to become indifferent or slack concerning duty. I feel as I always have in the past the importance of pressing forward in the line of duty, fully believing that God is at the helm.

There has been a great deal of preaching here, and many have been convinced that we have the truth, through the efforts of Brn. G. H. Hilliard and I. M. Smith; yet only a few out of the many convinced have ever accepted it, and whether any more who were convinced will ever accept it in this life remains to be revealed. I confess I do not know. The few who did accept seem to be firm in the faith although there are only two out of that few who reside here at present. The others have moved away and one (Bro. Alonzo Parsons) has passed over on the other side.

Just south of here, at Kibbie temple, Bro. White and the writer have been trying to revive the work, at which place Emsley Curtis built up a large branch in a short time, about which so much was published at the time in our church papers; but, seemingly, the branch went down in about the same length of time it took to build it up. An effort was made while we were there to reorganize the branch. Bro. Charles A. Griswold was ordained a priest and chosen president of the branch, and A. McKee his assistant, and J. T. Curtis was sustained as presiding teacher. Bro. White intended to have visited other places in the district, but on account of some other things to look after in another part of his mission he thought it wise to go there.

Yours in the faith,

F. M. SLOVER.

MOORHEAD, Iowa, Feb. 18.

Editors Herald:—After rendering what assistance I could at the Interstate Sunday School Teacher's Institute, I began meetings at Persia, January 1, continuing till the 6th, when a message came that my oldest sister was dying and wished to see me. To her bedside I proceeded as rapidly as possible but ere I arrived her spirit had taken its flight, so that the cold form of clay was all the reception I received. She left a husband and six children, one child being an infant babe of six days, now in the care of Bro. George and Sr. Nellie Ballentyne, of Moorhead, Iowa.

I immediately returned to Persia where I again began meetings, Bro. W. A. Smith occupying the appointments while I was absent, and continued for a few days longer, when another message announced the illness of my wife, and again I turned my face homeward with sadness, leaving the saints somewhat disappointed and saddened. Excellent interest was shown considering the sickness existing there and the extreme cold part of the time.

As soon as wife's health would permit I went to Missouri Valley and continued till Wednesday, the 8th, when it was so extremely cold that it was thought inadvisable to continue services, and advisable for me to return home on account of ill health there. Began here on Wednesday eve with a full house, and have had excellent interest since. At the close of the Wednesday evening service Bro. E. C. Outhouse, teacher of the branch, and Sr. Mary Turman, of Smithland, were made husband and wife according to the sacred covenant of the church, "that is keeping" themselves "wholly for each other and from all others during" their "lives." I often think what might Zion's children now have been had that covenant have been kept inviolate from the beginning of creation till now.

The missionary work in this mission is brightening some. Some of the local ministry are approving themselves.

Hoping for the best, and working for the victory, I am, In Christ,

J. F. MINTUN.

P. S.—After a second reading of "True Succession in Church Presidency," I can say I am well pleased with its pointed arguments, and clear, well-arranged evidence presented. I have written articles for the Missouri Valley Times and the Logan Observer, both of which were printed, on the question of whether B. H. Roberts should be received as a member of Congress, and have sent an article on the same subject to the Sioux City Journal. The people are taking notice of our doings in connection with this case.

SEYMOUR, Mo., Feb. 7.

Editors Herald:—It has been about two years since I wrote on this subject. I thought I would not mention it again, but coming into this country has changed my mind. I believe this to be one of the best openings for those wishing a home that can be found with a small amount of capital. There are nine hundred and twenty acres of land all in one body joining E. T. Atwell's eight hundred acre farm that can be bought for twenty-one hundred dollars; one forty in cultivation, with good water, fine orchard, common house and barn, good for this part. Good springs are on the land; the greater portion of the land is fine, covered with good timber. The brakes are just the place for small fruits of all kind.

E. T. Atwell is setting out three thousand fruit trees, besides small fruits of every description. I would think it a wise conclusion of the saints to all throw in their mite and buy this land, set out a large fruit farm, build up a town and schools for the worthy saints that have no means to help themselves. We are called as a class ignorant and lazy. Let us show by our works that we can get up a colony of industrious saints as well as Booth Tucker of the Salvation Army. E. T. Atwell is trying some of everything. Should one thing fail the other would hit. He keeps a lot of books on agriculture, of every description, telling how to grow large crops of corn and potatoes on small plots of ground.

I am of the opinion that this plan will work all right. Let some good farmer with wisdom conduct and give instructions to all who wish to come. While the fruit trees are growing there could be raised alfalfa, artichokes, corn, melons, etc. Our books say that one acre of artichokes will fatten twenty-five hogs, and all that you have to do is to grow them through the summer, then turn your hogs in and let them feed themselves.

The plan I would suggest would be to write to each branch of the church and get each branch to assist all they could, to buy the land. We are on top of the Ozark Mountains. The land is rich and productive. Ten cents from each of six hundred or eight hundred saints would buy a stump puller that would take out any stump or tree on the land. To start this ball rolling I will start it with five dollars, B. A. Atwell with the same, E. T. Atwell with five dollars, O. R. Atwell ten dollars, W. A. Atwell five dollars. It will be remembered that all who contribute will be shareholders to the amount thrown in; those not wishing shares state the same when sending in their donations. Others can be bought out that do not wish to occupy nor donate free.

We are commanded to build up the waste places; therefore let us work while the day dawns. Bro. Joseph, if you say for us to go ahead with this we will do so. Can you select one with wisdom to aid in this undertaking, who would govern the scheme? Should the ball start we shall do more. I forgot to mention that this land is thirty-five miles east of Springfield, Missouri, and a little south of east. It lies five or six miles south of Seymour, Missouri, and that far south of the Fort Scott and Memphis railroad, which constitutes the Gulf Line of road. I will close waiting for your counsel. Please oblige with counsel.

I am, as ever, strong in the everlasting covenant,

M. A. ATWELL.

WALLACEBURG, Ont., Jan. 19.

Editors Herald:—I love to read the Herald's pages, also the Ensign. I also know it takes money to publish them, as well as labor. It makes me feel bad when I see, as I often do, so much standing unpaid for by the saints of God, when a little effort with each would make it all right, and our Father would be so much better pleased with us.

Last Sunday our hearts were made glad by a visit from our dear brother, George Green, president of Chatham district, and he always comes with good cheer, bringing glad tidings of good things. May the Lord bless him and his.

He told us how a company of angels was present at the time Bro. Swainson was ordained, and when the order was finished one took a chair and sat down to the table and wrote something, having a quill pen in his hand. This Sr. Green saw in open vision, she being present with us; and I knew there was something to be revealed at the time, but could not tell just how or what. This was about two months ago, and when I thought upon it I remembered how I wondered if there might not be angels around them at the time, as I had read and heard of such things being seen; and so it made my heart rejoice to hear how the Lord had shown in vision his angels whom he had sent to take note of the work being done in this little corner of his vineyard. And I feel I must be more careful and faithful in my walk in life so they can have good record of my works while here, and that I may be worthy to enter into his rest.

Since writing the above I have been sick with lagrippe and feel the smart of the rod of correction yet, for such I feel it has been to me. We learn obedience sometimes by the things we suffer, and in weakness are made strong to overcome evil. Sometimes our children omit to do as we advise them and we have to use the rod in order to bring about the desired result. Of course it is for their own good. Just so our Father in heaven has to do with us, when we don't heed the voice of the Spirit. I for one have omitted to do that which I have been told through the Spirit would be for my good, both soul and body, through weakness, and trust I may in the future be able to rejoice more and more each day that I have been counted worthy of chastisement. Pray for me.

Your sister,

ELIZABETH BENNETT.

MANCHESTER, Texas, Jan. 29.

Editors Herald:—As another year has passed and gone and thousands have passed off the stage of action; but God's work rolls on and will continue to do so until it goes to the utmost parts of the earth. The gospel is spreading its wings over Northeastern Texas, and we pray that a few more years will find thousands of saints in this country to sing the songs of Zion. But we are made sad often over seeing so many violations of God's law. In the 29th chapter, verse 18, of Proverbs, the wise man said: "He that keepeth the law, happy is he." And in the same chapter, "Where there is no vision, the people perish." And six thousand years have proven this to be true.

If we will live for God's blessings he will give them to us. Since we have obeyed this latter-day work we have been blessed with the Spirit of prophecy and have seen the sick healed, and been blessed with several visions; and should I not endure to the end, and be cast into the dark prison world, there I will raise my right hand to the truthfulness of this latter-day work.

It has been made known to me by the Spirit of God that Bro. Joseph Smith, Sr., was a prophet of God and that he began a work that will roll on until the heavens are unvailed and Jesus Christ comes with his saints to reign on this earth. D. H. Bays, myself, and others may fall; but God will roll on this great latter-day work to success.

Three years ago last November I was one day looking at the leaves as they fell from the trees, and my mind was called to all of nature, that it must die. So I began to think of man and his redemption, and just how it would be with him after he was redeemed, and would we know each other; and about that moment I thought of my brother, J. D. Erwin, who was at that time in the State of Alabama preaching the gospel, and I wondered if we never meet in this life any more would we recognize each other if blessed to reach Zion; and would God cause a temple to be built to gather his people. At this moment the first chapter and fifth verse of James was brought to my mind, "If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God;" so we went to a lonely little grove and sought unto God in the matter, and after praying, God blessed us with a vision and we were made to look down the stream of time and see the temple and how it was built; and of all the grand buildings we have ever been permitted to see it was the grandest. And we saw the saints gathering from all quarters of the earth; singing the songs of Zion. And while we were in the temple viewing its grandeur we met with Bro. J. D. and had quite a talk with him, and he stated to me, "Brother, who would not take the stripes I got in the State of Arkansas for a glory like this!" the temple seemed to be built out of white granite and had on the north and south a large entrance which was beautifully arched over; and the saints were gathering from the north and the south, the east and west. The end of the temple was supported by two large bars which looked like silver. The bars extended in the east end from the northeast corner at the floor to the southeast corner at the top, and the other bar extended from the floors in the southeast corner to the top in the northeast corner and crossed each other in the middle of the east end of the temple, and the west end was the same.

I saw many other things, which would take too much space in the Herald to write of; but this was seen by the power and Spirit of God; and the glorious day is not far in the future when God will begin to gather his people. But keeping the law of God is all that will ever cause us to be gathered.

Let us as the people of God come up higher and live better in the future. We ask an interest in the prayers of saints that we may endure to the end and be an instrument in God's hand to bring many sons and daughters of Adam into the kingdom of God.

Yours in the gospel,

E. A. ERWIN.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Feb. 21.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Des Moines district held at this point the 18th and 19th inst., was quite well attended, and good will and encouragement in the work were manifested by those in attendance. Apostle H. C. Smith was with us, aiding in the good work. If not specially called to other fields he will visit several points in the district and labor to the best interests of all under the circumstances. One, a Bro. Bean, of Adel, was baptized. Quite a good interest was manifest at the Sunday school convention held during the day and evening of the 17th.

It is the opinion of some of the saints of the district that conditions relating to the work here are improving. For this we feel thankful, as this as well as the spread of the work is that for which we are laboring.

May our Father bless all his saints, endow all the ministry, and move forward his work marvelously.

Yours hopefully,

C. SCOTT.

EDMOND, Ok., Feb. 21.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Oklahoma district was held Saturday and Sunday, the 18th and 19th. We had a splendid conference, good attendance of saints, all things being considered. Eleven of the ministry general and local were present, besides several of the laity. The afternoon prayer meeting was especially good, the Spirit being present in power, to the comfort and edification of all. Words of cheer and encouragement were spoken through the gift of tongues, while testimonies of a spiritual and confirming nature were presented by various persons. It was a feast to the saints, many of whom had not before witnessed the blessing of the Lord in such power. Particulars of the business transacted will be reported by the secretary.

I have done very little preaching of late. I thought best to take close care of my health during the bad weather. I think that with the return of settled weather I shall be able to resume active duty. I have remained in my field, though not preaching, and have found considerable work to do in various ways which I feel has not been in vain. The Oklahoma saints generally are alive and the work is advancing. We had the pleasure during conference of witnessing the baptism of Mr. and Mrs. Pate formerly of Henry County, Missouri, who now live at Okarche, Oklahoma. They had been convinced through the labors of the Brn. White, Pement, Keck, and others, the writer also contributing his mite while stopping with them four years ago while preaching there in company with Bro. Keck. Graceland College came up for consideration during the conference. The chain letter system was voted against, it being thought best to follow the plan as laid down by the college committee as the wisest and most economical way of raising funds. A friendly feeling exists toward Graceland and the saints of this field will no doubt respond to the extent of their ability.

Bro. Hilliard's article on the gathering has aroused universal comment out this way. One feature is, the talk is all in favor of it. The people need education along this line. They are ready to do if told how. A great change is coming over the minds of the people both in and out of the church. What does it mean? The present competitive system is not giving satisfaction. It must be replaced by a better one based on the love of our fellow man. So may it be.

In bonds,

C. R. DUNCAN.

PIPER CITY, Ill., Feb. 24.

Editors Herald:—I have been engaged in this vicinity since holidays, preaching at the Heavener schoolhouse, where there is a small branch of the church; and at the Dunn and McBride schoolhouses; the last two named are new openings, where I held forth more than five weeks—more than two weeks in each place. Part of the time the roads were very muddy and rough, which made it hard for the people to get out; but when the roads were good we had good attendance at both places. We were well cared for by the people, all of whom seemed anxious to make us as comfortable as possible.

While no great results are yet manifest as the result of the efforts, yet there has been a vast amount of prejudice removed, and friends made for the cause. Some few are specially interested, and are still investigating the work.

When we left we had many invitations from the people at both places to "come again;" and often the question was asked, "Well, when do you think you can visit us again?" And, "Be sure and come next summer," was heard from a number.

Among the many that showed kindness to the "minister," was Samuel Clark, Daniel Mylcrane, Daniel Cook, Frank Stadler, John Heavener, Hugh Hawthorne, Jacob Ehresman, and others.

These people were willing to listen, and thereby learned that there was a great difference between what is commonly known as Mormonism and true Latter Day Saintism; whereas, before hearing, many or most of them had thought all Latter Day Saints belonged to the one class.

I think good will result from these efforts in the future. If the roads were only good during the winter months, I am satisfied that a good work could be done in these country places, as I find that the people are practically left to themselves. During the summer months some of the preachers go out from the towns and preach at some of the country schoolhouses. But when the roads get muddy here it is very difficult getting about; the mud not only gets deep, but becomes very sticky and rolls up on the wheels of vehicles, sometimes clogging them so they will not turn, but just slide along. The saints and friends have been very kind, and my wants—temporal—have been well supplied.

On January 3 the saints completely surprised me by presenting me with a letter expressing their appreciation of my efforts, and with it the neat sum of fourteen dollars to aid in getting a new suit of clothes. May the Father bless and reward them.

The few saints in this branch hold regular social and prayer service, and hold Sunday school every Sunday, but have no preaching save when some of the traveling ministry come along.

The Sunday school, under the able superintendency of Bro. S. D. Heavener, assisted by Bro. Ben Pearson, Sr. N. I. Heavener, and Mary Siefkin, and others, is doing well. If only the officers of the branch would have a little more push, pray to the Lord for help, then study and "preach the word," we think much more good could be accomplished.

Here, as elsewhere, the B. H. Roberts question is being agitated, and a petition is being circulated against him. We have tried to place ourselves on record relative to this matter, and let the people know the position of the Reorganized Church.

Hoping, praying, and working for Zion's redemption, I am still in the conflict,

H. E. MOLER.

MACON, Mo., Feb. 17.

Editors Herald:—When we see the signs of the times multiplying we have been made glad to read what has been written lately in the Herald, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves, urging attention to the higher requirements that have been commanded: the council of the elders or the school of the prophets, gospel in temporal relations, the gathering, etc., looking towards the redemption of Zion.

It has been remarked that there is need of industries, means of giving employment to those who want to gather and build up Zion, for they cannot go unless they can find something to do for a livelihood.

In regard to Lamoni or any other near community of saints having various coöperative institutions for the mutual benefits of their people, under the supervision of the church, well and good, providing it were distinctly understood that they were local affairs, to be established by local means; but when it comes to industries of a general character; that is, contributed to by the saints, generally, towards which their "surplus" would go, such industries should be planted at the center, in the land "which I have appointed to be the land of Zion for the beginning of the gathering of my saints," as has been commanded, and radiate out from there as needs be.

It is understood that there are to be stakes, but there is nothing said in the revelations that justifies us in forming nucleuses, or planting inducements of a general nature at any of the stakes before the central place, attracting from or delaying the gathering at the center, as would be the tendency of the natural consequences.

In regard to putting "surplus" into factories, etc., a question arises: Is it correct to talk of these things first? The revelations on the subject of the gathering seem to me (I am not speaking of the individual or spiritual qualifications necessary now—that is supposed to be understood) to lay their stress on the purchasing of the lands in "Jackson County and the counties round about." Were the surplus means to be put into any other use, even though so well appearing as factories, etc., would it not retard buying up those lands just so much? When we move out it should be on the lines specified by the Lord, first, and bring our ideas in close accord with higher judgment. Developments will follow, the way for them will open, and the Lord will reveal more as we get in a position for it.

We do not want to become over enthusiastic, now, and desire to plunge into too many things at once. Moving out on the simple lines that have been made plain, carefully, with wisdom, "not in haste," as admonished, will doubtless be the safe course and save mistakes and sad experiences.

Sincerely,

LOUISE PALFREY.

MALLARD, Iowa, Feb. 20.

Editors Herald:—The Jaredite corn has been published in many papers, about it coming forth; but no one says anything about selling any for seed.

I raised some last year. The corn is a sweet corn variety; grows from ten to twelve feet high, a great rooter on dry land; stands dry weather; stalk remains green until frost takes it; stalk full of sweet juice. It is great for fodder; hogs will eat all of the stalk. I will furnish seed at thirty cents per quart and $1.25 per peck, here at the billing place; parties paying postage or express. I will send good seed. Send orders soon.

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 5.

THE DIFFERENT GLOBES—EVERY ONE TO RECEIVE ACCORDING TO HIS WORKS.

That there will be a difference between the salvation of those who obey the gospel in this life and those who put it off till they go to the pit or prison, and there learn obedience by the things which they suffer, is so clearly taught in the Scriptures that it really needs no proof; but that there may be no misunderstanding in regard to our position on the final destiny of man, and that the reader may know there is nothing in our position to encourage a man in putting off obedience till this earth life is over, I think best to present this chapter on the different degrees of glory. The first text of scripture I shall ask you to read is this:—

For therefore we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe.—1 Tim. 4: 10.

Now I believe that with all my heart. And as I think I have proven that he is "the Savior of all men," and that he "will have all men to be saved," I shall now attempt to prove that there is a special salvation for "those that believe." And in doing this it will be necessary to show that there are more places of happiness than one, and that those places of happiness differ, one from another, in glory. There are a number of proof texts in the Old Testament to which I wish to call your attention, and as they are so nearly alike, I shall quote them, without stopping to comment, simply italicising the words I wish you to notice.

Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the Lord's thy God.—Deut. 10: 14.

But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee.—1 Kings 8: 27.

But who is able to build him a house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him?—2 Chron. 2: 6.

But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? Behold, heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee.—2 Chron. 6: 18.

Thou, even thou, art Lord alone; thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their hosts.—Neh. 9: 6.

The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's.—Ps. 115: 16.

If there is only one heaven, then why should all those inspired writers use the word in the plural number? And if those "heavens" are all the same in glory, then why should one of them be represented as being so much superior to the others as to entitle it to be called "the heaven of heavens"? Evidently there is one that is superior to all the others, and we shall doubtless find it to be the special salvation for "those that believe." But this idea of more heavens than one is not confined to the writers of the Old Testament. Paul says:—

I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such a one caught up to the third heaven.—2 Cor. 12: 2.

Now there could not be a "third" finger on your hand if there was not a first and a second finger; there could not be a "third" day in the week if there was not a first and a second day; neither could there be a "third heaven" if there were no first and second heavens.

Again, the same writer says:—

There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead.—1 Cor. 15: 40-42.

You will notice that those glories are not the same: the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. The "glory of the sun," I should think, is "the heaven of heavens," because of its great superiority; and I should also pronounce it the special salvation for "those that believe." Then next to the glory of the sun is the glory of the moon; and as its glory is one, I understand that those who attain to it will be one, just as those who attain to the glory of the sun will be one, but it will, of course, be an inferior glory. Not so, however, with those who attain to the glory of the stars: their glory will be inferior to that of the moon, and they will differ, one from another, as the stars of heaven differ in brightness and splendor.

On this same subject the Savior says:—

In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.—John 14: 2, 3.

He says there are "many mansions," while Amos says "stories" or "chambers":—

It is he that buildeth his stories in the heaven.—Amos 9: 6.

The Revised Version says, "chambers." There are then "many mansions," or "stories," or "chambers," in this great universe which

God has builded; and the Savior said that he went to "prepare a place"—one of those "mansions" or "chambers," I should think—for his followers. And this, again, is the special salvation for "those that believe," "the glory of the sun," or "the heaven of heavens:" to dwell in the presence of the Savior, and with a fullness of his glory. This is the "inheritance" which Peter says is "incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you" (1 Pet. 1: 4). Those who reject the gospel here can never, so far as I can see, have any right or title to this inheritance, this special salvation, but must take a less glory than that of the sun. Where God and Christ are they can never come, but must suffer a never-ending loss—the loss of celestial salvation in the presence of God. Those who reject the gospel here may never receive even the glory of the moon, which when compared with the glory of the sun, is very inferior indeed; but they may be glad "after many days" of suffering "in the pit," to accept even a glory that is represented by one of the dimmest stars. But while they might be very glad to be sent forth "out of the pit wherein is no water," and to be received into one of the smallest glories, I doubt their being perfectly happy; there will be something lacking to make their joy full and complete. But they will be saved from death, from hell, and from sin, "every man in his own order." Their loss though will be very great, as great as the difference between the brightness and splendor of the sun and the brightness of the dimmest star that bedecks the heavens.

And this is not all. Those who reject the gospel here must be "turned into hell, with all the nations that forget God;" and when the dead in Christ shall be raised from the dead, to reign with the Savior, we are told that "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." There is a strong probability then of the wicked having to remain "shut up in prison," in "outer darkness," where "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth," during this thousand years, while the righteous dwell with God. The apostle says:—

Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after.—1 Tim. 5: 24.

And another apostle says:—

The time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?—1 Peter 4: 17.

Putting the two statements together, I get the idea that the saints of God were being judged, in part at least, even then; that their sins were going "before to judgment," and the saints were being cleansed from all sin by "obeying the truth;" and that when they are called to stand in the presence of God, they will receive the "crown of righteousness" which is laid up "for all them that love his appearing." But not so with the wicked; when they are called to stand before God, their sins "follow after" and condemn them in the presence of the Great Judge, and they are cast out "into outer darkness;" there they suffer "until the thousand years were finished," and "after many days shall they be visited."

Malachi, in speaking of the time when the Lord shall come and "make up my jewels," says:—

Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.—Mal. 3: 18.

Yes; there will be a difference. And the parable of the prodigal son illustrates this difference, to my mind, quite clearly. This parable is found in Luke 15:11-31. In it we have two brothers represented: one of them takes his portion of the father's goods and wastes it in sin and folly; the other one stays at home and faithfully discharges his duty as a faithful and obedient son. By and by there arose a great famine in the "far country," whither the younger son had gone, and in his dire extremity he resolved to return to his "father's house." His father ran to meet him, ordered that he should be well clothed, that the "fatted calf" should be killed, and that the whole household should "be merry,"—all because of the prodigal's safe return. The elder son, coming to the house at this time and learning the cause of all this merrymaking, became offended and refused to go into the house. And when his father came out and urged him to go in, he still refused, and proceeded to justify his conduct by referring to his past faithfulness as compared with his brother's unfaithfulness, and to the fact that during all those long years his father had never done for him as he was now doing for his unfaithful brother.

Colonel Ingersoll, I think it is, makes fun of this parable, and claims that the father is unjust. But to me it seems to be as true to nature as anything could be. Verse 31 says: "Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine." While the younger son was received back with great demonstrations of joy and gladness, the entire estate went to the elder son. The younger son might sit down and look out upon the farm, the barn, the stock, the machinery, the house that covered and protected him from the weather, the victuals upon the table from which he was eating; but he must recognize the fact that all, all belongs to the son who had been faithful and obedient. He must remember too with many regrets, that his father had given him the same chance that his brother had; but that he had squandered his part of the inheritance, and that now he is simply a beggar in the house of his father, a pauper, dependent upon the charity of his father and his brother. Thoughts like this would no doubt pass through his mind: I might have had a good farm, a good house, a good barn, plenty of stock, and plenty of money; but alas! I wasted everything, and my life is a blank—worse than a blank.

Reader, can you see any difference between the prodigal son and his faithful brother? Do you think for a moment that the prodigal is just as well off as if he had been faithful? Do you think that his being received back into his father's house, being conscious of all he had lost by disobedience could make him perfectly happy? It seems to me there is a wide difference. And now while I would not take the position that the Savior referred to those who do not obey the gospel in this life, in bringing before us this prodigal son, I do believe that the principle holds good with them, and that the lesson is a good one. It teaches that the faithful and obedient will receive the entire inheritance, even though the unfaithful and disobedient, after humble and contrite repentance, may be saved. And in line with this is the teaching of Paul:—

If a man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.—1 Cor. 3: 14, 15.

The works of the elder son, in the foregoing parable, did "abide," and he received "a reward;" "all that I have is thine," the father said to him. But the works of the younger son, being bad, were "burned," and he suffered "loss"—the loss of his part of the inheritance; but "he himself" was "saved; yet so as by fire."

Daniel says:—

And the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.—Dan. 7: 22.

And again he says:—

And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High.—Dan. 7: 27.

And in verse 18 he says:—

But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

Yes; there is a special salvation for "those that believe." Whatever salvation may be in store for those who have to learn obedience in the world to come, by the things which they suffer, one thing is sure: the "dominion," and the "greatness of the kingdom," are to be given to the saints of the Most High. God's love and mercy are unbounded, infinite; but we must remember that his justice is as great as his love, and that mercy cannot rob justice. The God of heaven has decreed that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap;" and there is no power beneath the heavens that can change his decrees, or thwart his purposes. Hence we believe that the wicked shall be "turned into hell," and that their punishment will be great; we believe too that their loss will be eternal, and that their suffering must continue until they learn obedience; and, further, we believe that they must accept God's terms of pardon before they can ever come out of the "prison house" to inherit even the smallest glory of the "many mansions" in our "Father's house." In other words, we take the position that there is no salvation for man, here or hereafter, only through obedience to God's law.

Can you see then anything in our position to encourage men to go on, even for one day, in sin and rebellion against God? Is a man going to break his arm simply because he is sure it can be set, and that it will get well in a few weeks? Is a man willing to go to State's prison simply because he will be permitted to go free after ten or fifteen years of hard labor? Then would a sensible man be willing to put off obedience to God simply because there is a possibility of his coming out of the pit after suffering there, in "outer darkness," for a thousand years? And then, remember, he cannot come where God and Christ are; can have no part in that special salvation, but must remain outside of the Holy City in some of the smaller glories. He will be as far inferior to what he might have been as one of the stars is inferior to the sun in brilliancy and power.

No, reader, there is nothing in God's law that will give man any encouragement to continue in sin. Every day, every hour that is spent in sin must cause us suffering; not only suffering, but the loss will be irreparable, in some respects at least. The temptation, here, to launch out upon the results of obedience and disobedience is strong; but I must forbear, lest we get too far from the object of this paper.

The Savior says:—

Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.—Rev. 22: 12.

If our works are bad they will be "burned," and we shall "suffer loss"—the loss of a fullness of glory in the presence of our Savior.

mony meeting, with Elder F. B. Blair in charge. The superintendent reported verbally. Eight of the eleven schools of the district reported. Report of auditing committee was adopted. The three main features of the evening session of the 9th were a discussion, "Ought parents to encourage the Sunday school and how," led by J. W. Wight. A paper on "District Sunday school institute;" by J. A. Gunsolley; and the election of officers. After the paper on Sunday school institutes had been read and discussed, the district officers were directed to take into consideration the propriety of holding an institute. The annual election of officers resulted in the selection of the following: superintendent J. A. Gunsolley, assistant superintendent W. B. Paul, secretary J. P. Anderson, treasurer John Lovell, librarian Clara Mader. The session on the afternoon of the 10th was devoted to presenting the work of the Religio. "The Religio's place in the church," and "How to begin and how to continue," were presented by J. A. Gunsolley, with the aid of the blackboard. The very cold weather interfered with the attendance, but a profitable time was had. Adjourned to meet at call of district officers.

Kewanee.

Kewanee district Sunday school convention was held at Kewanee, Illinois, February 3, and was attended by a large delegation. A very profitable time was enjoyed, by hearing very good papers and remarks on Sunday school work; blackboard exercise in the evening, which was very beneficial to all.

Fifteen minutes of each evening were occupied by the Religio in representing their work; as a result a society was organized at Cheltenham, February 17. Our district newspaper, "The Sunday School Advocate," read by Bro. T. J. Elliott, was a special feature of Sunday night's program. Owing to the extremely cold weather the attendance was not as large as otherwise would have been.

DECATUR DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

To all Officers, Teachers, and Members, Greeting:—Having been elected your superintendent for the ensuing year, I desire to express my confidence in the work and workers, and in the kind Father of all, who owns and blesses all who seek to build up the cause of truth.

We most surely believe that the Sunday school movement is approved of the Lord, and that it is an aid in building up his kingdom. The measure of our belief is told by the degree of diligence manifested upon our part. Do we believe it to the extent that we are willing to do all we can for its promotion? to the extent that we are willing to forego some of the conveniences and comforts of life that we may be at our posts? Are we willing to sacrifice the late hours in bed Sunday morning, or the pleasure of a Sunday visit, or ice cream party, in order to meet our classes and be on duty? Do we esteem the privilege of coworking with God for the salvation of his people of sufficient importance to brave the occasional inclement weather of this climate in order to be regular in attendance, so as to beget confidence in us upon the part of our fellow workers and the children? Are we sensible of the fact that our teaching and example may determine the life course of some individuals, and do we try to know aright what we attempt to teach? To the end that we may know aright, do we attend teachers' meetings and conventions when possible, so as to get the best thought and methods? Do we remember that this, too, as well as the church work proper, is God's work, and that our way is not necessarily his way; and do we ask daily, and constantly for his direction?

What shall we say, brethren and sisters of this district, to these questions? The responsibility resting upon us is great, for within our hands rests, quite largely, the power to mould the minds of the future men and women who are to be leaders in the church. Shall they fail, or shall their work not meet with God's approval because we have come short? God forbid.

I should like to have personal letters from any and all in the district who are having difficulty in any matter, or from any who may wish help in any phase of Sunday school work. Do you have trouble in keeping up attendance? or interest? Can you get your teachers out to teachers' meetings as well as you would like? Do you have any trouble in use of Quarterly? Are any of the "thousand and one" problems in Sunday school work perplexing you? Let me hear from you.

I shall not be able to travel much, but hope to be of some service. Bro. J. P. Anderson, our secretary, will do some visiting, and if you need aid which cannot be obtained by correspondence, he can come and see you. He is an energetic young man, devoted to the work, and competent to render aid in most any department of it. His address is Lamoni.

Hoping to cooperate with all schools now organized in the district, and that others may be organized; and soliciting the cooperation of all, in return, for which I trust I may prove worthy, I remain, in bonds,

J. A. GUNSOLLEY, Dist. Supt.

RELIGIO.

A GOOD STARTING POINT.

With March number of Autumn Leaves, programs for April, we finish what may be called a bird's eye view of the Book of Mormon people. We have been getting a general idea of them, locating them geographically.

In the April number of the Leaves, programs for May, begins the review of the Book of Mormon, which will be, in reality, a more careful study. This has been the general desire of the societies. The lessons will begin at the first of the book. Archæology will continue along with the lessons, and whereas we have found that the evidences affirm that there was an ancient civilization in America, and it has been located, we will now look into the manner of that civilization.

The lessons will be sufficiently brief not to overtax, and it will be the endeavor to make the programs very interesting, giving due consideration to the musical and literary, that our young people may be instructed in things of greatest importance, enjoy themselves, and develop their minds and talents—all at the same time.

Can any branch having young people under its care afford to let the opportunities of the Religio pass by? Now, in May, will be a most favorable time to start new societies, and for older societies that have not been pursuing the Book of Mormon study to begin to do so. We have given this notice in time to work up an organization and make arrangements to make a start by the first of May. We trust that wherever there are branches having young people, a strong effort will be made to organize a Religio society for their benefit. Branch officers, missionaries, district Sunday school superintendents,—anyone who feels interested may properly take the initiatory step. Don't wait for some one else to take the first step. Send for "Leaflet of Instruction" and Constitution and By-Laws," telling all about how to organize and what is needed to conduct a Religio society. You will be furnished a commission to organize, and all necessary information upon request made to the General Secretary, J. C. Hitchcock, 2507 Slatery Street, St. Louis, Missouri, or the undersigned.

BOND.—Mary E. Bond, daughter of Ira and Charlotte W. Bond, was born in Mendon Township, near Rochester, New York, July 24, 1828; she came to Ohio with her parents in 1832, where for the most part she has resided up to the time of her decease, which took place Saturday morning at one o'clock, February 4. Man, as organically constructed by his Creator, was made neither all for laughter nor all for tears; but tears and sorrow, pain and disappointment were so disproportionately allotted to her in her life-long suffering, as but few comparatively are called to endure. An accident followed by painful disease left her while yet a young girl with only the wreck of a physical constitution, which served so poorly and inadequately to express or fulfill the ambitions of a bright, active, intelligent will; a ready, keen wit, and a most affectionate nature. While she could not be truthfully classed as optimistic in religious belief, yet she, like Thomas Paine, truly hoped for immortality and believed all that the sum of evidence to her mind warranted her in believing. She longed, not for death, but for rest and surcease from pain and disappointment; and for the change, satisfied that no matter what the future holds for humanity—whether of transcendent heavenly joys or of the eternal silence of unconsciousness, she had more to hope for than to fear—more in prospect than she had left behind, and if conscious existence under happier conditions in the future were denied her, so also had pain, disappointment, heart hunger, and tears forever and forever passed away. But this is not our poor belief for her; nay, but an assurance of better things hoped for, than she many times seemed to possess makes the hour and time one more of comfort than of sorrow, a time in which the element of gladness is mingled with our sadness—sadness for her darkened life—a lengthened tragedy almost, whose depth only the few intimate with her inner life best knew. Gladness, that the worst for her has past, believing as we do, that the sleep which would bring release from suffering and pain, which she so much courted and longed for, has already been broken by the joyous consciousness of the dropping of the burden that had in this life so poorly answered to the energy of a spirit and an ambition that found but poor utterance or expression in the frail physical machine called the body which she possessed. If she had a religious belief—and I think she really believed a good deal—it was in the mission of Joseph Smith the Seer and the gospel as revealed to him. The Book of Mormon was to her the greatest of books in this world, and the strongest intellectual evidence of the truth of the Christian religion, the existence of God, and the divinity of the character of Jesus Christ, as future developments will show. The writer, and others also have heard her declare or express a desire that if practicable President Joseph Smith of the Reorganized Church with myself should conduct her funeral service; a request made impracticable, if not impossible, by the circumstances which surrounded her death, which was, notwithstanding her poor condition—unexpected and very sudden, none of her four surviving brothers being present at the time of her death. Even her faithful friend and nurse, Sr. Maggie Handy, having gone to Pittsburg for a brief visit and rest from a most faithful service, and to whom through a most tender and loving care she had in the past two or three years become attached. Her four brothers, Ezra, Eber, Milton and Myron—the three former in Florida and Mississippi, the latter in Providence, Rhode Island, were summoned by telegrams, the second two failing to get word in time to attend funeral services. Funeral service conducted by Elders William H. Kelley, and by her request, her brother, M. H. Bond. Beautiful and appropriate music was rendered by Messrs. Wells and Billings, Misses Sleemen and Thompson; floral offerings from Willoughby and Painesville; and a throng of friends and relatives followed her remains to the place where beside their tomb her ashes will mingle with those of her father and her mother in the village churchyard.

CLEMENT.—Sr. Melvina Elizabeth, wife of Bro. Charles Clement, died January 18, 1899, at Cove, Arkansas. She was born in Warren County, Iowa, April 27, 1861; married to Charles Clement, January 28, 1884; she with her husband were baptized in Denver, Colorado, by Bro. John Kaler just prior to his going to Australia. She was a faithful member. Short services were held at the home, conducted by Elders A. L. Newton and A. Z. Rudd. Her name was enrolled in the Holden branch. She leaves a husband, one daughter, and five sons, one of which was but a few hours old at her death.

FLETCHER.—Mr. Albert S. Fletcher (Bro. T. Hopkins' father-in-law) at Lucas, Iowa, February 18, 1899. He was born August, 1845, at West Hallam, Derbyshire, England; came to America before reaching his majority. Married Mrs. Mary Stone, at Kewanee, Illinois, in 1866; came to Lucas in 1879. He was a member of the Methodist Church. Quite a number of his relatives are members of the Latter Day Saints Church, but for some reason he never united with it. Bro. E. B. Morgan preached the funeral sermon to an attentive congregation. He was a faithful husband, a kind father, and a peaceful neighbor.

MCLAIN.—At her home, South Boardman, Michigan, Sr. Rosalie M., wife of Bro. George McLain. She was born April 11, 1837; was born again July 31, 1892; died February 11, 1899, aged 61 years, 9 months, 28 days. Her faith was strong to the last, and she passed away hoping for a part in the first resurrection. She left a husband, two sons, and one daughter to mourn.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

PROFESSOR JAMES ON THE IMMORTALITY OF MAN.

The late Miss Caroline Haskell Ingersoll left in her will a provision for the endowment, at Harvard University, of a chair for lectures on the immortality of man, and this year Prof. William James, of the university faculty, delivered the first of the annual lectures in compliance with the terms of this endowment. Professor James set before himself the task of removing two serious objections to belief in the immortality of the soul. The first is that the brain is supposed to create thought, and therefore thought, or the soul, has no more than a material basis, and accordingly is subject to death. The second is the supposed multiplication of beings or souls beyond the grasp of the imagination. These two difficulties, Professor James feels sure, rob the doctrine of a future life of much of its power to carry conviction into scientific circles.

How can we believe in a life hereafter, when science has once for all succeeded in proving, beyond the possibility of escape, that our inner life is a function of that famous material, the so-called "gray matter" of our cerebral convolutions? How can the function persist after its organ has undergone decay? Every one knows that a blow on the head abolishes memory or consciousness, that arrest of brain development occasions imbecility, and that stimulants or poisons change the quality of ideas. The laboratories and hospitals are teaching us that thought in general is not only one of the brain's functions, but that the various special forms of thinking are functions of special portions of the brain. We see with one part of the brain, hear with another part, and so on. Professor Flechsig, of Leipsic, considers that in certain special convolutions the processes of association that take place permit the more abstract processes of thought to go on. This doctrine of functioning thought in brain localities is now generally accepted.

But does this doctrine, that thought is one of the brain's functions, compel us to disbelieve in immortality? Most people will answer yes. The professor declares, on the contrary, that although the brain may be the functioner of the soul as it is revealed to us here below, yet it is quite possible that life may still continue after the brain is quite dead. There is one functional dependence of the brain that does not at all exclude a life hereafter. When the physiologist thinks of the brain as a functioner of thought, the operation of his mind is the same as when he says, "Steam is a function of the tea-kettle," "Light is a function of the electric current," "Power is a function of the moving waterfall." These materials create their effects, and their functions must be called productive functions. Of course, if the brain functioned the soul in this way, when the brain dies the soul must die.

But even in the physical world, this is not the only kind of function with which we are familiar. There is realizing or permissive function; and there is transmissive function. The trigger of a crossbow has a realizing function; it removes the obstacle that holds the string, and lets the bow fly back to its natural shape. The colored glass, prism, or lens performs a transmissive function; it modifies the color and direction of the light, no matter how much energy it has. The ordinary psychophysicist leaves the permissive or transmissive function out of account in considering the subject.

Professor James thinks the whole material universe is a surface veil of phenomena, hiding and keeping back the world of realities. Let us at least suppose this to be so, and, moreover, let us suppose that the opaque dome should become less opaque at certain points, sufficiently thin to emit the beams of the supersolar blaze within. These beams would be so many finite rays, so to speak, of consciousness. Admit now that our brains are such thin and half-transparent places in the veil, what will happen? Why, as the white radiance comes through the dome, with all sorts of staining and distortion imprinted upon it by the glass, so the life of the soul as it is in its fullness will break through our several brains into this world in all sorts of restricted forms, and with all the imperfections and queernesses that characterize our finite individualities here below.

According to the state in which the brain finds itself, the barrier of its obstructiveness may also be supposed to rise or fall. It may sink so low, when the brain is in full activity, that a comparative flood of spiritual energy pours over. At other times only such occasional waves of thought as heavy sleep permits get by. And finally, when a brain altogether stops acting, or decays, that special stream of consciousness which it subserved will vanish entirely from this natural world. But the sphere of being that supplied the consciousness would still be intact, and in that more real world with which, even while here, it was continuous, the consciousness might, in ways unknown to us, continue still.

In all these suppositions, the soul's life would none the less be the function of the brain. The brain would be the independent variable, the mind would vary dependently upon it. But such dependence upon the brain for this natural life would in no wise make immortal life impossible—it might be quite compatible with life hereafter.

Materialism looks at the word function in a one-sided sense. We ought to insist on a logical view of it at least.

Professor James frankly admits that all he has said is based upon hypothesis, and metaphysical hypothesis at that. On this whole subject science must confess her imagination to be bankrupt. She has absolutely nothing to affirm. She is ignoramus, ignorabimus.

The theory of transmission in its widest sense has positive superiorities quite apart from its connection with the question of immortality. According to it, consciousness exists already in a number of places, does not have to be created, thus explaining away many so-called miracles. The transmission theory is also in touch with the conception of a "threshold." Fechner imagined, as the condition of consciousness, a certain kind of psychophysical movement. The requisite degree of movement for the production of consciousness is called the "threshold." The threshold rises or falls according to circumstances. When the mind is lucid, it falls and we grow conscious of things which we should be unconscious of at other times. In a state of drowsiness the threshold rises and consciousness sinks accordingly. The rising and falling of this psychophysical threshold seems to conform to our notion of a permanent obstruction in transmission.

Professor James applies this transmission-theory to occult phenomena. We quote:—

"The transmission theory also puts itself in touch with a whole class of experiences that are with difficulty explained by the production-theory. I refer to those obscure and exceptional phenomena reported at all times throughout human history, which the 'psychical-researchers,' with Mr. Frederic Myers at their head, are doing so much to rehabilitate; such phenomena, namely, as religious conversions, providential leadings in answer to prayer, instantaneous healings, premonitions, apparitions at time of death, clairvoyant visions or impressions, and the whole range of mediumistic capacities, to say nothing of still more exceptional and incomprehensible things. If all our human thought be a function of the brain, then of course, if any of these things are facts—and to my own mind some of them are facts—we may not suppose that they can occur without preliminary brain action. But the ordinary production-theory of consciousness is knit up with a peculiar notion of how brain action can occur—that notion being that all brain action, without exception, is due to a prior action, immediate or remote, of the bodily sense-organs on the brain. Such action makes the brain produce sensations and mental images, and out of the sensations and images the higher forms of thought and knowledge in their turn are framed. As transmissionists, we also must admit this to be the condition of all our usual thought. Sense-action is what lowers the brain barrier. My voice and aspect, for instance, strike upon your ears and eyes; your brain thereupon becomes more pervious, and an awareness on your part of what I say and who I am slips into this world from the world behind the veil. But, in the mysterious phenomena to which I allude, it is often hard to see where the sense-organs can come in. A medium, for example, will show knowledge of his sitter's private affairs which it seems impossible he should have acquired through sight of hearing, or inference therefrom. Or you will have an apparition of some one who is now dying hundreds of miles away. On the production theory one does not see from what sensations such odd bits of knowledge are produced. On the transmission theory, they don't have to be 'produced'—they exist ready-made in the transcendental world, and all that is needed is an abnormal lowering of the brain threshold to let them through. In cases of conversion, in providential leadings, sudden mental healings, etc., it seems to the subjects themselves of the experience as if a power from without, quite different from the ordinary action of the senses or of the sense-led mind, came into their life, as if the latter suddenly opened into that greater life in which it has its source. The word 'influx,' used in Swedenborgian circles, well describes this impression of new insight, or new willingness, sweeping over us like a tide. All such experiences, quite paradoxical and meaningless on the production-theory, fall very naturally into place on the other theory. We need only suppose the continuity of our consciousness with a mother sea, to allow for exceptional waves occasionally pouring over the dam. Of course the causes of these odd lowerings of the brain's threshold still remain a mystery on any terms."

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

The chapel talks of the past week have been quite literary in character; we have had discourses on Charles Dickens, Rudyard Kipling, John Ruskin, reading from Kipling, and an exhortation to cheerfulness. This week, Professor Mills enters upon the regular list of lecturers at chapel service, and so we may expect to learn something more of the great art of music and its history. We understand that the musicales, under the supervision of Professor Mills and Sr. F. M. Smith have become quite a success, and evince the fact that Lamoni is not without talent. Many young people think that they are so unlucky as to be born without any special ability, but, in the majority of cases, such opinion is a great mistake. Persistent effort, alone, can demonstrate the presence or absence of talent, and hence every one should be desirous of participating in all exercises that tend to develop. Success to the musicales and all kindred societies!

Brother John Smith, of New Bedford, Massachusetts, has forwarded to us recently a couple of books for the library and some interesting coins for the museum. Such donations are very acceptable and the college is indebted to our brother. May many others follow his example! It is rumored that an inventory of the college library is soon to be taken, so those who have loaned books therefrom had better take notice and return them in time for the same.

We should like to see more responses to the "success when united" appeal, the influx of names has decreased until, of late, our brethren and sisters seem to have forgotten all about it. We hope this is only a temporary lull, and that soon the subscriptions may pour in as vigorously as at first. There ought easily to be found in the church fifty more people who are willing to take a subscription each. We also require more students; forty thousand people ought to send a couple of hundred students or more to our college.

The Athenian literary society still flourishes, and is performing a valuable work in cultivating the taste of our students for the refinements of mental life. The present President, Mr. W. D. Gillen, is quite active in its behalf, and is assisted by an able corps of officers.

WAS JOSEPH SMITH A TRANSGRESSOR?

The organization over which Elder Lorenzo Snow presides, and which claims to be the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, makes great pretensions of loyalty to Joseph Smith, the Seer, and its representatives everywhere frequently and positively bear testimony that he was a prophet of God, and that he remained in favor with God until his death, June 27, 1844. Yet if the testimonies of the last two Presidents of that organization are true, Joseph Smith was a transgressor of God's law and was, during the latter portion of his life, unworthy to retain his membership in the Church of Christ.

Both Mr. Wilford Woodruff and Mr. Lorenzo Snow were witnesses in the Temple Lot Suit. Mr. Woodruff said:—

Joseph Smith of course taught the principle of plural marriage commonly called polygamy, and he not only taught it but practiced it too.—Plaintiff's Abstract, p. 292.

On cross-examination he made this statement more direct saying:—

I know that Joseph Smith taught it to certain individuals, but he did not teach it openly to the church.—Ibid. p. 302.

This testimony was taken March 16, 1892, in Salt Lake City, Utah.

At the same time and place, and before the same court, Mr. Lorenzo Snow testified, and when examined on the subject of the revelation authorizing polygamy he said:—

Up to the time of the presentation of that revelation to the church and its acceptance by the church, the law of the church on marriage was the same as you have read, and which I referred to in the 1835 edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Exhibit E. That was the law of the church up to the time of the purported revelation and its acceptance by the church; yes, sir, that is true.

And a man that violated this law in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, 1835 edition, until the acceptance of that revelation by the church, violated the law of the church if he practiced plural marriage. Yes, sir, he would have been cut off from the church. I think I should have been if I had.

Before the giving of that revelation in 1843 if a man married more wives than one who were living at the same time, he would have been cut off from the church. It would have been adultery under the laws of the church and under the laws of the State, too.—Ibid. p. 320.

According to Mr. Snow's declaration, if Joseph Smith, as alleged by Mr. Woodruff, taught and practiced polygamy, he was guilty of adultery; he violated the law of God, and the law of the land; and should have been cut off from the church as a transgressor. Mr. Snow was right; if guilty, as alleged by Mr. Woodruff, he should have been brought before the constituted council of the church according to the law which says:—

There is not any person belonging to the church, who is exempt from this council of the church.

And inasmuch as a president of the high priesthood shall transgress, he shall be had in remembrance before the common council of the church, who shall be assisted by twelve councilors of the high priesthood; and their decision upon his head shall be an end of controversy concerning him. Thus, none shall be exempted from the justice and the laws of God; that all things may be done in order and solemnity, before him, according to truth and righteousness.—D. C. 104: 36, 37.

Here is special provision made for bringing to an account in case of transgression the President of the High Priesthood, which position Joseph Smith occupied. If Mr. Snow is right, he certainly was a transgressor if, as Mr. Woodruff alleges, he taught and practiced polygamy, and did it before the revelation was received and accepted by the church.

It may be said that Mr. Woodruff did not allege that Joseph Smith so taught and practiced prior to the acceptance of the revelation by the church. It will be pertinent then to ask, When did the church accept that purported revelation? We will allow Mr. Snow to answer. In his testimony from which we have quoted he said:—

No, sir, the church never accepted the revelation on polygamy during the lifetime of Joseph Smith, for it was not during his lifetime that it was presented to the church for acceptance.—Plaintiff's Abstract, p. 322.

Then according to their own showing, if Joseph Smith at any time during his life did teach and practice polygamy he was an adulterer, a transgressor of the law, and the church was derelict in duty for not expelling him and all others from the church who prior to his death were guilty of the practice of polygamy.

Though the character of Joseph Smith, or that of any other man is but a minor consideration, compared with the vital question of the truth or falsity of the principle, yet our respect for the man leads us to hope that the charge of Mr. Woodruff is not true. But, whether true or not our friends in Utah are in a dilemma.

If true, the church which they represent failed to execute the law in not expelling Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, Lorenzo Snow, and all their associates who thus transgressed prior to June 27, 1844. If the charge of Mr. Woodruff is not true, then Joseph Smith is free from all blame; but Brigham Young, his successors and abettors, are guilty of duplicity, deceit, and downright lying in palming off on the public and the church that so-called revelation on polygamy as a revelation through Joseph Smith.

If the people of Utah would have us believe their testimony that Joseph Smith was before the law of church and state an adulterer and transgressor, they cannot expect us to believe their testimony that he was in favor with God as a prophet until his death. Which will they have us believe? Let them take their choice and we will give the matter consideration.

As we have said, the character of Joseph Smith is of but little importance compared with the main issue; but if he was guilty as charged, let the church in Utah come forward and show cause why judgment should not be rendered against it for failure to cut him off from the church as a transgressor according to the opinion of their present chief representative, Lorenzo Snow.

IS UTAH RETURNING TO OLD CONDITIONS?

A writer in the Salt Lake Tribune, signing himself "Young Mormon" sizes up the situation in a sentence or two, thus:—

The idea that such a return is possible will probably be scouted, but if the present attitude of certain papers is continued it will not long be an impossibility. Did not our troubles in the past arise from polygamy and the church being in politics? They are antagonistic to the principles of civil and political liberty. This has been recognized, conceded, and from such convictions have arisen our improved conditions.

The HERALD is not a political organ. It was founded for a purpose, that purpose the conservation of what was good in "Mormonism," and the elimination of what was bad, or conducive to evil and wrong. Those who have opposed the mission of Joseph Smith and the system of religion that he taught, have made war on the whole, holding that there was no good in any part of it.

The HERALD and its supporters and compatriots have advocated and defended true Mormonism, or that system of which Joseph Smith and his co-workers were the exponents and representatives from 1830 to June 27, 1844. The Deseret News, of Salt Lake City, Utah, with its co-workers, have advocated and defended that system of religion which grew up after Joseph Smith's death under the fostering hand of President Brigham Young; and in this system polygamy or plural marriage was included.

This plural marriage system provided that a man might, by the consent, advice, or direction of the President of the church, marry one, two, or any number of women and live with them as wives simultaneously. At the first it was contended that no man could or would be allowed to marry a second wife unless the first and lawful wife should give her consent to such marriage. But this restriction was soon removed, and but little attention was paid to the wishes of the lawful wife. Jealousies, heartburnings, and unhappiness resulted. The workings of the system made apostates by the hundreds and the thousands; until the Utah Church had drawn from the United States and abroad into Utah Territory pretty near all the active believers in Mormonism with polygamy included in its teachings, and leaving scattered thousands who believed in Mormonism as defined in the primitive faith, but would not accept either the dogmas of plural marriage or the practice of it. These, few or many, began the fight on the Utah contingent because of the introduction of the demoralizing teaching and practices involved in the dogma of plural marriage and its correlatives; believing that from them trouble, sorrow, and ruin were sure to follow.

Without any desire or any intention to take up any of the political issues raised and existing between the two great parties in Utah, we propose to offer to "Young Mormon," and his fellow-sufferers under the apprehension of a revival of old conditions from which trouble resulted, a few suggestions, which may or may not have occurred to them; and by which we believe the civil and political conditions may be materially helped, differences quieted, and the material prosperity and an honorable status for Utah secured and maintained.

It is in the power, and we believe it to be the province of the younger element of the church in Utah, to enter an effectual protest against those evils which have so long been darkening the councils and obstructing the progress toward better conditions in Utah. It is the privilege of the young men of the church to take up the burden of making the State of Utah a factor in the onward march of the Nation's greatness, and to place and make her name high in the galaxy of honor in the roll of States. That it will take courage to do this is conceded; but it can be done, and none but the younger men of the Utah Church can do it and do it successfully. We suggest:—

1. That there is good in Mormonism, so-called, in Utah.

2. That this good be recognized distinctively, and become the basic principle on which the effort for supremacy and control in the destinies of Utah shall be prosecuted and maintained.

3. That polygamous or plural marriages having been prohibited in the Constitution of Utah, and laws enacted by the legislature providing for the punishment of persons contracting such marriages; the demand should be made and enforced that the practice of polygamy or plural marriage, the living in polygamy, having a plurality of wives or husbands, shall also cease; not only in Utah, but in every place where the church may have local branches, or missions.

4. That the reason for such demand exists, and will continue to exist, to the great and continued detriment of the State, and to the disgrace and infamy of the church, so long as the policies, management, and control of the affairs of the church remain in the hands of men who continue in the practices of polygamy and plural marriage.

5. That as President Wilford Woodruff was "permitted to advise" a cessation of the practice of plural marriage in his Manifesto of 1890, and as President Lorenzo Snow has said that "polygamy is not Mormonism," and as Governor Wells has said that "Mormonism is alive, but Polygamy is dead;" these assertions justify the conclusion that "polygamy and the church being in politics," have been the fruitful sources whence trouble has come to the church and State in Utah; therefore, the time has come when causes for further trouble should be removed.

6. This must be done from within the ranks of the Mormon Church, and by sons and grandsons of those early elders who carried the work forward from 1830 to 1844, when polygamy was not a tenet, a burden, nor a bane to progress.

7. It used to be the boast of the fathers of "young Mormons" that sons were not under obligations to carry burdens of wrong, error, or crime, of ignorant traditions or false theories or foolish doctrines because their grandfathers and fathers did. So now the "young Mormons" are under no obligations, religious, moral, or political, to carry the burdens of unjust church rule, false teaching of the priesthood, bad dogmas and evil practices because the fathers, old Mormons, have done so. Hence "young Mormons" should now collect their forces together, select their leaders in the contest, and rally to them with honesty of purpose and unflinching courage.

8. In this connection it may be well to call the attention of "young Mormons" to the fact that the sons of the "Seer of Palmyra," when setting out in their public career, adopted the principle that polygamy and plural marriage were not Mormonism, and should not be allowed place in the work begun by the Seer. To do this they had to adopt a course that ostracised them from a host of the so-called friends and one time coworkers of their father and his brother Hyrum. They did not shrink from the contest, believing that right must finally triumph. They have maintained their contention and now have the satisfaction of knowing that President Lorenzo Snow for the old Mormons states that "polygamy is not Mormonism;" that Governor Wells for the political Mormons, says that "polygamy is dead." And "Young Mormon" for the young Mormons announces that the church troubles in the past have risen from "polygamy and the church being in politics."

The sons of the Prophet greet young Mormons, in the rising conflict and hope that some worthy scion of the early men of the church work will be moved to the leadership and will be able to continue until he shall eliminate the evils from Utah Mormonism and save the good, to the triumphing of right against wrong.

RESOLUTIONS ON B. H. ROBERTS.

Of the many resolutions being presented and acted upon by the different branches and districts of the Reorganized Church, the following passed by the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, branch, is one of the best and strongest:—

With a few words of introduction Elder McDowell produced a paper and read therefrom the following resolution:—

Whereas, The Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints stands pledged to the doctrine of good morals and loyalty to civil government, and believing that governments were instituted of God for the benefit of man, that all men are bound to sustain and uphold the respective governments in which they reside, while protected in their inherent and inalienable rights by the laws of such governments, that the commission of crime should be punished according to the nature of the offense by the laws of that government in which the offense is committed; and for the peace and tranquility, all men should step forward and use their ability in bringing offenders against good laws to punishment. And furthermore, believing that the teaching and practice of polygamy is an act of rebellion against the laws of the government, a crime against society, of which B. H. Roberts, Congressman-elect from Utah is guilty; we, therefore, as a congregation of above-named church, located in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, do hereby declare our opposition to the seating of said B. H. Roberts in the House of Representatives of the Government of the United States.

The resolution was promptly seconded and carried unanimously. There was no debate. The Dispatch reporter was told by a man who claimed to be a member of the church, but who refused to give his name, that the resolution was railroaded through in the most approved political style and that no opportunity was given to anyone to speak in opposition. This was emphatically denied by Elder McDowell and Elder C. Edward Miller, the president and local preacher of the society. They both declared that, so far as they knew, there was not a man or woman in the congregation, which numbers nearly two hundred members, who favors polygamy. —Dispatch, February 20, '99.

THAT LETTER CHAIN.

More or less has been published in the HERALD about the Letter Chain started a while ago by someone of the sisters about Moorhead, Iowa.

Blame is being put on the Editors and the heads of the church by some, because they did not disapprove of it and so save the saints from doing wrong, etc.

The Business Manager handed the Editor a letter making a statement about the Letter Chain, and asked the Editor to give it a notice. This we did. It was a private effort of a well-meaning saint to help the Graceland College cause. The Editor had no occasion to say anything about it, either approving or disapproving. It was simply a matter outside of his control, or interference, one way or the other.

None of the "heads of the church," whoever they may be, was consulted about it, or asked any questions about it. None of the Bishopric and none of the Trustees, was consulted; not even Bro. Criley, who was made the custodian of the funds to be raised by the chain; none of these was consulted or asked about the scheme. It was started and went its way, the child of good intentions and high hopes.

The College matter had been placed in the hands of the Bishopric; and a plan of procedure adopted, and put before the saints. The Faculty, by consent of the Trustees, presented the scholarship expense plan, as a help; then came the Letter Chain.

Some hundreds of letters containing moneys have found their way to Bro. Criley, from those who have taken the chain notion seriously, and it is presumed more will.

There is nothing in the scheme that is wicked, or vile, or in disregard of any known command, and there is no necessity for anybody being scored in the HERALD, or being alarmed about it. It may be one of the "ways of the world;" but if so, it was said by the Master that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of the Kingdom." Not all the ways of the world are bad. The Editors, neither approve, nor disapprove of the Letter Chain; it was begun without consulting them in any way, and will be run to its end without public interference from the Editors, and we hope without unnecessary interference from anybody else. It was not a church measure, and must pass the test as other things of the kind.

Bro. Criley says, Tell them that those who receive the letters must act, each upon his own judgment, write the letters, and send in the ten cents, or take such other course as they may deem to be best. He suggests the example of a brother from the south somewhere who wrote him, about like this: "Letter received. But as I am not a member of the chain gang, I return letter to you. Please find enclosed ten dollars, which place to the college fund from me."

Space in the HERALD is too limited and too valuable to waste any more of it over this Letter Chain affair.

We suggest, however, that the schoolboys and girls take pencil and see to what a length of figures multiplying by four for twenty-five times will make. This will determine whether the scheme is practical or not.

A WRITER in the Scandia, Kansas, Journal writes up the late Pender-Shick debate in graphic and significant style. Though he proceeds upon the plan adopted by those who describe pugilistic encounters, the descriptions are none the less clear and pointed. The articles run through three numbers of the paper and after the manner of the wild world, divide the contest into "rounds." The closing paragraphs read as follows, and as throughout, indicate that Bro. Pender sustained his positions and defeated his antagonist:—

In recapitulating Shick proved to the majority of the spectators, that he had done nothing. Pender brought out the fact that the church which Shick represents had no foundation and was liable to fall at any time. Pender was considered by the majority as the rider of the white horse, while Shick was left to fight his weary way, riding his blind mule homeward.

After Mr. Pender and Mr. Shick had thanked the people for their conduct and respect, Mr. Rhodes, in a neat and well rendered speech, presented Mr. Shick with a Bible as a token of the event. Miss Allie Johnson also crowned the aged man with a wreath as a token to their hero of sixty discussions. In this we beg to differ. He may have been the hero of fifty-nine, but the Pender-Shick contest was not to be placed on his honor roll. Referee Bowersox was given a vote of honor, after which Mr. Pender was presented with a donation of $15.75 to defray his expenses which he had incurred during his stay with us. The discussion being closed and all announcements made the congregation was dismissed with prayer by Mr. Shick.

GOOD records made by individual members of the church are both credit marks of honor to themselves and the cause we represent as a people. The following tribute published in a late issue of the Kendall County News, of Plano, Illinois, is a case in point. Bro. Vickery has been the shepherd of the flock at Plano, since headquarters were moved thence and established at Lamoni, in 1881. We are pleased to note this commendation of his work. We hope for his continued usefulness and welfare in his new location:—

HONOR ELDER VICKERY.

At last Sunday night's services the Latter Day Saints passed resolutions of thanks and appreciation for the services of Elder W. Vickery (just before his departure for a new home in Kansas), who has been officially connected with Plano branch for eighteen years. During that time he must have preached over a thousand sermons and driven his horse over five thousand miles, besides doing other ministerial work, and all without a cent of pay. Well may the church offer thanks.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. A. H. Parsons, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, February 24:—

I inclose a clipping from the Philadelphia Press merely to let you know at headquarters that we are trying to keep the work before the people; not that I desire it should go into Herald. The work is moving along slowly; one name to-day for baptism, a gentleman who has been attending our church for some time. I think his wife will soon follow. Our congregation is increasing, which makes city work more pleasant. Brn. A. H. Smith and R. Etzenhouser gave us excellent help in the fall and winter in their call at the Quaker City.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, Nebraska City, Nebraska, February 20:—

Our late conference at Wilber, Nebraska, was a success. The preaching was excellent by Elders Caffall, Peak, and Forscutt. Many of the leading citizens were present and expressed themselves as being highly pleased with the sermons, the church being crowded with all that could be seated. A kind and peaceable spirit prevailed throughout all the sessions. Conference adjourned, to meet with the Nebraska City branch, in September.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. George W. Needham, writing us from Wales, Iowa, states that a pair of Utah elders laboring at Red Oak, Iowa, are reporting that one of their number, Elder D. F. Duffin, began his work of proselyting at Independence, Missouri, last spring and baptized over forty from the Reorganized Church, including the elder in charge; and was soon to baptize forty more, making eighty in all. Bro. Needham wishes to know whether this is true. The HERALD is not aware of any such work having been done at Independence, Missouri. If it has, our Independence folks have kept very quiet about it. A late letter from Bro. G. E. Harrington, presiding, states nothing of it.

The Bevier, Missouri, Appeal contains a full column account of proceedings of the late conference of the Northeastern Missouri district, at which we note that Brn. White, Griffiths, and Elvin of the general missionary force were present. Resolutions on the Roberts case and other business items appear with favorable mention. The St. Louis Chronicle also contained a brief account of the conference action on the Roberts matter. Other districts are passing such resolutions and receiving due credit from the public and press for their attitude toward the twin relic, now gasping with a determined effort to retain life in America. That "polygamy is no part of Mormonism" is becoming patent to the American and other people. Let the good work go on and it will be demonstrated that the faith is sound and strong morally and otherwise and that the Reorganization is the true church in succession and worthy of commendation because of its consistent teaching and general attitude maintained before the world as a church since the beginning of its work.

Bro. J. C. Hitchcock, St. Louis, has replied to misstatements of the faith which appeared in a former number, in the March issue of Word and Works, an Astro-Religious journal published in the Missouri metropolis. Our pickets seem to be awake at the post of duty, ready to correct the prevailing tendency to misstate the faith in connection with the Roberts case.

Mr. J. R. Smith, a friend of the Reorganization and residing at Trenton, Florida, writes again that he would like some representatives of the Reorganized Church to meet the Brighamite elders and preach the gospel to the people, who, he writes, are stirred up generally on religious questions. We have referred his communication to the missionary in charge of that field.

Polygamy, its history, in connection with the developments of Utah Mormonism are discussed by Elder A. H. Parsons, in the Philadelphia Press of February 20. Bro. Parsons clears the atmosphere and makes a plain case to his readers, to the vindication of the faith. He quotes Brigham Young, George Q. Cannon, John Taylor, Utah authorities, to prove that polygamy was not taught by the church until after the death of Joseph Smith.

The Christian nations control over 32,000,000 out of the 52,000,000 square miles of the world.

The poor men and women who frequent the Salvation Army shelters have contributed in dimes and nickels over $82,615.

The New York Labor Bureau of the Salvation Army recorded during the year 1898, 2,033 applications for work and succeeded in finding positions for 1,557 persons.

"In almost every section of the United States some loss was occasioned to the farmers by the recent big storm. It was so wide in its area that no State escaped. The loss to fruit crops in some States was about sixty per cent."

In the character of Jesus Christ there was the ability, while surrounded upon every hand by imperfect systems and wrong conditions, to discern the remedy for public and general wrongs, and to steadfastly, wisely and strongly insist upon the application of principles of truth to all phases of life, public and private, necessary to correct, to eradicate, and forever remove the wrong conditions of humanity. His principles amounted to a resurrection and life of truth, and because his character was truth actualized his personal resurrection and exaltation was the sequence.

HOME AMENITIES.

The social intercourse of home imposes more important duties, and carries with it a far greater influence than some people suppose.

Auntie Sunnybrook tells us that when her morning's work is done, everything about the house is in order, and "herself is tidied up a bit;" it seems to her that "the hull world looks brighter." "But" she says "if the dishes are left undone, the floor unswept, and the cheers and winders need dusting, and the pantry wants a little freshnin, all the tidying up of myself makes things look dingier than ever."

Auntie is right. And so we say it takes many things to help make social life in the home a pleasant one. For instance: the little acts of politeness shown by the members of the family, the softly shutting of the door, instead of letting it slam in Brother's face, preference shown at the table, and saying only pleasant things there (not worrying about the stiffness of the napkins or the plainness of the dishes), giving Gran'pa the tender bits, offering to fill the water glasses for Mother, making things look orderly (instead of throwing caps and shoes behind the door), attending to the little everyday chores in time (not waiting till nightfall), these, and many other seeming unimportant duties help to lighten care and brighten home.

Then there is the kindly word. Father says, "there's a most too much wind a blowing in here;" and is quickly helped by one of the boys, "I'll shut the window; Pa, let me do it," says he, offering his kindly services.

The habitually kindly word and act not only make the wheels of the family circle go more smoothly, but their good effect reaches beyond home, and all with whom we come in contact feel the magnetic touch of sympathy and love. There are many easy ways in which we may overcome the jarring things of life. The cultivation of generosity is necessary, because some folks are apt to fall into a niggardly way of dealing with their fellows.

Uncle Darius (our rich brother—the miller—you know) returned from the country the other day feeling quite elated over his success in laying in, at so little cost, his winter's store. "I tell you, brother, I got a bargain! and I'm going again for another load," said he. "Just look at these 'taters, and so cheap! only 25."

"Well! you are lucky! Darius," replied the poor, thin-faced brother; "wish all of us could be lucky too! Its pretty close times though; even the grass doesn't seem to do good this year, and most kinds o' vegetables have been a failure with me; but the good Lord has not let us suffer so far.

"A wonderful feeling of thankfulness has come over my sperrit when (at meal time) some poor tramp has softly rapped at our back door (they allers rap very softly), as tho' they hardly dared to ask for a bite, wandering about like a starved dog that nobody cares for. Yes, I've felt thankful, always, when I've been able to help them a bit. The poor tramps may be our brethren sometime I think, or good angels now, for ought I know; and you know what the Scripters say about entertaining sich!

"Brother Darius," he continued, "when you take your next trip, bring along a sack at the figgers you mentioned for me, will you? Here's the money."

"O," said the prosperous brother, "I'm allers very keerful about those things; you see, ef I do that sort of thing for one, I'll have to for the rest of the brethren round ere! Just wait a little longer, brother, we'll have all things in common by and by! The elder said so; don't you know."

Now how easy it would have been for brother Darius to have lent a helping hand! And I warrant you he learned how to be selfish when he was a boy, right at home. It is there we gather the seeds of selfishness or unselfishness, to scatter again among our neighbors, and in the world afterward.

Beside the "little words of kindness, the little deeds of love," there are the all-important duties of parents to lead the children to reverence our Creator, to set up the family altar, to read a portion of the Scriptures, and to ask a blessing at the table daily. The reading aloud of a good book or some of the church literature, having vocal or instrumental music in the house, innocent games, telling stories, and elevating conversation are all factors in the social life of home.

One of our Sunday school teachers told us teachers about story-telling one day. "The Bible stories told long ago by Papa," she said, "are in my memory like apples of gold in pictures of silver! They hang on memory's walls the most precious mementos of childhood. They helped me so!" she said, "and when I have at times lacked for something to tell my little pupils and my own darlings who gather around me, the stories have come to mind clearly, and I can tell them over again."

In a family not well governed, there is always discord. We have in mind now a home where things go on about this way. After the usual "Good morning," from one-half the head of the family, the other half generally responds with a few crusty remarks; the comfortable breakfast is prepared, and all are gathered round the wonted board. A very sensible, pleasant beginning to the day's doings is it to ask a blessing and offer thanks; but, we regret to say, the day with the family we speak of is begun something like this: "Father, don't forget the blessing," the good wife suggests, for she knows he feels badly this morning.

"I'm always thankful for everything! I work hard for what I get, and thankful to get it at that! Ask it yourself! I've no objection!"

The mother bows her head, and the family also (they do it out of respect for her perhaps), and things go on in just that way, some of them neglecting to do such duties cheerfully and heartily "as unto the Lord."

It is no wonder that there is so much said and written nowadays about child study, social duties, etc., at the mothers' meetings and the Home Column. Look at Sr. Pinkins' family, for instance; she is one, you know, who has sacrificed much by encouraging her husband to go "into the field," and she promised to write often, send lots of kisses from baby, keep the boy in school, pay all bills promptly, and have everything go on just the same as when he was at home.

And indeed things did go on just the same! There was the same uproar, and the same quantity of nagging all day long! The boy to be sure was very full of mischief, and the baby might take the prize at any baby show for making the loudest and longest cries with the least amount of exertion!

The nervous, worn-out sister might have derived great comfort and benefit by attending "the Daughters;" but, to use her own words, she wouldn't give the rap of her finger to sit there and hear 'em discuss "the enormous literary productivity of the age, the passing from the period of physical existence into the right moral atmosphere, proclivities of infants, and moral suasion being like soothing syrups passing over the brain cells! Pooh! And as for the opinions of the professors and doctors, Trumbull included, Auntie Sunnybrook's was better than them all, for she had raised her large family well, and raised em without any o' their help or notions."

To tell the truth, with her it was, "Don't do this," and "Don't do that," from morning until night; and on the children's part, a plenty of accidents happening. The baby slips down or falls into the washtub, and the boy in trying to kindle the fire pours oil from the can onto it and sets everything ablaze. "O dear!" exclaims sister, a dozen times a day, "do go out of the house and play; you're so much trouble to me, Tom."

We were reminded of that little poem that begins with,

"In the house of Too Much Trouble
Lived a lonely little boy;
He was eager for a playmate,
He was hungry for a toy.

"But 'twas always too much bother,
Too much dirt and too much noise,
For the house of Too Much Trouble Wasn't meant for little boys."

And it closes with,

"Every room is set in order,
Every book is in its place,
And the lonely little fellow
Wears a smile upon his face.

"In the house of Too Much Trouble,
He is silent and at rest;
In the house of Too Much Trouble,
With a lily on his breast."

We would like, if time permitted, to depict before you another family, in which the domestic life was always cheerful and peaceful; not a jar, not a ripple was observable.

There was no chiding the children above a subdued tone of voice, proper amusements were provided for them, and in summer or winter, the parents and children enjoyed together the pleasures to be found in wholesome reading; and the merry voices of the boys and girls were often heard, accompanied by their instruments of music. We noticed, particularly, that the children had been taught to be obedient from their infancy; and that "moral suasion" on the whole was not to be despised, as some think. They all seemed to have great confidence in their parents, and through a correct training, had grown up physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually, a well-developed family. They were all reverential, heroic, studious, and athletic. It was indeed a happy family.

Let us treasure in our minds the lesson of the hour; and while others may discourse upon the good that comes from social life outside the home, let us not forget that it is in the home social life brings to us an inspiration; that kind which comes to us from family devotion, principles of unselfishness, politeness, order, cleanliness, innocent and healthful recreation, love of art, music, and good literature, and good conversation.

As the Lord said concerning the house that was to be the abiding place for his servant Joseph, so may our homes ever be "a delightful habitation for man, and a resting place for the weary traveler."

CHILDREN'S DAY.

An outline or skeleton program for a Children's Day exercise for the coming summer is in the course of preparation and will be given to the schools through the columns of the Sunday School Department of the Herald in due time. One of the chief ends sought is the consecration of the children to the service of the Master, and to this end will the parts of the day's exercises be directed.

One of the parts will be to induct those of the children who have attained to sufficient age into the kingdom by baptism. This of course must be under the direction of the branch authorities, but we trust that none will decline to cooperate with the Sabbath school in this. It will be necessary then to prepare the minds of the children that they may have a proper desire for and understanding of the ordinance. It may be well for the parents to be reminded that it is their duty to see that their children are thus prepared. (See Doctrine and Covenants.) Mention this to the teachers and parents and have the work of preparation begin at once.

By courtesy of the Editor of the International Evangel, St Louis, we reproduce a letter from the American Sabbath school missionary to Japan. It will be interesting to our readers from the fact that it to some extent pictures the condition of the Sunday school work in that heathen land. And, too, from it we may learn that the International Sunday School Union is doing considerable in the work of evangelizing the world. The Sabbath school is a powerful factor for good whenever and wherever good resolute work is done.

MR. IKEHARA IN JAPAN.

To the Editor of The International Evangel.—A week after you and Mrs. S. left me alone, waiting at London, with Mr. and Mrs. Meigs I went across the channel, and parting with them at Paris, I went unaccompanied across the continent to Brindisi, Italy. From that place I left for India. . . .

In India I remained only a week. . . . But during the few days I visited about ten Sunday schools. On one Sunday I managed to see seven of them at Bombay. I confess that some schools there are well managed, and would not take a back place if compared with some schools in America. But when I reached Japan, after a three days stay at Colombo, one day at Penang, one day at Singapore, and five days at Hong Kong, I found the Sunday schools such as to make one sad to look upon them.

I reached the southern extreme of Japan on September 21 and went along the coast visiting schools. In two weeks I reached Tokyo. The work in my estimation is progressing more in the southern than in the northern part of Japan, including Tokyo, but even in the progressive part it is not an inspiring sight. Of course all the schools are left in the hands of the native workers, who have no idea of what we really mean by a Sunday school. They think it their duty to call the children together on Sunday and spend an hour some way or another. Their work is neither interesting nor instructive. It is a useless weapon as it is, and when conversing with the teachers they all admit that fact, and are very eager to get some idea as to how to improve, or more correctly, remodel the Sunday school.

The work has not made any progress during my years of absence, and to-day is exactly as I left it in 1889. It is a discouraging sight, but I am encouraged by finding that many workers are very anxious to improve their schools, and do what they can to advance its standard. Under these circumstances I began to gather material for publication, so as to help these helpless workers to see better methods and plans of work. I believe this to be the first need. Then to meet the cry "no teachers," some plan, as well as books for normal work, must be issued.

I have thought of organizing an association, and it may be formed, yet I fear such will be a weak one, and will not last long. There is a deep denominational feeling, and I fear lest such feeling, may put an end to every good work; consequently, I am approaching the work very cautiously. I believe, however, an association will be a natural outcome of my work in this city before very long.

There is no one, absolutely no one, who knows about the Sunday school statistics. I am trying to formulate a plan for securing accurate statistics, and while I am gradually getting the information, it is a difficult work. With a helper, I am now tabulating locations and figures; first of this city, then for the whole country.

Of course I am now hampered because of lack of funds. I see many things I ought to be doing, but I cannot do them yet. I suffer because I see the work suffering.

During the month of November I delivered eleven public addresses and visited nine Sunday schools at each of which I gave a brief talk on the Sunday schools of America. The little people are particularly interested to hear of the Sunday school children across the water. Several receptions were given me at different churches, and I had repeated opportunity to explain the work I am undertaking. Everywhere I received the hearty sympathy of the workers. In the church to which I belong a couple of printed cloth charts were hung up at the reception. They were the twenty-third psalm and the Apostles creed, which I made for the infant class long before I left for America.

Two strong denominations have just united in publishing international lesson helps. The International Lesson System is slowly gaining ground. At present these helps are published in three forms, quarterly, monthly, and children's leaflets. There are yet no books published on the aim, plan, and method of the Sunday school work, but they have now been commenced, and the Sunday School Workers' Manual will be issued by the writer at the completion of this undertaking.

The number of schools in the whole country approximates one thousand, and one-sixth of this number are in the city of Tokyo. Usually a Sunday school here has from twenty-five to one hundred scholars, and the large majority of these come from the very poor homes, and are such as the children of the tenement houses in America.

The program of a Sunday school session is much like it is in other places, but here it is very mechanical and admits no variety. Consequently the scholars get tired of the monotony. There is very little singing. The prayers are long and full of big words. The teaching is altogether a lecture, and directly after the class work the school is brought to a close by a hymn and prayer. A very few Sunday schools have a superintendent's review of the lesson.

I am to work in this city until next spring, probably until March. Then, according to the promise I made, I shall visit the west and south of Japan. I expect strong support at Kobe and Nagasaki. I am convinced that to show how a Sunday school may be worked, and to unite the efforts of all the Japanese Sunday schools, will be a great help to the missionary work in Japan.

Teachers who are employed in the public educational institutions are forbidden to teach in the Christian Sunday schools, not by law, but by public opinion. There has been a case of a certificate being denied a graduate of a normal school because he is a Christian.

I had quite a little difficulty in gaining my fluency of speech after a ten years' absence from home. I found it difficult to speak without preparation, but now I am doing well.

This is a very unusual rainy season, and in this city where only the business portion has street car service, one has to hire a jinrikisha to get round. This weather is very hard on me. I never knew before that the construction of Japanese houses is so poorly adapted to keep out dampness. By and by I shall try to get a stove in my room.

Pray for the Japan work.

Yours in the work,

T. C. IKEHARA.

Editors Herald:—Ofttimes have I read with interest the pages of the Herald, and been strengthened with the good news. It is over one year and nine months since I began to serve our heavenly Father in spirit and in truth. I am thankful I was ever brought to know the truth. For years I was a professing Christian, and as earnest and sincere as I am now; yet it was a "zeal for God, but not according to knowledge."

I recollect that when I first heard of this work I was bitterly against it; and I thought that if there was one body of professing Christians that were wrong, both in precept and practice, it was the Latter Day Saints; but when I began to "search the Scriptures" with an open mind, I discovered that if anyone was in the wrong it was myself.

I remember that as I searched the Scriptures, they seemed to open up the truth as I had never beheld it before; but it was the Spirit of truth which, as had been predicted by our gracious Master, was leading me into all truth. How many times had I read that same Bible before; but never did I understand it as I did now. I could not get rid of the truth as I now beheld it, else would I assuredly have done so.

I recollect going to the saints' hall, London, and there hearing Elder James Caffall preach on the subject, "Authority to preach the Gospel." I thought I had never heard a more beautiful or convincing sermon in my life. He so well sustained it with scripture, that I felt he had preached "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." I thank God for ever giving me the privilege of listening to such a faithful exponent of the truth; for on that night the wall of my defense was broken, and soon afterward it completely fell; and I found myself left destitute of power to fight against what I had at first strongly believed to be heresy.

I felt that I could not go to my old place of worship any more to stay; yet it was hard to break away from those I had been with between seven and eight years; but the dear Lord gave me strength to do it and I was buried with him in baptism; in March, 1897. Since then I have been able to testify to the truth of this work in a variety of ways; for the Lord has given me a knowledge which no man can give and no man can take away. Although I have not seen visions or angels, yet to my own mind the Lord has given me a testimony which I shall never be able to shake off or deny. He has filled me at times with his Spirit to overflowing, all praise be to his holy name; yet at times I fear lest I should not be able to continue faithful unto the end; yet I know that inasmuch as we are humble and faithful we shall certainly have the power to stand; for we can rest upon the promise given to us in his word that as our days, so shall our strength be.

There are but few saints in London, when we look upon the vast multitudes of inhabitants in this teeming city of millions; yet it is hard work to reach them, for the only practicable way of reaching them is by outdoor preaching at the corners of the streets; for we cannot obtain control of the press, and we have not hitherto been able to get them into our little hall; but we are hopeful of better times just ahead, for we believe the way will be opened up so that the truth may reach the people. The people here are like many of us were—prejudiced against the very name of Latter Day Saint, owing to the deeds or reputed deeds, of Utah Mormonism; still we believe there are many honest in heart who would gladly receive it if they were brought to a knowledge of the truth of this glorious latter-day gospel, which is the same gospel the former-day saints enjoyed, with all its glorious gifts and blessings as had they. It is therefore our bounden duty to show by our lives that we are real Christians, and that we do enjoy the same blessings and privileges that the former-day saints enjoyed; but to be able to do this we must have the Spirit of God with us, for we cannot do it of ourselves. The children of God have many trials and difficulties to overcome in their spiritual life as well as in their temporal surroundings; but by his strength we shall overcome and obtain the final victory.

The Sunday school work is progressing steadily here in London; and we hope that ere long our school will be one of the best saints' schools in England.

Dear Bro. Pitt came along some time back, and gave us a good hand with our Sabbath school; for he is just the man to gain the love and affection of children. We all love him; and pray that God will crown his labors with abundant success wherever he may go.

Elder Pitt became quite reconciled to outdoor preaching while in London, although it was new and doubtless unpalatable to him at first. However, he soon found that he could preach to a fairly good audience of all classes with such liberty that the people would stand for an hour, and even more, with great attention; and we believe that much good will come of it.

We had a capital time on the New Year's Day (Sunday). The good Spirit was present and continued with us throughout the day. Many good resolutions have been made, and many, I hope all, the saints will endeavor to live more like their "Leader and Commander," Jesus Christ, than they have done in the past. Not that I am finding fault, but I believe it ought to be the aim of every child of God to live more like Christ every day he lives; for if we slip to-day, it ought to be a warning to us for the morrow; and if we strive in this way, we shall be able to move right along learning "here a little and there a little."

Let us not be discouraged if we do make a mistake, for as it was once told me before I came into this church, "It is only fools that make no mistakes;" and I believe there is a great deal of truth in it; therefore let our mistakes be lessons to ourselves, and we shall be the stronger for them; for when the same things come along in our path again, we shall be able to overcome by the power and Spirit of the Lord. My heart's desire is, that I may be able to continue faithful that if the Lord see fit to use me I shall be found worthy of that honor; for I feel it a great honor to be one of his servants in deed.

May the dear saints seek to bring the truth of the work to the minds of the people; for I believe each one has something to do, in one way or another. Therefore let us strive to be more humble and prayerful, that we may have his Spirit to be with us; for we can do nothing of ourselves. Let us realize that of ourselves we can do nothing, and it will cause us to be more humble and, above all, more prayerful, than ever before.

Your brother,

J. W. WORTH.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 27.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here on the 18th inst. after one of the worst storms of the winter. I visited this place twice before, some twenty-six years ago, and did some preaching here on my first and second mission to Wales. Since I have been here I have occupied two Sundays in the saints' commodious hall, with A. N. Bishop presiding. Have also been busy visiting old friends and relatives. Of the latter I have found nine families of very anxious people who wanted to see me—the children of my brother and two sisters, who have passed to the world of spirits.

I am pleased with the situation as far as I am acquainted with the circumstances—impressed favorably with the saints that are in attendance, but of course am not acquainted with the others. The possibilities are considerable here, but of course I expect some obstacles that I know not of that have to be removed.

Please correct my address into this form:
No. 820 South Main Avenue, Scranton, Pennsylvania, care of A. N. Bishop.

LAYMOUTH, Mich., Feb. 20.

Editors Herald:—After four weeks wrestling with the grip I left my home near Five Lakes to answer some of the many calls for preaching. I got to Vassar Township and commenced holding meetings at four different places with good interest, and was blessed with good liberty.

On Sunday, 12th, I buried three with Christ in baptism near Vassar. A large number of people were present to witness the ceremony. The weather was cold, but the water did not seem colder than in July. It was remarked that that was the grandest baptism they had witnessed. The candidates were brave and showed no signs of coldness from entering into the watery grave. We had a good meeting at the confirmation and preaching service.

Bro. and Sr. B. Kilbourn from Juniata were the only saints who responded to come to our help. I must say their services will not soon be forgotten. They brought the good Spirit with them and joined with the few saints who reside here. At the close of this service I blessed a little boy belonging to one of the sisters just baptized. A few days before the baptism the child's mother was taken down with the grip and the child's face was broken out with blotches. She requested me to administer to her, if I would. I told her I would if she believed the Lord would bless his own appointed ordinances. She said something told her to ask me to administer to her and she would get better. I attended to the ordinances and also put oil on the child's face, and the next morning some of the blotches on his face were gone and at present he is about well. The sister got well and the next day did her washing and in the evening attended our meeting and told how the Lord had raised her up and also blessed her child, and asked the prayers of the saints that she might get into the fold of Christ, etc.

I learned that Bro. William Watson was very sick, four miles east of Juniata, and that they had been trying to learn where I was, and as my whereabouts was not known, they telegraphed for Bro. Barr, at Applegate, and got an answer from Port Huron that he would respond in the morning; so I drove to Bro. Watson's. He told his wife before I went in that Bro. McKenzie had come. She thought it strange how he knew at first, till she thought of the office work of the Spirit of God. When I entered his room I said: "Bro. Will, I did not expect to find you in this state." He said: "I am not going to be here long now." The room seemed to be filled with the Spirit of God. About half an hour after he was administered to he got up, dressed himself, and came out into the kitchen and had supper with us, and next morning was the first one up and gave orders to wire Bro. Barr not to come. I had to leave in the morning, for Bro. B. Kilbourn's, as Sr. Kilbourn had done my washing so I could come to this place to tell the good news of the angel's message to a people that had not as yet heard our elders preach. If the good Lord spares me till seven o'clock this evening and the people come out, the first gospel shot will be fired into the enemy's camp from the rostrum in the Indian Methodist church. I expect to keep to the front all this week, and by the help of God to plant the flag of liberty, and set up the standard of Christ, and leave at least some to rejoice in this good work to mark the place of battle. This, the 20th till the 25th day of February.

I was accompanied to this place by a young sister from South Juniata who was raised from death's door by the power of God last summer. This sister (Vernia Brewer) has a sister and brother-in-law here who want to learn the way into the kingdom of God. They are doing all they can to get a place to preach in, and make us feel at home. Mr. Burleson went with me yesterday to see the Indian gentleman that had charge of the church. I preached about two sermons to him and all that came to his house, twelve in number. The good Spirit melted some to tears, while I was filled to overflowing.

With love to the dear ones at home and all saints,

Your brother in gospel bonds,
A. MCKENZIE.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 20.

Editors Herald:—As a believer in the mission of the church for the ingathering of the honest in heart and for the preaching of the gospel in its fullness, and seeing so much in our church paper about the means used by other churches for raising money, and hearing our elders preach so much about it, I am surprised to see the Herald or any of its staff helping on any such scheme as the chain letter system. It is like the blacksmith shoeing the horse for one cent for the first nail and doubling the price each nail; and the outside world has a good deal to say about it as the Salvation Army have the same thing; and if ever the saints are to be gathered into the regions round about and Zion be built up, it will not be by such things as that, else I do not understand the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and the first volume of the History aright.

The church has burdened itself with the debt of the college while hundreds of saints are starving for the word and saying, "Send us an elder;" and there is no money in the treasury to send them to teach them the law of tithing and freewill offering that there may be money in hand to buy the land in the regions round about and the gathering commence as the Lord has directed; while in the case of the college there was no command given.

Now may those that have the church affairs in hand be led and directed by our Lord that there may be no more mistakes, that his kingdom may come, his will be done on earth as it is in heaven, is my prayer. Amen.

We have no branch here and but seven of us, and all from forty-six to seventy odd years old, and work by the day for our living. We are not able to give much, but are doing what we can; also trying to let our light shine and hoping for the time to come when there shall be more added to our number. We came into the church in March, 1890, wife and I, under the preaching of Elder Robert Davis, and were baptized into Black River branch, Sanilac County, Michigan, and am not tired yet; but the more I study this gospel of the kingdom the brighter the light shines, and the more ready I am to say, "Father, not my will but thine be done."

I thank God for this latter-day gospel and that I have been able to lay hold of his promises, and to be healed by complying with his commands. May we all be able to come up higher and live so that we may ask and receive, knock and it shall be opened unto us.

Yours in hope of the first resurrection,
W. A. B. CLINE.

Editors Herald:—If an obscure member may be allowed to express her opinion and desires upon so important a subject, I would like to give expression to a few thoughts inspired by reading Bro. Hilliard's article on the Gathering.

First I would like to suggest that all Latter Day Saints, laity and officers alike, who are interested in the subject, write to Bro. Hilliard, expressing that interest, and defining the amount of moral, financial, and spiritual support they are willing to give the movement.

Since the brother's article appeared, our own (Chelsea Park) branch has become greatly interested in the subject. The Book of Doctrine and Covenants is studied as never before. Wherever two or three are gathered together the subject of Consecration is sure to be discussed. As I understand it one brother has expressed his intention to speak upon the subject at next General Conference; another was heard to wish he had a million dollars that he might consecrate it according to the laws of the church.

As has been remarked, the saints may be unwilling to stand the sacrifice; it is human nature to want to keep and enjoy what we have earned. But when we see our brethren and sisters in need, how dwelleth the love of God in us if we refuse to relieve their wants? Is it harder for the rich to give up only their luxuries than the necessities of the poor may be supplied than for the poor to bear their privations? Hunger and cold are hard to bear, and the cries of the poor ascend to God continually. Shall some continue in luxury, compelling others to abide in pinching want? What sweeter thought than that in relieving the wants of the poor we minister to Christ himself? Hath he not said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me?" (Matt. 25:40.)

I suggest that with one accord we begin to study the laws of Consecration and the Gathering; that we make ourselves familiar with the revelations already given; that we meditate and pray much upon this subject and wait not for further revelation before attending to the things already revealed. Let us not be slothful, but diligent, in keeping the law.

I do hope the councils in which the leading quorums are directed to fast and pray that they may instruct one another in doctrine, may be held, that harmony of view may prevail among those in authority, and the saints instructed in their duties.

Brethren, I believe that even now, there are many of the saints who desire to go up to Zion, but the way is not prepared. There are hindering causes; whose duty is it to help remove these? O, let us heed the instruction of the Lord! Let everyone do what he can to help this movement on. Let us no longer "receive" revelation "with doubtful hearts" nor "keep it with slothfulness," but arouse ourselves to faithful and willing obedience, "establish Zion," prepare to build the temple of our God, being ready that when Jesus comes he may receive us into his kingdom. Surely we do not wish to be without oil at the time of his coming and be shut out into outer darkness.

As suggested, let us all write to Bro. Hilliard. He can then form some idea of the desires of the saints to obey these commands concerning the Gathering; councils will be held and the way prepared; and in due time latter-day Israel rejoice together in the land of Zion. SISTER IDA.

CASCILLA, Miss., Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—I have not seen a copy of the Herald since leaving Bay Minette, Alabama, December 8. On my way here I spent one night with Bro. James Bennett, from Independence, Missouri, in the city of Mobile. This was quite a treat indeed to spend a night with some one from my native State.

Taking train at three a. m. the next stop for a stay was New Orleans, remaining from six a. m. till eight p. m., weather cloudy and rainy. Our only objection to this city is that it is built in a swamp. I thought it a little strange that its people could have health at all. At eight p. m. took train, arriving at Grenada four a. m., two hundred and ninety-five miles. Waited in depot till daylight. Began to look around for passage to Cascilla, twenty miles distant; breakfasted at boarding house. At ten a. m. started in lumber wagon, roads very rough and mud very deep, blowed and snowed, arrived eight p. m. Next morning walked to Mr. Arnold Presgraves.

Mrs. Presgrave had written for some of the elders of the Reorganized Church to come, as the elders of the Brighamite Church were making favorable impressions on the minds of some of her neighbors, and she said she did not want any Brighamites for neighbors, which would have been had some of our elders not come and intercepted their work. They had baptized ten very good people near Murphreesboro, some fourteen miles distant. There is not a Latter Day Saint in less than a hundred miles of here that I know of. Sr. Presgrave, who is a member of the M. E. Church, but has been reading the Ensign for six years, being a good reader, well informed, and a splendid woman and of great influence among her neighbors, by the use of the Ensign and Bro. R. Etzenhouser's pamphlet, "Books and Utah Mormonism in contrast," and Bro. J. W. Wight's reply to Roberts and Penrose in the Ensign, and by telling her neighbors not to be in haste till they heard the other side, that she was going to have some of the Missouri saints come and preach, succeeded in holding them till I came. So I being from Missouri, and it being my home, seemed to fill the bill to a ty.

When these elders returned and learned what this noble woman had been doing while they were away, they told the people that those things published in the Ensign and in Bro. E's. pamphlet against them were all lies, and that the Josephite Church had no authority whatever; that there were only a few of us and that we didn't amount to anything; that we hired the son of the prophet to join our church and paid him $7,000.

I held eight meetings in succession of nights in private houses. These men whenever they preached, had been offering to divide the time with any man who would come and show them they were wrong; so with satchels on my shoulders I began to track them up, and on Christmas Day at eleven o'clock I treed them some fourteen miles away, in Mr. Cox's house, where they were to preach and hold Sunday school, he and his family being members of their church. I told them I had come to divide time with them, according to their proposition. I was told by one of their members they were itching and more than anxious to get hold of me; but when I went in I could see they would rather I had not come. But after consulting together they agreed to let me preach on their appointment, but confined me strictly to the three books; they would open the meeting and I must not speak a word after I was through with my discourse. Agreed. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good," was my text (1 Thess. 5: 21), Book of Mormon my subject. I read from the books to show they did not teach polygamy, Deuteronomy 17: 17 with 1 Kings 11, to the surprise of their members. When through, Elder Tollman arose and spoke. He said there were worlds to people, and how could we people them without more wives? and he would suffer his head taken off before he would deny this doctrine. Before meeting was opened I read my proposition to them. They all said it was fair, but would not debate.

I left them; heard no more from them until one of them came and told me they had concluded to accept my proposition. I tried to prevail on them to put it off till July, as we had no house suitable to hold it in. "No, if you don't debate next week we will expose you to the people." "Just come on; I will be here." Saturday evening following they came in the community and notified the people they would preach at the schoolhouse, and came and invited me to attend. "How about the debate?" "You will have to see our leading man; he's at Mr. Lowery's." I did not go Saturday night, thought to give them a little rope. They had been telling the people they did not teach nor practice polygamy, and that the laws of the country would not allow them if they wanted to. Their leading man preached Saturday night; said I had misrepresented them and told lies, and any man that preached anything different to what they did was an impostor. "Well, well. If Bro. Tucker is not here tomorrow I am done with him." "So am I." "So am I!" Sunday eleven a. m. Bro. Tucker was there; heard their leading man preach, called my name and intimated I lied. Said he got word the work was all torn up at the other place, and hastened there, but found it was not. (Their own elders sent this word.) When they announced their meeting for night and dismissed I asked the congregation to be seated, stating I had a few questions to ask these gentlemen. "Do you believe the three standard books of the church, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants?" Bluntly, "He knows we believe those books." Addressing the leader, "You are superintendent of Sunday schools are you not?" Emphatically, "Yes sir, I am." "Do you use the three books in your schools?" "Yes, sir." "Do you teach all that's in those books in your schools, or only a part?" "Ahem! No, sir, we don't teach all that's in them." "What part in those books is it you don't teach in your schools, please?" "I refuse to answer that question." "Gentlemen, I have a proposition I wish to read to you in the presence of this audience: The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true and lawful successor and continuation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as it was organized and established by angelic administration through Joseph Smith and others in the year of our Lord 1830, in the State of New York, and is in harmony with that church in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice; D. E. Tucker affirms, they deny. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, commonly known as the Utah Mormon Church is the same, etc. Gentlemen, will you discuss this proposition with me?" "No, sir."

Then I began to read from their pretended revelation on plural marriage to show the people the absurdity of it. Mr. C. W. Penrose, a son of the noted C. W. Penrose, arose to make some statement. "Just be quiet, please; this is my meeting now." "All right." Down he sat, then I read from Penrose's pamphlet on Blood Atonement and proved that Bro. Etzenhouser's pamphlet was correct. I then asked the people if they wanted their children to go to a Sunday school among this people where such things were taught. I then put the question, "All who think these propositions fair ones that I read in your hearing, raise your hands." A good showing of hands. Vice versa, not a hand went up.

When meeting was dismissed the man having charge of the house told them they could not preach there any longer. "All right." "Mr. Lowery, can we preach in your house to-night?" "No, sir, if you refuse to debate this question, you can't preach in my house any more: and my doors are no longer open to you," which ends their work here.

Later: Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, Feb. 23.

I came here yesterday; never received permit over Illinois Central until the morning I started to the railroad. The agent at Louisville sent or started my credentials to Mr. Newlain, at Bevier, Missouri, but he had not received it; so Mr. Kelland, at Louisville, wrote his agents at Grenada and Hardy to sell me a clergy rate ticket to New Orleans, and wrote me also to that effect, stating he would trace up my permit and send it to me. Bro. Carpenter and some of the saints in Mobile district sent me financial aid to pay my way to their conference.

The winter was so severe at Cascilla, registering 16 below, and so much fatal sickness and no house to preach in, till I have not preached a sermon for six weeks, not even on Sunday. Mrs. Presgrave was taken with a severe case of pneumonia and for several weeks lingered between life and death. I administered to her twice according to her request. After a long severe spell she is up again. Some of the Holiness, or so-called sanctified ones, thought she ought to have jumped up instantly, and went to jumping and shouting all over the floor, and because she did not do it I am not right and nothing but a Mormon. I am glad to say this sort are only few there, however. They once numbered one hundred and eight; they now number about eight. What a drop!

Yes, one of the Utah elders told one of their members on Christmas Day, before several, "If I had known you had not believed in it [polygamy] I would not have baptized you; and we would not ordain any man in this church that don't believe in it." What a homily. And this same member told me that he told them in plain words he did not believe in it, neither did he believe in their dancing. These men, three in number, the last time I met them as before referred to, had to take the road. Surely the way of the transgressor is hard; for these men have proved it to themselves.

My stay of two months at Cascilla was more, it seems, to defend the work than anything else. My number of sermons preached this year is far below the average, but 'tis not all in the number, by any means; one little sermon well preached at the proper time and place and a splendid victory gained are worth more than a hundred sermons of three hours duration and nothing accomplished.

FAIRBANK, Iowa, Feb. 27.

Editors Herald:—We are snowed in at this place, but the weather appears a little warmer this morning, and we hope to be able to continue our meetings. The severe cold weather this year has interfered a great deal with our work, but we hope to gain during April all we have so far lost; thanks to the two-year adjournment idea.

Our recent conference was quite a peaceful one. The attendance was not so large as it ought to have been, but those who attended were well paid for the effort. We were royally entertained by the Arlington saints. One thing would greatly improve the work there; that is, a church. The schoolhouse in which they meet is far too small for a conference, especially in warmer weather. A new tent was ordered purchased and Bro. Warren Turner and Bro. C. G. Dykes were ordered to purchase it.

Our Institute was a grand success spiritually and every other way. Several expressed themselves with having been greatly edified. The main effort was to instruct and edify each other, and I for one felt well repaid for the effort. Some of the speeches were well seasoned with the Spirit of the Master. We especially remember one by Bro. B. F. Miller in defense of the advice of the Lord to the traveling ministry, to leave "the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers." The question of "district presidents being chosen or appointed," was discussed at some length, and then referred to Bro. J. R. Sutton for his especial study, to be spoken upon by him at our next meeting. The question of tithing was spoken upon at some length, the main points being whether one should pay tithing on what he had need of or whether it should be on that which he had "more than he had need" (See Gen. 14: 39, I. T.); also whether the beginning of tithing was a tenth of all we possessed or whether it was "all our surplus property." The question was referred to J. W. Peterson for his special study, to be spoken on at our next meeting. Other questions were discussed and after a very profitable day adjournment was had to meet at Fulton, Iowa, May 29, at 8:30 a. m.

We feel very well satisfied with our first effort in this matter, and already we feel our hearts longing for another meeting of the same kind. With joy we shall hail the coming of the school of the prophets. May the Lord hasten the time and prepare us to be worthy. Our great desire to obtain an education of the "things concerning the kingdom" makes us feel like one of old: "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." May the Lord hasten the time when our college may impart divine rather than worldly knowledge. "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world" (1 Cor. 1: 20) in these last days by raising up an "unlearned man" to be his choice seer, to establish a work that cannot be "gainsayed nor resisted"? A knowledge of worldly facts is good; worldly conclusions from worldly facts are not always so good. We long for the time when our "faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God;" when we shall speak more thoroughly "the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory;" that we may receive "not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth." (1 Cor. 2: 5, 7, 12, 13.)

I hope to see the college prosper till the things "which be of God" be more thoroughly taught therein, and the school of the prophets be substituted for the school of the world. I would not be understood as opposing useful information imparted at Graceland, but more in favor of more necessary facts obtained of the Lord—facts which make for our eternal good, should we be so fortunate to obtain a dwelling place with the Master of earth and sea and skies. I compare a worldly education with the divine as I compare the earthly life with the divine. One should be used to secure the other. A worldly education compares with the divine as a worldly life compares with the divine.

The necessity of a worldly education may possibly be discussed at our next Institute, and we earnestly invite those interested in that line to come and help us out. This invitation extends to the priesthood anywhere.

I expect to go from here to Waterloo and then to Cedar Rapids and Viola.

Our house in Clinton, at No. 1205 Ninth Avenue, being so cold, we moved to a more comfortable one and are now located at No. 727 Fourth Avenue, Clinton, Iowa. Will our friends please take notice.

In bonds of divine peace,

J. W. PETERSON.

SMITHLAND, Iowa, Feb. 25.

Editors Herald:—I was just thinking of answering another chain letter when I received the Herald from the office and my eyes fell upon Bro. H. T. Watson's letter, and I think good can be accomplished. Now is the time for us to send freewill offerings in place of writing the five letters. I will enclose this one, accompanied with one dollar. With a united effort let us as a body work together and prove to the Lord by paying off the debt and freeing Graceland College that we are willing and have a desire to profit by the mistakes of the past and come up higher, and not keep on making mistakes.

Let it be a warning for us to keep our tithing paid up, and observe the laws and commandments in fear and trembling. To-day we have a chance, to-morrow we may not, and by delay we are cheating ourselves out of blessings we might be enjoying.

A few words more from my heart: I am one who has tasted the sweet and the bitter. I have been a member of the restored gospel two years. It is dear to me. As a brother stated, my faith in the work is so strong that if I had to die or deny it, I would give my life. When under trials, O let us learn to be more like our Savior, and come off victorious. I seal this with a prayer. May God bless all.

A sister in Christ,

ELLA PARKER.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—During the past year wife and I having been at Greenville, Connecticut, I have spent the most of my labors in that part of the State; preached with Bro. Robley at Preston and Pachang, and he having then returned to Rhode Island, I went to Quakertown, a place fifteen miles from home, and preached in the Quaker meetinghouse, which had been closed against us for six years, Bro. Sheehy having first preached there seven years ago, and there the writer first heard the glad tidings of latter days. I came from there about five weeks ago, leaving some of the younger people very favorable towards the work; but much opposed by the leaders of their society as a rule; but the Spirit was with me for the work, and who can successfully oppose it? However, the trustees closed the building against me, saying, "It is not for what you have taught, but because you do not believe as we do." "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." After preaching, one of them came to me and said: "I do not see how you can believe as you preach and belong to a creed." I informed him that our creed was God's word.

On the 7th instant the writer was surprised by the sudden appearance of a goodly number of the saints of the Boston branch, it being the beginning of the twenty-seventh year of my life. Among other things were allusion to milestones, in spite of which the writer feels as young as ever. Bro. Luff has consented to be in Connecticut in March, where are some new places opened for the work.

For Zion's cause,

A. B. PHILLIPS.

DENVER, Col., Feb 26.

Editors Herald:—Our conference passed off very pleasantly; I think it was the best ever held in the district. We were somewhat disappointed in not having Bro. Joseph present with us, but hope he may be able to pay us the promised visit in June. Two-days' meetings have been appointed as follows, with the expectation of his visit: Wray, Colorado, June 3 and 4; Denver, the 10th and 11th; Sterling, the 17th and 18th. We only hold conference twice a year, which brings the next one in August.

At the preaching services during conference the house was well filled, and at the sacrament service Sunday afternoon the attendance was about one hundred, and a grand time was had, the Spirit being manifest in a great degree.

Bro. Gillen has left for home; Bro. Roush has moved to Wray, Colorado; Bro. O. B. Thomas is with us to-day, but will leave tomorrow to answer calls for preaching in the east end of this county; Bro. F. L. Sawley remains to assist in the work of saving souls in this wicked city. Surely there is plenty of work in a city like this with crime of all kinds on the increase; it is very necessary that the gospel be preached for a witness. Several suicides in the past two weeks in high society, among them being the Royal Vice Consul of Sweden and Norway. He was found lying in some weeds and brush where he had taken his life about three weeks before.

My time is taken up with providing for my family, so I have but little time to devote to church work, except on Sunday; and it seems to me that in a branch as large as this, one hundred and fifty-three, there ought to be more house-to-house visiting done. I think the Utah people owe a great deal of their success to this mode of procedure. I hope the time may come, if I am kept in charge here, when I can perform more of this kind of labor. There are thousands of good honest people in this city that I think could be interested in the plan of salvation if we could reach them, and I know of no better way to reach them than by the above method. I hope Bro. Joseph may be able to meet with us in June.

Yours truly,

E. F. SHUPE.

SCANDIA, Kan., March 27.

Editors Herald:—The Pender-Shick debate, so much talked of and looked forward to with many speculative reflections, came at last. The propositions were duly discussed by the principals and immensely enjoyed and appreciated by their hearers, and the debate is now a thing of the past.

To say that Bro. Pender achieved a glorious victory for truth, expresses it very mildly indeed. We might submit a lengthy report that would no doubt be very interesting to your readers, but instead, suffice it to say that after a weary contest Joseph Smith the Seer and his various religious productions shine forth with a brighter luster and his divine mission are recognized by those who heretofore entertained a much different opinion of the illustrious man.

I mail you three issues of our local paper, the Scandia Journal, which contains an itemized report of debate, which, though told in a way that savors very much of the prize ring, yet expresses clearly the opinion of the major portion of the immense throng that crowded the building and listened attentively during each session throughout the entire debate.

Your brother,

MILTON BONNER.

HIGBEE, Mo., Feb. 26.

Editors Herald:—The Northeast Missouri district conference is now in the past. It was held at Bevier, Missouri, February 19, 20. We had a good time throughout; quite a turnout from Salt River, Huntsville, Higbee, and Pollock. I trust the saints were strengthened in meeting together and testifying of God's goodness to them since obeying the angel's message to earth in these the latter days.

I find one of the greatest difficulties in this latter-day work is self—to keep myself in this straight and narrow path that leads to the tree of life. I find that in watching myself I will have no time to watch my brethren. We are commanded that our walk through life be what will speak of us; and if we are really living the life we profess, we will not be picked out by our enemies as, "Look at such a one; do you call him a saint?" Some may be visiting the dramshops on the sly; others go to dances; some borrow money and do not try to repay it. Such ones are soon picked out as samples of the church. We are commanded to come out from among them, "saith the Lord."

The question may be asked, Are you keeping all of those commandments? I will say that I am trying to by the help of the Lord. I find that we are to purify ourselves, to cleanse ourselves of all filthiness. If we are addicted to strong drink, such as is intoxicating, or the use of tobacco, we are expected to leave them off, to cleanse our bodies for the indwelling of God's Holy Spirit, as he says he cannot dwell in an unclean temple, and that our bodies are temples. This I believe is a day of sacrifice. If we expect to see our Elder Brother come to redeem Zion, there are sacrifices to be made that the gospel may be preached in all the world as a witness; and not till then can we say, "Come, Lord Jesus, come." The work of the saints is not being accomplished as fast as it ought, or the elders would not have to leave their fields of labor and take up the pursuits of life to care for their families, for it has been said that if we do not care for our families we are worse than infidels. Let us say with the poet,

"Let us shake off the coals from our garments
And arise in the strength of the Lord."

There is a work for us all to do, not the elders alone have to make sacrifices, leaving loved ones and going out into a cold, sinful world. The good wife has a large share to bear, while often we can hear complaints that they are living too high. I have often meditated on this problem. There is a work for us all if we will put our shoulders to the wheel and help push this work on to victory. If we do not do our part God has promised he will raise up a people who will. Saints, let us be that people.

May God add his blessings to all his people. Saints, pray for me that I may not lose the reward.

In gospel bonds,

JACOB WALTENBAUGH.

MOORES JUNCTION, Mich., Feb. 22.

Editors Herald:—I have obeyed the gospel of Jesus Christ. I am not ashamed of this gospel, and am ready to defend it wherever I go. My mother and father obeyed it about the same time. We have all been blessed with a portion of the Spirit, and do not regret the step taken, but can thank God that he ever called us to obey the truth.

The saints hold prayer meeting here three times a week, and enjoy a goodly portion of the Spirit of the Master.

Sr. Belinger is very low. She requests saints to pray for her that she may be healed, if it is according to the will of the Master.

May God bless every saint that all may live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Your brother,

BERNARD L. MCNAMARA.

It is a curious question to ask why God permitted Protestantism to sweep away the greater part of the Anglo-Saxon race from its moorings to the ancient faith. We have never seen the question discussed before, but Henry C. Corrance, a recent convert from Protestantism, discusses it in a masterly way in the Catholic World Magazine for March.

Recent observations among Indians show that in South America, as well as in North America, the red woman lives longer than the red man. But the average duration of life is only seventeen years for both sexes in the South, and 22 per cent of the Indians die during the first year of life.

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 6.

THE OBJECT OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT—FOR THE GOOD OF THE INDIVIDUAL.

We can never fully understand the subject of the "eternal judgment," and the final destiny of man, unless we have correct ideas of the object or purpose God has in view in punishing the children of men. Many have, seemingly at least, overlooked this matter in the investigation of this subject, and have therefore arrived at conclusions that are incorrect. Not only are they incorrect, but they are repugnant to all the better feelings of our nature, and in direct opposition to the unbounded goodness, love, and mercy of our heavenly Father as presented to us in his word. The Lord said to Moses:—

Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the Lord thy God chasteneth thee.—Deut. 8: 5.

How? "As a man chasteneth his son." The wise man also says:—

My son, despise not the chastening of the Lord; neither be weary of his correction. For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.—Prov. 3: 11, 12.

Here then are two witnesses who testify that God chastens his children as a father corrects his son, "the son in whom he delighteth." Let us now take a view of a father chastening his son. We shall suppose this boy to be fifteen years old; he has disobeyed his father's command, and the father now purposes to chastise him. The boy is tied to a tree, a red hot iron is brought forth and applied to his body; again and again this heroic treatment is applied, all the while the boy's screams are rending the air; his pleas for mercy are pouring into this father's ears, and his agony is fearful to behold. But there is no cessation of the punishment. The boy faints in a dead swoon, but the father is determined to show him how much "he delighteth" in him, so he continues to apply the torture as long as there is a throb of the pulse, a spark of life, left in his boy's body—the boy "in whom he delighteth."

During this time the rest of the family are standing around shouting, Glory! Hallelujah! along with other expressions of gratitude and happiness.

Now you would say that man is a brute, and the whole family are worse than heathen cannibals. Such a thing would not be tolerated anywhere in all this land. Yet if God's punishment of the wicked, those who have not obeyed the gospel in this life, has been correctly represented by the religious world, the above is the way a father should chasten "his son in whom he delighteth." Men have tried to make me believe that my heavenly Father will take his erring creatures, pack them in a lake of fire and brimstone, and roast them there for millions and millions of ages; and they have thought me an unbeliever in the Bible because I could not believe it. I am not yet prepared to accept it. But when I look upon the chastisement of God in the light in which it is presented in the Scriptures, quoted above, I can comprehend the statement of the Psalmist:—

Before I was afflicted I went astray: but now have I kept thy word. . . . It is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes.—Ps. 119: 67, 71.

I can see that the chastisement, in his case, was upon the principle of correction, and that it had the desired effect. So it is, as a rule, when a loving parent chastises his son; the son is corrected, and the father is respected and honored because of his superior judgment. Not so, however, with a brutal father; he drives his son from him, loses his love and respect, and the boy, as a rule, goes to the bad. As to which of these is to be taken to represent our heavenly Father, I leave the reader to decide for himself. The Psalmist says again:—

He that chastiseth the heathen, shall he not correct?—Psalms 94: 10.

Do you think he will? If not, what is meant by this?

For all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.—Rev. 15:4.

And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever.—Rev. 11:15.

"The kingdoms of this world," at the present time, would hardly be recognized as "the kingdoms of our Lord;" nor do "all nations come and worship before thee." This is to be in the future. But when? "When thy judgments are made manifest." Surely, then, "he that chastiseth the heathen" will "correct," when his "judgments are made manifest," and will, by those judgments, cause "all nations" to "come and worship before thee," and to "become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ." And this is made doubly strong by the Prophet Isaiah:—

For when thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.—Isa. 26:9.

'Twere better to learn righteousness before that time; but if one does not learn before, then it is a consolation to know that their sufferings will be of such a character as to teach them righteousness, and cause them to "come and worship before" God. The Lord chastens his children in this life, that they might escape those judgments, the condemnation that shall rest upon the wicked. Paul says, in speaking of the afflictions that come upon the people of God in this life:—

But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.—1 Cor. 11:32.

Peter says:—

For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?—1 Peter 4:17.

And this is all in harmony with the statement:—

Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after.—1 Tim. 5:24.

Hence the Lord says of Israel:—

Behold, I have refined thee, but not with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.—Isa. 48:10.

The Lord has seldom seen fit to allow his people to sail along on "flowery beds of ease," for any great length of time without some afflictions. Not that he delights in seeing them suffer, but because this suffering usually becomes an absolute necessity in correcting and curing them of evils that would lead to greater suffering if not corrected now. Even the noble Paul was no exception in this. He says of himself:—

And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.—2 Cor. 12: 7.

And when Paul plead with the Lord to remove this affliction, the Lord kindly showed him that the affliction was really a blessing in disguise, an absolute necessity in disciplining this grand and noble man for the work of the Master. Then Paul said:—

Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.—2 Cor. 12: 9.

Paul had learned the following important lesson:—

And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose.—Rom. 8: 28.

Many, very many, have failed to learn this lesson, and are therefore most always complaining of their afflictions, trials, and sufferings; not realizing that a loving Savior is trying, by this means, to purify and prepare them for his presence. The apostles, we are told:—

Departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.—Acts 5: 41.

The apostles were "men of like passions" (Acts 14: 15) as other men, and they had to learn humility, many times, by the things which they had to suffer. Paul it seems was of that disposition that could be faithful in all kinds of tribulation and suffering; but when blessed with such an abundance of revelations, it became necessary for the hand of affliction to be laid upon him too, lest he become "exalted above measure." But when he realized that it was for his good, he could rejoice even in his infirmities. He evidently believed his own teaching, in the following:—

For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons.—Heb. 12: 6, 7.

And a little further on, in comparing the motives of earthly parents with the motives of our heavenly Father in the administration of punishment, he says:—

For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.—V. 10.

Notice that the Lord's object in punishing is, "that we might be partakers of his holiness." It is not for the purpose of wreaking vengeance upon the offender, nor to satisfy Divine anger; it is "for our profit." Then in the next verse he says:—

Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.—V. 11.

Chastisement, then, although it usually seems grievous while we are suffering it, is purifying in its nature; and this, no doubt, is why future punishment is so often referred to in the Scriptures as being "cast into fire," "into a furnace of fire," etc. "I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction," said the Lord to the children of Israel.

As an example of God's object in punishing that people, choosing them "in the furnace of affliction," I wish to call your attention to Jeremiah 24: 1-5. The Lord here, in speaking of those who were in captivity, says:—

Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good.—V. 5.

They had been wicked and rebellious no doubt, which was the cause of their having to be turned over to the cruelty of the heathen; but God still loved them, and in order to correct them "for their good," brought this punishment upon them. And that their captivity was working in them "the peaceable fruit of righteousness," is evident from the fact that the Lord says, "so will I acknowledge them." Their captivity, being enslaved by the heathen who knew nothing of the "true and living God," was indeed "grievous" to them; but it was "for their good." Other proofs might be offered, but these are sufficient; they show that God punishes people, now, "for their good," that they "might not be condemned with the world," that they "might be partakers of his holiness," "for our profit," and to yield in them the "peaceable fruit of righteousness."

Now by what line of reasoning do we reach the conclusion that he chastises upon just the opposite principle to this in the world to come? "He that chastiseth the heathen, shall he not correct?" If God's people are chastised upon the principle of correction, and if the chastisement of the heathen is to be corrective too, then I see no reason to doubt that the punishment of those who are "turned into hell" will be upon the same principle; that the correction and final good of the individual who is being chastened will be the grand purpose in the Divine Mind. If the punishment is to be upon any other principle, I can see no good to come of it; the individual would not be made any better, the righteous would not be made any happier, and God's glory would not be made any greater.

And, besides that, we are told that God is unchangeable; "the same yesterday, and today, and forever;" and as he punishes upon the principle of correction here, we are forced to believe that he will do so hereafter. This, taken with what we have learned in regard to the mission of the Savior to "the dead," to "the spirits in prison," certainly justifies us in believing that when the wicked are "turned into hell," with all the nations that forget God," it will be for the same purpose that the children of Israel were sent into Chaldean captivity—"for their good." The old proverb says: "Experience is a dear school; but fools will learn in no other." The child who will not obey his parents must learn obedience in the house of correction; citizens who will not obey the laws of the land must learn obedience in the State's prison; and men and women who will not obey God here must be "turned into hell," and learn obedience in God's prison house, and that too by the things which they suffer. I say they must learn it there, because God has declared, by the inspired writers of the Bible, that "every knee shall bow" and that "every tongue shall confess;" that "all nations shall come and worship before thee;" that he will "reconcile all things unto himself" "through the blood of his cross."

God has declared this, and his "purpose shall stand." May the Lord help us to live so that we may escape the punishment that shall overtake the wicked.

Carlile; Priests: L. P. Jensen, C. C. Larson, P. M. Hansen, J. Evans; Teacher A. E. Madison. Bishop's agent, J. P. Carlile, reported for six months ending February 28: On hand last report $16 45; collected since, $530.90; paid Bishop E. L. Kelley, $375; ministry and poor $143; balance on hand $29 35. Referred to an auditing committee, who reported a deficiency of sixty cents due to error in copying from record, otherwise correct. The following preamble and resolution was passed and ordered forwarded to Hon. Smith McPherson, congressman-elect from the Ninth Iowa Congressional district: "To the Honorable Members of the Fifty-sixth Congress of the United States, Washington, D. C., Greeting; At a meeting of a conference of the Pottawattamie district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, February 25 and 26, 1899, and representing a local membership of over 800, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted and ordered forwarded to the national house of representatives: Whereas, the State of Utah is reported to have elected a polygamist, in the person of B. H. Roberts, to represent it in the congress of the United States; be it Resolved, that we earnestly protest against one guilty of the crime of polygamy, or plural marriage, or unlawful cohabitation, being seated or retained as a legislator in the House of Representatives of the United States; and be it further resolved, that we do not object to Mr. B. H. Roberts as a man, or believe that the question of his religious belief should prejudice the case against him, but we hold that anything contrary to the code of good morals, or which is opposed to the laws of our country, should be held criminal and should debar any aspirant who is compromised thereby from a seat in the National Congress." President Carlile called attention to a resolution passed by the conference of August 27, 1898, at Hazel Dell, requiring elders to report to the conference, and in the event of their failure, he to report them to their quorum if enrolled, and if not, then demand their license. He thought the penalty too severe. A motion to repeal was laid upon the table until next conference. Elders J. S. Strain and I. Carlile, Jr., reporting for labor were referred to the district president. Officers elected for the next quarter: D. R. Chambers president, H. N. Hansen assistant, J. C. Jensen secretary. J. P. Carlile sustained as Bishop's agent, and was tendered a vote of thanks for past service as district president. Preaching by Elders D. R. Chambers, Henry Kemp, and Isaac M. Smith. Social service Sunday afternoon that filled the hearts of the saints with joy and thanksgiving. Adjourned to Underwood, Iowa, May 27.

Laird 37; loss 1. Eustis 47. Cedar 21. New Windsor 11; loss 10. Highland 20. Coal Creek 9. Ministers reporting: Apostle J. W. Gillen baptized 6; High Priest E. F. Shupe baptized 1; Elders J. B. Roush baptized 1, O. B. Thomas, F. L. Sawley baptized 2, J. Kemp baptized 1, J. W. Gilbert, E. D. Bullard, J. Houston, Alma Kent; Priests M. F. Ralston, G. Keller; Teacher L. J. Bradshaw; Deacon I. C. Edwards. Bishop's agent, C. E. Everett, reported: Receipts for six months $498.12; cash on hand, August 15, 1898, $22 50; expenditures $465; cash on hand $55.62. Found correct by auditing committee, and the Bishop's agent was sustained by vote of the conference. Committee on Conifer church repairs reported $14.25 on hand. Report accepted and committee continued. Conference voted to hold a two days' meeting, each at Denver, Sterling, and Wray, Colorado, in June, under the direction of the district president. The presidents of branches in the district to constitute a committee to solicit funds for the purchase of a gospel tent, the Bishop's agent of the district to be ex officio chairman of said committee. The New Windsor branch was declared disorganized. Committee for the organization of a district Sunday school association reported that an organization had been effected, with officers as follows: Sr. L. A. Schmutz, 1846 Lincoln Avenue, Denver, Colorado, superintendent; J. B. Roush, assistant, Wray, Colorado; J. F. Curtis, Falcon, Colorado, secretary; A. E. Tabor, Seebarssee, Colorado, treasurer. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, B. H. Roberts has been elected to a seat in the United States Congress from Utah; and whereas, said Roberts is an open and avowed polygamist, contrary to the enacted laws of the land and the revealed law of God; and whereas, the avowed authority for the practice of polygamy is a purported revelation to Joseph Smith; and whereas, all of the public and private teachings of said Joseph Smith, and his practice as well, to the time of his death were most pronounced against polygamy and concubinage and in favor of the monogamic sanctity of the home circle. Therefore, be it resolved, that the Eastern Colorado district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in conference assembled, do hereby deny that Joseph Smith received the abominable revelation authorizing polygamy; and further, be it resolved, that we as a district do most solemnly protest against the seating in Congress of Brigham H. Roberts, not because he is a Mormon, but because he is a polygamist, and we believe that law breakers should not be law makers; and further, be it resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Hon. John F. Shafroth, with a request that the same be read to the House of Representatives in Congress assembled. Officers for the ensuing six months: J. B. Roush president, E. F. Shupe vice president, C. E. Everett secretary. Speakers during conference: Elders A. Kent, O. B. Thomas, and F. L. Sawley. Adjourned to meet with Laird branch, Wray, Colorado, August 19 and 20.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

The first district Sunday school institute of the Clinton (Missouri) district convened with the Walker saints, February 24, at seven p. m. District superintendent, Sr. Dr. Miller, being absent on account of sickness, Sr. Mina Kearney, first assistant, presided.

On account of inclement weather only a few from a distance were in attendance, yet the interest was excellent, and all felt that they were better prepared to carry on the Sunday school work. The Friday evening session consisted of Sunday school prayer meeting, and Saturday at 9:30 a. m., two p. m., and seven p. m., institute work. At the close it was voted to petition the district Sunday school convention to set apart a certain time for the institute. Also a vote of thanks was extended to Sr. Miller for calling this institute. As a result of the work done, next Thursday evening was appointed as teacher's meeting at Walker, and quite an interest is taken in the library work.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of Northeast Missouri District, Greeting:—We have started on another year of our lives in this glorious work, and allow me to appreciate the sacrifices you have made in the past year, and may the blessings of God continue with you. I wish to state that there are some in this district doing nobly, in contributing of their means as God has blessed them, towards the support of the missionaries' families and helping the poor and needy, as the law directs; but in comparing the number of those who have observed the law of tithing with the total membership in the district, I learn that the largest number do nothing financially. There is perhaps a cause for this, and while this may be true and justifiable with some when giving reasons why they don't comply with the law of tithing, it is also true that none are exempt from complying with this law.

In my experience of eight years as Bishop's agent I have learned a little of the condition of the district financially; also the dispositions of men and their circumstances to some extent, which assists me in drawing conclusions, notwithstanding my judgment may be incorrect, as I am far from being perfect; yet I am confident that some are in good circumstances, and have not yet started to pay tithing.

In trying to present this subject to the saints I find they are divided; some are glad to hear it taught, while others are not. It is a very easy matter for the speaker on the subject of tithing to discern who are in favor of honoring the law of tithing and who are not. When I look over the congregation before me, I don't need to ask the question, Why hast thy countenance changed? Some have a pleasant appearance, while others look sad and grieved, like the rich ruler spoken of in Luke 18: 18-24. Notwithstanding he had kept all the commandments from his youth, Christ said he lacked one thing, and commanded him to "sell all that thou hast" and give to the poor. He went away sorrowful, because he had much riches. His tender chord was touched.

There is a possibility that many of us are lacking in this. When I come in contact with some saints, I learn they don't fully understand what is required of them to contribute. To such I refer the answer of Bishop E. L. Kelley in the Herald a few weeks ago, saving me the trouble to repeat it here. However, I shall refer you to a quotation claimed to be a revelation from God, in answer to the question asked through prayer, found in Doctrine and Covenants, section 106.

In this section we have a thus saith the Lord. By reading and studying this section carefully, we shall understand how much is required of us as tithing, and that it is the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after we have thus been tithed of our surplus property, comes our interest annually, or increase. The tenth is required, and this is to be a standing law forever. In addition to this read section 64, paragraph 5. We learn that we are living in the day of sacrifice and tithing of God's people until the coming of the Son of man. The above quotations are sufficient and plain enough to be understood without any comments.

I feel to appeal once more to those who have not started to observe the law of tithing. I appeal to you, and advise you to begin according to the revelations quoted above, and assure you that God will verify his promise unto you both temporally and spiritually. Let us all sacrifice a little this year, that the gospel may roll forth and many come to the knowledge of the truth. I wish to impress upon the minds of those who are not able to give much not to hold back your small mites, because you are not able to give as much as Bro. or Sr. So and So. It is not for the amount you contribute that the blessing is promised; but the sacrifice in proportion to the means which you have.

And while we observe the Law of tithing, let us not forget the Home—a grand movement to bring about the designs of God and the wants of his people. Remember also the College. The church needs our help financially to bring about the ends we have in view. I wish to make known what the sisters of the Bevier Mite Society have done. Last year they sent $20 to the Bishop as an offering, besides contributing to the local work of the branch. And they still continue sewing away. From a social held in the church February 21, they realized $36.15, for the purpose of painting the church building. Let the sisters of other branches do likewise.

One thought more before I close. As this appeal will not be known to all the saints throughout the district, for the reason that they don't subscribe for the Herald, I refer this thought more especially to the Bevier saints, because I know that many heads of families don't get the Herald, hence this appeal will not benefit all the saints. Will Bro. Criley write to those, and impress upon them the need and benefits derived by getting the Herald weekly to every family.

I invoke God's Holy Spirit to move upon us to understand our duties to bring about the redemption of Zion is my prayer.

J. T. WILLIAMS, Bishop's Agent.

BEVIER, Missouri, February 28.

REUNION NOTICE.

To the Saints of the Nebraska Mission, Greeting:—We your committee appointed to locate the time and place for holding the State reunion, have considered the matter seriously, with an earnest desire to make the best move we can for the interest of the church in general, and have not considered our personal desires in the least; but after a careful canvass of the grounds, have decided to locate the reunion at Shelton, Nebraska; on the main line of the U. P. railway, and the time from August 5 to 14. We hope to secure one of the First Presidency; the balance of the speakers will be chosen from the mission force in Nebraska. There will be plenty of good speakers. The grounds are situated nicely, and very handy to the depot; good camping grounds, good place to care for teams, and plenty of water. Fuel and hay will be furnished free.

We hope to have the hearty cooperation of all the saints who can do so by their presence at the reunion, and hope they will remember that there is some expense which is legitimately incurred in such a reunion as this that the committee are expected to meet, and come prepared to help us out. While we expect to make as little expense as possible, there is some that must be met, and is unavoidable; so make your arrangements to come and camp out for a week, and enjoy a season of rejoicing and instruction, and be strengthened in the faith and hope we have in Christ our Lord, and edify one another. Come with earnest prayer that God may bless us with his protecting care, and his Spirit's presence to cheer our hearts. Further notice will be given later on.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On February 28, I mailed to each member of the quorum a blank report. You will please fill out the same and return to me by April 1. I hope all will report, and I will publish a summary of work done when all reports are in. If any fail to receive blank report, if they will notify me I will send them another.

Balance-sheets are unhappily scarce among farmers; the few that are taken are hard to get at; for these reasons the one presented by Mr. Frank H. Spearman in the Review of Reviews for March is of especial interest. As Mr. Spearman says, "It is not from a paper farm; it is not a paper balance; nor is it a paper farmer who makes the showing. It is what no American review has ever before presented to its readers—an actual glimpse at the books and workings of a model American farm. This farm, located in the State of Iowa, contains 6,000 acres, and its business is to produce corn." Not only does Mr. Spearman disclose the business workings of this great corn farm, but his article also gives an insight into the business of wheat-growing on a large scale in the Red River Valley of North Dakota.

DIED.

HAYER.—Andrew Hayer, born November 22, 1815, at Telemarken, Norway, came to America in 1842, settled on Koshkonong prairie, Dane County, Wisconsin; two years later he located in La Salle County, Illinois, where he remained up to the time of his death. With other members of his father's family he was one of the pioneer settlers of La Salle County, and participated in the privations and inconveniences of a new country. Bro. Hayer was married in 1842, to Miss Olena Mid Gorden, with whom he lived thirty-two years; she dying November 6, 1874. He married Miss Ellen Danielson September 6, 1876, with whom he lived to the time of his death. Hearing the restored gospel he united with it in 1844; hailed with joy the Reorganization October 7, 1860, being baptized in Fox River by Elder W. W. Blair; was ordained an elder April 14, 1863. Bro. Hayer was a faithful believer in the restored gospel and the coming glory of Christ's kingdom upon the earth. He fell asleep in the Lord on Sunday, February 26, 1899, at his home in the town of Miller, La Salle County, Illinois, aged 83 years, 3 months, 4 days. He leaves his wife, two brothers, one sister, to mourn. "Uncle Andrew" will be greatly missed in his home, in the church, and in the community where he had lived so many years. His mortal remains were laid to rest from the saints' chapel, March 1; sermon by Elder F. M. Cooper, assisted by Elder Thomas Hougas.

ASPEY.—John and Mary A. Aspey were pioneers of St. Joseph, Missouri, and by their carefulness and frugality had accumulated a considerable amount of property, mostly consisting of houses in one of the poorer parts of the city. They loved the gospel of Christ, although not partaking actively in church work; but this desire to see the work prosper prompted them to donate free use of one of their houses, which was fitted up, by removing the partitions and so forth, into quite a nice little chapel for the preaching of the word, and through this means quite a number of good, honest, earnest souls have been brought into the light. On January 9, 1899, death claimed Bro. Aspey; but before he went he left as a bequest that the property which had so long been used by the church should be deeded to the church—a bequest which his son declares shall be carried out. His aged companion said when he died that she would be but a month following him, and she also passed away just one month following, February 9. Both were buried from the little chapel known by the St. Joseph saints as the Aspey Mission; both lie side by side in beautiful Ashland cemetery; both sermons by their request being preached by Elder Hyrum O. Smith. Bro. Aspey was aged 73, his wife 63 years of age.

BURR.—Bro. Joseph Burr was born in Birmingham, England, September 26, 1829, and died at St. Joseph, Missouri, January 20, 1899. He joined the church in 1876, and died respected by all who knew him. His wife's name was Green; she had two living children by a former husband, and having no children of his own, he became a father indeed to these who loved him as they would an own father; and when they had grown and married and the children of one at least becoming fatherless by death, he also became a father to them. Thus fulfilling one part at least of James' ideal of true religion and undefiled. His funeral took place at the saints' chapel, St. Joseph, Missouri, services in charge of Elder F. A. Smith, sermon by Elder H. O. Smith. He leaves an aged companion, her daughter, and five children to mourn.

DANN.—Joseph Almon, infant son of Bro. J. A. and Sr. Cordelia S. Dann. Died February 18, 1899. Funeral from the residence of Mrs. C. A. Wickes, Sunday, February 19, Brn. Fred B. Blair and E. L. Kelley officiating. A quiet peaceful rest to one of the Lord's little children.

MOONEY.—At Independence, Missouri, February 13, 1899, Sr. Jane Mooney departed this life. While in town on business the Wednesday previous to her death, she fell, sustaining injuries that resulted in her death. She was born in Newcastle, England, October 4, 1818. In company with her father's family came to Canada, where she married John Mooney; to them eleven children were born, six of whom survive her, and mourn the loss of a beloved mother. In Canada the gospel reached her, and together with her husband, she united with the church, a short while before the death of the Propbet. Again the light dawned, and she was made aware that the Reorganization represented the truth. She came to Independence, twelve years ago, and many can testify of her integrity to the gospel, of her hospitality, and activity in goodness. Funeral services in the church Sunday; remarks by G. E. Harrington and R. May.

ROBB.—At his home, Port Huron, Michigan, December 26, 1898, Elder James Robb; born March 1, 1823, in Edinburgh, Scotland; united with the church April 30, 1870; ordained an elder November 5, 1882. He leaves a widow and three children to mourn. Funeral sermon by Elder Andrew Barr. Laid to rest in Lake View cemetery, Sarnia, to come forth in the hope of the first resurrection.

EARLY.—At her home in Calhoun County, West Virginia, January 16, 1899, Sr. Catharine Early. She was born March 16, 1826, in Ritchie County, West Virginia, and at her death was 72 years and 10 months old. Had belonged for a long time to the missionary Baptist Church; but when she heard the angel's message, the everlasting gospel, she knew it, and immediately obeyed it and lived it until the grim reaper of death said it was enough. She had received great relief at different times during her afflictions by the administering of the elders, and died firm in the faith.

GREENWOOD.—At Stafford, England, August 15, 1899, Jane, the beloved wife of Elder G. S. Greenwood, aged 53 years. She was baptized April 5, 1874. She was a true saint, living a consistent life, continuing firm in the faith to the end. Though she suffered very much during the last few years, she bore it patiently and without complaint. She was a faithful, loving, and devoted wife and mother. A husband, two sons, and three daughters mourn. Funeral services and sermon by Elder C. H. Caton. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

GELL.—At Sheffield, England, February 1, 1899, in her seventy-first year, Sr. Ann Gell, mother of the late Elder Henry Hoole. The following was adopted at the branch business meeting: Whereas on the 1st of February, 1899, Sr. Ann Gell was removed from our midst by death. We therefore adopt the following expression of our appreciation of her devotion to the latter-day work. She was a faithful saint, a noble worker, ever willing and ready to render assistance in the furtherance of the work. She has fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and lodged the servants of God. We miss her, but bow to God's will, and believe that she will have a glorious resurrection. We sympathize with our bereaved Bro. Gell, and trust that God will sustain and bless him to continue his attention to the good work.

BROCKETT.—At her home, near Eliza, Illinois, Sunday, February 26, 1899, Sr. Caroline Brockett. She was born in Germany, December 29, 1835; was baptized June 24, 1888, and remained firm in the faith to the day of her death. Though sorely afflicted for years, yet she bore all patiently and passed away peacefully, quickly, and almost free from pain, according to the desire of her heart. She leaves a husband, two daughters, and one brother. Funeral services in charge of Elder J. W. Adams, sermon by Elder F. A. Russell.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

PROFESSOR JAMES ON THE IMMORTALITY OF MAN.

(Concluded.)

The Professor closes his discourse with a brief consideration of the second objection to man's immortality, namely, the intolerable and incredible number of beings which, with our modern imagination, we must believe to be immortal if immortality be true. This, he thinks, is a stumbling-block to a great many persons. Until recently man's view of immortality was an aristocratic one. It was thought that only the great kings, heroes, saints, and prophets were the nucleus of the immortal group; the minor sects next, and the people formed the background. Heaven was not then conceived as a very large place. But with our own generation an entirely new quantitative imagination has swept over our Western world. The theory of evolution requires us to take into consideration a far grander scale of times, spaces, and numbers than our forefathers ever dreamed of. Human history grows out of animal history, and the new view of immortality is democratic. On this view the mind may have grown a little cynical, but, in a general way, it has been made sympathetic by the evolutionary perspective. Evolution has not only reared a vast scale for the kindred of man, but it has made the brutes our brothers. And why may not they have souls too? So now if we are to indulge in the immortality of the soul, it demands a scale so stupendous that our imagination staggers before it. Some of us give up the hope of our own immortality sooner than believe that all the hosts of Hottentots and Australians that have been and shall ever be should share with us in secula seculorum. The very heavens themselves and the cosmic times and spaces would stand aghast at the notion of preserving eternally such an ever-swelling plethora and glut of life.

Professor James feels sure that this is the most obvious fallacy in the world, and he declares it exists from our lack of sympathy or interest. It is absurd to suppose, simply because our private power of sympathetic vibration with other lives gives out so soon, that in the heart of infinite being itself there can be such a thing as plethora, or glut, or supersaturation. Each mind brings its own edition of the universe of space along with it, its own record to inhabit, and these spaces never crowd each other. The space of my imagination, for example, in no way interferes with yours. The amount of possible consciousness seems to be governed by no law analogous to that of the so-called conservation of energy in the material world. When one man wakes up or is born, another does not go to sleep or die, in order to keep the consciousness of the universe a constant quantity. Professor Wundt has formulated a law of the universe, which he calls the law of the increase of spiritual energy, and which he expressly opposes to the law of the conservation of energy in physical things. There seems no formal limit to the possible increase of being in spiritual respect. The supply of individual life in the universe can never exceed the demand, the demand for every supply always being present. If we are theists, we can say God has an inexhaustible capacity for love. If we are pantheists, we can say that through so many diversified channels of expression the eternal spirit of the universe realizes and affirms its own infinite life. This is a democratic universe in which your paltry exclusiveness plays no regulative part.—Literary Digest.

SOME OF THE DANGERS OF ALCOHOL.

At the meeting of the Paris Hospitals Medical Society, held on December 15; M. Legendre, alarmed by the ever-increasing amount of drunkenness, asked if it would not be possible to withstand this by means of meetings, insistence on the dangers of alcohol, and, by what he considered an even better method, that of getting up for the instruction of patients lantern shows with exhibitions of anatomic preparations to show the dangers of alcohol. M. Legendre has had printed for the use of all his patients a little leaflet, the text of which runs as follows:—

‘Most of the diseases treated in the hospitals arise from alcoholic drinks—that is to say, they are either caused or aggravated by the abuse of alcohol. All alcoholic drinks are dangerous, and the most harmful are those which contain aromatics in addition to alcohol—as, for instance, absinthe and the so-called aperients, called ainers.

‘Alcoholic drinks are more dangerous when taken on an empty stomach or between meals. A man necessarily becomes an alcoholic; i. e., slowly poisoned by alcohol—even if he never gets drunk, when every day he drinks alcohol in the form of liqueur or too much wine, more than one litre per diem.

‘Alcohol is a poison the habitual use of which destroys more or less quickly, but none the less certainly, all the organs most necessary to life—the stomach, the liver, the kidneys, the blood vessels, the heart, and the brain. Alcohol excites man, but does not strengthen him. It is no substitute for food, but takes away the taste for it. Those who often drink alcohol or too much wine (more than one litre a day) are much more liable to illness, and when ill are much worse, for the disease is often complicated with fatal delirium.

‘Alcohol is a frequent cause of consumption by its power of weakening the lungs. Every year we see patients who attend the hospitals for alcoholism come back some months later suffering from consumption. Fathers and mothers who drink often have children who are deformed or idiots or who die from fits."—London Lancet.

PEACE IS ONLY A DREAM.

Man is a fighting animal. After 4,000 years, according to a biblical chronology, two highly civilized nations have just been flying at one another's throats. The most enlightened nation in the world, the United States of America, has been engaged in war, variously stated to be for "the pacification of Cuba," "the freedom of Cuba," "the annexation of Cuba," "a war for humanity," "a war to drive Spain out of the Western Hemisphere," and "a war to revenge the Maine."

Universal peace is a dream of the student and the scholar. That amiable person, Albert, the Prince consort—who was imported from Germany into England to continue the royal Hanoverian line—believed in peace. At the opening of the Crystal Palace exhibition, nearly half a century ago, he told the world that this exhibition heralded the dawn of peace; that thereafter the dogs of war would never be let loose. This was in 1851. Yet in 1854 England waged war against Russia; in 1856 she waged war against China; in 1856 she waged war against Persia; in 1857 she made blood run like water in India, crushing the mutiny there; in 1856 France, Italy, and Austria became engaged in war; in 1861 the United States entered upon the bloodiest civil war ever known to the world; in 1866 Prussia vanquished Austria; in 1867 England began her war against Abyssinia; in 1870 France and Germany engaged in their bloody struggle; in 1874 England waged war against the Ashantees; in 1879 Russia and Turkey went to war; in 1879 England began her Zulu war; in 1882 England bombarded Alexandria and invaded Egypt; in 1883 Chile and Peru were at war; in 1883 the French were at war in Tonking; in 1894 China and Japan went to war; in 1896 Greece and Turkey were at war; in 1898 the United States went to war with Spain.

These are a few of the wars that have taken place in the last half century, not to mention the scores of minor wars in half-civilized countries like South America. Prince Albert's dream of peace has been a bloody one.—San Francisco Argonaut.

NEW ZIONIST ORDER.

The Jewish World, published in London, England, says in its issue of February 17 that a project is now advocated by London Zionists to form a Zionist order similar to the Knights of Zion, recently organized in the United States with headquarters in Chicago. The proposal has been taken up very enthusiastically.

In reply to the question what he thought of the Zionist movement, Joseph Medill has written the following letter to Editor H. S. Wolf of the Daily Jewish Courier:—

"San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 28.—Mr. Wolf, Editor Courier, Dear Sir: On my return in the spring, if my condition of health justifies, I would take pleasure in expressing my views on the question you mention.

"Already I have written several times in the Tribune upon the 'Zionistic Movement,' and have long strongly favored a restoration of Judea to the Jews—to those of the race who desire to live there.

"I think the Jews of Europe and America will, ere long, be able to secure this end, a consummation that would rejoice their 'Gentile' friends all over the world.

"I am a believer in the doctrine of evolution, and I think that resistless force on the human mind and human actions has arrived at a development that will not permit the Hebrews to wander and wait much longer before their ancient home will welcome or await their return to it.

"Yours truly,
"JOSEPH MEDILL."

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

"Graceland College has been founded and planned with the object in view of supplying the means necessary to the best possible education, while avoiding the evils which so often attend schools of learning and which are a grave injury to the social and moral nature of the students.

"The promoters of it from the first were well aware of the difficulties to be overcome in order to establish, in a small town of a few hundred inhabitants, an educational institution that could measure and compete with colleges and universities, founded in the midst of dense populations and having at their command magnificent endowments of wealth. They realized, however, that numbers and means, although very desirable elements, are not the first and best requisites to the better education of the youth of the country, and determined to put forth efforts to answer the demands for a higher scholarship by educating where the great vices were opposed by a majority of the citizens.

"SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

"The object of attending schools and colleges is to acquire proper discipline and development mentally, morally, and physically, becoming thus fitted for the actual duties of life. A failure to provide for any one of these, is, to a great degree, certain to prove disastrous to the student. To insure success, the advantages of the schoolroom must be offered to the student, stripped, so far as practicable, of the surrounding evils and allurements which entice boys and girls, young men and young women, into ways that so often lead to habits and vices, certain to their overthrow, regardless of mental culture and development. But it is the intention of those having Graceland College in charge, to do all within their power to afford such protection as is right, from the ordinary evils which beset the pathways of the young. It should not be expected, however, that in Lamon, or at Graceland College, absolute immunity from evil be found."—College Catalogue.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BOOK OF RULES.

1. Is, or was, the book of Rules of Order and Debate a law to the church? If so, when did it become a law? If not, why is it so taken by some of the leading elders of the church?

A.—The Book of Rules is an agreed upon set of rules to govern in the matter of church procedure, and in that sense is a law to the church.

The book was first compiled and prepared by Bro. T. W. Smith, now deceased, and Joseph Smith, President of the Church, and was accepted and adopted at the April Conference of 1876.

It was afterward revised by a committee consisting of Brn. Mark H. Forscutt, Edmund L. Kelley, and Joseph Luff, appointed by conference. Their report was heard and acted upon at the April Conference, for 1891, held at Kirtland, the report was approved and the Book of Rules as now in use was adopted and became the rule of procedure for the purposes therein stated.

2. Does a church resolution have to go through the same process to become binding on the church that a revelation does?

A.—No. Resolutions of conference are liable to be changed by conditions that may arise after they have been adopted, or for any cause that the wisdom of the body may deem sufficient, or may be repealed altogether, or by agreement cease to be operative. They are in force, however, when adopted, until changed, repealed, or otherwise disposed of.

3. When a young man is just starting out in the ministry which had he better stand on, the revelations (the law) or the church resolutions?

A.—He had better stand on the law, as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the revelations, and be guided in reference to church business proceeding by the rules adopted by the church and found in the Book of Rules. If he does not, he may find himself out of harmony with his brethren and in the condition of being a law unto himself.

4. Can a resolution, or revelation become a law to the church and binding on the same without being passed upon by all of the quorums of the church in regular order as presented by the law?

A.—The conference in proper and regular assembly may by resolution properly presented and acted upon by vote adopt such rules of procedure and conclusions upon the law as may be needful for the good of the whole, without an appeal to the quorums; and such action is valid and binding, until changed, or revoked. But whatever purports to be revelation from God coming through any source, must first pass the test of examination before the quorums, before it becomes law, or binding on the church.

Resolutions for the government of the body differ from revelations in this; that resolutions are propositions presented by any member of the assembly, and may be amended, adopted, or rejected as the majority of the assembly may deem wise; revelations are not subject to modification, or change by the body; and because they are to become law, not subject to change by action of the body, must pass the scrutiny of the authorized quorums, whose duty and privilege it is to take care that neither themselves nor the church at large are imposed upon by false revelations.

DEACON'S DUTY.

In deacon's duty, outlined by the Presidency and Twelve, I find the words: "He shall visit the poor and report to the church." Will you please state what "church" means in this case?

A.—In organized branches, the report should be made to the presiding elder, the officers' council, or the branch business meeting, whichever might be nearest in point of time or the urgency of the case might demand. In places not organized to the Bishop's agent, or the Bishop. In the article referred to the word "church" was intended to mean the branch organization.

UTAH ELDERS MAY DISCUSS BUT NOT AS REPRESENTATIVES.

By letter we are advised that some of the Utah elders have stated that they are permitted to discuss with the Josephites as individuals but not as representatives of their church.

That is very nice of the Utah Church authorities. But what have they to fear? Is the issue one of individual responsibility only? The differences that separate the two bodies did not originate with the itinerant elders on individual opinions, convictions, or dogmas presented upon individual responsibility; but were the result of a direct official interference with church doctrines and practices by leading men, who set aside the revelations of God and his commands, by personal mandate, and instituted dogmas and practices directly contrary to the already acknowledged and accepted word of God. Why then should the authorities of that church be fearful to have these issues tried? They are sure to come up for trial, sooner or later, here or hereafter, and, by the grace of God, the Reorganized Church by its representatives expect to be there when they are tried.

Let there be no wavering in the ranks. Stand fast in your integrity, brethren. The dawn of the coming day is flushing the eastern skies, and the daystar is shining on our pathway. Let us be wakeful, watchful, and ready in honesty of purpose and method to do the Master's will, and the victory in the full light of day is sure to come.

By the way, Bro. G. E. Harrington, writing from Independence, Missouri, where an elder of the Utah Church reports so many baptisms out of the Reorganized Church, of late, states about as follows:—

We have been visited by several elders from Utah, who held five meetings in our church. First principles were given us to start with. This did not satisfy; authority came next. This seemed to stir us up a little. Bro. Bozarth replied, and waxed eloquent in testimony of the Reorganization,

These young men bear faithful testimony to the latter-day work and challenge us to meet it at the last day. We were cautioned not to speak against the endowment of the temple. These to some extent were exposed by Bro. H. H. Robinson. By a series of questions they were brought out on the subject of polygamy, Adam-God doctrine, blood atonement, etc. They defended polygamy and Adam-God, as by necessity, not willingly. Their position upon Adam-God is that after the resurrection, Adam will be our God. Elder Walder smilingly stated Brigham Young was a virtuous man. This he stated because of his associations with prominent men, who were his companions; he credited their testimony. His (Brigham's) published statements were brought forward by Bro. R. J. Parker in refutation of the claim. They are inclined to deny blood-atonement. They tell us they are not courting discussion, but are at liberty to debate with us as individuals, not as representatives of the church.

They made no attacks upon the Reorganization, stating, however, that if they wanted to they could tear it all to pieces and not leave a hair of it standing. This met with a response from the audience by "Do it! Do it!" In replying to the effort Bro. Parker stated he would be pleased to have it done if it could be. He further told that there was a standing challenge from high church representatives to discuss the differences of the two churches in Salt Lake City, Lamoni, or Independence.

Bro. Parker made a splendid defense for the church. I was very much surprised to find him so well posted and logical; inspiration was with him.

They were gentlemanly and received all the criticisms apparently without disturbance.

The saints almost all feel well over the matter.

CURE FOR TOBACCO HABIT.

Bro. George H. Brush, Mooring, Tennessee, thinks he has a valuable remedy or aid to the quitting of the tobacco habit, which he will send copy of the recipe for, to anyone sending three cents in stamps. He charges nothing for the recipe, asking only the stamps to cover paper, envelope, and postage.

It may be that Bro. Brush has what will help anyone to stop the using of tobacco; but as he does not ask to be remunerated for imparting his information we do him no harm by suggesting that anyone who really desires to be free from the habit, who will set about it, resolutely stopping at once and never thereafter tampering with it, or trifling with his appetite, can, by appealing to the Master in the hour he needs help most, finally overcome and be free. But the man who in a half-hearted, hesitating way, keeps trifling with his appetite, dabbling with this and that as a substitute, will either not cure the habit, or will be a long time about it.

Upon the hypothesis that "the Lord helps those best who help themselves," we believe that the most necessary helps a man may or can have to enable him to get rid of his bad habit, are an earnest and positive desire to be free, a certain and determined will to overcome, and kindly aid from the Master in answer to faithful and devoted prayer.

We used to think that any man could quit the use of tobacco-chewing, smoking, or snuffing; tea, coffee, whisky, wine, or beer, if he only would; but our acquaintance with one, two, or more cases in which the men had seemingly lost all moral control over themselves, in which their moral manhood was lost, has satisfied us that there may be cases where men would, but cannot. It is, of course, a humiliating thought, and it is painful to know that a man has fallen so low in moral force; but then facts are facts, cruel as they may be.

The question whether a man in such condition, that is, who recognizes the need of becoming free from the shackles of habit, desires to, but cannot because of his lack of moral force and will power, is so far responsible to the Lord as to be subject to condemnation because he still continues a slave to his habit, has often been suggested, and is now. It is quite certain that other men who may be better endowed with will power and moral force in the direction in which these fail, ought to be very careful not to judge too harshly, or be too certain of themselves, for they may be weak in other things—be as weak and poor in spirit as those are whom they condemn. In such case charity ought not to begin at home, but with our neighbor.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Louise Palfrey, Macon, Missouri, March 1:—

Perhaps the Herald has already been informed of the Roberts resolution passed by our late conference at Bevier. The ground on which we oppose his taking a seat in congress is clearly defined; not because he is a Mormon, but because he is a polygamist, a lawbreaker, which is also a violation of the true teachings of Mormonism, etc. The resolution will be given in full in our conference minutes. It will be given considerable publicity. Bro. Thomas Rowland, of Bevier, who is correspondent to several newspapers, county and city, has been the means of making the resolution more than locally known. Here, in Macon we have four papers and the resolution appears in all of them this week. Our district secretary furnishes a copy to our congressman, Mr. Lloyd. Thanks for information furnished of others of our branches and districts in the Roberts case. I showed your district action to the superintendent of our public schools, Professor Jameson for one, and he instructed the teacher of United States History to inform the class that Joseph Smith was not the founder of the Utah Church as the book stated, never taught or practiced polygamy, and that none were opposing polygamy to-day more strongly than the true church of Latter Day Saints, and in evidence of it quoted our action towards the Utah congressional representative. This agitation is doing good here. It is showing many that there is positively no connection between our church and the Utah church, and that "Mormonism" is a different thing than it has often been thought to be in the public mind.

Bro. W. S. Pender, Oberlin, Kansas, March 2:—

Our conference at Lenora, 25th and 26th ult., was quite a success. Bro. E. H. Ebert, of Bazine, Kansas, was ordained a priest and provision made for ordination of Bro. W. H. Mannering to eldership. Conference was held in M. E. Church. Attendance of townspeople at preaching services was large. Quite a missionary field in this western country. Expect to begin a series of meetings in Oberlin Wednesday, next week. I am glad to see the matter of "gathering" engaging the attention of the people. It is evident that the destiny of the church will necessitate a forward movement in financial department, and that right soon.

Bro. F. T. Baker, Lebeck, Missouri, March 6:—

I would like to correspond with some elder that could visit parties in Antelope County, Nebraska.

Bro. G. T. Terry, Riverdale, Utah, March 6:—

We would be pleased to have any traveling brethren call on us if it should be convenient. We live two miles south of Hooper, six south of Ogden, close to Oregon Short Line Railroad.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, Hamlet, Kentucky, March 6:—

I wrote you some time ago that six of the mob that set upon me in Tennessee were indicted, but from a later letter from the seat of trouble I learn that it was a mistake, that there were no bills found and the mob are encouraged and are still swearing vengeance on the Latter Day Saints. "They know not what they do." Stormy weather, and roads in a most terrible condition.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

At last writing, March 1, Bro. R. J. Anthony was at Castle Gate, Utah. Brn. David Crow and Edward Rowley had secured the use of the Mormon meetinghouse, and Bro. Anthony had occupied for four evenings. Then Bishop Lamph and Counselor Ricks concluded to review him; which they proceeded to do. Bro. Anthony would reply, but doubted getting the use of the meetinghouse to do it in; if it was denied them, he would get the use of the hall of the Knights of Pythias, and in that present his reply. There is quite an element in the place disposed to see that Bro. R. J. has a fair opportunity to make our positions understood, and these would stand to him in his endeavor. Bro. Anthony states that both the Bishop and his counselor had been pleasant and gentlemanly to a degree. Bro. A. was expecting to hear from Bishop Brinkerhoff, of Molen, as to a discussion proposed some time ago, but not yet materialized.

Bro. William Johnson, writing from Box 109, Nanaimo, Vancouver's Island, British Columbia, is anxious that some elder shall visit that portion of the field, "the world," and introduce the gospel there. He will furnish a home for an elder who may come. Here is a chance for some one of our adventurous young spirits to make a name as a gospel banner bearer. Who goes? We have written Bro. R. C. Evans to send some one if he can and has a man to spare.

Bro. John Smith, of New Bedford, Massachusetts, sends to the Church Library, a copy of a Dakota-English Dictionary, by Stephen Return Riggs, issued by Department of the Interior. It is a valuable reference work, and we venture to tender the thanks of the church to Bro. Smith for it and his thoughtful kindness in sending it.

Brn. Heman C. Smith and Columbus Scott are at work in Boonesboro, Iowa. The Evening Republican for March 6, contains a digest of one of Bro. Heman's sermons with favorable notice. Both are able defenders of the faith and the work will not suffer at their hands.

Bro. F. C. Warnky, writing from Argentine, Kansas, states that there is an excellent opening for a blacksmith, at Holliday, Johnson County, Kansas. Holliday is a nice little town with a good country around it. There is a blacksmith shop there already, which could be bought or rented, but no smith there. Bro. Warnky goes there to preach four times a month. Anybody wishing particulars write F. C. Warnky, Argentine, Kansas.

Bro. H. E. Brown reports a profitable session of the Northwest Kansas district at Lenora, Kansas, of late. The people manifest a desire to hear more concerning the faith.

Bro. T. G. Whipple, of Providence, Rhode Island, writes favoring the idea that saints should not enlist in the army and thus take up the sword. We state his position because lacking room for his letter.

Bro. J. A. Grant has been writing of the faith of the church in the Sunday News-Graphic of West Bay City, Michigan, of late. He has done good work, in several issues of that paper, giving the public a better understanding of our religious belief.

Sr. Cora Avery, Rushville, Illinois, writes of her love for the work of God. She is isolated from branch privileges, but is striving to do what she can to live her religion and lead others to it.

The Moorhead, Iowa, Mirror, March 2, contains resolutions on the Roberts case, passed by Moorhead saints, also a friendly notice of our local congregation and the work it is doing for the community young and old.

A Lansing, Michigan, paper, the Tribune, March 7, contains good words for the saints of Creola, Ohio, commending them as members of the Reorganized Church for their opposition to polygamy.

The Kinsman, organ of the Presbyterian Church in Utah, and upon which it is making aggressive warfare, contains in its February, 1899, number an account of a late discussion at Logan, Utah, between Bro. S. D. Condit, representing the Reorganization, and Elder Ballard, of the Utah Church. The report is meager, but seems to indicate that our cause was maintained.

The Evening Leader, published at Manchester and Richmond, Virginia, contains in its number for March 3 an article entitled, "Polygamy was not taught by President Joseph Smith," written by Bro. P. P. Stark, in which the writer presents a strong line of evidences to sustain his proposition. This article ought to prove valuable in educating many in the South, where Brighamite elders are said to thrive better than in other portions of the country. Bro. Stark has done well in this and in other efforts to enlighten the people of the Old Dominion. Our cause is marching on.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

THE editor is in receipt of a letter from Sr. Ida Hurd, of Mosinee, Wisconsin, in which she wishes to know if any of the sisters could dispose of some fancy work for her. She makes papers flowers, and birds of different kinds on velvet or flannel cloth. She is poor, and would be very glad to dispose of some of her handiwork in this way. If any whose hearts incline them are in a position to lend Sr. Ida a helping hand, let them write her at the above address and she will enter into particulars which we have not space to give here.

ANAA, South Sea Islands,

Nov. 14, 1898.

In my last I informed the readers of our intended trip to this island by steamer Southern Cross. We left Papeete on the 8th, and arrived here at Tuhora on Thursday the 10th inst. Had a very pleasant trip. I had never dreamed of traveling in such a comfortable way in the South Sea Islands mission. Truly the Lord is ever able to give more than "we can ask or think." On our arrival here we were conducted to a house where the branch meetings are held, though it was built for a dwelling house, and were made as comfortable as the situation would admit of. One of the owners of the house, Taina, who came from Papeete with us, lodged in one half of the room, there being but one, because there were no saints nearer than a quarter of a mile or more, which is a long way in this country. He very kindly brought water, and assisted in every way that a grownup son would have done.

It being a treat here to see a missionary, the saints of this island have improved the time to visit with us thus far; only a few have come during the day time, but in the evenings the room would be well filled. The aged and diseased ones cannot go out in the hot sun. One poor old woman who is so bent together, she crawls about the floor like a child, feebly tottered from the village down here on Friday evening and remained until this—Monday—morning, and of course had to sleep in the same room; all slept on the floor. We had a curtain partition for our part at sleeping time, and which was drawn back during the day. I believe the poor old sister was half starved, being too feeble to do much for herself, and she did not seem to have anyone to do for her. I fed her well, and she went home much stronger.

On Saturday a number of saints came from Temarie, to be here for meeting on Sunday, and all lodged in this one building and on the porches. On Saturday evening the house was filled to its utmost capacity, and oh so warm. Besides the saints there were a number of Catholics, with one of their smartest men to discuss the question of religion, which discussion was of course carried on in the native language, and was continued till ten o'clock. Then a rain shower came up, so it was perhaps after eleven when we laid our weary heads down to rest. But all were astir again at the dawn of day, for our breakfast, though light, must be gotten over with, and beds, bundles, and mattings put away, and the house made ready for the seven o'clock meeting. Being aware the people would begin to gather at six, we wished to be ready for them. They came very early and remained "gathered" till 4:30 p. m.

The attire of some of the brethren looked very cool and comfortable. But to the uninitiated eye, the flowing skirts of their long white shirts, reaching nearly to their knees (over dark pants), and fluttering gently in the breeze, buttonhole lap in front, persistently upturned, minus coat and vest, and as usual feet undressed, but with collar standing high, well "underpinned" by an elaborate black tie, would, I presume, be a comical sight. But since it is their custom, we have learned to regard such costume as being all right.

The day was a very busy one for Elder Burton; he preached twice in the forenoon, and during the intermission between the seven and ten o'clock meetings, talked almost as steadily as if preaching. Immediately after the ten a. m. service Sabbath school was held, and conducted after the manner of the early days of Sunday school work in these islands, that is, no classes. An elder walked around among them, as they sat on the floor, and heard each one read a verse, or repeat it after him if they could not read; and he asked questions in like manner.

At the close of the exercises I addressed the school and its officers, in the capacity of my office in the Sunday school association. Knowing that this was one of the islands where much prejudice existed against women teaching, I endeavored to act wisely, by first referring to the church in America as our example in all its various branches of work, wherein it was sustained by the General Conference. And that the Sunday school work in America had first commenced in a limited way, much the same as here; and that in its growth it had developed an association. Also spoke of the object of the association. Here I produced a type written letter received from the secretary of the association, on which the names of its officers were stamped, two of which were women. (This letter was written last year, but it served my purpose, which was to show that there were female officers appointed in the Sunday school work in America, and that work was sustained by General Conference.) And farther, since the association in America included the work in these islands also, it became the duty of all the schools here to be governed as nearly as practicable by the rules of the association; and suggested a reorganization of their school, which will take place next Sunday.

Since I had to speak through an interpreter—Joseph—it occupied double time. Then there was some consultation, which prolonged the Sunday school service till 12:30, by which time both porches were well filled with those not of the church, principally Catholics, among them our friend of the evening before, who as soon as the benediction was uttered, stepped inside and resumed his argument, which was kept up till 2:30 p. m., Joseph doing most of the talking. When the stranger was gone, others—the brethren—who had been waiting their opportunity gathered about the Orometua, as they call him, to settle some questions for them.

At three o'clock prayer and testimony meeting commenced, and was in session till 4:30; there being a goodly number present, and a lively meeting was enjoyed; there were four prayers, sixteen testimonies, and considerable singing. During all this long, busy day, we had to fast perforce, there being no room to get anything to eat, nor time to eat it. Joseph did not even leave his position back of the stand. Most of the saints fasted also, preferring to remain and hear what was being said, rather than go in quest of food. It did not take long to get our meal—a cup of cocoa, bread, and very soft, bad-tasting butter, and canned ham. As soon as this repast was partaken of, Joseph was called to administer to one of the native elders up in the village, and I devoted an hour or so to drilling the sisters in a hymn I am teaching them. And when dark came, a heavy shower of rain came also, which detained Mr. Burton till after the hour for meeting, consequently there was no evening meeting. But the brethren improved all the time in very earnest talk on scripture. To a person unacquainted with their manner of earnestness, it would seem as if they were about to devour each other, they get so excited and gesticulate in such a vehement way.

As soon as the rain abated sufficiently for Mr. Burton to return, our Catholic friend returned also, and the discussion was resumed. But he had still less to say than in the afternoon; he was getting short of material, and seemed quite relieved when Mr. Burton informed him that it was nine o'clock, and that he was much fatigued with the almost constant talking of the day, and must retire. As for myself, I had been suffering torture for the past hour, from headache and bodily weariness. But the tension had been on too long to give place to sleep very readily. The echoes and reëchos of voices in a confused language lingered amid the ever rushing and rumbling as of waves breaking on a rock-bound shore, together with the steady, surging pulsation as of an engine in the top of this head of mine. And so the morning found me more weary than the night.

But since word had been left us, and all who were at the house, to be ready to go to another island, Temarie, at eight o'clock, at which time a boat would be at the landing for us, the early dawn found us astir again,

And before the given hour, our boxes, bedding, stove, chairs, table, and valises were out on the porch ready to be removed. But it is now three p. m., and no boat. The probabilities are that we will not go to-day, and so will have to do some unpacking.

This island is not just like Papeete. I think though it must be very healthy; this part of it at least abounds in old and feeble people, bent and twisted out of the natural form, with so many years of crouching and lying about the floor. I often think it must have been just such people as are in these islands that Jesus traveled among and ministered to. I cannot call to mind a characteristic of the people in New Testament times, so far as what is written, that is not found here also. Leprosy is found in various places, and those impotent in their limbs, some with a withered hand or arm, the infirm, bowed together, and crippled in unsightly ways; in fact there are comparatively few who are sound in body. And were there a "pool of Siloam" here, where the angel stirred the waters with a healing scepter, methinks its borders would be lined with those in waiting to rush in and be healed. But as in those days, so now, some would remain long in waiting because not able to help themselves, and have none to help them.

Their beds consist of a piece of matting and a hard pillow, sometimes a piece of thin cloth to wind themselves in, and is carried with them from one place to another. They also bury their dead in tombs above ground—all who are able to have tombs. Here, in Anaa, there does not seem to be any buried in the ground; there were no tombs in Hickuaru, neither do our people have them in Papeete. And again, when their food is such that will waste away if put on leaves, it is put in a large dish and all dip their hands in it for the food. Jesus said, "He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish," showing that they ate in like manner.

TEACHERS' MEETINGS.

Why have teachers' meetings? is the question so often asked.

1. To unify the work of teachers. "Where there is unity there is strength." Teaching is a science that must not be played at, but requires attention and study to make it effective, to bring about the best results. As each teacher has his or her way of studying and preparing the lessons, and this resulting in different understanding, different opinions and ideas are formed as to the important points of the lesson to be taught. One will teach and emphasize one point while another will teach and emphasize some other point. Hence there exists a demand for something to be done that this random teaching may cease and a uniformity of teaching ensue.

There exists a grand opportunity to reach this end in the teachers' meetings where they may meet to discuss and determine what points to reach. It is written, "In the multitude of council there is safety."

2. It gives the teachers a good opportunity to study and prepare the lessons. Sometimes they will neglect the study and preparation of lessons till almost the last moment, when there is a hurry and a bustle to look over and study it. The dry, cut questions are used, the answers obtained and committed to memory, which results in a lack of understanding of almost every vestige of the meaning or importance of the lesson.

If the teachers' meetings were conducted, the teachers would become interested in their work, would attend the meetings with prayerful hearts, all of these obstacles would be removed, and the sunlight of God's Holy Spirit would shine in and help those who help themselves, thus qualifying them for the great and onerous work that is intrusted to them.

The meetings will serve as an incentive to study the lesson beforehand.

PREPARE FOR REVIEW.

3. As it is an indisputed fact that review work is the best and surest way of ascertaining the knowledge and understanding gained in the recitation, it is therefore our opinion that there should be a uniformity upon the part of the teachers in teaching, so that the review may be made effective. The superintendent then may review with much greater success when he and his teachers have an understanding in regard to the points that are taught. This can be done in no better way than, as we have said, to assemble together and select teaching points.

SUCH MEETINGS WILL INSPIRE CONFIDENCE.

4. This may readily be seen in superintendent, in teacher, in pupil; in fact in the whole school. How will it do this? the question is asked. (a) The lesson being learned and understood by the teachers and superintendent, the teaching points selected and taught, the recitation and review in harmony with each other, then the pupil will readily perceive the uniformity of opinion with both the teacher and superintendent. Hence their confidence will be placed in them as their instructors.

(b) When the teacher thoroughly understands the lesson, and has her teaching points selected, and is equipped with the necessary preparation, she will always go before her class with a great deal more confidence in herself than if the lesson was only half or not at all learned. She will realize a greater ability in herself to teach. The pupil will notice this also.

(c) The superintendent will also have greater confidence in himself in conducting the review if he has become acquainted with the most important and practical points of the lesson and has made all the necessary preparation, which cannot be had so thoroughly in any other way than to assemble in counsel with his fellow sufferers. He will also have greater confidence in the teachers when this condition prevails; the teachers will also have greater confidence in him as their senior.

5. There is another point that is very important: teachers may have the lesson ever so well learned, the important and practical points selected, but if they do not have some ideas as to the method of teaching, their efforts will be void and barren of results. It is not all of teaching to simply ask a few, dry, cut, already prepared questions.

There is something to do to gain the attention of a scholar, and a little different thing to hold their attention. The study of methods at the teachers' meetings will remove this disability. One or two points in methods learned at each meeting, then applied, are worthy of commendation.

Now in conclusion a few thoughts on how to conduct a teachers' meeting:—

1. Prayer, or song and prayer, or a number of prayers.
2. Have notebook and pencil, Quarterlies, Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and other helps.
3. Study.
 - (a) A subject.
 - (b) Golden text, then its relation to the subject.
 - (c) Outline.
 - (d) Lesson text.
 - (e) Select teaching points.
 - (f) How to illustrate.
 - (g) Outline of work.

W. B. TORRENCE.

For the Nodaway, Mo., district convention.

DON'T go before your Sunday school and give utterance to these words, "I had not the time to prepare my review work." Not so; there is a time for everything under the sun, and you have just as much time to prepare your work as you have to attend Sunday school and pose as a superintendent. What a multitude of sins that one word "time" is used to cover! It may serve as a panacea for a drone, but it never can for a live Sunday school superintendent.

JOSEPH ROBERTS.

Letter Department.

CARDIFF, Wales, Feb. 20.

Editors Herald:—Since my last letter I have been laboring in South Wales, with headquarters at Cardiff, in which city I am still centering my efforts. The work in these parts continues to move rather slow, yet I am pleased to be able to report progress, especially with reference to Cardiff. Our ten new members continue active and earnest; and those who were formerly connected with the Utah church rejoice in their deliverance from that darkness. It was discovered that our place of meeting was not the kind of hall required, as it was too large, expensive, and poorly patronized. So the brethren advertised for a hall, which resulted in their securing a corner building, formerly occupied as a club house, located in a very good neighborhood. By a united effort this was cleaned up, papered, and painted. The upper rooms were let out to one of the families of the saints, and the lower hall seated to accommodate about one hundred persons. At last the saints find themselves in possession of a neat little hall of their own. It has been a severe struggle for these few members to accomplish so much. But a good brother in Lydney and another in Birmingham, sent us a donation to assist in this work. And when the saints all work in harmony it is wonderful how much can be accomplished. One of our most active workers in painting the seats and helpers in making our hall comfortable, is a gentleman outside the church, but who hopes to be one with us soon. He told me last Sunday that it was his intention to unite with the church this week. He says he can content himself nowhere else. I expect his wife will come with him, also some of the members of our Sunday school.

I know our Sunday school workers at home would rejoice could they witness the activity and zeal of the members of our Cardiff school. Not very large it is true—only between thirty and forty members—but all alive. This school reminds me of a remark made by a lively sister, rather small in stature, who in answer to a statement about herself, replied, "Yes, I am little; but oh, My!" Nearly every member of the branch is a member of the school; but the older ones are by no means the foremost. The little ones are heard, and they occupy the front seats. I certainly never saw better interest manifest in any school. It is surprising how well they learn their lessons, and how quickly they turn to the different parts of the Bible, when requested to do so to prove the correctness of their answers to questions. They are very fond of the Hope, so kindly sent us by the children in America.

I feel like mentioning a little incident here that occurred Sunday before last. An unexpected number of strange children were present, and I had not brought Hopes enough with me to go round. To encourage the strangers I told the school that I would give the Hopes to these new scholars, and would bring some more for the others in the evening. Chancing to glance down one column of the paper, judge of my dismay when I saw several horrible oaths. It proved to be a portion of the history of Joseph Smith, in which the language of the bitter opposers of the church was given. I blushed for shame that our children's paper should contain such profane language. I hesitated to give the papers to the outsiders lest their parents should accuse us of teaching the children to use bad language, and it might result in keeping the children away. I hardly knew what to do. The children would be disappointed if they did not get the papers. I had little time to decide, and I am sorry to say I gave them the papers; but immediately afterwards wished I had put them in the fire. The following Sunday more than half of these children were absent. Whether or not these papers had anything to do with keeping them away, I do not know; but I am sorry I gave their parents this opportunity to condemn us. The Lord has recently told his servants, "It is therefore not seemly that they indulge in loud and boisterous speech, or in the relating of coarse or vulgar stories, or those in which the names of their God and their redeemer are blasphemed." (D. C. 119: 3.) Surely this divine admonition should apply in the education of our children. They will come in contact with enough evil in the world, in spite of all one can do. But in the name of all that is pure and good, let us not place before our little ones language with which we should be shocked to hear them use.

The indications are that our little "True Gospel mission" will be a success. In fact it is already proving a success. Some strangers are present at every meeting, who appear interested and express themselves as being pleased with the service. My experience here confirms me in the belief that the most good is not always accomplished by trying to cover so much territory. To reap we need to cultivate what is sown. This requires time.

I have recently come in contact with the Brighamites at Ystrad. They were holding a series of meetings there, and one of their elders took occasion to deny certain statements made against them by Bro. Trenchard, in one of the daily papers. The statements were published here in Cardiff, where this Brighamite elder resides; but not a word of denial was heard here. But the elder goes up to Ystrad and there denounces the statements as false, and challenges the world to prove them otherwise. One of our brethren chanced to be present, and notified us of the challenge. We were present at their next meeting. A written notice was handed to the one in charge, accepting the challenge, informing him that we were on hand with the proofs demanded, asking him to state publicly if they were prepared to hear them, and if not now, to state when it would suit their convenience. They declined to refer to the notice publicly. So at the close of their meeting we read a copy of the notice to the audience, announced that I would expose Brighamism the following week. They denied they had made any challenge, etc., but members in their audiences contradicted them.

The night appointed was very stormy, but we had a fairly good audience, and quite a number of their members. We showed their false position by the books of the church. I cannot say that I enjoyed it. I never take pleasure in having to refer to their wickedness. I despise their dirty work, and wish I never had to refer to them. The beautiful gospel of Christ is what I enjoy. But to save honest people from being deceived, there are times when it seems necessary to expose these deceivers. I think good was done. One gentleman present, a lawyer, proposed a vote of thanks to the speaker, which was given. He stated that he could now see the difference in the two churches.

Of late we have had access to the columns of the daily papers, enabling us to show up the true situation. But Brighamites are boasting, with not a little delight, at the capture of two of our members, Brn. Roper and Man of Aberaman who state they were attracted towards the Utah Church by the many articles and letters appearing against them in the Ensign. I visited them last week, and find them very ignorant of the teachings of the Utah Church, and hesitate to receive the evidence I furnished them. But they manifest a disposition to even accept the doctrine of polygamy. So if they can accept such faith, I see little hopes for them. We took pains to lay the truth before them, and if they prefer darkness to light, that is their business. But I am inclined to believe even now, that had they taken time to investigate their doctrines they would not have united with them. The weather this winter has been very wet, but very little frost in these parts. The fields are as green as in spring. Sr. Pitt continues very weak in body. A little bright American sunshine would do her so much good, but she refuses to accept it alone. Thanks to our kind friends for sending us papers. We are making good use of them. Still hopeful.

In bonds,

F. G. PITT.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Feb. 6.

Editors Herald:—It has been over one year since I wrote a few lines to the columns of our dear old Herald. How short that year has seemed to me! Would I recall it if I could? O no. Many changes have taken place, and such changes that have caused our eyes to be moistened with tears in the present loss of loved ones. The Sheffield branch has lost some of its best members of late, by the interception of the hand of death. It has been hard for us to part, and the more so when we see the places vacant that were once occupied by the faithful saints.

The first to be removed from our midst was Elder Henry Hoole, who was a faithful and exemplary laborer for the cause of truth. Then our dear old Sr. Gell, who had toiled for years for the latter day work, passed peacefully away on the 1st of February. She entered into the desired rest with the hope of meeting her son, Bro. Hoole, who preceded her a little over twelve months. How consoling are the words recorded in Revelation 14, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

I am very grateful to our heavenly Father that my life is still spared, to walk down time's vista one year nearer the time when we hope to see the glorious advent of Christ. We are only weak mortals at the best, but what an amount of good could we do if we only sought and embraced the present opportunities. Remember, dear saints, the good Lord has said that we shall live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. If we try to do this there will be no doubt but what we shall be living nearer to our heavenly Father, which is pleasing to him. The Apostle Paul also speaks wisely in advising us to run with patience the race that is set before us, and to so run that we may obtain the greatest gift of all, even that of eternal life. May we all press forward in the good work of our Master, laboring together in unity and in love for the accomplishment of the great work intrusted to all, that we may be prepared for the coming of our Lord and Savior. My prayer is that God will bless his humble servants who are out preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Then may we strive to so live that it will be said of us, Well done, good and faithful servant. We rejoice to read the Herald, for it is always laden with good from afar.

I take this means of thanking all the saints, especially the young ones, for sending me Hopes for free distribution, which we give to our scholars, who appreciate them very much. I believe that you are sowing seed of kindness in this way. We took quite an interest in looking over the names of the senders. We also thank Bro. Pitt, who has kindly been the means of our receiving so many. The names that struck us the most were the Kelleys; we think there must be a great number of them, brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, and cousins. The work here is progressing slowly, but we trust surely. The Sunday school also is healthy. May God bless his people with his Spirit and lead us all to do our duty.

In gospel bonds,
J. ARBER.

COVE, Ark., Feb. 24.

Editors Herald:—Something like a year ago Bro. Ellis Short, who has a large lumber plant at this place, ordered grounds purchased and a building erected for church use, at his expense. This order was complied with, Bro. L. S. Moore having the building erected as ordered, Bro. Moore and his esteemed wife and son Ross being the only saints here. Before this, however, Bro. Short had done some preaching at Bro. Moore's residence and one was added by baptism, Sr. J. W. Neal. The writer came here in February last and his family followed May 1. Soon afterward other families of saints located here, a Sunday school was started, and preaching each Sunday night; Bro. Short coming and preaching one or more times, once a month, Brn. J. W. Jackson and J. D. Erwin dropping in occasionally and preaching the gospel with no uncertain sound.

Recently added an alcove 10 x 18 to our building, painted the outside, oiled the inside woodwork, papered the walls, placed a bell on top, purchased an organ, maps, etc. We now have a membership of seventy-five in our Sunday school, prayer meeting every Sunday afternoon, and preaching each Sunday night; also a Religio of forty-two members.

The Northeastern Texas and Choctaw district conference convened here the 18th and made us a part of that district. Among those present from a distance were Bro. and Sr. Ellis Short and Master Ellis, Srs. J. A. Robinson, Belle James, Mrs. W. N. Robinson, and Miss Eva Bailey, of Independence, Missouri. The entire sessions of this conference were blessed with a degree of the Spirit seldom witnessed in a similar gathering, the Sunday afternoon meeting being a regular pentecostal one. Many under the Spirit's influence wept like little children.

Conference closed on Monday and our worthy district president, Earl D. Bailey, and many others departed for their homes. The larger attendance and increasing interest seemed to warrant a continuance of the meetings, so Brn. Short and J. D. Erwin remained, preaching night about. Like Paul and Peter of old these brethren preached with a wonderful degree of the Spirit. As a result of these meetings, on Thursday morning six noble souls were baptized in a running stream near by, Ellis Short officiating. At two o'clock confirmation was had at the church. During all these meetings Sr. Belle James presided at the organ and much credit is due her and those that assisted in singing in helping to make these meetings a success.

Yours in bonds,

A. L. NEWTON.

IRVING COLLEGE, Tenn., Feb. 19.

Editors Herald:—I have been confined to the house most of the time for two weeks past on account of cold weather, some of the coldest weather I ever saw, thermometer registering 26° below. I have not been idle; I have read up the Heralds and Ensigns very closely, and must say that they contain some splendid articles, especially the ones written by Elders T. W. Williams, G. H. Hilliard, and I. M. Smith. I say amen to them. I love to see men right and then have the moral courage to contend fearlessly for what they know to be right.

I met one of the leading members of the Utah Church in this section a few days ago and renewed my standing challenge to meet the best preacher they have in this State upon our differences. I mean that the people where I labor shall know that we are not the same church. Many good, honest people here believe that all who call themselves Latter Day Saints are Utah Mormons and that they believe the abominable doctrine of polygamy. I have succeeded in opening a great many eyes already. I understand they aim to hold a conference in this or the adjoining county soon. If I find out when it is I intend to attend it. I have never met an elder of that church at any time, I have visited some of their members since I came to this section and talked to them a good deal. Four of them have decided to have no more to do with them. They told me their elders taught them all right for about four years and then left books with them to read which taught the doctrine of polygamy and told them if they denied that doctrine they might just as well deny all the doctrine of the church; and so these honest people renounced them at once. The Utah elders tell the people here they do not believe or teach the doctrine of polygamy. They teach the first principles of the gospel as we do, but when they get them into their church, then they teach them the abominable doctrine as an after consideration or second degree.

As soon as weather permits I am to again commence traveling and dispensing the grand old gospel restored in these latter days. There are openings enough in this section to keep a dozen elders at work all their time. The people are willing to hear, as a rule, but slow to enlist; but we still keep sowing the good seed, expecting the harvest time to come sometime; but we would love to do some of that work along with the sowing. We do not urge the people to come into the kingdom; we preach the gospel to them and leave results with them and God. Is not that right? We sometimes think some have been baptized prematurely and are in a worse condition than they would have been if they had remained out of the church.

I never felt better than I do now; the good Lord has wonderfully blessed me of late, for which I am thankful; and I feel my dependence is in the Lord, for without his continual help I cannot do anything aright. If every member of the church would take the Holy Ghost for their guide and follow its guidance all the time, there would be more unity and concert of action among the members than there is, and less contention about authority in the church.

Since writing the above I have met one of the Utah elders and had a long talk with him. I renewed my challenge to meet them in public discussion upon our differences. He said he thought I could be accommodated, but would not make any arrangement for the discussion with us. I told him my reason for challenging them, which he said was right. He told me they intended to try to send out twice as many missionaries this year as last; that they had about sixteen hundred last year. If they do, I guess we will have a warm time here this year. We mean to hold the fort, and by God's help, against all foes, no matter what they call themselves nor what their claims are. O, how that missionary did squirm when I assailed Brigham Young and that abominable revelation upon polygamy! He said God gave it to raise up a righteous seed unto himself and all God ever had against it was when men engaged in it to gratify their lust. I told him they engaged in it only to gratify their lust.

More anon,

E. W. NUNLEY.

Editors Herald:—In reporting the condition of this mission I am pleased to state that as far as I am able to judge we are gradually moving onward, although it is very slowly. There have not been so many additions during this year as last, but the spiritual tone among the saints is much higher than for years past, and we feel encouraged because of this.

The saints generally are poor and the mission has suffered for want of tracts to distribute. I tried to get a district fund started here, for the purpose of obtaining tracts to distribute in opening up new places; but no one seemed inclined to move with me in the matter. If any tracts can be had free, I could manage to pay the postage. When preaching on the street one has a splendid chance to hand out tracts.

I have labored considerably with my hands in order to make ends meet and to help the mission work along. Bro. John Kaler expresses himself as being willing to continue his labors in the mission, and he is a man on whom the church may safely depend.

Though he may not be able to please all, he will try hard to please "Him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." He is a suitable man for this field in almost every respect. I will inclose a part of Bro. Wells' letter to me, which speaks for itself.

In this mission we are denied many of the "nice" things which may be enjoyed at home, such as going to conference, reunions, etc.; but this is a lovely climate, and suitable almost to anyone; only it is very difficult to make openings and reach the people. Our work takes well anywhere until some one reports we are Latter Day Saints, and that is more than enough for most people out here. To them it means everything bad.

I have been in the country now going on eleven years, and I am willing to continue or quit as the Lord and his church may deem wise and necessary. I should very much like to see some one more experienced take the oversight of this mission; but if no one comes we will try to move on as best we can.

Hoping you every success in the Master's cause,

Yours in the cause of truth,

C. A. BUTTERWORTH.

KINGSLEY, Mich., Feb. 21.

Editors Herald:—I love this "latter-day work," and although my experience has been short, yet I have received many evidences of its genuineness. Five years ago last September 15 I became identified with the church; eleven months after I was ordained to the office of an elder; since then I have been doing what I could to extend the Father's kingdom among men. God has blessed me in my feeble efforts to proclaim the everlasting gospel, and while he gives me breath I shall not cease to lift up my voice in defense of this work.

I am trying, as superintendent of the Northern Michigan Sunday school association, to arouse an interest in the Sunday school work, and hope and pray I may have the coöperation of every brother and sister in this district; for I feel that this branch of church work in this district is not up to where it should be. My intention is to visit every branch, if possible, before the next convention; or, if I cannot visit personally, to send some one and urge the saints to put forth a greater effort in building up this department of the work.

And now I wish to say to the saints of the district, Let us show a greater zeal for this work, by putting forth every effort possible, and by our untiring energy instruct the young around us, and teach them the principles of eternal truth; for I realize this work will eventually be intrusted to the children under our care. I believe that as fathers and mothers in latter-day Israel it is our duty to train up our children so they will be better equipped to carry this work on than even we are, because a great many of us have not had the opportunities that our children have.

I would urge every officer and teacher to attend the conventions if possible, and assist in making these gatherings interesting and instructive. Let us be a unit in these things, and then we can get some good at these assemblies.

My hands have been tied, heretofore; I could not give much time to the visiting of schools; but, thanks be to my heavenly Father, the way is opening up, and I trust from this time onward I shall be able to devote my whole time to the service of the Master in this department of his work. Pray for me, dear saints, that I may have wisdom and understanding in carrying it on.

It makes my heart ache sometimes to see so many careless concerning this branch of work; and especially do we see this among the older ones, those that ought to take the lead in these things; they are seldom found in the Sunday school, the result is their children become careless also, and the progress of the work is hindered.

Brethren, let us wake up to a sense of our duty and help to roll this work along, that in the day of accounts we may have a grand reward, and an inheritance in our Father's kingdom.

In gospel bonds,

W. D. ELLIS.

LOCKHARTVILLE, N. S., March 2.

Editors Herald:—While we are made glad by the reading of the good old Herald we feel under obligations to contribute occasionally when there is something of interest to chronicle. I voice a goodly number of the eastern people when I pay a tribute to the serial that is now running, by I. M. Smith. Those not of our faith are finding food for thought and are favorably impressed. No doubt much of the so-called Calvinistic rubbish will be cleared away and a broader conception of the mission of our Savior will obtain by the effort. I have long thought that such a work should be had among us, and I thought too that Bro. Smith was the man to bring it forth.

We are glad to notice occasionally a testimony from the heavens that this work is acceptable with the Father of light. Now it is our turn to edify along that line and so I send you what is to me the most satisfactory manifestation of the Spirit's workings that has occurred for some time. On a night in January last Sr. Mary Munroe, a young lady who joined the church about a year before and is living the only one of our faith in a small town where the spirit of intolerance is manifest in quite a marked degree, dreamed that she was at a gathering where some of them were speaking hard things against the latter-day work which was hard for her to bear. But the Spirit told her to read to them the fortieth and forty-first verses of the thirteenth chapter of Acts. With her own voice she repeated the words, Acts 13: 40 and 41, which caused her to awake. Not knowing what those verses contained or that there were even forty verses in that chapter, she was constrained to arise, light a lamp, get her Bible, and read those words: "Beware therefore, lest that come upon you, which is spoken of in the prophets; Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you."

This was enough; here was an acknowledgement that the work she was engaged in was of God and that she was acknowledged, comforted, and directed; and the beauty of it all is that its benefits do not remain alone with her, but to all that are engaged in this work. The work is of God and that fact is enough to cheer us up many times when to human eyes alone it looks to be moving too slow for divinity.

I like the tone of Bro. Williams' letter in recent Herald; I think if saints cannot cooperate successfully, then the gospel has not done for us what it must do before we are fit subjects for the kingdom.

We are getting some interested in the subject of gathering. But the love of home, country, and flag is awful strong in the Nova Scotian heart. How are we going to get converted?

We are having our share of the "Roberts" matter. Unfortunately Mr. Roberts represents Latter Day Saintism as a whole to a large majority in this eastern land, yet we have succeeded in placing ourselves on record in one of the most influential papers in the Dominion. Upon the whole it will not do us as much injury as it will do good to the Reorganization to an equal amount of population in United States.

Now, lastly: While I commend the zeal and the good intentions of the instigators of the "chain" system, I am opposed to the principle. Two chains have already been broken at our house. We will send the ten cents as requested, but decline the rest of it.

Yours in the faith,

H. J. DAVISON.

LIBERTY, Wash., Feb. 24.

Editors Herald:—I am alive in the work, and though I have not baptized any since November last, I have thoroughly canvassed our claims in Ellensburg and vicinity according to grace given, and while I have toiled for the necessities for family and self, I have preached twenty sermons in twenty-two days and talked in private every day early and late, except when trimming the lamp and when engaged in eating a little twice a day, or in secret prayer. Among the saints I have tried to build up the family altar, teaching the Word of Wisdom and the law of tithing.

An unusual interest was made manifest at all the meetings; good friendly reasoning, with infidels, ministers, and members of other churches, was the order of the day; some reading Church History, some Book of Mormon or Herald, others said, "Come again."

The Editor of the Ellensburg Down upon request announced our meetings and stated that I was not of the Utah saints. Inclosed find the clipping. Bro. W. T. Sheldon, of Cherokee County, Iowa, kindly paid for the hall. He is now wide-awake and is swinging in line in the army of the Lord. He is well liked in his neighborhood; he was chosen superintendent of a union Sunday school organized during our meetings there. Our literature is now in use; several are near the kingdom. I hope that I or Brn. Holt and Chase will soon lead some into the sheepfold.

I also hope to hear soon of an actual move towards the gathering, in harmony with Bro. Hilliard's suggestion, or as may be directed.

Your brother for Zion's weal,

N. C. ENGE.

LUCAS, Iowa, Feb. 28.

Editors Herald:—In Herald for the 22d inst. Bro. J. D. Erwin, writing from Ingleside, Arkansas, says in the second paragraph of his letter: "At times we had a crowded house, but I find coal miners to be a hard set to get to accept the gospel, and those that do accept it are about as hard to get to live it."

Thinking it possible that such reflections are calculated to do injustice to that class of people, I would say for his benefit and a few others of our brethren who have expressed themselves in the same vein, it doesn't always prove because men do not attend our meetings regularly that they are "a hard set." It sometimes follows that the minister is to blame.

Again; there are wide differences in localities. Sometimes the proprietors are loose and immoral in their practices, and as a result "birds of a feather will flock together." However, taken as a whole I think they will compare favorably with any other class of people.

Suppose we would look around us; how many doctors and lawyers have we in the church? Are they any easier to convince than "coal miners"? And when in the church do they live purer and more honorable lives than "coal miners" do? Many of our good men now in the ministry came to us from coal mines, or have been coal miners. Among them may be mentioned Brn. John R. Evans, John Davis, William Sparling, L. W. Powell, T. W. Williams, and Apostle G. T. Griffiths; and several others could be mentioned. Again; when we come to statistics, coal miners marry younger than any other class of people. Thereby obviating the sin of adultery to a great degree. They bathe their bodies from two to three hundred times during the year. Very few of them go to the penitentiary. There are very few criminals among them. They work hard, have a good living and are liberal-hearted. As a rule they have large families; this attests their innocence of one of the greatest crimes of the age.

It is true that during the last ten or fifteen years a low element or low class of coal miners has been shipped into the Northern States from the Southern States, generally under contract to fill the places of other coal miners that may be out on strike. Those that have thus been brought are very low morally and intellectually, and among them are a great many ex-convicts of the blackest dye. I believe it can be accounted for there being a low element of coal miners, or "hard set," as Bro. Erwin calls them. Some of the Southern States lease their convicts to coal operators, hence the southern penitentiaries are a factor in creating a class of coal miners that are a reproach to the craft.

We have about a dozen branches in the Northern States composed largely or entirely of coal miners, and they will compare favorably bly with any class of people in the church, in supporting it financially or any other way. They turn out many of our busy workers. Be patient, Bro. Erwin, fate has been against you Southerners. Not long ago Old England dumped her convicts upon your shores; then the greed and avarice of the American Southerners fostered slavery. Having to yield unwillingly to northern supremacy and the fiat of God's eternal justice "that all men should be free and equal," the Northern States will reflect this light (although the South be slow to accept it) until the dark precincts of a once slavery-cursed and blood-stained land will be permeated with a better understanding of human rights and God-given liberties.

E. B. MORGAN.

LANCASTER, Wis., March 7.

Editors Herald:—The 19th of January found the writer in company with Bro. W. A. McDowell, our district president, on the train bound for Valley Junction, where we arrived about four o'clock in the afternoon, after having passed through some wonderful scenery. It was my first trip to the northern district, and although the country was somewhat a rather sad surprise to me, I found other things that made my trip a pleasant one, and one long to be remembered because of the many blessings I received, and also by the lessons learned by association with different people and in different surroundings and circumstances.

There are certain ways with the people in the North I do not like, which we as the children of God ought to guard against and if possible purify ourselves from; namely, a spirit of negligence and carelessness not perhaps any more in spiritual things than in temporal. Perhaps the Savior's words, "Take therefore no thought for the morrow," may seem to have a sweet consoling ring to some people. If I have any knowledge of the things of God or am in touch with the Divine Mind, it has taught me that to be industrious is one of the first principles in the religion of Jesus Christ, and that when we made the covenant with our heavenly Father by the water of baptism we consecrated ourselves to his service. That being the case, we are all his, and our time and talent must be used in his service. It is my duty, then, to use my time and use it to the best advantage. If I am a preacher, to learn the best ways and means to become an able speaker, learn how to present the word in the most winning manner and yet in its purity and fullness; if I am a farmer, to learn the best ways of cultivating the soil, what time and ways are best adapted to our farm, or in other words, the best way to make the most out of it, without doing injustice to our fellow men. There is nothing wrong in making money; I believe the more the better, but remember that God will hold us accountable how we use it. Use it to the honor and glory of God and for his church and kingdom and thereby lay up treasures in heaven.

We preached in Valley Junction about three weeks to a good audience, and also to Necedah, about twenty miles away, where we found the people willing and glad to hear the gospel story. I got acquainted with many of the saints and friends up there and found that same Spirit that has characterized God's people in all ages burn in their bosom. May God bless them in their labor.

Bidding the dear saints good-bye, we took again the train for Madison, where we arrived the 22d of February. Here we parted the next day, the train carrying me off to Lancaster, while Bro. McDowell remained there over Sunday for again to join me at Buckwheat Ridge, where I had been preaching since Sunday, having good interest.

My ministerial experience is short, and though I have had many discouragements God has blessed me and I hope and pray that I may so live that he can use me as an instrument in his hands for accomplishing some good.

With a thankful heart and a strong determination to press onward in my weak way, I remain,

In gospel bonds,

PETER MUCEUS.

SHERIDAN, Mo., March 4.

Editors Herald:—Last evening I spoke to a full house at this place, in reply to the lecture of one Rev. La Vake, an M. E. minister, delivered a few nights before on "Life among the Mormons." In his bills the Reverend calls his lecture "celebrated." The gentleman had not been long in Utah and could be but slightly acquainted with the situation, past and present, in that country. He was not going to tell stories; O no; he knew what he was talking about. Perhaps the following points in his lecture may interest some.

Says he, "There is but one kind of Roman Catholics, and there is but one kind of Mormons; they are the same, whether living at Allendale or Salt Lake City." How is that, brethren of Allendale?

"There is an insane asylum at Provo, Utah, and when women opposed polygamy they were adjudged insane and sent to the asylum."

The Reverend was sorry that Joseph Smith was born in Vermont, but did not state why that was a cause of sorrow to him.

"A Campbellite preacher paid for the first edition of the Book or Mormon." The reverend got things mixed every time.

"When Mormons go from here to Utah, they mingle, pray, and worship with the Mormons out there." Undoubtedly this statement was intended to prove that there is no difference between the Reorganized Church and the church in Utah; but even if true, it fails to prove it. The gentleman claimed some acquaintance with our people in Provo and Salt Lake City. Perhaps the brethren there can tell us more about it. For my part I would like to hear that it was true, because it could be done without the sacrifice or compromise of principle and would be an evidence of our sincere and genuine interest in the people of Utah.

"Joseph Smith traveled with gypsies, obtained a kind of second-sight, and divined by means of a hazel witch or stone." These stories never grow less, especially when left for preachers to tell. But let us remember that the gentleman knew what he was talking about. I think he was born about the time Joseph Smith was killed.

"Joseph Smith stole Spalding's manuscript and stamped upon it his imaginary characters." Singular indeed, when it is remembered that the only opportunity for stealing the famous Manuscript was while it was left in the printer's office at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, between the years 1812 and 1814, and that Joseph at that time was only between seven and nine years of age, living at home with his parents in the State of New York.

"The Mormons believe that they are all going to be gods, when this world goes up into soap bubbles, or burns." How is that?

"Polygamy is the natural outcome of Mormonism." He was careful not to notice the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants on this subject.

"Everybody knows that Joseph Smith practiced polygamy." I referred the people to the decision of Judge Phillips, in the Temple Lot Suit; and when we remember that such men as Wilford Woodruff and Lorenzo Snow did not know, it sounds rather queer to hear Mr. La Vake say that everybody knows that Joseph Smith practiced polygamy.

"According to the Mormon religion, a woman must be sealed to a man in baptism in order to be saved." Mixed again.

Mr. La Vake made one, to their work, fatal but undoubtedly true admission. He said that, after spending hundreds of thousands of dollars they had not made one hundred conversions in Utah.

Not being able to get any of the churches here to reply in, Bro. Frank Hawley secured the opera house, and we had a good attendance. The attendance at the M. E. church when the lecture was given was small, and, as far as I have been able to learn, our good Methodist friends did not relish it very much; but it was given in the interest of charity (?) and perhaps some of them felt themselves in duty bound to attend. Wonder how long these lecturers on "Mormonism," "Life in Utah" etc., will be finding out that their business is degrading, unprofitable, and actually hurtful to their own cause.

Even that saintly (?) minister of the Christian Church, J. D. McClure, came over to Ravenwood about two weeks ago, lecturing on the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints, telling the people about Joseph Smith's walking on the water, about that rent in the garment "nailed to the end of a pole thereof," etc., and what a dangerous set of people we were; also challenging our church from head to foot to discuss the issue between us, as he had arranged, of course. When I arrived there I told the people at the close of one of his services that there was no need of him spoiling for a debate, because one of our men had promised to meet him on fair propositions anywhere in Northwest Missouri.

Our people there have been long and favorably known to the people of Ravenwood and vicinity, and the Rev. McClure's peculiar way of introducing us and our religion to them did not hurt us in particular; but we have been informed that he preached himself out of a congregation in a few evenings.

We feel hopeful as regards the work in this field, and shall look after our interests as best we can. One of the pleasing features in this district is the interest taken in the work by the young, as manifest at our last conferece. I hope this interest will continue and increase, for the good of the work in the future.

In bonds,

PETER ANDERSON.

MORTON'S MILLS, Iowa, March 4.

Editors Herald:—Thursday is always looked forward to with pleasure by the writer as that is the day the Herald comes. One time I rode two miles horseback through a drizzling rain, so anxious was I to read the Herald. I have enjoyed the article of late on the atonement.

Brighamites in Red Oak report eighty conversions from our ranks in and about Independence, Missouri, including missionary in charge. Has Bro. I. N. White gone over to them? If he has, wonder if he will debate as much now as he used to? Utah elders occupied same church the writer did in Red Oak. They began with preëxistence and followed it with the subject of Joseph Smith a prophet of God. Rather strong doctrine to begin with. I wrote an article on the difference between us and them for the Sun but it has not yet appeared.

Was challenged for debate by a Christian in Villisca. He agreed to affirm his church to be in harmony with the Bible. I to do the same.

Have preached here four times in a hall. Was invited by the Christians to come and preach in their church to-morrow, as their minister is absent. Think they will let us use it next week.

Hopefully,

C. JOSEPH CARLSON.

UNDERWOOD, Iowa, March 3.

Editors Herald:—The Pottawattamie district conference, held in Council Bluffs, Iowa, February 25 and 26, was real good. Peace prevailed during all the business sessions. Resolutions against the seating of B. H. Roberts were passed, and were published in the Omaha and Council Bluffs papers, Monday. At the afternoon social meeting on Sunday the Lord spoke, through the gift of tongues and interpretation, by Bro. Henry Kemp, to the edification of all present, and giving special encouragement to the branch officers of Council Bluffs branch. The Spirit seemed to touch every heart, and the saints were made to rejoice in the knowledge of the truth and the hope of eternal life. There are some noble saints in this Southwestern Iowa mission. But the admonition of the Spirit, at both the district conferences last month, has been for the saints to get themselves in condition to receive the blessings God has in store for his people, and to prepare themselves for the coming of the Savior, which goes to show that we are not yet in spirituality, purity, and holiness, what God requires us to be. No, saints, we have not yet reached the high-water mark of perfection, neither are we sufficiently near it to receive the greater manifestations of the Holy Spirit which he is ready, willing, yea anxious to give unto his saints just as soon as they place themselves before him in the proper condition. Then let us strive to "come up higher" and "walk in the light as he is in the light" that, when he calls, we may be found "ready." Have you put your "hands to the plow?" Then don't look back, but look forward. Look ever to Jesus, as our example, and strive to be like him. We want more divinity and less humanity in our work. We want more of God's Spirit, more of his wisdom, and more of his power.

In gospel bonds,

BEVIER, Mo., March 7.

Editors Herald:—On date of last communication I was stricken with la grippe and for three weeks was disabled for preaching. As soon as able to leave my room and travel I came here and held forth for two weeks. The attendance and interest were fair considering there are so many worldly attractions to draw the people away from God and the truth. It is somewhat trying on the patience of ye missionary to see those who have a name in the church take little or no interest in the work of the gospel, without the church papers or books, and nevertheless be head and heels in the follies, amusements, and affairs of this fast and sinful world. My observation of the past few years is that the saints (or those that bear the name) are more active and numerous in the walks of pride, fashion, and society than two or three decades ago. Perhaps this is on account of increase of our membership. The lessons of the ancient people of God in the Orient and the Occident, is that when they became wealthy and powerful they fell from grace into sinful association. A favorite adage of the elders is: "The same cause will produce the same effect in all ages of the world, under like circumstances." I ask, Will history repeat itself unto the people of God?

Latter part of January obeying an official I went to Leon, Iowa. Being so near home, (oh, how strange the word "home" sounds to me,) I stopped to rest. But it was only to assist in care of four la grippe patients. Was privileged to attend the conference of Decatur district and commune with the loyal friends of other days. There was a satisfaction in seeing accomplished that which had been indicated by the Spirit and attempted in time previous. The most important transaction was the almost unanimous adoption of the resolution against the seating of B. H. Roberts, congressman elect from Utah. The Reorganization owes it to itself, the United States, and to God to continue the fight against polygamy.

Returned here the 18th ult. The Sabbath school convention and conference were both educational and interesting. Apostles I. N. White and Gomer T. Griffiths present. The weather has been quite changeable, sometimes muddy, and again bitter cold; yet the meetings have been well attended, and last Sunday, we disturbed the icy water and the "army of the Lord" was increased four.

Last evening was the semi-annual branch business meeting. Slowly the business was done good-naturedly. In electing the servants of the branch all were chosen from the younger element, and of those who are not addicted to use of tobacco. This is both praiseworthy and encouraging.

I do not agree with J. D. Erwin's remarks about coal miners. He made no friends to himself or the cause by his rash utterance. The saints (coal miners) have been kind to me. Praise the bridge that carries you over.

In bonds,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., March 8.

Editors Herald:—Last General Conference my family attended with the double view of the benefits of the session and of beholding this place with a purpose of locating. After consulting with the Bishop and others as to the advisability of purchasing a home here, and finding about an acre known as "The Vernon Place" available, I secured it. The old home of my wife's uncle still stands in a fair state of preservation. The elaborate cellar has a fine well in it where the deceased aunt formerly made the golden butter and sheltered vegetables in profusion, and royal dainties. Their last days were spent in Los Angeles, California. The forest-crowned height is situate two blocks southwest of the stone church, corner of Electric and Short Streets, where we hope to build, for all time to come, so far as we are concerned, in the near future. My many friends, both in and out of the church, will be welcomed at our humble home from time to time.

I have disposed of the greater part of my real estate in Illinois at a fair value, as well as goods and chattels that were not needed here particularly and which it would not be wise to ship, etc. I make mention of the above to let all interested know I have not acted hastily or fanatically in this change, nor yet have I suffered loss from caution, and care, and patience. Through industry and management it has rang in my ears like an inspiration, "Trust in the Lord, and he will bring it to pass." There is a hidden all-powerful hand that molds the character and shapes the destiny of the submissive obedient ones. While I would be loth to pit myself as a model or pose me as special favorite, I can but follow the light that has dawned on my pathway while trying to render service. I do not wish to either turn or even look back, but the rather keep my eyes and heart open to the cheering rays of the Son of Righteousness. To falter by the way would surely mean a Napoleonic Waterloo; and to retreat or flee would be a lost Armada and a wrecked and ruined empire. While the polarity of the axis tells a truthful story, and the silver lamps hang in heaven's blue dome, let us be true to our convictions and march to orders.

While engaged in getting ready to soon take our departure, and being in the midst of work, imagine our complete surprise in viewing about a double score of dear saints and kind friends flock in, besiege, and fairly possess the place. Well filled baskets were the order, amid the disorder, and merriment and feasting characterized the scene till a late hour. On the 27th ultimo our household goods were placed in the care of the railroad ticket and freight agent at Aledo, Illinois, for shipment here the next day. The family, from start to finish, was taken to Reynolds, by Bro. John Epperley, a distance of fourteen miles; but the roads being good and the carriage covered, we did not materially suffer. Bro. Charles Wakeland saw our baggage of five trunks over all right, and then with Bro. Tim Duncan accompanied us by rail to Rock Island. My wife's widowed sister and son Thomas Riddell and her married daughter Nettie Willey all live there, hence an objective point. That evening I addressed the saints at the home of Bro. and Sr. Strang, and on March 1 my labor with the Kewanee district and mission came to a finale in a cottage prayer meeting.

My first introduction to this part of the State of Illinois was at and just after the General Conference that convened in Plano, April 6, 1877, although I had traveled in the south half of the State, and labored some the two preceding years. My good wife, Viola Vernon Short, was born a few miles north of Millersburg, but the family settled in the village when she was quite small. The hamlet noted for health, rich soil, and beautiful scenery was the birthplace and happy home of my three children. The above-named being the adopted place for the Hoosier head and the nativity of the rest, it was with many tears and strange forebodings that the last adieu was said, and on the 2d inst. we boarded the Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific at Rock Island. A thirteen-hours' run brought us to Kansas City, then a layover of an hour, and twenty minutes' run and a few more of walking and we brought up at my brother Ellis' home.

I spoke last Sunday morning, attended Sunday school, and other services and will set up and complete for housekeeping in full blast in the very near future. The saints seem much pleased to meet and greet us, and I reciprocate, I assure you. It has recently been stormy and cold, but the snow is fast vanishing this bright sunny day. Hoping to get the harness fully on for these parts, and trusting to receive light and impart good while on the shore of mortality, I am still,
M. T. SHORT.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 6.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you last I have been at work visiting and talking to those who are willing to hear. On February 13 Bro. T. J. Martin, of Detroit, Minnesota, came to the city. We were glad to see him, and put him to work at once. His preaching was good and his visit with the saints strengthening. Come again, Bro. Martin. On the 24th of February Bro. A. V. Closson, of Porcupine, Wisconsin, arrived and at once entered upon the duties of a missionary to the edifying of all, giving them good spiritual counsel. By the timely aid of the above-named brethren the writer was permitted to be a listener and take a rest from speaking during their stay in the city. Come again, Bro. Closson.

Our meetings were not so well attended, but we had good interest, and we feel that good was done. The weather has been very changeable this winter, from extreme cold to warm, etc. The saints here are moving on slowly but surely, we trust. Some are indifferent, but we hope to see all alive in the work ere long. I expect to go north the latter part of this month to make arrangements for our reunion in June at Detroit, Minnesota. We hope to have a good time and try to make it pleasant to all who attend.

Dear saints, now is the time to begin to get ready for the summer work in the church. I hope and pray that all will be on hand and strive to make our reunion a success. With love for all and the work of God,
Yours in the faith,

I. N. ROBERTS.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, March 9.

Editors Herald:—The district conference which closed here yesterday was up to standard, surpassing in interest the expectations of those in attendance. There was not a ripple of discontent seen throughout the session. The business was transacted with unanimity of sentiment, the preaching was excellent and the social features most gratifying. Brn. G. H. Hilliard, Francis Ebeling, F. C. Smith, R. Etzenhouser, A. H. Parsons, and M. H. Bond, of the general ministry, were present, and each in his place rendered acceptable service. The services of Bro. Parsons were secured for this place and district the present year, to fill a very urgent need; so that the outlook for future work and success is brightened for this section, and it is to be hoped that there will be no diminution of interest or effort in other places by reason of this change.

The inspiring Paraclete was sensibly present in the meetings, abiding until the close, and under its animating touch, with that of exhortation, testimony, and doctrine, resolutions for good were strengthened, made or renewed for future conflict and service. A profitable time in many ways was had.

Rains and a thaw having set in, the roads were very bad, which prevented many from attending who had planned to attend; but there was a sufficient number present for business, interest, and edification. At the close of the first session held on Saturday, fifteen Brighamites had arrived from Chardon, nine miles away, where they were engaged in conference. They came down in a body to visit the temple, and tarried for dinner at the hotel. Our salutations were, "Pleased to see you, we are looking for you;" "Pleased to see you, we were looking for you." But neither party forgot the spirit of toleration peculiarly American, or the courtesies due to men of every name, however sharp the conflict between respective faiths. They were young or middle-aged men, and rather promising looking. It is singularly strange, however, that so much zeal should be exhibited in such a poor cause. They hold tenaciously to the polygamist features of their faith, and try to defend it, more in the way of bearing testimony or citing statements of others, than furnishing scriptural references. Clearly there is a reason for that. They announced that they had two thousand preachers out in the field. There is a splendid opportunity for one to fulfill the scripture in conducting a campaign against these misguided people. "One [shall] chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight;" for one good saint, armed with the word of God, can easily chase a thousand of them in a contention for the right. They are human beings, however, and are entitled to just sympathy, Christian consideration, and the putting forth of an effort by Christian workers in order to reclaim them. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price;" so there is a chance for repentant Brighamites.

Those present here were Heber J. Grant, Salt Lake City, Utah; Louis A. Kelsah, Murray, Utah; Joseph E. Condon, Logan, Utah; Wilford Woodruff Cronway, Logan, Utah; Edward F. Turley, Colonia Juarez, Mexico; W. F. Burton, Ogden, Utah; J. B. Erickson, Murray, Utah; Thomas Warnock, Munroe, Utah; Peter James Sanders, Murray, Salt Lake County, Utah; Henry T. Williams, Alma, Vinta County, Wyoming; Alma Hansen, Brigham City, Utah; W. M. Bebb, Youngstown, Ohio; Lovisa L. Green Richards, and Lucy B. Young, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mrs. Young is one of the wives of Brigham Young. She is advanced in years, of pleasing address and intelligent, and withal seems to be devoted to the work they have in hand. Probably out with the boys as a living monument of the old regime, a present inspiration, to aid in keeping their courage up. She does not know her number in the list of wives owned by Brigham Young, if it is lawful to call them wives. She said he had fifty-six children, and as there was no cause for an evasion, this is perhaps as good authority on that point as can be had. Is the Reorganization and Brighamites to be as Nephites and Lamanites and the two wage eternal war against each other?

Congratulations for the prospective outlook for Zion's cause.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 8.

Editors Herald:—I expect to open up a protracted meeting in this great city. To the dear elders and saints scattered abroad over this earth, greeting, sitting about in heavenly places: Hold me up at a throne of grace. One more lady for baptism, March 13. She is very smart in music.

I am still in the fight; all seems to be going well with us here. Sunday, March 5, was another feast for us. I met the saints at No. 3411 Cottage Grove at three o'clock p. m. and God met with us in power with the gifts and blessings in the Spirit, owning us as his children, and at the close of the meeting our missionary in charge, J. M. Terry, said to the saints: "It is good to be here;" and his loving wife by his side bore her testimony in power and said she felt at home; wheresoever she went it was the very same Spirit. I hope she will like our city. Four were ordained.

THE ATONEMENT OF CHRIST AND THE FINAL DESTINY OF MAN.

BY ELDER ISAAC M. SMITH.

CHAPTER 7.

"FOREVER," "EVERLASTING," AND "ETERNAL,"
AS APPLIED TO FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

It is thought by many that the words "forever," "everlasting," and "eternal," when applied to the punishment of the wicked, in the world to come, must necessarily mean unending, endless, in the fullest sense. But upon a careful examination of the use of these words, as applied to other things, I find that they do not always mean endless; and if they do not always mean endless when applied to other things than future punishment, I can see no reason for deciding that when applied to that subject, they must necessarily and invariably mean never ending.

We shall take those words, as used in our Bible, and learn if possible if they always signify endless duration. Let us take first the word "FOREVER." Jonah, in speaking his experience when cast overboard and swallowed by the "great fish," said:—

For thou hadst cast me into the deep, in the midst of the seas; . . . all thy billows and thy waves passed over me. . . . The waters compassed me about, even to the soul: the depth closed me round about. . . . I went down to the bottoms of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me for ever.—Jonah 2:3-6.

He was in the fish three days and nights, yet he calls it "forever." Surely he did not mean without end. The Lord gave to Israel a law in regard to Hebrew servants, and in that law he said that when the servant did not wish to go out free at the end of the seven years, certain ordinances should be performed, "and he shall serve him for ever" (Ex. 21:6). Again, in speaking of the heathen nations in that country, the Lord said:—

They shall be your bondmen for ever.—Lev. 25:46.

In speaking of the earth, the wise man says:—

One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever.—Eccl. 1:4.

And David says:—

Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever.—Ps. 104:5.

Yet Isaiah says:—

And the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger.—Isa. 13:13.

The Savior says:—

Heaven and earth shall pass away.—Matt. 24:35.

Peter says:—

The earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.—2 Pet. 3:10. (See also Rev. 20:11; 21:1.)

So the earth is to be "removed," "burned up," and "pass away," notwithstanding it "abideth for ever," and "shall not be removed for ever." "For ever," then, does not mean endless in these texts. It means three days and nights, the time Jonah was navigating the sea inside the "great fish;" it means the lifetime of a Hebrew servant, which may be one hour or may be fifty years; it means the length of time the heathen nations served Israel, which ceased long ago; and it also means the length of time the earth shall stand, before being "burned up" and "removed" to give place for the "new earth."

Now if the meaning of this word is so flexible and indefinite, when applied to other things; if it can be used to express any length of time, from three days and nights to ten millions of years; then why not admit that it has the same flexible and indefinite meaning when applied to the punishment of the wicked in the great hereafter? The wise man says:—

I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him.—Eccl. 3:14.

The word "everlasting" is, perhaps, a stronger term than the word "forever;" but whether it is or not, it is used in the Bible in just about the same way. The Lord said to Abraham that he would give to him the land of Canaan "for an everlasting possession" (Gen. 17:8). And to Jacob: "And will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession" (Gen. 48:4).

In Genesis 49:26 the hills are called, "the everlasting hills." In Habakkuk 3:6 we are told, "and the everlasting mountains were scattered." But notwithstanding they are called "everlasting hills" and "everlasting mountains," the Bible says:—

For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed.—Isa. 54:10.

Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low.—Isa. 40:4.

Yet they are "everlasting." Not only this, but we are also informed that "the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up;" and that "we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Pet. 3:10, 13).

And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.—Rev. 21:1.

Now when the earth is "burned up," and when there is "a new heaven and a new earth," are we to understand that the "everlasting mountains" and the "everlasting hills" will still remain? If "everlasting" means without end, they surely must. And will Abraham and his posterity inherit the land of Canaan, as their possession, after this earth is "burned up;" and the "holy city, the new Jerusalem" comes "down from God out of heaven" upon the "new earth"? Well, it was to be "an everlasting possession."

Again we read:—

And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee. This is my covenant, which ye shall keep, between me and you and thy seed after thee: Every man child among you shall be circumcised. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised: and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant.—Gen. 17:7, 10, 13.

The above tells us that God gave to Abraham, and his seed after him, the law of circumcision for "an everlasting covenant." Yet Paul tells us:—

For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision.—Gal. 5:6; also 6:15.

Yet it was to be "an everlasting covenant" with Abraham and his seed, "in their generations." And, mind you, Paul says, "if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed" (Gal. 3: 29). Should all who "are Christ's" continue to keep this "everlasting covenant"? No; for Paul says "if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing" (Gal. 5: 2). An "everlasting covenant," then, may be fulfilled and cease to be binding. Why may not "everlasting punishment" accomplish its work, and then cease to be operative too? Why should this word mean more, when applied to future punishment, than it does when applied to a covenant, to an inheritance, or to the hills and mountains? Why should it?

Let us now notice briefly the word "eternal." Does it mean endless? Yes, sometimes. But it is like those other words: its meaning is not so definitely fixed that there can be no variation. If we had a perfect language, a language in which every word had but one meaning, we might afford to be more dogmatic in some of our opinions; but when we consider that most every word in our language has more definitions than one, and that we must often determine the meaning from the connections, it ought to teach us to be at least very cautious in taking our positions.

I shall use but one proof text in which the word "eternal" is used, and in that it is used in connection with the punishment of the wicked:—

Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.—Jude, verse 7.

Now this people suffered "the vengeance of eternal fire," and they are "set forth for an example" too. And if we can learn its effect upon them, it will be of help to us in understanding the meaning of this word, also of the word everlasting, as used elsewhere. By reading Genesis 19: 24-28, we learn that the Lord rained "brimstone and fire" upon those cities and burned them up with their inhabitants, leaving them "neither root nor branch" in all that land—except Lot and family. But when they were burned up, the fire ceased to burn; there was nothing more for it to burn, and so it went out. If you take the position that the "eternal fire" is to burn them after they are cast into hell, as it did the "rich man," then I shall prove to you that even that burning, however severe it may be, is to have an end.

Please turn and read, carefully, Ezekiel 16: 44-63. The Lord here is talking to Israel, and in verse 46 he says:—

And thine elder sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand: and thy younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters.

The younger sister of Israel then is "Sodom and her daughters." Please keep that in mind. In verses 49 and 50, he says:—

Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fullness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore I took them away as I saw good.

I call especial attention to this to show you that the Sodom, of which the Lord is speaking here, is the same wicked Sodom that he destroyed from off the earth because of their abominations, and that it is therefore the same Sodom that suffered "the vengeance of eternal fire." The Lord says here, "I took them away as I saw good." I believe that God destroyed them from off the face of the earth, and sent them down "into the lower parts of the earth," into the pit or prison: turned them into hell with other "nations that forget God." And that this was to be a kind of "house of correction" or "reform school" for them is proven by what follows. In verse 53 the Lord says to Israel:—

When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them.

And in verse 55 he says again:—

When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

Israel had been very wicked, more so than Sodom and Samaria, and the Lord tells them, in verse 59, that they had "despised the oath in breaking the covenant," and then, in verses 60 and 61 he says:—

Nevertheless, I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant.

Sodom and her daughters are to be restored to their "former estate" or inheritance, and are to be given to Israel for daughters; but the Lord says it shall not be "by thy covenant." No; for in verse 62 the Lord says: "And I will establish my covenant with thee." The covenant is to be made with Israel; and Sodom and her daughters, those who suffered "the vengeance of eternal fire," are to be restored to "their former estate" and given to Israel "for daughters." Not for slaves nor servants, but "for daughters."

Then in verse 63 we are told that Israel shall be ashamed and confounded, "when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord God." Yes, the Lord is to be pacified toward them, and they are to "know that I am the Lord;" but when they "remember their ways," and think over their past conduct, they will "be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame." They must suffer for their wrongdoing. Just so with Sodom: they must suffer the "vengeance of eternal fire," and then, although they may be restored to "their former estate," although it may be "more tolerable" (Matt. 10: 15 and 11: 24) for them "in the day of judgment" than for those who reject the greater light, the light of the gospel, I find no promise, for them, of an inheritance in the presence of God. Like the prodigal son, their deeds have been bad and are burned up; they themselves "may be saved, yet so as by fire."

But the "suffering the vengeance of eternal fire," in their case is quite a different thing from suffering a never-ending torment, in the lake of fire and brimstone, with the Devil and his angels. Both these words, "everlasting" and "eternal," are applied to God; and he is represented as being "eternal," and as being "everlasting." But we must remember that God has no beginning of days, as well as no end of life, and that we cannot use those words in the same sense, give them the same meaning, when used in connection with future punishment as when applied to God. If "eternal," when applied to God, means without beginning or end, then when it is applied to the punishment of the sinner in the world to come, it means the same thing, or it does not mean the same thing, one of the two. And when you admit that it cannot mean the same in the latter case as in the former, because punishment in the world to come must have a beginning, you then concede that the word "eternal," when applied to future punishment, is used only in a limited sense. And what is true of the word "eternal" is also true of "everlasting," although "eternal" seems to be the stronger word of the two. And when we concede that those words are used in a limited sense when applied to future punishment, and that they cannot mean the same as when applied to God, then why should we assert so dogmatically that they must mean without end? If "everlasting punishment" must have a beginning, then I contend that it may have an end also.

"But," says one, "if 'everlasting punishment' may have an end, why may not 'eternal life' have an end too?" What is eternal life? If we can learn from the Bible what "eternal life" is, then perhaps we can tell whether it may have an end or not.

In him was life; and the life was the light of men.—John 1: 4.

And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son.—1 John 5: 11.

Not only is the "eternal life" in him, but he is the life.

I am the way, the truth, and the life.—John 14: 6.

I am the resurrection, and the life.—John 11: 25.

When Christ, who is our life, shall appear.—Col. 3: 4.

The life, then, the "eternal life," is in Christ, and he is the life. But how do we get this "eternal life"?

He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.—1 John 5: 12.

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.—John 17: 3.

Christ then is the life, the life is in him; and when we know him, and have him dwell in us by his Spirit, then we have "eternal life" in us. Will this "eternal life" ever end? No, Christ is the life, and he has no beginning nor end. We may lose the life by transgression; that is, our communion with God, the source of life, may be severed, and we may die; but Christ is the life, and he can never die. Paul says:—

Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.—1 Cor. 3: 16, 17.

Again he says:—

What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God?—1 Cor. 6: 19.

And again:—

For the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.—2 Cor. 3: 6.

The thought is: Our bodies are temples in which God purposes to dwell by his Spirit, and while that Spirit is in us we know God, and the Spirit gives us life. But God's Spirit will not dwell in unholy temples, and if we defile the temple of God, he will destroy us by withdrawing the Spirit that "giveth life." The life does not die, but we lose it, are separated from it, if we "willfully" rebel against God after having received "the knowledge of the truth." And as man may lose "eternal life" by rebelling and turning away from God, the source of life, so the sinner may be freed from "everlasting punishment" by repenting and turning to God. The difference is this: In the world to come there will be nothing to cause the righteous, those who are saved, to wish to turn away from God, but everything to cause them to wish to remain with him. Not so with the wicked, everything will be of a nature to cause them to desire to get away from sin and its consequences, and back to that condition of purity which we understand to be the normal condition of the human family.

"Eternal life" then is God's life, the life of the Eternal One; "everlasting life" is God's life, the life of the Everlasting One; and when we obey him and come before him in that condition of purity and holiness that he can take up his abode with us and dwell in us, he gives unto us this "eternal life," and then we have "eternal life," the divine life, the Christ life, abiding in us.

And on the other hand, "eternal punishment" is God's punishment, the punishment of the "Eternal One;" "everlasting punishment" is God's punishment, the punishment of the "Everlasting One;" and when we get so wicked, and so far away from God that his Spirit finds no place in us, then we have to suffer "eternal punishment," "everlasting punishment," just as long as we remain in that condition.

By taking this broad and liberal view of the matter we can believe that "the wicked shall be turned into hell, with all the nations that forget God," and at the same time believe that God "will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth;" we can believe that those on his left hand shall go away "into everlasting punishment," and still believe that "all the ends of the world shall remember and turn to the Lord;" we can believe that "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God," and still believe that "all nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship before thee," and we can believe that "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," and yet believe that God will "reconcile all things unto himself," "through the blood of his cross," and that the time will come when "every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them," shall say, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever.

By taking this view of the subject we can believe God's word in its entirety, and have the consolation of knowing that, when so accepted, it will harmonize with itself, from the beginning of Genesis to the end of Revelation.

Now, allow me to quote again, in conclusion, the words of the Creator in the beginning: "Let there be light."

May the Lord help us all to come to the divine light, the heavenly light, and to "walk in the light as he is in the light," that "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son" may cleanse "us from all sin."

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of Northern Nebraska District, Greeting:—I trust that all in the district know that God requires you to tithe yourselves, by paying one-tenth of what you have as a commencement of tithing, and thereafter a tenth of your increase, into the hands of the Bishopric of his church, for the support and spread of his work and the demands of the needy.

He has told us through the Prophet Malachi that the withholding of tithes and offerings from his storehouse is robbery. He will not be pleased with us if we only give him the crumbs we may have left after fully satisfying our own desires—as a man would feed his dog; but he requires our best, that which to offer requires a sacrifice.

To do our duty in this way, Paul says is "a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God" (Phil. 4: 18). So I trust that all will be willing to make this sacrifice.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness [that is to do the things that are right]; and all these [earthly] things shall be added unto you" (Matt. 6: 33). Then in doing these things that are right we have the promise of his blessings.

But if we offer that which is not a sacrifice for us to offer, we will incur his displeasure; for he has said: "If ye offer the blind for a sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick [crumbs], is it not evil?" (Mal. 1: 8).

The saints in and near Omaha may pay their tithes to Bro. John Avondet, subagent, who will receipt you and send the same to me. Those at Lake Shore may in like manner pay to subagent, Ira Lewis; and at Valley, to subagent, George H. Wilson. These brethren can be fully trusted with your offerings. All who are not situated so as to pay in moneys to these brethren and be receipted by them directly, should send their offerings to me and receive their receipts from me.

Asking God's blessings to rest on you all, I remain, yours in the truth,

J. M. STUBBART, Bishop's Agent.

P. S.—Address me at Octavia, Nebraska.

He leaves an aged companion and three sons with their children to mourn. Funeral service by Elders D. R. Chambers and H. N. Hansen.

WIGHT.—Eliza Wight was born in Liverpool, England, December 24, 1832. With her parents received the gospel about 1841; in 1842 located at Nauvoo. Her father died soon after coming to America, and at the age of sixteen she was left an orphan by the death of her mother. In 1853 was married to Lyman Lehi Wight, who died October 8, 1895. Upon hearing the claims of the Reorganized Church she received baptism August 27, 1865. She was very firm in her religious belief, and nothing could move her from a position she thought to be right. Her life was one of much tribulation, and her faith in God and the work never wavered. Just before her demise she had the following beautiful and significant dream: she seemed in her dream to be traveling along life's pathway. The way was very straight and narrow. By the side of the path ran a beautiful stream of water, and into her hand she dipped some of this and discovered that it was very clear. As she looked ahead she saw the end of the path and the stream of water ran along beside it all the way. She died at Lamoni, Iowa, March 6, 1899, aged 66 years, 2 months, 10 days. Truly her rest must be sweet after her toilsome journey here. Funeral services at the home, in charge of Elder H. A. Stebbins; sermon by Elder R. S. Salyards; interment in Lamoni cemetery.

WIGHT.—Siena Wight was born in Bandera, Texas, February 13, 1856; died in Lamoni, Iowa, February 23, 1899. She joined the Reorganized Church September 14, 1865, and remained a faithful, consistent member until her death, which came so peacefully that she seemed simply to pass into slumber. She received peace and satisfaction, and realized her acceptance with God. Funeral services in charge of Elder H. A. Stebbins; sermon by Elder R. S. Salyards. After services her body was placed to rest in Rose Hill cemetery to await the resurrection.

YORK.—Hazen, the beloved child of George W. and Maude Steele York, February 21, 1899; after two months of severe suffering, he passed quietly away to join the throng of little ones for whom Jesus Christ died, and enter the rest he has prepared for them in his paradise. He was 2 years, 11 months, 15 days old; the joy of parents and the life of his home. Funeral at the home; many friends and saints present. The casket was surrounded with beautiful flowers. Funeral services by Elder R. Bullard.

HORSEY.—Little Mary Hazel, baby daughter of Sr. Kate and Mr. Jack Horsey. Born April 4, 1897; died March 4, 1899, at Lowell, Iowa. Funeral service in the Baptist church; sermon by Priest F. M. McDonald.

CROUCH.—At his home, six miles south of Lamoni, Bro. John Crouch passed away February 19, 1899. He was born in England, February 21, 1826; and lacked two days of being 73 years of age. Came to Canada in 1850. With his wife he emigrated for Utah, and to their disappointment became very much disgusted; and soon after reached Benton County, Iowa, residing there until 1876, then moved to Harrison County, Missouri, where his wife died. He married again in 1884. Up to his death was very faithful and true to the work. His wife and some other relatives mourn for him. Funeral at the home, sermon by Elder T. J. Bell.

BROWN.—Ida May, daughter of Bro. C. A. and Mrs. Emily Brown; born December 13, 1895; died February 27, 1899; aged 3 years, 2 months, 14 days. Funeral sermon by Priest William Chapman in the Holiness church, three miles south of Armstrong, Missouri.

ANDERSON.—At her residence, corner of Fourth and Jackson Streets, St. Joseph, Missouri, Sr. Ida May Anderson. Sr. Anderson was born November 25, 1872, and died March 4, 1899. She was a good woman, loved by all who knew her. She left a husband, two little girls, an aged father and mother to mourn her departure. Funeral from the "Aspey Mission," in charge of and sermon by Elder H. O. Smith.

CALHOON.—At the home of his son, in Akron, Plymouth County, Iowa, March 8, 1899, Bro. William R. Calhoon, aged 77 years, 4 months, and 21 days. He has been a member of the church since 1844.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

JAPAN TO BE CHRISTIAN.

NEW RELIGION OF THE EMPIRE LIKELY TO BE ADOPTED.

New York, March 11.—Dispatches from Tokio received in this city today bring the intelligence that the Japanese government is discussing a plan to make Christianity the religion of the empire.

That such a move would really be startling may be appreciated with the assistance of statistics. There are 44,000,000 persons in Japan. Only 200,000 of them are professing Christians, and of these a large proportion are shaky in their orthodoxy, from the point of view of American missionaries. In other words, one native out of every 220 calls himself a Christian. The remaining 43,800,000 are divided between Buddhism and a cheerful agnosticism, which accords well with the Oriental temperament.

An English philosopher remarked: "You cannot make people moral by act of Parliament." The news from Tokio foreshadows an attempt to make 43,800,000 people Christian by imperial proclamation. Persons interested in foreign missions will be anxious to learn whether the government of the land of the chrysanthemum, if it decides in favor of a Christian country, will adopt the dogmas of any particular Christian sect or whether it will permit the people to construct their own state religion from the teachings of the Bible.

It is explained in the dispatches from Tokio that the wise men of Japan, the statesmen, have come to the conclusion that Christianity makes for progress. They have got trolley cars, silk hats, corsets, and gas stoves, and they have defeated the Chinese in battle. But the Mikado's advisers believe that without the Christian religion Japan will never earn a place in the sisterhood of civilized nations.

It is only a few months since a distinguished Japanese Christian visited this country, where he had received his education, and made public many interesting facts about spiritual affairs in Japan. This visitor was the Rev. Dr. Naomi Tamura, a graduate of Princeton and of Auburn, and the pastor of the largest church of Christians in Tokio and in Japan.

"We are still a heathen country," he said in one of his addresses. "Generally the upper classes are infidels and the lower are hard to reach, though the Salvation Army is having some success with them. Buddhism is on the wane. The lives of some of the priests are not admirable, and with the spread of the common school system the people are more enlightened and are censuring the priests for conduct that was formerly ignored. Thus Buddhists become infidels first and then Christians.

"But I say in all humility that you do not send us the right sort of missionaries to render Christianity much service among us."

The Rev. Arthur T. Pierson of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church said today:—

"I am not surprised to hear that Christianity may be adopted as the state religion of Japan. The Emperor is showing himself one of the most progressive sovereigns of the world. In political economy, in the disestablishment of Buddhism, and in a hundred giant strides Japan is astonishing the world. In 1873 the calendar of Christian nations displaced the pagan, and Anno Domini determines all dates. In 1876 the national fifth day gave way to the one day in seven as a day of rest.

"Prominent Japanese leaders have long advised as a measure of political economy and national advancement the acceptance of Christianity as a state religion. The popular faith in Buddhism is already dead, and instead of the vast sums formerly spent on temples it is estimated that not more than $100,000 is now expended, and an exdaimio sent $500 and a chandelier as a present to the mission church at Saida, at its tenth anniversary."—Chicago Tribune, March 12.

BRAIN WEIGHT AND INTELLECT.

Dr. Joseph Simms writes in the December Popular Science Monthly on the above subject, and points out that many investigators have observed that men with the largest brains are not necessarily those possessing most brain power, talent, or intellect. Many persons with brains of unusual size have never risen beyond mediocrity, while on the other hand some of those men who have risen to great eminence by reason of their powerful intellectual development have had brains smaller than the average. Esquirol asserted that no size or form of head or brain is incident to idiocy or to superior talent, and with this statement of opinion the author agrees. Dr. Simms some years ago announced that he had made the discovery that the natives of cold climes had larger brains than those dwelling in tropical regions, and supports this contention with numerous statistics.

In one table are arranged the names of sixty renowned men drawn from different parts of the earth whose brains varied in weight from seventy-one to forty ounces. In the next table it is shown that the brain capacity, in cubic inches, of individuals of various races ranged from one hundred and one hundred and two for Swedes and Lapps to eighty and seventy-eight for Egyptians and Bengalese.

According to other tables, the fact is demonstrated that brains are smallest in the hottest countries, while to Scotland is conceded the honor of reaching the highest average in the matter of cranial capacity. Yet another table is given containing the brain weights of 125 persons of ordinary or weak minds, idiots and criminals, whose brains were on the whole larger than those of the sixty before-mentioned eminent men.

About 9 or 10 per cent of men examined in asylums registered a brain weight of more than 55 ounces, while those of Daniel Webster, Lord Byron, Bacon, General Skobelev, and of many other renowned men were between 53.6 and 50 ounces. The average brain weight of the sixty famous men was found to be less than the estimated brain weight of all men, and the ten most weighty brains in the list of famous men averaged more than nine ounces less than those of the ten heaviest, belonging to the idiotic, criminal, and ordinary classes. —Medical Record.

WRITES ON THE "NEW FARMER."

New York, March 12.—James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture in President McKinley's Cabinet, has written for a New York paper about the "New Farmer." He says he is the result of a revolution in agricultural methods and has already arrived. Part of Mr. Wilson's article declares:—

"A new era is coming for the farmers of the United States, and those of New York and the Mississippi Valley in particular. It will be the new fashioned farmer who will bring it about. He is the Moses of modern agriculture.

"The farmer of the future must be a practical scientist. The man who does not understand the science of the soil has no business on the farm. If a boy wants to be a farmer it is just as necessary that he take a course in an agricultural college as it is to the boy who who wants to be a lawyer, a doctor, a preacher, to have a university education.

"There is no lesson as good as an object lesson. The dairy farmer of the United States is going to be a great factor in the future. I will tell you why. Because we have learned the secret of Denmark's butter and cheese keeping so well in tropical climates.

"The farmers of New York State and those of the Mississippi Valley make as good butter as is produced anywhere. Denmark makes good butter. We send our butter to China and it cannot compete with the butter of Denmark. Why? Because it won't keep. There is a splendid market in the Orient, but we are shut out of it practically because our butter will not stand exportation to that sort of a climate.

"I sent a man to Denmark to find out about it. He learned that the Danish dairymen fed their cattle food that contained the same substances as the waste of our beet sugar factories—nitrogenous products. Now, then, all we have to do in this country to make our butter just as good in the tropics as that of Denmark is to raise the sugar beet and feed the waste of the factories to our cows.

"I sent a man to the steppes of Russia because I heard there was a grass there that months of winter could not kill it. I got it, experimented with it here, and found that what I heard was right. It will stand all sorts of winter weather and yet be in a condition that as quick as moisture strikes it it will grow like a weed. That is not a particularly scientific fact, but it shows the beneficial results of investigation for the farmer in almost any direction. The new fashioned farmer, the scientific farmer, must study the feeding of cattle. Not a pound of cotton seed was fed to the 400,000 cattle we exported last year, although the South raised 600,000 tons of it. That cotton seed was mostly wasted or made fertilizer."

A recent treatise on alcoholism by Trull states that in England 75 per cent of all cases of pauperism are due to drink and in Germany 90 per cent. Drink leads to 1,600 cases of suicide a year in Germany and supplies the lunatic asylums with 3,000 victims.

A lot of Bourbon County, Kentucky, cattle went into a tobacco barn for shelter during the last snow, and twenty of them died from eating the tobacco.

Booker T. Washington in one of his recent addresses said: "Our race is in too big a hurry. The preachers want the title of D. D. before they know divinity. Some want to take Latin and Greek who do not know the personal pronoun in English."

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

The College Laboratory is now in possession of a Chemical and Physical Balance, which is a welcome addition to our equipment. We are still hoping for further aid in this direction, though sometimes we think that it is a long time coming. Next Friday and Winter Term comes to an end, and scholastic operations will be suspended till Tuesday, April 4, when we hope to commence again with renewed energy and a larger enrollment. The work of Graceland students, during the last term, has been of a satisfactory nature. We are glad that we are not greatly overburdened with drones. If no other lesson were instilled into the mind of a student than that of diligence, the period spent in college would not be without profit: the virtues or vices shown by the college student are such as will characterize his after life.

We still meet some good old people who rail against education as a thing unnecessary, and refer you back for proof to the good old times, when they were boys, and were turned out to work at eight, nine, or eleven years of age. In good sooth, they are to be admired because they have done so well in the battle of life, but they ought not to forget that the boy of these days has to strive against greater odds, if he is without education. The number of competitors has increased, and the percentage of those educated has grown manyfold, and still continues to wax greater. If you cannot provide your children with that education which is their birth-right, cease to accept the responsibility of parenthood, so that you may no longer inflict such rank injustice on unoffending ones.

On Friday next the Athenian Literary Society will be in evidence. The closing exercises of the term will be under its care, and we all expect to have a good time; to commence ten a. m., Friday, March 24. All who can attend should come out to college on that morning.

A mistake crept into a recent issue of the "Echoes:" the items accredited to Bro. John Smith should have been placed in the name of William Willey, Fall River, Massachusetts. We extend our hearty thanks to Bro. Willey, also to Bro. J. S. for correction.

REFLECTIONS ON STUDY, WORK, AND GROWTH.

It is probable that all our readers are not well acquainted with the peculiar and conflicting positions of various sectarian religious bodies on the "question of authority," the history of their origin, their faith, general claims; with the necessity of studying such positions, old and new, etc. However, much has been published in the HERALD, past and present, upon such topics, and many besides the general ministry are well posted upon such subjects. They will therefore understand why we publish the statements from church papers of other denominations which have appeared and that will appear from time to time. We trust the subject matter will be understood, that proper discrimination will be exercised in the reading, and that the admissions made by writers will prove helpful to the brethren, who come in contact with representatives of religious bodies committed to the doctrines and policies treated by the writers whose articles we republish. Other matter of similar import will be given to our readers from time to time.

In republishing such items we shall not attempt to do more than to very briefly indicate the leading points at issue, our limited space forbidding extended comment, and frequent reference to such questions rendering lengthy treatment unnecessary. Leading points will be mentioned, because it is safer to presume that some may not be familiar with the ground covered than that all are. Our friends, the enemy, have waged and continue to wage unrelenting war upon the faith. It is therefore well that their own admissions of value to us be considered and preserved for present and future use. Had more been done in this line in the past, the matter could have been made quite generally accessible and in compact form for ready reference, for use of those who now can hardly obtain access to publications of early times. Much has been preserved, however.

Verified quotations of such matter as covers ground in controversy are helpful to ministry and laity in obtaining an early and comprehensive understanding of questions at issue, and thus prepares for effective and fearless work among opposers of the faith.

With this object in view, for the general good of the cause, we request the brethren and sisters to keep an active outlook for any and all matter that would prove mutually helpful to any or all departments of church work. We have secured such denominational publications as have been accessible to us on exchange, and others by special arrangement. We shall obtain others, and shall scan their columns with a view to keeping posted in all lines of attack upon the faith. Because the work we represent is divine in its origin, it will endure searching examination and criticism. We shall seek also to give due credit for such other useful matter as sectarian and secular journals may have to present upon religious and general topics. Men and women engaged in the work of God certainly ought to be able to discern truth, even though presented in some form or other by their opponents. Truth is truth wherever found. Certainly those enlisted in its service should be sufficiently impartial and free from prejudice to give due credit for every grain of truth held by any possessor. All have some truth. The knowledge of the truth we claim to have should make us both careful in discrimination against deception, and broad-minded against narrowness, bigotry, or intolerance.

It will be well for us to bear in mind that attacks upon the faith and other resistances to the great latter-day work have not ceased, nor will they cease until the church militant is merged into the church triumphant. They will continue and will assume various forms and modes, and for aught we know, may again in due time take on the form of open if not vigorous persecution as it becomes more and more apparent that the truth of the angel's message cannot be defeated by fair and open investigation. What we desire to do is to mutually assist all interested in obtaining and keeping up with a progressive knowledge of the past, present, and future, and the ever-changing tactics of our opponents. Let us not forget that the church will continue to meet capable and determined men; men educated, cunning, and wily—well trained in the schemes and arts of aggressive and defensive warfare; men whom the arch-enemy of truth will "raise up" and inspire to "resist the truth" as surely as God raises up instruments to promote its progress. It is therefore necessary that we keep posted on all lines of affirmative and negative warfare; in that we keep ourselves well informed in the new developments that constantly come to the front, in God's good providence, to assist to bring about his purposes. The Lord is employing various agencies to accomplish his work. Men in different departments of life, in literary, historical, archaeological, scientific, and other phases of research and criticism, are delving into the past and prying into the future in quest of knowledge. In so doing much valuable matter is constantly being brought to light; with it there will always be more or less that is false or erroneous in theory, in the conflict between light and darkness, until by proper examination the facts are made to appear in their true light, brought out and emphasized by the contentions of opposing theorists. To keep posted in these stirring times of mental and general activity, means devotion, and work, and study. It requires close application to keep anywhere within respectable distance of the forward moving procession.

In this connection we desire to express an opinion based upon experience and somewhat careful observation. It is this: We believe the ministry, though constantly traveling about, should be given reasonable opportunity for regular, uninterrupted, systematic study. It has become the rule with many to regard the missionary as a sort of traveling "visitor" with "lots of time to spare;" and because of this misconception of his work he is, as a general rule, expected to put most if not all of his entire time in ordinary, passing conversation; is expected to "entertain" or "be entertained" about all the time not actually engaged in pulpit work. This we believe to be a mistake, and one that is detrimental to the interests of the work in no small degree, also to the minister himself and those among whom he labors. It is with a view to a better understanding, and for the good of all concerned and interested that we take the liberty to express a personal opinion upon this matter.

The ministry go out to preach the gospel, to establish the work, to build up the saints and to do good to all in so doing. Their time is not their own, but is expected to be used in the best possible manner. They are commanded to "study," to "preach the word," and to "communicate." This requires preparation—reading, thought, observation; also labor—all these combined; and necessitates a careful economizing of time, strength, and opportunity. Men who succeed in business and professional callings in these busy, stirring times are required to be regular, diligent, and alert, if they would be progressive and meet the demands made upon them. Our work requires exercise of the same diligent application. It calls for the same, and if anything should receive greater application upon the part of those engaged in its service. Men may and do often carry into it whatever they possess of developed energy, education, training, and ability; all according to previous training, habits, disposition, etc. If a man has been trained to activity, energy, self-application, etc., he will carry those habits with him, and thus inspire others by his excellent example, thus help others to higher and better conditions. On the contrary, if indolent, listless, or careless, he fails to accomplish what he might, hence does not lead the people upward and forward by his general example and attainment. Much therefore depends upon the man himself. He who has not been developed in these lines may observe and set himself to work in self-improvement. He who has had advantages may move forward, and will continue so doing if possessed of the spirit of the gospel to that degree that he comprehends the character of his privileges and obligations; for the Spirit of the Lord will constantly offer the invitation to occupy higher ground, and constantly renew the invitation to whomsoever will labor, all along the line of advancement until perfection in Christ is attained.

It should be intelligently understood that our work represents God—God's standards of living, of thinking, and doing. Because men and women are not where they ought to be, the Lord has sent forth the gospel, the principles and power of a higher life, to make manifest, to bring up to the conditions of a perfect life; and through the employment of definite means, which means are only made effective through and operative by actual practical application, by individuals. The religious thought, the religious conceptions of many persons are erroneous in this: that they are limited to a nominal assent or obedience to fixed elementary principles, in a sort of formal way, while the life, the vitalizing force of the gospel of Jesus Christ—the power of an endless and perfect life—is lost sight of, if it is ever realized at all. The religious life as lived by the Master himself was a life of spiritual realization and activity. It is time for people to learn that religion means work, labor, thought, practice; that it includes every good; that it therefore demands application, service, and training—the doing away with old or low standards, and the acceptance and practice of the higher life in the new. It means that order, system, and definiteness of purpose are required in any line, in all lines of life; that all things worth doing should be well done—done heartily as unto the Lord.

Many homes are places of mistraiding, of miseducation, of actual misdirection of children. Children are often permitted by careless, indifferent, if not ignorant parents, to foster habits of idleness, if not worse things, if worse there can be. Children are permitted to remain out of school at their own whim or pleasure; or if they do attend, their progress is not watched, their work not tested, and what ought to be under constant guardianship of parents supposed to be faithful to the interests of their children and the interests of the community, is left entirely to teachers who may have no other interest in their work than earning their salaries, or to such as might do good work were parents sufficiently awake to cooperate and look after the listless or intractable child. Others through pitiable weakness of the so-called heads of the home are overindulged and permitted to have their "own way" until tyrannical little "bosses" are developed, who not only spoil the home, but are a menace and a nuisance to society ever afterward, ready to project and continue their headstrong ways through life. Others are careless or unclean in person or in work, and lack refinement, energy, industry, or push; who "let things go" generally, who make little or no effort in the line of self-improvement.

These are some of the things seen and noted at times by the traveling elder, by everybody who is observant. We understand that the elders are sent out to teach the people, to lift them up, both by precept and by example. In their travels, while certainly under obligation to be sociable and entertaining to a proper degree, they ought not to be required nor expected to spend too much time in mere ordinary, passing conversation. True, the people are glad to see them and ought to have all-sufficient time for essential conversation and good-fellowship; but the elder must read, and study, and think, if he is to keep up with and do his work. He should have regular hours for study and his time for such work be respected and be reasonably free from interruption.

To work to the best possible advantage to the cause he should be permitted to locate himself at a fixed point, making it his headquarters while there, in harmony with the admonition so to do. From that central point, after his hours of study or other work, he can go at proper regular times to visit and labor among the people. Besides this it is helpful not to change sleeping quarters too often or more frequently than necessary. Change of location is conducive to restlessness and sleeplessness, which wear out the man bodily and mentally, and should be provided and guarded against so far as possible. Men, even in the Lord's work, cannot defy the laws of nature. They are under obligation to do and to teach them. They should be helped to a compliance with them, and thus be the more in harmony with God, and to be preserved as they are to be sanctified by obedience to law. Many an elder has been worn out, broken down, and retired from service long before his time because of constant recurring loss of sleep and change of diet incident to almost daily change of place and conditions. Some men, too, can endure what others cannot; hence one man's obligations cannot be correctly estimated from the condition of another. It is hard enough on anyone to travel constantly and to put up with all the incidents growing out of the life of the traveling elder; hence due care should be permitted and encouraged.

In the matter of study the student is fed and has wherewith to feed the flock, seeking learning both by study and by faith. Men are granted the operations of the Spirit of truth in thought as well as in speech. If the mind be not inspired in thought, in study, as well as in the hours of open public service, men receive but very limited inspiration and teaching. It is a mistake to conclude that inspiration is not needed in all departments of life. No important work, in any department of labor, should be undertaken without the application of the spirit of thoughtful, prayerful consideration, that mistakes and evils be avoided, and that correct conclusions be reached, and reached by the aid of the operating influences of the Spirit of truth. Truth is light, and light is needed in all we do in every undertaking in church work and in personal life. The men who preach over and over and limit themselves in a satisfied way to the same old sermons, who never add definitely to their store of knowledge, are the men who do not grow, hence do not feed the flock as they should. Men cannot continue under application of the law of the Spirit of life without feeling and moving in harmony with the impulses that develop them, the impulses of moral, spiritual, and intellectual life. And, a man may be so constantly on the move as to practically confine himself to a limited number of set discourses in a perfunctory way—the word without the essential, accompanying, directing Spirit.

It is to the interest of the people that the ministry be encouraged and aided to study. Knowledge is power—power to teach, to reach the hearts of the hearers, and to lead the flock to higher ground. Both ministry and laity must study if all would show themselves approved. Prayer, and thought, and work are essential. Men and women who do not read, and think, and pray, lack the inspiration and inspired understanding requisite to the makeup of intelligent, effective saints of God. We want our children to become both good and intelligent; the Lord desires no less, to say the least, in his children, his people. The church cannot be the light of the world unless itself enlightened and disciplined. The honest in heart among the world will not be attracted to and affected for good by a people who do not give evidence of being taught of God. It is only by a combination of goodness and intelligence applied that the church can hope to do the work expected of it; and the true idea is for every individual in his sphere, at home, abroad, or wherever he may be, to apply himself to attainment in his work, that he may be qualified to exercise intelligent discrimination in all things pertaining to the good of the cause—to learn and know where the right is in principle and in general policy. When thus we do we shall come nearer to God, shall then more fully please him, shall avoid mistakes and prevent wrongs, and receive at his hands such expressions of light and favor as shall open up means to further progress in our work. We need to move forward on many lines certainly, but cannot move forward until we first move upward, by observing what has already proceeded from the mouth of God—his law. To sit idly or listlessly and wait for the body to move—to expect the church to make some rapid jump forward and perforce carry us forward with it, is a mistake. There must be a steady, natural, gradual, sure development of the whole body, by a wise and careful and reasonably complete advancement of the individual entities who compose it, to bring the desired and necessary results. No one has ground for hope of better things who fails in present duty. The present should and must be mastered to insure further and added successes. Advancement is based upon previous work or accomplishment. It is useless to build a wall without a foundation; as well seek heaven by flight as to neglect strict obedience to first and added principles. Character is the basis of salvation, and it is a definite quantity made up of recognition of and obedience to principles strictly essential to the makeup of a healthy, wholesome, accepted moral and spiritual nature. It is not strange that men and women of the church have been admonished and invited to occupy higher ground. The Lord would have all partake of the divine nature, because the human is too far below the standard as he has measured it, for the good of all.

When there shall be a reasonable degree of attainment by the membership of the church in general—not of a few only—we can expect a general forward movement. It is not the advancement of the few by which the end desired and designed is to be attained; all must live and labor in harmony with God, if all are to be benefited. Head, feet, and all other members of the body must attain and maintain a progressive supremacy—continuing in a condition of constant advancement and attainment. Past efforts and accomplishments will not suffice for the present and future. The church is required to continue constantly, steadily, and reliably in the process of coming nearer to God.

To locate our real position, to learn our real condition, to study the best methods to be employed, and to employ what God's word, the teachings of his Spirit and good hard, common sense indicate, seems to present a solution of personal and general problems affecting our personal and general status. We plead for study, thought, and the application of intelligent discriminating action, that success may be assured and continued and guaranteed to every worker and to the body in general.

TRUE SERVICE FROM LOVE.

The Salvation Army, the "Church of the Blacksheep" as it is sometimes vulgarly called, began the celebration of "self-denial week" on Sunday, the 19th. "It is to be celebrated in forty-five countries and colonies in various parts of the world." Last year the Army raised $400,000 by this means, "through the willingness of its members and friends to give up a few of the luxuries they are accustomed to enjoy."

A commendable example this, one from which many might profit. Luxuries might well be dispensed with, many of them at least, not for one week only, but permanently, in the interests of the cause of truth, on behalf of which God's people have made a covenant with him "by sacrifice."

Does not man himself gain by giving to God? We think so, but do not believe that "gain" should be the motive prompting the giving. There is a giving in the spirit, in the sense and fact of giving because the heart is consecrated and the life in communion with God. Giving in such spirit is what the Lord designs, and is acceptable to him.

Where the soul, the life, is sanctified and wholly consecrated, there will be no lack in service, whether the service mean labor or the giving of means, the fruits of temporal labor. It is true in all phases of our service that when in the spirit of the Master, serving and living in spirit and in truth, one moves and acts in entire harmony with the demands, the life of love and service to God. Duty, then, is not a constraint, a compulsion; it is hailed and entered into because of love of doing for God, for his work, for fellow man.

There will be a high character of service rendered, a full expression of life in Christ upon the part of the church in general, when there is an entire consecration of life to the service of the Lord. Such was the service of Christ to the Father—a loving and voluntary service, a devoted, a spontaneous and anxious desire to serve; so must it be with us if our service as a people is to be complete, "wholly acceptable in his sight."

The service of God and of Christ is sacred, and pure, and unselfish, because of its nobility, its high character. Can we be godlike in nature lacking such spirit in, such prompting of our service? We think not, but the rather that if service is to be upon a high plane it is "because the love of Christ constraineth us."

Let us love and sacrifice, and serve as did the Father and the Son, as they yet do, and as we must to "be perfect" in service, from the pure love of doing, "the pure love of God," the greatest and grandest principle in heaven above or upon earth beneath. It is "shed abroad in the hearts of the children of men," and we must receive it if we are to serve as we are called to do.

THE San Francisco Examiner of March 4 and 5 contains statements of the action of the Northern California district against the seating of Roberts. The article in the Examiner of the 5th is given herewith as showing what is being done to educate the public mind concerning the position of the Reorganization on the polygamy question. It seems clear that the faith of the church will become more widely known and more favorably regarded, as a result of the present contention:—

Santa Rosa, March 4.—There is no mistaking the sentiment of the members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints who are here attending the annual conference of the church in Northern California regarding the seating of B. H. Roberts in Congress. They are all strenuously opposed to the Representative's being allowed to have a voice in making the laws while he himself is an avowed lawbreaker.

A number of vigorous speeches were made at the business session this morning, and the resolution against the seating of Roberts was passed without a dissenting voice.

The resolution was introduced by F. M. Sheehy and was seconded by Presiding Elder C. A. Parkin. In discussing the matter Mr. Sheehy reviewed the stand taken by the Reorganized Church against polygamy.

The action taken this morning is important, as it is the first expression given by a conference of the church in the State.

At to-day's session B. F. Taylor was recommended from the district conference to be ordained to the eldership of the church, and J. Lansis was recommended for ordination as a deacon.

THE Deseret Weekly News of February 21, published at Salt Lake City, Utah, contains an account of the funeral of one Elder Joseph Woodmansee, aged seventy-two years, at which a number of high church officials were present, among them "President Angus M. Cannon," who is thus quoted as having said of the deceased:—

Elder Woodmansee's life would entitle him to come forth in the morning of the first resurrection clothed with immortality and the means of eternal increase.

Pres. George Q. Cannon followed, indorsing the remarks of the preceding speaker. From this it appears that the vain traditions still remain; that the "peopling of worlds" and other great schemes preached in the palmy days of polygamy are still adhered to.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. S. O. Foss writes from Augusta, Maine, the 3d inst., where he was called to administer. He found the State Legislature in session and interest in its proceedings so great as to prevent him from getting a hearing. He was driven from the legislative hall, by the odor and smoke of tobacco to which most of the wise men gathered there were addicted. He says:—

Our stay here will be short, as we are unable to secure a place for preaching, and we do not wish to idle away any time, but work where there are opportunities. Bad storms, grip, and very cold weather during the winter have prevented us from laboring as successfully as desired. There are many chances for improvement of the work in Maine, and it is hoped that the time of improvement may soon come.

Bro. D. E. Chandler, No. 207 Market Street, Portland, Oregon, March 10:—

I was baptized by Elder Thomas Daley, in Sacramento, twelve years ago, and my wife by the same elder, in Seattle, Washington, six years ago; and we have not since heard a sermon from our elders. I would be pleased to receive back numbers of the Herald and other church literature. Such would be thankfully received, for we have no church literature and are unable to buy any.

Bro. Henry Kemp, McPaul, Iowa, March 14:—

The Pottawattamie district conference, held with the saints of the Council Bluffs branch, was really all that could be expected; a very profitable and peaceful session indeed, we think satisfactory to all present. Our work in this mission is a little on the improve. We have nothing to boast of, but much to be thankful for. I have been down for a week with lagrippe, but am up and on duty again; to our heavenly Father be all the praise. The roads are almost impassable in some places, which makes it bad for holding meetings; still we have nothing to complain of, as the people do the very best they can in turning out, and God is blessing us with liberty in presenting the word, and the Spirit bears witness to the truth.

Bro. J. M. Terry, Chicago, Illinois, March 15:—

We are working away with the blessings of God with us; present conditions favorable, and future prospects bright. Bro. J. H. Lake is with us, doing good work for the Master. I go to-morrow to preach funeral sermon of Sr. William Wilson, of Coal City, Illinois, who died last night. Wife and son are with me now. We are just setting up housekeeping again.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. Joseph Maxon, Bannings, Pennsylvania, who some time ago was hurt in the mines, writes that he has recovered and is again at work trying to preach the word. He was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of a Universalist gentleman and was listened to by members of other denominations with interest and respect. He is hopeful for growth of the cause in that region.

The Columbus, Nebraska, Journal for March 5, contains an excellent character sketch of our veteran brother, Henry J. Hudson, of Columbus. Bro. Hudson has filled the following offices within the gift of the people during his residence in Platte County, since 1857: Presiding elder of the branch of the church from 1865 to date. He has been justice of the peace, postmaster, county superintendent of schools, county clerk, county representative; county commissioner; county supervisor, and is now police judge of the city of Columbus. He was one of the incorporators of Columbus cemetery and helped to bury the first one interred there. He was born November 28, 1822, and is now well along in his seventy-seventh year.

The Boone County Democrat for March 10 comes to us with the digest of Bro. Heman C. Smith's sermon on, "I am come that they might have life," delivered Sunday, March 5. The sermon in Lamoni branch pulpit, by Bro. Salyards, Sunday evening, March 12, was from the same text; both excellent; we heard the last and read the other.

Sr. America Thompson, Beeler, Kansas, reports a recent discussion at that point between Bro. W. H. Mannering and one Rev. C. C. Platt, of "the comeouter order"—a Holiness man we presume. It was Bro. M's first discussion, but he did well and gained a victory for truth, in the opinion of Sr. T., and she states that such is the general verdict. The people are asking for the return of Bro. Mannering, she writes.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, laboring of late in Pennsylvania and Ohio, will shortly begin operations in the Southwestern mission, in Texas, so we are informed.

Bro. Frank Criley, of the Herald Office, returned from Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, on the 18th, after an absence of about one week on a business trip.

Bro. Ephraim Squire, superintendent of the Brooklyn Sunday school writes as follows from the "city of churches," March 5, in forwarding a contribution on behalf of Graceland College: "Inclosed you will please find five dollars from the Brooklyn school to Graceland College. We wish it were more, but we are laboring under quite a financial strain at present, and if we are able to live up to our heart's desires you will hear from us again."

Pope Leo is reported to be sinking. The College of Cardinals is said to be preparing to choose a successor.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Jan. 25.

MRS. M. E. HULMES, Pres. D. Z. S.,

Dear Sister:—In glancing over the past year's record of our local Daughters of Zion, we notice there has been a steady improvement as to attendance, interest shown, and work done. The number of sessions held since January, 1898, was ten; one meeting of the general society having been held in April, and one omitted in March, during the time of our church repairing. The average attendance was twelve, the highest twenty-one, and five names have been added to our roll since last report. At a regular meeting held in May, Mrs. Emma Smith was elected president, Mrs. Clara Frick treasurer, and the undersigned secretary.

Besides the select readings provided by the Home Column, the society has been favored with readings from "The Child-Study Monthly," pamphlet souvenir of "The Mothers' Congress," and other good publications, which were utilized by the president.

These have furnished food for thought, and the discussions upon the subjects treated have always been very interesting and instructive. Besides the topics presented, such as "Reading," "Books for the Children," "Behavior," "Slang," "Night Meetings," and "Domestic Economy," there have been discussed such subjects as "Bills of Fare," "The Seven Laws of Heredity," "School Topics," "Parents and Teachers," "Good Health," "Food," and "The Teeth." These subjects have been canvassed by general discussion; and the reading of well prepared papers, furnished by some of the members, has been the means of creating an increased interest in the meetings.

A committee appointed at a meeting of the society framed the following protest, and it was read before the congregation on the following Sunday:—

"The Daughters of Zion wish to call the attention of parents to children attending night meetings. Those of tender age, who cannot take interest in the meetings being in the habit of going home at night unprotected, is a serious question. As a society of the Daughters of Zion we make a protest in all kindness, and hope the wise will take notice."

At each session the programs are carried out, as published in the Home Column.

Being thankful for the increased interest, and for the prospect of a more hopeful future of the society, we desire to press onward; and humbly urge all the sisters here to meet with us on the third Wednesday of each month, and enjoy the blessings of so beneficial a work.

As a society, we extend the hand of sympathy and cordial cooperation to all the sister societies of Daughters of Zion.

OTIPIPI, South Sea Islands,
December 14, 1898.

Our boat came on Tuesday morning. There was a fine breeze, and we soon run across the lake to Temarie. It was well that we went quickly, for the boat was old and leaky, and had we been out much longer may have gotten our feet wet. I was much pleased with the looks of Temarie. The island was so free from the crumbled coral rock that covers the surface of some islands, making walking both unpleasant and destructive to shoes, and no niau branches or old cocoanuts lying about. The ground is very level; comparatively smooth, hard, and white; so white where we were located, that it was injurious to the optic nerves when the sun shone upon it. Being so very low and level, it is flooded quite often.

We remained with the saints there three Sabbaths—the natives do not count weeks, they count "Sabbaths"—the last being sacrament day, on which all fast. There is a good niau building for church, after the style of their "niau fare pure ra"—houses for prayer.

Good niau matting covers the ground, upon which the congregation sits. A table and one chair back of it, constitute the furniture. The saints from the other two islands came each Sunday, and the routine was about the same as the one described, except that there were no Catholics for discussion. They came though, not to take a seat inside, but stood and sat about the door, and leaned over the side, thrusting head and shoulders inside. The priest would rather they would keep away, but their curiosity in regard to new people is too strong, they must see and hear what is going on.

The saints at Temarie were very kind, and provided us with such things—both eatable and otherwise—as was in their power to do. Milk is seventy cents per tin, potatoes, twenty cents per pound, and other things accordingly. I enjoyed having a living room by ourselves. I find it very wearing when compelled to be continually in the presence of the people. But there was one disturbing element, and that was mosquitoes. I never encountered the like before. They were as bad at midday as at any time, and even worse in the day than at night. For a day or two after a heavy rain one cannot do much else but fight against them. We were warned that they would be even worse over here; but there has been a strong wind ever since we came, consequently we have been troubled but little. We came here on Tuesday of last week. Had a lovely sail. The wind was light, and it took three hours to beat across. All three of these islands belong to Anaa. This island, Anaa, is about like all others of the Paumotus group, in that it is simply a rim of land and rocky reef inclosing a large body of water, which vary in size and depth. Some are very deep; but this one is very shallow, at least the most part of it is, so that we were not much of the time out of sight of the bottom. The bottom is of very white sand, and the water so clear it was beautiful. Like all other lakes it has lots of rocks to be navigated around.

Here at Olipiti we are located in a large three-roomed house by ourselves, that is, there are no others living here all the time. Meetings are held in here, and quite a number sleep here on the front room floor, which is not pleasant, on account of the "odor," there being only half partitions. Last Sunday night there were about sixteen. The saints all gathered here on Saturday, and on Sunday had a feast instead of a fast. "Big Pae" did the honors of hospitality most generously; he brought a wheelbarrow load of bread, well rounded up, from the baker's on Saturday. We did not see any preparations for a barbecue; but after Sunday school was over, and the natives were preparing to eat, I saw them lift a good sized porker from a trench in the ground and deposit it in one of their large trays. I have never before eaten any meat cooked by the natives that was so thoroughly cooked and so free from a smoky taste as that was. It was juicy and delicious, a real treat. That, with bread, coffee, and lots of sugar, made their feast. The day was pleasantly spent by all. The members of the Sunday school knew their lesson well, and all passed off in good order, and in class form.

They have a very pleasant and profitable way of spending their time between meetings. Since all have to remain in one place during the entire day, at the close of the meeting the sisters lead off in singing; then some one asks a question from scripture. Of course there are several opinions given on it, but if it verges towards an argument, they are "sung down." At such times two or three hymns will be sung. The same subject is not resumed again after being sung down. One question that was asked Sunday evening was, "Why did not God speak of the second day's work of creation as being 'very good?'" Another was, "What kind of a body was it that Paul was longing for, when he had one body already?" I did not learn of the others.

I like this island much better than Temarie. There is considerable grass on the ground—salt grass—that relieves the eyesight, and also because it looks more like land. Then there is a nice view of the deep blue lake, and a broad strip of cocoanut woods beyond. There is a nice beach right near, where we have had pleasant walks, and got a good wetting in a rain squall once. It is only a little way across the island to the ocean beach, or sand ridge and rocky ledge. The lone rocks, and miniature caves around and beneath them, with the irregular beach line, makes a walk very interesting. I love to see the great ocean, or broad lake, and when situated where there is no view of the water, I very soon get lonesome, and feel as though I were imprisoned. But I should not like to be kept on this island five or six months, as Bro. Newton was.

We will soon be on our way to Papeete again, if this wind moderates sufficiently to get on board of the steamer. It has been blowing strong on shore now for over a week. We are very hungry for news from home. The August mail received in September being the last we had and here it is almost Christmas time.

Joseph's throat has been troubling him nearly ever since he came here. One cause is, it is overtaxed, and the weather has been of the worst kind for him. These houses are built to keep as cool as possible in, and when there comes a spell of high winds like this, that is rather more than cool, it is impossible to keep out of drafts. We feel the need of being ten or twelve years younger. The missionaries to this part of the world need some of the elasticity of youth; and above all things they need "oil in their vessels with their lamps," for the time of darkness in which they cannot obtain from another, is long and tedious. PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A mother requests the prayers of the Prayer Union in behalf of her only son, that he may be able to overcome drink and be of use in the army of the Lord.

Mrs. C. J. Kay desires the prayers of the Prayer Union. She writes:—

"I live where there is no branch of the church; have been sick over a year. In St. Louis, after four months' treatment, the doctors said I could never be cured. I want to get well for my children's sake; they have no one else to look to, as my husband died in December, and I am left alone with five children. I wish I could hear a good sermon again, and pray that God will restore me to health, that there might be a branch started where we could attend. I hope that God will answer our prayers."

Sister H. C. Puckett, of Lake Park, Washington, asks the prayers of the Prayer Union in her behalf, if it is the Lord's will that she may be healed of heart trouble. She desires to live to bring her children up in the way they should go.

DUTIES OF A SUPERINTENDENT.

For the Pottawattamie district convention.

The word "duty" implies obligation, responsibility; that which we owe another. To superintend is to oversee and have charge; hence we conclude duty toward God, and those in charge, responsible for government, example, as overseer in the school of, and leading to the Church of Jesus Christ, intended to fulfill the request of him who said, "Feed my lambs," over which "I have made you overseers." How important to properly execute divine law and teaching to those who shall form the future of church and state. To do this we must learn at the feet of the great Lawgiver; and by humble, prayerful obedience receive the "Holy Spirit as an abiding Comforter that shall lead and guide unto all truth, taking of the things of the Father and showing them unto us." Not all being equally qualified, this Spirit must come to give needed development. Our gratitude to God, love for humanity, faithful discharge of duty, increase as we conceive the good to be done in teaching that gospel of salvation, for which Christ died.

A superintendent's duty is to be promptly, faithfully at his post; not only to work on Sunday, but seek opportunities daily for advancement; to be at place of meeting before time, have season of song, see that even the "wee tots" have a book of songs, and be surprised at their efforts to sing. Be cheerful; and while not acting childish, be a child in your sympathies and sociability. Call to order on the moment announced, and teach to be prompt by example, for it is oft better than precept. When you pray, or have others do so, be brief and to the point, of which the Lord's prayer is an example. Pray for your lambs in general, the sick in particular. Have the pupils honor prayer with bowed head or bended knee, for this is too often neglected, sorry to say, especially by older ones, and more so now than years ago.

Give a smile to all, it costs you naught and improves your looks. See that late pupils are ushered to classes. Be not forgetful to entertain strangers. When the little ones come in in winter, aid them in removing wraps, and have the teacher see they are properly "bundled up" at close of school.

Keep in touch with teachers by visiting each class during session, giving such aid as may be needed. See to pupils being advanced to higher grades when fit, that they be encouraged. In review be not tedious; seek to bring in new thoughts. Aside from regular class work, address yourself to junior members and encourage them to answer, as the older ones ought then to be interested, and can be appealed to for more difficult answers. Give blackboard exercises with colored crayon, and illustrate with drawings as far as possible, and be pleased to see this the feature of your school. If the superintendent should plead inability to make drawings, letters, etc., select one that may act for him in this department. Do not overlook trifles; move about on tip toe, and the children will learn to move with less noise too. Take the part of the imposed upon and a word of advice to the imposer. Visit the sick. Be kind yet firm; be cheerful, yet sober. See that teachers' meetings, visiting committees, etc., provided by general associations are maintained as far as possible, and rejoice in the seed sown.

Prayerfully,

ALMA FYRANDO.

XENIA, Ill., Jan. 23.

Having been elected librarian of the Southeastern Illinois Sunday School District, respectfully ask the superintendent of each school in the district to please assist in this work by soliciting in your respective branches suitable books for the district library to be used in your Sunday school.

Many of the saints of this district have access to but few of the church works, saying nothing of valuable works on morals and manners, art and literature; and as a worthy brother who made a talk on the subject of the district library, wisely said, "We saints have good books in our houses which we have read, we can donate them to the library, other families can read them, and we in turn can read theirs, and all thereby be benefited."

And I am pleased to say that several of this the Brush Creek branch, have donated books from their own library, and others have sent to the Herald Publishing House and procured valuable church works and donated them; and also Elders I. M. Smith and R. Etzenhouser donated works of their own that are much appreciated.

This district not yet being in the best of working order and the librarian of each school having enough to do to take proper care of Quarterlies, Bibles, song books, and also Bible dictionary and map of the Holy Land (which should be if not at hand), without being taxed with the district library, and will therefore insist that the superintendent of each school take charge of district library of his school, keeping list of books, their title and author, and also place in each book a statement that it has been donated to the Southeastern Illinois Sunday school district, by whom and when; that not only each donor shall have credit for merit due, but to know who is especially interested in certain lines of thought will perhaps awaken an interest in the reader, as also the name being appended will likely cause a more careful selection to be made. You will also keep lists of names of persons taking out books, when taken out and when returned, that our district officers, or anyone so interested, may at any time by referring to the record see just what the district library is accomplishing. This may seem an arduous task, but you can select assistants, by you still being the responsible party.

The subject of selecting books is a vastly important one, and carries with it the gravest responsibility; yet we should not shun duty, but move cautiously, though it be slowly, trusting to the great Author of this work for his guiding hand, as at all other times when the weight of responsibility is laid heavily upon us.

Although the subject matter under consideration be of the highest type, its value in the Sunday school library is not yet assured; for the manner in which such matter is treated is of vast importance, as also its propriety depends largely on the language in which it is couched. If the language be not good, discard the book at once.

I am sure our worthy district president and superintendent will gladly assist you in deciding on such books as may be of questionable value, as they will doubtless visit all parts of this large district; but I plead with you to assist at once in making up this library by seeing both members and friends of your branch; and those who have not a book they can donate will furnish the money to purchase one, that the good work may move on.

This is a work in which every member of the district is interested, and should feel it his or her duty to assist in building it up, realizing that the time has come for us to arise and work with a zeal, to shake off our drowsiness, and enter into the spirit of the work. In the interest of the work,

Editors Herald:—The intention of these few lines is merely to check an overanxiety to gather into the central point of gathering for the building up of Zion. I, it is true, in harmony with my brethren and sisters, have long hoped and prayed for the time when Zion shall be redeemed. But at the present, being a watchman upon the spiritual walls of Zion, I feel it my duty to warn my brethren and sisters against running before they are sent, lest they run in vain; for I read, "It is not expedient in me that there shall be any stakes appointed until I command my people. When it shall be necessary I will command that they be established. Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me."—D. C. 117:11.

To me there is but one to whom the Lord reveals any commandment for the government of the whole church, as such a command as the one referred to in the above quotation would be, and when such a command is given through the proper channel and accepted in due form by the church, it then becomes a binding law unto the whole church. The law of consecration to us will be governed entirely under the same rule, from the fact that transgression in the old organization set aside, for the time being, the law given to them, and they as a church were rejected. In due time it became necessary to rearrange or reorganize the church, which could only be done by the command of God and under the supervision of those who should be appointed by him for the purpose, from among the faithful ones who remained unspotted by the pollutions which destroyed the old one. This in due time was done, and under the legal and lawfully appointed son of the martyred prophet the Reorganization has progressed through all the stench and nausea heaped upon it by its enemies on account of the abominations into which the old organization fell after the loss of their earthly shepherd, until it, the Reorganization, has found and will if faithful find favor in the minds of the people, as promised of God.

In due time the law of tithing came again into force, and under the directing mind of the Master has been revealed through his appointed one of the mode of operation that should govern his people under that law. If the saints have not lived up to that law as given, and those who should have been benefited by its provisions have been allowed to suffer, the shame and disgrace of their neglect will in a day to come surely find them out.

The law of consecration, as I understand it, was given originally as a law to govern in Zion and her stakes and will be the law which will come again into effect when the Lord shall again command his people and they again gather home to Zion, and those who gather must be pure in heart and comply fully with the law given of God or they will not stand to receive their inheritance in no greater degree than those who were there before them; for the Lord has declared that the disobedient or rebellious shall be cast out, for they shall not pollute his holy land.

It is well then that the law governing in this matter should be taught "That you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand."—D. C. 85:21.

If this is all properly done and acquired and put into practice by all the saints who bear that name as it should be, we would hear no more of our missionaries' children running barefooted or hungry; and, far better, that the law now given should be fully complied with and also fully prepare our minds for that which is to come when our Father shall see fit to command, than it is to half comply with present conditions and go hunting for trouble which will surely come if we are unprepared when the higher law of consecration shall be demanded of us by the Lord. There are some things which cannot be done acceptably without a command, and that command must come through the proper channel and be accepted in proper form.

Your brother,

WILLIAM HAWKINS.

PORT HURON, Mich., March 9.

Editors Herald:—I would like to say to the readers of your columns that I am alive and well and am battling away for the right. I have been in the Eastern Michigan district for several weeks, and have preached in Flint, Riley Center, Highbanks, Tibbets, Saint Clair, etc.; and although the weather has been rough and cold at times, we have had a fair turnout, and many seem pleased to hear. But it does look to me as though the people are not, as a rule, so willing to accept the gospel as they were in past years. About fifteen and twenty years ago I remember that when we would preach to a good congregation sufficiently to give them a clear conception of the truth, we would usually get ten, fifteen, or twenty, more or less, to obey; while now, to the same number of people and with about the same amount of preaching, we will only get five or six, or maybe eight or ten. There seems to be so much else to draw the mind away from the things of God to the things of this world that the "pleasures of sin," and vanity of this world seem to be uppermost in their minds, or in the minds of the majority.

But we feel to thank God amidst it all that there are some who are coming over on the Lord's side. Four have recently been "baptized into Christ," and "have put on Christ," at Saint Clair, and others are believing. I return there to speak for them to-night, and will continue until over the coming Sunday, after which I purpose to call and see my father, twelve miles north of here, at Lakeport, and then return to the Northern district.

I was sent for to preach in a certain church in Port Huron, but on arriving we found them singing, and praying, and shouting, and making a great noise. The sister who had asked for the church, went to the elder and said in a mild way, "The elder is here now; shall I introduce him to you?" He said "Yes." We shook hands, and he sat with me for a minute and said: "Elder, unexpectedly one of our sisters has come from Canada, and she is on her way to Indiana, and will only have time to stop to-night with us, and we want her to speak to us," etc. I said "All right;" and we waited to hear what the lady had to say, thinking perhaps we might occupy a few minutes after she was through; but the minister then spoke, then called upon a gentleman to speak, etc., and we were not allowed a say in the services. But on the second day after that the same sister went over to him and asked for the church for another time, as it was promised to us, and the elder gave out the appointment himself, and also put a notice in the paper that J. J. Cornish should preach in the church that night. But as their sister preacher had come so "unexpectedly," she thought we might get it at another time; but the elder said "No!" and then gave as a reason that when he announced the appointment for me some one said I was a Mormon, and I should not be allowed to preach, etc.; also that when his notice appeared in the daily paper several others told him not to allow me the privilege of speaking there; and some of the ministers of other faiths also warned him, and so we got the lady to speak. "But," said our sister, "is that a Christian spirit to promise and advertise it, and then not do it, and get some one else to talk and say she came 'unexpectedly'?" "Well," said the minister, "I am glad he did not speak; I know I lied when I told you that he could speak and then did not allow him that privilege; I also lied when I said she came 'unexpectedly,' we sent for her to come," etc. Poor Babylon! "But," said the minister, "that was the best way out of it."

In my early days in this work, if anything like the above would occur I would grieve over it for days and weeks, not at my disappointment only, but at what they had lost, and what they might have gained had they listened to the truth. But of late years I think, Well, if you will not hear it now, you must go to the pit, where the Lord will bring you to your senses. That is the best the Lord can do for them.

I feel good in the work. God has given me good health and strength to tell the good old story, and he has also given me much of his Spirit to assist me in the same, for which I thank him every day. Bro. Joseph, your blows on Utahism are grand; keep it up. Bro. C. Derry, you have our sympathy. Go on, dear brother, may God's blessing be with you. May God bless all of his saints.

Your brother,

J. J. CORNISH.

APPLEDORE, Ont., March 5.

Editors Herald:—The Herald, Ensign, Autumn Leaves, and Hope are welcome visitors to our home; their perused columns often encourage and help to make many an hour pleasant. Life is not all sunshine, neither clouds and disappointments. Our heavenly Father has so blessed us in some way or other, with a knowledge of the gospel that when the saints are most tried and would fall by the wayside the thought of God's past blessings often prove a sweet solace. At a conference in the Lindsley branch a brother sang in the gift of tongues, another brother sang the interpretation, as follows:—

L. M.

"Ye saints of God fresh courage take,
I bless you for the gospel's sake;
I've called you for to sing my praise
In these the great and latter days.

"Be firm and fixed in me your Lord,
I'll bless you if you keep my word;
Your trials shall all dross remove,
Temptations shall love for me prove.

"Then rise, my people, do my will,
Soon you I'll bring to Zion's hill;
My people there shall gathered be,
My face and glory soon they'll see."

June 8, 1889.

So, dear saints, if we have temptations and severe trials to meet, these verses sung under the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit teach us that they are necessary to help us to subdue our evil natures. And amid the mist and clouds let us look forward into the great beyond for the rest God has promised to those whose prove faithful to the end. Hoping God may bless the tried saints, I remain, lovingly,

Your sister,

MARY M. GREEN.

Colorado.

Editors Herald:—In reading the article of Bro. Hilliard on the gathering, my mind was carried back to about thirty-two years ago. In the year 1867 there was a little band of saints in Nebraska City that was very anxious to go to Missouri, and they met together in the house of Bro. K. Johnson to inquire of the Lord in regard to the matter. They sang and prayed, and the Spirit came upon them in great power,—and the Lord said by the voice of the Spirit to those that were assembled that if they would go and purchase a piece of land in Missouri, and settle upon it, he would be with them and greatly bless them; and believing it with all our hearts, a committee was appointed to go and look up a location and make arrangements for a small tract of land to settle upon. They went and found a beautiful place in Nodaway County, Missouri, where land could be obtained on reasonable terms, but they failed to purchase or even make arrangements for the land; so we were sadly disappointed in not going to Missouri at that time. Now this committee had the means, or enough to make the bargain for this piece of land; but I suppose they were afraid to invest it for the benefit of those who did not have the means, so they with us came short of the blessings that all might have enjoyed if we had only hearkened to the voice of the Spirit.

At that time I was a great advocate for the gathering of the saints in the regions round about, where the Zion of God should be; and I still believe that was the proper and set time. The land was cheaper then than at any time since, and instead of the saints gathering together as they should have done they have been pulling farther and farther apart, and scattering all over the country, ignoring the admonitions of the Lord, and they wonder and wonder why they are not more blessed than they are.

I also heartily indorse the sentiments breathed in Bro. T. W. Williams' letter in the Saints' Herald for February 15, and I hope and trust the saints have learned wisdom by this time, and will be willing to hearken and give heed to the revelations and commandments of the Lord in putting all their surplus property into the hands of the Bishop of the church; for indeed this is what the Lord requires his people to do "to-day" as he did in days gone by; for God is unchangeable, "the same yesterday and to-day and forever," "I am the Lord, I change not." Therefore if we want to see Zion redeemed—which of course we are all praying for—we must work in harmony with the law which God has given. He has said in Psalms 50 : 5, "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."

Now, dear saints, what do we learn from this? That this is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the gathering of the saints of latter days. Are we all willing to make sacrifice and let this "work" of gathering commence? I hope and pray that the Spirit will inspire all the saints to hearken to the voice of the Bishopric as well as to the voice of the Lord, and then we can look for blessings to come, both temporal and spiritual. And the poor will be made to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel; and many, many hearts will be made glad.

JAMES KEMP.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., March 12.

Editors Herald:—You may state from me that the elders from Utah, mentioned by Bro. Needham, have reported falsely. I suppose I am the one referred to as "presiding elder," which position I still hold; and if I ever met Elder D. F. Duffin, I do not remember it; and if any of our members have joined the Utah Church, none of the officers know of it, that is, within the time specified.

We have given them ample opportunity to make converts, by allowing the use of our church at different times, and it is true, they have secured a few from our ranks; and one of the few has rejoined us, and another expressed himself as dissatisfied, and will, we think, return; so that so far as my knowledge extends I know only one family that can be counted upon by them as fairly secure in their faith as proselyted from the Reorganization here in Independence.

Yours for the truth,

G. E. HARRINGTON.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, March —.

Editors Herald:—I feel like bearing a part in the work; I write a few lines to let you know I am in the faith. We should be ready always to give a reason for the faith that is in us.

The reason I have to hope is, that when I do as the Savior says, I am blessed; and when I do not, I am not blessed! I was once an enemy to the church, because I did not know what it taught; but when I heard the first sermon I began to think that was what I believed.

I was baptized in 1879, and for five years lived as faithfully as I could, and enjoyed myself; then I was led away by the evil spirit, and I suffered in body, and my mind was darkened, till three years ago I thought I would give up and not try to serve God; but I could not do that without denying the work, and that I could do; I then commenced to think what I had done that had brought the trouble upon me, and I found that it was a lack of doing what I should have done, and because of doing things I should not have done. I began to try to do, but was like one who had been sick for a long time; I was weak, but as I have tried to do my duty in helping to build up the kingdom of God, my faith is increasing.

Others may do as they will, but as for me, I shall seek to serve God, and I want to encourage others so to do. Now the best way to serve God is to do as the Savior said, "Let your light so shine" among your neighbors that they will see "your good works," which will encourage them to say that you live your religion and are a Christian. If we do not, they will say, "Look at that man now!"

Let us all pray for one another around the family altar, and if we have none, we should make one, and never let it go down. We may say we haven't time. Well, I take time, and thank God for everything. If we all do our duty the church will arise and shine in her beauty. Do not say, "I cannot pay my tithing, because I am in debt." The way to get out of debt is to pay your tithing, and not think after you have paid that you had better have done something else with your means.

May God bless all and help us to do his will.

F. T. DABIE.

BURT, Mich., Feb. 28.

Editors Herald:—I am still here, unfurling the gospel of Christ to a crowded house every night this week in the Indian M. E. church, and on Saturdays (their Sabbaths) in the Advent church; and they want me to preach in their synagogue through the week; and as the M. E. church is by far the largest place to accommodate the people, I hold forth in it six nights and on the seventh day in the Advent church twice, morning and evening.

This evening the M. E. church was full of attentive hearers. If the number keeps increasing much more the church won't hold the people. They are coming from far and near and the order is so good that one could hear a pin drop when the speaker halts a moment, and not a word of fault has as yet been found with what I have told them. They say it is all Bible, and as long as I stick to that it is what I want. I never met a kinder lot of people, even among our own folks, than I find here. Among the different denominations (some seven kinds) they have not as yet called me any pet names, only a man sent of God to preach the Bible; and some don't think I want to carry a Bible with me, as I have enough in my head. One Catholic man traveling through this part stayed over night where I am staying, attended our meeting, and when he went away reported that he never heard the like before; that it was no trouble for me to talk "sure:" "It just rolled out of his mouth like fire. Sure there is power at the back of it."

Besides preaching every night I am visiting in the day and talking and answering questions till I can hardly talk, with hoarseness; but when the hour comes around again the good Lord is with me and the hoarseness is gone. I forget it and my coat has to come off, and, thank God, I do not lack something to tell them that's new, and still it is the old, old story sung with the old chorus that shakes the foundations of the systems of men and roots up every plant that God has not planted.

Dear saints, pray for me that I may have wisdom given me to do the work of God wisely and be blessed to bring the honest ones back to the old paths. Some have already seen the light and have given their names for baptism; but as the water had risen above the ice it could not be attended to, but is to be soon. Three gave in their names to forsake the world and its evils and follow Christ, but the storm hindered. Probably it is for the best. I promised to remain this week and there was joy in the camp. The cry comes, "Come and see us," etc.

I am homesick; have been looking for a letter for a week before I left Vassar, but as yet none has come. Have written three letters, but no word yet. Last night I dreamed of home, and in such a way as I am tempted to go home, but it seems too bad to drop the work here at such a stage with interest increasing so widely. Calls come from all around, "Come and preach for us." And the Lord has blessed the sick. Yesterday while at the village of Burt I was invited to call on the sick; one lady declared she was benefited. The people are Advents and their leader attends my meetings and testifies he is getting light on the Scriptures. If Satan does not hinder I expect to leave worthy saints here who will care for the servants of God. If any elder who could labor here sees this, please remember that it is a good field in which to labor for the Lord. Let other churches alone; just build up the kingdom of God. Let your light shine, practice what you preach, and the Lord will take care of the rest.

My permanent address is Five Lakes, Michigan.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., March 16.

Editors Herald:—Having labored in the South Missouri district for the past three months, I am home for a few days, fighting with Mr. Lagrippe. In some way he has made my clothing too large for me, but the Lord being my helper I shall free myself from his grasp before long and be off on duty again.

I have visited every branch in the district but one; and while I cannot say that any of them have reached the standard of perfection, yet I find the saints kind and full of love, and after laboring from one to three weeks it was with reluctance we gave one another the parting hand.

Not in all the world can so great, true, and Christian love be found as among the saints. By it we bear one another's burdens and forbear one with another, and by that spirit we conquer the world, the flesh, and the Devil, and make good use of the mantle of charity, establishing among ourselves a heaven on earth, dispersing every cloud of darkness. Who would not be a saint in latter days if this is a foretaste of the millennium? Who would not sacrifice his time, his talent, and his all for this grand and glorious work and the bringing of many who are good and noble into so great a oneness? Who would not sacrifice the use of tea, coffee, and tobacco, that our bodies might become fit dwellings for God's Holy Spirit, and more especially ye that bear the vessels of the Lord? Be ye clean in that respect.

This district is not what it should be altogether, but improvements have been made in the last few months, and I look forth with grand anticipations toward a speedy progress in the near future; for by the help of Him that doeth all things well we hope to root out every plant that is not of God's planting; and while we lay great stress upon the evils of tobacco, tea, and coffee, let us not lose sight of the fact that they are but three among hundreds of other besetting sins, and that we need to keep up the bars all around.

I must conclude by saying a few words to the saints who are looking for homes in South Missouri: Saints should use wisdom in matters of that kind. The word of the Lord is, Let the way be prepared before you. South Missouri is a timbered, mountainous country, and in places very rocky. Thousands of acres of no worth, only for pasture, and in places a cow would fall out of that; but there are thousands of acres of fair farming lands that can be bought at reasonable figures and in time make good homes with more or less hard work. But by all means do not buy or trade for a farm or tract of land till you see it for yourself. Take no man's word for it; not but what the man's word might be as good as gold, yet you all know that we cannot all see alike out of the same glasses, and what would suit one, another would not take as a gift; although I think South Missouri is a good poor man's home, for a man with small means cannot buy homes where land is worth from thirty-five to one hundred dollars per acre.

Yours in gospel bonds,
J. C. CHRESTENSEN.

HAPPY, Kan., March 3.

Editors Herald:—I am holding a series of meetings in a large, commodious schoolhouse, located on a beautiful prairie called Happy, between Hill City and Wakeeney. It is the first time that the angel's message was ever sounded here, and it seems to be appreciated by some. Measles are raging and affect our meetings materially. I am requested to return when the malady is over, and in the light of the moon when people can come from a distance.

Some of the roads are very dim and hard to keep in a dark night. Last night three men got badly lost on their way home after services, and after wandering over the prairie among the coyotes for a long time, found a road that led to the coveted place and about midnight pulled into the comfortable home of Bro. Morrill; and the funny part is that one of the party was the preacher. It was only two miles across, but we have concluded to go a little further around next time in a better road. The directors say the saints can use the Happy schoolhouse any time.

I have been asked to hold meeting in a schoolhouse five miles from here, and they promise to furnish an organ and a choir. It is no trouble to find places to preach in this country; I have not been able to fill half of the calls.

I start Monday for Bazine, where I will join my colaborer, Bro. Mannering, a very agreeable companion in the ministry.

I stopped here while on the way from Lenora conference to Bazine, to answer the earnest request of Brn. J. W. and H. D. Morrill. There is a fine opening here for any of the ministry. Bro. Morrill says there are several quarter sections of good land that can be got reasonably which he would like to see some of the saints benefited by. There were good crops raised here last season. Bro. Morrill seldom fails of a corn crop; he plants the Early Butcher. He would be glad to correspond with any saints that would like to locate here. This is recommended as a good stock country; plenty of buffalo grass and good water.

Direct to Happy, Graham County, Kansas, to J. W. or H. D. Morrill.

In bonds,

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 6.

Editors Herald:—Our conference at Santa Rosa has just closed. We had a nice time, considering all things. Bro. Stebbins will soon get the reports of the branches he ought to have got a year ago. The fault lies with the secretary. He did not send them; he did not know he ought to. People who read Bro. Stebbins' notice of Northern California will think we are very slack. It appears so, but we do not want it to be so in reality.

The conference appointed me district president again, which I feel is rather too much work; but I am willing to work for the Master, and I intend that this year will give me a better record for work than any year of the past if God so wills or permits.

I want to get my business so I can take trips to all the branches oftener. The way seems to be "opening up" for me to do more ministerial work.

I thank God for the glorious Spirit we had in administering to the sick.

May peace abide with you and all saints.

In bonds,
C. A. PARKIN.

PEMBINA, Ark., March 12.

Editors Herald:—We are here in the sunny South and isolated from the saints of God amidst religious intolerance and ignorant bigotry; but I am trying to set the true principles of the gospel before the people. Some are delighted with the preaching, and others scorn it. The Baptists have tendered me the use of their church one Sunday in each month, and it would be useless for me to tell you that I was not slow to accept their invitation. I preached my first to them to-day. The major part of them seemed well pleased, but I noticed one Baptist preacher in the audience who made himself somewhat conspicuous by shaking his head, disapproving of our position on the final destiny of man. It is hard to predict what the result of my effort will be at this place.

I have also been invited by the Methodists to preach in a schoolhouse three miles from here, where they have a class organized. I have held several services at their place of worship and enjoyed splendid liberty. Perhaps if Brn. C. J. Spurlock and J. R. Wedlock could hear me preaching for the Methodists here in Arkansas they might have cause to accuse me as they once did at Ozark, Missouri, that is, "a Methodist softsoaper." But if my effort to plant the truth here is as successful as it was at Ozark, Missouri, I shall be well satisfied, and I think they would be too. The people here never heard any of our ministry until I came, and many are anxious to hear, and I am curious enough to tell them the same old story that Jesus and the apostles told the Jews.

There is a splendid opening here for missionary work, but it will require a man with strong constitution, and patience like Job, to endure the hardship and teach these people the plan of salvation.

This is a high, mountainous country, not very good for farming, but said to be rich in mineral wealth. There is a corps of engineers now at work locating a line of railroad from Pomona to Harrison, Arkansas, and if that road is built this country will take a boom because of its rich mineral deposits. I would not advise any saint to come here. I shall leave as soon as I can; sometimes I wonder why I ever came here.

Your brother,
JOSEPH WARD.

DARK BEND, Ill., March 13.

Editors Herald:—I asked the Methodist minister here for the use of his church to preach in a few nights, but he would not grant the use of it. His objection was that I was a believer in the Book of Mormon. I asked him if he ever heard that subject presented. He said no. I told him if he would let me have the use of his church I would preach on that subject and he could point out the defects if there were any, but he would not consent, saying that he had no faith in it; so you see that we have not converted everybody in this country yet. But we are in the faith and doing what we can to advance the work. We will occupy a private house offered us by Bro. McKee. We desire to work on and live worthy of the blessings promised to the faithful.

F. M. SLOVER.

COLEMAN, Mich., March 8.

Editors Herald:—I am truly thankful that I am one of God's little ones. Nearly two years have passed since God led me to come where I would hear the gospel in its fullness. I was in the ministry for four years before I heard the gospel.

It is useless for me to write my experiences, how God showed me by visions and dreams that this is the Church of Christ. After the saints at Beaverton had succeeded in convincing me I had been deceived, I investigated the work for three months, until the 4th of July, 1897, when I was baptized and confirmed into the church of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I will say that God has truly given me many manifestations of his Spirit to confirm me stronger in the faith. I have tried to live faithful to my covenants.

On the 10th of September last the Lord saw fit to call me into the ministry, and I was then ordained a priest. They then voted for me to preside over the branch at Beaverton, as I lived there until a month ago. I did not have any other appointments until the holidays. A bit of my experience was rather rough, for after I had received permission from two of the school board and had given out my appointment, I went to one of the directors after the schoolhouse key, whereupon he turned me out of doors. This introduction was somewhat different than I had been used too. I held several meetings with good interest at the Pennsylvania settlement; I have now moved to Coleman.

I was preaching for the Free Methodists, on a circuit, before I heard the gospel in its fullness. Like Paul and many others I desired to return home and tell the glad news to those whom I had previously labored with. Not only have I the desires, but God has through different manifestations of the Spirit shown me I have a work to do among them. I have therefore opened up an appointment at Dow, about three miles from Coleman, as there is a Free Methodist church there. I first went to their meeting and declared the gospel and asked them the privilege of preaching in their building, but was refused. Truly I can sympathize with Christ and all who have had this experience as he uttered those words: "I came unto mine own, and mine own received me not." Again, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." I feel if I give careful attention to the leadings of the Spirit and use wisdom that my efforts will prove a success. Desiring the prayers of all saints,

Your brother,
CHARLES E. IRWIN.

SCRANTON, Pa., March 13.

Editors Herald:—The attendance fairly good at the hall yesterday, though the weather was unfavorable. Sunday school and social meeting from ten to twelve and preaching by the writer at seven p. m. Bro. A. N. Bishop seems to have a wise control of the situation here for the good of all inside as well as those outside of the church, if supported in his worthy efforts.

Preaching in the Llewellyn Hall at Taylorville on the 8th inst., also preaching at the home of Bro. Watkin Jones, of the same place, on the night of the 9th inst. The prospects are encouraging for all who desire to worship God to come to the front.

BALMAIN, N. S. W., Jan. 12.

Editors Herald:—Just a few lines to tell you how I love this work. I love it because I know it is of God. My whole desire is to go on walking uprightly before God and letting my light so shine before men that it may glorify my Father which is in heaven.

I am the only one in the church, but I pray that before long I may rejoice to see the rest of my family in. I am only eighteen and have been baptized six months and I know now what a glorious thing it is to be in the light. "Let us pray for one another, for the day is fading fast." We need the prayers of our sisters and brethren.

I go to Sunday school every alternate Sunday. We have a good number of scholars. Dear saints, may we all be found watching when our Lord shall come, is my prayer in Jesus' worthy name. Amen.

Your sister,
LILY WHITE.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., March 14.

Editors Herald:—Our late Sunday school convention, held February 17 with the Blue River branch, at Wilber, Nebraska, was very interesting and promises to be better in the future. Many thanks to the saints of Wilber, Fairbury, and Nebraska City for their cooperation with the Sunday school work.

Bro. Forscutt rendered us valuable service. Our newspaper of the district was grand. The entertainment held by the young people was all one could ask. We adjourned to meet with Nebraska City branch, Friday before the conference of next September. Come all.

Original Articles.

"PREACH THE WORD."

Under the above heading an article is written, which, though containing many good points, is in some respects misleading. I am aware that it is possible to expound the claims of the Book of Mormon and of Joseph Smith upon some occasions when they would be better left alone. But I also contend that there are times when these things should be advocated in new localities. A rule governing cannot be laid down, and if an elder is led to present these things he ought to do it, notwithstanding the views that some elite ladies of the town may have. If we withhold these things because certain ones are attending our meetings for the first time, the probability is that these subjects will never be presented, for very often somebody is there for the first time, and yet the main part of the congregation has been convinced of the first principles taught; but the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith's mission is a stumbling-block to them. Then the elder should take these subjects, that the honest in heart may not stumble, but accept the truths taught and be made free indeed. The writer of "Preach the Word," seems to admit this, but his article seems to almost discount itself, for he says it is always in season to "preach the word." The Apostle Peter says, "And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." (1 Peter 1:25.) We are informed that in the Book of Mormon is contained the fullness of the gospel (D. C. 17:2; 26:2), and again in Doctrine and Covenants 42:5 we find that in the Bible and Book of Mormon is the fullness of the gospel. From this we conclude that the fullness of the gospel is not contained in the Bible alone, and that "the word" cannot be preached without teaching the Book of Mormon also. If Elder Clapp had said, "Preach the first principles," it would have been all right, for they should be preached first, but he says, "Preach the word," and that means the Book of Mormon and Bible both. With this little straightening out, I think that part of his article is good.

There is much in the article I indorse, but some things I do not indorse. He says: "But when we wander off into the heads and horns and times and half times, we are only speculating, and the very best we can offer in this line is only guesswork," etc. Indeed! Guesswork. Let us see if it is guesswork. We read in Revelation 17 of the beast that had "heads and horns." We read that the seven heads are seven mountains (verse 9). Is that guesswork? That the woman sitteth on these seven mountains. Is that guesswork? We read that the ten horns are ten kings (verse 12). Is that guesswork? We have found that the woman sits on seven hills, and verse 18 says that the woman "is that city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Time was 96 A. D. History informs us that Rome reigned over the kings of the earth at that time. History shows also a subdivision of the Roman kingdom into ten parts, which without doubt refer to the ten kings, and yet an elder of the Church of Jesus Christ says it is only guesswork and the very best that we can offer. The heads and horns and the description of them are plain statements of the Bible, and history also substantiates it all, yet an elder says it is "only guesswork." Where are we drifting, anyway?

Now I will notice the "times and half times." What is a time? We read in Daniel 4: 16 that seven times was to pass over Nebuchadnezzar. We learn that these seven times were to pass over the king; for Daniel said it was decreed by the Most High. (Dan. 4: 24, 25.) History again shows that the word of the Lord came to pass, that it was not guesswork. It shows the king ate grass as oxen for seven years. Hence seven times are seven years. So a time is a year. In Revelation we find the church was to go into the wilderness 1260 days. (Rev. 12: 6.) In verse 14 she is spoken of as being nourished for a time, times, and a half time; that is, three and one half years. In Revelation 13: 5 the beast that had the horns was to continue forty and two months. The Jewish year (sacred year) was 360 days, twelve months to the year and thirty days to the month. Forty and two months were three and a half times, or in other words, twelve hundred and sixty days. We also find that the days were used in a prophetic sense, and meant years. If there is any doubt upon the subject, a reference to the "Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures" will settle the point, for in Revelation 12 it says the woman was to be in the wilderness 1260 years, and the King James Version says twelve hundred and sixty days. This shows the days to be the same as years. Perhaps Elder Clapp will show us where the speculating or the guesswork comes in.

I fail to understand why plain statements of Scripture should be called "guesswork." These heads and horns and times and half times are very useful to those who understand the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. The kingdom was to be set up after these times and half times, and it follows that those who claim to represent the kingdom should know what these times mean, and unless he can prove these times are past, it will be rather a difficult task for him to establish his claims that "the authority" has been recommitted to earth.

Suppose first principles are taught. Who has authority to administer the ordinances? Should they be administered by some one connected with the heads and horns? Our elder will say, "No." He will contend that they should be administered by the church organized after these times, half times, days, or whatever we call them, are past. Hence he should know what the time, times, and half time means, and he should also know if those "days" are passed. So saying, I climb "off the fence."

Yours in the one hope,

T. J. SHELDON.

McCOOL JUNCTION, Neb., Nov. 5, 1893.

ELIGIBLE TO MEMBERSHIP.

Under the above caption Elder C. J. Spurlock tries very hard to find fault with an expression I made in an article I wrote, entitled, "Preach the word." The following is the paragraph objected to: "Some have taught that no person was eligible to membership in the Latter Day Saints Church who did not believe in Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. I was asked quite recently if this was the case and I answered most emphatically, 'No! believe in Jesus Christ and the gospel, and you shall be saved, is the doctrine of the church as I understand it.'"

In the brother's effort to find fault, he intimates that I wanted to get people into the church before they are taught these things; but if the brother will read a little more carefully, he will see that I did not even intimate such an idea. My objection is to the preaching of those things first in a new place, and for all I can see in Bro. S's criticism, I am of the same opinion yet.

Bro. S. says he has known of some coming into the church that did not know our belief on these points, and they have made but little if any progress, etc. Quite likely; and I have known of others coming into the church that knew all about these things and they have never made any progress at all; but that proves nothing. I also knew an individual who came into the church and made a good member for nine years before he received the evidence of the divine call of Joseph Smith, or of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon; and now that same person is one of the most enthusiastic defenders of those two truths that is to be found in the church. But all this does not prove which is the best method of presenting our message to the world.

Bro. S. must believe that the best way is to preach the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith first. If he does not, then his criticism is altogether meaningless; and taking it for granted that he so believes, I will make a proposition to him that I think will be fair, and may bring us a little nearer to a unity of the faith.

Let us compare notes for the last thirty odd years; let us take into consideration the fields traversed, the condition under which we have labored, and the amount of work done; and if Bro. S's work shows up the best I will gladly adopt his plan. For I can assure Bro. S. that the whole desire of my heart is to do the very best I can for the Master's glory and the people's salvation.

Very respectfully,

J. C. CLAPP.

PREACH THE WORD.

I have seen an article in the Herald, "Preach the Word," which I think is good. I noticed one brother found some objections to it. Now there might arise a question in regard to how much of the word to preach. Jesus said, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them;" "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Inasmuch as we are commanded to teach the Bible, Book of Mormon, Book of Covenants, if it is a fact that Joseph Smith's prophetic mission can be proven by either of these books, would it not be preaching the word to bring forth the proof? I am of the opinion that the best plan will be to obtain the Spirit, then we can teach them, leaving the result with God. My experience is that we cannot please all our hearers.

I remember once preaching to the saints, and I taught them the word as I understood it from the Book of Covenants. After I was through an elder took me to task, and said my sermon was a failure. I asked him in what way. Said he, "You offended several of the saints by urging the matter." He also said, "I could see one of the sisters did not like the sermon." "Well," said I, "what I preached, was it the truth?" "Oh yes," said he, "it was the way you presented it."

So by this time I began to feel better; the shoe was a little tight for the elder. So the word will not always please; but we must preach it all the same. By turning to Book of Covenants we read:—

And ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple.—41:2.

Have we as a church received the law given in the Book of Covenants? If so, we will be found in harmony with it:—

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support.—42:8.

“Bring all your tithes into my storehouse,” so reads the word. Again we learn from the Book of Covenants:—

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day.—59:2.

I find the saints are slow to learn this. Some branches in this district have not taken the sacrament for over twelve months; yet the elders of my church are to “see that my laws are kept,” are the words of Jesus. Again:—

There are many who observe not to keep my commandments, but unto him that keepeth my commandments, I will give the mysteries of my kingdom.—D. C. 63:7.

Again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle. . . . And again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly. . . . All saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health, . . . and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; . . . that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them.—D. C. 86:1, 3.

Now, brethren, do we want to understand the mysteries of the kingdom and escape the judgments that will follow, when the destroying angel passes over; if so, let us observe the law that will entitle us to the same. “Well,” says one, “I do not think it means coffee.” Well; but what says the word. You must not drink strong drinks in any form, hot drinks either. Now some of you coffee and tea drinkers, try a few cups of cold coffee or tea that sits over night. If you don’t confess that it is pretty strong, I will confess that I don’t understand. That hot does not mean hot, makes me think of the way some people get around Christ’s words to Nicodemus.

The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the twelve and the seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers; . . . thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit. . . . The differences between the quorums be healed, confidence be restored and good will and peace come to the people as a cherishing fountain.—D. C. 122:7, 9.

Now in conclusion, the word tells us though a man may have many revelations, and power to do many mighty works, yet if he sets at naught the counsel of God, and follows after the dictates of his own will and carnal desires, he must fall, and incur the vengeance of a just God upon him. So let us live by every word, as well as to preach it, is my prayer.

Cravens were appointed a committee to solicit money for tent purposes and to disburse the same. A question was asked by one of the Stewartsville delegates, "What shall be done with a brother who signs a saloon petition?" Answer by the chair: "The brother should be labored with." The following resolution was passed: Resolved, that we as members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and representing the Far West district of said church in conference assembled at St. Joseph, Missouri, do hereby express our belief that it would have a demoralizing influence on recognized public sentiment, that an individual who is a violator of the law of the land is a proper person to legislate laws; therefore, be it resolved, that we conscientiously and sincerely oppose and protest against the seating of B. H. Roberts Congressman-elect of Utah in the House of Representatives, not on the ground of his being a Mormon, but on the ground of his being a polygamist, which is a violation of the laws of our nation and the teaching of true latter-day saintism, which emphatically enjoins obedience to the law of the land, and is uncompromisingly opposed to the doctrine of polygamy; and further, be it resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished the press and also be placed in the hands of our representative from this congressional district. Bro. W. Lewis offered his resignation as president and Bishop's agent of this district. The resignation accepted. The following was passed: Whereas, as our present Bishop's agent has been unable to thoroughly canvass the district in the interest of finances, and there is no immediate prospect for his doing so, on account of his business affairs, and as we deem it of the utmost importance that the agent should visit every part of the district at least once each quarter to teach and collect tithing; therefore, be it resolved by this conference, that we recommend Bro. Charles P. Faul as our agent for this district; and further, be it resolved, that we as a body express our appreciation of the long and faithful services of Bro. William Lewis in that office, and regret that his business affairs have hindered him in doing as much as he no doubt would like to have done. A vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. W. Lewis for his faithful services as president and Bishop's agent in the district in the past. Officers elected: T. T. Hinderks president, Frank J. Chatburn vice president, C. P. Faul secretary. The matter in the John Rounds case came up for consideration and was laid on the table until next conference. The district officers to appoint two days meetings in the district, and that we sustain them in this action. Preaching by Brn. A. and I. N. White, and F. J. Chatburn. Miscellaneous Department.

NOTICES.

The following counties comprise the South Missouri district: Greene, Christian, Taney, Ozark, Howell, Oregon, Shannon, Texas, Wright, Douglas, Webster, Dent, Laclede, Pulaski, Phelps, and Lawrence, and if there be any saints living in any of said counties away from branches, they will confer a favor by sending me their address, how to find them, and prospect for labor, and you will be called upon as soon as possible.

My address is 911 E. Dale Street, Springfield, Missouri.

J. C. CHRESTENSEN, Dist. Pres.

PASTORAL.

IOWA AND MINNESOTA MISSION.

Elder James McKiernan, of Farmington, Iowa, (one of the Seventy,) has been duly appointed to take the missionary field, and give his time to the work, in the Nauvoo district. He is also hereby appointed to act as our assistant missionary in charge, in said district. All missionaries laboring in that field will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

We are glad that Bro. McKiernan is now in the field again, where, we think, he should have remained; but as there is an added expense to the church incurred by this appointment, we trust the saints of the Nauvoo district will faithfully remember their tithes and offerings, placing them in the hands of George P. Lambert, of Adrian, Illinois.

Bro. J. S. Roth, who is now laboring in the Nauvoo district, will as soon as he can without injury to the work, repair to other parts of the Iowa mission, in order to supply pressing demands where he has previously labored.

J. R. LAMBERT,

HEMAN C. SMITH,

Missionaries in Charge.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 20, 1899.

As per his own request, Bro. H. W. Belville is honorably relieved from ministerial labor as a General Conference appointee, he having decided to take up manual labor for the present, and will travel and preach as circumstances may allow, under the direction of the president of Southern Nebraska district. A petition from members and non-members from Thayer County, Nebraska, requests that he labor in Hebron branch; doubtless Bro. J. W. Waldsmith will direct in the matter. I am of the opinion that labor is needed there. It appears that former labor by Bro. Bellville in the above vicinity was acceptable to the saints and those friendly to the cause. This speaks well for the young brother, who by Godly perseverance may become a useful instrument in representing the gospel.

Those retiring from missionary labor, and being the holders of half fare railroad permits, should not fail to return such permits.

It will be remembered that T. J. Sheldon has been removed from Nebraska to Iowa, and that D. F. Tyson, priest, appointed by conference of 1898, to labor in Nebraska, has not yet reported for labor. And that in consultation with the Bishop, I learn that the appointment of W. Self to labor in Southern Nebraska district in the place of Bro. H. W. Belville is sanctioned by the presidency, and that the Bishop will arrange with Bro. Self on finance.

Doubtless Brn. Peak and Waldsmith will direct or suggest labor for Bro. Self where, in their judgment he can accomplish the most good. New fields for General Conference appointees should be sought.

JAMES CAFFALL,

Missionary in Charge.

Brethren of Mobile District, Greeting:—Over a year ago it was resolved by the district conference to appoint one day in each month as a day of fasting and prayer; where practicable this should be on the first Sunday, the day generally set apart by the branches to partake of the sacrament. We would suggest that in the next four months the special objects of our fasting and prayer should be, in March: that God would bless the missionaries, district and branch officers. April: an increase of spiritual blessings. May: that God will bless us temporally. June: that God will bless the district conference which convenes during this month.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

Whereas, in the providence of the allwise God, our brother, W. G. McIntosh, has been called by the messenger of death to scenes beyond this life.

Resolved, that as an expression of condolence to the family and friends of the deceased, and as a tribute of respect to our worthy brother's memory and his work in the vineyard of the Master, that we regret the visitation of the messenger which called him from our midst and so sorely afflicted the hearts of his family; yet feel resigned to the hope that as he occupied well, under trying and adverse circumstances, he has gone to that rest in the paradise of God, to await the glorious resurrection which shall restore him to the company and association of the faithful in Christ.

Resolved, that his patience and energy in the latter-day work emphasized his fidelity and sincerity to the cause for which he endured.

Resolved, that in his death we lose a bright mind, a faithful brother, and a willing worker in the cause of truth.

Resolved, that we condole with the bereaved in their loss and ours, deeply felt, and commend them to the care of Him who doeth all things well.

Respectfully submitted,

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

INSPIRATION OF MAN.

"The Inspiration of Man" was the subject of the Rev. Artemas J. Haynes' sermon yesterday morning at Plymouth Congregational Church. He said:—

"Moral and religious truths are the results of spiritual experience and research. Revelation does not mean religious truths have come down to man out of the heavens. The Bibles of the world are the text books of man's inner soul experiences. They are the records of that which he has experienced or divined. The inspiration is not in the book, but in the man. The burning question is not that of biblical inspiration, it is the question as to whether man has been inspired, and may be inspired to-day. The central teaching of Christianity is that of the incarnation—the great truth that God dwells in man and inspires him. We deny the inspiration of the Bible, only that we may affirm the inspiration of man.

"Many people think of the religious life as something mystic and unreal. Religion is simply morality aglow with inspiration. God's processes are as natural in the spiritual as in the physical realm. The religious life is the fine glow of moral enthusiasm. There is nothing miraculous in it whatever. It is time to take religion out of the realm of blind superstition over into the realm of reason, out of the arbitrary over into the natural.

"When we apply these principles of inspiration to the Bible we find the result is only to enhance its value. The essential thing is not the shell, but the meat within. The value of Genesis is not in its outlook from the point of view of science; its value is in the affirmation of God and the great truth that man has been made in God's image. We are to take the Old Testament for what it is worth, morally and spiritually. The New Testament is to be received in the same way. The essential thing in the Gospel of Matthew is the character and ethical teaching of Jesus. What do we care if these are draped in legend and myth? Through the primitive fancies of the writer we catch a vision of one who lived a life of such strength and beauty as to lead men to fall down willingly and worship him as God.

"Our astronomies are not infallible, but we study them, for they lead not [out?] the imagination in a stupendous effort to comprehend the glories of the infinite. The New Testament is not infallible. Any schoolboy can prove it from almost every page of the book. But it does lead the soul of man out in a mighty effort to attain unto the moral glory of the life of Jesus of Nazareth. We are to read the Bible as we read every other book, rejecting those parts which were incidental, accepting those parts which are permanent because of their inherent moral and spiritual grandeur. It is an old saying, quoted from Bishop Butler, that it is the province of reason to pass upon the probability of any scripture.

"To conclude, I would say we are not to speak of the Bible as infallible; nor are we to speak of it as being reliable except in parts. It is certainly unreliable as a book of science, and I think few would to-day accept the philosophy of Job. It is not always reliable ethically, especially in the Old Testament. The Bible was the source of the strongest argument to uphold slavery, and this because people held to an entirely false idea of the Bible, as a book absolutely authoritative. Recognize the application of the law of evolution in the composition of the Bible and all becomes simple.

"The one word to characterize the Bible is the word of Paul, 'profitable.' 'Every scripture that is inspired of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect—thoroughly furnished into every good work.' We should go to the Bible, as the miner goes to the mountains, for the gold that is hidden and must be dug out."—Chicago Tribune, March 20, 1899.

DIVINITY OF MAN.

The Rev. Artemas J. Haynes, of Plymouth Congregational Church, preached yesterday morning on "The Divinity of Man." He said:—

"Science has revolutionized every department of human thought except theology. Science has enhanced the dignity of man. The theological doctrine of 'the fall of man' has been replaced by the scientific doctrine of 'the rise of man.' Man began at the bottom of the ladder, and has been climbing ever since. Evolution has now passed out of the physical into the spiritual. The emphasis is not on the 'human,' but on the 'divine.'

"It is interesting to compare the teachings of Jesus concerning man with those that have been established in our own day. He makes no reference to Adam, to the 'fall of man.' Indeed, you will find no hint in the teachings of Jesus to any of those central doctrines of theology, so called. Jesus appeals to the natural divinity in man. He takes it for granted man is spiritually the son of his Father in heaven. Man came forth from God; and were going back to God. Science teaches that the physical man came up by a process of evolution from the lower animal creation. Jesus nowhere contradicted this. He supplemented it by teaching that man ascended to the Father.

"Concerning the destiny of man, we should form our speculations with great care. We know that all processes of nature are prophetic. Man began in barbarism. All the more reason that he should conceive divinity as his destiny. From barbarism he passed to feudalism; thence to individualism; and now he is entering on an era of mutualism. He is coming to a recognition of himself as a son of the living God. 'But it doth not yet appear what he shall be.'

'Jesus undoubtedly shared the beliefs of his day, concerning the destiny of man. But we must distinguish between Jesus' belief and his faith. He believed in the Devil; he had faith in God. His belief is passing away; his faith remains, and grows more luminous with time. Whether he taught the everlasting punishment of the wicked is a point of controversy. Scholars are not agreed, and while they engage in dispute let us hold to our idea of God, as the perfect Father in heaven. Let us maintain his Fatherhood in the face of a thousand Bibles, if need be. We need the courage to say plainly that God desires to save all men.' — Chicago Tribune, March 13, 1899.

“SURRENDER OF ORTHODOXY.”

DOCTRINE OF EVOLUTION AGAINST SUPERNATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

Preaching on “The Surrender of Orthodoxy” yesterday morning at Stewart Avenue Universalist Church, the Rev. R. A. White said:—

“It is not unfair to the truth or to orthodoxy to say that orthodoxy has surrendered. To be sure, it has not yet admitted the fact. Possibly it is not itself fully aware of the capitulation. Orthodoxy has directly abandoned many long cherished doctrines once delivered to the fathers and considered vastly important. Verbal inspiration is an abandoned fort. Predestination has been refined away to mean little more than heredity and environment. Original sin has become heredity pure and simple. A literal hell of fire has gone by the board, and endless punishment itself has become a matter of conscience. The hell of modern orthodoxy is little more than a mild winter resort compared with the hell of Edwards. It is being admitted that many of the ethnic religions are good.

“What is more significant, orthodoxy, has surrendered or is fast surrendering the supernatural philosophy upon which the entire traditional structure rested. From that position of twenty-five years ago it has shifted, or its educated constituents in pulpits and pews are shifting to the scientific doctrine of evolution.

“If evolution is accepted humanity does not need to be washed in the blood of Christ, however much it may need his inspiration. It is no longer the fall of man, but the rise of man, that must be emphasized. Man is on the march from savagery to refinement, from caves to palaces, forests to schools, from picture writing to literature, from the twang of the bow-string to the piano, from tattooed faces to art, from gods of wood to a spiritual worship. Man does not need a sacrificial atonement in the old sense, but an inspiration. God speaks to men now as much as he ever did.”

WHAT OUR CHURCHES SHOULD DO.

A number of influential gentlemen connected with church work have called a conference to consider a world's parliament of religions, with the idea of promoting religious toleration, reciprocity and cooperation. This movement, if it is directed by practical minds, should produce good results. Religion would profit if there were fewer churches, and if those that were left were better equipped for their work; if, at least once a year, in every church, strong, convincing argumentative sermons on the authenticity of the scriptures were preached; if every church gave to the pastor the necessary help to search out the deserving and suffering poor, and if every church were made an open door for the needy in body or mind. If there were fewer churches and stronger preachers, freer pews and freer religion generally, the work of evangelizing the masses would proceed much more rapidly. Unity of church interests on the lines suggested would result in administrative economies that would give religious work a wider scope and much greater efficiency.—Leslie's Weekly.

Old folks can't jump, crack nuts with their teeth, or climb a greased pole, but it is not every kind of old age or wine that grows sour with time. It is always encouraging—for we must all grow old unless we die—to see men and women who find new occupations or new pleasures while growing old.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

A liberally educated man, in the words of President Schurman of Cornell University, is a man that knows everything of something and something of everything.

When'er a noble deed is wrought,
When'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts in glad surprise
To higher levels rise.—Longfellow.

Echoes from Graceland.

CONDUCTED BY GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Last week we had to correct ourselves in attributing a donation of books to Bro. John Smith of New Bedford, Massachusetts, but this week we are glad to thank our brother for a fine work on Ethnology, which will be quite an addition to the library. Our librarian, Professor Gunsolley, would be delighted to see a supply of books coming in each week; a new book for the library is almost as good as a meal to him. Then, do not allow him to starve (in a literary way).

At the time of writing, the last day of the Winter Term has arrived. Books have been pushed out of sight; Typewriters no longer make the air merry with their ceaseless click, and The Blackboards no longer accumulate perplexing and intricate-looking diagrams and charts. The library table is short of one of its most interesting features (from a psychological point of view); viz., a wonderful disarray of books and papers. Query, Did you ever see a student who knew how to keep books and papers in order for twenty four hours together? As we look back over the term, we see some things to be regretted, but much to be thankful for. As a school, our esprit de corps is on the increase and every student seems desirous of maintaining the honor of Graceland. Our Seniors are endeavoring to wisely carry out the responsibility of their position as heads of the school.

Thursday evening the students of the college were entertained by Bro. Frank Criley and Sr. Ella Rich, at the home of the former, and a most enjoyable evening was spent together. Sr. Rich is at the head of our Short-hand and Typewriting Department, while Bro. Criley, of Herald Office fame, is one of our Trustees.

The closing exercises of the term were placed in the hands of the Athenian Literary Society, and they have produced an exceedingly interesting program, which reflects great credit upon the society. May the College Chapel be filled with auditors!

The Spring Term commences Tuesday, April 4. Registration of new students, 8:30 to 10 a. m. Opening exercises 10 a. m. All students are requested to attend these exercises, and a hearty invitation is extended to the general public.

OUR COVER ARTICLES.

MODERN RELIGIOUS DRIFTING.

The present HERALD cover contains two synopses of sermons by Rev. Artemas J. Haynes, of Chicago, on "Inspiration of Man," and "Divinity of Man," which fairly well illustrate the present trend or evolution from extreme rigid creedism to radical evolutionary or revolutionary theology—the wide rebound or reaction from one extreme to another. Dr. Haynes says some good things and takes some positions concerning the Bible that are not far from right, when he undertakes to discriminate between its purely historical and its inspirational statements; that is, so far as he may refer, in a general way, to the difference between the history of fallible humanity and the statements of inspiration. While it is true that most of the historical facts related in the Bible are true as such, so far as preserved from error in subsequent manuscripts other than the original, etc., we have never held that "every line and every word" was inspired, the extreme view held by the orthodoxy with which the first elders of the church contended. The Bible, as we have believed, "contains the word of God so far as it is translated correctly." However, in so saying we do not accept the loose and careless opinions of the present day, which would practically cast aside the doctrinal and prophetic portions of the sacred word as of little or no consequence, the exponents of which theory are already treading on the shadowy lines of evolution so called, which is a change or departure from primitive foundations. Such schools of theological evolutionists are at sea, rapidly losing sight of land and landmarks, drifting, they know not whither, bound for the land of the shadowy nowhere, preaching systems of ethics all fairly well in themselves, but having no God, no power, no force or vitality within to quicken and to save the sons and daughters of men who are religiously dying for want of spiritual bread. Well have their systems been called "a refined paganism."

Extreme Calvinism preached the damnation of unbaptized infants and of the great masses of the human family as a result of the "totally depraved nature of man." Based upon such conception of the "fall," it was not difficult for their uninspired minds to see in the figurative language of scripture a burning hell and to read in its tongues of flame a harsh, severe pen picture of God's wrath and vengeance. The approach to a saving clause (?) if there was one, in their theory, in which they saved their idol divinity himself from "total depravity" and a few of humanity from his ferocity, was the doctrine of "unconditional election," by which God loved and saved the few and hated and burned and eternally tortured the many. "The dawning of a brighter day" however, has released man from such narrow and harsh conceptions, hence the reaction against such doctrines, which were in fact an outgrowth of the apostasy and the darkness that promoted and attended such departure from God.

The Bible is not responsible for such misconceptions nor for the reactionary tendencies which go to extremes which now appear. God himself spoke to this generation in 1830, when the latter-day work was brought to light; in the appointed time and season, the pivotal point in modern times; in a period when it was necessary and timely to call the world away from its mistaken religious conceptions; when it was possible to correct the popular traditions and prevent the incoming tide of infidelity and skepticism from sweeping the people from religious foundations entirely; in a time similar to the one David wrote of when he said, "It is time for thee, Lord, to work: for they have made void thy law." (Psalms 119: 126.) But no! priest and people with comparatively few exceptions, especially the former, would have none of it, and resisted the influences of light and truth. Like Israel of old, they knew not the things which belonged to their peace and they were hidden from their eyes; and as with Israel, their systems have been overthrown. The new wine could not be contained in old bottles, and the leaven of truth ultimately destroyed their errors of doctrine, and they, clinging to the old and its errors and refusing the light, have been left to drift and toss whither the winds and waves of the spirit of Babylon may carry them.

Sad indeed is the condition of any people without God, "without light." "The fathers" in modern times, as in days of old, "have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge;" for since the restoration of the gospel in 1830 opposition to the truth has continued to come from the popular religionists of the day. Like the day of the Master and his disciples those who should have received the gospel message have been foremost in influencing the people to reject it; those in position to lead the people for good, to accept the truth, have misrepresented the message God would carry to them through his servants, and have held them to the more popular and established traditions of their fathers.

But compensation has come and truth is being vindicated, though the vindicating process is sapping the foundations of the creeds of men and carrying the people away from or undermining their confidence in the Bible and what they possessed of the truth of Christianity; not because there is good reason to doubt either, but because the people are still largely influenced by those to whom they have looked and still look for guidance, the man in the pulpit, the wearer of the sacerdotal garments. The people naturally look to their spiritual leaders for light and direction; the leaders lacking light and communion with God, cannot direct or lead to heights or plant their feet upon better foundations than they themselves possess.

The situation is a plain one, strikingly so; the position assumed by the early elders of the church is found to be tenable and manifestly correct. Departure from primitive Christianity is not a mere theory, it is an established fact. The past history of Catholicism and Protestantism proves this claim of the early elders to be a true one, and the continued driftings of modern theologians, first from their own creeds, and later from the foundations of Christianity, the Bible and the truths it contains, but serve to confirm the correctness of the instructions given the young Seer when, stirred by a local religious revival he asked which church he should join and was told to "join none of them," "that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight;" "they teach for doctrine the commandments of men; having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof."

Looking through the revelations given through the young Seer, one is struck with the clear fulfillment of the predictions made in 1830-35, etc. In section 1, the preface to the Book of Covenants, the church was instructed that the religious world "have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant; they seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great which shall fall.

In section 3 we have the following statement concerning the restoration of the gospel and the building up of the church:—

And for this cause have I said, If this generation harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them. Now I do not say this to destroy my church, but I say this to build up my church; therefore, whosoever belongeth to my church need not fear, for such shall inherit the kingdom of heaven; but it is they who do not fear me, neither keep my commandments, but build up churches unto themselves, to get gain; yea, and all those that do wickedly, and build up the kingdom of the Devil; yea, verily, verily I say unto you, that it is they that I will disturb, and cause to tremble and shake to the center.—D. C. 3:13.

Other revelations declare that the "shame and folly" of religious opposers and persecutors would be "made manifest."

An idol, in ancient times, was the product of a mistaken conception of deity; what the worshiper conceived his god to be he hewed or carved from wood or stone or other material; the idol represented his faulty, erroneous conception. The same principle is true in all essential features of modern idols; for religious creedmakers and church builders have built up systems of faith based upon the erroneous conceptions of God that have been in fact idols—creatures of human imagination and as such destined to fall with the passing of Babylon. The statements of the revelations are being literally fulfilled. The Lord has indeed disturbed them and caused them "to tremble and shake to the center." As in the days of the Master and his apostles, who undermined and destroyed the foundations of Jewish tradition and other errors, it "signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, . . . that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." It was the destruction of the "false" and the establishment of the "true." God's methods do not change; the works of men, fallible and misleading and corrupting are permitted to be made manifest, until by the force and power of truth he causes error to be swept away. The philosophy and manifest destiny of the great latter-day work cannot be gainsayed or resisted. It cuts the gordian knot and solves the problem of the ages. It saves the world to God from the present drifting of the tide which would carry the race away from God "into the blackness of darkness forever." "Out of Zion the perfection of beauty God hath shined" upon the world, to give light to "the people which sat in darkness, . . . and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up." It was and is the message of peace on earth, good will to men, the proclamation of the coming Christ and of salvation in him by the gospel. The great latter-day work has been established to save the world. Without it there is no saving message from God to man, no salvation for the race. Its message is timely; its doctrine is truth; its foundation is sure, substantial, and eternal. Its importance looms up and is strongly apparent to those who discern its character and the gravity of the condition to the world. (The children of light who study world problems should discern and see more clearly the responsibilities it entails, and give close intelligent study to its demands that the exigencies of the situation may be capably, fully met in the requirements of their service.)

With this general mention we return to a more direct but brief comment upon the cover articles. We quote from "Inspiration of Man":

Moral and religious truths are the results of spiritual experience and research. Revelation does not mean religious truths have come down to man out of the heavens. The Bibles of the world are the text books of man's inner soul experiences. They are the records of that which he has experienced or divined, etc.

This is somewhat vague if not contradictory. It is not to be denied that man's spiritual inner consciousness has sought after God, but it is not true that God has been found and revelation received through the slow processes of mere thought upon man's part. God has sought after man from the beginning; he has spoken directly to the race and communicated truth "to man out of the heavens." Man's religious vagaries, are the outcroppings of the uninspired mind, and sometimes of even lower origin; the Holy Scriptures is a record of what God has revealed. It is not to be classed with the Bibles of the heathen world. A critical, scientific comparison therewith demonstrates the vast superiority of "the Bible" over the sacred books of Hindoos and others. "Spiritual things are spiritually discerned;" the uninspired mind cannot "comprehend the things of God;" neither can he know them:—

But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man. For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ.—1 Cor. 2:10-16.

If the Bible records what inspiration conveyed to man, the book should not be treated lightly but be sacredly valued. Truth is always truth.

The important question is "present inspiration;" the necessity of communication from God to the race is emphasized by the present as it has been emphasized by past religious contention. Since 1830 the Latter Day Saints have made the consistent claim that the Father of the race should be sought after; that his children should be both willing and anxious to hear and heed the instructions his Fatherhood alone could supply; that Christ under God was still light and life of man and as such should be heard and heeded. For this we have been contending against the persistent unbelief and stubbornness of the religious world. But present revelation or any claim therefor or assent thereto is inconsistent if it deny the past revelations of God. God is the Father of the world; we cannot ignore the communications of his will to man in former ages, as we cannot separate the past from the present. The scientific world claims an orderly systematic development of the physical universe; that from "the beginning" of the world, from foundation through all subsequent growth, there has been an orderly, systematic, sequence, the one stage consequent from and complementary to the other. Why should scientific theologians, so called, depart from their so-called scientific creed, or rather from true scientific principles almost while their statements of departure, of being scientific, are fresh on their lips? All truth is one; it is unnecessary and illogical to "deny the inspiration of the Bible" "that we may affirm the inspiration of man;" this with the thought that inspiration from God through man is meant. But the preacher probably referred to the present-day conception of his school, the so-called inspiration which is denying holy writ. If that is meant it is well designated "inspiration of man," and its inconsistencies not to be wondered at. The thought of Paul is brought to mind, wherein he described men who in a previous age represented the same spirit and who "changed the truth of God" and served or glorified the creature more than the Creator. This is undoubtedly the tendency of some schools.

This tendency may help us to understand the references to "the religious life." The true religious life is not mystical and unreal, not blind superstition. It is natural however in no merely earthly sense—it is not limited to man here or the things of earth's activities; it takes in the spiritual with the material realm. It argues that the attending enlightening Spirit of truth is natural and essential to a natural life, a proper development of the man entire. It is higher and more exalted in its conceptions than the mind of the natural unregenerate man, as "the heavens are higher than the earth." Its aid to man in the past, the necessity for its operations in the present should not be overlooked nor disregarded by those who so broadly assert their high-sounding generalities. It is "the Spirit of truth whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him."

References to Genesis in the article "from the point of view of science," are significant. It has come to pass that popular religionists, leaders of religious thought, are casting aside the word of God for so-called scientific deductions of the modern school; in other words, the things of God are to be measured and rejected by the standard of modern scientific conclusions, the extreme evolution theory of man's development from low forms of life up through barbarism to present development. The theory contains truths that the Bible does not contradict—the principle of general development; but the claim of secular and theological evolutionists of the origin of man is but a theory, not a demonstration, "a working theory" by no means established, but involving much that is purely speculative. It in itself has a peculiar and "natural" attraction to Bible rejecting religionists in that it denies the word, treats it lightly, and bids fair to reject its Author entirely as it does largely in fact. It is this theory that denominates the Jewish cosmogony a collection of myths, which regards the statements of early Bible history among the folk-lore and traditional myths of barbarous primitive man. Such is the tendency of modern, up-to-date theologians of the "progressive" school, who, emancipated from the grave clothes and bands of the creeds have swung themselves loose from all hampering restraints and are beating the air in their new-found freedom. Such is the result of proceeding from misconception and error in the beginning, of running without tidings; of lacking a divine commission with its attendant light and power, and rejecting, and of refusing the message God has sent in these last days; such are men without anchor, chart, compass, or rudder, adrift because without God in the world, because they receive not them whom God has sent. The modern theologian with his theory is like unto the modern air ship in its crude stage of development, making efforts to sail aloft but doomed to fall to earth and dashing to death its inventor.

It is the evolution theory that asserts the divinity of man in contrast to the supposed errors of the Bible, its advocates overlooking the distinction between what the Bible does teach and what they suppose it teaches. Their theory has made the creature a revelator superior to the Creator; God's word is banished from the scene of religious action, and God himself dispensed with, as a theory.

This view of the ultimate of such teaching is strengthened by the statements that "Jesus undoubtedly shared the beliefs of his day concerning the destiny of man. But we must distinguish between Jesus' belief and his faith. He believed in the Devil; he had faith in God. His belief is passing away; his faith remains." (See closing portion of article "Divinity of man.")

Mr. Haynes and his school profess to hold up the personal character of Jesus as a model for humanity. But how can they distinguish the character from the belief and convictions upon which it is based? how separate the faith of Jesus from his doctrine? With them there has ever been a disregard of the doctrine of Christ, lacking which men are devoid of "the Father and the Son" (2 John, verse 9), hence the evolution of religious belief now presents itself as a radical departure from professed belief in the Bible to "rational" ethical standards. It is in fact but a mere formal acceptance of Jesus and of God in name, but not in fact; it cannot be successfully distinguished from the moral precepts of many Oriental systems of belief in ultimate "Good." It separates ethics from the ordinances and other requirements of the gospel; it enthrones human reason above the Creator and states that error is merely a principle without personification in personal agency behind it, hence that there can be no personality of evil—no Devil, no representative incarnation of error. With such accepted as a working theory, the transition to a similar extreme is to be anticipated, hence doubtless we shall have belief in good, but no necessity for God nor Christ, save that a good man as Christ once lived—a highly developed and evolved type of humanity, but only human after all. Such is the outlook for the assertion of "the divinity of humanity" of the modern schools, who already practically reject both Father and Son, and before whose eyes the faith of their fathers is dimmed and rapidly receding from view.

Above the confusion of Babylon God reigns and will not give his glory to another. The word which men reject presents to man the Christ, the representative of God, as Creator "in the beginning," life and light and Redeemer of man, and ultimate universal Ruler, the Alpha and Omega, and to whom every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God the Father, who is and must ever be "all in all," the Majesty on high, who presides in the midst of all things. The Apocalyptic Seer who in the vision of Patmos was permitted to see represented the finale of earth's drama clearly and vividly describes the scene where a great multitude which no man could number stood before the throne and rendered to God their adoration in the beautiful language of the word: "Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God forever and ever. Amen." It is the conservation and advocacy of this great truth—the Fatherhood of God in fact, the divinity of Christ, and necessity for strict adherence to the revealed word and wisdom of God, which the great latter-day work stands to represent and maintain to the world.

COMPENSATION.

One of the consolations of our common and troubled life is this; that whatever laws may have been enacted for the government and the good of man to be realized here or hereafter, there is one that has never been repealed, abrogated, set aside, or forgotten—the law of compensation, that sure enactment of God recognized by the Apostle in the pithy saying, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The truth, the gospel as the angel recommitted it and as the elders called of Christ Jesus to bear it abroad have been openly declaring it, together with the sowers of the word, that truth, have been so persistently misrepresented and the efforts of the opposers have been so widespread and universal, that truth bearers have at times been fairly appalled at the narrowness of the field themselves occupy, their feebleness and the limited influence they seemed to exercise in presenting and defending the great cause intrusted to their watch-care. But, of late, through the fortuitous circumstances by which the affairs of humanity seem to be shaped to a greater or lesser degree, a wider field of defense is opening before the banner bearers, and thank God, in nearly every place where the head of evil and misrepresentation is raised, there is a "man called of God" whose voice and pen are used effectively to meet the calumny of enemies and the false statements of those separated from the truth.

Bro. F. G. Pitt gets a showing in the press, and shows the faith.

Bro. A. N. Bishop, himself a veteran lately from Wales, but now resident at Scranton, Pennsylvania, gets a fair representation in the Scranton Tribune, for the 14th and 15th of March, including a resolution on the seating of Mr. Roberts, of Utah. Bro. P. P. Stark, is out in a capital defense of the faith in the Evening Leader, Manchester and Richmond, Virginia, for March 3.

All along the line the brethren are alive to the situation, and it really seems that there is hardly a place where an attack is made but what the Lord has a soldier on guard.

May they steadily increase in number and spiritual life and growth.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. T. A. Hougas, Superintendent of the General Sunday School Association, visited Lamoni of late in the interests of his department of church work. Like other ministers in the field he finds much to do in the wide field of work open and constantly extending before the workers—the earnest, devoted helpers of the cause. He reports the outlook as encouraging, bright with promise in proportion as opportunities to do good are sought and improved upon. This is the experience of every man and woman in the church; so many opportunities of doing good and receiving good are all about us that no one need despond; nor should any cease to make earnest endeavor to do his best. Within, above, and all around us is life; we have but to live and labor as God would have us do to enter into life "more abundantly." The child of God is an heir of life and peace. We should and must possess life now, if indeed in Christ. Let us not forget that "it is written," "If any man [or woman] have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his;" that "to be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." If indeed in Christ, retaining our relationship unto him, we have already "passed from death unto life," and are living in life by the power of the indwelling, renewing Spirit of truth. Death is cessation of activity; life is a manifestation of it. Let us be alive in Christ.

We suppose that a discussion is raging at Barnard, Missouri, between Bro. I. N. White and his old antagonist, T. H. Popplewell, of the Christian Church. It was to begin the 16th, so wrote Bro. Gowell to Bro. Criley.

"Mormons fight shy; decline to engage in a controversy with Rev. H. O. Smith," etc., is the heading of an excellent article in the St. Joseph, Missouri, Herald, of March 23. The writer describes the public interest manifested in Bro. Smith's efforts to induce some Utah elders to meet the issue, which they declined. It so clearly states the main features of points at issue between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church that it will do much to enlighten the public mind. Bro. Hitchcock reports seventeen baptized at the St. Louis district conference of our people, and that the Utah elders have abandoned their mission hall there. Indications point seemingly to an early surrender of the whole field by that body. If they decline to meet the issue the weakness and error of their position will be made manifest; if they do face it, the truth will grind their errors to powder. It is a case of "between the upper and nether millstone."

Bro. Nicholas Stamm writes from Runnells, Iowa, commending the brethren who go down into the mines as among the disciples who have fed and clothed and helped him in other ways in his labors. Bro. Morgan seems to have presented sufficient upon the point, hence we omit further reference.

Bro. W. O. Lynch, St. Thomas, Ontario, writes in good spirit of his love for the cause. He is quite deaf, hence unable to hear well, but derives profit and pleasure from reading the HERALD and church books. He asks prayer for improvement in his hearing.

The mission address of Bro. G. T. Griffiths is, No. 3010 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, California, care C. A. Parkin.

Nearly all of Japan's liberal and progressive statesmen have been under Christian influence, and a number of them have been pupils of the missionaries, "it is said."

"Until the coming of the Son of Man there shall be foolish virgins among the wise." FAMILY GOVERNMENT—CONTINUED.

The next requisite to fit you to rule well your household, is to retain the absolute respect of your children. We say "retain" advisedly, for you have it in the beginning. In their infancy and early childhood, you are to your children as the very voice of God. Developing years, while they bring to them truer ideas of your mutual relations, ought not to decrease this respect, and will not if it rests on the right foundation. This foundation is not your infallibility; if thus based it will and ought to fall. You will make mistakes; you will sometimes do wrong; and the children will know it. Do not ignore the fact, nor seek to deceive them; tell them manfully, "I was wrong; I am sorry;" and if you have been unjust to them, "forgive me." They will respect you more for such a course than they could if you should gloss it over, and even, by sophistry, succeed in convincing them that you were in the right. If you should thus convince them, you would do them an injury in blunting their moral sense by confounding right and wrong. Win and hold their respect by being always thoroughly honest, truthful, and just. "Whatever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report—think on these things," and practice them. Thus will you win and hold the thorough respect of your household.

The third essential in good family government is prompt, unquestioning obedience on the part of children. Expect this, and have it at whatever cost. It follows logically the previous step; if you control yourself and enjoy the thorough respect of your children, they will obey you. EXPECT THIS. We cannot too strongly emphasize this point. If in your heart lurks a doubt as to whether your children will obey, be sure they will not obey. Your uncertainty makes itself felt through your looks, your tones. Your command will be given with the rising inflection of a question, instead of with the falling inflection of certainty, and the children will not be slow to take advantage of the "benefit of the doubt."

Never give a command in a harsh, dictatorial tone; it arouses opposition and tends to defeat itself. Speak quietly, pleasantly, courteously, but with no shadow of uncertainty in your tone. Never give a command that you do not intend to have obeyed; then make very sure your intention is carried out. This necessitates the greatest care in giving commands. Just here is a weak point with many of us; we issue too many orders and are too careless as to their execution. Let your commands be just as few as possible, and let these few not be given without considering their possible consequences.

We are all familiar with the story of the fussy mother who, on leaving her children in the kitchen with a pan of dry beans within reach of their fingers, charged them, for the life of them, not to put beans up their nostrils. On returning she was horrified to find all six pug noses stuffed full of the rapidly swelling legumes. The children had never thought of this possible use of beans till their mother's command put it into their heads. We laugh at the story, but there is a deal of wisdom to be learned from it in regard to unnecessary commands. You can often forestall the need of them, as that mother might have done by putting the beans out of reach and saying nothing about them.

Make the Golden Rule the supreme law of your little domain, training the children from infancy to make it the test of their conduct, and it will obviate the necessity of many other rules. It is astonishing—nay, rather, it is proof of its divine origin—that it fits so perfectly into all the exigencies of life, as to render unnecessary the thousand and one special precepts which, without it, must be given to fit every special case.

In the fourth place, endeavor to develop and strengthen the good there is in your child, and repress the evil. One way of doing this is by showing appreciation of the good and abhorrence of the evil. The most mischievous child does many more good things in the course of the day than he does bad things. Notice these good actions, and show him that you do notice them. Love of approbation is strong within him; use it to call out his better nature; God gave it for this very purpose. When he does wrong, show your disapprobation just as plainly, but no more so. Make him feel that this disapprobation comes because the thing is wrong, not because it incommodes you.

Take your child's part in his conflicts with his evil nature. We all have such conflicts; help him in his struggles with wrong by making him feel that you are on his side against the wrong. Helen Hunt Jackson gives an instance so fully illustrating this point, as well as several others in family government, that we give it almost entire. A little friend of hers had once a hard contest over so simple a thing as saying "G;" the contest was with himself and his mother was the faithful Great Heart who helped him through it:—

"Willy was about four years old. He had a large, active brain, sensitive temperament, and indomitable spirit. He was and is an uncommon child. Common methods of what is commonly supposed to be "discipline" would, if he had survived them, have made a very bad boy of him. He had great difficulty in pronouncing the letter G,—so much that he had formed almost a habit of omitting it. One day his mother said, not dreaming of any special contest, "This time you must say G." "It is an ugly old letter, and I ain't ever going to try to say it again," said Willy, repeating the alphabet very rapidly from beginning to end, without the G. Like a wise mother, she did not open at once on a struggle; but said, pleasantly, "Ah! you did not get it in that time. Try again; go more slowly, and we will have it." It was all in vain; and it soon began to look more like real obstinacy on Willy's part than anything she had ever seen in him. She has often told me how she hesitated before entering on the campaign. "I always knew," she said, "that Willy's first real fight with himself would be no matter of a few hours; and it was a particularly inconvenient time for me, just then, to give up a day to it. But it seemed, on the whole, best not to put it off."

So she said, "Now, Willy, you can't get along without the letter G. The longer you put off saying it, the harder it will be for you to say it at last; and we will have it settled, now, once for all. You are never going to let a little bit of a letter like that be stronger than Willy. We will not go out of this room till you have said it."

Unfortunately, Willy's will had already taken its stand. However, the mother made no authoritative demand that he should pronounce the letter as a matter of obedience to her. Because it was a thing intrinsically necessary for him to do, she would see, at any cost to herself or to him, that he did it; but he must do it voluntarily, and she would wait till he did.

The morning wore on. She busied herself with other matters, and left Willy to himself; now and then asking, with a smile, "Well, isn't my little boy stronger than that ugly old letter yet?"

Willy was sulky. He understood in that early stage all that was involved. Dinner time came.

"Aren't you going to dinner, Mamma?"

"Oh! no, dear; not unless you say G, so that you can go too. Mamma will stay by her little boy until he is out of this trouble."

The dinner was brought up, and they ate it together. She was cheerful and kind, but so serious that he felt the constant pressure of her pain.

The afternoon dragged slowly on to night. Willy cried now and then, and she took him in her lap, and said, "Dear, you will be happy as soon as you say that letter, and Mamma will be happy too, and we can't either of us be happy until you do."

"Oh, Mamma! why don't you make me say it?"

(This he said several times before the affair was over.)

"Because, dear, you must make yourself say it. I am helping you make yourself say it, for I shall not let you go out of this room, nor go out myself, till you do say it; but that is all I shall do to help you. I am listening, listening all the time, and if you say it, in ever so little a whisper, I shall hear you. That is all Mamma can do for you."

Bedtime came. Willy went to bed, un-kissed and sad. The next morning, when Willy's mother opened her eyes, she saw Willy sitting up in his crib, and looking at her steadfastly. As soon as he saw that she was awake, he exclaimed, "Mamma, I can't say it; and you know I can't say it. You're a naughty mamma, and you don't love me."

Her heart sank within her; but she patiently went again and again over yesterday's ground. Willy cried. He ate very little breakfast.

He stood at the window in a listless attitude of discouraged misery, which she said cut her to the heart. Once in awhile he would ask for some plaything which he did not usually have. She gave him whatever he asked for; but he could not play. She kept up an appearance of being busy with her sewing, but she was far more unhappy than Willy.

Dinner was brought up to them. Willy said, "Mamma, this ain't a bit good dinner."

She replied, "Yes it is, darling; just as good as we ever have. It is only because we are eating it alone. And poor Papa is sad, too, taking his all alone downstairs."

At this Willy burst out into an hysterical fit of crying and sobbing.

"I shall never see my papa again in this world."

Then his mother broke down, too, and cried as hard as he did; but she said, "Oh! yes, you will, dear. I think you will say that letter before tea time, and we will have a nice evening downstairs together."

"I can't say it. I try all the time, and I can't say it; and, if you keep me here till I die, I shan't ever say it."—Childhood: its Care and Culture.

HOW TO KEEP THE YOUNG MAN IN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The primal or initiatory proceedings by which the lepus cumiculus is made palatable, receives in common physiological phraseology the appellation prehensive. So in reply to the query, "How to keep the young man in Sunday school?" the first difficulty that presents itself is to get him there. When God breathed into man the breath of life there came with that life-endowing principle or natural instinct to love and worship its Creator. Untampered by evil environments, this love for the unknown Creator, this tendency to worship the great "I am" would ripen into knowledge, and knowing God as he is, he would take us unto himself. But 'tis no virtue to live a sinless life in a sinless world. As well were it if man were never made of a dual nature but left to praise God in the spirit world.

Environed as we are on all sides by evil and its influences, our proclivities for good are soon educated by the doer of all evil to become our continual menace and then it is a ceaseless warfare for any man to attempt the right.

Some one has said that every act of the soul leaves as its enduring result a tendency to do the same act again in the same way. If this be true, how important the child's first acts be guided into channels of right conduct. No wonder Peter received twice the injunction, "Feed my lambs" to one of "Feed my sheep." The great Teacher knew the truthfulness of the maxim, "As the twig is bent, the tree is inclined." He knew how much depends upon the nurture received the first few years by the tender moral plant which is to have its ethical emotions cultivated till it becomes a living character, choosing good because it is good, shunning evil because it is evil, not because it is commanded.

Does anyone ask, "What has the parent to do with keeping the young man in Sunday school?" Perhaps all. How many parents realize that they are in a great measure responsible for their children's attendance or absence at Sunday school. No one is old enough to graduate from Sunday school. There will be but one Commencement Day in that school, and that will be when we are ushered into that higher life to begin a new school under the tutorship of the gentle Christ.

If the parents tire of the Sunday school, can the young be censured for like actions? We are children with gray hair and wrinkled visages unless we have formed a character that acts always from high ethical motives. The beautiful story will never all be learned. In the Sunday school should be found hoary heads and forms bent with age, yet with faces beaming with that Christ-love and voices low and sweet telling in trembling accents the story of his wondrous love. Such conditions would ever serve as incentives and an inspiration to the young.

In seeking the solution of the problem in question many plans were suggested. Some suggested that nothing short of good glue would bring the desired results. Others would try ropes. Again, a few would try again the Blue Laws of Colonial times, which compelled attendance at all forms of worship.

One very pretty little girl suggested a row of beautiful young women on the front seat as an inducement. Laying all levity aside, if the young women of this church would insist that no young man should be granted her company until he had acquired sufficient moral development that he loved to attend Sunday school and all church worship, their influence would soon be felt as a power for good in the church. Much depends upon the inducements which bring the young men to Sunday school. Make few promises as to the great blessings he will receive—disappointment is bitter. It sows the seeds of skepticism. Do not promise that he is sure to receive an outpouring of the Spirit and that his soul will be made happy. Whatever is promised be sure it is realized. Make an appeal to his sense of judgment and his reason. There is a time in the life of every individual when the soul longs and thirsts for ethical and religious instruction. This moment should be looked for by teacher and parent and made the occasion of the person's introduction to the Sunday school.

Important, and above all else as a means of keeping the young man in Sunday school, is the living teacher.

It is not the province of this brief treatise to expatiate upon all the necessary qualifications of a successful teacher.

There are few teachers in the world—many instructors.

The real teacher knows the true end, not only of every lesson, but of all instruction. Combined with this knowledge of the true end he understands the most efficient means of securing this result.

How little inducement is there to a young man to attend Sunday school, when he knows just the manner and form in which every question is to be asked and answered; where there is no time for originality, but set questions are hurried over as though life and death depended upon asking and answering all before the hour had elapsed, even though all had learned them as well as a little boy learns his spelling lesson or multiplication table.

The teacher should understand, to some extent at least, the order of physical development. Let him avoid sermonizing and dry talks on unimportant items of heraldry. Better teach living examples of right conduct, teaching that a virtuous life is the happiest and best, though there be no hereafter.

Make the pupils feel at home. If they can sing, interest them in music. If sketching or drawing be their talent, let them prepare board work for the class. Should some be of a literary mind induce them to prepare class work from books of travel, and lives of great characters, teacher and pupils being thus mutually interested but few will desire to absent themselves. One other thought: it is prayer. The future of the church among us depends upon the young. The Sunday school is the offspring of the church. It has been commanded that the lambs shall be brought into the fold and fed. Being the Lord's work, how earnestly devoted should be the parent, teacher, and pupil. Prayer should be continually rising as sweet incense before the Lord. Duty and pleasure being thus performed no fear need be entertained as to the future. That can be safely intrusted in the hands of Him who loveth us and knoweth all things from the beginning.

USES OF THE QUARTERLY IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Quarterly, what is it? It is a text book and help in the Sunday school work. As a text book it should always be thoroughly studied and particular attention given to every part. And as it is also a help, do not fail to take note of all the hints and suggestions in the part known as the Home Readings.

That brings the thought that the pupils must not lay aside their Quarterlies from one Sunday until the next and then expect to gain all there is in the lesson; for in order to be properly prepared with the lesson it is necessary that the Quarterly be used both in the class and at home; but especially at home, for you can more easily dispense with the Quarterly in the class if the scholar has studied the lesson.

In preparing a lesson from the Quarterly the central thought should be the subject studied; how it bears upon the persons or thing named. After getting this in your mind, take into consideration and learn the principal points, such as the places named and the things said or done, and what was their effect in the matter studied. After that, bring up all the minor details you can that will lead up to the subject named.

Outside of the Quarterly and as a basis for the lessons the text book should be the Bible and it should be a guide or settler of all points of wonder or doubt, and should be freely used in the class in connection with the outlined lesson.

In connection with what has already been named there are other helps the teacher and scholar often need in the preparation of the lesson; and those are the other standard works of the church. The question was asked, "What other helps does the teacher need in the class?" After a little thought I am led to answer it as follows. A help and one of no little import for a teacher is the scholar's preparation of the lesson. Therefore I would urge all the larger ones in the Sunday school to study their lessons as much as they can through the week so they will be familiar with them when Sunday morning comes and the class is called.

A VOICE FROM MISSOURI.

Were half the power that fills the world with terror,
Were half the wealth bestowed on camps and courts
Given to redeem the human mind from error,
There were no need of arsenals or forts.

Our physical conditions we seldom have wisdom enough to change if we would, and when faith fails us, we learn to be patient. The spiritual state of mind we so much desire seems to depend very much on the grace received from heaven for its degrees from sweet restfulness to sublime ecstasy; but though we may try to walk along very serenely, it is the immoral atmosphere that may surround us which often embitters life and renders it a very difficult thing for even the most saintly to exercise that gift of gifts—charity.

For instance: a brother's horse we see hitched near the church door during the Sunday services, and standing, without food the greater part of the day in summer, and minus a blanket in winter, with the mercury 25° below zero, and exposed to the cold blasts which whistle through the streets at the rate of seventy-five knots an hour; then, grate upon our ears, in the rush of the business days of the week, the harsh sounds (that issue from the miry alley) of some one's cruel club which is being unmercifully applied by another brother to his faithful beast already prostrate from his masterly belaboring; and then again, the scarlet colors the cheek and the kindly word is choked from utterance when there is the needless exposure, at a branch business meeting, of the first falling away from grace of some brother or sister, tender in mind as well as in years; these are some of the things that should elicit on the one hand pity and charity, and on the other, wisdom to deal justly.

The one is "cruelty to animals," the other is honored with a high-sounding name; but its victim goes out from among us lean of spirit and wan-looking because of the need of the lacteal sustenance of human kindness, which is sometimes justice tempered with mercy. But only the sad complaint of one is this; what of that of the many?

In the dark and cloudy day, Missouri's sorrowful refrain was heard, and even now Justice laments her wrongs, and many of her people blinded by priestcraft and tradition are groping in darkness. The robber and the slayer still go free, and in the very heart of Zion the truth is rejected which apostles and prophets declared would lead God's erring children to safety and happiness.

The footsteps of crime may approach our doors; yet even this concerns us less seriously than the teaching of false and erroneous doctrines; and we need not go far out of our way to hear them.

Should the intruder enter our peaceful fire-side, he may escape the law's vigilance, and by some means go on his way again. A man, called "husband," enraged with jealousy, pursues into the public street his wife, fleeing from his blows, and with deadly weapon in hand threatens to take her life and that of her offspring unless she will go back to their "home" where often the sacred pledge of love and protection had been broken. At such a sight as this our hearts well nigh stop beating, and a righteous indignation makes us to ask that justice be meted to the offender. To the offended, in the words of the Savior, perhaps we might say, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul;" for it is the spiritual slayer we need to fear most. So common is the occurrence of crime, we may as well compose ourselves and try to be interested in what is going on within doors, and mostly under the steeples where, it may be, honest truthseekers assemble and more interesting topics are discussed.

As we enter the place of conference, we hear the "reverend's" voice. His eloquence touches the heart and inspires the mind, as he portrays the beauty of old earth's fauna and flora, the sublimity of the starry firmament and the munificence of the Creator, so all-mindful of his noblest creature, man. At the close, we imagined his repeating the words of Paul: "Do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." And what must have been the reply?

Another exhorts with zeal his brethren to prepare well their sermons, to study the Greek and Hebrew, to examine each word, sentence, paragraph, and chapter, and their relations to each other, because to preach the gospel is all-important and requires "expository preaching." Upon this kind and manner of preaching great stress is laid.

In the minds of some of his hearers this thought infuses new life, the preaching of the gospel assumes new beauty, and great light dawns upon them like a flame of inspiration just now sent down.

"Learned philologists, who chase
A panting syllable through time and space,
Start it at home, and hunt it in the dark
To Gaul, to Greece, and into Noah's ark."

Their research; how critical, precise, and scholarly! And yet, one cannot but commend it, for it is written that the brethren of Berea were "more noble" than some others because they were apt to learn and "searched the Scriptures daily."

As we listen, the thought comes, "They speak with wisdom, grace, and eloquence; they attract hundreds by their personality;" and then we hear, as from far away, by a saintly voice: "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called!"

"A brother bishop from the West asked the venerable Connecticut diocesan: 'Bishop, will you tell me what you consider the best bit of work you have done in Connecticut during your long episcopate there?' The bishop replied: 'Well, perhaps the best work I did for the diocese, and for the church as well, was to keep a number of men out of the ministry.'"

With all their study, critical delving, and word connecting, they but blindly seek and never find; for we hear the Prophet Amos say to them as he said to the "famished" and "thirsty" ones,

"They shall . . . seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it." These divines say to the young men present, "You need not wait to be ordained, to have the hands laid on you by a presbyter; go forth, and preach the gospel unmixed with science and politics if you feel that you are called!" And looking up as though listening to the apostle's impressive words, they repeat, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!"

It is said that when Lady Townsend was asked if Whitefield had recanted, she replied: "No, he has only canted." Their fluent quoting of the words of St. Paul causes us to inquire, though silently, "Why not examine carefully, critically, the words written by him in the fifth chapter and fourth verse of his letter to the Hebrews?" And echo answers, "Why not?"

Their application of the idea of word, sentence, and chapter relations reminds us of a kind of reasoning indulged in by another class of religionists who say, "As it is lawful that the man 'shall have one wife,' he should have one at least, and could have two or more;" and as to "the mountain of the Lord's house," the words "concerning Judah and Jerusalem" are not to be so critically considered. To the Galatians the apostle wrote about another gospel, a perversion of the gospel of Christ; and, amid all the various doctrines and teachers of these latter days, the great Teacher has spoken with trumpet voice and declared that this proclamation "shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples whom I have chosen in these last days, and they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them," "that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed," etc.

During the thirties the attitude of Justice in Missouri was most hopeless, for mobbing the saints was punished with a fine "just enough to answer the law." Persecution and false rumor with her ten thousand tongues were then rife, and the unpitied people of God were said to be "like Noah's dove, without even a resting place for their feet." It was in Missouri that abolition was said to have reared its "deformed and haggard visage" and lawabiding and inoffensive citizens were forced to leave their homes and lands.

But the clouds begin to disappear, and as the printed word is being sent forth and our elders go forth to preach the everlasting gospel, the result must be that many of the honest in heart will embrace the truth and be brought into "the kingdom."

These are "able ministers," as St. Paul calls such, "not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

As in ancient Corinth the apostle uttered the unimpassioned words of confidence in God, so the saints here can say, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair;" for, as Lincoln said, "We know the Lord is always on the side of the right. May the day soon dawn when shall be fulfilled what the prophet of old said: 'The Lord hath broken the staff of the wicked. . . . The whole earth is at rest, and is quiet: they break forth into singing.'"

"The world is young,
And God is good; and truth, victorious;
And right and love and virtue stir us yet;
And Christ is living and we follow him.
See, brother, see, the night is on the wane,
And all the hills are blossoming with morn."

Your humble sister,

WHO LIVES THERE.

INDEPENDENCE, March 15, 1899.

WILBURTON, I. T., March 17.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me well, and will say to Bro. E. B. Morgan, I am back again to Wilburton, Indian Territory to preach, not only to saints, but coal miners, if I can get them out. Hope to have a few of them out anyway. Glad to see Bro. E. B. Morgan's nice defense of the toiling coal miner. But, ah! Bro. Morgan don't know them down here like I do. However, I am willing to surrender the question at present.

We had a very fine conference at Cove, Arkansas; much and lasting good was accomplished. After conference, by request of J. W. Jackson, I went down to Euclid, Arkansas, where I received forty lashes save five some few years ago. O, how things had changed! the mob that whipped me all gone, the most of them dead and quite likely serving out a term in the prison house. "Offenses" "must" "come," "but woe to him by whom they come."—Christ.

I had a full house to hear me and splendid attention and behavior. Bro. J. W. Jackson lives here and quite a number of saints. Bro. Jackson has been around home much of his time this winter, repairing his house and taking care of family. I hope he will push out now and get the gospel before the people of Arkansas, and not fish too much in the little river near his home.

Bro. Ellis Short and the writer have just closed a very fine meeting at Cove, Arkansas, seventeen baptisms since conference. Bro. Ellis Short is the iron wheel of this work in the southwestern mission, financier, preacher, and baptizing some also. God blesses him remarkably because he does his duty. Why don't all Latter Day Saints live the gospel like Bro. Short and be truly a blessed people?

I will go from here to Texas for about seven weeks, and back to Cove the second Sunday in May. Love and peace to all.

In bonds,

LONE ROCK, Ore., March 19.

Editors Herald:—I find in the Herald much of great worth to all lovers of truth. I wish to give voice to the sentiments of many saints in this part. In a recent issue of the Herald appeared an able article from Bro. G. H. Hilliard, "The Gathering;" and I cannot call to mind the time when any theme seemed to reach me with such force as that; for just a few days before I saw it I was reading the revelation given in 1873, paragraph 11, which says: "Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me." The thought then came to me, Here is a revelation given to us of the Reorganization twenty-six years ago, and what has been done towards obeying it? When have the elders counseled the saints concerning the matter, for it says, "Let . . . the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter." Guide who? Why, the saints who are scattered over the world, among whom the elders are called to minister; and since the aforesaid article has appeared many come to your writer and ask, "How are we going to do this? How can we all go to Zion or the regions round about? Gladly would we obey if we knew how to proceed to rightly fulfill the commandment."

I find in Doctrine and Covenants 102:7-9, "Let my people who dwell in the regions round about, be very faithful, and prayerful, and humble before me. . . . Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but [notice] carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people: and, behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, Execute judgment and justice for us according to law [What a grand thought, that according to law the saints will receive justice, for what?] and redress us of our wrongs." Who have been wronged? Look back, saints, upon the history of the church, into Missouri, when many thousands were driven from their homes, their lands and goods wrongfully taken from them, their wives and little ones cruelly slaughtered. Can you not see where justice and judgment could, and God says will be, meted out?

In paragraph 8 the Lord says that when all the lands in Jackson County and the regions round about have been purchased that can be purchased, and the saints possess them, "I will hold the armies of Israel guiltless in taking possession of their own lands, which they have previously purchased." What lands are these which they have previously purchased? Those possessed in the dark and troublous days.

But notice further: "And of throwing down the towers of mine enemies, that may be upon them, and scattering their watchmen." But bear in mind this must be done according to law.

Methinks I see in this our beloved Temple Lot returned to its rightful owners by law; but before that the saints must be obedient to God's commands. I will close by asking that all true saints keep this matter before one another until our whole body sees fit to take much needed action; that we cease to be dilatory longer, but be up and doing, ever ready and willing to obey our Father's commands, that when he shall send his Son again to earth we may be found ready to meet him in peace.

Your brother,
W. A. GOODWIN.

BROCKTON, Mass., March 20.

Editors Herald.—This has been so far, in many respects, to me an eventful year. Changes unexpected and sudden have turned me perforce from lines marked out and plans forecast, and the truth of the proverb, "It is the unexpected that always happens," seems to have been verified.

"We know not what may befall us,
God hangs a mist o'er our eyes;"

And we have to trust the providence and wisdom that plans, without notice almost, the overthrow of our appointments and our will.

On February 4, as you have known, I was summoned to Ohio from Providence by telegram, on account of the death of my only sister. Matters connected with her decease detained me until or about the time of holding the district conference at Kirtland, and am now glad that I remained and was able to meet saints and former friends of the Kirtland and Pittsburg districts again.

The conference and representation was a good one, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, and was ably and satisfactorily conducted by the presidents of mission and district, Brn. W. H. Kelley and Francis Ebeling. The Lord seemed to be with us all the while, trying to help us along in legitimate work relating to affairs in his kingdom, and we believe that a unity of sentiment prevailed that means good to that district and to the work generally, wherever the church representatives who were present may be called to labor in the interest of gospel work.

After conference we were called, in company with Bishop Hilliard, Brn. Etzenhouser, Parsons, and Ebeling to turn out in one of the worst snowstorms of the season, to go to Akron, Ohio, in the interests of law and good order. Our associations with the brethren named, Brn. W. H. Kelley and others, notwithstanding disagreeable weather and unpleasant duties to be discharged, were of a genial and satisfactory, and we believe profitable character.

Leaving Kirtland Friday morning, March 10, for Buffalo and Providence, we arrived the following day, Saturday, at noon, finding family in fair health, and Bro. Luff though poor in health, in good cheer over the success which had attended his efforts with others in lifting the church debt in Providence. The manifest approval in many regards, and spiritual direction attending the sacrifice which has made this release from worldly obligation possible and given us, as we trust, a church home free from moral compromise or transfer of obligation, has proved, certainly in many individual cases, what faith and works united may accomplish.

Last Saturday we came to this place to look after our church interests. Exceedingly bad and stormy weather undoubtedly kept some, indifference and carelessness many others, away from meetings yesterday. A few interested strangers, however, out last evening, and we trust some good done. Meeting again to-night and as long as wisdom and circumstances warrant an effort to reclaim the careless or reach the stranger to our faith.

The standard set by the Christ life seems so far above the ordinary human ambition that we may not wonder so much perhaps at the little procession of weary and worn stragglers that in such places as these are trying to keep up with the flag and the demand of our faith and contention in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation of cranks, humbugs, deceivers and being deceived, that swarm in the highways and challenge the attention always and constantly, and especially in the great cities of the East, of the ignorant and the uninformed. And if the church we are called and commissioned to represent have any idea that the novice, the inexperienced, men who do not know not only men and women, but devils disguised in human form, are the men to whom can be safely trusted our interests as a church, they are making a most serious mistake.

We are told in the Book of Commandments to the church that light cleaveth to light, intelligence to intelligence. The bare assumption is not enough; its truths must be demonstrated by rational appeal, and argument drawn from scripture, and human reason, and analogous historical data in its applications to men's lives and current events, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

"How can they preach except they be sent?" Ah indeed! how can they?

"Feed my sheep," "my lambs." It was the Master's injunction, apostolic advice long ago, "Feed the flock of God over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers." That misinterpretation of the law which counsels the pushing out and leaving congregations and churches, especially in large cities and branches, without pastors or intelligent and spiritually-minded, capable overseers, to the tender mercies of the ignorant or unlawfully ambitious, to cranks and devils in disguise, is and has been proved to be to the observant in my opinion both foolish and disastrous to our permanent interests, and a defect which must be remedied before we shall be able to stand before the world in a proper light and in an adequate and just as well as profitable representation.

The pioneer, and the protective and educational forces of the church should be so arranged and distributed as that on the one hand, the world may be warned, intelligently warned, while on the other we may not undertake to cover so much territory as shall leave the forts and stations already captured and their inmates to the tender mercies of our common enemy whose most effective and successful work against us has not been in the past confined to the open and new fields of operation.

If this is the kingdom of God in very truth, then must its superior order, discipline, and citizenship be made to appear, or our claims must to the world and to ourselves remain undemonstrated.

M. H. BOND.

SHERBURNVILLE, Ill., March 20.

Editors Herald.—Owing to failing health of some of my family I wish to change climate. Physicians advise us to go to Texas. I would like to communicate with some of the saints in Texas.

We are the only family of saints living in this county—Kankakee, Illinois. Brn. Moler and Keck held a meeting here last fall; one man obeyed, but has through the persecution of his wife and children fallen away.

I hope some good brother or sister will write to me.

Faithfully, your brother,
ERWIN DICKEY.

DELOIT, Iowa, March 21.

Editors Herald.—We are pleased to note that one of our missionaries in charge, Elder Heman C. Smith, has been doing some good work in the Galland's Grove district for the past eight or ten days. He is a welcome visitor and an able instructor. We, the writer and many others, are sorry he could not remain with us longer, but it is quite evident that what we lose by his departure others will gain. The writer had the pleasure of listening to Bro. Smith preach four discourses while at Dow City, Iowa, which were timely, encouraging, and elevating. He is a true soldier for Christ.

Our district conference held at Dow City on the 25th and 26th, while not largely attended, was a pleasant and profitable session, as the good Spirit was present with us. Resolutions protesting against the seating of B. H. Roberts, copied very largely from those adopted by the Decatur district, were passed and published in quite a number of newspapers, and copies sent to three representatives by order of the conference. If our action in this matter should have but little weight in National Congress, we are sure it will materially help us in our field of labor, as in this way many people read the resolutions adopted, and are thus made aware that we do not indorse polygamy.

This has been a hard winter for missionary labor on account of the excessive cold weather, and bad condition of the roads, and much sickness among the people. However, we feel that our missionaries have done all they could, and local men have done well. Associate President of the District Elder J. M. Baker and others have done good work, which is appreciated by all. Our Bishop's agent, Elder C. J. Hunt, is always busy and is doing a good work as agent, also as a missionary. Last but not least our experienced and honored missionaries, Elders Charles Derry and George Montague, have done us much good, notwithstanding ill health has prevented them from doing as much as they desired to do. However, a little work done at the right time and in a masterly manner often accomplishes much good.

Our district never made so great an effort financially as it is making now, which we are pleased to note, and hope the good work will continue. Spiritually it is doing fairly well, though it might improve its condition. More labor performed by branch officers would result in much good to the work. Brethren, will you kindly take hold and help visit and encourage each and every member of your respective branches?

Missionaries and district officers will try to visit, encourage, and help scattered members. If any need special help, please make your wants known by writing to C. E. Butterworth or J. M. Baker, Dow City, Iowa, and they will do all in their power to help the work along. By a united, wise, and persistent effort we may, with the help of God, be enabled to accomplish much good. Every saint should be alive in the work and a living example to a dying world. Pure thoughts, wise and good words, industry, honesty, and proper deportment beget confidence; and confidence begotten and retained gives us true fellowship and enables us to work together in unison and love for the salvation of souls and to the development and growth of the church, and the glory of God.

The pleasures of this world are not to be compared with the peace, joy, and spiritual feast found by the meek and humble soul who is truly in Christ. A conscience void of offense toward God and man brings to the soul a joy and satisfaction and divine rest beyond the power of the world to give. Why not reach out heavenward and eat of the spiritual food and drink of the fountain of life while they are still within our reach, while we rejoice and learn what it is to "sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus"?

It is good to know that every position occupied by the true disciple is an honored and holy position. It is not the office we hold that makes us profitable to the church, but the way in which we discharge the duties imposed. It is not the profession we make nor the office we hold that brings us into favor with God and secures to us the light, joy, assistance, and power of the Holy Ghost; but the purity of the soul, the faith exercised, the prayers offered, and the duties performed. Let us take courage and press forward, for it is written: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." In bonds,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 15.

Editors Herald:—Seventeen baptisms and one of the best spiritual conferences that we have ever had, last Saturday and Sunday, is perhaps a better index than a long explanation would be to the present status of the work in this part of the vineyard. The interest manifested by our people here is commendable and certainly very encouraging. As true Latter Day Saintism is scaling the heights way above par, Utahism seems to be at a very low ebb. After several years of persistent labor on the part of from three to a dozen elders, they have closed their doors and taken in their sign. Understand indirectly they have another place to hold meeting on Sunday afternoon, but could see no sign at the latter place advertising such meetings. Thus about endeth an earnest struggle. In writing their epitaph would say, Zeal to be commended, judgment to be pitied.

Hustling John D. White, our present missionary, is doing a splendid work. If he don't hear the early birds sing it is not because he is not out looking after the interests of the work early enough. When seeing his earnest work and the successes following, how oft we think of, "Young men for war." Business is business, whether in affairs of life or affairs of church, and we believe should be so conducted; that is, the same amount of energy should be thrown into our gospel work as into our business (when we are working at it).

Was very much interested in the statement in recent Herald regarding work to be done by local brethren. I heartily agree that more should be done by them. It is altogether possible to us that sometimes much less is done by them than could be, through lack of wise leadership in mapping out the work. Again, only too often they are not respected in their office. Is it not true that we have given too little attention to the teacher? The priest's work, though the most pleasant of any in the church, we believe, has been neglected. True, circumstances must govern in this, more or less, as in other things; but living as we are in the time when the saints are being tried and the adversary seeking constantly for mastery, if there was ever a time when the priest and teacher should be active it is now.

That every organized branch should hold its priesthood meetings is, I think, now generally conceded. Would this not be a good place to counsel as to just how and what the priest should teach in the family? Unless the priest instructs along gospel duties, can we consider he is doing his duty when visiting a family? While the same instruction could not be given in its entirety in all cases, some of it could be, as far as they were in a condition to stand. Some will not heed, it is true, but the responsibility is placed where it should be and may bring forth fruit earlier than we think. Perhaps I am bordering too close to the ideal for our present surroundings, but we certainly can take steps along this line; in fact, such has been done with us, and with good results. Regular priesthood meetings have a tendency to more systematic work than was done before we held them. Have been holding them for several years; our work is there mapped out, conditions reported, etc.

We notice some are already talking reunion. We are talking reunion down here whenever it is warm enough, but when the thermometer was standing about twenty below, talk of camping out had such a "chilly" sound, we left our argument on the shelf. The weather is now warmer, which we consider sufficient apology for mention of the subject. Some have said we are having too many reunions—to have less and make them larger. In our judgment such argument is decidedly wrong. Every district where strong enough to support one, even though it be small, should have a reunion. It need not be of two or three weeks' duration, not by any means. If you can't support one for more than a week, commence with that. The only argument we have ever heard advanced against this is the question of expense and preachers.

Take for example, the Bluff Park reunion last year was advertised both far and wide as a "general reunion," or something of that nature. Attempts were made to draw from all quarters for its support, which was done, but with all this attendance was less than in some places where district reunions were held. If we hold reunions only for an outing, perhaps that might be alright; but our understanding is they are held for the good they do the saints and the good that may be done the world. This being the case, the more we concentrate our forces and draw from a number of States to one reunion the more we are shutting out the very ones who need the good we are seeking to do. Only those who have means at their disposal can in the first place afford to attend at all. The mother who is all the year shut within her narrow borders must look upon the reunion as one of the luxuries she must deny herself, which if we are to concentrate our efforts and have them hundreds of miles apart, is true.

Before going farther, the question of expense. To use figures that would be most familiar, last year a large delegation, perhaps twenty-five or thirty, went from Decatur district to Bluff Park. The railroad fare alone of that number would doubtless have paid the entire necessary expense of a reunion in Decatur district, and more. Had a reunion been held there, probably fifteen hundred people would have had the benefit of it, who as it was did not; no more money invested, no more time lost by the ministry, and fifteen hundred had the benefits of the reunion, instead of twenty-five or thirty. From St. Louis district some ten or twelve attended Bluff Park reunion last year. The railroad fare is about twelve dollars, round trip, enough money spent in traveling expenses to have run a reunion in our district, giving to those who could not afford to go so far and who really needed the benefits, a chance, the same time, no loss of money, no loss of ministerial work; perhaps a thousand have the benefits instead of ten or twelve.

Well, how about the preachers? It appears to us it would be better to try and get something that would solve the problem as to what on earth to do with fifteen or twenty good speakers at one reunion when only one can speak at a time. We would not claim or expect the many great bursts of oratory in every district reunion that would be expected at Bluff Park, but most every district has at least one missionary, he with one imported for the occasion, perhaps the one of the Twelve in charge, and the local ministry could certainly keep up the meetings with credit to all concerned. Why not? Is it worse than for two men to go out and keep up meetings in a tent all summer? The prayer meetings, so far as the saints are concerned, are among the best at reunions. The preaching should be good, of course, but why have a dozen good preachers waiting their turn when the world is famishing for the truth?

If I could say it so low no one would feel offended I might say something about large reunions having a tendency to make us think of dress-parade day, and—well, those who have been there know it is true—which goes one step farther toward shutting out the poorer. We have no special war to wage against the Bluff Park reunion, if they will make it strictly a district affair. If those from outside the district wish to attend, all well and good, but to agitate the matter for hundreds of miles around, advertise it as a General Reunion, and try to draw from our forces, is what we most decidedly object to. Most people only want to attend one reunion during the year; if they go to Bluff Park from any distance, they have invested about all the time and money they care to in reunions for one year, hence cannot give their home reunion their support. So far as the good that might be done the world, of course the argument is almost wholly in favor of the district reunion. The largest reunion that we can give is but a small affair in the eyes of the world, hence will only attract a certain class whether we have the attendance of three or forty preachers. If those who persist in holding large reunions only, have any good substantial argument in their favor, let us have it.

We have talked with those who have had considerable experience in these reunions and their argument is most positively in favor of district reunions. That it is much cheaper, is certain; that ten times as many of our people can attend, is likewise true; that ten times as many of the world can attend, will hold good; that there will be a smaller number of good speakers present, may be true also; but I don't believe there is one of our missionaries in fifty that wants to lay around some place for a week to ten days and not get a chance to speak more than once if at all.

Such certainly has not been the disposition of those I have had the pleasure of meeting.

It is not our intention to be arbitrary in this, our motive being the interest of the work all have at heart. We are to have a reunion in our district this year, and are anxious for its success. Every one that is drawn from our district to some general reunion weakens us just that much—retards the work in our district just that much. Will it build with the same weight some other place? That's the question.

Yours truly,
J. C. HITCHCOCK.

PORT ELGIN, Ont., March 20.

Editors Herald:—We are glad to inform you that the work of the Lord is onward here. I baptized three on January 22, and two yesterday, all well-to-do people. Many are investigating the restored gospel here, and we expect a goodly number to come into the fold ere long, as the sound of the gospel trumpet is wakening many from their long slumber. Hitherto they have been fed anæsthetics by their former teachers, in order to secure a goodly living and the mammon of unrighteousness. This place is situated on Lake Huron, in the county of Bruce, about one hundred and seventy miles north of my home—Delhi.

This has been the severest winter, the settlers say, for some years, which has hindered the progress of the work to some extent. I have been suffering quite a bit with my lungs. This climate is rather too severe for me in the winter months. We are anxiously looking for the final end when the gospel will reach all nations and the glorious victory be won.

Yours in gospel work,
S. TOMLINSON.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 6.

Editors Herald:—It is with joy and thankfulness to God that I write these few lines for his goodness to us as a branch; that he so kindly remembered us by sending his servant Bro. Luff; for we were laboring under a very heavy burden, and could not see our way out of it. When Bro. Luff saw our condition he set to work to get us out of it, and many of us thought it impossible to do so, for we owe over two thousand dollars for our chapel.

Bro. Luff went to work with faith and prayer to God to help him, and he visited the brethren and sisters, and some did not believe he would ever accomplish it, so they would not have their names put down to give anything. But Bro. Luff plead with them. One brother said he would not give a cent, and another that if he got the sum within twenty-five dollars he would give it; and this two thousand dollars had to be gotten within a month; so the brother thought it could not be done. So Bro. Luff went to God in prayer in behalf of the brethren, and the Lord made it known to him that he would get it, and on Sunday morning Bro. Luff said that he was going to the brother and get the twenty-five dollars, and he went and the brother had the bills in his hand for him, and the other brother forty-five dollars.

See how good the Lord is to those who trust in him. Bro. Luff has worked hard to free this branch and he will accomplish it. My prayer is that God will bless him in body and in spirit, and that his days may be long; for he has been and is a blessing to us in giving us good counsel. May God bless him and those near and dear to him, and all his servants everywhere.

Yours in the gospel,

DOWNES, O. T., March 20.

Editors Herald:—Prospects for a good work in Oklahoma, the coming year is favorable. Bro. C. R. Duncan and writer held a meeting in the Congregational church at Okarche, closing March 8; interest fair.

At the request of Bro. and Sr. Hiles, I came here the 11th and began in Silver Ridge schoolhouse. Attendance and interest have increased from the beginning; house filled to overflowing last night.

Question box has received queries on polygamy, prophetic mission of Joseph Smith, language contained on Book of Mormon plates, Sabbath question, immortality of the soul, mode of baptism, etc. A general interest is being manifest and a splendid feeling prevails.

We intended to close last night, but were requested to continue, and will do so, perhaps till over the 26th. Bro. R. W. Davis is expected the 23d.

Bro. C. R. Duncan has gone to "D" County.
In bonds,

KIRTLAND, Ohio, March 21.

Editors Herald:—I was privileged to attend the Wheeling, West Virginia, conference, March 11, 12. Although the number of visitors was not large, we had a very good conference. Business passed off nicely; not a discordant voice was heard. The same officers were elected to serve the ensuing term; provision was made for tent work, etc., etc.; prayer and testimony services were cheered by presence of the Holy Spirit to the comfort of all present. Preaching by Elders McDowell and Hilliard was forcible, plain, and instructive. If the counsel given will be cherished and lived up to, we shall surely occupy a higher plane and be better able to bear the heat and burden of the day.

Truly it requires a prayerful, careful, daily life to enable us to have that faith and confidence in God to claim the promises he has made to the faithful as our very own in times of perplexities and trials. How oft am I led to exclaim, "O for a faith that will not shrink!" Experience teaches me that this faith is attainable only by a consistent daily walk. When harassed by willful wrongdoing or careless neglect of duty, and a test comes to us, we have not confidence to plead the promise of the Father, but only ask for mercy, and that in faltering tones; and so many times the waters of adversity cover us for the time being, when had we lived according to the light given us, we might easily have outridden the storm and helped some other tempest-tossed soul.

If rightly borne each trial helps to refine the gold, to purify and rid us of the dross, to make us a purer people, a people whom Christ shall delight to own and bless. How often, alas, instead of our overcoming our trials, do they overcome us!

Now just a word to those who have kindly and persistently remembered me in their petitions before our heavenly Father. I feel grateful for the interest you have manifested in my behalf. I believe the Lord blessed me often through the prayers of his faithful ones. On the evening of February 1, 1899, I was especially blessed, and the evidence was given to me and to some of God's servants that I should be healed. Since that time I have been steadily improving; have been relieved of all pain and nervousness and am gaining in strength. I am able now to attend to light household duties, attend meeting, which privilege I had been deprived of since last June. I have not been so well for six years. To God be all the honor and glory.

May we all ever strive to do our part in the great latter-day work faithfully and well, that Christ may have a people who honor and serve him.

Your sister in Christ,

HATTIE R. GRIFFITHS.

BUILDING CHURCHES IN THE EAST.

And the branches in the East, instead of building church houses and staying there, let them gather their moneys together, and send wise men to buy land in the regions round about, and in this way establish Zion.—Bishop Hilliard in Herald, p. 13, 1899.

It seems to me there is a growing necessity for such an organization as the "school of the prophets," where a unity of purpose and teaching would be obtained as a result of following the Lord's advice, that the elders so counsel together that they may become "more perfect in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand." (From D. C.)

This cannot be accomplished in annual councils or conferences. If the school was organized, as a result there would be less of private opinions advanced, and the saints of God would be taught more perfectly in the things of the kingdom.

If the advice quoted at the beginning of this article is right, it should be heeded, if erroneous, it should be treated accordingly. Let us examine it closely.

We are about to buy a lot and erect a modest little brick church here in Pittsburg, therefore it is of importance to us whether the advice of Bro. H. is to be heeded.

The branch, since it has been organized, has paid out about $15,000 for rent, and to-day we have no place to lay our head! all because we didn't make an investment of between $1,000 and $2,000, which, years ago, would have purchased ground that would have been worth thousands of dollars to-day. Is this financial folly to continue? Not if the present regime are able to carry out the movement, started with a degree of inspiration by the former president of the branch, Geo. H. Hulmes, now of Independence, who repeatedly agitated the question of building a church; but there was so much apathy and opposition to the movement that it failed to materialize, until about six years ago, when an "auxiliary society" was formed in face of all opposition, and as a result there is perfect unanimity of feeling in favor of going ahead and building a church, and with the Lord's blessing we intend to do so. Shall we take Bro. H's. advice?

Here is about the situation. In several months we expect to have $1,100 in our possession. We have a lot in view that we can purchase for $1,500. A building will cost $1,500 more, making $3,000 for both, leaving us in debt nearly $2,000, which we can borrow at six per cent interest for three years and renew for another three years if we find it necessary, which will place us in this position:—

Our present yearly rent and janitor service.....	$331 00
Interest on proposed loan of $2,000 at six per cent.....	120 00
Saved every year while paying interest on $2,000.....	$211 00

Allowing for expenses for light, heat, etc., the total revenue of the branch, in connection with the funds raised by the auxiliary society, will be, conservatively estimated, about $300 a year above what we paid for interest, which could be applied to paying off principal. In five years I believe we would be entirely free from debt, and during that time we would be worshiping God in a building that we could use when we wished without paying five or ten dollars extra. It would not be soaked with tobacco smoke, or restaurant odors, or the street cars banging along every few minutes as we now are afflicted.

Verily the children of this world are wiser than the children of light, very often. There is not a sectarian church in Pittsburg that would have made such a mistake as we have, and this is often pointed at us, and we are believed to be an unprogressive people, because we have met in a hall for thirty years. Shall we move into a church of our own or keep on paying rent? To revive Lincoln a little: Some people are fools sometimes, and some people are fools all the time, but all the people are not fools all the time.

Enthusiasm about second coming of Christ, the gathering, and several other things have helped to keep us where we are.

Now after paying out thousands upon thousands of dollars for tithing, rent, supporting ourselves without any aid from the church, and helping to raise up and support other branches around us, until we have attained unto the dignity of being the mother of a large number of branches, we don't expect to have high authorities in the church discourage any of our "children" in now turning and helping the "old lady," as we hope they will do, and as the church ought to do as is commanded in Doctrine and Covenants 42: 10.

But what about leaving the branch here, disorganizing and going west?

There are salesmen, railroaders, bookkeepers, painters, contractors, printers, electricians, telephone operators, machinists, etc., in this branch. Will we give up our positions, go west and farm, or what do you want us to do for a living? None of us here know which is "gee" or which is "whoa," and we think it is nicer to live in the city, because it is so far from the market house in the country; and we couldn't get nice fresh vegetables, etc., as it would be too far to the city to get 'em.

If we all go west, who is to take care of the East? If we don't go in haste, the ones remaining will want to hold meetings and help gather out the honest in heart, and it is much cheaper to build than to pay rent.

Evidently Zion is to be built up by farmers, at least given a good start by them, and as it increases in size and commercial importance — as it certainly will — skilled artisans will gradually find employment. But say, is Jackson County and the adjoining land now for sale? Is Decatur County in the "regions round about"? If not, why are you booming the college, building a saints' home, etc., at Lamoni? Why not sell 'em and use the money to buy land in the regions that are round about, and not expect us poor eastern saints to do so much? By the way, we have sent quite an installment of our membership out there. You are so well pleased with them that you want the whole tribe of us, do you? We'll be out there in the sweet by and by, brethren; but then the gospel must be preached in all the world as a witness. In Europe over 381 millions, Africa 128 millions, Asia 855 millions, Australia 5 millions, America 133 millions, etc., that must hear the gospel, as it is recorded in Doctrine and Covenants, before the second advent. "Every man is to hear the gospel preached in his own tongue."

I believe the vision Bro. White had, as published in Autumn Leaves some years ago, entitled "The Redemption of Zion," is about the way the movement will be carried out. Glad to see the brethren helping the Providence branch to clear their church of debt.

Bro. J. F. McDowell is here interesting himself in our struggle to get out of the rent bondage. He has given illustrated lectures and just finished carrying out an entertainment. The proceeds of lectures and entertainment are to go to the new church fund.

Bro. Griffiths, while here, encouraged the movement, and has done so right along, and advised the branch years ago it was making a mistake in not building.

When we are needed in the West we will be ready at duty's call, but out there you must observe the Lord's warning when he says: "Let these things be done in their time, be not in haste; and observe to have all things prepared before you."

That's the idea exactly. The effort to bring about this preparation should be encouraged; but, brethren, be careful not to advise radical measures that will tear down what it has taken years to build up. There is much work yet to be done in the East and in the world. The gospel must be taken to 1,500,000,000 souls before it is preached in all the world.

If Bro. Hilliard's article was sent out as a "feeler" you know how some of us "feel" in the matter.

C. EDWARD MILLER,
President of Pittsburg Branch.
PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6, 1899.

"THE MEMBER WITH THE WIVES."

I do not often trouble your columns by way of correspondence, but I would be glad just to "air" a few thoughts relative to the following, clipped from a popular daily paper of this city (Leeds):—

THE MEMBER WITH THE WIVES.

The excitement over the election of Mr. Brigham Roberts, the polygamist, for the State of Utah, is daily becoming more pronounced, says a telegram from the States. Mr. Roberts, who has three wives and families, yesterday issued a public manifesto defending polygamy on religious grounds as an institution approved by God. He entreats the broad-minded American people not to compel him to cast off his wives and abandon his children.—Yorkshire Evening Post, Thursday, December 29, 1898.

I do not know whether it is true that B. H. Roberts is in possession of three wives, but it is a fact that he has more than the laws of God or man provide; viz., one. One would have been inclined to think that after reading the telling reply to his theological treatise on ecclesiastical succession, etc., by Bro. H. C. Smith, that Mr. Roberts would have learned to be a little more consistent in his assumption of positions, but here is an evidence which proves him to be as illogical and contradictory, nay, absolutely puerile in his political and moral conceptions as he is in his religious and historical understanding and assertions. And after hearing his attempts to vindicate his position we can say with the Irishman, "We see through it all as clear as mud." Mr. Roberts is presenting himself before the public of America as a candidate to represent one of the States as a fit and capable person to assist in guarding and formulating the laws governing the rights and privileges of the people for the purpose of preserving public peace and assuaging crime.

Now, notice, about 1890, I believe, a law was passed to suppress polygamy in Utah. It was law before then that a man was only to have one wife and a woman one husband, given by God and indorsed by man, but our Utah friends seemed to think that God had made a mistake and man did not know anything about it, but in 1890 they veered, perforce, and submitted to the inevitable and promised to abide by the law of the land and quit the crime of polygamy. If the law of monogamy be the law governing the people in case of marriage, then it follows to have more wives than one at the same time is not legal but illegal and criminal, and in face of this Mr. Roberts entreats the American people to allow him to continue in his violation of law with impunity, and not only so, but to elect him, a lawbreaker, to sit as a law-maker and assist in moving the machinery of the law through which justice is dispensed, and one of the laws Mr. Roberts would have to represent is that "a man shall be the husband of but one wife." How consistent (?) that will be. "Do as I say, but not as I do, people."

Mr. Roberts' sense of perspicuity and comprehension must have become somewhat blunted for his fruitful imagination to allow him to think that people, intelligent and educated, will forget their sense of right and duty to vote an open disregard of the law and Constitution of the land to be a protector and representative of that law. How can he solicit respect for that for which he himself has no respect? How can he ask people to obey that which he openly violates and defies? In this country the only public institution for which such a one would be eligible would be the jail.

It is said, and truly too, that "they who cannot be governed, cannot govern." On the epitome of faith and doctrine issued by the Utah church they publicly advertise themselves as believing in being subject to kings, presidents, etc., meaning, as is obvious, all lawful authority, in being true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous, and doing good to all men. Though how polygamy is reconciled with virtue we are not informed, and just as to what the definition of the "good" they propose doing to all men may be we are left to find out, but the immutable, inexorable facts of the past present an overwhelming amount of evidence that the good (?) done to all who did not indorse the wild and sinful vagaries of an apostate priesthood was productive of incalculable harm and evil bodily, mentally, and spiritually to those so unfortunate(?) as to allow their nobler manhood and innate sense of justice, righteousness, and truth to prompt rebellion and opposition to such questionable methods of producing good. And now at the present time it seems Mr. B. H. Roberts publicly entreats the broad-minded (!) American public to allow him to defy the President and ignore the law by which the public good of the people is insured and warranted which the President is bound to guard and honor. What a chaotic mass of confusion this tenacious effort to sustain sin and crime evolves!

The Psalmist says: "Great peace have they which love thy law," and it would appear that had Mr. Roberts have read this with profit his position would not have been one of apology and confession and disquietude of mind, but of honor and peace; but the fact that politically and religiously he knows not the peace and consolation resultant from a practical observation of ethical law of God is evidence that he has not loved "thy law," "O God." Even domestically such a course must bring confusion and disturbance, and I have seen in print that twins were presented to Mr. R. by one of his wives; not usually harbingers of "peace."

We reiterate that had he followed the unchanging law of God, B. H. Roberts would not now have to beseech the people to desist compulsion of casting off his illegal wives and families, nor have proved himself to be a religious fraud and impostor by attaching the names of God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Ghost, and Joseph Smith their servant to such a base scheme of the "father of lies" as polygamy beyond all doubt is and always has been.

Perhaps we may be judged as harsh and uncharitable for so saying, but Mr. Roberts claims to be a servant and minister of God, sent by him to teach and practice the gospel and ordinances pertaining thereto. Let us put him to the test. God provides: "He whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God."

Now what says Mr. Roberts? A public manifesto issued by this polygamist defends this practice on the grounds that it has God's approval. Is this true, that God approves of polygamy? If so, then we apologize and withdraw, and submit that Mr. Roberts is sent of God. If not, then the conclusion as stated is inevitable and inexorable as death and we are not responsible for it; the matter is between God and Mr. Roberts.

Right at the start of man's history, when a "perfect" Creator, God the Father, from whom cometh every "good" and "perfect" gift, presented his work, we read he provided one husband for one woman and one wife for one man. This was beyond all question God's work, and God's work and gifts to men are always perfect and good, cannot possibly be improved upon or made better. God revealed to Moses that it was not good that man should be alone, and to meet this he made a gift to man of "one" woman as his wife, and all his gifts are the best, absolutely the best and most perfect, and who should know best, God or Brigham Young, whether one or more wives would be the best for man? God is the source of all inspiration and prophetic truth. Brigham Young did not claim to have the prophetic afflatus, but denied its possession, and in opposition to God's statement it was the best for man to have but one wife, he, Young, proclaimed it was not good that man should have "one" wife but as many as he could conveniently keep, and set a glorious (?) example by taking to himself forty. I wonder if he ever sung, "Great peace have they which love thy law"?

Now when God had created man and woman, after regulating the mundane affairs, he reviewed his work and pronounced it all "very good," and then, before the Devil commenced his interference, monogamy was the God appointed law governing the marital relation. If, therefore, God pronounced monogamy to be "very good," polygamy being the antithesis, the very opposite, as diametrically opposed to God's law as the nadir to the zenith, then polygamy must be "very bad." Further, if goodness be of God and badness of the Devil, then monogamy is of God and polygamy of the Devil. These conclusions are unavoidable on a scriptural basis. If Mr. Roberts be represented correctly in advocating that God at any time subsequent to that, approved of polygamy, then he proves God's admission of blundering in the beginning, that our estimation of God's being the best and most perfect of workers is misplaced, and what is disastrous to all religious science, that God not only changes but is not truthful, for God says: "I am the Lord, I change not." Samuel, a prophet of God, says: "The Strength of Israel will not lie nor repent: for he is not a man, that he should repent."

If Mr. Roberts has found any evidence in the Bible or any work claiming to contain the revelations of God's mind and will that it was possible for God to change his mind, we candidly confess our ignorance of its existence, and state freely that our love and adoration for God causes us to endeavor to prove to the world by consistent deportment, both by precept and example, that God never tells a lie nor repents of his word or deed, and we believe that man's love for God will be the motive power that prompts to an implicit obedience to all God's commands, irrespective of our own will or desires, and God encourages us so to do by promising us that by so doing we shall have everlasting life. And if loving but one wife fulfills God's commands, this insures us the promise. Then having more than one wife at the same time is sin, and the only ultimatum is DEATH. God's hand has written it.

Jesus the Son of God said: "For this cause shall a man" "cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh." "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Jesus said, "I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak." This should be conclusive that when Jesus left heaven to come to earth that God was still of the opinion that one wife was ample for all the requirements of one man. And when Jesus ascended to heaven he found that his sojourn on earth had not tended to alter God's mind on that point, for Paul corroborates Jesus by saying, "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh." This was the gospel law of matrimony, and Paul says, "I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man, . . . neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." It is manifest that Paul objected to marrying at all, so far at least as he was concerned, (and according to Brighamite philosophy will be damned,) but that that he did command was by revelation from Christ, which was one man was to have but one wife and they two were made one flesh, and whom God put together no man was to put asunder. There are but two powers or forces that operate upon man; viz., the power of God for good and the power of Satan for evil, and we read that kind cleaveth unto kind, therefore Christ says, "He that is not with me [and he taught monogamy] is against me." So once more the inevitable conclusion comes that polygamy is the work of Satan against the work of God.

To argue that because polygamy was practiced by men whom God blessed made it justifiable is a most pronounced case of what in logic is termed petitio principii, begging the question. Such a puerile argument, if admitted, binds God to accept anything we do, whether right or wrong, and give us his approbation simply because we, professing his name, "commit such action." The mere fact that a certain act is performed by men good or bad does not guarantee the rectitude of such act nor its acceptance by God. So all the illustrations of Brighamites from the Old Testament are of no value whatever only to show how insipidly weak and blindly puerile is their position.

The revelation on polygamy (so-called) makes it imperative that if we would have salvation we must indorse polygamy. Here are the issues in a nutshell. God says, by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, Christ has become the author of eternal salvation to all those who "obey him." (Christ taught monogamy, please don't forget.) B. H. Roberts and Company, dead and living, say, ipso facto, all who "disobey" God's law (monogamy) shall have eternal life and celestial salvation. What a striking analogy is this to the terrible human tragedy that obscured the sunlight of God's presence at the dawn of the world's history. God said, In the day you disobey my will ye shall surely die. The Devil comes along and says, In the day you disobey the command you shall not die. Who told the truth, my friends, God or Satan? Who is telling the truth on polygamy. God or Brigham Young and Co.? Who? He that is sent of God speaks the "word of God." This word is scintillating with the fire of God's inspiration, and that "word" on marriage was one man one wife, and whoever says contrary (if God speaks the truth) tells a lie and represents, so far at least, "the father of lies," for we become the servants of whomsoever we elect to obey.

It has been and is still said by the blind leaders of latter-day Israel, that Joseph Smith taught and practiced polygamy. How gallant (?), how brave (?), how charitable (?), to make a man, beloved for his fidelity to God's truth, who died rather than prove false to God, the scapegoat for the sins and crimes of that society! But we reply, and God's Spirit has borne and is still bearing witness we speak the truth, it is false, absolutely concentrated falsity conceived in sin and wickedness and perpetuated by traducing the dead, avoiding investigation, and gulling the unwary. The written statements of Utah Mormonism prove the statement that Joseph was responsible for polygamy to be a base lie. In the first place, polygamy was not born in the church until 1852, and Joseph Smith had been dead eight years prior to that date, and hence for the best reason in the world could not have been in any way connected with polygamy, for he was dead. Secondly, in a pamphlet issued by the Utah elders in this country entitled, "A Prophet of the Latter Days," written by Elder E. F. Parley, quite an elaborate effort is put forth to prove Joseph Smith was a man sent by God as his servant and prophet and was inspired by the Holy Ghost, and on page 57 in bold type is printed, "The Book of Mormon an evidence of the inspiration of Joseph Smith." I don't propose to elaborate on the Book of Mormon evidence to prove polygamy false and sinful, for we most of us are conversant with the fact that in this "evidence of the inspiration of Joseph Smith" the God and power of his inspiration tells us that polygamy is an abomination in his sight, whether it was Solomon or David, Brigham Young and B. H. Roberts included. This pamphlet is written to prove that Joseph Smith was inspired by God. We grant it succeeds, and admit the veracity of the claim, and present one of Joseph's inspired statements as follows: "Again, I say unto you, . . . marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh." The statement of Joseph by the inspiration of God is unquestionable evidence that he was sent of God, for he spoke God's word. But if B. Young, B. H. Roberts, or anyone else says they can have two, three, or forty wives, they certainly are not inspired with God's Spirit, but are opposed to him. If Joseph was inspired in 1831 when he advocated monogamy, and if we allow he introduced the revelation on polygamy commanding that practice, will our political aspirant kindly inform us if he was inspired on that occasion. If he was, then God has changed, and if he has changed, then he has proven untrue and ceases to be God, and so religion becomes a failure and a sham. But the fact that the Utah saints proclaim Joseph to have been a prophet and servant sent by God and continued so up to his death is the best possible evidence that he could not have taught or practiced polygamy consistently with his high and holy calling, for "he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God."

We could multiply evidence upon evidence to show the invalidity of Mr. Roberts' claim that God approves of polygamy, but think the foregoing is sufficient to show that we are safe in concluding from scriptural premises that polygamy is a sin in the sight of God and all who advocate or practice it are transgressors of God's law and are not sent of God to preach his word, which is his gospel. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," says Paul, and the law of matrimony under the gospel of God was monogamy, always was, and is, and will be until time is no longer.

Surely Mr. Roberts never advertised his own weakness and puerility so much as when he endeavored to clamber into the seat of the nation's lawgivers by misrepresenting God, Christ, and the illustrious dead. Sin brings its own punishment, transgression and disobedience carry in themselves the seeds of dissension and disruption, and surely sooner or later the iconoclasm of God's eternal truth will cause the downfall of that great ecclesiastical fabrication built upon the sandy foundation of man's ever-changing opinion, and great will be the fall thereof.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

To the Missionary Appointees in the Eastern Mission:—Please send to my address, Temple, Lake County, Ohio, your annual reports, as provided by rule of the General Conference, giving items; viz, sermons, baptisms, etc., with suggestions, recommendations, outlook for the work as you may deem wise to present; so that our annual report may be made out and sent in as provided by the same rule. It is preferred that you make out your own reports, rather than to make them from the quarterly reports. Make them up to the first of March, 1899.

Respectfully,

WM. H. KELLEY,
JOSEPH LUFF,

Presidents of Mission.

Elder A. H. Parsons has been appointed to labor in the Kirtland district, Kirtland itself being an objective point, which is likely to claim much of his attention during the summer months. At the late district conference, held at Kirtland, he was selected as the district president. Bro. Parsons is commended as a worthy representative of the faith, one in whom the saints may safely confide, as a man of high moral aspirations and standing.

WM. H. KELLEY,
JOSEPH LUFF,

Presidents of Mission.

By consent of all concerned in such appointment.

To the Officers and Members of the Pacific Slope Mission; viz, Arizona, Nevada, California, Oregon, and Washington, Greeting:—I have felt impressed for some time that if the saints in said mission would observe a day of fasting and prayer, the same would be pleasing and acceptable unto our heavenly Father.

We find by a careful examination of the work of God, that the true and faithful saints in all ages frequently fasted and prayed, humbled themselves before the Lord in earnest prayer, when they desired and were in need of special blessings; and in every instance, where they sought the Lord in faith, and in the depths of humility, their fasting was recognized and their petitions answered. We are serving the same unchangeable God; therefore, if we will but follow the example of those ancient saints, we will be recipients of like favors.

I hereby set apart the first Sunday in May, 1899, as a day of fasting and prayer, and sincerely trust that all Latter Day Saints will meet in their respective places of worship, abstaining from all food and drink, save where physical disabilities preclude, until the evening meal. Let the burthen of our petitions be for the general good of the work in the territory so named; and

In behalf of the general and local ministry, that greater success may attend their labors, that they may enjoy a greater degree of God's power in all of their ministrations than they have hitherto experienced. Also, that those of us who are called upon to suffer intense pain of body and distress of mind, resulting from manifold diseases to which man is heir, may be speedily healed; also, that those who are weak in spirit and despondent may have their spiritual strength revived.

Now, dear saints, I feel assured that all who will faithfully comply with the foregoing request will be abundantly blessed.

Brethren F. M. Sheehy, T. W. Chatburn, T. W. Williams, and others with whom I have consulted, heartily concur in setting apart this day of fasting and prayer. Will the presidents of branches please call the attention of the saints in their respective charges to this matter.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

POLYGAMY IN INDIA AND THE PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

It seems by all accounts that Uncle Sam will have a big time in Congress, as the press reports are as follows:—

"Pittsburg, Pa., May 27.—The last day's session of the Presbyterian General Assembly opened this morning with a crowded docket. An overture from the synod of India, asking for a reply to the memorial upon the subject of baptizing polygamous converts, was considered. The Mohammedan was admitted to the church and he was allowed to retain both wives and house. A memorial was presented asking the General Assembly that final power be given the synod of India in such cases. Dr. Thompson of the committee on church policy, to whom it was referred, said there was no concrete case before the assembly, and that the committee was indisposed to interfere until the judicial case involving polygamy was before it. Dr. Morrison representing the synod trial cases and special legislation, held that the recognition of polygamous marriage by the church in India was an absolute necessity; 'any other rule,' said he, 'would rule David out of the church.'"

Now, Mr. Editor, you can plainly see that Brigham H. Roberts and his ilk can clasp hands with Brother David of the Presbyterian Church, and praise God that though, like other men, they were saved by election, if not by personal grace. How inconsistent these narrow creedists are in connection with the rank and file of present-day Christendom, when they will seek to cloud the minds of the uninformed. If under said conditions in India, God and the church can condone polygamy, it will be equally applicable here. A stress of circumstances makes queer bedfellows.—Garafraxa correspondence Fergus, Canada, News-Record, March 16, 1899.

FINLAND AND THE CZAR.

Mr. Henry Norman in his special cable to the Tribune yesterday called attention to the Czar's course in Finland and its bearing on the proposed peace conference at The Hague next May. Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, is in mourning, "the theaters are closed and the people in black, the newspapers heading their articles with the words: 'A Nation in mourning.'" Certainly this is a bad prelude to a conference called in the interests of peace and presumably of human advancement by the disarmament of Europe.

The methods the Czar has recently employed to bring about the Russification of Finland have attracted the attention and also the condemnation of the civilized world. By the peace of Frederikshamn, September, 1809, Finland was severed from Sweden and became a part of the Russian Empire. The Finns, however, by a manifesto of the Czar Alexander, were given large political liberty. Their religion and the constitution of the grand duchy, as well as the rights and privileges enjoyed under Swedish rule, were guaranteed to them, and these rights respected until quite recently. The grand duchy had its own Diet, coinage, and military organizations, while there were perfect religious liberty and toleration and the press was permitted, unlike that of the rest of Russia, to criticise the government and its measures and to point out and correct abuses. It was not under the tutelage of a censor and had no connection with governmental organs or opinions.

All this has been changed. By a recent ukase of the Czar the right of initiative in the Finnish Diet has been taken away and measures must now receive the approval of the Imperial Council at St. Petersburg before they can even be discussed, much less become laws. Finland, also, has suffered much less from the burden of militarism than other parts of the Russian Empire. It maintained its own army organization, but hereafter 35 instead of 10 per cent of its youth must enter the army, and the Russian term of six years with the colors has been substituted instead of the previous mild military service. The soldiers, moreover, may be sent to any part of the empire instead of being retained for home service, and a military contribution of 10,000,000 marks is exacted. The law requiring officers in the Finnish army to be born Finns has been repealed, another blow to Finnish pride and national feeling.

Previous to these radical changes made by the present Czar, despite the solemn guarantees given by his predecessors, a preparation to this thorough Russification of Finland was made by requiring Finnish officials to have a knowledge of the Russian language. The next step placed difficulties in the way of the alumni of Helsingfors University unless they had a knowledge of Russ. While lectures were permitted in Finnish and Swedish, a chair of the Russian language and literature was established and the authorities given to understand that their making Russ the language of instruction was looked on with favor at St. Petersburg. Recently this preparatory measure has been completed by making Russ the official language of Finland.

The people are naturally in despair at these invasions of their ancient rights and privileges and the evident intention of the Czar that Finland shall become absorbed in the Russian Empire and be ruled wholly by the autocrat of all the Russias. But they are helpless. Finland is too small and too remote from the interests of Europe in general to evoke the sympathy that Poland received, although unavailingly. It is true that Norway, Sweden, and Denmark are naturally indignant that a Scandinavian people, Protestant and liberty-loving, should thus be crushed under the despotism of the Czar. But Scandinavia is not united for action, and even if it were it is doubtful whether it would care to brave the power of Russia in behalf of Finland. The probability is that the present indignation in Helsingfors may yet result in some outbreak which will be seized upon by the Czar to justify the severest measures, and thus the last vestige of Finnish liberty will disappear.—Tribune.

A CHARGE OF HERESY.

One of the possibilities of the near future in Hamilton is a charge of heresy against an elder in one of the Presbyterian churches.

This is how the trouble originated: The young people of the church held a missionary meeting recently. There was a good attendance, and a few of the older members of the church, including several officials, were present. Papers were read, summarizing the latest reports from foreign mission fields. Two or three of these papers concluded with exhortations to those present to do all in their power for the salvation of the heathen, millions of whom were going down to perdition every year because they had never had an opportunity to hear the gospel of Christ preached.

This reiterated statement proved too much for the patience of one of the younger elders of the church. He rose and entered a protest. "I don't think it is wise," said he, "to allow a statement like that to go unchallenged. It is calculated to give our young people a false impression of the nature of God. I believe in God the Father, and I believe that he is the Father of the heathen as well as of those who call themselves Christians, and I don't believe that the Father of the heathen is sending them to hell because they are unfortunate enough never to have heard of Christ. We are told that our Father in heaven is 'a God of mercy,' that he is 'slow to wrath,' that 'he is not willing that any should perish, but that all should be saved.' We are told that 'God is love.' Now I believe that it is dishonoring God the Father to say that he dooms any of his children to damnation because of their ignorance. Such a thought is repugnant to our ordinary sense of humanity. Besides it is unscriptural. There is scriptural warrant for the belief that those heathen who live righteously according to the light they have will be saved."

There was silence for a few moments. Then an elderly elder rose, and in a voice which trembled with emotion expressed his pain that an elder of a Presbyterian Church would venture to utter such heretical opinions in the presence of young people. Christ was the only way of salvation, and how could heathen be saved who had never heard of Christ?

The chairman of the meeting was the pastor of the church. To him the young elder appealed. "I don't think it is wise to discuss theological questions at a meeting of this kind," he said. "We can safely leave the heathen in the Lord's hands."

"That's just what I think and what I said," cried the young elder. "I would trust to the Lord's mercy and leave the heathen in his hands; but Elder —— is not satisfied with that; he insists upon having them sent to hell."

By this time the excitement had grown so intense that some of the young ladies were weeping, and the meeting was suddenly brought to a close.—Hamilton, Ontario, Herald.

RITUALISM DISTURBS ENGLAND.

London, March 24.—The debate in the House of Lords yesterday concerned itself with a case that is likely to have a great effect in the present crisis of the Church of England regarding the alleged Romanizing tendency of the ritualists.

The fiercest attack made by the Protestant party is that upon the practice of compulsory confession, said to have been introduced by the ritualists. The particular case under notice is that of a boy of 16, named Cavalier, who formed the acquaintance of an unbeneficed clergyman named Bridge. This clergyman heard the lad's confession, and then gave him a Roman Catholic book of devotion, written by Cardinal Manning. Subsequently Cavalier left home, and went first to a ritualist clergyman at Derby and then to a species of monastery, the House of the Sacred Mission, at Mildenhall.

The Bishop of London defended

Bridge, on the ground that he gave the book without having read it. Lord Halifax, however, strenuously and without qualification defended the whole action, but popular opinion is overwhelmingly condemnatory, for the English public almost universally is jealous of priestly interference with the children, while it is generally believed among Protestants of moderate views that confession is the most threatening of all the ritualistic practices complained of by the Evangelistic party. The mass of Englishmen hate the confessional, and if the practice cannot be checked the nation surely will decline all responsibility for a church in which it is practiced.

Thus even many persons of the high-church party are beginning to see that if they wish to prevent disestablishment they must resist the growing tendency in the direction of compulsory confession.—Chicago Record.

THE latest development of the social work of the Salvation Army is the establishment of a "Business-House league," which will step in and provide veritable homes for young men and women engaged in business-houses of every description. It is intended that in course of time experienced officers will be placed in charge of suitable homes situated at convenient centers, where young people can be received, made comfortable, and cared for on reasonable terms.

IN the American Monthly Review of Reviews for April the editor reviews the work of the Fifty-fifth Congress, examines the present status of the various plans for inter-oceanic ship transit, discusses the latest developments in the Philippine situation, and comments on the other news topics of the day in home and foreign politics, including the cabinet change in Spain and the altered relations of Germany, England, and the United States.

Among birds the swan lives to be the oldest, in extreme cases reaching 300 years; the falcon has been known to live over 162 years.

The National Armenian Relief committee has 3,500 orphans under its care, 2,000 of whom were rescued by funds from this country.

The present population of Bordeaux, France, is 297,000, of whom 18,864 are in receipt of assistance from charitable societies.

All signs indicate the steady progress of Christianity in Japan.

The first post office was opened in Paris in 1642, in England in 1581, in America in 1710.

THE DIVINE ORDER VERSUS THE WORLDLY SPIRIT.

WORSHIP OF GODDESS ISIS.

Paris, March 25.—The chiefs of the cult of the worship of the Egyptian goddess Isis, which has been introduced in Paris, are the Count and Countess MacGregor, wealthy Scotch people, living in the Rue Mozart. Their names in the new religion are "Hierophant Rameses" and "High Priestess Anari."

At the initiation of a convert the other day—a young woman whose name is unknown and who wore a long white veil—the "mass of Isis" was celebrated and M. Julien Bois delivered a lecture, in which he declared that the name of Paris was derived from "Bar-Isis," or ship of Isis.

The curtain then rose upon a waxen figure of the goddess, seated upon the table, clothed in multi-colored gauze and wearing a sort of spangled helmet. The hierophant and the grand priestess were present, the former curiously helmeted, bangled, and bejeweled, and clad in a long flowing white robe, with a leopard skin upon his shoulders. His wife was a strange vision of shining white raiment, wreathed with nodding flowers. Before the candle-lit altar they chanted and intoned prayers and invocations, the language of which was French, although the accent was Scotch.

The young convert, to pianoforte accompaniment, danced four dances, symbolizing flowers, etc.—Chicago Tribune.

The foregoing is one of the signs of an age in which many, "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God," have more money than sound sense; more love for display and sensationalism than for plain truth and the uplifting of humanity.

The worldly spirit of the times is shifting the scenes and manipulating the gaudy showings of worldly splendor, attracting those in whom there exists the same spirit, developing it and crowding out, excluding what little might remain of the Spirit of truth, which to some extent "lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The rapid increase and concentration of wealth and the headlong rush of the masses after it even though many suffer that they be gratified, indicates clearly that "unrighteous Mammon" is the god of the world—of Babylon.

Our gospel and its Spirit are unlike the gospel and the spirit of the world, the one foreign, antagonistic, separate from and dissimilar to the other. Our people are called upon to be also separate from the world, by separating themselves from all that is worldly in its nature; from all that pertains to the pomp and glitter and circumstance of the worldly spirit.

Men and women cannot be light-minded and trifling, butterflies of fashion and taken up with the mere passing incidents of social life and amount to very much in spirituality. Great demands and important work require sobermindedness, earnestness, consecration of life. "Spiritual things are spiritually discerned," requiring "the mind of the Spirit" to "know" them. "The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

There is as great if not greater need that the people of God develop in a united spirituality as that the elders preach the gospel and build up branches throughout the world. With the people of God from head to foot, from highest stations in the ministry throughout the ranks, consecrated to and energetic in the service of God, there would be little in the way of an extension of church interests throughout the world; for while there is opposition to be met from the world, that is not especially to be feared. The chief thought to be considered is, That truth is always strong; that no opposition can compare with the wisdom and power of truth, which has resources all sufficient to contend with and overcome every principle, every phase, of error.

It should also be remembered that in this age of falling systems of men and increasing developments in every form of evil, millions of earnest true men and women are seeking light, and that they are now prepared to see, to admire, and to come to the standard of Zion provided there can be an exhibition of her spirit—an exhibition of unselfish interest in the welfare of fellow man, of the poor, of love of neighbor as love for self—a manifestation of the Christ spirit actually wrought out not only in the preaching of doctrine, but in the living of truth in all the phases of general life—economically, socially, morally, etc. Baptism into Christ contemplates such conditions to be brought about; but much remains to be done to realize them. However, the amount of work to be done certainly suggests prompt beginning and active application that no time, no opportunity be lost.

Human thoughts, human purposes, human actions, human conditions at best, as such, are so far below the principles and illustrations of the "divine nature" that wise men and women will readily discern, and constantly realize, the need of something better. We understand that every child of God to whom has come the gift of the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of truth, has had bestowed upon him the right, if he will exercise his or her high privilege, to overcome every surrounding condition that affects him personally for evil. We mean by this that the Spirit sought for and its teachings heeded will so enlighten, so strengthen, and so qualify every individual to represent the Christ standard as to make him in fact a representative of the Christ in the interests not simply of himself, but of the church and thus of fellow man.

Looking through the history of the past it is strikingly clear, plain, apparent, that the leading difficulties of God's people have arisen from their own lack of devotion, their carelessness, their indifference, their worldly-mindedness. The Jews and the Nephites were constantly turning and following the world about them. The Jew would turn to heathen idol-worship and the worldly pomp and show and favor that made it popular.

Heathen idols do not appear among the moderns; that is, in actual form; but the spirit of the world is the same, and many in Israel, far too many, worship at its shrines of fashion, idleness, vanity, and general worldliness.

The more life conditions are studied the more apparent appears the necessity that sober, intelligent study be given to the problems of life; that conditions be intelligently comprehended and acted upon. It has ever been true that evil forces have stood ready to take advantage of every wrong condition, to lead downward if forces of an opposite character were insufficiently developed in the human soul to resist their deceptive or open aggressions. No father or mother is qualified to look after the welfare of child or children who is not in touch with the Holy Spirit to that extent that he is prepared to teach and shield his children from the forces that are everywhere about him, ready to enter and lead away captive to evil. It has come to pass that individual and general life conditions are taking on much wider scope and significance in the modern world. With the growth of civilization there is a wider development of life opportunities, life privileges; and it is recognized that every man is not only an individual entity, but a mutual factor as fellow man; in other words, that society has an interest in as it is affected in no small degree by the welfare or condition of its individual members. The downward turn of anyone is a loss to all. No one can fail in duty without entailing loss upon others besides himself.

The standard may be set too high in so saying, but we have understood and do yet understand that in the gospel economy there is the clearest and strongest recognition of the individual and of the mutuality of the spiritual compact known as the church. The family organization is one of the highest and holiest; God himself instituted it and surrounded it by such provisions as are and have ever been designed to make love—pure love—the hallowed influence under which children should grow up to manhood and womanhood as factors in the world. No nearer approximation to the divine love exists or can exist than the love of a true parent; and supplemented by the spirit of the organization known as the "family of God," the church, ought to result in the development of perfect men and women. It is the practical character of family and church privileges that the revelations of God impress upon the people—that they are not ordinary, but important, and that they should be intelligently and conscientiously studied in order to realize the results designed in the moral and spiritual elevation of the human trinity created in the image of God—man, wife, and child.

The church is heaven's order revealed for the government of man on earth; it is the family of God gathered together representatively, a body called out to enjoy the benefits of and commissioned to represent the divine order of government in the world. To claim less for it than that it represents a true and perfect system of organization in spiritual things, is to claim too little; to demand less than an exposition of divinity in human nature, the suppression and overcoming of the human by manifestation of the higher nature in the actual concerns of humanity, is evidently below the requirement of the Author of the heavenly system of government. We are taught to pray that God's will be done on earth as it is done in heaven; to labor to that end, that there be an exposition of truth applied to human affairs.

Gospel work challenges the admiration and arrests the attention of the honest in heart because it not only reveals truth, but demands that men and women shall rise to its high and exalted requirements; that revelation of truth to humanity be supplemented by revelation of truth in humanity. A system such as it claims to be requires not only the belief that God, Christ, and angels are wise, holy, and pure, but that humanity must become likewise; that men, women, and children can and must rise above the worldly level to the heights in which Christ occupied when, dwelling amid surrounding evil upon every hand, he kept himself "unspotted from the world," pointing effectively to the higher life because he loved it and lived it, thus demonstrating to his fellow beings the possibilities open to all who will enter into "life" "more abundantly."

God's love is revealed in the strictness of his demands upon us; his perfection is manifest in his insistence that holiness shall be made apparent in the characters of his children. When we teach faith in God, in Christ, and the additional principles of repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, etc., it is because they are parts of the great system of truth whose ultimate is the individual development of those obedient to the gospel. The Christ life in the disciple, "Christ in you," is the hope, the only true hope and foundation of glory and inheritance in God.

It is comforting and inspiring to the intelligent disciple to know that God has counted his children worthy to bear a portion of the responsibility of redeeming the world; that he has imposed upon his people the burden of acting with him in the prosecution of his work. It is plain that all must share in the labor if all are to share in the glory of the redemption of the world. A glance at the history of the past and present shows plainly that though called while in spiritual infancy, those who became effective instruments for good were those who applied themselves and attained to knowledge of God and to spiritual stature in him. From Adam to Moses, from Moses to Christ, down to our own day, no man, no woman has done much for humanity who did not to some extent realize the condition of the world, the purposes of God, and the important character of the work to be done; who did not comprehend the gravity and import of the problems of human life; who did not consecrate his service to God through self-discipline in all the various activities of his human life. Such is history of the earthly life of Christ the Master, who sought by constant communion with his Father to know and to do the will of him that sent him; and such must be the life and character of those who would enter upon and do the work of God. We claim none too much in contending for an advanced, a higher spirituality. We must develop and maintain the same close walk with God, the same constancy in spirituality, the same reverent and prayerful thoughtful care, if we shall succeed in the high purpose of aiding to bring in "everlasting righteousness."

It is not strange that the early elders of the church were commanded to call a "solemn assembly," to organize themselves and "prepare every needful thing;" to establish "a house of prayer," "a house of faith," a "house of learning," "a house of God;" and to "cease" from all their "light speeches," from "pride," "lightmindedness," "wicked doings," etc. The work before them required no ordinary preparation to accomplish it; it was solemn, grave, and very serious in its character; hence it demanded that attention and godliness of character by which alone the instruments chosen to do it could hope to succeed.

Christ, the Creator and Redeemer of men was not and is not an ordinary character; had he been he would never have been chosen to accomplish the wonderful work he did. The exigencies he met, the difficulties he surmounted, would have defeated and overthrown one less devoted, less intelligent, one lacking in any degree his high character. Christ's ministers and his people though not called to occupy as did he, cannot succeed in reaching the heights demanded and that are yet to be demanded in their attainment and responsibilities without rising to higher and purer conditions of spirituality and intelligence. Out of "Zion the perfection of beauty" God is to shine through "a pure people;" a people tried and refined by fire as was the Christ.

It was by "much prayer and faith," much communion with God, by refraining from following in line with the ordinary drifting of human affairs, that Christ found favor with the Father; and it is by a similar process that the church is commanded to do its work outlined in the revelations given in the present dispensation. The word of the Lord thus admonishes us:—

And ye shall remember the church articles and covenants to keep them; . . . And I will bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost. And the Book of Mormon, and the Holy Scriptures, are given of me for your instruction; and the power of my Spirit quickeneth all things; wherefore, be faithful, praying always, having your lamps trimmed, and burning, and oil with you, that you may be ready at the coming of the Bridegroom; for, behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that I come quickly; even so. Amen.—D. C. 32: 3.

Truths, all truths, seem to need restatement, to be impressed upon the mind. No truth is received simply by reading the word of it, the spirit of it must be received, must be conveyed to and impressed upon the mind, must be sensed by the inner spiritual man. Until possessed by the realization, the nature and importance, the significance of a truth, one is really ignorant of that truth. The hearing ear and understanding heart means more than the mere hearing with the outward ear and the comprehension of the physical brain. It means that the soul, the entire emancipated nature of man, is to be attuned to harmony with God, that man may know and act in harmony with the mind of God. Especially is this true of very important truths, not overlooking the importance of any truth. The necessities of our work demand that "ye shall know the truth," not in its outward ordinances alone, but in its inner spirituality, that light and life may dwell within the soul of every child of God, animating and governing all in all the activities of life.

Exhibitions of human folly, of departure from God, now so prevalent in the world, serve to emphasize the necessity that truth be sent abroad and be lived at home by those called to maintain it—the church. It is written of the church in early times that "vanity and unbelief" had brought it under condemnation and that said condemnation rested upon "the children of Zion, even all," and that it should remain until the church remembered the word of God, not only to say but to do according to what "is written." The Master has more than once admonished his people that they be not condemned with the world. Let us not forget that it will require earnestness and close attention to the things of God to successfully resist the influences of evil now becoming so strong in the world. The word of God and observation of human experience clearly prove that saints from least to greatest have no protection from worldlymindedness, from spiritual blindness, from indifference to things spiritual, from carelessness and drifting from sound lines of principle and policy, if not careful to earnestly seek unto God for light; if not diligent in secret prayer and in general duty as the Master has repeatedly admonished. First steps in obedience to the gospel have brought blessings to the children of God, and only such compliance has brought the blessing. That continued and added and constantly increasing obedience to the will of God expressed in his word should be manifest in the work of all his children, needs no argument to be proven.

ANOTHER SPIRITIST FRAUD.

The Sabbath Advocate, published at Stanberry, Missouri, by the Advent people, had in a late number the following pithy expose of a spiritist trickster. The Advocate while being at war with what it understands to be Mormonism, has still some few things in common with the HERALD'S understanding of the referred to "ism." These are: 1. A reliance in Christ that when he comes the good of all things will survive the evil, and the bad perish. 2. That the word of God should be sufficient basis for the faith and hopes of all men. 3. A belief that spiritism, or so-called spiritualism is at best a deception, and much of the so-called manifestations, in seances, so-called, are fraudulent, just tricks to deceive.

An ardent believer in spiritism once told "ye editor" that not more than one manifestation in twenty of the so-called phenomena was genuine, and not more than one in ten of those that were genuine was of any practical value to man. He did not believe in dark seances at all, and when we remarked that his charge against the craft of his brethren was a very serious one, he replied, "Well, I can't help it. I have been humbugged so often that I am discouraged, and forced to my conclusions."

We commend the bravery of Mrs. LaPearl—that is a pearl of worth.

CAUGHT THE SPIRIT.

An exciting incident was witnessed last evening at the spiritualistic seance held at the home of Mrs. Burton, on South Vermilion Street. Quite a large party of people had assembled to witness the work of a man who professed to be a materializing, trumpet, and every other kind of a medium that was ever invented. His name is Sims, and he has been staying at a house on Park Street since his appearance in Danville.

Professor Sims was giving one of his materializing seances where the spirits of the departed are called from their shadowy home to converse with friends and relatives on earth. He was behind a curtain hidden from the sight of the audience, and when a white robed spirit came out and began its awe-inspiring gyrations there was one in the room who was brave enough to attempt to learn the truth concerning the exhibition. It was a woman, too. Mrs. J. H. LaPearl, wife of the showman, grabbed the spirit and held on bravely. She yelled for others to turn on the light, and when this was done she still had hold of the shade. His clothing did not smell of the tomb, nor did he fade into nothingness with a mocking laugh or with a sibilant hiss such as you read about in the story books. He was in the flesh, good healthy meat, which had been fed on Danville's best for several weeks at the expense, perhaps, of Danville's "suckers." The spirit proved to be Professor Sims.

A press reporter visited the home of G. W. F. Church, secretary and treasurer of the First Spiritual church, and there learned that Sims is not recognized by the church, nor countenanced by its members.

The reporter next visited the home of Mrs. Burton, who talked freely concerning the matter. She said that she did not have much faith in Sims, who had held a seance at her home once before. He will not be given the opportunity to do so again. Mrs. Burton confirmed the story told by Mrs. LaPearl concerning the matter in every detail, and she seemed to be thoroughly disgusted with the fake spirit tamer.—Danville, Illinois, Press.

"CHEER UP, COMRADES."

A sister writing from somewhere in the wide West, sums up thus:—

It strikes us that North Dakota is in the van. She has adopted a law "denying marriage licenses to drunkards, lunatics, and the victims of hereditary diseases." This is certainly a "severe jolt" given to the principle of personal liberty; but to look after the interests of the generation coming is both unselfish and patriotic. So say the D. Z., and they will no doubt be glad to hear of Dakota's step forward.

Great advancement seems to be going on everywhere in the world; trolley cars are to be shipped to the land of the Pharaohs; in experimenting with the X rays, it is developed that the printing press and typesetting will no longer be needed. A given original can be multiplied to a great number of copies. Floriculture comes also to the front with a pink for which my native city offers $30,000. Pink of perfection, sure enough! Then there are great strides taken by the sectarian world, although they do make some very "grievous mistakes."

Some of the ministers' parsonages in New York are furnished with tables on which are arranged meerschaum, and common pipes, and great jars of tobacco, and at their entertainments all reach forth and help themselves.

This morning's paper brings us vis a vis
