NOTICE BY GENERAL CHURCH RECORDER.

Branch reports have not yet reached me from the districts named below. Such reports are now overdue, and they should be forwarded without further delay, if it is possible: District conferences were held in May, 1899, whose reports have not arrived, as follows: Southern California, Idaho, and Fremont.

June conferences were held by the Southern Indiana, Montana, and Southwestern Texas districts and the branch reports have not yet come to hand.

In July the Northeastern Texas and Central Texas districts met in conference. In August the Central Nebraska district held conference, but branch reports have not been received from their officers yet.

Neither have reports come from the Ohio district since their session of August, 1898, a year ago; nor from Nevada for a still longer time. From Oklahoma district no reports for February and May, 1899. From Utah the only one received during this year, is the report of the Provo branch, forwarded by kindness of the clerk.

Numbers of districts have appointed to hold sessions in September and October, and if the district clerks will forward branch reports promptly I will feel greatly obliged. Those so appointed are: London and Chatham districts, Ontario; Mobile, Central California, Florida, Northern Illinois, Kewanee, Nauvoo, Des Moines, Decatur, Little Sioux, Northeastern Kansas, Spring River, Eastern Maine, Western Maine, Massachusetts, Southern Michigan, Far West, Northeastern Missouri, Independence, Southern Missouri, Northern Nebraska, Southern Nebraska, New York, Kirtland, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pittsburg, Southern Wisconsin.

Texas, Eastern Iowa, Fremont, Southwestern Texas, and West Virginia.

I publish the above in order to urge upon delinquents the need of closer attention, while those who are habitually prompt need not be hastened. To avoid times and seasons of "rushing," it is better to attend to business promptly, that reports may be copied upon the General Record soon after conferences are held. Where district clerks can have branch reports corrected I am glad to allow a reasonable time for that work, and in such cases, help will be afforded so far as I can give aid. Respectfully submitted,

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

LIFE BY MEANS OF DEATH.

DR. F. W. GUNSAULUS ON THE RESURRECTION.

"The Resurrection of Jesus and Optimism" was the theme of the Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus' sermon yesterday morning at Central Church. His text was from Luke 24: 32: "Did not our heart burn within us while he talked with us by the way and while he opened to us the scriptures?" He said:—

"The life of Jesus was one process of divine self-manifestation. His transfiguration marks one of its stages; his resurrection marks another. The same latent power which made his face shine at Hermon carried his body at a later day through the broken sepulcher and past the Roman guard. In one Christ's 'power' was manifested as 'glory;' in the other his 'glory' was manifested as 'power.' Jesus is 'declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead.' The resurrection was the gleaming fact which shone through his death with such transfiguring glory as to give Moses and Elias, whose bodies of resurrection were seen in the light of Christ's transfiguration, not death as their theme, but the exodus—of whose glory they could see a prophecy in that glowing face.

"He, the reason of every law and force, has come out into manifestation, traveling in the chariot of every force and along the avenue of every law, and being now incarnate, flashes back through their mysteriousness the illumination of himself, making them clear and radiant. He is the spirit, the informing and authoritative fact of all laws, for he is love, and law is only love's order. He includes in his person all laws, for love is the all-inclusive law—a law unto itself. Is not this the desideratum of all philosophy?

"It is obviously an incomplete account of matter and force which leaves out such a scene; and philosophy has written her death warrant unless she willingly and gladly follows out the evident movements of force in matter, the certain modifications of which matter is the subject, which, 'far beyond' the 'ooze and slime,' so leap with the infinite motive power within them, and glow with the eternal and changeless reason, which, in the silence of some remote past, augured their existence and destiny. Christian philosophy enthrones the Logos, the Christ, as this motive power and reason.

"Christianity is as eternal as the soul. It is the love of love. Every element of life that lifts the soul to that self-centered life it takes up and fulfills. All morality is thus more than 'touched with emotion'; it is transformed; and, in hours when Jesus is transfigured in some human soul, it comes from its home, and, like Moses, is seen in the light of something far more divine, which is its fulfillment.

"They talk of morals, O thou bleeding Lamb!
The true morality is love of thee.

"As love, in the incarnation, did complete law, and in the nature of God must ever give it its fullness, so in the real life of a man, the life in which he partakes of God in Christ, 'love,' and love alone, 'is the fulfilling of the law.' The power returns at last, to its source.

"The resurrection of Jesus is a fact of the deepest philosophical significance. Philosophy is confessing a 'groaning creation.' It is evident that a Logos has been in things from the beginning. The more we study the Christ, in the light of the deeper thinking of our own day, the more we are ready to confess that in him is 'the nature of things.'

"Things seem tending through all the universe to some such fact as the resurrection. Life by means of death—death as the servant of life—are facts appearing on every side. An occult law is touched by the quivering atom and the brain of man, which promises a goal for creation—a goal which includes not only the transfiguration of matter, but its transformation as well. It is with a grip almost prophetic that materialism will not let the most spiritual scheme forsake matter.

"All that Christ was is ours. We live in him and through him. Our halting faith waits in the valleys of humiliation; he points a significant finger to the heights of glory and says, 'Follow me.' When the flash dazzles us and the scene bewilders our souls yet half asleep we grow faithless, yet we must follow. Our faith in ourselves is astonished when he says to his Father: 'The glory which thou hast given unto me I have given unto them.' Life is transfigured. But he who receives the transfigured and transfiguring Christ has within him a force that never rests. 'Christ' is 'formed within, the hope of glory.' There is something beyond. A process is going on that includes the destinies of soul and body. John, remembering, perhaps, the transfiguration and its prophecy of the resurrection, understood it when he said: 'Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for [the reason that] we shall see him as he is.'—Chicago Tribune, April 10, 1899.

SPEAKS FOR A NEW FAITH.

MRS. CELIA PARKER WOOLLEY ON MODERNIZED CHRISTIANITY.

Disavowal of dogmas in favor of practical religion was the suggestion offered for "modernizing" Christianity by Mrs. Celia Parker Woolley at the Unitarian Memorial Chapel yesterday morning. Her sermon topic was "What Kind of a Religion Does the World Need To-day?" The harmonizing of scientific thought with religious feeling by the church, she said, has been made necessary by the growth of an analytical tendency in the popular mind. Common interpretation of the worship prescribed by the Bible, she declared, frequently has led to "a sort of blind, perfunctory worship."

"The world has outgrown a religion that bids a man to despise himself," she continued. "We need a religion that gains its foothold, not through fear and humiliation, but through fortitude and self-confidence. The trouble with some of the present religious creeds is that they are kept pinioned to antiquity. By neglecting to modernize Christianity in accord with nineteenth century culture it almost seems as if we were afraid to advance religion.

"But the old religion which decried human nature and was built upon the dogma of total depravity is passing away, and is to be replaced by a faith which, in Channing's phrase, teaches the dignity of human nature. Belief in man—not in his attained, but potential goodness—is the foundation stone of the new faith, the growing instinct in man—that is, the germ of his religious life.

"The coming religion must be of a kind which inspires respect for honest human effort of every kind, which teaches reverence for every natural law and bases faith upon knowledge. It must be one that will seek to develop the sense of human accountability, putting its greatest trust in the human conscience. Man has learned to trust and honor himself in every other field. He must learn also to depend upon himself as his only true religious savior and guide. He must work out his own salvation.

"The religion that man needs to-day is one that will bid him think fearlessly, revere all truth, and conform his life to his highest ideals of right. Fear of dogma will be replaced by love of principle, superstition by true worship, springing from love, and religion will dwell with us as no casual possession, but a constant presence, an atmosphere of spiritual aspiration and desire, as essential to life as the coarsest breathing stuff with which we fill our lungs.

"Faith demonstrated in works, a deepening sense of justice, greater kindness, courage to speak the truth, that alone will make lasting appeal to men.

"The new faith will wipe out the line between the secular and religious life, for all life will grow religious in proportion as we come to understand the divine laws controlling it. Every duty will then be a sacred duty and virtue the best piety. This new religious consciousness in men will become an active element in the commercial and political world. It is already becoming so. The demands of the age for honest government and more equitable relations between men and classes of men, for a purer domestic life, better education of the young—these are religious demands and every act performed in their accomplishment is a religious act.

"We have become analytical and synthetical and therefore worship is worthless save where it expresses some tangible thought. In the reformation of our religion praise and prayer will cease to be perfunctory. Heretofore we have built our religious structure from the top down; we have put up an ephemeral roof and plastered in abstract nothings. Now we must have a meaningful religion. We must be practical. Religion is nothing if it is not practical."

THE INTERNATIONAL DATE LINE.

For most people there is still more or less mystery about the sudden losing or gaining of a day in crossing the Pacific Ocean. In one of Poe's stories there is a cruel father who ironically promises to give his daughter to a certain love-lorn suitor when three Sundays occur in one week. The obdurate parent is duly confounded and the lovers made happy by the appearance of two ship captains who have circumnavigated the earth in opposite directions. The bringing together of three Sundays in this bit of fiction is matched by the anecdote in a recent book of travel telling how the pious passengers on a vessel bound for the Philippines placarded the cabin one Sunday morning with notices of divine service to occur at a given hour, but before the hour arrived the Captain posted another notice announcing that the 180th meridian had been crossed and it was now Monday morning.

An article in the current Century explains the puzzle, not only in the ordinary way but also with some interesting historical side lights. Any one who has traveled knows that going westward fifteen degrees causes one to lose an hour, while traveling eastward the same distance results in the gain of an hour. By the time the journey has extended half way around the earth there is a difference of twenty-four hours between travelers who have come in opposite directions. As longitude is now universally measured from Greenwich, the meridian on the other side of the earth from Greenwich has by common consent become the international date line where the discrepancy is corrected. This 180th meridian is near the middle of the Pacific Ocean. It is a curious fact that the United States, since its acquisition of the Philippines, is the only nation in the world that has to cross the date line in order to reach one of its dependencies.

The portion of the Century's article that is most interesting is its account of the confusion that at first resulted from the absence of any recognized date line, and the erratic course of the line before the 180th meridian was finally agreed upon. British, French, and other European colonists went to the Orient by way of the Cape of Good Hope, while the Spanish and certain British explorers came to the Asiatic coast by way of Cape Horn. The result was that neighboring settlements often went by different calendars. Gradually an irregular date line became established, beginning in Southern Alaska, coasting Kamchatka and Japan, but running on the other side of the Philippines. At that time no day was dropped in sailing from San Francisco to Manila. The result was that vessels arrived a day ahead of the local time. To remove this inconvenience the Archbishop of Manila decreed that December 30, 1844, should be immediately followed by January 1, 1845. This brought the date line to the hither side of the Philippines. In 1867 the purchase of Alaska further straightened the line by moving it to Behring Strait, though it has all ways continued outside the farthest island of the Aleutians. Since then there has gradually grown up a non-official agreement to regard the 180th meridian as the international date line. The line deviates from the meridian, both at the Aleutian Islands and at Oceanica, but it follows the meridian for the greater part of its course, and it will always be necessary to drop a day or add one in crossing the line, as long as we continue using our present system of counting time.

IAN MACLAREN ON THE CHURCH.

It has been known for some time that Ian Maclaren has been critically studying modern church methods, and the results are now to be made public in The Ladies' Home Journal. His first article is called "The Candy-Pull System in the Church," and in this he frankly states what many have felt but have scarcely ventured to publicly assert with regard to social tendencies of the church. The great English author will then handle "The Mutineer in the Church," and after that answer that somewhat startling question, "Should the Old Minister be Shot?"

NEBRASKA'S GREAT CORN CROP.

300,000,000 BUSHELS IS THE ESTIMATE AND IT MAY BE MORE.

A conservative estimate of Nebraska's corn crop, which is now safe from frost, is 300,000,000 bushels. It is hard for the mind to grasp just what these figures mean.

Counting 60 bushels of shelled corn to the load, it would take five million teams to haul the crop to market, a caravan that would reach around the world. It will take an army of 80,000 men over two months to husk it if they husk 60 bushels a day each. If loaded into cars of 30,000 capacity it would take 600,000 cars to haul the crop, a train over 4,000 miles long. At no time within the past ten years has there been such a tendency on the part of farmers to look for new locations, either to better themselves or to provide homes for their children. Many sections in the East are overcrowded while thousands of acres of rich, well watered lands can still be had in Nebraska and Northern Kansas at comparatively low prices. Thousands will visit that country this fall as the railroads have announced cheap-rate harvest excursions for September 19, October 3 and 17.

LIBERTY AND DEVELOPMENT.

Lovers of liberty, lovers of truth, who believe the revelations of God, one of which declares, "It is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another" (D. and C. 98:10), will see in the results following action of the late Chamber of Deputies of Belgium a cause for gratification. The unequal suffrage laws of Belgium have caused open violence and other disturbances among the people. Recently the Chamber "rejected a motion to revise the constitution, the vote standing 59 for, against 31. The motion was intended to pave the way for a universal suffrage bill."

The Literary Digest, August 5, 1899, thus comments upon the situation, including quotations from Belgian papers which follow:—

THE BELGIAN TROUBLES.

Since 1884, the Catholic Party has ruled in Belgium. Its opponents were unable to muster sufficient force, for, being divided into Liberals, Radicals, and Socialists, and giving full scope to the individual opinion of the voter, they were ill matched against a party whose followers are trained to strict obedience on religious principles. Of late, however, the opposition parties have shown a tendency to unite, and have been hoping for victory at the next election. To prevent this, the premier has proposed certain "reforms," suggested by M. Schollaert, abolishing the "blanket ballot" in the large cities, but retaining it in the country districts. This, it is charged, would insure the election of Clerical candidates where the Catholics are in the majority, and while enabling the Clericals to avail themselves of the services of a strong Catholic minority in the cities, the Opposition minority in the country districts would be prevented from making itself felt.

Serious riots were the result. Stormy scenes in Parliament ensued. A general strike was threatened by the Socialists, who have sufficient power to make good their word, and the Government has been forced to pigeonhole the obnoxious redistribution bill. The Independence Belge, Brussels, says:—

"There is only one way out of the difficulty. The country must be divided anew, yes; but in such a way that the majority rules. A redistribution which is intended solely to benefit the Clerical Party is not to be tolerated. The system which allows the Clericals to obtain a seat at a second ballot must also be abolished. What we need is a system which enables each party to muster its full strength on the first ballot, and quiet will not return for good until these much needed reforms have been accomplished."

It appears that the opposition parties are very much in earnest, and that the militia could not well be depended upon to support either the king, the ministry, or the present parliamentary majority. The Etoile Belge expresses itself in the main as follows:—

"The militia is with the people. At Doornik, when General Tournay called for cheers for the king, only three officers responded, the men all remained silent. At Liège a militia officer addressed the crowd as follows: 'We have inscribed on our swords the device "For King and Country." But if the king interferes with the rights of the people, we will say: "For the Country only." Every one who is not an out-and-out supporter of the Clerical Party indorses these sentiments."

The Clerical Gazette de Liege suggests a referendum, but it seems that the majority is so certain to be with the Opposition that the Government would only suffer moral defeat by risking a referendum. "There is no doubt that even good Catholics are revolting against the Clerical Party," says the Paris Journal des Debats. Naturally developments are watched with much interest in the neighboring countries, for a revolution in Belgium would lead to serious international complications.

There is cause for gratification in the growing sentiment in Belgium for universal suffrage, and in the fact that the Clericals and other ultraconservative elements have been obliged to place themselves on record. The people are growing in independence and are vigorously demanding their rights, and propose to assert them; peacefully if they can, forcefully if they must. Success to the Belgian patriots.

Another, and also a significant indication of the growth of the spirit of liberty in the world, is seen in the result of the late German elections. The canal bill, a pet project of the Emperor and his government, and which was strongly urged upon the Prussian Landtag, was rejected by the constitutional assembly and the bill defeated. For the first time in the history of Prussia, it is said, the mandates or wishes of the Kaiser were disregarded and the government subjected to ignominious defeat. This is encouraging. It indicates the development of independent thought and manifests a proper disposition to think and act independently, a wholesome sign indeed.

The world is yet to be taught the "self-evident" "truths" that "all men are created free and equal, and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness"—liberty and life, both; both free bestowments by the Creator.

The following item shows what is stirring the independent-minded among the German people of Prussia. It serves to show the friction that has been and is being generated, and which must eventuate in defeat for the Kaiser and larger liberties to the people:—

Berlin, Aug. 31.—Action against officials who voted against the canal has taken the form of a warning not to do it again. The official paper to-day publishes a communication to the provincial presidents, in which the ministry regrets that a portion of the state officials appear to be unaware of their obligations to the higher political officials. The "landraete," the nearest German equivalent of justices of the peace, are privileged to allow themselves to be guided by the opinions and wishes of their districts, but they are obligated to actively support the government, especially in important questions. Under no circumstances may their personal views cross the government's designs or interfere with its plans. Such lack of discipline is contrary to the traditions of the Prussian civil service, and cannot be endured. The ministry hopes it will not be necessary to take further steps.

And later we have this also from Berlin:—

The Kaiser has taken another step against the opponents of his canal schemes and has banished those dignitaries who voted negatively from the court.

In Austria the same general causes for discontent exist and the same mutterings are heard. "The people," affected by the microbe that is propagating the prevailing epidemic of popular rights and equal privileges, are demanding changes and reforms which must inevitably result in their final and complete emancipation. We quote from the Chicago Tribune, August 25, 1899, the following, published under the heading, "Discontent in Austria":—

Men of all parties are uniting to make miserable the life of Count von Thun, the Austrian Prime Minister. That dissatisfaction which has given rise to the frequent demonstrations that are the theme of dispatches from Vienna and Prague is due to the fact that Austria is being governed without a parliament, which is in defiance of the constitution. When the Emperor found that parliament would not come to an agreement on matters of legislation the parliament was dissolved, and since then Austria has been governed by decree, just as Russia is governed. Through Count Thun the Emperor gives effect to his will. One of the latest measures to irritate the people is the imposition of a tariff on sugar, that has doubled the price, and this was done without the sanction of parliament. Indignation meetings are broken up by the police, and the military suppress any attempts at remonstrance by the people, leading to constant turmoil in the empire. Count von Thun is well fitted to carry out a reactionary policy, being a hater of democracy, a retired army officer, and one of the richest men in Bohemia. He is likewise brave, and has the courage to fight to the end in support of his reactionary principles.

This is another case of "taxation without representation," which sometime ago was ruled out of date, and which stirred another people to successful revolution and contention for popular government.

The universal, the general and widespread movements of the race, as by a common impulse, in the line of human liberty, the desire for a full and fair opportunity to develop and enjoy the privileges of life equally, is in itself a strong evidence of the divinity of such influences and of such principles. A power superior to man is being diffused abroad upon the human family, and he is slow indeed to observe who fails to see the constant and increasing movements of the masses toward liberty universal.

All hail the glorious day when all mankind shall be free and equal. Success to the divinely commissioned men and women, who, baptized with the spirit of true fraternity and equality, would and do proclaim liberty throughout the world "unto all the inhabitants thereof." May God strengthen their hands for the conflict, whether waged with tongue or pen, with spear or sword. They are in unity with the master spirits of the age upon whom God has breathed a portion of his strength that they may stand forth boldly and fearlessly in the day of battle.

It is comforting to read what has been revealed in "these last days," in which "God has spoken unto us by his Son," concerning constitutional liberty and equal rights "to all mankind." We quote section 95, paragraph 2, Doctrine and Covenants, as follows:—

And now, verily I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, It is my will that my people should observe to do all things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifieth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil. I, the Lord God, maketh you free; therefore, ye are free indeed: and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these, cometh of evil.

Again, from the same, section 98, paragraph 10, as follows:—

Those who have been scattered by their enemies, it is my will that they should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine, and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.

The spirit of the latter-day work is thus seen to be broad and true, and such as we are compelled to admire, and which we should imitate. It furnishes substantial ground for hope of enjoyment of "the glorious liberty of the children of God," both "in this world, and in the world to come." It means and stands for God through liberty enlightening the world, preparing and conditioning the masses for development, discipline, emancipation, education, redemption—the means in his hands—the eternal principles by which alone can deliverance be wrought and perpetuated. Humanity, like the plant of the field, needs proper opportunities for growth, for culture, for fruit-bearing. Enslaved mentally or bodily, it is impossible to bring about the fruitage, the results possible under right conditions. Hence liberty, access to equal privileges, and right to obtain and enjoy, are among the eternal, the necessary, the absolute necessities in the matter. It is therefore apparent that in the application of God's fatherhood, which means his "eternal purpose," that all shall have free opportunity of and access to the means of development, we have the application of scientific principles, of truth itself, in all its phases, material, social, political, economical, and spiritual, to the race. God is manifest in principle. God lives to assert, to maintain, and to apply principle. Without the application of principle there is no God in any movement so lacking; hence only so far as any people, any person, any association, applies principle—truth—truth unequivocal, unhampered, undiluted by evasions or policies or methods contrary thereto, are they, he, or it in harmony and in rapport with God; justified, and accepted with him. We hold these truths also to be "self-evident." Jesus said, "He who is of the truth heareth my voice;" that is, obeys true principles and seeks not to vary therefrom.

God's "paths are straight" and "his course is one eternal round." It is not seemly that humanity should longer continue determined to move in contrary orbits. It is becoming to wise, considerate men and women that they study and seek to learn the ways of God—his paths and methods—and conform and adhere firmly, faithfully, truly thereto; and suffer no one, few or many, no influences, however popular, to permit them to drift from God and truth. Human history past and present is replete with the sad and distressing examples of human failure, human drifting, human miseries, caused by failure to be governed by and in harmony with the divine will, the very law of life and being.

It becomes those upon whom the light of the latter-day glory has dawned to see to it that their conceptions, their sympathies, their acts, their movements, their personal influence and agency, public and private, are exerted in support of truth—diamond truth, pure, true, just, grand, and unsullied. It is the palladium of the liberties of the race. It forms the only substantial hope for attainment and usefulness. Observed, it will bring its faithful follower to the presence and into the image and character of God himself, the infinite and eternal embodiment of truth.

How important is our profession of faith in God; how true should be the characters and service of those called to "put on Christ!" Shall we be content to be mere professors of the faith? Shall we stop growing and attain merely to childhood in our spiritual relationship to Christ? Let it not be, but let us be strong, passing safely, judiciously, wisely, through the formative periods of Christlike manhood and womanhood—our spiritual and moral childhood and youth—unto the fuller and mature stature to which we are called in Christ. By so doing we shall become able to accomplish in his service; being not children in understanding nor in character, but rounded out and developed in symmetrical harmony and equilibrium of character, having "the mind of Christ;" able to discern and faithful to do in the work unto which we have been called.

"Many are 'called,' but few are 'chosen.'" Many are baptized into the kingdom, but few, comparatively few, attain to the highly developed spirituality and wisdom and effectiveness seen so fully developed in the Christ and in his really spiritual and devoted followers.

Let us strive, all of us, to be among the "called," the "chosen," and the "faithful;" that God may be in us "to will and to do of his own good pleasure." Such is the designed freedom and glorious liberty of the children of God.

It is in evidence of and in keeping with the divinity of present developments for good in the world, that God has brought forth the kingdom of God and established it upon the earth that the fullest development and complete salvation of the people be provided for and placed within the reach of all. The revival of letters, the re-discovery of arts, and the invention of new ones in the renaissance, turned the people from intellectual sleep to mental activity. A spirit of universal inquiry moved upon the masses as a common impulse. Light was radiated, diffused abroad. Men and women awoke from the stupor of mental and moral and civil stagnation, touched by a common inspiration, Desire for freedom from bondage also moved them to demand improved civil and political conditions; the power of priest and king was largely curtailed and new significance began to attach to the worth and rights of the man, the individual.

Physical discoveries made possible advanced civilization, in which further privileges brought out and developed the mental, moral, and intellectual life of the people. Man, given opportunity, began to comprehend and to use the forces about him. Life took on a broader meaning; the scope of view was broadened as the elevation of the masses enabled them to see abroad and beyond. Larger life, increased breadth of mind, greater intelligence resulted; and the good work of education goes on in the application of principles of physical, mental, moral, and general science to the race.

This divine economy or spirit of liberty of action is destined to be extended abroad until liberty, light, freedom, toleration, equal privileges, and equal opportunities to life and happiness, are enjoyed by all, in all the world. No force is able nor will any be able to withstand it; it is divine in its origin, to be universal in its ultimate; for God himself is the author and finisher of the work of universal emancipation.

We are therefore, as those called to be free indeed and to proclaim the truth which makes men free, in sympathy with every means and end designed to liberate the oppressed and to extend liberty throughout the world. We are called to be active supporters and strong helpers of every true movement to that end, at home and abroad; "to every kindred, tongue, and people."

SCIENTISTS AND THE DOCTORS.

The Ensign quotes from the Kansas City, Missouri, Journal, for September 9, 1899:—

Springfield, Illinois, Sept. 8.—Attorney General Akin rendered an opinion to-day that the medical practice of 1899 does not prohibit the treatment of disease by mental, or spiritual methods by Christian Scientists or others where no medicine is used, and that where a person dies during such treatment, it is not an offense under the criminal code of Illinois.

Attorney General Akin is a sensible man, and states an opinion on just ground.

While we do not accept the theories of the Christian Scientists as applied in their methods, we can see no just reason why persons who are sick, or their friends for them, should be compelled by law to employ physicians whose methods are no more infallible than the ministrations of skillful nurses and prayerful friends.

If there were remedies known to the medical fraternity which were specific and infallible cures for recognized diseases, it might be more reasonable to compel sick people to take such remedies at the hands of medical practitioners; but while it is acknowledged that there are no specifics known for any one, or all diseases; and that even the remedies that are known and used do not have the same effect upon all persons, owing to constitutional differences, and temperamental conditions; and that the same remedy given to the same person does not always have the same effect, for reasons not known to either physician or patient, it is absurd to urge that physicians only shall be privileged to give pills and potions, kill or cure the victims of disease, and be protected in their privilege to do so by law.

It may be said that doctors do not kill patients. Perhaps not; but who knows whether they do, or not? Do the doctors choose to claim that they always cure; that no one dies under their administrations? Who is it that kills a patient, when that patient is under the hands of an operating surgeon, who knows that the chances for life under the effects of such operation are as one to two or one to ten against recovery? Who is it that is responsible for the life, or chance for life, where the physician neglects the patient, neglects, or refuses to give proper attention to the possible changing conditions of the sick man?

Physicians all agree that it is not in their power to give life. Some say, If the patient has vitality enough to respond to the remedies given, then the doctor may cause a recovery by means of the medicines given; if not—ah, there's the rub!

Again, as there are quacks and charlatans among scientists, healers, curers of human ills, curers by prayer; so are there quacks, charlatans, and impostors in the practice of medicine. And, in the recognized regular medical fraternity there are different orders, differing materially in their theories of disease, the causes for and remedies calculated to eradicate. The range from the homeopaths, to the old school, through the herbalist, the mineralogist, the massage and bath advocates. And it is a pertinent question among those being and to be sick, which of these varying schools of medical practitioners should be entitled by law to care for the people, cure them, kill them, or let them die when sick, and which should be excluded from such privileges.

We are not writing against the doctors to deride them or their profession; for our experience with them has fixed our respect for them as men, brave, conscientious, benevolent, as a class; and where really skillful, great benefactors of their fellows; but until they can show, by a better class of evidences than we have yet seen, that they are absolutely necessary to the prolongation of human life; that their practice is invariably followed by cure of and return to health of those who unfortunately become sick, the people should not be compelled by law to employ them, take their remedies, and pay their bills.

Attorney General Akin, is surely correct when he urges that when a person dies while under the treatment of the Christian Scientists, or others who employ mental or spiritual methods, "it is not an offense under the criminal code of Illinois;" nor should it be in Iowa. If a mind curer, a Christian Scientist, or one who believes in the anointing with oil and the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick should be made liable to prosecution and punishment, by fine, imprisonment, or death, because a person undergoing their treatment respectively should die; then for the same reason, and upon the same principles should an allopathic, an eclectic, a homeopathic, or any other sort of a physician be subject to like prosecution and punishment, whenever man or woman or child should die while being treated by them. If the first-named should be held responsible for the lives of those whom they treat, so should the last named, and for the same reasons, and upon the same principles.

MAYSVILLE REUNION.

The tabernacle and some tents were up in Jackson's Grove, near Maysville, Missouri, as early as September 7. Late in the afternoon of that date there came suddenly upon the camp a severe rain and wind storm which leveled the large tabernacle and also all or nearly all the individual tents. The few who were on the ground were treated to a complete drenching.

On the 8th the reunion was duly organized with Elders H. O. Smith and A. White in charge.

We arrived on the ground the evening of the 9th and participated in the proceedings until the last, except the closing prayer meeting held the morning of the 18th.

Perfect order prevailed, and a good spirit was manifested. One peculiar feature is worthy of mention. No police were appointed and to the credit of Maysville and vicinity be it said that no advantage was taken of this omission.

Health was more than usually good. After the storm in the beginning was past the weather was perfect until the last Saturday night and Sunday, when a heavy rainstorm dampened the camp, but not the ardor of the campers. Saturday night the large tent leaked so much that many sat under umbrellas during the service, while the noise of the falling rain on the canvas threatened to drown the speaker's voice; but Bro. M. T. Short seemed specially adapted to meet the emergency, and his voice arose above the din of the storm while he delivered an elaborate address on first principles. The preaching was usually very good, and considerable spirituality was manifested in the social meetings.

The general missionary force was represented by Heman C. Smith, of the Twelve; G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric; J. C. Foss, M. T. Short, H. O. Smith, M. F. Gowell, and F. J. Chatburn, of the Seventy; and Alfred White, of the Elders. Quite a supplement of the local force was also in attendance.

Graceland College interests were represented by Bro. Dr. J. H. Hansen; the Bishop's Department by Bro. G. H. Hilliard. The Religio work was in charge of Sr. Louise Palfrey. Children's day exercises, including Sunday school work, was in charge of Bro. C. P. Faul. The interests of the publishing department were looked after by Bro. E. A. Smith and wife.

The people of Maysville received and entertained the visitors courteously.

The DeKalb County Democrat gave us special mention, publishing names and addresses of visiting ministers, names of campers on the ground, and the program from the 14th to 18th, with the following comment:—

The Democrat is a newspaper, therefore it accords to every religious denomination the same fair treatment, publishing the news pertaining to each without bias or prejudice. Our readers belong to all churches, therefore we publish the news of all churches. The Constitution of the United States guarantees religious liberty to every citizen that he may worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. The Methodist, the Catholic, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Latter Day Saint, the Christian, and the Salvation Army soldier of the cross have equal rights under the Constitution of the republic, with special privileges for none. We have visited all churches and find that all are working to the same end—the salvation of the soul—and they differ only in their creed. We are satisfied to let each denomination continue along their own lines. By visiting the meetings of the Latter Day Saints we find the members of this church to differ from the congregations of other churches only in their creed. They are as intelligent, respectable, and law-abiding as the members of other churches. They are not polygamists, but denounce this evil in as strong terms as any church. Their meetings are conducted the same as at other churches. Perfect order prevails and the members seem to be a refined, intelligent, and cultured body of people.

We do not think it necessary to thank the Democrat for telling the truth about us; but in this age of misrepresentation and unreliability we certainly appreciate the courage and fairness of the Democrat in frankly telling the situation as it was. We also heartily commend the sentiment expressed regarding religious liberty and equal rights under the Constitution of the Republic.

The reunion was decided a success and provision made for the holding of the eighth annual reunion to be held in 1900. Bro. T. T. Hinderks, C. P. Faul, A. W. Head, Ben Dice, and A. B. Hawley were appointed a committee of arrangements. May success attend their future gatherings as in the past.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. N. Roberts writes thus of his work among the people at Bemidji, Minnesota, where he spoke, night about, with several ministers of the Seventh-day Advent faith, but who refused to debate; date September 17:—

Books received, and many thanks for your trouble in getting them for me. The night about preaching is over and they never tried to answer any of the doctrines of the church, but came in with Tullidge's History and attacked the character of Joseph Smith. Their text was, "Mormonism vs. the Bible." After his first speech I showed he had belabored himself to show us wrong by a rejected history. It had the desired effect with the people. Next he was going to show up the rottenness of the Book of Covenants; how it contradicted the Bible. But I was able by the blessing of God to soon silence his battery on that score, showing that every part that he used harmonized with the Bible; and as I would read the texts from both books you could see him wilt, as it were, and the eyes of the people would rest upon him. They could see how he had garbled the work in order to carry his side of the questions. They refused me the use of the books they used, which was a give away to them in all candid thinking minds. I caught them in a lie and showed it to the people. They made the statement public and private that they (their church) never had any rules of order and did not use them at all. I was looking over some of their pamphlets and found in their catalogue two books of rules published by them and on the market at fifty cents a copy. They refused emphatically to debate any single subject, the Sabbath and soul-sleeping included. I was to have another speech, but cowards as they are, they took that privilege away and used it themselves. I am thankful to our heavenly Father for his Holy Spirit that was with me. At times I was so full of the Spirit I scarcely knew whether I was on the platform or not. The meeting was held in the Adventist's tent and was very well attended for such a busy time. I only wish it could have been a little later in the season and that we could have announced a regular debate. Many people wanted it that way and would have attended had it been so. I begin here to-morrow (Sunday) at eleven o'clock.

Bro. John Smith, New Bedford, Massachusetts, September 17, presents the following correction:—

In the Saints' Herald for September 13, in your article on your Massachusetts trip, you say John Smith is district president. This is an error; Bro. Richard Bullard is our district president. "Honor to whom honor is due."

THE TWO COVENANTS.—NO. 5.

THE BIBLE IS THE OLD TESTAMENT AND THE NEW TESTAMENT; OR, THE OLD AND THE NEW COVENANTS.

BY ELDER JOSEPH F. BURTON.

THE NEW COVENANT.

Jesus came to Israel. He never preached to the Gentiles. Before his death and resurrection, he sent his disciples to the lost sheep of the house of Israel only. And Israel was most zealous of the law, but they were lost sheep, although they thought that they observed the law very strictly. Jesus went among them, saying, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He showed them from Moses and the prophets and the psalms that he was indeed their Messiah, but they would not receive him. He offered to them the law of redemption, by which they might be free from sin and enjoy the communion of the Holy Spirit, but they rejected him. He manifested the divinity of his mission by extraordinary miracles and signs among them: The sick were healed, the lame walked, the blind saw, the lepers were cleansed, multitudes fed, devils cast out, the tempest stilled, and the dead raised to life by that Christ who offered to Israel redemption from the bondage of Sinai's covenant and from sin, and promised to them under his new covenant an inheritance in that heavenly Canaan which should be eternal, but they still refused him. And when he made known plainly to them the divinity of his mission, they being yet zealous of that old Sinai law, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," cried out, "Crucify him. Crucify him."

What was the covenant which he offered to them? It was the gospel—believe in God and in Christ, repent of all sins and dead works, all false or self-righteousness, be baptized in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, for the remission of sins, and receive the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and then live an upright life. These upon the part of man. And God will bestow the remission of sins, and the Holy Spirit and its gifts, and the ministering of angels. These with the help of God the Father and Jesus Christ will aid man in conquering sin and evil while in this world, and will raise him from the dead and give man an inheritance among the redeemed ones in celestial glory.

This new covenant was offered to Israel. It was refused by them, so the apostle said to them:—

It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.—Acts 13: 46, 47.

THE NEW COVENANT TO BE RECEIVED BY ISRAEL.

When the apostle was writing concerning this he said:—

Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob: for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.—Rom. 11: 25-27.

And the place in which it is "written" says:—

And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord.—Isa. 59: 20.

Therefore at the time that God makes that new covenant with Israel there will come out of Sion a deliverer, who will take away their sins. For under that new covenant they will be baptized for the remission of sins, for that is the covenant with them, that their sins and iniquities will be taken away.

But before that time comes, Israel must be gathered, and the Deliverer will come unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, (the law was added because of transgression,) and standing upon mount Olivet will deliver Israel. Then will they recognize their Redeemer. Then will the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, and all Israel will be saved by entering into the new covenant, and then their sins shall be taken away.

And under that new covenant with the new law in their hearts, they cannot remember that old covenant, to regard it, for they will know God the Father, and Jesus Christ the Son of God; neither will they observe that Sabbath which was a memorial of their deliverance from Egypt, for,

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt. But, The Lord liveth which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land.—Jer. 23: 7, 8.

The miraculous power of God which will be manifested in bringing up Israel from the land of the north, especially spoken of by the prophet, as well as from all other countries, will so far exceed the deliverance from Egypt, that it will be forgotten, and after they are thus gathered into their own land the Lord says by the prophet,

And it shall come to pass, when ye be multiplied and increased in the land, in those days, saith the Lord, they shall say no more, The ark of the covenant of the Lord: neither shall it come to mind; neither shall they remember it; neither shall they visit it; neither shall that be done any more. At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord.—Jer. 3: 16, 17.

When Israel forgets the ark of the covenant, he will forget the covenant; when he no longer says, The Lord liveth which brought us up out of Egypt, he will not keep the sabbath which was given to him as a memorial of that deliverance.

And when Israel are gathered again, and when they "turn to the Lord, the vail shall be taken away," and when the vail is taken away what will they see? Will they see the old covenant? No. They see that now; but they will see that he whom they pierced and wounded on Calvary was their Messiah, the Son of God, God with us, and therefore, that the gospel which he brought to them was and is the power of God unto life everlasting; then the parable of the prodigal son will be fulfilled. And the apostle says,

Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness? . . . For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?—Rom. 11: 12, 15.

Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as a hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: . . . And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.—Isa. 35: 5, 6, 10.

MOUNT SINAI AND MOUNT SION.

Abraham a descendant of Shem, who was a son of Noah, received the promise of Canaan's land for himself and his seed; and another promise, that in his seed all the world should be blessed. And in fulfilling these promises, God ever kept the children of Abraham as a peculiar people, and after their sojourn in Egypt he led them by his mighty power out of bondage into liberty. And from Sinai, that mount which burned with fire, roared with mighty thundering, was made vivid by flashing lightning, and the ever increasing sound of a trumpet, came the voice of God; all of which produced such an awe upon the millions of lately liberated Israelites, that they entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more. And from thence came Sinai's covenant to Israel and for Israel, the first covenant of redemption for them as a nation, redeeming them from Egyptian bondage and idolatry. And Moses did not know the name of Israel's God until he was told to say to Israel, "I AM" hath sent you. Therefore he whose power and majesty were visible on the mount was he who told them, "I am the Lord thy God," and that was Jesus of Nazareth.

And because Israel would not or could not abide in the gospel, their God gave to them laws, commandments, and statutes, the tenor of which were, "Thou shalt not," the principles of which were, "An eye for an eye." Under such laws no forgiveness was possible, no remission of sins could be had, no hope for the sinner, except in looking forward to the fulfillment of the covenant made to Abraham. But Abraham's seed had not yet come; not yet had Israel learned the law by which they might be redeemed. And for ages Israel sought to walk uprightly, but ever wandering and returning; violating repeatedly the covenant so sacredly made at the holy mount, then repenting, and God in mercy forgiving them, until the law, finally, was made of no effect by the traditions of their elders and rabbis, and then their God, upon his part, annulled the covenant. And when the Savior was put to death on Calvary, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, which hid from curious gaze the ark of the covenant, and the holy of holies into which no foot might tread but that of the high priest once a year, upon which no eye might look except he who annually offered an offering for himself and for the sins of the people. But no more is there a holy of holies on earth; for the heavenly tabernacle is established, and our great high priest has entered into the holy of holies in the heavenly tabernacle not made with hands; and the earthly tabernacle is ended with all its solemn service of offering and sacrifice, and the ministration of that law and its glory is swallowed up in the ministration of the gospel and the glory of the Spirit of God. And now as the seed has come, and the way into the holy of holies is opened, man may receive a remission of sins, and may receive of the divine nature and thus become the sons and daughters of God.

And when the true Pentecost was fully come, again was God's power displayed; not as at mount Sinai, on the mountain, in thunder, in tempest, in lightning; not in trumpet and darkness, but in the hearts, in the minds, in the understanding of the disciples of Christ. The sound, indeed, of a rushing mighty wind was heard, and tongues of fire which rested upon the disciples was seen, but it was the Holy Spirit of God, producing, not awe only, but giving miraculous power to those who received it. And under its power the apostle said to assembled Israel in Canaan's land, REPENT, AND BE BAPTIZED EVERY ONE OF YOU IN THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS, AND YE SHALL RECEIVE THE GIFT OF THE HOLY GHOST. For the PROMISE IS UNTO YOU, AND TO YOUR CHILDREN.—Acts 2: 38, 39.

The promise was to them and to their children, for they were the children of Abraham. But Abraham had two sons; one was rejected, the other was received. Which son were those Jews the descendants of? Those who accepted Christ and cast out the old covenant were the children of Abraham through Isaac. Those who rejected Christ and his covenant, were the children of Ishmael, and Jesus said to such, "Ye are of your father the devil." Jesus was the seed of Abraham, as was Isaac; and the children of Ishmael mocked Isaac again in Jesus, and were cast out, they and their covenant, with all its ordinances and temple ceremonies.

And this promise on Pentecost day was the promise of the Holy Ghost which is received through the covenant of Abraham and Isaac, and not through the covenant of Moses or Ishmael.

And not only "unto you, and to your children," is this promise, but to all the world. For in Abraham and his seed all nations shall be blessed, but in Moses and Ishmael only Israel was included in the covenant.

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek. . . . And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.—Gal. 3: 27-29.

And this is the glad tidings of great joy to all people. Thus Israel was again before a mount. Not a mount that might not be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness and darkness and tempest, but unto mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant.—Heb. 12: 22-24.

Hear, O Israel, The seed of Abraham is come; he is Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and in him is fulfilled the law and the prophets; and the covenant of Sinai with its glory has passed away in the bringing in of a better hope, by which all Israel, and all the world, may draw nigh unto God, through him, and his message of eternal life.

ISRAEL BEFORE CALVARY.

See yonder devout Israelite to-day, standing before the cross on Calvary. He is not there to worship, but to wonder. How devoted he is, for in all his generations from Abraham, he has been looking for the promised seed, whom they have known as the Messiah, who should have come near two thousand years ago. And because he has been gazing so long in anxious expectation of his coming to redeem Israel, there has settled upon his countenance an ever present peering look, a patient gazing look, a far off look, as though he would pierce the walls of the far off future with his steadfast gaze, and hasten the coming of their long expected Messiah.

He looks backward three thousand eight hundred years and hears the beautiful promises to Abraham: Israel shall dwell in Canaan's land, and all the world shall be blessed in thee and in thy seed.

He afterwards sees Jerusalem—beloved Jerusalem—in her glory; the magnificent temple adorning the city; the renowned rabbis instructing the aged and the youth in the mysteries of the great law from Sinai; and all Israel rejoicing.

Then came he whom men called the Anointed One, the Messiah. But says this Israelite in his soliloquy, He did not come as a conqueror, nor as a king to deliver us from the power of Rome's hated government. And as he violated our law by ascribing to himself the title of God, thus making himself equal with God, we could not receive him. We have a law, and by our law he ought to die because he made himself the son of God. And then there came O such a long night of sorrow to Israel. Our temple defiled and destroyed; our people slain or scattered over the wide world; and no nation so small or insignificant but might with impunity pillage, deceive, rob, and kill Israelites. Over eighteen centuries have passed since our temple was destroyed. And all these long, weary years we, in exile, have been looking anxiously for our Messiah. And we are well-nigh disheartened. And our rabbis now tell us that we have made the mistake of believing too literally the word of God by our prophets. Ah me! that cannot be, for the promises of God are sure and steadfast. But can it be possible that our fathers made a mistake when they slew this most remarkable man, before whose cross I stand? Was he, is he indeed our Savior of whom Moses and the prophets wrote?

Calvary's cross, he would fain accept Jesus as the Messiah. But he immediately hears the roar of the thunder, and sees the lightning's flash of Sinai, and hears again, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord." And there settles again upon his countenance the fixed, far off looking gaze; and with an appearance of almost utter despair he turns away from Calvary.

He is still waiting! gazing! How long O Lord! how long, ere the blindness shall depart and the veil be taken away from Israel, and he be permitted to see clearly that Jesus was indeed Immanuel, God with us, and that on Calvary ended the thunders of Sinai and all Israel were then made free to accept God the Father and God the Son.

O, thou God of Israel. O Jesus, thou Lamb of God, have mercy upon Israel. Remember thou thy covenants with their fathers, and burst asunder the veil which is upon their hearts in the reading of thy word, as thou didst the veil of their temple so long, long ago, and free Israel from Sinai's bondage. Then shall all the righteous of the earth rejoice and be glad and sing praises unto thee forever and ever.

PAPETE, Tahiti, January 14, 1899.

Letter Department.

MANEBACH, i Thür., Germany, Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—No, doubt some like to hear from this side of the globe. Three sermons is all I have to report, and it is just possible that will be all that will be preached in Germany. I have succeeded in getting permission to preach in private houses, in the province of Schwarzburg, Sondershausen. At present I have it to do with the government of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. I have written a letter to the Duke Alfred. He is an English prince. He informed the ministerium that I wanted to preach openly in his realm, and that body, in turn, wrote to the superintendent of the preachers to wait on me. From the superintendent I received a letter asking me to correspond with him in the German language or speak in person.

He was very friendly, and said he was to find out what I had, and then report. I told what I had to preach, and that it belonged not to the common people only, but also to the preachers, and that I was born and raised in Manebach; that I received my education there and was well instructed in the Lutheran doctrine, therefore he should consider that I must have been aware before I came to Germany that I would have to meet the learned divines, and unless I knew that I had more truth than they had, there would be no use of my mission here. I told of God, who is a God to-day; of Jesus; of the angel's appearing; of Joseph Smith the prophet of God at the eleventh hour or last dispensation; of the authority and first principles of the everlasting gospel with the signs following them that believe it.

I told him the reason why only a few go to church was the absence of the truth, and therefore no Spirit of God, no signs and blessings, because no authority; therefore the people had no desire to go to church while there be no proof that God existed; but if the truth be preached through the Spirit of God and he bestows his blessing by healing the sick, the people would have reason to go to church and would gladly go, to give thanks and praises. His words to me were: "I wish that all Germany were as spiritually-minded as you are."

This happened in Gera, one and one half hour's walk from here. I wrote a letter at once and sent it to the superintendent to send same with his report. In this letter I proposed a thorough examination of my mission and the doctrine that I have, to be preached. I have no answer yet.

I have also reported to our worthy brethren the President and the Bishop of the church that we missionaries in Germany have to pay for our board if we want to eat. If the church cannot pay for what we eat, we cannot stay here; there is absolutely no other way to get anything to eat. Again, we have to rent a private room to preach in; and unless the church can do that, she must get us away from here. I know it is not expected that an elder shall make debts for the church to pay, but this will have to be an exception.

We have no word yet from the brethren, although we have to eat, and accomplish nothing for want of means; but we are patient, because we see in the Herald that they are not at home. We may receive word before this gets in print; we hope so; we are both willing to stay if we are supported.

We confess that with so much money as it takes to labor here much more can be done in America; but if the church is able, she should not give up, but get a footing here as soon as possible. This people has no idea what religion is. With all their so-called learning, they know nothing of God or his ways, and my prayer is that God may give wisdom and direct the affair of the German mission to the salvation of many souls and to his glory.

In answer to the question: Is American money good in Germany? I say, yes. I am weak in body for some time.

I am for the establishing of the truth,
ROBERT OEHRING.

OLIVER, Mich., Sept. 17.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since I have written anything for your columns; being at home to-day on account of our baby's sickness, I will write a few words, that the saints of the district may know of my whereabouts, also what I am doing.

After the conference at Freesoil, June 16 and 17, I went to Cadillac, where I baptized a promising young man and wife; from there I went to the vicinity of Sugar Grove, and in the LaGraff schoolhouse organized another Sunday school, also baptized Bro. George Keith and wife, who I believe will make noble saints. In this district two years ago the Christians and others tried to crowd us out, but they only hurt themselves, for they have let the Sunday school and meetings go down, while we have a flourishing school of near fifty members, with Bro. Buell Shelley as superintendent. There is a growing interest through that part of Mason County, and, I believe, if the work is properly executed there will be a great ingathering ere long.

I delivered three lectures on Mormonism at the Sugar Grove schoolhouse, where they shut me out last winter; but many of the patrons of the district were very indignant about it; so when I went back in the summer, the officers let me in. Although it was a very busy time, the schoolhouse would not hold much over half the people that came to hear. The Free Methodist man that preaches at this place said some very hard things about the saints, and especially about Joseph the Martyr; hence I delivered these lectures, that I might exonerate Joseph and get our cause properly before the people. I believe much good was done, and a great deal of prejudice removed by the friendly feeling manifested by those who came to listen.

Since that time I have been laboring in Boyne City, Mancelona, South Boardman, Kingsley, Inland, and other places, trying to extend the Redeemer's kingdom among the children of earth.

I am especially interested in the Sunday school work, and desire to see this department of church work advance more rapidly in this district in the future than it has in the past.

We invite the coöperation of every saint in the district in this noble cause, for we understand the destiny of this work, and also the nation, depends largely upon the children of to-day. I believe we should heed the counsel of the wise man. Proverbs 22:6: "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Let us see to it, dear fathers and mothers in latter-day Israel, that we do this thing, that our children may be better qualified to carry on this work than we are.

Trusting that we may all labor together in love, for the advancement of this good work, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,
W. D. ELLIS.

CENTRALIA, Kan., Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—I came here about ten days ago, and have preached in the Holiness church in town, also in a schoolhouse six miles in the country, congregations varying in size, but attention good, as a rule. The few saints in this vicinity, with Bro. Frank Pierce as president of branch and superintendent of Sunday school, seem determined to hold the fort. May they be richly blessed and rewarded in their efforts.

I leave to-day for Effingham. We are endeavoring to build up the work in this field, to the best of our ability. Brn. Hudgens and Gurwell have just moved the tent to Elmont. They are both men of energy and push, and deserve the confidence and support of our people and friends. Good use has been made of the tent this summer, and I trust that weather will permit the use of it for some time yet. Saints should not forget to send their contributions for the tent to Bro. L. G. Gurwell, Fanning. Now is the time to labor. Let us all work together, and make a strong effort to advance the work in this beautiful, promising, and inviting field of ours here in the Northeast Kansas district, that we may all be partakers of the reward in store for the faithful children of God.

My field address for the present is No. 219 North Fifth Street, Atchison, Kansas.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, Sept. 14.

Editors Herald:—I was ordained priest in this (Galland's Grove) branch nearly one year ago, and since then have endeavored to discharge my duties as best I knew. I am ready to state that there is a power and Spirit granted to individuals peculiar to their office and calling, but they must pray for it. This must not be construed to mean that God will fill the mouth of anyone he has called to the ministry upon ordinary occasions. God fills the mouths of his servants in the sense that he will allow them to tell yarns in the pulpit as well as any place if they have not been careful to properly post and prepare themselves, and think out clearly the matter to be presented before presenting it to the public.

But is not this "taking thought for the morrow?" Not necessarily. It is preparation for future work as occasions require, let it be on the morrow or any other time. The minister (not God) will be held responsible for what he says in the pulpit. Doesn't God give a called servant his Spirit when preaching? Yes, if the servant is preaching the law and has complied with it himself, by preparation as the law requires. Let it be remarked, however, that the Spirit of God is not a feeling we get sometimes. I like the term disposition better. If we cultivate the disposition towards others that God has towards us, we are sure to have the Spirit of God. A good disposition is more likely to produce the fruits of the Spirit than an impulsive feeling that often comes over us. A good disposition in the pulpit is more commendable than an impulsive feeling to which ministers are quite sure to give expression unless careful.

I know that God blesses his ministers with the power of his Spirit so far as they teach and go according to law, but no farther. We must think and study and pray. If God will not help a minister in thinking a thing out clearly for presentation to the public, pray, how can we expect him to help a minister talk it out clearly? I want the kind of faith in God that believes that every available effort must be put forth on the part of humanity to become efficient, then I can look to a loving Parent (who works only consistently) for aid.

The ministers, especially the young, should not be disappointed if they do not make marked progress. It takes years to become efficient. How many times have you thought over your sermons and time after time discovered some weak point in them? Next time you had the weak point strengthened. So perfection is accomplished. Toadstools spring up in a single day. They bear no fruit and soon die and decay. They leave little or no impression for good. Their existence is not remembered. But the tree of the forest or orchard mounts heavenward but a few inches each year. Its growth is slow and steady, but it bears its fruit year after year, and its good to the world in other ways is almost incalculable. Does not the mind of the Creator as reflected in nature itself protest against rapid growth? I think the Psalmist in his comparison of the righteous to a tree, and the Savior in his comparisons of the kingdom of God to a mustard seed and other things undeveloped, so understood it.

May it be our happy lot to grow unto perfection, is the prayer of,

Your brother in Christ,
FRED B. SHUMATE.

WILBURTON, I. T., Sept. 12.

Editors Herald:—I can say of a truth that the good Lord in his abundant mercy has blessed me beyond measure, in sparing my life when I was, as my neighbors put it, killed in my coal mine by a fall of slate, on the 9th of June, 1899. I knew nothing of the elder administering to me until I felt something on my head; then I began to regain consciousness, and said to myself: "The priesthood of God." Then the Spirit told me I would not die, but should live; for the Father had a work yet for me to do.

While waiting for the elder to come and administer to me I told my sons that it was impossible for me to live unless God would spare my life. I felt the pangs of death coming over me. I told my sons where to bury me and bade them good bye; then I became unconscious until I felt the elder's hands on my head.

Now the good Lord spoke peace to me and gave me the gift of faith; then was my faith centered in the power of God. To him be all the praise for raising me up from death.

I would not let any doctor touch me nor take medicine from any, but I said I would trust God and apply his remedies; so I told my brethren that the Lord said in the Book of Covenants to apply tobacco in cases like mine, so we applied the tobacco, the natural leaf, and let me say it proved a healing balm.

On the 11th of June, two days after I was hurt, my bones began to pop and crack until you could hear them all over the room, so on the 13th, two days later, I felt myself with my hands, then I received the witness of the Spirit that everything was in its proper place; and to my surprise, when I felt myself with my hands my rupture was gone which I had had for about four years.

Now I, Elder Peter Adamson, testify unto all people that I was raised up by the power of God. To him be all the praise forever and forever.

We had a visit from Bro. G. H. Hilliard. He preached to us some soul-cheering sermons and gave the saints such counsel and instruction as none but a servant of God is able to do. If Bro. Hilliard could have staid with us a week longer O, what a work he could have done! for the people were anxious to hear him longer on his soul-cheering sermons.

Bro. E. A. Erwin has paid the Wilburton branch a visit and preached the gospel every night to us for eight nights in the power of God's Spirit. The branch was so well pleased with him that we passed a motion giving him a vote of thanks for his labors of love among us in bringing about peace in the branch. He baptized two into the kingdom of God while here, and I also baptized into the kingdom of God; so the good work rolls on in this part of God's vineyard.

Our heavenly Father is blessing us in administering to the sick, both in the church and to our neighbors outside of the church. May the Lord hasten the time when the saints will be gathered home to Zion and the honest in heart be gathered into the kingdom of God, and prepare ourselves for the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

I now start for Oklahoma for a short visit. Asking you to pray for me, I remain,

Yours in gospel bonds,
PETER ADAMSON.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, Sept. 14.

Editors Herald:—We are still striving against opposing forces and conditions with the usual hopes and fears common to poor, weak humanity. That forces set in opposition to God's work are surely at work both within and without, cannot be denied; and that all branches experience more or less the effect of these forces, there can be no doubt. And I believe our branch has its portion of said experiences. I believe the greatest evil with which we have to contend among the branches is the spiritual indifference manifested by many of the saints. So many are too conspicuous by their absence from the meetings, hardly ever attending any of the services.

God has made it the duty of one of the officers whom he has set in the church to see that the saints meet together often. God certainly has a purpose in this. He knows that it is necessary for his people to meet together, to pray together, to exhort one another; to cheer and strengthen by their presence; to invite the Spirit by their zeal and ardor and manifested love for the work. This is the place God has provided for the saints to obtain their spiritual meat, and if they fail to come and procure a necessary supply where God has provided it, and continue so to neglect, they will surely starve to death spiritually in the end.

Some excuse their non-attendance by saying there are those who do attend who have treated them badly. Now I suppose if the accused would quit attending meetings; or go to those whom they do not know they have offended by any information that they which claim to have been offended has given, that complainant would return to duties again. Here is an open confession of violating God's law, for God has commanded that those receiving offenses should go to the one giving the offense, and go alone, and not go to everyone else and tell them all about it and say nothing to the offender.

Some are becoming discouraged because not many outsiders attend the meetings, and predict that the branch will go down; when they themselves are hardly ever there to set the example. Now I have taken the risk of being called a chronic grumbler and of being accused of talking discouragingly. God forbid that any should become discouraged, but what we think to be evil, either in ourselves or others, should be strongly avoided by us, lest we all should fall in the same error, or something as bad or worse.

I send you clipping from the Oskaloosa Herald, September 7; setting us aright concerning the Utah Church. This is the more appreciated by us because it was written wholly unsolicited by us. Four of the Utah elders made their appearance in our city and did some street preaching, but did not stay very long. One man accused them of practicing polygamy, especially among their leaders, and referred to B. H. Roberts as having four wives. One of the elders replied that they were being misrepresented, for Roberts had but three wives. From present indications I think there is no danger of these people gaining much ground in this vicinity. Hoping for truth's final triumph,

In bonds,
C. B. BROWN.

SELKIRK, Ont., Sept. 16.

Editors Herald:—Our little branch is still intact, and we continue to hold our regular Sunday services. It is about seven years since we were organized. The attainment of our present membership, the totality of which approximates twenty,—two or three less,—has been of a very gradual character. Nearly all who have come in thus far were members of other churches previously, and have come in very intelligently, too. The power of God has been manifested to their knowledge in and out of the branch, so that they are all pretty well confirmed in the faith of this grand and glorious gospel.

It seems to me that the spirituality of a branch is affected to a very large extent by the frequency of its prayer services. Where members are anxious about their manner of life, they will want to meet together often to confess their sins and to refresh their spiritual strength. Where no prayer services are held, the condition of that branch is questionable, suspicious.

Then, again, the success of such services depends in great measure on the interest and activity of all the members during service. It is all right enough to be there in time, to be punctual in attendance; yet he or she who is faithful in these things, but takes no part in the meeting by way of offering vocal prayer or bearing testimony, and then finds fault with their brother who comes late but generally takes part, strain at a gnat and swallow a big elephant. It is incumbent on all to take part. Those who neglect to do so are religious dunces—if they persist in it at length after their duties have been pointed out. Drones are out of the question in this latter-day work. In a social service or saints meeting, one has as much right to be silent as another, and if all remain silent and inactive, the service will be quite foreign to being social. It is a duty as well as a privilege, and none are exempt from obeying it. To simply come to warm a seat, to fill up space, or to observe what is going on, will not answer the purpose of God in instituting such meetings. And to get off the old threadbare "I can't," is a very deficient excuse, for God would not ask of us an impossibility. We have only to study the standard books to find out that he does ask it of us. They are duties which all can perform who are willing to begin at the bottom. A contrary inclination to begin at the top is the one, I fear, which obtains on the part of those who say, "I can't." They may begin with little, but if faithful will end with much. Remember, "To him that hath, to him shall be given," etc.

The Sunday school work also is undoubtedly a very important factor to the church. Truly it is deserving of every care, attention, effort, energy, and time that our finite minds can reasonably bestow upon it. In the interest of this work, we have lately had our Sister Maggie MacGregor among us for a season, who by her splendid adaptability to the work, did us no little good. Her visit was much for the betterment of our school, and it may well be hoped that her appointment to labor along that line may be long continued, and that she may meet with a cordial reception wherever she may go.

ALVIN KNISLEY.

SPRINGERTON, Ill., Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—The much talked of debate between Elders Clark Braden and I. N. White is a thing of the past; the first session opened on the morning of September 12, in Waller's grove, near Orchardville, Wayne County, Illinois, closed on the 17th. Propositions: 1st. Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God? 2d. Is the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice with the Church of Jesus Christ, set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago? Elder Braden denied that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. After hearing Elder Braden through the entire discussion, I could not believe the reasons stated by him in his argument on the first proposition were his real reasons for not believing that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God.

Mr. Braden is a man of more than ordinary intellect, and men with the degree of intelligence Clark Braden has, can't help but see, if they are not blind, the books he assails and calls the productions of Joseph Smith, could never have originated in the mind of mortal man; and instead of them being an evidence against Joseph Smith being a prophet of God, they should be and are the very strongest evidence in favor of his prophetic calling. Elder Braden says the church,—after it was stripped of all or nearly all of its officers and all of its spiritual gifts and blessings, and power and influence of the Holy Spirit,—was in a much higher state and condition than when it was clothed upon with the Spirit and power of God. He says the Holy Ghost did not make any one any better for having received it. The Corinthian church exercised the spiritual gifts more than any of the others, and was in the worst condition of any of them; as much as to say it would have been better off without them.

A close examination of Elder Braden's church discloses these facts, that the church he represents is without apostles and prophets, without the spiritual gifts and blessings of heaven; no Holy Spirit, and denies the power of God being in it. But Mr. Braden says they have attained to that perfect state and condition, seeing face to face and know as they are known, hence are not in need of any of the spiritual gifts or prophets. No place for a prophet in their church, and of course would reject Joseph Smith or any other man who came in the name of a prophet.

But with the keen eyes of Bro. White, he was unable to find in the Bible Elder Braden's church, and Mr. Braden could not find a church in the New Testament like his, and I think the majority who heard the debate decided in their minds the Christian Church was not in harmony with the church set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago. Latter Day Saints being the judges, the debate was a decided success. May the glory be given to the God who gave it.

On my arrival here in White County this morning, I found the town had been billed for Braden to lecture here, but some of the more thoughtful ones of his church sent him word not to come.

If Elder Braden's love for the faith was as intense as his hatred is against what he calls Mormonism, he might be a power for good.

Yours truly,

J. D. STEAD.

MCPAUL, Iowa, Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—Our reunion held on the grounds of Bro. D. Hougas was all that we could wish for. It was quite a task on the part of the brethren of that branch, with help from Wheeler Grove branch, to make necessary preparations, as heavy rains threw them late with their work, in caring for their harvest; but they worked hard, did bravely, and with the help of brethren from a distance, who also made effectual efforts to be on hand, at the time appointed, all things were made ready. Our preachers did well, all were satisfied with their work. The saints were strengthened and built up in the faith, and took new courage to press forward in the good cause, eight were baptized. We think much good was done.

Since our meeting we have labored in Hamburg, Mill Creek, and Shenandoah, doing the best we could, considering the hot weather.

September 15, came to McPaul, to assist in a two-days' meeting, in charge of Elder J. C. Moore, who has had the work in charge for several years in this place. He is one of these kind of men who do not make a big noise, has no special desire for notoriety, but moves forward in the line of duty, doing the best he can, getting others to help when an opportunity offers. The saints from Plum Hollow, Bartlett, Tabor, and other places came to help in the good work, cheering us with their presence, for which we felt thankful, and were more than pleased to meet them. Bro. C. Fry took charge of the singing, and with the able help afforded him by the saints, did exceedingly well; the air fairly rung with the sweet anthems of praise that ascended to that God who has in this dispensation manifested his love to us and all people, in restoring the gospel in its fullness. Five were baptized—four adults and one girl of thirteen years. We are still holding forth here for a few nights to fair audiences, who are paying good attention.

We go from here to Bartlett for a few nights and one Sunday, and then south of Emerson, where labor is wont to be done in the interest of our work.

We hope to see a good attendance at our district conference, to be held with the saints of Thurman branch, October 15 and 16. May the blessing of the Master attend every effort put forth for the advancement of his cause.

Yours as ever in gospel bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Sept. 21.

Editors Herald:—In reporting the Northern Missouri reunion, which was held at Maysville, Missouri, September 8-18, I will say as the secretary of this gathering, it proved to be a success from start to finish. Of the General Conference appointees we had Brn. Heman C. Smith, G. H. Hilliard, M. T. Short, J. C. Foss, M. F. Gowell; with H. O. Smith, A. White, and F. J. Chatburn, our missionaries in Far West district; these brethren make a good team we all can be proud of. It has been said on the ground, and since coming away, by those who have attended, that the reunion was the most spiritual yet held. Saints were strengthened by listening to the word preached; all went away encouraged to go on in the good work. I think I am safe in saying all who attended are thankful to our Father in heaven for his blessing given us during the meetings. Bro. H. O. Smith was elected to act as chairman and chorister, Sisters Carrie Lewis and Lettie Byergo as organists; the music and singing was splendid.

Good order prevailed throughout all the meetings; in fact we had no need for police, or watchman at night. The attendance was not as large as in former reunions. This was on account of a severe storm which passed over north Missouri on the evening of the 7th inst.; hay stacks and small buildings were turned over; all our tents blown down with exception of five, hence many were hindered from coming.

Dr. J. H. Hansen was in attendance in the interest of Graceland College. Bro. Elbert and Sr. Clara Smith represented the Herald and Ensign. The editor of the Ensign was on the ground one day, just long enough for the brethren to say, How do you do, Bro. Garrett. Sr. Louise Palfrey was here in the interest of Zion's Religio. This organization was given one day, Friday. Children's Day was Thursday. All these meetings made the reunion interesting. Saturday, at two p. m. was business meeting; it was voted that we hold a reunion in 1900, with T. T. Hinderks, Charles P. Faul, A. W. Head, Ben Dice, and Ben Hawley as committee.

C. P. FAUL.

ORCHARDVILLE, Ill., Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—The White-Braden debate, which has continued for six days has just closed, with a grand victory for our work.

Six sessions were devoted to the question, Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God? And six sessions were occupied on the question of the Christian Church being in harmony with the Church of Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago.

It was thought by our people here, to be one of the most successful debates and one of the most complete victories ever witnessed. Braden, to use a common expression, was whipped from beginning to end. He was as weak against Joseph Smith's work as he was in maintaining the claims of his own church. Bro. White was fully prepared to meet him on every important question.

There is no danger of Braden hurting our work as long as we have such men as Bro. White to look after him. I think Braden surely saw his weakness in meeting our position. We give God all the glory for such a glorious victory for the truth.

Hopefully in the work,

F. M. SLOVER.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 21.

Editors Herald:—Des Moines district reunion is a thing of the past. It was a success. The speakers were: J. R. Lambert and Herman C. Smith, of the Twelve; C. Scott and J. S. Roth, of the seventy; J. W. Morgan, M. H. Cook, and T. J. Sheldon, of the elders. Twenty-five sermons were preached, and the preaching was of an elevating and instructive character. There were nine prayer meetings. Brn. W. C. Nirk, J. P. Knox, and others in charge. The prayer meetings were good, and a means of spiritual strength. The peaceful influence of the Holy Spirit prevailed, and a profitable time was had. There were ten baptisms and confirmations. It is considered a success, and another reunion is in prospect for next year; the committee of arrangements are C. Scott, J. W. Morgan, and W. C. Nirk. The Sunday school was not forgotten, and the Religio also was remembered. I have attended larger reunions, but none better, and we look forward to the Des Moines district reunion of 1900.

Yours in the one hope,

T. J. SHELDON, Sec. Com.

WHITTEMORE, Mich., Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—The work is still progressing in Michigan. Elder J. A. Carpenter and I held meetings in Gladwin County where much good was done. Bro. Carpenter has been laboring much in that part and has made many friends to the work among the better class of citizens, and is troubling the waters often. Our two two-day grove meetings were very successful.

Last Saturday and Sunday we met with the saints of Moore's Junction in a two-day meeting. Bro. Carpenter was again chosen to preside, and the Spirit of the Master was with us throughout. Brn. Carpenter, Burr, Burtch, and your correspondent were the speakers. A very enjoyable meeting it was. At the close of the Sunday afternoon service, an old gentleman, whose locks were snowy white, came forward and expressed his thankfulness for what he had heard and holding my hand in his, requested baptism, the tears coursing down his cheeks. At the close of the meeting he and a United Brethren exhorter were buried beneath the wave, Bro. Burtch, the branch president, officiating. So the work moves on. I desire to always labor for the upbuilding and extension of the kingdom. My prayer is for grace to continue, and that I may labor acceptably.

The household's food has much to do with the household's health. If it be unsuitable in quality, badly cooked, or given at irregular intervals, disordered stomachs result. Nourishment, not stimulation, is what your children and yourselves need; hence you should avoid feeding them on rich, greasy, highly-seasoned, or other stimulating food, and give them only those kinds that will make good blood to nourish the bodies. That you may be able to do this you should study the chemistry of food sufficiently to know what is needed to nourish bone, teeth, nerve, and muscular fiber. You may feed your children to surfeiting on starchy or saccharine substances, and they may grow fat thereon, while nerve, tooth, and bone are literally starving because in the food is nothing to nourish them. Decayed teeth often come from this cause; not because, as some suppose, the sugar rots them, but because in a diet made up of sugar and starch, there is nothing to nourish them. The lime and the phosphates which brain and bone and teeth need, are utterly lacking in the food of some pampered children. If the parents are farmers they reason correctly from cause to effect when the hens lay thin-shelled eggs, and act on that reasoning by feeding the hens lime; a similar use of their reasoning powers would build up strong bone and nerve and muscle in their children by feeding them food containing the necessary ingredients for such building.

Milk and wheat are nature's typical food, each containing the elements necessary to nourish the body; milk being especially adapted to young, growing animals, wheat containing elements needed for advanced development. In fine white flour the elements of the wheat necessary to build bone and nerve tissue are sacrificed to its whiteness; for this reason bread made from whole wheat flour is most nourishing. From the kernel of wheat has been rejected nothing but the outer husk. All the rich nutriment lying just below it, is retained. It is preferable to graham flour which retains the husk that sometimes irritates delicate stomachs. In five hundred pounds of the whole wheat flour there are seventy-eight pounds of muscle material, and eighty-five pounds of bone and teeth material; while in the same quantity of fine white flour there are only sixty-five pounds of muscle material and thirty pounds of bone and teeth material. These figures explain the flabby muscles, poor teeth, and bones that result from a diet of superfine flour. "Bread and butter" are closely associated in our thought and speech, and with good reason, as butter is the natural complement of bread, each supplying some element the other lacks. We know some people object to giving children butter; but this fact we have noted; children deprived of it, or disinclined to use it, seem more inclined to consumption than those who do eat it moderately. We leave it to doctors to decide which is cause and which effect, simply stating a fact noted by many observers. Another fact germane to the subject is this: A favorite medicine in consumption is cod liver oil; this seems to point to a lack of fats in the consumptive's make-up. Of course butter and all sorts of fats can be, and very often are, used in excess, with disastrous results, especially where there are scrofulous tendencies. Probably most families need cautioning on the side of eating too much fats, especially in the forms of rich pastries and gravies.

Cracked wheat, germicilla, and especially oatmeal, are very nourishing, and can be prepared so as to be very palatable. Take pains to so prepare them, and accustom your children to use them regularly if you would have your family strong and healthy. Give them meat, varied with "fish, flesh, or fowl," once a day at least in winter, accompanied with vegetables in their season. With both meat and vegetables good cooking is a vital point. Do not overload your tables, and so tempt your family to overload their stomachs with a great variety of food at one meal; let there be variety at different meals and different days, but one kind of meat and two kinds of vegetables are enough for any dinner. Fresh fruits and simple puddings for desert instead of rich pastries, will make the after-dinner hour less stupid than it often is, and will tend to make dyspepsia less common. Fresh fruits are valuable, not so much for their nourishing properties, for these are not great, but because they assist in assimilating other food. They should be taken at mealtime and not haphazard at any hour of the day or night.

Highly seasoned food should never be eaten, especially by children. We sometimes see a child follow his father's example in making his potato black with pepper, but seldom see such a child who does not have a "delicate stomach," because a diseased one, and a capricious appetite. Usually the fathers have their sense of taste deadened by tobacco, hence must use condiments to make any impression upon it. Their children follow their example, if indeed, they do not inherit their vitiated taste, and thus the evil is perpetuated. The vitiated taste and disordered stomach give rise to unnatural cravings and unreasonable antipathies; such children soon reject simple, nourishing food, and crave that which is unwholesome and stimulating. The drink crave often has its roots right here; you cannot be too careful of the dietetics of your household, because of their relation to bodily, mental, and spiritual health.

Shall children use tea and coffee? We believe nine tenths of the thoughtful people will answer No, even though they believe in their use for adults. Disordered nerves, capricious appetites, and irritable tempers are likely to result from their use. Milk and water are nature's drinks, the drinks to make children strong.

We have said so much about healthy dress in former chapters that we need not dwell upon it here. But we must again emphasize the importance of loose clothing, supported entirely from the shoulders, to the health of girls. No girl can grow into symmetrical, healthy womanhood, fitted to perform well the duties it will bring her, who has not from childhood worn loose clothing, whose weight rested on her shoulders, not on her hips. This matter is of vital importance; do not neglect it at the peril of your daughter's health and happiness. Combination suits of underclothing, and waists to which all skirts are buttoned, fulfill the conditions of health and comfort. And as your girls grow older, do not discard the waist for the corset. The Bates waist supplies everything a corset ought to supply, without doing any of the bad things a corset is apt to do. And train your girls from their childhood to such a true sense of beauty that the wasp-like waist will seem to them not a thing of beauty, but a deformity, as it really is, and as it appears to the true artistic eye. Powers, the sculptor of the Greek slave, walking behind one of these fashioned deformed ladies exclaimed, "Where does she put her liver?" Such thoughts, not very complimentary or pleasant, you must admit, are aroused in the minds of every true artist and every one who understands the wonderful mechanism of our bodies, by seeing the deformity caused by tight dresses. Educate your girl's eye and taste by familiarizing her with the woman's form in Greek sculpture, confessedly the highest type of beauty the world has ever produced. To do this a trip to Europe is not necessary; models and copies of the Venus de Medici and other famous statues are to be found everywhere. Show them to your daughter and direct her attention to the perfect proportions of the waist, and how its symmetry and beauty would be marred if made to conform to the fashion-plate model. Some girls will be influenced by considerations of this nature who would not be reached by reasons based on considerations of health.

Guard your daughters well in those critical years of their early teens. That you may do so intelligently and wisely we recommend every mother to procure Mrs. E. R. Shepherd's book "For Girls" and first study it for herself and then with her daughters. A little book which will do younger girls much good is Mrs. E. P. Miller's "A Mother's Advice."—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Ida L. Jones, Canton, Illinois, writes: "I ask you kindly to set aside Sunday, October 1, for fasting, in order that our dear sister, Winifred Grimm, may be healed of her great affliction, if it be the Lord's will. We dislike to see this loving one taken from among our midst just in the prime of life, as her daily walk indicates a promising life in the future."

"SHOULD HAVES" OF A SUPERINTENDENT.

J. R. PEPPER, SUNDAY SCHOOL HELPER.

Should have two good feet, like the two hands on a good clock. When it is 90 minutes after eight, they should point to 9:30 exactly, and not to 95 minutes past eight.

Should have two good eyes, or at least double as many eyes as mouths. Good order is gained much more quickly through the eye than the throat.

Should have two good ears. Illustrations are gathered more readily through that organ than the printed page. The pigeon holes in the head should be systematically and continually filled through these little doors opening thereto.

Should have one good back, and he will have use for it during the whole year. Pile upon pile will be laid upon it, until he will begin to think of himself as a second edition of that old man Atlas, whose pictures used to adorn the covers of the geographies of our father's time.

Should have a quality and quantity of patience that would run over the top of the barrel that belonged to the ancient man of Uz. Like funds in bank, it should be drawn upon.

Should have every member of the school labeled in good large letters, that he may read at sight. Tommy Babcock don't want you to think he is now Willie Whittaker.

Should have a big stock of perseverance in carrying out plans. Many people have no vision that reaches from the beginning to the end. Perseverance, like killing a snake, has our own preservation in it. The head of the snake must be flattened.

Should have at least as many new suits covering his plans as there are seasons in the year. Because he reads alternately with the school one Sunday is no reason why he should do so six months in the year. If he closes with the Lord's prayer for a while, why not commence with it at some other time?

Should be a specialist and an enthusiast. Not the kind that turns the crank with one hand and gestures wildly with the other, but in the best sense of the term. His zeal should have an intensity of purpose that will amount to a perpetual internal shout.

Should have a blackboard and use it, as a helping instrument in real teaching, and not as a wooden horse to make fantastic excursions on to the mystical fields of symbolism.

Should study the lesson himself as well as those over whom he presides. To sit on a platform and look wise will not stand the test of the bright-eyed interrogation points projected by quick-witted boys and girls of this rapid, trotting nineteenth century.—Selected.

PRIMARY WORK IN COUNTRY SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

I think I need not dwell long on the importance of this subject this morning. Statistics show that two thirds of the people of the United States live in rural districts. This fact alone convinces us of the importance of country work.

I will give you a few lines from a speech made by Supt. E. B. Stevenson of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, at the International Sunday school convention last April:—

"It is a fact that a great majority of our leading men of this country came from farms. Nineteen of our twenty-four Presidents of the United States were country boys. Of the 127 of the leading business men in Chicago, 125 of them were country boys. Five years ago I wrote a letter to each of 100 of the leading business men of my home city, asking them where they spent the first fifteen years of their lives. Ninety-eight of these busy business men were kind enough to reply. Eighty-nine of these were country boys. Of the nine which remained, two were bootblacks and three were widow's sons, who were obliged to work from early morn till late at night to assist their mothers in getting a livelihood for other members of the family."

Study the statistics of all lines of life, and you will find the same conditions prevailing, thus indicating that the work in the rural districts is of the highest importance.

Our principal disadvantage in these places is that we have no separate room for our primary department. The children are present during the opening exercises of the entire school; and as these songs, prayers, and reading are usually incomprehensible to them, they become wearied before their time for work comes. Then when they are permitted to retire to their accustomed corner, the arrival of late comers, and the noise of the other classes, attracts attention to other things rather than the lesson.

However, even this condition offers advantages. The class is usually smaller than in city schools, and we can easily become acquainted with the home life of the children—a thing very necessary to proper teaching. The small amount of space forces us to get nearer the pupils, which is an advantage in discipline. The children get to talk more frequently, etc. Under such conditions the primary teacher must use great tact and ability, in order to keep her work the most attractive thing in the room, or she will accomplish very little. Much of this trouble can be obviated by the simple device of hanging a curtain or placing a screen in front of this class. Either device is easily attainable and no school need be without either one or the other arrangement. True, we cannot sing in there; but we can learn and repeat hymns and motion songs, the commandments, the Beatitudes, Psalms, etc., always remembering to use as low a tone as possible.

Let us go to our classes fully prepared with the lesson and our illustrations. First learn the lesson from the Bible, then from the Quarterly, and then write it out in your own language, not necessarily to memorize it, but to establish the points well in mind. Then close your books and helps, and recite the lesson aloud, giving it just as you intend giving it to your class. Practice and prayer are the keystones to success. Be sure that your stories touch upon the point in the lesson that you are trying to make prominent, and that your illustrations do not detract from the lesson itself. When you are before your class, do everything just as you have planned before coming. When we thus carefully prepare, God in his infinite mercy will bless us.

There are many appliances for the advancement of the primary teacher. In fact this department is the foundation for the whole thing, and should receive our greatest attention. If we wish to build a temple, we put in the foundation the strongest material, but we are not so particular about the foundations of our playhouses. For the benefit of teachers we have our institutes and conventions, and it is often the case that only our best teachers attend these, because they are the most anxious to advance. A course in reading is what we need and must have before we can teach acceptably. Some think there is no use trying to present spiritual things according to "book methods," but that God will supply the method. However, it seems to me that if the Lord blesses some bright mind with the power to put into a book the how of presenting a lesson, and that book is within our reach, it is unnecessarily bothering him to request another manifestation of that identical plan. Furthermore, I do not believe he will help us in that way. It is not in accord with his law. He will be more apt to say, "You have Moses and the prophets; hear ye them" (Luke 16:19). I believe the Father likes a hustler, and unless you put thoughts in your head he will not put words in your mouth. If my friend sends me a present by a brother or sister, it would be considered ill-mannered in me to refuse it, simply because the friend did not present it personally.

Let us avail ourselves of the many helps which stand ready for us. Many good men and women are willing to direct us aright in these matters. Are we reading any of the Sunday school papers of the day? There are very few farmers who have not their papers on stock raising, poultry raising, and fruit culture, and they will frankly tell you they could not farm successfully without them. Shall we value our Sunday school work less than we do our cattle, poultry, and apples?

There is a course of study for primary teachers being prepared by the central committee appointed by the International convention, that will undoubtedly be of use to us. Let us avail ourselves of this or some other good course.

Many of our classes in the country schools are improperly graded. It is impossible to do good teaching in a class composed of children whose ages range from four to thirteen. Do not attempt it. Put those that are five and under, in a kindergarten class; those from six to ten first primary; from ten to twelve or thirteen, second primary. Have a fixed time, once a year, for promotions. It must be discouraging to a child to remain in the same class from the time he is four years old until he is thirteen.

It is possible to do just as good work in the country school as in the city school, and it is being done in many places. It takes more exertion to keep the work up to the standard and we must be continually on the watch for new and useful hints.

If time permitted, I should like to tell you of some of the good things I have been reading about recently from the Sunday School Times and the Quarterly Bulletin. The Primary Rallies, the Cradle Roll, the Perry Pictures, Birthday Letters, Birthday Box, Mothers' Meetings, etc. One game for learning the order of the books of the Bible I thought would be very interesting. I saw it in the Sunday School Times. These were the directions: "Cut from cardboard 66 pieces, each 6 by 2½ inches. Print or write on these the division of the Bible, the title of the book, the style, the number of chapters, the date when written if known, and the writer. They will look like these:—

O. T.	N. T.
Proverbs.	Romans.
Poetical.	Epistle.
31 Chapters.	16 Chapters.
About 1000 B. C.	60 A. D.
Chiefly Solomon.	Paul.

"Put these 66 pieces of cardboard into the hands of the child in a disorderly arrangement. Have the child try to place them on the floor or table in their proper order. Repeat the exercise until skill and accuracy are secured."

Experience has shown that by this game, children soon acquire a readiness in the use of the Bible.

This is only one of the many games and devices for assisting in the study of the word of God that the journals are filled with. Let us be earnest in our endeavors to do practical teaching, always remembering that the primary work is the most responsible, and God will call us to account if we do not avail ourselves of the helps he places within our grasp.—Dora Young, for the late Woodbine reunion.

WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

Editors Herald:—Thinking your readers might be somewhat interested in knowing how the late White-Braden debate came out, I thought I would write a short account of it for Herald. The debate was held in a grove near Orchardville, Illinois, commencing September 12 and continued six days, having two sessions a day. The attendance was from two hundred to more than one thousand if properly reported. Braden had early in July delivered a series of lectures on "Mormonism" at that point. His stock in trade was the usual amount of trash, with some added not yet heard of by the people. It consisted of such a tirade of abuse that our people living in the neighborhood thought it wise not to let it pass without some notice. They wrote me concerning the matter while the lectures were being delivered. I promptly sent some circulars explaining some things in answer to Braden's challenges that he was sending out and daring us to meet. These were met by Braden branding them "Mormon lies;" that we were all a set of cowards and dare not meet him in public debate upon the real issues of Mormonism. This, I promptly met by sending the following counter challenge:—

"COUNTER CHALLENGE TO THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

"Gentlemen:—There is no issue over the questions; 1. Was the church established eighteen hundred years ago, by divine authority, the history of which we have in the Bible, the Church of God in fact and accepted by him. 2. Were the teachings of that church the teachings of God and ordained by him, and its teachers sent of God? But the Christian or Campbellite church demands that all believers of the Bible accept the Christian or Campbellite church, as the Church of God, and accepted with him, and the teachings of the Christians or Campbellite church as true doctrines and its teachers authorized of God, the same as the teachers of the Church of God Organized eighteen hundred years ago.

"The real issue then is, Is the Christian or Campbellite Church the legitimate successor of the Church of God, established by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago, in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice? Is it identical in principle sufficient to establish a valid or legal claim to the heirship of the true Church of God? Are its teachers the true representatives of God and called by him?"

"The above propositions express clearly the position of those who reject Alexander Campbell and his claimant.

"No eagerness for discussion can justify omission of the above issue. The entire claim of the Christian or Campbellite Church shall be discussed under rules governing honorable controversy.

"Latter Day Saints Will Affirm also the scripturalness of their position in a proposition embodying (as admitted) that issue.

"Two Clear Cut issues—not one. And clear, honest work shall be the motto.

"PROPOSITIONS.

"1. Was Joseph Smith a Prophet of God? Latter Day Saints affirm.

"2. Is the Christian Church, (Commonly Called Campbellites), in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice with the Church of Jesus Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago? Christians Affirm. The Bible, the standard of Evidence."

This "counter challenge" was in circular form and was freely distributed to Braden's hearers. This renewed the storm and Braden promptly notified the people that he hated I. N. White as he was a "black skunk," etc. I was called a coward and one who dare not meet the real issue, the one Braden was doling out to the people by the hundreds, which contained "Challenge I;" "Challenge II;" "Challenge III," under fifty-one different heads of allegations against Joseph Smith, the Reorganization, etc. My "counter challenge" was publicly denounced as being unfair in not covering the issue in demand; hence it was rejected as a "cowardly dodge to evade a debate upon the true issue of Mormonism."

At this the lectures closed and Braden appointed a "special committee" to look after his interest and flaunt his challenges. Hearing this I sent the following letter which was put in circular form and sent broadcast:—

"NOTICE!

"To the Honorable Citizens of Orchardville, Ill., and Vicinity:—No eagerness for debate can justify the Campbellite in now trying to dodge the issue. They have, through Braden, their representative, challenged Joseph Smith's prophetic calling, revelations, teachings, etc. Have also claimed that the so-called 'Church of Christ' is the true Church of God, harmonizing with the Scriptures in its teachings, etc. In my counter-challenge have I not offered to affirm Joseph Smith a prophet of God and thus attempt to defend him and his revelations to be just what we claim for him and them? But now, it seems these Campbellites are weakening and fear the issue. I will agree to drop that proposition if they will now acknowledge in writing that Joseph Smith is a true prophet of God. Otherwise that proposition stands as it is, to perplex their righteous souls till they dare meet it in debate and attempt to prove it false. Will they do it? Also, if they will now agree in writing that the 'Church of Christ,' commonly called Campbellites, is not the true Church of God, and not in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine, etc., then I will agree to drop that proposition. Otherwise that proposition stands just as it is to perplex their troubled souls to the day of eternity. Dare they affirm it to be just what they have claimed for it? Or will they now back out and let it go to the public that they dare not deny in public debate Joseph Smith a prophet of God. And are they now afraid to affirm in a public debate that their church is just what they have been claiming for it? If they dare not, cannot meet these two clear-cut issues with their boastful debater, Clark Braden, let them continue to smart under it till they have learned that it takes more than a basswood sword in the hands of 'I, Clark Braden,' to defend themselves in their boastful claims of being the true Church of God, and to deny ours to Joseph Smith being a prophet of God. Two clear-cut issues that cover the whole disputed field. We rest our case with these two issues.

"Yours for fair play and honest dealing,
"I. N. WHITE."

This "notice" reached far and wide and people that had not been interested before become involved in the issue it contained, and asked, "Cannot Braden meet this?" Presently, on July 26, Braden wrote Bro. Slover his acceptance of the propositions, but reversing their "order" and demanding only four sessions to the Christian church proposition and eight to Joseph Smith! Then adding at the bottom of his letter of acceptance these words: "Now sign without any more cowardly, contradictory, crawfishing or back square out. If you back out, I will scatter this letter, in circular form, all over Southern Illinois." This was forwarded to me and I answered through Bro. Slover, saying: "No amount of Braden's twisting, transposing, and long lingo of pettifogging in order to dodge the clean-cut issue, in its 'order' as found in my 'counter challenge' and 'circular letter,' can have any weight with me, since Braden so blatantly flourished his big (?) knife against Joseph Smith's prophetic calling, and in defense of Campbellism's divinity during his late lectures, which raised this whole issue. Let Mr. Braden meet the propositions in the 'order' they appear in the 'counter-challenge' with equal time on each proposition, or say like a man, that he will not, CAN NOT, DARE NOT, and that will end the controversy. Otherwise we shall put this letter in circular form and let the people of Southern Illinois, and elsewhere know who it is that fears the issue."

This letter was sent to Mr. Braden and after some time the following answer received:—

AN AGREEMENT FOR A PUBLIC DEBATE.

There shall be a public debate, between Clark Braden, and a properly endorsed representative of R. C. J. C. L. D. S., in the Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Wayne County, Illinois, or in a grove near that church, on these terms:—

1. The propositions discussed shall be those published in the printed challenge of the R. C. J. C. L. D. S.

2. They shall be debated in the order in which they were printed.

3. Six sessions, of two hours each, shall be given to the discussion of each proposition.

4. There shall be three sessions each day, beginning at ten a. m., two p. m., and eight p. m.

5. The debate shall begin at ten a. m., Tuesday, September 5, and close Friday night, September 8, 1899.

CLARK BRADEN.

I notified Braden's committee through Bro. Slover that I had engagements for the 5th; and also a soldiers' reunion was to be in session on that very date and to be held only about one mile from place of debate. Hence, I objected to date and suggested 18th or 25th, not knowing at the time that it conflicted with Braden's work at the Southern Illinois Christian College. Should this date not suit Braden let him name a time after that and I would consider it. Braden answered through his committee saying: "Setting that time is a dishonest, cowardly dodge of Mormonism to evade debate, and pretend to be willing to debate." He then sets the 12th and added: "This quibble over time is a lying dodge to get out of debate." He closes his letter with: "Now take someone with you, and let Slover read this letter, and kick the coward into debate if you can."

On receipt of this, I at once notified the proper authorities I would be there on the 12th to commence debate, the Lord willing. On the 11th, as Elder J. D. White and myself stepped from the train at Xenia, Illinois, Mr. Braden did. I presume he had been in the smoker, as I did not see him on the train. I had no opportunity to speak to him as he struck across the tracks, thus evading the platform where I stood talking with friends. I took dinner at Sr. Gauger's and then pulled out for the battlefield some ten miles south. When in the neighborhood I learned Braden was to lecture that night at the Christian church near by. Elder J. D. and others of our people put in an appearance and the burden of Braden's remarks were to pave the way for the debate. Some uneasiness had been indulged in by B's members since they had learned their church was to be debated. Mr. B. informed them that they must be prepared to hear their books handled in a different light than what they had been hearing them from their elders. The Latter Day Saints might expect the same. The announcement was made for the debate to commence at ten the next morning and to be renewed at two in the evening, two sessions a day and continue six days. This had been my advice when Mr. B. had made an effort to hurry the debate through with three sessions a day.

We met at ten and Braden signed the rules I had drawn up, without a word of objection—no change only in the time. We met an anxious crowd of people. The man with the "big knife" was there to defend (?) from the same platform what he had said during his series of lectures; and there was also an opponent that dared to "interrupt" or speak up for the other side, without being "arrested on the spot." My large twenty foot chart was stretched in the rear. Braden chose for his moderator Rev. McKinley and I Elder J. D. White, our missionary of St. Louis. They were unable to agree upon a chairman. Braden had so prejudiced and poisoned the minds of the people during his lectures, that but few were qualified for that important place.

I opened the debate with an hour's speech upon, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?" Told Braden that since Campbell had acknowledged an apostasy, and he himself had said in the Braden-Kelley debate (p. 220), "They [Thomas and A. Campbell] undertook a restoration of apostolic Christianity, and not a reformation of any or all existing denominations," as did Luther, Calvin, Wesley, etc., it was hardly necessary for me to prove the need of some man coming with a "Thus saith the Lord" to build Christianity anew. To save controversy over the authority of text books, I would quote Campbell upon the subject: "Since the full development of the great apostasy foretold by prophets and apostles, numerous attempts at reformation have been made."—Christian Sytem, p. 3. "Under the present administration of the kingdom of heaven, a great apostasy has occurred, as foretold by the apostles. As the church compared to a city, is called 'Mount Zion,' the apostate church is called 'Babylon the Great.'" "The 'Holy City' is still trodden underfoot, and the sanctuary is filled with corruption. It is indeed a den of thieves."—Ibid. 178.

This being true from Mr. Braden's own standpoint, the need of a prophet of God to straighten up things, was certainly apparent. Why could it not be Joseph Smith? He came in the right time and in the right way. If it took a prophet to first plant Christianity, it certainly would not take less than one to restore it.

Campbell, on page 274, acknowledges that all the other sects and parties have failed in their attempt to restoration; and I now ask, Why could it not be Mr. Smith? Campbell says: "Societies, indeed, may be found among us, far in advance of others, in their progress towards the ancient order of things; but we know of none that has fully attained to that model." Therefore, Campbell says: "We want the old gospel back, and sustained by the ancient order of things."—Ibid. 234. Such important work as all of that could hardly be done without some special divine interposition. There must be found some man that is worthy to step forward with a "Thus saith the Lord." Was it Smith, or Campbell? These are the only two men that claim to have attempted a "restoration"—bringing back the "old gospel" to be "sustained" by the "ancient order of things." Hence, this fight will be on Campbell and Smith.

Did Joseph Smith come in the right time and in the right way? Did he preach the "old gospel" as left by Christ in Mark 16 and elsewhere in the New Testament? At this point I referred to my chart, quoting Matthew 20, in regard to the special work to be done in the "early morn;" at the third, sixth, and ninth and eleventh hours. The "early morn" was in days of Adam; third hour, Noah's day; sixth, Moses'; and ninth, Christ's. Showed Matthew 9 corresponded with Luke's, "I will send my beloved son," (chapter 20,) and Mark's, "one son, his well beloved" (chapter 12); establishing the fact by three witnesses. Since Amos 3: 7 says: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets," it looks very plausible that a prophet is needed to restore the "old gospel" back to man. Was Joseph Smith that prophet?

Mr. Campbell says: "For a divine warrant has always been essential to any acceptable worship. The question, 'Who has required this at your hands?' must always be answered by a 'Thus saith the Lord,' before an offering of mortal man can be acknowledged by the Lawgiver of the universe."—Ibid. p. 36. I am prepared to accept this statement of Mr. Campbell's.

Here I gave a detailed account of Joseph's life; his attending the protracted meeting, retiring to the woods and making special inquiry of God for light in harmony with James 1:5; of two heavenly personages appearing to him and the conversation that took place; of the angel's visit to him in September, 1823; and his connection with the Book of Mormon, and ordination under the hands of the angel; that Joseph did not come as an impostor, but came with a "Thus saith the Lord;" waded up through trials, persecutions, and died as he lived with the claim that his work was a message sent from heaven in fulfillment of Isaiah 29; Matthew 24: 44, 45; Revelation 14: 6, 7. Showed that God had been true to his word in all ages to do no marvelous work among the people without using a prophet. Adam in the "early morn," Noah in third hour, Moses in the sixth, and an angel being dispatched from heaven to inform him of his prophetic calling, and the needed restoration of God's children to their former standing; of the ninth hour—an angel visiting Zechariah, informing him of the need of a prophet, John the Baptist, to call God's people from "crooked paths;" of an apostasy that took place afterwards, which had been conceded by Campbell, also by my opponent, since he is indorsed by Elder J. H. Garrison to speak for their church in this debate. (Here I read his indorsement,) and explained the matter to the people; that I was not meeting Braden, but the Christian Church.

Again I turned my attention to the chart and hastily ran the church through the wilderness, and on this side find only two men claiming to have restored her to the world again—Alexander Campbell and Joseph Smith. Now the question is, Which, if either of these men did that work? John the Divine, has made a statement that shall be noticed first: "After this," (that is, after he had taken a view of the church as it then existed,) "I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter."—Revelation 4: 1. By prophetic eye he sees the church enter the wilderness. Here the Bible church was lost track of; an apostasy was declared to have taken place, and many attempts are made to reproduce the church, either by reforming that which they had, or restoring that which was lost. John looking forward for the things that "must be hereafter" sees "another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth."—Rev. 14: 6. "Another angel," may indicate that at other periods of the world's existence, angels were employed to introduce God's work to man. At the sixth hour an angel appeared to Moses in the burning bush; at the ninth hour to Zechariah; and now at the eleventh hour, since the apostasy, why not to Joseph Smith? Here is a prediction that must "come to pass;" it was something to take place "hereafter"—after the day of John. Campbell and Smith both claim to have restored that which was lost in the wilderness. Campbell says: "We want the old gospel back, and sustained by the ancient order of things." Campbell claims no angel's visit; but John says one shall come "hereafter," and with the "everlasting gospel." Smith says he received a visit from one; was ordained under his hands and authorized to preach the "old gospel," the "everlasting gospel," the very one Christ left with his people as found in Mark 16.

I made a short comment upon Mark 16, and introduced Paul, who received the gospel not of men, but of God, as found in Mark 16, and he preached faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, resurrection from the dead, and eternal judgment. This was the "everlasting gospel;" and Paul makes a statement that if angels or men preach any other, they should be accursed. (Gal. 1: 8, 9.) Mr. Smith, at once, after the claim of the visit from the angel in fulfillment of Revelation 14: 6, commenced to preach: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover;" as the "everlasting gospel" restored to him. Campbell and Smith, remember, are the only two men that claim a restoration of the "old gospel." These are the only two men in this debate. Campbell claims no angel, yet a restoration of the "old gospel," and he preached: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and these signs shall not follow them that believe." Smith claimed the angel of Revelation 14: 6, and a restoration of the "old gospel" and preached: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and these signs shall follow them that believe." Smith organized the church with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, deacons, etc., as were found in the primitive church before going into apostasy. Campbell organized his church with elders, deacons, and an occasional evangelist, with no miraculous power to follow believers—the very condition the church was in while in apostasy.

Time being called Braden labored hard to prove that the whole of the Book of Revelation had its fulfillment shortly after John gave it. I referred to the "New Jerusalem," of chapter 21, coming to earth where God would "wipe away all tears;" and "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, no crying," pain, etc. He still contended "The time is at hand;" "Surely I come quickly," etc. I crowded him for a "where" and "when" of the fulfillment of Revelation 14: 6, 7. If ever a man was snowed under on the saying found in the Book of Revelation, Braden was. I shall not hereafter attempt to give speeches in their order, but sayings here and there, as they occurred, so that the reader may gather from it what the contention was and how. Will give the pith and points.

DIPHTHERIA AND CROUP.

A positive cure and very simple recipe, and which has proven to be very effective. It originated with Dr. Delthill, who reported his discovery to the French Academy of Medicine, and later was published in the Paris Figaro.

He found that the vapors arising from liquid tar and turpentine would dissolve the fibrinous exudations which choke up the throat, and are so prevalent in cases of croup and diphtheria. Dr. Delthill's method is described thus:—

He pours equal parts of turpentine and liquid tar into a tin pan and sets fire to the mixture; a dense resinous smoke arises which obscures the atmosphere in the room. "The patient," says Dr. Delthill, "immediately seems to experience relief; the choking and rattle stop, the patient falls into a pleasant slumber, and seems to inhale the smoke with pleasure. The fibrinous membrane soon becomes detached and the patient coughs up microbicides. These, when caught in a glass, may be seen to dissolve in the smoke. In the course of three days afterward the patient entirely recovers."

Death resulted from an explosion of gasoline, which she was using at the time for cleaning house, the fumes of which caught fire from a match struck by her husband in the room. Before help could be secured, she was so badly burned that she died in a few hours; her husband was badly burned on the hands and arms, while attempting to save his wife. The body was brought to Kansas City. Funeral sermon by Elder F. C. Warnky. She was a devoted member of the Methodist Church. About two years ago we held meetings in her neighborhood; she attended, and became much interested. She loved and rejoiced in hearing the fullness of the gospel. Bro. Redman was wounded by being thrown from his wagon, and suffered intense agony for a number of days, when death came to his relief. Was a graduate of St. Charles College, Missouri. He was a man of fine mind, and a great student. After his connection with the church, he lived an humble and faithful life, and often expressed an unbounded confidence in the work and the restored gospel, and who can say that his rest will not be glorious? True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Archæological Committee's Report,
WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archaeology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Berlin, Aug. 5.— . . . Asked his view on the present situation in France, Bismarck [Prince Herbert] replied:—

"The Dreyfus trial is the beginning of a struggle of parties. As a nation France may recover from her present sickness after a time, and so may Spain from her seething discontent and bankruptcy, because Spain is also a rich country, with fertile soil and splendid mineral wealth, which only need development. But the Latin races are doomed unless they are liberated from the medieval clergy. Look at the condition of Belgium, where the clerical party is bound to cave in, the Flemish being victorious. The general military service, as forecasted by General Brialmont, will be introduced and no mistake.

"Italy presents a miserable state of affairs, approaching bankruptcy. Taxation is pushed to the uttermost, while workmen during the summer only earn two lire daily. Only 3,000,000 out of 31,000,000 earn over 250 lire yearly. A million and a half people subsist upon alms. The condition there is deplorable.

"Revolution is sometimes predicted in Sweden, but this will never occur, though the Norwegians continue to foment that teapot storm. The Scandinavians are not likely to form a unit, but may within the next fifty years lean upon some paramount power.

"My opinion is that the unrest which converts the continent into one huge camp is mainly attributable to Muscovite statesmanship and nothing else."

Berlin, Sept. 28.—In a speech at Forchheim to-day, according to the Tageblatt, the Kaiser said that many centuries would pass before the theories of eternal peace would be generally recognized, and that in the meantime the best safeguard of peace was in the German Empire, its Princes, and its army.

Paris, Sept. 26.—Minister of War de Gallifet is daily growing in disfavor, as he has the unhappy knack at present of always doing the wrong thing. . . .

Other political men attack the Minister of War for mentioning the name of the Deity in his discourse at General Brault's funeral and say it is outrageous to speak of God and a better world in public.

The agitation over this incident brings to light a scandalous omission upon the part of the French nation and indicate that what the nation needs is to be taught the difference between religion and clericalism and that neither atheism nor infidelity will aid France to pull out of the present situation.

Religious intolerance is growing stronger and more bitter than in the Middle Ages, and politicians are not willing to accept De Gallifet's declaration that the Dreyfus incident is closed and want to keep France in the throes of anti-Dreyfusardism. . . .

Clemenceau, editor of L'Aurore, stated concerning the Dreyfus case, in a telegram to the Chicago Tribune, dated Paris, August 8: . . . In this way we shall deliver our republic from the threatening plots of faction, who openly aim at the renewal of religious hatreds long gone by, to crush freedom of thought in France as they have done in Spain, and establish a dogmatic infallibility on the ruins of justice and law.

London, September 15.—The Times prints this morning a four-column article from its Rome correspondent on the Pope and Americanism, who says:—

"The duel between the Anglo-Saxon temperament and the Jesuit discipline will be worth watching, for the stake of civilization in its outcome is by no means small.

"So long as the American Catholics formulate no doctrine, claim no liberty, and avoid all action which might give a handle to their foes, they may hope to live in peace.

"The question arises: How long will respect for their past, their independence of spirit, and especially the constant influence of the American environment, permit them to hold their tranquility on sufferance or to enjoy their freedom by stealth?"

CARDINALS TO STUDY DEMOCRACY.

The leaders of the so-called Christian democracy in the Catholic Church are greatly encouraged by the appointment by the Pope of a commission of Cardinals, which is to study all the developments of democracy as they may relate to the welfare of the church. At the head of this commission is Cardinal Maxsella. It is pointed out that pressure has been brought to bear upon the Pope by the imperial governments of Italy, Austria, Germany, and Belgium to prevent him from recognizing in any way the principles of Christian democracy, and that the appointment of this commission shows that the papal authorities, while not interfering in any way with the old ideas, are ready to accept what may seem good in the new.

NEW CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.

The resignation of Count Franz von Thun, Prime Minister of Austria, creates another crisis in the affairs of the empire. The resignation of the Minister is the result of the bitter feeling growing out of the fact that Austria is being governed without a Parliament, which is in defiance of the constitution. Men of all parties have assisted in making things uncomfortable for Count von Thun, through whom Emperor Francis Joseph has given effect to his will. The dispatches from Vienna and Prague have recorded several scenes of violence growing out of the indignation meetings held to protest against the action of the Emperor. The new complication will certainly not make more secure the throne, to which the Archduke Francis Ferdinand is the heir apparent.

Constantinople, Sept. 24.—Later reports from the district of Aidin, in Asia Minor, which was visited by an earthquake on September 20, indicate that over 200 persons perished.

Calcutta, Sept. 26.—Earthquakes, floods, and landslides occurred at and near Darjeeling, in the lower Himalaya, last night. Great damage was done and no fewer than sixty natives and twelve Europeans were killed.

There was a rainfall of twenty-eight inches in thirty-eight hours. Three bad landslides took place between Darjeeling and Sonada. Nine European children and twenty natives were lost between those two points.

The whole Calcutta road is blocked, and the Paglajhore line has been seriously damaged. About a thousand acres of tea has been destroyed from Jalapahar to Burchill.

Missoula, Mont., Sept. 26.—Seventeen States and Territories were represented at the meeting of the National Irrigation congress to-day. Dr. Draphagan of Montana, Professor Whitney of Washington, D. C.; Professor Buffum of Wyoming, and others discussed at length the question of reclaiming alkali lands. The principal address at the afternoon session was by Elwood Mead of Wyoming, on "Water Right Problems." Indiana, on the east, the coast States on the west, Montana on the north, and New Mexico on the south represent the limits covered by State delegations in attendance.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16.—A so-called "Christian social organization," a colony to be run on communistic principles, is to be started near Shell Lake, Wisconsin, by seventy-five German families from Butterfield, Minnesota. The people have bought 3,200 acres of land on the Omaha Railway, and all lands will be held in common. The lands are now being cleared and buildings put up. The station and postoffice will be called Sarena.

Berlin dispatch:—Sixteen hundred representatives of the 18,000,000 Catholics of Germany to-day closed a conference at Neisse, Silesia. The resolutions reaffirm the traditional position on most questions, support the Pope's hopes for worldly power, regret his exclusion from the peace conference, demand the repeal of the laws against the Jesuits, and condemn Sunday excursions. The assemblage closed with a "hoch" to the social Kaiser and to the social Pope.

Rennes, France, July 26.—Gambling in France is reaching tremendous proportions, and more than 222,000,000 of francs ($44,000,000) has been made in France annually, nearly all of which is from Paris. The Department of the Seine has estimated that half the suicides are caused by losses at the races. The government is seriously studying the question with a view to taking preventive measures.

Calcutta, Sept. 28.—Four hundred lives were lost through the floods at Darjeeling in addition to those drowned on the plains.

Great havoc has been caused at Kurseong. The Margaretohope estate lost 100 acres and the Mealand factory was destroyed. Some coolies were buried in the ruins of the manager's house which was partly destroyed.

The Avongrove estate lost thirty acres and 4,000 tea bushes. The coolie lines were swept away and many persons were killed, but the exact number is not known.

The story of the destruction of the Ide Villa branch of the Calcutta Girls' School, supported by the American Methodists, is related by Miss Stahl, who saved many of the children. . . .

It is estimated that the loss to the tea garden proprietors alone is about $5,000,000.

London, Sept. 28.—The Echo to-day says the Greek government was informed yesterday that the severe shock of earthquake around Smyrna, reported several days since, killed 1,000 persons, injured 800, and demolished 2,000 houses and two villages.

Paris, Sept. 28.—To-day's papers are full of envy at the American reception to Admiral Dewey. One of them declares:—

"It is a fortunate country which can give way to maddening enthusiasm and have the object of their enthusiasm remain a simple, manly man, devoid of self-ambition. Such adulation would turn the heads of any of our Generals who have never brought home a victory. In twenty-four hours a French General in Admiral Dewey's position would be plotting to overturn the government."

HOW TO STOP WORRYING.

. . . Suppose you were to go into a completely dark room, wishing it to be light. How would you set about the work? Would you try to scoop the darkness up in buckets and carry it out at the door? Not at all. You would just open the windows and shutters and let in the blessed sunlight. You would replace the darkness with light. So it is with worry. The only possible way to get rid of it is to replace the worry attitude of mind with the non-worry attitude. And this can always be done when the person is sincere and patient in his desire to bring it about. All he has to do is to be passive and let Nature have her own perfect way with him.—Ex.

POOR TEETH OF THE YOUNG.

A rapid tendency to decay, hitherto unknown in extent, is taking place in the teeth of the children and youth of the present generation. That the disease is assuming alarming proportions is painfully evident. A few years ago a school committee was appointed by the British Dental association to acquire more knowledge of the condition of children's teeth at various ages. Of the children of a large number of parochial, industrial, and other schools over 10,000 mouths were examined, and the condition of each tooth was marked upon a chart. Less than 15 per cent of such boys and girls of an average age of 12 years did not require some treatment for decayed teeth. The large majority, therefore, of over 85 per cent demanded skilled attention.—Nineteenth Century Review.

Speaking of the Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones' book Jess, which the author also calls Bits of Wayside Gospel, "The Outlook" for September 23d, says in its review "that it is a book which will refresh and inspirit any reader," and they "earnestly and heartily recommend everyone who loves nature, but especially everyone who loves the uplands of the spirit to read the book. Amidst the rush and turmoil of this end of the century it is a pity that time has not been found, by the few who can do such work, for the writing of more volumes of this character." "Jess" is a saddle horse, and out of that horse's service its master extracts the kind of sermons and genial philosophy in which an exquisite sympathy between the horse and its rider, the charm of the landscape, and a broadening of the religious spirit of man are blended.

The Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones is the editor of the Chicago Unity, and his book is published by The Macmillan Company.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION.

One of the conventions to be held in Des Moines carnival week, and which will also help swell the multitude, is the Good Roads meeting. A meeting of parties interested in good roads has been called and will be held October 6. Those who have the undertaking in hand predict an attendance of several thousand. Gen. Roy Stone, who built roads for the American army in Cuba and Porto Rico, will be present and will talk on what he knows of the subject. W. H. Moore of St. Louis, president of the national good roads association, will also be in the city, and will personally conduct the meetings. Harrison, of the government good roads commission, will accompany General Stone, and assist him in educating the people of Iowa to the belief that they want improvements along these lines. It is the intention to organize a state association. Samples of roads will be built in the outskirts of the city, where farmers driving in may pass over them and form an estimate as to what they are really worth. Captain Brewer is in Des Moines in charge of a good roads office at Commercial Exchange, and spends his time advertising the matter, traveling about to the district conventions, of which several are being held, and answering all questions as to what will be done.

Traveling on the Burlington Railroad on the way to Denver, a little town called Atlanta, near Hastings, Nebraska, is pointed out as a point of interest because of the corn cribs built there along the tracks. In all there are twenty-four separate cribs, 12 feet wide and 12 feet high, with a total length of 5,964 feet, or a distance of nearly a mile and a quarter. This year's enormous crop (three hundred million bushels for the State of Nebraska) will test their capacity. Everybody seems prosperous in Nebraska. Nobody complains but the bankers, who find it hard to lend their money. Nobody wants to borrow it.

With the Fall Fiction Number of The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, that journal will be enlarged from a sixteen to a twenty-four page weekly magazine, with a double number every fourth week. The Fall Fiction Number will have a handsome colored cover and thirty-two pages of short stories and entertaining articles by well-known and popular writers. It will be on all news stands September 28. The price has not been raised.

SEPARATE TOWELS FOR CHILDREN.

Two or more children should not be permitted to use the same towel. Each child should have a separate one, and be taught to regard it as personal property. Towels may be bought with initials woven in them, which makes it easy for the owner to distinguish his own. Diseases of the eye and skin diseases are easily communicated by the indiscriminate use of the same towel by different persons. If carelessness in this matter be indulged in childhood it may save much suffering.—September Ladies' Home Journal.

LAMONI, IOWA, OCT. 4, 1899.

JOSEPH E. TAYLOR'S ARREST.

We learn from the Deseret News of September 14, 1899, that Elder Joseph E. Taylor, first counselor to Angus M. Cannon, president of Salt Lake Stake, has been arraigned for unlawful cohabitation with one Clara Taylor, who resides at 352 East Second South Street, Salt Lake City. The complaint was sworn to by Charles Mostyn Owen, and it is alleged that said Clara Taylor gave birth to an illegitimate child on or about March 4, 1899, and that said Joseph E. Taylor is believed to be the father of the child. Angus M. Cannon, Heber J. Grant, C. W. Penrose, et al., are cited as witnesses.

The Deseret News persists in the claim that there is a material difference between polygamy and unlawful cohabitation, yet it does not deny, but admits, that unlawful cohabitation is a crime against the statutes of Utah.

Will the News please explain why parties pleading guilty of this crime, Angus M. Cannon and Heber J. Grant, for instance, are permitted to retain official standing in the church without any effort upon the part of the church to call them to account? In an editorial "Address to non-Mormons," published in the Deseret Evening News for September 9, 1899, is found the following:—

We do not attempt to apologize for, condone, or advise the infraction of any law of the land.

This sentence standing alone would look harmless enough; but what will be the effect of the following sentiments found in the same address, and published in the official organ of the church? After making an effort to show that polygamy is only the contracting of plural marriages, and does not include the living with plural wives in the relation of husband and wife, the News continues:—

We ask your patient consideration of the facts in the case. It is an old subject revived, but has been forced before the country as a present issue. The Manifesto of 1890 has been published many times. The gist of it is contained in these words:—

"Inasmuch as laws have been enacted by Congress forbidding plural marriages, which laws have been pronounced constitutional by the court of last resort, I hereby declare my intention to submit to these laws and to use my influence with the members of the church over which I preside to have them do likewise."

"And I now publicly declare that my advice to the Latter-day Saints is to refrain from contracting any marriages forbidden by the law of the land."

It will be seen that this advice from the only officer recognized in the "Mormon" faith as holding authority to permit a plural marriage, reached simply to the cessation of marriages contrary to the law of the land. It was so understood by the thousands who endorsed the counsel in general conference. No other meaning can be fairly attached to the language used. The probability is that if it had been worded so as to command or advise men and women who had contracted plural marriages under the regulations of the Church, and by solemn covenants for time and all eternity, to separate in violation of those sacred agreements, the Manifesto would not have been accepted by the people to whom it was addressed.

If the intention of this statement was not to condone "the infraction of the law of the land," against unlawful cohabitation, will the News please explain its purpose in so stating the case?

To escape the effect of the opinions of Presidents Woodruff and Snow, et al., who stated under oath before Judge Loofbourow, in effect, that the scope and meaning of the Manifesto "covered association with plural wives," the News states:—

Whatever was explained was the view and opinion of the witnesses as to the meaning they attached to the language of the document, etc.

It then argues that the people are not pledged to, nor bound by such opinion. If this is not condoning, and indirectly advising an infraction of the law what is it?

Again, this same address contains the following:—

When the President of the Church issued his Manifesto against the further contracting of plural marriages, and when Utah entered the Union as a State on an equal footing with the other States, there were a number of men who had contracted marriages under the ordinances of the Church to which they belonged, and which the parties regarded as entered into by divine authority and sanction. The covenant between the man and his wives was an eternal religious contract. It was for time and all eternity. According to their faith it was "sealed on earth and sealed in heaven." Unless for transgression of the conditions of the covenant, no man had the power to dissolve it. The marriage was binding and could not be dissolved even by death. It was to remain in this world and in the world to come, "in and after the resurrection from the dead."

This may not be accepted by you whom we are addressing, but it was and is a part of the faith of the parties who entered into those contracts. Thus, they fully believe that the obligations they entered into are sacred and eternal. The plural wife is in that sense as much a wife as the legal wife. While the secular law does not recognize this status, the Church covenant and ceremony are exactly the same as in the first or legal marriage. You cannot change a religious sentiment, conviction, or belief by law. It cannot be stamped out by violence. Chains, the dungeon, the fires of persecution, ignominy, the denunciations of the majority, the ridicule of the unbeliever, the anathemas of the pulpit, the fulminations of the press, will not remove it from the souls of men and women.

Here we have it concisely stated; viz., the secular law does not recognize the plural wife as a wife, but "the church covenant and ceremony are exactly the same as in the first, or legal marriage," and "the plural wife is in that sense as much a wife as the legal wife."

Is there not then a conflict between the law of the land and the church covenant of these lawbreakers?

While this church covenant is pleaded by the News as a justification for these confessed law violators, why should it have the monumental assumption to say: "We do not attempt to apologize for, condone, or advise the infraction of any law of the land?"

In addition to this, we append the defiant words of President George Q. Cannon, uttered at Mount Pleasant, Utah, September 3, 1899, and published in the Deseret Evening News of September 5:—

There are ministers who are devoting their time to circulating evil and false stories about us; our enemies are wrought up against us. If they could they would treat us just as Egypt did ancient Israel. They do not want us to have children, they would stop it if they could. But we will have children, we will multiply and increase and no earthly power can prevent it. Many are finding fault because some of our men have had children by their wives. I do not say this is not violating the law of the land, but their love for the increase of their posterity is of such a character that they can endure the consequence and are willing to go to prison if necessary for it. I have not disobeyed the law and I can talk freely about it. The Lord is with this people and he will continue to bless us. We shall prosper and increase.

This having of children, which Mr. Cannon declares will continue, and "no earthly power can prevent it," must have reference solely to having children by plural wives, for no one has found fault with men having children by legal wives, nor is there any law against it; but Mr. Cannon admits that the practice which he refers to is "violating the law."

Will the News claim that Mr. Cannon did not "attempt to apologize for, condone, or advise the infraction of any law of the land"?

Whether he did or not, he certainly hurls defiance at the law, and yet we are asked to let them alone and wait for unlawful cohabitation to cease with the death of those who practice it.

WOODBINE REUNION.

President Joseph Smith wrote of the Woodbine Reunion, under date of September 25, as follows:—

I reached Woodbine, Sunday, September 17, in time for the afternoon exercises; Bro. Forscutt occupying I believe in his old-time style and vigor, doing excellently well.

It is useless for me to try by memory to follow the events of the week, as the one succeeded the other; it being sufficient to write that from the opening to the closing "all went well."

Organization had been effected before I came, and Brn. E. L. Kelley, Isaac M. Smith, and myself were put in charge; Brn. Kelley and Smith having presided with skill and good effects till I came, after that we presided conjointly.

So far as preachers were engaged, Brn. Derry, I. M. Smith, J. C. Crabb, Kelley, Garrett, W. A. Smith, J. S. Roth (the latter gained a new sobriquet of "the unbridled Dutchman"), Hilliard, Forscutt, C. E. Butterworth, and the writer, all did what they could to build up the cause and conserve the general good.

Excellent helpers were found in Brn. Hudson (H. J.), the veteran from Columbus, Nebraska, Case (Hubert and Oscar), Dodson, Strain, Carroll, Cushman, Kibler, Hutchings, Baker, Criley, and a number of others, who had charge of prayer service and assisted in preaching services. Not keeping the list we may fail to remember them all.

The weather was fine from first to last; the only drawback being that the long, dry spell covered the weeds with dust, which the winds blew into the camp in fine percolating showers. Sunday, 24th, was especially bad in this regard.

The thousands of feet that threaded the rounds of the tent, the avenues and streets of the canvas city, ground the fine soil into powder, which rose like fine mist and covered tents, wagons, people, and seats till things took on one sober gray tint, the tint of "Iowa soil."

The police force was ample, the order good. We heard of no jar or disturbance.

The sanitary conditions were not quite so good as last year; local causes, the high water of the late summer, the scarcity of laborers caused by the grading of the Illinois Central Railway through the county and town, all combined to prevent the citizens' committee and the saints' reunion committee from doing what was contemplated and promised; but the grounds were in fair condition; all that talk about their being overflowed and dirty, was a mistake; it not being the case. Had the grounds been unfit to be occupied the brethren of the committee would have certainly informed the saints by due notice. So, after this if any such rumors get afloat, let those who contemplate attending the reunion be at ease in mind about the location and the condition of the grounds. If anything goes wrong, the committee will give due and proper notice.

The song service was good, Brn. Kibler and Pearsall, with Bro. Mark Forscutt to help, gave good selections, and their band of singers all did well.

The water supply was good and abundant. No ice was used, which was better, we think, than to have had it, as the use of iced water to those not accustomed to it at home, is provocative of stomach and bowel disorders, which it is well to avoid. Personally, we preferred the good fresh spring water to that chilled by ice.

The expenses of the reunion were practically inconsiderable, taking into account the numbers in attendance; less than one hundred and forty dollars, the amount needed by collections, making use of only one of the Sunday services, on the 24th to complete it.

The attendance was possibly not so large during the entire session as last year; but on Sunday, the 24th, the grounds were crowded; probably twelve hundred to fifteen hundred teams being in the grounds and the town. This last day's preaching services were by Bro. I. M. Smith, at 10:45 a. m.; M. H. Forscutt, at 2:30 p. m.; and the writer for the evening. The morning and afternoon services were hard ones for the preachers, the wind coming strong and fresh from the north filled the air in and around the big tent with fine dust that filled nostrils and throat, to the annoyance of the speaker. The evening was not so bad, as not so many were astir around the tent.

An overflow meeting was conducted in the afternoon by Brn. J. S. Roth and S. F. Cushman, which was attended by some hundreds of the saints and visitors, who were much interested and pleased with Bro. Roth's exposition of gospel themes.

Nineteen baptisms were had; some of them those who had long known the doctrines, but had never seen the opportunity to obey, until the present. Brn. Hubert Case and W. A. Smith performed the rite, while the confirmations were in charge of Brn. C. E. Butterworth, Charles Derry, and others; all being delighted to be of use in the Master's cause.

There was a committee of administration in laying on of hands. In conversation with Bro. Butterworth, chairman, we learned that there had been quite a number of administrations; only two or three being for serious causes. In nearly all relief was given as the result of the service,

There was no very serious illness, the health of the camp was good.

The next reunion will be held at Dow City, Brn. J. M. Baker, C. E. Butterworth, W. A. Carroll, A. H. Rudd, and Claire Butterworth being the committee. The time is left with committee to determine and give notice.

 AGENCY, ADMINISTRATION, AND CRITICISM.

To those who study the general problems of the world, and its conditions, and therewith the problems of the church and its work, this, we think, must be apparent: The trend of present events shows that there must be developed among the people a well-defined personal interest in all problems affecting human life. The people—the masses of them, not a few only—must be awakened to a deep interest in, to an active study of and participation in all things affecting the welfare of church or state. Those who rule and those who administer must be held to a strict account of stewardship; no evasion of responsibility must be permitted, no misuse of power or position be tolerated. The people themselves and their representatives must insist upon a frank and full administration, a conformity to the letter and spirit of the law of God and man.

The day is past for taking important matters for granted. Human nature is naturally ambitious and liable to err. Power conferred upon anyone is liable to be misused by the holder or to be controlled by others to the detriment of the masses concerned, without intelligent and just attention upon the part of the people, in whose behalf power is both conferred and to be administered.

The history of all the past, remote and recent, teaches us that intelligent comprehension of conditions by the masses, and the exercise of watchful discrimination with a view to insisting upon strict conformity to law in the interest of all concerned, upon the part of the representatives, administrators, and executives of the people, in church and state, are strictly necessary to preserve the liberties of the masses and to insure their further development and entire emancipation.

While those chosen to act for the people should be given loyal support, the support should not degenerate into unquestioning support. Their acts and general policies should be inquired into, with due respectfulness; but the inquiry should not be neglected.

True leadership invites and does not evade nor fear close inspection; and they who love the people will encourage such source of procedure, and insist that the people, whose interests, including the interests of truth and right reposed in them to a great degree by God himself, shall be frankly and justly and considerately dealt with, and have abundant opportunity to comprehend the exact condition of affairs.

Tyrants and ambitious men have been able to injure the people through the ignorance or indifference of the people themselves. God has placed in the hands of the masses the opportunity of acquainting themselves with the principles and details of his moral and spiritual and general system of government. He designs that all shall know the truth in all things pertaining to life here and hereafter. He would not have a few leading minds comprehending conditions, but all.

Granted that men would always do right and administer wisely, could the people ever attain personal, individual development by folding their hands, closing their minds, and moving on in the consciousness that some one else would carry on all work to be done? Certainly not. We should therefore see to it that by faithful close attention to the problems of church and general life we are prepared to act our individual part in our personal moral agency, under the conditions and laws of life in which God has placed all intelligence to act.

While it is regrettable that offenses arise, yet every difficulty is an opportunity. If men do wrong or act unwisely, the responsibility rests upon some others to be prepared to act in correction; hence to do so there must be clear, intelligent observation and a just and righteous criticism as a basis for proper action.

God himself cannot benefit a people as he would until they learn to hearken to his voice and to continue under the tuition of his Spirit until they become enlightened, developed agencies capable of doing his will. It is that kind of coöperation with him that will enable us as a people to become one in the truth, able to coöperate together, and under the blessings of God to succeed in our work for humanity. The gospel is broad and grand in its scope. It includes every agency for good, every principle of truth, in every realm, in every sphere in which God moves and rules to redeem the race. It is therefore necessary that as the people of God in name we arise to an intelligent conception of our work, and prepare ourselves for full and complete coöperation with the Lord. Mere entrance or induction into the kingdom amounts to little or nothing if not supplemented by usefulness as growing factors consecrated to and capable in the service of God.

Modern Israel has been in the wilderness because she did not rise above the conditions that hindered her development.

We are admonished that we have been intrusted with a great and solemn responsibility having in view the salvation of mankind. We should remember, therefore, that all agencies employed—all men and all women, official and laity—are under solemn obligation to labor as "servants," in the spirit of humble service in which the Christ sought not his own glory, but the glory of the Father in the good of mankind universal. If we coöperate in this spirit, we will separate ourselves from every motive, every policy, and every influence that asserts itself contrary to the spirit of the gospel, the spirit of sincere humbleness of mind. We shall then stand firmly for right, for truth, for the common good—for God. We shall then, as rapidly as is wise for us to move, solve present difficulties—inquire into them frankly and fearlessly, rendering to every man and every measure a just but impartial examination—and move forward and coöperate in all things spiritual and temporal as we should to the redemption promised the faithful workers together for good.

In conclusion: When the latter-day work burst forth upon the world, it called its converts from many conditions of life. Men and women came from the influences of sectarianism and from different political and social systems of government, all of which influenced to a great degree the character and habits of people subject to such conditions and influences. The fact that God had spoken and had raised up a prophet, had called apostles, etc., was with many enough. The necessity of comprehending the full purport of the work was not understood by many; the functions of men in official station were not clearly apprehended, and the tendency was to strongly overestimate them; to follow without understanding; to repose blind, indiscriminating confidence.

Loyalty and confidence in men are good, and not to be decried against; but true loyalty, or intelligent confidence should exist; not a misconception of such principles. People taught from childhood to look up to classes regarded as above them, are more apt to render unquestioning obedience than those taught to regard all men as equal, as fellow men of one common flesh and blood. Neither extreme—of unquestioning confidence nor of unjust criticism—but the happy medium of judicious and just criticism, (which is strictly essential to due appreciation of men or principles, as it is also to guard against error,) and in the spirit of brotherly kindness and charity, are, in the judgment of the writer at least, "just and true"—just and true to the ones thus observed, and to the cause of humanity.

We are in the work to labor, not to build up any particular persons or branch of the human family, not to follow human policies or designs, but in the interests of the race, by strict adherence to the truth. Just so soon as we are sufficiently developed to adhere closely to the spirit of our work, in all branches of the service, ministerial and lay, we shall be permitted to enter in and occupy higher conditions and to move still further forward. We have been admonished to occupy higher ground, necessarily so. It is absolutely necessary to our success and the success of truth that this be done.

HOME READING AND PRAYER.

Scripture reading at family worship, morning or evening, or both, is an excellent practice. Perhaps the children do not read the word themselves, perhaps they are not interested in it or have not been taught it. At all events the home reading of the word, in the family circle, will leave its impress indelibly and remain within the mind and heart, a lamp to guide and a force to control and bless the children and youth of the rising generation.

Gather your children around you and read to them or let them take "turn about" in the home reading of the word. Perhaps they are wandering, becoming worldly, as any are apt to be unless interested in the cause. Nothing is nor can be more potent than the word of truth. It is an old-fashioned practice to read the word at family worship, and the "higher critics" in modern life may not indorse it; but it is the right thing to do, nevertheless. Try it, and continue it, if you do not now make a practice of it, and your children will be blessed by it and be a blessing to many in return. The hour of family worship, once a day at least, should be faithfully observed.

Children are what their surroundings make them. Spiritual-minded parents and home influences develop spirituality; worldly or carelessly conducted life and homes mean the same things in children raised under such influences. Keep the children in touch with God and his work; do not neglect it, whether you are in a branch of a thousand members or a scattered and lonely family isolated from all church privileges. The Lord has commanded observance of the service of prayer. Those who neglect the office of prayer are "weakened thereby." "Pray often that your mind may become strong," was the advice of the angel to the young Seer. Jesus, the Master, commanded his saints to "pray always," to continue in prayerfulness in life. He prayed much himself, for he found it necessary. You need to pray; your children ought to be brought up under the influences of prayer. No one, from least to greatest, in all Israel, can walk in the light without prayer. All need to "watch and pray."

Let us not neglect the family altar for any mere bauble of pleasure or "social function." If we are God's people we should seek unto him and live in him, and not be carried away by the spirit of Babylon and neglect to observe the great office of prayer. Are we living unto God, striving for the life that is hidden in him, or are we living "after the manner of the world"? There is need for thought and action along these lines, by all of us.

MORE ARRESTS IN UTAH.

We learn from the Deseret Evening News for September 25, 1899, that Mr. Charles Mostyn Owen has turned up at Richfield, Utah, where he has filed affidavits with the county attorney charging President Joseph S. Horne and O. P. Borg with adultery, and Paul Poulson, Hans Christensen, and L. P. Christensen with unlawful cohabitation. He cites the Stake presidency and Ward Bishops as witnesses in each case.

THE Oskaloosa, Iowa, Herald, September 7, contains the following; clipping sent us by Bro. C. B. Brown:—

THE OTHER MORMONS.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints which is holding its reunion at Kansas City has no connection with the Mormon church whose headquarters are at Salt Lake, save a historical connection. The head bishop of the former organization is the son of Joseph Smith who was killed by the mob at Nauvoo, Illinois. The organization is entirely independent of the Utah Mormons and has its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, and numbers thousands of adherents in Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, and other States. It is bitterly opposed to polygamy and has always been since its organization. It regards the Book of Mormon not as a substitute for the Scriptures, but as auxiliary, or rather as an addition to the Bible. This church believes in the continuity of divine revelation. It holds that revelations have been made since the time of the apostles and that Joseph Smith, "the Seer," was a latter-day prophet. The membership is made up of good people, but they have been exceedingly modest in disseminating intelligence concerning their beliefs, and have therefore been confused with the Utah Mormons.

BISHOP E. L. KELLEY hands us the following item:—

JUST BUT NOT TECHNICAL.

The National Church Mutual Insurance Company, at Lisbon, Iowa, in which was insured the church building at Knobnoster, Missouri, that was moved from its foundation by a cyclone in 1898, has duly returned the money that was paid out by the church for the replacing of the building. This is particularly commendable to the company for the reason that notice had not been given the company as the rule requires, the matter having been overlooked by those in charge at Knobnoster, Missouri, and also by the Bishop's office. The company, however, did not stand upon this, but settled the matter at once, through its secretary and manager, Rev. W. S. Furnas.

The National Church Mutual Association is, therefore, just, as well as reliable in its work, and may well be commended.

GOING to press, we received the following card from Bro. G. W. Rogers, son of Bro. Israel L. Rogers. Pray for him if it be not too late.

SANDWICH, Ill., Oct. 1.

Dear Brother Criley:—I write to you and ask that you and all the saints and the Prayer Union would pray for Father. I. L. Rogers is a very sick man and unless God helps him—he is confined to his bed and I see no hopes for his recovery—except God interposes and blesses him; and I hope and pray that God will help him.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Arrivals from the Woodbine reunion include Bro. and Sr. Criley, Bishop Kelley, and President Joseph Smith, wife, daughter, and son; all well pleased with the gathering and its results.

Bro. I. N. White, writing from Independence, Missouri, late date, says: "Good meetings here yesterday; best for a long time. God was with the saints." We once had a correspondent at Independence—"Critic." What has become of him?

Bro. H. Goreham, Chicago, Illinois, writes briefly of his interest in the work of the church. He rejoices in added evidences of its truth.

Sr. Rebecca Deason, Gregville, Conecuh County, Alabama, asks prayer for her mother, who is an invalid. She expresses an earnest interest in the work.

"A brother of Joseph Knox, of Sandyville, Iowa, desires that some of the ministry visit Mr. Thomas Knox, employed at a lock factory at Terryville, Connecticut." This is reported for consideration of the missionary in charge by one of the mission force of the Des Moines district.

Brn. Duncan Campbell, E. B. Morgan, and J. R. Evans, of the ministry, were visitors at Lamoni of late, on church business.

The International Geographical Congress opened its sessions at Berlin, Germany, on the 28th.

Dr. Boucher, of the late anti-compulsory vaccination congress held in Berlin, declared that vaccination had caused the spread of the plague in India and in other countries. It seems that even doctors disagree on the question of vaccination.

The present address of Bro. F. G. Pitt is, No. 16 Carlingford Road, Harringay, N. London.

Bro. J. H. Lake reports the Southern Wisconsin reunion as passing pleasantly. Brn. Adams, Clark, Crawford, Stebbins, Russell, and McDowell present; some of them from the Kewanee district.

Our cover items this issue reflect to some extent the diversified conditions and movements of humanity. It is necessary to note and to study the inspirations and movements of the people to comprehend conditions that exist and aid in changing them to what they ought to be. The world needs the gospel—the gospel applied to the physical, moral, social, economic, and spiritual life of the race.

A report of the second proposition of the White-Braden discussion will appear in next issue of the HERALD.

"The Christian Scientists have petitioned the School Board of Independence, Kansas, to change the physiology in use to conform to their belief."

The threatened revolt by Episcopal clergy against Bishop Potter for his "liberal" action in ordaining Doctor Briggs has quieted down; a broad church committee being appointed at the late Episcopal convention, which was tantamount to an indorsement of the liberal wing of the church.

GATHERING. HOW ACCOMPLISHED?

In writing upon this or any other subject it is hoped that whatever criticisms it may call forth, none will indulge in such expressions as, "That bold and fearless defender," or terms of like import. All such expressions, while well intended, are uncalled for and may result in so "swelling" the head of the one for whom they are meant as to detract from his future usefulness, if not destroy it altogether.

One of the first prerequisites to the gathering is to fully observe the following:—

And now, behold, I give unto you a commandment, that when ye are assembled together, ye shall instruct and edify each other, that ye may know how to act and direct my church how to act upon the points of my law and commandments, which I have given; and thus ye shall become instructed in the law of my church, and be sanctified by that which ye have received, and ye shall bind yourselves to act in all holiness before me, that inasmuch as ye do this, glory shall be added to the kingdom which ye have received. Inasmuch as ye do it not, it shall be taken, even that which ye have received. Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you: sanctify yourselves before me.—D. C. 43: 3.

The "assembling" may be in either branch, district, or General Conference capacity. Or, better still, in a General Assembly, in quorums or quorum, or possibly in membership group. But we are to be sanctified by that already received and "act in all holiness" before the Lord. In doing this we will purge out the iniquity among us and thus be prepared to go up to Zion. The Lord is so very particular in the matter that in the short quotation given above he repeats the necessity of our becoming sanctified.

Our people are at times a little touchy on the question of sanctification, but if we purge out the iniquity we will be in a sanctified condition.

If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—1 John 1: 7.

We have it in our hands to have the gathering either near or far, as we will. In section 3: 15 the Lord says:—

I will gather them as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, if they will not harden their hearts.

The above emphasis is to show that we have it in our power.

Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you.

Again.

Gird up your loins, and take upon you my whole armor, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, having done all ye may be able to stand.—D. C. 26: 3.

With this couple the following:—

And it shall come to pass that the righteous shall be gathered out from among all nations, and shall come to Zion singing, with songs of everlasting joy.—D. C. 45: 14.

Better wait till we are "righteous" before we start! Better get "righteous" just as soon as possible! But whatever we do, don't let us gather before we are ready. Don't let our Zionie impetus be so great that trouble will ensue. Listen:—

And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.—D. C. 58: 12.

And now, behold, this is the will of the Lord your God concerning his saints, that they should assemble themselves together unto the land of Zion, not in haste, lest there should be confusion, which bringeth pestilence.—D. C. 63: 8.

Therefore, a commandment I give unto all the churches, that they shall continue to gather together unto the places which I have appointed; nevertheless, as I have said unto you in a former commandment, let not your gathering be in haste, nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you; and in order that all things be prepared before you, observe the commandments which I have given concerning these things.—D. C. 98: 9.

And let all my people who dwell in the regions round about, be very faithful, and prayerful, and humble before me, and reveal not the things [to the outside world] which I have revealed unto them, until it is wisdom in me that they should be revealed. Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently [done] with the feelings of the people: and, behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety.—D. C. 102: 7.

But verily thus saith the Lord, Let not your flight be in haste, but let all things be prepared before you.—D. C. 108: 4.

To the Reorganization through the present Joseph, the Lord says:—

Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me.—D. C. 117: 13.

Surely the above quotations are sufficient to show three things: 1. We are to have all things prepared before us, hence, 2. We are not to gather in haste. 3. We are to be guided by the counsel of the elders. What should the elders counsel? Nothing only that which is in harmony with revelation, and especially with the following:—

Wherefore it is wisdom that the land should be purchased by the saints.—D. C. 57: 1.

But says one, "How can we purchase?" After we have purged out all our iniquities—and we won't do that till we have complied with tithing as well as every other law—then put what money we can either into the hand of the Bishop or of any man whom we may choose as one in whom we have confidence as the one through whom the purchase can be made, of land in Zion for our inheritance. "An epistle and subscription" was to be written by Sydney Rigdon, to be presented unto all the churches, to obtain moneys, to be put into the hands of the bishop, to purchase lands for an inheritance for the children of God, of himself or the agent, as seemeth him good, or as he shall direct. For, behold, verily I say unto you, The Lord willeth that the disciples, and the children of men, should open their hearts even to purchase this whole region of country, as soon as time will permit.—D. C. 58: 11.

It may be said that Rigdon is dead and the command is no longer binding. There are but two ways to get the land, by purchase or by blood. "If by blood, . . . lo, your enemies are upon you." If, then, we want the true inheritance, we must purchase. The sooner, then, we begin to lay by the money for such purchase, the better we will be prepared for the redemption of Zion. "The love of money is the root of all evil." "Purge ye out your iniquity."

And again, inasmuch as there is land obtained, let there be workmen sent forth, of all kinds, unto this land, to labor for the saints of God. Let all these things be done in order. And let the privileges of the lands be made known, from time to time, by the bishop, or the agent of the church.—D. C. 58: 12.

Here, saints, is God's Zionie plan. Will we take him at his word and thus furnish employment for the worthy poor?

Wherefore, I, the Lord, willeth, that you should purchase the lands, that you may have advantage of the world, that you may have claim on the world [before the law], that they may not be stirred up unto anger.—D. C. 63: 8.

Read that which follows, very carefully. But to make the matter as plain as it is possible, the Lord says:—

Observe the commandments which I have given concerning these things, which saith, or teacheth, to purchase all the lands by money, which can be purchased for money, in the region round about the land which I have appointed to be the land of Zion, for the beginning of the gathering of my saints; all the land which can be purchased in Jackson County, and the counties round about, and leave the residue in mine hand.—D. C. 98: 9.

A very simple and plain duty this, and imposed by the Lord. The question for us to settle is, Do we really believe the Lord? If so, will it not be a very good plan to show our faith in him by simply doing what he requires? It is easy to put in practice. Let each branch make of the Bishop, or an "honorable" man chosen by themselves, a savings depository of all the money they can spare for this purpose and let it be used for the purchase of lands. Or in other words, just take God at his word, is to follow, and don't try any other scheme, if we really want to "gather." Coöperative associations may work O. K. from a business standpoint, but they are dangerous things to meddle with unless God has commanded their organization. If as communities you can thus combine and work harmoniously and purchase lands in Texas, Southern Missouri, or any other place, you will likely prosper, for a time at least; but it is well to remember that God has commanded that we should purchase "in Jackson County, and the counties round about, and leave the residue in mine hand." However others may feel, I prefer that as for me and my house, we shall obey God.

Now, verily I say unto you, Let all the churches gather together all their moneys; let these things be done in their time, be not in haste; and observe to have all things prepared before you. And let honorable men be appointed, even wise men, and send them to purchase these lands; and every church in the eastern countries when they are built up, if they will hearken unto this counsel, they may buy lands and gather together upon them, and in this way they may establish Zion.—D. C. 98: 10.

This is so plain it scarcely needs comment. If branches and communities, either "east," west, north, or south, for now the saints are in all these directions from Jackson County, or those in foreign countries or the islands of the sea, wish to purchase lands in Jackson or adjoining counties, let them save up as they can and put into the hands of the Bishop, or some "honorable" or "wise" man whom they may prefer beside, all moneys possible for this purpose. But "be not in haste;" that is, don't get so anxious about the matter that you will rush off to that land before all things are prepared before you, neither get into such a hurry as to sell your property at a needless sacrifice, and have cause to repent of your folly when the deed is done. Just simply begin the matter now and turn over what you have if it be not more than five cents. By and by it will amount to quite a sum, and before you are aware of it you will have enough to purchase a home there. While you are waiting to move there after such purchase is made, the Bishop can hire workmen to till your land and pay them out of the proceeds, thus giving employment to the worthy poor. See another beauty in the Lord's plan. He knows that we feel more "at home" among those with whom we have an acquaintance, hence let branches and communities combine in the saving of their means for this purpose and with their combined means purchase sufficient land in a body to move onto it together. Possibly you may prefer to go on your own "hook" in this purchase. All right, the Lord will let you exercise your own agency. I would prefer, however, to hold his knowledge in the affair as far superior to mine as the infinite is above the finite.

One more quotation:—

For it is my will that these lands should be purchased, and after they are purchased that my saints should possess them according to the laws of consecration.—D. C. 102: 8.

The laws of consecration make us "stewards" over our lands, and are the best calculated to remove selfishness from our nature of anything I know of.

That we are to purge ourselves from all iniquity; have all things prepared before us before gathering; be not in haste to gather; put our moneys into the hands of the Bishop or some "honorable" or "wise" man whom we may choose for this purpose that they may purchase lands for us to "gather" upon in Zion, the above quotations make plain.

Individually, I will be proud of the Rocky Mountain saints if they take the initiative in this matter. Desiring to write in a plain way about a plain fact, rather than to elaborate needlessly, and that whatever movement the saints may feel like making in this direction they will seek to comply with the law in the case, and with a prayer for Zion's weal,

J. W. WIGHT.

"THE WORD OF WISDOM."

Upon several occasions, when attempting to defend the "Word of Wisdom," I have been accosted with these words, "You elders read into that Word of Wisdom that which is not there." Now I hardly think any of the elders would wilfully or maliciously "read into," or misinterpret the counsel of the Lord; but by faith and study would be enabled to give a rendering of his word, which if heeded, would meet his approval, and prevent a vast amount of our present ailments, and save a deal of contention. To wholly meet the divine approbation of our Creator, and receive his benedictions like softening showers upon the thirsty land, we are required to submit our all to him, and live by "every word that proceedeth out of his mouth." There is no question with Latter Day Saints as to its origin; but to the manner of its being interpreted. Now, as "no prophecy of the scripture is of any private will of man," the necessity and surrounding conditions must be taken into consideration, in order to draw a logical conclusion.

The Word of Wisdom was given for a purpose, and has a real true meaning couched somewhere; and it is for us,—by prayer, faith, and study,—to search it out, and put it into practice as soon as possible, that when the voice is heard, "Go ye out to meet him," we are not met with those remorseful words, "slothful servant."

The word of the Lord,—whether law, counsel, or otherwise,—is among the things that does not pass away, either with using or abusing; but "liveth and abideth forever." And when all things of a transitory nature have run their course, and pass into the great ocean of oblivion, the records of heaven and earth will remain, and by them we will be rewarded or punished, according to our acceptance or rejection. The words which I have spoken, said the Savior, shall judge you; "and the dead were judged out of the things written in the books," etc. Is not the Word of Wisdom written in one of the books that we, through the kindness and love of God, are permitted to peruse, and learn his mind and will touching both our temporal and eternal welfare? Certainly; and his knowledge and ways are as much superior to ours as the heaven is higher than the earth. Hence, when it is recorded that the wisdom of this world is foolishness in his sight, I conclude that it is not safe to rely on the conflicting words of even saints, when the Lord has spoken to the contrary; but as Peter would say, we ought to obey God rather than men, or as God would say concerning his Son, "Hear ye him." The Preacher said, "Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty man." "But," says one, "this Word of Wisdom is not a command, it is only a saying, like many others, and is not compulsory."

I can readily admit that it is not compulsory, for the Lord does not force, but loves a willing heart and mind. Suppose it is a saying, is that any benefit to the objector? Certainly not; for says the Master, "He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings;" and in the revelations of Jesus Christ to John, we read, "these sayings are faithful and true;" and further, "blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." Not the book of revelation only, but all those intrusted to our care. The thought is broadened in these words, "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, is like unto a wise man," but those who do not, are classed among the foolish. Now, in the parable of the virgins, those who had kept his sayings, were robed in their spotless garments of righteousness, and were given a hearty welcome to the marriage supper of the Lamb; but where were the foolish saints of the parable? O, only on the outside with closed doors, still knocking! But listen; if hearts are not brought to a realization of their position before then, what will be the nature of the remorse, when the calm, clear words ring out, from the immaculate Son, saying, "I know you not"?

Now what does the Word of Wisdom say? "That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father." If it is not good, then it must be evil, and injurious. "But," says one, "it does me good to take a glass of spirits now and again." Well, if that be true, then you have proven the Lord to be in error, for he says it is "not for the belly," and "is not good for man."

"Again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man." But has not God ordained that "all wholesome herbs" are "for the constitution, nature, and use of man?" Yes; but tobacco is not good for his constitution, but to be skillfully applied to strains, bruises, and be administered to sick cattle. Smokers claim to receive peace of mind and comfort from the use of this herb that the Creator declares "is not good for man," which to a certain extent may be true; but let me assure every conscientious user, that there is far more comfort and peace of mind among those who do not use it; but who have received this warning as from a loving friend, who is interested in our welfare, and has kindly pointed out the dangerous rocks upon which we are liable to be harmed. But is not tobacco using a good disinfectant? Perhaps; still we have a better in him who holds power over all diseases, and has said, "All saints who remember to keep, and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments," etc., "I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them."

Brethren, is it not better to hearken and heed the counsels of the Lord than run chances when the destroying angel is abroad?

And what can be the meaning of "hot drinks"? Certainly, not whisky, brandy, gin, or others containing alcohol, for they are disposed of under the heading of "wine and strong drinks." It is an entirely new subject, and has no reference to wine or liquors; nor can it refer to ginger, pepper, etc., for these are not hot drinks, but herbs steeped in water and used as a medicine, in accordance with the Word of Wisdom, which states, "All wholesome herbs God hath ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man, every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof;" and there are other mild herbs which the sick are to be nourished with also. Is then hot water or milk prohibited, or does the importance of the statement hinge on the word "hot"? Let us see. In this revelation is shown "forth the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days," "adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints." "Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days," etc.

Now the reason of this Word of Wisdom being given appears just at this point, and the Lord forewarns the saints against the work of "conspiring men," in certain evils and designs they have in the preparation of these beverages. What! hot water? No, they have nothing to do with that; for that is wholly a work of the saints, and surely you would hardly class them among the evil and designing men of the last days."

What evil design would a good housewife, a true saint, have in preparing a cup of milk and water? None at all. Then we must look somewhere else for the meaning. Competition has become so keen and cutting in these days of grabbing to get something for nothing, that almost every commodity is so adulterated, that many of the articles offered for sale, are unfit for human consumption. Tea, coffee, cocoa, and several others, of the common beverages in use, come in for an extra amount of these admixtures, in their preparation, that they are injurious to the system, and unfit to be used. So the Lord in his kindness and foreknowledge of these evils, says, I warn you and forewarn you, that to indulge in these unnecessary adulterated compositions called "hot drinks" is not good for man, hence must be evil, or at least has an evil effect upon the system. I know not what effect these articles in their pure state would have upon the body or mind; but as the Lord does not speak until the necessity exists, and as we read nothing on this subject, until the Word of Wisdom was given, I think, therefore, that "hot water" can justly be excluded, as it is pure in itself, and evil and designing men have nothing whatever to do with its preparation, but is wholly prepared by the saints.

Now, as then, is a clear line of distinction drawn between "strong drinks" and "hot drinks," and both are said not to be good, or fit for the body or belly, what wisdom is there in a brother getting up to "slate" smokers and chewers, who habitually drinks these adulterated beverages himself. Thou sayest that saints should keep the Word of Wisdom, in order to escape the impending doom which shortly will visit the ungodly. Dost thou keep the Word of Wisdom?

In 1887 the Lord said: "Avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example."

Great are the privileges and promises held out to the faithful observer of this Word of Wisdom! But I heard one of our ministers say that "he had tried this hot water and milk racket for several years and he never had received any more knowledge," and had gone back to his accustomed drinks. Well, to this I can only say, Lord have mercy upon any saint who lives for several years in this latter-day work, whether he drinks tea or not, and does not increase in knowledge. They will need to get the reign of Christ extended considerably beyond the appointed time to attain to the "measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," at their present rate of growth. "Let us hear what God the Lord will speak," and when he does speak, "hear ye him," and we will arise higher by leaps and bounds, and soon be prepared for a greater endowment. Lord hasten the day.

Yours in Christ,

C. A. BUTTERWORTH.

THE FUTURE OF PALESTINE.

It is very remarkable how persistently a large portion of mankind insists upon regarding the future of Palestine as in some mysterious way associated with the destiny of the race. The feeling is not confined to Christians, among whom the stupendous events enacted in that country have become the groundwork of faith; it is shared in by Jews and Mohammedans, both of whom alike regard that little strip of territory that has been under the heel of the Turk so long with a vague belief that at some time, in some way, it is to be the scene of tremendous events affecting both the religious and political well-being of all peoples.

The persistency of this belief is all the more remarkable because the material interests of the nations and the conditions of Palestine do not warrant it. The country itself is a strip of land no larger than the State of Vermont, hemmed in on one side by an almost inaccessible coast, and on the other by the Syrian Desert. Denuded of its timber and made arid by tyranny and neglect, it offers little temptation to the territorial greed of Europe or the vast industrial schemes of modern enterprise. And yet, notwithstanding all this, the legendary interest of the domain for three vast divisions of the human family, and the profound conviction that somehow this memorable spot lies waiting either for a new evangel or a political crisis, have so entered into the minds of men that Palestine with each succeeding year becomes more and more the Mecca of civilization and the mystery of the ages.

The population of Jerusalem is now three times what it was thirty years ago, and a large proportion of this influx has been made up of Jews and Christians, who here bridge their differences with a common veneration. At the last annual meeting of the Palestine Exploring Fund in London, at which Lord Amherst presided, the reports of this slow but steady growth occasioned considerable surprise. It was shown that in spite of the discouraging conditions of labor, and existence generally under the Turkish tax-gatherer, there was a steady increase, not only of capital, intelligence and enterprise, but of the world's interest in the future of the country, and that something quite independent of commercial attractiveness was slowly changing the aspect of affairs along the Jordan Valley, where colonies of Jews are now planting olive gardens and vineyards side by side with Christians who are planting chapels and schools.

This growth and restitution of the Holy Land by agencies that elsewhere have been antagonistic presents one of the most profound phenomena of our time, for in each of the sects is the same ineradicable belief that the territory that has been buried so long "under the drums and trappings" of a hundred conquests is once more in some mysterious and millennial way to put on its beautiful garments. Such a sentiment, surviving and growing, despite the Westward pressure of the world's activities, must in any aspect of it command our reverential attention. Already Palestine is in the centre of a world-wide pilgrimage. Not only the Christian, but the Jew and the Mohammedan go there to muse amid its ruins, and, mayhap, if not like Kubla, who,

"Mid this tumult heard from far, Ancestral voices prophesying war," they may at least, in the confraternity of interests, be helping to realize one of the oldest prophecies of peace.—A. C. Wheeler, in Saturday Evening Post for September 23, 1899.

ORTING, Wash., Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—When last I addressed you I was in Oregon en route for reunion. Well, I found the place at last, and as you have been informed concerning it, I will say nothing. I was only there two evenings, Bro. Griffiths thinking our time could be more profitably spent elsewhere, so I left for Tacoma, where Bro. Griffiths did some branch work. We tried to preach to the people, but they had no disposition to hear. I went to Eatonville, by the request of Bro. Griffiths. He had made a short visit to Orting, thinking good might be done there; advised me to go there from Eatonville. I was in Eatonville seventeen days. Preached sixteen discourses to an interested few. Baptized four, did visiting through the day, and talked till it seemed my brain was on the whirl. I was kindly cared for by the saints and friends while there, who esteemed it a pleasure to provide for my wants. May the good Lord reward them for the same. I left others convinced of the truth we teach, but some little things had to be attended to before they could accept, but I expect them to do so some day. It was with sadness I took the parting hand of those kind saints and friends, and I shall long remember them. Some will say, Why did you not remain? Well, it was harvest time with them, and nearly all were going away to work, and Brn. Emerson and Hiram Van Eaton are there, and will look after the work. Bro. Hiram kindly took me up in his stage and brought me down again, and his house was headquarters while there; and anyone who is acquainted with him and his noble wife and family knows they make one feel at home, while others were not behind them in their effort to make one feel at home, and they did not forget that the elder needed help other ways than just a home while with them. May the Giver of all good blessings give the reward they need.

I came to Orting, where I met as noble a band of saints as you will find anywhere, and who spared no pains to make my stay pleasant. I could not ask any more than I have met with here. Some not with us in membership, yet are in works, which we regard as works of righteousness, equal to many who have the name. While here I have preached almost nightly; so you see I have been doing some work, and I might say that I left home to come to this field to work, not to find a "playground," for if I had been looking for the latter, no doubt I would have been "catching fish or eating clams," or reclining on some "lonely island writing up the situation."

I am now in Western Washington, but shall not remain here always. While my ministerial experiences are not very great, yet I do not need to travel over a field more than four years to tell the probable best time for gospel work in it, hence shall (or hope to) return to Eastern Oregon when people have the time to listen to our message.

One thing I noticed in the advertisement of our reunion was that Bayview was a good place for "fishing, and clam digging, and boat riding." But remember this country is no "playground," but a place of work. So I ask the saints and friends in Oregon to let me know what the opportunities for preaching in their places are. Address me at Castle Rock, Washington, or Lone Rock, Oregon.

In Orting I met Elders John Davis and N. C. Enge, both alive in the Master's work. Bro. Davis is working in the hop fields, and will keep up the gospel work on Sundays while here. Bro. Enge is at work, but will return home this week, where he also keeps the camp fire blazing.

Yours ready for work,

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 22.

Editors Herald:—I left home the 8th inst., for this place, in response to a letter from my wife's sister, Sr. W. E. Wolfe, which stated if I could be here by the 9th I could have the use of a fair-sized tent for meetings. On the 9th I was on the ground ready for duty. Found the tent all equipped and ready for use. It seems a few of the ladies who have become somewhat disgusted with the popular churches formed themselves into a Prayer Circle, and organized a mission. They procured this tent for services and have been holding nightly meetings most of the summer. Their efforts have been rather discouraging to them, and when I came I found they were praying the Lord to send some one to the tent who might do some good. One of them said she guessed the Lord had sent the Latter Day Saints.

I began meetings the 10th with rather a small crowd, but withal some of the best people of the town. On the 16th Bro. C. R. Duncan came to my assistance, and we have been preaching every night since. Our audiences have not been large, but there is one encouraging feature, we have about the same people every night; most of those who attended the first service have attended nearly every meeting since. We are to have the tent over this Sunday, and while we have no baptisms to report, we think the prospect encouraging for a good work to be done here. This is the first preaching done in this town to our knowledge.

One gentleman marveled because we have taken up no collection, and wanted to know how our expenses were met. I informed him my brother-in-law was bearing the expense of this meeting; then he wanted to know if I had a brother-in-law in every town. Of course the joke was on me, and Bro. Duncan thinks it is pretty good. Sr. Wolfe and her husband, though not a member of the church, have stood by us faithfully; he leading the singing every night. Sr. Cora Dove is also kindly remembered as assisting in these meetings. She and Sr. Wolfe are the only saints in this city that we know of. They have the respect of all who know them, and have done much toward removing prejudice and making an opening here possible. If we succeed in getting our district tent for the season next year, we believe a good work can be done in Pueblo.

I hope the saints of Eastern Colorado will come to our assistance in this matter, for it seems we need a tent very much, and I think great good will be done with it. The committee appointed by the last conference to solicit means and purchase a tent is composed of Brn. O. B. Thomas, C. R. Duncan, and myself. We will be glad to receive your subscriptions, whether they are little or much. If we do not succeed in calling on you personally, you can send your money to me at Wray, Yuma County, Colorado. Bro. Duncan goes to Falcon on Monday, to look after the work there, and the writer to Denver. I find in Bro. Duncan a careful workman and a genial companion.

Your brother and coworker,
JOHN B. ROUSH.

ADAMSTON, W. Va., Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Barbour County, West Virginia, where I was moderator for Bro. D. L. Shinn in a debate with A. A. Bunner of the so-called Church of Christ, commonly named Campbellites. The propositions were on the organization, faith, and practice of the two churches. The debate was held in the courthouse, and we had to pay our board at the hotel, there not being a Latter Day Saint nearer than forty miles that we knew of. Well, as to the result. His church with elders and deacons; and water baptism for the remission of sins; and no baptism of the Holy Ghost; no Comforter to lead and guide and enlighten the understanding; and no living apostles; no gifts of the Spirit; the elders and deacons usurpers, not sent, hence no priesthood in the church; was compared with the church set forth in the New Testament, with its living apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, bishops, teachers, and deacons, with the nine gifts of the Holy Spirit; with faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of sins, and gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, to comfort and to lead and to guide into all truth, and to take of the things that are freely given of God, and show them unto us, would have to fall into insignificance, and the congregation could see the point made, and laughed him to scorn, and he thirsted for revenge.

When Bro. Shinn made his first affirmation, instead of Bunner following in the negative, as he had agreed to do and had signed an article to that effect, he brought in Braden, Bays, Neal, and all the slander that he could get from any source, and undertook to prove that Joseph Smith was the author of polygamy, Adam-god worship, blood atonement, and all the Brighamite abominations. So we gave him the rope and let him run, telling the people that his slang would be answered to their satisfaction after we had set the church up.

So Bro. Shinn in his last speech read the two records of the courts in the United States and the one in Canada, and to his confusion and shame, down went all Brunner's argument the negative of our proposition. This was in the presence of lawyers, doctors, merchants, and the county officers, and all other shades of men, for the debate was held in the courthouse in the center of the town, and had been advertised in the county papers in advance, consequently drew a large crowd. A lawyer of the town was chairman, and one night he could not attend he got ex-judge Lee of the circuit court to preside, so we had the intelligence of the county out to hear.

As to the result, I will give you the signs and you can judge as well as we can. The postmaster was heard to say, "The debate has done us all good; we have all learned something we never knew before." J. S. Thacker, a Campbellite, asked, "When can you come and hold a meeting for us? write me, and I will meet you at the station." The people said they would be glad to see us come again and preach for them. One man said, "When you come again, remember the latch of my door hangs on the outside; come in and make yourself at home." Prejudice all gone. Yes, we will go back right soon and preach for them.

We will go from here to Washburn, to engage in debate with them again on the 25th of September, on the same propositions. We are not challenging anyone; but when they protest against what we teach, we will try to give a reason for the hope within us, and defend what we teach. The work is onward in West Virginia, and we are rejoicing and are hopeful of success in the end. Pray for us that we may accomplish our mission and be saved. Your brother in the one faith,
G. H. GODBY.

WILMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 25.

Editors Herald:—After remaining in Chicago more than two weeks, assisting the brethren in doing street work, and withstanding the Brighamite elders, I left on the 20th inst. for this place, having shipped the tent the day preceding. Arriving at Wilmington, I found that the tent had already arrived, and everything was in readiness. By the assistance of Bro. Elmer Kahler, and Bro. Walrath and son, we erected the tent the same day I arrived, and began meetings the following night. Interest has been good from the beginning, and has increased up to the present. The people give good attention, and we have felt well in presenting the word. Preached three times on Sunday.

In the midst of our discourse on Sunday afternoon, a gale blew down the tent; notwithstanding quite a crowd of people were in the tent, no one was hurt. Some of the sisters who were working so hard to make the effort a success, felt very much discouraged, thinking that the people would be afraid to return. But with the assistance of the brethren and friends, we soon had the tent righted and ready for meeting at night.

When time came for meeting, we had a larger crowd than ever; so all felt encouraged again. We had our prayer signally answered at night. When I came to the tent to arrange for the night meeting, the wind was still blowing hard. I prayed that the wind might cease, and that conditions might be favorable for meeting. Soon the wind subsided, the clouds disappeared, and all was calm. Yes, "it might have happened anyway;" but somehow when I ask a favor of God, and receive it, I feel like giving the praise to the Lord. Whether it was done for our especial benefit or not, he is entitled to the praise.

Bro. and Sr. Kahler are doing everything to make the tent work a success. Bro. and Sr. Walrath also are giving excellent assistance; the saints are cheerful, and all are hopeful of good. So far I have been alone in the preaching, but expect Bro. A. J. Keck to come to my assistance to-day.

I remain yours, still in the conflict,
H. E. MOLER.

HONOLULU, H. I., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—I forward copies of the Advertiser and Independent, which editorially discuss the decadence of Protestantism in these islands. So far as learned, the Independent correctly states the situation. God help the heathen if missionaries have been the same everywhere. Catholicism and Utah Mormonism are quite popular, because of the unbridled license allowed. If this place is a fair sample of the world, the end must be very near; it is decidedly Sodom like. One constantly witnesses scenes that make the heart sick, as we travel over the island. Bro. Poepoe, my native assistant, and myself have visited several neighborhoods, one of them seventy-five miles from the city. Let me describe one service: from twenty to thirty people on the ground, dimly seen by the light of one lantern; and dogs—black dogs, yellow dogs, brown dogs, spotted dogs, big dogs, little dogs; when one barked they all barked. Whether the dogs or the preachers started the roosters crowing I never knew, but they all struck in. It was a never to be forgotten serenade.

We visited one Mormon settlement and occupied their church three evenings. Their leaders are industriously circulating the lie that we have changed the books—Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants—and manufactured those historical statements about Brigham Young's teaching. When I opened their own books and read therefrom, was gravely charged with "taking a little here and there just to do their church injury," as if it were possible for one to injure them worse than their own leaders have done.

At Laei they have a sugar plantation, which supports the mission and something besides. They have twenty white missionaries who go out for five months on the different islands, then return to Laei to see their families and attend conference. An excellent plan. We occupied their church one evening and partook of their hospitality. Natives informed us that in coming to the plantation they consecrated all their property, and now pay rent for their houses, for pasturing their horses, and are obliged to trade at the plantation store. Several walked to Kahuku with us, in the early morning hours, who claimed to receive higher wages there, and money for pay, who desired to move away when possible. The chains are forged pretty tight. One evening I partook of poi and fish, which taste all right till I was told it was shark—then! I wondered how many dirty Chinese or Japanese fishermen it had eaten? Was I turning into a second-hand cannibal? I felt queer at the stomach for some time.

We are plodding along in this far away mission, slowly; there is but little to encourage. How my soul longed for the spiritual association of saints at the New England reunion. So far away, under vastly changed conditions, among a class who have no apparent desire to hear or obey the message of life, we longed for the spiritual refreshing. Our present method is to visit every home, leave a copy of our church paper, Ka Elele Ewanelio, and some tracts in the native tongue, offer the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants for sale, and talk with all who care to listen. There are no churches, halls, or schoolhouses open, save now and then a Mormon church for a night or two. We hold services outdoors or in houses. Natives will not go far to church. Our church paper is sent to about eight hundred people every month. In addition to the Sunday school lessons, other matter is supplied, setting forth the gospel, and showing the difference between the Reorganized Church and the Utah people. We will advertise if we don't baptize. This country, so far as climate and scenery go, is all one could desire for a home, if the loved ones were here. I wish to thank the friends in the East who have cheered many lonely hours by their letters. Write again. For this final triumph of Zion may we ever labor, in his name.

REUNION AMONG LAMANITES.

VINITA, I. T., Sept. 25.

Berry's Ferry, Indian Territory, reunion begun September 15, closing September 24, lasting ten days. Preaching by J. D. Erwin, E. A. Davis, F. C. Keck, S. W. Simmons, W. S. Macrae, A. M. Baker, Henry Smart, T. S. Hayton, Brn. Haden and Decker; other elders assisting in presiding over meetings. Bro. F. C. Keck was chosen to preside over the reunion; and he is the right man in the right place to preside, being a whole-souled, good-natured fellow, not a lazy bone in him, and is one of the pushing missionaries of the church. The work will never languish in his field if he can help it. Sr. E. A. Davis was chosen chorister, assisted by several of the fine young ladies from Weir City, Kansas, and Webb City, Missouri. The sisters from Weir, Kansas, Joplin, Missouri, Maysville, Arkansas, and Webb City, Missouri, assisted nobly in the singing service. Eighteen baptisms performed by S. W. Simmons, J. D. Erwin, E. A. Davis, and F. C. Keck. Some of the prayer meetings were very spiritual and grand. One young Lamanite sister, about twelve or thirteen years old, uttered one of the grandest testimonies I ever heard from the lips of one so young. She arose, and the Spirit rested upon her in great power. She stated there are two kinds of Latter Day Saints—pretending Latter Day Saints and true Latter Day Saints. Also a prophecy had been uttered over her, promising her she would come to that reunion. About this time the writer was so melted under the power of God's Holy Spirit, he lost the other words declared by this young Sr. Clark. Another full-blooded Wyandotte Lamanite, Bro. Kerry, arose, saying God had shown him he had a work for him to do; pointing to another brother Lamanite, said that he had a work to do. Also one Bro. Depue, of Tiff City, Missouri, arose and declared in prophecy the time is near at hand when God will endow his elders with a great endowment or power.

We had three sermons daily, which were logical and spiritual. One day was set apart for Sunday school work, conducted mainly by Srs. Davis and Lizzie Macon of Weir, Kansas, also Sr. Martha Macon. These sisters proved their ability in Sunday school work, which is greatly needed everywhere in the church. Bro. W. S. Macrae assisted splendidly on this line, and seemed to be a live Sunday school worker.

Three Lamanites were baptized among the eighteen baptisms performed.

The work is onward in the Cherokee Nation, which is a great field for labor; and according to vision and revelation to Bro. Keck and others, many branches will be raised up. Bro. S. W. Simmons is laboring hard to advance the work, and having a nice team and buggy, he can drive all over the country without purse or scrip. It would be very unwise to move him out of this field of labor. Bro. Henry Smart has also labored successfully.

Thus ended one of the most important reunions ever held by the Reorganization. There were thirty-two tents on the ground, and two hundred and fifty people in camp. The attendance must have reached as high as five hundred people. The influence of this meeting will reach out in every direction, and do much and lasting good. But the saints of Spring River district moved their next reunion to Cherokee Creek, near Sherwin, Kansas, next September.

The reporter,

J. D. ERWIN.

CORRECT, Indiana, Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—Some time has elapsed since you have heard from me, yet I have not been asleep all the while; only a part of the time appointed to man for that purpose. I have been very busy this year, however, not all the time in the ministry. I wondered last week, while, taking my corn knife in hand,—for about ten days, earning my bread by the sweat of my face,—if there are any more of the ministry under like circumstances. (By the way, we think it no disgrace to labor with our hands.)

During this year many have been the encouraging features along the gospel line, as well as some discouraging. We think the work is gaining ground all the while, although others have different opinions; but we remember one small spot is not the entire district. We are frank to say (yet sorry) that there seems to be a sleeping time with many of the members, and we fear, if the bridegroom should come to-night, there would be a great cry, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps have gone out." Nevertheless, we believe it is as it was in Noah's day, some are ready to enter in. We have visited the greater part of the district and tried to stir the saints up to duty. But too often, after the preacher is gone, they like Peter of old, go a fishing. These things ought not to be. I trust God will inspire our hearts more and more, that we may arouse. Be more energetic; be up and doing while time and opportunity is ours. To-day is ours; to-morrow may not be. I hope we will resolve henceforth to take up our line of march more earnestly, heed the great admonition, Come up higher.

We want to make our bodies fit abodes for the indwelling of God's Spirit. This cannot be done so long as our bodies are saturated from head to foot with tobacco and such like; or our stomachs filled with strong drinks, thereby crazing the brain; or our minds reaching after and indulging in the orgies of the world. One of God's servants says, "Cleanse yourselves from all filthiness; perfect holiness in God's sight." There will come a time some day when we may be weighed in the balances and found wanting.

Every one of us have our influence; we know not who are watching our conduct. How often do we hear some one say, I am as good as Brother A. Why, I heard him swear; I saw him drunk; that sister attended a dance the other night, and such like.

Ah, my dear saints, are we as the Savior said we should be, the light of the world, a city set on a hill whose light cannot be hid? While it is true we must answer for ourselves, it is also true, Woe to them that cast a stumbling-block in one's way.

Assuredly the district is gaining in prestige. Prejudice is subsiding. More people come to hear; more places are being opened for preaching. Additions are few. We are of the opinion the people should thoroughly understand themselves before entering the fold. Should this have been the case hitherto, we would not have to encounter so much trouble. Courts of elders would not be so often needed. We want all the honest in heart gathered in, but those of the opposite character we can get along without. Taking into consideration the vast amount of territory in the Southern Indiana district, with only three missionaries, and so many hindering causes, the writer thinks the district is getting along nicely. Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., has been unable to labor much, on account of sickness, of himself and family. Bro. Jenkins has been afflicted like one of old, with boils, which rendered him unable for missionary work. The writer has been obliged to work for a living a part of the time. This is the way the matter stands.

A few words to the saints: Don't neglect your tithes and offerings. Remember we shall be rewarded according to our works. If all would help a little, how much relief it would be to ye missionaries.

Yours in bonds,

W. C. MARSHALL.

BUFFALOGAP, Texas, Sept. 21.

Editors Herald:—I am a lonely traveler in the mission of our Lord and Master, so far as being surrounded by those of the same like faith as myself, although I realize the promise "Lo I am with you alway." After leaving home in Sweetwater, Texas, some two weeks ago, I made my way to Abilene, preaching by the way. On arriving at Abilene, I sought admittance, but was refused a hearing by the self-righteous bigots of this world. Those people are of the wealthy class. I then remembered that Christ said how hardly shall a rich man enter the kingdom. As I was pondering in mind, what move I should make next, the Devil entered and told me to go home and stay there; but I remembered the Savior's example and the counsel of St. James with profit to myself. A little later I learned, by mere accident, or an overruling providence that Bro. F. M. Oldham was living fifteen miles from Buffalogap. This is one of the most beautiful and lovely spots on earth, or at least that I have ever had the privilege of looking upon—a beautiful valley, somewhat broken and interspersed with live oak and elm. A thriving settlement is here, with good farms and pastures well stocked with improved cattle and horses.

In company with Bro. J. G. Emmons, who lives near Abilene, I came to this place, he returning to his home the same day. Bro. and Sr. Oldham are alive in the latter-day faith, and lost no time in telling the neighbors that a preacher was at their house, and I was called upon to preach on Saturday. We held over Sunday, and left an appointment for Tuesday. On Monday morning, in company with young brother M. U. Oldham, made our way to Guion, ten miles from this place. Stopped with Bro. H. B. Alexander and his excellent family, preaching to a small audience in the evening, and returning to this place Tuesday to fill appointment.

This place was at one time the county seat, but not now; hence a vacated jail in which are comfortable seats for school and other purposes. The stone walls are of fine workmanship and massive. I was told that it cost the county nine thousand dollars. In this we preached to as large and attentive a congregation as I have ever had the privilege of standing in the presence of. When I entered those walls, I had very peculiar and solemn reflections. I thought of Paul and Silas, and I imagined I could almost see them crouched against those walls and hear the chains clanking. Then I thought how they rejoiced for Christ's sake in their suffering, and it seemed to me that I could hear the sweet strains of music floating upon the atmosphere, as the two sang praises to God at the hour of midnight. I thought, too, of the time when Bro. Joseph and his fellow prisoners lay in Carthage jail, and perhaps the sweet strains of song in praise to their Master had hardly died away before the floors of that jail, and the hands and hearts of a ruthless mob were stained with their blood. (I have been told that those martyrs had just finished singing:—

"A poor wayfaring man of grief, Hath often crossed me on my way," the second time, when the mob entered the jail.) Then my mind wandered back to the earliest recollection of my childhood, when my mother and her helpless family, with hundreds of others, destitute and penniless, were driven across the bleak prairies of Missouri, Iowa, and Illinois, to seek shelter in an unsettled wilderness, and wait six long months with only a hope of ever seeing my father, who lay languishing in company with the men above-mentioned, within the walls of Liberty Jail for opinion's sake, and the sake of Christ. And when I looked upon the floors and walls of Buffalogap jail, I wondered how many poor souls had been confined here under false accusations.

I will preach to-night, and close here for the present. On my announcement last night that I would preach to-night, a professor arose and announced that he would lecture at the same hour on vocal music; but he was ruled down by the congregation. Considerable cheer, but not much sand. I pray God that we may all labor together in harmony as laborers for Christ, until the little stone shall have gathered from every part of the earth, and the tree be fully developed.

Yours in Christ,

L. L. WIGHT.

IRVING COLLEGE, Tenn., Sept. 25.

Editors Herald:—Wife and I came to Tennessee the first of July, 1898. We came with the expectation of being the means of bringing several into the kingdom before this time. We were received kindly by nearly all the people that we have met; they have treated us splendidly all the time, and as a rule given me a fair hearing at all our appointments for preaching. We have preached in but four counties in this State, and one in Georgia. Many seem to believe the doctrine we teach, but still they remain where they are, so far as the church is concerned. I sometimes wonder why it is that people can believe as they seem to, and still remain out of the church. I do not urge them to come into the church, for I believe when they are thoroughly ready for the church they will come without any urging; yet I would love to see a number baptized while I am here, but whether they are baptized now or not, I am satisfied there is a good, broad foundation laid for future building. Nearly all churches and schoolhouses are open to us to preach in at any time when not in use by those who own them.

I have lately held a public discussion with a noted Baptist debater. The result was a victory for the good cause; the greatest I was ever the means of achieving. I have held several debates, but this one was with the most unfair man I ever met, his unfairness was one great cause of our victory. To God be the glory, now and forever.

One drawback here, as elsewhere, is the Brighamites; they tell the people that they don't believe nor teach the doctrine of polygamy. Some people believe them and have been deceived. Some in this section, as elsewhere in the South, that they deceived, have found out that they were deceived, stand aloof from all churches, declaring that a burnt child dreads fire. So they won't enlist with us yet, but we expect them to sometime. The outside people and members of other churches point to them as samples of deception, and some say that we are the same as Utah Mormons; and so the good people are kept in suspense. Yet I expect a good harvest sooner or later in this section.

There are enough places open for preaching to keep a dozen good elders busy. I am here alone as a missionary, and but three members of the church to meet with at any time. Nobody to write to the Herald and Ensign to cheer me up, like I see from other parts of the missionary fields. Well, I will just do the best I can, and wait as patiently as I can for the results. I would be glad to see the missionary in charge in these parts, so that he might see things as they are, and help me a little, if no more. I never felt better, spiritually, than now. Wife and I have been blessed with a reasonable portion of health ever since we came here. Sometimes when we think of Texas, the children, and folks, we would love to be there awhile at least; but we aim to remain at our post until our time expires in this field, or we are released, which we do not expect, neither do we ask it.

If another Baptist preacher don't back down, we will have another debate, but I now believe he will back down, as the Utah elders have done in this section. I have challenged them all, but none show up. I am still in the faith,

E. W. NUNLEY.

WHEATLAND, Mo., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—Elders D. C. White, C. P. Welsh, and M. Sory have just closed a ten-days' arbor meeting, which resulted in five baptisms and others quite favorable to the work, and I think much prejudice removed. The saints have been greatly strengthened spiritually and in numbers, for which we are thankful to our heavenly Father.

Editors Herald:—I was guilty of unintentional omission in my letter from North Dakota. I should have reported that I. N. Roberts organized the Star Hope branch, at North Dakota. True, two hundred and thirty pounds avoirdupois, is not to be trifled with, but credit to whom credit is due, is the thought.

JAMES CAFFALL.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 22.

Editors Herald:—Dear brethren in the Lord. It is many a long day since I intruded upon your valued columns, fearing to thus aid in excluding more pressing and important matter from abler penmen. I have, moreover, lost the letters of some of your fellow laborers in "Zion's goodly land;" and have thus been precluded from replying to their kindly communications.

London still remains the gigantic spiritual problem it ever was! The city of the richest; the city of the poorest; the city of royalty; the city of refuge! The city of science and learning; the city of hydra-headed want, and ignorance containing within its environs the carriages of lords, dukes, earls, countesses, and viscounts; containing also, I grieve to say, many thousands to whom the certainty of a day's food is a vanishing quantity. How to grapple with even the fringe of such a theological problem surpasses the learning of the wisest and the astuteness of genius itself.

Many of the ablest minds and noblest powers, backed up by the possession of almost fabulous riches, have for many years past bent all the energies of mind and body to the elevation of London's "submerged tenth;" and have, so far at least as human sagacity can discern, simply "spent their strength for nought, and their labor for that which satisfieth not."

Is it, then, to be wondered at that a comparative handful of Latter Day Saints, destitute of the adventitious aids of social influence, power, wealth, or position, should fail to effect any visible amelioration in the very "seat and synagogue of Satan," or be able in any adequate degree, to preach the gospel to "every creature" in this the world's metropolis. Yet this is the eternal, unceasing, and never-ending problem which is "ever with us."

Talk of mathematical problems, why! the twenty-ninth problem of the fifth Book of Euclid is as nothing in comparison to this; and the pons asinorum itself is mere child's play, and unworthy of being mentioned in the same breath; for I am convinced that were the highest and brightest luminaries in the church to labor unremittingly in London for fifty years, they would hardly then have preached the gospel to "every creature" within its gigantic and everwidening bounds!

The brethren who have been sent among us in times past, and the brethren who are now on Britain's shores have faithfully and I believe conscientiously upheld Zion's banner in London, commensurate with their several phrenological talents and capabilities; and this branch will be long ere it ceases to have their names and their labors in grateful remembrance.

The recent work of Apostle Heman C. Smith upon Presidency and Priesthood is a monument of didactic skill, and forensic acumen and discrimination. Many articles, too, which have recently appeared in your welcome pages, ought to be printed and disseminated broadcast throughout England. Your editorial articles are distinctly good and discriminating.

I miss Elder M. T. Short's breezy and epigrammatical articles and letters of late. Write again, Bro. M. T.

Elder William Newton, before he went to conference, delivered us a course of rousing, earnest, and soul-searching discourses; while Elder F. G. Pitt has also instructed us in many things touching the kingdom of God, and the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let the dear old Herald teem with variety; for "variety is the spice of life." With sincerest respects to the senior editor and his gentle partner in life, I remain,

Yours in hope of the never-ending victory,
F. R. TUBB.

WEAUBLEAU, Mo., Sept. 27.

Editors Herald:—Leaving the Washington Park reunion on September 4, I came to Harrisonville and stopped a short hour and took dinner with Bro. and Sr. Cummings. They are in the work both heart and soul.

I stopped over night at Blairstown; next day on to Lowry City; found Bro. T. R. White and wife in the faith and wanting to have a tent meeting. Bro. C. P. Welsh met me here with faithful "Lizzie," as we call her, and on Friday morning, the 8th, "Lizzie" was harnessed and hitched up and away we went through dust, rocks, stumps, and hills. After traveling about twenty-five miles we landed safe at James N. Stephenson's.

We began meeting at Squire Prairie school-house and continued one week. Bro. M. L. Sory met with us here and we divided our force, occupying in two schoolhouses. Good was done at the first named place. We were kindly cared for by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Bridges. Though not of the faith, but warm at heart. Bro. Welsh met with a disappointment at this place. He was reading the Book of Mormon and laid it down on the railing of the porch, and a big black dog slipped up and stole it and almost ate it up. We called him "Mormon dog" after playing such a trick. We watched the dog to see if (or hoped) he would die after such a bundle of truth as that in him; but he seemed to want more. We thought, Could the people take it down like that, our work would be a success.

On September 17 we began a ten-days' meeting in a grove arbor at Sr. Mary U. Paxton's, four miles northwest of Wheatland. We had a spiritual and profitable time, baptizing five on Sunday. Bro. A. Lloyd, the district president, was with us a few days, and while one morning he and I were out in secret prayer the Lord spoke to us through the Spirit by tongues and interpretation. I was admonished, counseled, and directed in my labors, and promised that I should yet stand before thousands both in and out of the church to declare the gospel; and one special feature of the tongue was that our prayers were heard and recorded and we should read them when we appeared before the Lord. This makes the second time the Lord has spoken to us by the gifts since I left home, July 19. My work has been pointed out to me and my "work not yet finished in the Clinton district." The Lord is truly with us and has blessed me "in a dream, in a vision of the night," and "openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction."

We came to this place yesterday. Bro. E. L. Terry had arranged to hold services in the schoolhouse and bills had been posted up and scattered over town to that effect, but when time came for preaching no key and no one could tell where it was. The only way we could account for this was that one or two of the local churches had just closed a (distracted) meeting in which many had joined and they had enough. But we have rented a vacant storeroom for one week, paying two dollars and fifty cents for the use of it and shall seat it up, and make our defense for the restored gospel. Yours in bonds,

D. C. WHITE.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

FROM the Daughters of Zion department of Autumn Leaves we copy the following instructions, intended as helps for local organizations, and do so with greater pleasure, because we have long felt the need of just such helpful suggestions as are here found. Believing that a wider circulation may be obtained through the Herald, we cheerfully give them place.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE!

To all who have charge of local organizations of Daughters of Zion, and those whose interests and influence could further the work, we wish to submit the following thoughts and suggestions, trusting each one may receive at least some help regarding their respective needs. Many inquiries have been received by our corresponding secretary as to objects and aims of the society, also how to proceed to organize and conduct the meetings. These questions have been answered personally by the secretary, Sr. H. H. Robinson, Box 437, Independence, Missouri.

We think it also best to answer in a general way, part of which will be a reproduction of parts of the Constitution of Daughters of Zion and also that given out by advisory committee published in Autumn Leaves. (See January and February numbers, 1899.)

In Constitution, page 2, article 2, it reads:—

"The objects of the organization shall be:—

"First, To unite for mutual benefit and to increase love for the sanctuary of home; to study to educate our children in the principles of the gospel, to prepare them to resist the evils of the world, and to become active agents for good.

"Second, To promote social purity and teach the sisters the great responsibility of motherhood, that they may be mothers indeed, guarding the interests not only of their own children, but of the children of others.

"Third, To extend a helping hand to erring ones and to do all in our power to win them to paths of righteousness.

"Fourth, To be ready to sustain every good work, that our influence may assist in the establishment of Zion, the pure in heart."

On page 5, Constitution, instructions are given as follows:—

"In organizing a local society, it may be desirable for the sisters to interest their branch president or other minister who may be willing to assist them. Should this be found to be impracticable they may proceed to effect organization without such aid. It is thought advisable to make public announcement of a meeting for that purpose, explaining briefly the objects and character of the society.

"At the called meeting, after choosing a temporary chairman fuller explanation of the work may be made by those interested. Permanent officers may then be elected; the length of their term of office and the time and place of monthly meetings being also decided upon."

Article 3, page 5, has been changed to read in reference to locals, that presidents of local organizations must be Latter Day Saints in good standing. Members who are not Latter Day Saints may hold offices of secretary and treasurer.

The president, or one whom she may request, should offer the opening prayer. She could at times request a few others to follow. In one of the prominent locals it is the custom for the chairman to read the Bible lesson and the secretary read the "select reading" from Home Column in Herald, the chairman reading the supplementary readings for discussion.

"The secretary shall keep a list of members, sending the names to the Recording Secretary for publication. She should call the roll and mark the attendance at each meeting. She should also send an annual report to the General Convention as to the numerical, financial, and general condition of the society. It is her duty also to write orders on the treasurer for any moneys to be paid out by the society."

Since the dues per month from each member has been dispensed with, the work of treasurer has pertained only to incidental expenses of their respective locals.

Will state further regarding meetings. Much will depend upon the executive ability of the chairman, and the active interest she will take in the local she has charge of, and that she in humility, trust prayerfully in God's help that she may be guided in wisdom's ways and light be given her in the discharge of her duties. It is advisable that the sisters bring their Herald containing the "select reading" to the meetings, as a help in noting points in discussion.

"The Question Box is intended to draw out discussion upon matters of interest to the society. The chairman may select from questions handed to her and call upon members for expression of views in answer to the question."

It is a custom that at some of the meetings a subject is named for a sister to write upon, and read at the following meeting.

A visiting committee should be appointed, whose duty would be to visit, in view of creating an interest in the work of the society, and to invite attendance at the meetings.

It is hoped that it is needless to state that perfect order should be maintained during the session, and the questions discussed never lost sight of by side issues, and all talks be addressed to the chairman.

We recommend that each local society purchase the "Report of Addresses of First National Congress of Mothers," that selections therefrom may be used in locals. Address, Secretary National Congress of Mothers, Washington Loan and Trust Building, Washington, D. C. Price thirty-five cents. Postal order or stamps taken.

It has been decided that we recommend for local use the book, "Child Study in Mothers' Clubs," by Harriet A. Marsh, principal of Hancock School, Detroit, Michigan. Price fifteen cents.

Roll call and business should not take up much time, unless special business pertaining to election of officers, etc., should call for it. The church "Book of Rules" has been adopted as authority in transacting business.

We feel thankful to report the work is advancing, and those who have taken hold of the work with interest have felt blessed in it, so far as we have heard. We have heard many testify of the help they have derived from the work. We pray the Lord will lead the minds of the sisters to still greater comprehension of their duties. Let us still hear of new locals being organized and reports from present ones.

MRS. M. E. HULMES,
Chairman Advisory Committee.

WILL those who desire to purchase the addresses and book recommended for use in local societies of Daughters of Zion, please send direct to addresses given in article above, instead of addressing corresponding secretary.

WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

Braden pitched into the Inspired Translation of the scriptures, with a vengeance. He accused "Joe" Smith of blasphemously crowding his "silly interpolations" into our "Holy Bible!" This ignoramus impostor has interpolated into it "baptism," the "crucifixion of Christ," "preaching of Christ and the gospel," hundreds of years before these things were even thought of. Even the prophets and apostles of the New Testament knew not a word about such things till introduced in their day. The book was held up and ridiculed before the people as a fraud from the hand of "Joe." Braden's lectures had been even more contemptible than what is penned here.

In one single speech I so effectually spiked Braden's guns in regard to the Inspired Translation that he nevermore referred to it during the whole debate. In my answer I quoted 1 Peter 1: 9, 10, 11: "Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls. Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." Then I read 1 Corinthians 15: 3, 4 (King James' Translation): "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures: and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." I stepped over to Braden and threw my Bible on his table and defied him to point out chapter and verse from the Old Testament, the very Scriptures Paul was referring to, where it "testified before the sufferings of Christ;" and that "Christ died for our sins;" and that he "rose again." Braden sat dumbfounded. I pointed to the Inspired Translation that lay on the table before him, and said: "You can find it in that book; that is the very book that Christ and the apostles used. Joseph Smith was only inspired of God to reproduce the things that had been taken from the Holy Bible by just such men as is Mr. Braden. Christ and the apostles quoted scripture that they had in their possession, that cannot now be found in any translation of the Bible extant, outside of the Inspired Translation by Joseph Smith. I asked Mr. Braden to please take my Bible and show me where "Moses and the prophets" used such language as this: "Having therefore obtained help of God I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come: That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles." (Acts 26: 22, 23.) Where, Mr. Braden, can you find such doctrine as that in King James' Translation? You can find it in Joseph Smith's translation, in Genesis 7: 54, 57, 62, 63, 69; 15: 11, 12. How about this, Mr. Braden? "Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself. . . . Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." (Luke 24: 25-47.) Where am I to find such doctrine as this taught in the Old Testament? It cannot be found outside of the Inspired Translation; yet Jesus and the apostles were using a Bible—the Holy Scriptures of God—that contained this doctrine of faith in the Son of God, and repentance, and baptism, and the reception of the Holy Ghost. Christ and the apostles had just such a Bible in their possession as is this Inspired Translation. It teaches in Genesis 4: 8, 43, 44, 45; and in 6: 53, 54, 62; and in 7: 12, 13, and elsewhere, just the doctrine imposed upon the apostles by Christ to preach to every nation, as I have just quoted. It is easy to see how they preached it by referring to Acts 2. It is then faith, repentance, baptism, and the promise of the Holy Ghost; just as Christ expounded it to the apostles from "Moses and the prophets," in his language just referred to.

As to preaching the gospel in the days of "Moses and the prophets," we quoted: "For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. . . . Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it [the gospel] was first preached entered not in because of unbelief." (Heb. 4: 2-6.) The Bible knows of but one gospel; hence, when the law of Moses, which was added, was taken out of the way, the original gospel that was preached at the "first" by "Moses and the prophets," is now preached unto "us," by Christ and the apostles. When preached by "Moses and the prophets," they "were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that rock was Christ." (1 Cor. 10: 1-9.) Moses and the prophets believed the gospel and looked forward to Christ, as we now believe it and look back to him.

Braden rejected the Book of Mormon as a fraud because the people of God were called "Christians" by the world some few years before Christ—(p. 326). To this I answered: "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt." (Heb. 11: 24-26.) This "reproach of Christ," could have been nothing less than what was renewed by the jeering populace of Antioch to the followers of Christ about A. D. 44. The truth is, the difficulty lies in Braden, and not in the Book of Mormon, which harmonizes with the Bible. Braden in reading page 531 of Book of Mormon read: "And it came to pass that when they were all gathered together, every one to the army which he would, with their wives and children, both men, women and babies being armed with weapons of war, having shields and breastplates, headplates and being clothed for the manner of war," etc. He then made a great ado about the "babies" going to war, carrying arms and having shields and breastplates on. He racked across the stage in a way to try and raise a laugh. When I got the floor I read from page 354: "They were all armed; yea, even to their women, and all those of their children, as many as were able to use a weapon of war." Then I explained that in such extreme cases they used their children, those large enough to bear arms. Braden said: "I did not dare to read where he did." [He had a large Book of Mormon and I used a small one] I read on purpose where I did, thinking he would fall into a trap, and so he did. He said it was "babies" where he read. [Thinking I would not find the page in mine.] I stepped to Braden and said: Give me your Book of Mormon, and reached for it. Where is it, Mr. Braden? Page, I mean. He rose up and came to my side and showed me the page (473)—"There says he—you see it is babies." Braden at once took his seat, and I turned to him before reading it and said: Braden, if it reads "babies," I will give it up and acknowledge my mistake before this people. Turning to the audience I said: "Ladies and gentlemen, please listen to me read about Braden's babies," reading: "Both men, women and children being armed with weapons of war," etc. Anything there about babies? Not a word. The Book of Mormon is all right, when you leave Braden's "balderdash" out of it. Here I scorched Braden for his downright trickery; and he felt it too. He then tried his hand on Moroni's rent coat (p. 326). He read only the latter part of the eighth paragraph and paced over to my side of platform pretending to wave a hole on a pole; pretending that the "hole" had been written on by Moroni. Braden fell hard when I read the explanatory paragraph—the seventh—saying: "He rent his coat; and he took a piece and wrote upon it," etc. I renewed my gift to "scorch," and I don't wonder at Braden saying: "I hate I. N. White, he is a black skunk." Yes, about this time I had raised such a "stench" among Braden's admirers that it was being whispered around: "Bro. Braden has struck more than his match;" "Braden is down;" "Braden is snowed under." The thing got so hot for Braden, that I heard him say: "I am glad it is over." Though he said this privately and to his friends yet my ears were open and I heard it. I reminded Braden that he had run against a thunderstorm and one that would follow him to every nook and corner where he attempted to raise his puny arm against the work I represented. Braden makes another pass at the Book of Mormon; reading: "Endured the cross and despised the shame." "There, Watts' hymn! That was all the rage in Joe Smith's day." I read: "They who have endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it." (p. 72.) How is that for Braden leaving out half a dozen words and twisting and distorting the statement with Braden's trickery to make a point against the Book of Mormon? Surely this opponent is getting hard up. Still Braden is not satisfied, and on p. 532, he reads: "And it came to pass that they 'fit' all that day; and on the morrow they 'fit,' and they 'fit,' and 'fit.' And on the morrow they rose up again and they 'fit,' and 'fit,' and 'fit,' and 'fit,'—What balderdash!" When I got the floor I read: "And it came to pass that they fought all that day, and when the night came they slept upon their swords; and on the morrow they fought even until the night came . . . and on the morrow they fought again," etc. Did you hear any "fit" and "fit" in that? Not a word of it; but you heard plenty of Braden's "balderdash" which would corrupt any and everything it struck. I asked: Why did not the people laugh when I read the fighting story from the Book of Mormon? I turned to Braden and said: The people were not laughing at what was in the book, but were laughing at Braden and he did not have sense enough to know it. I admit this is rather hard language to use against an opponent; but some men are to be answered according to their folly. I pressed Braden hard in regard to the Spaulding manuscript being the source of the Book of Mormon, which he had so bravely (?) flaunted during his lectures, when no man was allowed to answer under the penalty of being "arrested on the spot." I begged and dared Braden to make an argument in its favor; but no, not a word.

We had quite a debate on Isaiah 29, Ezekiel 37, and Amos 9: 9, 14, 15, which would be interesting to those not at the debate, but it is too lengthy for the Herald.

Braden kept piled upon his table a lot of his circulars in which he averred that Joseph Smith was "a lazy loafer and idler;" "a vagrant and vagabond;" "a drunkard;" "a notorious liar;" "a pilferer and thief;" "polygamous," etc. These circulars were advertised by him at the end of every session during the first part of the debate. He made an attempt to flaunt them into my face with: "Will you face before a mutually chosen committee of lawyers an investigation of these issues?" I told Braden that was just what I was here for to "investigate these issues;" and I was lawyer enough to do it when he was brave enough to bring on his witnesses with his pretended evidence to prove his allegations. Do it, sir! I am here for that purpose; and for you to attempt to take it from before this assembly to a "committee" is admitting your defeat and inability to prove it to their satisfaction. My brethren have placed their cause into my hands, and yours have into yours. Now sir, if you have any witnesses to prove your allegations that you make against Mr. Smith, I want you to introduce them before this people. I will examine them to see if they prove. For you, sir, to crowd these circulars on the people without an attempt to prove what they allege, is begging the question, and an acknowledgment of your defeat. After this I noticed the "circulars" were crowded into the drawer of his table, and only occasionally saw daylight.

Braden's last effort on the first proposition was upon the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. He accused the Reorganization of dishonesty because they did not put into that book all the revelations that the church pretended to receive. He spoke of the ones in the Utah edition. And of the one on the war; asked why we suppressed it. I told him: I have it in my book. He asked: Let me see your book. I handed it to him. Turning the leaves said: What page is it on? I don't know, but it's there, I said. Braden still looking and not able to find it, slammed the book down on my table and said: "It is not in the book; you have lied sir!" Then he paraded me before the people for lying; called it a "Mormon trick to dodge the issue." People looked at each other as if to wonder if White had really lied—this once anyway. When I got the floor I produced the revelation which was marked "page 233" by my pen. Speaking to Braden: There it is, sir; who is it that has lied? Braden said: "Let me examine your book"—reaching for it. No sir, you cannot handle my book, said I. (I refused because I had a point to make by it.) "It is not in your book," says Braden. It is, and it is bound in the book too, said I. "Let me see it—I deny it being there, and I call for a committee to examine it," says Braden. (By this time everybody was excited and anxiety ran at high pitch.) I said: Mr. Braden, you cannot examine my book, but these two moderators can; they are committee enough. The moderators were called and as they stood by me, I opened the book at page 233, and Braden's moderator says: "It is only pasted in." There, says Braden, it's a trick. I asked the moderator to give it a thorough examination. They did, almost tearing the leaf out to see if it was "bound in." They decided that it was "pasted in." Braden got the floor; it being the last speech for that evening. He branded the whole thing as a Mormon trick to deceive the people—"pasted in!"—White said it was "bound in" his book; that's another Mormon lie. Well, it might be thought risky to leave a thing just in that shape till another day. But I did—although Braden took pains to inform the people that he had been after Mormons before, and had he not been here to uncover this "trick," that revelation on the war would have been palmed off on the people as one "bound" in the Doctrine and Covenants. Morning came, and I found Braden and his moderator all worked up over that revelation—the debate would stop right here unless a chairman can be agreed upon. It was a trick of the Mormons to reject every man proposed for a chairman on purpose to let White get in his tricks. Name after name was presented for to act as chairman, but all were objected to by either one party or the other. What was to be done? Braden's moderator said: "I'll declare the debate off." I asked him: Who gave you so much authority? The debate has run for two days without a chairman, and can run one more—till this question of Joseph Smith a prophet, is finished, or you fellows will show the white feather.

More than one half hour of the time was squandered over this "parley," when the debate was renewed. Braden opened up at once and attempted to expose me because I refused a committee to examine my book, to see if that revelation on the war was "bound" in it or not. He still contended that I had lied about it. He spent considerable time along this line; and when I got the floor to answer, I produced my book again, and held up between my fingers, "That revelation 'bound' in the book." There had been so much said about this, that it caused no little stir when I produced the proof of what I had previously stated; and more especially since Braden had branded me a "liar" over it. All was excitement. Braden claimed I had gotten another book, and it was another one of my "tricks." I contended seriously that it was the same book. Braden called for a "committee." I refused "that committee"—the one Braden always calls for when cornered. Well! It looked like the debate would end right here. I told the people I would pass my book through the congregation and they could examine it; or I would let the two moderators with Braden and myself examine it. Finally it was agreed if I would let the Rev. Hays (a Campbellite) be added to my choice they would consent. I gladly did so and the "book" was put through a thorough examination, as much so as though the whole debate depended upon "that decision." The examination went on, right on the stand. The revelation "pasted in," on page 233, was there, torn at the top just as the committee had left it in their other examination. But where is it "bound in"? Well, I was slow to show them; I wanted to keep Braden on the anxious seat a little longer, probably I might get him to repent of calling me a "liar." Well, it's there, I contended. Presently I turned to page 29, following the concordance and sure enough there it was, and "bound" in too. I had to tell them: Don't tear it out! Their unanimous decision was, "It is bound in the book, and is the same book that I used the day before." Braden was beaten; White had told the truth; but what about that other fellow? If Braden lived to be a hundred years old, he would never forget that episode. I intended at the very first, that he shouldn't. My explanation of why that revelation on the war did not appear in its regular time and place in Doctrine and Covenants was: The Doctrine and Covenant contains "covenants and commandments" to the church, and in the war, there was no "covenant" to bind the members of the church, nor a command for them to obey, more than to "stand in holy places and be not moved until the day of the Lord come."

Thus ended one of the most lively contests I ever had on, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?" I was never better pleased with my effort in defending Joseph's prophetic calling. Our people stood right by me, and a better pleased people I never had the honor of meeting and representing. Thank God for so noble a people, and so grand a work to defend. To God and the Lamb be all the glory, now and forever. Amen.

WOODBINE REUNION.

Morning prayer service as usual, at which time a tongue and interpretation was given. Prayer services at this hour were continued throughout the reunion, during which services the gifts were manifested, and great joy was had. Forenoon preaching by Pres. Joseph Smith, who recited events of the past, and gave special instruction concerning the building up of the work of the Lord in these last days and his association therewith. Preaching services continued each day at the same time. In the afternoon, Sunday school and Religio work, which was very interesting. Wednesday and Friday afternoons were occupied with same work, to the building up and strengthening these departments of the church. At four p. m., regular session of the Sunday school was held, which was the regular work of the reunion at this hour each day, except Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday no session was held, but on Sunday at eight a. m., one of the best sessions was held during the reunion, God's approval of the work being markedly shown. The children expressed themselves sorry that the sessions were not longer. In the evening, Bishop Kelley gave one of his best efforts on the subject of "faith," which was very strengthening to the saints. At this hour preaching services were held each day, being occupied the last Sunday by Pres. Joseph Smith.

At 7:45 on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, normal work connected with the Sunday school and Religio was held. The preaching services were occupied by Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley, Isaac M. Smith, Hubert Case, M. H. Forscutt, C. Derry, J. F. Mintun, W. H. Garrett, John Roth, G. H. Hilliard, J. C. Crabb, C. E. Butterworth, and W. A. Smith.

The business session was held on Saturday afternoon, when it was decided to hold a reunion in 1900 at Dow City, Iowa. Three afternoon sessions were granted for the use of the Sunday school and Religio work.

The collections paid all expenses, leaving a small balance in the hands of the committee, to be turned over to the new committee appointed, consisting of J. M. Baker, A. H. Rudd, C. E. Butterworth, C. Butterworth, and W. A. Carroll. A resolution of thanks was passed to the outgoing committee, for their untiring efforts that have made this reunion a success.

The last day of the reunion was very trying, on account of the wind, dust, and the restless crowd, many of whom came to see and be seen, as appearance indicated. An overflow meeting was held, and yet there were thousands who could not hear had they wanted to. There was comparatively very little sickness in the camp, although there were a few stubborn cases. Some marvelous cases of healing reported, to the confirmation of God's people, some being led to investigate by reason of the testimonies borne concerning what God had done.

On Monday morning the work of destruction began very early, and by noon but few campers remained. During the reunion one hundred and twenty-eight tents were erected, and about ten covered wagons were occupied. It can truly be said that the reunion was a success, although but nineteen were baptized. The primal object of reunion work was answered, in that the saints were instructed, admonished, and reproved, and faith and spiritual strength increased; the Lord's promises verified, in that the gospel was preached in power, and in the Holy Ghost and much assurance, as well as in word, and signs following confirmed the word.

Sunday, the 3d. Sacramento meeting at ten a. m., in charge of G. T. Griffiths. At 2:45 p. m. F. M. Sheehy preached. A. B. Phillips was the evening speaker. He dwelt upon the necessity of having the Holy Spirit in our reasonings.

Monday, the 4th. Prayer meeting at ten a. m., in charge of J. A. Saxe and D. A. Anderson. At 2:45 p. m. an informal meeting was held, for the discussion of "The Gathering." At eight p. m. D. A. Anderson was the preacher. His subject was Holiness of Life.

Tuesday, the 5th. The forenoon prayer meeting was in charge of E. Keeler and A. C. Barmore. At 2:45 p. m., Coöperation was the subject discussed. In the evening F. B. Blair was the speaker. He answered the questions: Why do we believe in Christ? Why are we Latter Day Saints?

Wednesday, the 6th. At ten a. m., prayer meeting was in charge of G. T. Griffiths and D. A. Anderson. In the afternoon tithing was discussed. In the evening E. Keeler addressed the audience. His theme was the Prophetic Mission of Joseph Smith.

Thursday, the 7th. The forenoon was devoted to the duties of officers. At 2:30 p. m., a prayer meeting was held, in charge of F. B. Blair and A. B. Phillips. At eight p. m., G. T. Griffiths occupied the stand. His subject was Charity.

Friday, the 8th. Prayer meeting at nine a. m., in charge of A. Haws and R. Ferris. At ten a. m. C. A. Parkin preached on the law of tithing. At two p. m., a Sunday school meeting was held. At eight p. m., A. C. Barmore preached. His subject was, "What shall we do to be saved?"

Saturday, the 9th. At seven a. m. a prayer meeting was held for the sick, afflicted, and others who had requested prayer. At ten a. m. the prayer meeting was in charge of J. B. Carmichael and F. M. Sheehy. At two p. m. a business meeting was held. The following business was transacted: It was decided that the Northern district hold a reunion next year and the Central decide in the future as to whether it will assist or not. Oakland was unanimously chosen as the place to hold it. Moved and carried that it begin August 31. (It was understood that its length should be ten days.) Moved and carried that a committee on arrangements consisting of five be appointed, four to be selected by the body and the other to be a missionary appointed by the man who is missionary in charge at that time. Six were nominated, but the following were elected: J. A. Saxe, J. H. Driver, R. Ferris, and D. Joyce. The first received the largest number of votes and will as a consequence act as chairman. The committee on finance reported as follows: Received $89.20; expended for reunion $45.25; balance $43.95. Moved and carried that the balance be divided among the missionaries present. A vote of thanks was then extended to Mr. Bailey, on whose land the reunion was held, for water and the use of his lot, also to the finance committee, whose report was accepted and committee discharged. At eight p. m. F. M. Sheehy was the preacher.

Sunday, 10th. At nine a. m. prayer meet- was in charge of J. M. Putney and J. A. Anthony. At eleven a. m. F. B. Blair was the speaker. His subject was, Sacrifice. At 2:45 p. m. F. M. Sheehy lectured on the archaeological evidences of the Book of Mormon. At eight p. m. A. C. Barmore preached on the scriptural evidences of the same.

The above is the story of an excellent reunion. The attendance from without was very ordinary, but the meetings held in the interest of the saints were especially good. The prayer meetings were very refreshing; but only two prophecies and one tongue were given. Plans were adopted in the business meeting which promise a far better reunion in a general sense next year. Among other things a sub-committee of three was appointed to have charge of the commissary department. The chairman was authorized to select said committee. His selections were Srs. Rehwal, E. Knight, and M. Brown. There is some talk of adopting coöperation in this matter, but no matter what course is pursued, all are satisfied the committee will be equal to the emergency, for they've been tried.

UTAH REUNION.

Reunion of Rocky Mountain mission convened at Provo, September 8, and lasted until the 17th inclusive. Present of the ministry: J. W. Wight, H. N. Hansen, S. D. Condit, Charles Albertson, and D. W. Wight. Saints present from Nephi, Elsinore, Clinton, Springville, Richfield, Sandy, Murray, Ogden, Salt Lake, Pleasant Grove, Far West, and Fairfield. Weather excellent, and all seemingly happy. Sunday school work, Thursday, the 14th, gave evidence of great interest in this branch of the work. Seven baptized during reunion and six just previous. The reunion was probably the best ever held in this mission. On account of much interest and some controversy on lines of church differences, the meetings are being continued since close of reunion, Elder J. W. Wight being speaker, and large crowds in attendance.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the members of Decatur district. We are badly in need of means to supply the missionaries' families; cannot some of the brethren and sisters bring in wood, or potatoes, or something in the line of necessities, if you have not the ready money, and we will receipt you for tithing at market prices. It takes money to buy these things. We will receive cattle, hogs, poultry, corn, oats, wheat, rye, hay, wood, posts, butter, eggs, and any kind of produce at market prices, the same as money for tithing. Brethren, don't be neglectful in this part of our duty.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

TWAIN ON CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Mark Twain has written his impressions of the doctrine of Christian Science, and after reading them no one can doubt his views on that subject. He uses all of his power of satire on the belief itself and for the book of Mrs. Eddy, which is the fountain head of the cult, he uses as weapons both satire and direct attack. The article is in the Cosmopolitan for October.

To embody his idea Mark Twain uses a mythical tale of an accident he suffered in Europe. He had walked off a cliff and accumulated 234, more or less, compound fractures. The only medical help he could obtain was from the village horse doctor and Mrs. Fuller, a Christian Science healer from Boston. The healer came first, and after scorning to look at his tongue and pulse, repeated her axioms. She scratched herself with a pin and said: "Ouch!" Then, to quote:—

Just at that point the Stubenmädchen trod on the cat's tail, and the cat let fly a frenzy of cat profanity. I asked, with caution:—

"Is a cat's opinion about pain valuable?"

"A cat has no opinion; opinions proceed from mind only; the lower animals, being eternally perishable, have not been granted mind; without mind, opinion is impossible."

"She merely imagined she felt a pain—the cat?"

"She cannot imagine a pain, for imagination is an effect of mind; without mind there is no imagination. A cat has no imagination."

"Then she had a real pain?"

"I have already told you there is no such thing as real pain."

"It is strange and interesting. I do wonder what was the matter with the cat."

In the same manner he goes through the doctrine as explained by Mrs. Fuller:—

"It is quite simple," she said: "the fundamental propositions of Christian Science explain it, and they are summarized in the four following self-evident propositions: 1. God is all in all. 2. God is good. Good is mind.

3. God, spirit, being all, nothing is matter. 4. Life, God, omnipotent good, deny death, evil, sin, disease. There—now you see."

It seemed nebulous: it did not seem to say anything about the difficulty in hand—how non-existent matter can propagate illusions. I said, with some hesitancy:—

"Does—does it explain?"

"Doesn't it? Even if read backward it will do it."

With a budding hope I asked her to do it backward.

"Very well. Disease sin evil death deny good omnipotent God life matter is nothing all being spirit God mind is good good is God all in all is God. There—do you understand now?"

It—it—well, it is plainer than it was before; still—"

He read Mrs. Eddy's book to pass the time. These are his conclusions:

For of all the strange and frantic and incomprehensible and uninterpretable books which the imagination of man has created surely this one is the prize sample.

The book's serenities of self-satisfaction do almost seem to smack of a heavenly origin—they have no blood-kin in the earth. It is more than human to be so placidly certain about things and so finely superior and so airily content with one's performance. Without ever presenting anything which may rightfully be called by the strong name of Evidence she finds the whole Bible in an unclarified condition, and at small expense of time and no expense of mental effort she clarifies it from lid to lid, reorganizes and improves the meanings, then authoritatively settles and establishes them with formulæ which you cannot tell from "Let there be light!" and "Here you have it!"

He closes the paper with this:—

"Nothing exists but Mind?"

"Nothing," she answered. "All else is substanceless all else is imaginary."

I gave her an imaginary check, and now she is suing me for substantial dollars. It looks inconsistent.

The whole thing is a delicious satire, interspersed with logic and spiced with something of invective.—Tribune, Sept. 24, '99.

NORTH POLE ITEMS.

DR. NANSEN ON POLAR SEAS.

Berlin, Oct. 2. - Nansen's lecture on "Oceanographic Conditions of the Polar Seas," while scientifically one of the most important events of the Geographical Congress, proved a great disappointment to nine tenths of the audience which packed the house of delegates. Dr. Nansen stuck closely to his subject, using a stereopticon to project scientific tables instead of icebergs, dog sleds, and polar bears. The interest flagged after he had stated his reasons for believing that the polar ocean was practically an inland sea. He said that he had discovered that the southern part was separated from the northern by a ridge covered by comparatively shallow water, which connects Spitzber-gen with Greenland. The depths in the northern part, he said, range beyond 3,000 and 4,000 meters. He exhaustively discussed the temperature and saltness of polar waters and the influence of the gulf stream, polar currents, and the Siberian rivers upon the climate. He said he found the surface water in polar regions hardly one fourth as salty as the Atlantic.

ANDREE'S NORTH POLE BUOY.

Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 2.—The buoy marked "Andree Polar Expedition" which, with an anchor attached, was found September 9 on the north coast of King Charles Island by the master of the Norwegian cutter Martha Larsaak, was opened yesterday in the presence of a number of experts and members of the Cabinet. It was found to be the so-called north pole buoy, which Andree had arranged to drop if he succeeded in passing the pole.—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 3, 1899.

WILL MOODY'S HOPES BE REALIZED?

Mr. Moody, who is in Chicago now, tells a reporter that "we want to stir the churches—to wake them up." Very likely some of them do need stirring up, and he knows how to do it. He has wakened up Laodicean churches before this. But Mr. Moody says also, "The time is ripe for a great revival of religion." He thinks so because "the material interests are in evidence everywhere. There is great wealth in the world. There should be a spiritual advance along with the material and it must come. The world is ready for righteousness."

Mr. Moody may be able to read the signs of the times correctly, but in the past prosperity has not been the mother of revivals of religion. When Jeshurun waxed fat he did not take interest in religious matters, but devoted himself exclusively to the pomps and vanities of this wicked world. Religious revivals usually follow in the wake of panics and hard times, of earthquakes, and pestilences. Then it is that men see the emptiness and uncertainty of worldly things and feel that they should devote more attention to their spiritual interests than they have been doing. Then the noonday prayer meetings are thronged. So, too, are the revival meetings, large and small.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Moody is not mistaken when he says the world is ready for righteousness. Assuredly the need of it is great. Were there more righteousness in England there would be more Englishmen speaking out in behalf of the Boers. Righteous nations do not covet the property of others and endeavor to acquire it by threats of force. Were there more righteousness in New York and in Chicago, each of those cities would have an honester and more efficient government than it has. If Mr. Moody can do anything during his stay in Chicago to increase the number of its righteous, and, therefore, good, citizens, he will be entitled to heartfelt thanks. The politicians will be the only ones to blame his "pernicious activity."—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 1, 1899.

ANTI-SEMITE HATRED IN AUSTRIA.

Anti-Semite hatred and prejudice have again been aroused in Austria by the discovery that Anna Hruza, a Christian girl of nineteen, was recently found murdered in Polna, Bohemia, the body being absolutely bloodless when found. The authorities immediately jumped at the conclusion that the girl was murdered and the body drained of blood to be used for ritual purposes. The Judge, public prosecutor, jury, and the representatives of the anti-Semite press sympathized with the grewsome theory, and a Jew of bad repute named Hilsner, who had been arrested for the crime, was found guilty upon the most flimsy evidence and sentenced to death. The ritual theory is nonsense and the grossest injustice to the Jewish Church, but the popular prejudice is so strong in Austria that the event has been used to inflame the resentments of the people against the Jews.—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 6, 1899.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

There are 345,000 native Protestant Christians in Dutch East India.

The President of Venezuela has signed on behalf of the State, the act of consecration of the republic to the blessed sacrament.

It is thought that the conflict between ritualists and the Episcopal authorities of England is likely to break out anew later in the fall.

The Lutheran Church in the United States is said to be growing and increasing its membership. It now has 1,500,000 connected as members with its churches.

The new catechism recently prepared in England is being printed in Spanish by the American Tract Society and will be circulated in our new island possessions.

The Catholic priests in Belgium have secured the passage of a law compelling parents to give to their children no names except those in the calendar of saints.

Nine "Sisters of the Holy Ghost" are on their way from Ireland to St. Antonio, Texas, where they will establish a school for training young negroes and Aztecs in the Catholic faith.

The Pilot is authority for stating that the struggling Catholic colleges and convent schools in Ireland much more than ever hold their own with the richly endowed Protestant institutions.

It is stated that there are "fifty sects of Buddhism in Japan alone, and that they have now reached their furthest limits, and Buddhism is destined to disappear from the face of the earth."

The Presbyterians who operate in the north of Corea have about 7,000 converts, the Methodists in the middle, 5,000, and the Australian and Canadian Presbyterian missionaries are having great results. The features of the work are self-help, self-support, and the spread of the gospel through converts instead of through helpers.

According to official statements published by Pastor de la Roi, himself a convert from Judaism, the total gains made from Jewish sources by all branches of the Christian church since the year 1800 have been in round numbers 224,000. These converts have gone into the Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Greek Catholic Churches.

The Rev. W. A. Jarrell writes to the Texas Standard that he is open to engagements to preach special sermons "against Romanism, infidelity, Campbellism, Mormonism, Seventh-day Soul-Sleeping Adventism, Russell Millennial Dawnism, Spiritism, so-called Christian Science, or any other of Satan's inventions, or, where necessary for debates."

The great incense question is still agitating the English Church. The latest submission to the "opinion" is that of Mr. Ram of Norwich, who on Sunday reverted to George Herbert's "use" of "sweetening" the church before service. It is expected that many clergymen who have not heretofore used incense will adopt this method of the old Caroline divines when they had emerged from the persecutions of the Puritans.

"There has been a decline of interest in Christianity in Japan since the successful war in China produced a high degree of national self-confidence among the Japanese," says the Christian Intelligencer. "The cry was heard everywhere, 'Japan for the Japanese.' One result was religious, and became manifest in a decline in the number of converts to the Christian faith, and a falling off in the membership of the Christian churches. Not a few abandoned Christianity. At the same time the policy of some of the missions was modified. Self support was more and more insisted on both in relation to churches and schools. Contemporary with these influences has been perhaps a decline, under the power of an increasing materialism, in the interest and the prayers of the churches which have established the missions."—Chicago Tribune.

"TRUST" LEGISLATION.

It seems to me—simply as an individual, of course—that almost every paper or address we have heard has made some admissions or concessions which may form a basis for some conclusions, and if you will allow me I will formulate some of them only, as follows:—

1. Combinations and conspiracies in the form of trust or otherwise in restraint of trade or manufacture, which by the consensus of judicial opinion are unlawful, should so be declared by legislation, with suitable sanctions and, if possible, by a statute uniform in all jurisdictions, and also uniform as to all persons, and such a statute should be thoroughly enforced, so that those who respect it shall not be at a disadvantage as compared with those who disregard it.

2 That the organization of trading and industrial corporations, whether under general or special laws, be permitted only under a system of careful governmental control, also uniform if possible in all jurisdictions, whereby many of the evils of which complaint is now made may be avoided.

3. The objects of the corporation should be confined within limits definite and certain. The issue of stock and bonds, which has been a matter of so much just criticism and complaint, should be guarded with great strictness. If mortgage bonds seem to be required, they should be allowed only for a moderate fraction of the true cash value of the property that secures them. As for issues of stock, they should be safeguarded in every possible way. They should only be allowed either for the money or for property actually received by the company, and dollar for dollar, and when the property is so conveyed it should be on an honest appraisal of actual value, so that there may be no watering of stock.

4. And finally there should be a thorough system of reports and governmental inspection, especially as to issues of bonds and stock and the status and value of property, whether corporeal or incorporeal. Yet at the same time, in the matter of trading and industrial companies, there are legitimate business secrets which must be respected by the general public. In short, we need to frankly recognize the fact that trading and industrial corporations are needed to organize the activities of our country, and that they are not to be scolded or belied, but controlled, as we control steam and electricity, which are also dangerous if not carefully managed, but of wonderful usefulness if rightly harnessed to the car of progress.—From "Chicago Conference on Trusts: the Final Word of the Presiding Officer," by the Hon. William Wirt Howe, in Review of Reviews, October.

BRO. WILLIAM MARKS' STATEMENT.

For the reason that the elders from Utah are misstating the statement of President William Marks, as given in the HERALD in its first number, for January, 1860; and for the further reason that some of the brethren request it, we herewith republish the statement entire:—

OPPOSITION TO POLYGAMY, BY THE PROPHET JOSEPH.

Brother Sheen:—I feel desirous to communicate through your periodical, a few suggestions made manifest to me by the Spirit of God, in relation to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. About the first of June, 1844, (situated as I was at that time, being the Presiding Elder of the Stake at Nauvoo, and by appointment the Presiding Officer of the High Council) I had a very good opportunity to know the affairs of the church, and my convictions at that time were, that the church in a great measure had departed from the pure principles and doctrines of Jesus Christ. I felt much troubled in mind about the condition of the church. I prayed earnestly to my heavenly Father to show me something in regard to it, when I was wrapt in vision, and it was shown me by the Spirit, that the top or branches had overcome the root, in sin and wickedness, and the only way to cleanse and purify it was, to disorganize it, and in due time, the Lord would reorganize it again. There were many other things suggested to my mind, but the lapse of time has erased them from my memory. A few days after this occurrence, I met with Brother Joseph. He said that he wanted to converse with me on the affairs of the church, and we retired by ourselves. I will give his words verbatim, for they are indelibly stamped upon my mind. He said he had desired for a long time to have a talk with me on the subject of polygamy. He said it eventually would prove the overthrow of the church, and we should soon be obliged to leave the United States, unless it could be speedily put down. He was satisfied that it was a cursed doctrine, and that there must be every exertion made to put it down. He said that he would go before the congregation and proclaim against it, and I must go into the High Council, and he would prefer charges against those in transgression, and I must sever them from the church, unless they made ample satisfaction. There was much more said, but this was the substance. The mob commenced to gather about Carthage in a few days after, therefore there was nothing done concerning it. After the Prophet's death, I made mention of this conversation to several, hoping and believing that it would have a good effect, but to my great disappointment, it was soon rumored about that Brother Marks was about to apostatize, and that all that he said about the conversation with the Prophet was a tissue of lies. From that time I was satisfied that the church would be disorganized, and the death of the Prophet and Patriarch, tended to confirm me in that opinion. From that time I was looking for a reorganization of the church and kingdom of God. I feel thankful that I have lived to again behold the day, when the basis of the church is the revelations of Jesus Christ, which is the only sure foundation to build upon. I feel to invite all my brethren to become identified with us, for the Lord is truly in our midst.

WILLIAM MARKS.
SHABONA, De Kalb Co., Ill., Oct. 23, 1859.
—Saints' Herald, Vol. 1, No. 1, pp. 22, 23.

There is not a sentence in this statement that implicates the Prophet Joseph Smith as having taught, or having been in the practice of polygamy; nothing to show that either President Marks, or President Smith was in any way connected with the practice; but to the contrary.

1. Joseph Smith desired to have a conversation with President William Marks on the subject of polygamy. The reasons for this desire are given:—

(a) Pres. Marks was the President of the High Council. It was the duty of this council to try offenders upon complaint and information.

2. The Prophet was satisfied—(a) That the doctrine of polygamy was a cursed doctrine and (b) That it must be put down, or (c) that it would overthrow the church.

The Prophet then stated to President Marks what he proposed as necessary to put this "cursed doctrine" down.

3. He, the Prophet, would go before the High Council; (a) And prefer charges against those in transgression. (b) President Marks as President of the High Council was to try those against whom charges were preferred, and sever them from the church.

It is not reasonable or logical to assert from these evident facts, so clearly stated, that Joseph Smith was himself one of the transgressors. And it is clear that the transgression to which the Prophet referred was the teaching, and possibly the practice of polygamy, as this follows as a sequence to the conversation.

Joseph Smith has been called a fanatic, an enthusiast, an unlearned man, a knave, etc.; but has never been called a fool. And surely, if he was himself in the same transgression as the statement assumes that others were, he would certainly not have made the statement to President Marks which that worthy states that he did. Nor would he have been so foolish as to have offered to make charges against men for transgression of which himself was guilty, he knowing that those men knew of his guilt.

That the Prophet knew that there were some who were guilty, is possibly deducible from the statement that he would prefer charges against them. Had he lived he would have kept his word to President Marks, and the church would have been freed from the "cursed doctrine."

The idea that this statement inculcates the Prophet in either the teaching or practice of polygamy is entirely untenable and not worthy of belief in any sense.

MOHAWK AND HEBREW SIMILARITY.

The following purported interview contained in a "Denver [Colorado] special" and published in the Kansas City Journal for September 19, 1899, will be interesting to our readers as corroborating the claims of the Book of Mormon regarding the American Indians being of Hebrew origin. The interview was said to have been had with Mr. Dayolheasala, of Spokane, Washington, a chief of the Mohawk Indians, who was at the time sojourning at the Albany hotel, and who was in the employ of Boston capitalists locating or purchasing copper mines. Among other things Chief Dayolheasala said:—

There are now only four thousand six hundred of us on the Mohawk reservation, comprising six nations—the Mohawks, Tuscaroras, Delawares, Oneidas, Cayugas, and Onondagas. Some Indian tribes will become extinct, just as some branches of the white race will become extinct, but not so the Mohawks. We have an unwritten law which prohibits intermarriage with the whites, and that is strictly observed. And then we have written laws of health which are stringently enforced.

Before entering into matrimony both parties must undergo a medical examination, and if not in a state of perfect health the marriage will not be permitted. Morally the Mohawks are ahead of any other nation. They are total abstainers as far as liquor is concerned, and crime is almost unknown among them. It was entirely unknown until the whites came to this country. We are now the happiest and most contented people on earth, and originally our lot was a more contented one than it is now in some respects. Our people are engaged in farming and mercantile pursuits, and our life may be likened to that of a commune. Every man is considered the equal of another, whether he is wealthy or not. The poor Mohawk holds his head as high as the man of means.

Our school system is an excellent one, and when the Mohawk graduates from our high school he is ready to enter any college in America. The only hope for the Indian is in education, and our tribe has long since come to a full realization of that.

RELIGION RESEMBLES THE HEBREW.

Their religion is almost the exact counterpart of the ancient Jewish religion. We have not accepted modern forms of worship. We believe in a supreme being and follow many of the ceremonies in vogue among the Israelites. In fact, we observe all of their feasts except that of the Passover. The general belief among the people of the tribe is that we are descendants of one of the lost tribes of Israel. At certain periods of the year we gather for religious worship, and our priests are the old men of the tribe whom we reverence. They tell us what we shall do and what we shall avoid in order to reach a future state of happiness, and we place faith in their teachings and follow them.

We are taught to love one another, to respect property rights, the laws of marriage, and in all respects to follow what to the religion of the white man are the Ten Commandments. We are taught nothing about a place of future punishment, and to the mind of a Mohawk the belief that a good God can condemn a frail human being to everlasting punishment is preposterous.

Of our origin, anything that may be said is purely speculative. That we were at one time in a state of the highest civilization is evidenced by utensils which are still in our own family. They are of beaten copper and of the most exquisite handiwork. This is a lost art among us.

Further comment is unnecessary. Our readers are sufficiently alert to catch the salient points.

THE "ORIGINAL" MANUSCRIPT.

Every now and then something like the article here inserted, which is taken from the Troy, New York, Press, which copied it from the Richmond, Missouri, correspondence of the St. Louis Republic, goes the rounds of the papers and passes for truth, but simply shows how little the public journals of this country know on the subject of "Mormonism" and the "Mormons:"—

"The original manuscript of Joseph Smith's 'Book of Mormon,' the Bible of the Mormon Church, is kept in a bank vault in this town. The elders of the Mormon Church in Utah made different attempts in past years to get possession of it, but failed. Once they offered $100,000 in cash for the old and yellow manuscript, but its keeper, David Whitmer, one of the founders of the church, refused the offer because he believed the Utah branch of the church wished to get hold of the manuscript to insert into it by forgery a clause that would authorize and sanction the practice of polygamy. Last week two representatives of the Mormon Church of Utah were here making another attempt to buy the manuscript.

"This original manuscript, written at the dictation of Joseph Smith, is now in the possession of George W. Schweich of this town, a retired merchant, the grandson of David Whitmer, who was one of the three witnesses to the writing of the manuscript. The manuscript of the 'Book of Mormon' contains 600 large sheets of linen paper the size of foolscap, written closely on both sides. The paper is yellowed with age, and the ink is faded to brown. The pages are bound together with strings of yarn. The manuscript contains 350,000 words. It was written in 1829."

The facts in the case are that the manuscript, said to be stored in the vault of a Richmond bank, is without any considerable financial value. It is not the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon, but simply a copy of the original. The copy was sent to the printers, after careful comparison, and the original was retained. After the experience with the pages taken away by Martin Harris, Joseph the translator took good care not to send to the printers the original manuscript, but kept it safely, and finally, with his own hands, deposited it in a box with some other relics in the southeast corner of the foundation of the Nauvoo House. When that portion of the building was taken down by the late Major Bidamon, who married Emma Smith, the Prophet's widow, the box was discovered. The manuscript was very mouldy, and only the central portion of the pages was decipherable. All that was thus left of it is now in this city in possession of church authorities.

The copy in the bank at Richmond contains the marks of the printer, from whom the manuscript was obtained after publication, by Oliver Cowdery, who gave it to David Whitmer. He set great store by it, and would not part with it while he lived. President Joseph F. Smith in company with the Apostle Orson Pratt called on him once at Richmond, and suggested that it would be safer to have the manuscript deposited in the Historian's office in this city, but he declined. He was not offered any sum of money for it, nor would he have been paid any large amount for it if he had been willing to let it go. There was no great anxiety to obtain it, for it is of no worth except as a relic.

The idea that, after the Book of Mormon had been published in several editions and translated into many languages, an interpolation such as suggested could have been effected, even if desired, is simply preposterous. There is no wish on anybody's part to change the doctrine and purport of the book, and no one in his senses would attempt such an absurdity. The notion however, is about as sane as many others entertained by people and papers that are hostile to "Mormonism."

No one has been authorized by "the Mormon Church of Utah" to negotiate for the manuscript, and the suggestion probably comes from some one who is anxious to sell it. The document is not needed for any purpose, and is absolutely without commercial value, and would fetch little if anything more in the market than the strings of yarn with which it is tied, the newspaper yarn included.

The foregoing is from the Deseret News, Utah, for September 27, 1899. We give it place because we are receiving every few days or so clippings or papers containing similar information as the quotation which the News gives, those sending them thinking some possible advantage might come to us from noticing the facts stated.

In 1884 the church appointed a committee consisting of Brn. W. H. Kelley, A. H. Smith, and Thomas W. Smith to visit Richmond, Missouri, and with the consent and under the supervision of Elder David Whitmer, to compare the current editions of the Book of Mormon with the manuscript in his possession.

Elder Whitmer objected to this examination unless "Joseph, the son of Joseph the Seer should be present." We therefore went to Richmond and took part in the reading and comparison.

One of the party held the Palmyra or first edition; one held the Nauvoo edition, and one held the edition published by the Reorganized Church, and one read from the manuscript.

This examination occupied some ten days or more. Elder Whitmer was present nearly the entire time; and when fatigue or increased feebleness prevented his being present, a relative of his by the name of Philandi A. Page, was present in his stead, as a witness to the proceedings.

A memorandum was kept of every possible difference in wording, spelling, and punctuation, and note made of each one. This memorandum was published in the HERALD for August 23, 1884, in a report from the committee.

We agree with the News that the principal value that now attaches to this manuscript now in the hands of Mr. George Schweisch, at Richmond is as a relic; the probability of any tampering with the text of manuscript by interpolation or other changes, are very remote, made so by the examination we refer to and its publication in the report of 1884.

Four of the witnesses to the examination are still living, we believe, Mr. Page, Brn. W. H. Kelley, A. H. Smith, and the Editor. We were not one of the committee, but agreed with the members of it in all essential features of the report; and were much pleased to have had the privilege of sitting with them in such examination and comparison; for the reason that it set at rest much that was being said about "changes in the Book of Mormon."

We understood that the "Whitmerite" brethren were to publish an edition of the book from the manuscript, but have not yet seen a copy, and suppose the project either failed or is delayed for the same reason that other schemes fail—want of means and unity of action.

At all events, such publication cannot seriously affect the editions of the Book of Mormon now current. The market for the book would be limited, and there would be little money in it to the publishers, if any.

We are satisfied with the custodianship of the manuscript at present, but should it change hands, we would prefer that it fell to us as a people, or to some others of the faith as originally held from the teachings of the book.

The committee were of the opinion that the manuscript examined was the one from which the book was printed in 1829, and so reported that it was the "original," the copy that was in the printer's hands, as it showed evidences to that conclusion. Subsequently to the report, we believe, Major L. C. Bidamon, in removing the wall of the east wing of the Nauvoo House, unearthed the corner stone, and found that water and frost had shattered and split the stone so that the contents were ruined. He sent us a small box of such contents, among them being a few pages of manuscript, on paper similar to that of the copy at Richmond, the writing being a part of some portion of the Book of Jacob. The writing was hardly legible when we received it; and upon exposure to the air the writing faded and the paper crumbled to pieces. We believe like the News that the original manuscript, or first copy of the book was the one placed in that corner stone and thus lost. This would leave the one at Richmond the only written copy as a relic.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. D. R. Chambers, Fontanelle, Iowa, October 3:—

I am laboring here at Fontanelle at present. The work is progressing nicely; shall continue here for some time, God willing.

A private letter from Bro. Joseph F. Burton, written from Papeete, Tahiti, August 12, 1899, announces that Bro. and Sr. Peterson arrived there on the July mail vessel. He states:—

Bro. and Sr. Peterson have taken hold of the work here vigorously, and have tackled the language and otherwise are striving to make themselves at home among the dark-skinned inhabitants of these lands. He is relieving me somewhat of my tasks as well.

Bro. Burton's health of late is not very good, and if it does not improve he and Sr. Burton think of leaving for California on the January vessel and thence on to the General Conference in April next.

Sr. A. J. Carter, of 2470, 115th Street, Kensington, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago, a convert to the faith under the labors of Bro. George H. Graves, writes of the peculiar circumstances of her conversion, and of the joy and peace in Christ she now enjoys. She writes of herself and husband:—

We realize the most intimate communion with Christ; that we are one with him. We must partake by faith, or it will be of no avail. Food is of no use, unless we eat it. It holds up the infinite love of God, who gave his only begotten Son. It reminds us that that salvation like the bread of life, in fruit of the vine is the gift of God. It brings to remembrance the life of Christ; all who he was, and did, or said; it makes him a living reality to us. It is an irrefragable proof that he lived and died for us. As the Passover to the Jews, so this supper helps us to realize the grievous bondage of sin from which Christ has redeemed us. It holds up before our eyes the atonement, the sacrifice for sin, the body of Christ given and his blood shed for us. It teaches that Christ is the food of the soul as our food makes us what we are and becomes in us bones and flesh and sinew and blood; as our intellectual makes our minds what they are, coarse or refined, barbaric or cultured, disciplined or wild and riotous; so our spiritual companionship makes our spirits what they are. This fact makes his ordinances universal; and thus typical of the kingdom for every race and every person. By eating together, we learn the blessings and power of the oneness of God's people, many as the waves, but one as the sea; like the radii of the circle, the nearer we are to the center, Christ, the nearer we are to one another.

If one so recently born into the hope of Israel can so feelingly and beautifully write of the effects of the sacramental service, what ought the older members of the fold to feel as to their part in the feast?

Bro. L. E. Hills, Marion, Iowa, September 30:—

My wife, daughter, and self went to the Janesville reunion, 16th September. The weather was bad most of the time, but we did enjoy the meetings so much. Bless those dear saints there, how hard it was to part with them. Bro. Lake, Stebbins, Cooper, and others from out of the district were there and all enjoyed themselves regardless of the bad weather. Bro. Lake was taken very sick the last day of the conference, but as he was better the next morning when we left, we hope he is all right again ere this. Bro. Crawford, of Savannah, Illinois, with Brn. Frank Russell, J. W. Adams, and — Clark, came from Savanna with a team and were with us a few days, also Bro. Johnson, of Rock Island, Illinois; all of whom helped to make the meetings a success. The young people's entertainment, Saturday evening 23d, was well attended and a most excellent program was rendered. Too much could not be said of the readings and recitations. The hospitality of the saints in charge of the boarding tent, and of Bro. O. N. Dutton and family, will long be remembered by all. We arrived home last night, tired, but with good appetites and stronger (if possible) in the faith than ever.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Something more is required of a man in the gospel sense, than simply to belong to a church or the church. It is not enough to be able to say, I have been baptized into Christ. A man must so live that it may be said of him, "He has put on Christ."

The disciple of Jesus should be something more than an outwardly professing Christian. He must so have the love of God in him, that he loves his fellow men; and must make this love manifest in a consistent effort to do them good. He must learn the art of assimilation, and cultivate the faculty of rightly judging his fellowmen. He must learn that speech is silver and silence often gold. To know when to speak, and when to keep silent is a qualification greatly to be desired; like wisdom it is above price. Few choose this golden mean.

He who would govern others successfully must first learn to govern himself.

He who would serve well where he would need to command men, must first learn the value of obedience and himself obey.

The cause of truth has lately been defended and maintained both at Philippi and Washburn, West Virginia, by Brn. D. L. Shinn and G. H. Godbey, both of whom are long residents and laborers in the cause of Christ in that field. After the two discussions Bro. Shinn returns to that city, by request of the people, and Bro. Godbey will labor in Calhoun County. These brethren are deserving of high commendation for the faithful and courageous manner in which they have opened up the work and defended the gospel message among those who hitherto were wholly strangers to the faith taught by the Reorganized Church.

CATHOLICISM: IS IT FROM HEAVEN, OR OF MEN?

On the hypothesis that nothing that comes within the grasp of mortals is too sacred to touch, or too true to investigate, I propose to contrast Catholicism with Christ's teaching, and thus determine its origin.

"The gospel" but implies one method, known in the New Testament Scriptures as the everlasting gospel, which distinguishes it from human dogmas and creeds. As the infinite God is everlasting, it follows as a logical sequence that he will sanction nothing purporting to be gospel, or religion, in lieu of this everlasting gospel, which he gave to Christ to preach, and which Christ in turn gave to his chosen servants, with a command to preach it in all the world, which is preclusive of the thought that he would sanction more or less than this gospel revealed or made known, which claim is rendered formidable in the fact of a day or time for righteous retribution, when all are to be justified or condemned—hence God's judgments are eternal, being decided by the principles of the everlasting gospel. These thoughts meet with confirmation, in the fact of Christ's declaration:—

He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.—John 12: 48.

He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.—John 8: 47.

Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him. And as he spake these words, many believed on him. Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 28-32. See verse 47.

Those who contended with him were by him informed that they were of their "father the devil," who "was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth." Thus we have narrated a clear, straightforward advocacy of God's word reflective of the everlasting gospel; which an ordinary mind, whose spiritual vision has not been beclouded by human dogmas, may understand, and understanding, may decide and act intelligently.

A brief search will enable a God-fearing biblical student to see that Christ's chosen servants in prosecuting their ministerial work were actuated by the same inspiration as is evinced in the fact of their advocacy of the verity—and therefore the imperativeness of God's word.

And with many other words did he [Peter] testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.—Acts 2: 40.

The work of those thus addressed, in order to save themselves, consisted in evidencing faith in Christ, repenting of sins, and being baptized for the remission of sins, with a promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost; these conditions, being revealed to Peter by the Comforter, the Spirit of truth, by which these illiterate fishermen were to be guided, and kept in the ways of truth, as the infinite God had decreed. This Pentecostal gospel being thus revealed proved a test in all subsequent time for the God-fearing, by and through which they could discriminate between the true and the false. This is quite compatible with Christ's teaching:—

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?—Matt. 7: 15, 16.

Without doing violence to the teachings found in this chapter, it may be claimed that it pleased our Lord to present his thoughts on this occasion in figurative language; thus comparing true prophets to good trees, which cannot bear corrupt fruit, and false prophets to corrupt trees, which cannot bear good fruits. Wherefore, by their fruits (teachings) ye shall know them. In conformity with this, he bade his disciples beware of the doctrine of the Pharisees and Sadducees (Matt. 16: 13). And as if to meet an exigency, he denounced tradition, declaring it made the word of God of none effect; and definitely, authoritatively, and inspirationally declaring that the worship of those was vain, who taught "for doctrines the commandments of men" (Mark 7: 7). Thus it was that Christ came to teach, instruct, and thus inform the mind; hence his appeal to the better judgment of man, portraying by moral suasion, coupled with consistent examples, the advantages that would accrue to man in the acceptance of the doctrine his Father had sent him to preach, and equally anxious to inform as to consequences ensuing if rejecting the counsel of God. This being done, man was left to choose life or death.

The Roman Catholic Church is very blatant as to its claims of an unbroken succession, which gives them (as they think) a pretext to declare the Roman Catholic Church is the one and only church; yet the New Testament scriptures evince a deathlike silence so far as a recognition of a church with such distinctive features as "The Roman Catholic Church" of Jesus Christ.

The fact of successors presupposes predecessors; it therefore follows that the claims of the former must be proven or disproven by or in the light of the teachings and practices of the latter. The New Testament scriptures being a reflex of these teachings and practices, and the organic structure of the church Christ said he would build (Matt. 16: 18).

The disciples, as per command, assembled and tarried at Jerusalem, to receive the light and power of the Comforter, which Christ said he would send; which Comforter was to lead them into truth and show them things to come; and through its interposition they were to receive power to be Christ's witnesses (Acts 1: 8). This, together with the frequent reiteration of Christ that the doctrine he taught was given him by the Father, was prohibitive of the thought that their work consisted in formulating creeds or dogmas, which were to be known as a religion of a Christian body, etc.; for God reserved the right to himself to devise, and revealed the means of salvation.

Yet we find this Romish Church, despite their claim of an unbroken succession, floundering until the sixteenth century like a ship at sea without rudder or compass, or so it would seem; for we find the Council of Trent opening its session A. D. 1545, closing A. D. 1563, and the fact having obtained publicity that an agreement had been reached as to the number of sacraments being seven, which sacraments are found and explained in a catechism book, approved by Cardinal Vaughan, and the Bishops of England, and which forms a basis for that known as Catholicism. Therefore Catholicism found its origin in or by the Council of Trent. It cannot therefore be of heaven, and must be considered a human product. But lest this conclusion be thought premature, I will examine some of the sacraments of Trent in the light of Christ's teachings:—

Q.—How many sacraments are there?

A.—There are seven sacraments: Baptism, confirmation, holy eucharist, penance, extreme unction, holy order, and matrimony.—Page 44, Catechism.

Q.—What is baptism?

A.—Baptism is a sacrament which cleanses us from original sin, makes us Christians, children of God, and members of the church.

Q.—How is baptism given?

A.—Baptism is given by pouring water on the head of a child: saying, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

Q.—What do we promise in baptism?

A.—We promise in baptism to renounce the Devil and all his works and pomps.

Thus we learn from this Trent baptism: 1. That it cleanses from original sin. 2. That its mode consists in pouring water on the head of a child (infant). 3. That a promise is made to renounce the Devil and all his works and pomps. But as the recipients of this Trent baptism cannot resist the Devil, etc., sponsors or godfathers and godmothers are provided to resist for the babies. Thus speaks the Council of Trent, and all Roman Catholics say, Amen.

But be it known, that a greater one than the Council of Trent and all Catholics combined has spoken, and the corroding tooth of time cannot diminish aught from his word, or render it null and void.

Then there were brought unto him [Christ] little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.—Matt. 19:13-15.

Thus we have the fact given by Christ, that little children are of the kingdom of heaven, therefore not contaminated with original sin, which should be an end to controversy. The Catholic Church is therefore in error in declaring children under condemnation through original sin, needing cleansing by pouring water on their head. This practice is further condemned by Christ in his instructions:—

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.—Mark 16:15, 16.

This needs no comment, as it proves beyond successful contradiction that belief is an essential prerequisite to baptism, which is preclusive of the thought that a baby is the proper subject for baptism.

Matthew (28: 19, 20) so represents Christ commanding the apostles to "teach all nations, baptizing them;" making the fact apparent that teaching was to precede baptism. The fact also being just as apparent that they were to teach subsequent to baptism; the ostensible purpose of which must have been that the recipients of baptism might act intelligently. This could not have been applicable to infants; this the Catholics virtually concede in providing godfathers and godmothers to do for the recipients of this Trent baptism, what they cannot do for themselves. John had ministered baptism to those capable of confessing their sins (Matt. 3: 6). Again he addressed them, saying:—

I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance.—Verse 11.

Beside all this, we find him "baptizing in Enon, near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized." So we learn, those receiving baptism at the hands of John possessed the power of locomotion. We may therefore safely conclude that this John, "the prophet of the Highest," knew nothing of this Catholic arrangement of godfathers and godmothers, and pouring water on a child's head for the God-revealed baptism. Nor Mark, nor Luke, who both testified that John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (Mark 1: 4; Luke 3: 4).

But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.—Acts 8: 12.

And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch: and he [Philip] baptized him.—Acts 8: 38.

Many other confirmatory quotations might be adduced to further substantiate the facts that faith and repentance were prerequisite to baptism for remission of sins; and that faith, repentance, and baptism for remission of sins (Acts 2: 37-40) were prerequisites for the gift of the Holy Ghost; but a point once established is sufficient, and in the mouths of two or three witnesses every word reflective of Christ's saving method is established.

The reader who is capable to think, must see an irreconcilable antagonism between the Council of Trent and the Romish Church on the God-given "baptism." In which event one of two things must be conceded, either Christ is right and the Romish Church wrong, or Christ wrong and the Romish Church right. Choose ye, kind reader, whom you will serve; but in the effulgent light radiating from Christ's teachings, Roman Catholicism is not from heaven, as you must see.

Gahan, a Roman Catholic historian, is credited with having said that Novatian was baptized in bed, and he adds that it was not by immersion, which he says "was then the usual method." The Catholics defend the change to sprinkling, by saying that the authorities of the church, as the successors of Peter, holding the keys, had a right to change the ordinance if they thought necessary. I don't vouch for its correctness, nor is it material, so far as the issue is concerned. For certain it is, that the Catholics advocate and practice a baptism by pouring, etc., hence their practice of it renders them culpable, whether the change was made at their instance or not.

Had it been a fact that Peter was the first Bishop of Rome, and he as per divine injunction had appointed, properly charging and instructing his successor, the presumption that the church would have been following in the footsteps of their predecessor in contending for the faith once delivered to the saints is a fair one (Jude 3), which would have superceded the necessity of ecumenical councils at so late a period of the world's history as A. D. 1545, closing A. D. 1563, for the formulation of dogmas as a basis for Catholicism. But as it is, one of two things is made apparent, — either Peter failed to appoint a successor, or he did appoint a successor, and said successor failed to lead the church or point them to the teachings of the predecessor. We must therefore believe that this Council of Trent were rather seceders from, than successors of, the apostles—and that the church of Rome was the beginning and perpetuation of the apostate church, represented under the figure of a fallen woman in Revelation 17, in contradistinction to the church represented in the twelfth chapter of Revelation.

Christ enjoined upon the people the searching of the scriptures, because they testified of him (John 5: 39). Paul taught the church to prove all things, saying:—

I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.—1 Cor. 10: 15.

Not for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand.—2 Cor. 1: 24.

But the Council of Trent prevents the laity from reading the Bible in the vulgar tongue. The following was confirmed by Pope Gregory XVI.:

Moreover, we confirm and renew decrees received above delivered in former times, by apostolic authority, against the publication, distribution, reading, and possessing of books of the Holy Scripture, translated in the vulgar tongue.

I will now briefly consider the sacrament known as Transubstantiation:

Q. What is the sacrament of the holy eucharist?

A. The sacrament of the holy eucharist is the true body and blood of Jesus Christ, together with his soul and divinity, under the appearance of bread and wine.

Mr. Chiniquy, a Catholic for fifty years, and acting priest twenty-five years, who wrote a book assigning reasons for recantation, says on page 119:—

I was ordained a priest of Rome in the Cathedral of Quebec, on the 21st of September, 1833, by the Right Reverend Signale, first Archbishop of Canada. No words of mine can express the solemnity of my thoughts, the superhuman nature of my aspirations, when the delegate of the Pope imposing his hands on my head, gave me the power of converting a real wafer into the real, substantial body, blood, soul, and divinity of Jesus Christ. The bright illusion of Eve as the deceiver told her, "Ye shall be as Gods," was child's play compared with what I felt when assured by the infallible voice of my church, that I was not only on equal terms with my Savior and God, but I was in reality above him; and that hereafter I would not only command, but create him.

is stigmatized as an apostate, but as he speaks according to the catechism, he should be heard. On page 123, he says:—

I have often been asked, Was it possible that you sincerely believed that the wafer could be changed into God by you? And that you have really worshiped that wafer as your Savior? To my shame, and to the shame of poor humanity, I must say, "Yes;" I believed as sincerely as every Roman Catholic priest is bound to believe it; that I was creating my own Savior, God, every morning by the assumed consecration of the wafer; and I was saying to the people, as I presented it to them, "Ecce Agnus Dei!"—"This is the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world; let us adore him." It seems almost incredible that anyone with a sound mind could believe and teach anything half as monstrous, but so it is.

We do not expect to gather grapes from Christ, because he calls himself a "vine" (John 15); or that he is a door made out of oak plank, because he says, "I am the door" (John 10: 9); because the very nature of such sayings proves at once they are of a figurative character. Nor can it be expected that a morsel of wheaten bread, called a wafer, can be turned into Christ's body, and be placed upon the tongue of a communicant, and slip down into his stomach.

But whatever Christ taught touching the bread and wine,—reason, propriety, and good common sense,—must suggest that the significance and meaning thereof is reflected in these words: "This do in remembrance of me," so the apostles understood and taught (1 Cor. 11: 23-25.).

Pope Gregory XVI. is credited with having said, "Mary is the only hope of sinners." So says Mr. Chiniquy in a sermon he preached, on the Virgin Mary, while yet in the faith (page 327).

Perhaps the most effective time for the advocacy of Mary as a mediator, is while the priest is preparing children for their first communion, of which Mr. Chiniquy speaks, pages 49, 50:—

Priest to the child: When you have been guilty of some fault at home, who was the first to punish you—your father or your mother?

Answer: My father.

You have answered correctly, my child, said the priest.

So the priest continues at length; then he informs the children, saying, You have a father and a mother in heaven, dear children. Your father is Jesus, and your mother is Mary. Do not forget that a mother's heart is always more tender and more prone to mercy than that of a father's.

With this strong appeal to the emotions or sensitiveness of the children, he now pours into their ears that which forever holds them bound in the meshes of Catholicism, unless at sometime in their natural lives reason and studiousness shall lead them to think and act as free men and women.

The priest says, Often you offend your father by your sins; you make him angry against you. What takes place in heaven then? Your father in heaven takes his rod to punish you. He threatens to crush you down with his roaring thunder. He opens the gates of hell to cast you into it; and you would have been damned long ago had it not been for the loving mother you have in heaven, who has disarmed your angry irritated father.

Thus in the promulgation of the Romish dogmas these self-styled successors displace God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; makes Christ the Father, presenting him as a monster, having the gates of hell open ready to crush you (the children the priest is preparing for their first communion) with his roaring thunder; but Mary steps in and prevails upon this cruel monster to desist from his contemplated design, in crushing and throwing these children into hell.

Thus we have these successors denying the God that bought them, in fulfillment of Peter's prediction (2 Peter 2: 1, 2), and in the denial of God making Mary supreme. Was blasphemy ever more conspicuous? What say the predecessors:—

There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus.—1 Tim. 2: 5.

My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.—1 John 2: 1.

But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother [Christ].—Matt. 12: 48-50.

This Christ was not negligent in duty; hence, if Mary had rights and privileges over others, this was an occasion on which the fact should have been known. He makes no distinction by which Mary was to fill the position of an intercessor. It is blasphemous, therefore, for this Romish Church to do so. And why should sound-minded men or women allow themselves to be entangled in such a base delusion?

On page 334, Mr. Chiniquy refers to doubts arising in his mind subsequent to a sermon he delivered on the Virgin Mary. Meeting his Bishop, in his distress he solicited the privilege of propounding some questions to this important prelate, whom he addresses my lord. His request being granted, he opened his mouth and said:—

Well, my lord, who came into this world to save you and me? Is it Jesus or Mary?

It is Jesus, answered the bishop.

Who was called and is, in reality, the sinner's best friend? Was it Jesus or Mary?

The bishop answered, It was Jesus.

Many other similar questions were presented and answered, to which the bishop responded, and in each response recognizing the superiority of Christ over Mary.

At length the bishop informed Mr. Chiniquy he would find answers to your [his] questions and difficulties in "The Holy Fathers."

Can you lend me "The Holy Fathers," my lord?

He replied: "No, sir; I have them not."

This last answer, says Mr. Chiniquy, from my bishop shook my faith to its foundation, and left my mind in a state of great distress. With the sincere hope of finding in "The Holy Fathers" some explanations which would dispel my painful doubts, I immediately went to Mr. Farbre, the great bookseller of Montreal, who got me from France the splendid edition of "The Holy Fathers," by Migne.

Continuing Mr. Chiniquy says, What was my desolation, my shame, and surprise, to find that the Holy Fathers of the first six centuries had never advocated the worship of Mary; and that the many eloquent pages on the power of Mary in heaven, and her love for sinners, found in every page of my theologians and other ascetic books I had read till then, were but impudent lies, additions interpolated in their works a hundred years after their death.

When discovering these forgeries, under the name of "The Holy Fathers," of which my church was guilty, how many times in the silence of my long nights of prayerful meditations did I hear a voice telling me, "Come out of Babylon," etc.

Continuing, Mr. Chiniquy says, Thus as the unexpected contradictions of "The Holy Fathers" to the tenets of my church, and their furious and uncharitable divisions, among themselves were striking to me, I plunged deeper and deeper in the deep waters of "The Holy Fathers," and the word of God with the hope of getting rid of the deadly darts which were piercing my Roman Catholic conscience, etc., etc.

How deep was the wound I received from Gregory the Great, one of the most learned popes of Rome, against the supremacy and universality of the Pope of Rome, as taught to-day, the following extract from his writing will show:—

But I confidently say that whosoever calls himself a universal bishop, or desires to be called so, in his pride, he prefers himself to rest. And he is led to error with a similar pride. For as that wicked one wishes to appear as God, above all men, whosoever he is, who desires to be called a Supreme Bishop, extols himself above all other bishops.—Epist. Greg. Mag. Lib. 7 Indict 15 Ep. 23 ad Maur Aug.

Those words wounded me painfully. I showed them to Mr. Brassard, saying, Do you not see here the incontrovertible proof of what I have told you many times, that during the first six centuries of Christianity, we do not find the least proof that there was anything like our dogma of supreme power and authority of the Bishop of Rome, or any other bishop, over the rest of the Christian world?

My dear Chiniquy, answered Mr. Brassard, did I not tell you when you bought "The Holy Fathers" that you were doing a foolish and dangerous thing? In every age the man who singularizes himself and walks out of the common tracks of life is subject to fall into ridicule, etc. You are also too free and imprudent in speaking of what you call the contradictions of "The Holy Fathers," and their want of harmony with some of our religious views.

Surely the reader will begin to see that all is not smooth with the prelates of this Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Chiniquy states the time of the origin of the dogma of the immaculate conception. He says:—

The 5th of December, 1854, Pope Pius IX. was sitting on his throne; a triple crown of gold and diamonds was on his head; silk and damask—red and white—vestments on his shoulders; five hundred mitred prelates were surrounding him; and more than fifty thousand people were at his feet, in the incomparable St. Peter's church of Rome. After a few minutes of most solemn silence a cardinal, dressed with purple robe, left his seat and gravely walked towards the pope, kneeled before him, and humbly prostrated himself at his feet, said: "Holy Father, tell us if we can believe and teach that the mother of God, the Holy Virgin Mary, was immaculate in her conception."

The supreme pontiff answered: "I do not know; let us ask the light of the Holy Ghost."

The same was repeated the third time, then the response came from the pontiff: "Yes; we must believe that the blessed Virgin Mary, the mother of God, was immaculate in her conception."

There is no salvation to those who do not believe this dogma.

Mr. Chiniquy states:—

It is only in the twelfth century immaculate conception began to be openly preached by some brainless monks. But then it was opposed by the most learned men of the time. . . . Philip III. and Philip VI. made what we may call supreme efforts to force the popes, Paul V., Gregory XV., and Alexander VII. to stop the shedding of blood, and disarm the combatants, by raising the opinion in favor of the immaculate conception to the dignity of a Catholic dogma. But they failed. The only answer they could get from the infallible head of the church of Rome was that "that dogma was not revealed in the Holy Scriptures; had never been taught by the apostles, nor by the Fathers, and had never been believed, or preached by the church of Rome as an article of faith."

At the Council of Trent the Franciscans and all the partisans of the "immaculate conception" gathered their strength to have a decree in favor of the new dogma; but the majority of the bishops were visibly against that sacrilegious innovation, and they failed.—Chiniquy's book, pp. 395-397.

Thus we learn that the infallible popes, up to 1854, denounced the immaculate conception, but the infallible Pope Pius IX. declared it a doctrine, daring to say, "That the Holy Ghost revealed it." Thus you see, kind reader, some of the glaring inconsistencies, contradictions, and bold assumptions of these self-styled successors. A little sober thinking will at once reveal the fact of Pope Pius IX. being deceived in claiming to be inspired by the Holy Ghost in his decision. For we have learned that the Holy Ghost was only attainable by complying with God's revealed conditions: Faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins.

Can you think, kind reader that God made this blessing conditional to the predecessors and bestows it upon these who claim to be successors who practice and teach in opposition to these conditions? How could you think thus? The effects of practicing the dogmas of the Romish Church may be understood by considering the effusions of some of the influential men.

If Catholics ever gain a sufficient numerical majority in this country religious freedom is at an end. So our enemies say; so we believe.—"The Shepherd of the Valley," official journal of the Bishop of St. Louis, November 23, 1851.

The Catholic Church is the medium and channel through which the will of God is expressed. While the state has rights, she has them only in virtue and by permission of the superior authority, and this authority can be expressed only through the church.—"Catholic World," July, 1870.

Religious liberty is merely endured until the opposite can be carried into effect without peril to the Catholic Church.—Rev. O'Connor, Bishop of Pittsburg.

The Catholic Church numbers one third the American population; and if its membership shall increase for the next thirty years as it has the thirty years past, in 1900 Rome will have a majority, and be bound to take this country and keep it. There is ere long to be a state religion in this country, and that state religion is to be the Roman Catholic.

1. The Roman Catholic is to wield his vote for the purpose of securing Catholic ascendancy in this country.

2. All legislation must be governed by the will of God, unerringly indicated by the pope.

3. Education must be controlled by Catholic authorities; and under education, the opinions of the individual and the utterances of the press, are included; and many opinions are to be forbidden by the secular arm, under the authority of the church, even to war and bloodshed.—Father Hecker, "Catholic World," July, 1870.

It was proposed that all religious persuasions should be free, and their worship publicly exercised. But we have rejected this article as contrary to the canons and council of the Catholic Church.—Pope Pius VII., Encyclical, 1808.

Every one knows that one of the first and most solemn acts of the present pope, Leo XIII., was to order that the theology of St. Thomas Aquinas should be taught in all the colleges, seminaries, and universities of the Church of Rome, throughout the whole world, as the most accurate teaching of the doctrines of his church. Well, on the 30th of December, 1880, I forced the Right Rev. Foley, Bishop of Chicago, to translate from Latin and English, before the court of Kanakakee, and to swear that the following law was among those promulgated by St. Thomas as one of present and unchangeable laws of the Church of Rome.

Though heretics must be tolerated, because they deserve it, we must bear with them, till by a second admonition they may be brought to the faith of the church. But those who after a second admonition remain obstinate in their errors, must not only be excommunicated, but they must be delivered up to the secular powers to be exterminated.—St. Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theologia, vol. 4, p. 90. Chiniquy's Book, pp. 468, 469.

It may appear absurd, in view of the fact of volumes having been written on Catholicism, to attempt to make anything like an expose within the limits of a tract. But the absurdities of this Romish Church are so palpable that a few points well considered were better than darkening counsel with many words. Christ's gospel is perfect, and exists in integral parts, and an ignoring of one of its fundamentals must lead to a further digression. Let the reader think well, looking to the heavenly source for light to guide.

Those are to be filled with righteousness who thirst for it, none else (Matt. 5: 6). Should you, perchance, have cherished a love for the dogmas of the Romish Church, you will never lose that love until you studiously and prayerfully think of and make the contrast between those dogmas and the simplicity and grandeur of Christ's teachings. That being done, you will never again (if you ever have) bow down to the Virgin Mary; but you will love God, and him only, through Christ, will you serve.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—The reunion of the Northern and Central California districts, held at Livermore from September 1-10, was a success. Seven of the general missionaries were in attendance, besides a goodly number of the local ministry; a fair turnout of saints, but only a small attendance of strangers.

The social services were spiritual and of a high character. Short prayers and speeches were the order, and all made it a point to keep within bounds of the rule; and it seemed that each meeting was a little better than the one preceding, in point of spirituality. An exceptional feature of these meetings was that nothing whatever occurred during the sessions to mar the peace of the saints. The preaching was excellent; every sermon seemed to be relished and appreciated by the people, and the speakers were blessed to a marked degree in dispensing the precious words of life. To God be the praise.

The spirit of peace and true brotherly love prevailed from beginning to end, and it was with regret and reluctance, that they gave each other the parting hand. What a glorious day it will be when we meet in that great reunion of the redeemed with Christ as the King of kings, and where parting will be no more.

The expense of the reunion was met without taking up one public collection; and the traveling ministry were remembered, as each received liberally and equally from the donations that were made. The California saints do not have to be urged to do their duty along that line. They will surely receive their reward.

Bro. Sweet and Sr. Young, who had the responsibility of arranging of affairs in general, did nobly the work assigned them, and their untiring efforts were highly appreciated by the visitors.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy, true to his promise, returned to his mission in time to attend the reunion, and rendered valuable service. He was accompanied by our young brother, A. B. Philips, from Connecticut, who will perform missionary labor in this State until next conference. He is at present with Bro. Barmore, operating one of the gospel tents at Walnut Creek. Brn. Blair and Ferris are with the other tent at Oakland. Bro. Anderson and myself are looking after church matters in this city.

The work here is looking up. Bro. Daley, president of the branch, with his collaborators, have expressed a determination to do all within their power to keep the camp fire blazing in these parts. Bro. Anderson will remain here for some weeks to supplement their efforts.

Bro. Joehnk still occupies his old stand at No. 511 K Street, and continues to manifest by his faith and works that he is in accord with the saying, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace," as he makes it a point to see that their feet are well shod, as none of the missionaries have yet been forgotten by him. May God continue to bless our brother in his temporal affairs as well as spiritually.

Bro. Keeler who was for some time confined to his bed with a fever, has by the grace of God recovered and is now busy at work in the vineyard, attending to his heavenly Father's business. Bro. Holt, Harris, Chase, Chatburn, and Williams all report progress. Bro. Gibson is confined to his home most of the time by reason of his aged companion's illness, but is doing all his circumstances permit in assisting the officials of the San Bernardino branch. Bro. Dana has done but very little ministerial work for over a year; has been engaged at manual labor all summer. He has the responsibility of caring for one of his sons who has for some time been confined in a hospital. At last advices he was much better. Perhaps Bro. Dana will be at liberty to devote his time to the ministry this fall and winter. Bro. Thomas Daley is unfurling the banner of truth in Nevada in the face of bitter opposition, but reports a number of additions to the church by baptism. Bro. Daley does not permit the grass to grow under his feet while out in the field. Continue to thrust in thy sickle, brother, you have the prayers and confidence of the saints, and the Lord will stand by thee.

The Utah Church claims seventy-five missionaries in California alone and the Reorganized Church has only nine to offset their influence and the stigma brought upon us by that people. I am inclined to believe that number correct, for we find them in every city and village we enter. Those elders distribute literature from house to house and are very active in street preaching. In many instances they tell the people that there is no particular difference existing between the two organizations—theirs and ours. They have frequently been invited to meet our elders in public discussion, but have backed down in every instance. Truly the harvest is great and the laborers are few. There is great need for more efficient laborers in this field to meet present and urgent demands.

In our late war with Spain and the one now being waged with the Filipinos thousands of our brave young men responded to the call of the President to take up arms to relieve millions of downtrodden and oppressed humanity from the yoke of bondage and slavery. The young men who thus volunteered their service sacrificed home with its endearments and worldly prospects, and also ran the risk of losing health and life, that they might be instrumental in bringing those who were under the yoke of tyranny and despotism under the banner of light and liberty. Now a word to our young men who hold the office of elder or priest; How many of you are willing to sacrifice home with its endearments and worldly prospects to engage in ministerial work, say for two years, and thus help the present warriors on the frontier to relieve the teeming millions of humanity who are under the bondage of sin, degradation, and religious bigotry and dogmas? Now suppose that fifty or one hundred young men should thus volunteer their service for two years, what a great benefit it would be to them individually, the church, and mankind in general. Thus they would gain an experience that would be of more worth to them than gold. Also by this experience they would be able to ascertain which wing of the work they were adapted for, whether the local or the general missionary work; and the knowledge thus gained would better qualify them for either capacity. I am strongly of the opinion that men who have had experience on the frontier are better fitted for local work. By the time the first volunteers' term has expired another regiment of young men will be ready to relieve those who wish to retire from the general missionary work or to augment the ministerial forces. The church would derive great benefit from such help. "But," says one, "I don't know that I am called to engage in missionary work." But the Lord informs us that all are called who desire to thrust in their sickle and reap. "Behold, the field is white already to harvest, therefore, whose desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God; yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God."—Doctrine and Covenants 6: 2.

Another one says, "How will I get my support?" My answer to such is, "Have faith in God," and take him at his word. Please read Matthew 6:25-34, and if your faith is equal to that of the young Lamanites who engaged in the conflict under the leadership of Helaman (Book of Mormon, Alma 24 and 25), you will never fall a victim to the adversary nor lack any blessing that will be for your good. All you need to start out with is a suit of clothes, change of underwear, a satchel, the church books, and an earnest desire in your heart to win souls to Christ. If you will keep humble, be watchful, apply yourself to study, and seek to do your duty faithfully before the Lord, I'll assure you that you will be instrumental in gathering many precious sheaves into the garner. I will vouch for the statement that the Lord of the harvest will send his angels before you, and his Holy Spirit will be with you to qualify you for every good word and work.

We want such volunteers in the general field as have the moral courage to distribute literature from house to house and who will sound the gospel trumpet in schoolhouses, towns, and cities outside of branch organizations. In this connection read Doctrine and Covenants 83:13-16: "It is expedient that I give unto you this commandment, that ye become as my friends when I was with them traveling to preach this gospel in my power; for I suffered them not to have purse or scrip, neither two coats; behold, I send you out to prove the world, and the laborer is worthy of his hire. And any man that shall go and preach this gospel of the kingdom, and fail not to continue faithful in all things, shall not be weary in mind, neither darkened, neither in body, limb or joint; an hair of his head shall not fall to the ground unnoticed. And they shall not go hungry, neither athirst. Therefore, take no thought for the morrow, for what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, or wherewithal ye shall be clothed." Read on.

But methinks I hear some young man say, "If I wasn't engaged to be married soon I would willingly volunteer my service for two years." Now my dear brother I advise you to do as did many of the United States volunteers—postpone your marriage for a time; and if you are engaged to one of our faithful Sunday school or Religio workers, I am strongly of the opinion that she will concur in the project and agree to the sacrifice; and she will think more of you for your loyalty to Christ and your willingness to help save your fellow men.

If you wait until after marriage your domestic relations may be of such a character as to forever debar you from doing the work which it is your desire to accomplish and that the Lord requires of all those who love him with all their heart, soul, and mind. Remember that there are great blessings in store for those who put themselves on the altar of sacrifice, for it is written that this "is a day of sacrifice," and that through sacrifice the work of redemption is to be consummated.

How many volunteers will be ready for the service of the Lord by next spring?

Your well wisher and coworker,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—We arrived here all safe and well on the evening of August 1, being thirty-two days and twelve hours enroute. Thus far we like the place and the mission very much—much better than we expected. The climate is very pleasant, at least at this season of the year. The women here scarcely know what clothes pins are, though they hang their clothes on lines; so you see the winds are mere zephyrs.

In Papeete one can buy almost anything one can obtain in America, and almost as cheap as in San Francisco. There are some things of course that cannot be obtained; butter for one, and a few other things are very high, such as wood and lumber.

The saints here have a comfortable little chapel and mission house. They are thinking of buying the house we live in (the one Bro. and Sr. Devore and Bro. and Sr. Case lived in) for a printing office. Bro. Burton publishes a paper called Te Orometua, which being interpreted is The Instructor; also a Sunday school question book, and other things.

The natives here are much more intelligent than I expected to find. Some of their sermons are really brilliant. One on the Sabbath question as interpreted by Bro. Burton contained some good and new points. I begin to think that I have come here to be taught rather than to teach.

I am feeling rather better than in America; Fruit diet agrees with me. I have long been troubled with catarrh of the stomach, and the fruit acid is helping me. Wife is well, and seems to enjoy talking, or trying to talk, with the natives. She was quite sick on the boat. My feelings were stirred to the center yet I was not compelled to give up a mouthful I had eaten.

Bro. Burton is not well, but is better since we came. He is quite a little filled up with news from America. Sr. Burton seems quite well.

I have long desired a home at the foot of the mountains on the seashore, and now my ideal is realized. We will probably remain here till October.

Will our friends in America accept this as a personal letter to them, as my time is very much limited. Bro. Burton is behind, and I am helping him with his writing.

Yours strivingly,
J. W. PETERSON.

KNOX, Ind., October 3.

Editors Herald:—We closed our communication to your columns with a statement of progress in the two-days' series of meetings up to and including the effort at Marcellus and a week's meeting at this place. The Coldwater appointment followed and was a success, the attendance quite large, the interest good, and we closed with the baptism of three.

Wending our way to Anderson, Michigan, the following Saturday and Sunday we had a repetition of good times. Saints at that place are few in number, but are strong in the work. Visiting saints were present from Milan, Ypsilanti, Detroit, Webberville, Oak Grove, Clear Lake, Indiana; and Coldwater. Bro. Durand was present to aid in the good work and did aid very effectively.

The work at Webberville was conducted by Elders G. A. Smith and F. Granger. We learn that an interesting service was had. According to conference card, the following Sunday was occupied at Grand Rapids in conference capacity; a splendid representation. Here we met our genial Sunday school superintendent, Sr. Royce, who aided, cheered, and stimulated the work of the Sunday schools.

Conference was presided over by Elders E. C. Briggs and G. A. Smith. 'Twas a very interesting session. Elders Cornish, Ellis, Schreur, and Kaplinger, of the Northern district, were present and lent aid. Bro. Durand, of Eastern district, was also present. Enthusiasm was high and the Grand Rapids branch through one of its representatives thanked the conference for the light brought, to encourage on the way. Indeed, the Saints there are to be commended for the way and means of entertaining the large gathering.

On Monday, after completion of business and adjournment of conference, we all (the Coldwater and Clear Lake delegation—for there were just nineteen of us) took motor headed by Sr. Supry, for North Park, Soldiers' Home. After taking in sights and scenes there, we visited the famous John Ball Park, lovely sceneries of nature chiseled to advanced taste by the hand and policy of man. Returning to city for evening service, Elder G. A. Smith was the speaker. Tuesday morning we broke ranks, departing for our several homes; Bro. Durand going to Hartford, I to Coldwater and from thence to this place, where Bro. Durand precedes me one evening, he addressing the people on Friday evening, presiding over the social service Saturday morning. I came on the afternoon train; meetings quite largely attended.

Sunday afternoon we repaired to the river, parted the waves, and buried three persons in the waters of baptism. Three children were blessed, and good done, in various ways. We continue the services for a few evenings this week, and then on to Flint, South Scott, et al., to meet the appointments. We find a hospitable home with dear Bro. and Sr. Prettyman. God bless them, with all the Knox saints.

Hopefully,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—I want to say to the readers of the Herald that Bro. J. W. Wight's article in this week's paper, October 4, meets my approval, and I would suggest that all read it carefully, and reread it, and act accordingly, and it will do us all good. I want to further state that Bro. Hilliard has no theory as to how the gathering shall be accomplished and the saints provided for. He has only urged and encouraged the Lord's way, as revealed and written in the books. I may err in judgment, and have a wrong understanding of what is written; but I have not and will not advocate or encourage any scheme contrary to that set forth in the books, as I understand it. We cannot urge too strongly the first preparation, that of the heart and mind. "Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you: sanctify yourselves before me," cannot be neglected, and must be done if we would accomplish the work entrusted to us. I trust that we may all see to it that we do our part of the work in every way as the law requires; and the Lord will do the balance as he has promised. Working and praying for the redemption of Zion, I am as ever in the faith,

G. H. HILLIARD.

WILMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 27.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Southwick and I had a pleasant surprise at Ladd. Last Tuesday we went there to undertake to adjust some difficulty in the branch. After preaching Wednesday and Friday nights and prayer meeting Thursday night, two requested baptism, a Bro. Shewey and wife. We went to the water Sunday morning to administer the rite, and Bro. Southwick buried those two with their Lord in baptism. Then it developed that two more, Sr. Turner and Sr. Mason had come prepared for the water. Then when those were ministered unto and the invitation extended for more, there was a moment's pause, then Sr. Snow (whose husband was already a member) yielded to the movings of the Spirit and went through the water of regeneration. Then we repaired to the home of the new brother, Shewey, and confirmed the five where we had expected two. The Spirit was present in power and wisdom and promise of yet more increase.

Ladd branch is small, but the young people there are showing themselves in earnest by study of the word and effort to better themselves by what they learn. I mention the young people and their work, there, because they are doing what many of those young in years or young in the work fail to do; that is, acquaint themselves with all there is in the work for them and apply the truth in action. We cannot commend any in any place as examples of perfection, but when we find examples of progression, we feel to say to others whether young or old, "Go thou and do likewise." The true watchword of the divine life in man is "progress."

On Monday, Bro. Southwick and I left Ladd for Plano, whence, Tuesday morning, the former took train for home. I stopped one day with the better three fourths (wife and children), then came here to assist Bro. H. E. Moler in tent work. Judging by the attention they gave my weak effort to expound the "wonderful words of life," Bro. Moler has impressed our position favorably upon the minds of the people. The tent was nearly full, but the blow-down last Sunday made some of the people a little nervous.

I notice a feature of the financial side of our work that causes me to reflect seriously. There is a constantly growing willingness on the part of missionary and local forces to call upon the saints and friends for money. Is it right? When the work was founded the law for the support of missionaries was laid down thus: "Thou shalt take no purse, nor scrip, neither staves, neither two coats, for the church shall give unto thee in the very hour what thou needest for food, and for raiment and for shoes, and for money, and for scrip; for thou art called to prune my vineyard with a mighty pruning, yea, even for the last time. Yea, and also, all those whom thou hast ordained. And they shall do even according to this pattern. Amen."—D. C. 23: 7.

We note from this that the ministry were not burdened with the charge of tents, furniture, and appliances, which would make it necessary to advertise and plead for means to operate a device borrowed from the world of amusement. The expression "The church shall give thee . . . what thou needest," must be understood in the light of, "Whoso receiveth you, receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money."—D. C. 88:16. This shows that it was not intended that the Bishop or saints at a distance should support the missionary, but those who received his ministrations. "But what if they don't do it?" If we humble ourselves and have faith in God, they will do it. For myself, when those to whom I minister fail to supply my needs, I ascribe it to lack of faith and humility on my part; for it is evident that the law contemplates that the missionary should trust in God in all things, and in men only as instruments. Those who do this may not dress as well and fare as well as those who are ready to call on the Bishop or the saints, but their real needs will be met. The last report of the Bishop shows a decided increase per capita in "elders' expenses" paid from the general funds. Are we to continue thus, until the Bishop, and not "whoso receiveth" the missionary, pays all his expenses? I hope not.

A word as to tents. The reason I work in tents is because they are owned and used in the church, not because I think they are the best means of doing missionary work. Good is done in and by them, but I believe their use not strictly in line of God's intention for missionaries. Their use by local forces, and for reunions, etc., is a different thing. I have done tent work three seasons in different districts, and, so far as I am concerned, tent work is not a success. Nor has there come under my observation the measure of success by others that the same energy, talent, time, and money expended in other lines of work would have brought. But, lest the expression of my opinions should turn the church upside down, to its detriment, I desist.

In the faith,

ADAM J. KECK.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Kind looks, kind words, kind acts, and warm handshakes—these are the secondary means of grace when men are in trouble, and are fighting their unseen battles.
—Dr. John Hall.

IT IS SO.

Doubt, fear, and distrust are depressing emotions; but faith, hope, and trust are tonics of mind. Whatever depresses the mind enfeebles the body, while on the other hand, that which gives tone to mind invigorates the body. If a person in health indulges in doubt, fear, and distrust, he will surely become ill. Thought is the product of mind, and mind is controlled by thought. The nervous system is the servant of thought, and in fact every organ of the body is. They all constitute the machine that was created by our all-wise Father, and by it he designed that each individual mind, or spirit, should perform its allotted work, and if well performed, it will be called good and faithful. The nerves have a direct connection with the mind, if they did not, how about sensation? how about the limbs being obedient in performing labor directed by the mind? The mind can be, and should be, so educated as to rightly control every organ of the body, thereby keeping the body under subjection. Harmony is manifested in all of God's works, the human body not excepted. If the mind is harmonious, the organs of the body will work in harmony, and the result will be health, for health is harmony.

Now if fear, doubt, confusion, etc., to say nothing about vice of any kind, is fostered in mind, the victim must surely suffer in body according to his degree of indulgence. And not himself only, but all with whom he is connected, for every wrong thought casts its own peculiar shadow on minds under its influence. All mind depressions affect the quality of the blood and its circulation. Depressing thoughts are dispatched on the nerves to every part of the system, and the results are often disastrous. Even our breathing is affected by them. The breath of fear, doubt, hate, anger, etc., are very different from that of hope, trust, love, etc., and their effects are very different.

Reader, if these facts have not been demonstrated to you by experience, have they not frequently passed under your observation?

Consequently, we come to the conclusion that if depressing thoughts are long indulged in, the nerves become prostrated, irritated, and the body becomes ill. Now if this is so, let us reverse the cause and look at the effects. We say to the invalid in all kindness, cultivate cheerful thoughts. In the creation God called all his work good, man not excepted. He created him a perfect physical body. All parts worked in harmony, like a perfect musical instrument; and did so as long as the operator, the mind, worked in harmony with the Author's plan. By wrong thinking man fell—became a victim of disease and death. God did not create disease, but it was caused by wrong thinking. Every act, whether good or bad, was preceded by thought, voluntary or involuntary. We do not refer to vices or virtues in this essay, but speak of depressing emotions and their opposites, hope, faith, trust, etc.

We again say to the sick, cultivate cheerful thoughts, and reflect them to others, and thereby stop centering your thoughts in self and sensation. Cultivate a love for the beautiful, especially in nature. Embrace every opportunity of comforting others as a blessed privilege. Every ray of light that shines from your pure, bright thought will penetrate other minds, and then be reflected back, and photographed on your own. Hope, faith, and trust are as strong pillars in our physical salvation as in our spiritual. If we accept them, they will give brilliancy to the eye and color to the cheek. A continued cultivation will render clearness to the complexion, calmness and strength to the nerves. It will vivify and strengthen the whole body. The broken down tissues will build up, the muscles will develop, and the once despondent invalid will find himself comparatively a new man in a few weeks.

Brother and sister invalid, please accept this free advice from one who has demonstrated it. Do not condemn it, but faithfully practice it. We did not, and would not, ask anyone to attempt it without daily asking the blessing of a loving Father. It is his Holy Spirit that seals the blessing. Every good and perfect gift cometh from him; but we must receive it through the lawful channel—hope, faith, trust, and harmonious works. Try it, and with me you will say, "It Is So."

Dear Sisters:—I have been impressed time and again to write, and I am glad to have the opportunity of informing you that I know this is the true church of God, and that he does bless his children in these days, the same as he did in the olden times. I rejoice when I think of the blessings I have received. When I have been very, very sick, I have called on the elders and they would administer to me, and I would receive relief immediately, and I would feel strong and firm in the faith which was once delivered to the saints. I remember my little girl was very sick, in fact she was almost dead. My husband could not rest at his work, so he came home and said, "How is Janetta? I cannot work, and must go and fetch an elder." But before he started, an elder came, as if he was directed to come. There was joy when we saw him, though the neighbors were in the house, because they thought she was dying. The elder sat quietly in a chair, but he was in deep and earnest prayer, and the neighbors went home. Then the elder administered to our dear little girl, who knew nothing; but as soon as she was administered to, she pointed to a cup on the table, for a drink, and I gave her the cup with some milk and she drank and sat up and ate. I feel I should like to inform you about all the blessings which I received. I think that I can remember them all now, but my letter will be too long.

Dear saints, we cannot receive blessings without we try our very best to keep the commandments of God, and we must desire and ask God in spirit and in truth for blessings, and we must respect the officers our heavenly Father has called to teach and up-build the saints. My husband is in the church and two of my children, and one ready to be baptized. We have six children.

Your sister in bonds,

MARGARET THOMAS.

"BLEST."

Blest be the tongue that speaks no ill,
Whose words are always true,
That keeps "the law of kindness" still,
Whatever others do.

Blest be the ears that will not hear
Detraction's envious tale;
'Tis only through the listening ear
That falsehood can prevail.

Blest be the heart that knows no guile,
That feels no wish unkind,
Forgetting provocation, while
Good deeds are kept in mind.

Blest be the hands that toil to aid
The great world's ceaseless need—
The hands that never are afraid
To do a kindly deed.

Blest be the thoughtful brain that schemes
A beautiful ideal;
Mankind grows great through noble dreams,
And time will make them real.

Do good in thought. Some future day
"Twill ripen into speech;"
And words are seeds that grow to deeds,
None know how far they reach.

Like thistle-down upon the breeze,
Swift scattered here and there,
So words will travel far, and these
A fruitful harvest bear.

When goodness dwells in heart and mind,
Both words and deeds will be Like cords that closer draw mankind
In peace and charity.—Marion Bernstein.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

COLLEGE, Kans., Sept. 26.

Dear Sisters of the Prayer Union:—Please pray for a young man of twenty-five, who has been a victim of the morphine and cocaine habit since he was twelve years of age. He desires to quit, but is powerless to do so. He would like to be administered to, but hardly knows when or how to present himself to the elders, fearing he has not sufficient faith. His mother is a member of the church; his grandfather was an elder in the church during the time of Joseph the Seer. His mother and other friends desire to bring him to the elders for healing, and ask your prayers that God's blessing may attend the administration. Please give him your earnest prayers; the case is a sad one.

SISTER IDA STEWART.

Sr. Hester Sykes, of San Jose, requests the prayers of the Prayer Union for Sarah Forbs of Vancouver, that she may be healed from a lame hip, being in need of special blessing.

Sr. Mary Etta Gregory, Grand Rapids, Michigan, requests the prayers of the Prayer Union that she may be restored to health.

Mrs. Martha Curtis, of Imlay City, Michigan, niece of Sr. Gregory, requests the prayers of the Union for herself and mother, both of whom are sorely afflicted, that they may be restored to health. They have faith in the prayers of God's people.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

OUR General Librarian, Sr. (Miss) Mamie A. Allen, Lamoni, Iowa, would like to hear from every one of the district librarians that have been appointed or elected. She wishes to be of some service to you, and this she cannot do unless you report who you are and where you live. And we suggest that you write her at once, and give her a report of what has been done in your district in the library line, and what the general outlook is. She will gladly assist you in any way to build up an interest in the library work in your district. Please report at once.

[THE following selections are from the Sunday School Advocate, the Sunday school newspaper of the St. Louis district. The paper is edited by our Bro. J. J. Billinsky of St. Louis, superintendent of the district. He very kindly furnishes us with copies of each issue of the paper as it comes out. Many thanks, Bro. Billinsky. We appreciate the kindness and can make good use of the material.—ED.]

"Whom the gods love die young!" Ah, yes! The words have deeper meaning than we guess.

Whom the gods love! the brave, the pure,
The chivalrous, the patient to endure—

These the gods love; to these impart
The magic words of great Nature's heart;
Such grow not old, can never be
But young, come death however tardily.

WHEN SYMPATHY IS NEEDED.

Sympathy is often better than comfort. Tears call for tears. "Jesus wept" by the grave of Lazarus, though in a moment he was to turn weeping into singing. Let us not tell a bumped child to be more careful, and say, "You will know better another time;" but give the child our kisses and sympathy, and postpone the calculation about moral values. Let us not say to a heart in new sorrow, "He doeth all things well;" but let suffering know the answering pain of our heart. The best sympathy is often voiceless,—the pressure of the hand, the tear brimming look that says, "I cannot speak, but I have heard." Tears before truth for sorrow, otherwise truth may be wasted on unprofitable soil.

NO LACK OF TIME.

While the following may be somewhat exaggerated, we believe it is worthy of consideration: No man delays reading or writing what he really wants to read or write just now, because he lacks time. He may lack sufficient interest in the subject to take hold of it at once and do it just now, with his occupations as they are. But let him not deceive himself with the thought that his trouble is a lack of time. If he wants to do a thing, he can do it, and he will do it, and the more he has to do besides this, the easier he can find extra time to do this. There may be a dozen good reasons why he delays doing this, but the lack of time is not one of the dozen.

The poisonous nature of tobacco is well shown by the dispatch sent during the severe weather of last February: "Paris, Ky., Feb. 13.—Near Cythiana, yesterday, twenty of Newton Reese's fine cattle took refuge from the storm in his tobacco barn. They ate the tobacco and died to-day from the effects."

THE PUPIL.

The child placed before us in the Sunday school class is a most complicated being. The strongest element in its nature is its animal activity, and its physical growth and ills will have much to do in molding its disposition for after life. There is, it is true, a budding intelligence, but the vitality is so marked as to make attention difficult to retain. But the intelligence is there, nevertheless, and if the teacher is to benefit the child, attention must be both secured and retained. Conscience is also just springing into being, and here again the teacher may play an important part in helping to form lofty and spiritual ideals. The teachers in secular schools have already realized the value of understanding the child life, how much more then should the Sunday school teacher, who is hoping to impart the greater lessons of eternal life?

OUR MISSION TO CHILDREN.

Our mission to children being a very important one we can but briefly touch upon one or two points.

The first step in order to fulfill our mission to the children is to love them, and by so doing we will cause them to love us, and we will draw them to us as Christ by his love drew all men unto him. We will then be better enabled to teach them the love of Christ and his gospel.

Another point in our mission is to live in such a way that our lives might be worthy of imitation. The child invariably follows in the footsteps of those with whom it associates.

Children are tender plants, and they should be reared and trained as such. And it is our duty to study their lives and natures that we might mold noble characters for the future man and woman.—L. M. Patterson.

If you cannot do the best, do the best you can. But do not understand this to mean that you should be content with things as they are, and make no effort to improve them. Our noblest efforts are developed when things are not exactly right, and we try to make them so.

TEACHERS' MEETINGS.

We are sorry the teachers' meetings are so sadly neglected in this district. The most eminent Sunday school workers tell us that no perfect Sunday school can exist without a teachers' meeting, to which we say, Amen. Of course we do not claim that our schools are perfect, but that does not license us to neglect an opportunity to improve them. We should always strive to make them as nearly perfect as possible; and one very important step towards attaining that end is in having a regular weekly teachers' meeting, where the lessons can be gone over together, after they have been studied, so that all may get the same ideas as nearly as possible, and teach the same thing throughout the school.

And also that the teachers may get together and study methods of teaching. We think the meetings will be more interesting if the time is divided between the lesson and the way to teach it. It is necessary to know how to teach the lesson as well as to know the lesson. Teaching is more than telling or hearing one recite, we must cause them to know, and we must learn how to cause people of different minds and dispositions to know the thing we wish them to know.

If, for any reason, you cannot have a regular weekly meeting, then have one as often as you can, at least once a month. But, by all means, have a regular teachers' meeting.

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Annual conference met in South Manchester, at six p. m., August 5; Elder F. G. Pitt in the chair, W. R. Armstrong and S. F. Mather secretaries. S. Clarke and J. R. Dewsnup appointed deacons, J. Foden chorister. The mission president's report was now read as follows: "To the members of the European Mission in conference assembled, Greeting: In submitting this, my report, it would be very pleasant to be able to state that the work throughout this entire mission is in very flourishing condition. While this would be hardly correct, and judging from conditions existing in some localities, would seem to be far from the truth, yet, on the whole, I believe we can truthfully say the work has made some progress in the last twelve months. In some places difficulties of long standing have been removed, and the work placed upon a better basis. I know no serious trouble now to interfere with our progress. In some places, however, principally in Wales, with the exception of Cardiff, our progress has been slow. Some branches have failed entirely. The causes have been wrongdoing on the part of some and the emigration of others to America. Ogmores branch has become disorganized; also the branch at Morrington. Llanelly branch is almost in a disorganized condition. Penygraig was disorganized by order of their district conference, but was afterwards reorganized, and seems to be progressing since. In compliance with requests from the Eastern and Western districts to so define the boundary lines dividing the two districts as to include the Aberaman branch and the Penygraig branch in the Western district. This was done, and the said branches are now a part of the Western Wales district. It was thought that this would produce better harmony, as it would separate the Welsh speaking saints from the English. The change seems to give general satisfaction. Cardiff has made, I believe, the most marked progress of any of the branches. In less than a year they have increased from six members to nearly thirty. They have a good meeting room and a flourishing Sunday school. At Lydney too the work is progressing. The saints there though few in number are working with a zeal, erecting a neat chapel in a good neighborhood, which no doubt will benefit the work there. The work in London has also improved during the past year; especially the Sunday school. In nearly all the branches I have visited I find earnest faithful workers, willing to sacrifice for the truth. In some places, however, the work seems to be retarded somewhat through a lack of wisdom and employment of proper methods. I have tried to correct this whenever opportunity offered. The ministry ought to be frank and liberal-hearted in their intercourse with each other, and as ready to accept advice as they are to give it. In their little differences they should converse more with those with whom they differ rather than about them to others. This would prevent much misunderstanding, which is the cause of much trouble. In our efforts to spread the work, better results will obtain if we are careful to give other religious people credit for the good they are doing, and offering them more truth rather than in spending our time in abusing them. Becoming 'wise servants harmless as doves.' A little less boasting about everything being free, and no collections, would, I believe, tend towards better results. All do not need this counsel, and it is only intended to apply where needed. I believe we are fast approaching the time, if indeed that time is not already upon us, when there is needed a number of active missionaries to open up the work in new places, as well as to assist the weak branches who are not strong enough to carry on the work successfully alone. If we have men in this country prepared to enter upon this work, it seems to me their names should be placed before this conference for indorsement, so that they may be placed in the hands of the proper authorities of the church for their consideration when missionaries are appointed to this country. I would suggest that you consider this matter at this conference. During the last twelve months I have preached in London, Tunbridge Wells, Cardiff, Calcanian, Porth, Penygraig, Llanelly, Dinas, Lydney, Leicester, Leeds, Claycross, and Manchester. In all 194 sermons. I have baptized 11, confirmed over 20, blessed a number of children, administered to a large number of sick, and ordained several to the ministry. I have organized one branch and one Sunday school, and solemnized one marriage. I have written several articles relative to our work and succeeded in getting them printed in the public press. I have been greatly blessed in my ministry and feel very grateful for the kind treatment I have received. May God bless you in this conference and grant us all wisdom and strength to make our work a success."

Elder Wm. Newton's report was next read. It stated that our brother was appointed to labor in the south of England in 1898. He had preached 144 times, led 121 meetings, administered to the sick 33 times, performed 1 marriage, blessed 8 children, baptized 8, confirmed 7. He had preached in the open air, in Penzance, Nellau, Cornwall, Plymouth, and London. He had also preached at Poltermore, Cardiff, Lydney, Devonport, Penzance, and Heavitree near Exeter.

Elder J. D. Jenkins, missionary for Western Wales, also reported.

The district presidents' reports were presented.

1. Birmingham, by C. H. Caton, who said that reports from the branches comprising the district were of an encouraging nature, and showed the branches to be in fairly good condition spiritually and otherwise. So far as we know there is no disturbing element in the ministerial ranks.

2. Manchester, by Elder J. Dewsnup, Sen., who said, In making my ministerial report to the annual conference of the mission, I desire to place before you a plain and unvarnished statement of the spiritual as well as the statistical condition of the Manchester district. Since my report a year ago, some slight changes have occurred in several of the branches comprising the district and another branch has been organized now known as the East Manchester branch. . . . It is also intended to organize branches at Hunslett Carr and Burley, both of which places are now a part of the Leeds branch. This will of course be in harmony with and subject to the ruling of our next district conference. The ministerial staff of the district are, with some few exceptions, faithfully trying to fulfill the obligations imposed upon them by their ordination. Outdoor services are being held in several of the branches, under the auspices of the branch officers, and similar services are being held in other places, under the supervision of the officers of the district. The outlook for ingathering seems encouraging. A number having been baptized in the several branches of the district during the past conference year. So far as the spirituality of the branches is concerned, there is, I am sorry to say, much left to be desired. The spirit of jealousy and contention is very marked amongst the saints, in which I regret to say that church officials are not altogether blameless; internecine warfare has very largely prevented that progress being made that ought to have been made had all been working together to one end instead of opposing one another. I have noticed numbers of the ministry who are quite as fervently engaged in meddling with the business of others as they are in attending to their own, and this to my mind has in the past been a fruitful source from which has sprung forth a crop of troubles that have charged the patience and ingenuity of these called to preside. I have hopes though that in the future this disposition to mischief will be kept largely under control by the efforts of the officials themselves. In regard to local labor, I believe that we have within ourselves all that we require under present conditions, and have confidence that with our Father's help the best interests of his work will be fully conserved, thus leaving the energies and abilities of the general church missionaries to be developed outside of the limits of organized branches and districts of the church, as provided for by the law.

3. Sheffield, by Elder John Austin, who said: The work of the Sheffield district is still engaging our attention, and while we find some things of a discouraging nature, yet we find many things to encourage. Some of the members are spiritually alive to their duties; and those of the ministry, especially in Claycross, are laboring faithfully in their respective spheres and offices, and in a manner that is very commendable. Sheffield is going along very slowly, but we are hoping for improvement ere long.

4. Eastern Wales reported by Thomas Griffiths, as follows: The spiritual condition of the district is fair. The officers of each branch have been diligently laboring to present the gospel to the people. This field is large and the laborers are few. This glorious work appears to move slowly. The smile of God has been upon us, and our work has not been in vain, for some have turned from error to serve the living God. Men free to labor are wanted.

5. Western Wales reported by J. D. Jenkins, as follows: This district contains five branches: Aberaman, Penygraig, Llansamlet, Llanelly, and Pontyeats. The majority of the district are in good spiritual standing.

The London branch was reported by Bro. R. Clift, who said it was spiritually better than at last report. Difficulties of long standing had been cleared away, and the saints were taking hold of the deeper teachings of the church. This is owing to the instruction given by our American brethren.

A communication from London branch, recommending Bro. J. Worth to the office of elder was read, and a protest respecting the same. It was resolved that the matter be referred back to London branch, and that it be advised to confer with the missionary in charge respecting the matter.

The names of two delegates were now read: Elder W. Newton for London, and Elder J. Taylor for Salford. These were ruled out of order, as our conference was not a delegate one, and the secretary was instructed to write the branches concerned.

Elder Pitt's report was referred to by one of the brethren, who inquired of the president if he had performed a marriage ceremony. He replied that he had. It was then stated that the law in this country requires every minister who performs a marriage ceremony to have produced, prior to the ceremony, the registrar's certificate. The president was then asked if he had complied with the law. He replied that he had, according to his best knowledge and belief. He was then asked: "Did you see the registrar's certificate?" To which the president replied: "I decline to answer that question." It was then moved and carried that this answer be recorded in the minutes. The president stated in explanation that, after having answered the question, he did not think it becoming to be catechised in this manner.

A letter from London branch, protesting against certain action of the previous conference (1898), relating to the appointment of missionaries to this country was read and ordered to lie on the table.

Resolved, that the Bishop's agent's report be read. It was read by the secretary, and by request was again read in detail. Elders C. H. Caton, A. Bishop, and J. Dewsnup, Sen., were chosen an auditing committee to examine the Bishop's agent's report.

Resolved, that the question of the licenses of the Broadclyst brethren, which had been held for several years without cause, be referred to the missionary in charge.

Resolved, that the report from the president of the Broadclyst branch be referred to a committee, consisting of Elders Meredith, H. Greenwood, and Thomas Taylor (Bradford).

A report of Elder Joseph Tankard was read, and one presented by Priest A. Jennings was not read; both brethren belong to the London branch. It was then resolved that Bro. Jennings' report be not spread upon the minutes, inasmuch as he is a priest, and not asked to report to this conference.

Monday, business was resumed. A brother gave notice of question, with respect to Manchester district report. A motion relating to the right of all church members having voice and vote in district conferences, if they be of good standing, was now considered. It was introduced by Bro. John Austin of Sheffield. Section 8, page 10 of Rules or Order and Debate was now read, also, a resolution from General Conference minutes of 1891, pages 45 and 61; also page 162, section 180, Rules of Order and Debate.

Bro. Austin's motion was amended as follows: I move that in the opinion of this conference, all members may have the privilege of voice and vote in district conferences. It was afterwards resolved that the matter lie on the table.

Resolved that the reports be considered, beginning with the mission president's report.

Resolved that no speaker occupy more than ten minutes.

The meeting here adjourned for one hour. Business was resumed. The following on the Broadcyst report was presented and adopted: We have examined and duly considered the letter placed in our hands for consideration, and report. We, your brethren and committee, are of opinion that the conference cannot take any action in the matter referred to in said letter received from Broadcyst, but are of opinion that the things referred to in said letter need immediate attention and investigation, and would advise that the proper authorities attend to these matters as soon as possible; and with reference to the license of Bro. Ireland, we would advise that it be not renewed until matters referred to and affecting the said brother be investigated and settled.

The following motion was presented: Moved that in the opinion of this conference the time is not opportune for missionary labor in this country. This was rejected, when the following resolution was presented and carried: Resolved, that the time is now opportune for the general church authorities to devise means for supplying missionary laborers from amongst the ministry of this country, as per resolution of last conference.

The report of committee on Bishop's agent's report was presented, and unanimously adopted: We have compared the sheet with the books handed in by Bro. Taylor, Bishop's agent, and found them correct.

The following resolution was presented: Be it resolved, that we recommend the release of J. D. Jenkins, missionary for Wales. The matter was referred to a committee, consisting of H. Greenwood, G. Baty, and J. Taylor.

It was moved that we do not indorse the following part of the Manchester district report, as it was thought to reflect on the missionary in charge: "In regard to local labor, I believe that we have within ourselves all that we require under present conditions, and have confidence that with our Father's help, the best interests of his work will be fully considered, thus leaving the energies and abilities of the general church missionaries to be developed outside of the limits of organized branches and districts of the church, as provided for by the law." The conference held that it was not reflective, and therefore rejected the motion.

The following protest from London branch was then read: "Whereas, at the last European conference, held in Birmingham, 1898, a resolution was carried appreciative of the integrity and devoted labor of Apostle H. C. Smith, but requesting the appointment of local and English missionaries in future in lieu of a continuation of the policy of dispatching such missionaries from abroad to these islands; therefore, the London branch of the church, while completely in harmony with the first portion of the aforesaid resolution relative to the uprightness of character and integrity of purpose of Elder H. C. Smith of the Apostles' Quorum, desire respectfully to present the following amendment to the latter clause, believing as your petitioners do, that any such expression of opinion as would tend in any degree to fetter the action of the authorities of the church is to be deprecated: Whereas, urgent necessity may at any time arise, or direction may at conference be received by the Prophet at the head of the church, or imparted to the Quorum of the Apostles, enjoining or commanding the appointment of one, two, or more missionaries from America to this European mission, such missionaries being so dispatched shall receive hearty welcome and cordial recognition in this mission; and this country bearing in mind the faithful admonitions, the self-sacrificing zeal, and the devoted labors of those missionaries, who have hitherto labored, and who are still laboring in these islands; and above all, the manifest approval of Heaven upon their labors." A request to take this protest off the table was denied.

The following resolution was then presented with respect to a British Bishopric and Elders' Quorum: Whereas, in the report of the First Presidency to the General Conference of the church, held at Kirtland, Ohio, April, 1891, re the request of the (then) English mission for the ordination of a bishop and high priests, they recognized the apparent necessity and justice of the request; and again at the General Conference of the following year, the matter being before the body for consideration, it was deferred until the session of 1893, pending a report from members of the Quorum of the Twelve, who might be appointed to missions to England, and which, so far as we have knowledge, was not then and has not since been presented to any conference; be it hereby resolved, that this conference again renew the request for the appointment and ordination of a Bishop for Great Britain, from amongst our number, who shall have authority to receive and disburse according to the law of the church all moneys paid over to him for church purposes; and be it also further resolved, that we respectfully request the general authorities of the church in America to authorize the organization of a quorum of elders in this country, with all the necessary privileges and responsibilities accruing to the same.

The secretary here stated that he had forwarded letters of condolence, as requested by the conference of 1893, to Sisters Hoole and Gell, the wife and mother, respectively, of the late Elder H. Hoole; also an illuminated address to Apostle James Caffall, late missionary in charge. The action of the secretary was approved by the conference.

Seven p. m. The clause concerning a Bishopric was now taken up and approved; also that concerning the organization of an elders' quorum.

The following motion was presented: Resolved, that in the opinion of this conference, it is desirable that elders and priests from America refrain from taking part in the marriage rites of any brothers and sisters in the British Isles. This resolution was then amended, put, and accepted, as follows: Resolved, that in the opinion of this conference, it is desirable that elders and priests from foreign lands refrain from taking part in the marriage rites of any brethren and sisters in the British Isles, without first consulting the local authorities.

The committee's report in the case of Bro. J. D. Jenkins was here presented and adopted: We, your committee, after hearing the evidence for and against the brother in this case, suggest that this conference recommend his release, as he is unsuitable for the work as a missionary.

The conference committee here reported that our finances were very satisfactory. They were ready to discharge all dues, to pay the visiting elders' half fares; a little would be given to the missionaries, leaving a small amount towards the expenses of the conference of 1900.

Resolved, that the location of the next conference be left in the hands of the mission authorities.

It was resolved, under suspension of rules, that the rules governing the mission be revised. The following committee was appointed for the purpose: C. H. Caton, E. R. Dewsnup, and W. R. Armstrong.

Resolved, that a committee consisting of A. Bishop, H. Greenwood, C. H. Caton, J. Austin, and R. Clift, be appointed to formulate a scheme for missionary labor in this country, for presentation to General Conference of 1900, and that they are hereby authorized to forward the same to the proper authorities of the church in America; and be it further provided, that the above scheme be placed before the various districts, and branches not in districts, for their approval or disapproval, and that the same be signified on the aforesaid scheme.

Resolutions sustaining the following were put, and unanimously supported: 1. The church authorities, the secretaries, and the treasurer. 2. The President of the mission, and associate ministers, excepting Bro. J. D. Jenkins, presidents of districts and branches, and Bishop's agents.

A resolution recording the appreciation of the services of the President of the mission and Elder Newton in their work amongst us was unanimously supported. Conference adjourned.

Sunday prayer meeting held in South Manchester room in charge of Elder J. Meredith. At 10:30 a. m. preaching by Elders W. Newton and J. W. Rushton. Testimony meeting in charge of Elders W. Eccleston and T. Taylor. At 6:30 p. m. the speaker was Elder Pitt.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference at Indian River, September 9; Joseph Luff chosen to preside, A. S. Kelley secretary. Olive and Indian River branches reported. Ministry reporting: Elders T. C. Kelley, E. C. Foss, and U. M. Kelley; Priests J. N. Ames and L. A. Woodward. Bishop's agent's report read and referred to auditing committee. Agent of tract fund reported, and his report referred to committee. Reports examined and approved. The committee of the tent and belongings report having given the seats to the church at Beals Island. Report approved. Bro. T. C. Kelley's report read as follows: Indian River, September 7, 1899. To the Conference of Eastern Maine District, assembling at Indian River, September 9, 1899.

Dear Brethren and Sisters: At your last session a resolution was passed requesting me to write a paper, protesting against the seating of Elder B. H. Roberts, congressman elect from Utah, in the national legislature, and to present said document to your representative in congress.

After learning of the action of your body appointing me to write such a document, and believing the matter would have greater weight if presented by the body than it would have if presented by any one individual, I have prepared the following resolutions for your approval, before sending to your representative.

Whereas, Elder B. H. Roberts, a member, and one of the leading representatives of the church in Utah, commonly called "The Mormon Church," has been elected as a member of the National House of Representatives by the people of the State of Utah; and

Whereas, the said B. H. Roberts is a polygamist in theory and practice, having more than one wife, with whom he sustains the domestic relations of the marriage covenant, as appears from undisputed published reports; and

Whereas, the holding of such polygamous relations makes the said B. H. Roberts a violator of the law of the land, and also of the law of God, and also of the code of good morals among men; and

Whereas, the Book of Mormon, in which every true Latter Day Saint believes, calls the having of many wives and concubines an abomination in the sight of God, and expressly commands, "There shall not any man among you have, save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none."—Book of Mormon, page 116; and

Whereas, the revelations of God to Joseph Smith, as contained in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, clearly teach monogamy as the God-appointed order of marriage, expressly declaring as it does (page 161), "It is lawful that he [man] should have one wife;" and

Whereas, these two books agree with the Bible in all matters of doctrine and ethics; and

Whereas, the laws of the United States, and of the several states, prohibit polygamy within their jurisdiction, and the law thus prohibiting the practice of polygamy has been pronounced by the United States Supreme Court to be constitutional; and

Whereas, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of which Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph the martyr, is president, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, and of which this conference of the Eastern Maine district forms a part, and is representative, is UNALTERABLY opposed to the doctrine and practice of polygamy, and all its kindred evils; and

Whereas, said Reorganized Church believes it to be the duty of all men, and especially of all Christian people, to uphold and obey all constitutional laws of the land;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Eastern Maine district conference, assembled at Indian River, September 9, 1899, that law-breakers, such as Elder B. H. Roberts, representative elect from Utah, should not be law-makers for those who wish to live chaste, honorable, and virtuous lives; and we hereby enter solemn protest against the holding of a seat, by the said B. H. Roberts, in the halls of congress.

And be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. C. A. Boutelle of the Fourth Congressional District of Maine, with a request that it be brought to the notice of the House of Representatives, or of such committee as may have charge of such matters.

Respectfully submitted,

T. C. KELLEY.

Resolved that the report of Elder T. C. Kelley, on the matter of the seating of B. H. Roberts, be by us adopted, and that Bro. Kelley be authorized to carry into effect the suggestion appended thereto, as to furnishing the congressman of this congressional district with a copy thereof.

U. M. Kelley was sustained as district president, A. S. Kelley secretary. Preaching by Elders Joseph Luff and T. C. Kelley. Adjourned to meet at call of T. C. Kelley, as to time and place.

WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

Second proposition. Braden took the position that the "miraculous state of the church" was her lowest state; that the church in the days of Christ and his apostles—down to the time of Timothy and Titus was only a "provisional church;" that the "perfect church" was not reached till Paul had commanded Titus to go and "set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee." (Tit. 1:5.) Also Timothy was commanded: "And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." (2 Tim. 2:2.) In the "provisional" church were apostles who were the "constitution makers." After the "constitution—the New Testament—was completed, then there was no need of apostles, or consti-tion makers. It took miraculous power to bring into existence the first man; after that they were brought into the world by natural process. It took a miraculous working power to produce the first church, and after that they were produced by a natural process. The apostles were constitution makers, and they could have no successors.

In answer I said: God was the lawgiver—the constitution maker, and the apostles were only custodians, it (the law) being committed to them from God to preach to the world. I quoted Matt. 10:1-8, "Go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." And Mark 15:15, 18: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," etc. Also Eph. 4:11-13: "And he gave some apostles . . . for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry," etc. Not to make constitution. If apostles were "set in the church" to make constitution, they had made a wonderful failure, as but three out of the first twelve ever wrote a word of what we have in the New Testament. I asked Braden if he could tell me what the other nine were doing, since they failed to "make any constitution." And again; he had dropped into a hole—probably like the one he tried to palm off on Moroni; as he said these "constitution makers"—apostles—could have "no successors." Hence, as Luke was not an apostle at all and he wrote the Acts, and Paul could not be a "successor," that would take about three fifths of the New Testament from Braden as being unconstitutional; and that might account for Braden's claim of so much of it being done away. I also showed that after Braden had his "perfect" church set up with Titus and Timothy, John gave some very important "constitution" in the Book of Revelation and his three epistles years afterwards. Hence his "perfect" church was a church of continued revelation, and was he prepared to say that this church that is "commonly called Campbellites," as is found in his proposition, has "constitution makers" in it? Your question makes you affirm your church harmonizing with the church of Christ, set up by divine authority, eighteen hundred years ago. Here Braden dropped into his hole again, and I did not fail to tell him of it too. I put his Titus and Timothy church to test and what did I find? "Paul, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians." "Nor of men sought we [Paul, Silvanus, and Timotheus] glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have been burdensome, as the apostles of Christ." (1 Thess. 2:6.) Here I find Timothy called an apostle, and he called there by revelation, and ordained by the imposition of hands, as the following will show: "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery." (1 Tim. 4:14.) Therefore the very church that my opponent calls a "model—perfect—church," is headed by an apostle; yes, a "living apostle too." Now if this is the "model," what about this church Braden is defending, that has neither apostle, prophet, angel, Holy Ghost, (that is a Holy Ghost that has any power with it,) neither an officer in it called of God? Braden was pressed hard along this line, and it was not hard to see that he did not feel at home with his question. But Braden contended he had elders and deacons and a few evangelists in his church; this made up his organization. I accused him of choosing all of his officers by "vote;" set in by vote. He neither affirmed nor denied this, though I often pressed him on it. I read from the Christian Evangelist for May 28, 1896, in answer to "What is the scriptural way of appointing elders and deacons of a congregation of Disciples?" "Answer. They should be selected by the church at a special meeting called for that purpose, in any way that will secure a fair expression of the choice of members. It is usual to appoint a committee of discreet brethren a week or two before the election to present names for the different officers. This committee consults the wisest and best members and makes its report to the special meeting, to be adopted, modified, or rejected." I compared this with the model found in the church eighteen hundred years ago, where Christ gave the law to his church in regard to the calling of the ministry: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." This was a law to the church that was honored when filling an apostle's place, as in the case of choosing Matthias: "And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen." (Acts 1:24.) Later along in the church, as in the case of Paul and Barnabas: "As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." (Acts 13:2.) Still later in the case of elders: "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church." "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers," etc. (Acts 20:17, 28.) Still later and in Braden's perfected church: "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy," etc. (1 Tim. 4:14.) And as a general law to the church for all time to come: "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?" (Rom. 10:12-15.) There is no power on earth that can abrogate this law; and if Christ has repealed it I ask for chapter and verse where the repeal is recorded. Braden never attempted to show it.

I have heard, or read in some of Braden's books, about some revelation being given to Braden's church, at the time when they were in the act of organizing; this revelation was in regard to how they should proceed in some of their ministerial work. I hope Mr. Braden will bring this out; we want to know something about it. At this Braden's moderator shook his head and laughed; and I said to him: Mr. Moderator, I certainly have heard or read something about such a revelation being received by your people; but we will trust to Mr. Braden to bring it out. When Mr. Braden got the floor he referred to it and said: "It is a Mormon lie! We have never had any such a revelation." He almost went into ecstasies over it. I referred to it again in a kind of a doubtful way, but thought Mr. Braden would probably call it to remembrance by a little thought, as there must be something in it. It was again branded as a falsehood. I then dropped the matter till the next day—the last day. In the forenoon session I referred to it again. This was promptly met by Braden in rather hard words. In my next speech I pressed the matter; and since the people had become worked up over the affair, the thing must be settled in some way or other. I am certain that I have read, or heard the Christian people speak something about a revelation to them, that gave direction in determining some needed information in regard to some of their work, when first organizing—they ran against a snag of some kind that brought their church to a standstill, till this revelation was given. Braden put his wits to work; I saw he was at sea, uneasy, fearing one of "White's tricks;" but he was brave, and branded it "a Mormon lie!" Next to my last speech was my only chance to present new matter and when I arose I had my moderator nail to the tree behind me in large letters the word, "IF." This was like a thunder clap from the sky to Braden; his cheeks twitched and his moderator got uneasy. Every eye was turned to see the "IF." "What does that mean?" was the thought that ran along the line. Braden was now able to see the point for the first time. Here stood that "revelation"—the very one—and only one that his church stood on. Was this a "Mormon lie?" or was it a Campbellite revelation? which? From whom—where, and when? I read from Rev. Barton W. Stone, who was Alexander Campbell's right-hand man in getting up the Christian Church—the one Braden was affirming to be in harmony with the church of eighteen hundred years ago. He says: "Some time after the new organization had been inaugurated, he became dissatisfied with his infant sprinkling; the brethren, elders, and teachers came together on the subject, for we had agreed previously with each other to act in concert and not to adventure anything new without advice from one another." (Here you see they are looking for something "new"—a revelation upon something that is bothering them badly.) "At this meeting we took up the matter in a brotherly spirit, and concluded that every brother and sister should act freely and according to their conviction of right, and that we should cultivate the long-neglected grace of forbearance towards each other; those who were immersed should not despise those who were sprinkled, and vice versa. Now the question arose, who will baptize us?" (James 1: 5 gives instruction how to determine such things; they should have sought God for revelation.) "The Baptist would not, unless we would unite with them, and there were no elders among us who had been immersed. It was finally concluded among us, that 'if' we had authority to preach we had authority to baptize. The work then commenced. The preachers baptized one another, and crowds came and were also baptized." So the work commenced from the time of receiving this "new revelation"—"if we had authority to preach, we had authority to baptize;"—yes, the most doubtful little word in our language, is the foundation stone of Braden's church. Neither God, angel, Holy Spirit, nor Bible being consulted as to how to organize or how and who should do the preaching and baptizing! But, "If we had authority to preach we had authority to baptize!"—Thus the work commenced! As this point was reached, I almost pitied Braden's moderator and felt a coming sorrow for Braden. Braden tried to repudiate Stone as having no part nor lot with "Campbell's restoration." But he could not dispose of that revelation that I had been calling for, in that way; Stone was found to be one of the "restorers" in Campbell's "movement." I assure you Braden will never be caught in that trap again—just in that way. But that revelation will stay with the people that heard the argument till the day of judgment. The question will be asked: "From whence is your authority?"

It took lots of maneuvering on my part to make the point; but it was made, and made to stay. I was making an argument in regard to the Holy Spirit being the medium through which Christ was revealed to man; and that it was eternal life to know him, etc.; and Braden looked up into my face and said: "I haven't seen Christ, yet, like you have." I retorted instantaneously: No, sir! and you never will unless you repent; but you will see that other fellow. Braden dropped his head, and the people laughed. I felt that this was the best gospel sermon that Braden had heard for a decade at least; and he felt it too. Braden claimed there were only two times when "baptism in the Holy Spirit" took place. 1, on Pentecost day; 2, at the house of Cornelius. These two times the Holy Spirit was received in a "miraculous way;" at all other times in an "ordinary way." There is considerable hair splitting about this, and of little importance too.

A play on the language used at these two times was indulged in by Braden. I met this by showing there was no peculiar system used by the writers of the New Testament, in compounding of words while expressing, "The receiving of the Holy Spirit." For instance: Terms applied to receiving the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost: "will pour out my Spirit" (Joel 2: 28); "baptized with the Holy Ghost" (Acts 1: 5); "Holy Ghost is come upon you" (1: 8); "All filled with the Holy Ghost" (2: 4); "Holy Ghost fell on all" (10: 44); "poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost" (10: 45); "received the Holy Ghost" (10: 47); "Holy Ghost fell on them as on us at the beginning" (11: 15); "baptized with the Holy Ghost" (11: 16); "gave them the like gift as he did unto us" (11: 17).

I showed that Holy Ghost baptism was the same to all of God's creatures—even from Christ down to the least in his church: 1. With Christ (Matt. 3: 16; Mark 1: 10; John 1: 32, 33). 2. At Pentecost (Acts 2: 4): "All filled with Holy Ghost." 3. Place was shaken and all filled with Holy Ghost (Acts 4: 31). 4. At Samaria (Acts 8: 16, 17). 5. With Ananias and Paul (Acts 9: 17, 31). 6. With Peter and Cornelius (Acts 10: 44-47; 11: 15-17). 7. With Paul and the disciples of Ephesus' brethren (Acts 19: 1-6). 8. With Paul and the Ephesian brethren (Eph. 1: 13, 14; 2 Cor. 1: 21, 22). 9. "All baptized into one body," "drink into one spirit" (1 Cor. 12: 13). 10. "To all that are afar off" (Acts 2: 38, 39). 11. "Will pour out upon all flesh" (Acts 2: 17). 12. Disciples filled with the Holy Ghost (Acts 13: 52). 13. All the Ephesian brethren (Eph. 1: 1-3, 13, 14, 17; 5: 18, 19). 14. All the Thesalonians (1 Thess. 1: 5, 6; 5: 19, 20). 15. Elizabeth filled with the Holy Ghost (Luke 1: 41, 42). 16. Zacharias filled with the Holy Ghost (Luke 1: 67).

I showed that the Holy Ghost produced "miraculous power," whether received direct from God or through the imposition of hands. Balaam's ass when receiving the Spirit direct, spoke as a man (Num. 22: 22-30). The Gentile converts; and they "spake in tongues" (Acts 10: 44, 45; 11: 15). On the day of Pentecost; "speak with other tongues" (Acts 2: 4). Paul, under the hands of Ananias who was not an apostle (Acts 9: 17); yet Paul spake "with tongues more than ye all" (1 Cor. 14: 18). Under the hands of an apostle, and "they spake with tongues and prophesied" (Acts 19: 1-6). And that God had said the "gift of the Holy Ghost" was to "all" that were "afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call" (Acts 2: 39). And the "Spirit is given to every man to profit withal" (1 Cor. 12: 7).

I poured this array of evidence in on Braden so rapidly that he could hardly attempt an answer; yet, he did try to define, "even as many as the Lord our God shall call." He read Acts 8: 12-17, and tried to confine "the called" to those whom apostles laid hands on. He simply failed to make a point along that line, and none could possibly be so blind as not to see it. I accused him of being like a drowning man clinging to a straw for refuge; it was even worse than that, as he did not even have the "straw" of an argument.

What desperate straits these fellows get into, when opposing God's truth. To honest men they show themselves up in bad light. Braden would make whole speeches and never once refer to his church which he was affirming in harmony with the church of eighteen hundred years ago. Not one time did he read the question; but, you warrant, I kept it before the people. I asked him for his apostles and prophets in his church like the church of eighteen hundred years ago. I wanted their names and residences. He said they had the same apostles in his church that were in the church of eighteen hundred years ago. I pressed him hard upon his "dead apostles," and at last he said: "We have no apostles in our church, and don't make such blasphemous claims." I was glad to tell him that I could give him credit of telling one truth at least, in regard to his church. I was frank to admit that they had "no apostles in it," and as he had admitted the church of eighteen hundred years ago had, he had surrendered the field to me, and the debate could end here, as I had no longer an opponent.

In Braden claiming the Titus and Timothy church was the "perfect" church, and that the church under the Apostles and Christ before that time was only a "provisional" church, very imperfect; and his church, the Campbellite church, was in harmony with the Titus and Timothy church of eighteen hundred years ago, therefore, was far ahead of any church that was in existence before Titus and Timothy, it made Campbellism stand out in prominent figures head and shoulders above the church that was in existence at the death of Christ. I paraded Braden's church without living apostles, prophets, no gifts of the Holy Spirit, no angelic administrations, no answer from God, angel, or anywhere else, excepting the revelation of the, "If we had authority to preach, we had authority to baptize," before the people, and contrasted it with the church of which Christ said, "I will build my church," of Matthew 16: 18, the very church that was in existence at the death of Christ, whom Paul wrote of in these glowing words: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." (Acts 20: 28.) I argued that there was a church in existence at the death of Christ and which it "pleased God" to "set" in "it," "first, apostles;" secondarily, prophets," etc. (1 Cor. 12: 28.) These officers and powers to continue, "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." (Eph. 4: 11-13.) And now to have it supplanted by this church Mr. Braden says is far ahead of that one that was in existence eighteen hundred years ago, that had all of these things in it—the one Christ purchased with his own blood, was simply preposterous! It was simply saying to God and Christ that they did not understand their business, and now had to wait to this late hour to be instructed by such men as Braden, Campbell, Stone, and others! What a pity it was that you fellows had not lived in the days of Christ and his apostles, so they could have gotten the benefit of your superior wisdom upon church building. You could have told them how you could have run the whole machinery upon the lonely word, "IF," without bothering them for revelations, living apostles and prophets, and the "miraculous" influences of the Holy Spirit.

I told Braden, I was not surprised at him publishing in his church papers, that no man could meet the Latter Day Saints upon church propositions; since he had so ignominiously failed in every attempt he had made with our brethren. I reminded Braden that the hue and cry of his church has been; "Back to Jerusalem;" but I had run him out of the Jerusalem church to Antioch; and from Antioch to Timothy and Titus; then from Timothy and Titus into the ditch. Where next?

Braden continues to make such unbecoming threats against our people, and continues to "slip in," "dodge in," here and there to lecture upon his favorite text: 1. "What is Mormonism?" 2. "Origin of Mormonism and its pretended revelations," etc., etc., till he has doled out twelve propositions on Mormonism, which is carefully listed in his circulars in a way that does our church damage.

He has a second circular listed under fifty-one heads, attempting to dodge a true issue between our church and the so-called Christian Church. This circular is full of poison in its cowardly attempt to prejudice the people against our faith. For our people to cry out, "Braden is not worthy of our notice, because of his unbecoming manner of attack," is not in keeping with wise generalship. The enemy is here, and it should be met; it must be met. It will be here in some form till Christ comes. Shall we lay our armor down because our enemy doesn't fight to "please us?" Never! NEVER!! NEVER!!! Braden is not to be feared by wise and well informed men, when he can be got at in a public way. I have now met him twice in public oral debate; and I have learned enough about his manner of warfare to believe it to be our duty to meet him in every hamlet, town, and city, where he attempts to oppose our faith. Therefore, in my closing speech, I threw the following challenge upon his table, and gave one to his moderator, and handed a number to a man in the congregation to be distributed to the people:—

A CHALLENGE TO REV. CLARK BRADEN.

The Rev. Clark Braden is hereby challenged to repeat the debate held with me near Orchardville, Illinois, from September 12 to 18, 1899, at Alma, Illinois. I also challenge him to repeat it at every hamlet, town, and city where he may attempt to preach or lecture against the faith taught by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This challenge holds good, the Lord willing, during my natural lifetime.

I. N. WHITE.

September 18, 1899.

PROPOSITIONS AND THEIR ORDER.

1. "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?"

I. N. WHITE affirms,
CLARK BRADEN denies.

2. "Is the Christian Church, (commonly called Campbellites) in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice with the Church of Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago?"

CLARK BRADEN affirms,
I. N. WHITE denies.

The next minute after handing out this challenge the debate closed. Hundreds pressed forward to shake hands with me before I could get from the stand. "May God bless you!" was heard from the many. There must have been a thousand or more people upon the ground at the close of the debate.

I have sought to be fair in writing up a synopsis of the debate, giving the thought on both sides as near as memory and notes would serve. Many points I could not touch as it would have been burdening the Herald with matter that probably many would not care to read. What I have given has been for the benefit of those that were not privileged to attend the debate; and that they might imagine themselves on the very spot. If I have made a single mistake, I hope it will not fasten upon the memory of anyone to the detriment of truth. Have written in haste and with many other burdens of church work on me.

Hoping and praying that God may bless the reader and the truth for Christ's sake, I am,
Yours in gospel bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

JOSEPH SMITH, Pres.

GROVE MEETINGS.

The Latter Day Saints of Ripley County, Indiana, met in their annual grove meeting, September 16. The president of the district being absent, Elder William C. Marshall was chosen president and chorister, Anna Camren secretary. The welcome address was delivered by Elder George Jenkins, of Byrnsville, Harrison County. Sunday morning, 17th, service was opened by Bro. John Boswell, after which Elder M. R. Scott, Jr., occupied the stand in a very creditable manner. Elder Jenkins spoke to a large and attentive audience in the afternoon. Elder Marshall addressed the people in the evening. Each speaker ably defending the principles of the church. Meetings were continued during the evenings of the following week, conducted by the three named elders in a very able manner.

Sunday, the 24th, was the crowning day, it being our basket meeting. The crowd began to gather early, with well filled baskets; attendance being estimated in the neighborhood of five hundred people. Elder Jenkins addressed the people in the forenoon, on the "Former apostasy of the church." Elder Marshall occupied in the afternoon, showing the difference between the Utah Church and the Latter Day Saint Church led by Joseph Smith. The speaker drew the line so distinctly that all who are willing to acknowledge the truth could readily see a great difference; and judging from the evidence produced, the Latter Day Saint Church is the only true church, while the Utah Church is an abomination in the sight of the Lord. In the evening Elder M. R. Scott, Jr., occupied the stand, speaking on the signs of the times, handling his subject in a very able manner. This was the closing address, and was somewhat disturbed by threatening weather, yet the attendance and attention was good throughout.

Thus closed a series of nine evenings and four day services, making in all thirteen discourses delivered in defense of the truth, in which the banner of King Immanuel was beautifully portrayed. We think prejudice was removed, and the cause built up. The wish of the saints in this part of the district is to have those three elders (Marshall, Scott, and Jenkins) remain in the district, for they have done a noble work, which those not acquainted with the people could not do. Some of the saints of Daviess and Jefferson counties met with us, whom we were glad to welcome. The saints then adjourned to meet again at the same place in the light of the moon in August, 1900.

HARTWELL.—At Lamoni, Iowa, Monday, October 2, 1899, Sr. Lucinda Almeda (Merritt) Hartwell. She was born at East Templeton, Massachusetts, July 27, 1809; was baptized November, 1837, in the State of New York, by Elder Benjamin F. Sweatt. She is the last of her father's family of eleven children. She leaves two sons, Hyrum C. and Joseph P. Hartwell. Her husband and self and family were among those of the church who stopped out of the host moving westward, after the driving from Illinois, and made homes in Western Iowa, near Council Bluffs. It was there that Sr. Hartwell welcomed the ministers of the Reorganized Church, and her home was made the rallying place for the workers for many years. She was received into the church with pleasure, because of her integrity and steadfast principles; she remained true to her covenant with the Lord unto the end. She became helpless, and for over three years she was carefully cared for by Bro. R. M. Elvin, her son-in-law, and his wife and children. The last few months of her life were spent at the Home, Lamoni. Some time before her death, she requested that Pres. Joseph Smith should preach her funeral sermon from 2 Timothy 4:7: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." She also requested that hymns 877, 835, and 859 in Saints' Harp should be sung at the services. All these requests were complied with, when on Thursday, October 5, the funeral obsequies were held from the Saints' Home, beginning at three p. m. Sr. Hartwell was justly entitled to the privilege to repeat the words of the apostle which she had chosen. A brother at the service gave the sentiment of all, "There was no better woman than Sr. Hartwell."

LINES BY SR. LUCINDA A. HARTWELL.

Beloved saints, and children dear,
If aught on earth would keep me here,
'Twould be my love for you;
But Jesus calls me hence away,
And gladly I the call obey;
So, fare you well, loved ones, adieu.

The angels now are beckoning me
Away from earth, with them to be;
So, do not me deplore.
But keep the faith, 'twill win the prize,
And gain a crown in paradise;
Where we shall part no more,

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Archæological Committee's Report,

WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—Delegates representing 25,000,000 Presbyterians throughout the world assembled at 10:30 to-day in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church to attend the first session of the Pan-Presbyterian alliance.

The sessions of the alliance will last ten days. The body is purely deliberative, and not in any sense legislative. Its capacity is entirely advisory.

The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. John De Witt, D. D., Professor of Church History at Princeton Theological Seminary, his subject being "The attitude of the reformed churches towards the Bible."

The subject of higher criticism, so-called promises to be one of the seriously mooted subjects of the present council.

Referring to the attitude of the churches represented by the council towards the Bible Dr. De Witt said:—

"This attitude is embodied in the well-known phrase of William Chillingworth: 'The Bible and the Bible alone is the religion of the Protestants.' It involves the two great propositions that the Holy Scriptures are the supreme rule of religious faith and conduct, and, that being sufficient, they do not need, for religious purposes, the mediation of the church as either witness or interpreter."

These excerpts serve to indicate the position taken by the members of the council, as the address received the cordial approval of the members.

The feature of the afternoon session was the address of the President of the council, the Rev. Dr. J. Marshall Lang, pastor of the famous Barony Church, of Glasgow, Scotland. His address commanded the interest of his auditors, although it was evident that his comments upon "higher criticism" will be made the topic of discussion later in the sittings of the council.

Referring to the position of the church upon this question, Dr. Lang said:—

"Let there be growth to the greatest extent, but not change of the faith. We all wish to progress, but we do not wish to rush down steep places into confusions in which the integrity of the faith might be lost. We all wish the amplest development within the truth as it is in Christ, but we do not wish to part with historical continuities.

"An absolute and blind obedience to any statement of councils or any dogmatic formula whatsoever is impossible. Even in regard to the pronouncement of the general councils of the church, it was always held that these must be afterwards approved of by the church. In words of the same standard we use the statement or formula, 'not as a rule of faith or practice, but only as a help to both.' Faith after all is better, larger, loftier than even the best confessions of it." The Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church welcomed the delegates and then the council directed the President to send a telegram of fellowship and greeting to the Congregational Union Council now in session at Boston.

An effort was made to amend the motion to include the appointment of joint committees of the two councils looking to a coalition of the bodies, but this engendered opposition, as it was deemed too great a matter for hasty consideration.—Chicago Tribune.

EPISCOPAL MINISTER THINKS BIBLE HAS MET ITS SEDAN.

New York, Oct. 9.—The Rev. Dr. B. F. De Costa, who recently resigned from the Church of St. John the Evangelist, was asked to-day concerning a rumor that he had now left the Episcopal ministry.

□ "Yes," he said, "it is quite true that I have sent my resignation to Bishop Potter, but I have had no reply yet. The Bishop can hold such a case in abeyance for several months, giving the parson the opportunity to reconsider; but in my case, I suppose, he will act with little delay."

Dr. De Costa refused to give out his letter to the Bishop—"at least not to-day."

"I will say, however," he added, "that it contains no disparagement of the Episcopal Church, and refers mainly to maladministration."

The minister said he had resigned his rectorship on account of over-work.

"My strength would not allow me to carry the heavy load any further," he went on, "but now that the diocesan convention is over and the Bible, so far as Episcopalians are concerned, has met with its Sedan, notwithstanding the effort to gloss the matter over, I have concluded that it would be quite as well to drop out of the Episcopal ministry altogether.

"To my mind, unless the unexpected comes to pass, the poor future of the Episcopal movement must be considered as clear.

"The Episcopal Church has made a new departure and I cannot go along with it. I happen to know many Episcopal clergymen who would get out of the ministry if they could.

"This is the period of deformation, not reformation."

"I should be glad to see the church rescued from the present mismanagement, and I say to the brethren who are laboring with reference to this end what an Irish editor says, 'More power to your elbow.' But my own elbow, when a bit rested, may rightfully be devoted to some other cause.

"This diocese and the Episcopal Church at large is dominated by what the ruling faction call the 'spirit of the age.' They forget to say what age. This 'spirit' that they talk about is simply the belated ghost of the age of Arianism. It recalls the words of one who spoke of the Georgian as a period when things were 'shelving down into a well-written, able, moral, gentlemanly deism.'

"The Episcopal Church has made a new departure, and I cannot go along with it. Consistency requires a repudiation of the whole scheme, and I think I have adopted the best method. I prefer the faith that I learned at my mother's knee to inventions of scientists. The church has moved on, and I am left behind to take care of myself.

"The veteran editor of one of the oldest and most conservative Episcopa publications says: 'I am glad you are attacking the evils.' One of the most brilliant Bishops writes: 'I realize that there was great need for some one to pitch into things as you have done,' and a distinguished Bishop assures me that there will be no improvement in his day or mine."

Dr. De Costa would not speak of his plans for the future. — Chicago Tribune, Oct. 10, 1899.

ILLINOIS METHODISTS.

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 8 — . . . Judge Horton, President of the Laymen's association and provisional delegate to the General Conference, said: "We have several reform measures to put through. We are pushing one thing at a time. The first step was equal representation in the General Conference. We have as good as secured that, but we do not want to do too much till the provisional delegates are finally seated. This victory will be the result of a fight which has spread through nearly a hundred years. I do not believe the church at large realizes yet what a momentous meaning there is in it. We have gained power and will use it in further steps for the good of the church."

Another sensational step the Committee on Memorials has ready to offer is on the subject of church prohibitions on assessments. A member of the committee said:—

"The laymen are urging, with good reason, that our church is fifty years behind the times in this respect. We have rules in the 'Book of Discipline' prohibiting dancing, cards, and theater-going, which to this generation are a dead letter. The laymen tell us that such laws are a farce, and the pastors realize it.

"The Methodist Church stultifies itself by keeping these rules on the books to find itself powerless, if not also unwilling, to enforce them. The pastors see that our young people care nothing for the rules and are disregarding them everywhere, which makes the prohibitions farcical and antiquated. We propose to recommend an abolition of dead rules and give our young people a chance to live up honestly to what laws we have, making these questions matters of personal conscience, as in most other modern denominations."

Another proposed reform which is startling the older men is that of changing the life term of the Bishop's office to five or ten years. The younger men are enthusiastic over it. Many of them assert that it would prevent favoritisms and make the Bishops more active. Some who think the present Bishops become prejudiced for or against certain ministers believe changes in Bishops would give more men better chances for good changes, and also give more men an opportunity at the bishoprics.

Many influential laymen are urging the committee to recommend the new order.

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 9. — Recommendations for radical changes in church laws forecasted in the Tribune of this morning were adopted in the Rock River conference to-day, causing one of the stormiest fights ever known in the conference. Dr. John Foster predicts that it will set the church "fighting like Kilkenny cats," and Dr. Brushingham said in the debate it would rend Methodism asunder.

Among the items referred to were action on the proposal to limit the terms of Bishops, which was postponed. A recommendation to abolish time limits for pastors was carried.

A recommendation to make it against the laws of the church for a Methodist holding a civil office to sign licenses to sell liquors was passed after a violent debate. The recommendation, the objectors claimed, called upon Methodist civil officers to violate their oath of office requiring them to carry out license laws. The reply was that if the law required them to sign licenses they must either die or resign. Some said it prohibited practically any Methodist from ever acting as Mayor of Chicago.

A recommendation requiring all Methodists to vote the prohibition ticket was lost. Recommendations were carried out stipulating that the General Secretary of the Epworth league be elected by the general conference instead of the Board of Control; that the office of Presiding Elders be elective, with power given them to veto unfavorable rulings or appointments by Bishops; and that amusements be made a matter of conscience, with special prohibitions annulled.

The memorial asking for organic union of the Methodist Churches of the North and South in such a way as to preserve the integrity of both branches was strenuously objected to, but finally passed. Many said it was an inconsistent and ambiguous request. Bishop Galloway of Jackson, Tennessee, feared it would distress the colored people now in affiliation with the Methodist Church North. He said the race prejudice of the blacks against the whites was as strong as that of the whites against the blacks. He did not believe organic union could be accomplished in this generation. The resolution, however, was carried.

All these recommendations will be introduced at the next general conference as coming officially from the Rock River Conference, and a hot fight over them is predicted. Conservatives express doubts of the wisdom of such memorials, and express fear of a schism in the church.

Dr. Axtell offered a resolution asking the Northwestern Christian Advocate to print more articles for the comfort of the aged and for instruction of the young in religious matters. He believed the religious papers published too much secular news.

The Committee on Periodicals scored a Chicago paper for publishing beer advertisements alongside of the Sunday school lesson, and expressed regrets because so many Christians read Sunday newspapers. . . .

The Committee on Conference Statistics reported a fair increase in church membership during the year, but there was a marked falling off in collections for missionary purposes. — Chicago Tribune, Oct. 10, 1899.

It has been reported for some time that a movement is afoot for a union of the Unitarian and Universalist churches. The chief doctrine of the former is historically a belief in the unity of the Godhead as opposed to a trinitarian conception, while the Universalists have emphasized the doctrine of the ultimate salvation of all created beings. As both churches of late years have advanced to a ground in which merely distinctive doctrines are less dwelt upon, and a general spirit of what is termed liberal theology is emphasized, they have found themselves to be in increasing harmony. However, there is much opposition in each church to the idea of an amalgamation. The Leader (Universalist) says that "the genuine Unitarian preacher can never feed the thoroughbred Universalist, and the consistent Universalist cannot satisfy the genuine Unitarian." The Christian Register, the weekly organ of the Unitarians, has thus far been silent on the subject. — Literary Digest.

French Protestants will attempt evangelizing work in connection with the Paris exposition.

There are indications in New York that Unitarians and Universalists may unite in the near future.

Zion's Herald is calling in question the value of the camp meeting as now carried on by the Methodists.

Both theologians and scientists are waiting the investigations pertaining to the fall of a substance in Lower Palestine, two or three inches in thickness, resembling the manna of the Bible. This may settle another disputed point pertaining to the Bible.

Alarm is felt by some Northern Presbyterians at the slow growth of the church. The statistics are these: For the year ending April 1, 1898, total number of communicants, 975,877; for the year ending April 1, 1899, total, 983,907—or a net gain of only 8,030. Sunday school membership 1898 was 1,034,164; in 1899 it was 1,029,229—or a net loss of 4,935. For the last five years there has been a retrograde movement. The net gain of membership is reported thus: For 1895, 26,907; for 1896, 20,802; for 1897, 17,195; for 1898, 14,966; for 1899, 8,030.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Should a branch of the church, the members of which live in easy distance of the meetinghouse, and the majority of the saints of said branch say it is not necessary to meet every Sabbath, so they drop out the second Sunday in every month, and also the fifth Sunday, so the saints can stay at home if they want to, or can go visiting just as they please—can a branch in this condition prosper and be justified by the word of God?

A.—The Book of Doctrine and Covenants requires that the members of the church meet together often, to speak together and to partake of the bread and wine; and the apostolic injunction is, "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together. . . ." But we know of no rule that defines clearly how often one should assemble under this injunction and the requirement referred to means. The branch has the right to control by a majority the times and places of their meeting together to suit themselves.

Whether a branch in the habit referred to in the question can be prospered, we cannot say; it is a matter of experience with which we are not acquainted. As to such a branch being justified by the word of God, we cannot write, for the reason that the word is silent as to just how often a branch must meet together. Conditions must govern in the case of branch meetings.

It is usual in most branches to meet every Sunday in some sort of meeting; but we know of no general rule requiring it. Some branches meet and partake of the sacrament every Lord's Day, others on the first Lord's day of the month only. Both of these classes seem to be blessed alike.

Again, a branch that has not been visited by the priest of the branch for nearly two years: Is it proper for said priest to wait for direction from the presiding elder of the branch before he visits the saints as required in the law?

A.—The work of the priest of the branch is a work separate from the work of the presiding elder, and may be done by the priest without waiting special direction from the presiding elder; it would then be proper for the priest to visit the members as required in the 17th section of Doctrine and Covenants, as his time and opportunities permitted. The priest should report his work from time to time, say once every month, or every three months, or oftener if he so chose to do. The priest should also work in harmony with the presiding elder.

SR. MARY BURNS, of Underwood, Iowa, writes under date of September 3, endeavoring to correct what she deems to be a mistake in a late HERALD. She writes:—

I saw a piece in the Herald concerning the five elders who went west in the year 1830. I wish to correct the mistake. Parley P. Pratt was not there. Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, Peter Whitmer, Martin Harris, and Ziba Peterson. The last was my uncle, married my mother's sister, three miles west of Lexington, Big Sni Township. They baptized forty-four, and I am the only one left. My parents took me to Lexington when I was fifteen months old. I was numbered among the immigrants, since my parents laid out one hundred dollars, and a large group of uncles, aunts, and cousins live in Jackson and Lafayette counties. We went with the church from Jackson County, and they lived a few miles of Far West. I myself owned eighty acres in Daviess County, and eighty in Jackson County, south of the Big Blue, in 1830. My stepfather and my brothers and sisters all came to suffer with God's own people. At Lexington, Thomas Hoper, uncle, Charles Maclure, William Jennings, uncles, Jack Jennings, John Young; and they were all large families, of whom some must be living yet.

I did not think I would live to see the last days of perilous times. I haven't heard but one meeting in twelve years. I belonged to the Ladies' Aid Society, organized by Emma Smith, in Lee County, Iowa, and my husband's name was Case. If we have not got it right, please excuse. I am pushed from post to pillar ever since. I wish to return to my native land.

I see that you put into the Herald, "Do unto others as you would wish them to do to you." That makes cold chills over me. I am eighty-five years old. I am pushed and pulled around till I am clear worn out; and I want help while I am able to live. I want to return as quick as possible. I am awful homesick, and awful lame with rheumatism, yet I can walk about, and get up and dress myself without help.

CLARK BRADEN AND CHALLENGE.

Bro. Isaac N. White of Independence, Missouri, gave in the Herald for October 11, a challenge to Mr. Clark Braden to discuss at Alma, Illinois, the same propositions discussed by these two men near Orchardville, Illinois. Those propositions are,

1. Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?

I. N. White to affirm,
Clark Braden to deny.

2. Is the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) the Church of God in fact, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice with the Church of Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago?

Clark Braden to affirm,
I. N. White to deny.

Mr. Braden is President of the Christian College at Alma, the place where the debate is to be held, if no hitch occurs in the proceedings preliminary.

We suppose both of these debaters will now make such preparation as they may deem needful to the defense of their respective positions.

Mr. Braden in accepting the challenge to debate at Alma wishes Bro. White to agree to dedate at Independence. What the result will be remains to be seen.

THE NORTH COUNTRY, ETC.

Berlin, Sept. 25.—There was a gathering of naturalists and physicians at Munich last week, at which Dr. Fridtjof Nansen was present. The most far-reaching of his conclusions, perhaps the most important result of his journey, was stated as follows:—

"From Franz Josef's Land to the east coast of Greenland there is a submarine land mass (backbone) which separates the northern Polar Sea, with a depth of at least 4,000 meters in places, from the comparatively shallow southern part of the polar waters, where the greatest depth does not exceed 180 meters."

In other words, the Polar Sea proper is almost an inclosed body of water.

It was found that the temperature of the Polar Sea rarely sinks below 1° centigrade—that is, a fraction below freezing. At the surface the temperature is sometimes a degree lower, and it becomes gradually warmer with the depth without quite reaching the zero point of the centigrade scale. The salt contents likewise increase with the depth. It is considerably less in the eastern portion, where the Siberian rivers affect it, than in the western part. The Gulf Stream, after reaching the deep northern Polar Sea and having been greatly cooled, sinks beneath the surface, and the difference in the salt contents of the two strata can be easily detected. In the southern part of the polar waters the Gulf Stream is on the surface.

The highest temperature of the atmosphere observed was 5 C., the lowest 53 C.

So-called "northern lights" were frequently observed, but they appeared just as often on the southern horizon as on the northern.

From his observations Nansen judged that plants and animals would be found both on land and in the sea throughout the polar region.

Professor Wilhelm Foerster of Berlin delivered an interesting address on the progress of the human mind in its conception of the astronomical universe. With enthusiasm and a really poetic imagination, as well as with the resources of mathematics, physics, and chemistry, he traced the progress of astronomy from the time of the Chaldeans and Egyptians to Galileo, Copernicus, Laplace, Kant, and the present day, and closed by pointing out the highest service of astronomy was not the contents of the science, but the certainty that the same laws prevail on the earth and throughout the universe and the assurance that this will always be so.

BRO. D. L. HARRIS AND THE GOVERNOR OF WASHINGTON.

It appears that Bro. D. L. Harris in prosecuting his mission in the State of Washington, learned that the chaplain who regularly officiated in the State Soldiers' Home would be absent from the post on a certain Sunday and made application to the commandant, Captain Allen, for permission to occupy at that Sunday's service, but was denied the privilege.

Bro. Harris wrote to the Governor, John R. Rogers, complaining of Captain Allen's refusal and asking that the Governor interfere in behalf of free speech and equal rights.

We give the correspondence as sent us by Bro. Harris, to show the situation, although we do not see how Governor Rogers would be justified in an interference.

ORTING, Wash., Sept. 15, 1899.

To the Hon. John R. Rogers, Governor of Washington, Olympia:—

Sir:—Pardon my intrusion on your valuable time, but I write to know under what religious creed the Washington State Soldiers' Home is founded? I will explain. I have been holding religious services in Orting and a goodly number of the comrades from the Home have been in attendance, and they, including the Doctor of the Home, asked why I did not come out to the Home and hold services?

There have been services held at the Home weekly, and learning that the Rev. was going to be absent on a given Sunday, I applied to Captain Allen for permission to occupy in his place, or at some other hour, not wishing to crowd anyone out, whereupon I was denied the privilege by said Captain Allen.

I ask, why a son of a noble sire who fought and bled to establish the free Constitution of America has not the right to express his religious convictions upon a spot of territory where Uncle Sam has the exclusive right to reign?

My forefathers fought under General Washington. What for? That they might bequeath to their posterity the right to worship God according to the dictations of their own consciences, which Constitution says, "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none," when such religious principles do not prompt its adherents to infringe upon the rights of others.

I quote some of my religious tenets: And for this purpose have I [the Lord] established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up for this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.—D. C. 98: 10.

And again: Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land.—D. C. 58: 5.

I will refer you to my home city for my good citizenship. I am a resident of San Bernardino, California, where I have lived for twenty-five years. Am acquainted with most of the county officials and all city officers.

The spirit manifested by Captain Allen is not commensurate with our free Constitution, and I feel that legitimate measures should promptly be taken to suppress such a spirit, lest we drift out from under the stars and stripes and once more find ourselves under the rule and ruin of priestcraft and superstition.

The above has been prompted by the suggestion of several at the Home that something should be done. I subscribe myself,

Your servant and a lover of truth and freedom,
ELDER D. L. HARRIS.

Here is the answer from the Governor:—
"Sept. 18, 1899.

"ELDER D. L. HARRIS, Orting, Wash.;
"My Dear Sir:—Your letter of September 15, was received. In reply to your complaint, which recites that you have been refused permission to hold services at the Soldiers' Home, can only say that the institution there is under the charge of Commandant Allen, under direction from the State Board of Audit and Control; Ernest Lester, Secretary, Tacoma, Washington.

"In the matter you bring up I do not feel warranted in interfering with the ruling of Commandant Allen. No doubt members of the Home who wish to hear you can do so at Orting.

"I certainly should have no objection to your speaking there, nor can I undertake to command those members to hear you.

"Yours very truly,
"J. R. ROGERS, Governor."

The above will explain itself.

Yours for the truth and right.

D. L. HARRIS.

LORENZO SNOW CHARGED WITH UNLAWFUL COHABITATION.

The Deseret Evening News, October 9, states that Charles M. Owen, the prosecutor in recent similar cases, has filed an affidavit charging Lorenzo Snow, President of the Utah Church, with unlawful cohabitation with one Minnie Jensen, of Salt Lake City. The affidavit cites as witnesses Joseph F. Smith, George Q. Cannon, counselors to the President, F. D. Richards, Heber J. Grant, John Henry Smith, and others prominent in the Utah Church.

The County Attorney has taken the matter under advisement until Wednesday, the 18th inst.

ELDER JENSEN, OF UTAH, ON BOSTON COMMON.

We learn by letter from Bro. Richard Bullard that after we left Boston, our letter was handed to Mayor Josiah Quincy, and answered by him with the privilege of a permit to occupy on the common, if asked for at his office in the city.

Bro. Bullard had called twice at the mayor's office, but failed to meet Mayor Quincy each time; he was to call again when he wrote.

The Mayor also renewed the permit to Elder Jensen, of Utah, and that elder had occupied the Sunday before Bro. Bullard wrote. Whether our letter to the Mayor had any influence on him to cause him to renew Elder Jensen's permit or no, we cannot say; but we think it may have helped to point the tone of the general sentiment in favor of free speech "On Boston Common."

Long may the love of liberty, cradled in the Old South Church and Faneuil Hall, and coddled and fostered on Boston Common, live and flourish there, and everywhere.

We cannot give the text of Mayor Quincy's letter to us, as Bro. Bullard forgot to inclose it when he wrote.

OBLIGED TO WITHDRAW.

The Rev. M. M. Bales, who resigned from the pastorate of the Fowler Methodist Church and also from the Rock River Conference, denied yesterday that he is a convert to Dowieism, which had been announced as the reason for his resignation. He explained that he believes in an independent church, conducted purely on the principles laid down in the Bible, and in order to have such a church says he was obliged to withdraw from Methodist associations.

... Professor Newell of the Moody Bible Institute, will preach for the new church a week from Sunday. The members of Mr. Bales' following say the charge that he had gone over to Dowieism was trumped up by the Methodists because the latter wished to discredit anybody leaving their ranks.

Mr. Bales has issued a formal statement of his beliefs and the principles that will govern the new church.

The Independent Deaconesses of Bethany Home, 15 South Center Avenue, will affiliate with the new church.—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 6, 1899.

It will be noticed from the foregoing that Rev. Bales thinks it necessary to withdraw from the Methodist associations "in order to have an independent church conducted purely on the principles laid down in the Bible." We know nothing of the "independent" ideas of Rev. Bales, whether his conceptions of independence are true or false, correct or extreme. However, we are quite sure he has not found and that he cannot find in any sectarian organization, Protestant or Catholic, a "church conducted purely on the principles laid down in the Bible."

We are also as sure that the reverend gentleman will not succeed in his efforts to produce such an organization, for all human movements having in view the organization of the Church of Christ have failed, and must ever fail, Christ himself being the only divinely commissioned architect and builder of the church, of which he is the great Head and supervising Masterbuilder.

It becomes apparent that, turn about as they will, as they have done, as they may, the religious world is obliged to confess, by its acts, if not actually in so many words, that it is at sea religiously; that the world needs the divine direction of the Master himself. The restored gospel grows in importance in the minds of "those enlightened," as its divine authenticity and its necessity become more and more apparent.

"UNCHRISTIAN NONSENSE."

The Rev. Gilbert D. Cleworth preached at the Ada Street Methodist church last night on the "Truths and Errors of Christian Science." He dubbed Christian Science "unchristian nonsense." He said, in substance:—

"There is no doubt that the mind largely controls the body, but Mrs. Eddy did not discover that. Plato speaks of it, and all physicians hold that a hopeful mind is half a cure. The mind, however, does not have absolute control. Mrs. Eddy's cult is not Christian, because it rules out a personal God, an incarnate Christ, the fact of sin and the need of atonement. It is not science because it says that matter does not exist, and that there is no intelligence in nerves. These are but samples of this unchristian unscience. Let us call it Eddyism. Christian Science is right when it says that the prayer of faith will heal, but prayer to what? God, with Mrs. Eddy, is an impersonal principle. Can an impersonal principle affect anything? We believe that the personal God can heal, and does heal often, in answer to prayer, and the church should claim its lost heritage."

Bro. W. E. Messenger sends us the above from the Chicago Record, of August 16, with the comment that "some seem inclined to 'steal our thunder,'" referring evidently to our Bible belief that the Lord has provided for the healing of the sick.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

Disquieting additional rumors of war continue to grow out of the prospective conflict between Great Britain and the Boer Republic in South Africa. Paris advices hint at possible interference with Great Britain by France and Russia in the Transvaal, and state that the French and Russian Foreign Ministers are conferring at Paris upon a program under which England will be asked to regulate the Niger question in Africa, French interests in Madagascar and Siam, and the northwestern boundary of India, where Russia's interests are touched."

A Paris late dispatch states:—

"With the Queen of Holland in Germany urging the Emperor to interfere in favor of the Boers, and Russia and France with their heads together, England may find a coalition of continental Europe against her.

"Count Mouravieff, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Russia, accompanied by Minister Delcasse, was received privately by President Loubet at the Elysée . . . and held a long conference concerning the policy of Russia and France in the Transvaal and the prospective rapprochement between Germany and Russia by which the latter is determined to win a point on the Afghanistan question and profit by England's situation and the growing insanity of the Ameer."

The London Chronicle "insists that the foreign papers, especially Russian, are threatening to take advantage of England's preoccupation in South Africa."

Close watch on the movements of the French diplomats tends to confirm the rumor that Mouravieff is endeavoring to form a general European coalition against England. In this connection Russia has seemingly taken advantage of the Transvaal crisis to announce that Afghanistan is in a state of unrest, and that a strong hand is needed to restore order. The French Foreign office, it is said, has quietly been asked by Russia as to the propriety of the latter sending troops into Afghanistan for the purpose of settling the troubles and establishing a protectorate. Russia has evidently been quietly preparing for this move for several years.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Of the influential Berlin journals the Tages Zeitung, which voices the agricultural sentiment, alone discusses the Boer ultimatum at length. It says:—

. . . It is unnecessary to say that our best wishes accompany the Boer army, which fights, not only for its own existence, but for German interests as well.

"English victory means untenability of the German-African colonies. Boer victory may mean the dissolution of the British empire.

"We hope Russia will utilize the present opportunity to cripple England in Asia, for England's downfall is the one essential preliminary to the success of Germany's colonial policy."

Other influential German papers are quoted as strongly favoring the cause of the South African Republic. On the contrary some British journals report that Germany's attitude will be one of "benevolent neutrality."

These items and rumors are given merely as signs of the times. They indicate at least that the nations are not yet tending to universal peace.

Copenhagen advices state that the Czar will submit to an operation on the brain for relief from intolerable headaches from which he suffers as a result of the blow struck upon his head by a lunatic in Japan some years ago.

An earthquake shock at St. Joseph, Michigan, on the 10th inst.

Advices from Batavia, Java, state that a violent earthquake visited the island of Ceram, next to the largest of the Moluccas, completely destroying the town of Amhei and killing 4,000 people, injuring 500 others.

Berlin, Oct. 10.—Representatives of European academies of science are conferring at Wiesbaden on the possibility of all nations adopting uniform scientific and commercial languages. It is reported that the gathering will recommend the rehabilitation of Latin as the scientific tongue, and will recognize English as the dominant language of commerce. Mr. Newcomb and Mr. Bell of Washington represent America.

August Bebel, the leader of the Socialist Reichstag group, offered the resolution at the Hanover congress to-day, declaring that the party still regards the economic and political emancipation of the laboring classes as its principal task, and that the present political power must be conquered in order to socialize the means of production and distribution. . . .

The party retains the privilege to contract temporary alliances for election purposes or to enlarge the political liberties of the people, but remains hostile to militarism by land and sea and to the Kaiser's colonial policy. . .

Rev. W. R. Notman, of Chicago, while speaking for the Woman's Home Missionary Society of Chicago in its crusade against the seating of B. H. Roberts, made statements from which we take the following report, from the Tribune, of the 12th:—

Mr. Notman urged his audience to make a clear and emphatic distinction between the system of the Mormon Church and the people who hold its beliefs. He stated his willingness to admit that there were many people in the Mormon Church who were living in earnest endeavor to be what their conscience told them they should be.

"It is war to the knife with the system," he said. "The church is bad to its core, but there are branches of it other than the church in Utah. The Latter Day Reorganized Saints were among the first to cry out against polygamy."

New York press reports give accounts of a similar movement against the seating of Roberts, among New York women, headed and patronized by Miss Helen Gould.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Many of the readers of the HERALD will be pained to learn that Bro. Israel L. Rogers, the first bishop of the Reorganized Church, is reported as being very sick, lying at his home in Sandwich, Illinois, at which place and its near vicinity his home has been since 1844, very near to the end of his earthly pilgrimage. A line from Bro. H. A. Stebbins to Bro. Salyards, dated October 8, states:—

I have been with Bro. I. L. Rogers (by his request) most of the week, he and all of us expecting his departure to the other side. But for two or three days he has been improving in strength, although it is remarkable that it is so. He is clear in mind, perfectly composed, not at all nervous, and is free from pain. Has sat up a half hour each day for past three days. I preached at Rock Island last Sunday, and here to-day.

A letter from Bro. E. L. Kelley, dated the 9th, states:—

Find Bro. I. L. Rogers quite badly afflicted and hardly expected by his friends to rally. He sat in a chair after being lifted into it from the bed this morning a few minutes, but is entirely helpless. His mind is free and he is at times cheerful even. Says he is only glad if his time has come to go if his work is done. The chances are very slight in favor of his recovery.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith, wrote from Jonesport, Maine, September 29:—

I held forth in Boston the Sunday following your effort, and had good liberty. Bro. Luff and I failed to meet in time to come east to the late Maine conference, because of a severe attack of neuralgia, or nervous headache which laid me up two days. However, I followed him the next Monday, and spent a week or ten days in Stonington, preaching there three or four times with much liberty. I cannot remember when I had better, for years.

Last Sunday I met Bro. Luff at Jonesport. I talked about forty minutes in afternoon at social meeting on subject of gathering; felt led to do so, notwithstanding it was social meeting. Monday morning of this week I came on to this place. Am staying for the time at the home of Bro. E. C. Foss, on Foss Avenue. Yesterday visited and made arrangements to go into the woods. Bro. Francis Foss, George William Foss, and myself have arranged to go to the woods next Monday. I hope to get back to attend Massachusetts district conference at Boston on the 14th of October. All the saints at Stonington, Jonesport, and here remember you in loving kindness, would have been much pleased with a visit from you.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly, though yet in poor health, has returned to his field, the Southwestern mission.

The address of Bro. William Newton is, No. 9 Etherley Road, West Green, South Tottenham, London, England.

The French cabinet has decided to place all French colonies under civil authority and to abolish all military administration.

Our readers will note in our cover articles some significant items which indicate the growth of a strong reactionary sentiment against the "higher criticism." There is at least a strong minority against its tendencies even in prominent church circles.

Plymouth, England, has one case of bubonic plague, brought in from Bombay. The Medical News, New York, says emphatically that the danger from the plague is grave, not only to Europe, but to the United States, and urges most stringent quarantine measures.

At the English Church Congress in session at Royal Albert Hall, London, "the burning question of incense produced an approach to rowdiness, a comparison of extreme ritualism to the 'fetish worship of barbarians' causing a storm of hisses, cries of 'Shame!' and other commotion, which had to be stopped by the Lord Bishop of London."

WILL SOMEONE PLEASE EXPLAIN?

Inasmuch as I have always been taught, and have taught, that the saints should pay as tithing: first, one tenth of all they possess, and afterwards one tenth of their increase annually; and being unable to harmonize this with the revelation in Doctrine and Covenants, section 106, will someone please explain? The church, I understand, teaches we should pay: first, one tenth of all we possess, and this is to be the beginning of the tithing of the people. In this same section the Lord is made to say: "I require all their surplus property;" and further on says:—

And this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord.—106: 1.

I fail to see how one tenth of all we possess can be made a surplus. Surplus means overplus, or that which remains when use is satisfied. The Lord says, "I require all their surplus property," and this is for the beginning of the tithing. The church requires one tenth of all we possess; where is the harmony? A man may have just what he needs and no more. Can this man be said to have a surplus; if not, how is he to begin to pay his tithing? "But," say some, "cannot he pay one tenth?" "Yes, certainly; but one tenth is not the beginning." "I require all their surplus property," and this is to be the beginning; and it also shall be a law unto them forever. The Lord hath said it. I do believe that one tenth should be the law governing tithing, according to the law of God; but I fail to see at present how the two, that is one tenth of all we possess, and all their surplus property, can be made to harmonize. If someone with wisdom will turn on the light, I with others shall be thankful.

There is one more item I wish light on; that is what I consider to be a contradiction of a prophecy of the Book of Mormon by the Inspired Translation, or vice versa. On page 416, Book of Mormon, fifth chapter of the Book of Helaman, verse 7, the great prophet of the Lamanites, by name Samuel, who was prophesying to the Nephites concerning the signs which should be given, making manifest the birth of Jesus Christ, also his death and resurrection, said an angel had told him the things whereof he spoke. The part I call attention to reads as follows:—

And behold thus hath the angel spoken unto me: for he said unto me, that there should be thunderings and lightnings for the space of many hours; and he said unto me that while the thunder and the lightning lasted, and the tempest, that these things should be, and that darkness should cover the face of the whole earth, for the space of three days.

This we are told actually came to pass:—

And it came to pass that it did last for the space of three days, that there was no light seen. (See Book of Nephi, chapter 4, verses 4 and 5, pages 438, 439 of Book of Mormon.)

Now the Inspired Translation has this to say of the same circumstance:—

Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour [total three hours].—Matt. 27: 49.

Mark says:—

And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land, until the ninth hour.—Mark 15: 38.

Again, Luke says:—

And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.—Luke 23: 45.

St. John is silent. But here we have three witnesses who give the time as three hours, while the Nephites say it was three days. I have heard men say the six days in which the world was created meant six thousand years, the same with the days of Revelation written by John. And some try to harmonize these two statements by saying that the three apostles meant three days instead of three hours. But if this is so, Jesus hung on the cross three days, for we are informed he spoke afterwards. (See following verses.) I might go on quoting still farther, but I think a prayerful study of the New Testament will not permit us to say the darkness spoken of really lasted three days as we understand time, where Jesus was crucified. Praying that someone will turn a little light on these subjects, I remain, yours in gospel bonds, CONSECRATION, TITHING, OFFERINGS, ALL THINGS COMMON.

IS THE TITHING LAW THE ONLY RULE OF FINANCE THE CHURCH HAS?

The Apostle Paul in Romans 12: 1 says:—

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

The gospel always finds a person at variance with the will of God, for in our unregenerated state we are striving after the things of this world; and, like as it was at Jordan, "There standeth one among you, whom ye know not," and we are always slow to receive the servants of God and their message of salvation. However, when we receive the gospel we should, in the Spirit of the above, present ourselves a living sacrifice, or consecrate ourselves,—heart, soul, and body,—to the service of God, in order that we might comply with the celestial law, and thereby receive the celestial glory. This idea is presented by the Savior in his instructions to the young man, and in his revealed message to the Laodiceans.

Failing to properly consecrate ourselves, we fall short of the celestial glory, and, consequently, must receive a less reward; hence, consecration is the first step of a Christian. Now, how about the consecration of our properties? A man's worth in the church or kingdom is measured by his mental, physical, spiritual, and pecuniary ability; for, "to whom much is given, of him shall much be required."

We are indebted to God for our being, our mental and physical powers and possessions, for by the application of our God-given gifts we make money and property. From these deductions it is evident we cannot consecrate ourselves a living sacrifice and hold in reserve, for our private aggrandizement and gratification, our possessions, property and money, which we made by the God-given intelligence, or power of body.

Christ left the courts of glory,—made himself of no reputation, had not where to lay his head,—in order to serve his father who sent him. Can we do more than this by complying with Doctrine and Covenants, sections 42 and 106, thus consecrating all our surplus properties, to begin with, and later, by paying one tenth of all our earnings; and later, if God blesses us with such prosperity that the nine tenths accumulate to the extent that we have another surplus, give the second, and even the third consecration?

I repeat: Can we do more than Christ did in doing all this? The object of consecration is to supply the poor, buy lands in Missouri preparatory to the gathering, the building of the temple, and the second coming of Christ.

Now, the question is, how shall we consecrate our properties? If a man has a lot of money in the bank and an income from another source sufficient for his support, he should place his money in the hands of the Bishopric, taking a receipt therefor, that in due time he may receive an inheritance in Zion. If his properties are in lands and live stock, section 42: 8, Doctrine and Covenants, gives the rule and provides for a deed and covenant to be made to the Bishopric which cannot be broken.

But says one: "How can this serve the purpose that ready cash will in buying lands and feeding the poor? By assessments. The Bishopric know if any lands have been spied for sale, also the needs of the poor in the aggregate. The cash donated and the properties deeded will form the general church fund to be drawn upon by assessments.

To illustrate: The church fund, we say, is $10,000,000. There is a favored piece of land in Jackson County, Missouri, which can be bought for $10,000. An assessment of one tenth of one per cent, or one mill on the dollar is made, and the man in Florida, who has in his hands, as steward, $1,000 worth of lands and cattle, can pay one dollar, and the emergency is met, and the land purchased.

Will this make all things common? I believe it will, as far as practicable till Christ comes, at which time we must expect the millennial plans will be perfected. The poor will be supplied, the lands can be bought, and everything move along leisurely, not in haste, till the end be achieved.

We have not got to the gathering yet, neither need we worry over it, for if we consecrate our possessions, tithe all we make, not all we have left after we have lived too high, reconse-crate and give offerings, if able, till the lands are bought, and the poor supplied, God in his infinite mercy and wisdom will send us the welcome revelation through Bro. Joseph: "Come all ye up to Zion who are prepared. Lo! the Bridegroom cometh!"

And we need take no extra thought and care about the manner we shall be colonized, or the manner in which we are to live, for God is able to supply even manna, if need be, to feed us. The gathering and the making of a living afterward are still in the future, and may need more instruction from God. But let us go to work and obey what has been given, and not climb any hill before we get to it.

I believe in, first, consecration; second, tithing all we make; third, other consecrations and offerings as we are able, the poor helped, and all things common as far as possible. I do not believe that the law of tithing is the only rule of finance the church has. Neither do I believe that paying one tenth of our clear profit is the true method of tithing. Some one, perhaps, will say: "You are narrowing down the possibilities of reaching the celestial kingdom, and who can attain to it?" Why, those who are putting their lives into this work, the presidency, the twelve, the bishopric, the seventies, printers, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and laymembers who are doing the same. But he or she, who has great possessions and loves them, and makes the gospel the twenty-fifth consideration of their lives, will not be apt to get there.

I stand ready to deed all I possess to the Bishopric, and to act as faithful steward over the same, and answer all assessments made upon the same till I die, or all things be made ready for his coming, which we all hope will be in our day.

May God help us to come up higher, and so live that we may be worthy to go up to Zion, and be ready to meet the Master when he comes, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Your colaborer,

S. D. ALLEN.

INTERPRETATION OF DANIEL 12.

There are three prophetic periods mentioned in the twelfth chapter of Daniel. The first one was evidently fulfilled in 1830, Doctrine and Covenants 5: 3, "and the coming forth of my church out of the wilderness." The second period, 1290 years, was fulfilled in the Reorganization, in the year 1860, when the son of the prophet came forward and took the lead of the church. The third prophetic period, 1335 years, is what we are most interested in now. If we count from the same commencement as the others, it will be fulfilled in 1905. Now what is most likely to happen between now and then. Certainly the end of the Gentile times, and the coming in of the Jews. Daniel's prophecy is certainly to the Jews, and will be a blessed thing for them to have the blindness taken off and the gospel restored to them. The trend of the times certainly indicates the withdrawal of God's Spirit from the Gentiles, and also the spiritual awakening of the Jews. Then our brethren that are so anxious to usher in the gathering will have a chance to see it commence. The question now is, are we as a church ready? I feel to say, No. But can we get ready by the year 1905? I think we can, if we can all pull together for a oneness in Christ our Master. M. L. SORY.

THOUGHTS ON CAMPBELLISM.

The Disciples are of late years being admitted into the family of Mother Catholicism—the "orthodox" church. In Pittsburg, the Baptists and Campbellites are holding a joint revival meeting. It is remarkably strange to see the "restored church of Christ," in communion with one of the "sects" from which the originators, Mr. Campbell and company "withdrew," when they found the more excellent way. They are now acknowledged and acknowledge themselves one of the sects, as a system and community of professed Christians. Thus leaving the field open for the Church of Jesus Christ of the Reorganization. They held the independent position—outside of orthodoxy—"the sects," etc., for a long time; but being, after all, of the same metal, were very naturally attracted by the power of the papal family magnetism.

Mr. Campbell says in the preface to Christian System, page 1:—

While protestant hatred to the Roman Pontiff and the Papacy continued to increase, a secret lust in the bosom of protestants for ecclesiastical power and patronage, worked in the members of the Protestant Popes, who gradually assimilated the new church to the old.

And now the Campbellite reformation itself, after the lapse of a sufficient time from the Campbells, begins to show symptoms of the work of "Protestant Popery," in "gradually assimilating the new church to the old." And we expect ere long to see the "new organization" referred to in the works of B. W. Stone, take up its place among "the sects"—designated by Mr. Campbell, in debate with Bishop Purcell in Cincinnati, the daughters of Mystery Babylon, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth. (Rev. 17: 5.)

I remember well the years 1850 to 1860, the hottest of the fight was against "the sects" of "self-styled orthodoxy." My father and some of my uncles and aunts were Campbellite preachers, (although my aunts were not to speak in church, for with them you know, such a thing is "a shame".) They all carried "the living oracles,"—the New Testament; and some of them carried Campbell's translation of it; which, although some of their preachers now deny that he ever published a translation of the Scriptures, Mr. Campbell called "the living oracles."

They assumed then to be THE church of Christ, and done their best to overturn every "principality and power" in the world, outside of their "true body of Christ." Mr. Campbell boasted, in his day, they had completely demolished the pedobaptist temple in these words:—

This foundation of the pedobaptist temple being instantly destroyed, the whole edifice leaning upon it (infant sprinkling), became a heap of ruins. We explored the ruins with great assiduity, and collected from them all the materials that could be worked into the Christian temple; but the piles of rubbish that remained were immense.—Preface to Christian System, page 10, 2d ed., by Bosworth, Chase, and Hall, Cincinnati, Ohio, 1871.

Mark, that Mr. Campbell is building, "the Christian temple" at this time; and notwithstanding he got some material for the building from the ruins of the pedobaptist temple, the most of it was mere rubbish, "the piles of rubbish that remained were immense."

And now we are credibly informed and that too in their own publications, that the "immense pile of rubbish" is gradually being worked into this same "Christian temple;" built, and left perfected from the foundation to the steeple by Campbell, Stone, Scott, et al. They are admitting into communion and fellowship persons, who if not pedobaptists, have only been baptized by sprinkling. They are "split into no less than five divisions"—says an editor of one of their journals; but still claim that they are "the Christian temple." They have shamelessly fallen backward unto the filthy rubbish from which they seemed to emerge in Campbell's day, and have turned "like the dog to his vomit, or the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire."

Campbellites are in the habit of using as much of sophistry as some of their other Babylonized brethren. They reason in a circle when they assume to have authority to baptize, "if they have authority to preach," and vice versa. Thus it is admitted, that in the event their authority to preach be successfully denied, they have no authority to baptize their converts. If they can truly baptize their converts "in the name of Jesus Christ" (there can be no other authority), then it follows that they have divine authority for preaching the gospel and administering every other ordinance of the Christian ministry.

They assume the great commission —"Go ye into all the world" (Mark 16:15), and by the authority of this command they presume to preach and baptize in the name of Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." (Matt. 28:19, 20.) The commission truly conveys such authority, and more: it clearly affirms, "they shall cast out devils" in his name!

It is overlooked by many, that when those preachers assume the authority given in this great commission, they assume it all. And if it conveys any rights at all it arms them with the whole apostolic prerogative to perform the "work of the ministry" in the name of Jesus Christ.

In this document the Lord authorizes the following: 1. The right to preach, etc. 2. To baptize in the name of the Trinity. 3. To cast out devils in his name. 4. To speak with new tongues. 5. To heal the sick by the laying on of hands. 6. To give the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands, as the apostles demonstrated in Samaria. (Acts 8:19.)

If men are powerless to administer as commanded—if the one coming out on this authority does not and cannot cast out a devil in the name of Jesus Christ—if he dare not "lay hands on the sick" that they may "recover," then I have ample room for a doubt as to his divine authority either to teach or baptize in the name of Jesus Christ. I would not seek a sign from them if they would claim the full authority, for there would be no need of it; the signs would follow as the Lord promises, affirming and confirming the authority of the minister, otherwise it is equally evident the minister is a false apostle—is not known to the Lord—not a coworker, and the Lord not a coworker with him. Our souls are not safe in the hands of such "workers of iniquity."

We have it from one of their own preachers and editors, that the temple is broken into factions, and by the word of the Lord we have a right to say that "every house divided against itself must fall." The argument above made as to their power to assume the whole commission, or as to their intention and desire to do so, is witnessed in a publication called "The Gospel Echo;" A. Ellmore and W. J. Rice, editors; I. C. Moore and H. M. Evans, co editors. The field editors are given as follows: Andrew Perry, W. P. Gray, Will Ellmore, Covington, Indiana. I transcribe these names lest any should doubt the good standing of the Echo as an authority worthy of respect. Here is the item referred to:—

With all the advancement of methods in the modern religious world, the truth grows more and more apparent that the supreme need of men is the plain, simple gospel which was preached in its fullness for the first time on the pentecost following the resurrection of Christ. While denominational leaders plan to save their party possessions, and well-meant but confused philanthropists offer their reforms to the world, let disciples of Christ preach the word, and contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

I do not doubt their good intentions, but in order to have the faith once delivered to the saints (it is here tacitly admitted they have not this faith), the great commission should not merely be assumed, but should be re-committed to men of these days. For it is an undoubted fact, that that document was given only to "the eleven as they sat at meat," and applies only to regularly chosen apostles. And that man who takes upon himself the authority to teach and baptize from that instrument, falsely presents himself to the world as an apostle of Jesus Christ. And we have a just right, when we read his commission, to see him assume the office and work of the apostles—preaching and baptizing, ordaining others, founding the church, appointing and ordaining elders in every church, casting out devils, speaking in other tongues, healing the sick by the laying on of hands, etc.

"THE TEMPERANCE OF OUR RELIGION."

"Be temperate in all things" was the injunction of Paul, and upon careful consideration of this we find that there is a great deal more implied than appears on the surface. Often we are prone to associate the word "temperance" exclusively with the drink traffic, and more often than wise have gathered up our energies and concentrated them upon this abstract issue, forgetful of its broader and inclusive meaning; and sometimes the intemperate zeal with which the advocates of temperance have propagated their views have done incalculable harm to the cause.

We are not the creatures of a single or separate operation, but we are the result of a complicity of operations; and our very existence is prolonged naturally as well as spiritually by variety; we develop our physical and mental faculties by the absorption of a variety of food adapted to that end. If we only follow one trend of thought or study, we are apt to develop into fanatics, and thus become either more or less the destroyers of that we seek to uphold.

We cannot hope to obtain our salvation, and this is the object of earth life, by only complying with one commandment of God, because we so understand that if we break the least of his commands we are just as guilty as if we broke the whole; and the "preacher" in summing up the whole matter, says, "Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man." Then we see plainly that we have no warrant for becoming "spiritual specialists;" we have no biblical right, at least, to make a speciality" of any particular one of God's commands; but salvation in its highest and fullest sense is emphatically the result of obedience to all that our Father desires.

We would not seek to deprecate or minimize the good wrought by the temperance people, but we would wish to guard against the disposition which is evinced in some to use all their talents and powers for the accomplishment of good solely in this way, forgetful of the deeper meaning of the apostle's admonitions. Surely the "all things" would serve as a basis for arguing and concluding that temperance is of broader issues and vaster interests than merely refraining from drink; especially does this thought commend itself to us when we remember that there are but two forces in our experience, that of "good" and that of "evil;" and if our minds are made up to act as did the warrior prophet, Joshua, namely, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord," it means that we have become the antagonist to all that is opposed to God, and everything that is opposed to God should be the object of our warfare; and a good, efficient soldier who has command of forces, either for attacking or the defensive, always prepares himself for the enemy at every assailable point; and so in our spiritual warfare, we must for our soul's safety be careful that we leave no point susceptible to advantage by our enemy, which if we only build up one portion and weaken others, we must sooner or later be overcome by evils against which we had made no provision. So we are led to believe that Paul made no mistake, but spoke the truth for our good, when he admonished us to be temperate in all things.

Further, the intrinsic value of the apostle's teaching is more fully realized when we remember that there are two extremes in the world of action and thought, which in the abstract are sources of evil, not good; namely, indifference and bigotry. The one is as much to be avoided as the other; indifference leads to carelessness, and from that is evolved callousness, which robs man of all his inherent nobility. Bigotry also degrades and lowers the standard of true manliness; but by another way, inasmuch as bigoted people are only half developed, and that all on one side. The history of the past will furnish ample proof of this in language more reaching in its effect than all the theorizing of the present, emphasizing the fact that when we lose our moderation or temperance in any departure of life, we become more or less the destructors of the very thing we are seeking to establish,—be it socially, politically, or religiously.

We are all of us scholars or learners in the great school of life, and if we would occupy our time advantageously we must always evince a spirit of toleration, even though our minds have received impressions that would cause us to be prejudiced against a cause; yet it is only our bounden duty to give a fair hearing and as far as possible render just judgment to all that profess good, if for no other cause than our own safety. Paul was a splendid specimen of temperance or liberality of thought, though determined and persistent in that which he conceived to be right, yet was always sufficiently honest with himself to submit to greater light. He was not bound down by any dogmatic creed that was not susceptible to the freeing power of divine truth, nor did he desire to walk in darkness when the light was nigh, as may be perceived by observing the fact that even though he had been acquainted with all the intricate sophistries of Phariseism, and had learned the Jewish law at the feet of an accomplished scholar like Gamaliel, and occupied high positions in the active work of the Sanhedrin, yet when the great beams of divine light penetrated the armor of his intense zeal for Judaism, and with iconoclastic blows the force of truth shattered the idols of his nature and erudition, we find that in the process of time his indomitable zeal and energies were bent in the very opposite direction to that for which they had been trained; for instead of continuing to pursue in blind prejudice with unrelenting and vigorous persecution the followers of the lowly Nazarene, he was by divine grace developed into the most tireless, incessant, and courageous advocate of that which he had erstwhile condemned.

Still even in his new career and line of action he was not bigoted nor his creed narrowed; but by the operation of God's Spirit it was broadened to the capacity of embracing "all truth;" and while his labors were wrought in time, yet eternity alone shall estimate the results. He was led to recognize that in God and Christ are found the source and fountain of everything, wheresoever revealed or displayed that is virtuous, good, lovely, just, and true; and all these are embraced in the true worship of God. Bigotry and intolerance are the products of ignorance and superstition, and wherever such are manifest we can safely conclude that such are standing in their own light.

The question with us in relation to everything should be, What is the end in view? Is it praiseworthy? Is it good? And then we must consider the utility of the means employed to gain that end, and when once we have conceived the true import of these, our responsibility commences and it is obligatory upon us to show by consistent and practical observation of the means thus provided the efficacy thereof in producing the results desired, or attaining the end in view. So, in considering the question of religion, our first inquiry must be, What is the object of religion? What is the end attained by it? We answer that upon careful consideration we discover that religion is the medium by or through which we are made acquainted with God and our relation to him, and that the end to be attained by it is the assimilation of the divine nature to be consummated in our eternal salvation. Then the end is good, and indeed the desire of all mankind. Now we ask, Is the means employed (religion) capable of producing the desired effect? We affirm that it is amply sufficient, inasmuch as the means were revealed by God himself, and he is perfect; and hence the means he would provide must be the most perfect and complete for the attaining of the end. So then in the Bible, which reflects the mind and will of God concerning us, we learn what constitutes the religion employed by God as the agency to produce the desired result; namely, our salvation. This all professing religionists must concede.

Now we ask another question, Is it possible to obtain salvation by another way? Can we by utilizing any other means obtain the same result as produced by the religion of God? If we answer Yes! then we affirm that God must have made a mistake, for Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Here is definite, decisive evidence to show the exclusiveness of religion. That that is not in harmony with "the way," and coincides with "the truth," cannot produce the same effect. Further, to provide against the possibility of error, Christ tells us he has not spoken of himself, but his Father which sent him gave him a commandment what he should say and speak. On one occasion some of the disciples turned away and forsook Jesus, and he asked those that remained, Will ye leave me also? And Peter answering said, "To whom shall we go?" Lord, for thou alone "hast the words of eternal life;" and Jesus corroborates that when he said, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God." That knowledge was imparted by following in the way, observing the truth, and imitating the life of Christ,—this medium through or by which we are made acquainted with God. So then the force of this logic must compel us to answer the question emphatically in the negative. Then inasmuch as nothing short of the religion of God can produce the effect we desire, we are necessitated, in order to obtain the approbation of God, to accept all that God has given and put into practice all the precepts of his will. Then, obviously, our duty as students in the school of time, preparing for the examination of eternity, is to seek for truth, for only the truth of God can bless us now and save us hereafter; and Christ tells us that our sanctification is accomplished through the truth, and he adds, "Thy [God's] word is truth." So necessarily it follows that we are not to seal up our perceptive faculties, or say so far as we individually are concerned, to the great tide of truth that God sends sweeping over the souls of men for their sanctification, "So far, shalt thou come and no further." Sometimes this thought may be expressed otherwise; for instance, one says, "Well, my father and father's father believed so and so, and it will do for me." But, my friend, it won't do for you, for you are individually responsible to God for the proper use of your talents; and your business in this life is to do always the things that please God, and if you never make the effort to find out what will please him, you never will do those things conducive to that end.

We must not blind our eyes to that which is true, nor turn a deaf ear to the whisperings of divine inspiration, lest we "frustrate the grace of God" toward us, for that can only be detrimental to our own mental and spiritual development.

Then, in conclusion, if James spoke the truth when he said, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights," we insist that it becomes our imperative duty to always seek the good and true, and when recognized it must be incorporated in the gospel of our salvation, because it comes from God, the author and giver of all that is good and perfect.

Then from the trend of the logic herein employed, we see that if we are bigoted or indifferent in relation to the vital question of religion, with all that religion means, including sobriety, we are jeopardizing our soul's salvation. As we before quoted, Jesus prayed for his disciples, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth;" not a principle or part of truth, but the whole truth. Then our minds must be made up, that if we would obtain our soul's desire, if we would realize the end or object of our worship of God, it must be by following fully and implicitly "the way, the truth, and the life." And he gave us the key to the whole matter when he said, "I came not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me." That is, our egoism must be submerged beneath the overwhelming desire to perform the will of our heavenly Parent, and what we may think must not be made the standard by which we measure the revealed word of God; but always make the word and will of God the standard of our daily deportment. Then, we conclude, that in the temperance of our religion is indeed the safety of our religion.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—Out of sight is not out of mind with Bro. F. R. Tubb across the sea. I had thought his facile pen, also the trenchant one of William Kendrick and other gifted Britons were liable to rust and corrode somewhat, from long-continued inactivity.

I am of the Johnny Bull type in complexion, build, and temperament; but it has been so long since my worthy ancestors embarked from your shores that "the mind of man runneth not to the contrary," as William Blackstone, the celebrated writer on jurisprudence, said in regard to an old highway.

English valor, enterprise, manners, habits, and customs are revolutionizing the world, while the language is the lion of the tribes, and the fearless adventurer of the zones of eternal frost and tropical heat. Field and forest, ores and gems, mechanism and science, commerce and trade, the arts of peace and the achievements of war have engaged the peoples of the island more or less since the Romans garrisoned the land and infused the children of the heath and moor with uplifting thoughts and actions.

Alfred of the long ago did well amid the heptarchy, but later invasions with varying fortunes contributed to establish a royal dynasty and perpetuate the throne. The land of the brave and the free revolted against the usurpations of kingcraft, and the parasites incident to the regal institution that did tax all out of character.

The bone and muscle, the brawn and sinew of the British domain have ever been the ardent friends to American enterprise and genius; while the nobility have felt jealous envy at their loss and our gain. The great I Am, in restoring the gospel, set up the ensign on this favored land, organized and set in motion Christ's church, and thus it is to go forth from the rivers to the ends of the earth. When it was in its veriest infancy it was potentially the latent power, the rising glory, and ultimate emancipator of the world. This "strange act," this "marvelous work," this "gospel of the kingdom," is on the march, and will roll forth conquering and to conquer until peace and good will shall subdue all enmity and resurrect and glorify a fallen world.

One cogent reason why I did not rush into the columns of our church papers was that I have been at home erecting a permanent, commodious home in the center of Zion. I could not see that it would edify to relate how I worked off a double score of excessive flesh, and how tired, restless, hot, and impatient by times I got.

A month ago, while the structure was nearing completion, I left it in care of artisans and the home folks, and now they are beginning to occupy. I am working now for all that is out, trying to make amends for this first considerable layoff for more than a double decade of years. I am fairly well, family comfortably located, comparatively happy, and enjoy much light and liberty.

"To communicate forget not," both by word and pen, will be my aim and object. My desire is to get all the good I can and adhere to all I obtain; my maxim, Onward and upward.

An otherwise fairly good brother elder takes, as I write, a small particle of tobacco to keep him awake. He disavows hypocrisy, but I commented on this wee bit; to wit: "I had just as soon be hung for stealing a sheep as a lamb," but to no visible avail as yet.

The saints generally here abstain from the use of the weed, and many are keeping in part and as a whole the Word of Wisdom, for all of which they are amply and happily repaid. While I have spoken in rather flattering terms of the Anglo-Saxon race, I know full well God has made of one blood all the families of man and he respects not persons. He figures on character and rewards diligence. Piety, persistence, and zeal make a good trinity.

The Lord love the lovable and aid us all to do likewise. M. T. SHORT.

16 Carlingford Road, HARRINGAY,
North London, Sept. 29.

Editors Herald:—Last month I took advantage of a cheap railway excursion to visit Scotland, where I spent a week, visiting Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Hamilton. At the latter place I found four members of the church, Bro. and Sr. Miller and Bro. and Sr. Cairns. The latter have returned from America and are making an effort to arrange their affairs so as to provide a home for an elder when one may come to that country to labor. Bro. Cairns is a collier and states that he can do fully as well in this country financially as he can in America, and he thinks a little better. If a few other families who are alive in the work would move to Scotland and do as this brother is doing, it would be a great help in starting the work there; otherwise the missionary would have to pay his board. Another good brother who is interested in starting the work there has made a very liberal offer financially to sustain an elder. We hope some elder may be able to avail himself of this opportunity in the near future. Summer time will be best, as outdoor preaching will have to be done first.

We spent a pleasant Sunday with the saints. A neighbor opened his house for preaching. A few strangers came in and expressed themselves as pleased with what they heard, and doubtless will come again when opportunity offers. I like the spirit of the Scotch people. They seem to have more life and animation than in some places we have visited.

Edinburgh is a very fine city, clean, with broad streets and many fine edifices. Glasgow is a great city, but I think I saw more drunken men and women there than in any place I was ever in. Women go about the streets in rags and barefooted. Of course my stay was too short to see much of the city. The Brighamites are here. I found their hall, but they only advertise their meetings on Sunday.

I also took a one-day trip to Belfast, Ireland, a fine city. Here I called on Bro. and Sr. Edwards, the only saints there so far as we know. Elder Swan, of Birmingham, visits these scattered ones from time to time in his rounds and furnishes them with spiritual food. We would like to see the gospel planted here, but it would be much more difficult I believe than in Scotland.

Returning from Scotland. I called at Leicester, in answer to an invitation, and found the little branch struggling forward, endeavoring to let its light shine. We failed to get many strangers to hear us in their neat little hall, so we tried street preaching, and had good crowds each night, who paid excellent attention. Several became much interested and came to the spot before we arrived, and waited for us, and stood and listened from beginning till close. None went to sleep either, as some do in church. But we could not stay long enough to see the results, as we had to move on to attend conference at Llanelly. We hope the local brethren however may look after the interested ones.

A lot of literature from our friends in America reached us at Llanelly. This we divided with Elder J. D. Jenkins to distribute in Wales, while I took about all I could carry with me to Nantyglo. Here I joined the local brethren in outdoor work and succeeded in creating the greatest opposition I have encountered yet. I hardly know how it all happened, but it seems that the Devil got angry and he made it warm for us the first few nights; but we remembered the promise "Resist the Devil and he will flee from you." We stood our ground and for three nights it was "nip and tuck;" but on the fourth night he retreated, the tide turned in our favor, and the victory was ours. I think not less than twelve hundred heard the gospel that week. To God be all the praise.

But again we had to move on. The brethren tried to persuade us to remain, but we were anxious to start the work here in London before cold weather set in. We trust the local brethren will continue the good work in Nantyglo and Bryn Mawr. They are alive in the work and anxious to do all in their power. May God bless them. Heralds and Ensigns did us splendid service here and went like "hot cakes." We took great bundles with us each evening, but never had near enough to go round. These we distributed at the close of each meeting, and the people almost fought to get a paper. At one time they made a rush and I was carried completely off my feet, but the people were good natured; so no one was hurt.

Bro. William Newton joined me here on the 14th. Woodgreen is a petty suburb of London, nearly fifteen miles from where the branch is located. We began outdoor preaching on the 17th and have continued every evening save one, when rain prevented. We do not have as large audiences as we have had elsewhere, sometimes but very few; but some are becoming interested, among these a local preacher who assists us with music and offers us the use of his house twice a week for services. He and his wife seem much interested. They appear to be nice people, searching for truth; therefore we hope we are accomplishing good. Though it is uphill work and the enemy seems to be working hard to discourage and prevent us from reaching the people.

I am called away now for a week or two to assist others. Bro. Newton will hold the fort during my absence. He is a willing worker, one who never tires telling the gospel story. We hope to be able to secure a hall as it is getting rather cold for outdoor work. We have failed in finding one yet.

I am feeling well and have been greatly blessed in my work. My vocal organs have recovered and stand the strain of outdoor work much better than I had reason to expect.

Thanks to our many friends for literature and words of encouragement. I am too busy to answer all their letters. We now have a large quantity of Heralds, enough to last us several months. Ensigns and tracts are still in demand. We expect to use these in house-to-house canvass when the weather becomes too cold for outdoor preaching. Rumors of war now fill the air. The indications are that before this reaches you the conflict will have commenced. May Zion soon be redeemed, is our prayer. In bonds,

F. G. PITT.

LENOX, Mich., Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—It gives me much pleasure to read the many interesting letters from the saints of Michigan and other places. We, for there are five of us here in Lenox, seem to be almost forsaken, almost forgotten, by our more fortunate brethren and sisters. Many times we have written for assistance, and as many times we have received kind letters in reply, but in each case the same disappointment, as far as assistance was concerned.

There are many interested ones here, and we firmly believe some of them have been "almost persuaded," but "almost" is not enough. Must we let them remain in darkness? Must they go down to the pit without an effort to cast to them the life-line? You may say to us, Why do you not cast it yourselves? Let us tell you: We have thrown it many times and as many times has it fallen short. They are struggling with the sweet morsel of man-made creeds, are clinging to the water-logged crafts which are fast falling to pieces. One by one they are loosing themselves from the wrecks, which they know cannot save them. One by one they are giving up in despair. Many of them know that their helmsman has lost control of the ship, and also that the compass does not point heavenward, and that sooner or later they must dash upon the rocks. Must we ride on within hailing distance and see them swallowed up by the sea of falsehood and traditions, while we are safely sailing in the good ship "Zion"?

It seems so, for we have no speaking trumpet with us, and we dare not heave to near enough to hail them without, as the water near them is full of shoals and hidden rocks. Must we change our course and leave them to sure destruction, or will someone come to our aid with a trumpet large enough to be heard by our drifting fellow men? The drifting ones are the sons and daughters of educated and refined parents, and have been carefully trained to follow their leaders in the way which many have gone, with the mistaken idea of security, while their leaders, if they would speak the truth, know too well that they themselves are quaking with fear for their own safety.

What means this discord in the religious denominations of to-day? Why are many of the independent thinkers being ousted from their ministry, and branded as heretics?

The church is coming out of the wilderness. The honest in heart are shaking off the slimy coils of his satanic majesty and are coming out into the beautiful light of the gospel. May God speed the day when the gospel in its fullness will be enthroned in the hearts of men, and tradition will have departed to the regions from whence it came, is the prayer of,

Your humble brother,

GRINNELL, Iowa, Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—After the great feast of spiritual things at the Woodbine reunion, by the urgent request of a number of the saints of the Galland's Grove branch to go home with them, I did so. I stayed a week and preached six sermons to a very appreciative congregation; a large crowd the last night, all that could well be seated in their large church; and O, what a fine choir they have there, such splendid singing! If they enjoyed my preaching as I enjoyed their singing, we certainly had a good time; and such noble, generous, goodhearted saints as they have in that branch; I could hardly get away from them. May our God bless them all for their kindness in every way, for they can see what the man of God needs, and are ready to supply his wants.

I came home on the 4th and found Bro. F. A. Russell home also. I was told he preached a good sermon for them here on the 24th. Yesterday I spoke in our hall.

The work in this place is still on the move. Yesterday I baptized four noble young folks; two young ladies and two young men. Bro. Russell assisted at the water and in confirmation. The good Spirit was present. A few weeks ago Bro. F. A. Russell baptized Bro. E. Clark, his brother-in-law, at the Runnells reunion, and Sr. Mabel Wildermuth from here was baptized; so you see if we have no branch here, we are not dead.

We have about twenty members here now, and others investigating. Our sisters have a nice little Sunday school, also a Religio; and when Bro. Russell and I are both away there is no one here holding the priesthood; therefore I think our members are doing real well, considering the disadvantages they have to encounter. May our Father bless them in their effort in doing good, in trying to build up his kingdom.

After our conference at Des Moines on the 14th I will go to Ames, in Story County, to open a new place in a union church. I will see how deep the union is grounded, or whether it is just for "me and my wife, my son John and his wife, we four and no more." There it is again, unbridled as usual. Well, I hope it will be all right in the judgment. I know no one will say they did not understand me.

May God bless his people everywhere, is the prayer of
J. S. ROTH.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 3.

Editors Herald:—I call you brethren, although I never saw you; but that is the way I feel toward you. I am out here in this city and there is not one saint out here that I can find. I am alone and have to go to the Baptists and they look at me sideways, for I tell them in very plain language that I am a Latter Day Saint. I give some of their members the Herald to read, and some are well pleased with it, and others will make very crooked faces.

I wish a good man like Bro. White or Bro. Williams could spend one year in this city. I believe there could be one of the biggest branches built up here. If I had money I would have some printed matter sent me, but I am poor and can't do it. May God bless you is my prayer. Good-bye.

LEAVENWORTH, Ind., Oct. 7.

Editors Herald:—On the 16th to the 24th of September Bro. Marshall and Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., and the writer met in a grove meeting near New Marion with saints and friends of Jefferson and Ripley counties. An enjoyable time was had; we had the flintest and jolliest saints in attendance I ever saw, for so were their names (Jolleys and Flints). This was the first time I had met with the saints there since 1897, at the September conference, when Bro. E. C. Briggs was there. One might think that a long time to be away from one part of his mission field, which it is; but not so long when we take into consideration the vastness of this district, it being about one hundred and eighty miles wide and three hundred miles long, and I live somewhere near the center of the district and no missionaries but myself to look after the work in the south half of it, and the above place being in the north part of this field.

The locals are doing what they can to help me. Just think of three missionaries laboring over a territory of three hundred by one hundred miles. While the work may not be thriving in the branches as it should, it is gaining favor in the eyes of the people, until we have friends in almost every neighborhood wanting to hear the gospel. If we had more helpers to push out in the work, ere long we could have other honest souls to fall in line with us.

The grove meeting closed September 24, and we next met with the saints of Louisville, October 1. How we rejoiced to see how zealous the saints were. They were firm in their testimony that they knew this is the work of God. They are truly united as one, which could not be brought about only by the working of the Spirit of God, which proves to us that they are keeping God's law, and God is blessing them in so doing.

On leaving Louisville I made my way to the place of writing. We are having some good meetings; the Lord is with us by his Spirit, especially so on last evening, for which I thank his holy name. From here we go to the conference at Byrneville October 14 and 15, where we hope we will meet with Bro. E. C. Briggs again.

I was thinking of writing in relation to the gathering, but as Bro. J. W. Wight has expressed my sentiments, I will refrain.

Yours in hope of the redemption of Zion,
GEORGE JENKINS.

NANTYGLO, Wales, Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—We are having a good interest here in outdoor work, and because of the interest Satan wakes up, sends an agent at Abertillery to lecture on the square on Joseph Smith, the Mormon impostor, bank robbery, fowl stealing, etc. I made a defense after him with liberty, from a Scriptural standpoint, got two letters in a local paper, offered a reward of five pounds to the person who could produce the court findings of Joseph Smith's guilt in any way. No one has been successful yet.

I invited Bro. F. G. Pitt to aid us, and he came to the rescue September 5, and on the 6th at Bryn Mawr, held forth preaching and kind of answering questions for about two hours. The enemy could not overcome Bro. Pitt by gospel reason, so, as usual, the polygamic epidemic came forth, and to prove the point the Rev. Myrrdin Davies, as he was called, asked the audience if they hadn't heard that Joseph Smith was a polygamist. No answer. He tried again, but it came "No; No;" so he said next evening he would prove that the prophet had seven wives. Next evening crowds waiting for us cheered us for coming, as I may say to the battle. The opponent spoke first, then Bro. Pitt did about three quarters of an hour's preaching; disorder then by some and another local preacher intervened to vilify Smith, also said he had proofs. Bro. Pitt wanted them read. Reply was to-morrow night. Bro. Pitt read the findings of the court in our defense, in Canada, also the Temple Lot extracts. After a rough wrangle we broke the meeting by delivering or holding up Ensigns and Heralds. Some hundreds went, everybody grabbing for them in spite of opposition.

On Friday night these men had got the bellman out, announcing something about Mormonism to be exposed unawares. We were in the battle; Brn. J. Jones, Oakey, Evans, and Bro. Pitt were present. The clique had come to oust us, about eight hundred or nine hundred present. Encyclopedias were read, exciting the minds of the hearers, the same tirade as Clark Braden uses. Poor

Bro. Pitt and myself up on a wagon, two of them speaking to his once, and that was no go. He was interrupted so much it looked worse than useless to prove we were not of the Utahists. Bro. Pitt showed his license to prove that President Smith was now the President of our church. When Bro. Pitt wanted to read something it would make a good snap shot—I had a bicycle lamp, showing him light. It was a rough time.

I say Bro. Pitt is made of the right stuff for Wales; room for a dozen like him, that would take the same way of working this mission. It is hard to get people indoors here; they seem afraid, but outdoor work is a success to advertise, if it is only to show the difference between the Brighamites and us. On Saturday eve Bro. Pitt had an attentive audience of about two hundred and fifty, and the town counselor, who has been the schoolmaster, congratulated him, giving a speech that did us favor. On Sunday morning again a fair crowd listened well at the same spot. Bro. Pitt was determined not to be beat.

The tide has turned; folks say 'twas a shame for us to be treated like we were. It will take a lot of ridicule to cause the saints here to apostatize. We had good meetings at our hall here the remainder of Sunday. On Monday, at Abertillery, a good lecture was given against Utahism. There are four missionaries there, but they let us alone always.

We need laborers in this part. I won't dictate who I should like to have; the saints ought to learn to honor all those whom God appoints; his servants should be equally honored.

May God direct qualified men, men of grit, good hustlers to this unfavored part of his vineyard, is my desire and prayer. Won't say any more about Bro. Pitt for fear some one will say I am fishing, but we commend his labors very much.

In bonds,
THOMAS JONES.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—It is truly a pleasure to note improvements in our church periodicals; viz., Herald, Ensign, Autumn Leaves, Zion's Hope, and Gospel Quarterlies. Every Latter Day Saint ought to have access to them, and they are reasonable in price, hence in the reach of all.

While doing gospel work in the northwest part of this, Galland's Grove, district last month I was furnished a horse and buggy by Mr. and Sr. C. A. Edson, of Schaller, which enabled me to travel without expense to the church, and to do more effectual work as Bishop's agent.

In Cherokee County I had the pleasure of preaching a few sermons to members of the Pilot Rock branch. It was encouraging to see a greater interest manifest in the law of tithes and offerings.

Closing my labors in Cherokee County I returned the horse and buggy on the 28th ult., distributing tracts and church papers by the way, hoping to interest some sufficiently that they would either subscribe for the papers or order books advertised.

For ten days I labored at Deloit, Arion, and Dow City. At the latter place I find a growing interest in the "temporal law." Bro. and Sr. F. R. Schafer furnished me a conveyance, and now I am visiting the Galland's Grove branch. Preached twice in their church Sunday. Dear saints of the Galland's Grove district, I hope you will faithfully discharge your duties in paying tithes and offerings to the church. Address me at Deloit, Crawford County, Iowa.

Faithfully yours,
C. J. HUNT.

FLAG POND, Va., Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—Several of the brethren and sisters have asked me to tell them through the Herald the kind of stamps wanted. Please tell them they are the old, obsolete ones, from 1847 to 1875, with high values, of all dates; also match, medicine, revenue, and departments, I want, with any curios, works of art, or nature. It will be a help to me and not hurt anyone.

Yours in Christ,
MRS. N. J. ROLINETTE.

RHONDDA VALLEY, Wales, Sept. 23.

Editors Herald:—I have thought for some time I would write and let you know how the work of God is in the murky regions of the Rhondda Valley. I might say things are not as I would like them to be. Some saints are humble, striving to do their duty; others are indifferent and lukewarm in the work.

One great drawback is, we have no meeting room; we hold our meetings in private houses, one time in one place, and one time in another, around the homes of the saints; and as we are living far apart, it is very difficult to accomplish much good. And it makes it more difficult with the sisters, as we have to walk over large hills. The Rhondda is very hilly; it consists of two valleys. Some saints live in one valley and some in the other. Then one lot has to walk every Sunday to meeting, and it takes a full hour of hard climbing from our house to Bro. Collins', at Gilpach, where the meeting will be next Sabbath, September 24. Bro. Pitt was with the writer there a few months back, and I am inclined to think he will not forget the hills of Wales. He is a very good missionary, trying to uplift the blood-stained banner of King Immanuel to a sinful people. My heart's desire is that he may be blessed and accomplish much good in the Master's cause, for this mission is a hard one. The saints as a rule are poor, but they are good-hearted and are willing to share, and give with a cheerful spirit such as they have; and many here would help more if their means would allow.

My desire is that the saints in Wales may be prospered that they may be able to help more in this grand and glorious work. I learn we are going to lose two faithful sisters in Alice Edwards and Lilly Collins. Those two sisters have walked the mountains to worship the God of these latter days. Sr. Edwards' husband, I learn, is in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, in America, and she intends to share the joys and troubles there with him. We lose two faithful sisters, and my heart's desire is they may be protected in crossing the great ocean, that Sr. Edwards may yet join her partner in life.

A few months ago I was chosen president of the Penygraig branch, during which time I have done my best to improve the condition of the branch. I have an excellent branch teacher, a faithful young brother, in David Collins. He works in the spirit of his calling, and attends to his duties as a servant of God. He is very wise in dealing with members who are indifferent and tries to win with love back to the path of duty. May the God of Israel assist him in this and every other good work.

Three weeks ago we had our district conference. The writer was not present, but I learn they had good sessions. Bro. Bishop, of Cardiff, and Bro. John D. Jenkins (late missionary) were the speakers. I understand they spoke with good liberty. I trust good was accomplished. Elder John D. Jenkins, missionary for Wales, was released. I think it wise in so doing, under existing circumstances, which will prove well in due course.

On September 9 we had two grand meetings; Elder A. N. Bishop, of Cardiff, was the speaker in the afternoon. His subject was, "What is the gospel?" In the evening, "What must a man do to be saved?" The hall was packed, the preacher enjoyed good liberty, the saints were pleased with the meetings, and some, I firmly believe, were convinced of the truth. I wish we could keep these meetings up at Porth. The writer is firmly impressed that if the saints here would all agree and make an effort at Porth, and rent the hall we had for these meetings, good would be accomplished. Some outsiders want to know when the preacher is coming again. "Good sermons;" "Sound arguments that cannot be refuted;" that is what some say of our meetings at Porth.

I might mention also that good old Bro. Trenchard, of Cardiff, was at each service in question and denounced the evils and follies of Brigham Young and his damnable heresies. He is an orator and can manage the subject in a masterly manner, as he is well informed, and has their Journal of Discourses, and many of their works, which he uses to condemn them with. These meetings with regards to exposing the church in Utah passed off peacefully, as there were none of their members present, as none live in Porth, I believe.

On September 17 we had meetings at Istrad. Elder A. N. Bishop was the speaker, subjects the same as at Porth last Sabbath. We had a nice few people present, and some of the Utah people (I mean Brighamites) were present. Bro. Trenchard, of Cardiff, was there again, exposing their false doctrines. It was too much for them; they could not contain themselves and acted very unwisely and interrupted our meeting. Bro. Bishop had to threaten the police on them before perfect order could be restored. They asked a few questions, which were answered them. They are down on Bro. Trenchard, as he was formerly a member with them. He is just the gentleman to meet them. He is only a member with us; of course he does not preach, only lecturing. He is called, I believe, and no doubt will be ordained shortly to an office.

I think much as to which is the best way to get our faith before the people. My opinion is that if the church could purchase a Bible carriage, which would cost about eighty pounds and get an elder and priest to travel together, they could live in the van, and could preach and warn every village in Wales; and I firmly believe good would be done. Of course it would be a hard life for missionaries, but we are in a good work and it is worth sacrificing to get the truth before the people.

I ask you to pray for Penygraig branch and its officers, that we may fight the good fight of faith, and continue to the end, that we may all appear at Christ's second coming and gain an entrance into the city of God.

Yours in the faith,
L. BISHOP.

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 21.

Editors Herald:—My many friends in America and in this land would like to know what I have been doing and how I have been getting on, and I take this method of letting them know.

I find it is very difficult to get the truth of the restored gospel before the people in this country, much more difficult than when I was here in 1888-89. There seems to be more carelessness and indifference regarding it, and a seeming disposition to let us severely alone.

We cannot get the people to attend our meetings. There are many causes for this, and one of the reasons is the enormity of the Brighamite teachings and doings. There have been so many works written regarding the same, and the people as a whole have been educated to believe that the Latter Day Saints' teaching is not worth their attention, and that it is not safe for them to have anything to do with it, and the adversary is doing his work very effectively and gathering his combined force, knowing he has but a short time to do his work.

I have labored much in Plymouth since my arrival on this mission, doing most of my preaching in the Odd Fellows Hall, and on the quay, in the open air. Sometimes I would have great crowds while preaching on the quay, but greater when I would give them the privilege to ask questions. I sometimes had many classes gathered around me, such as the infidels, spiritualists, Unitarians, freethinkers, and many others. The Holy Spirit was always with me, and I was able to answer all their questions; all praise be to my heavenly Father.

God enabled me to see the true condition of the people on the quay, in a dream or vision. I saw, every way I looked, hundreds of nasty serpents of every kind and size making towards me. I had a big club or stick in my hand, using it with all my might; but none of them had power to hurt me. That Sunday morning as I was preaching they gathered around me by the hundreds, but I had power over them all.

Since I came to Plymouth I have baptized seven, and blessed thirteen children. I visited Penzance and Nellan, in Cornwall. I did some preaching and teaching in both of these places; they did not seem to know anything about the angel's message, or the gospel restored. I had some who were taking great interest in my teaching, but the enemy was after them, and books or literature were soon furnished them, and they wanted no more of me nor the gospel.

I visited the saints at Havetree, near Exeter, and did some preaching, and blessed one and baptized two, I also visited Cardiff and preached for them when they opened their hall, and had the pleasure of meeting our beloved Bro. and Sr. Pitt. I also preached five times for the saints at Lydney. They were making ready to build a church. I hope they will have the needed help, and that God's blessing will be with them.

I have labored with the saints in the London branch about two months, and preached about forty-two times. I did some little outdoor preaching while there, with Bro. Bradshaw. I baptized three children there; there were very few strangers that visited the saints' church, casually one or two, while I was there.

I attended the Manchester conference, which convened on August 6, 1899. I had another pleasure of meeting Bro. and Sr. Pitt there. We seem to feel good in one another's company, and I also felt good in meeting so many of the dear saints; although the conference was not what I would like to have seen it. There was not enough or sufficient humility manifested by some; too much of a spirit for mastery, to have our own way; not to be subject to the powers sent of God; and also a spirit is made manifest by a few that no missionaries from America are needed in England; and yet I notice that the work is suffering in many parts of the country because no one remembers the injunction of the loving Savior, "Feed my sheep;" "Feed my lambs."

To show that this is the true state of affairs, when I was here in 1888-89, I labored much in the southwest of England and organized the Broadclist branch, with an elder, priest, teacher, and deacon, about fourteen members; and many have been baptized there since that time, by the elder, Bro. Tucker; and there were eighteen members in Plymouth. Now these brethren at Broadclist paid their tithing regularly, and Bro. Bord before his death left to the church forty pounds, two hundred dollars. Many of them have been faithful until the present. Now the authority in this country soon after I left for America called in the licenses of the officers of the Broadclist branch and without assigning any reason for the same, and did not return them. I wrote Bro. Pitt in regard to it, but no one seemed to know anything about it, and at the Manchester conference I there introduced the matter, and new licenses were ordered to be given them. Now none of the ministry in this country had, from the time I left them until the present, paid any attention to them in any shape or form.

Now these ministers at Broadclist did not know whether they could administer in any shape or form; no one to inform them. But the missionaries from America, Bro. James Caffall, visited them and labored a few weeks, and so did Bro. Pitt. That is all the help they have had. Bro. Pitt baptized while there five. Now there are twenty-five members in Plymouth, and they have not as much as a deacon to look after them. And yet some say they do not want any American missionaries. I have labored with them about twelve months. I think many missionaries from America are needed in this land, and I hope the coming conference will see its way clear to send many able men to care for the work, not only in England, but in Wales, and Scotland, and other parts of Europe. There are many of the branches here that need much tender care.

I hope God will remember the ministry in this land and that each shall be able to see his littleness and his dependence upon God, that they may be humble.

Bro. Pitt and myself are laboring in the north of London, preaching in the open air. My family is now located in this place.

Your brother in bonds,

WILLIAM NEWTON.

RAVENDEN SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—About four years ago I commenced preaching at Martins Creek and vicinity, where I found a few saints. After this, Elders Montague and Ward organized a branch there. I was elected to preside, and have been sustained to date.

Not until recently have I been able to make any visible impression. There is quite a congregation of Disciples or Christians at that point, whose young people are always at my meetings, and in vain have I tried to get them to sing for me. It appears that recently some one or more of them have been listening to the thunder of the gospel; at any rate the leading spirits got one, Elder Harris, to "rip us up the back;" but my congregation were present to face the music. Bro. Yates offered him some of our literature for his information, but he knew all he wished to about our doctrine and preferred to go it blind; so he proceeded to erect his man of straw and then show his dexterity belaboring it. His hearers, however, knew our position much better than he, and soon became disgusted, and so failed to come out to hear him. Some of his own people requested me to begin meeting Friday night before my regular appointment on Sunday and reply to him. This I did.

There was not much to reply to, as he had assumed false positions for us, wherein we stand not. So this big gun shot wide of the mark.

I was happily surprised when the young people who before refused, now volunteered to sing at my meetings. But all is not smooth sailing yet, for one of their elders, Bymun Black, editor of the Eye Opener, now confronts me with the stale old church propositions.

With the sanction of the members of the Martins Creek branch I have signed his propositions, debate to begin November 20.

I recently had a short debate with Elder Black, and send you herewith brief clippings of the same.

I have long since written our missionary in charge of this corner relative to the work here, but can get no reply. Elder Black had a number of their elders present at our recent debate. One Elder Spurlock rendered himself conspicuous by trying to "grin me down." I finally told him it was useless for him to try that. This called attention to the fact, so he gave it up, but reported the debate to the Eye Opener, wherein he manifests marked ability to misstate facts.

He writes that Baldwin "said of so much confusion, strife, and division among the so-called people of God, the cause could be nothing else but their depending on the Bible for a guide;" whereas I said depending on their own wisdom contrary to the Bible, and independent of inspiration or revelation.

The only contradictions I called attention to in the Bible were those relative to the character of God, because Elder Black had affirmed the Bible to be all-sufficient to give us a knowledge of God. The twenty-four questions that Elder Black propounded were a list of Braden's questions, and after Braden's manner of putting them at the last possible minute.

This Spurlock is a relative of Elder Jephtha Spurlock. Would to God he were one half as humble and honest as Bro. Jephtha.

We are resting satisfied over the results of the past debate. Viewing the situation from a physical standpoint, I am working against great odds, for the Christian Church has a popular hold in this country. I should be happy to see some elder put in an appearance before the 20th of November; should much like to advise with some one under conference appointment. I do not appreciate being forced into public debate without the knowledge or consent of our missionary in charge, but we are here, and the people are beginning to find it out. Nor do we propose to stand still and see our Master's cause brushed aside as a thing of naught.

The presence and aid of any elder who can be with us at the given date will be duly appreciated. Debate to last four days.

By what means can I commune with the missionary in charge of Northern Arkansas?

Respectfully,

D. R. BALDWIN.

LOWRY CITY, Mo., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—We have been enjoying a feast of good things of late. On September 25 Elder R. T. Walters and priest A. C. Silvers, with the assistance of Bro. Frank Manner and his team, brought the district missionary tent to this beautiful city of about six hundred inhabitants, and on the evening of the 26th it was up with Bro. Walters in the stand declaring the same gospel that Jesus and his apostles did in their day of preaching. These two brethren kept their post until Saturday night. Bro. D. C. White having arrived on Saturday he filled the stand, and on Sunday at eleven; and on Monday night Bro. White went to the High Hill schoolhouse, a distance of five miles from the city, and preached each evening but once through the week. On Sunday at eleven he preached at the Landaker schoolhouse east of the city, and at 2:30 baptized

Bro. J. A. Mannering's wife, and then returned to the city and preached in the tent at night.

All this time Brn. Walters and Silvers remained with the tent and had one, a Mr. Benjamin Franklin Metz, of the city, ready for the water, and on Monday he was baptized by Bro. Walters. Monday night the meetings closed with a large audience, which had been the case all through the series of meetings, which in all were of fourteen days' duration with the tent.

Bro. Silvers left on Sunday morning for Lebeck; Brn. Walters and D. C. White remained and saw the tent stored away for the winter. On Tuesday they turned their faces, as did Bro. Silvers, for the Rich Hill conference to be held October 14.

May the Lord bless the brethren and the good seed they have sown.

T. R. WHITE.

ORCHARDVILLE, Ill., Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—I succeeded in getting the inclosed challenge into the Baptist News, a paper edited by W. P. Throgmorton, at Duquoin, Illinois. The three lines which I have underscored are what the editor has to say in the matter. Please publish the entire clipping in the Herald; also state that Bro. White will begin another debate with Braden at Alma, Illinois, November 6, and continue six days, on the same propositions debated at Orchardville. Your brother,

F. M. SLOVER.

The "Latter Day Saints" are after Clark Braden with a sharp stick as the following clearly shows:—

"The Rev. Clark Braden is hereby challenged to repeat the debate held with me near Orchardville, Illinois, from September 12-18, 1899, at Alma, Illinois. I also challenge him to repeat it at every hamlet, town, and city, where he may attempt to preach or lecture against the faith taught by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This challenge holds good, the Lord willing, during my natural lifetime.

"I. N. WHITE."

September 18, 1899.

The propositions and their order are as follows:—

1.—"Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?"

I. N. WHITE affirms,

CLARK BRADEN denies.

2.—"Is the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice, with the Church of Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago?"

CLARK BRADEN affirms,

I. N. WHITE denies.

NEW CANAAN, Conn., Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—Your weekly visits are looked for with eagerness, as you come laden with good news from almost every part of the earth of the angel's message being presented to the children of men, many of whom receive it gladly.

We cannot report much from this part because the people are very slow to hear the gospel because of their blind guides. The truth has no charms for them. Bro. M. H. Bond was with us at conference, September 3, 4; preached for us morning and evening, making a good and telling effect upon all present. In the evening the storm broke over us upon the outside and raged terribly for some time, in such a way as to almost drown the sound of the preacher's voice.

From here Bro. Bond went to Danbury, Connecticut. Meeting with about the same class of people there as here he moved on to New Haven, where he did some little labor. Since his departure from the last-named place the writer has had the pleasure of burying two precious souls in the waters of baptism, mostly the fruits of other men's labors, the two baptized were residents of New Haven, Connecticut; so the work moves slowly along in this eastern country.

We are pleased to see so much written upon the gathering. Go on brethren, press the matter before us until all God's people may come to a perfect understanding of the matter. It certainly must be pleasing to our heavenly Father, because of the very fact that agitating this question in the spirit of love will bring many to a better understanding of how our heavenly Father purposes to gather and protect his people in days of trouble; for surely many things are seen and heard that confirm us in the thought that surely the great and terrible day of the Lord is near at hand.

Asking the prayers of the saints that we in this part of the field may be faithful in all things,

Yours in gospel bonds,

ALBERT E. STONE.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—Being in this city at the time I improved the opportunity of attending the semiannual conference of the dominant church on the 6th to the 8th inst. I was especially anxious to observe their mode of doing business as a body, but in that I was disappointed, as no business whatever was done with the exception of the authorities of the church being presented for the people to sustain, which in each instance was done by unanimous vote. The names were presented by George Q. Cannon. Lorenzo Snow was sustained as President of the church and as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator in all the world; George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith as his counselors. The Quorum of the Twelve were sustained, after which the members of the Presidency and the members of the Quorum of the Twelve were sustained as prophets, seers, and revelators in all the world. Lorenzo Snow was sustained as Trustee in Trust for the whole church.

That, to me, most peculiar and unbecoming in the procedure was that these men voted for themselves every time. I paid especial notice to the fact that when Mr. Snow's name was presented as Trustee in Trust his own hand was lifted voting for himself.

There was nothing new presented at the conference. The importance of paying tithing, which of late has been almost the exclusive theme among the people here, was the principle largely dwelt upon. Still there was an apparent improvement in the preaching compared with former years, for while the "living oracles" were mentioned now and again, and the necessity of obeying counsel was not forgotten, yet the books were brought forward and quoted from quite extensively by nearly all the speakers. President Snow quoted largely from the Doctrine and Covenants, emphasizing the fact that God in the early days of the church gave a law for the government of his people, and that it is the duty of the elders to see that the law is kept. He said there had been a great and serious failure in the past because the people had not observed God's law. They had been driven from their homes and from place to place away from the land designated by the Lord as the land of Zion, which God permitted because they had not observed his word. He said we can only become worthy to return and do the work wherein others so seriously failed upon the conditions of returning to the law.

This all sounded good to me; it was what we of the Reorganization have been preaching in the past; and I was glad to behold that the necessity of keeping the commandments of God was made so prominent a theme. But President Snow and his associates did not seem to realize that any but the law of tithing had been violated, and it was this law seemingly that they were anxious to enforce. However, I felt thankful for so much truth from that source, and I hope it may have a good effect.

I learn that the doctrine of Adam God and the like is repudiated by leading men among them, and I trust the day may speedily come when upon all questions of rules and actions, the law of God, and not the counsels of men, may be recognized as the unerring standard.

Yours for truth,

H. N. HANSEN.

MANEBACH, Germany, Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—This is to notify one and all who are interested in the German mission, that we cannot get permission from the governments and spiritual authorities to preach in Germany. The same is true of Switzerland. We are therefore under obligation to return to America. We expect to take the Kensington on the 7th inst. at Antwerp and will reach New York about the 17th if all goes well.

We expect to labor amongst the Germans in America, and anyone who wants to correspond can do so to our home addresses: Frank Steffe, Kirtland, Ohio, and Robert Oehring, Meadow Grove, Nebraska.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

MOTHERS.

One mother, once, when her encircling arm
Grew powerless to shield her child from harm,
Wove a frail basket of the trembling reed,
And, strengthening it with loving art, she laid Him helpless, thus, beside the river's brim,
Trusting that God would keep and care for him.

Since then all mothers, taught by her, have known
God's care is larger, better than their own.
They weave their trembling faith into an ark,
And strengthen with their prayers the tiny bark,
And trust their growing children thus to him
Who saved the lad beside the river's brim.

—Mrs. F. L. Ballard.

STRENGTHEN ONE ANOTHER.

"O, I'm so discouraged; I feel like giving up completely!"

Yes, we hear it on every hand; in the affairs of the family, the church, the state; everywhere, among those who are and should be workers among mankind, because of the talents entrusted to their keeping. We hear the cry of discouragement, till I sometimes think it is one of the adversary's strongest weapons.

"Why is it thus?" I keep asking myself over and over again. Is it because of the magnitude of the work in which we are engaged? Not that alone, I believe; but because we try to do too much, and that in our own strength. And we are too anxious to see immediate results. If we could but get up and away from our narrow, restricted view of life, and upon the mountain tops of faith, in the calm sunlight of eternal truth and right, view the petty obstacles that retard and hinder our work, we would feel not discouraged, not like giving up; but only the more determined to do all that lay within our power, and leaving the rest in His hands, have sweet rest and content.

If we could but see things that trouble us today as we will view them a few years hence, even, I think that many of our troubles would seem so trivial that they would hardly be worth a thought, much less the hours of precious time in which, by brooding over our weakness and the strength of the foe, we unfit ourselves for work.

If we could only remember that whatever our work,—whether it be the training of a wayward child, or with the class in the Sunday school as teacher, or as president of branch, or even church itself,—God only requires our best at our hands, it does seem to me it would tend to lessen our fears in that direction. However zealous we may be, and however much we long to see the right triumph and truth prevail, there is One who is more anxious, more eager than we can be in this finite condition, for his love is infinite. And oh! how comforting the thought, when seemingly our best desires are not realized, our best plans are frustrated, that there is One whose word will not return unto him void; but it will accomplish that wherewith it was sent. Again.

Our work may seem but a discord,
Though we do the best we can;
But others will hear the music,
If we carry out God's plan.

All hinges upon our carrying out God's plan. "Are we doing our utmost?" should be the question daily asked ourselves; and if we can truthfully answer in the affirmative, we have no reason to feel discouraged, for God will take care of all the rest, and he is fully able to do it.

Again, the thought is presented to my mind that we do not often enough speak words of cheer and encouragement to each other. This thought has been quite forcibly impressed but recently. One of the ablest contributors to the Hope seriously entertained the thought of laying down her pen, and giving up her work in that line, feeling that she was not doing much. For myself and family, I can truly say her writings have long been a source of pleasure and profit. But I have never once returned a "thank you," nor a "God speed you in your work." How selfish it was of me, and others like me! How long would it take us to write a few lines of encouragement to these noble fellow-workers, who are doing so much for us, and not us only, but through us for unborn generations. Who can estimate such work? Ah! who can estimate anybody's work, even of the least of us? But in the light of the judgment day, when the books are opened, will it be said of us: "Thou hast done what thou couldst." If it is, it will matter little, I think, as to the quantity of the work, but it will matter much as to the quality.

And so, dear sisters, let us not be discouraged; but let us commune more oft with the Infinite source of all strength, and though the forces be strong and formidable that are arrayed against us, yet even stronger is He in whose hands rests the destiny of nations and He is our Father, our God.

THE NEW SONG.

BY ALICE R. CORSON.

Once, in the happy long ago,
Life seemed so joyous, bright, and fair;
So fraught with pleasure, love, and peace,
Without one shadow—trace of care;

That just to live seemed bliss complete;
But that was long, so long ago.
Since then I've drained full many a cup,
Whose bitterness alone I know.

Ah me! so full of pain is life,
Each rose conceals a stinging thorn;
Each cup of sweet holds drops of gall,
And every joy leaves cause to mourn.

Methinks 'twere sweet to lay me down
With daisies growing o'er my breast,
And all life's weary pain forget,
In an unbroken, quiet rest.

For I am weary of the strife,
The cruel wrongs, the repressed tears
That sometimes burst their bonds; the cross
I bear, and must, through weary years.

'Twas thus I sang with wailing note,
Nor knew where rest and peace were found,

Since I have learned Redemption's song,
My harp gives forth a gladder sound.

I heard a Voice so fraught with love,
I could but list. "Come unto me,
Poor, weary, heavy laden child,
Sweet rest and peace I offer thee.

□ "Take thou my yoke and thou shalt find
The bearing of it bringeth rest.
And learn of me, the Lowly One,
And thou shalt be most fully blest."

Oh, blessed word! Oh, precious yoke!
Oh, sweetest rest! Henceforth I sing
With joyful heart the glad, new song,
And crown the Lowly One my King.

ATTENTION.

Attention, that is one of the all-absorbing questions with the Sunday school teacher. But does the teacher pay attention to the demands of the pupils?—sometimes expressed by their silence, sometimes by their words, sometimes by their dullness, and sometimes by their alertness, by their everyday interests as well as by their Sunday appearance. If you do not pay attention to the individual pupils, how can you expect to gain the attention of the class?

Some preachers spoil a good sermon by making it too long, and trying to preach too much at one time. Many teachers do the same thing, and get discouraged because they cannot teach to young pupils everything they can glean from the lesson. Let us remember that one thought well taught is better than a dozen half taught, and that one truth is about all most young children, and many older ones, can comprehend and retain at a time.

The engineer, or machinist, usually cleans and oils and gets everything into proper order before the machine is started. This plan will also work well in the Sunday school. If the superintendent and his officers and teachers will get to Sunday school a little before it is to begin and see that all the details are attended to before starting, everything will, most likely, start off in good order. Many superintendents, and others too, work hard enough, but they do not work at the right time. If you want the school to start off without disorder or confusion, see that everything is in order before the signal is given.

THE POOR UNFORTUNATES.

There are many unfortunates in this world, and among those we wish to reach with this number of the Advocate are those unfortunate church members who consider themselves beyond the Sunday school; and those careless "lords of creation," who think the Sunday school is only for women and children. We do not ask for impossibilities, and we understand full well that some of the parents cannot attend the Sunday school regularly, but we do plead for the active, sympathetic interest of all the parents in the work of the Sunday school.

Approach the parents of your pupils while everything is well. Get acquainted with them and gain their confidence, and then when you approach them with a complaint of the misbehavior of their child, they will doubtless assist you.

The following paper is one of several that made up what was called a "Moderation Program" at the convention of Fremont, Iowa, district convention, last May. The evening was set apart for temperance work, and the district officers conceived the idea of teaching "temperance in all things." We believe that there are few persons to whom the paper in some of its parts will not be a good admonition. Read and reflect.

MODERATION IN OUR CONVERSATION.

BLANCHE J. ANDREWS.

- We should not
 - Tell vulgar stories.
 - Carry or hint at scandal.
 - Exaggerate.
 - Unkindly criticise.
 - Repeat unkind remarks.
 - Repeat everything, though true.
 - Speak to wound.
 - Lightly speak of sacred things.
 - Speak idle flattery.
- We should
 - Speak to cheer.
 - Speak to enlighten.
 - Speak where duty demands.
 - Use our tongue to praise the Lord.
 - Let our conversation be pure.
 - In our conversation honor our profession.
 - Freely award merited praise.

"Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile."—Ps. 34: 13.

The tongue of the just is as choice silver.

Death and life are in the power of the tongue.

Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles.

If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart; this man's religion is vain.

Even so the tongue is a little member and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth.

But the tongue no man can tame. It is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.

It is not seemly to indulge in loud or boisterous speech, or to relate coarse and vulgar stories, or stories in which the names of God and Christ are blasphemed.

"Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—Bible and Doctrine and Covenants.

"Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is richer, happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one to society; it is disgusting to refined people, and abominable to the good."

Vulgar story telling! Perhaps some of you think it useless to warn saints against this evil; but it is more common than you might suppose, for the Lord has seen fit to warn his ministry against this evil.

We should avoid telling stories that make light of sacred things, and be careful that we do not use the names of God and Christ in a light or disrespectful manner. Let us, as saints, in our conversation honor our profession, and let the language of our tongues be pure.

Avoid unkind remarks that wound another. Do not criticise in an unfriendly manner. If you have a criticism to make, be sure that your motive is kind. An unkind criticism, though true, may fail to bring forth aught but wounded feelings.

Exaggeration. This is one of the most common, as well as one of the worst, evils to be found in our conversation. We are all more or less addicted to this habit. I have heard incidents related, with which I was thoroughly familiar, in such an exaggerated form that I scarcely recognized the facts. Sometimes this exaggerated way of repeating things does a great injustice to those spoken of. The common carelessness of our speech, in this respect, sometimes leaves a wrong impression upon the minds of persons not familiar with the facts of the matter, whereby some one may be put in a false light. Then beware of exaggeration.

Let us speak to cheer; to cheer the sad, those who are weary of heart. We should strive to help make their burdens lighter.

We should strive in our conversation to impart useful aid or knowledge.

"Some of the meanest things said are those which are not said. Many a fair reputation has been ruined by an 'if,' and many a man has been damned with a 'but.' The listener is left to guess the truth, and it is human nature to guess the worst when a sentence is broken off with a dash, suspicion supplies the dash with the meanest words to be found in the vocabulary of malice. Yet there are those who are ready to thank God that they are not like other men, because they thus break off a sentence with an 'if' or a 'but,' not realizing that they may be also breaking reputations and hearts just as surely as though they had completed the hateful message which they had started to send forth to the world. If a message is to be sent forth, let the sender be sure that it is true, and that it is a message that the world needs to know. If it isn't needed, though it be true, it had better never be sent out to the world. Knowledge is power, but it is not always a power for good. That depends upon what the knowledge is. There are things which it is better not to know, but if one does know them, better not to tell."

Speakers for conference were Elders John Shippy, B. St. John, R. C. Evans, and F. Gregory. Prayer services were held on Saturday, Sunday, and Monday mornings at eight o'clock, and were especially peaceful and spiritual. God spoke to his people much in the gifts of tongues and interpretation, through his aged servant John Shippy and Elder R. C. Evans; two were called to the ministry, and much instruction given to the saints and ministry; four were baptized, two children blessed, and one elder and one priest ordained during conference. All former officers were sustained. Adjourned to St. Thomas branch the second Saturday and Sunday in June, 1900. Thus ended the largest and we believe the best conference ever held in this district.

Sunday School Associations.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.

Association convened at Grand Rapids, Michigan, in saints' hall, September 22. Called to order by Sr. J. H. Royce, district superintendent; G. F. Weston, secretary; Lorenzo Fay, assistant. Reports from seven schools were read, showing membership as follows: Coldwater 52, South Scott (Indiana) 21, Buchanan 27, Grand Rapids 53, Hartford 33, Clear Lake 83, Flint (Indiana) —. We are much pleased that the first six of these reports were entirely correct in the membership details and in finances, and these schools had also sent credentials and delegates. Remarks were made by the superintendent that an outline for study of the Book of Mormon was felt to be needed, and teachers' meetings were recommended. The previous officers were all reelected in their order. A motion was carried to adopt the names chosen at the Galien convention for delegates to the General Convention, and that any of these present there will have power to choose any others present from this district as delegates, in case they are needed to make up our number of delegates, and that they all together have power to cast the entire vote of our district. The district treasurer's report was read and received. A collection of $2.80 was taken to defray the secretary's expenses to convention, and for preparation of lesson illustrations, etc. Address of welcome by Elder J. A. Cavanagh, president of branch and superintendent of Sunday school at Grand Rapids. Response by Sr. Royce. Bro. Weston gave a review of past quarter from a chart, showing an illustration on each lesson. All the questions were answered by one little girl. Most of those on the program were present and fulfilled their parts with credit. "Concentration of energies," by Bro. S. Stroh. "Preparation of Lesson," by Bro. E. W. Heth. Extempore address on "The Quarterly," by Sr. Anna Heth, followed by a discussion, forcibly bringing out the proper use and nature of the Quarterly, to the end that it was an excellent help to Bible study. Evening session. Voluntary by Mr. Oppeneer, Bro. Heth, Srs. Bernice Griffith and S. W. L. Scott. "The Three Books in the Sunday school," by Sr. Jennie Turnour, was supplemented by a paper read by Elder S. W. L. Scott, that would have done credit to the most learned and scientific lecturer of our land. Recitations by little Cora and Florence Allis. "Gems from God's gem book," being an article on the proper use and benefits of memory verses in the Sunday school, by Sr. Fern Griffith. "Sunday school libraries," by Bro. W. Shaub in a well prepared paper, followed by Elders Scott and E. C. Briggs. "Sunday school lessons illustrated," by Bro. G. F. Weston completed the literary exercises. Three methods of illustrating were given: plain straight lines, pictures in outline, and finished work. In the second class some outline work was given while speaking, and in the third class some illuminated and moving pictures were presented. A picture of the latter class was also given on Sunday at the close of morning session of conference. Adjourned to Friday before and at the place of next conference, Coldwater being the place chosen.

TETERS.—At Fulton, Iowa, to Bro. William and Sr. Etta Teters, a son, July 25, 1899. Blessed September 10, by Elder John Heide and named William Alpha.

BIRNIE.—At Boonesboro, Iowa, October 19, 1897, to Bro. and Sr. William Birnie, a daughter. Blessed September 17, 1899, by Elder J. S. Roth and named Roth.

HISCOCK.—April 8, 1898, at Lamoni, Iowa, to Bro. Asa and Sr. Katie Hiscock, a daughter. Blessed January 1, 1899, by Elders F. M. Weld and C. Scott, and named Lellia Marie.

DIED.

THOMAS.—At St. Louis, Missouri, September 26, 1899, Sr. Margaret Thomas, wife of Bro. William O. Thomas. She was born in South Wales, August 30, 1828, being aged 71 years and 26 days. She was baptized into the old church while in Wales, and came to America. Early in sixty she became identified with the Reorganization. Her first husband, Elder George Davis, preceded her twenty-seven years ago. After thirteen years of trials as a widow, she married Elder William O. Thomas, who is left to mourn at the age of nearly 81 years. Besides her husband, she leaves one son and one daughter.

She was engaged in fixing a clothes line near a twelve foot embankment and fell, striking in such a manner as to break her neck. Death resulted instantly. The church loses a friend in more ways than one. She was very charitable to the poor, and Bro. and Sr. Thomas' blessings of this world's goods enabled her to assist to a great extent. Our ministry will miss her, for her door was always open to them and her hands busy caring for their needs. She is missed in Sunday school and prayer meeting. Funeral at Cheltenham church; the attendance was large, not all could get into the church; the procession the largest held from the church. Funeral sermon by Elder J. D. White, interment in Bellefontaine cemetery, St. Louis.

HARTMAN.—At his home near Lamoni, Iowa, October 2, 1899, Bro. William Hartman. He was born March 7, 1840, at Greencastle, Pennsylvania; came to Decatur County about forty-two years ago, and was married to Eliza E. Driskill, October, 1862; they were the parents of ten children, six of whom, with the mother, are left. He was baptized in June, 1874. He had a wide acquaintance in the county, and as a man was highly respected. Funeral at the home; sermon by Elder R. S. Salyards, assisted by Elder Eli Hayer. Interment at Davis City.

PERKINS.—Sr. Louisa Perkins died August 2, 1899, at her home on West Spring Street, New Albany, Indiana. Born in London, England, October 14, 1833; married Marion Perkins, near Galena, to whom were born eight children. United with the Reorganized Church, May 1, 1885, and lived a staunch defender of the faith. Funeral sermon by W. H. Kelley, in the Christian church at Floyds Knobs, Indiana, to an interesting audience.

WATTS.—At Little Compton, Rhode Island, October 4, 1899, Bro. John Watts, aged 61 years and 10 months. Funeral October 8, at Fall River, Massachusetts, from the saints' chapel, with services by Elder John Smith.

GCELLICK.—At Incline, Iowa, Robert Gcellick was crushed to death in the coal mine, September 12, 1899. He was not a member of the church, but was favorable. Funeral sermon by Elder J. S. Roth.

TETERS.—Mary Etta Carter was born March 8, 1862, at Cincinnati, Ohio; married William Teters, September 6, 1882; was baptized June 23, 1889; died near Fulton, Iowa, October 7, 1899. She was a faithful member, and our best primary teacher—she seemed to know how to interest little children. She leaves husband and five children, father, mother, four brothers, and two sisters. Funeral in charge of Bro. J. R. Sutton, sermon by Elder John Heide.

NAIDEN.—At St. Louis, Missouri, September 19, 1899, Sr. Maria Naiden; was born June 21, 1818, at Tollington, Lancashire, England. With her husband, Samuel Naiden, she joined the church in England; came to America, and after many trying experiences joined the Reorganized Church, February 23, 1868, at Carbondale, Illinois. Funeral by J. D. White.

SHEPHERD.—At Caseyville, Illinois, July 1, 1899, Bro. Thomas Shepherd; was born in England 57 years ago, came to America twenty-five years ago, locating at Caseyville, Illinois. He was baptized in 1880. Funeral from Union church, by Elder J. D. White.

MASON.—At Milwaukee, Wisconsin, September 22, 1899, Sr. Effie Jennett Mason. She was youngest daughter of Elder James Beaird. Remains were brought to Belleville, Illinois, for burial, where she was born October 13, 1878. Funeral conducted by Elder J. D. White.

ETTINGER.—At Taylorville, Illinois, August 6, 1899, Joseph Walter Ettinger; was born December 20, 1893. Funeral from residence, by Elder J. D. White.

SIMPSON.—At Taylorville, Illinois, August 10, 1899, Grover Dale Simpson; born December 11, 1892. Funeral from residence, conducted by Elder J. D. White.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Re-organized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report,

WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

It is divided into three parts. Part I contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

EVILS OF DIVORCE.

If the church has not at hand the tool, or man or woman for a particular task she may wisely employ, or honor if she does not employ, such social mechanisms as, being wholesome and helpful, are fitted to a particular occasion. And in this spirit she may honor, and herself reproduce university or college settlements or any other of the manifold and graceful agencies, the creche, the kindergarten, the clubroom, the libraries, recreation halls and all the rest, which social interest and sympathy have reached among us to-day.

But when these things are done and other greater things are done; when our tenements are rebuilt and their occupancy regulated by just laws; when we have torn down whole blocks of buildings, as we are doing in New York to-day, and converted them into blooming parks—even then we have not laid the foundations of a stable civilization nor reared the walls of a righteous social order.

There is but one hand that can do that, but one divine force that can maintain it! And here to-day and forever we see the place in such a community as this, in such a nation as this, of religion and the divinely appointed institutions of religion. In one word, the world still waits for the message, the standards, the eternal authority of Jesus Christ in his word and in his church. Take these out of human society and, so far as its decay and downfall, sooner or later, are concerned, it is of little consequence what else you leave. If we review the history of what we are wont to call the higher civilization we shall find that their progress and their permanence have largely turned upon the Christian sanctions, which, absent in Greece and Rome, doomed those earlier civilizations, for want of them, to decay and ruin. The family is indeed older than the Catholic Church, but it was the religion of Jesus Christ which took the family, consecrated its venerable relations, ennobled its original authority and lifted its august sanctions into their divinest place. And to-day it must be that same supernatural institution that shall both interpret and define for us what in that and kindred fellowships we owe, first to God and then to one another.

The subject relates itself very closely to another divine institution to which of late the public attention has been drawn and with which the church in this land has very seriously concerned itself—I need hardly say that I refer to the institution of marriage.

It has been held by men of ripe wisdom and judgment that the only course for the church to pursue was to refuse remarriage to persons divorced. Such a remedy for our present evils would doubtless be, as some of us may think, a very drastic one, but the evil has grown to such proportions, it may justly be answered, that we can meet it with no other; and in one sense this is undoubtedly true. A wider view of the whole subject, however, will disclose to us, I think, the fact that it is not the only remedy, and that if accepted as a final solution of the whole social problem of which, after all, it is but a small part, we are destined to be disappointed as to its results.

For that wider view will reveal to us that the social relations of our time, in all their various ramifications, have been profoundly affected by causes which reside in the character of our free institutions and in that spirit of the age—in which the historian of the future will discern perhaps its mightier force. I may best describe that spirit as far as we are here concerned with it as the spirit of individualism. The great movement which issued here in the revolt of the American colonies and their subsequent separation from the mother country was only a part of a larger whole, which profoundly affected not only the mother country, but France, Germany and, later, Italy—which is at work to-day even in Russia, and which has wholly or partially dethroned some of the most widely ruling ideas of earlier ages. I may not trace its progress elsewhere, here at any rate, it has issued in the almost complete abrogation of some earlier forms of authority, and not only that, but of some of the most venerable and sacred traditions of the community and the State. In this direction nothing has been more serious than those results which have affected the family, and especially the institutions and obligations of marriage.

These last have come to be so lightly regarded that now, at length, the least thoughtful among us are beginning to realize the vicious tendencies in some forty or fifty different commonwealths of our composite and contradictory legislation, and to recognize that the facility with which the marriage relation may be taken on and put off is a menace to the foundations of society and the jest of the civilized world.

It would be well that the church should meet such a situation with a stern front and with legislation which, so far as she is concerned, will make divorce increasingly difficult if not impossible. But she must do a great deal more than that, and she must beware of the delusion that in doing only that she has done anything more than a very small part of her duty. However we may safeguard the solemnization of holy matrimony we must not less lift up and safeguard the approaches to it. No legislation, whether ecclesiastical or civil, which touches only the terms and conditions of the contract itself, will do a work which must needs be done before it is entered into. We may reiterate with utmost solemnity, "Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder." It will be quite in vain unless we see to it that those reasonable precautions of forethought, inquiry, publicity and of intelligent understanding of the obligations to be assumed, which once obtained, have preceded it. These were wise provisions of our fathers' times, but that spirit of individualism which, in the case of authority of the church, would brook none of these things has swept them away.

The church's office should not be merely to reestablish and exalt the ancient sanctities of marriage, but first of all that most ancient institution in which it took its rise. The decay of the august sacredness of marriage in our day is not more alarming, than the painful tokens which salute us of the disintegration of the home. A clever paper which I saw not long ago in a foreign periodical describes a home which has lost its surviving parent. The executor of the estate, a lifelong friend of the family, is pointing out to the family the resources available to them if they continue to live together, and each in turn gives the reasons which in the case of several individuals make any such course impossible. They are frivolous reasons, supremely selfish reasons, but they triumph to the complete breaking up of a home, and furnish one more illustration of the disintegrating power, even when it touches so sacred and venerable a thing, of individualism. We must needs recognize that vicious influence in the decay of parental authority, in the early impatience of it on the part of boys and girls, in the increasing reluctance to exercise it where its exercise involves pain and painstaking in the strident note, in one word in so many homes whose cry is "I will," or "I wont," and not, "I ought."

Such a situation calls for clear and plain teaching from the pulpit, and the still mightier teaching of a fine and high example in all our homes. If we are to see, in the matter of our domestic obligations, whether they are martial, filial, or parental, that wide awakening of Christian conscience which our land so sorely needs, it will be because the principle or a divine authority over all these relations has been revived and enthroned anew among us, and because in the training of our children, and in the consecration of every other most sacred tie we have refused to go below it. The application of that august authority in other aspects of it is a no less sore need of these times. It ought surely to sober us that along with the decay of family integrity and the sanctity of the marriage tie there has gone side by side no less wide decay of the observance of the Lord's Day and of other sacred times and seasons. In our eagerness to prove that we are no longer Puritans, some of us seem anxious to demonstrate that we are pagans; and the secularization of the Lord's Day especially by people with abundant leisure on other days for social exchanges and every kind of recreation is a scandal of which they who are guilty of it should be ashamed, and for which all Christian people have cause to grieve.

SPALDING'S SCORN FOR EUROPE.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13.—At the dedication of the new building of the Holy Cross society, donated to the Catholic University by the order, with headquarters at Notre Dame University, Bishop Spalding of Peoria delivered a loudly applauded sermon containing a significant reference to the aims of American Catholics as opposed to foreign influences, the Illinois Bishop saying:—

"Those who stand with averted faces looking ever backward to Europe do not impress us. What sacredness is there in Europe more than in America? Is not the history of Europe largely a history of wars, tyrannies, oppressions, massacres, and persecutions? Has not its lust for gold made it a scourge to all the inferior races of the earth? Have not its people long stood face to face, arms in hand, ready to butcher one another? Why should Europe be an object of awe or admiration for Catholics? Half its population has revolted from the church, and in the so-called Catholic nations, which are largely governed by atheists, what vital manifestation of religious life and power can we behold? In any case, we are in America, not in Europe, and to stand in the midst of this vast, advancing world, with averted faces looking backward, is to sink out of sight and be forever lost as a living force.

"What country ever had fortune like ours? Where else has there ever been such opportunity for all? Where else has the Catholic Church ever had a wider or a freer field? Does not our Lord say, speaking to his apostles: 'They who are not against you are for you?'

"If we fail the fault is in ourselves, in our timidity, in our indolence, in our lack of faith. What is there to make us afraid or despondent?"—Ex.

ATTACKS CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

Paris, Oct. 18.—The parliamentary commissions on public instruction, in its report to be submitted to the Chamber of Deputies, fiercely attacks congregationalist education under the present system. The government wants a monopoly of the education of the French youth. The commission has passed a resolution asking the Minister of War to exercise such supervision over the superior officers of the army as will prevent them from encouraging their subordinates to send their children to Catholic schools. The commission also asks the government to forbid the professors employed in the state schools from giving courses of instruction in private Catholic schools. This is the third strict measure taken against the Catholics by the parliamentary commissions since the first of the month. First came the demand for the suppression of the French Ambassador to the Vatican, then the suppression of the salary of the priests; and now, finally, the proposal for the suppression of Catholic schools and for full liberty in education. All signs point to a bitter religious struggle in the near future. . . .—Ex.

A ROMANCE IN SCHOLARSHIP.

Three years ago two learned English ladies, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Gibson, traveling in southern Palestine in search of Syriac manuscripts, found a bundle of fragments, mostly written in Hebrew, which upon their return they submitted to the inspection of Professor Schechter, the Hebrew scholar at Cambridge. One of the fragments he identified as a Hebrew version of Ecclesiasticus. Encouraged by his success, Dr. Nebauer, the curator of the Cairo synagogue, made search for further portions and found nine leaves immediately following the Lewis-Gibson fragment. Further scraps were found by Professor Schechter in the British Museum. Up to the present more than three-fifths of the Hebrew text of Ecclesiasticus have been recovered. Professor Schechter has also discovered there is a list of quotations from the Bible in these fragments extending over the whole of the biblical books with the sole exception of the Book of Daniel. Joseph Jacobs, an Oriental scholar, in an article in the Fortnightly Review, says the discovery seems destined to throw light "upon the fixation of the Old Testament canon, upon the development of Hebrew between the Old Testament and the Talmud, upon the theology of the Sadducees, while incidentally it will give pause to those who have so confidently attempted to revise the Hebrew text of the Old Testament from the Septuagint version, as well as to those higher critics who have been so positive about dating separate psalms. In short, it will do much towards filling up the blank pages between the Old and New Testaments."—Exchange.

TEACH CHILDREN TO READ ALOUD.

A mother should take great pains to teach her children to read aloud acceptably. Much time and money are often expended in cultivating the voice for singing, and yet quite as much pleasure may be given by the person who reads aloud in a pleasing manner. No attempt need be made at elocution as the word is ordinarily understood; distinct utterance and proper emphasis so as to convey easily to the hearer the meaning of the sentences read are all that is necessary.—Ex.

A DIFFERENCE IN VISION.

Bro. D. R. Baldwin, writing from Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, sends us clippings from the papers concerning the debate lately held at the Springs between Bro. Baldwin and Bynum Black, of the Christians.

The Spring River News, of August 25, first notices the fact that the debate will take place, thus:—

A DEBATE.

Resolved that direct inspiration or revelation from God to man is necessary to salvation and in harmony with the Bible. The above is the proposition to be debated at Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, on September 9, 1899, by Elders Bynum Black and D. R. Baldwin.

In this proposition, Bro. D. R. Baldwin affirmed, Bynum Black denied.

Following this is the reportorial comment which we give below, from the News for September 15:—

The roar, the shouts, the commotions and thunder of Saturday's battle is a thing of the past. The smoke and fog have cleared away. Each of the great champions with their comrades are naturally claiming the emoluments. If both sides have gained, who is the loser? Both are apparently good marksmen, and during the heat of battle both hewed close to the line. There appeared, however, to the unbiased listeners, a marked contrast in their methods of warfare. A careful synopsis of each speech shows for the affirmative a devotion to old-time Christianity, a fervor for truth, a love of fair dealing, a broad platform embracing all known truth, and a desire for a more perfect knowledge. In some of these points the negative was surely found wanting. Whatever opinions the large congregation may have formed of the two men, and of their religious peculiarities, some things are apparent; i. e., no one is sorry for having been present. The disputants parted in good humor, and no enmity nor bitterness of soul was wrought. MAXEY.

From this it will be seen that the Saint impressed the general auditor to a better advantage than the Christian; and we gather the important lesson that no matter what the provocation and stress put on one's temper in debate, it must not be forgotten by the disputant for Jesus that he is a gentleman, keeping himself under control and reviling not when reviled; always answering ridicule in calmness, and misrepresentation, falsehood, and abuse with truth, in simplicity and humility, but never in boisterous assertion.

While the unprejudiced reporter, Maxey, saw the weight of good to be on the side of Bro. D. R. Baldwin's part of the argument, one G. W. Spurlock (Christian) writing to the Eye Opener, a Christian paper published at Ravenden Springs, closed his letter thus:—

Brother Black killed the modern revelation theory dead in the forenoon, and then put in the evening pounding away on it in order to convince skeptics that there is punishment after death.

Everybody was in good humor, and the very best of feeling prevailed. The large concourse of people returned to their homes in perfect glee. No doubt but that the few "Latter day Saints" present felt the sore sting of utter defeat.

So, those of us who have been persuaded that there was a need for revelation from the Lord Jesus by which the honest in heart might know that Jesus was and is the Christ; and having that spirit in us "which raised up Jesus," we might have hope of the resurrection of the just; will remember that according to G. W. Spurlock that belief of ours, that theory of present revelation, was "killed" at Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, by a "Christian" minister; who, not contented with the murder he there and then committed, "pounded" the poor dead body all the evening "in order to convince skeptics that there is punishment after death."

We wonder, do G. W. Spurlock and his "Christian" friend Bynum Black believe the commandment, written for Moses on a tablet of stone, and reaffirmed by the Prince of Life, "Thou shalt not kill."

Truth, crushed to earth, will rise again;
The eternal years of God are hers.

So, brethren, cheer up. The principle of revelation from God is as eternal as the gospel; and, though the "modern theory of revelation" was "killed" at Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, a modern Golgotha, September 9, 1899, and, though the Great Revealer was killed on Calvary's Hill, nearly nineteen hundred years ago; he before his death promised that he would reveal himself to his following believers by his Spirit; and after his death and his resurrection, in his risen body promised that he would be with his disciple believers "always, even unto the end of the world."

And, as the Master wrested his body from the grasp of him "that had the power of death," and raised it up to never-ending life; so has he decreed that, though Bynum Black, or G. W. Spurlock, did at Ravenden

Spring, Arkansas, on the 9th of September, 1899, assault, kill, and with intent to murder the "theory" of revelation, and "pound" it "after death," it shall rise again by the "power of an endless life," and live in every hamlet, city, country, and place where an earnest, honest believer in the word of God, shall willingly hear and obey that word and submit to the ordinances of the everlasting gospel. And, as the kind and degree of murder are determined in courts of justice by the kind and degree of the intent manifest in the killing, it may so occur in the great Trial Day, before "Him that sitteth on the Throne," these "Christian" teachers, who could ruthlessly "kill," and recklessly "pound" "after death," one of the principles to which the Master had given life, may be adjudged guilty from the motive which prompted them, the intent shown in the act of killing. For, "God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing."

PRES. SNOW'S CASE IS DISMISSED.

County Attorney Putnam has refused to authorize the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of President Lorenzo Snow on the charge of unlawful cohabitation, preferred by Charles Mostyn Owen, for the reason that the proof submitted by the complaining witness was deemed insufficient. . . .

When asked to give a reason why he had declined to authorize the issuance of a warrant for President Snow's arrest, Mr. Putnam said:—

"I did not consider that Mr. Owen had laid before me sufficient proof of the charge of unlawful cohabitation, as set forth in his affidavit. There was nothing to prove that President Snow had any legal wife, upon which the presumption of cohabitation could be based, and hence to prove that he cohabited with Minnie Jensen would be insufficient unless it could be shown that he had a legal wife living. If, however, there was sufficient evidence to show that Sarah or any woman, other than Minnie Jensen, was the legal wife of President Snow, the presumption of law would be that he cohabited with such legal wife (which, however, is rebuttable), and his cohabitation with Minnie Jensen would be unlawful."—Deseret News, October 14, 1899.

Angus M. Cannon and Heber J. Grant, prosecuted of late by this same Mr. Owen, each entered a plea of guilty to the charge of unlawful cohabitation, and were fined one hundred dollars each.

But, and for the reasons given above, according to the statement of the County Attorney, President Snow is not required to stand examination or to make a plea. In view of the past and present record and attitude of President Snow, many at least will find occasation to strongly dissent from the views expressed by County Attorney Putnam.

Mr. Owen is evidently bent on a crusade against lawbreakers in Utah, judging from the record he is making. He is evidently backed by a moral syndicate of some kind, having in view the elevation of the moral atmosphere of the former State of Deseret now admitted to statehood as the State of Utah.

Bro. D. W. Wight, writing from Provo, Utah, sends us the following from the Provo Enquirer, October 14, as "significant of present feeling and conditions in Utah":—

Charles Mostyn Owen, the professional affidavit manufacturer, of Salt Lake, informed the officers of this county that he would not slight Utah County in his crusade, but expected to do quite a flourishing business. He intends to present affidavits in blocks of five, and expects to have five from each town in the county. Owen also intimated that he had about 100 more cases in view for Salt Lake County.

We learn from the Deseret News, 16th inst., that Mr. Owen had preferred the charge of adultery against Brigham H. Roberts, of Centerville, Utah. Mr. Roberts, at last accounts, had gone East and was located at Brooklyn, New York.

The following from the Provo Enquirer, October 13, is significant:—

The Ogden Standard suggests that the way to solve the polygamy question that is doing so much to disturb the peace of Utah is to solve it here at home, by passing a law "legalizing all of the plural marriages made to date, and to prohibit by severe punishment all future plural marriages." The trouble with that plan is that the State constitution would have to be amended to make binding the law which the Standard proposes.

There is little room to doubt that could the dominating element of the Utah Church prevail and have its way, the State Constitution would be amended as suggested. As it is, the State law is freely violated. However, the wheels of progress are at work, and polygamy and its concomitants are now between the upper and the nether millstone, and the grinding process must inevitably be "exceeding fine." Skulking and dodging and double dealing all have their destined end, and Utah's sin and evil will be found out in the persons of its transgressors, and bring merited results. The dominating forces at work in the world are moving for right, for truth. Transgressors may elude conviction for a time, but final detection and suppression are "as sure as fate."

NEWS FROM WAY OFF.

Bro. Gomer R. Wells, our efficient young missionary to Australia, writing under date of August 29, from Sydney, of his contemplated coming home, writes thus:—

I came here on a promise to the church to stay three years. I have staid twice that, and by February next, if I leave, I will have staid six and one half years, arriving home after seven years' absence. If I go then I will feel that I do not leave the mission crippled (that is with one less man in the field), for my place will be amply filled by our rising young missionary, Elder Walter J. Haworth, now under appointment and fully justifying the wisdom of those appointing him. I feel proud of him and expect to see him a power for good in this field. He is only one example of what several other elders here could do if they were given a chance—the same encouragement that beginners receive at home. My own idea is this: We have as good missionary timber here as in the United States of America; and that there is no urgent need to send it here, when they've got it. A good, experienced leader and counselor is all they would need.

If God wills it so, I look forward to speaking with you face to face at no distant day, and meet the other brethren in General Conference, April, 1900.

Bro. Gomer has been a very faithful worker; has been cheerful and uncomplaining, and will receive a soldier's welcome at his return.

We can assent to Bro. Wells' thought that there is excellent missionary "timber" in the field where he has been laboring, as in the United States, and we shall most cordially greet them when the Lord shall call them, and the brethren choose them into the ranks. "The harvest is white" indeed, and "the laborers few."

HAWAII AND MAORI.

Bro. G. J. Waller sent us a copy of the Independent, a Honolulu paper, for October 2, (this the 14th,) with the following marked article. It will please the many who are interested in the "islands of the sea."—

"THE LAND OF THE MAORI."

The second musical and descriptive recital of Maori land by Wherahiko Rawei, B. A., took place Thursday evening at the Y. M. C. A. hall and drew forth an attendance almost filling the hall. The subject "The Land of the Maori" was illustrated with beautiful lime-light scenery showing different phases of the progress of civilization and of native life. The scenes depicting nature in all her glory, such as vegetation, mountain and lake views, snow-capped peaks, native beauties, and so forth, entirely puts our own loveliest scenes in the shade.

From beginning to end the lecturer was carefully followed by his listeners and applause was frequent. He is a fluent and pleasing speaker, his diction of the English language being of no mean order, showing how well he had profited by the opportunities of education. We consider these recitals quite a treat, his expressions and denunciation being so pure, grand, elaborate, magnificent, and comprehensive, especially in one who is foreign to the English language, he himself being a part-Maori.

During the course of his recital he said that it was traditional with the Maoris that New Zealand was first peopled from Hawiki, meaning these Islands. It substantiates our own traditions. His description of Maori life is not at all unlike the incidents of Hawaiian life, which fact makes his discourse all the more pleasing and attractive, especially to Hawaiians of birth or long residence. His rendition of Maori music is very pleasing, but the songs and harmonies in no way compare with our own.

Taking it in all in all, these recitals are very entertaining and descriptive, besides being moreover very instructive. As Mr.

Rawei leaves for home on the Moana on October 14, we hope he will give other recitals for the good cause he is working for, that is, the raising of a sufficient fund with which to endow a school for the uplifting of the Maoris from their demoralizing mode of living to a much higher and better sphere. We hope that more young Hawaiians will attend and see Mr. Rawei dressed as a Maori and hear what he has to say of his own people akin to ours.

REV. BRADEN ACCEPTS ELDER I. N. WHITE'S CHALLENGE.

All readers of Herald will have noticed Bro. I. N. White's challenge to Elder Clark Braden to repeat the debate held near Orchardville, Illinois, at Alma, Illinois.

The propositions were:—

Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?

I. N. WHITE affirms,

CLARK BRADEN denies.

Is the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice, with the Church of Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago?

CLARK BRADEN affirms,

I. N. WHITE denies.

We have received from Elder Clark Braden, an acceptance of the challenge of Bro. I. N. White, with request that we publish it, in a letter which we publish below, in accordance with Mr. Braden's request.

ALMA, Ill., Oct. 2.

I. N. White; Sir:—I will debate in Alma, Illinois, my home, my headquarters, the headquarters of my work.

Will you debate in Independence, Missouri, your home, your headquarters, the headquarters of your work?

Is not this fair and equal?

I will furnish the meeting house of "The Church of Christ" in Alma, Illinois, as the place of the debate at Alma; and bear all incidental expenses of the debate in Alma.

Will you furnish the meeting house of "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" in Independence, Missouri, as the place of the debate in Independence?

Now, is not this fair and equal?

Now, sir, not only is your challenge accepted, as emphatically and pointedly as it is possible for you to make it, but you are hereby defied to make good your challenge.

CLARK BRADEN.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

Sr. E. Horton, Chicago, sends us a number of clippings from the Chicago papers giving accounts of various religious movements in that city, of some interest to our readers. Among them is an extract from one of Mr. Moody's sermons, in which he says: "The power of the Holy Ghost is what is needed, now as in the apostles' time—that power and a straight gospel." (Daily News, October 2.)

Another clipping, paper and date not named, gives the following statement from the Rev. M. M. Bales, who left the Methodist Church and organized an independent movement of his own, taking all or most all his former flock with him:—

In his circular the founder of the new church says:—

"I believe in an entire Bible, from lid to lid, and have no sympathy with the encroachments of evolution and higher criticism and modern methods of raising money for God's work, such as church fairs, bazaars, and societies. I can no longer indorse any of these or engage in them. I believe I am divinely led to organize an independent church in Chicago which shall embody only Bible principles and run along purely gospel lines, returning to the simplicity and power of the early church as much as possible. I shall receive no stated salary, but shall trust to God for my living, as well as for the money with which to erect our church building and carry on all the work."

Sr. Horton expresses the wish that some of the ministry of the Reorganized Church call on Rev. Bales.

Other clippings give accounts of Mr. Moody's meetings, also of attacks upon "Rev. John Alexander Dowie," the "Overseer" of "Zion," the institution into which Mr. Dowie has gathered many converts through his claims to heal the sick by faith. Some Chicago ministers, prominent among them Rev. Frank DeWitt Talmage, claim Mr. Dowie is a fraud and a mountebank, and are attacking him publicly through their pulpits. Their claim is that his methods are questionable; that, among other reprehensible methods, he has succeeded in securing large financial returns from his followers.

Here is another, from the Chicago Tribune, October 16, which we submit without comment:—

NEW CHURCH OF FREE THOUGHT.

Springfield, O., Oct. 15.—Articles of incorporation are soon to be filed with the Secretary of State for a new religious sect, to be known as the Church of Free and Independent Thought. The new sect will welcome all believers of any religion, and even unbelievers. It is averred that the purpose of the new church will be to free religion from superstition and hypocrisy. The teachings of the Psalms, Proverbs, and the words of Christ are accepted for the betterment of mankind, but whether or not these teachings are inspired is left to the individual belief of the members. The organizers say that the present churches are a barrier to the search after truth.

JEW'S ILL TREATED BY TURKS IN PALESTINE.

Consul Merrill of Jerusalem has made a report to the State department regarding the unfortunate condition of the immigrant Jews in Palestine, in which he says: "The Turkish regulation requiring Jews arriving at Yafa to leave the country again in thirty or ninety days, if they come as visitors, has, I understand, been agreed to by our government. There is no provision, however, so far as I have been informed, as to how these people are to be made to return.

"As the Turks do not accept the word of the immigrants on landing, a system of money pledges has been resorted to. This may be called 'fine,' 'tax,' 'deposit,' 'backsheesh,' 'bail,' or 'pledge.' It is a money guarantee that the parties will carry out the requirement of the Turkish government. Unless they pay the guaranty the immigrants have great trouble in landing.

"In many cases the Consul is appealed to, and rather than see them starve or sent back to the steamer, which would probably not receive them again, he gives his word as security that they will leave the country at the expiration of the time specified. Respectable American Jews coming here as bona fide travelers encounter no more trouble than do Christian travelers.

"It is the immigrant class—Russian or Polish Jews—who are suspected by the authorities here as likely to swell the ranks of the colonists."—Washington Bureau, Chicago Tribune, Oct. 11, 1899.

NORWEGIAN legislators propose that girls who do not know how to knit, sew, wash, and cook, should be refused permission to marry. Daughters of wealthy men are not to be excepted.—Ex.

Now let the same legislators provide that the opposite sex shall be as well qualified for marriage as the gentler sex, if they have not already done so. There will then be little or no cause for complaint.

AMERICAN ARCHÆOLOGY.

The University of Berlin, Germany, will appoint Dr. Eduard Seler to the position of Professor of American Antiquities. The founder of the chair is the Duke de Loubat, now of New York, who himself made a journey of exploration into Yucatan. An item dated Berlin, September 30, will prove of interest to students of American Archæology. It is taken from the Chicago Tribune, October 18:—

M. de Loubat ten years ago offered a prize of 3,000 marks, to be distributed every five years, for the best work in regard to America. This prize has been awarded only once, and Dr. Seler was the successful competitor. His subject was "Pictorial Manuscripts of Mexico."

Joseph Florimond Loubat, a citizen of New York, now living at 47 Rue Dumont de Urville, Paris, owes his titles, formerly that of Count, now of Duke, to the friendship of the Pope and the scientific circles at Rome, where he is well known. The prize fund, now worth nearly 30,000 marks, was established ten years ago, when a congress of Americanists met here. The offer of funds which to establish a professorship came wholly unsolicited, and was, of course, an agreeable surprise to the Ministry of Culture and the university.

The Emperor expressed his gratification that an American citizen had given the German scholars the means of devoting their energies to the investigation of the extinct civilizations of the Occident. He is reported to have declared this was an evidence of the solidarity of interests on both sides of the ocean.

Americans here, who feel they owe a debt of gratitude to German science and German universities, are also pleased that an American scholar has the means and the will to repay a portion of this debt. M. de Loubat is himself a scholar, whose attainments and services are recognized by those who are familiar with the progress of American studies. Professor Sachau, one of the few personal acquaintances that he has here, esteems him in the highest measure. He has, by publishing a series of the pictorial manuscripts of Mexico, placed a large mass of material in the hands of the Americanists, and his income has for many years been largely devoted to the studies in which he is interested.

He travels the greater part of the time from one library to another in Europe, and from Europe to Central America, in the search for a clew that will reveal the almost impenetrable secrecy of the Aztec hieroglyphics.

It is his ambition to discover the "Rosetta Stone" that will do for Aztec civilization what the translation of the Egyptian inscription into Greek did for the land of the Nile. At present he and the Roman scholars with whom he is acquainted are hunting through the library of the Vatican in the hope of discovering some monkish paper or another dating from the time when the priests of Spain and the priests of Mexico were engaged in dealing with the American subjects of the Spanish empire on rival lines.

In addition to his work in Yucatan the Duke de Loubat has interested himself in excavations in Venezuela.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

A sister writing from Nebraska City, Nebraska, mentions Bro. Forscutt's labors there in the following commendatory way:—

Bro. M. H. Forscutt's health has improved since the reunion at Woodbine, and he keeps the meetings up by presiding and preaching. Hope he will be entirely healed, and be returned here in 1900, as our city pastor. No one like him here anyway, to preach and have charge of God's work, as both saints and outsiders like him and we need him always.

Bro. J. W. Wight reports 228 sermons, 32 baptisms, and 16 children blessed during the past quarter, by the missionary force in his field; or 56 baptisms during the past six months. He writes:—

Our work has exceeded that of the previous quarter. We need more men to do the mission justice. I have been more hampered than ever before on account of lack of men. The mission needs some good local presiding men, which would give our missionary force better opportunities to be "free" to wait upon our ministry. We also need another tent for Utah. We could easily find work for another. We have eight more baptisms for the half year than for all of last year. One thing is sure: if we accomplish anything we will have to appoint a larger force. We have now but little opportunity to be sufficiently aggressive. If we had a dozen or more young, aggressive men, who would and could go from house to house with our tracts and talk to the people; not so much need of their being preachers as real, live talkers. Wherever we can get up anything in the shape of a controversy we have no lack for a crowd.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. J. B. Roush, Denver, Colorado, No. 522 Nineteenth Avenue, wishes to obtain addresses of saints who live in or about Colorado Springs, Colorado City, or Manitou, Colorado, where efforts will be made to preach the word.

The Chicago Tribune reports that, "The Catholic priests in Belgium have secured the passage of a law compelling parents to give to their children no names except those in the calendar of saints." How long the Belgian people will stand such legislation does not seem hard to predict, in the face of present popular outbreaks against Roman Catholic control in state affairs. The dominant church has but to enforce such legislation to make its presence and tenure odious to the people. There may be and doubtless are liberal Roman Catholics, but there is little reason to doubt that the nature and tendency of the spirit of Romanism is to control and narrow the political and religious life of every people in conformity to its prescribed course of action. They will never succeed in dominating modern political tendencies—not in America at least—and we believe and hope that they will not so succeed in many other countries.

Pres. Joseph Smith left Lamoni on Friday, the 20th, for Three Oaks, Michigan, to dedicate a church building at that point.

By card from Bro. Stebbins we learn that Bishop Israel L. Rogers is now out of danger and recovering from his recent attack of illness.

Bro. Duncan Campbell, Pleasanton, Iowa, would like to obtain the address of Bro. W. D. McKnight, formerly of Lamoni.

We learn that Bro. J. A. Tanner, of the Northeast Missouri district has signed propositions for a discussion with Elder Thomas H. Chambers, of the Utah Church, at Moberly, Missouri, to begin November 6. The propositions involve the respective claims of the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church. Bro. R. M. Elvin is expected to represent the former.

Bro. W. H. Kelley arrived home on the 17th, after a brief visit to the Kelley homestead, in Western Iowa, where an elder brother lies dangerously ill.

Paris cablegrams continue to hint at the dream of French diplomats to form a United States of Europe including Asia, the old-world Latin-Muscovite races against the Anglo-Saxon, aided by Russia and Germany, "with whom the pourparlers are now actually in progress;" the plan to include also a United States of Africa.

It is difficult for some persons to discriminate between the logical conclusions of an argument and a personal attack upon them or upon positions taken by them. In advocating truth one necessarily refutes error, and he who assumes untenable ground must be prepared to see his positions moved, shown to be in error. However, he should not take offense where no personal attack is made. He must learn to discriminate between the logic of an argument and a personal arraignment. The assertion of principle is necessary, however strongly it may refute personal opinions, cherished ideals, or policies.

At the late annual session of the synod of Illinois Presbyterians "the most important action probably has been the passage of resolutions breaking away from tradition and introducing secular subjects into the synodical program." "Other changes affecting traditions rather than mandates of the church were regarded as victories for the radical over the conservative commissioners." "Decline in the number seeking entry to the ministry was due to the fact that the church is restricting ministers in their desire to teach new truths."

Copies of the Pacific Commercial Advertiser and the Independent, published at Honolulu, Hawaii, and sent us by Bro. U. W. Greene, comment upon the decline of Protestantism among the native population of Hawaii. The Advertiser queries whether the decline is caused by disease of the natives and the influx of foreigners, or by the errors of those representing it; but thinks those influences should count for naught as against Divinity supposed to be behind the system of faith. The Independent blames the decline upon the growing worldliness of Protestantism, whose professors it states have robbed and corrupted the natives.

Again:—

Verily, verily I say unto you, except a man is born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom.

In these words Jesus declares emphatically that a man cannot enter the kingdom unless he is born again. This declaration surprised Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. But the great Teacher explained the matter so plain that he could and did understand it clearly, for he became a disciple of Jesus after that time. Now I want to explain the subject so that all who read will understand what my Master meant, when he said to Nicodemus, "Except a man is born of water, and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." In the first place, in order that there be a birth, there must be something to be born; and in order that there be that something to be born, there must be something begotten. It is written that children of God are begotten by the Spirit, through the word or gospel; they are then quickened. This is one operation of the Spirit, and then they are drawn by the Spirit to Christ; "For no man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him."

This is another operation of the Spirit, and when they have complied with the prerequisites to baptism with all their hearts, having received of the Spirit unto the remission of their sins, they are then ready to be born again, which means deliverance from the kingdom of Satan into the kingdom of heaven (or God); such subjects being baptized by a legal administrator, which is a member of the kingdom, and one who has been called and ordained by those having authority.

Now when such subjects are baptized by such administrator, in the name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, they are born again, not of water alone, but of water and the Spirit; for there are not two births, one of water and one of Spirit. Jesus said except a man was born again, not again and again. One birth brings a child into the world, and a second birth puts a man into the kingdom of heaven. Again I repeat that the entire birth takes place at the time when and wherever the baptism of water takes place, the Spirit here performing its part in the birth, which is another operation of the same Spirit. They are then made children of God by adoption, being then made free from their sins. Now as Paul said, "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying Abba, Father." Now this gift of the Spirit is given through the laying on of hands of a legal administrator. They are then "sealed unto the day of redemption of their bodies." This is the way I understand that men were born of water and the Spirit in the days of Christ, and the way they received the Spirit as a Comforter. I cannot understand that a person has to have hands laid upon them in order to be born of the Spirit, or be baptized of the Spirit. I do not understand that to be born of the Spirit and to be baptized with the Holy Ghost is the same thing (or operation of the Spirit) for the following reasons. When John the Baptist came preaching the gospel and baptizing the people, they entered into the kingdom, for Jesus said, "From the days of John the kingdom suffereth violence;" and there could not be a kingdom without subjects, and they could not be subjects unless they entered by being born of water and the Spirit at the time he baptized them. John could not lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, for he was an Aaronic priest. Jesus was baptized by John, and the Spirit came upon him at the water, and he was born of water and the Spirit there and then, just like all the balance that John baptized, who were proper subjects; not that all of them received the Spirit in the bodily shape of a dove; but the Spirit came like Jesus told Nicodemus, the "wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." John told the people that he baptized them with water, but that he that cometh after him, whose shoes he was not worthy to bear: he should baptize them with the Holy Ghost and with fire. This promise was fulfilled on the first Pentecost after the ascension of Christ.

Now if to be born of the Spirit and to be baptized of the Spirit means the same thing none were born of the Spirit until Pentecost; but such was not the case. The kingdom was only confirmed upon the day of Pentecost or established by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, and not born of the Spirit. The Holy Ghost upon that day baptized the kingdom, and endowed it with power to do the work that Jesus had commanded. The members had received a portion of the Spirit before that; at one time Jesus had breathed upon them and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost," before he left them. Now in concluding this article, will say as Paul said, There are diversities of operations, manifestations, and gifts, but it is all one Spirit. Let us not confound them, let us rightly understand, divide, and apply them; if so I am satisfied that no one will say that a man is born of the Spirit when hands are laid upon him, or that the baptism of the Holy Spirit and the birth of the Spirit are the same operation. Now if I am not right, will some brother show that I am not, by thus saith the Lord.

E. W. NUNLEY.

WHO IS ABIDING IN THE VINE?

We are still in Minnesota, trying to battle for the truth, against evils that are constantly seeking to creep within the fold, and are also opposing forces from without. And inasmuch as in the past we have been connected with one of the factions that arose after the death of the prophet, and as we at the present time are considered apostates from the truth, and as guilty of committing the unpardonable sin by some of the little remnants of that faction, because of our uniting with the Reorganization, we deem it good to again go over the ground of some of the differences of our belief, and try to see if we are in the true faith, and abiding in the vine; and see if our belief will agree with the law and the testimony, if not it is because there is no light in us.

Jesus taught in fifteenth chapter of St. John that he is the vine, and "as the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me."

Now we know if a branch is severed from a vine it withers and dies, and cannot bear fruit. So how necessary it is for us to know how we may abide in Christ the true vine; that we may not become as withered, dead branches. We read in this same fifteenth chapter of St. John:—

If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what you will, and it shall be done unto you. . . . If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love.—John 15: 7, 10.

So it is by being obedient to the word of God that we shall abide in the vine. Our Savior promised to send the Comforter, the Spirit of truth, to those who would abide in him, and in the sixteenth chapter of St. John we read, "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." Let us then try to be obedient to God's word, for "one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Christ continually referred to the scriptures, written before his day, to prove his work; and that he was fulfilling the prophecies concerning the Christ they had looked for so long. He tells them: "If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin." No other man fulfilled the prophecies concerning Christ; yet many did not believe him, and thus were not abiding in the vine.

And the work established by Joseph Smith, the prophet, was in direct fulfillment of prophecies contained in the Bible and Book of Mormon. No other man or work fulfilled these prophecies, and now it is too late to look for anyone else to fulfill them. For the "sealed book" of Isaiah twenty-ninth chapter, which was to come forth just a short time before Palestine was to become a fruitful land, has been brought forth, and the land of Palestine has been restored from that barren, desert-like condition, which came upon it in fulfillment of the prophecies of Christ. And all this has come to pass in the nineteenth century, so we need look no farther on this point. But most people reject the mission of Joseph Smith nowadays, the same as they rejected Christ in his day, in spite of all the proofs of prophecy fulfilled and the modern discoveries which go to prove the Book of Mormon a true record. The Jews thought they were abiding in the vine while rejecting Christ and his work; and in our day people think they are in the true vine while rejecting the angel's message. But they neglect to investigate God's word, to see if they are in the faith.

Every church or faction that has arisen since the death of the martyr claims they are abiding in the vine; but where are the proofs? We have been warned that many deceiving spirits have gone abroad to deceive. By the word of God we must try the different plans that are presented as the plan of salvation. We hear some say, "I don't see how anyone can tell which church is right," and they really think they cannot find out and so they do not try. Others say, "My father and mother tell me so and so, and they are just as good or better than anyone else I know of, and so it is my duty to believe them." But it is plain to be seen that somebody's father and mother are mistaken; and if it should be that our father and mother are deceived, will it be wise for us who are not children, but grown people, to cling to a mistake, a deception which is contrary to God's word, just because our parents do? Would it not be more wise for us to search the scriptures, prove all things, our parents' belief not excepted, and hold fast that which agrees with God's word? Remembering that if we are not forgetful hearers, but doers of the word, that God has promised the Holy Spirit, which leads and guides into all truth. Then we can understand what Lehi's vision meant, when he beheld a tree whose fruit was desirable to make one happy; and when he had tasted he began to be desirous that his family should partake also. And Nephi explains that the rod of iron which his father saw was the word of God, which led to the fountain of living waters and the tree of life. And both of these represented the love of God. Even so, I believe that people nowadays, who will take the word of God as their guide, it will lead them to the tree of life eternal. And once they get the love of God in their hearts they cannot help being desirous to show their friends the way; and it is because we love them, and have an interest in their welfare. Some of our friends seem to think, Why is it you cannot leave us alone; we will gladly let you alone, if you will only not mention your religion to us. And while I am writing of Lehi's vision, it brings to my mind a dream which was given me less than a year ago; and I believe that God warns people by dreams, occasionally, nowadays, as well as in old times.

I saw in my dream what had been in the past quite a large river, flowing through the land. A part of that stream had turned out of the true current, and had flowed over into a place between the hills, and had become a stagnant pool of corruption, and my soul seemed to shrink in horror from the contemplation of that corrupted mass. Then as I turned my eyes from that scene, I beheld a little barren spot of ground, altogether too near to that loathsome pool, upon which my own father had taken his position. And as I watched him, I saw him stand like a pillar, immovable as a rock, with his arms folded, and his eyes fixed steadfastly off over the hills, as if he was looking for something which never comes. He had turned his back upon all that corruption. But it pained my heart to see him standing in such a barren, desert looking place; no signs of life, nothing green and growing, but everything a desolate appearance; and I did so wish he would come where I was. Then I began to look to see where I was, and I found myself upon much higher ground. The soil was good, the grass and trees green, and everything around me betokened life. Upon one side a considerable stream of water seemed to be flowing; and running along the bank there seemed to be an iron rod, about the right height from the ground to grasp with the hand, and a narrow path by the rod. And I saw some of the brethren and sisters moving forward in this path, clinging to the iron rod; others I saw leaning upon the rod, but making no noticeable advancement. Others were getting careless, and wandering from the rod of iron, and were beginning to stumble and fall. Some went down laughing, as if they were unconscious of their danger; and I myself was warned, that though I might be standing upon higher ground, yet I might not be walking in the straight and narrow path, and might suffer loss thereby. And in examining the river of water, I saw it was not perfectly clear, though I could see the pebbles at the bottom, and I thought the great storm that swept over in the past had troubled the waters to their very depths, and they had not yet become as clear and pure as they should be.

Now if this stream could represent the church, we know that a portion of that church did turn out of the true current pointed out by the books, went into a state of corruption, and followed "seducing spirits and doctrines of devils," by reason of which the way of truth has been evil spoken of ever since. But is there anything in the history of the past that would show that my own father had taken a position too near to that apostate church, seeing that he had in truth turned his back upon their seducing, corruptive teachings and practices? Surely to my mind there is. And if I try to show my reasons for so believing, and should make any mistakes, I believe our editors would give any of the Cutlerite faction the privilege of correcting such mistakes through the Herald, and it would seem to be their duty to do so, seeing that they claim to be the only ones on earth who have authority to preach, teach, or baptize; the only ones holding the priesthood or the right to administer in any of its ordinances.

Now it would seem that for at least four years after the death of Joseph Smith, that Father Cutler stood by the Twelve and their measures, whatever they were. I have read history of those times, and I find that whoever opposed the Twelve were dropped from their official positions, and soon after cut off from the church. Three of the Twelve, to their honor be it said, refused to accept the leadership of Brigham Young. These were William Smith, Lyman Wight, and John E. Page. Also quite a number of the Seventies; and many other officials and laymembers refused to uphold Brigham and his followers in unrighteousness. These were all soon dropped from their stations in the church, and others chosen as officers who would not oppose Brigham. Father Cutler did not oppose them, so he was allowed to keep his position in the church. And believing himself at that time to be under the authority of the Twelve, and not above them, he waited to be set off by them upon the mission to which Joseph had ordained him before his death.

Now the Twelve began teaching contrary to the doctrine of Christ, and polygamy began to be taught and practiced on the sly. I have had the testimony of many who lived then that such was the case. And did Father Cutler oppose them in this? Oh no; not at that time! He would lose his position in that rejected church if he did. Can it be that their unlawful acts were accepted of God at that time. It cannot be; for we read in a letter written by Joseph Smith, which was printed in the Millennial Star, Vol. 17, page 85—

That the rights of the Priesthood . . . may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, or vain ambition, or to exercise control, or dominion, or compulsion, upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, amen to the priesthood, or the authority of that man.

Surely they must have been rejected, when good people tell me they began to run into light-mindedness and dancing; would open their balls by prayer, and during a cessation of dancing would preach the glories of polygamy. They would (pretend to) bestow the high priesthood upon the young girls, and then get them sealed as (spiritual) wives to the officials, and console the young men by telling them their time would come in the future. I am indebted to witnesses living near me for this last information.

But Father Cutler did not uphold everything, even if he did not openly oppose; for he told his followers, afterward, of a time when he voted with his hand (for his life was in jeopardy if he did not), but not in his heart, for a man to be murdered, who was opposing the Twelve. But he says a little bird flew over and informed the man of his danger, so he was missing when they attempted to carry out their plans. As time rolls on and people are learning to obey counsel, Brigham Young is placed in the office made vacant by the the prophet's death; not by revelation, as the word of God points out, nor by ordination, but by a vote of those who dare not or did not wish to oppose the Twelve. Father Cutler could not have opposed this measure, or he would have lost his official position then. Well, at last the Twelve set him off to perform the mission to which he had been appointed. And in the spring of 1848, if I am rightly informed, Father Cutler moved to Silver Creek, Iowa, where there was already a branch of the church. But their president, being a polygamist, moved to Utah, and they chose Father Cutler as president. Now he began to do a good work, something which it seems to me he ought to have done long before. He began to preach against the evils and wickedness that had been creeping into that rejected church. He began to call their attention to the law taught in the books, and gave them to understand that they could serve God without following Brigham to Utah. Well, I am thankful for this; he will be rewarded for all the good he did. And I think he kept a few from going to Utah.

I am told that the Twelve who were then at Council Bluffs or Omaha, soon heard that Father Cutler was preaching against them, so in the fall of 1848 they sent George A. Smith and others to Silver Creek to investigate. Father Cutler reported to them that he was only trying to teach the law as laid down in God's word, to the little branch at Silver Creek. They saw nothing wrong in that; and at a public meeting there George A. Smith bore testimony to Father Cutler's calling and mission; that he had been duly ordained by Joseph Smith. What! says one. Did George A. Smith bear testimony to Alpheus Cutler's being ordained to lead the church! O no; not that. Though I used to think that was what was meant. George A. Smith never believed it was Father Cutler's calling to be president of the high priesthood; but he bore his testimony to Father Cutler's being ordained to a mission among the Lamanites. This was explained to me lately by a Cutlerite elder. In the spring of 1849 the Twelve preferred charges against Father Cutler, and he was cut off from the church. My father went with them to attend the trial, but found that lay members were not permitted to attend the trial.

Now Father Cutler had recognized their authority up to a year before this, when they set him off on this mission. Can he recognize their authority now? I think not, but he goes ahead on his own hook now. And as he had to reject their authority and oppose them then, one cannot help but ask if it would not have been better to have opposed them sooner?

For it seems to me, his mind must have been darkened, to some degree, by the pernicious doctrines he had listened to, but had not opposed. For I am told by responsible parties, that while he was president of that branch, a two days' blessing meeting was called; and among those appointed to lay hands on the heads of their brethren and sisters, to bless them in the name of the Lord, was one Walter Cox by name, who was a polygamist, having three wives at that time. So in this instance he does not consider members of the old church rejected, and even recognized his authority to officiate in the ordinances of the gospel, while practicing this abomination. Though I am told that Father Cutler afterwards preached against polygamy and kindred evils. Soon after this he departed, with a chosen few, to a place called Grasshopper, on a mission to the Indians. But whether God recognized this work, I know not. I have never been able to find out if any Indians were converted. The only Indian I ever heard of belonging to the Cutlerite Church was Louis Denna, who was converted at Nauvoo, before the prophet's death. A few years after this, I think about 1854, Father Cutler moved to Manti, Iowa, where a few of his old friends and neighbors were located. The branch there feeling as if the church could accomplish much, if there was a vacancy in the highest office, proceeded to fill that vacancy, by voting to uphold Father Cutler as president of the high priesthood, prophet, seer, and revelator.

Thus following the example of those who went to the salt land. They ignored the law in Doctrine and Covenants, which says: "The president of the church, who is also the president of the [high] council, is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church." They proceeded to acknowledge him in that office without revelation. Also like those who upheld Brigham Young, they ignored the law which says:—

Every president of the high priesthood . . . is to be ordained by the direction of a high council, or general conference.—D. C. 17:17.

Also ignoring the word of God in section 107:18, that in Joseph and his seed the kindreds of earth should be blessed.

They proceeded to vote to uphold some one in an office to which he was never called by revelation, nor was he ever ordained to that office, as has been testified to me by several who were present at the time. And yet we read that "nothing shall be appointed to any of this people contrary to the church covenants."

After all this, every one (except Father Cutler) was required to be baptized anew, or they would not be recognized as members of the church. Father Cutler said he would not break that link between him and Joseph by being baptized. Query: if rebaptism is right, how could it break any link? and if wrong for him, was it not wrong for others? But be that as it may, it is certain that the Cutlerites never regarded any as church members unless they came to them to be rebaptized; and then whatever authority they held in Joseph's day was recognized, for they never ordained them again, but confirmed them members of the church, with all their former rights, privileges, and blessings. Though it is a mystery to me how they can claim that a man is rejected, and not a member of the church, and yet he holds his priesthood and authority. But in this case, Father Cutler recognized their authority, as members of the church, to vote him into office; and the next thing tells them they are not even members of the church, unless they will be rebaptized. Now I would suppose if people were rejected so as to lose their membership, they would also lose their right to vote, and would lose their authority and priesthood. But being only a woman, and a deluded Josephite at that, I wait to be corrected.

Now I believe that in each of these factions which arose after the death of the martyr, each individual will be rewarded for the good they did. And God would not entirely forsake them who were honestly deceived, though they might be following blind leaders who would lead them into the ditch. Yet God often heard their prayers and blessed them in afflictions. They believed in part and were blessed in part. But after God had called one to set in order the house of God,—truly he found it terribly out of order, scattered as sheep without a shepherd, some following false shepherds and blind leaders; but a few who would not choose and set up for themselves leaders, but waited and prayed for God's revealed will concerning the leadership,—after God calls one, does he go at it haphazard, ignoring the law? No; he is sent to teach the law. But I am told by some, that the one "mighty and strong," to set in order the house of God, is not a prophet, but a bishop, because he was to divide by lot the inheritances of the saints.

But they forget that in Father Cutler's blessing, which they have had so much faith in, it is stated that he should be the one to divide the inheritances of the saints, or cause it to be done. Do they think this means a bishop? But the right one waits till he is called of God as was Aaron, as was his father before him. He had also been appointed by revelation through his father, for we have the testimony of Lyman Wight, Father Whitehead, Father Cutler, and others, that such was the case. That Joseph Smith set his son Joseph apart by blessing, anointing, and prophecy, to be his successor when the time came, and as I believe him to have been a true prophet, I cannot accuse him of being a false one at that time.

And when the testimony of Father Whitehead reached Manti that Father Cutler was present at that time, Father Cutler "denied not, but confessed that he was present;" but said, "They take a blessing for an ordination," and so we believe it was a blessing, by anointing and prophecy. His father could not ordain him or anyone else to that office, for it was not a vacant office; he was filling that office faithfully himself at that time. And the people had been told in one of the revelations before, that the one to receive revelations for the church after Joseph should be taken, would be appointed through him, Joseph. The Lord warned them of this, so they would not be deceived; yet they cannot understand or believe it, so that many to this day are yet deceived. Nevertheless, after their tribulations and temptations, and being scattered and driven, because of their treating lightly the word of God, the Lord begins to feel after them as he had promised—to call them back to the true faith; for Zion shall not be moved out of her place, though her children are scattered. The honest in heart shall be gathered again. And who does God send to do this work? Is it those who have voted to uphold some man in an office to which he has never been called or ordained? No; but he calls on the one who had been appointed, and sends him to a little company who are trying to keep the faith, and are praying God to send whom he will. They have not set up a leader for themselves, so they accept the one whom God has sent, and he is ordained by those having authority, as his father before him was.

And God begins again to direct them, and sends them out as he did in his father's day to gather up the lost sheep, and convert sinners unto Christ. And God confirms the work by signs following those that believe, the same as in his father's day; the same as in the days of Christ's ministry; the same as in every age when God has set up his church and kingdom on earth. And while the blessings grow less and less among those who reject the one sent of God, the testimonies accumulate from the east, west, north, and south, how God is confirming the work by signs following the believer; and we read of evil spirits cast out, the blind restored to sight, the deaf made to hear, many are healed of diseases, while the gifts of prophecy, unknown tongues, visions, dreams, etc., are granted by the one Spirit.

But as one person told me, "That is nothing; the spiritualists and others claim some of these supernatural gifts too." "Well," I replied, "it certainly is not enough that these gifts are manifest, for we must search the scriptures and see if they are preaching the truth; but if they teach the truth and obey it, and have the authority, then these gifts should follow the believers, for they are the effects of faith, and when faith comes it brings its train of attendants with it; and when these things disappear, it is because faith disappears."

And if as I fear, these gifts are not among us to as great a degree as it would please God they should be, it is because we are not as faithful as we should be. For it behooves us all to deny ourselves, and take up our cross and follow Christ. Let God's word be true, whether it should agree with our preconceived ideas or not; whether it is to learn more humility, patience, charity, or love, or to conform to the law of tithing or plainness in dress, or to take up our cross and speak in meeting, or pray, or whatever it might be. May God help us all to be faithful soldiers in God's army.

Editors Herald:—I have been laboring mostly in the eastern part of the State since I arrived in the Nevada mission, on May 24. I arrived at Austin September 12. The M. E. preacher had gone to conference. I saw the trustees of said church and was granted the privilege of using it until the minister returned, which was ten nights, and I baptized four, two men and two women, making eighteen since June 6. Three out of the eighteen had belonged to the Brighamite Church. I left several at Austin who seemed to be very near the kingdom.

I expect to open up here on the 12th. I am informed that I can have the use of the old Congregational church as long as I wish to occupy it, which I think will be for two or three months. I have two furnished rooms secured.

I went out about nineteen miles from here and camped out and chopped wood for two days. I cut all lengths, just so we could load it on a wagon. I will have a four horse load, so you can see I am preparing to give the people of Reno a chance to hear the gospel of Jesus Christ. All I will lack now is means to get a little food along as I may need it, and I know that will come when I have need of it. I never have wanted for anything that was really necessary for me to have in this mission. The saints have always been very mindful, and also friends, in supplying me with things really necessary.

This is the finest town in the State; six thousand inhabitants; only forty-two thousand people in the State; so I think I will remain here until I work this town and vicinity pretty thoroughly. I will be at Mottsville conference, which convenes November 11 and 12; then I expect to return to Reno for awhile.

I thank all the saints and friends for assistance rendered, and pray God to bless them, which I know he will. Our Master told us that as small an act as a cup of cold water given to one of his disciples shall verily bring its reward. The saints can send all communications to me here at Reno, Nevada.

Yours in gospel bonds,
ELDER THOMAS DALEY.

ISLAND, Kan., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—The question of "expansion" has been agitating the minds of the American people for some time; we mean in a political sense. Thousands of dollars have been expended in the effort to establish the "stars and stripes" over on the Philippines; yea, more—human life has been sacrificed.

While men of the world are endeavoring to solve the "expansion problems," we as a church have a more gigantic problem to solve, along the line of expansion.

None can object to expansion in a spiritual sense. And it is not our purpose to discuss the principle of expansion in this paper from a political standpoint. Suffice it to say, that a nation which has failed to legislate in the interest of the commonwealth of America should not think of taking an additional burden upon her shoulders by caring for the Philippines. True expansion is all right. Let every true principle expand until it shall fill the whole earth.

We have had "expansionists" all along the lines. The Devil was a representative of this theory, when he appeared to man in the garden.

When Jesus Christ came upon the stage of action he commenced to advocate "expansion." His teachings hinge and rest absolutely upon this principle. Read: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."—Matt. 5:5. When Christ uttered this language he was the meekest man on earth, and he didn't own a foot of land. He in connection with his people expected to expand.

The Lord's prayer is another document containing the doctrine of expansion. "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven." Christ taught his disciples to pray for expansion.

This marvelous work and a wonder was established upon the true expansion theory advanced by the inspired Daniel: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."—Dan. 2:44.

From the time that the angel first made his appearance to Joseph the Seer the leaven began to work. His mind began to develop and before his death he had been changed from a backwoodsman to a Hebrew and Greek scholar. Likewise this latter-day work began to grow and develop from a membership of six to that of over one hundred thousand people at the death of the martyred prophet.

Disregarding this principle is what brought disaster to the church. When the saints began to "contract"—split up into factions—then they commenced to lose favor with God and man. Most of those factions have come to nought, excepting the Mormons of Utah, and upon this institution we see the "hand-writing on the wall."

We admit the expansion theory has been taught and practiced in Utah, from its incipency almost; but there are two sides to this question, as well as to all others, right and wrong. Jesus Christ represents the right, and his satanic majesty the wrong. Brigham Young was a firm believer in "expansion." This is clearly evinced owing to the fact that he had nineteen wives and about fifty-six children, more or less. To-day this government is fighting "expansion" in Utah, but clamoring for it in the Philippines.

According to the courts of the land the Reorganized Church is the continuation of the one organized by Joseph Smith. He organized it upon the heaven-revealed system of "expansion." Please read: "Now, behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men, therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day; therefore if ye have desires to serve God, ye are called to the work, for, behold, the field is white already to harvest, and lo, he that thrusteth in his sickle with his might, the same layeth up in store that he perish not, but bringeth salvation to his soul; and faith, hope, charity, and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualifies him for the work."—D. C. 3:1.

A better system of expansion never was revealed to man. This marvelous work is to reach the ends of the earth. The field or the world is already ripe and ready to be harvested. All who have desires to serve God are called to use the sickle. This means "expansion."

But we must use the sickle with all our might, mind, and strength. Brethren, have we expanded to that extent? Listen to the reports in quarterly conferences: "I have not much to report. Haven't preached any, etc."

Christ prayed that his ministry might be one, and his people also. It is found in the seventeenth of John. Have we expanded so far that we are completely united? If not there is room for expansion. It is necessary that the ministry be one, so that the world might believe that God has sent us.

The priesthood are the vitals of this church, and if we would have an active laity, the local priesthood as well as the missionaries should expand to activity and energy. We should expand until we can follow the advice given the world, to "live by every word." This means to observe the Word of Wisdom as well as to be baptized for the remission of sins. In the eighty-sixth section of Doctrine and Covenants we learn that by observing the words of wisdom we can obtain wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, also health and strength. "The glory of God is intelligence." If this be true, wouldn't it be a good thing for this whole church to open the windows of our souls and let the expansion principle have sway.

We cannot receive a remission of sins until after we obey the gospel and be baptized; so we cannot attain to the "glory of God" only by observing the means laid down in the written word. If we cannot leave off our tea and coffee, strong drinks and tobacco, how in all this world do we expect the Lord to redeem Zion? The Lord has invited us repeatedly to "come up higher." We hinder his work because of our slothfulness. Let us do what the Lord says and we will expand. It is the observance of these little things that will prepare us for the general gathering and final triumph of this restored gospel.

A beautiful thought concerning the gathering is found in the tenth chapter of John, where Christ is represented as the Shepherd of the sheep. Does a shepherd keep his flock scattered all the way from Dan to Beersheba? There were a certain kind of shepherds in ancient Israel who were rejected of the Lord, because they permitted the sheep to be scattered. Read: "My sheep wandered through all the mountains and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them."—Ezek. 34:6. Now because of this the Lord says in the tenth verse: "Behold, I am against the shepherds, and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock."

The sheep must be gathered for them to grow, develop, and expand. The sheep cannot be fed properly in their scattered, isolated condition. "Feed my lambs," was the advice given to Peter. But there are hundreds being brought into this church every year who die of famine, because they wander and perish upon every high hill.

Dear readers, the principles of expansion and gathering go hand in hand. If we wish to be gathered we must expand to a certain extent spiritually. However, the best place for spiritual expansion will be in a gathered condition; and if we desire to expand we must be gathered. I marveled and wondered when I heard an elder and missionary make the statement that the gathering would never be until Christ came to reign with his people.

Sheep shouldn't be fed upon "volunteer food" alone, but upon the full corn in the ear—at the stalls in the church and home. Even the presiding priests of the different branches complain and say it's impossible to visit all the members because of their scattered condition. Hence the membership don't expand, because every joint does not supply the needed strength.

What we need is good presiding officers—sheep feeders—so that Zion might be redeemed and that we might be prepared to occupy when it is redeemed. Our predecessors lost much because they failed to expand along these lines. The saints had not been gathered long, on Missouri's fertile soil, until the Lord gave them the following command: "Hearken, O ye elders of my church, saith the Lord your God, who have assembled yourselves together, according to my commandments, in this land which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which I have appointed and consecrated for the gathering of the saints: wherefore this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion. And thus saith the Lord your God, if you will receive wisdom, here is wisdom. Behold, the place which is now called Independence, is the center place, and the spot for the temple is lying westward upon a lot which is not far from the courthouse; wherefore it is wisdom that the land should be purchased by the saints; and also every tract lying westward, even unto the line running directly between Jew and Gentile. And also every tract bordering by the prairies, inasmuch as my disciples are enabled to buy lands. Behold, this is wisdom, that they may obtain it, for an everlasting inheritance."—D. C. 57:1.

"Zion shall not be moved out of her place;" hence if Zion is ever redeemed we must be gathered; and our pocketbooks must expand until we do what our fathers failed to do—purchase the land.

Let gathering and expansion be our motto, until this work is carried to a final triumph, is my prayer. A. M. BAKER.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 16.

Editors Herald:—I believe it is nearly a year since I have written anything for the Herald; not that I have been inactive in gospel work, but because I have not had anything of special importance to write.

The most of my labor has been outside of branches, and I have met with fair success in getting the gospel before the people. I feel satisfied that the seed sown will bear fruit in due time.

I have opened up the work in several new places, and have made many friends to our faith. I have enjoyed much of the good Spirit in preaching the word, and the Lord has manifested to some outside of the church that I was his servant and preaching his gospel. At one new place where I had held a series of meetings the Lord in a peculiar way gave one to understand that I was his servant and preaching the truth to them. It was this way: After I had left the place a man came through there and stopped to take dinner at a farmhouse where I had visited some, and the family had also attended the most of my meetings, and some were quite favorable to our faith. The housewife, a member of the "Christian Church," told this man about the meetings and how much she enjoyed them, and in a frank open way spoke favorably of the meetings, when he cautioned her to be very careful for she was liable to be deceived. He said he was acquainted with some of our members in Ottertail County and if she was not careful she would be led away from her present faith to unite with us. He then told her of an incident that took place where he lived. He said that two Utah elders came into the place and secured the schoolhouse for meetings, advertised, and had a houseful to hear them. After holding a few meetings some were in favor of closing the house and driving them out of town, but an old lady living there counseled them to let them alone, not to disturb them, and she would make it a subject of prayer, and ask the Lord that if they were not his servants their mouths might be closed and their work come to a close. Her counsel prevailed and she took it to the Lord. They came together again, had their opening exercises, and one arose to speak, but could not say anything and had to sit down. The other then tried, but failed, and they had to close the meeting, and left the place, their meetings proving a failure. As she told me afterwards, she thought it a good plan, and concluded to try it on me. So she went by herself for secret prayer, and was going to ask the Lord to close my mouth if I was not his servant and was trying to deceive them. The outcome was that her mouth was closed, and she could not pray at all, and the Lord gave her to understand that what I was preaching was the truth, and that I was his servant. She also said to me that no one need tell her that I was not one of God's servants, for she knew I was. But she said that she should not be in a hurry to change her faith, but would take time to consider the matter, which I advised her to do. I feel that good will come of it in the end, for I made many friends in the place.

Of late I have been holding meetings in three different places outside of the city, and have had very good congregations, considering the time of year, it being a very busy time with the farmers. Have been holding night meetings during the week and speaking in the city Sunday evening. I feel hopeful and think the work is onward. The great need is for more laborers.

I see by the papers that there are seventeen Utah Mormon elders in this State, and they claim a membership of seventy-five. If we had that many men in the State I think we could make it hot for them.

I have been hindered to some extent by poor health the forepart of the season, but am feeling better now, and shall push the work all I can the balance of the year. I am to go into the southern part of the State to look after the work there, and to encourage the isolated ones, for I know by experience that they need it. I desire to continue to the end that I may receive the reward.

For truth and right,

E. A. STEDMAN.

SHERBURNVILLE, Ill., Oct. 16.

Editors Herald:—On the 11th inst. Bro. A. J. Keck and I closed the tent meetings at Wilmington. I began the work alone, and continued for one week, after which I was joined by Bro. Keck; we continued the effort together, for two weeks longer, all of which time we had splendid attendance and attention. In all, twenty-seven sermons were preached. The weather was very propitious for the work, considering the season of the year. When we closed our effort many expressed their regret at our departure, and hoped that we would return again. Two or three persons were almost persuaded to obey the gospel, but finally thought better to wait awhile and investigate further.

On the 13th inst. Bro. Erwin Dickey conveyed us by wagon from Wilmington to this place, where we are now holding meetings, having begun on Saturday night. There is considerable opposition, but on last night we had a large congregation. We expect to continue as long as may be deemed advisable. Bro. Dickey and wife are the only members here, and they are anxious to get the work before the people. Bro. Keck and the writer made an effort here once before, nearly one year ago.

We are using the Bilhorn Telescope Organ, which was purchased by the district for tent and missionary work, and wish to say to the saints that it is a decided success, and just the right thing for the work. It has a beautiful, sweet tone, and splendid volume. It surpasses many of the parlor organs now in use. Being portable, and weighing only thirty-three pounds, it is very convenient. The little organ of itself is quite an attraction and a great help to the singing.

May the Lord speed the gospel message everywhere, is our prayer.

H. E. MOLER.

PARSONS, Kan., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—On the 2d of October, after saying "good-bye" to loved ones, in company with Bro. G. W. Beebe and our faithful horse Prince, we started for a missionary trip through the counties in South-east Kansas. In order to insure a safe journey we drove by Weir City, where Bro. Elmer Gilbert repaired our buggy, and then on to the home of Bro. Press Jones, where we spent a pleasant evening.

The next day we only drove about eight miles, to where Sr. Spurgeon lives. This sister has been a member of the church over twenty-five years. Although she has been isolated from the saints most of the time, she is strong in the faith.

There was once a branch in this neighborhood; but it was disorganized several years ago and the only remains were three members. So we thought we would try and fan these "few coals" into a living flame. There was a mountain of prejudice before us, and it required meekness and courage on our part to surmount the obstacles.

That which the people heard was different from what they expected to hear. We stood right by the Bible, and the people seemed interested in the message we had to tell. The best of order and attention were given us. Many were heard to say, "I think different of that people since hearing them preach."

While here we sold ten Voice of Warnings, distributed many tracts and papers, and left a general good feeling with the people. At the conclusion of the service we didn't take up a collection, but the people came up to the stand and handed us six dollars. I am convinced if we live humble and observe God's law, our wants and needs will be supplied. Our congregations during the week were fair, and on Sunday nights the house was crowded. We preached fourteen sermons at this place, with excellent liberty, and in a special manner we felt the approval of God when discoursing on the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith.

The people gave us a hearty handshake in saying "good-bye," and gave us pressing invitations to come back. If we only had some local elder to follow this work up with regular appointments, until another opportunity is presented to hold a series of meetings, what a help it would be. This point is located fourteen miles northeast of Parsons, at the Lakeview schoolhouse.

We left there yesterday morning, expecting to open up the work in the city of Parsons, but hall rent is too high, and only one man, a Mr. Cadmus, to bear the expense, and we didn't want to impose on his generosity. But we found an opening south of town in the Trowbridge neighborhood. We commence meetings here to-morrow night. We are stopping at the home of Mrs. Trowbridge. She doesn't belong to the church, but I was never treated better by the saints. Two or three of the boys are members. May the Lord lead them all into the "light," is my prayer.

Saints of Spring River district, remember us in your prayers, that the kingdom of God may be advanced through our efforts. Our next points are Elk Falls and Winfield, Kansas.

Let me say to the saints who live near these points, Please be looking for a good place to open the "gospel work," for we want to preach when we reach that point, if things are favorable. This is what we are out for. I rejoice in this work and find the closer we live to the Lord, the better we enjoy this gospel. In bonds,

GUILFORD, Mo., Oct. 16.

Editors Herald:—It is some time since I have penned a line to the Saints' Herald; not because lacking in interest or idle, but thinking I better withhold for others. However, if all would so conclude, not much would be done to help this line of church work.

At present I am working in and around Guilford. The outlook is quite good; more places to preach than men to occupy. Brn. M. F. Gowell, William Roach, and the writer are the only missionaries to do all the work along this line in this inviting field. The local brethren will, I trust, move out better than in the past; get out appointments for Sundays at least. In this way they will improve their minds so that better work can be done with the branches, which will be conducive to greater spirituality among the saints. There is some splendid young talent in Nodaway district that the church will be glad in days to come, if the young keep faithful.

The Sunday school arm of the church in this mission, as near as I can see and learn, is above the average, while the branches, like other places, need more life. At our late conference held in the new church in Holt County, Bro. I. N. White gave some splendid instruction to both local and traveling facilities of the church, on the duty of those that have the priesthood. It was splendid. Those present should heed it. The conference throughout was of a very high order. Three were baptized.

I have been much interested in the letters and articles touching on the much talked of principle "all things common;" but I can see we are not seeing alike and all reading the same books. This proves, to me at least, that "the Lord" must speak further on this matter. The most needful thing at present is to get our church up to that standard of spirituality that we will be prepared for a Zion, and her equality will come as soon as we are ready for it, as I believe God will crowd those conditions on as soon as he has a people good enough.

I think I will like this mission splendidly, the saints are good and willing to help roll on the great work, with both prayers and pocketbooks. On the 10th I was sent for to go over to Ross' Grove to preach the funeral of the son of Bro. and Sr. R. K. Ross. He was a noble young man and respected by all. It was the largest attended funeral I have witnessed for some time. The bereaved family stood the trial with great fortitude, showing they had hope in the gospel promises that if faithful they would meet again. Next morning after the funeral Bro. M. F. Gowell baptized four. So we have reasons to be thankful, and will try to work on, and wait for our reward.

Your brother,

J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

MILTON, Fla., Oct. 16.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference has just closed with profit and pleasure to all who attended. Bro. G. T. Chute, of the Mobile district, was with us and bore the most of the heat and burden, doing most all of the preaching and presiding. There was no jealousy, strife, or friction, and, as a result, one was baptized, an aged and invalid sister, and many more near the kingdom.

Bro. L. F. West contributed much to the pleasure of the meetings by his presence and forcible talks. May many such conferences be ours to enjoy.

STILLWATER, Okla., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our reunion is now over. A profitable time was enjoyed by all. Not a large representation was present, on account of the scattered condition of the saints. Two young souls ventured into the waters of baptism, to enlist themselves in the great cause of the Master.

Owing to sickness in his family our district president, R. M. Maloney, was not able to be present. Fifteen preaching services were held and six prayer and testimony meetings. The Holy Spirit was present to cheer and comfort us on our earthly pilgrimage. Elders present: S. Butler, R. W. Davis, W. S. Macrae, S. J. Hinkle, T. J. Smith, and H. C. Hughes; Priests James Yates, T. N. Berry, L. A. Hall, R. K. Rowland, and the writer.

The order or sect known as "True Followers" is well represented in this vicinity; it is one of their strongholds. Seems to me like they are truly a deluded people. They think it just as necessary to "pick up serpents" as to be baptized, and some of them have suffered death in consequence. They do not believe in applying the slightest or mildest remedy to man or beast, in case of accident or sickness.

Bro. W. S. Macrae holds a debate with J. W. Coats, a Christian minister; questions to be discussed: Book of Mormon and the two church propositions; to be held at Clayton, thirteen miles southeast of Stillwater, commencing October 18.

The work is slowly progressing here in Oklahoma and we feel confident of its final triumph over opposing forces.

In gospel bonds,

JUNIATA, Mich., Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—On the 4th of September I was called to Saginaw City to administer to the sick. I remained three weeks, held two cottage meetings and one in the Baptist church on Mackinaw Street, in South Saginaw. I found eleven that bear the name of saint, and some are trying to honor it. I learned there were some saints in East Saginaw. I took my fishing hook and line, the Bible, and soon found a resting place at the home of Bro. and Sr. James W. Knight, from Ohio. This brother had learned there were saints in South Saginaw and Bay City, and called on them. He is alive in the work, and doesn't keep his light under a bushel. He has an uncle, a preacher. He also works in the mines and they have it right and left, and as Bro. James is of the John Bull stamp, he doesn't take any bluff when he knows he is right, and through his uncle he learned of other saints close by, who attended his church and wouldn't join in with him, as they had found something better, and the preacher put them down to be the same as Bro. Knight in faith.

I was told one was a doctor, and while canvassing that street one day I saw the sign, "Dr. W. Schriener." I took down the number, and next morning called on him, and was welcomed. I told what my business was; that I wanted some information. Was he a Latter Day Saint? He spoke frankly and said, "Yes." The sister was coming out of the kitchen when I asked, What kind of Latter Day Saints, as there are more than one kind calling themselves saints? She spoke up and said, "We are the true Latter Day Saints, the Josephite saints." I need not say I felt a burden go off my shoulders, for I didn't know how soon I was showing the hole the carpenter left, when I introduced myself. What a happy time we enjoyed. They didn't know of any saints in the city. The sister ran to the next house to tell her mother, who was soon on the scene, and her husband is also a saint, and a teacher, from Ohio, named Smallwood.

I called on another sister from Illinois, Sr. Russell. About three weeks before I called she had two dressmakers come to board with her, and she was anxious to find names for them, so as to have them blessed before I left. They are two pretty baby girls and are doing well. This sister was brought into the church through reading the church works and is well posted and of a noble character. She was baptized by Elder Kerr, a few years ago. Her husband is not with her in the church, but is good and kind to her, and she has about all the church works. She said she only heard a few sermons and knew this work was of God before she came in and that Joseph was a prophet of God, and that the present Joseph is a prophet of God and in his right place. She talks calmly and every word in its place—firm. While she talked of the hope of the saints as she understood it from the church works, my mind ran back twenty-eight years this fall when I came into this good work. It proves what we learn of the right ways we do not soon forget. I thought, what a grand thing the gathering will be and what a happy meeting it will be for those that are ready and waiting for the coming of the Lord. I also found Bro. S. D. Haana, and Sr. Flora Hanna, and a son of Bro. Hanna; the name I didn't get down, and can't tell if in the church or not. I was well treated and had a pleasant visit among them.

While in South Saginaw I made my home with Bro. and Sr. Brewer and Bro. and Sr. D. near; and in East Saginaw with Bro. and Sr. James Knight, who did all they could to help me while holding meetings in the Second Street Baptist church. Every meeting was announced in the Evening News and sometimes twice in the same paper, by some friend not of the church. The last night I spoke a Baptist lady told Bro. Knight that if I would come back and hold meetings in their church she would board me as long as I would stop.

I was called home to go to Lapeer and Five Lakes; held some good meetings while there and one four miles east of Lapeer, where I held some meetings two years ago. Had a warm reception in that section where that post master lady made me a present of a new Oxford Bible. I had to stay all night with them. They think I am all right (and they are right). I told them to stay right where they were till they found something better, and to prove all things by the word of God. I am afraid I won't be able to keep my promise good to those people where I have been laboring of late, to go and tell them more about this new but old, old gospel, this fall and winter. I rented my farm near Five Lakes, Michigan, last spring and bought this house and lot in Juniata that Elder Phelps had, so my wife would be close to the saints and post office, while I would do what I could to help build up the kingdom of God, and as the man that's on my place has done nothing to help me, nor to improve the place, I shall have to go back to the farm, after our conference, if something doesn't turn up to brighten the way, so I won't lose what I have in it.

As I was leaving Saginaw City I got a combing down. Some said I was like all the rest of the elders, just as soon as I got a good interest started, pull up and go, etc. I explained to them that I wasn't out by the church, and got no support from the church, and that I had a family to support, and my first duty is home. With the above explanation I got away without any bodily harm, by promising to come back again soon. I felt sad to think that this city of about sixty-five thousand souls and such good opportunity for preaching the true gospel to them, and none of our elders to respond. Only praying to the Lord to send more laborers won't do; we must send something with the prayer; the hand must go down into the pocket, and if there is only a dollar and a penny in it, don't let the Devil keep the dollar and hand out the penny to do work for the Lord. The other will go farther with the prayer and do more good for the Master, and that is what we all want to do; then the reward is sure. I got my reward for preaching in the Baptist church in collections, and I turned it over to the Lord.

In bonds,

A. MCKENZIE.

FANNING, Kan., Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—I remained home two days after returning from the Washington Park reunion, then on to my field of work, stopping with the saints in Atchison over Sunday. I then went to Whiting and found the tent stored in a barn, and Bro. Hudgens at Baker, where he had been suffering with fever, but was able for work again.

We pitched the tent at Elmont, the saints paying the freight from Whiting, and began meeting with prejudice high against us, but after seventeen sermons by Brn. Hudgens, Dunnington, and the writer, we viewed the field and found a change in the people, favorable to us. On the second Sunday the M. E.'s endeavored to open services, but they only continued two nights, with very small attendance. They closed, leaving the field for us. The people were finally very good to us, furnishing us gas for lights, as also furnishing us eatables. We left there with five families and parts of families much interested in the latter-day message. Mr. C. Jones and wife (estimable people) have thrown their doors open to the elders, also the postmaster's wife is now willing to entertain the elders. When we located the tent she said she would not go to hear the Mormons, but noticing our demeanor at the post office, she was led to attend services near the close, when she saw we have the truth.

At the close of the services I announced we had some books for sale, and they could be had by paying ten cents for them, when to our surprise the books were taken as fast as two of us could sell them. One young lady said she had never read a word in the book, but believed every word of it to be true before reading. By some good labor, I see no reason why there will not be gathered fruit for the Lord. I have visited three towns during the season with the tent, where the gospel was unknown to them, and we have always gained the favor of the best and leading people. I consider the tent work a success in Northeast Kansas district; it only needs to be in the field continually during season.

From Elmont we went fifteen miles to Silver Lake country, found Bro. Ed Nelson of Nebraska City, Nebraska, stopping with friends living on one of his brother's farms; he aided us in getting a hearing and otherwise. While there we interested some in the gospel, left with one young man much interested and reading the Book of Mormon. He is a Lutheran, but was working for union of all churches. I preached on union after I destroyed Babylon, which gave him a clear idea of the conditions at present, and he soon saw his union scheme could not accomplish his desired end. He has a faculty of readily understanding the gospel. From there we came to Atchison. Attended conference the 14th and 15th. Am now at home with Bro. W. S. Hodson. We have just begun a series of sermons at Highland Station.

Every laboring for Zion,

L. G. GURWELL.

JUNIATA, Mich., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our conference of the 14th and 15th inst., held at Juniata, is an event of the past, and those who were present and took part, felt it was good to be a saint in latter days, and were encouraged to press on and follow their leader and commander, and be found with the wedding garment on, when He comes to preside over his own. Peace and unity prevailed throughout the conference as far as I saw, and I do know that many tears were shed as we were parting, and hoping to meet again and share the joys of heaven. The conference was called together by Elder A. Barr, district president, who was chosen by the body to preside, and Elder A. McKenzie as assistant; Elder W. Davis secretary, with F. O. Benedict assistant; Sr. C. Boyer was organist and chorister, with Sr. Stephenson assistant; ushers Richard Hartnell and C. Boyer. The preaching was as follows: Saturday evening by Elder Goodenough; Sunday forenoon by J. A. Carpenter; in the afternoon, by F. M. Cooper; and by Elder E. C. Briggs in the evening. The last three meetings were held in the Baptist church, as our church was not large enough to even seat the saints that attended; and the Baptist people offered us the use of their church if ours was not large enough. This act is a Christian one. Do unto others as you would wish others to do unto you.

This closed one of the largest gatherings of saints that ever met in this place, to meet again, if the Lord spares us, with the Bayport saints, the first Saturday and Sunday nearest the full moon in June, 1900.

On Saturday, the 14th, Bro. D. Loar came and took the picture of the saints' church and saints, took two views, front and side views, and a sample of them was on hand Sunday afternoon. They are well taken; the only fault was the price was too high, fifty cents each, which was cut down to thirty cents, and Tuesday morning I took orders for twenty-three, which will be sent to the brethren in about ten days. I have made arrangements with him to supply all that want any for twenty-five cents each postpaid. If any get damaged in shipping, will replace them. Send all orders to me with the price, twenty-five cents, and state what view wanted, front or side, and make the address plain. I will see that the pictures are as good as the samples shown at the conference, or the money will be refunded, as I won't pay for them till they are examined. But I must have the money with the orders, before I can order them. Now brethren, I have gone to this trouble in order that those wanting them can have them for twenty-five cents. If any write to me and want a reply before pictures are ordered, send stamp for reply, as I will be out enough, that is my time. When those pictures are ready I will send two, one of each, to the Herald editors, and then you can see what a fine church the saints have in this place.

I forgot to mention that three were baptized during conference.

Your brother in bonds,

A. MCKENZIE.

ARGENTINE, Kan., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—Last week our newspapers gave notice that Rev. W. H. Moore would lecture in the Baptist church; subject, "Inside of Mormonism." At the time appointed myself with a few of my brethren were there and occupied front seats. Rev. Mr. Rafferty, pastor of the church, gave out the hymn, "My country 'tis of Thee," and after singing, Rev. Mr. Prout, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was called upon to offer prayer. He prayed loud and long that the brother might be blessed in presenting the inside of Mormonism which was a curse to our country.

After prayer the Rev. was introduced. He began by referring to Joseph Smith, when and where born. The first slanderous and false attack or statement he made was that his mother in her works stated that she was a fortune teller and Joseph was of much service to her because of his visionary turn; and that his father was a horse trader; "and" said he, "we all know how untruthful horse traders and fortune tellers are." Then he related Joseph's early experience in religion, and I do not think I was ever more surprised than I was in hearing him relate the facts of the coming forth of the latter-day gospel, how an angel appeared to him and showed him the place where the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated were deposited; "that some people believed that the Book of Mormon was fixed up from the writing of one S. Spalding, but I have no proof to that, therefore will say nothing about it." "I do not see why anybody should object to the Book of Mormon; it contains good reading and opposes polygamy. Really I don't see what they want with it themselves, as they hardly ever refer to it in their public preaching."

He stated briefly when and where the church was organized and its progress; how Joseph Smith was mistreated; how upon one occasion he was taken out and abused, tarred and feathered, and the next day Joseph Smith came near the identical spot and preached and baptized twenty-two persons. "This, to me is evidence that Joseph Smith was honest and sincere in what he believed; that an impostor or hypocrite could not have done that." At that I spoke out loud enough to be heard all over the church saying, "I thank you for such honest admission."

He referred to the death of Joseph, and of Brigham Young taking the lead. He said many hard things about the people of Utah, some of which I know were not true. He read a preamble and resolution in opposition to seating Elder B. H. Roberts. A rising vote was called for, and myself and brethren registered before them where we stood, by our votes.

I feel thankful to God for the lecture, because it brought us before the people to a large extent in our true light, showing us in perfect distinction from the Utah Church. He spoke in the highest terms of Pres. Joseph Smith and the members of the Reorganized Church. At the close I spoke to him and the pastor (who is a personal friend of mine) to compare doctrines of the churches. They thought it would not result in any good, I thought so too, from a Baptist point of view.

I am, as ever, standing on the watch tower in defense of the truth.

F. C. WARNKY.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—At the conclusion of our reunion at this place, September 3, I went with the district tent to Sandyville, in Warren County, Bro. George Jamison hauling the tent for me, and where I held a series of tent meetings, which were well attended by those mostly not of the church, but some of whom are beginning to believe. Several of the saints from near Milo, a distance of eight to nine miles, some living at Pleasantville, attended the services Sundays, to aid with their presence, prayers, and otherwise as best they could. The weather was cool for tent work, but we kept at it, Bro. Joseph Knox and family, and his father, Joseph P. The crowds kept increasing, till on the last Sunday night the tent would not hold near all the audience.

I left the tent there at conclusion of the meetings, September 19, hoping that warmer weather might permit us to resume there later, but not so to date. I then went home for a few days, to visit with and aid my family as I might be able, having been absent since the 10th of May. After a few days with the little family, now made less by the absence of the older son, who was away searching for labor and to perform it, (a rather difficult thing to do single-handed and without friends to push one's claims, outside of a "trust,") I resumed my field labors October 6, at the Concord schoolhouse, near Milo, in Warren County, where Brn. R. W. Barr, William Griffin, S. Burgess, and families reside. Held forth one week of evenings, including Sunday forenoon. While there had the pleasure of baptizing five persons of excellent repute; three of them heads of families, and two young men. All were encouraged by these additions to the work there. And, as is usually expressed, others there are favorable to the work, and are investigating. How "near the kingdom" they may be, I would not try to predict, but feel hopeful of them sometime.

On the 15th I was at the conference of the district held at Des Moines. It was much more largely attended than I had anticipated, owing to the recent reunion, and was lively and spiritual. Brn. J. W. Morgan, J. S. Roth, T. J. Sheldon, M. H. Cook, H. B.

Brown, T. P. Cook, H. A. McCoy, J. P. Knox, and John Park of the ministry were present. And Bro. F. A. Russell, being at home in the district, was also with us. Some of the teachers and deacons were also present, manifesting their interest in the work.

A number of late baptisms were reported. The saints present appeared fervent and earnest, and many seem to be getting wider awake, and the impression seems to be growing that a better day, a brighter, for the district is now dawning. I hope this may be realized, and it will if the spirit manifest at the reunion and conference continues to spread, blaze, and burn. We all have some dross in us yet that needs to be eradicated ere we are transformed fully into the image of Christ, or fully reflect him in our lives. This purifying process goes on the more successfully as we attend to our duties the more diligently, and labor for the Master more faithfully and continuously.

What a grand move in the advance the work would now make if all the saints in all the world were awake and marching together in solid phalanx, as Christ our great commander, leader, example, bids us to awake and move out unitedly! And just now, while Babylon is so rapidly tumbling, and while consternation is seizing her leaders, our pen and press, and the trumpetlike voice of our ministry ought to reverberate along the falling, crashing walls and towers, "Come out of her, my people, that you be delivered from her sins that now tower to heaven, and her plagues now laying her waste." For her plagues are death,—spiritual as well as literal,—and her iniquities are being visited upon her. Her "strong delusions" of Dowism, Christian Science, and Spiritualism—"three unclean spirits"—with her "holiness," nee infallibility, with their deathly influences, are entwining her about, as the gleamy-eyed boa does the harmless lamb, and is being inculated with their deadly virus.

It is no presumption to thus warn. Has not God's command to do so gone forth? (Rev. 14: 6, 7; 18: 4; D. C. 1: 3; 34: 3; 83: 24.) Saints, many of you are asleep, while Babylon is falling! Awake! Are you being charmed by her to slumber? Trim your lamps; look prayerfully into the books; gird the loins of your minds. The world never witnessed such times before. Gentile nations are in the balances, are weighed, almost ready for their fall. Be wise. Look forth for the signs of the times.

Bro. W. C. Nirk was absent from the conference, and was missed, since he has always been a faithful attendant heretofore. Will many saints now asleep on guard, be so missed "in the crowning day that's coming by and by"?

Bro. F. A. Russell's Saturday evening sermon, addressed mainly to the young, will have its good effects. One thought I will refer to: The spirit of worldly attractions, that so powerfully operates to draw young saints away from Christ; dancing, to illustrate. Putting it something in this form: No harm in the simple act of dancing, if you do not dance too hard, or too long, or till too late at night, and under proper restrictions. Hold a social dance, but dance with your brother, father, sister, or mother. And at a seasonable hour return home, with the members of the family only. This will meet every emergency, if the simple act of dancing is the object of the dance.

Or if a mixed audience is present at the dance, stretch a rope down the middle of the room, and let the gentlemen take one side of the room, the ladies the other, and retaining their respective sides of the rope and room, dance, ladies with ladies, gentlemen with gentlemen, till the close, then return home in family groups. "Pshaw!" say the young, "that's no dancing." Then what is? The same spirit would not be in this as in the usual dance, the promiscuous. This would be dancing, and would afford all the exercise needed or wanted; and the figures, sets, could all be carried out just as well as though gentlemen and ladies danced together. Then it is not so much the dancing, after all! "No; it is the social and sentimental assimilation in the association of the sexes in the dance that takes us." Is that putting on the Lord Jesus Christ, and making no provisions for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof?

I note with much pleasure the way the subject of the gathering, and other incidental points thereto, are lately being discussed. Each writer reviewing it from his affirmative independent standpoint, without unjust criticism of any he may differ from; and with brotherly commendation of points where agreement is reached. This is a most laudable way of investigating, with a view to reaching a unity of understanding on subjects wherein mutual interests are involved. As the time nears for the gathering to take place, interest will increase concerning it in the minds of the saints, and an understanding of it be reached. The keys in general to that subject are already revealed in the books; and like other gospel subjects and works of God, all minor details will be made known of God, as required by him.

The all-essential thing now required is for all saints by diligent, humble obedience to the divine commands already given, to become "Zion," "the pure in heart," so as to be ready for the gathering, and be able to live on their inheritances without polluting them. God has said that Zion cannot be built up except by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom. Heaven and earth could sooner fail. All the apostles, and prophets, and elders imaginable could not otherwise build up Zion. Human speculations and schemes are absolutely useless. God works by principles and laws divine, not by human policies, to accomplish his works and to save man; and the sooner we all accept this inevitable, and act according thereto, the better it will be for us. God will move for us in this when we are ready to follow, and not precede him, in all his requirements. May we note carefully human experience in all the past, and be wise unto salvation.

I preached the funeral to-day (October 20) at this place, of Sr. Julia A., wife of Dr. W. L. Pence, she having died on the 18th. Expect to be here till after Sunday, the 22d., and then on as the way opens to us.

Earnestly desiring success,

C. SCOTT.

BYRNEVILLE, Ind., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference is now a thing of the past, and we are glad to say it was the most peaceable and quiet conference that ever convened at this place; that loving and good Spirit of Christ was with us throughout the entire session. The visiting brethren or elders rather, were Brn. Marshall and Scott of Wirt, Bro. David Scott of New Albany, Bro. James M. and James G. Scott of Borden, Indiana. The last named being the first person baptized in Indiana; and as prejudice ran very high at that time, he and his affectionate, worthy, and faithful wife have suffered many sore persecutions, and have passed through some very dark and trying trials, all for the work's sake. We feel safe to say they have done more for the work than any one family in Indiana. To-day the gospel blaze shining brightly in the pathway of their lives, makes them stand as able defenders of the restored gospel, and strong in the faith. And now as they have climbed the hill of life, and are nearing the valley on the other side, the battle almost fought, we feel while persecution and trials come thick and fast, and they have endured all of these, we are satisfied if they continue a little while longer, there will be many stars in the crowns being prepared for them.

The elders preached some able and very instructive discourses. At the close of conference session two were baptized—Elder Kelley's daughter and Bro. W. W. Kepley's daughter, both of considerable influence. So the work moves. After baptism, a few of the saints gathered at the home of Bro. W. W. Kepley for social meeting, and the greatest feast followed that we ever experienced. It seems to us the heavens were open to our awaiting souls. The time came for us to clasp the hand of parting saints, but we feel it is but for a little season, till the tried and true will be gathered into one place, there to bask in the sunlight of the gospel, to take the parting hand no more. May we be faithful to the covenant we have made, in my prayer.

Your brother in Christ,
JAMES P. SAPPENFIELD.

Good teeth are essential to good health, for "without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication. Without thorough mastication there cannot be thorough digestion. Without thorough digestion there cannot be proper assimilation. Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition. Without nutrition there cannot be health." Good teeth must first be built up out of proper material, then kept in order by proper care. In speaking of healthy foods we have indicated the proper material for building the teeth. For further information on this topic, as well as upon everything relating to the care of the teeth, we refer you to the admirable little book, "Letters from a Mother to a Mother," by Mrs. J. R. Walker of New Orleans. If, as is the case in that city, soft water is used for drinking, the teeth will probably be soft from lack of lime. Correct this by taking lime water; a tablespoonful or two in a glass of milk or water does not affect the taste unpleasantly, and will benefit the teeth. Lime water is useful for so many things it is well to keep it in the house. You can prepare it just as well as a druggist, and much more cheaply; put a teacupful of clean, unslacked lime into a pitcher and pour two quarts of water over it, taking care that the lime does not fly into your eyes as you stir it. When clear, pour off this water which will contain impurities, and refill the pitcher; cover to keep out dust and insects; let it stand till perfectly clear, then pour off and bottle for use. The first water poured off is useful to cleanse sinks, drains, and the like, and as a fertilizer for house plants.

Keep the teeth clean, and early train children to do this. For this purpose Dio Lewis says one toothpick is worth ten toothbrushes. Remove all particles of food sticking between the teeth, after every meal, and rinse the mouth out thoroughly both then and before retiring, occasionally using lime water to complete the cleansing, especially if the food eaten was acid. Brush the teeth once a day with a soft brush. Train the child to sleep with closed lips both for the sake of his teeth and of his throat. If he cannot breathe well with his mouth shut, the nasal passages need attention, as there is probably catarrhal trouble. Never eat or drink anything very hot or very cold; especially avoid quick transitions from hot to cold, as it cracks the enamel. Never bite thread or crack nuts with the teeth, nor pick with anything harder than a wooden toothpick.

Take your children to a dentist at least once a year, to have their teeth examined. If you have done your duty, he will find little or nothing to do, but it is safe to have the examination. Occasionally the teeth of little children need filling, and when this is the case it should be attended to at once. Some parents think it not worth while to fill a first tooth, but this is a mistake. A first tooth, if decayed, will ache, and toothache is no easier for a little child to bear than for yourself. If you pull a tooth before its time, that is, before the second tooth is ready to take its place, the jaw will shrink, and the second set of teeth will be misshapen.

Thus far our health helps have purposely dealt almost entirely with preventive measures, for prevention is vastly better than cure. But accidents and sickness come to most families; we need to be prepared for them. The first, best preparation a mother should make is to cultivate self-possession, presence of mind. "Be very much afraid of danger when out of it," says Mentor to Telemachus, "when you are in it, be fearless." This is a good motto for every mother.

The next step is having in the most accessible spot in the house, an emergency drawer, as suggested by a writer in Babyhood, which magazine, by the way, should be taken by every baby's mother. In the drawer let there be always ready for use, court-plaster, adhesive plaster, and sharp scissors to cut it, a bottle of arnica and one of Pond's extract of hamamelis, also one of ipecac syrup, which your physician will teach you to prepare for croup, and one of sweet oil, vasaline, or calenduline; rolled bandages of different widths, pieces of soft old linen or cotton, a sponge, strips of flannel for outward bandages over wet compresses, a pair of forceps, a ball of woolen yarn to tie up cut fingers, a pincushion with pins big and little, and needles ready threaded, one with white silk for sewing up wounds, the other with white thread for sewing on bandages; some cotton batting, a rubber hot water bottle, a syringe, and an alcohol lamp. To prepare the bandages, cut or tear old sheets into the widths of the various bandages you wish, ranging from an inch to four inches in width, each width to be rolled by itself, making it into a hard, smooth roll by rolling it upon the table with the right hand while the left holds the strip in position. After using these prepared bandages you will never wish to return to haphazard rags for doing up cut fingers. Rolling the bandages furnishes employment for the children on rainy days.

For a simple cut, doing it up in its own blood is the best remedy. If there is dirt in the wound it must be washed out, otherwise it is better not to have water touch it. A slight cut will be held together by the bandage put on smoothly and tied with a woolen yarn; if the cut is deeper, draw the lips of the wound carefully together and hold in place by strips of adhesive plaster, then put on the bandage. Sometimes a stitch seems necessary. A steady hand and a little nerve will enable you to take it with the white silk threaded in the needle on your cushion; press a piece of cork against the flesh where the needle is to come out. If from the cut the blood is a bright red, and comes in spurts and jets, an artery is cut, and the case is serious. Tie a handkerchief round the limb between the heart and the wound; put a stick through the handkerchief and twist it till the flow of blood is stopped. Send for the doctor, if you have one near, as soon as you see the spurting blood, but stop the bleeding also, or the child will bleed to death before the doctor comes. If you live at a distance from a physician you should learn to take up an artery. This is done by seizing its cut end, the one toward the heart first, with the forceps, drawing it out and having an assistant tie it up with white silk, just as you would tie the mouth of a bag. When this is done do up the wound with adhesive plaster and bandages.

Bruises and sprains are best treated with showerings of water, after which do them up in bandages wrung out of water slightly colored with arnica. In all these cases keep the bandages moist without undoing them.

Sprains are often very troublesome. Absolute rest for the injured joint is a prime necessity. I have known people lamed for life by attempting to walk on a sprained ankle before it had regained its strength.

A bone out of joint is not an uncommon accident, especially in case of the shoulder joint, where the socket is shallow. It should be replaced as soon as possible, a painful though not dangerous operation. Study the form of the corresponding joint so that you may know when you have it right; then by a careful, firm, steady pull draw the bone out till even with the edge of the socket, when the contraction of its ligatures will bring it into its place with a shock. Bathe the joint well with arnica or Pond's extract, and do it up in a wet compress with the dry flannel over it, a precaution to be taken with all wet compresses.

A broken bone is not so serious an accident with a child as with his parents, for his bones knit readily; but it must be carefully set, that the limb do not grow crooked. Broken limbs and dislocation of joints demand a surgeon's care, but if one cannot be immediately obtained you need to know what to do. Handle the broken limb very carefully, lest the end of the bone puncture the muscles and skin, compounding the fracture. If it is a leg, lay the broken limb alongside the well one, and tie the two together till the surgeon comes. If it is an arm, bandage it from the shoulder. Broken ribs require a broad, firm bandage round the waist. I have known cases in the country in which broken ribs made good recovery with no other treatment than this; the bandages being kept moist with arnica and water. — Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

THE following paper is one of several that made up what was called a "Moderation Program" at the convention of Fremont, Iowa, district convention, last May. The evening was set apart for temperance work, and the district officers conceived the idea of teaching "temperance in all things." We believe that there are few persons to whom the paper in some of its parts will not be a good admonition. Read and reflect.

MODERATION IN OUR CONVERSATION.

"Oh, Mr. Emerson," once remarked a young woman in greeting the Concord philosopher, "it must be so delightful to know that people all over the country are grateful for the things you have said!" "Thank you," said Emerson slowly, "but it is for some of the things I have not said that I feel the most grateful."

Idle flattery! Why do we indulge in it? Why offend the good sense of those to whom we speak with such idle words? If you can truly and honestly praise another, do so; but do not, we beg of you, speak foolish, idle flattery.

Do not carry scandal, nor hint at it. Such things should find no place in our conversation.

We should speak where duty demands that we should. Our very silence sometimes leaves a wrong impression. Sometimes duty demands that we speak in defense of a principle. It may be we should speak in defense of a friend. A friend that will not speak in our defense, if necessary, is not worth the having.

Now if there be nothing good that we can say, let us then follow the saying of the ancients, "Let us be silent, for so are the gods."

"No trait of character is rarer, none more admirable, than thoughtful independence of the opinions of others combined with a sensitive regard to the feelings of others."—A. J. Froude.

"Flattery is a false coin which has circulation through our vanity."—La Rochefoucauld.

"I think the first virtue is to restrain the tongue; he approaches nearest the gods, who knows how to be silent even when he is in the right."—Cato.

"Nobody talks much that don't say unwise things,—things he did not mean to say; as no one plays much without striking a false note sometimes."—O. W. Holmes.

"By examining the tongue of a patient, physicians find the diseases of the body, and philosophers the diseases of the mind."—Justin.

"Four things never come back,—the spoken word, the sped arrow, the past life, and the neglected opportunity."

"Good words are worth much and cost little." "A cool mouth and warm feet live long."

"Three may keep a secret if two of them are dead."—B. Franklin.

"For with all our pretensions to enlightenment, are we not now a talking, desultory, rather than a meditative generation?"—J. C. Shairp.

"There are men whose tongues might govern multitudes if they could govern their tongues."—George D. Prentiss.

"Gossip pretending to have the eyes of an argus, has all the blindness of the bat."—Ouida.

"Talking and eloquence are not the same thing; to speak, and to speak well, are two things." "A void circumlocution in language. Words like cannon balls, should go straight to the mark." "Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is richer, happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one to society; it is disgusting to refined people, and abominable to the good."

An English burglar, who shammed insanity in order to escape trial, after keeping up the pretense for six months, has become really mad.

The following report from the elders' court appointed to hear the appeal case of Thomas Carlos Clapp was received and adopted:—

LAMONI, Iowa, Sept. 26, 1899.

To the President and Brethren of Decatur District in Conference Assembled; Greeting: We your court appointed at Lucas, Iowa,

June 24, 1899, to consider an appeal from a decision of an elders' court held at Lamoni, May 9, 1899, wherein Lamoni branch was plaintiff and Thomas Carlos Clapp defendant, beg leave to report we dissent from the findings of the former court, for the following reasons:—

1. The evidence relied upon seems to have been a purported confession made by one of the witnesses outside of the court, the truth of which confession said witness denied when brought before the court. Apart from this confession there is neither direct nor circumstantial evidence recorded.

2. In the judgment of this court, the former court erred in refusing to allow a witness to testify in behalf of the defense because of contempt, while said witness was permitted to offer over three pages of closely typewritten testimony for the prosecution after committing the act of contempt.

3. The court erred in not permitting the defense to locate time and place of certain alleged acts.

4. The court erred in permitting the witnesses to decide whether certain questions were relevant to the case.

Therefore we reverse the findings of the former court.

Signed, { JOHN R. EVANS.

DECATUR.

The twenty-eighth convention of Decatur district convened at Lamoni, Iowa, October 12, at four p. m. The topics discussed were: "Our district conventions;" "Some needed improvements;" "Duties of Sunday school officers;" "Our responsibilities toward the Sunday school." There were also a Sunday school newspaper, a primary class drill, a paper on primary work, and a session of Religio work. The prayer meeting was highly enjoyed by those present. Reports were read from three of the district officers, and eleven of the thirteen schools of the district. The program as published was carried out with one or two slight changes. The attendance was good and the interest excellent. The Holy Spirit was present, giving cheer and comfort to those present, and strengthening them for future work. It was the best convention held in the district for some time. Adjourned to meet at same place, and just prior to our next district conference.

OKLAHOMA.

District Sunday school association convened in convention October 12, at Stillwater branch. District superintendent, W. S. Macrae, in charge; Stephen Smith clerk. Report of district officers. Oak Grove and Nicely schools gave verbal reports; Canadian Central gave written report. Reports show good average of attendance and in collections. Nicely school postponed for a time on account of sickness. The following resolutions passed: That a committee be appointed to arrange for a program for next convention. That we have a Sunday school newspaper. That Sr. H. C. Hughes and James Yates be editors. That when we adjourn we do so to meet at the place, and one day later from the time when district conference meets in the light of the moon in December. That we take action on the question of a library. That a committee be appointed by the body, consisting of the appointed missionaries and individuals from every branch and school, to solicit means, books, periodicals, or tracts, to be turned over to the librarian of the district. We did not go over a great deal of ground, but we were thorough. A good program was rendered in the afternoon. Three newspapers were read. This is rather a difficult field to operate in, but we trust the future will bring forth better results.

Briggs shall continue, and the missionary force labor in harmony with present understanding with him until otherwise arranged.

I now expect to reach that field some time in November. Trusting that our relations may be mutual, profitable, and pleasant, and that God may bless our administration to the good of his work, I am your coworker.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, death has taken from us, so suddenly, our beloved sister, Margaret William O. Thomas; and whereas, the Morning Star Sunday school has lost thereby an earnest and devoted member, and the primary work an efficient and trusty teacher; resolved, that we hereby express our sorrow, and regret that her going was so sudden; and that while we mourn our loss as a school, and teachers and officers thereof, we feel to mourn also with those who hold her dearest, and extend to them our sincere sympathy and love; and we feel to say that she was truly a mother in Israel, for her kind and charitable disposition.

That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, that they be entered upon the record of the school, and published in the Herald, Ensign, and Zion's Hope.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report,

WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

THE JEW IN AMERICA.

All the Jews feeling the stimulus of American life, which is Western life in its latest expression, have shaken off or modified Oriental life. This wave of modern thought and this Western way of living, combined with their dispersion through vast spaces, instead of being huddled together in the warmth of a common religion, has de-orientalized them here more than anywhere except Germany. But at present, stimulated by works published by the Jewish Publication Society, of Philadelphia, there is a reaction toward Orientalism, of which it is impossible now to foretell the extent. The Jewish Journal this week says this will be increased by this play of mine.

Hitherto these peculiar Oriental manners, customs, and ceremonies, being conserved chiefly by the poorer classes, have been considered vulgar instead of picturesque. But the mere fact that forms and ceremonials are conserved by poor people does not make them vulgar. And in so far as American Judaism is beginning to perceive this it has a tendency to gravitate back toward the point of view it thought it had shaken off forever. It begins to perceive that these things are part of a vast historical chain, which links them on to the period before Greece and Rome flourished.

In short, the Jews are beginning to evolve the historical sense, which is only a variety of the aesthetic sense, since whatever is past begins to gather color and atmosphere. Thus, I am told, many American Jewish families, who a generation ago sold off their Sabbath lamps as vulgar evidences of their past, have not hesitated to buy them back at ten times their former price, perceiving that they are beautiful and historical objects.

I have not personally noticed any anti-Semitism in America. Indeed, I have been pleasantly struck with the magnanimity and tolerance of the American people. Thus, last year, when I was in Philadelphia at the season of Jewish New Year, I was much gratified to find a great daily organ coming out with the Jewish New Year greeting printed in Hebrew above its title. This is a thing I have never before seen in any newspaper in the world, and it shows the sympathetic ties between Jews and their fellow citizens. Many New York journals have had kindly notices of the festivals which the Jews have observed this month in celebration of the year 5660, according to the Jewish calendar.

I believe it has been established that the United States is not a "Christian nation," as much as there is no established church of any kind, and that the broad principles of the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God suffice as a basis or modus vivendi for all sects and classes.

It is only in newspapers that I have read of petty examples of American anti-Semitism, such as the exclusion of Jews from a few summer hotels. Although I am willing to believe that the blame is to be divided both between the excluded and the excluders, yet I could wish, for the sake of the great principles of the American Constitution, which should override the comfort or discomfort of a few summer boarders, that public opinion should stamp decisively upon this embryonic germ of some future Dreyfus drama. Possibly some few Jews who have gained money before they have had time to gain culture may be a little loud and a little displeasing to many gentlemanly Americans of the same income. But exclusion carries with it such tremendous dangers and such peril of resuscitating the old mediæval savagery which Americans came to overthrow, that this deadly weapon of social excommunication should be resorted to only whenever any other method fails. And as one who has closely studied the Jewish character in its shades as well as its lights, as one who has always written without fear or favor, I can assure our squeamish and impatient American aristocrats that the disappearance of any unpleasant social taints in the Jew is only a question of one generation.

The most offensive Jew who has made money is humbly anxious for his children to have better social advantages than he had. And from the strident and assertive Jews who have grown coarse in the struggle for existence will come the quiet and cultivated ladies and gentlemen who will be an enormous force for good in the America of to-morrow. The same is true of America at large, not merely Jews.

You may see these finer specimens springing up all around and coming to the front in your schools and universities. As an example very near to hand, and one that naturally occurs to me, here am I sitting in the rooms of Dr. Hollander, professor of political economy in the Johns Hopkins University, whose work on "The Financial History of Baltimore" is already a classic. I have just migrated from the rooms in Washington of Dr. Cyrus R. Adler, the famous Orientalist and keeper of MSS. in the Smithsonian Institution, and Dr. Friedenwald, who is one of the librarians of Congress. When it is remembered that another Dr. Adler was the projector of the Midway Plaisance in Chicago, which was built by a Jewish architect of the same name, you have high examples of the striking way in which the Jew is to the fore, promoting the best interests of every nation.

There is not a country in Europe in which investigation will not show the hand of the Jew behind the greatest national organizations. The importance of all that he does for good is negatived by the disproportionate attention concentrated on the few Jews who happen to be wicked and vulgar.

That the Jews are a race of angels is not more true than that they are a race of devils. The truth is that their average of public and private virtue is higher rather than lower than that of Christian people, many elements of which have never yet been redeemed from their primitive paganism. This is only natural when we consider that Jewish civilization is some three thousand years old, whereas a thousand years after Christ half of Europe had not accepted Christianity even nominally.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

New York Journal, Oct. 1, 1899.

BISHOP JANSSEN REBUKED.

PRIESTS MUST BE ASSIGNED ACCORDING TO NATIONALITY.

Rome, Oct. 24.—The following is the full text of the official instructions from Carninal Ledochowski to the Bishop of Belleville, Illinois, bearing on the recent controversy in the Catholic church of East St. Louis:—

“Remove immediately the excommunication from the parish; as it does not deserve it. Get Father Cruse to resign and appoint a pastor of their own nationality over them.”

Cardinal Ledochowski is Cardinal Prefect of the propaganda, to whom belongs the final settlement of all ecclesiastical controversies of this nature. There is no appeal from his ruling. It follows on these instructions that the general practice of the church for the future in the United States will be that Bishops must appoint pastors according to the nationality of congregations.

The trouble in the East St. Louis parish of St. Patrick's followed as a consequence of the death of the old pastor, the Rev. J. P. O'Halloran. The assistant pastor, the Rev. James Downey, was appointed to the pastorate temporarily. The congregation is made up of Irish people and the temporary pastor is Irish and was popular with the flock.

A petition was sent by the congregation to Bishop John J. Janssen for the appointment permanently of Father Downey, and some days later the answer came that the Vicar General of the diocese, Very Rev. Father Cluse, had been assigned to that parish as its permanent pastor. Father Cluse is a German, and the people of the parish protested and locked the door of the church against Father Cluse. Father Downey retired to the small assignment given him by the Bishop, but the members of the congregation were firm.

Finally the Bishop excommunicated the entire congregation of 1,200 persons. The case was appealed to Mgr. Martinelli, the apostolic delegate, who decided in favor of the congregation, and the pastor they wanted was given them. The case was then passed to Rome for final adjudication.

NEW FAITH OF UNIVERSALISTS.

Boston, Mass., Oct 23.—The biennial convention of the Universalist Church opened to-day after nearly a week of preliminary meetings, Charles L. Hutchinson of Chicago presiding. The first business taken up was the ratification of a new platform of principles, by which the Universalist body gives up the Winchester confession of faith adopted by it in 1803. The new declaration was adopted by the Universalist body at its last biennial convention in Chicago, but under the by-laws had to lie over two years for ratification.

The Chicago declaration is as follows:—

The essential principles of the Universalist faith are the universal fatherhood of God.

The spiritual authority and leadership of his Son Jesus Christ.

The trustworthiness of the Bible as containing a revelation from God.

A certainty of retribution for sin.

The final harmony of all souls with God.

The ratification was voted, 132 in favor, 10 adverse.

The next most important feature of the proceedings was the admission of a delegation headed by the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, from the Unitarians' general body for conference on the subject of a union of the two denominations.

Dr. Hale addressed the convention, saying that the leading feature of Unitarian life was the forward look, combined with the determination to keep fast historical relation to the leader of Christianity.

“In these words,” said Dr. Hale, “is the distinction between our great religious bodies and any of the ecclesiastical corporations. These corporations are trying to translate the past into the methods of the present. It is your business and it is ours to illustrate the lessons in the voices of to-day.”—Ex.

ISRAEL AMONG THE NATIONS.

Max Nordau concludes a paper on the Jewish problem in the North American Review for June with these words:—

“Even well-meaning Christian observers of Jews admit the one point only, that the Jews serve the people among whom they live in a commercial capacity solely. But this is not a correct perception of their nature. It is just in commerce that they could be best spared and most easily replaced, at least among the civilized people of the Occident, and they will presumably, of their own volition, leave trade and turn to other vocations more in accord with their genius after they have lived in freedom and equal rights for a few more generations.

“Where the Jews have attained equal rights they are still haunted by the fears of Ghetto times; they have not yet a sense of quiet and assured possession, but are pursued by the secret dread that they will be again deprived of what has been given them. They are possessed by an almost morbid desire to demonstrate to their Christian compatriots that they are citizens of the country simply, and nothing but that. Their patriotism is more sensitive and demonstrative than that of Christians. They noisily repudiate any solidarity with Jews of other lands. They affect an unnatural indifference toward all Jewish interests, an indifference never met with among Christians. They strive to make their Judaism as unobtrusive as possible, and frequently persuade themselves that they are not a distinctive race, still less a distinctive people, nor that they have antecedent and historic origins differing from those of their Christian compatriots. Oddly enough, however, only a minority is sufficiently logical to do that which comports with such sentiments—that is, to be baptized and to give their descendants a Christian ancestry by marriage with Christians. From this the conclusion follows that the assimilationists are subject to a passing nervousness only, and that at bottom they have not entirely overcome Jewish nature, and that they will again awaken to race consciousness when emancipation has ceased to be a novelty.

“The Jews who do not possess equal rights—and these comprise four fifths of the race—have preserved the consciousness that they are a distinctive people. They realize that they can escape the hatred that pursues them only by ceasing to be a recognizable minority in the midst of other peoples. They refuse to sink their identity. Lost identity is no solution of the Jewish problem. They look for their salvation in a reunion in a land which shall be their own, where they will be the majority and where they can develop in a temperature of sympathy along their own organic lines.”—Review of Reviews, July, 1899.

RUINS OF EL-KARNAK FALL.

Cairo, Oct. 9.—News has just reached here of the recent fall of nine columns of the great hypostyle hall of the Temple of El-Karnak, built by Zetee I., dynasty XIX., one of the most magnificent and celebrated relics of the architecture of ancient Egypt.

The great hall of El-Karnak, which is the most notable of the monuments of Thebes of its class, is 170 feet long and 329 feet wide. The stone roof, now partly in ruins, was originally supported by 134 columns, the loftiest of which were nearly seventy-five feet high and about twelve in diameter. It was built by Zetee I. and sculptured partly in his reign. Work upon it was continued by his son and successor, Rameses II.

The hall commemorates, not in its grandeur alone but also by its sculptures, the magnificence and power of those two Pharaohs. The sculptures of the interior walls represent these monarchs making offerings to the gods.—Ex.

THE EDITOR AT THREE OAKS, MICHIGAN.

Sometime last spring Bro. Cyrus Thurston, who resides at Three Oaks, Michigan, an old time saint, who had often tried to secure and have improved an opportunity to get the gospel, and the angel's message before his neighbors, with but little success, thought of a way that promised a better result.

The German Evangelical Church had worshiped in a frame structure until their numbers, wealth, and desire made the building too small, when they proposed to build a larger, more substantial edifice. This they proceeded to do. In the doing of it the necessity of getting rid of the smaller building was apparent. Bro. Thurston, waking from his sleep one morning was cogitating how to get the gospel preached in Three Oaks, when he was inspired with the thought: "Buy the little church, move it to an eligible sight, repair and refit it, and have a place where the gospel may be preached." Acting on the thought, he approached the officers of the German Church, and succeeding in buying the building, possession to be given when the new edifice would be ready for use. This occurred late in June, when Bro. Thurston moved the house to his own land, and put it in good shape. He then deeded it to the church, and asked that it be dedicated.

By agreement with Bishop E. L. Kelley, the Editor met him at Three Oaks, on the 22d of October, just past, and with the assistance of Bro. George A. Smith, of Clear Lake, Indiana, president of the district; and in the presence of a good number of those not of the church, these officers effected the dedication. A band of the saints from Galien, six miles eastward, gave us an organist, and we sang of the songs of the church. Bro. G. A. Smith offered the opening prayer; the sermon was by the Editor, and the prayer of dedication was offered by the Bishop, the congregation kneeling with him in this solemn and impressive ceremony. Bro. Thurston turned the keys over to Bishop Kelley, emblematical of the possession, and at the close of the service these were returned to Bro. Thurston, with a charge by the Editor to hold them and the house subject to the use of those who might desire to worship; for and in behalf of the church. The services began at 10:30 a. m. and were concluded at noon.

Notices had been distributed in the village, and everything done to make the occasion a pleasant and successful one; and it was.

After the exercises the visiting saints and friends spread a collation in the room and ate together of the bounty with which the land is blessed. There were saints present from Galien, Baroda, Dayton, Clear Lake, Troy, Sumnerville, Buchanan, South Bend, Rolling Prairie, and the scene was indicative of the presence of the good Spirit which gives satisfaction, peace, and joy. Brn. John Shook, of Buchanan; Dr. Royce, of Baroda; Frank Granger, of Coldwater; G. A. Smith, of Clear Lake; E. A. Blakeslee, Jesse White, Bro. Green, and others of Galien; and the missionary, Bro. James M. Baggerly, with the Bishop and the Editor, made an assembly that gave evidence that the work in this part of the Wolverine and Hoosier States was not dead by any means.

There was little formality, but much good cheer, and all passed pleasantly. The day was an ideal one, more like a day in June than a late October one; warm and balmy. The frost had held off, many of the trees were still in leaf, the gardens and pastures still green, and the golden sunshine gave gladness and promise to all.

Three Oaks is a town of near a thousand inhabitants, situated in a nice site and lying on both sides of the Michigan Central Railway, some seventy miles east from Chicago, on the way to Detroit. It derived its name from three large oak trees, which by accident, or design were left standing while the rest of the forest went down before the axes of the foresters and mill men; and which stood long enough to give the town its name, and then struck by the decay that usually attacks the species when surrounded by the homes and usages of civilization, they succumbed and now are gone, the name and town remain.

Three Oaks has lately come into notice as the home of E. K. Warren and his Featherbone industry, which utilizes the quill portion of feathers; making of it a substitute for whalebone, used in whips, corsets, skirts, and other articles where whalebone has hitherto been employed.

Moreover, Mr. Warren is a man of push and energy; one to whom it is useless to say, "You can't do it." This the following story told of him will illustrate.

The disaster to the Battleship Maine, gave rise to the Maine Memorial Association. This association secured the gift of one of the cannons taken by Admiral George Dewey from the Spanish at Manila. The association then offered the cannon to the corporate city, or town whose inhabitants should give to the Memorial Fund the largest sum per capita of its population. This was Three Oaks' chance. Mr. Warren set himself the task to secure the cannon. He called the citizens together, solicited subscriptions to something between one and two hundred dollars. He added to this a thousand dollars, sent the subscription to the association, timing it so near the end of the time for closing the fund that no chance was given for another corporation to outbid him, and the thing was done. Besides this, he made his way to President McKinley, secured an interview, and so wrought on the man in the White House that the hamlet of a thousand people received the President and heard him speak from the pedestal prepared for the resting place of the captured cannon, while larger towns failed to see and hear. He also secured an interview with Admiral Dewey, having a tug and meeting the Olympia in the front line of boats, getting a promise of a visit from the Admiral. More than this he pushed his way to an interview with Miss Helen Gould, who is now attracting so much attention from the American public, by her excellent beneficence and womanly qualities, and secured a promise of a sometime visit to the hamlet of the cannon. Who shall say that western pluck is not successful.

The securing of the cannon was thought at first to be the getting of a "white elephant;" for the question, "What shall we do with it?" became the question of the hour. But this too was solved by the good genius of the place. The Michigan Central has a neat new brick station house situated on the south side of the road. Opposite this Mr. Warren and others of the citizens laid out a small park, in the center of which is a raised and sodded mound, on which rests a pedestal of Vermont granite brought by Mr. Warren from Admiral Dewey's native State, on which the cannon will stand, in full view of those who pass on the trains and a constant reminder of what perseverance will do. The park is tastefully laid out, walks, grass plats, avenues radiating from a center where set in a triangle will stand three oak trees, preserving the traditional name. From this center, shrubs, flower beds, rows of shading trees will make a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

And last, but we hope not least, the place will be known among the saints as the one where the devoted spirit of a brother in the faith, alone and almost unaided, caused an altar to be erected, at which saints might assemble to worship, where the incense and offerings of faithful hearts might be offered up to the Lord of Life and glory. So while among the citizens of Three Oaks the name of E. K. Warren, the Featherbone man, may be remembered as one whose public spirit and energy had blessed the town in its material and financial prosperity; the saints, and those who may hereafter become saints, will be able to remember Bro. Cyrus Thurston, as one who was willing to put forth an effort to bless the village with the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. And it may not be in vain to hope that when the wastes of time shall have crumbled pedestal and cannon into rust and dust, the oaks into the decay which has overtaken those now vanished and gone, E. K. Warren be laid away with his fathers and his name gone from the memory of man, the name of Cyrus Thurston may be as one to whom the promise is made, he "shall shine as the stars in the firmament."

Services were held in the afternoon at three, and in the evening at seven o'clock. Bro. G. A. Smith occupied in the afternoon, the Editor in the evening; audiences fair. Services were announced for each evening during the week; and for Sunday the 29th, Bishop Kelley occupying on Monday night, the Editor on Tuesday night. The work for the remainder of the time set will be with Brn. G. A. Smith and J. M. Baggerly.

Bro. Kelley goes to Bay City, Michigan, for the 29th and the Editor to Chicago.

THE METEORIC DISPLAY.

Our readers, in America and abroad, will probably be interested in the coming meteoric display, scheduled by astronomers to occur November 13-17 next. Authorities state that it maybe observed during any of those dates from midnight to morning. The earth, as we understand, enters upon this particular and dense group of meteors every thirty-three years.

It will be remembered as chronicled among the early annals of the saints who, when driven from their homes in Missouri in 1833, observed "the signs in the heavens" in the early morning of November 13.

We shall try to give fuller particulars for observation next week.

DE COSTA RENOUNCES THE EPISCOPAL FAITH.

STATEMENT WHICH IS THE IMPLIED ANNOUNCEMENT THAT HE WILL BECOME A CATHOLIC.

New York, Oct. 22.—Under the title "A Farewell Letter to a Member of the Protestant Episcopal Laity" the Rev. Dr. B. F. De Costa gives out a statement in which he declares his formal severance of all relations with the Protestant Episcopal Church. His resignation from the ministry of that faith had left him still in the fold as a layman. Now even that relation is no more.

Though he does not declare specifically his intention of joining the Roman Catholic communion, the tenor of his letter—its denunciation of Episcopalianism and Protestantism in general—apparently leaves little doubt on that score. The letter has much of implied reverence for the Church of Rome, but there is a note of hesitancy, as though the writer found it difficult to overcome his prejudices of so many years' standing.

The letter, after pointing out the necessity of elaborating some of the points touched upon in his formal resignation from the ministry, continues:—

"The situation has now become unendurable, and I cannot conscientiously remain. Don't fancy, however, that I have any fears about the Bible or Christianity. I have always welcomed genuine criticism and historical inquiry. But criticism has come to be uncritical. It forms largely an agreement between Herod and Pilate, a case of Tom Paine masquerading in the garb of a rabbi.

"I hope that all my old friends who can stand by in good faith may do so, at least until they can find something better. I could not consent to their abandonment of the Episcopal scheme without first having a prospect of something better.

"One of the most eminent and best balanced of your Bishops says that the situation fills him with 'alarm,' while another, sadly recognizing the truth, says despairingly, 'there will be no improvement in your day or mine.'

RELIGION AGAINST RELIGION.

"The situation is thus portrayed by a writer who is looking on, studying the condition of the church:—

"One clergyman may teach the doctrine of the real presence or assure his flock that he possesses the power of priestly absolution. But in the next parish—if in a large city only a block or two distant perhaps—the clergyman in charge will deny both of these doctrines and teach his people that they are false and unscriptural."

"Yet both these men are authorized teachers of religion in the Protestant Episcopal Church, with equal official authority. The Bishop may happen to agree with one or the other. He can do as he likes in the matter.

"The situation cannot be made good with whitewash or juggled away. It should rather, if you are able, be met honestly and dealt with. To put on rich robes, assume an air of authority, and advocate the change of name to that of 'The Catholic Church in America' forms simply a ghastly farce. Multitudes of clergy, after persevering awhile and preaching strongly about our 'Catholic heritage,' have rendered their obedience to Rome. A Catholic heritage forms a Catholic faith, not a collection of discordant and heretical opinions.

CHURCH RIVEN BY SECTS.

"To-day Protestantism is riven by sects. The Church of England, as the result of the 'blessed reformation,' became the fruitful mother of about one hundred and thirty sects nearly all of which have been reproduced in this country.

"All are at war with one another, and inside the Episcopal denomination a hot fight of faction goes on, the Bishops having no recognized authority for regulating matters which distinctly belong to an Episcopate. In truth, we have no Episcopate, any more than a standard of doctrine.

"Under the circumstances, does it appear at all strange that multitudes should be asking if this body really forms a 'branch' of the Catholic Church?"

"At the same time Cranmer and Ridley clubs have done their best to empty Anglican orders of the suspicion of 'sacerdotalism' and purge the sacraments of the spiritual value and significance claimed for them by ritualists, denying that the reformers held or made any sacerdotal claims in connection with their 'blessed reformation,' and declaring that we have no Episcopal line in accordance with the idea of the prereformation period.

"Ritualists feel the ignominy and shame of the situation and ought to appreciate the guilt they incur on their principles. In contrast with ritualism, rationalism is strongly entrenched and is bold. It has well-nigh destroyed the value of the Bible as a text book in Sunday schools and as an authority in sermons.

BIBLE OF THE PAST DEPARTED.

"The Bible of our forefathers has departed, and the men who impeach it hold places of high influence and power. Skeptics of various grades and discontented men are now being welcomed into the church, which promises to become, in due time, a veritable Cave of Adullam.

"Did we or did we not sell our heritage at the time of the 'blessed Reformation' for a mess of pottage?"

"The semi-Arian and Pantheist explain away what are claimed as 'Catholic verities' unmolested, and 'advanced' men tacitly recognize that the bulk of the clergy cannot be trusted to stand at their altars. So, likewise, 'higher criticism' will not tolerate superstition, either in pulpit or in chancel.

SEES A NEW RELIGION.

"Between the various schools there is a recognized incompatibility, an irrepressible conflict. It is neology against theology. As stated in a recent sermon by a leading rector in this city (Dr. Dix), it is a case of real Christ against the invented Christ—a Christ that Paul never preached, that the Twelve never heard of; a Christ not found in the word of God; a Christ not able to save mankind.

"Yes, I know what you will say: 'Let us be patient, and sing 'Lead, Kindly Light.' But what can be the use of calling upon the light to lead? When do you mean to follow?"

"Carlyle has written on the subject of clothes and we have among us on the one hand a body of men in Catholic garb, with holy water, confessional, penance, and genuflections, offering Rome the flattery of imitation, while withholding obedience; on the other hand, the whilom Calvinist, now shorn of his 'degrees,' with a dress shading off into business suits, or pearl colored trousers, expansive shirt fronts, and smart cravats, the symbols of a flashy Protestantism—carping at Bible, faith, discipline, orders, sacraments.

"The cowl does not make the monk, but clothes form an index to mental and moral conditions, while a thousand altars and chan-cells, strewn with saleratus bread crumbs, cast a Zwinglian protest at the sacramentarian. Can these things coexist in a branch of the Catholic Church? As a matter of history, the structure is crumbling about us. Many all over the land are deserting the church; missionary societies are toppling.

"Is a place in such a body a place for me? With my views a situation to remain would be immoral.

"We are indeed told that similar conditions exist among all Protestant bodies, which is quite true, and practically Episcopalians have put themselves on their level. Episcopalians have vied with them in catering to the skepticism of the day. The church is a safe harbor even for men whom they will not tolerate.

"The Episcopal body is afflicted not with a case of simple blood poisoning, but ineradicable leprosy. The situation can never be recovered by the grievings of the wise or the ventral grumbings of the 'judicious.' Still, my brothers, if you will, keep your place in your boat, singing 'Lead, Kindly Light,' until it rots and sends you to the bottom. It would be better, however, to steer for some good port."—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 23, 1899.

DOCTOR DE COSTA'S ARRAIGNMENT.

We devote a considerable amount of space in the present issue of the HERALD to the statements of Doctor De Costa of New York, formerly, and for many years, a learned and prominent minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church. See first his letter to Bishop Potter, second his comments; the former published under "Selected Articles," the latter in our editorial columns. We present his statements in full, so far as published and accessible, for the reason that we believe they should be in the hands of every minister in the church, and also be read and carefully digested by the laity. They make a part of the history of our times. They form one of the most sweeping and comprehensive arraignments of Protestantism and Episcopalianism that we have ever seen. They furnish a true index to, if not a correct analysis of, the present drift and flood of the popular tide of the higher criticism evolution; whose final goal bids fair to be infidelity and a refined paganism, based upon principles of ethics, if the goal does not evolve into atheism itself.

The latter-day work from its inception has sounded the warning cry to all the world that there has been an "apostasy," a departure from primitive Christianity; that based upon the necessity for an authoritative restoration of the church, divine authority has been given and men commissioned to labor for Christ in building anew upon earth the church militant in harmony with the divine pattern; that the kingdom of God would be established preceding the fall of Babylon. This, briefly stated, was and is the announcement made from the beginning of the work of the "new evangel." It was and is clearcut, comprehensive, and consistent in its statement of faith and foundation of belief. Moreover, it is strictly in harmony with the Christ-pattern and has received and continues to receive the sanction of divine approval.

However, notwithstanding its authoritative sanctions, in the word and certified to by the divine approval, it met the combined opposition of Protestantism from its inception; and beginning in smallness of numbers and apparent weakness of force, it met and withstood the combined attacks of prominent and popular religious systems, which though divided upon questions of religious belief, have been ever ready to unite in opposing what to them was and is a natural enemy, one whose destined mission was their overthrow.

It is interesting to note the contrasts and confirmations that appear along the line as one reviews the history of the latter-day work and that of Protestantism, side by side, both busy at work in the modern world, both standing as representatives of prominent but different conceptions of faith; the one proclaiming active living faith in God and instructing, directing revelation to the church from Deity; the other representing God as practically only a past participant in the religious life of the race and also practically nil as a supervising force in the destiny of the world.

To the first there came success, then misrepresentation, slander, and persecution, as other arguments failed; finally culminating in the martyrdom of its chief ministers, also in the wickedness of some of its own professed devotees, and a partial apostasy of the body, with the final exodus to the West. Evil among its professed adherents constitutes the most difficult kind of obstruction and opposition. The truth, however, continued, by its inherent force and vitality, to live on, and proclaiming its disapproval of the iniquity brought in by the enemy like a flood, has marched forward, proclaiming the message in truth and power as at the first, and stands now firm and steadfast upon the original foundation; unremoved though not untried; unshaken though not unassailed; more firmly rooted and grounded because of its baptism of fiery ordeal and its manifest superiority over the forces that have sought to overthrow it; like the giant oak which, standing high, has many blasts that shake it, but whose roots strike deeper into the virgin soil; and which but strengthens its hold by taking firmer root in the earth.

Protestantism, upon the other hand, had no clear legal title, as such, to continued life and being. It sprang from a diseased theological ancestry. Its roots were not sound, and though transplanted, it necessarily took with it much of the nature and condition of the parent stem. Had it continued as a simple protest against the wrongs of the past, with a firm determination to accept light as it came, it would have been led along safe lines, and the philosophical course of its life would have been toward a retracing of all past wrong steps against which it urged its protest, until the historic wrongs thus pointed out and acknowledged, all along the line backward to first departures from the faith, were freely and frankly confessed and forsaken. The logical result must then have been a waiting attitude before God, a teachable condition, a seeking, a preparing for, and a willingness to be governed by whatever light came.

Many of the Reformers and their followers labored in this spirit, be it said to their credit, and had those who followed continued in like humility, would have been prepared to accept the truth restored, in contradistinction to apostasy reformed. It is clear that Wesley, Robinson, and others labored in such spirit, with such expectation. However, the later and less pious leaders clung to the old garment, rejecting the new, warring against it to their loss. They built up popular systems of faith to which they and their successors clung tenaciously; humanity naturally accepts the traditions of the fathers as a heritage. But the new wine could not be contained in their broken systems, and they have been left to follow the devices of their own wills, like all others who reject truth and make flesh and popularity their arm. They could not accept the latter-day work, though it came just in their time of need, and ready to receive them into the fold of the true Shepherd, where, had they sought shelter, they would have found a covert from the fury of the storm of darkness and infidelity now sweeping them away from their sandy foundations.

As a consequence we have had and are having the inevitable result, the natural sequence, which appears in a dying if not already dead Protestantism; for but little life remains in that system.

First the Calvinistic creed with its narrow rigid conceptions of God, and of man; its doctrine of unconditional election of the few to salvation, including its dogma of infant damnation and the final woes of the great mass of mankind in the flames of their burning hell; also their erroneous conceptions of the Scriptures, their lack of discrimination between pleenary inspiration and inspiration as set forth by the word itself; their failure to discriminate between historical, doctrinal, and prophetic statements of the Bible;—these phases of their faith have been openly rejected by many of their leading men in our own times, and who though discovering to some extent the serious errors of their theological fathers, yet fail to materially profit by their example. These men should have sought unto God for light, and have followed the light, though it took them from the popular Sanhedrins to the lowly manger cradle; from the council of the ruling high priesthood to Nazareth; from the popular temples to the plain unlettered ministers of the new evangel. History repeats itself. The Gentile, like the Jew in his zeal for Moses and the prophets, who "sought it not by faith, but by the works of the law," the dead law of works and outward ceremonies, and failed to see and accept their Messiah and his work, has repeated his mistake. The similarity in the two cases is remarkable, the parallels striking. Jewish tradition was a corruption of the law of Moses; Gentile creeds the tradition of the modern elders, Calvin et al., formulated through a misconception of the New Testament Scriptures; and like the Jewish traditional system, the result of long-continued departures from God and rejection of his word. Building upon such errors, following the lines of theology formulated in the trying times following the Dark Ages, when there was no authoritative direction amid the prevailing darkness, no clear light "amid the encircling gloom," it is not strange that their steps have been farther and farther into the dark.

It is not denied that in the times of Knox, Luther, Wesley, and others of the Reformers there was a degree of light and blessing attending their work. But it is manifest that from the inception of the latter-day work in 1830, the decline of Protestantism has been steady and continuous. It is in harmony with the great law of agency by which man, rejecting greater light, loses what former light he once possessed: "Whosoever receiveth, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever continueth not to receive, from him shall be taken away even that he hath."—Matt. 13: 10, 11, I. T.

One ray of light is not enough; the entire combined rays of the sun give us the white light; not one alone, but all of the seven primary colors combined are required, to give us the necessary results of light and heat. Truth as a combined system completes the gospel, not one isolated principle of truth alone.

Following the rejection of its creeds and as a direct result of having a form of godliness, denying the power thereof, Protestantism has become honeycombed with doubt and unbelief, and thus an easy prey to the prevailing evolutionary conception, the work of which has already been given to our readers, and upon which Doctor De Costa ably comments.

Remembering that Protestantism has been the faith of millions, the leading religious ideal of modern civilization, in connection with the present movement toward its extinction, one is reminded of the development and decay of Roman and Greek conceptions of faith; how such furnished the foundation and framework of the various phases, theological and philosophical, of then existing systems of religion and civilization.

Draper in his work, "History of the Conflict between Religion and Science," gives us this picture of the conditions then existing, and which Christianity, in the preaching of Paul and others, overturned and supplanted:—

No spectacle can be presented to the thoughtful mind more solemn, more mournful, than that of the dying of an ancient religion, which in its day has given consolation to many generations of men.

Four centuries before the birth of Christ, Greece was fast outgrowing her ancient faith. Her philosophers, in their studies of the world, had been profoundly impressed with the contrast between the majesty of the operations of Nature and the worthlessness of the divinities of Olympus. Her historians, considering the orderly course of political affairs, the manifest uniformity in the acts of men, and that there was no event occurring before their eyes for which they could not find an obvious cause in some preceding event, began to suspect that the miracles and celestial interventions, with which the old annals were filled, were only fictions. They demanded, when the age of the supernatural had ceased, why oracles had become mute, and why there were now no more prodigies in the world.

Traditions, descending from immemorial antiquity, and formerly accepted by pious men as unquestionable truths, had filled the islands of the Mediterranean and the contiguous countries with supernatural wonders—enchantedresses, sorcerers, giants, ogres, harpies, gorgons, centaurs, cyclops. The azure vault was the floor of heaven; there Zeus, surrounded by the gods with their wives and mistresses, held his court, engaged in pursuits like those of men, and not refraining from acts of human passion and crime.

A sea-coast broken by numerous indentations, an archipelago with some of the most lovely islands in the world, inspired the Greeks with a taste for maritime life, for geographical discovery, and colonization. Their ships wandered all over the Black and Mediterranean Seas. The time-honored wonders that had been glorified in the "Odyssey," and sacred in public faith, were found to have no existence. As a better knowledge of Nature was obtained, the sky was shown to be an illusion; it was discovered that there is no Olympus, nothing above but space and stars. With the vanishing of their habitation, the gods disappeared, both those of the Ionian type of Homer and those of the Doric of Hesiod.

But this did not take place without resistance. At first, the public, and particularly its religious portion, denounced the rising doubts as atheism. They despoiled some of the offenders of their goods, exiled others; some they put to death. They asserted that what had been believed by pious men in the old times, and had stood the test of ages, must necessarily be true. Then, as the opposing evidence became irresistible, they were content to admit that these marvels were allegories under which the wisdom of the ancients had concealed many sacred and mysterious things. They tried to reconcile, what now in their misgivings they feared might be myths, with their advancing intellectual state. But their efforts were in vain, for there are predestined phases through which on such an occasion public opinion must pass. What it has received with veneration it begins to doubt, then it offers new interpretations, then subsides into dissent, and ends with a rejection of the whole as a mere fable.

In their secession the philosophers and historians were followed by the poets. Euripides incurred the odium of heresy. Æschylus narrowly escaped being stoned to death for blasphemy. But the frantic efforts of those who are interested in supporting delusions must always end in defeat. The demoralization resistlessly extended through every branch of literature, until at length it reached the common people.

Greek philosophical criticism had lent its aid to Greek philosophical discovery in this destruction of the national faith.—Pages 1-3.

Professor Draper, as is well known, is a materialist, hence his conceptions of nature and of history are largely tinged with the materialistic coloring. However, his description is eloquent and impressive and therein we have another parallel, for the civilizations and religious concepts to which he refers were also built upon Gentile fragments of former truths, upon lost and perverted traditions held by national sages as received since man's early apostasy and departures from God following the dispersion.

At the period of that early departure from faith to idolatry Abraham, the father of the faithful, was called out to leave his father's country and his father's kindred in Chaldea, to preserve, through God, the faith given to man "in the beginning;" hence the Hebrew, the Jew in history, and the Christ, and the word, the oracles of God, and which the higher criticism is now seeking to get rid of, that God himself may in due time be banished from his own dominions and evolution—no God and no faith—remain; the final extinction of truth and light and the criterions of Almighty God.

In such an important period, in such culminating epoch, appears the great latter-day work, a light to the Gentiles, the savor of life unto life to the world. The great standard of Zion, the ensign to the nations, appears with the Abrahamic call to the people of God to come out of Babylon, that they may be rescued, not only from her spiritual darkness, but from her false political and economical systems, and the world be redeemed and brought to the true order, the divine economy, through the operations of which Zion is to arise and shine because the glory of the Lord has risen upon her.

The great purposes of God, the divine intent "toward which the whole creation moves," appears in its magnitude and grandeur in the great latter-day work, the "strange act" of the Almighty, as the weakness, and darkness, and apostasy of the world of Babylon is brought to light. Well may we resound the cry, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her plagues." (Rev. 18: 4, 5.) Well may we free ourselves of every Babylonish ideal, policy, system, and act, and place ourselves in strict harmony with truth—in all its principles, spiritual, moral, economic, and otherwise—that we may be prepared by proper and full conception of the truth, in all its departments, to extend and to fully perform our work as a people, in behalf of the race.

The theme extends in scope and deepens in intensity of interest as it opens to the mental view, but we leave it here for the present.

The careful student of past and present theological and general history will study the sententious sentences uttered and the striking points made by Doctor De Costa. He will note his references to the Bible being received as "literature," "myths and fables;" to "the apostolic succession," "where you show how nimbly the apostolic current disregards 'gaps in neglected order,' and puts a broken line in authoritative connection with the apostles; to "The storm is here, but the Protestant Episcopal body has no anchors;" that "if the cathedral [the contemplated new one in New York] is ever finished it will prove the sarcophagus of Episcopalianism, the coffin of its creed."

In his "farewell letter" Dr. De Costa refers to the higher criticism compromise as "largely an agreement between Herod and Pilate, a case of Tom Paine masquerading in the garb of a rabbi." "To-day Protestantism is riven by sects. The Church of England, as the result of the 'blessed Reformation,' became the fruitful mother of about one hundred and thirty sects, nearly all of which have been reproduced in this country. All are at war with one another," "no recognized authority," "no episcopate," no "standard of doctrine," "no episcopal line." "Rationalism strongly entrenched," "neology against theology." Note the significant statement: "It is a case of real Christ against the invented Christ—a Christ that Paul never preached, that the Twelve never heard of; a Christ not found in the word of God; a Christ not able to save mankind." "A body of men with holy water," etc., "offering Rome the flattery of imitation, while withholding obedience;" "a ghastly farce;" also his description of "the whilom Calvinist" with "the symbols of a flashy Protestantism—carping at Bible, faith, discipline, orders, sacraments." See also his closing paragraph: "The body is afflicted not with a case of simple blood poisoning, but ineradicable leprosy." "Still, my brothers, if you will, keep your place in the boat, singing, 'Lead, Kindly Light' [the hymn of Newman, prominent first as a minister of the Church of England, but who finally evolved into Catholicism and was made a Cardinal] until it rots and sends you to the bottom."

Dr. De Costa's closing sentence, "It would be better, however, to steer for some good port," with others, is supposed to indicate his intention to enter the Roman Catholic Church and its priesthood, whither others have preceded him.

Such is the logical outcome of the whole or at least much of the Episcopal movement. It began in a quarrel, caused by the refusal of Henry VIII. to acknowledge Rome's disapproval of his criminality.

The shrewd conservative Vatican watches with pleasure the backward drift into her communion and authority. She would make no compromise to Gladstone and the Episcopal clergy by acknowledging "the validity of Episcopal orders;" she expects to receive again entire or a major portion of the Episcopal Church in England and America. Those who refuse her extended arms and open bosom may drift along with the tide for a time, but the end will be inevitable—evolution complete, no Bible, and extremely indefinite conceptions of God or no God at all.

Such is the drift of Babylonish systems of faith, also of its ideals and systems in general—back to the legitimate results of separation from and disregard of God and truth.

These points are full of meaning and should prove both instructive to the student of events himself and to those to whom he may present them in his declaration of the truth. Truly the designs and purposes of man are brought to naught, and only that which is true and laid upon the true foundation will stand. It is only the work of man that is brought to naught. Principle, truth, the eternal verities, the absolute necessities—they only can remain. God is the builder of the universe. He has never designated humanity as his architects. He lives to complete, to perfect the works of his hands. It must be done. It can only be done in his "own way," as he has said. God is to be "all in all" and "God over all, blessed forevermore."

The sun of Babylonish time is rapidly setting, the era of human wisdom is at an end; but we are in the dawn of the coming day of a redeemed humanity, because of which, though man's blindness and perverseness present a sorrowful picture, all should lift up their heads and rejoice and be glad. The Apocalyptic Seer described it as its glorious inspiration gave him utterance, when, seeing the fall of Babylon and the ultimate reign of Christ, he declared: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." Again: "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly."

May the church, the expectant Bride, by her individual and general attitude and preparation, in harmony with the light, so brightly appearing to the faithful and discerning, say, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

MORMONS MAY ASK ROBERTS TO RESIGN.

It was intimated to-day by a prominent Mormon leader now in this city that pressure is being brought to bear on the polygamous Congressman-elect, Brigham H. Roberts, by the leaders of the Mormon Church to induce him to resign to save him from expulsion.

It was said by this gentleman that the church realizes that if Roberts is expelled by Congress it will put the Mormon faith back at least half a century. To save the church and prevent the further spread of antagonism the Mormon leaders are said to be ready to sacrifice Roberts. They have come to a full realization of the strength of the movement inaugurated against the seating of this avowed polygamist in the national body of lawmakers.—N. Y. cor. Chicago Tribune, Oct. 22.

The foregoing item in substance appeared in a number of the leading journals of the country.

The Salt Lake Tribune, October 24, thus states:—

A number of prominent members of the Mormon Church are gathered in New York this week and the inference in the metropolis is that a scheme is on foot to induce Congressman-elect Roberts, if possible, to resign his seat so as to avoid the danger of expulsion from the House.

The New York Journal to-day claims to have authentic information that this is the purpose of the visit of George Q. Cannon of the First Presidency of the Mormon Church, who is registered at one of the hotels of the metropolis.

He is said to have had several conferences yesterday with Mr. Roberts. He is accompanied by Judge Le Grand Young, [nephew of Brigham Young] the legal adviser of the church, etc.

The same item makes mention of the presence of Col. Theodore Bruback and C. O. Whittemore, United States District Attorney for Utah, A. W. McCune, E. V. McCune, and Frank J. Cannon, all of Utah.

An item in the same issue reports Judge Young and Frank J. Cannon as denying the story, and states that George Q. Cannon could not be seen.

The Deseret News, Utah church organ, has not, so far as we have seen, made reference to the matter. So much for the rumor concerning Roberts.

GEORGE Q. CANNON ILL.

The Deseret News, October 24, contains the following:—

Information has been received by telegraph at the President's Office to the effect that President George Q. Cannon, now in New York, has been stricken with pneumonia, and that his condition is regarded as serious, though not necessarily such as to greatly alarm his family and friends.

President Cannon had a very bad night last night, but was slightly improved to-day. He has not, however, passed the critical point in his illness.

Physicians state that a man who is more than fifty years of age and who has been intemperate in his habits is almost certain to succumb to the ravages of the disease, but where he has lived a life such as President Cannon has lived, he has a good opportunity for recovery notwithstanding he may be older than that.

President Cannon is in his seventy-third year. He has been a prominent factor in the policy of the Utah Church for years past. His death would probably have a marked effect in its future leadership and course of action.

VISIT OF AN EDUCATOR.

Prof. R. A. Harkness came to Mt. Ayr on Friday evening, October 6, to visit his old friends and especially his old students. Many persons in this vicinity attended his school at Garden Grove. It was under him an academic center, and hence Henry Clay Dean used to speak of Garden Grove as "the Athens of Iowa." He also taught for a succession of years in the Ringgold County normal and made many friends. He has filled the chair of Latin in Parson's College at Fairfield, Iowa, for many years, and is known as an Iowa educator. He had a thorough classical education in Union College at Schenectady, New York, and under the famous president, Dr. Nott.

At present Professor Harkness is teaching in Graceland College at Lamoni. He is pleased with Lamoni as a town and with his work in the college. He thinks that the college promises well as to the future. The building is most excellent for the purpose. The attendance of students is good and constantly increasing. Lamoni people pride themselves on the college and give to it a good home support. Mr. Harkness is pleased with his fellow laborers in the college and made special mention of Professor Gunsolley in the business department. He thinks that Graceland College is a most excellent place for young people to take a course of study. All conditions are favorable.

Professor Harkness called on many of his old students and they all expressed gladness in seeing him and a hope that he might remain permanently in southwestern Iowa.

The professor is a natural born educator. He has not only the power of imparting, but also the gift of drawing out students and leading them to higher attainments.—Ringgold Record, October 12, 1899.

The foregoing is from a local paper published at the county seat adjoining Lamoni. In it our people have an opportunity to learn of the high esteem in which Professor Harkness, President of Graceland College, is held in this section of country by those who know him best. The college work under his direction is being ably conducted.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser, writing from Vermillion, New York, October 20, indicates that he has been to see the Hill Cumorah, whence the Record of the Nephites was received by the young seer in the beginning of the latter-day work. Cumorah is the property of Admiral Sampson, and we trust will be preserved in its native simplicity. It is a historic spot in the world's annals. Bro. Etzenhouser wrote thus:—

As the lower line, then and there written, indicates, I stood "where bright angel feet have trod," fulfilling a desire of many years and coming as it has in the natural course of my travels, I was the more gratified; "All things to them that wait." I think I can use yesterday's trip to the good of man and the glory of God. I shall try so to do. The story of the Book of Mormon, believed firmly since the days of my childhood, was in a measure confirmed if it were possible. The hill is a solid fact—so is the book.

CUMORAH, Oct. 19, '99.

Bro. Richard Coburn, Blenheim, Ontario, October 23:—

We had an excellent time at our late conference; the spirit of peace and harmony prevailed throughout. Bro. R. C. Evans expects to organize a branch at Cedar Springs next Wednesday evening. It is right where the work first started here in 1862.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. I. N. White states that his coming debate with Clark Braden will be held at Alma, Illinois, November 7. Mr. Braden resides at Alma and is president of a college of the Christian Church located in that city.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins returned during the past week from his trip and labors in the States of Wisconsin and Illinois. He preached the word at various places and baptized a number, performing other general ministrations.

President McKinley has issued a proclamation designating Thursday, November 30, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer—the national Thanksgiving Day.

Various cablegrams during the past week have made references to a continental alliance in combination against England, under which France and Russia were to interfere in South African affairs, also to menace Afghanistan and the British possessions in India and interests in China. Later advices proclaim the neutrality of Germany, and further state that Germany and England are in close rapport, under which Germany is to have a free hand in Asia Minor, including colonization in Palestine. The whole subject was made a matter of interpellation in the British House of Commons. We note among the "rumors of war."

By letter from Bro. C. P. Faul, Clarksdale, Missouri, the 27th, we learn that Bro. J. T. Kinnaman is very sick at his home, and not expected to recover. Bro. Kinnaman is a veteran in the service. We earnestly pray for an extension of his usefulness here.

Revolution is reported from provinces of Panama. Unrest prevails. A successful revolution in Venezuela now is followed by a counter revolution. In the Province of Barcelona, Spain, a state of siege has been proclaimed. Murmurs of twelve cases of bubonic plague—the India scourge—are reported from Rio Janeiro, now under treatment at Santos; one of the patients a physician. Is America immune from such diseases? Physicians say not.

Unrest continues in the Balkan States. Austria is threatened with a renewal of race wars, if not dissolution of the empire. The German government wishes to expend $80,000,000 for additions to its navy. These conditions, following the late Peace Conference, are indicative.

ATTACKED BY DE COSTA.

MINISTER'S RESIGNATION FROM EPISCOPAL MINISTRY MADE PUBLIC.

So-called "higher criticism" and the administration of the Episcopal Church are bitterly attacked in the letter to Bishop Potter accompanying the resignation from the ministry of Dr. B. F. De Costa, formerly pastor of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, in New York. Dr. De Costa was one of the most determined opponents of Dr. Briggs, and his resignation, as is indirectly told in his letter, of which the Tribune is in receipt, was prompted by the ordination of that divine, which carried with it, Dr. De Costa avers, an indorsement of Dr. Briggs' theories. The letter by which Dr. De Costa severed his connection with the Episcopal ministry follows in full:—

New York, Oct. 7, 1899.—The Rt. Rev. Henry Codman Potter, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Diocese of New York—Dear Sir: I hereby respectfully resign the office of presbyter.

It is proper for me to give some reason for this course, which, at the end of long years of service, is adopted deliberately and in the fear of God. I must now, however, confine myself to a few points. In what I have to say at this time I desire to speak with entire plainness, as well as with kindness and respect; while, to avoid possible misapprehension, I would add that I do not resign on account of any personal grievance. I cannot reconcile my convictions with the present condition of the Episcopal Church, which, contrary to its own principles, has been drawn into the adoption of a policy of toleration towards a school of theology and biblical criticism which, in my judgment, is hostile to revealed truth.

Your own attitude in relation to the subject forms, of course, a subsidiary consideration. I may observe, however, that I do not see that you have opposed the system to which I refer. Further, permit me to say, respectfully, that I do not find that you have been "ready, with all faithful diligence, to banish and drive away from the church all erroneous and strange doctrine contrary to God's word," while much less have you seemed inclined "both privately and openly to call upon and encourage others to the same."

CRITICISM OF BISHOP.

On the contrary, I think, the testimony proves that you have discouraged and baffled men inclined to take such action. I do not, however, undertake to impugn your motives, or charge upon you the "lamentable ignorance" and "deliberate malice" which some time since, in the public press, you attributed to men by no means your inferiors either in learning or charity.

I desire, nevertheless, to indicate that, as I view the subject, you have acted with and defended those who have struck at the scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the plenarily inspired and infallible word of God. You have thus championed a revolution hostile to every evangelical body in the land. You have done this, I think, by accepting, as admissible and worthy of toleration, a system of interpretation which undermines creeds, orders, and sacraments, leaving the most sacred interests of believers of every name without the support of the unerring word upon which, hitherto, they have been grounded. The progress of doubt during the last few years is most notable.

If Newman had lived in our day he would hardly have been able to write that beautiful eulogy of the Bible in which he says of the Englishman that "it is the representative of his best moments," and that "all that there has been about him of soft, and gentle, and pure, and penitent, and good speaks to him forever out of his English Bible. It is his sacred thing which doubt has never dimmed and controversy never soiled." Even in Episcopal seminaries the inerrancy of holy scripture is boldly and systematically denied.

DOUBT AS TO SCRIPTURES.

You, Right Reverend Sir, have entered the field at a crucial hour, plainly declaring that the system of denial or negation embodied in the "higher criticism" forms an allowable method of interpretation, and that the acceptance of the methods and its conclusions does not disqualify candidates for the ministry.

You have, therefore, deliberately received into the denomination, and you have approved as proper teachers for the people, men who declare that the Scriptures are errant and do not form an infallible guide, abounding in myths, fables, scientific and historical errors. Men of this kind plainly declare that what, hitherto, we have called the Bible is not the Bible, and that the real Bible lies buried underneath the rubbish of ages, waiting to be recovered.

The long catalogue of errors credited by so-called "higher criticism" to holy scripture may or may not, in your estimation, appear as trifles. That, however, has nothing to do with the present issue, but the system that you vouch for, as within the liberty of clergymen, leaves, in my judgment, no sufficient authority for the Christian religion. We are plainly told that "the prevalent dogmatic theories of the inspiration and infallibility of the Bible have been undermined in the entire range of Biblical study, and it is a question in many minds whether they can ever be so reconstructed as to give satisfaction to Christian scholars."

NEW STANDARD ADOPTED.

The party you represent has taken possession of the church, and adopted a new standard of qualification for the ministry. Heretofore an attempt has been made to maintain at least an appearance of respect for orthodox rules of interpretation, and a class of critics has allowed that those parts of the Bible that clearly relate to faith and morals were inspired and authoritative. But the school of "higher criticism" now does not make even this poor distinction. On the contrary, it is taking away the props of both faith and morals.

I cannot affirm that you agree with the details of this system, but it is plain that you deem its teachers fit persons for the ministry. The system cannot be employed and repudiated at the same time. This decision revises the standard of qualification, and, in the future, men cannot prescribe a higher standard. The minimum is the maximum. I submit that you have degraded the qualifications, and arranged the terms of admission in accordance with a scale that now affords gratification to enemies of Christianity. The worst is that the church approves your course. Future candidates may openly deride the story of Pentecost, as the world has understood it from the time of the Apostles.

The former belief in the Bible is no longer required. Candidates of the school to which I refer will indeed continue to sign papers, agreeing to accept the Scriptures as the word of God, but such subscriptions, practically, will prove little better than perjury.

"EPISCOPALIANISM SET ADRIFT."

The phrase, "word of God," is now a phrase only; its meaning has been juggled away. Again, let me not be misunderstood. One standing by the Nileometer does not fancy that the instrument causes the rising of the Nile. No more can I think of you as the author of the tide now brimming and swirling in upon the Episcopal body. Without abating anything from your responsibility I must, with all due respect, think of you mainly as the exponent of an accomplished revolution. Episcopalianism has been set adrift. "Higher criticism" has struck every diocese in the land, and from all the States of the Union there is coming a wild, ungovernable flood of opinion and sentiment that renders your position as an indicator still more significant.

You do not stand alone. You are upborne by the power of consecrated wealth. Your convention, which has just closed its session, is with you, having overwhelmingly vindicated your laissez faire standing committee by indorsing its dark acts. Your examiners give unqualified support. Thus far the case is diocesan, but venerable and saintly men like the Bishop of Minnesota, men of superior judgment and influence, applaud the "wisdom and good sense" displayed in this phase of your administration, while the criminal silence of other Bishops speaks louder than words.

The press, being creedless, is, for the most part, with you, and hails you as the exponent of incoming "liberal thought."

A leading editorial in a prominent daily, describing present society as one that "has outlived the faith of dogma," claims that your position is "invincible." Humanly speaking, it is, indeed, secure. The masses of Episcopalians are with you. The suggestion that the House of Bishops might interfere with your policy, though once seemingly probable, now appears puerile. The House of Bishops, as a whole, is on your side. Practically, your voice is the voice of the church.

This is no personal or diocesan issue. It takes in the whole body. As one result, discipline seems to be practically dead. Indeed, how could it be otherwise when you, taking a fuller view of the situation, declare, in a charge, that the Episcopal Church now forms one of the congeries of interdependent branches of the Anglican communion that is without a head to think or a hand to act?

FIGHT FOR BIBLE LOST.

I can understand why the Bishop of Western Texas is obliged to admit: "We know that the young men are not in the churches and the laboring classes are entirely alienated." The President of you Standing committee has just reported to convention that the youth of the denomination "deny any obligation to go to church. They go if they please, but if not, it makes no difference." Indeed, what have they to go for? To listen to the reading of what preachers pronounce myths and fables? Substantially, the battle for the Bible has been fought. The cause is lost, and now you can present no inducements for either youth or age "to go to church."

By a town meeting process the Bible has been declared "literature." This new relation of your denomination to the Bible changes the relation of the denomination to other religious bodies, and never again can Episcopalians approach the Presbyterians, calling to union on the basis of a "common Bible." The real Bible, when you get it, must at least prove an uncommon Bible. Its exact character is not yet known. It is still to be recovered by a patent mining process from beneath the rubbish of the ages. Your church has lost its supposed grasp upon the essential factor in any plan of unification. The new Bible, when produced by a "critical acumen," will prove no more acceptable than the apostolic succession described in your "Third Triennial Charge," where you show how nimbly the apostolic current disregards "gaps in neglected order," and puts a broken line in authoritative connection with the apostles.

If all this is as easy as alleged, those denominations to whom you will be obliged to offer the new Bible may prefer to put themselves in position, and, without the aid of obliging Episcopalians, allow the apostolic current to overleap the "break in the twisted wire" and "fly onwards on its swift enkindling errand" into their own receivers.

ATTACKS ON THE FAITH.

All this is in harmony with private judgment. Episcopalians are proceeding logically in their work of destruction, and in accordance with reformation principles. Do not say that I am misinterpreting your theological opinions. I am not dealing with your opinions, but with the policy and action which rules the people. I accept the verdict. You register the revolution correctly, and, however certain Bishops and others may dissent, the revolution is a fact. Unless some swift counter revolution takes place this destructive work must go on to the end.

At this point I regret that it seems necessary to turn, and indicate that the long-studied scheme to inaugurate Arianism is substantially perfected. The windows of Episcopalism are now opened, not towards Jerusalem and the fair realms of Catholic thought, the range, on the contrary, being down-hill, towards what is called the broad and coveted landscape of Deism and dissent. The distinguished rector of the leading parish in Brooklyn declares over his name that "it is probably true that ninety per cent of our Bishops believe and teach the views for which Bishop Colenso was deposed."

On the eve of Trinity Sunday last there appeared a public and open repudiation of the Holy Trinity, and your neglect, in another case, to allow a hearing under Canon II., Title 2, indicates that it would be idle to attempt any action in this or similar cases.

Proceedings against heresy are no longer to be tolerated, for if the guilty come to trial may not Bishops be brought to the bar?

The sense of culpability is general. Unbelief is in the air. Indeed, I must here call attention to the fact, as yet little noticed, that the worst of the prevailing skepticism does not appear in print, nor even in public addresses. Yet in private not a few of both clergy and laity openly repudiate the authority of Bible and creed, using no concealment.

WORK OF DESTRUCTION.

One prominent rector who stands high in the ranks of your supporters speaks of the New Testament as a bundle of left-over documents. Another has declared that the first three chapters of St. Matthew form simply a beautiful legend; while another even ridicules the apostles' creed. Important positions are held by men of this class, who remain in the pulpit to win present bread or accomplish ulterior ends. Such men are well known. They enjoy the favor of the body at large, and we must not measure the situation simply by the publication of an occasional volume, intended to mislead, it may be, and guard its author's position, or defiantly attack the faith. The thought comes often in the veiled forms favored by the Socinian school of Hoadley, in the last century, who then exhibited in the Church of England that system of "reserve" practiced by many in and out of the pulpit to-day.

Still, with all this precaution, the underlying hostility is by no means concealed. The perforated, honey-combed condition of Protestant Episcopalism is indicated by agnostic phrase. We all know perfectly well that clergymen in your diocese are assaulting and riddling the faith, and openly circulating Socinian literature.

The skeptic is secure, and the revolution wins honor and applause; though it cannot be said of the system carefully sheltered in dioceses by the purple of the Episcopate, that "the scoffer observes a side of it that reduces his sneers to silence." In reality, it forms the bouleversement of Christianity.

WILL NOT ACCEPT RESULT.

I have thus endeavored to point out the work of "higher criticism," for the reason that I wish to keep well up in the front the true state of the church, that no one may pretend that I leave the Episcopal ministry because you or any other person may disagree with my conception of truth. This revolutionary process in the denomination, possibly, was inevitable. I recognize, but do not accept, the result.

For years, in common with others, I have tried to stem the current, and, in the course of discussion, the temper of Episcopalians has been thoroughly tested. Evils have been pointed out, privately, to the Bishops, and the pessimistic reply of one, "Things will never be any better in your day or mine," may be accepted as the expression of nearly all.

Letters in my possession from some of your associates in office form instructive reading. For myself, recognizing the situation as I do, there is but one course; and, therefore, whatever other men, whom personally I esteem, may do, and however they may regard their obligation, mine seems clear. While no action on your part could lead me to go out, I recognize a condition that no one man, or any possible combination of men can now successfully meet.

Episcopalianism, based on private judgment, is not only far overshadowed by doubt that will characterize the incoming twentieth century, but it is possessed by the unbelieving spirit. The storm is already here, but the Protestant Episcopal body has no anchors. Are not your people hastening to accomplish their evolution?

Few will be misled by the pompous diction of that Bishop, who, in his last charge, foretells great victories. Fewer still, allow me to say, with all kindness, will be persuaded by your own phraseology, where you speak of "the book" as "incomparable and precious," since it is commonly believed that many churchmen would not disdain such language if applied to the works of Shakespeare and Homer.

One can well anticipate the reply of men, who, with assumed indignation, deny that they refuse the Bible as the word of God, but discerning persons know the value of a phrase out of which the erstwhile faith, robustness and honesty have departed. You are, of course, ready to affirm that this school now in power honors the word of God, and that the effort being made is one simply to "separate the chaff from the wheat," the false from the true. You would indeed place the Bible on a more impregnable basis" than ever. No doubt it will be set upon the impregnable basis of Veda, Shasta, and Book of Mormon.

Your charge, that "a modern fetishism which dishonored the Bible by claiming to be its elect guardian has shut it up these many years within the iron walls of a dreary literalism, robbing it thus alike of interest and of power." You have thus furnished a remarkable discovery. All along the people have regarded the Bible as a free book. It has stood the pride and glory of the nations, accredited with the uplifting of society and the advance of civilization and modern thought. No language has been found too superb in describing its work of emancipation and purification. Now, however, you assure us that we have been mistaken, and that, all the while, the Bible has been shut up within iron walls, robbed of interest and power.

Do you, Right Reverend Sir, suppose that the people of this land, who have organized Bible societies and carried them on at a large cost for many years, are sufficiently ignorant of the history and influence of the Bible to accept tamely this charge? Your language is astonishing. I deeply deplore the necessity which exists for saying this, yet you are winning laurels among infidels far and wide. Still you have Christian people, Catholic and Protestant alike, to reckon with in this attempt to charge an ignorant and degraded fetishism upon scholars and holy and enlightened men of every name, who, rejecting a carping, uncritical criticism, revere now as formerly "the Bible of our forefathers."

It is hardly to be supposed that one in your position is qualified to make this charge of "fetishism" and "intolerable ignorance." The particular kind of usefulness that higher criticism may aspire to is indicated by the language of one of your friends, the Bishop of Washington, who declares that under the influence of the "higher criticism" thousands have lost their faith in the Old Testament as the inspired word of God; while "the faith of the multitudes is so shaken that even Sunday school children speak of the Scriptures with an irreverent freedom that would have amazed the preceding generation."

This statement is sadly emphasized by the last annual Sunday school report, which shows that while your party has been engaged with plans to secure the ascendancy and make the Bible acceptable with skeptics, no less than 1,250 Sunday school teachers have parted from their work. The youth recognize no more loyalty to Sunday school than church.

Of the influence of the whole scheme upon the body at large one may judge from the testimony of Dr. Paret, the Bishop of Maryland, who says: "The church in this country has almost lost the idea of aggressive work. Its missionary enthusiasm, if it ever had much, is now feeble." This is echoed by the church press.

DRAWBACK TO RELIGION.

One may, therefore, safely dismiss your statement, where you speak of what "a higher scholarship has done for us in our generation for the advancement of Godliness and good learning throughout the Christian world." It is, on the contrary, driving people away from the religion of Christ. It should, therefore, be borne in mind that the Episcopal body was not founded on this "higher criticism." However logically it may put in force private judgment, no logic will enable it to survive on this new system of biblical interpretation.

Furthermore, it might be remembered, with profit, that it was never designed to entertain any comparative religions; and the system you applaud can only degrade the Episcopal denomination to a plane where the maintenance of the simplest element of Christianity will prove impossible. As for your own diocese, the central and most important, when its actual state is known, it will be seen that it is rapidly approaching the condition of the bloodless heart. Spiritually, your strongest corporation is failing. The appearance of prosperity, as the statistics prove, is unreal.

As things are tending, far-sighted friends say that if the cathedral is ever finished it will prove the sarcophagus of Episcopalianism, the coffin of its creed. It is to be devoutly hoped that the policy with which you are identified may yet be paralyzed.

WRITES WITH REGRET.

I need not say that I write these words with much regret. I am not here, let it be understood, speaking against the Episcopal Church, but against its administration. I have always recognized the Church of England as the masterpiece among modern denominations. I can make the language of Newman my own where he says: "I recognize in the Anglican Church a time-honored institution of noble historical memories, a monument of ancient wisdom, a momentous arm of political strength, a great national organ, a source of vast popular advantage, and to a certain point, a witness and teacher of religious truth." Moreover, I should desire to see it preserving whatever of truth and integrity it may possess, since no right-minded man can find any satisfaction in religious decay.

I should be glad to see it demonstrating essential superiority over other modern systems found around us; and I can only feel a profound concern when I view the course upon which the branch of the Anglican body in this land has now fully entered. Others are not simply concerned; but one of the most eminent of your Bishops, a wise, far-seeing man, says to me in his letter that he is "greatly alarmed."

One of your leading and most trusted periodicals comes to me while I write, saying, editorially, how serious is the situation and how great the danger of the movement "which threatens to make patches and shreds of holy scripture and to reduce the faith of the church to an iridescent dream."

ATTEMPT TO PERVERT.

I regret to view the successful attempt to pervert a time-honored institution, and to discredit noble historical memories associated with fealty to the word of God, reducing ancient wisdom to "fetishism" and "intolerable ignorance." To-day authority is gone. I can no longer declare that Episcopalianism hold as formerly to the Bible. The idea of inerrancy is a "fetish." I cannot, on the prevailing theory, present a single text from Genesis to Revelation that carries any final authority; and, with the departure of inerrancy from the written word I lose the inerrant Word that was made Flesh; since, if one cannot depend upon written tradition, how can he accept any spoken tradition, coming down through various languages and peoples during a long course of ages?

You destroy the value of the church, since a body that cannot vouch for a written record cannot vouch for anything. That, I am sorry to say, is the case with the body you so fully represent. It is the case of the blind leading the blind.

In quoting Canon Gore, you say that the church "is not tied by any existing definition of inspiration," and that "we cannot make any exact claim upon anyone's belief in regard to inspiration, simply because we have no authoritative definition to bring upon him." Therefore, you will observe and confess "that what is heterodoxy to-day in one jurisdiction may to-morrow be pronounced by some other court in another to be orthodox," and that such a decision in the Episcopal Church "absolutely determines nothing."

"DEADLY STAB" AT SYSTEM.

No more deadly stab has ever been aimed at the Protestant Episcopal system than this which you have given. You wrote even almost gayly, conscious of the fact that you were getting the better of the men who sought to defend the Bible, and the world recognizes what you have done.

It is sad that the Episcopal body stands helpless in the midst of attack, but the saddest of all is that you give no sign that the situation is distasteful.

For myself, I cannot bow to the guidance of the "distinguished critics" whom you have set forth as teachers and examples for the faculties in Episcopal seminaries, masters in Israel—who now, side by side with the professional infidel, stand forth to lecture on the "Mistakes of Moses."

My sense of right would not support me in any such course; I retire from the field, convinced that I am no longer called to struggle with an overwhelming and rapidly increasing force. I cannot accept the revolution or drift with the tide.

Your school is indeed benevolent, and quite willing to tolerate Catholic faith, bestowing upon it from time to time nothing more severe than ignoble terms. But for myself I ask no favors. I will not remain where doubt commands a premium, and the belief in an infallible Bible enjoys simply the immunity granted to a fallible Koran. Therefore, however the issue may be regarded by some excellent brethren who have stood firmly by the word of God, for myself I must be guided by the light that is given.

I may have been misled by my teachers and examiners, but I entered the Episcopal ministry with the distinct understanding that, whatever theories some individuals might hold with respect to inspiration, the Scriptures themselves were inspired and inerrant. That was the view held by all so-called orthodox bodies.

By degrees, however, new views arose, shocking the Protestant sentiment at first, but afterwards making progress, until, finally, the present opinion took on form. The situation is therefore changed. The Episcopal body has relinquished the former belief and requirement, and the contract that I made is broken. I am free.

FULL FAITH IN CHRISTIANITY.

I have not, however, lost any faith in Christianity. My belief is brighter and fuller than ever before. I am an optimist, cheerful and hopeful, trusting in the ever-increasing good; and I leave the ranks of your ministry with charity for all, and especially for highly respected brethren still accepting illusions by which I was once enthralled.

In closing, while wishing you personal prosperity and happiness, allow me to express the hope that the eyes of your soul may yet be opened to see the real character of the work which has secured the influence and support of the Episcopal body; and that, by the divine blessing upon the labors of earnest and upright men, Episcopalians may finally be brought to realize the splendid realities of the Catholic faith mirrored in the divine word.

Committing my future to God and to the holy angels,

I remain very respectfully your obedient servant,

B. F. DE COSTA.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, Oct. 20.

Editors Herald:—Since my last I visited Montana, where an excellent time was had. Five were baptized and saints strengthened. A volunteer captain had delivered an indiscriminate lecture on "Mormonism," and the public promise had been made that it would be looked after from our standpoint. This was attended to while I was there, and as the Spalding Romance and Joseph Smith a polygamist, were the leading features of his lecture, it became necessary that an examination should be made along this line.

Four Utah elders were present, and the polygamy phase of it was rather strong medicine for their theological maws. Anyway the preacher felt well during the two hours' examination and generously offered to forego his next night's appointment if the Utah elders wished to occupy in a reply to the polygamy phase.

This their president publicly consented to. By the way, he had given public assent to this rendering of the Book of Mormon: "Truly David and Solomon had many wives and concubines, which thing was well pleasing in my sight, saith the Lord." He also publicly stated that it was rendered this way: "For if I will, saith the Lord, raise up seed unto me, I will command my people otherwise." This he failed to publicly correct the following night, but privately admitted his mistake.

Instead of keeping his agreement next night one of them occupied one and three fourths hours on the successor! The president then stated that he had expected to talk on polygamy, but the hour was so late he hardly thought it wise; but would take a vote. Some two thirds voted for him to go on, but he thought it too late! I then offered to divide time with them, but, no, sir! It was then proposed that they occupy one and one half hours and I would pledge myself to occupy only a half-hour in reply. But that would partake of "controversy." Poor fellows!! Out of the four not even one could spare time to listen to my reply on successor, though I plead with them to do so.

While there, attended Adventist camp meeting and heard them preach "justification by faith" just as the Free Methodists do. One of their elders told me that the church is now largely adopting it, the last three years being especially marked in such avowal. Baptized over into this new idea. Among them I saw the exemplification of the holy kiss.

Returned to Utah in time for the reunion at Provo, which, as already noted in church papers, passed off pleasantly. We kept the tent standing for a week, though the nights were very cold, because of a controversy which drew crowds that we could not begin to accommodate. They were very rowdylike on the outside one night, but our opponent, Elder Sorensen, apologized to us the following night and scored them. He was gentlemanly throughout, but very weak in discussion.

A visit was made to the Brigham Young Academy to investigate the controverted "reorganize" between Heman and Roberts. Mr. Pratt says reorganize so it is for Mr. Roberts to explain why he omitted the prefix "re." The preacher could not help to quietly call the matter up, as well as some of Mr. Roberts' contradictions. The "Aunt Zina" interview was read to them and commented on. Whenever the Herald or Ensign desires to publish that interview they have my consent thereto, for I only promised to withhold its publication "for a time."

As one of the known results of the controversy one Inspired Translation, two of Heman's Successions, and five of those published by Ensign, were purchased—all by Utah Church people. We didn't have tracts enough to supply the demand. Two of the academy students had sent the tracts to their parents and gave me their names and residences, with a request to call.

Had a long talk with one of the professors at the academy who told me they would be glad of any of our works. The Herald lies on their reading table every week. They have the Inspired Translation, and the Professor told me he used it largely in his theological lectures. He also uses it to disprove "Adam-God." I noticed W. H. Kelley's "Presidency and Priesthood," and the Professor said it was one of the finest things he had seen on the subject. (Congratulations, W. H.!) Now who can become financially magnanimous enough to see to it that the Ensign, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and one each of every book, pamphlet, and tract published in the interests of our church, is sent to the "B. Y. Academy Library, Provo City, Utah?" I feel sure that our Utah saints would but be glad to see to this, only that we have called upon them in the building of the Provo chapel, now nearing completion; so they have all they can bear. It is important. Will it be allowed to drop?

Elder Sorensen told us publicly of a man by the name of York who at one time testified that he knew Joseph to be a polygamist. Two nights after Mr. York came to me voluntarily and denied it and signed the following statement:—

"PROVO, Utah, 9-23, '99.

"I, A. M. York, hereby certify that I was born October 5, 1843, and could know nothing of Joseph Smith having practiced plural marriage.

A. M. YORK."

I also copied from yesterday's Salt Lake Tribune this:—

"Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet, was my uncle. I never saw him, but his wife, my father's sister, and known in church circles as 'Emma, the elect lady,' visited at our house. She married again after Smith's death. According to my best knowledge and belief the prophet did not believe in polygamy; I know his wife did not. So this feature of the church in Utah must have been an after consideration. I am not a Latter Day Saint."—Jesse Hale, of Chicago.

Bro. Greene certainly has the sympathy of the missionaries to Utah. We can't even get the thirty "squatters" in some places. The dogs and chickens we are not looking after, unless it be the latter after their crowing proclivities have ceased. Like preachers in general we are ready for a post mortem determination as to their qualities. Too bad, Bro. G., that you have permitted your crowing to develop to such an extent as to start every chanticler off within the sound of your voice! There must have been a "likeness" in both the "bark" and the "crow." Were you trying to preach in the native language? I personally know one who, as a boy, found an English rooster which could crow in Dane! That rooster should have been killed instanter!

J. W. WIGHT.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—I send you, by request of the publishing committee here, Nos. 1 and 2 of The Ensign, which you ought to receive same mail as this letter (not Zion's Ensign).

My explanation under heading of "church paper" in No. 2 will give you the history of the enterprise, so I will not repeat. The committee undertake to pay the printers by getting advertisements. In other words the church proposes to advertise other people's business at a cheap rate and get its own free in the bargain.

This will require some hard work, as about twenty-five dollars per month must be raised to pay for three thousand copies. They promise advertisers to distribute these in the suburb of Balmain, and the young people of the branch do most of the distributing from house to house. The writer knocked at seven hundred doors with papers last month and will make the same round this month. And yet only a part of the suburb is canvassed.

The branches in other parts of Australia are welcoming the advent of a paper published here. The Herald and Ensign are too far away to meet the needs of this mission. A local sheet is really needed.

The subscription price is small—only twenty-five cents per year in the colony and thirty-seven cents out; so it will surely not crowd out the few Heralds that are taken in this country.

Most of the publishing committee are busy men, some of them having branch work as well as their own business to attend to; and hence the added labor and anxiety of soliciting advertisements for this paper, will give them all, and probably more, than they can reasonably do. Some other and better plan may yet be discovered and the paper be tendered by the branch to the district or mission.

From the last issue of Ensign sent, you will notice that I am making what is probably my last special effort in this city,—an "all-week mission." You would call it an ordinary missionary effort, and others at home would call it a protracted meeting. Expect to baptize a few before we close.

Yours faithfully,

GOMER WELLS.

P. S.—As the publishing committee and editor are novices at the business, they crave your charitable consideration as you cast your experienced eyes over the Australian Ensign.

"THAT CHALLENGE."

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald:—In your issue for October 25, Rev. Clark Braden has a note to me about "that challenge" that invited him to repeat the debate at Alma, Illinois, where he has made himself so very conspicuous by circulating his base literature against the Reorganization; not to say anything about his ungentlemanly lectures against us, in the regions round about. These are the reasons why I asked him to repeat the debate at his home, in Alma, Illinois.

Braden feels the force of that challenge, and has made a number of attempts to induce me to break its provisions and stipulations in order to let him have a "loophole" to crawl out of an honorable debate, wherein he is billed for all time to come to defend his pet theory of Campbellism, in every hamlet, town, and city where he raises his voice against the Reorganization. Will Braden now understand that the "stipulations" and "provisions" found in "that challenge" are as immutable as were the laws of the Medes and Persians? Braden's pretense to want a debate at Independence is one of his tricks to evade a debate at Alma. You see he does not name the propositions for debate at Independence, when making his request in the Herald of October 25. No; they are other propositions altogether from that found in my challenge; also with the "order" changed. This is one of Braden's attempts to "shelve" "that challenge" which is bothering him so badly. The "provisions" of my challenge are: "To repeat the debate at Alma, Illinois; and at every hamlet, town, and city, where he (Braden) may attempt to preach or lecture against the faith taught by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ." This "stipulation" is the alpha and omega to "that challenge."

When Braden wrote me, attempting a change I answered him on the back of one of my printed challenges in these words:—

"INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Sept. 23, '99.

"Rev. Clark Braden; Sir:—Yours of 19th before me. Replying say: The enclosed challenge, embraces and concludes my 'terms', at Alma, in every hamlet, town, and city where you raise your voice against the Reorganization. I. N. WHITE."

The following reply was received:—

"ALMA, Illinois, Sept. 28, '99.

"I. N. White; Sir:—You write: 'The enclosed challenge embraces and concludes my terms;' a cowardly sneaking conclusion. Four years ago I challenged you to debate in Independence. Two thousand circulars were scattered all over Independence. You did not dare to open your mouth. Now you have the cowardly impudence to challenge me to debate in my home; when you dare not debate in your home!! If it was any person except I. N. White, I would ask you: 'Are not you ashamed of yourself?' Now, sir, I repeat my challenge: I will debate in my home if you will in yours. Will you act the coward and back out? CLARK BRADEN."

I answered this on October 2, saying: "What I have written I have written. My 'terms' and 'conclusions' are contained in my challenge for Alma; and in fact for every hamlet, town, and city where you may attempt to raise your voice against the Reorganization. If that is 'a cowardly, sneaking conclusion,' it alone, is on your part. Your students should know how you sustain Campbellism, and defeat (?) Mormonism.—I. N. White."

Braden then makes one more attempt, sending me a long pettifogging letter with propositions to debate at Independence, ending his letter in the following style: "Let me hear from you and your Holy Ghost.—Clark Braden." I answered this by writing on the back of one of my challenges: "Stipulations for all other debates are found in the inclosed challenge.—I. N. White."

That the readers of the Herald may see how much truth there is in Braden's statement, when he says to me in his letter: "Four years ago I challenged you to debate in Independence; two thousand circulars were scattered all over Independence; you did not dare to open your mouth," etc. I here reproduce my letter in answer to Braden's challenge and two thousand circulars, etc., which letter was printed at the time in the Ensign, and the "Reasons Why," in the Primitive Christian, Braden's own church paper. This will also enable the reader, to judge as to who was the one that "acted the coward and backed out."

"EXPLANATORY.

"Editor Ensign:—I happened in the office while Elder Popplewell, Editor of the Primitive Christian, was reading proof of Braden's late circular, titled 'Christianity vs. Mormonism,' which has been so industriously circulated upon the streets of Independence, since. I then and there told Elder Popplewell to place a note at the bottom of said circular, stating that the glove laid at Braden's feet to repeat the El Dorado Springs discussion at Independence, with same rules governing. I would affirm first proposition, 'Was Joseph Smith a Prophet?' in the stone chapel of the Latter Day Saints, and deny the second proposition, 'Is the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice with the Church of Jesus Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago?' in the Christian chapel.

"This Elder Popplewell agreed to do. Braden's circular made its appearance upon the streets and its contents found its way into the columns of the Primitive Christian; but I. N. White's kind offer to accommodate Mr. Braden and the Christian brethren with an opportunity to test Braden's so-called Christianity (Campbellism) vs. White's non-Christianity (Mormonism) failed to materialize. Later, I visited Elder Popplewell's office, making inquiry why my kind offer failed to appear in print as agreed upon. Elder Popplewell said he would explain the reason in an editorial for the next issue of his paper (April 11). I here submit the editorial, which will give one more reason to the many that are asking why Braden's 'Christianity vs. Mormonism' fatigued without profit so quickly at Independence."

"THE REASONS WHY.

"For some time there has been an effort by Clark Braden, as well as others, to have him lecture in Independence, Missouri, on several phases of Mormonism, as appeared in Primitive Christian. This it was hoped would bring some light to the understanding of Mormons and other citizens of Independence, Missouri. . . . We published and circulated near one thousand tracts concerning Braden's lectures and scattered them in this city, hoping we might secure Braden's lectures, as he had offered to defray about all the expense himself. I. N. White, Braden's former antagonist at El Dorado Springs, Missouri, said he would meet Braden in this city and discuss the same propositions, under the same rules and regulations as at El Dorado Springs, Missouri, the discussion to be held in the Mormon chapel here while White was affirming, and the Christian chapel while Braden was affirming. It seemed that only a few had any interest in the discussion so it did not materialize. We asked one of the business men of the town, and we understood a deacon of the Christian Church here, if he would assist a little in aiding Braden to come to Independence. He said: 'He would give one dollar to keep him away.' We write this to let all who read this know, that the reason why the debate and lecture did not materialize, was not cowardice on the part of either Braden or White.

"THOMAS POPPLEWELL."

Can it be possible that Braden has forgotten all this? Never! In his attempt to get away from "that challenge" to repeat the debate at Alma, and in every hamlet, town, and city, where he raises his voice against the Reorganization, he has cornered himself. I can well afford to stand by the honorable stipulations that are found in "that challenge." What will Braden do?

I. N. WHITE.

HUNTSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 23.

Editors Herald:—Although the change in place of our district conference and Sunday school convention was a disappointment to some, yet I think we can truthfully say we had an enjoyable time. All business passed off quietly and with dispatch. Our social meeting on Sunday afternoon was a good one. Many of the young saints took part, which was encouraging. Dear young saints, is it not time we should take our part in this latter-day work? If not now, when?

By request of the district Bro. Tanner went to Moberly to meet some Utah elders who were preaching there and misrepresenting the truth. He came on Tuesday, but as they did not come out on the streets that night as they usually did, he did not meet them till Wednesday night, when six of them came on the street and sang, when Elder Chambers, their missionary in charge of the State of Missouri, preached on "authority." When they dismissed, Bro. Tanner took his place on the street and gave the people a history of the Old Church and of the two churches, and challenged them to prove their "authority" or prove that Joseph Smith was not the true successor of his father. At first they seemed as though they did not want to meet Bro. Tanner, but when the cry "coward" was hissed at them, they said they would debate.

Agreements have since been made and propositions signed for a debate, November 6, 1899, at Moberly. The two propositions are on church authority and are to occupy six nights. Many of the citizens are interested and we think good will result by the debate. Anyway the people will know we are not the same.

Hoping for the welfare of Zion,

Your brother,

GEORGE A. TRYON.

NORTH PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 22.

Editors Herald:—Reflection upon this great work that I have embraced, brings joy and sadness. Joy for the hope and assurance the gospel brings; sadness for the mistakes that I have made that never can be recalled. Oh how quick I would start off at this time if I could undo some things that are past. And while perusing the pages of your mission work abroad in the world, and see what instruction you are able to give, and judging my life from the standard works of the church, it brings sadness to my heart, and I am left to ponder and say, When shall I say in the words of my Savior, Get behind me Satan. I feel I have no other God to worship but the one of the Latter Day Saints. I want to serve him and adore him, and to crown him Lord of all.

I feel proud of our little chapel here in Plymouth, and want to be devoted to God's cause.

I have baptized two of late, one of them was my daughter; so I have lived to see one after the other take upon them the name of Christ, following him into the waters of baptism, to rise to walk in a newness of life.

We had visits of numbers of elders for the last six months, Pres. Joseph Smith with them. It was quite a treat for me to see our president, not because I worship him or think he is infallible, but it causes reflection. We had it notified well that he would be here among us, and anticipated a good turnout; but I was deceived as much as the boy that stole the melon, it proved to be a green pumpkin with him, and it proved to be empty seats with me; it was far short of a baker's dozen that came out to hear.

Bro. John Smith has been with us for the past week. I believe him to be well posted in the work. I do not believe he got excited over the numbers that came to hear him; but he is one not easily discouraged, and has that amount of confidence in himself that he is not afraid, and when he is talking real estate with men, his black eyes will snap, and he seems to know every nook and corner, and every dodge there is. He says he is going to train me up in it; he thinks it is needed from what he could observe. I believe him to be a good teacher, and a useful man to the church. May the Lord bless him in his efforts.

I am in hopes of seeing some embrace the gospel this coming winter. We feel sad to see how they stand from a scriptural standpoint; but so it is, and as Bro. Robley has expressed it, some are sweetly saved, and it is not much use to change their minds. I will close, hoping this will be received in faith.

Yours in Christ,

N. R. NICKERSON.

THURMAN, Iowa, Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—Our work in this district is still onward, our number increasing slowly. We put in about ten days in the Keystone branch of late and baptized three precious souls into the kingdom, all adults, and one from here was baptized at our late reunion, which make four added to their number. We are hopeful for this branch, that it may revive; that all will take hold and work in right good earnest, and that they may have the good Spirit of promise to aid them in building up one another in the faith, and be able to bring others to see the light and obey the truth, to rejoice with them in the hope of everlasting life, is our earnest prayer. Our Sunday school convention, held at this place, in the saints' church, October 12, 13, was well attended. Sr. T. A. Hougas, district superintendent, is up to date in this important part of the work, and being ably assisted by the general superintendent, T. A. Hougas, made the work, as expressed, interesting for all and very instructive.

Our conference held on the 14th and 15th was truly a source of comfort and delight to all present. Our business was transacted without a jar; all felt happy and glad. Preaching Saturday night by Bro. I. M. Smith, also Sunday morning to a large, intelligent audience, who had gathered in within a radius of ten miles from the surrounding country to hear the word of life as ably presented to the satisfaction of all, we believe.

In the afternoon our social meeting was good. At night your humble servant was blessed with liberty in speaking to a fair audience of faithful ones who were out to hear.

By invitation we occupy the Christian church at Thurman this week, Bro. Smith doing the preaching. We are treated well, their choir doing the singing. We have a fair attendance and the speaker is blessed with good liberty. We are hopeful for the work, and joyous in spirit.

PEMBINA, Ark., Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—I am preaching as circumstances will permit. I preached yesterday at eleven a. m., then took all of the the congregation that I could at three p. m. about three miles to another schoolhouse, to hear the Utah Mormons. At the close of their meeting I endeavored to explain the difference between the church in Utah and the Reorganized Church; I also read Jeremiah 17, and told the people that I thought that that part of the church that went to Utah fulfilled that prophecy. The poor elders blushed when I began to tell the difference. They have made a thorough canvass of this county without any success in this north part, but I hear that they have several converts in the southeast part. This is a hard field for anyone, it makes no difference what denomination he represents, as the major part of the natives are made up of ignorance and prejudice. I believe that they will not learn obedience until they go to the prison for a season.

JOSEPH WARD.

MALLARD, Iowa, Oct. 25.

Editors Herald:—The saints have decided to dedicate their church at this place on the second Sunday in November, if all goes well. It is expected that President Joseph Smith will have charge of the services and preach the dedicatory sermon.

Saints here will do what they can to entertain visiting saints, though none live in town and but few families near by.

I trust this will be all the notice necessary.

Dist. Pres.

MANCHESTER, Texas, Oct. 20.

Editors Herald:—A few lines from North-eastern Texas. I have just returned from a trip down in Bowie County, where we have been battling for the gospel, God greatly blessing us with his Spirit. Our preaching was in much assurance of the Holy Ghost. We had the pleasure of leading one noble man into the water, and left several others near the water. One Freewill Baptist preacher said when Christ came to earth again he would come to the same church he left. I think he will obey soon. I am alone in this part of the field, so far as brother elders are concerned; but the Lord is going to raise up some more instruments in this country to carry the gospel. Bro. P. B. Bursell and Bro. Whit Dalbey are going to preaching, and noble men are they. May God bless them in their great undertaking. We are looking for Bro. I. P. Baggerly's return to this country when Jack Frost gets here. Come if you can, brother. So, brethren, let us be up and doing, for the time is near at hand.

Branch clerks will please take notice that we want them to bring their branch records, and meet us at Cove, Polk County, Arkansas, on the 8th of November next, at which place we meet in district conference on the 11th of said month, this being a conference to elect officers for the district, and we want to get all matters straightened up. Please respond.

Yours in bonds of the gospel,

E. A. ERWIN.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

“The wise [men] ask, ‘What language did Christ speak?’ They cavil, argue, search, and little prove. O sages, leave your Syriac and your Greek! Each heart contains the knowledge that you seek: Christ spoke the universal language—Love.”

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Aug. 31.

Dear Readers:—Having received several letters outside of my correspondents and circle of acquaintances, and not being able to respond to each personally, however much I appreciate their kindness in writing, I again take this opportunity to respond to all.

I should have written last month and told you all how pleased we were to welcome the new missionaries, but we had so much talking to do, there did not seem to be any time to settle down to writing. They are pleasantly situated, that is pleasant for this country, in the same house that Sr. Devore occupied when in Papeete, with the improvement of a new coat of white paint on the inside. They will remain here till October, then they will probably go to Hikueru, where the saints will be gathered in bulk for the diving. There will be few families left in Tarona from October until January, when about fifty persons will return here to move houses and put up the conference buildings.

Thinking perhaps Bro. and Sr. Devore, Bro. and Sr. Case, and others who have been here, will be interested in learning of the changes that take place, I will sketch briefly the principal changes that are, and are to be, beginning at the missionary grounds, which would scarcely be recognized. That large tree near the center of the front yard, where the flagstaff was, became rotten, and during a heavy wind broke off flat to the ground, flagstaff and all, and we had the stump rooted out. That left a large dreary looking bare front yard, with not a tree or shrub nearer than the shade trees on side of the road, and the sun poured down unmercifully on the front of the house in the fore part of the day. We could scarcely go out on the porch at the seasons of the year when the sun rises fair in front of the door, and wended its heated course straight overhead, making those iron roofs too hot to touch. Those clusters of banana trees at the end of the house grew to make a nice shade, so I had a half grown banana tree planted opposite each front window, a few steps from the porch, and one at the back part, opposite the lattice window, where the sun shines in so uncomfortably bright just about supper time. Then a row of mock coffee trees—the chief beautifier of almost every place in Papeete—across the front, except an opening opposite the front steps, about ten feet from the porch in front, and four or five feet from the side. This little hedge formed a small front yard, and suggested an inclosed flower garden, and extends along the end of the house towards church, nearly to the platform at the kitchen door, where a flourishing young breadfruit tree is now growing; also four coffee trees opposite the large trap door window at the back, and seven next the church opposite the kitchen door. Those all have now a good growth, some far above my head. The banana trees in front have added to themselves, there are two on one side and three on the other, as close as they can stand, all are straight and healthy, and shade the porch and its roof nicely, and their long palmy leaves cross each other overhead across the walk from the front door.

My flowers and all choice plants and trees have to be planted in boxes or oil cans, to keep the crabs from destroying them; even the coffee trees have to be bandaged or bamboosed. I have a solid row of boxes and oil tins just beyond the eavedroppings, with mint, running vines, Chili pepper trees, native hollyhocks, and three other plants that I don't know the name of. They are very pretty; no wine-colored silk velvet could be prettier, and they have such a healthy growth. Then there is a hedge of those lily bushes that grew in clusters along the walk in front of the church—planted I think by Bro. Gilbert—that encloses the whole front yard, except an opening for a front gateway near the road.

And now within these past few days the whole settlement of Tarona is encircled with a new picket fence, and nearly all white-washed, which of course is a great addition to the appearance of the place.

Pae has torn down his old house, and is taking it to Tiona, where they are soon to move, on account of Tatehau's affliction. Pori's house is moved off the grounds; he sold it; his wife would not be persuaded to return to Papeete after little Tatehau's death. The big frame for a building, which set near the center of the plot of ground here, and Afai's cook house is also taken away. Afai is living at Tiona too; also Teumia with Tinihau. Two new cottages have been put up in the Pilot's back yard, near the fence where our water faucet is; also two houses on the opposite side of the road from Haroatea and Tapuni's houses. These belong to our people, as also that triangle of land.

And now after all my work of coaxing these little trees to grow, replacing the missing ones, making soil and carrying it to them, the missionary house is soon to be moved. But I am not sorry I did the work. It has beguiled many an otherwise lonely hour, and given back more than enough to repay for the pains taken in cheerful appearance, and I have enjoyed them for a season. I cannot tell you how much I enjoy the effect of all, when the moon turns her cheerful face towards us, and all is bathed in her silvery light, reflecting leafy patterns on porch and ground. The moonlight is so much brighter here, I think, where the air is so clear from fog, smoke, or dust. How often in the future, when we are far from this place, will my thoughts turn to this beautiful island, and those quiet evenings spent on our front porch in the glory of the moonlight. I sit, gaze, and admire, and can never become sufficiently satiated with its beauty.

But to return. The missionary house will be moved out on the corner near the bridge, facing the ocean, and the trees will be moved also. The Tapuni house will set next it; that too will be for missionary purposes, perhaps for a printing office, since Tapuni wants to sell it. Then the church, and next the conference building, which will necessitate the moving of the Moi house, also that of Haroatea's and Metuaore's old house. Afai will move his to Tiona after conference. Elia of Amanu thinks his branch will build a nice new house on the grounds here for their own use when they come here from that branch. Well, I think you are all tired by this time; I am, with simply the writing it, saying nothing of living through it all, and winding off with a native feast and conference.

We are now thinking some of going to Hikueru; the brethren are very anxious that we should. It seems to be a great undertaking. I feel as if we needed the intervening time to rest up and recruit ready for the busy times.

Mr. Burton is feeling quite well now, and we have given up all thought of going home till after conference.

Before closing, I wish to speak a few words of commendation of Autumn Leaves. The July number is unusually rich in good thoughts. "Helpful thoughts" and "Hours with best authors," can scarcely be surpassed. Sister Stebbins' "Talk on moderation in dress" agrees with my thought precisely. And I might refer to each article in particular; but the best way is for each one to do as Bro. H. J. Davison said, "read every word of it," for one's self, then each one will be sure to get the cream. Nor would I overlook the other publications. All are laden with food for thought, the kind that produces spiritual growth; an earnest desire to attain to all that is best in our scope of action. The thoughts of thus attaining, are grand; but the progress is slow and difficult. But let us continue in the desire to attain, and striving to do so, and helping each other too, by keeping helpful thoughts before our readers, whether known by that name or not.

EMMA BURTON.

P. S.—To those who have requested a collection of shells, I will say that there is no establishment here where shells can be bought, except one kind of small shells from Raeatia. By our remaining here in Papeete, my own collection is not as large as it would have been had I traveled more extensively among the islands, and having so many friends and "duties that lie nearer," I cannot make any promises.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.
Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

THE MOTHER'S PART IN PRIMARY WORK IN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The first teachers of the principles of the gospel were the first parents, Adam and Eve. In the abundance of their joy upon being made acquainted with the plan of redemption and with the instinct of true parental love "they made known all things unto their sons and their daughters."

The natural teachers of children are their parents. In the law of God parents are responsible for the religious training and teaching of their children. (Doc. and Cov. 68:4.) Properly, the Sunday school work is but supplementary to the work to be done at home, and by the parents.

Who comes so close to a little child, who has the key to his confidence, who understands his unspoken thoughts and feelings as do his own parents and, more especially in most cases, his own mother?

In his early years she has him daily, almost hourly with her. Then she has an opportunity to impress upon him right principles and to teach him the prominent facts of religion as no one else may have again.

In the quiet of home she can tell him of the loving heavenly Father who made him and all the things about him. She can impress upon him in a multitude of ways and by many ordinary incidents in his daily life the necessity of being pure, kind, and true in his conduct.

When he climbs upon her knee in the evening and pleads for a story she can pour into most attentive ears the many beautiful Bible stories that tell of God's love, his power and might as well as of the blessings that have come to men through faith on his name.

And when her child is old enough to go to Sunday school, she can remind him of the lesson that he may not forget. While he is unable to read, she must be his helper in the preparation of the lesson; and after he can read, she still needs to remind him of the duty so easily forgotten amid the attractiveness of play.

Mothers have duties of this kind. They must share the blame if their young children go to Sunday school late, with lessons unprepared, without their pennies for the offerings.

A week is so long to a little child that he often forgets entirely what his teacher asks him to do in preparing his lesson unless his mother at home acts as his faithful mentor and prompts him to do his part.

A mother can do much in this way to benefit her children and to teach them, even though she may not be able to attend the Sunday school. Should she be able to go herself is there any place for her in the ranks of the teachers?

It is sometimes urged that young teachers should be chosen for young children, because they find it easy to come down to the child's level, because they can adapt themselves readily to childish modes of thought and expression.

There is no doubt some truth in this and young girl-teachers can do good work, but is it not reasonable to believe that the mother who "lives with her children," having her attention daily centered upon them and their studies, their plays, their joys and their sorrows, habits, and all that is common to child-life, has all the qualifications possessed by the young girl-teacher, while she has, in addition, the earnestness, the discretion and discrimination, the prudence, the patience, the self-control that usually are stronger in us in maturity than in youth?

Is it not reasonable to believe that the girl who is "a good teacher" in her early youth will be a better teacher when her heart and mind have expanded and broadened under the experiences of life and the discipline of gospel law? Can she not teach with a deeper realization of its truth of the boundless love of the heavenly Father after she has experienced in her own heart the love of a parent for her children?

One point not to be overlooked, however, is this: There are women, not mothers, who, had they been, would have been model mothers, so strong in them are the natural mother instincts. And on the other hand we sometimes are made painfully aware that some women are poorly qualified to be mothers in the high sense of the word.

There are children who find in some kind kindergarten teacher, not a mother, more of the elements of true mother-love and more wise guidance than they find in her whom they call mother.

It is the mother in heart and not only the mother in name who is to be sought out and such are the natural teachers of little children.

Miscellaneous Department.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of Northern District of California; Greeting:—The year 1899 is drawing to a close, and I am expected to make a report of what funds you have put into my hands as agent for the Bishop, and what use has been made of it. I would respectfully ask any who are contemplating paying tithes or offerings to do so at as early a date as practicable, so it may be included in this year's report.

The church is in need of money to extend its ministerial force. The burden of furnishing it rests with those who have it.

We are under solemn obligation as "laborers with God," as "stewards in his house," to do our part in this matter, under the law. No one is exempt. See Doctrine and Covenants, section 70: 3: "Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God."

First, man is to "love God with all his might, mind, and strength," and make all his offerings based upon this love. "And love his neighbor as himself." To my mind, when we sense what God has done for us and will do, in the gift of his Spirit, it is not so hard to do as we might at first think. Who can help loving God, in contemplation of his love and opportunities offered to us?

All we have and are, he gave us, or put within our reach, and made it possible for us to obtain by putting forth proper effort.

It is mandatory that we pay the Lord one tenth of all we have, and then after that, one tenth of all our increase. It is just as binding on us as it was for us to be baptized to join God's church. The Lord says that we can prove him by honoring this law. We can prove him in this, just as much as we can or did in gaining the knowledge of this truth in the first place.

Our acceptance with God, is dependent upon obedience to the whole law, not a part of it. It will take or require the operation of the whole of the "perfect law" to make us like it—that is perfect. "Man shall not live by bread alone." No; he shall not only honor part of the great plan devised for his redemption, but all of it.

Well, please send your tithes and offerings by the last of November, if you can. Trusting you may find it a pleasing duty, and that you may do it in the manner that will bring what has been designed in the law, I remain your collaborer in bonds,

CHAS. A. PARKIN, Bishop's Agent.
SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.,
No. 3010 North Sixteenth Street.

Brethren and Sisters of North and South Dakota; Greeting:—Having been appointed Bishop's agent for the two States, I deem it my duty to respectfully call the attention of the saints to the matter of tithing.

I trust that all will make an effort to comply with the law of God as far as their ability will permit.

Branch officers, please make a special effort in this direction, teaching the law to the saints. Any needed instruction or counsel will be given by any of the missionary force, including Bro. James Caffall, in the neighborhood of Clifford; Bro. Swenson in the Bottineau, Turtle Mountain Country; Bro. Walling in the south and central parts of this State; or by addressing me at Clifford, Traill County, North Dakota, where all remittances may be sent.

BORN.

MAITLAND.—To Bro. William T. and Sr. Carrie E. Maitland, at Bevier, Missouri, August 26, 1899, a son. Blessed October 1, by Elders J. A. Tanner and Charles Perry, and named Gomer Evan.

HILLYER.—To Bro. Chester and Sr. May Hillyer, of Solomon, Iowa, June 6, 1897, a son, named Ralph McKinley. Also, a son, January 21, 1899, named Robert Shanner. Blessed October 6, 1899, by Elder Henry Kemp.

MARRIED.

ECHTERNACHT—LIGHT.—At the home of the bride's parents, in Hall County, Nebraska, Mr. Frank J. Echternacht and Miss Hattie E. Light, both of Hall County, Elder C. E. Blodgett officiating. Among the guests present were Mrs. D. F. Lambert and daughter, of Lamoni, Iowa, aunt and cousin of the bride. A bountiful feast was served to a peaceful waiting of near relatives and friends of bride and groom. The presents were numerous, valuable, and useful articles incident to married life. May a loving, peaceful, happy, and prosperous life be theirs to enjoy, was the wish of all present.

CLITES—MALLARY.—At the home of the bridegroom's parents, near Red Oak, Iowa, October 8, 1899, Bro. Warren C. Clites to Miss Ada Mallary. Quite a number of relatives and friends of this young couple were present to witness the ceremony, and many useful articles were presented to them, which added to the happiness of the day, as they now start out in life. Long may they live to enjoy peace and prosperity, with a desire to work the works of righteousness, is the prayer of all who love and knew them. Elder Henry Kemp spoke the mystic words that made them one.

DIED.

BENNETT.—Bro. Alma Bennett was born at Stockton, California, or Palisade, Nevada, October 19, 1864; died at Lamoni, Iowa, October 23, 1899, being 35 years and 4 days old at time of death. He was not a stout man but energetic. A complication of diseases affected him for some time, and suffered from a paralytic stroke. His father died when he was in infancy, and his mother when he was but ten years old, and he was brought up by Bro. William Cunningham.

Altogether his life was a disappointing and hard one. On May 4, 1884, he was married to Miss Mary J. Brantwait. Six children have been born to them, three boys and three girls; two of the boys were drowned some five months ago. They have a young babe five weeks old. Bro. Bennett was an industrious citizen but never was able to amass wealth. His standing in the community is said to have been of the best. One of his neighbors stated to me, that if Bro. Bennett does not go to heaven he didn't know who would. This is a pleasant comment upon a man at the close of the journey of life. Bro. Bennett united with the church about nineteen years ago, at Davis City, Iowa, being baptized by Elder B. V. Springer. He has resided in Lamoni about ten years, hence is well known. He was a wood turner by trade, but being no work of that kind done here, he worked as a laborer. He was devoted to his family, and did what he could to make home and life pleasant for them. Bro. Bennett will be missed from the home circle and the community. He rests secure in the saints' hope. His family is entitled to the sympathy and warm friendship of saints and friends. Funeral sermon by Elder W. H. Kelley.

JONES.—At Galena, Kansas, October 13, 1899, Charles H., son of Bro. Frank and Sr. Alice Jones, aged 1 year, 8 months, and 16 days. A beautiful, bright child, whose stay on earth seemed so brief. Funeral services conducted by Elder Thomas Haden of Galena.

WHEATON.—Sr. Wealtha A., wife of Bro. R. P. Wheaton, died at her home in Chase, Michigan, October 11, 1899, aged 56 years. She united with the church in an early day, came to Chase in the year 1875, where she lived until her death. She was a kind and loving mother, an affectionate companion, and a person very highly esteemed by her neighbors and friends. She was the mother of eleven children, two have preceded her to the spirit land, while nine are left to mourn. The funeral services were held in Chase Baptist church, Elder W. D. Ellis preaching the discourse. Her remains were laid to rest in East Chase cemetery, there to await the resurrection of the just, when the righteous dead shall come forth in the likeness of their Redeemer.

BEAIRD.—At East St. Louis, Illinois, in the hospital, September 7, 1899, Bro. James William Beaird; was born May 11, 1870; baptized when between eight and nine years old. Interment at Belleville, Illinois, funeral by Elder J. D. White.

ROSS.—Robert Kinmins Ross, was born September 22, 1881, at Mound City, Missouri; baptized August 2, 1891; died October 10, 1899, aged 18 years and 18 days. A father, mother, four brothers, and one sister are left to mourn. Funeral sermon in the Dunkard church, by Elder J. Arthur Davis, assisted by Elder M. F. Gowell. Interment in Dunkard cemetery. This young man was respected by all. He has gone to his reward.

WILLIAMSON.—Chauncey Williamson died at his home in Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 9, 1899, aged 76 years, 4 months, and 16 days. Baptized August 18, 1862; ordained a priest October 11, 1863. Bro. Williamson was faithful unto death. Funeral sermon by C. J. Hunt; R. Wight in charge.

PENCE.—At Runnells, Iowa, October 18, 1899, Sr. Julia Ann (Norris) Pence, wife of doctor and Bro. William L. Pence. She was born at Indianapolis, Indiana, February 16, 1837; was married to Dr. Pence at Newton, Iowa, July, 1874. After being a member of the Church of the Disciples for a number of years she heard the gospel preached as restored, and accepting the greater light, was baptized by Elder C. Scott, October 20, 1895. Always meek, gentle, and earnest, she died in the hope of a glorious rest. Funeral from the saints' chapel, conducted by Elder C. Scott. Sr. Pence sustained the respect of all who knew her. Husband, younger son Ray, one brother, and one sister survive her.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to, and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of the Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

THE "NECESSARY" MAGAZINE

The best-informed men and women in the world use the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS to keep well informed, and call it the "necessary" and "indispensable" magazine. In the busy rush of to-day ambitious men and women must know about the important questions of the month, and not only this, they want to know about them at the right time. When the whole country is puzzled over the gigantic combination of trusts, a well-informed article is printed in the AMERICAN MONTHLY, giving the facts, and its editor discusses the theory; when the Dreyfus affair is in everyone's mouth, the best story of Dreyfus and the great case comes out in this magazine.

Every month, in "The Progress of the World," Dr. Albert Shaw gives a comprehensive picture of the world's history during the previous thirty days. In the departments, the valuable articles and books that have been published during the past month are reviewed and quoted from, so that the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY can get the gist of them. In every issue nearly a hundred pictures are printed, including the portraits of the men and women who are making the history of the month.

To be thoroughly well informed helps any man or woman in his or her work. A subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS represents an investment for the best kind of profit, as well as entertainment. One subscriber has just written: "Count me a life subscriber, and when you send me a number beyond the limit of my subscription and secure no renewal from me, consider it a notice of my death."

IS THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST A MYTH?

Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D., president of Union Theological Seminary, holds, with St. Paul, that the whole system of Christianity must stand or fall with the resurrection of Jesus. In the Easter Sunday edition of The Times (New York) he discussed the authenticity of the accounts of that resurrection, and the attacks made upon it, especially those made in the present century.

He pays attention, first, to the rationalistic explanation that Christ was in a deep swoon when entombed, and, being revived by the odor of spices, left the tomb and sought his followers. The most effective answer ever given to this, says Dr. Hall, was that made by Strauss in his "Leben Jesu" as follows:—

"One who had thus crept forth half dead from the grave, and crawled about, a sickly patient, who had need of medical and surgical assistance, of nursing and strengthening, but who, notwithstanding, finally succumbed to his sufferings (for on this theory Jesus subsequently must have died like other men), could never have given the disciples the impression that he was the conqueror over the grave and death, and the Prince of Life. Such a recovery could only have weakened, or at least given a pathetic tinge to, the impression which he had made upon them by his life and death; but it can not possibly have changed their sorrow into ecstasy, and raised their reverence into worship."

Taking up then the explanations made by Strauss himself and Renan, Dr. Hall thus describes their position and makes reply to it:—

"The rationalistic theory denies that he died, and claims that he merely became unconscious, and that he regained consciousness on the third day. The mythical theory asserts that he died on the cross, like any other man, and that the myth of his resurrection was an afterthought circulated by his adherents as a desperate but successful expedient for the recovery of a lost cause. The two great apologists of the mythical theory were Dr. David Friedrich Strauss, whose first edition of 'The Life of Jesus' appeared at Tübingen in 1835, and M. Ernest Renan, member of the Institute of France, whose 'History of the Origins of Christianity' (in which 'The Life of Jesus,' 'The Apostles,' and 'St. Paul' were successively considered on lines somewhat parallel with those of Strauss, but with differentiations of style and method), constituted a brilliant summary of New-Testament interpretation from the point of view of French materialism.

"The position of Strauss in reference to the alleged resurrection of Christ is that the myth of the resurrection was invented by the disciples in order to substantiate before the world their earlier belief in him as the Messiah. The following sentences, taken from the English translation of the fourth German edition of Strauss's 'Life of Jesus,' set forth his view:—

"In order to form a correct judgment on this subject, we must transport ourselves into the situation and frame of mind into which the disciples of Jesus were thrown by his death. During several years' intercourse with them he had constantly impressed them more and more decidedly with the belief that he was the Messiah; but his death, which they were unable to reconcile with their messianic ideas, had for the moment annihilated this belief. Now when, after the first shock was past, the earlier impression began to revive, there spontaneously arose in them the psychological necessity of solving the contradiction between the ultimate fate of Jesus and their earlier opinion of him—of adopting into their idea of the Messiah the characteristics of suffering and death. What was more natural to the disciples than to reinstate their earlier Jewish ideas (which the death of Jesus had disturbed) through the medium of an actual revivification of their dead Master, to imagine him as returning to life in the manner of a resurrection? When once the idea of a resurrection of Jesus had been formed in this manner, the great event could not be allowed to have happened so simply, but must be surrounded and embellished with all the pomp which the Jewish imagination furnished."—(Quoted from vol. 3, pp. 370, 371, 374, ed. London, 1846)

"The position of Renan concerning what he describes as 'the origin of the legends relating to the resurrection,' is fully stated in his book on 'The Apostles,' but it can be comprehensively ascertained from the closing sentences of his twenty-sixth chapter on 'The Life of Jesus':—

"The cry, 'He is risen!' ran among the disciples like lightning. Love gave it everywhere facile credence. The life of Jesus to the historian ends with his last sigh. But so deep was the trace which he had left in the hearts of his disciples and of a few devoted women that for week to come he was to them living and consoling. Had his body been taken away, or did enthusiasm, always credulous, afterward generate the mass of accounts by which faith in the resurrection was sought to be established? This, for want of peremptory evidence, we shall never know. We may say, however, that the strong imagination of Mary Magdalen here enacted a principal part. Divine power of love! sacred moments in which the passion of a hallucinated woman gives to the world a resurrected God!"—(Quoted from pp. 356, 357, American ed., 1873)

"Such, fairly indicated in the work of its own chief apologists, is the mythical theory of the event upon which the whole structure of the Christian church is built. The myth of the resurrection, according to Strauss, originated in the luxuriant imagination of a few Jews; according to Renan, the Parisian, 'the passion of a hallucinated woman gives to the world a resurrected God.'

"But it is to be borne in mind that the Gospel accounts of the resurrection constitute but a small part of the biblical testimony concerning contemporary belief in the actual rising of Jesus Christ from the dead. The Epistles of the New Testament represent first-century thought on this subject; and lest it be supposed by any that an enthusiasm for Christian truth leads one to overstate the credibility of the Epistles as historical documents, it is well to remember what degree of historical credibility is conceded to some of the Epistles by the readers of the mythical theory of the resurrection. In his work on St. Paul (p. 9, American ed., 1881), Renan, after asserting the legendary character of the earlier part of the book of the Acts, says:—

"The Acts, up to this so legendary, suddenly becomes quite substantial; the last chapters, composed in part of the account of an eye-witness, are the only completely historical narrative of the first years of Christianity in our possession. Finally, by a privilege very rare in such a subject, these years offer us dated documents, of absolute authenticity; a series of letters, the most important of which are proofs against all criticism, and which have never undergone any interpolations."

NOVEMBER METEORS.

"These 'dated documents of absolute authenticity which are proof against all criticism, and which have never undergone any interpolations,' are described by Renan (p. 10) as the 'Epistles unquestionable and unquestioned, namely, the Epistle to the Galatians, the two Epistles to the Corinthians, and the Epistle to the Romans.' As to the dates of these 'unquestionable and unquestioned' documents, Bishop Westcott says ('Gospel of the Resurrection,' p. 108): 'The most extreme opinions fix them between A. D. 52-59, that is, under no circumstances more than thirty years after the Lord's death (A. D. 30-33). There can then be no doubt as to the authority of their evidence as expressing the received opinion of Christians at this date, and there can be no doubt as to the opinion itself. In each of the Epistles the literal fact of the resurrection is the implied or acknowledged groundwork of the Apostle's teaching.' An explicit statement concerning the literal death and the literal resurrection of Christ occurs in one of these 'unquestionable and unquestioned' sources of information (1 Epistle to the Corinthians, 15: 3-7)."

Dr. Hall lays stress upon the fact that, though this mythical theory has been before the world for many years, yet the Gospel account of the resurrection is held by "more people than ever before in the world's history." He maintains also that the time has gone by when the burden of proof in this matter rests upon Christians. The mass of evidence in behalf of the Gospel account has shifted the burden of proof upon those who deny it. It is for them to prove that Christ is not risen and that Christianity is founded upon a myth. Dr. Hall concludes as follows:—

"The burden of proof is on the critics of Christianity. It is for them to account for Christianity on some theory more credible than that which underlies the Catholic faith. Safely may we test the reasonableness of supernatural religion by Hume's test of a miracle: 'To establish a miracle, the testimony should be of such a kind that its falsehood would be more miraculous than the fact which it endeavors to establish.' (Quoted by Prebendary Wace in 'The Gospel and His Witness,' p. 44.) To account for Christian experience and for the Christian church without the resurrection of Christ from the dead requires a theory more miraculous than the theory of the Catholic faith. Christianity founded upon a myth would be ten thousand times more wonderful than Christianity founded upon a Christ who rose from the dead. It is not we Christians who must prove that he rose. Let them who deny his resurrection prove that he did not rise."—Literary Digest.

The expected return of the main body of the November meteors dwarfs every other astronomical event this fall. The splendor of their display, in 1833, made so deep an impression that they have ever since occupied a place apart in the popular imagination as the most gorgeous and startling of all celestial pageants. The fact that three of their periods measure just the span of a century tends to add to their reputation as a spectacle. Although their returns are separated by a space of thirty-three years and a fraction yet they may be seen three times in the course of man's life. One who saw them as a child, in 1833, might have regarded their fiery menace with the cooler judgment of a middle-aged man in 1866, and, this year, may behold again the scene that marked the start and the turning post of his life with ineffaceable memories of wonders in the heavens.

But, while everybody hopes for a brilliant spectacle on this occasion, there are reasons for anticipating a possible disappointment. In 1866 the display, although imposing, was by no means as wonderful as it had been in 1833. The fact that the meteors were almost as abundant in 1867 as in 1866 showed that they were being scattered along their path. Later investigations indicate that this scattering of the meteors has probably continued ever since. The planet Jupiter, the great perturber of the solar system, has had his hand upon them. They are apparently traveling in several shoals, or parallel streams, and it may be that when the earth crosses their line of march it will fail to pass through any very dense column of the wanderers.

Yet, at the worst, it is certain that there will be a meteoric "shower." There may be only a hundred, or a few hundred, visible in an hour, or there may be many thousands. One unfortunate circumstance will be the presence of a strong moonlight, which will suffice to conceal many small meteors and to rob the larger ones of much of their brilliance. The maximum of the display is generally expected soon after midnight on the morning of November 16, and at that time the moon will be within twenty-eight hours of the full phase. At one o'clock a. m., November 16, the moon will be in the constellation Aries, about two hours west of the meridian, while the radiant point of the meteors, in Leo, will be about two hours from its rising point in the northeast.

While the best attainable information points to the first hour of the morning of November 16 as the time when the meteors will be most numerous; yet the data are so uncertain that all observers are advised to be on the watch forty-eight hours earlier. Begin say at midnight on the 13th, and watch until dawn. Resume watching on the following night, and so on until the morning of the 17th. Every watcher for the November meteors on this occasion can have the satisfaction of knowing that his, or her, vigil is being shared, all over the civilized world, by thousands of the brightest spirits, which now inhabit the earth. The solution of the mystery of the November meteors will stand, in the perspective of a thousand years, high among the achievements of man. . . .

MANUAL TRAINING IN THE COLLEGES.

I have no fear that the college will ever cease to draw appropriate and noble inspirations from Athens and Rome. But wise men are anxious to see the colleges of our country brought into closer connection and more vital relations with the industrial and commercial world. It is certainly appropriate that universities should serve American democracy in the most effective way. The variety of tools and machines which men employ is itself an index of civilization. Inventors all over our land are giving their trained intelligences to new devices for improved work, and workmen themselves are stimulated to become inventors. In the breadth, continuance, and intensity of their intellectual life there are manufactories which rank well with colleges. A factory like the famous one conducted by the Pattersons in Dayton, Ohio, is a hive of intensely active and intelligent workers. Here minds are busy and alert, not only to run machines already made, but if possible to make better ones. The masters of great industries confess a trying need for more highly trained intellects, and one of the problems of the future is how to make the college serve the industrial world.

What advantages would follow from planting the manual training school in the midst of the college? It would furnish lacking elements of a liberal education—how seriously lacking many college men whose eyes and hands have never been trained grievously acknowledge. It would of course bring the college into closer touch with the industrial world, and would be especially helpful in enabling the student to discover what he can do best. Thousands of college graduates to-day are third-class ministers, doctors, and lawyers who might have done better if they had earlier discovered their aptitudes. But manual training in the midst of a Christian college, while helping many students to remunerative employment, would be of immense service in the training missionaries for the varied kinds of work which will confront them in Africa and Asia. I do not wonder that those who have studied the effect of the new education in a city like Toledo and have grasped the principles underlying recent educational progress are possessed by a splendid enthusiasm as they consider the possible developments in wealth, happiness, refinement, mutual good-will, productive power, and world-wide influence by the people of the United States.—From "The Toledo Manual Training School," by President John Henry Barrows, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November.

THE WORK IN CHICAGO AS SEEN BY THE EDITOR.

By a sort of collusion between Brn. E. L. Kelley, John M. Terry, and the Editor we were induced to stop at the great Metropolis of the Middle West, and stay to attend the services held in the city.

We reached the city from holding services at Galien, Michigan, Wednesday evening, the 25th, coming in on Thursday at eleven a. m. That night we attended the weekly prayer service held at No. 1267 North Halsted Street, in company with Bro. J. M. Terry and wife, who now reside at 1402 Wrightwood Avenue. We found a goodly number in attendance, the meeting being presided over by Bro. Frederick Mormon (Where did that name come from?) Pitt, son of Bro. F. G. Pitt, now absent in England on a mission there. Bro. F. M. is a coming man, of excellent presence and ability; who is at work in the church and Sunday school departments, to good results. May his shadow never grow less, but the number like him ever increase.

From the prayer meeting to the home of Bro. Elmer E. Johnson, 1972 North Marshfield Avenue, was but a step—in the street car—and we were at home, with Sr. Grace and hostess.

After an all day's visit at Bro. J. M. Terry's, Friday, the 26th, enforced by a rainy day, we accompanied Bro. John to the Ancient Apostolic Mission, as it is called by Bro. George H. Graves, who as an elder is busily at work among his own, the colored, race. We had not met Bro. Graves for many years, and so were not surprised to find that from a slender, straight, and lithe young man he had developed into a tall, portly man in middle life. His mission place is called by Bro. Terry "the Graves Mission," because it is the field of work of Bro. Graves. It is at 1802 Armour Avenue.

Bro. Graves lives in the mission house with his at present invalid wife, and seems to be trying earnestly to carry on a good gospel campaign among his fellows. He has succeeded in getting a number to hear and obey, and those whom we saw are rather an intelligent looking people.

By the appointment of Bro. Terry, we addressed the audience of those in and out of the church, upon the reasons of our hope, taking for a text, one of the mottoes tacked to the wall, "Our God is not slack to remember his promise." We had a good degree of liberty and the congregation was in a receptive and responsive mood. We here met Brn. G. H. Henley, of West Pullman, S. C. Good, Brn. William Strange, Laing, Deam, Lang, Robinson, Williams, and a number of others whose names are crowded out by the rush of the many whose faces followed in quick succession—too many to remember all at once. We enjoyed the occasion, and the occasion had been of mutual benefit.

On Saturday, the 28th, the rain continued, so all we could accomplish was to visit the Field Museum in Jackson Park, a relic of the Great World's Fair, of great interest. The departments of Ethnology, of the various countries to be found there, gives a good idea of the peoples and their advancement in the ways of human life.

One of the most interesting exhibits was the one in which the Human Beasts of burden, and the means of transportation, from the primitive chair carried on the back of an Indian, and the various burdens carried by men in bundles and boxes, to the sedan and jinrikisha, and palanquin carried by two bearers.

Then the carrying by water vessels, from the bundle of reeds, the raft, the canoe with paddles, and those with sail and an outrigger, to the luxurious gondola of Venice, the Roman barge and the trireme, all the way up to the modern yacht and line steamer.

From this to the wheeled carriers, from the primitive one wheel barrow, through the goat and donkey cart, the ox carts of various nations, the cart of the Red River region of the Northwest made without a bit of iron in its structure with its companion of Mexican origin, of a similar but much ruder construction drawn by the patient bullock, fastened to their load by a straight stick borne on their head back of the horns secured by rawhide thongs to the horns. We could almost hear these primitive carts groan, complain, and shriek, as their huge clumsy wheels wrought out of the block, turned on their ungreased axles as they were drawn along the dusty roads in bearing the burdens of their owners to the markets of civilization. From these to the cariole of Spain, the sledge of Funchal to the Russian drosky and the buggy and carriage of our civilized world, was a transition so unique and strange as to possess a weird interest to the mind wearied with labor.

No less interesting was it to trace by successive steps, in actual demonstration, the transition of the saddle from two flat pieces tied together by thongs and placed across the back of the ass, or horse, up to the elaborate saddle of the cowboy and the army officer.

And again of fascinating study was the evolution of the railway locomotive from the earliest, rudest appliances of steam to rude wheeled carriages moved by steam for carrying burdens, and the primitive flat rail, and peculiar roadbed; all the way up to the finished car, richly appointed for the use of the wealthy and luxurious, with the dates given of each advancing improvement, and the country where made. But "time is short and art is long," so—

Saturday evening we were the guest of Bro. and Sr. Eric Johnson at their home 1950, Marshfield Avenue, for supper, Bro. E. E. and Sr. Grace Johnson accompanying us.

On Sunday morning the storm had passed; the sun rose clear; and it was a joy to be alive.

At 10:45 a. m. we greeted a house full of saints and inquirers at 3411 Cottage Grove Avenue, an hour and a quarter's ride on the "cable cars," south from the city center, or Bro. Johnson's residence. Here we met Brn. Cooper, Strange, Deam, Wainwright, Laing, Pement, with a number of brothers and sisters whom we had not met for years; all of whom we were glad to see and know that they still had their faces set Zionward. We talked to them an hour about the gospel salvation and the salvation presented in the New Testament. Many an eye grew moist, and faces grew tender as the Spirit gave utterance and hearing to the word of God.

The mission is called the Laing Mission by Bro. Terry in honor of Bro. Laing, who is one of the principal workers in it; but this appellation Bro. Laing modestly objects to, preferring that it be called anything else, as he feels hardly to be honored in that way, as not deserving of it. But it is not hard to guess that the name will stick.

From the mission back to the hall on Halsted Street we made the ride in the car, accompanied by Sr. Ford, who was making her way to the home of Bro. Fred M. Pitt, at 1472 North Halsted, where she was temporarily engaged as a helper. We attended the afternoon preaching at the hall, by Bro. Terry, which was good.

We had dined at Bro. E. J. Laing's at the mission, and so were hardly ready for supper at Bro. Pitt's; but it was in order, so with congenial spirits, Bro. Terry and wife, Bro. Benson, Bro. Pitt, Sr. Grace Williams, and others to fill the table, we ate the food that sustains life.

We attended the Religio prayer service at six p. m., led by Brn. James S. Kier and Elmer Johnson, in which the Spirit of prayer and testimony prevailed. It was both interesting and cheering this evidence of life in Christ Jesus borne by the young in years. There are coming men and women in the Chicago branch.

At 7:45 p. m. we essayed to address the hall well filled with earnest and inquiring hearers. We told them the story of the church as we had learned it, and gave the reasons, or some of them, why we had taken the position and the course we had.

We had a number of elders from Utah present. These are principally young men, of Scandinavian parentage. Some thirty-six of them are in the city now. Whether they were edified or disturbed by our speech we do not know. We talked of our own work and views, not of theirs.

Bro. F. M. Cooper has been trying to get into a discussion with them; but we doubt if he will succeed. We look for them to report to their press an account of meeting with us; and hope, for the sake of honesty and truth, they will not misrepresent us. We treated of the subject fairly, affirmatively and without aspersion of men or motives.

Take our visit to the city of Chicago, as a whole, and it has been very encouraging, and the outlook for the onward march of the truth is apparently good. Bro. John M. Terry has a number of good workers; and will, if the Lord permits, make a telling effort for success. His prayer, like ours and all lovers of the work is, "That the Lord of the harvest will send more laborers into his vineyard."

JOHN T. KINNAMAN DEAD.

From a copy of the St. Joseph Herald for October 31, handed to us by Bro. Charles Brackenbury, we quote the following notice of the death of Bro. John T. Kinnaman, so long known among the saints as "Bro. Kinnaman the singer."

We regret the passing of Bro. John, and express the sympathy of the saints with the family in their great loss:—

PROMINENT FARMER AND OLD RESIDENT OF PLATTE PURCHASE.

John Thomas Kinnaman, aged seventy years, died at his home several miles from Stewartsville, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. He was an old resident of the Platte Purchase and had lived on the farm where he died for twenty-four years.

The deceased was the father of Officer M. Kinnaman, of the police force, of D. C. Kinnaman, who is in the restaurant business here, and of Mrs. Newt Collins, also of St. Joseph. They, with their families, went to Stewartsville Saturday and Sunday. Police Officers Clayborne, Berenberg, and Duncan drove to Stewartsville yesterday to attend the funeral.

The services were held at one o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. H. O. Smith, of the Latter Day Saints' Church of this city, assisted by Wm. Lewis, also of St. Joseph.

The deceased was one of the best known farmers and stockraisers of De Kalb County. He was well known in this city, where a number of his relatives reside.

"RESIST NOT EVIL."

One of the most striking, and at present discouraging phases of our work, referring to the general church work and not to the special features of it under our editorial care is the tendency to resist any and all sorts of things said and done by others, which may seem to be, or really may be contrary to our views, or have the appearance of being intended to be aimed at us in a personal, physical, moral, or doctrinal way.

Instead of quietly parrying the supposed thrust, or permitting the hasty word to pass unnoticed, the tendency is to resist and put ourselves on the defensive—standing on our rights, as it were.

The words quoted as the caption must have been intended for good; as the one who uttered them declared that for every idle word that a man should speak, he should give an account in the day of judgment; hence, he would not, evidently did not speak this idly. What did he mean? The language is found in "the sermon on the mount;" and is part of the comparison between the ethics of moral conduct under the old code called the moral law as interpreted by Moses, and the ethics of the gospel; or Christian philosophy.

From the context it is easy to draw the conclusion that the lesson which the Savior sought to impress upon the disciples, was the uselessness, possibly sinfulness of contention and strife. These arise from the latent disposition to resist, to strike back, when assailed. Hence the teaching: "If a man smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." "If a man compel thee to go with him a mile, go with him a mile." "If a man sue thee at the law and take away thy coat; let him have it." All of which teaching but emphasizes, "Resist not evil."

Let the innuendoes pass unnoticed; be slow to take offense, and cherish resentment not at all, toward any. Byron has it in the Doge of Venice, "Resentment is for reptiles, not men."

It is foolish to be always ready to resent a slight, a slur, or an innuendo that may or may not have point or pith. Such can only do harm by being noticed and much if by an essayed defense.

Live above the actions that would give occasion for open rebuke, and neither the sneers of the foolish, the slurs of the envious, nor the false aspersions of the slanderer can harm you.

Quarrels come of attack and defense, either open or covert. So that, if a man, a Christian be the object of attack, he can afford to wait the abatement of the malice of the attack, when his cause rights itself by the lapse of time.

So, let the Savior's words have place, "Resist not evil."

ROBERTS AND POLYGAMY.

Whether the public press is properly a conservator of the public morals, or not, it is quite certain that much that is calculated to show the trend of a popular and just sentiment in society is reflected from the current news journals of the time.

What follows below may serve as an instance of this:—

Brigham Young, son of the great Mormon leader, attributes the arrest of five Mormons of Richfield, Utah, on the charge of polygamy, to the activity of a correspondent of a New York newspaper which has been waging a war against the Mormons for several months. Mr. Young is at the Grand Pacific Hotel.

"The men arrested," he said, "belong to that class which has refused to abandon the wives they took before polygamy was abolished in 1890. They feel duty-bound to support the women who bear their names, and feel that they are violating no law in so doing. I know positively that there are no more plural marriages in the church."—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 25, '99.

We may not know positively whether Mr. Young is correctly reported in this statement, but give it as we found it. And as it is like the statements hitherto made by President Snow and others who have excused those who have defied the law, in spirit at least, we may believe that the sentiment expressed is the prevalent one among the leading men of the Utah Church, and hence Mr. Young may have easily said what is credited to him in the statement. It has a curious look, anyway.

NO ROOM FOR A POLYGAMIST.

Though it be a truism it is still true, at the bottom of everything that is good in our civilization are the purity and integrity of the home.

If the British House of Commons, for instance, should admit to its membership an open and avowed polygamist all the world would stare at the fact. And the moral influence of it would go far and last long. Should our American Congress admit or harbor a polygamist it would mean a great deal. The fact would become notorious throughout the world. Japan, just now taken into the fellowship of the civilized nations, would quickly catch at it. There is already such a tinge as the public sentiment of the world, and its light beats more and more fiercely on whatever comes to the front in every land. The action which the American Congress will presently have to take in regard to the admission of Polygamist Roberts of Utah will be no exception.

Roberts is an avowed, unrepentant, determined polygamist. And yet Utah was admitted into the Union on the express condition that polygamy should be forever prohibited. And the constitution of that State does prohibit it. In no other State is polygamy tolerated. In every State it is a punishable crime. American civilization has from the beginning treated it as a heinous offense, a scandal to decency and the social order, fundamentally at variance with every idea of good homes. Modern civilization in every country regards it in the same light.

This is in no proper sense a religious question; it is a social question, and one which every well-organized nation or community is bound to deal with.

For the State of Utah, in view of the history of its admission into the Union, to send an open and avowed polygamist to represent it in our national Congress is not only an act of shameless perfidy, an indelible blot on its own honor, but is an insult to Congress and to the entire country. One cannot imagine how it could have perpetrated a grosser insult.

For the United States Congress to allow such an insult to be consummated would be an act of national stupidity. In allowing itself to be trifled with in that way it would betray an insensibility and moral obtuseness that would shame the country before the world. And it would be for Congress to make itself a participant in the crime.

Nothing is plainer than that Congress has the right to judge of the fitness of its members and the constitutional power to protect itself in the matter. Even if Congress could not refuse to accept a Representative-elect on his credentials, it has the unquestioned right instantly to expel him as a man disqualified to hold a seat in such a body. It is none too soon to have the facts brought to the attention of the people. Women have done well in moving in the matter. When the time comes for Congressional action there should be no quibbling and no unnecessary delay.

If the right thing is done in the right way, and done promptly, the lesson will be a wholesome one.—Chicago Tribune, Oct. 25, 1899.

This is from one of the leading papers of the Western Middle States; and certainly reflects the sentiment of the people among whom this journal and others of its kind circulate.

Quite lately we have seen that prosecutions have been urged against some prominent men in the Utah Church for crimes or misdemeanors against law. Angus M. Cannon, a leading man, and president of the local church organization; Heber J. Grant, a wealthy and influential political man, and one of the Twelve Apostles of the Utah Church, have been arraigned, convicted, by confession, and fined, under the statutes; Lorenzo Snow, the aged President of the Church, has been complained of and barely escaped prosecution because of an informality in the complaint; and complaint is filed against B. H. Roberts, congressman-elect from Utah, for a similar offense against the law; all of which has a peculiar and significant look.

It is said that Joseph Smith was made the subject of complaint and prosecution some thirty odd times; but was not convicted of any offense; except that of assault and battery upon some man, at Kirtland, Ohio, the particulars of which we do not know; hence cannot say how, or what provoked the assault. And so uniformly was the innocence of Joseph Smith from just accusation known and acknowledged, that when last arraigned and voluntarily consenting to incarceration in jail upon a charge of conspiracy and treason, his accusers joined the unlawful band of murderers and killed him with the confession upon their lips: "The law will not touch them; but powder and ball will."

What a spectacle is presented. The leading men of a religious body publicly arraigned for offenses against the law of the land and publicly acknowledging by confession that they are guilty. And this too, with the injunction of the Lord through revelation published and known to the church for over sixty years.

That these lawbreakers, in spirit, as in fact, are in any sense justified under the plea that they took their plural wives before the Manifesto in 1890, is a mistake in morals. The offense with which they were charged, unlawful cohabitation, under Utah statutes, has its equivalent offense laid down in the statutes of Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Missouri, and other States as "lewd and lascivious cohabitation" and "bastardy;" and prosecutions in such States under the statutes for these offenses, if conviction is had, are not only followed by the penalties prescribed in the law, but the social order of society stamps the culprits with the brand of immorality; a departure from the code of morals, which obtains everywhere in civilized countries.

This code, this sentiment, is voiced by the Tribune in the editorial which we quote.

We confess that we cannot help a feeling and sense of shame, when we think of so-called men of God, posing before their own people and the world as religious leaders, apostles of the Lamb, exponents of the gospel, being charged and convicted of offenses against the command "Thou shalt not commit adultery; nor do anything like unto it." If they feel no shame, it must be that persistence in an erroneous dogma and practice has seared the conscience beyond shame.

WHAT MAKES THE DIFFERENCE?

Several writers on "Mormonism" in referring to the Hill of Cumorah, from which it is stated and believed that the plates of the Book of Mormon were taken by Joseph Smith by divine command and permission, have stated that the various stories concerning the digging of holes all over the eastern country by Joseph Smith, in searching for buried treasure, must be true, for there is the hill and the remains of holes in it as well as elsewhere, etc.

Now Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser has visited the Hill, and finds in that visit and what he saw and heard, confirmation of the statements made by the Prophet of Palmyra, concerning the finding of the plates, and of the truth of the work done by the prophet and his coworkers in establishing the work known as the latter-day work.

AMERICAN ARCHÆOLOGY.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, of the committee on American archæology, hands us the following evidences from Mr. Markham, the eminent writer on American archæology. They are valuable:—

PERUVIAN TRADITION.

They had no knowledge of writing, but in the house of the Sun, kept near Cuzco, they had the life of each one of Incas, with the lands they conquered, painted with figures on certain boards, and also their origin. Among these paintings, the following fable was represented: In the life of Manco Capac, who was the first Inca, and from whom they began to be called the children of the Sun, and to worship the Sun, they had a full account of the deluge. They say that all creatures and all created things perished in it, insomuch that the water rose above all the highest mountains in the world. No living thing survived, except a man and a woman, who remained in a box; and when the waters subsided, the wind carried them to Huanaco [Te-huanaco], which will be over seventy leagues from Cuzco, a little more or less.—"The Rights and Laws of the Incas," by C. R. Markham, p. 4.

PERUVIAN PRAYER IN THE DAYS OF THE INCAS.

"O Creator! [O conquering Viracocha! Ever present Viracocha!] Thou who art without equal, unto the ends of the earth! Thou who givest life and strength to mankind, saying, Let this be a man and let this be a woman. And as thou sayest, so thou givest life, and vouchsafest that men shall live in health and peace, and free from danger! Thou who dwellest in the highest heaven, in the thunder, and in the storm clouds, hear us. Have us in thy keeping, and receive this our offering, as it shall please thee, O Creator! "Translation from Christoval de Molina of The Fables and Rites of the Incas, by Clemens R. Markham, p. 28.

Garcilaso de la Vega, 1, pp. 65, 66, and 2, pp. 169 and 230, "Says that the first settlement, made in the valley of Cuzco, was on the hill called Huanacauri, and that a temple was built there. It was looked upon as a very sacred place, and was the spot whence races were run." "The Rites and Laws of the Incas. Translated by Clemens R. Markham," p. 13, given as a quotation Garcilaso de la Vega. Translated from Christoval de Molina, report on The Fables and Rites of the Incas.

TAKE NOTICE.

Conference and convention notices, and other matter requiring early insertion in the HERALD, should reach the office not later than Saturday of each week, and earlier if possible.

Because of changes made in mails arriving at Lamoni but little mail matter reaching us early Monday morning can go into the following issue of HERALD, for the reason that the first form of the paper must be printed on Monday morning, leaving but a small portion of space open on the second form, which is printed on Monday afternoon and folded, and stapled, and wrapped, and stamped for mailing on Tuesday afternoon. Under the new mail schedule many will receive the HERALD earlier; but, as stated, only a small portion of matter reaching us as late as Monday morning can be inserted.

Don't forget to get all notices and other matter into our hands by Saturdays—and as much earlier as possible.

Touch the button correctly and we will try to do the rest.

THE ENSIGN—OF AUSTRALIA.

The HERALD editors have received a copy of the initial number of the Ensign, a paper published by the brethren in Australia in the interests of the Australian mission.

The paper is a three-column eight-page quarto, size 9 x 11. It is issued monthly at Sydney, New South Wales and is edited by Bro. Robert McLaughlin. The subject matter of the copy forwarded is instructive, newsy, and bright, and the paper bids fair to prove helpful to the interests of the Australian mission.

It has a large advertising patronage and, as stated by Bro. Wells, a circulation by house-to-house distribution of about three thousand copies.

We trust the paper will prove a power for good in the hands of the brethren and sisters in the southern hemisphere. Success to them and to their every move for good.

The Ensign is published at No. 628 Darling Street, Balmain, Sydney; "within New South Wales, one shilling per annum; outside New South Wales, one shilling and sixpence per annum.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

At a regular branch business meeting a resolution is presented recommending Bro. A. B. to district conference for ordination to the office of elder. The matter is disposed of by a motion to indefinitely postpone. Will this action prevent a consideration of a similar resolution, to recommend the same brother, made at any subsequent business meeting, by the same or other parties?

Ans.—No. The intention of the motion to indefinitely postpone is to remove further consideration of the subject from before the then sitting body. It may be renewed at a subsequent meeting.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The following articles donated to the Saints' Home, through Bro. Frank Criley, at the Woodbine reunion, are gratefully acknowledged on behalf of the Home and those in charge: From Sr. Deborah Chapman, Persia, Iowa, one quilt; Srs. Ella and Lulu Chapman, Persia, napkins and towels; Sr. J. F. Mintun, Little Sioux, one quilt; also one through Bro. Kelley, donor's name not given; Sr. Eliza A. Benefield, Springfield, Nebraska, one comfort. These items represent the good will toward and labor for the Home of the donors. That others who desire to aid that worthy institution may know its necessities, we may state there is not a clock in the building, unless it be a small alarm clock in some private room. Several good clocks could be used to advantage, in the office, dining room, parlors, etc. Knives and forks and small spoons are also needed for the service of the dining room. Address articles forwarded care of Bro. Frank Criley, who will see to their proper care and distribution.

Bro. G. W. Rogers, son of Bro. Israel L. Rogers, of Sandwich, Illinois, writing to Bro. H. A. Stebbins, under date of the 30th ult., states that Bro. Rogers was resting more easily, though still weak and suffering much at times. But little hope of recovery was entertained. They hoped that by prayer in his behalf his remaining days would be free from severe suffering.

Sister Nora Johnston of Cincinnati, Pike County, Illinois, is anxious that some one of the ministry may come to their vicinity. She states that quite a different reception would be accorded an elder now to what would have been in the past. Try it, some elder.

But few men become great; that is, but few as compared with the great mass of mankind. While this is true it should by no means discourage men from an effort to become good. To become good is within the province of all. It is therefore a lawful ambition to endeavor to become good; because of the command, "Be ye good, even as your Father in heaven is good." Therefore, dear brethren, be ye anxious to strive, not only to enter into the straight gate, but also to so emulate the example of the Savior, that you may become good. To be good is to be truly great.

The struggle to be good imposes much self-restraint upon man's evil passions, but the reward is great, for it not only gives present joy but final triumph.

FEED MY SHEEP.

To whom did and does this apply? Who are Christ's sheep? Are they the saints or the honest at heart of the world,—those that would accept the gospel should the opportunity ever be theirs,—or is it both? Did Christ intend for Peter to understand that he must go to the world in search of the sheep that he might feed them? No. Christ said that he was known of his sheep (John 10:14). And there is but one way they can know him, and that is by the Holy Spirit. For it is written that "no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. 12:3). If no man can say that he is the Lord but by the Spirit, how can he know him without it? This testimony can never come to those who have never received the birth of water and the Spirit. In the parable of the sheepfold (John 10:1-3) there is a sheepfold, sheep, a porter or door keeper, and a shepherd. John's disciples are the sheep within this fold. John is the porter at the door, and Christ is the shepherd, and is on the outside, he being of the world, not having as yet received baptism. But when John, the porter, opened the door unto him by baptizing him in Jordan's fountain, and he had received the Holy Spirit which testified that he was the Christ, then he became the true shepherd of the flock. And when the disciples of John (the sheep within this fold) heard his voice, by his teachings of a more perfect way or plan of salvation (John being only a forerunner and not sent to teach the complete law), they were ready to accept and follow him. And he led them out of John's partial or imperfect organization into the more perfect one. For from John's disciples he chose men and ordained them to officiate in certain capacities in his church or kingdom. (John 1:36-51). He of necessity had to do this, else he would not have honored John's calling. Almost the entire following of John went to Christ.

Before Christ's departure he told the disciples that there were other sheep that were not of that fold, them he must also bring, and they should hear his voice, and there should be one fold and one shepherd (John 10:16). That the disciples did not understand him is evident. (Nephi 7:19-22.)

The belief is prevalent with some to-day that Christ had reference to those outside of the kingdom that had a desire to be saved. But Christ had in mind the church partially organized upon this continent (Nephi 7:19), which had been in this semi-organized condition for years. (Mosiah 9:38; Alma 2:3; Nephi 2:54-63.) It was Alma's understanding that before a person could become one of Christ's sheep, they must accept him as their shepherd. (Alma 3:79.) Christ, in speaking of the Jews, spoke of them as lost sheep (Matt. 10:6). They were once of the fold, having been sheep by promise, but had strayed from the fold and became lost sheep, and can never reënter the fold as Christ's except by the door.

The writer has heard it taught publicly by those who should know, that the sheep of Matthew 25:33 were the honorable men of the earth, those who shall have done any act of kindness unto the people of Christ; that the goats were those who would not accept the gospel under any conditions; and that the brethren (verse 40) were the saints. Is this correct? There are three classes of people spoken of—the sheep, the goats, and the brethren—and only two places of occupancy specified, the right and the left. The sheep are the saints of God, and can be no other people, as they are to be awarded the highest or first place of honor that Christ will have to give, that at his right hand; besides he calls them the "blessed of the Father," and "the righteous." (Matt. 25:31-46.) Neither of these terms can be applied correctly to an unbaptized person.

If the argument is made that the brethren are the saints, where are they to be located. They cannot occupy the same space that he does—must be on one side or the other. Christ was "received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God" (Mark 16:19). This is only figurative; expressing the thought that he occupies the highest place of honor. In judgment the entire human family must pass before Christ, and after sentence is passed, will be consigned to his right or left. John, on Patmos, saw in vision "the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. . . . And they were judged every man according to their works."—Rev. 20:12, 13.

This quotation contemplates the fact that the saints will appear at this judgment. The book of life is to be opened at this time, and every man judged. The parables of the wheat and tares and the ten virgins are synonymous with the sheep and goats, and contemplate the separation of the world and unwise virgins from God's people. It is an impossibility for the simple act of giving a cup of cold water to make a person a righteous being. Although such acts of kindness will not go unrewarded, they cannot bring that reward granted to the sheep. It will take greater works than these.

Is it not a fact that the parable of the sheep and the goats will seem about thus? The brethren are the ministry; the sheep, the righteous ones, are the saints of God. The laity those whose duty it is to look well to the welfare of his servants when in active service. And when we give these a cup of cold water in his name (Mark 9:41) it will not be forgotten by the Master. How can one of the world give a cup of cold water in Christ's name? Peradventure, the question may be asked, Who are those that will say, "When saw we thee a hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?" The answer: Those of the kingdom that are selfish and inconsiderate; never administering to the wants of the needy around them; never spending a penny for the work. They will be honest in the question, Lord, when saw we you in need? Because they will have been so completely wrapped up in worldly things that they will overlook those little things that go to make up a Christian life. Will be so selfish and grasping after this world's goods that when the book of life is opened on the judgment morn, their names will not be found written there, and Christ must say, Depart. As this gospel goes out as waves from one common center, it reaches many who say, How glad we are that at last we have found the truth; that which we have for so long been looking; now our hearts are satisfied, and we are content. This fact is often cited in proof of the theory that Christ's sheep are scattered everywhere among all creeds and people.

This is only a mistaken idea. The fact being overlooked that wherever these parties were and are reached by this gospel, it has found them reading, thinking, observing men and women; and not because that somewhere in the dim vista of the past, in this life or some other, they have received a greater degree of Divine favor than those less favored than they. Not because those accepting the gospel are more honest hearted than those that do not. This phrase, the honest hearted, is foreign to the genius of this latter-day economy, and should never be used in the sense that it is used by many of the saints to-day. Many pray to the Father that the honest hearted may come to the knowledge of the gospel, and never say one word for or ask one favor for the other class, if there be such a one. The Master did not intend that any such an idea should ever obtain among his people, for his instructions were to pray for all. The gospel of Christ is so simple, grand, ennobling, and elevating; so broad and far-reaching in its nature, sending its influence out into every condition and avenue of life, gathering from all classes regardless of their hearts' condition before it reached them, that all men will be left without excuse when Christ comes to make up his jewels.

Be it remembered that every human being born into this world, comes bringing an honest heart with them, and is pure until the age of accountability, and should any pass hence during this period, will receive the best the Master has to bestow. And any condition other than this is the direct outgrowth of environments and Satanic influences. Every son and daughter of Adam are equally beloved by the Savior, who died for all, being no respecter of persons.

The writer cannot conceive that this beautiful plan of salvation is or was to a special few, and that they were Christ's before they had passed through the waters of regeneration. It is alike to all. And if any find themselves with the wrong class on the redemption morn, there will be no one to blame but self.

SAUL'S "WIDOWS."

Having at various times in life been caused to stumble and doubt, by the crafty and specious interpretations placed upon some texts of Scripture by the enemies of righteousness, I have sought for, and thanks to God been given to know the truth and discern the fallacies. Attention was lately called, editorially, to some of the sleights and quirks of one Elder Roberts, of the Salt Lake persuasion, in advocacy and defense of polygamy, notably an effort to make Divinity responsible for its practice, on David's part, by citing 2 Samuel 12:8. "And I gave thee thy master's wives into thy bosom," speaking of Saul's widows.

If this be interpreted as the giving, by the Lord, to David of Saul's widows to wife, any Latter Day Saint who is approached thus should be able to oppose it instantly with the explicit words of Leviticus 18:6: "None of you shall approach to any that is near of kin to him to uncover their nakedness;" also, "Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of a woman and her daughter."—17th verse. Now David was married to Saul's wife's daughter, Michal, hence could not under the law of God to Moses and Israel do such a thing; it was an "abomination," and "confusion." Neither could or would the unchangeable God ask a man, though a king, to commit a deed in contravention of his own enactment. In the Book of Mormon the Prophet Jacob says:—

David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord.—Jacob 2: 27.

These testimonies should be sufficient to satisfy anyone believing the message of the angel in latter days, since by two or more witnesses shall every word be established. But since the same crafty methods are resorted to in using Book of Mormon texts to make them do duty as arguments for instead of against polygamy, let us refer to the principal one:—

If I will, saith the Lord of hosts, raise up seed unto me, I will command my people: otherwise.—Jacob 2: 32.

See where the comma mark is placed? after the word "otherwise." Place it before the word otherwise, or after the word people, and note the strong, positive, monogamic ring the sentence has: "I will command my people, otherwise they shall hearken unto these things." What things? The threats, reprovings, and warnings of a sore judgment to come because of their grosser crimes, resulting from their erroneous understanding of the things written of David and Solomon. God said of Abraham that he knew him, that he would command his house. To command is to rule, govern, manage, lead. If God raises up a righteous seed on this or any other continent, he must be the commander, his law the rule of action, his will the governing impulse, his word the end of all strife—the final code of appeal. He hated the nastiness of whoredom and concubinage of old, in Jacob's time; ditto in John the Revelator's time, when the filthy doctrine of Nicolas was rife in the ancient church; and he, if an unchangeable God, hates the same slimy cup of abominations now offered by the "enemy who hath brought iniquity in as a flood" in these "perilous" days, when those bearing the name of saint had no respect unto a covenant, but became for the lust of gain "truce breakers," and spilt innocent blood in the name of him who said, "vengeance is mine; I will repay."

Perhaps a glance at the history of Saul will offer some other meaning of the gift to David of Saul's wives or widows. Let us see. 1 Samuel 20: 14, 15, tells us of the covenant of amity and continual kindness between David and Jonathan, while 1 Samuel 23: 21 tells us of a like covenant of favor and love between David and Saul. These covenants were God-witnessed and made to be kept. That David loved Saul, see 2 Samuel 1: 17-27. That he kept his covenant in the spirit as well as the letter of it, witness the record of his great kindness to Ziba, a servant of Saul's, and his loving, tender, sweet ministry to Mephibosheth, son of Jonathan, he who was lame and helpless, saying of the lad, "he shall eat at my table as one of the king's sons." Now consider what must have been the close and holy relations of sacred friendship between the young poet-warrior and the royal house of the "Lord's anointed, and what more fitting service could David render than to admit to his "bosom," (keeping, care, hospitality, charge,) the house of Saul with its inmates, those women whose favored guest he had often been while the mighty Saul reigned? Since David was under covenant so to do, he could not do otherwise than show kindness to the royal family, bereft in one day of husband and warrior sons in disastrous battle, hence God gave the sweet singer this charge to assuage the bitterness of the cup of sorrow as the Master on Golgotha's bald rock in tender solicitude gave to the beloved disciple his mother, saying, "Behold, thy mother."

DES MOINES, IOWA, Nov. 29, 1896.

THE POWER OF ATTRACTION THAT MUSIC HAS ON HUMAN NATURE.

That music has the power of attraction on human nature is an undeniable fact that cannot be refuted; and I think I can produce evidences to demonstrate this assertion. But first, let us understand what music is, or what produces music, then our minds will be better prepared to understand the thoughts presented. Music is the production of sound or sounds, and two or more different sounds together constitute a chord, providing they are according to the law of harmony. Again there are two characters of music that are termed major and minor. The major music is of a joyous nature, effecting a happy feeling when sung or played; and the minor music is quite to the reverse in its character. It is of a solemn nature, effecting a sad feeling when performed either by human voice or instrumental. Man also is naturally possessed of those two characters or feelings, as our experiences in life teach us this fact. Realizing then that as far as the effect of feelings is concerned, that there is no difference existing between music and human nature in this respect. Comparing music with human nature, it is not surprising then that music has such power of attraction on mankind. To illustrate it a small instrument in the shape of a staple, has a magnetic power; it is called lodestone; it has a power to draw steel towards it. Tailors generally make good use of them, searching for their lost needles. In the same sense music has an attractive power to draw mankind within its charming sound. To demonstrate this fact it is very evident in the case of Saul, King of Israel. Please read the sixteenth chapter of first book of Samuel, beginning at the fourteenth verse to the close of the chapter. We learn from this history the effect it had on Saul. The Spirit of the Lord had departed from him and he was troubled by evil spirits and his servants sympathizing with him over his trouble, proposed to him a remedy that would cure or restore him to his natural condition. One of his servants suggested to him to send for a son of Jesse the Bethlehemite; he was a cunning player on the harp, and one that also feared the Lord; and that when he would play with his hand before the king the evil spirit would depart from him, and he would be made well. To this Saul consented, and commanded his servants to send for David the son of Jesse, who was a shepherd boy over his father's flock. Jesse consented to the king's request, and sent David his son to him, and Saul was pleased. When David played before Saul, the evil spirit departed from him and he was refreshed or revived in spirit and was made well. We learn from this history that Saul's servants believed in the power of attraction that music had on mankind, from the fact that they proposed to the king the remedy to cure him; and to prove their assertion it was demonstrated to be true by the results that followed. Their prediction to the king was literally fulfilled, and it so pleased Saul that he promoted David as his armor bearer. If this be true in the case of Saul, king of Israel, why not affect others when applied under the same circumstances. The same cause will produce the same effect.

That music has power to attract the human family is a demonstrated truth beyond all contradiction. What brought five hundred singers across the wide Atlantic Ocean from England and Wales, and a choir of two hundred and fifty from Salt Lake City, to the World's Fair held in Chicago; and double that number or more came specially to hear the singing? Was it not the power of attraction that music had upon them? Undoubtedly many came over from Europe at a great sacrifice to hear the contest singing. Have we noticed particularly in our respective towns, on some occasions, when our elders and missionaries have appointments to preach on a certain date, and it so happens that a concert is held on the same date and hour, is it not true that in nine cases out of ten that the greatest number of the people will attend the concert? Yes, we have seen our churches and halls half empty, while every seat is filled and many have to stand up in the concert halls, to the discouragement of our elders that go forth to preach the pure gospel of the Son of God. Why is this? It is because music has more attraction on the people than the preaching of the gospel has. If music has such control on the people, should it not arouse every Latter Day Saint of the Reorganized Church to take more interest in this feature of the work, to draw the people to our places of worship, and instead of having one half of the seats empty, as it is often the case, let us make an effort to improve on our musical talents, that our singing will be of such a character that will draw the people to our respective places of worship, and every vacant seat filled?

Music seems to be one of the leading characters that creates life in the whole civilized world, not only religiously, but also socially. What is our social entertainment without music? Why it is dead, comparatively speaking, because it is the main object that brings us together to enjoy and amuse ourselves? It has more attraction upon us than any other part of the program. Mankind is naturally more or less controlled by music's attraction.

It is very evident according to Bible history that music originated at a very early date among the antediluvians. Musical instruments are among the earliest recorded of human inventions (See Genesis fourth chapter), and in the scriptures we learn that their use is confined to both religious and social festivities, except the trumpet which was used as a warning call to battle, undoubtedly the ram's horn, such as was blown by the priests when marching around the walls of Jericho. We read in the Old Testament scriptures of various kinds of musical instruments, both the stringed and wind instruments. Vocal music occupies an important place in scripture also, both in religious worship and social gatherings. David the sweet singer of Israel was greatly attracted by music; he had a select body of singers, both male and female. (See 2 Samuel 19: 35; 1 Chronicles 16: 41, 42.) Again we read in 2 Chronicles 20: 21, 22, that Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, appointed singers unto the Lord, to go out before his army and to shout, Praise the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever; and when they began to sing and to praise God, the children of Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir, that came against Judah, were smitten. The twenty seventh and twenty-eighth verses read that on their return to Jerusalem, rejoicing over their victory, with the king in front of them, they marched to the city with psalteries, harps, and trumpets, to the house of the Lord.

From the above quotation we learn that the king appointed or selected special singers (vocal voices) as well as selected players on various kinds of musical instruments. This is in harmony with the revelation given to the Prophet Joseph at Kirtland, Ohio,

April 11, 1887, section 119, paragraph 6, wherein it says:—

Let them who shall be moved thereto by a desire and the gift to sing take upon them the burden and care of the service, and use therein instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct. Let the young men and the maidens cultivate the gifts of music and of song; let not the middle-aged and the old forget the gladness of their youth and let them aid and assist so far as their cares will permit.

I have quoted a part of this paragraph to show that it is the will of the Lord directly to us in this age, as well as anciently, to cultivate our musical talents, and devote them for the service of the Lord. Not wishing to intrude upon the liberal generosity of the editor and fill too much of the valuable space of the welcome Herald, I shall leave the thoughts presented for the consideration of the reader, and exclaim with the psalmist David, Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord, Praise ye the Lord.

BEVIER, Mo., Aug. 31, 1896.

I RUN ALSO.

Inasmuch as this is a day when many are running with all kinds of tidings, I have concluded that I will swell the number by running also. I have listened to much testimony heard on the street and in the church, of various witnesses of different faiths, and I have observed that their Holy Ghost which they profess to have received is the author of confusion and division. They not only contradict each other, but are in direct opposition to the revelation of Jesus Christ, as it is recorded in holy writ, which owes its origin to the righteousness of the meek and lowly, yet mighty ones of the earth. To one who loves unity and seeks to build in accord with eternal truth, this does indeed look like Babylon. I am one of those who believe the moral of the story told on one of the sons of Erin, a good one. This royal son went one day to his spiritual adviser, and asked whom should he make confession to. The father told him to himself, the priest. "Whom do you confess to?" was his next query, and on being informed in regard to the different ones in succession to whom confession was made; and of course the priest finally got to the fence, and said that such a one confessed to God. "Then," said the faithful son, "I guess I will go to headquarters."

Now that is not only a good place to confess, but it is a good plan to make some inquiry there also.

There are so many who are out proclaiming their abominations compared to the few who understand the truth, that it makes it difficult to calm the people. And in these latter days, within the seventy years, we have had of the preaching of the elders of the church, there have been abominations by apostates such as ought to make the most corrupt mind hide its vision for shame. By reason of these the way of truth is evil spoken of; yet, in view of the history of the past fifty-five years, which makes the darkest pages that have been written in the book of the life of the great Republic, with Utah standing as a monument to the black lines written, some minds in the face of all this seem to be troubled for fear that the Lamb's bride has her headquarters in Salt Lake City.

I do not know that the testimony that I shall write will cast out any fears, but my mind will feel that it has done its duty by revealing itself in regard to this matter. When I entered the service of God, I did so with a firm belief that I should know the truth, taking God at his word, without a doubt existing in my heart, that I know of, in regard to the Sonship of Jesus Christ. After I was baptized I thought a great burden had been lifted, because I felt so free. Then I commenced praying for wisdom, knowledge, and understanding; of course, simple enough to expect an answer; and I received a communication on this wise:—

One evening before going to sleep after retiring, I discovered a sound as of a rushing mighty wind; and, after discerning that it was inside the room instead of outside, my faith was then made strong; and immediately the Holy Ghost fell on me and I was quickened in the inner man; and so mightily did it work on me that I was pierced through and through, and my natural powers were overcome, and I was carried away in the spirit. While in the spirit I saw the following vision:—

I saw the restoration of the gospel, with Joseph Smith the Martyr standing between heaven and earth, with a flood of light proceeding from him bright as the noon-day sun. I saw that this light came from God. I saw also that others received the light, and for a time were willing to abide in it.

I saw the Quorum of the Twelve set in the church; also, that in that quorum was a speculative spirit, and much of the man was in evidence. I saw great floods of darkness arrayed against the prophet and the church; and that it commenced to prevail and hung over the Twelve; and finally I saw the Prophet fall by the shaft of death at Carthage; observing that he died in faith, and that the Spirit was yet in him; although the enemy had succeeded in entangling him in some snares; but did not snare him in the polygamy trap—that he did not practice nor sanction.

Then I saw the church broken up into factions. I saw a part move to Utah and the leaders became as black as demons, teaching lies in hypocrisy with seared consciences, and through them many became defiled by seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. Some went there with good faith, but the Spirit was withdrawn rapidly from them as a body. I saw other fragments in the East, among them the Reorganization. I saw that they as a body were accepted of God. I saw that they were looking for Joseph Smith to come and be their leader; and I finally saw that he went to them by the influence of the Spirit; and after he was legally ordained and accepted by the body, that the same flood of light, bright as the sun, proceeded from him. I saw the church commence to spread, and officers chosen to fill the places made vacant by the apostasy. I saw some unpleasant things happen in the church; and finally I saw the Quorum of Twelve filled and the church moving upward. I saw a ring of fire in front of them; and after awhile a halo of light covered them.

I also saw a prophet arise who had great knowledge given unto him; and through him the faith of many was strengthened, yet that prophet refused to take any honor that belonged to another. I also saw that he honored Joseph Smith in his office as prophet to the church, and as interpreter of the law to the church. I also saw that he honored all in their place; that he did not attempt to dictate, and would not suffer that any man or set of men should dictate to him; also that he was of mighty faith and received knowledge upon knowledge; and that when great questions and problems were being solved he knew whether they were solved right or not; yet he made himself of no reputation. I saw through the church much covetousness, and many who did not do the commandments; also dark rings issuing from certain individuals.

After this I saw the Christian world and that they had no power as churches to act for God.

I also saw Jesus Christ sitting on the right hand of God; that he had come into the world and had been crucified. I saw that he had been nailed to the cross and that a spear had pierced his side; that he has that body which was pierced; that he is equal in glory with God; and I heard the still small voice from heaven, saying, "Yes, you know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and this is to confirm your faith."

I saw that God was a personage of spirit and power; that the elements seemed to be his tabernacle. Also, that he comprehended all things. After this the vision closed.

I will also say that I received this testimony, that if I kept Christ's commandments, I would be saved; if not, condemned. The holy influence in the inner man remained, causing joy to fill my soul, and was still on me when I went to sleep; but in the morning it had departed.

In conclusion I will say, I know not who shall read this. Mockers may; but fools mock, and the folly of such shall lead them to misery and woe.

I have written this from memory. I never shall forget that night. When my thoughts revert to it, it causes me to "praise God from whom all blessings flow," with a pure desire for the good of all, and a knowledge that this work in which we are engaged shall triumph though individuals may fail; and a continued prayer for the welfare of Zion.

I am your humble friend,
GEORGE DALEY.

"WILL SOME ONE PLEASE EXPLAIN?"

In reply to the above caption propounded by J. E. Holford, of England, it seems to me that the only safe position on the tithing is to interpret the word "surplus" to mean one tenth. The word "tithe" means tenth. To begin our tithing would be to pay the Lord what we owe him, and as he requires one tenth, that would be our just obligation to commence with.

"Surplus" means excess; "excess" means over and above. This may be interpreted in two ways. That which is in excess of my own; that which is in excess of my needs.

If the latter interpretation is the one to be used, then who is to determine the question of excess? One man may be worth $50,000 and yet have no surplus, for in his way of looking at it he "needs" it all in his business. Another may have $25,000 and pay all to the Bishop but that actually required for the support of his family. Thus it might go on and one be just as honest in his interpretation of the law as another, but when would a unity be reached?

The Savior's parable of the talents certainly conflicts with this latter interpretation. How could a man add to his financial talents by applying the law of excess in this way? Besides, by virtue of retaining his means and observing the law of tithing strictly, he may bring a greater amount of money to the church in the end than if all were handed over save the actual support of the family to begin with, for his financial talents might be so much in excess of those controlling a common fund as to bring a greater amount to the church in the legitimate use of such money.

Between me and my God, and in harmony with the law of tithing or tenthing, that which to me would be a surplus or excess of my own—as a steward—which God would require as his would be one tenth. His, God's, own interpretation conveys this idea:—

And after that, those who have thus been tithed [tenthed], shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually.—D. C. 106: 2.

The part of the sentence just preceding says, "This shall be the beginning of the tithing [tenthing] of my people."

Abraham, Genesis 14: 20, gave to Salem's king "tithes of all." Here was the "beginning," so far as the spoils of war were concerned. In fact I think it is the first mention of tithes recorded. Paul, Hebrews 7: 4, shows just what this "beginning" was:—

Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.

It seems to me that is the only safe interpretation by which we can reach a unity of action.

The objector may urge that such a method is one of favoritism, but I rather incline to think it the opposite. The favoritism would come in from the other method, for the man having financial talents would hide them in a napkin if he were so stripped of his ability to use. The financiers of the church applying their means in harmony with tithing and consecration, will place the church in the position that there will be no poor among us.

The financier who toils for the salvation of himself and the race, and the financial salvation of the church, and who may be daily harrassed, as much so in fact as the artisan or the preacher, should have equal reward with any other toiler in the great work of life. Every man in his own station, attending strictly to his own business, and the work will move.

PART II. "DARKNESS."

This matter of a seeming contradiction is answered in the thought that those speaking each had reference to their own land, and while they called it "all the earth," it was only so figuratively.

The use of hyperbole was a common indulgence with writers on both continents, Jewish writings being especially tinged with it. Jonah said, "The earth with her bars was about me for ever." The total forever, here, was seventy-two hours!

Luke, Acts 2: 5, says:—

And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

The Lord told the eleven to go "into all the world." Geographically their labors reached not beyond the limits of the eastern continent.

The statement of the Prophet Samuel, "The face of the whole earth," had reference to the western continent. When Nephi recorded, "That it did last for three days," he he was speaking historically of what happened in America.

When Matthew, Mark, and Luke record the fact that it was from noon till three o'clock that darkness lasted, they speak with regard to their own country. Hence while there is a disagreement as to duration of time, there is no contradiction as to fact, for it is just as easy for the Lord to cause three hours of darkness there, and three days here, as it is for him to cause an eclipse here, not seen there at all, and vice versa.

For truth,

J. W. WIGHT.

THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

In looking over the columns of the Herald from time to time, I see no news from this part of the Lord's vineyard; however, it is not because the Lord's work is at a standstill in this locality; the saints in general seem to be feeling well in the good work of this the restored gospel. Many of the saints can and do testify to the world that they know that God accepts the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints as his only church, because it is in strict harmony with the teachings of the New Testament; and furthermore, the teachings of Christ both past and present, which he has given to the church in these the latter days are in strict keeping and compliance with those in the New Testament, which is acknowledged by all Christians to be the standard by which we are to submit if we wish to become heirs of eternal bliss. God has provided means by which we may know concerning the doctrine. Christ says:—

If any man will do the will of the Father he shall know of the doctrine.

Jesus made the promise. The Apostle James, in his first chapter and fifth verse tells us how we may know:—

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

There are thousands to-day who can testify that revelation has not ceased, and God has and does reveal his mind and will to the children of men just as much as he did nineteen hundred years ago, when we put ourselves in a position to secure them, and take God at his word, for you cannot find one statement from Genesis to the close of Revelation where God has said he would not any more reveal his will to man.

Friends, it is not there; so are we not justified by laying hold on his promises, and take God to the test; hence we must have faith before we can expect knowledge, because if we did not have faith, or did not believe, we would not put him to the test; faith is a school master to bring us knowledge. It is true that the church has and does undergo much opposition and trial, from various sources; and those who have as yet not obtained this knowledge which we have mentioned, but whose faith may be strong, yet a person may believe a certain thing and yet not know; but those who know a thing to be true cannot be changed from their position. We live now in a day when the powers of earth and hell have, and do, and will combine against the children of God; and unless they are grounded upon the rock of truth, their foundation must be shaken.

While many differences arose at the death of Joseph Smith, Jr., and many factions were caused in the church, and many apostatized from the church as organized in 1830, who were bewildered and did not know where to go, is agreed, we believe that there are many yet, yes a great many, who have never been reclaimed; while those who differ and differ honestly, they will be brought to see their error, and wherein they have been misled. While these conditions exist, is it not fair and also our privilege to examine the claims and arguments of those who differ. For instance, our brethren, the Hedrickites, in their little paper called the Searchlight, of April 1, 1896, we find an article headed, What is in a name? The idea held forth under the above heading seems to be that because we term ourselves the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, that we have abandoned the name of the primitive church, and hence we will not be able to answer the call of the Church of Christ, because of the statement made in Book of Mormon, second Nephi, where they were disputing what to call the church, and Christ appeared to them and told them that whose name they should give the church his church it should be.

Let us look at this for a few moments and see what and where the name of the Reorganized Church will lead us to. Because we do not call our church the Church of Christ, in so many words to those who are acquainted with the conditions existing in the church at the time when the three words of "Latter Day Saints" were coupled with the church which the Searchlight claims was done in 1834, which is not disputed, is it and was it not a fact at that day as well as this, that there were various churches which purported to be and called themselves the Church of Christ; and as we claim to be the only true church in the land, and as there is but one true Church of Christ on earth, we would not want to be classed among the rest of the Christians' so-called Church of Christ. The true Church of Christ always had some peculiar feature to distinguish it from the other religious sects. Do we not read in the Book of Mormon repeatedly where they were of all of one faith, that they called themselves the Church of Christ? Very well agreed to that; but we also read the true followers of Christ called themselves Nephites, or Church of Christ; but when the church began to be corrupted by damnable heresies which crept in unawares, till the church began to be disorganized, and those who were lifted up in the pride of their own heart began to persecute the humble and meek, and even to smite them. These humble followers of Christ called themselves the people of Nephi, or Nephites. The more wicked part of them were no longer content with their former name, but began to divide themselves into factions of the church, and call themselves by the name of their leaders—some of them still purporting to be the church of Christ, while others, the more wicked part, denied the Christ. It looked very much like the commotion which took place when our prophet Joseph Smith, Jr., was murdered, or shortly after; for instance there were the Brighamites, the Hedrickites, Morrisites, and the Whitmerites, and many more who followed some of the prominent leaders of the old church.

But now as the Searchlight argues that the three words "Latter Day Saints" were adopted by the church in 1834, hence at the martyrdom of Joseph Smith, Jr., or shortly after rather, when the leaders began to pull their own way, did not that disorganize the different quorums of the church? Hence in all this confusion the church was disorganized as we have shown, and as afterwards determined in the courts of our land. If the church was organized in 1830, which is agreed, and as referred to previously. Disorganized in 1844, or shortly after the death of Joseph Smith, and organized again in 1860, so instead of saying "Organized again" we have the word "re," which means "again," hence the word reorganized. Reader, does that word take away or add to the name of the church, or of Jesus Christ? Certainly not; but it explains the condition in which the church now exists, namely in a reorganized condition.

As far as the three words "Latter Day Saints" are concerned, who that professes to be a child of God ought to find fault therewith. Does not Christ himself, and prophets of old, and also the writers of the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, make mention of the latter days? and as agreed by our brethren and the most of the so-called Christian world agrees that we live in the latter days. Webster gives his definition of "saints" as follows: "Child of God or one blessed of heaven." So summing up the words "Latter Day Saints," we have: "A child of God in these last days," where is the fault with that?

If the name is essential to salvation, which we believe it is, because in Acts 4:12 we find this statement: "Neither is there salvation in any other name," speaking of Christ. And also in Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 16, par. 4:—

Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby men can be saved.

So we agree on that point. We are also told in the Book of Mormon that we must be called by his name if we desire to be his church. Hence we can see no good reason why we shall not be permitted to respond to the call as the Church of Christ at that great day. Why not? As the name is all the argument which the Search-light preferred against the Reorganized Church, let us see whose name we have. As shown that the church has been reorganized, let us see whose church has been reorganized as regards the name. Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ; hence it is Jesus Christ's church. Now notice that his church is composed of Latter Day Saints, and if we obey his principles or laws, then are we his children, and a child of God has a right to the name "saint."

So in conclusion, we can find nothing wrong with the name of the church. Whatever led to the coupling the three words, "Latter Day Saints" with the church, or whatever the motive may have been that prompted it, judge ye. To the writer's mind it appears very consistent with the cause. It still holds the name of Jesus Christ as its model and name. May the day be hastened when we shall see eye to eye, and different factions be brought to see the unity of this restored gospel.

MILTON, Fla., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald.—Our district conference has just closed and it was one of the best we have had in some time. Bro. G. T. Chute, of Mobile district, was with us and expounded the Scriptures in a way that was calculated to remove prejudice from the minds of all, resulting in one baptism, and we trust that the cause was advanced to some extent at least.

Perilous times are among us of Santa Rosa County just now, caused by a strike among the laborers, especially the lumber men; but we trust the Almighty will overrule all things for our good, and if we only remain faithful we shall be blessed. Our (Open Head) branch was organized February 1, 1898, with eight members. Since that time we have received by baptism nine, by letter one, and have expelled one; making our branch number seventeen in all. We have our weekly prayer meetings and Sunday school, and sacrament, and preaching meetings, and endeavor to let our light shine. While growth may not be so fast as some could wish, yet we trust that it may be permanent.

Personally, I feel to rejoice in this latter-day work, as it seems to be in perfect harmony with the law of God; and I have received evidence from time to time that it is true. It is now three years since I united with this church and I have never regretted it, and pray God that I never may. My belief in it only grows stronger as I learn more of it and though the heathen rage and the people imagine vain things, yet I know that God will perform his marvelous work and will not rest until he has gathered his people home.

Pray for me, that I may triumph over the weakness of the flesh and may yet be of some service to the cause of Christ. Ever praying for the purification of the saints, the building of Zion, and the coming of Christ, I am,

A sister,

EMMA BAILEY.

AMES, Iowa, Oct. 30.

Editors Herald.—I closed my meeting four miles north of Ames in the union church last night, with a house jammed full and a splendid interest; no saints within ten miles. Mrs. N. Taylor (an aunt of Sr. Jennie Leland, Bishop Kelley's stenographer) was the means of getting me in there. She and her son Fay and daughter Nettie (who by the way is one of Story County's best teachers) gave me a warm welcome. But after the second night I had plenty of places to go to, and many vied with one another to see who would get me to go first. I was requested by a number to come again as soon as they got their corn out, so they would not miss a night.

But there are a few there also who are very prejudiced. The following conversation took place between two young ladies of the neighborhood about eighteen years of age:—

1. "Do you folks go to hear that Mormon?"
2. "Yes, we do."

1. "Well, I don't see what you do that for."
2. "Why, the elder stops at our house."

1. With both hands up, "Well, for the land's sake; worse and more of it."

2. "The elder is going to take a car load of women to Utah, and he is going to call for you too."

1. "Well, I won't go."
2. "O yes you will; you will be his favorite."

A few days after this the young lady No. 2 and her sister, father, mother, and I went to town on the wagon, and the other girl passed us on the way; then No. 2 told her we had started for Utah. They will make her tired of her foolishness yet.

I believe the Lord has a people there to be gathered out. Maybe we can get them and the church also.

The saints at Nevada, eleven miles off, were up there to meeting, and Bro. L'hom-medieu and family from Colo, also Sr. Flora Hidy and husband, came twenty-one miles just to hear one sermon; so hungry to hear the gospel as to drive forty-two miles to get one sermon. May the Lord bless them.

I will go to Clear Creek soon for about three weeks. The Lord blessed me greatly in preaching, and that is strengthening.

In bonds,

J. S. ROTH.

CANTON POINT, Maine, Oct. 30.

Editors Herald.—Work moves slow here in the "Pine Tree" State, but I think we are gaining in some respects. Conference at Stonington, October 14 and 15, was good; everything passed off pleasantly. Only a few baptisms reported, but a better feeling in some of the branches is apparent. This, with an increase in financial support, gives encouragement and hope.

The spirit of the gathering is moving the tongues of some of the down East saints. Whether it will ever move their entire bodies or not, I cannot say. I hope that many will be found worthy of a place in Zion and her borders, anyway.

We were disappointed in not seeing Bro. A. H. Smith at conference at Stonington; also Bro. Joseph Luff. Well, this is a world of disappointments, so we look for our share, and we find 'em too, but do not feel disposed to complain.

Hoping to be among the victorious ones of Zion's redeemed hosts,

Yours in the conflict for truth,

T. C. KELLEY.

GUILFORD, Mo., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald.—I am happy to report progress in this part of the world. Nodaway district is small in numbers and extent, but about twenty-five have been added by baptism during the last six months, and there is an evident toning up of the church, a rising of the spiritual thermometer.

Our late conference, held in the new church near Maitland, was notable in point of attendance and interest. Numbers of the young are coming into prominence and usefulness. The Holt County saints were not lacking in hospitality, and somehow all were fed and sheltered.

Clouds and sunshine alternate in this life; and following the gladness came sadness through the death of our young brother, Robert K. Ross, who sickened the day after conference, and died a week later. Consolation was administered to a large congregation of friends and relatives in the Dunkard church near, by Elder J. Arthur Davis. The instruction given could not have been bettered for the occasion, and we are sure that good will accrue.

Bro. I. N. White was with us at the conference, and gave seasonable instruction, and his labors after the conference were not in vain, we believe.

I have been associated during the summer with Priest William Roach, who is zealous for the work; and since the middle of August

Bro. J. Arthur Davis has rendered valuable service.

During the first part of my nearly three years' stay in this field, openings were not numerous. Progress seemed imperceptible for a time; somewhere else would have suited me just as well. It is a source of encouragement now to know that progress has been made, and the future outlook is promising, even among an unimpressible people, whose pride it is to say, "I'm a Missourian; I have to be showed." But we hope that only the beginning of better days and better things is realized, and that with faith increased and hope enlarged, with minds and hearts attuned to the will of God, whether in prosperity or adversity, sickness or health, we may move steadily forward to the goal of Zion, gathered, purified, established, redeemed.

Your brother,

M. F. GOWELL.

SPRINGFIELD, Neb., Oct. 24.

Editors Herald:—I have been reading Bro. Butterworth on the Word of Wisdom. I have been putting it in practice for over forty years, and I derive much benefit from it, according to my strict adherence to it. We went onto new land. The water was bad. I began using tea and coffee; used it for a month or two. My head began to show signs of palsy. I suspected the cause, quit drinking both tea and coffee, and soon all signs of palsy disappeared. That was more than fifteen years ago. I am now over seventy-seven years of age, and do all my own work. Surely the Lord has fulfilled his promises to me in many ways. I do not drink anything very hot. I heard when a child that we should not drink anything hotter than our blood; so I was convinced of the truthfulness of the Word of Wisdom. There are few around me who have as good health as I have. The oil is my only balm, no matter what goes wrong, inwardly or outwardly. I was well pleased with what Bro. Wight wrote on the gathering.

Yours in the one faith,

SR. E. G. HODGE.

TULARE, Cal., Oct. 22.

Editors Herald:—E. Keeler and Eugene Holt made us a visit and held a two days' meeting, September 30 and October 1. The time and place were well advertised, but only a few outsiders were present. The Spirit's presence was with the elders, so they were able to feed both the sheep and lambs. We were loth to give them the parting hand, but were assured that Bro. Keeler would come back this winter as a missionary. There is not much being done here among the outside world, as they are self-righteous.

The saints as a rule are coming up to a higher standard of spirituality. How could we do otherwise with the energetic branch officers we have. President Joseph Flory, and Priest C. W. Deuel will travel from twenty to thirty miles to hold meetings, with the mercury 104° in the shade, not saying anything about the clouds of alkali dust they have to pass through. We have wondered why Bro. Flory left the land of Zion to come to California, but now believe that he is the right man in the right place. Bro. Sheehy, when are you coming this way? May God's blessings attend every effort that is put forth for the building up of his cause.

MARY A. TWADDLE.

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 30.

Editors Herald:—It is some time since I penned a few lines to the saints abroad and I am pleased to note to all that on the evening of October 27 about 7:30 at No. 1802 Armour Avenue, at the ancient apostolic gospel mission, in walked Elder J. M. Terry in company with Elder Joseph Smith, President of the church, of Lamoni, Iowa; and O, how we enjoyed such a noble sermon, and how our hearts burned within us when he presented the word of God to us, to a full house, saints and friends! Of course, on Sunday morning at 11:45 I listened to another rousing sermon at No. 3411 Cottage Grove Avenue; and I am sure all of the saints enjoyed his visit. May God bless him to live until Jesus Christ comes in the clouds of heaven "with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him; these are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage."

Sometimes, saints, I think I might just as well take a popgun and try to shoot a mountain over as to try and get people into my mission to hear the gospel preached by the writer, and by others of the missionaries when they call on me or pay us a visit, on the account of prejudice against this glorious work of the latter days.

Dear saints, I am still in the fight, and I expect to fight until I die a bold soldier for Jesus.

Yours in the faith,

G. H. GRAVES.

CANTON, Ill., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald:—When I pen a few of my weak thoughts I often wonder, if not at each time, if my thoughts are expressed in a manner that will be pleasing to my brethren and sisters, when published in the columns of the Herald. My greatest desire is to do all things well, and in order to do this I must have that feeling of joy and love within my heart that will enable me to do so.

In speaking to people of other religious denominations, they say, "Love" is their motto. But it does seem to me they fall far short of having that love that becomes a true child of God. Oh, how easily will pride banish that feeling of love away! Pardon me, dear saints, if I speak a little discouragingly of some of these other denominations, but let me relate an incident that happened not long ago. In conversation with a kind lady, not a member of any church, I asked if she would object to sending her two little girls to our Sunday school, and the kind reply that came from her lips was, "No." "But," said she, "they have only calico dresses to wear;" and in the meantime she said they had been going to another Sunday school and had been mistreated by children who wore finer clothing. I kindly remarked that it mattered not about their little calico dresses, all we asked of her was to send those dear little ones neat and clean to our Sunday school and they would be kindly cared for as two of God's precious little lambs. Did the parents of those better clad children have the true Christian love within their hearts?

Children's actions more or less resemble the teachings they get at home. I do hope we have not one little child belonging to a Latter Day Saint, who would ever think of mistreating another little one because of its poor clothing.

Let us all, young and old, remember the golden rule and lend a helping hand in every time of need.

Yours for the truth,

IDA L. JONES.

BOTANY, Ont., Oct. 28.

Editors Herald:—As I am to-day detained at the home of Bro. Henry and Sr. Jane Leatherdale, in consequence of heavy autumn rains now falling, I thought I would write to the Herald. This is the scene of what was known as Botany branch, which has become disorganized through removal, death, and other causes. The remaining members are mostly enrolled with Ridgetown branch, five miles distant. There has not been much preaching in this part for a length of time. Last summer Bro. Leatherdale fitted up his orchard, and Elder Arthur Leverton attempted to "build again the waste places," and had good congregations at times; but the fulfillment of past predictions seemed to limit apparent success; namely: "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine," and "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

I have just come from Cedar Springs vicinity, where, on Thursday evening last, a branch of eighteen members was organized by Elders R. C. Evans and George Green, mission and district presidents. Cedar Springs branch is located a mile east from where the first branch in Canada was raised up by Elder John Shippy. It was then known as Buckhorn branch, which finally became disorganized or removed to Blenheim; and for years there was no preaching at Buckhorn. About two years ago the writer began a series of meetings at the home of Elder George M. Shippy. Although he had been blessed by his Uncle John, when a child; his mother then died, and his father not being a member of the church, he grew up without the influence of the gospel till manhood. Together with his wife, they became prominent members of the Methodist Church, and were living in Chatham when they happened to hear Elder R. Coburn, and united with the church. Bro. George M. was called to the eldership, and afterward moved back to his father's farm, where he was blessed in childhood. Through the splendid influence of the lives of Bro. and Sr. Shippy, our meetings were well attended. Many believed; some fourteen were baptized, and several still believe who have not yet obeyed.

They have also a Sunday school, with an average attendance of about thirty. Bro. Snobelen, priest of the branch, had been a Bible class teacher in the Methodist Sunday school about twenty-five years; Sr. Snobelen had also served as organist in that church. Bro. John Maynard at times led the Epworth League, and his wife sang in the choir. Sr. Wood has a brother for years in the Baptist ministry. So you see the "waste places" are being built up with material that we hope will abide the day of burning and not suffer loss.

Elder John Shippy and wife were over to their former home on a visit for a few weeks, the guests of their daughter, Sr. Maynard. He felt cheered to see he had not labored in vain in the days agone. He visited the conferences at London and Petrolia, and his testimony of association with two living prophets of God, and the power of witness, was quite edifying to all.

I am on my way to a new opening near Appin. Buxton is my permanent address for this district.

FLAG POND, Va., Nov. 1.

Editors Herald:—As several dear readers of the Herald have written me, asking me to tell them just what I want, and to do so through the Herald, I ask you to let me do so, as I have no postage to answer all their letters. I want real old stamps of all sorts, that are not common. Those on old letters and documents from 1847 to 1870, and entire stamped envelopes of 1853 to 1876, and high values of all dates. I have nothing but my prayers to give, except some one would accept C. S. A. documents as a curiosity, that were left me by a C. S. A. officer. I can exchange the stamps for medicine, clothing, etc. Pray for me that the Lord would restore me to health. My doctor says medicine will relieve me, but not cure. Yours in hope of eternal life,

MRS. N. J. ROBINETTE.

HACKNEY, Kan., Oct. 29.

Editors Herald:—As yet there is no branch of the church here, only a few saints scattered through Cowley County. We are in hopes to organize a branch at Arkansas City before long. I have preached six times in my neighborhood to small audiences, and attended three prayer meetings with the few saints at Arkansas City, and talked with all I have a chance to, telling them what I am; only I refuse to be classed with Utah Mormonism, and find many are anxious to so class us together, either ignorantly or willfully.

A Christian minister by the name of Smith preached quite a number of times in the same schoolhouse that I preach in, but he could not call the people out, and so gave it up.

Elders Russell, Hall, and Kendall, of the Utah Church, have canvassed this county, visiting each house, and attempting to preach wherever they could get a schoolhouse to preach in. They got the schoolhouse and gave out an appointment, wishing to hold meetings for a week. I went to hear them the first time; there were very few out, and the next night they did not have anyone to hear them. In the house to house visits they called on me—came early in the morning. I took them in and talked with them for about three hours on the presidency and other matters, and went to hear them that night. And as no one gave them an invite home, I thought I would not be a heathen entirely, and so told them if they would come home with me I would give them a place to sleep. And as it was either hunt a stopping place or sleep in the schoolhouse, they came home with me.

I did not say anything to them that night about doctrine, but as soon as they arose in the morning we were at it again. I then answered their question as to the ordination of the president of the church, and showed them by church history that there was no direct evidence that Peter, James, and John laid their hands on Joseph Smith; and that being the case, there were only elders in the church of which Joseph the first was one, and Oliver Cowdery another; and therefore the President of the Reorganized Church was ordained by as high authority as the first Joseph, as the command of God is authority in all cases. But they could not see it that way, as they are sure the Twelve did not lose the authority when they went west.

Next I wished to see the revelation on polygamy. They very willingly showed it, and asked me to read out loud and carefully; which I did, stopping and asking them questions wherever I wished such as where Hagar is called wife, and where God commanded Abraham and called her his wife. They could only find where Sarah gave her to Abraham to be his wife. But I showed them that Sarah confessed her wrong, and said to Abraham, "My wrong be upon thee: . . . the Lord judge between me and thee." And when the Lord spoke he said, Send her away, calling her bondwoman, and Sarai, wife; and when I came to the part of the revelation where it says, Go and do the works of Abraham, I looked Elder Russell in the face, and said that is right, send her away; that is where God commanded. But O, here comes the worst in that cursed revelation! Those who obey this law of polygamy, though he commit all sins and all blasphemy, he shall come forth in the first resurrection, if he has not shed innocent blood.

I said, Can you men believe that when Jesus says, "The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven . . . in this world, neither in the world to come," and John the revelator says, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power."

O, yes! they could believe that.

The Lord pity them. I referred to the man who made flesh his arm and put his trust in man, and was to dwell in a salt land.

O, say they, that was not Brigham Young! He did not put his trust in man.

I replied, Did he not when he said, "Adam is our God, and all the God with whom we have to do." But when I referred to such things quoted from Journal of Discourses, Deseret News, Millennial Star, they said, "O these are in Josephite works." I told them these were quotations from their own church papers, and gave them a number of references, as I found them in Bro. Heman Smith's book, and told them to look them up when they got where they could get those works.

Well, in my thirty-six years in the church, this is the first time I have met any of the Utah elders, and I think they will not forget our six or seven hours' talk.

The people in this part seem to have all the religion they need, and do not care to have only just what they have. However, I shall try to tell the gospel story to all I can, and trust some of the ministry will sometime come to this part. So let us watch, fight, and pray for this glorious cause. Asking an interest in the prayers of the saints,

I am your brother in Christ,

W. VICKERY.

NEBO, Ill., Oct. 30.

Editors Herald:—I have been listening to a discussion between "I, Clark Braden" (Latter Day Saints' esteemed friend?) and one W. M. C. Hicks, of the Baptist faith. In the judgment of your writer, Braden bore visible marks of the late conflict with Bro. White. One of the Baptist brethren told me he had learned that White had flogged the earth with Braden. The debate started by Braden affirming the identity of his church with the church of Christ. Said, "What the apostles made faith and practice, they made faith and practice." Attempted then to show when the church was handed over to uninspired men. "When that was done all the spiritual influence, except by the written word, ended;" and (patting himself on the breast) said none of this that men can feel within the soul religion ever came farther than the apostles. Said "Mormons could tell as big experience as any of them," the Baptists. Again, that no one believing as the Baptists do could stand for a moment before a Mormon. How is that? Braden says "Baptists can't defeat Mormonism." A Baptist says "Mormons did defeat Braden." So I guess the effect of our gatling guns is being felt all along the lines.

The Baptist man played the part of a debater well. With Braden already wounded and crippled, and broken-hearted over his defeat at Orchardville, and his oratorical, witty, historical, and scriptural qualifications, he had quite a picnic in completely flogging the old man. I consider it unnecessary to detail farther than to say the moderators had plenty to do. Braden surely got his match at mud slinging. Just one example, if the Herald will permit, what 500 or 600 people of Nebo did. Elder Hicks showing some thirty contradictions Braden had made, said, if he should make that many in defending his proposition, he'd make pack saddle, and Braden could ride him out of town. Braden said, "I'd as soon ride a jackass as you."

Hicks: "So would I; that's the reason I'd rather ride you."

Braden: "I'd rather ride a good decent jack as to ride you."

Hicks: "Eh; can't put decent to my name

Very well, Elder, the next jackass I meet I'll apologize to him for comparing you to him."

Meanwhile the crowd roared in laughter, and the moderator raved for order.

Hicks said if mud slinging was what Braden wanted, and would appoint a place, he'd plaster him from head to foot.

Thus it is easy to see the superiority of the effects of the Spirit to such conduct. Feeling thankful for the truth, "that we be no more children, tossed to and fro," etc., and hopeful for the final triumph of this great latter-day work, I am yours in faith,

W. A. GUTHRIE.

Original Poetry.

THE PARABLE OF THE TEN VIRGINS.

When Jesus, our Lord, was on earth among men,

He spoke to them often in parables then,
And to his disciples he spoke at one time,
The parable of the ten virgins, we find.

This parable will be fulfilled when our Lord
Comes in glory to earth, his saints to reward.
These virgins each one, took their lamps and went forth,
The Bridegroom to meet, said our Lord,
when on earth.

Five of them were foolish, and five of them
wise;

The wise took their lamps and oil with them,
likewise,
And they that were foolish, their lamps they did take,

But took no oil with them; Oh, what a mistake!

And we learn, while the Bridegroom tarried, they all
Did slumber and sleep, until there was a call;
'Twas midnight; a cry was heard plainly to say,
"The bridegroom cometh; go meet him on the way."

Then all of those virgins arose, and each one,
Did then trim their lamps, and the foolish
ere long,

Said, "Our lamps have gone out," which did them delay,
"Give us of your oil," to the wise they did
say.

But the wise said, "Not so, lest there should not be Enough oil for us all, but rather go ye

To them that do sell, and for yourselves buy."
How wisely did they to the foolish reply!

And while they went to buy, the Bridegroom came,

And those who were fully prepared for the same,

Were then welcomed into the marriage with him;

The door was then shut, all was joyous within.

We learn that the foolish ones afterward
came,

And plead for admittance therein, but in vain;

For alas! 'twas too late, too late then, too late;

The Bridegroom had come, and for them did not wait.

Watch, therefore, said Christ, for ye do not know when,

The Son of Man cometh to this earth again;
We may know, he has said, his coming is near,

When the signs he foretold, on earth do appear.

And these signs do appear on earth we do know;

Great destructions, commotion, floods, fires,
and woe,

And signs in the sun, moon, and stars do appear;

We know that the coming of Jesus is near.

Then let us attend to our duties, each one,
And watch for the day when our Savior will come,

Having oil in our vessels, our lamps burning bright,

And then at his coming we'll be clothed in white.

And victory, victory, then we will sing,
And glorify Jesus, our Captain and King;
Our sorrows and sufferings then will be o'er,
And with our Redeemer we'll dwell evermore.

MY WORK.

To bear another's weakness,
To soothe another's pain;
To cheer the heart repentant,
And to forgive again;
To commune with the thoughtful,
To guide the young and gay;
To profit all in season—
This is my work to-day.

WE ARE HOPING.

To Saints and Friends, Greeting:—Yes, dear brother and sisters, we are hoping to meet you all in the blessed future—in the beautiful life of which many have sung. We who cannot sing here will sing in the land of praise—and perhaps as correctly as those who have attained the art in this life—or at least we are hoping to. I thank those who have so kindly acknowledged their appreciation of my feeble efforts with the pen, whether by letter or through the church periodicals. I did not expect it; wrote because I loved to, and because there seemed to be a prompting from on high. In my present shut in condition, were it not for the comfort derived from writing, the blessing of the church reading matter, and the approving smile of Heaven, I should be as St. Paul and many others would have been, without the hope of eternal life, because they tend to develop our hope.

We are hoping to grasp your hand in the one faith in the paradise of God, and also to walk on the glorified earth, and to be an inhabitant thereon—how long, and in what condition? A few short years, groping about, bound with pain and suffering? No, no; a thousand years, and can walk and not be weary, can run and not fall, can eat of the tree of life, can quench our thirst at the fountain, and be forever healed; can have a free home, more beautiful, more durable than the mansions of earth—or we are hoping to.

O, God help us all to hold on to the truth, till the refining process is ended and we come forth like purified gold. Nothing less can give us the right to sit down in the kingdom with the worthies.

We are sorry that Sr. Burton's autobiography has come to a close. 'Tis beautiful, instructive, and inspiring—wish I could see her in this life. Our beautiful Autumn Leaves cannot be too highly appreciated. May God bless all the faithful church workers and their works, is the desire of Sr. Almira M. Snow, Sargentville, Maine.

TEMPERANCE WORK.

We cannot expect the temperance cause to prosper without workers. I presume if all the church members were asked, "Are you for temperance?" nearly, if not all, would say, "Certainly I am." Then were I to ask, "What are you doing to help the cause along?" most of you would answer: "There's nothing I can do. The drug stores sell almost as much as the saloons. The people don't seem much interested about it. They have done nothing that I hear of."

"They! What are you doing? I thought you said you were a temperance man, but it is all they."

How many times have I heard church members talk about "they" should do so and so. They don't do this, or they are doing that or the other that I don't approve of, and if they don't get to doing better, I think I'll leave the church.

"Well, my dear brother, I think it about the best thing you can do, unless you quit talking about they, and go to doing something yourself. I don't think the Lord has any use for any such men in his fold, and that you are decidedly out of place, unless you quit croaking about others, and look at self a little more. Better have ten earnest workers in a church than a hundred drones. You are simply a stumbling-block in the way of others; but if you will get up and go to work, others will believe in you. Don't trouble yourself about what others may say and do, but go right ahead and do something yourself, and the Lord will bless you. Then you have a right to say, 'Come on and help me.'"

What would you think, if in passing a farmhouse, you accosted a man, sitting before the door whittling, with "What is your your occupation, sir?"

"O, I'm a farmer," he makes answer.

You look over his broad acres, and although it is June, no crops are in, and not a furrough ploughed. You remark upon it, and he answers:—

"Well, the fact is, I'm not working at it. My neighbors are not doing anything, and I don't see any use in my working alone."

And so, poor man, he would starve his own stomach, because others don't work. Now this is just about as sensible as most of the church act about temperance work.

As I said in the start, it is they. They don't do so and so, when if all the I's that want to shirk responsibility, would just get up, shake their broad shoulders, and with resolute decision, say: "Come on, boys, this thing has gone on long enough; let us see what we can do to down this traffic, accursed of God and man," people would begin to believe in you.

This curse is here, and is preëminently the greatest curse of our land. But when we think of the majority of church members that are silent on the liquor question, we feel sure they are not in the way of duty. If our preachers and members were active, how long do you think our country people would be afraid to trust their boys in town, because of the liquor they can get. Honestly, there is no need of this. We could stop it if we would. Missionaries are sent to convert the heathen, when there are fifty heathen around us going to drunkards' graves, to one heathen convert. While doing what we can for the heathen, we should try harder to save those at home. We have a fearful responsibility. God will require them at our hands if we harden our hearts, and shut our eyes to what is going on around us. I maintain that God is stronger than Satan, and that there are church members enough, in most every community, to stop this illegal traffic if we will. M. J. P.

MY CREED.

While in my simple gospel creed,
That "God is love" so plain I read,
Shall dreams of heathen birth affright
My pathway through the coming night?
Ah, Lord of life, though specters pale
Fill with their threats the shadowy vale,
With thee my faltering steps to aid,
How can I dare to be afraid?

Is there a world of blank despair,
And dwells the Omnipresent there?
Does he behold with smile serene
The shows of that unending scene,
Where sleepless, hopeless anguish lies,
And, ever dying, never dies?
Say, does he hear the sufferer's groan
And is that child of wrath his own?

O mortal, wavering in thy trust,
Lift thy pale forehead from the dust!
The mists that cloud thy darkened eyes
Fade ere they reach the o'erarching skies!
When the blind heralds of despair
Would bid thee doubt a Father's care,
Look up from earth and read above
On heaven's blue tablet, "God is love!"

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK OF OUR DISTRICT.

The Sunday school work of the Fremont district comprises the work of seven schools, with the officers and teachers who carry on the work of the schools. All of these schools are progressing nicely and the workers are seemingly doing their best. They have done well, and as we are all desirous of advancing and doing better, we thought it advisable to treat in our paper of some of the obvious needs of the work.

First we should have

than there are in the district, as we have two branches in the district without schools. Then we need more workers to labor in the interest of the Home Department and look after the isolated ones who cannot attend the sessions of the schools. These workers should labor under the direction of the superintendent of the Sunday school in the vicinity in which they reside, and all under the supervision of the superintendent of the district.

We want more

DEVELOPED TALENT.

Talent we have in abundance but the development is lacking. Some cry for more workers, but the cry is in vain so long as we fail to develop what the Lord has already given us. We are reminded of what Alexander Dumas said when "All the world cried, Where is the man who will save us? We want a man!" Said he, "Don't look so far for this man, you have him at hand. This man, it is you, it is I, it is each one of us! How to constitute oneself a man? Nothing harder if one knows not how to will it, nothing easier if one wills it." Just so it is with the workers of the Sunday school. We need not look for material for workers but for the will to develop and grow, to consecrate self, and sacrifice selfish desires and self-interest. The talent is here but the will power to do is woefully lacking. Samuel Smiles tells of a hard worker who said, "There is little to see there is little to do, it is only to do it." We may have the sagacity to see, but not the strength of purpose to do. How often we hear the remark, "How such a one seems to enjoy his work. What wouldn't I give if I could do as he does." Now sometimes the very one saying that is not willing to do one single thing to prepare himself to enjoy the work. You don't have to be an officer or a teacher to be a grand factor in the Sunday school cause. Begin by being a good pupil, and if a parent, by training your children to be good pupils. By good pupils we mean those who give prayerful study and preparation to the lesson during the week and then be punctual and deport yourself devotedly and piously at the Sunday session. So many say,

"I CAN'T.

I wish I could, but then I can't." If you would be a worker in the Sunday school, never say, "I can't," but if asked to do a thing, say, "I'll try," no matter how arduous the task appears. Have we not the promise, If we ask it shall be given us? If we seek, we shall find. If the true desire to labor is there, the means for development is available. You cannot dream yourself into a successful Sunday school worker any more than you can dream yourself into heaven. You must remember in the language of a certain writer, "Great things must be worked for, hoped for, died for now as in the past." We must study and pray. And above all things never forsake the interest of the work for the pleasures of the world.

We need

one school for another. If there is a discouraged sister we should lend a helping hand and try to stimulate to greater effort. If the school is weak and cannot afford supplies sufficient to successfully run, we should be as liberal with our means as with our advice.

We need

and unity. If one school finds a good thing, it should lose no time in communicating it to the district. If a superintendent tries a new method and finds it a decided success, it should immediately be reported to the district superintendent, that it may be brought up before the district at the next convention. There should be more correspondence between the school superintendents and the district superintendent, that there may be more unity of feeling and purpose. More visiting by the district superintendent should be done in order that the officer get in better touch with the individual schools and thereby be better qualified to give advice and aid in the progression of the work.

We want

which means better work by officers, teachers, and pupils. By better records we would have you understand it means not only better attendance and study, but better reporting. The fault so far has been laid at the feet of the pupils for our poor records. But the teachers and officers are as much to blame for our poor records as the pupils. In attendance and study they may be an example, but in their reporting they make a very poor showing. If your pupils do not do the work you would like them to do, is it any excuse for your not doing your duty? The pupils refuse to do the work requested of them and the teachers complain, oh! so pitifully. Then the district secretary calls for a little report from the teachers once in a quarter and these conscientious teachers refuse to do their duty, so our district secretary cannot, if he would, make a correct record, but he has no right to complain. Suppose he in turn does not report to the General Secretary, who in turn is ashamed of himself (?), or you, because his records are incomplete and incorrect? A little thing, but you see where it leads to. Our assistant superintendent has had to abandon an excellent scheme for the accomplishment of perfect unity and correct records, simply because the teachers and officers openly ignored the requests made them. I presume each one had an excuse which justified his actions in his own conscience. But the lack of coöperation and a united effort has retarded our progress and we are no nearer perfection than we were before. Are we alive to the best interests of the work in general, or do we see beyond the limits of our own class and school? We should not be selfish in our work, and our strongest motive power should be hopeful, useful work for the good of all.

We want more

more libraries. And above all we want more reading of what we already have. Do we all read our little Sunday school paper, the Hope? Do we all read the Sunday school department in the Herald every week? So many complain they cannot afford a Sunday school periodical and then acknowledge they do not read what they already have. We do not think enough of what we do read. How many of us when we read an article in the Sunday school department think and study how we can profit by the experience of some one else instead of plodding along in the same old rut week after week? It matters not so much whether we read one paper or book, or many, but how we read. One article well read is worth a dozen skimmed over. We must not only read, but study and think, if we would advance. We should as far as practicable assist the district librarian in her efforts to upbuild the libraries of the district, thus heeding the call to "Come up higher."

We talk of

the object of which "is to consolidate and unify the forces engaged in the Sunday school work." Unless we are united and in sympathy with each other in all our efforts what good does it do us? Let each school ask itself the question, "What good does the association do us?" And, "What good do we do the association?" Our duty is twofold. Toward the association and toward ourselves. What good can the association do us if we don't associate? "And how are we to associate?" some may ask. Attend the conventions and see what is being done in the district. Study to find out how you can help this work along, then give the convention the benefit. If you have a thing you think good, don't for modesty's sake keep silent. The work of the Sunday school does not depend upon the general officers, the district officers, school superintendents, nor teachers, but upon the individual efforts of every member of the several schools of the districts. A writer has said, "Men cannot be raised in masses, as the mountains were in the early geological states of the world. They must be dealt with as units. For it is by the elevation of the individual that the elevation of the masses can effectually be secured." If we would have an army of Sunday school workers we must patiently draw out and develop a few at a time. And in this district we should feel hopeful, for within the last year we have more than doubled the number of workers who are interested in and take part in our conventions. And there are still others who are waiting their turn to be called upon to take the advance step.

Some who have been called upon have thought themselves on account of a lack of experience or education, but when pressed to at least make an effort, have with the help of their Master almost been astonished at the result. It takes courage and a determination to do your part, be it little or much. If the heart is in the work, success will crown your feeble efforts. A certain writer has said, "Oh! how vain the pride of intellectual ability, how worthless, how contemptible, when contrasted with the riches of the heart. "A true desire to labor for the Master, nurtured in love for the work and fellow man, backed by untiring zeal and energy, supported by hours of prayer and study is of more consequence and worth than mere intellectual ability.

Let us feel our

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Don't think, "I voted for such an one and he will take care of the work." Let us so consecrate ourselves to this work that we will so see and feel our duty that we will be led to say as did Wellington in Portugal, "I came to do my duty, and I neither do nor can enjoy satisfaction in anything else except the performance of my duty." May we each and all be led to see our duty as it is before Him who rules all things, and as Samuel Smiles says, "Whenever you do what is holy be of good cheer, knowing that God himself takes part with rightful courage."

URGENT NOTICE.

As it is under consideration to publish soon the third volume of the Church History which should contain some account of each of the many factions of the church formed after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, I would be pleased to have information from anyone who may know anything regarding the claims or history of any of these organizations, especially from those who are or have been connected therewith.

In giving information please state whether or not the events related came under your immediate and personal observation, and if not, how you obtained the information.

We especially need items concerning the movements under Sidney Rigdon, William Smith, Alpheus Cutler, Charles B. Thompson, J. C. Brewster, George M. Hinkle, William McLellan, F. G. Bishop, Austin Cowles, J. J. Strang, David Whitmer, Granville Hedrick, Joseph Morris, Zadock Brooks, and others.

Any books, papers, or manuscripts containing historic information will be thankfully received.

PASTORAL.

To Whom it May Concern:—Forasmuch as some are anxious to share the benefit of the ministerial labors of Bro. S. Swenson at Minnesota, this is to certify that after duly considering the suggestion of Brn. E. L. Kelley and J. R. Lambert, Bro. Swenson will leave North Dakota in a short time after date. I am of the opinion that souls are as precious in the sight of God at one point of the compass as at another, yet there are times when one will do more good at one point than at another, and as it is thought Bro. Swenson may possibly do more good, within a given time at the above place than any other point, and the best good of the work should be always considered, I submit. But in justice Bro. Swenson ought to visit Gregory County, South Dakota, late in May or early in June, 1900.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

THE "NECESSARY" MAGAZINE

The best-informed men and women in the world use the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS to keep well informed, and call it the "necessary" and "indispensable" magazine. In the busy rush of to-day ambitious men and women must know about the important questions of the month, and not only this, they want to know about them at the right time. When the whole country is puzzled over the gigantic combination of trusts, a well-informed article is printed in the AMERICAN MONTHLY, giving the facts, and its editor discusses the theory; when the Dreyfus affair is in everyone's mouth, the best story of Dreyfus and the great case comes out in this magazine.

Every month, in "The Progress of the World," Dr. Albert Shaw gives a comprehensive picture of the world's history during the previous thirty days. In the departments, the valuable articles and books that have been published during the past month are reviewed and quoted from, so that the readers of the AMERICAN MONTHLY can get the gist of them. In every issue nearly a hundred pictures are printed, including the portraits of the men and women who are making the history of the month.

To be thoroughly well informed helps any man or woman in his or her work. A subscription to the AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS represents an investment for the best kind of profit, as well as entertainment. THE MINISTRY.

Great, indeed, has been the influence of war, politics, commerce, law, science, and government, yet we must also confess that the pulpit has been one of the great forces in social progress. Be the reasons what they may, the moral teachers of yesterday are the social leaders of to-day.

To-morrow Moses will reënter his pulpit and pronounce judgment and control verdicts in every court of the city. To-morrow, as Germans, we will utter the speech that Luther fashioned for us, or as Saxons use the idioms that Wyclif and Bunyan taught our fathers. To-morrow, the groom and bride will set up their altars, and, kindling the sacred fires of affection, they will found their home upon Paul's principle, "The greatest of these is love." To-morrow, the citizen will exercise his privilege of free thought and speech, and recall Guizot's words, "Democracy crossed over into Europe in the little boat that brought Paul." To-morrow, educators will reread the Sermon on the Mount and seek to make rich the schools for the little ones who bear God's image. To-morrow, we shall find that the great arts that enrich us were themselves made rich by teachers of the Christian religion. For great thoughts make great thinkers. Eloquent orators do not discuss petty themes. The woes of India lent eloquence to Burke. Paradise lent beauty to Dante and strength to Milton. It was the majesty of Him whom "the heaven of heavens cannot contain, that lent sublimity to the Cathedral of Angelo and Bramante.

Christ's ideal of immortality lent sweetness to Handel and victory to his oratorio. It was the golden rule, also, that shot the cannons of freedom against the citadel of slavery and servitude. "The economic and political struggles of modern society," says the great English economist, "are in the last analysis religious struggles—their sole solution, the life and teachings of Jesus Christ set forth through the human voice." In his celebrated argument in the Girard College case, Daniel Webster reviewed the upward progress of society, and asked this question, "Where have the life-giving waters of civilization ever sprung up save in the track of the Christian ministry?" Having expressed the hope that American scholars had done something for the honor of literature abroad; that our courts of justice had, to a little degree, exalted the law; that the orations in Congress had tended to extend and secure the character of human rights, the great statesman added these words: "But I contend that no literary efforts, no adjudications, no constitutional discussions, nothing that has ever been done or said in favor of the great interests of universal man, has done this country more credit at home and abroad than our body of clergymen." Weightier or more unqualified testimony was never pronounced. Whatever the future may hold for the pulpit, the past, at least, is secure!

IS THE INFLUENCE OF THE PULPIT DECLINING?

Having affirmed the influence of the pulpit in early and ignorant eras, some writers now declare the pulpit has entered upon a decline, and predict its final decay. In this age of books and papers men question the need of moral instruction through the voice.

Thoughtful men are not troubled lest some agency arise to dispossess the pulpit. In the last analysis, preaching is simply an extension of that universal function called conversation. It represents an attempt so to bring the truth to bear upon conduct and character as to cleanse the reason, sweeten the affections, and lend inspiration to imagination; so as to strengthen conscience and refine the moral sentiment. The foundation of all moral instruction is in the family, where children are influenced, not by abstractions, but by the truth manifest in the voice of the father and the mother, who create an atmosphere about the child. Socrates came speaking, as did Plato and Paul, as did the world's Savior; and so long as man remains man, preaching will remain, not as a luxury, but as the necessity of man's existence.

So far from books doing away with the influence of the voice, they seem rather to increase it. In ages when there were no books men sat silent in the cell or were dumb by the hearthstone. Now, when a new book is published, like The Memoirs of Tennyson, or Equality, by Bellamy, or Letters of Robert and Elizabeth Browning, these books, instead of ending conversation upon the themes in question, seem rather to open into the flood-gates of speech, so that a thousand readers who before were dumb and silent break forth into discussion. Great is the power of books! Wonderful the influence of the press! But the printing-press is only a patent drill that goes forth to sow the land with the great seed of civilization. But while the drill may scatter the wheat upon the cold ground, it may not pour warmth about the frozen clods or shed forth the refreshing dew or rain. When the living man called Luther, or Whitefield, or Wesley, or Beecher, or Brooks shines forth, then the mind lends warmth to frigid natures, calls down dew and rain upon the newly sown seed, and lends light and inspiration to dull and sodden natures.

It is indeed given to the printed page to teach the truth regarding axioms, or the nature of solids and fluids, but even then experiments in the laboratory strengthen the book. But, so far as moral truth is concerned, the truth is never the full truth until it is organized into personality, and flashes in the eye, or thrills in the voice, or glows in the reason, or guides through sound judgment. And so long as life is full of strife and conflict, so long as men are the children of misfortune, adversity and defeat, so long as troubles roll over the earth like sheeted storms, so long as dark minds need light and inspiration, and the pilgrim band, floundering through the wilderness, needs a leader, and a pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of fire by night, will religion remain the guide, the hope, the friend and support of the people.

THE GENIUS OF PREACHING.

Preaching is man-making, man-mending and character-building. On the one side it is a science—the science of the development of all the powers, animal, mental, moral and social; the subordination of the lower impulses to the higher faculties, the symmetry and harmonization of all. The genius of preaching is truth in personality. Mighty is the written Word of God, but the Word never conquered until it was "made flesh." Truth in the book is crippled. Truth in the intellectual system is a skeleton. Truth in personality is life and power. Always the printed philosophy is less than the speaking philosopher. Wallace and Bruce had their power over the clansmen, not by written orders, but by riding at the head of the host. By the torch of burning speech Peter and Bernard kindled the ardor of the Crusaders. When to Luther's thought was added Luther's personality, Germany was freed. Savonarola's arguments were brought together in a solid chain of logic, but it has been said that his flaming heart made the chain of logic to be "chain lightning." The printed truth cuts with a sharp edge; the spoken truth burns as well as cuts.

Men have indeed been redeemed by the truth in black ink on white paper, but the truth quadruples its force when it is bound up in nerves, muscles and sinews. The soul may be taught by travel, books, friends, occupation. Yet these truths stand in the outer court of the soul. It is not given to them to enter into the secret holy of holies, where the hidden life doth dwell. Preaching is plying men with the eternal principles of duty and destiny, to give warmth to the frigid, wings to the dull and low-flying, clarity to reason, accuracy to moral judgment, force to aspiration, and freedom to faith. Truth is the arrow, but speech is the bow that sends it home.

The nature and functions of preaching grow out of the divine method of education and growth for men. God governs rocks by gravity, bees by instinct, trees by those grooves called natural laws. Man governs his locomotive by two rails and a flange upon the side of the wheel. Man, made in God's image, is the child of liberty, and God governs the pilgrim host through moral teachers into whose minds great truths are dropped from Heaven, and these men are sent on before the advancing multitude to lead them away from the slough, to guide them out of the wilderness and open up some spring in the desert.

It is possible to enrich dead things from the outside. Soft wood may be veneered with mahogany, nickel may be coated with silver and silver plated with gold, but living things must be developed from the inside. Would the husbandman have a rich flush upon the rose? Let him feed the roots. Would the mother have the bloom of beauty upon the cheek of the child? Let her feed the babe with good food, and the pure blood on the inside will lend the rosy tint to the cheek on the outside. Men cannot be made wise or strong or moral by exterior laws or agencies. The great spiritual principles of Jesus Christ are the most powerful stimulants to material civilization that the world has ever seen.

It is said that Shakespeare's poems bring thousands of visitors to Stratford every year. His poems indirectly have created more wealth for the people of Stratford than any of its factories or looms. It is still an open question whether Wyclif, with his translation of the Scriptures, has not done as much for the commerce of England as did Watt when he invented the tools that Wyclif had first made necessary. Shaftesbury once said that Charles Spurgeon, without discussing problems of government, had done more for social reform and progress than any statesman of his era.

THE DIFFICULTIES OF PREACHING.

In his Yale address, ex-President White lamented that young men were turning from the learned professions to enter trade and commerce. Materialism, he thought, was an evil spirit that had given its cup of sorcery to youth and beguiled them from the paths of noble scholarship and the intellectual life. Gone the poets Longfellow, Lowell, Bryant, Whittier. Gone the historians Bancroft, Motley, Prescott. Gone the great orators and statesmen. Gone also the era when young men like Channing and Starking, Swing and Beecher and Brooks, entered the ministry. And remembering that in New England the clergymen have founded the academies and colleges, and that in scores of families like the Emersons there had been seven generations of clergymen who had wrought in the pulpit, the lecture hall, or taken up the pen of author, or editor, the great educator predicted disaster would befall our eager American society.

But not the emoluments of commerce alone explain the drift of young men away from the ministry. The ministry is not an easy life. No profession makes demands so numerous or so stern upon nerve and brain, upon mind and heart. In former times, when books were scarce, religious newspapers unknown, and knowledge was not universal, preaching was not a difficult task, and it was easily possible for a clergyman to preach a sermon three hours long in the morning and repeat it at night without the congregation recognizing it. Now all the hearers have books and libraries, and the pew of to-day is wiser than the pulpit of yesterday. The time has come when the preacher must be a universal scholar. He must make himself an expert in social reform; master the facts as to illiteracy, vice and crime; study the tenement-house question; all social movements in connection with settlements and methods of Christian work. He must carry his studies into physiology and hygiene to note how abnormal physical conditions affect the conscience and the spiritual state.

He must study history, politics, the rise of law, and free institutions, the movements of art, the history of philosophy, and, above all else no facts in connection with science must be permitted to escape his notice. For his illustrations he must draw from the sciences of stars and stones and animals and plants. To keep step with his work he must read each month some review that deals with finance, reform, labor, education, and his own special problems, not forgetting the foreign quarterlies and magazines. In addition to all this there will be at least a hundred volumes each year that he must go through thoroughly, if possible, or hurriedly, if crowded. There are also public duties and demands. To-day he enters a home in which some woman, with little children clinging to her dress and crying bitterly, stands beside a young father, now dying. He returns home to find some youth, the child of poverty and orphanage, but of genius also, who needs help and assistance. When evening falls there comes the intellectual stress and task.

Immeasurable the demands upon nerve and brain! Now and then one arises who is called to the ministry by his distant ancestors, whose father loved moral themes, and had a vision and the outlook upon the realm invisible, whose mother had enthusiasm, imagination, and moral sentiment—gateways, these, through which God's angels come trooping—and father and mother, through heredity, call the child to the ministry. For such a one teaching is automatic, and preaching is instinctive, and the work itself is medicinal and recuperative. But even upon these men, like Robertson and Channing and Bushnell, the mere strain of delivery is such as to send them home from the pulpit in a state of nervous collapse from which they do not recover until Tuesday or Wednesday. With many the recoil dismounts the cannon. In these days no man would be equal to the difficulties of the ministry did not the happiest of the professions bring its own rewards, carry medicine to cure its exhaustions.

THE MINISTER'S FREEDOM OF THOUGHT AND ACTION.

No other occupation or profession offers such liberty and personal freedom. The politician is a thread caught in the texture of his party, and has little freedom. The merchant must buy and sell what the people want, and must serve them. The lawyer must move in the groove dugged by the mistake or sin of his client, while the clergyman is freely permitted to teach the great, eternal principles of God, and he steers by the stars.

Great is the power of the press; but the press writer has no personal contact with the reader, and he must report things evil often as well as good. Great is the power of the law. But law is litigious, and the jurist must struggle oftentimes for weeks or months to settle some quarrel, or correct some injustice, dealing, as Webster said, with negatives oftentimes. Great is the power of the physician. But, unfortunately, in influencing his patient his personality must first of all work upon an abnormal condition, and when the patient is restored to health and ready to receive the physician's personality, his task is done. In the ministry this advantage adheres. It emphasizes the great positive moralities, it handles the most powerful stimulants the world has ever known—eternal truths. It plies men with divine inspirations. It deals with the greatest themes life holds—God, Christ, conscience, reason, sin, salvation, culture, character, duty, immortal destiny. When all other arts have been secured, it teaches the art of right living. When all other sciences have been mastered, it teaches the science of right conduct in the home, the market and the forum. It puts its stamp, not into wood that will rot, not into iron that will rust, not into colors that will fade, but into minds and hearts that are immortal.

Multiply the honors and emoluments of the other occupations one hundred fold and these need them all to compensate for the happiness and opportunity of the Christian ministry, seeking to make the church a college for the ignorant, a hospital for hurt hearts, an armory from which man may receive weapons, that opens up springs in life's desert, plants a palm in life's burning sands.

Well did John Ruskin say that the issues of life and death for modern society are in the pulpit. "Precious, indeed, those thirty minutes by which the preacher tries to get at the separate hearts of a thousand men to convince them of all their weaknesses, to shame them for all their sin, to warn them of all their dangers, to try by this way and that to stir the hard fastenings of the doors where the Master himself has stood and knocked, yet none opened, and to call at the openings of those dark streets where Wisdom herself hath stretched forth her hands and no man regarded. Thirty minutes to raise the dead in."

And he who hath known the joy of encouraging some noble youth who is discouraged, the rapture that comes when at least one who hath been long snared and held in the cruel trap hath been freed; the joy of knowing that blind eyes have come to see things unseen, and deaf ears to hear notes that once were unheard, or hath swung wide some dungeon door to lead forth some prisoner of conscience, will know that there is no profession that conceals such hidden springs, receives such hidden messages, is fed with such buoyancy and happiness as the ministry.—Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., in Saturday Evening Post.

BRO. ISRAEL L. ROGERS DEAD.

By telegram to Bro. Henry A. Stebbins we learn that Bro. Israel L. Rogers, of Sandwich, Illinois, had yielded to the pale reaper and had passed over to the other side, dying in the afternoon of November 8, 1899.

Bro. Stebbins will go to attend the funeral services, he having been a life-long associate and intimate friend of our departed brother.

Bro. Israel L. Rogers was a member of the church in the days of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and came to Illinois intending to make his home with the saints, but learning of the unsettled condition of affairs at Nauvoo, he stopped in the Fox River Valley, not far from the old town of Newark, where he made a farm and a home. He was the first Bishop of the Reorganized Church, and while acting as Bishop was ever the warmhearted openhanded friend of the cause of God and the poor. Of him it can well be said, He loved his God and his fellow men.

He has gone to his rest, in a ripe old age, and "like a shock of corn fully ripe for the harvest."

His family will receive the sympathy and condolence of all who knew Bro. Israel.

A MINORITY OF TWO PER CENT.

In late controversies between the elders of the Utah Mormon Church and the elders of the Reorganized Church it has been claimed by those of Utah that at no time has there been more than two per cent of the people of the church who were involved in the practice of polygamy, or plural marriage. This has also been stated by some of the leading men of the church in Utah in referring to the subject.

We are led to believe that what this statement is intended to convey is that not more than two per cent of the men of the Utah Church were at any time in the practice of plural marriage. If it be so that the estimate includes both men and women, and means that only two per cent of the entire church membership practiced plural marriage, it is not much the better, as it would show a still smaller per cent of the men, who are supposed to be the chief beneficiaries of the institution.

In the thirteenth chapter, fourth paragraph of the Book of Mosiah, we read:—

Now it is not common that the voice of the people desireth anything contrary to that which is right; but it is common for the lesser part of the people to desire that which is not right; therefore this shall ye observe, and make it your law to do your business by the voice of the people.

The value of this command is enhanced by the statement to the church in the revelation on Priesthood given to Joseph Smith and six elders September 22 and 23, 1832, sixty-seven years ago:—

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written.

In our contention against the doctrine and practice of plural marriage we have always made this point: that the purported revelation which is claimed as the basis of the practice was not at any time presented to the church to obtain the voice of the people upon it. That the practice was a direct change from the then prevailing rule of the church, which rule was adopted by the "voice of the people" because of revelations to the church in which the one wife principle was clearly stated to be the law for the observance of the church membership.

The practice of plural marriage was the result of "desire" upon the part of few; and if we are to believe that not more than two per cent (two of every hundred) of the people have been in the practice, it was but a very few who so desired it. Apply the rule stated in the quotation from Mosiah, and what is the conclusion?

It has always been something of a mystery how such a dogma gained credence and a following viewed in the light of the foregoing commands of the Lord. And now, after the lapse of years, and the conditions imposed upon the people of Utah by the laws of the United States, and the responsibility placed upon the membership of the church there by the manifesto of President Woodruff, it seems passing strange that the greater percentage of the people whose material and political interests are involved should longer consent that this element of "two per cent" should be permitted to continue in a practice so adverse to the well-being of the whole; a practice upon which "the voice of the people" was not obtained when instituted; a practice having no warrant in all the revelations of God to the church prior to the death of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum; a practice distinctly denounced by the Book of Mormon; a practice which is in direct conflict with the expressed will of the Lord, as that will is stated in revelations given to the church in 1831; a practice in which two men out of each hundred may openly disregard the well-being of the other ninety-eight men of the hundred, and assume to themselves rights and privileges which their ninety-eight brethren may not aspire to.

We believe that the great majority whose practice is monogamous, who keep the law of the Lord in the respect of having but one wife at the same time, should assume the control of the public policies of the State of Utah, and compel the little "two per cent" portion to desist from pursuing a course of conduct which brings the whole under the just condemnation of the civil magistrates and the right-minded of all civilized people.

CURIOUS.

Lying on the Editor's desk is a card, bearing on the one side the name of one of the elders of the Utah Mormon Church, his mission and his home address; and on the other side an epitome of faith and doctrine under the general caption, "Articles of Faith."

These "Articles of Faith," are followed by the name of Joseph Smith, and are the same as published by him in 1842 and in 1844.

These articles contain no declaration of a belief in, or reference to the dogma of spiritual wifery, plural marriage, or polygamy; none whatever.

Now, it is not a little striking and peculiar that, after the promulgation of the dogma and the adoption of the practice of plural marriage in August, 1852, and continuing in both the belief and practice until 1891, when it is declared that the solemnization of plural marriages ceased by edict under the claimed sanction of divine permission or command that the propagandizing ministry sent out by the polygamous church in Utah should so soon and so completely absolve Joseph Smith from the responsibility of being the human author of the doctrine of plural marriage, presumptively, by publishing the "Articles of Faith" authorized by him in both the year 1842 and the year 1844.

ORSON HYDE ON SPIRITUAL WIFERY.

President Joseph Smith has been severely criticised for saying that a good man would not promulgate polygamy, or the spiritual wife doctrine.

The following are his words as used on April 6, 1860, at Amboy, Illinois:—

There is but one principle taught by the leaders of any faction of this people that I hold in utter abhorrence. That is a principle taught by Brigham Young and those believing in him. I have been told that my father taught such doctrines. I have never believed it and never can believe it. If such things were done, then I believe they never were done by Divine authority. I believe my father was a good man, and a good man never could have promulgated such doctrines.

This was, to be sure, a severe arraignment of those who had promulgated these doctrines, and as might have been expected, it brought forth an emphatic protest from them. But when we examine into the matter a little, we discover that President Smith's estimate of the moral status of men who promulgate such doctrines was closely in harmony with the estimate of at least one of their own leading men as late as April 27, 1845. On that date Elder Orson Hyde, of the Twelve, delivered a lecture before the High Priests' Quorum, in Nauvoo, "Upon the course and conduct of Mr. Sidney Rigdon," in which he sets forth that Elder Rigdon had accused the Twelve and others at Nauvoo of teaching spiritual wifery, and adds:—

But because he was rejected as the leader of this people, he now seeks to destroy us by the most cruel slanders—the most wicked misrepresentations, and the foulest calumnies that ever proceeded from disappointed ambition.—Page 28.

Again, he says:—

His first edition of lies did not seem to answer: He must next accuse me of beseeching him not to make any disclosures about the spiritual wife doctrine. In answer to this, I will say: that as God is my judge, and as I wish or hope for salvation, such a petition was never addressed by me to Mr. Sidney Rigdon. I did caution him, however, on board the steamboat "May Flower" lying at St. Louis, to be cautious what he wrote in this time of his excitement, lest he might say things that he would afterwards be sorry for, and lay the foundation for a more bitter repentance at some future day. I might have also added, that his tyranny and oppression in Missouri; and conduct also little if any better than land piracy in connection with Robinson, his son-in-law, caused me to say and to do things that I have ever since regretted. I considered that I had just cause for dissatisfaction; but Mr. Rigdon had not, if we may believe his own words one week before he was cut off. "Brethren, you are the best and most blessed people on the earth." Will the best and most blessed people on the earth have spiritual wives, and tolerate adultery?—Page 27.

Though Elder Hyde puts his last sentence in the form of an interrogation, it is that form of interrogation, and used in that connection, which asserts as strongly as language can, that the best and most blessed people on earth will not have "spiritual wives, and tolerate adultery." Why then should President Smith be condemned by Elder Hyde and his associates because fifteen years later he said, "A good man never could have promulgated such doctrines"?

The lecture referred to above, from which the words of Elder Orson Hyde are quoted, was printed in pamphlet form in the "City of Joseph" [Nauvoo], by John Taylor, 1845.

CHURCH DEDICATED AT LYDNEY, ENGLAND.

From The Dean Forest Mercury, for October 13, 1899, sent us by one of the brethren in connection with the conference minutes for the Eastern district of Wales, we quote:—

DEDICATION OF A NEW CHURCH.

The new church at Tutnalls, Lydney, which is described as "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," has been dedicated to its uses, and is now opened for divine service after the order of this particular communion. The building is erected on a site on the left side going to Tutnalls, is on high ground, and has a very pleasant aspect. The land, which is valuable in the neighborhood, was given by the late Mr. Charles Griffiths. The building has been erected according to plans drawn by Mr. Thomas Griffiths, of Lydney, building contractor. Mr. Griffiths was also the builder. A meritorious fact connected with the work is the great amount of labor and artizan assistance which members and friends of the cause have put in, largely in overtime, and in that way the question of raising money has been materially lightened.

The estimated gross outlay was £250, and we understand that the best part of £100 remains to be got in. The new church has an iron roof and side "walls," the inside being coated with stained matchwood, and the vacuum being filled in with sawdust. The main building is 43 ft. by 24 ft., and there are chairs to seat 250 persons. On one side is a set of small rooms, which no doubt will serve many useful purposes. Gas is the illuminant, and the building will be warmed with a large stove of the tortoise pattern. The window lights are filled in with cathedral glass. It is approached by a flight of steps, and the front wall is bounded by some fancy iron work.

The dedication services commenced on Sunday morning. Elder Alma Bishop, of Cardiff, offered the dedication prayer, and preached the opening sermon. Elder F. G. Pitt (lately returned from America) also assisted in carrying out the service. In the afternoon there was a saints' fellowship meeting, conducted by Elder Thomas Griffiths (of Lydney). Elder Gould, Cardiff, and Elder John Jones, Nantyglo, also took part. At six o'clock the missionary in charge, F. G. Pitt, was the preacher to a large congregation and A. M. Bishop also took part in the service.

During the morning service, the rite of baptism by immersion was administered to two young men of Lydney, and there was an ordination of deacons in the afternoon. Thomas Ellis, of Lydney, and Alma Moroni Bishop, of Cardiff,

Special references were made in the addresses to the fact that this community believed absolutely in a free open pulpit, and in an open Bible. An invitation was given to all ministers to attend their services, and see and hear for themselves before condemning them or their creed, and if it were so, to show them where they were wrong. They were welcome to try, and would be courteously received. They believed that the truth always shone the brighter when subject to critical examinations. The officers of the new church are Thomas Griffiths, minister in charge, J. E. Holford being assistant pastor. Mr. Charles Kelsey is both teacher and secretary, whilst Mr. Thomas Ellis is treasurer.

IMPROVEMENTS—LOWER-PRICED PUBLICATIONS.

The Herald Office has purchased some improved machinery of late in a "No. 4 Universal Wire Stitching Machine," by which the management will be able soon to issue cheaper editions of most of our publications—those that can be sewed into a volume not much over an inch in thickness.

By this means, by avoiding expense incident to hand sewing in binding, cheaper editions of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, and numerous other publications, including New Testament, Inspired Translation, can be issued and placed at the disposal of many who may be unable to purchase the regular editions.

In any event, the lower-priced publications will result in greatly increased sales and much wider circulation of our reading matter, features necessary to our external progress abroad and the internal development of the membership of the church itself.

Such works as the Church History and Inspired Translation of the Bible—more bulky volumes—cannot now at least be included in the list.

These items are mentioned for the information and benefit of the saints, all of whom are stockholders and equally interested in the publishing department, to which is intrusted the literary work of the church at home and abroad.

We hope to announce additional and important matter in this line next week. Further improvements will be made and duly announced as financial and other conditions permit.

LAMONI'S IMPROVED RAILWAY FACILITIES.

Lamoni has in the past been criticised if not ridiculed by some of its visitors because of its isolation from trunk lines and their traffic and mail facilities. However, future travelers to the city of the saints will find a change of affairs in that respect; for Lamoni now is located on a main line of railway and is served by two regular passenger trains and two freights, daily, with regular extras during the week.

The change was brought about by an extension of the line which formerly ended at Grant City, Missouri, so that now trains run regularly from Chariton, Iowa, a division point on the main line of the C. B. and Q. between Chicago and Council Bluffs, south to St. Joseph and Kansas City.

Besides this, other and regular daily trains to the same points may be reached from Bethany Junction, about two miles distant. However, travelers are not under the necessity of changing at said junction, but have through passenger service from Lamoni, north and south, as stated.

Lamoni is therefore finally and approximately up with the rest of the world in this new departure, from the standpoint of railway and mail facilities, not to mention other advantages. The day of the mixed freight and passenger short line dinky is a thing of the past at headquarters.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. N. White was at St. Louis on the 5th inst., enroute to Alma, Illinois, where he is to meet Mr. Braden again in debate. He writes:—

Go to Alma 6th and ready for the work as Lord may direct. Say: I should have a hundred or so of revelation on the rebellion; and really had I some good tracts would be fine to keep on exhibition during debate while Braden is circulating his trash. Could not the church furnish me some for this occasion? If the Bishop is there he would say yes. Can send to me at Alma, Illinois. Remember me. Speaking twice a day and every night since Thursday.

The tracts have been forwarded as requested, by Bro. Criley.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith writes from Norman, Kearney County, Nebraska, November 3:—

I go from here to-morrow to Fairfield, Clay County; expect to hold meetings for one week. From there I will go south of Hebron, Thayer County, to a branch of the church, six miles southeast of the town.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

"THE GATES OF HELL SHALL NOT PREVAIL."

I will write as I believe, being led or directed by the Spirit. It is now just about three o'clock in the morning. Last evening was Halloween. I did not leave the house to participate in anything that my fellow man did, but worked till about eight o'clock, to get my house in proper condition for my large family for winter. To state briefly, Yesterday, while about my duties, I happened to call at the house of a Campbellite (or Disciple) preacher, where I also found another ex-Campbellite, but now inclined toward Dowieism. We were soon engaged in religious conversation, beginning with the late persecution of Dowie.

The preacher soon grew eloquent and said, That is one thing I have against your church calling yourselves the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ. Now, said he, nothing can be reorganiznd until disorganized.

I conceded it; I must.

Well, he said, Christ promised that "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Then I made the statement just to draw out proper ideas: "But the gates of hell have prevailed."

He looked amazingly surprised.

Why, I said, according to your construction, all the history of reform indicates that the gates of hell did prevail; if it is but the hundreth part of an inch. My thoughts the meanwhile were running thus: I do not, and never have fully understood Christ's idea; but I am very sure you Campbellites are not right; neither are the Catholics; neither have I faith in Dowieism, Dunkardism, or any other ism. The church of my choice comes the nearest filling the bill of anything I ever read, or knew of, since apostolic times, possessing biblical organization, commandments, and spiritual gifts. I further thought, Is it possible that that special passage might be a mistranslation. The Spirit seemed to say, No. I gave myself no uneasiness, feeling sure we were nearer right than any system I knew of.

On retiring for the night, beautiful views and sceneries of mansions would appear before my sight. They were of stone mason work, and not embellished with paint. I tried to see them fully, but did not seem to have power; but the Spirit was with me, and my heart was glad, and I was at peace with God. I fell asleep, and during the night I seemed to be in quite a solid, spacious building. The ceiling was not very high; the room was well filled with worshipers; there seemed to be a tomb or grave near the south end, rising two or three feet above the floor, with a heavy slab on top, in which lay dead, a young woman. Now, it was known to some or all of us, that the young woman was to arise at that meeting. How far man was to be instrumental in this, I did not know. But a hymn was given us to sing, I don't know who by, but all seemed to know it: "Arise, my soul, arise." I now urged the congregation to sing with a will. I meant they should sing with the Spirit and understanding, so the Spirit of God would work with us. I thought to myself, now if the Spirit will come on me I will command her in the name of Jesus Christ to come forth, or arise. We had just fairly started singing, and I did not just notice the tomb; when, Lo, the young woman had risen, and was joyfully moving about near my left side. There was now some animation in the congregation, and many, if not all, had eyes on the young woman. This first drew my attention. There was neither fear, nor excitement. I now noticed a young man smoking a cigar near her person; the smoke just rolling. I beckoned him to move away; but before he did so, she sneezed and moved away a little space; and soon she became interested in letters of friends.

At this juncture I awoke; when awake a few passages came to my mind, "Jesus has the keys of death and hell." "Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth are named." "I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom."

Now, dear saints, while my ideas are not fully developed, or matured, I would suggest that we ask God with full faith to give us a correct knowledge of the passage referred to, so that we may have a correct conception,—all agreeing, no discord. A few thoughts more and I will come to a close. Did the gates of hell ever prevail against the church, taking it in the sense of the whole family in heaven and earth, with the idea of the power of the gospel connected therewith, among which ideas exists prominently the power to resurrect the dead? I feel sure it exists now, and always will, whenever God has an authorized ministry or priesthood. Surely the gates of hell did not prevail over Moroni, one of the church or family in heaven, who communicated with some of the family on earth. Trusting this will lead to more scriptural quotation and explanation, I will close.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—PART 3; NO. 1.
MIRACULOUS DECEPTIONS.

And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders.—2 Thess. 2: 8, 9.

For by thy sorceries were all nations deceived.—Rev. 18: 23.

For behold, at that day shall he rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good; and others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security, that they will say, All is well in Zion; yea, Zion prospereth, all is well; and thus the devil cheateth their souls, and leadeth them away carefully down to hell. And behold, others he flattereth away, and telleth them there is no hell; and he saith unto them, I am no devil, for there is none: and thus he whispereth in their ears, until he grasps them with his awful chains, from whence there is no deliverance.—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 12: 18, 19, large edition.

And again, I will give unto you a pattern in all things, that ye may not be deceived; for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations; wherefore he that prayeth whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me, if he obey mine ordinances. He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek, and edifieth, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances. And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise, and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you. And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me; wherefore by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases, under the whole heavens. And the days have come, according to men's faith it shall be done unto them. Behold, this commandment is given unto all the elders whom I have chosen.—D. C. 52: 4, 5.

"It is written in your law, the concurrent testimony of two is credible." In the foregoing array we have the united testimony of three inspired prophetic utterances to the verity of our proposition: That Deception's Reign will be greatly advanced, spread abroad, and fortified and sustained by the spirits of devils operating by supernatural manifestations. The spirits of devils have wrought miracles to push the claims of their deceptive doctrines in different ages in the past, and among different nations; but their operations are to be more widespread and universal from now till the end of the world, than in any past age of the world. The world of mankind is ripe for such a harvest for the kingdom of the Devil now, as never before. Never were the minds of the people so ready as now to receive, or so susceptible to the influence of supernatural "power and signs and lying wonders." And when the manifestations are presented, no inquiry is entered into to determine their divinity. The only question to be determined is, Did the miracle or wonder really happen? The settlement of that one question settles the entire subject to the satisfaction of all.

Is it not one of the strange peculiarities of the times, when economics, socials, politics, and science are so closely scrutinized, and all their details so analyzed, that religious matters are so superficially examined, so little thought about, that we are more likely—nay, liable to be on the side of wrong than right? How many of our readers would suppose that among the thirty-five millions of religious professors in the United States, nearly one third of them excuse themselves from rigid investigation, and of reaching unfavorable decision to many, by flattering them into the belief that "there is no hell," nor is there a "Devil"? There are about ten millions of persons in our country who, believing in a future state of existence, deny most emphatically that a Devil, either personal or impersonal, exists.

Nephi's prophecy is being fulfilled to a positive demonstration! And the existence of this negative doctrine is proof positive that the Devil exists. So long as the Devil can keep the people at war over sharp doctrinal clashes and divisional tenets, whereby are produced doubt, strife, uncertainty, prejudice, envy, emulation, and every other evil and spiritual death dealing effect, he is satisfied; for nothing is more suited to his deathly purpose, no realm than ignorance so fruitful of deception. His work and purpose is evil, and its legitimate result—spiritual death—which, of course, separates us from the life in Christ. He flatters his subjects into inactivity of thought, and encourages non-investigation. "One world at a time; do the best you can in this; let the next take care of itself."

But let divine truth be sent into the world—life giving truth—and let man set about proving it, and begin to personally apply its holy principles in their daily religious life, and the divine fruits of it begin to appear in "spiritual gifts," and the Lord reveals himself in promised signs to follow and confirm the truth to the faithful believers, (1 Cor. 12: 1-11; Mark 16: 16-20,) and it is not long till Satan's counterfeit signs and revelations make their appearance. False doctrine implies true doctrine; false prophets, true prophets; and counterfeit signs and wonders imply true or divine signs and blessings. As illustrative of this statement, take the record of the experiences of Moses and Aaron, and the elders of Israel with the magicians of Egypt (Ex. chaps. 7, 8). See also that of Daniel the prophet with the astrologers of ancient Babylon (Dan. 2), and the history of the Apostolic age (Acts 8: 9). Among barbarous or but partially civilized peoples, Satan's manifestations are of a low order and but partially developed, there being no great amount of divine truth among such to fortify them against. Under such circumstances Satan's forms of operations are in the line of fortune telling, spirit of divining, magical incantations, and other like wonder working, with attempted prophesyings, with other obscure operations.

The doctrines attending the spirits above referred to, among those uncivilized, is degrading and unprogressive in character, and generally panders to the propensities of the lower nature, and tends to gratifying fleshly passions. And when introduced among those more refined and civilized, they most generally seek to corrupt and pervert the marriage institution and sever its bonds, mar its native sanctity, and divert its divine intention. Hence, among some, it would be laid aside for the more convenient "congeniality" of spirits, corruptness, or allow the practice of polygamy to usurp its holy throne, thus destroying not only the bonds of, but the very institution of civilized society itself, its peace, and security. This is the work and tendency of "seducing spirits and doctrines of devils;" "speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth" (1 Tim. 4: 1-3).

The evil spirit whose company King Saul cultivated led him to disobey God, and then seek to justify himself therein (1 Sam. 16: 14; and 15: 15-21). After he had forfeited all right to revelation from God, he went right in direct opposition to God's express command (Deut. 18: 9-15), and consulted a woman possessed with a familiar spirit.

And when Saul inquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets. Then said Saul unto his servants, Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and enquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at En-dor.—1 Sam. 28: 6, 7.

Saul was withal a polygamist.

Moreover these "evil," "familiar," and "unclean spirits" operate most conveniently in the darkness of night, and for some reason hard to account for, like to appear to associate themselves with the dead. And would fain make us think them the spirits of our dead. Maybe they are ashamed of their chief relative and control! (See 1 Sam. 28: 7-14.)

The medium in this case no doubt had known the Prophet Samuel, and it was no great mystery that the familiar spirit actuating her had learned through Samuel, the prophecy delivered before his death, and reproduced on the occasion of Saul's visit to her.

And furthermore, God had, as early as the days of Eden, pronounced the sentence of death on all men, and Satan need not risk a great deal in telling him he was going to die. The familiar spirit does not claim to more than repeat himself, so personifying Samuel says:—

And the Lord hath done to him as he spake by me.—V. 17.

Supernatural, invisible powers may be distinguished generally as to their being good or evil, firstly by their mode of procedure among men, and secondly by the tendency of their teaching and their effects on the minds of men and society.

If evil, they seek at once, by some supernatural open display of their power, to bind the agency and supersede the necessity of its exercise, through testing the evidence by a recourse to logic and reason. The ocular demonstration cannot be accounted for by ordinary reason. You cannot down a miracle by reason! No room in such a case for a negative, or a denial. The mind thus once chained, reason is forestalled, and hence agency in man is useless.

But God gave the endowment—agency—to man, and hence is never so inconsistent as to proceed to teach man his truth in such mode as to bind, and forestall the use of his agency to begin with. Hence, he appeals to our "reason" first (Isa. 1: 18), and sends his servants out to "teach" first, and promises to send the confirming power afterward; provided we believe and obey.

No theory of reformation is enjoined or taught by evil spirits, nothing to purify and elevate morally; but with divine manifestations there invariably is enjoined a separation from sin and all dishonesty, and the practice of that which purifies, advances in intelligence, and elevates to the higher aims and nobler purpose in this life, with a view to a perfectly pure, holy, and undefiled life to come.

The effect of the teaching of Satanic agencies is a searing of the conscience, and a blunting of the moral sensibilities, till there is indifference to honesty, reverence to God, chastity, virtue, moral purity, and the elevating principles of Godliness. They finally lead to a denial of the deity of Christ, and his resurrection, and the doctrinal foundation of the Christian hope. They also deny the existence, absolutely, of the personality of God.

With a mixture of truth and error, the better calculated to deceive; they usually admit some or all of the varied phases of Pantheism or Deism, usually leading to idolatry in some form. In the earlier ages of the world, all the visible universe was an infinite collection and temple of gods, to be worshiped by mankind. In later times the material objects, sun, moon and stars, beasts and images were not gods; but he was the soul of the universe, material things being but indices pointing the eye to him, they being adored in worship as his representatives. While in modern times he is, by many who are influenced by evil spirits, held to be that which is diffused through or in all the natural creation, or is the essence of all good.

It is not, however, with the intention of giving the history of the doctrines of devils of all the past, that reference is here made to their doctrines relating to God, though it may be essential to refer to some of their teachings occasionally, to illustrate our subject, and demonstrate the truth of the prophetic warnings and verify the fact of Deception's Reign. Evil spirits and sorcerers teach "doctrines of devils," as well as work miracles and show wonders. And one of the sad things to contemplate is, these evil, seductive spirits have invaded, and will yet invade the territory of the Christian church, and lead some captive at their will.

Joseph the Seer stated in 1831, as quoted heretofore, "Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations;" what a sweeping statement in its scope. And the question is, Is it true? And if the nations are being deceived, will the church among the peoples of those nations remain unaffected from these deceptions? Should not the warning voice be lifted, and the dangers be pointed out, so far as we may be able? Will the saints and friends be diligent to heed the warning?

A great opportunity is afforded his satanic majesty to operate at the present time in all the religious realm, from the fact that a great doctrinal laxity exists there. Well-defined doctrinal lines are fading away. Some of the churches of leading character are losing their doctrinal identity, because of the boasted doctrinal liberality falsely so called. Liberal leaders are leading the people away from the old lines of sacred faith and doctrine; but where are they going? Have they no certain standard of doctrine and faith? Nothing on which they can agree? No religious compass to direct their course? For centuries these leading minds have been unable to agree to a certainty as to what the Bible teaches. To them it is therefore no infallible guide. The uncertain state of religious affairs, in the religious world to-day, is astounding! There seems to be nothing demonstrably certain about the systems of religion existing, except the fact that they are uncertain, unsatisfactory to their leading minds.

How strange! How astonishing this fact!

Doctrine, if true, is a statement of some fact or truth, with the evidence to sustain it.

True doctrine invariably embodies principle.

False doctrine is based on no principle, and hence the resort to some extraordinary wonder of some form to hide this fact, by thus superceding the necessity of investigating before accepting. Some of the brightest minds of the ages have been led captive by false spirits, through failing to recognize this trueism, and allowing a wonderful operation of some form to have precedence over the fact or truth of principle. And many more will yet be led to confusion and deception for this same reason; "for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations." Speaking of our day, Jesus says:—

And many false prophets shall rise and shall deceive many.—Matt. 24: 11.

With the foundations of religious faith all being broken up, as they are at the present, and in the midst of the consequent great and absolute uncertainty consequent upon such state of religious affairs, Deception's Reign can easily triumph, and Satan's victorious march be rendered easy!

The spiritual anarchy, so popularly prevalent to-day, but prepares the soil for a rich harvest of deceived followers at the time of harvest—the end of this world.

So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn.—Matt. 13: 27-30.

He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels.—Verses 37-39.

The forecast here presented by our Savior is vast, both in results and extent; comprehending, as it does, the world and its fortunes, and reaching as it does, clear down and onward to "the end of this world," even the harvest. Two great agents sowing: one righteous principles of doctrine—seed, the harvest, wheat, souls gathered into eternal life; the other, Satan, sowing false notions, absurd ideas, wicked deceptive theories, and working miracles to fasten them on the world,—the crop—tares, children of the wicked one,—“the Devil that deceived them” (Rev. 20: 10).

The Devil is not dead else God would be dealing with myths at the judgment. He is alive, and diligently at work, till the end of the world. Is it any wonder, in view of what is portrayed in these statements of our Savior and the prophets, that the Father has in ages gone, as well as now, sent forth the warnings—“He shall bruise thy heel”?

Then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word [of God] out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.—Luke 8: 12.

Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour.—1 Peter 5: 8.

Satan, the angel enemy of mankind,—the Abaddon in Hebrew, and called Apollyon in Greek,—once the holy and perfect messenger of God (Ezek. 28: 14, 15), became a libertine, a disregarder of the holy law, perverted the use of his agency; wrecked his own responsibility, and fell from light, power, and glory divine, in mansions of glory, and “as lightning” fell from heaven (Luke 10: 18). And willfully turning away from the truth, it was one of the most natural things in the world to deal in lies. What else could he do?

There is, religiously speaking, but the two realms to be occupied. One of light, holiness, and truth; the other the kingdom of darkness, falsehood, and deception. When the Devil or anyone else leaves one, he necessarily goes into the other. To some not in the kingdom of light, Jesus said:—

Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it. And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.—John 8: 44, 45.

Many of earth's children have been seduced by his devices; and of them has he reared a kingdom of darkness (Col. 1: 13), and entrenched himself as a “strong man” (Matt. 12: 29). Exalted himself to a throne over the kingdoms of this world and their glory (Matt. 4: 8, 9), and presides “the prince of this world” (John 14: 30). Under his satanic majesty are “principalities,” and “powers;” and over these, yet under his dignified sway, are “the rulers of the darkness of this world;” and the character of this government is “spiritual wickedness in high places” (Eph. 6: 11, 12).

In a late revelation this institution is designated “the church of the Devil.” And they are identified as being one, and the same as the statement of the Apostle Paul, that this is what he warred or wrestled against, and the statement wherein we are told to “contend against no church, save it be the church of the Devil.” (D. and C. 16: 4). This church of the Devil is the sum total of all “spiritual wickedness,” error, lies, corruptness, and deception, and of all evil devices; and will take the full time allotted to this department of the preacher's work, without contending against any of these minor institutions—churches of men. “Spiritual wickedness” legitimately leads up into the religious realms, and consequently when Paul or John, sometimes in their preaching, array error and truth side by side, the better to expose the falsity of error and deception, some of the error seems so closely allied to what some of the churches of men hold as religious belief, that to the superficial thinker he seems to be contending against men's churches. But in this age of many human churches, and where some little truth and so much error and deceptive doctrine are so intermingled, it does seem as though, when striking at the error, that he was contending against the churches of men, though the servant of God is in reality exposing falsehood,—that only.

Just at this point in our investigation, this question assumes several sides and many phases; a slight complexity enters into its consideration. Truth and error are interwoven and so thoroughly mixed in the religious realm under existing condition of things, that the aggregate wisdom of all the religiously inclined, after several hundred years' effort, have been absolutely unable to separate and sever the truth of God that saves from the error that kills (James 5: 20), to the satisfaction of their followers. And with no universally acknowledged standard of truth to determine the merits of the work of separating when done, the world is between the upper and nether millstones of fate in the matter, and the world without God's direct aid by revelation on the subject is absolutely without hope for the near or remote future.

What a dilemma this is; but it is as true as religious divisions exist. But of this fact of the hopeless condition of the world over this matter, many of earth's children are now painfully, sorrowfully aware. And is not Satan aware of it, too? Surely he is.

The number of persons proceeded against for drunkenness in England and Wales during the year 1897 was 193,276, compared with 187,258 in 1896; 168,398 persons were convicted, 159,997 being fined and 7,741 sent to prison. No record is kept of the ages of those proceeded against by the way of summons, but of the 163,398 persons who were convicted, 110,739 were taken in charge.

Editors Herald:—There are no Latter Day Saints in this immediate section, except Bro. Lick Woods and myself. Bro. Woods was baptized and confirmed by Bro. J. D. Erwin, who last year came into this neighborhood, and for eight days and nights,—with the help of E. A. Erwin, his brother, who rode thirty miles from Manchester to help him for a day or two,—labored to show the truth of the gospel, as taught in ancient days, and in the days while our Lord Jesus and his humble followers walked in the light and Spirit of the God of Israel, whom we have been taught was and is unchangeable. While here at that time these two brother elders were sent for to come to the bedsides of some sick, who were administered to, as taught by Jesus Christ the Lord, found in Mark 16: 18, and also as taught in James, fifth chapter; since that time Bro. Jeff Erwin has been here preaching, and the other brother has come as often as possible; and for the benefit of the isolated saints, I will say that the writer was very sick for over a week, when a neighbor who believes the truth came in one day after I had even been out of my head, and said he would go after Bro. E. A. Erwin, thirty miles away. The elder arrived late the next evening and administered to me, at which time I was healed, and immediately got up. After that several of my family were sick about a month later. He came and anointed five, who recovered and in two days went to the field to pick cotton. Since that we have had very good health. I do sincerely thank our Lord for the blessings bestowed and for a knowledge of the gospel truth.

Bro. Lick Wood, is a faithful believer in the truth, and a great change has been made in his daily walk, showing his enjoyment and faith in the gospel. When he was baptized, Satan got very mad and had his imp burn our arbor. But Bro. J. D. Erwin did not stop preaching until his time was up. May the Lord bless all his people, that we may live more faithful and pray continually, and in mercy and power remember our president, Joseph Smith, and all the elders in their administrations, and every trial that we must pass through.

Saints, pray for us, for we remember you all. It is written, we are to be tried in the fire of adversity. If you are poor, remember Jesus had not where to lay his head; and of course when you embrace this gospel and live it, the friends you had in other days will revile you, at least mine have, and turned cold and proved false. But when you see all these things, know you the time is nigh at hand.

I had the pleasure of attending the saints' conference at Shawnee Prairie last June. We felt joy and satisfaction in meeting Bishop Hilliard, Elders I. P. Baggerly, J. D. and E. A. Erwin, Ellis Short, E. D. Bailey, Kent, and Dolby. God bless the faithful elders who are not afraid of the scorn of this world. The love and blessing of the Father was with his people. While there we saw the sick healed and heard the gospel of the kingdom that our Lord Jesus Christ said would be preached to all the world for a witness, and then should the end come. May the will of our Lord be ever near and dear to his saints, and may they transgress not, but abide in the doctrine of Christ, and have both the Father and the Son, and pray continually, and love his appearing.

Yours in the faith,

JOHN E. TOWNES.

SUMNER, Okla., Nov. 1.

Editors Herald.—It has been some time since I have troubled your columns, not because there has been no news of interest to write, but because others have done the reporting. We have been very busy this year. Tent work began the first of April, and we just folded it for the winter October 27.

This has certainly been a successful year for Oklahoma. It seems that the saints have all tried to do their part, hence a general advancement all along the line. When the saints are up and doing, the adversary is also on the alert. First, A. B. Carlin, a Baptist minister, lectured against us at Tonkawa. We were not able to answer him at the time, but intend to yet. Brn. Maloney, W. S. Macrae, and writer, held a meeting at Morrison in May and June, resulting in eight accessions, and stirring up those whose craft seemed to be in danger. One, Elder Dunkleburger took it upon himself to tell the people who and what we were.

Bro. Crawley was present and heard the elder, but was informed that he must be silent, not even being permitted to ask a question. At the close of the meetings Bro. Crawley announced an answer to take place in September. Bro. Smith and the writer attended to that, and the Lord blessed us, so the work did not lose anything, and the saints seemed well satisfied that the work was able to stand, and each rubbing only makes it shine the brighter.

While our tabernacle was at Clayton, in July, the Christians thought our success would be their downfall. So they secured a man and came on the battle grounds; but when they arrived, their man was not prepared to meet us, so arrangements were made for a discussion to take place October 18. Bro. Macrae to represent the saints and J. W. Coats the Campbellites. The debate began at the appointed time, and to say it was a complete victory for our cause, is putting it mildly. Even the Christians themselves, many of them, admitted their defeat. There were rumors during the debate that they would challenge Bro. Macrae to repeat it, but at the close one of their ministers said they had enough. Their stock in trade was the usual trash pile: Beadle, Smucker, J. D. Lee, Bays, etc.

The Lord blessed Bro. Macrae wonderfully throughout the entire debate; to his name be all the praise for the victory. I herewith append an affidavit, which may be of benefit to the ministry in meeting the Campbellites, showing their practice.

"I was attending a meeting held in Coffeyville, Kansas, 1890, if I remember right, and there I may have been convicted of sin, at least I was not converted, as I have since found out; but at the time another boy named Cooper and I thought ourselves converted, so we went to a pond and proceeded to baptize each other in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. I was received into the Christian (Campbellite) Church at Pawnee, O. T., by Elder Dunkleburger, on the aforesaid baptism, at the organization of the Pawnee Christian Church, in the early part of 1895, if I remember the date right.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 28.

Editors Herald.—Our district conference at San Bernardino was a success in every way. Peace, harmony, and good will prevailed throughout the entire session. Brn. Griffiths, Barmore, Chatburn, and Williams were the speakers. Brn. Gibson, Earl, Jones, Dana, and Wixom assisting. The conference adjourned to meet with Los Angeles branch the first Friday in March, 1900. All the district officials were sustained except the secretary who resigned, and Sr. Maggie Pankey, a bright, energetic, young sister was appointed in his stead. Brn. Griffiths, Williams, Harris, Chatburn, and Barmore were selected as delegates to the General Conference of 1900.

One particularly encouraging feature of the conference was the informal meetings where church polity and usages were freely discussed. It was clearly manifest that the saints, as a rule, are densely ignorant on many points of the law. This will apply with equal force outside of California. Some of the questions were: When grievances arise, what course should be pursued by the parties affected? When parties are dissatisfied with a branch court decision, how should they make their appeal, and to whom? Is the district court an appellant court? Who renders the decision in cases before the High Council, the members of the council or the president? What are the prerogatives of district officers? of branch officers? of missionary in charge? of sub-missionary in charge? also of the members? Can the members be held to an accounting for deliberate refusal to attend church and partake of the sacrament?

These and many other questions were freely considered and a general unanimity of sentiment arrived at. If the ministry and membership were clearly informed on all these questions, much unnecessary friction would be avoided and general harmony prevail. Bro. Griffiths' plan in this is quite an innovation, but it has been everywhere complimented, and particularly by the ministry; even the "Jot" man and his "Douglas of the Seventy," Bro. F. M. Sheehy, are in touch therewith.

Bro. Griffiths, when he goes into a place, calls the branch or district officers together and takes them into his confidence, and at once secures their cooperation. He treats them as his equal.

We have inaugurated a cleaning up all along the line. First, we shall plow the field and mellow the soil around each plant. We will continue to nurture those which show evidence of life. We will pluck up the lifeless ones and cast them out. We propose to prune the priesthood likewise. In this district there are some seven hundred members, and about sixty holding the priesthood. It is proposed to stimulate all the official force to action, and—as priesthood is solely conferred for action—those who fail to respond will be called upon to deliver up their license, and thus give place for others who will act.

I cannot account for the lethargy of so many of the local priesthood. In their sphere their responsibility is comparable with that of the general ministry, and should they fail to perform the duty imposed, they will be condemned in the day of accounting. As God said: "With some I am not well pleased, for they will not open their mouths, but hide the talent which I have given unto them, because of the fear of men. Woe be unto such, for mine anger is kindled against them. And it shall come to pass, if they are not more faithful unto me, it shall be taken away, even that which they have, for I, the Lord, ruleth in the heavens above, and among the armies of the earth; and in the day when I shall make up my jewels, all men shall know what it is that bespeaketh the power of God."—Doc. and Cov. 60: 1, 2.

It is due to God, likewise the church, that every man holding a license should render efficient service and acquit himself, otherwise he should return his license, stating his inability or unwillingness so to do. An idle priesthood is the most prolific soil for satanic manipulation. It will always produce insurrection in branch or district, where permitted to remain. We hope to have our records cleared of most of the objectionable characters before the General Conference.

This, to my mind, is the best way to prepare for the gathering. See to it that the law is kept now, and when we carry into operation what God has enjoined for us in our scattered condition, then he will give us a passport Zionward.

The work in Los Angeles shows signs of growth. In all of Southern California, conditions here have been the most obstinate to yield to the sanitary measures of the gospel. Grievances, deep-seated and of months' and years' duration, are not to be removed in a day; but the tide has turned, and with proper nursing and a strict gospel dietary, there is no reason why the church here should not be convalescent.

All our branches are fairly equipped with officers, and with a little training, some of the young men can be prepared for divine assignment in the harvest field. We have some bright young men in this district who, if humble, will be of great service to the Master.

Our new Los Angeles church building is completed. Everybody is delighted with it. Brethren who know, say it will compare favorably with any building we have in the church. The lot and all will cost us in the neighborhood of three thousand dollars. This includes carpet, seats, light fixtures, baptistry, etc. We have good crowds since the formal opening. While in the hall it was an exception to see an out-sider, thus far in the new building they have exceeded the membership in point of numbers in nearly every service. Brn. Chatburn and Barmore are with us for the winter. We are sanguine of good results.

With well wishes,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

Editors Herald:—It is some time since I have written for your columns, but feel to say, we as a little band of saints in this part of God's vineyard are trying to do our duty. Elder George F. Green president, and Bro. Moroni Traxler priest of Lindsley branch, visited the saints at their homes, talked, read, and prayed with them. The saints of this branch feel encouraged by the example of its officers. Those who attended London and Petrolea Sunday school convention and conference feel filled with gratitude to our heavenly Father for his loving kindness, and for the gifts of the gospel bestowed upon his people in these the latter days. Our aged brother, Elder John Shippy of Lamoni, was present. He baptized a number of the saints who obeyed the gospel years ago. He was a welcome visitor to Canada.

Elder R. C. Evans and Elder George Green are visiting and preaching at Cedar Springs and other places. We trust much good may be done, for according to the instruction of the Spirit of God, the time is short for the reapers to garner the sheaves. The word has been sown in faith; the seed has borne fruit. Those who have obeyed the gospel are commanded to stand firm and true, for the Lord will come quickly, and his reward will be with him. May God continue to bless his people, and may we strive to prove faithful, is the earnest wish and prayer of your writer.

Your sister,
MARY M. GREEN.

COIN, Iowa, Nov. 5.

Editors Herald:—To the dear isolated saints who have not church privileges like myself, I feel to write of the blessed experiences I was a witness to yesterday, at Shenandoah, Iowa, in their sacrament meeting, as I have not had the privilege of attending there for nearly a year; and oh! what a blessed privilege it was to me to meet with them once more.

First, in the morning was Sabbath school, and a very interesting one, of which Sr. Pace is superintendent, and is surely one of the most humble and faithful and best that it has been my lot to witness. Go on in faith, dear sister, and great will be your reward; for I have a witness of the Spirit that God directs you in all your ways, and that is the reason you are so successful. And I noticed such good teachers in the Sabbath school; Sr. Redfield, Sr. Beckstead, although I think she does not belong there, but was a visitor, but taught the little class very efficiently; also Sr. Fanny White, and others that I did not know or do not remember their names now. The Sabbath school was most excellent throughout.

O how I do pray that the way may be opened that I and my little daughter seven year old may have the privilege of attending such a Sabbath school, if I am nearly fifty years old. I never wanted more earnestly to attend Sabbath school and learn than now; for I do earnestly desire a greater knowledge of the things of God.

Then came the preaching services, which were conducted by Bro. James Roberts, and I could not but notice how he had advanced under the knowledge of the teachings of the Spirit since I heard him last. His words of wisdom were a feast to my soul, for I do hunger after more righteousness and more knowledge and wisdom.

But the greatest feast, like the wine of Cana, was kept until the last, when we all met at three in the afternoon for sacrament meeting, where the Spirit was poured out upon us in tongues and prophecy, when Bro. James Roberts spoke in prophecy to us, that the angels rejoiced in heaven over our coming together there, and that our sins were forgiven us, and that his angels had charge concerning us, and that we should be faithful in keeping all God's commands, and that everything should work for our good if faithful; for the time was near at hand when the powers of the heavens would be shaken and the Son of Man should be seen coming in the clouds of glory; that great calamities should fall upon the wicked; that the time was very near at hand when we should have to flee to the land of Zion for safety; that we should be fervent in prayer often that we might keep the Holy Spirit for our guide. Then he commenced speaking in tongues and came down among the congregation and spoke to a good many individually and to part collectively; to Bro. Heber Wilcox, that he was called to preach this gospel the rest of his days, in the place of his father, old Bro. S. S. Wilcox, who was such a sainted elder, as I have reason to know by experience, as I have received great spiritual blessing under his administration; and that his father's prayers were ascending to heaven continually in his behalf that he would preach this gospel; also Bro. Redfield was called to associate with him, for there was a great work to be done in that region where they lived; and words of admonition were given to their wives and to Sr. Fanny White, Father Wilcox's daughter; also great words of encouragement and blessing to Sr. Davis, Bro. Cline's sister, for her faithfulness of heart; and to Bro. and Sr. Dungee, that he was called to preach and admonished to see that the members were faithful in prayer, as he is the branch priest I believe; and to Sr. Pace for her faithfulness in the Sabbath school; and Sr. Beckstead, and Bro. Cline, and Bro. Shaw, and several others that I do not remember their names; and to me, which I remember the plainest of all, for it was written on the tablets of my heart and in my very inmost being, which I shall never forget; and to Sr. Wood: "Thus saith the Spirit: be faithful in keeping all my commands and obey all my laws and in praying fervently morning, noon, and night, and thou shall be greatly blessed. Mine angels shall have charge concerning thee, for thou art a chosen one of the Lord; and at this time thy sins are forgiven thee, and the dark cloud that is hanging over thee shall be removed, and the light shall shine the brighter in consequence of it; so be of good cheer, for everything shall work together for your good."

What a glorious blessing for us weak children to receive from the hands of our heavenly Father. Bro. Roberts must have been nearly half an hour delivering it all.

How I do thank my heavenly Father for such great blessings; and as I stayed all night with Bro. and Sr. Dungee and their son, I must not forget to add how I enjoyed my stay in their clean, pure, and holy home, that I should think the Holy Spirit would be pleased to take up an abode; and Bro. and Sr. Cline's where I took dinner, may the Lord richly reward their kind and honest hearts. So passed a day in heavenly places.

May God richly bless and keep all his dear children, is my prayer.

JOSEPHENE WOOD.

THE WORK IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

CHILLIWACK, B. C., Nov. 3.

Editors Herald:—It is with feelings of gratitude I pen you a few thoughts relative to the mission assigned me by our worthy mission president, R. C. Evans. The 12th of July found me aboard train at Toronto, enroute for this distant field. I don't know whether I started out in the scriptural manner or not, for I had two suits and both worn at the same time. The outer one was none other than genuine blue overall stuff, costing something less than a dollar. It took off all the preacher peculiarity; however, I felt quite at home when I boarded that second class car surrounded by all classes and kinds, comprising, John Chinaman, black man, and Indian. I chummed it fairly well with my friend from the Celestial empire; not from celestial glory, but from t'other side of earth.

After four and one half days of rough riding on those washboard colonist seats I arrived at Vancouver and in a few hours took ship for Nanaimo. Arrived at Nanaimo in due time and at once started a hunt for Bro. William Johnston, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa. Located him eventually and received a hearty welcome. In a day or so we started work in Nanaimo by distributing hundreds of tracts from house to house, preaching gospel wherever we could. A hall was procured forthwith and we started services. After holding about six services, in which our audience dwindled from five or six to nothing, we quit and struck out to a neighboring town called Wellington, advertised, and preached a few times here with same result as at Nanaimo. Bro. Johnston assisted me nobly in paying for halls and opening my meetings. Came back again to Nanaimo, tried preaching once more at another part of city, but could not make it go; apparently the time had not come for this place to hear the word. Why! I couldn't even get the preachers mad; so you may judge how far down in spirituality they were.

I was now wondering where to go next, there were saints on the mainland, but I had no money to go there; moreover I could not bring my walking apparatus in working order without much faith, as there were thirty miles of ocean to traverse. In these moments of wonderment and waiting I received a letter from a brother inclosing ten dollars; hereupon I packed up all I had and put to mainland and was soon in the home of Bro. and Sr. Rainey. I came here with expectations of holding services, but circumstances rendered it impossible for the present. It will not be necessary for me to describe my feelings, I was practically a stranger in a strange land where the gospel never had been preached, hence no body of saints.

Learning that Bro. McMullen was living up the Fraser River, sixty miles back in country, and working out among the farmers, I determined to find him and see what could be done toward preaching in his country; so I packed one valise with change of underwear and a few books and finally arrived in Chilliwack region. After much inquiry I spotted his saintship five miles out of town hired out on a farm. Tarried that night with him and next day being Sunday we struck out to hunt up a suitable place to preach. After walking about eight miles we obtained a school and got out announcements for that evening. Good turnout and splendid liberty in telling the Pentecostal story.

I now began to experience the marvelous watchcare of the dear Master, for I was a stranger among the people and save the all-kind One should interfere I certainly should want. Some of my experiences at this time were quite amusing; one day after walking four miles with wet feet I went into a stranger's house to talk gospel. It was now 12:30; dinner was over, dishes on the table, but I wasn't offered even a smell. They didn't want to talk gospel, and soon all hands, except a blind man, went off to town leaving me to enjoy my splendid company. Presently the blind man left me and started sawing wood; but I was not alone, for the "enemy of all righteousness" now stepped in and began his violent temptations of "eat, drink, and be merry for to-morrow you may die." 'Twas the same old story "forbidden fruit," or rather "forbidden dinner." To make a long story short I briefly say I did eat; yea, I did eat, for by this time my dinner regions were very gaunt. Beans, milk, bread, and butter vanished, while my once jaded slim form now assumed a "corpulent corporosity."

My dinner over, the tempter now suggested the advisability of traveling with all possible haste, but after successfully opposing his satanic majesty, I sat me down to think if the Scripture did not bear me out in my recent relished meal; all of a sudden the stories of David eating shewbread, the apostles stealing corn, and the Master sending the Twelve after the ass, dawned upon me. I was now a new creature, so patiently I waited the home coming of the "lord of the household." He came, but looked fire and thunder; thereupon I quietly confessed to landlady my hollowness, temptations, and fullness, and hastily beat a retreat toward the place of my evening preaching. Upon arriving I put on a roaring fire, it being wet and cold, and so far as I could see I would doubtless be elected to tarry all night. A few came out and at close of service a stranger invited me home. To wind up the incident, I got no supper, but went in the strength of those beans till next morning—but enough along these lines.

The preachers now began to slander and misrepresent. A Presbyterian started the business by advertising an exposé of "Mormonism." I cancelled my appointment and with my crowd attended. At conclusion I got privilege to speak. I had not spoken long when the preacher jumped up and tried to stop me. It was a matter now of who could talk the loudest and longest. His reverence got outwinded, and sat down, while I proceeded merrily along. He soon left; great good was done. Slander nevertheless still rolled along until it assumed genuine persecuting proportions, on this wise: I had received consent to hold meetings in a school above six miles distant from my first appointment; I had held a few and had appointments out for over following Sunday, moreover the key of school was in my possession, having been delivered me by one of trustees.

I preached the Friday evening previous to the Sunday in question, without molestation; but upon arriving at school Sunday evening I found a large crowd outside of school waiting to get in. While busied unlocking door one of trustees came up demanding key, saying I could not preach there. I asked him to state his reasons. He replied, "You're a thief." I thanked him and at once addressed the audience, relating circumstances which entirely justified my entering school. I called for an expression by show of hands if I was not justified to open door, enter school, and preach. An almost unanimous vote sustained me. Hereupon I unlocked door and pushed it open there being a prop inside. The two inner doors were so barred on inside that muscular strength would not budge them, hence I came out and preached to an interested throng from the school steps. At close of service a gentleman offered his carpenter shop for services, so next day we fitted all up and over door on outside painted in large, bold letters "LIBERTY HALL." Crowds kept coming out. In a couple of days a policeman served me a summons for "unlawfully breaking open the door of a school," to appear in ten days or so. Interest was now at a boiling pitch; prejudice ran high. The well-believed rumor was that since the preachers and M. P. P. and leading church people were against me, I'd be sent down for a period somewhere between three and twelve years. The J. P. I was to appear before was none other than a Presbyterian chief gun, whose preacher I had flogged with the truth and even with the J. P. himself I had previously had some altercation. Thus prejudice stared me in the face, but none of these things moved me so long as I might finish my course with joy. All I dreaded was a fine and my friends paying it, then me staying in the country to bear the brunt of public censure; so in Nature's silent wood I retired and prayed that I might get a term in jail rather than have a fine imposed.

I hastily collected witnesses, twenty-eight all told, some of whom I think would swear a little more than truth in order to clear me. If I never had friends before I had them now. The day of trial came at last, a long weary wait. The courthouse was jammed; they had come for miles. I had no lawyer, having no money to hire one in time. But how did the trial come off? Just as court was about to sit the J. P. came to me privately saying if I would only apologize for entering school that my accusers would withdraw their charge. I replied, "No, sir!" that if I did it would give the public to understand I was in the wrong and my influence would be gone. "Well," says the J. P., "I'll have to send you down for trial." This meant I would have to go to jail until fall assizes unless he would let me be bailed out. "All right," says I, "I can't help it; I'll not apologize." He left me but returned in a little while pleading once more that I apologize, but I was as staunch as ever. What think you, Bro. Joseph, was the man competent to sit on my case when he thus passed judgment before he heard the matter? He returned the third time asking if I would go with my accusers before Judge Bole who had just come down from Westminster. "Yes," I replied, "I'll do all I can to effect a reconciliation." Accordingly my opponents and myself went into the ante-chamber before His Worship Judge Bole. Thank heaven for a fair dealing earthly judge; he heard both stories of the "door-breaking charge" and at once advised my opponents to withdraw charges. They consented, and His Worship went out and announced the decision before the assembled throng; then the cheering began. I was still a free man, while my opponents were chagrined and became the objects of public contempt.

Would I be surmising if I said some of the preachers were behind the men who urged this cowardlike, ungentlemanly charge? Shall I say it was the M. P. P. and his clique of bigoted Presbyterians who were the Pharisees in this case? Nay! I forbear saying so, as wisdom justifies silence at present.

Time and space forbid me telling much more of the peculiar incidents sublime, ridiculous, and devilish that continually linger round the pathway of the missionary. Preachers now went it like mad with scurrilous yarns, while I was kept busied preaching from house to house, preaching nearly every night and walking from six to ten miles every day. Baptist preacher advertised a slander to be preached, "Latter Day Saints on a parallel with Romanism." I attended with my crowd, and at close challenged him to debate; he refused. I at once took the stand and replied to his trash; preacher went, while I felt glorious in telling the good old story till dark.

Success at last has crowned my efforts; twenty-two have just been baptized, all adults, and fine, intelligent saints they are. Many more are interested; am just in midst of a big work. We want more men.

I may say in conclusion by way of testimony that when I landed in this mission I had something less than a dollar, and although I have been fighting on new ground continually, I've never gone hungry, athirst, or unclothed. To that all-wise and ever-watchful Father I try to raise my feeble voice in heartfelt praise.

Editors Herald:—I should like to make an appeal through the Herald, in behalf of the gospel of the Reorganized Church being preached in Scotland. None of the missionaries to Europe have ever been in Scotland, so we want some one sent, not to the European mission, but to Scotland. There was once a branch of the church at Penston; now they are all dead or scattered. The lamentation of a lonely old sister was, No one ever came to see us. Others say, Scotland has been long neglected. There are four districts of Utah Mormons: Glasgow, Edinburg, Dundee, and Aberdeen. For years the church has had missionaries in England and Wales; but it is over twenty years since there was one in Scotland. It is said the Scot is clannish; but what of the English and Welsh; are they clannish? We want help to start the work in Scotland, hence our appeal. Who will come? Come who will, they will be welcome. We will be thankful.

Yours sincerely,

WILLIAM PENMAN CAIRNS.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., —.

Editors Herald:—There are times when my spirit seems to be wrapt in thoughts and wonder over this our life we now are living, and over the plan of salvation which the Lord God has been so merciful to reveal to his children. Thoughts cannot express my gratitude and thankfulness to my heavenly Father for his tender mercy towards me and to those tender plants which he placed in my care.

I often think and meditate in what way I could show the greatest appreciation for the knowledge and gift of this gospel of Jesus Christ, which when its requirements are complied with will enlighten our minds and help us to see and overcome our weaknesses, and in general give us better principles in life than we ever had or could have had outside of the gospel.

Well my answer is this: that I will strive by the help of God's Spirit to live up to the principles and requirements of the gospel that I may not bring any reproach on the same either through unwise words or actions before the church or the world, but that in all things the Spirit of Christ may be manifested in and through me, and in this way, as I understand it, the name of the Lord will be glorified.

These few thoughts came so forcibly to my mind this morning that I could not refrain from leaving my work a few minutes and writing them, thinking perhaps sometime in the future they might drop into the hands of a soul inquiring the way of life and salvation.

Editors Herald:—Please consider this proposition and report the result through the Herald. Resolved, that the baptized believer is the antitype of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. JOHN B. PORTER.

GREEN LAKE, Wash., Nov. 4.

Editors Herald:—It has been so long since I intruded upon your sanctum that I am not sure but I need a letter of introduction. However I am of the opinion that the letter of Bro. D. L. Harris in a late issue will serve that purpose for both Bro. Holt and me.

Well, we are still here in this "playground," and it is not only a good place to dig and eat clams, but we find that work is plentiful too. The results may not always be what we could wish, nor—when we labor according to the wishes of those whom the Lord, through his "overseers," has placed in charge of his work—is the work always directed just when and where we, individually, might think best and most congenial; still we have never yet lacked for work. While some fault has been found in the direction of the field laborers in times past, still in looking backward with that sight that is generally a little clearer than our view of future events, we are not sure that there is any serious "mistake" recorded against those in charge of the work in these regions; but are rather of the opinion that, as far as our connection with them in this work has gone (and that has been now of nearly three years' duration), the record will be, They have done what they could.

Our summer's work has been very hard in some ways this year. Perhaps especially so to me, as I have had more work in the city than usual. I was raised in the country and like country work and country methods best. Yet as the commission is unto "all the world," we have tried to do our part by Seattle this summer. Just at present we are holding a series of meetings at Ballard, a city of about five thousand, near here. They opened last night. What the outcome may be there we know not, but an honest effort, at least, will be recorded.

I believe Bro. Holt reported the work up to our Mt. Vernon effort, and that, partially. Well, at that place the visible results were a well-filled tent (sometimes as many outside as could get in), two baptisms, and many invitations to return, with the promise of more to be baptized when we did go. From there to Anacortes (twenty miles) was made by team kindly furnished by Mr. Penn. Your writer was the teamster, and after taking the gospel tent and equipments, together with Bro. Holt and the writer's family, to that point, drove the team back the next day (having first hauled lumber for seats and assisted in setting up the tents), and mounting a wheel (a late acquisition of my wife's), I rode back to Anacortes in time to assist in the first service there. This is a part of the routine exercises of this "playground." Well, the move was accomplished (tent taken down, moved, put up, seated, and preaching began) without missing an evening's service. At Anacortes the interest was not as intense nor the attendance as good as at Mt. Vernon, yet one was baptized, and, I think, an effectual opening made. We remained here for about one week, Bro. Holt going back to Mt. Vernon on his wheel the Sunday following our arrival here, and the writer occupying in the gospel tent. The date of this was September 24.

From here we returned by boat to Seattle, and then by train to Ellensburg. Here from the 1st of October to the 8th inclusive was spent in an effort to get the people to hear. "But they would not." It was rather cool and very windy here for gospel tent work, and so your writer was not sorry when the tent was rolled up and we turned our faces toward Roslyn. Again we traveled by team, this time furnished by Bro. Sheldon and driven by Bro. Lake, both of Ellensburg. At Roslyn we were saddened by finding our sister, Mary Holmes, in the last stages of consumption. They had telegraphed for us to come but we were already on the road and hence missed the message. We did what we could for our sister, but the Master took her home and we laid her to rest the 16th, being granted the use of the Free Methodist church for the funeral services, Elder Holt preaching. Her death occurred the 14th. She died in hope of the glorious resurrection of Christ. She was a faithful wife and saint and the work at Roslyn misses her greatly. At Roslyn seven services were held, all—except the funeral service—at private houses. The saints here are trying to get a place of their own to worship in. I think they will succeed.

From here we returned to Orting where we left the tent equipage, and after holding a series of services, six in number, returned to Seattle. We have located my family at Green Lake and the little ones are attending school. Just at present we are holding services at Ballard. Not many have been out to hear, so far, but we hope for better things as the days go by. We made an attempt at this point—Green Lake—but were denied the use of the hall after one service. Still we think an opening will be made here partly as the result.

I think I wrote you last from Bandon, Oregon, and since that time, and before joining Bro. Holt with the tent, I baptized one at Cottage Grove (I believe I told you of the nine baptized at Bandon), and coming on up with Bro. D. L. Harris to Portland, bade him adieu there, and then to Castle Rock, where I met my family and Bro. H. L. Holt.

Well, I think I will stop this now lest I need a new introduction. What the future may bring forth in this field I know not, but "this I know," work is plenty and we are busy. Pray for us here.

Your brother in Christ,
A. M. CHASE.

Editors Herald:—I closed meetings here last night with the largest congregations had while here. Good attention was given and all seemed to be interested; subject discussed, "What must I do to be saved?" and much of the good Spirit was present. Am feeling well spiritually.

E. A. STEDMAN.

MANCHESTER, England, Oct. 28.

Editors Herald:—It is with pleasure that I take up the pen to write you and thus contribute to your interesting pages. About sixteen years ago, having a desire within me to seek him "who is full of grace and truth," I joined the Reorganized Church in this city, having proved that the teachings of men, ever varying and self contradictory, could not furnish me with a sure "soul's anchorage." Consequent on my obedience to the restored gospel, I realized afterwards the blessing and was thus led to rejoice that my search for truth had not been in vain, though for a time I had to fight my own way against prejudice and other hostile influences. However, some time afterwards my mother and sister were persuaded to follow my example, which added considerably to my satisfaction in seeing the result of my humble endeavors in the cause of "truth and righteousness."

I look upon the angel's message or restored gospel as a necessity of the times in which we live, and am thankful that honest souls can at this eventful period of the world's history be brought into communion with Jesus Christ through the cleansing efficacy of the gospel requirements and thus partake of his life-giving Spirit.

Some time ago the Roman Catholic Bishop of Salford made a statement that "The Catholic Church taught the same faith and practice as at Pentecost." I wrote to His Lordship pointing out that the statement made by him was not in accordance with the principles of doctrinal development and traditional teaching as set forth and accepted by his church. However, the Bishop, contrary to my expectations, replied to my letter, claiming, of course, "Infallibility and divine guidance against error" for the church he represented. This may to some seem reasonable, and find acceptance as a reason for changing doctrinal methods. To the humble Latter Day Saint, however, whose soul has partaken of that all-subduing, magnetic influence of God's Holy Spirit through obedience to New Testament conditions, the way of perfection in the divine life seems best exemplified in the words of the Psalmist, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." May the rich blessing of heaven rest upon all who have stepped forth from the creeds and doctrines of men in these "perilous times" in their loyalty to him whose friendship and love is worth more than the world can offer.

I hope the time is not far distant when missionaries acting upon divine pattern (D. C. 83: 15), and their souls filled with apostolic zeal for perishing men and women, will be called upon to evangelize this country, and if success is to be assured in this direction, it is certain that compliance with given conditions is as much a necessity as the preaching of gospel principles. Expediency often rules in many directions in our spiritual and temporal affairs, but to us as a people the undeniable facts of past history fully demonstrate that the principles of self-sacrifice and righteous zeal must of necessity, to be successful, ever go hand in hand with written and revealed law for the purpose of accomplishing the divine purposes.

To evolve order from chaos, light from darkness, freedom from superstition, bigotry, and priestcraft, has been and is still the work of the Reorganization, her divinely appointed mission, her sole prerogative. Human finite wisdom may sometimes endeavor to substitute "policy" for "law," but where the interests of God and eternity are concerned, let the infinite mind and will of the Lawgiver be "the man of counsel" to the exclusion of all other interests, and peace with success will attend the work of Zion's progress in the world.

The revelation of 1894 fully points out the magnitude of the work before the church, and the law bearing on tithing and other duties placed upon a righteous, equitable, and economic basis, both precept and example in personal self-abnegation are equally necessary to commend the teaching of tithing to the faithful of the church, so that confidence may be established; that the temporal means so obtained may be truly used for the purposes of the church and not for the purposes of self-aggrandizement by anyone (D. C., revelation of 1894); every member of the church being called upon to be a coworker with God for the redemption of Zion and for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all (D. C. 119: 8). Ever praying for Zion's prosperity,

Yours in gospel bonds,

Editors Herald:—I am holding meetings in the Congregational church, having large crowds, a fine interest, and good liberty in preaching the angel's message. I am domiciled at Dr. Miller's. Bro. E. F. and Sr. Ella Miller have done all they could to make home pleasant and comfortable. The Doctor has a fine practice in his profession. He has furnished me with a nice pair of new shoes, gloves, and ordered a good new mackintosh made for me; so I will be fixed to face storms. If others would look after the wants of the ministry as Dr. Miller does, it would save them much worrying. All have treated me kindly. Last Sunday night one of the trustees of the Congregational church, after meeting was dismissed, privately raised $4.00 and gave to me. I have preached on the divine mission of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. I gave them the doctrine straight and did not tear down other churches. The people are stirred for miles around. Sr.

Miller has furnished them tracts and sermons gratuitously. We are satisfied good will come of out of the effort being put forth. May God bless all who have lent us a helping hand in this meeting. The Doctor makes a fine janitor and usher pro tem.

To-morrow I expect to go to Cove, Arkansas. God speed the gospel plow till all shall have the privilege of hearing the angel's message. Hopefully, I am still one of God's weak servants battling for truth, Editors Herald:—We are still making some converts. On October 29 I had the pleasure of baptizing two very promising young men, who will be of great service to the church if faithful.

Editors Herald:—The White-Braden debate is in progress and the first proposition, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?" closed last night with success to the work. Quite a large crowd is in attendance. Elder Braden will begin affirming to-day that the Christian Church is in harmony with the New Testament church in organization and practice. Pray for us that success may crown our efforts. We are still in the faith and hope to continue.

"LINE UP!"

'Twas Sunday eve, a hundred saints or more
In wonted place were found Within the house of God; as oft before
The place seemed holy ground.

Silent and pensive, yet with mind intent
On witness, song, and prayer,
In which the swift-winged moments all were spent,

I sat, their moods to share.

Familiar tones, some sad, some full of cheer,
My supple fancy fed,
While buoyant hope, in turn with doubt or fear,
My yielding spirit led.

"Make bare thine arm if this be hast'ning day,"

I heard one loudly cry:

"Why comes not to us, Lord, some grand display?"

Inly I echoed, "Why?"

Musing a moment I devoutly sighed

For tokens, startling, sure,

On which the creeping Church might rise and ride

Triumphant, swift, secure.

Then vividly my mind beheld arise

A scene quite commonplace;

'Twas not a vision, for corporeal eyes
Its details failed to trace.
And yet I surely seemed to see and hear
What now I faint portray.
I say not 'twas the Spirit's work, yet fear
To style it fancy's play.

A wall of brick appeared; 'twas straight and long,
On which two workmen wrought;
From end to end, 'twixt corners plumb and strong,
Was stretched a line, made taut.

A brick midway along this line was laid,
And thence, trowel in hand,
Each workman, toward his corner plied the trade
He seemed to understand.

One laid each brick he seized with motion slow,
Nor ever changed its place,
And o'er the entire semi-course would go
With steady, even grace.

Nor sight, nor sound beneath, above, around,
Could once his interest gain,
Till the last brick for his set course was found
And laid, there to remain.

Not so the other, who, e'er and anon,
Spasmodic zeal displayed,
But backward turned betimes, to, one by one,
Adjust the bricks he'd laid.

His nervous rush was followed off in turn
By intervals, wherein
The gossip of the passer-by he'd learn,
Or vulgar "yarn" would "spin."

Forth from his pocket, once, a pipe he drew
And smoked, to "rest his trow'l,"
And o'er the hard times—growing worse he knew—
And his "small pay" to growl.

Meanwhile his working mate the other end
Of course had reached and, vexed,
Stood waiting until once again his friend
Would raise line for the next.

Then, clear and sharp, almost like trumpet's blow,
I heard these words forth ring:
"Line up! Line up! I can no further go Until you raise the string!"

The friend addressed arose and quickly o'er
The long course ran his eye,
Surprised that such command should come before
He'd closed up to comply.

For many bricks must yet be laid to fill
The space to him assigned,
Nor could the guage-line well be raised until He'd closed the course now lined.

Thus ope'd and closed my mind upon the scene;
Then eagerly I plied
My wits, in quest of what the thing could mean,
And thus did I decide.

God and his saints—coworkers—each pursue
The course to them ordained;
One wisely and with steady gait and true,
Unhindered, unrestrained.

With grace and dignity divine, each stroke
A certain conquest gains;
Nor skies, nor seas, nor calm, nor storms provoke
A change, the seal remains.

And kingdoms rise and dizzy grow. In turn
They totter, fall, and die;
While man, in earth-lust lost, fails to discern
The voice that says: "'Tis I."

The Book of Promise, from Cumorah's Hill,
Like harp of holy string,
Sends forth prophetic strains of truth to fill
The earth with wondering.

Its echoes, wandering in appointed way,
To Lebanon appealed,
Moistened its soil and coaxed from sterile clay
Response in "fruitful field."

And, lingering still, they charm the list'ning skies
To yield, as seasons turn,
Full measure of the rain which, falling, cries:
"Ye nations, look and learn!"

I hear those echoes in the tramp of feet,
As Judah seeks the land
Of Jacob's bones and David's kingly seat,
Of mount and temple grand.

I hear them rumbling in the old creed realm,
I see error deposed,
And, folly (masked as wisdom) at the helm
Of Babylon, exposed.

The quaking earth, the high-upheaving sea,
The fitful light'ning's glare,
The thunder's crash and cyclone's anarchy
Are echoes everywhere.

Gaunt famine, hand in hand with fire and flood
And stalking pestilence,
The scourge, the plague, the rapine, and the blood,
Are grewsome evidence.

Distress of nations and the fear-stirred heart
Of man—his blank despair,
The day of darkness and the stars that start
From heaven, their witness bear.

I see a land of liberty, and hear
From heaven the word again:
"'Tis Zion, and her sons will yet appear
Most terrible to men."

I see those sons upon the waters go,
Also upon the land;
The knell of serfdom loud they sound, and low
They lay the tyrant's hand.

And fettered sons of earth on Cuban soil,
And islands more remote,
Rejoice to share the fruit of ardent toil;
Freed from the hand that smote.

I view a scene, unparalleled I ween,
In annals wars replete,
As from the fire of belching hells is seen
Emerge, an unscathed fleet.

O, hand of God, I see thee, and I know
Thou'rt laying to the line
Stretched by thyself along life's course below;
The tokens are divine.

And haughty nations—dubious heretofore—
With lifted hats confess
How "terrible" on turbid sea or shore,
These sons whom thou didst bless.

Again I see the long prophetic line,
In ancient ages set,
And in the church restored a blessed sign
That thou dost not forget.

For by a thousand tokens thou art seen,
In miracles of grace,
Within, without, where'er thy feet hath been
Their sacred lines I trace.

Engaged, e'en now, preparing place for those Who look with fond desire
For thee, thy works thy hands of love disclose,
And thy sweet call, "Come higher."

"Come higher, O, my people, for e'en now
Zion redeemed might be;
But thou art slow to learn, nor wilt thou bow
Where course is marked for thee.

"Ye cry 'Lord, Lord; but do not all I say;
Ye ask; I give to thee;
But thy 'waste places' tell that thou didst stray
From virtue and from me.

"Return, O, Israel, and purify
Thine altars, nor 'strange fire'
Again essay to burn; thy lust decry
And lift thee from the mire.

"Remember the 'new covenant; renounce
The hands that on thee placed
The fetters which thee to the world announce
A willing slave—disgraced.

"Return and find me true; my word fulfilled
To Joseph and his seed;
'Favor and grace' enjoyed while they rebuild
'Waste places,' as decreed.

"Behold, ye sons of Zion, scattered far,
Ye daughters once made free,
The light that shines will guide, like Bethlehem's star,
To Christ and liberty.

"And ye who stand within the church approved,
To knowledge virtue add;
Let patience stay thy hope, and stand unmoved,
In truth and meekness clad.

"Increase thy charity and purge thy heart
Of pride and vain desire;
In prayer be instant and in faith impart
The 'substance' I require.

"Let peace within thy walls abide, and shake
The slumber from thy soul;
Perfect thy course, O, Zion, and awake,
And Christ shall make thee whole.

"Come higher, Zion, break the carnal band
That binds; 'Arise and shine!
No longer plead for tokens from my hand
Till thou shalt 'raise the line.'"

Thus seeing, feeling, thinking, to the saints
I told the reverie;
Urged them to view the line, to cease complaints,
And build more steadily.

Help us, kind Lord, to daily crucify
The lusts which in us burn,
And from the 'luring world our hand, our eye
Toward thee and duty turn.

Building in line with thee—coworkers true—
We humbly, Lord, aspire
To finish well our course and oft renew
The grace to "Come up higher."

Until—full stature gained, perfect and free,
Nor spot nor wrinkle shown,
Thy Church a mirror of thyself shall be
And "know as it is known."

I like the man who faces what he must
With step triumphant, and a heart of cheer,
Who fights the daily battle without fear;
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unflinching trust
That God is God; and somehow, true and just
His plans work out for mortals.

SHE MIGHT.

"Yes, I think she might do better than she does, and would if she would only try," said Mrs. Lockheart to Mrs. Kindheart. The former had just called on the latter, on her way home from a call on a sick woman, whom we will call Mary. For many years she had been afflicted beyond description from nervous prostration, accompanied by its long train of attendants.

"I, too, think she might do better, and would if she could. That is, she might under different circumstances, and she would, is my opinion," replied Mrs. Kindheart.

"Well, I don't know about that," continued the former, in a manner that showed that she knew it all. "Her own sister Martha told me only the other day, that she never amounted to anything. She always was complaining more or less, and for years has been poking around, or lying in bed, leaving things at loose ends, as if she had neither pride nor ambition. Her sister said so, and of course she knows, and besides, I have noticed her myself. When she gets up ambition enough to go out, she never moves as if she had a purpose, or ever intended to get there. Her clothes are out of style too, which gives her a dowdy appearance. I don't wonder that they are poor, and they always will be if she don't get up and go to work, and Martha thinks so, too."

"How long have you known her?" queried the other.

"About six months, and that is time enough to know what a person is; and besides, all her neighbors have told me about the same," accompanied with gestures to match the remark.

"I have known her all her life, and her sister, too, and I know that she was a feeble, diseased child from birth; but her sister was a well, strong child, and still retains more than average vitality," was the reply.

"Well, I didn't know that. Well, I declare; what made them so different?" was the reply, with a little interest.

"I knew it, and also knew that the first cause existed and did its work before her birth, and I also know that many other causes have flowed into her life all the way along, and a majority of them were beyond her control, even as much as was the first. Her sister had a better starting in when she entered this life, and consequently could float along in a different channel. She could keep out of the reach of many troubles that her less fortunate sister could not; but she got into others, which will be more unfavorable in the reckoning day. Mary was endowed with fine talents, and so was Martha; but as she never had muscular power, she could not do as Martha could, so the difference between them was always widening, both in mind and business, and we might add, in body. And—"

"But if Mary had worked harder, she would have been stronger—exercise strengthens one, you know."

"Yes, I know that a proper amount of exercise strengthens, and I also know that too much weakens, and such is the case of the two in question. Mary has worked harder according to her strength than Martha has, and has done as much good—in a different way though—and she has done all she could, and who can do more," were words that issued from a kind heart.

"But her sister told me that she had no disease; it was all clear, sheer nervousness and spleen."

"Very well, we will admit that she has a disease of the nerves; and I will state that it is the worst disease that mortals are heir to, and in many cases the sufferer has but little sympathy from his or her more favored friends; whereas, they, too, with all their boasted strength and skill, would shrink and fall under the pressure of such a weight, even as have those whom they have ridiculed. And besides, how would such people know about their own ailments—which they generally think are awful—unless their nerves send word to the brain? In fact every disease is affected by the mind and nerves, in every individual case; then how can the more favored ones say to the unfortunate, You might, or she might do better, because I can?"

"As regards her trouble being spleen, it is a mistake. She has no signs of such a case, whatever; but if her spleen was diseased, how could she help it, any more than others can help a lung trouble, or the disease of any other organ of the body? It is a fine idea for people to inform themselves concerning a matter in question, before discussing it at other people's expense, and thereby hide their ignorance. I want to be charitable as—"

"So do I," quickly broke in Mrs. Lockheart, "but Martha thinks that she might overcome her condition if she would only keep trying."

"Thinking is not knowing. How can she know? She has never been placed in like circumstances, and has never informed herself concerning such cases, and never has had sympathy enough for her unfortunate sister to learn the facts of her case. Now what does she know about it, or about sickness, by experience?"

"Well, I guess she knows something about sickness, for she has had fits and has been awful lame," replied Mrs. Lockheart in a tone of defiance.

"I know she has, but that is only another feature of nervousness. So are insanity and paralysis caused by a bad state of the nerves, and how hard it must be for such victims to be blamed for being in such a condition," was the sympathizing reply.

"Well, I s'pose it is; but I do think Mary might do better, and so does Martha. Why, you don't know how scared she is of the air. She will never sit in the draft, and never goes out without putting on wraps enough for winter. It looks awfully silly, I think, and so does Martha."

"If you or Martha had a bad toothache, accompanied by neuralgia, how then about the change of air in the affected parts?"

"O, it affects it awfully, terribly. I had it just so last spring, and I thought I should give up and die. Why I couldn't bear a mite of air on my face—'twas awful, I tell you!"

"My dear woman, that was only a pain in the nerves, and it lasted only a week or two; but if your blood had been very poor, and your nervous system diseased, you would have similar pains attack any part of your body, and especially if you overworked or exposed yourself to the cold air. Such is Mary's state, and has been for many years; and besides, she has had many, very many hard trials to encounter, and I for one think she has met them bravely."

"What if a person has had trouble; what is the good in giving up to it? I wouldn't, I know. I'd give it one good trial first, I'll bet," was the self-satisfied reply.

"How do you know what you would do if you have never been in the situation?" was the query, accompanied by a smile.

"In regard to her making an effort to rise above her condition, but few have ever equaled her, and she has had a knowledge of what she was doing, too. She is far superior to many who ridicule her, and no doubt will shine brighter in the life to come," was the firm decision.

"Perhaps so; but I think she must be pretty tough, must have a strong constitution, to live through so much as you think she has," replied one who did not want to yield her opinion.

"She has suffered much, and outlived many who were well and strong, but that does not prove that she has a strong constitution. A person's constitution depends on the strength of the bones and muscles, and on the power of the nerves. If they are properly developed, then they are a good machine for the mind to operate with; if not, how then? Can you by trying make a defective machine work properly, unless it is put in order? In like manner, in all cases similar to Mary's, there is some defect in the organization of the body: a lack of iron, electricity, or some other indispensable property in the human makeup. Something like a loaf of bread having plenty of acid but a lack of alkali. In such cases a person is endowed with great vital endurance—a hereditary blessing—if that which prolongs a life of suffering can be called a blessing.

"No one knows just what he or she would do, if in the place of another; neither can we tell what we will do, or how we will do it, till we get there and have done it," argued Mrs. Kindheart, speaking from knowledge.

"Well, I don't know as we do," was the answer with a downcast, thoughtful look. "But I don't think she can be so very bad off, for she usually seems cheerful, yet sometimes she speaks of her troubles in a sad manner. If I was as bad off as she claims to be, I should die of despair, and I should think she would—if it is so."

"I, too, have noticed her cheerfulness, and knowing her case so well, have come to the conclusion that she is a superior woman, and merits praise instead of censure. A cheerful spirit is better than a medicine; but a wounded spirit, who can bear? It is just as natural for an invalid to speak of her condition as it is for a person to speak of her business. I believe in equal rights, don't you?" interrogated the true woman, smilingly looking into the face of her caller.

"Of course, I do; but I must be going," arising to go.

"Come again, and I will tell you more about it."

WHAT GOOD IS IT DOING US?

The question was once asked the officers of the General Sunday School Association, "What good is the General Sunday School Association doing us?" Let us quote Article 2 of the Constitution of the General Sunday School Association: "Objects.—The objects of the association shall be to consolidate and unify the forces engaged in the Sunday school work; to devise and put in operation methods and means for its promotion, for the purpose of teaching God's word according to the best methods suggested by experience and the Spirit of truth."

It is recognized in God's word, as also in all the affairs of men, that "in counsel there is safety." The prime object of all organization in church work is counsel. In this counsel the best means of promoting the interests of the work are discovered. We come in touch with fellow workers and from them learn to love the work; learn to better do the work; and to overcome many of the difficulties standing in the way of the work. I may have a difficulty to overcome, and may have thus far failed. My fellow worker may have solved that problem, and can advise me quickly and correctly how to remove my difficulty. And again, I may have discovered what he has not, and can in turn advise him. Thus it goes. We meet together in district conventions, and at general conventions, and compare our thoughts, exchange experiences, encouragement, and love, and separate feeling a much greater zeal and interest in the work than when we assembled.

But to return to the question asked, "What good is the General Sunday School Association doing us?" In the case above mentioned we met for the first time a representative of the district referred to. No one from that district had, to our knowledge, ever attended a meeting of the general association. Is it strange that the question should arise, "What good is the association doing us?" But where does the fault lie? Is it possible for the officers of the general association who are without exception men of business who must depend upon their work outside the Sunday school for a living, to visit all the workers of all districts? If the workers of that district do not attend the meetings of the association, how can they expect to get the benefit to be derived from such meeting? It is very plain, they cannot. While you have the right to ask, "What good has the General Sunday School Association done us?" we can consistently ask, "What good have you done the general association?" These questions are not impertinent: they are simply plain. If the association is one of mutual benefit, and is a place for counsel and advice, it must follow that there is a work for both the district and for the general association. The district or the workers cannot consistently expect much benefit from association unless they associate. They cannot associate and stay at home. They must move out and give the general officers a chance to work with them; give the general association a chance to help them.

The possibilities of the general officers are yet very limited. As we stated above, every one of them must work for the support of himself and family, and therefore cannot devote all of their time to the work. But even if all the time of the executive officers was at their command, they could not reach many districts who did not extend the hand to them and indicate that they were ready to be helped and to return such help as they could give.

If districts would attend a special meeting for Sunday school work, one of the general officers could arrange for a tour through several districts in such a way as to reduce expense to a minimum and economize time. But to meet only at the regular times, it is very difficult to find even two conventions near together, either as to time or distance. For an officer to go to one meeting and return, then to another and return, is a loss of both time and money. Let the districts arrange for one special meeting and take their turn at the time most convenient in the tour, then all districts in the United States and Canada could be reached in the course of a year or two. What district will be first to signify its desire to take its turn?

DISTRICTS should remember that at their last meeting prior to April, 1900, they should appoint delegates to the forthcoming General Convention. The basis of representation is "one vote for every ten members." See Article 9, page 7 of the Constitution and By-Laws. Schools not connected with district organizations are entitled to representation upon the same basis. As this is the first convention for two years, we hope to see a very full representation. Begin now to prepare to attend.

FROM THE FIELD.

CHATHAM, ONTARIO, DISTRICT.

Sr. Jessie A. Hacket, superintendent of Chatham, Ontario, district, writes: "Our district is comparatively small and the work here new, but I think we have every reason to feel encouraged. Our young people, as a rule, are quite active, energetic, and zealous, for which we feel thankful. We have as yet no district librarian, but mean to attend to that at our next convention, October 13, 1899. We expect to have a pleasant and profitable time."

LITTLE SIOUX, IOWA, DISTRICT.

Bro. J. F. Mintun, superintendent, writes: "On account of sickness in the family of the superintendent of Missouri Valley school, and another one on program just being married, the program as arranged was somewhat crippled. I had to formulate a little scripture to just suit the occasion. '1. My family was sick and I could not attend. 2. I am just married to a husband and do not think I could do justice to the subject assigned me.' Of course I excused them both. The district is now composed of fourteen schools, three of which have been organized since our last convention. Ten schools reported in writing, two others verbally. One, on account of sickness of a contagious nature, could not report. The blanks for the other were received by an ex-secretary and not turned over to the proper officer in time to have the report made out and approved. Every school is out of debt and has a small balance on hand. The evening was devoted to the reading of a paper, 'The necessity and authority of the Sunday school, by Sr. Anna L. Stuart, and Normal work by the superintendent on the subjects, 'The assistant superintendent and duties,' and 'Blackboard uses in the Sunday school.' The eight a. m. session the next morning (Saturday) was devoted to the subject 'Prayer and its objects in Sunday school.' [A splendid outline was developed, but space will not permit insertion here.—ED.] About fifteen minutes were occupied in fervent prayer, when adjournment was had."

NORTHEAST MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Sr. Louise Palfrey, superintendent of this district, sends us a letter received from a Mr. Loomis, one of the State officers of the International Sunday School Union, also a coal operator of Bevier, Missouri. He refers to the convention and institute held at Bevier, Missouri, in June, at which the district was well represented. The general superintendent was present also. We give the letter herewith:—

BEVIER, Mo., June 22, 1899.

"Miss Louise Palfrey, Macon, Missouri; Dear Miss:—I received a program of your convention and institute, which was held here last week, for which I suppose I am indebted to you. Many thanks. It was a matter of much regret to me that I was so situated that I could not be in attendance at the same. I have heard the same highly spoken of on every side, and I trust it was in every way satisfactory to you and your associates in this good work.

"Again thanking you for remembering me, I remain, yours very truly,

"L. J. LOOMIS."

CLINTON, MISSOURI, DISTRICT.

Sr. Ella Miller writes, stating that they had just passed a very excellent convention, and that the work was in an encouraging condition in the district. She also expresses her many regrets that home duties have compelled her to retire from her work she loved so well. Sr. Miller has for some years been superintendent of Clinton district and has shown herself a very earnest and competent officer. In fact there are few district officers who have done more for their Master in the Sunday school work than has she. She secured and held the confidence of the district from the beginning. She now retires "not from any lack of interest in the work," but because "home duties claim the first right." We regret to see her go, but we cannot always shape our affairs of life as we would like. So we bid her "God speed," and trust that the day will come when she can again enter actively into the work.

Sr. Lucy Wright, the former secretary of the district, succeeds Sr. Miller as superintendent. Sr. Wright has been connected with the work of the district long enough to become familiar with it and can take hold of the work where her predecessor left it off. Sr. Miller says "the work is in good, earnest, and competent hands, and will not suffer by the change. May God bless them both: the one retiring for the good she has done and may yet be able to do; the other, may he bless and strengthen for the duties she has accepted. "The harvest is great and the laborers are few."

THE question is sometimes asked, "What can a district superintendent do to build up the work in the district?" Several of our district officers have set about working out some plan to increase and maintain the interest in the Sabbath school work in their districts. Several very good plans of work have been reported to us. We give one of them herewith.

In addition to the personal visiting of schools and the general oversight of the work, Sr. Emma Hougas, superintendent of Fremont, Iowa, district has decided to begin a work that is intended to develop officers and teachers. It is what she has been pleased to call "normal work." She introduces the work with a lesson on the "Old Testament." It is made very simple, and such that any one with a Teachers' Bible can work out. Yet it is what we all need and what but few of us have—an accurate knowledge of the make-up of the Bible. If this work is successful (and it will be), it is expected that the general association will prepare normal work for all who can be induced to take it.

Upon the same sheet with the normal work is the "convention report." Blanks of varied forms are sent out prior to each convention. Every teacher and officer is expected to report. This is a stimulus to work.

Conference Minutes.

EASTERN WALES.

Conference was held in the new church at Tutnalls, Lydney, Gloucestershire, October 7 to 9. District president, T. S. Griffiths, desired Elder F. G. Pitt to take charge of conference. The district president then gave his report verbally, stating that the district was in good spiritual condition, and spoke of the needs of a missionary to labor all his time in the Eastern district. Bro. Gould, vice president, reported, tendering therein his resignation. The missionary in charge reported his labors in various parts of the district. Also endorsing the sentiments of Elder T. S. Griffiths regarding the needs of a missionary in the Eastern district. Report of Bishop's agent and of treasurer were read. Officers reporting: Elders T. Gould, T. Jones, J. Jones, A. N. Bishop, T. S. Griffiths, and H. Ellis; Priest D. Edmunds. Branch reports: Nantyglo 15; gain 3. Cardiff 30; gain by baptism 3. Lydney 30; no change. A letter was read from Cardiff branch, recommending Bro. Alma M. Bishop be ordained a deacon; also from Lydney branch, recommending Bro. T. Ellis be ordained a deacon. Both recommendations were accepted and the ordinations took place during conference. Elder F. G. Pitt to be our delegate to General Conference, and to present the condition of the work in the Eastern district of Wales. A committee to be appointed to draft instructions for delegate to General Conference. Sunday services: forenoon preaching meeting in charge of Elder F. G. Pitt, sermon by Elder A. M. Bishop. After which Elder A. N. Bishop offered the dedicatory prayer. Elder Pitt then spoke a few complimentary remarks with reference to the church building and the sacrifices made by the brethren in erecting the church. At the close of his remarks two were baptized. Saints' fellowship meeting in the afternoon, in charge of Elders T. Gould and J. Jones. The gifts of the gospel were manifested in power, and a good time enjoyed by all. Evening preaching service in charge of Elder A. N. Bishop, discourse by Elder F. G. Pitt. Bishop's agent's account was audited and found correct: In hand last report £7. 8s. 7d; received £1. 19s. 6d; total £9. 8s. 1d; expenditure £6. 5s. 0d; in hand £3. 3s. 1d. District treasurer's account audited and found correct: In hand last report £1. 3s. 9d; total receipts £4. 14s. 0½d; expenditures £3. 9s. 1d; balance 14s. 1½d. Resolved that this conference disapprove of the continuation of the European Mission conference believing that we as a district receive no benefit therefrom. Also believing the district conferences held in said mission have power to transact all business done at European mission conferences. Resolved that we approve of the delegate system, as provided for in the "Rules of Order and Debate," and that a committee be appointed to draft rules to govern the district, and that they report at next conference. Moved by Bro. A. N. Bishop, that it is the sense of this district that the General Conference be held on the 6th of April annually; and that we as a body desire our delegate to vote in favor of the above resolution. If said resolution does not obtain, we favor that a vote be taken of all districts and branches of the whole church. Motion prevailed unanimously. Report of committee for drafting instructions for delegate were presented and approved. Instructions as follows: We confirm our recommendation of conference held at Cardiff, February 24, 1899, regarding the appointment of Elder A. N. Bishop as missionary to this district, with this addition, that said brother be appointed to labor all his time in the mission field as a district missionary. Further, we believe the time has arrived when the revelation given to the church in 1894 be adopted in this district, regarding the ordination of a high priest to have the oversight of this district. We, therefore, recommend Elder A. N. Bishop be ordained to said office, believing him to be a fit and proper person to be ordained a high priest; further believing the time has arrived when such an officer will be a benefit to the work here, if this recommendation meets the approval of General Conference. Should this recommendation not meet the approval of your honorable body, we request the appointment of such a one with such abilities and an earnest worker, one whom the Lord may direct and choose, as we believe the voice of God should be heard on such important matters. Resolved that this conference appreciate the labors of our worthy brother, F. G. Pitt. By his kind actions he has won the esteem and regard of all in our district. We therefore tender him our heartiest support and a vote of thanks for his kind counsel and advice, and pray that his life may be spared for many years to labor in the cause of truth. A vote of thanks was now tendered from Lydney branch to all those who contributed towards the new church and its furnishing. Resolved that we uphold by our faith and prayers the president of the European Mission, also that we uphold by our faith and prayers all the spiritual authorities of the church. Election of officers: A. N. Bishop district president, T. S. Griffiths vice president, T. Gould secretary, Alma M. Bishop assistant. A vote of thanks was tendered to Elder T. S. Griffiths as late president; also to Elder T. Gould, as late vice president, for their faithful labors. All collections at this conference to be handed over to Lydney branch towards defraying expenses. Adjourned to meet at the call of district president. Thus ended one of the most peaceful conferences ever held in the Eastern district of Wales. At 4:30 p. m. a public tea was held in the new church and quite a number sat down to tea. At 7:30 an entertainment was given, presided over by Elder A. N. Bishop. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Proceeds in aid of new church.

The district president is requested and authorized to go to Moberly and meet Utah Mormon elders there; and the district is to raise money to defray his expenses, and to pay him in accord to labor he loses. Resolved that we petition Bro. I. N. White, as missionary in charge, to send us some help in addition to what we have; the extent and demands of the work in this district demand it. Preaching by M. A. Trotter, W. Summerfield, and J. A. Tanner. Adjourned to Bevier branch the second Saturday and Sunday in February, 1900.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA.

Conference met at Monterey, November 3; F. M. Sheehy elected chairman, J. M. Putney associate, J. B. Carmichael clerk, F. H. Lawn assistant. Ministry reporting: J. M. Putney, E. Keeler baptized 4, J. B. Carmichael baptized 2, J. E. Holt, J. Holmes, John Swensen, W. Pooler, and F. H. Lawn. In future all reports of the ministry must be in writing. The committee to audit branch reports submitted the following: Lone 71, Jefferson 24, Santa Cruz 75, San Jose 61, San Benito 37. Delegates to General Conference: G. T. Griffiths, F. M. Sheehy, Bro. and Sr. John Swensen. Saturday afternoon was occupied as a Sunday school convention. Elders F. M. Sheehy, J. B. Carmichael, and E. Keeler discoursed on the word during the conference. Adjourned to Santa Cruz, April, 1900.

Sunday School Associations.

FREMONT.

Association of above district convened at Thurman chapel, October 12. Four sessions were held including one devoted to temperance. The published program was closely carried out, with one or two exceptions. The district superintendent, Sr. T. A. Hougas, with the general superintendent, were present to take charge of the work. The workers, generally, responded to their names, and some valuable papers were read and discussed profitably to all. One thing noticeable was the increased interest in the work, and an increased attendance from schools not usually well represented. The reports were encouraging; two schools, however, failing to report. The five reporting show an enrollment of 267, with 27 classes, and collections amounting to $65.42. The next convention to be held at same place [Hamburg] as next district conference on the preceding Thursday.

MARRIED.

GRENAWALT—ATKINSON.—At the residence of Sr. Susannah Atkinson, Lamoni, Iowa, November 7, 1899, at six a. m., Bro. George Robinson Grenawalt, aged 24, and Sr. Alice Mae Atkinson, aged 21, were married, Pres. Joseph Smith officiating. After the ceremony, the company, consisting of the families of the two contracting parties, and a few friends, sat down to a wedding repast prepared by Sr. Atkinson and ate with the young people, who took the early morning train for St. Joseph, Missouri, and Butte, Montana, where the father of the bride is engaged in mining. May happiness be theirs.

DIED.

PERRY.—At Bevier, Missouri, September 25, 1899, Charles, son of Bro. Zenos and Sr. Florretta Perry, aged 5 years, 11 months, 25 days. Services conducted by Elder J. A. Tanner.

ALEXANDER.—Sophia Alexander, born September 16, 1824, in Sharon, New York. Married Gilman Gordon in 1842; he died in St. Joseph in 1853. She then came to Springville, Pottawattamie County, Iowa; thence to Preparation, being associated with the Charles B. Thompson movement. United with the Reorganized Church in 1861, and married N. B. Alexander the same year. Her first identity with the church being by baptism in 1846. In all ten children called her mother, six of whom survive. She was a patient, faithful Latter Day Saint, and died firm in the faith October 8, 1899; funeral services from the church at Magnolia, Iowa; sermon by George M. Scott. A pleasant incident was that Bro. Scott, as a boy fifty-three years ago, was acquainted with the sister, she having been a special friend to his mother in hours of sickness and death. They both passed through the Thompson experiences, and rejoiced together in the Reorganization. So may we all be faithful to the end.

WILLIAMS.—At Keb, Iowa, October 24, 1899, Edith May, youngest child of Bro. William E. and Sr. Mary J. Williams, aged 1 year, 3 months, and 10 days. Sermon by Bro. John M. Hooper. Interment in Kirkville cemetery.

BATES.—Sarah Jane Lamb was born at Kewanee, Illinois, December 11, 1865; was married September 3, 1884, to James Bates; died October 23, 1899, after a short but severe illness, leaving a husband and five children to mourn. Funeral services at the saints' church; sermon by Elder S. A. Whitehouse.

SCHIEDECKER.—Bro. George Schiedecker was born in Hohwald, Alsace, France, November 20, 1828; died in a hospital at Chicago, Illinois, September 12, 1899, aged 70 years, 10 months, and 8 days. He leaves his wife, one daughter, and three sons to mourn. He was an exemplary member of the church for about thirty-eight years. His services in visiting and administering to the sick will never be forgotten by those who live as witnesses to God's goodness as manifested many times under Bro. Schiedecker's administration. Our brother will be missed at district conferences, and, above all his kind face will be missed in the neighborhood where he had lived and where he was beloved by all who knew him. To him there was no place like home, and the faithful wife, with whom he had lived forty-five years, now in her declining years, will miss him more than all; and her chief solace now is the hope of soon meeting him in the land that is forever free from sickness, death, and tears. Funeral services conducted by Elders Thomas Hougas and F. M. Cooper in the Baptist church at Shabbona.

FINCH.—At Nevada, Iowa, October 20, 1899, Bro. D. E. Finch, aged 80 years, 5 months, 2 days. He belonged to the G. A. R. post; he was also a faithful soldier in the army of the Lord. He served about three years in that, and now he is promoted to a better land. The funeral sermon was preached in the Baptist church by Elder J. S. Roth, who is also a G. A. R. man. The closing prayer was made by Rev. Brown of the M. E. Church. The funeral was largely attended. After the sermon the G. A. R. took charge of the remains; Elder Roth pronounced the benediction at the grave.

GOODWIN.—At her home in Whittemore, Michigan, October 14, 1899, Sr. Eva J. Goodwin, beloved wife of Bro. E. A. Goodwin; aged 21 years, 9 months, and 14 days. The sister was born in Bad Axe, Michigan, December 6, 1877; was baptized June 11, 1896; was joined in wedlock unto Bro. E. A. Goodwin, March 27, 1897. She was devoted to the gospel until the last, always rendering assistance unto our young brother in performing his ministerial duties. Funeral from saints' church, sermon by Elder David Smith, interment in saints' cemetery. May her rest be sweet and her resurrection glorious.

SPAULDING.—At Dunseith, North Dakota, October 18, 1899, Martha Lodice, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Charles Spaulding, aged three months and 28 days. A beautiful, bright child, whose stay on earth seemed so brief. She was blessed August 6, by Elder John Spaulding. Funeral sermon by Elder Swen Swenson, in the M. E. church; interment in Lake Schutte cemetery.

HOLMES.—Sr. Mary Holmes died at Roslyn, Washington, October 14, 1899; was born at Manistee, Michigan; united with the church at Richhill, Missouri, 1887. She remained a true Latter Day Saint until death called her home. She leaves a husband and one child to mourn her departure from this life. Funeral sermon by Elder Hiram L. Holt, assisted by Elder A. M. Chase.

HANNA.—Bro. Henry Hanna died after an illness of two days of hemorrhage, last Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, October 29, 1899. He was born in 1842, at Belfast, Ireland. He did the best he could.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report,
WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

THE INFINITUDE OF GOD.

The Rev. Samuel Eliot, secretary of the American Unitarian Association and son of President Eliot of Harvard University, preached at the Boston Church, Nahant, yesterday morning. He took his text from the 119th Psalm, "Though I should take unto me the wings of the morning," and spoke on the subject of "The infinitude of God in all his attributes, as revealed by his universe."

Mr. Eliot said, quoting Ruskin, that no landscape, however varied and striking its beauties, seemed complete or satisfying to the eye unless the horizon was visible. This was true of the mental and spiritual, as well as of the material world. The human mind and spirit was ever reaching to the limits and boundaries of the knowable. And yet, all that the human mind, with all its wonderful and God-given powers, can ever know or understand is of such small magnitude compared with the unknowable and incomprehensible; the horizon of human knowledge lies so close to our sphere that we cannot but feel as though we stood on a small and petty island surrounded by a vast and boundless ocean.

The more science discovers, the more science realizes of the magnitude of the undiscoverable. Time was, when religion was accused of being a dealer in mysteries, of advancing theories which could not be proved by the human reasoning powers. It is not alone in the field of religion that mystery is found. The botanist can trace the growth of the oak from the acorn, but can he explain the life force which causes the acorn to germinate? The astronomer can calculate the orbits of the planets, determined by the action of the laws of gravitation, but he cannot tell you what that law of gravitation is. These are mysteries belonging to the outer sphere of human knowledge.

The true scientific mind finds law and order existing in every part of the created universe. There is nothing fortuitous or capricious in the grand scheme of nature. The same life energy or creative force governs the growth of the wayside flower and the development of the remotest nebulae in the stellar universe. Every molecule in the composition of the colossal system of which we are a part shows the hand of the Designer as completely and as plainly as though that molecule represented the sum of the creation. Every movement and form of action found in what we are pleased to term animate and inanimate nature, can be traced as the result of a guiding and infinitely wise first cause, and that first cause is God.

Wouldst thou know God? Look above, the heavens declare him; look below, the earth is his revelation; look into thy heart, and know if thou findest love therein, thy Creator, who is a being of infinite love, has implanted it therein. If charity, sympathy, and affection are components of thy nature, thou hast received these qualities from him who is infinite in all those attributes.—Boston Herald, August 21, 1899.

WHITE FLOUR IS IMPURE.

THOUSANDS OF TONS OF ADULTERANTS USED BY MILLERS.

New York, Nov. 11.—United States Senator William E. Mason of the senate Committee on Manufactures, which for six months has been gathering evidence in Washington and Chicago relative to the adulteration of foodstuffs, says the amount of adulteration carried on in this country is simply appalling. Even the white flour in use in every family in the land has not escaped. On this point the Senator said:—

It was shown before the committee that the flour of the country has been adulterated with flourine, or corn flour, and that thousands of tons of white earth have been used by dishonest millers. I introduced a bill which compels all makers of adulterated flour to get a government license and stamp their product with government stamps. Since the passage of that bill over 12,000 barrels of flour have been confiscated. But a more important result is that it has increased the reputation of our flour abroad, with a consequent increase of exports of 5,000,000 barrels.

Professor Herbert W. Hart, an authority on dietetics, who was a witness before the committee, declared that white bread is the scourge of humanity, saying he would sooner eat the cheapest bread baked in the dirtiest slum of New York City than the best baker bread manufactured. He advocated the use of whole wheat bread, and said that appetite for beer is a result of the craving of the system for the life-giving elements that are taken from wheat by its manufacture into white flour. He also ventures the opinion that the persistent adulteration of all classes of food is responsible for the present degeneration of the race and would be responsible for a future generation of idiots.

BEHIND OTHER COUNTRIES.

In further discussing the investigations made by the committee Senator Mason said:—

The United States is the only country that does not protect the consumer of food products. We have not even any laws to prevent the importation of foodstuffs the sale of which is prohibited in the European countries that produce them. For instance, the offscourings of coffee known as "black jack" cannot be sold in Germany, but is shipped from Germany here by the ton and mixed with our coffee. The countries which prohibit the use of preservatives in beer, ale, and porter (and such preservatives are usually acids dangerous to the public health) permit their brewers to ship such stuff to this country.

There must be a general law to prohibit absolutely the importation of all articles of food which are injurious to the public health. This Senate committee is investigating two classes of adulterated foods: First, that class which is dangerous to the public health, and, second, that class of foods adulterated to cheapen the cost and sold to defraud the consumer.

DANGEROUS TO HEALTH.

In the first class are the goods that have been adulterated with preservatives, such as jellies and jams. They are generally made of glucose and acids, too strong and dangerous to go into the human stomach. The other class is those foods in which cheapening adulterants are used. For instance, take these crackers. [The Senator was lunching on crackers and milk.] They may be made of wheat flour, as they are supposed to be, or they may be made of corn flour, a by-product of the glucose factory, which is ground and bleached after all the gluten and sugar have been extracted from it. Or look at this black pepper. The evidence given before our committee by the men who grind it shows that it is adulterated from 50 to 80 per cent with coconut shells. This is supposed to be red pepper, but our evidence shows in many cases that it is adulterated with starch and that anodyne dyes are used to give it the necessary color.

LEGISLATION IS CERTAIN.

The evidence we have gathered is certain to lead to remedial legislation. When summed up the only article of food that I know of which is not adulterated is salt. I should say, however, that the reports of the government chemists show that our meats are naturally and healthfully preserved. While in this city the committee will investigate the adulteration of beer, ale, porter, spices, tea, coffee, and sirups. The chief chemists of Yale and Harvard Universities will aid the committee in questioning witnesses, also Dr. Wiley, the chief government chemist. . . . —Chicago Tribune, Nov. 12.

A PLEA FOR MORE RELIGIOUS THINKING.

The ordination of Dr. Briggs in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the recent indorsement of Bishop Potter's action by a large number of bishops of that church, is thought by many to be an indication of a widespread change of attitude not only in the Episcopal Church but in almost all the denominations; a change not so much toward any specific doctrine as toward a greater spirit of inclusiveness. In an article on "Christian Liberty" in The Outlook (October 7) the writer says:—

Nor is it a menace to the church if its members hold different opinions. The apostles themselves did this. Even on so vital a question as the resurrection of Christ they were not agreed at first. . . . Thomas openly declared his unbelief on the subject, and said, "Except I shall see in his hand the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." And yet no harm was done the church—perhaps because he was not expelled from among their number, nor abused by the rest, but was still their brother in Christ and fellow apostle. Let, then, the members differ as widely as need be. So long as one and the self-same spirit worketh in all, it will not hurt the church. On the contrary, it would be death to it if there were no difference—death from stagnation. Surely no one would maintain that it already possesses all truth, and that there are no deeper, larger views to be obtained. There must be. But how is it to be done unless we are free to confess that—

Our little systems have their day,
They have their day and cease to be;
They are but broken lights of Thee,
And thou, O Lord, art more than they.

Commenting on this article, a writer in The Christian Evangelist (Christian, St. Louis) under the caption, "A plea for more religious thinking," says:—

So long as the idea prevails that it is dangerous for brethren to differ from each other in opinion there is no encouragement to individual thinking, for the exercise of our individual judgments, in an honest effort to know the truth for ourselves on every subject that comes before us, is certain to result in differences of opinion. It soon comes to be, therefore, that thinking for oneself is regarded as a dangerous experiment, and we begin to look around for the most commonly accepted view, and we take that second-hand. There are, of course, many things that most of us are compelled to accept second-hand, because only a few specialists have entered these fields of investigation and are competent to express an opinion upon them. But as soon as the facts they furnish us come within our possession we are to exercise our individual judgment as to the bearing upon the particular question in hand, and he who does not do this is doing grave injustice to his own moral and intellectual nature. In the Roman Catholic Church all questions are settled by the hierarchy, and the people are saved the trouble of thinking for themselves, but the result of it we all know. The chief distinction between Roman Catholicism and Protestantism has been and is the greater freedom of thought which the latter inculcates; but all Protestants do not act consistently with this distinction.

We have long been of the opinion that there is more intellectual than physical laziness. There is a constitutional indisposition to mental exertion as well as an inherent reluctance in expending physical energy, and it, perhaps, is more widespread than the latter.

In the same article referred to above the writer asks, and we think with great reason, "Is not perchance this the very reason why so much coldness and indifference exist in the church to-day, because so many of us pretend to believe a great deal more than we really do? We pretend to believe every particle of every Protestant creed and every proposition of every orthodox work on theology. We are not wilfully nor consciously hypocrites in doing this. We ourselves believe that we believe them all, simply because we imagine that not to disbelieve is the same as to believe. After all, is not this all that the complacent orthodoxy of the multitude amounts to? They do not disbelieve! But neither do they believe with anything like positive faith, a real personal conviction, even some of the simplest and most vital truths of the religion they profess. If they did, they could not be the self-satisfied creatures they are, the cold, disinterested men and women we find in our churches by thousands. No wonder their professions have so little relation to their lives and their Christianity to their characters. What we do not disbelieve does not affect us, but what we believe does. I had rather have them disbelieve a great deal they profess if they would also honestly believe a very little."

"That these sentences strike at a widespread evil among professed Christians, we cannot for a moment doubt. There is a lack of reality in our religious profession that is the chief hindrance to the spread of the gospel. Let us have more thinking—real, personal, hand-to-hand intellectual encounters with the problems that confront us, and we will probably profess less, believe more, and live a great deal better."—Literary Digest.

DEAN FARRAR'S INDICTMENT OF PRESENT-DAY ENGLAND.

The Dean of Canterbury is not usually set down as a pessimist, but his recent utterance in the British religious magazine Young Man, quoted in The Christian Statesman (August-September), exhibits anything but a bright view of the immediate outlook for religion and morality in Great Britain. He says:—

I am neither a prophet nor a prophet's son, so I will not undertake the rash task of venturing to make any prophecy about the future. But it has long seemed to me that things are in a state of unstable equilibrium, and that another century cannot pass without the occurrence of some great European war, with all its terrible and heart-shaking catastrophes. Nor is it possible to be content with the state of things in England. The alarming spread of betting and gambling among workingmen and the youths of great cities—so that this ruinous vice helps to fill our prisons, and (in the north of England especially) has ruined the healthy influence of our games; the eager love of money, which leads to so much wild speculation and commercial dishonesty; the cruel indifference with which we degrade the helpless childhood of the world by deluging savage tribes with drink, the growth of Hooliganism, and crimes of brutal violence; the dominance of a selfishness which immerses itself in luxury, pleasure, and amusement, while a poverty more and more squalid welters almost at the doors of the wealthy; the growth of a sullen and angry feeling of discontent among thousands of the poorer class; the decay of faith in the deepest and most awfully vital truth; the ever-abiding and infinitely loathsome curse of drink, which seems, among women at any rate, to be gaining rather than losing ground, and as Pope Leo XIII. says, "drags unnumbered souls to perdition;" the tendency to substitute niggling nullities and fetish-worshipping superstitions for "religion pure and undefiled"—all these things give serious ground for disquietude.

The great men in religion and philanthropy and letters, says Dean Farrar, are all dying off, and are leaving no one to take their places:—

We have no poet who can stand for a moment beside Tennyson or Browning; no orator who can be distantly compared to Gladstone or Bright; no painter who reaches the level of Landseer or Millais, no writer nearly so powerful as Carlyle or Ruskin; no novelist—though novels now flood the world at the rate of five a day—who is worth mentioning with Dickens, Thackeray, or George Eliot; no religious teacher whose influence is half so telling or ennobling as that of Maurice, F. W. Robertson, or Dean Stanley. If our age could not produce one dauntless or far-sighted man—a teacher like Savonarola, or Luther, or Wesley, or Whitfield; a philanthropist like Francis of Assisi, or Vincent de Paul, or Thomas Clarkson, or John Howard; a man who would willingly face bonds and afflictions, and cataracts of calumny, and not hold his life dear unto himself, and would count it a glory, for the truth's sake, to "Stand pilloried on infamy's high stage,

And bear the pelting scorn on half an age;"

a man whose soul was so ardent with the light of heaven that he could flash conviction and reformation into depths of moral unreality; a man who could fling the fire of God, like arrows of lightnings, into the apparently impregnable strongholds of wickedness and shame—then we should feel a livelier hope for the immediate future.

DON'T PUT THE CHURCH TO SHAME.

Why should the church leave her high place and come down into the arena, where she will be put to shame? Do men come to church for petty pleasures fit only for children, or for the satisfaction of their souls and the confirmation of their faith? Would Christianity have begun to exist if the Apostles had been "pleasing preachers" and "bright men," and had given themselves to "socials" and "sales" and "talks"? The church triumphed by her faith, her holiness, her courage, and by these high virtues she must stand in this age also. She is the witness to immortality, the spiritual home of souls, the servant of the poor, the protector of the friendless, and if she sinks into a place of second-rate entertainment then it were better that her history should close, for without her spiritual visions and austere ideals the church is not worth preserving.—Ian Maclaren in the October Ladies' Home Journal.

ELDER W. A. HATTON A PLAGIARIST.

Elder Hatton has been making himself quite conspicuous of late in Van Buren and Lee counties, Iowa, as an exposé of Mormonism, and we have been requested to review two pamphlets which he has put before the public, entitled, "The Origin of the Book of Mormon," and "Mormonism versus Mormonism and the Bible." After a careful examination of these publications, we must say that we are astounded at the presumption and impudence of the man. He tries to account for the Book of Mormon by asserting the truth of the Clark Braden theory (without giving Braden credit) concerning Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith plagiarizing the manuscript of Solomon Spaulding. Mr. Hatton is loud in his denunciation of the plagiarist, and yet on almost every page of his productions the track of the literary pirate is to be traced. We here produce two specimens of plagiarism from the work of Mr. Hatton; where he has not only copied the ideas of others, but their words almost verbatim, without giving credit to the authors, nor even placing the copy in quotation marks:—

HATTON, 1899.

BRADEN, 1884.

We have shown that the Book of Mormon had a base human origin, and was fabricated as a fraud to deceive. We proved by the concurrent testimony of seventeen witnesses, one of them, Sidney Rigdon himself; that Solomon Spaulding wrote a romance called the Manuscript Found, that he did take one of his manuscripts to Pittsburg to have it printed. That the Manuscript Found had in it these features, found in the Book of Mormon and found in no other book but the Book of Mormon and the Manuscript Found:

1. The plot of the Manuscript Found, as witnesses describe it, was just what Mormons give when describing the Book of Mormon.
2. It purported to be a veritable history of the aborigines of America. So does the Book of Mormon.
3. It attempted to account for the antiquities of America by giving an account of their construction. So does the Book of Mormon.
4. It assumes that Israelites were the aborigines of America and ancestors of the Indians. So does the Book of Mormon.
5. It said the Israelites left Jerusalem. So does the Book of Mormon.
6. They left to escape divine judgement about to fall on these people. So does the Book of Mormon.
7. That they journeyed through and from southern Asia, by land

We then presented the history of the Book of Mormon and proved that it had a base human origin, and was fabricated as a fraud to deceive. We proved by the concurrent testimony of seventeen witnesses, one of them Rigdon himself, that Solomon Spaulding wrote a romance called the "Manuscript Found," that he wrote three drafts, or manuscripts, of this romance and part of another before his death. We have proved that the "Manuscript Found" had in it these features found in the Book of Mormon, and found in no other books but the Book of Mormon and the Manuscript Found. 1. The plot of the Manuscript Found, as witnesses describe it, was just what Mormons give when describing the Book of Mormon. 2. It purported to be a veritable history of the aborigines of America. So does the Book of Mormon. 3. It attempted to account for the antiquities of America by giving an account of their construction. So does the Book of Mormon. 4. They left to escape divine judgments about to fall on these people. So does the Book of Mormon. 7. That they journeyed through and from Southern Asia, by land and sea. So does the Book of Mormon. 8. Their and sea. So does the Book of Mormon.

8. Their leaders were Nephi and Lehi. So says the Book of Mormon.

9. One Laban was murdered to obtain records. So declares the Book of Mormon.

10. They quarreled and divided into two nations, called Nephites and Lamanites. So says the Book of Mormon.

11. There were terrible wars between the two nations, and the parties into which they divided, with awful slaughter. So declares the Book of Mormon.

12. They buried their dead after these slaughters in great heaps, that caused the mounds. So declares the Book of Mormon.

13. In two instances the end of these wars was the total annihilation of all but one who escaped to make a final record of the catastrophe. So declares the Book of Mormon.

14. These sole survivors finished the record of the people and buried it. So declares the Book of Mormon.

15. The Manuscript Found gave an historical account of the civilization, laws, customs, arts, and sciences of those people. So does the Book of Mormon.

16. One party of these people were the ancestors of our American Indians. So declares the Book of Mormon.

17. The names Nephi, Lehi, Laban, Lamanite, Mormon, Moroni, Amlicite, Zarahemla, etc. were in the Manuscript Found. So are these names in the Book of Mormon.

18. The use and characteristics of these names in the Manuscript Found were precisely the same as in the Book of Mormon.

19. The Manuscript Found was written in scriptural style; i. e., the style of King James' version. So is the Book of Mormon.

20. "Now it came to pass" occurred so frequently as to render the language ridiculous. Such is true of the Book of Mormon.

21. This ridiculous peculiarity got for the author the Manuscript Found the nickname of "Old came to pass." The Book of Mormon is just such a book.

22. The original from which the story was translated was taken from the earth. The same is claimed by the Book of Mormon.

23. One party of emigrants landed near the Isthmus of Panama and migrated across the continent in a northeastern direction. So declares the Book of Mormon.

24. The land near the isthmus was called Zarahemla. So declares the Book of Mormon.

25. In the battle between Amlicites and Lamanites, one party marked their foreheads with a red cross to distinguish them from their enemies. So declares the Book of Mormon.

26. The destructions of the Nations exterminated took place near a hill called Cumorah. The same is declared in the Book of Mormon.

27. The Manuscript Found could have been used as a fraud, an imitation of the Bible, a pretended revelation. The Book of Mormon is just such a fraud.

Now, then, we are compelled to believe one of two things, namely, That Solomon Spaulding, during a period of from twenty-two to fourteen years before the Book of Mormon appeared, by miracle wrote a romance that contained these twenty-seven great features that no other book except the Manuscript Found and the Book of Mormon ever contained in common, or that Rigdon stole the manuscript of the Manuscript Found and remodeled it into the Book of Mormon. We have proved that the Manuscript Found or a copy was taken to Patterson's printing office. That Rigdon was learning the tanner's trade in Pittsburg at that time. That he was very intimate with Lambdin, one of Patterson's printers. That the Spaulding Manuscript Found attracted much curiosity in the printing office. That he hung around the office until Engles, the foreman, complained of it. That the manuscript was stolen. That Rigdon was charged with stealing it. That he afterwards showed it to Dr. Winters, saying that it was a Bible romance written by a Presbyterian preacher named Spaulding, giving a history of the Indians and that it had been taken to a printing office for publication, and that he borrowed it as a curiosity. We proved that he spent so much time over it that his wife threatened to burn it. That he retorted, "Indeed you will not; this will be a great thing some day." We proved by Jeffries that Rigdon told him that he took the manuscript from the printing office and gave it to Smith to publish. We proved by Tucker, Mrs. Eaton, McAuly, Chase, and Saunders, that Rigdon was seen at Smith's in New York, from the spring of 1827 to the fall of 1830. We proved that he was absent from Mentor for weeks at a time during these years, and no one knew where. We proved by Bentley, Campbell and Atwater that he announced years before it appeared such a book as the Book of Mormon, translated from golden plates, dug up in New York, giving the origin of American Antiquities, a history of the aborigines of America, and telling that the Gospel had been preached in America just as the disciples were then preaching it on the Reserve. We showed that when a woman preacher read to a Conneaut audience, for the first time they had ever heard it (the Book of Mormon), Spaulding's old acquaintances, who had heard him read his Manuscript Found denounced the fraud, Squire Wright shouting, "Old-come-to-pass has come to life." His brother, John Spaulding, de-tended revelation. The Book of Mormon is just such a fraud. Now, then, the reader must do one of the two things, believe that Solomon Spaulding, during a period of from twenty-two to fourteen years before the Book of Mormon appeared by a miracle wrote a romance that contained these twenty-seven great features of the Book of Mormon—features that no other book except the Manuscript Found and Book of Mormon ever contained in common—or that Rigdon stole the manuscript of the Manuscript Found and remodeled it into the Book of Mormon.

We proved that the third manuscript of Manuscript Found was taken to Patterson's printing office. That Rigdon was learning the tanner's trade in Pittsburg at that time. That he was very intimate with Lambdin, one of Patterson's printers. That the Spaulding Manuscript Found attracted much curiosity in the printing office. That Rigdon was much interested in it. That he hung around the office, till Engles, the foreman complained of it. That the manuscript was stolen. That Rigdon was charged with stealing it. That he afterwards showed it to Dr. Winters, saying that it was a Bible romance, written by a Presbyterian preacher named Spaulding, giving a history of the Indians, and that it had been taken to a printing office for publication, and that he borrowed it as a curiosity. We proved that he spent so much time over it that his wife threatened to burn it. That he retorted: "Indeed you will not; this will be a great thing some day." We proved by Jeffries that Rigdon told him that he took the manuscript from the printing office and gave it to Smith to publish. We proved by Tucker, Mrs. Eaton, McAuly, Chase and Saunders that Rigdon was seen at Smith's in New York, from the spring of 1827 to the fall of 1830. We proved that he was absent from Mentor for weeks at a time, during these years and no one knew where. We proved by Bentley, Campbell and Atwater, that he announced years before it appeared such a book as the Book of Mormon, translated from Gold plates, dug up in New York, giving the origin of American Antiquities, a history of the aborigines of America, and telling that the gospel had been preached in America just as the Disciples were then preaching it on the Reserve. We proved by Atwater, Dillie, Z. Rudolph, John Rudolph, Green, and by Kelley himself, that Rigdon preached and advocated the doctrines in which the Book of Mormon differs from the Disciples, the peculiar ideas of the Book. That he so indoctrinated all his hearers, where he could, that every Rigdonite became a Mormon, when he became one. He had prepared then for the slight change, chiefly a change of name. We showed that when a Mormon preacher read to a Conneaut audience, for the first time they had ever heard it, the Book of Mormon, Spaulding's old acnounced it on the spot. We have shown that the witnesses, after reading the Book of Mormon declare that the historic portions in all of the twenty-seven great features we have enumerated is identical with the Manuscript Found.—Mormonism versus Mormonism and the Bible, pp. 82-87.

Here is Elder Hatton's apology for Solomon Spaulding, in 1898:—

In closing this part of our investigation, it is scarcely necessary to say that Spaulding must be acquitted of all intention to deceive, even though four of the hearers of his Romance as read by him, attested his singular presentment that in after years his Romance would be accepted by thousands as veritable history. But even he could not have foreseen that this coinage of his brain would ever pass current as having been enstamped by the authority of heaven. The unconscious prophet of a new Islam, in all his imaginings he did not dream that his hand was outlining the Koran of a dark delusion; that the fables which beguiled his restless hours would be accepted by hundreds of thousands of his fellow-men as the oracles of God; and that in inglorious, yet historic martyrdom some of them would even seal with their blood their faith in the inspiration of his phantasiasties.

Journeying to Pittsburg in 1812, with the sanguine hope of soon seeing his Romance in print, it never entered his mind that four-score years thereafter, the shades of Laman and Nephi, of Mormon and Moroni, evoked by his magic wand from the sepulchral mounds of Conneaut—the graves of a long-forgotten race—would be stalking over two hemispheres, and would be leading through the very city of his sojourn their myriad victims of deception to distant homes of wretchedness and shame.

Struggling to escape the burden of his debts, he little imagined how vast the burden he was about unwittingly to lay upon his country. Sleep on, thou humble dreamer, in thy lowly bed. Thy fond desire to win a public hearing for thy wondrous story was denied thee in thy toilsome and checkered life. Thou knewest not that a strange immortality was between it and thee. Rest peacefully, for from thine eye which sought to penetrate the past alone, this saddest of future visions was mercifully withheld. Surely never hitherto have passed such sorrowful processions near the grave of so innocent an author of their woe.—The Origin of the Book of Mormon, pp. 82-84.

These are not the only instances of literary theft found in Mr. Hatton's works, but they are sufficient, and quaintances, who had heard him read his Manuscript Found, denounced the fraud, Squire Wright shouting: "Old-come-to-pass has come to life." His brother, John Spaulding, denounced it on the spot.

We have shown that the witness after reading the Book of Mormon, declare that the historic portions, in all of the twenty-seven great features we have enumerated, is identical with the Manuscript Found of Solomon Spaulding. — Braden and Kelley Debate, pp. 216, 217.

Here is the apology of Robert Patterson, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1882:—

It is scarcely necessary to say that Spaulding himself must be acquitted of all intention to deceive, even though four of the hearers of his romance as read by him have attested his singular presentment—was it prescience?—that in after-years his romance would be accepted by thousands as veritable history. But even he could not have foreseen that this coinage of his brain would ever pass current as having been enstamped by the authority of heaven. The unconscious prophet of a new Islam, in all his imaginings he did not dream that his hand was outlining the Koran of a dark delusion, that the fables which beguiled his restless hours would be accepted by hundreds of thousands of his fellow-men as the oracles of God, and that in inglorious yet heroic martyrdom some of them would even seal with their blood their faith in the inspiration of his phantasies. Journeying to Pittsburg, in 1812, with the sanguine hope of soon seeing his romance in print, it never entered his mind that in threescore years and ten thereafter the shades of Laman and Nephi, of Mormon and Maroni, evoked by his magic wand from the sepulchral mounds of Conneaut,—the graves of a long-forgotten race,—would be stalking over two hemispheres, and would be leading through the very city of his sojourn their myriad victims of deception to distant homes of wretchedness and shame. Struggling to escape the burden of his debts, he little imagined how vast the burden he was about unwittingly to lay upon his country.

Sleep on, humble dreamer, in thy lowly bed! Thy fond desire to win a public hearing for thy wondrous story was denied thee in thy toilsome life. Thou knowest not that a strange immortality awaited it and thee. Rest peacefully, for from thine eye, which sought to penetrate the past alone, this saddest of future visions was mercifully withheld. Surely never hitherto have passed such sorrowful processions near the grave of so innocent an author of their woe.—Who Wrote the Book of Mormon, pp. 15, 16.

occupy as much space as we are willing to devote to this contemptible plagiarism. A man who will make a great blow and bluster about others being guilty of plagiarism, and at the same time resort to the same tricks that he alleges against others, can hardly be excused on the grounds of ignorance, but must be held to willful transgression.

We make no farther reply to these pamphlets, because if answer were necessary we would answer the parties who are responsible for the productions, and not he who has stolen their productions. They need no answer, however. Elder Braden made this summary and the arguments upon which it is based, in a public discussion with Elder E. L. Kelley, at Kirtland, Ohio, in February and March, 1884, and was at the time fully and completely answered by Elder Kelley.

The work of Mr. Robert Patterson has been answered by President Joseph Smith.

We have nothing more to do with Mr. Hatton. Messrs. Patterson, and Braden, et al., may have a case against him; but if they can afford to let him pass into disgraceful oblivion, we can.

CHURCH DEDICATED AT MALLARD, IOWA.

By request of the saints at Mallard, and Bro. Charles E. Butterworth, in charge of the Galland's Grove district, we visited the little town on the Keokuk, Des Moines, and Ruthven Railway, and on Sunday, November 12, assisted in dedicating a church building built by the saints during the past summer and autumn.

Sometime in July last the branch deemed it best for the work that a building should be erected in the village. A committee composed of Brn. Joseph Fish, Edmund Ford, and John Truog was appointed, whose duty was to be to solicit means, and build when means were secured. The saints contributed liberally, and so did their friends and neighbors, and the business men of the town. Some $1,039, in round numbers were subscribed, the building contracted and built, at a cost of $1,338.99. The amounts subscribed were so well paid up that but $67 remained unpaid to be collected. The committee assumed the remaining $300, paid up the bills and deeded the property to the church in a proper way.

To assist them $52 were subscribed at the meeting, and the building was dedicated.

Ample notice had been given, and at the hour set the house was full, with more turned away than obtained entrance.

A choir was arranged and the song service was good. The opening prayer was by Bro. W. A. Carroll, of Auburn, Iowa, the sermon by the Editor, who on behalf of the Bishop received the deed and the key, turning the latter over to the presiding elder of the branch, Bro. Edmund Ford, who will have the charge of the premises subject to the service for which they were dedicated, the worship of God and the building up of the Church of Christ. The prayer for dedication was offered by Bro. Charles E. Butterworth; a feeling and impressive appeal for divine favor and an acceptance of the sacrifices and labor of the Lord's people.

We were the guests of Bro. Joseph Fish and family, a farmer whose lands lie adjacent to the village, where we were hospitably cared for during our stay.

On our way up we spent an evening and a half day in the capital city of Iowa; and had the opportunity to assist Bro. T. J. Sheldon in one of a series of evening meetings he was holding. We met a number of the saints; Bro. and Sr. W. R. Vice, Thomas Cook, Brn. Watson, Armstrong, and others, whom we were pleased to greet again in the gospel work.

At Mallard we met Bro. W. A. Carroll and wife, Bro. Bush, of Wall Lake; Brn. Manly and Frederick Hartshorn, of Marathon, Bro. King and wife, Bro. Christenson and wife, Bro. Carlson and wife, Bro. John Truog and wife, Bro. Cross and wife, and a great many others of the saints from near and far.

There were three services on Sunday, and all seemed to enjoy the occasion as a blessing.

Bro. Butterworth remained with the intention of holding meetings the entire week if the interest justified.

Mallard has been the scene of labor for several years, the citizens being quite friendly and orderly. Brn. Derry, Whiting, Hunt, Butterworth, Carlson, and others, we believe, having labored there. The prospect seems to be good.

MISREPRESENTATION AND A CORRECTION.

A little pamphlet called Science Siftings is published at the Science Siftings offices, 123, 124, 125, Fleet Street, London, England.

Of this paper the numbers for August 12, and September 9, are sent us by one of the brethren in England. The first contains a rather rash digest of the history and doctrines of Mormonism, in which with much that is true there is a bad admixture of what is untrue. The last named contains a much better statement in which the Reorganized Church is accredited with its proper position on the main issues held by the two bodies of Latter Day Saints. At the close the editor adds:—

But after all, Brigham Young was the leader of the sect and he and his followers did practice polygamy, and it was at the time when the Mormons were under his influence that we studied their general character. We have perused the articles of belief of the Reorganized Church, and we feel bound to say, that as far as professing goes, the standard of excellency is very high. It is practice, however, that can alone furnish reliable details of the lives and habits of these curious people.

How true the editor's closing remark, "It is practice, however, that can alone furnish reliable details of the lives and habits of these curious people."

The profession of godliness is not enough. There must be practices which show lives conformed to the profession made, if a people would have the general public properly advised as to their righteousness. How necessary then brethren of the Reorganized Church that our everyday life and conduct should be in accordance with the law of righteousness which is by faith, abounding in good works which are ordained that we should do them.

THE ROBERTS CASE.

The following press clippings are inserted for what they may be worth as items of news on the Roberts case:—

ARE LOOKING FOR ROBERTS.

Salt Lake, Utah, Nov. 11.—[Special]—Brigham H. Roberts, Congressman from Utah, may be arrested wherever found and brought back to Utah to answer to the charge of unlawful cohabitation a warrant having been sworn out before the county attorney to-day, and it will be served as soon as the Congressman can be located. Roberts has said he would return to Utah whenever he was wanted, but the general belief here is that he intends to avoid service until Congress meets and passes upon his case, as he has, apparently, no business in the East and realizes what weight a conviction for unlawful cohabitation would have in depriving him of his seat in the House.—Chicago Tribune, November 12.

WARRANT IS ISSUED.

Justice Kroger to-day issued a warrant for the arrest of Congressman B. H. Roberts. The warrant, it is understood, will be served on Mr. Roberts immediately on his return to Utah.

Mr. Charles Mostyn Owen is the person who swore to the complaint. According to reports the document was presented to County Attorney Putnam Monday, last, but it was not until yesterday that the prosecuting officer concluded the case could and should be prosecuted. Hence, Mr. Putnam authorized the issuance of a warrant for Congressman Roberts' arrest. Owen then went before Justice of the Peace Kroeger and swore to the complaint.

THE AFFIDAVIT.

The affidavit follows:—
"Charles Mostyn Owen, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a citizen and taxpayer of the State of Utah, that he is informed and verily believes that one Brigham H. Roberts, of Centerville, Davis County, State of Utah, did on the 12th day of April, in Salt Lake City, Salt Lake County, State of Utah, and on divers other dates, and continually from the 12th day of April, 1897, until the 1st day of October, 1899, unlawfully cohabit with more than one woman; to wit, Sarah Louisa Roberts and Margaret Curtis, otherwise Shipp, otherwise Roberts, contrary to the provisions thereunto provided and against the peace and dignity of the State of Utah."

The names of the witness are omitted from the affidavit. It is understood that Mr. Roberts recently wrote County Attorney Putnam, similar to the one sent County Attorney Streeper, of Davis County, stating that he would return for trial in the event of a warrant being issued for him.—Deseret News, November 11.

BABYLONISH RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Bro. J. C. Hitchcock, St. Louis, Missouri, sends us the following clipping from the Globe-Democrat of the 11th. It is one of six announcements of church services under the head of "Baptist":—

Second, Rev. Dr. W. W. Boyd: 11 a. m., "The Baptism of Fire"; 8 p. m., Hampton meeting, Dr. Turner with stereopticon; negro quartet will sing plantation melodies.

"The church" (?) used to criticise secular societies which in years past held so-called "sacred concerts" on Sunday afternoons and evenings; but now the church, so-called, is going into the amusement business by wholesale, under the guise of religious and social entertainment.

In the instance noted above it takes on the phase of negro minstrelsy. We have had a recommendation from another popular minister that the church could learn from the saloon, in providing entertainment for its attendants, and thus lure others into its fold by such attractions as would draw the crowd, among them being the "roof garden" summer resort, etc.

By the way, is this late feature of the Second Baptist Church of St. Louis one of the links in their chain of so-called "Baptist succession"? If so, it looks to us very much like a Babylonish affair, as it surely bears the brand of Babylon, and is of the world undoubtedly.

The Gentile claims to apostolic succession, all around, will be found to be decidedly out of harmony with and strikingly different from the economy ordained and established by the Master through the ministry of himself and his coworkers, the apostles. Types are bound to develop and reveal themselves, "after their kind," in due time. "Blood is thicker than water;" the inner nature of anything appears and comes to light in its time. Not even in religious movements is it possible to conceal or so modify natural characteristics to the extent that they may successfully counterfeit the genuine, where subjected to proper tests.

It is patent that in the fall of Babylon the religious institutions that form part of her pride and vanity, her evils and confusion, must also go. Their "folly" is daily being "made manifest."

The "Baptism of fire," advertised by the church named above, is quite another thing than that promised by the Savior. Jesus promised the Spirit of truth to the faithful disciple who yielded obedience to the gospel. He also designated the Spirit of truth as one "whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him." (John 14:15-17.)

There is for every lover of truth a baptism of fire that shall purify and refine and redeem from all that is contrary to the perfect character of the Christ. There is also a baptism of fire that shall "try every man's work of what sort it is;" that shall consume and purge the dross and evils of the world. "Every plant which my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up."—Jesus.

A church which permits such features without protest is responsible for its practical indorsement of such folly. It is in evidence of the dominating influences within it that such things are permitted if not sanctioned.

ROBERTS TO FIGHT FOR SEAT.

New York, Nov. 15.—Congressman B. H. Roberts, of Utah, who is at present in the city, to-day denied the report that he intends to resign his seat shortly after Congress meets.

"I have seen many such stories since I came East," said Mr. Roberts, "but there is absolutely no truth in them and absolutely no basis for the statements.

"I will say as emphatically as I can say it that I do not intend to resign and never have had any such intention since my election.

"I was fairly elected and purpose to fight it out to the end with all the vigor at my command. Those who know me are aware of this intention on my part, and will not credit these reports, no matter in what terms they may be couched.

"The Mormon Church has no more to do with politics than the Episcopal Church or the Roman Catholic Church. It is not in politics. I was elected on purely political lines, and will go to Congress absolutely free of this so-called church influence over me."

The foregoing is clipped from the Chicago Tribune, November 16.

Of the late White-Braden debate Bro. White wrote from Alma, Illinois, the 11th:—

Debate closed last night with jammed house. This is the debate of my life. Such a victory for God's cause has never been chronicled in all of my debates. A roll of tracts and my challenge were at hand at the close, and it was a regular swarm around me, and I handed out with both hands, while my opponent stood dumbfounded and mad. As the jam got nearly out I offered opponent my hand, to receive only an insult, which was taken up by one that stood by in my defense, while I turned away. Go thirty miles to-day by buggy and do not know if I will find opportunity and time to write up debate. Will see. My address is Zenith, Illinois.

Bro. A. B. Pierce, Providence, Rhode, Island, November 12:—

Elder Luff preached his farewell Lord's day sermon last Sunday eve in this city. It was a cyclone of argument and inspiration touching upon the unanswerable arguments against evolution and spiritualism as only he can handle it. His sermon of the morning of same date was a heart-searching effort to the saints. Bro. Luff's work in Providence and elsewhere in the Massachusetts district speaks for itself. Long may he nobly wave the banner of truth which is the incentive to action of every true saint.

Bro. J. W. Burget, Hoboken, New Jersey, October 12:—

The inclosed clipping is from the New York Journal of November 9. It shows that some evil still exists in Utah. Perhaps it may be of interest to some of your readers. I have moved here to work at my trade.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 9.—A mighty blow is to be struck against polygamy in the Mormon Church.

Sixty members of the church living in Cache County are to be arrested. The evidence has been obtained and the information will be sworn to and filed, at once.

This arrest of sixty polygamists in one county in Utah will prove a shock to the Mormon leaders, who have been trying to make the people in the East believe that polygamy does not now exist in Utah.

All the persons against whom evidence has been obtained are prominent in the church. Several of them are elders. The judge in the district where they will be tried is himself a polygamist.

The sixty accused polygamists are outspoken friends and admirers of Roberts, whom they recognize as one of the chief disciples of polygamy in the Mormon Church.

Bro. E. W. Davis, Beaver City, Utah, November 9:—

I wish some of our ministry from Salt Lake would make us a call, but we will have to wait until the proper time comes so the people can be stirred up to a sense of their duty.

Some idea of the work of a busy man in the ministry may be gained from the following from Bro. I. N. White, who wrote thus from a point in Southern Illinois immediately after the late White-Braden debate:—

Yesterday I dropped you a card; I send you some manuscript, but it is not as complete and perfect in quotation as I would like it. I have no time to rewrite or correct. It is this or nothing, as it is right after preaching; no show before me for a week or two, as I see. Here two days more and then to "Pin Oak" to a conference. Were I at home or some other convenient place could give you a spicy article, as the debate was a lively one. Braden was much harder to meet this time and fought hard; but really I met him more promptly, and it was a complete victory. I preached to-night and am billed for two more nights here and on to conference as before said.

Bro. R. C. Evans, London, Ontario, late date:—

I am pleased to inform you that the work is growing rapidly in many parts of this mission. God is blessing us in many ways. Missionaries all alive in the work; local officers, in the main, doing splendidly, and the saints generally coming up higher.

Wars and rumors of war continue. Latest advices indicate serious troubles in Turkey in the uprisings of the Albanians, who are in open conflict with the government. Repeated rumors state that war between Japan and Russia is threatened, because of the alliance between China and Japan and also because of Russia's aggressions upon Chinese and Korean territory. Russia is also credited with intent to encroach upon Afghanistan and to obtain a port on the Indian Ocean. The French press continues to show decided hostility to England and sympathy with Russian schemes. France and Germany are also having trouble in their Chinese aggressions. Altogether the European and Asiatic international problem is complicated and the general situation appears ominous. There is little hope for long-continued peace, if even the present attitude of the powers may be designated as a peaceful one.

France is threatened with serious internal disorders which threaten the integrity of the Republic. There is also a growing fierce, anti-clerical sentiment in the country which is directed against Roman Catholic institutions. "A religious conflict cannot be regarded in any other light than deplorable, although the clerical party has invited much of what has befallen it" in France, Belgium, and other portions of Europe.

A recent severe earthquake shock is reported from Leghorn, Italy.

Depositions in the Roberts' case are being taken in Utah.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—PART 3; NO. 2. MANY SEEKING FOR NEW REVELATION.

Feeling the fatality of the situation, and the absolute powerlessness of man to extricate himself from the condition Satan has succeeded in placing man in by this attempt to salt the false, deceptive errors with a sprinkling of truth, some have either been led by the Spirit of the Lord to seek for divine light, and others feeling their insufficiency, have become willing to accept of so-called revelation, as offered, without any particular regard to the media through which the new information comes; and because of this indifference, Satan has stepped in and raised a division of sentiment, as to the source and media whence the new revelation comes.

Civilized man, as related to this question of new revelation, may in a general way be divided into four classes.

First, those who believing in a personal, unchangeable, and an infinitely wise and loving God, who deals impartially with those who seek to do his will; and believing therefore that he, acting on the unchangeable principles that have ever harmonized with his character, and he always has revealed himself to his adopted children for their good, and blessing morally and spiritually, believe that he will continue to reveal his will to them to the end of the world; and this, too, in a miraculous manner,—by angels, the Holy Ghost, by prophets and seers, revelators, and spiritual dreams and visions, and all this through the media of the Holy Ghost. But that no new revelation given will in anywise contradict or contravene any general principle or statement of the everlasting gospel, given through Jesus the Christ. God never contradicts himself in any of his revealments to man, though some revelations on matters of detail designed to be necessary in one dispensation, under certain circumstances, and not being applicable or necessary in another dispensation, under different circumstances, are, when the purpose for which given has been attained, abrogated. As for instance, when the law, as a code, given through Moses to Israel, with the order of worship instituted thereby, had served the purpose designed, was abrogated as a religio-political code, because in its nature it was not adapted to a system of worship that was wholly moral and spiritual, entirely religious, and entirely and absolutely separate and distinct from political government, as is the gospel law and God's church thereunder with its order of worship.

This first class of believers in continued revelation and miraculous blessings believe and teach that these miraculous blessings and divine revelations are given because of their firm faith in, and obedience to, the principles and conditions of the immutable gospel of the unchangeable God, upon which conditions these blessings are promised. An honest heart and an eye single to God's glory are at the base of the entire scheme, so far as man is concerned.

But all these [spiritual gifts and miraculous endowments] worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit [of God], dividing to every man severally as he [God] will.—1 Cor. 12: 11.

How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?—Heb. 2: 3, 4.

God's order then is that the gospel be taught, believed with all the heart (See Matt. 28: 19), and "obeyed from the heart" (Rom. 6: 17; 2 Thess. 1: 7, 8), and then it is the will of the unchangeable God to confirm the faithful, obedient believer, with signs and wonders and divers gifts of the Holy Ghost and miracles, to the blessing and profit of those who obey God's ordinances.

A second class of modern believers in modern miracles, and signs and revelations, have no definite, well-defined system of law or faith—principles of belief—but believe, they say, in religion in a general way; are liberal, so-called, admitting several or most any form of religion—called Christian; including Christian Science and Christian Alliance, etc. The most prominent manifestation of power supernatural, however, advocated by this class, is the gift of healing, called by them, "Divine Healing." One of the curious things advocated by some of these healers is, that in reality there is no such thing as physical ailment, it is only imagination, mental aberration! Admitting this to be true, their pretense to heal is a humbug, since in reality there is no disease to heal! "For any one to think they are sick is only a notion," say they, "It is not so."

This class have no definite rule of faith or system of law by which to try a manifestation, or revelation, as to its truth or falsity, evil or good, divinity or humanity. Their miracles and revelations are as apt to be of the Devil as of God! for aught they can know. And since it is the Devil's chief lever of power to produce anarchy, and subvert law and order, thereby placing a trial of his revelations out of human reach by a comparison of them with law, we should decide them to be of him, not of God. Ignorance is Satan's realm. He denies the existence of a personal God, and the atonement of Christ, and consequently of the saving power of the gospel or doctrine of Christ.

If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to Godliness; he is proud, knowing nothing, but dotting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmising, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself.—1 Tim. 6: 3-5.

Paul's statement here is a sweeping one. Nor is there need for him to enjoin: "from such withdraw thyself," if these men "destitute of the truth," and are therefore "false teachers," are to appear only far away from the realm of Christianity! Let us not forget that these men give "heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils;" but that these "men of corrupt minds" "resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith" (2 Tim. 3: 8), and they have "a form of godliness," and "as Jannes Jambres withstood Moses," with their magical enchantments (Ex. 7: 11, 12, 22) and sorceries (Rev. 16: 13, 14), so do these latter-day false teachers turn men away from the truth, and harden their hearts against it, as was Pharaoh's by his miracle-workers. With a medley of doctrines, all differing, yet under the guise of liberality, falsely so called, compromising; and withal, religious anarchy generally reigning, and miracles wrought to make it go, why wonder that Deception's Reign will take the world!

Another and third class of believers in latter-day miracles are those who have no doctrinal pretensions to present whatever; no formal religion, or doctrinal test. Of this class Schlatter, the healer of the west, at Denver, Colorado, was a sample. No repentance toward God, or holiness of life; no purity or exaltation of character is required by them; just get to be miracle workers. The strange thing about their claims is that so many are induced to follow and consult them. The only grounds upon which we can account for it is, people's natural love of the curious, ignorance, and superstition. Like wandering stars, they have no certain orbit in which to revolve; no pathway of light; no system of life to present, relating either to this life or the life to come. And like wandering stars, they soon are lost in the mists and the mazes of darkness.

"Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations," is a latter-day revelation. Reader, are you prepared to detect his devices? Are you able to resist his wiles? Are you, like the Apostle Paul, so well fortified with the truth, so panoplied in the armor of righteousness, that you can successfully put to flight his lionlike legions? His hosts are being marshaled for a final conquest of earth ere he goes bound to the bottomless pit. Only by God's truth, and the light of the Holy Ghost, can you conquer in the mighty contest, and to overcome is your only hope of safety and salvation in Christ. His cause is a popular one. It enters among the great and noble, is favored by the crowned heads of earth.

And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty.—Rev. 16: 13, 14.

This great battle is not now far distant. It is at this battle that the little stone that Daniel saw cut out of the mountain without hands, or rather that the king saw (Dan. 2: 38, 45), will smite the kingdoms of earth, and their place be occupied by the kingdom of God, that thenceforward will spread till it occupies the whole earth. But before this battle and smiting, Satan assumes the chief generalship of the kingdom of earth hosts, that have been gathered by the miracle-working spirits of devils, and they march under his command to Armageddon, there to be smitten, and fall to rise no more.

The fourth class of believers in revelation from the invisible world, by far outnumbering any other, denies the existence of God, save in the sense that he is personified, is the essence of all good, and the life power of all things, and is diffused throughout the universe essentially. They acknowledge no Savior in the sense of a Redeemer. Deny a literal resurrection of the body from the grave; and no Holy Spirit is included in their belief. Their revelations are discoveries only, being the results of experiences, had by the human spirits after they leave the body at death. No moral or spiritual conditions are imposed by which the revelations may be obtained; their reception being open alike to the good, the bad, and the indifferent. No definite code of law, of a moral or religious nature, is enjoined on its adherents by this peculiar belief. Good and bad are only relative terms with them. No such things as good or evil in the absolute sense of those terms exist—they exist only in a relative sense, that is as they relate to the changing circumstances that may be governing at different periods of the world. In other words, that which appears to be right to-day may be altogether wrong to-morrow or next year. With them there are no fixed moral and spiritual principles. Principles are fixed, established, basic, fundamental truths; and have no abstract changes. Changes with principles, are natural and moral impossibilities, absolutely so. And any religious system of ethics that is false avoids them.

There is with this class, therefore, no infinitely infallible God to give infallibly perfect, unquestioned revelations; and for this reason it is admitted that their revelations may be false in part or in whole. Nor is there any possible way of proving their truth or falsity, save by the slow and uncertain road of trial; and it may therefore occur that after trying a lifetime or longer, they prove to be false, utterly so. It is strange to many of us that almost unnumbered multitudes are led thus blindly along! The only demonstrable truth about this theory is, that it never can be demonstrated to be true. No standard by which to try it is admitted, save fallible human judgment, and even here it is admitted that the revelations tried by, and being the offspring of, human experience, so claimed, are as apt to be a lie—nay sometimes are lies—as truth. The media of these revelations are said to be human spirits.

Is this belief a deception? Is there a supernatural agency connected with it? If not, where is its superiority over any system of natural philosophy that is or may be developed? It, by its own admission, has none. This becomes apparent by a little thought on the subject.

How much more power has the human spirit after it leaves the body at death than it possessed while in the body? None, unless there be a supernatural one to give to it additional ability. What evidence is there that our natural spirits, after leaving the body, become supernatural, unless there be some supernatural being to impart to them supernatural ability? None. One is reminded of the observation once made concerning the Americans, by the great showman, P. T. Barnum, as we contemplate this subject as it relates to the race of man. He remarked: "The people like to be humbugged, and the bigger the humbug the better they like it." Barnum's observation was only second hand, however, for the Devil seems to have observed this peculiarity in our race a long time prior to Mr. Barnum. And acting on the suggestion, as Barnum did, began operations in Eden, and has kept up activities in the humbug show profession ever since. Some might with reason suppose that his material, out of which to manufacture "tricks," was exhausted long ago, but it seems not. "It might have been." Ah! "It might have been" exhausted, as laments the poet, but he runs the oldest established counterfeiting plant in the world's history! And here his resources seem inexhaustible. Diamond truth becomes as worthless as dust, as compared to a glittering lie in Satan's hand. Divine facts lose all their value to many of our race, as compared to the unreal, deceptive fancies of lies and myths when varnished with Satan's subtle arts. The mythic bubble in his hands becomes a veritable globe of glory, a world of supposed happified bliss! What a strange army of kings and their deluded subjects was that the Revelator John saw in his vision of long ago, duped by the "three unclean spirits, like frogs," by those miracle-working spirits of devils, marching to Armageddon to fight against God! Kings! How popular Satan is to be in latter days! Earth's nobility are to join the ranks of his army.

The marvelous thing about this affair is, it is now beginning to have its fulfillment. Arrangements are now being consummated. God is working, too, in this "dispensation of the fullness of times" (Eph. 1: 9, 10), bringing to pass "the restoration of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3: 21; Matt. 17: 9-11), to gather in one all in Christ, on the earth. His servants are sent with divine authority, or priesthood, to open up the "marvelous work and a wonder" (Isa. 29: 13, 14), by a proclamation of the everlasting gospel to all nations (Matt. 24: 14;

Rev. 14:6, 7). Also, to gather Israel back to the land of promise, as foretold by prophets of olden times (Isa. 11:11-13; Jer. 31:31-34), and rebuild the cities of Judah (Jer. 32:6-9; Ezek. 20:33-44; Zech. 2:1-9). In this dispensation God works, and as an opposition movement Satan has gone to work again among our race. God has again sent angels from heaven to communicate with his servants, and aid in the work (Zech. 2:1-3; Matt. 13:41; Rev. 14:6, 7); and in order not to be outdone, Satan must send his emissaries out to preach his claims, and must counterfeit the angelic movement, so he has his invisible agents assume the role of the spirits of our dead friends, and appear as such, the better to succeed in deceiving the world. And as God's purpose is to gather his people, Satan must have some inducement placed before his followers, to induce them to go to the valley of Armageddon. "A battle is coming between the two kingdoms. The armies are gathering round."

Now, kind reader, in order to a clear understanding of the subject before us, and having the four general classes of believers in miracles and present day revelation fairly before us, we need mention but a few things additional with which to conclude.

First, there are a great many religious people in the world, vast numbers who do not believe that any revelation is revealed from God at present, whatever. They assert that the Bible contains all that is necessary—all that God ever intended to give. Nor do they believe that any miracles have been wrought since the Apostle John wrote his visions seen on the island of Patmos. These claim that they take the Bible for their religious guide. But that much of it is revelation of a special or limited character, and intended only for those to whom originally given (and this latter idea is no doubt true), especially all that part of the Old Testament relating to the flood, and the doctrine relating to the Jewish system of worship, with all the laws relating to their government as such; that many of its prophecies have been fulfilled, which is all true. They also teach that much of the New Testament teaching and doctrine and many of its promises were special in their nature and character, and were therefore limited and restricted to the ancient apostolic age. This, they say, is true especially of the doctrinal teaching that involve the organization of the church of Christ, the office work, operation, and gifts, and baptism of the Holy Ghost. Thus leaving us with but a small portion of the scriptures of the Bible as a guide, as having any present application.

It is scarcely necessary for us to observe that this last mentioned claim is only their idea, that there is no text in the New Testament that in the remotest way teaches such an idea. And if it were true, then so far as the book shows, we can have no idea whatever without new revelation from God, what form of church organization would be accepted of God now; nor, indeed, whether he intended to have any organized church now or not. If the original pattern of church organization given of God is not to govern for all time thereafter, since no different form from that is given in the New Testament record, how, without new revelation, is this matter to be determined; since, as these same parties say, we must belong to the church or be damned? Again, if it be true that many of the teachings of the New Testament touching the office work of the Holy Spirit were restricted to the apostolic age, what part of its teaching on this infinitely important subject are to extend this side of that age and apply now, and be enjoyed by us?

Men, leading religious teachers, have differed and do differ on nearly every subject treated of in the New Testament. Who will determine, to the satisfaction of honest inquirers, the questions involved, and show us without doubt what parts of the New Testament apply to us now? What portions of it are binding on us now?

Surely, at the past and present rate of settling these disputed subjects, they never can be settled without additional revelation from God. Present revelation from God, therefore, is a necessity, or we are to be left, with future generations, forever in the dark, and grope in the mazes of uncertainty for all time to come. Without new revelation from God we are altogether uncertain how much or how little of the New Testament doctrine, or which part applies to us or that we are bound by. And, according to this position of new revelation deniers, all we have left of the Bible of certain application is the few prophecies yet remaining to be fulfilled, and regarding these, much uncertainty prevails among religious leaders of christendom. If the law relating to church organization, as given in the book, is not binding, and the original pattern not to be followed now in church building, is the original law of repentance and baptism now binding? Are we to follow original examples in these points of law? Who can determine this by the book without new revelation? If the promise of the baptism of the Holy Ghost is restricted to the apostolic age, is not the command to be baptized in water also so limited? Please compare Matthew, chapter twenty-eight and verse nineteen, with first Corinthians, chapter twelve and verse thirteen, on this point. With so much uncertainty and darkness as is involved in this position, as is manifest by an impartial investigation of it, is it any wonder that many progressive, honest-minded people are forsaking it? And not comprehending the character and laws of God and his government, many are falling into the wiles of false christs, false prophets and teachers, who show signs and wonders to confuse them, bind their agency, and lead them to darkness and destruction.

Four out of the five foregoing positions held by their adherents, are palpably false. The first one referred to is the only one that is reasonable and biblical; the only one that harmonizes with the immutability and impartiality of God; the only position on this question of continued revelation and present-day miracles that harmonizes with God's law as found in the Bible. The great fundamental truths and facts of God's plan of human salvation are in their nature eternal and unchangeable. They are principles. They, therefore, cannot change; and hence, like the longitudinal lines that encircle the round earth, these span the religious spiritual realm of God. These principles are designed in their application to man to elevate, spiritualize, regenerate, and finally redeem him from all evil, vice, sin, and also death; and having brought man back from the fall—under the dominion of darkness and sin, and mortality—into harmony with God and his nature, character, attributes, and immortality, he will continue to exist with God in glory, power, wisdom, and eternal greatness forever.

These principles are faith, repentance, baptism, the ordinance of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, the baptism of the Holy Spirit, virtue, knowledge of the truth, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity, the love of God with all the soul, and thy neighbor as thyself.

These are some of the ordinances of God. They are the principles by which man is regenerated. He cannot become a new—regenerated—creature by means of any other principles. And since the Holy Ghost, one of the powers and agencies of the Godhead, is unchangeable, and is a necessary agency in man's redemption, whatever his office work in redeeming in one age; however miraculous, it is necessarily so in every age in that office work. The Godhead—the three—God's law, and God's Spirit, work harmoniously. They cannot act contrary to each other and maintain order. They are not the author of confusion. God maintains the universe, and perpetuates it in form and character; in exact and complete harmony with the original constitution and principles, and pat- terned as originally designed. This is absolutely necessary, in order to the accomplishment of the original purpose in its formation. For the same reason he created and perpetuates mankind in the like way, and so of all the variety and grades of his creation. No fundamental principle in any department of creation ever changes. But the other details are by new miracle, enactment, and continued revelation developed as the circumstances may demand. And the same is true of his church. It must be organized and perpetuated in exact and complete harmony with its original constitution and pattern, in order that the original purpose of God respecting it be effected.

God's original purpose in the organized or builded church was the salvation of man. (See Matt. 16:16-18; Acts 2:47; 20:28; Eph. 5:25-27.) The church of God, organized with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, bishops, deacons, helps, and governments, all in proper order (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:8-13) is, in the ecclesiastical sense, the "Christ" (1 Cor. 12:12), "the body of Christ." (See verse 27 and Eph. 1:22, 23.) Surely it was God's original purpose to save his own body! He has a law to do or accomplish all his works. If, because of his agency, man conducts himself in such a manner as to come in conflict with any of God's original purposes respecting himself, and so thwart that design or purpose, it is rebellion against God, and therefore sin. As man cannot be saved in his sin, he must necessarily turn from such rebellion, or be lost. And hence we cannot but conclude on this point that the church is now, or ought to be, in organization, official structure, constitutional arrangement, doctrinal order, and spiritual endowment, and ordinance and law, just what it was when originally established. Nothing different. And perpetuated in the same manner and by the revealments of the same Holy Spirit, and that it will be, if existing at all, till the church militant becomes the church triumphant, that "unto him," God, may be "glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen." Eph. 3:21.

OUR OBSERVATIONS.

Some people evidence a disposition to criticise "the church," because the leading quorums do not publicly advocate the immediate emigration of the saints from all parts of the world to the "land of Zion," instituting at the same time a system of "equality," or "all things common." Such a course of procedure would be most unwise, and would bring swift disaster. I firmly believe in "equality" and "things common," but it must be brought into practice in its time, and in order. And the man who cites the scripture, "gather into the regions round about," and talks of "consecration," and intimates that "the church" is derelict in performing duty, in that a grand coöperative system is not now in full blast, and that "consecration is not taught sufficiently," is greatly in need of instruction.

Were the elders to urge "gathering" and consecration, it would result, as it often does, when baptism is urged, a total failure. We tell the people of baptism, and then if we are wise, we leave it to them to choose what they will do, without urging. If a man of his own free will demands baptism, without any urging, there is a chance that he will live a humble, consistent life in the church. If he is coaxed in, it will take much more coaxing to keep him in, and he is not a thorough, good saint then. Just so with "gathering" and consecration.

If those who are in this church of Christ, who have money, and can "gather" and "purchase the land," will do so without urging, but because it is God's law, and because of their love for fellowmen, then the law will be kept, the lawgiver honored, the land of Zion redeemed from Gentile hands, the worthy poor who now toil for a meager subsistence, will be given their inheritances, and thus, in time, all would be on an equality, enjoying God's own coöperative system, and this converting, baptizing, gathering of those who have money to "gather," "consecrating of their properties," that the Bishop might "purchase the land," and place the poor brethren who are worthy thereon, with equal privileges with those who consecrated, this grand and uplifting work would go on and on, until Jesus comes in flaming clouds. And it would be done in God's order.

Why this hue and cry against the so-called negligence of those in high authority? They cannot compel those who have money to consecrate, to deposit it with the Bishop, and gather "round about." And if they could, it would not be God's plan; and those thus "gathered" would be discontented and would not be fit to remain. I cannot see that the "church" is blamable that the work of gathering is not farther advanced, but rather the saints who have wherewith to assemble on the land and consecrate of their properties. It is upon such ones that God has placed the great responsibility of redeeming their poor brethren from the curse of the nineteenth century, i. e., heartless trusts, monopolies, and combines; which, octopus like, have stretched themselves out far and near, and gathered into their coils the poor of every nation.

Who is to redeem latter-day Israel from the merciless grasp of the soulless corporations that rob us of our liberty? Those who have the riches of this world to consecrate, that Zion may be redeemed from Gentile ownership, to the children of the kingdom of God. Bless you, "the church" is not supposed to beg its wealthy members to consecrate! This must be done willingly and unselfishly. I would give about as much for one who had to be urged to "gather," and "consecrate," as for one who had to be urged into baptism, and I'm sure he would last just as long and live about as good. God does not work that way.

When the saints who have money will do as God has commanded, "gather in the regions round about," purchase the land for an inheritance, and consecrate their "surplus," that others may receive inheritances also, then will the work of the gathering be on in earnest. Then you will "love your neighbor as yourself;" "sell what thou hast and give to the poor," Jesus said, to the young man, who had kept the rest of the commands, but he would not. And so it is with you and I, dear reader. The final test for saints is "consecration." There are many who will continue to neglect this command, until it is too late! Do it now. "He that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned!"

The Lord said, "There is even now already in store a sufficient, yea, even an abundance to redeem Zion, and establish her waste places, no more to be thrown down, were the churches [congregations], who call themselves after my name willing to hearken to my voice." Some are not "willing to hearken" to his voice. Or in other words, they won't gather and consecrate until "God gives another command," or until "I know for myself." When I hear people express themselves thus, I think of the command already given, to gather, which command they receive doubtfully; and Jesus said if they received doubtfully, they are damned. "He that heareth my words, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man." The land is there, it can be purchased. The command to gather and consecrate is given. All that is lacking is some one to "gather" and "consecrate" to redeem the land of Zion. The Bishop will accept your consecration, and will advise you of a location. Try him. If we will obey God, all will be well. It is his will that we obey and cease to complain. "Thy will be done."

Hopeful for Israel,

E. A. GOODWIN.

BEAVERTON, Mich., Sept. 1, 1899.

BRANCH JURISDICTION.

Branches, it would seem, are the primary organizations of the church; they are plainly recognized in the law, and we are instructed to consider and respect their "presiding officers," together with the presiding officers of districts. (See D. C. 17:16; 120:1, 4.)

The leading purpose of branch organization is not to do missionary work, but, rather, to take care of the membership, nurture and sustain them. Therefore a clear distinction must be made between branch and missionary work. The branch president presides over all the persons belonging to his branch, as members, and over all subordinate branch officers as ministers; but he has no charge of territory except the immediate premises where regular branch meetings are held. The mission field is the whole world; and I do not believe that either individual or branch has the right to exclude the missionary from any part of his field, except, possibly, from the regular places of branch meetings, for a time, until a decision is rendered on his case by the missionary in charge, or if he be a district missionary, by the district president, alone, or in connection with the missionary in charge.

The idea that the branch has sole jurisdiction over so many square miles, more or less, is, I think, absurd; and it has in the past, and perhaps always will, lead to many unpleasant, unprofitable, and unnecessary complications. However, I believe that it is possible for branch, district, and mission authorities to exercise their rights unwisely and improperly. Branches and districts should permit missions to do their own work, and missions should permit branches and districts to do their own work. Or, branches should permit districts and missions to do their own work, and districts and missions should permit branches to do their own work. Nor do I believe that any serious clash is possible when we all labor with an eye single to the glory of God, and have an intelligent and proper regard for each other. The writer commenced active work as a missionary in the winter of 1872-3, and he is not aware of any conflict had with branch authority, over the privilege to enter in and labor up to the present time.

It certainly would be unwise and improper for a missionary, from district or mission, to hold services so near to the branch place of meeting, and at such times, as to conflict with branch services, except by consultation and agreement with the branch president; but, as I view it, the branch president would have no right to say, "You cannot do it." To illustrate: The officers of the Lamoni branch may go to Nebraska or California and labor with any of their members residing in these states; but they cannot say to all missionaries, or any missionaries, "You cannot come here where our members are without our consent." The president of the Lamoni branch may properly arrange for and hold funeral services in the most remote part of the town, over the remains of saint or friend, but he cannot say to other elders and missionaries, "You shall not occupy here till I give you permission." He presides over the members of the branch, not over the territory.

All elders and priests who are not branch officers, are amenable to the branch to which they belong as members, and to the district and their respective quorums, as ministers; that is, if they are local men. If they are general missionaries, they are subject to the General Conference, the missionary in charge, and the quorums to which they belong.

I present the above, because the matters involved seem to be of general interest, and because I deem to be safer for me to represent, in print, my own positions (which I have hitherto stated verbally) than to have others who may be unfriendly to those positions, represent them for me. If I am wrong, then let us reason together without ill feeling and in plainness.

WITH AN EYE SINGLE TO HIS GREATNESS AND GLORY.

The daily routine of our lives hourly brings this oft-recurring, all-important phrase which is so expressive of our desires in our testimonies, to a severe test. It is a most exact standard measure by which the quality of our love for, and sincerity towards our God may be meted out. Is it with an eye single to his greatness and glory that we daily toil with our hands and exert our brains for the means which will raise us to some extent above our fellow beings? And is it our foremost thought when our elevated position is secured to return our thanks to him "from whom we do exist and cease to be?" Too often at this vital point the evil one successfully applies his stratagem for Adam's fall. Touches the weak spot—ambition for power; gaudily paints the poor victim with the glib tongue of flattery, until "he knoweth not himself;" then showers upon him the deceiving homage of the world. Now the poor deluded one fortifies himself in his own strength, and forgets and even openly defies his God. The period of the magic spell expires, the man is a wreck, the victim is gained, the tempter laughs, one more inhabitant for his land of torture, one more to share his disgrace. He exults in the only loophole of consolation left him—the sympathy of numbers.

What of the determination to do all things with an eye single to the greatness and glory of God? Foiled. The purposes of man have been coerced, blighted, destroyed, but those of his Maker remain invincible.

The merciful God upon his throne of grace yet is willing to accept the reconciliation of the fallen, to raise the sinner from his degraded position. His love endureth forever. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to bridge the dreadful chasm which divided the regions of life and death. It was not granted the evil one to foil the omnipotent; he is not to have absolute sway over his victims. The Lord still invites the poor weak man, his handiwork, to return to his Father's house and lovingly extends to him his protecting hand and arm of strength, the which, will he but grasp will lift him from the entangled meshes of destruction which have entrapped him and replace him on the simple though narrow path which leads to life eternal.

The Savior sympathizes with the poor fallen mortal; he having preceded him through life's journey, suffering pain and humility in journeying along the narrow path of life in preference to the temporal pleasures and exaltations attendant upon those who choose the broad gilded path which ultimately leads to death. He did not canvass for the marketable approbation and applause of the world, doing all things with an eye single to the greatness and glory of his Father. Christ conquered all temptation, repelling the wily approaches of the evil one at every turn; quitting this life having gained for himself the indisputable title of conqueror of sin and death. Now he charitably stoops to raise the fallen—the victims of the adversary; offering redemption and restoration to his Father through sacrificing his own lifeblood. Can we not demonstrate a little of our appreciation of this practical display of most wonderful, all-absorbing, self-sacrificing love for us on the part of our Savior, by reproducing to the best of our abilities such a noble example of self-denial amongst ourselves.

It profiteth us nothing if we gain the whole world and lose our own salvation. We can work for the benefit of mankind in two ways—with an eye single to the greatness and glory of God, and with a view to self-aggrandisement. Our heavenly Father knoweth our hearts and hath warned us that whatsoever we sow that also shall we reap. Let us therefore endeavor as far as lieth in our power to sow the good seed of faith, hope, love, and charity; first among ourselves, then in turn throughout the world; pressing onward toward perfection—"Coming up higher," that we may brightly shine as the Lord would have us, doing justice to his desire by being the light of the world.

Individual effort is our secret of success. We have to take the only perfect One as our example, disdaining to excuse our faults in the conduct of others. How gratifying then the anticipation of closing our career upon this earth with the assurance that our lives have been well spent in the service of God; upholding and protecting the honor of his church, having endeavored at all times to do all things with an eye single to his greatness and glory.

GRINNELL, Iowa, Nov. 11.

Editors Herald:—After enjoying a grand spiritual feast at our last conference of the Des Moines district, October 14, I came to the Clear Creek branch in Jasper County, in response to a call from them. I endeavored to perform that which the call demanded and left the saints feeling encouraged. Then I came on to Newton, where once a flourishing branch bloomed, but too much like the flower of the rose, which fadeth and falleth away; yet there are some good saints there. One young lady there whom I baptized last June, has a mother that feels greatly disgraced, and desired me to come down to her house. I went, and reasoned, and prayed, but to no avail. She demanded of this daughter to request me to remove her name from our church book, but firm to her covenant with God, she calmly replied, "I will do anything you ask, Mother, but that." How I rejoiced to see one young and thus persecuted by the one nearest and dearest, stand resolute, and then I remembered what the Master said: "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me."

Now this mother belongs to one of Newton's would-be popular churches, U. P., and the pastor put the mother up to make the demand which resulted in being ordered to leave home. Saints, this is what a confirmed hope in Jesus enables us to do. This would-be meddler in other men's matters said to me in a letter of reply, "I saw this young lady receive as true a baptism [sprinkling] as she received when she was put under the muddy waters of the Skunk" (river). Judge ye.

Well, from there I came on to this place, where I found the saints all alive and rejoicing in the good hope. My stay has been made pleasant by many expressions of kindness long to be remembered. I found Bro. F. A. Russell at home, also Bro. J. S. Roth. Both of them to-day bade adieu and departed for fields of action and labor; Bro. Roth going to Jasper County, Bro. Russell to Rock Island, Illinois, and I felt lonely and a little sad and prayed God be with them till we meet again. I stay here until Sunday services are over, then back again to Clear Creek. Expect to go from there to Runnells.

Yes, while here Bro. Frank and I took a run down to Oskaloosa, and found the saints in arms, fighting the battles of faith. Learning that Bro. Kephart was holding meetings south of town about six miles, I went to see him, in company with saints from town, and found him ready to take the stand before a fair-sized audience. I found some good saints at this place, mostly brought into the fold by Bro. K. Bro. Kephart is getting up in years, but is strong and works hard to get the faith before the people.

I must not forget to mention that my fortieth anniversary was celebrated by the saints gathering at Sr. Russell's residence, the celebration consisting of songs, speeches, and declamations, and giving of presents most acceptable by the receiver. By this expression of kindness I was made to rejoice and felt to say within myself, God bless the dear saints and help me to live worthy of continued respect.

So to God I will ever pray
And will serve him all the way,
And his blessed gospel preach
The heavenly goal to reach.

Editors Herald:—It is a long time since I penned a letter for the columns of our much prized church paper, the Herald; but in the meantime we have gained weekly news and pleasure as well as profit from the letters and articles contributed by earnest, interested workers in all parts of the world; England, Germany, Australia, and the islands of the great Pacific. There, indeed, we have heartfelt interest for those whom we know personally, and from that personal acquaintance realize the sterling qualities of mind and heart that are gone to labor in the cause of the Master; and though they are so far away and we miss them, yet we do not forget them, and are glad to know they still remember us.

Just lately we have had visiting us my sister, her husband, and child, from near Jersey City. Many of you will recognize her by the name of "Agnes Moore;" she used to write for Autumn Leaves and Home Column, as well as Hope. She was telling me of an elder who said he was a Latter Day Saint who called at their door when they lived in Jersey City. She invited him in, told him she had a sister who was a Latter Day Saint, and had quite a talk with him. He told her his name, but she could not remember it; he also told her there was a Latter Day Saint chapel in Jersey City, and before he left he gave her some tracts. Now I would like to know if that man was one of our elders. Does our church have a chapel in Jersey City? I am anxious for her sake and for the sake of the church to know the truth of the affair and so ask, if this man was one of our people to let himself be known, and I would like the address of our chapel in Jersey City.

I wonder how many saw the strange sight in the moon last evening—the evening of the 7th of November. About eight o'clock I was out in the yard and I noticed a red bar through the center of the moon perpendicularly. I stood and watched it; it remained a broad, red streak for a short time, then the bar extending below the moon would disappear and the bar above would flare up brighter and farther and gradually disappear, and then the red fiery streak would appear below the moon, waving gently like a curtain in the wind. I went to the window and called my husband and children to come out and look at the moon. They came out and we all saw that bright light like fire come and go above and below the moon, sometimes a light like a tongue of fire with thick smoke would dart up from the uppermost point of the crescent. I never saw anything just like it. I stood and watched it until I became chilly, and after I was in the house awhile I looked out through the window but a bank of dark cloud was coming up over the moon which still had a somewhat red glow. Signs in the heavens in fulfillment of prophecy.

We are looking forward with interest to the meteoric display that we have read will be seen soon. In one paper I read that it will be even greater than the fall of 1833. Such a sight is impressive, making us feel our nothingness in the display of God's power.

The editorial in Herald of November 1 on Doctor De Costa's arraignment is a strengthening article, showing the difference between "truth restored" and "apostasy reformed." I am intending to send that Herald to a friend who is an infidel, and hope it may be read, every word, in an honest spirit.

It makes me sad to think of those near to us by the ties of nature, willfully refusing to know for themselves. I feel like praying for them, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."

Not wishing to weary you I close cheerful in the knowledge that truth will prevail and hopeful that we may be faithful.

ELLA J. GREEN.

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 9.

Editors Herald:—I have not written for some time, because I had nothing to write of importance, as I have been at home ever since last March, on the sick list. I have not been confined to bed nor to the house but a small part of the time, but I have not been able to travel, as my stomach has been so bad I have had to live principally on parched wheat and corn ground in a coffee mill and made into mush. My kidneys have also been very bad, but by careful living I think I am improving some of late, and I hope to be able yet to battle for the right, the Lord so willing.

During this time, through the help of my son, financially, and the help of others in correcting my manuscript, I have been able to get my book on the Sabbath question printed and it is now ready to supply all orders. Where I have to send it by mail it will cost twenty-five cents, and twenty cents where I can deliver it.

I have collected data and been preparing to answer Sabbatarian theories for nearly twenty years; so everyone who has my book is armed and prepared to answer almost any questions upon this subject, and I believe that it should be in the hands of and be read by every saint and by everyone they can reach with it.

But some one will say, Bro. Haws is blowing his own horn. That is true, but every one that sends for a book will help to make me and mine independent of the church, whether I am able to be in or out of the active ministry; so brethren and sisters, when you send twenty-five cents for my book, you are getting the study and labor of nearly twenty years, and you are giving that much to help the church, as soon as I am out of debt.

Send all orders and money to Albert Haws, No. 922 Third Street, Oakland, California, and if anyone is not fully satisfied with the book, return it with stamps to pay postage, and your money will be returned.

Yours in gospel bonds,
A. HAWS.

AUDUBON, Minn., Nov. 11.

Editors Herald:—I continued my effort at Bemidji and vicinity until the bad weather came on; preached in all while there twenty-one times, with good liberty, and interest fair. There are now enough saints there to organize a good branch when the Lord shall direct such a move. A goodly number of outsiders expressed themselves as satisfied we had the truth, but that is as far as they could get. I visited and talked with some nice people and believe they will, in time, obey the truth.

While up in that country I had deer meat, bear meat, and a mess of red squirrels, fish, and some of the best vegetables I ever ate. I am very thankful for the good way in which I was entertained. Several places I was invited that I could not go on account of the bad weather.

On Thursday night, the 18th day of October, a nice little crowd gathered at Mr. and Sr. Porter Nye's to spend the evening with the writer. To say we had a good time is only putting it mildly; for truly it was a jolly little band of friends indeed. We had some good singing and other amusements that all seemed to enjoy. The next morning I bade them all good-bye and at five o'clock in the evening I was shaking hands with friends in Audubon. Spoke twice on Sunday and met many I was glad to see.

On Wednesday, the 25th, I received a call to come to Luce to the sick. I went and found Bro. John W. Welch helpless and unconscious. On the 26th at 9:45 his spirit took its flight. The funeral was held in the schoolhouse at Luce on the 29th, a large crowd being present, showing their respect for the departed brother. He was aged eighty-seven years, nine months, and one day.

On Tuesday, the 31st, I had the pleasure of uniting in marriage Mr. Llewellyn, of Fargo, North Dakota, and Sr. Fannie Way, of Audubon, Minnesota. About seventy-five persons were present to witness their marriage. Many valuable presents were given that are useful in the married life. Since the wedding I have been busy getting Bro. G. L. Jones ready for the Home at Lamoni. He left here Thursday morning, and I hope and pray the Lord was with him on his journey, and that he arrived safely.

I leave next week to break new ground for awhile and to sow the good gospel seed that in God's own time a harvest may be had. We have plenty of places to preach, but people are very, very slow to obey, and laborers are few. We had three good meetings here Sunday, the writer speaking twice, sacrament in the afternoon.

The work is moving slowly; we need local workers so much. May our heavenly Father soon raise them up, is my humble prayer.

I am fifty-six years old to-day, and feel well in body and in spirit. I have been a member of the church for twenty-six years, twenty-five of which have been spent in preaching and trying to help others to a knowledge of the truth. I am still full of the missionary spirit and hope to work on until the end.

May the Lord bless all Israel, is my prayer.

Yours in the fight,
I. N. ROBERTS.

GUY, Okla., Nov. 10.

Editors Herald:—I am engaged in a very interesting meeting ten miles west of my home. It is a new place and the people are interested.

Our baby girl, Edda, is very sick. We ask the prayers of the saints that the Lord will restore her to health.

I was prevented from attending our mission reunion and district conference on account of sickness at home. We are still trusting in the Lord and endeavoring to abide in the faith.

SWEETWATER, Texas, Nov. 13.

Editors Herald:—As I read the Herald week after week and with the deepest interest the testimonials and the sweet communion of saints and the Spirit bearing witness I pause and wonder if in this life I will ever again have the blessed privilege of meeting with my brethren. Yes, a bright hope looms up before me of the beyond when we shall assemble around the throne of God.

For the last twelve months it has been my lot to be cast among strangers, only now and then finding one here and two there of the household of faith; and although my afflictions have been heavy at times, there are two, thanks be to God, who have never forsaken me; the Lord and my dear companion.

The Lord is now blessing me with large congregations, and in the radius of about three counties we are getting the truth before the people and making many friends.

Bro. T. J. Sheppard, missionary over one year ago, thought it wisdom for me to come to these parts and labor in mission work. We counseled together for several days, and whether or not for the best, I am here and will likely remain until called hence. I have as many openings as I can attend to and would be glad to get help.

I would like to get the address of Bro. T. J. Sheppard. We are on the Texas Pacific road, about two hundred miles west of Fort Worth. Any members living in Fort Worth or near taking the Herald, or who in any other way learn of my whereabouts, I would be pleased to hear from them.

I think the brethren passing to and from California, sometimes go over this road. If you come this way any more, stop over, please.

Yours,
L. L. WIGHT.

SHERWIN, Kans., Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—For the information of all concerned, I wish to state that by mutual understanding with Bishop E. L. Kelley and W. H. Kelley, missionary in charge of the Eastern mission, I have been released from that mission and have been appointed a mission to labor in the West, in the mission field of Bro. I. N. White, comprising the Spring River district, Northeast Kansas district, and Northwest Kansas district. Herein I give Bro. White's letter of appointment to me:—

"INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Oct. 21, 1899.

"ELDER J. T. DAVIS; Dear Brother:—Yours of the 20th to hand and noted; also the one from Bro. W. H. Kelley. There is no lack of work in my mission, hence I welcome you to it. Kansas will be a fine field during this fall and winter. You may feel yourself at liberty to labor anywhere in the State, only I ask that the submissionaries may be consulted, which of course you would do, even without this notice. Should you desire to extend your labor to the Northwest Kansas district, W. S. Pender is in charge. Northeast district is in charge of Peter Anderson. Bro. F. C. Keck, of Lebeck, Missouri, is in charge of Spring River district.

"Any and all of these brethren, no doubt, will be glad to secure your help. You can report your labors to the one in charge where you work.

"Ever your brother and colaborer in the Master's work,

"I. N. WHITE."

And now, dear brethren and sisters, I hope to labor in those fields in harmony with the spirit and letter of the foregoing appointment, soliciting your aid in faith, prayer, and correspondence, that we may all be found coworkers with God.

I enjoyed my labors in the East, and trust that this will be the case in the West, many souls be gathered into the kingdom, and truth and righteousness may firmly be established in the earth.

In gospel bonds,
J. T. DAVIS.

Box 198, WEIR CITY, Kansas.

ELK FALLS, Kan., Nov. 14.

Editors Herald:—We are still endeavoring to perform our duty. From Parsons we went to Angola, Kansas, where we enjoyed visiting with the saints; preached three sermons while there.

We heard the "Brighamites" were over to Caney, and so with a box full of Ensigns and "Crooked Paths" we started for this point, twenty-five miles west. The saints we expected to find at this point had all moved away, but fortunately we were "able" to patronize the hotel that night. Next day we found a Bro. Henson, living about six miles west of Caney. "We were glad to see him and he seemed pleased to see us." This is in the neighborhood where Bro. Clark used to live. But he has moved away. While here we circulated an appointment for preaching. Only five came out, and we concluded we couldn't afford to drive five miles over those big sand hills the second time after dark. Next day we felt more cheerful as "old Prince" hauled us on to more pleasant surroundings. However, we didn't see any Brighamites, only their tracts. We found a welcome at Bro. and Sr. Anderson's, who live about five miles southeast of Elk Falls. Here we commenced preaching in the Border schoolhouse.

While here we heard the Brighamites were preaching about six miles from us, and on Sunday evening Bro. Fred Anderson took me over, and after their service was dismissed I called the house to order and showed the difference between the two churches in a friendly way. The people had been saying there was no difference between us. But they found out differently.

There is a noble little band of saints here. Last Sunday morning we called them together and administered the sacrament and had a prayer and testimony meeting. I expect it will be some time before we are in another such a meeting. Near the close of the service, Grace and Alma Dillie (a noble young man and woman) arose for baptism. Yesterday we had the pleasure of seeing Bro. Beebe bury them beneath the liquid waves. The Spirit was present at the baptismal service, and in the confirmation we were cheered by knowing that God recognized the work performed.

At present we are preaching at Elk Falls in the Baptist church. Truly we can say "we have lacked nothing" on this trip. God has been with us, and to him we give all praise.

In the conflict,

A. M. BAKER.

OVERINDULGENCE.

Overindulgence is as great a curse to the rising generation as too stringent rules are, if not greater, or that is our opinion, born of observation, not particularly of experience. We were born and reared under a medium line of government, and think that is the best method.

"Just look here, my boy," said the mother of a six-year-old son, whom we will call Willie. He was whining, nestling, and fussing at the table, because he wanted his father's cup of drink instead of his own.

"Now stop, Willie, or I will send you from the table. I do think he is the worst young one to mind, that I ever saw in my life," she continued. So of course he kept on.

The father spoke, "There Willie, be a good boy and father will fix it all right," at the same time giving him his own cup of drink, and taking the small cup.

Then quiet prevailed a few minutes, but when he noticed the doughnuts, he could not eat another mouthful of his oatmeal and milk.

"There, eat your oatmeal first, my son, and then you shall have all the doughnuts you can eat," said the mother.

"Yah-yah-I don't want it—'taint good—and I won't eat it," giving it a slat with his spoon, which scattered it over the tablecloth onto the floor.

"There, Willie, that is just like you. I never saw such a trial as you are. There, take a doughnut and stop your mouth with it," said the wearied, but injudicious mother.

He had to make his choice as usual, but before he had eaten half of it, the pie was brought in. Then his face assumed the expression that all such children wear on such occasions, and he whined out:—

"I don't want that, 'taint good; I want some pie," at the same time the remnant went onto the floor.

"There, take a piece of pie; but you don't deserve a mouthful," said the mother with a frown, yet passing him a consistent piece.

"Never mind, mother, the dog will eat the crumbs," said the father.

"I won't have that, I want a big piece like Pappie's." On came that peculiar expression. Reader, haven't you seen such?

"Give it to me, mother, and give him mine," said the father. Wise, or foolish, which?

"There—there, Willie; now shut your mouth, and let me eat in peace," said the mother, doing as she was bidden. It was not sweet enough for his taste, so the sugar was passed to him, and his judgment must decide the matter.

Thus things went on meal after meal. As the child's appetite was poor at the table, he must have free access to the food closet, or there was a loud uproar, accompanied by improper talk. Occasionally a little medicine was poured down his exasperated throat as an appetizer.

The father took the babe, and sat down for a few minutes' pleasure; but in a minute or two Willie began to wriggle, whine, and tease for Pappie to change his seat with him. The kind father could not long resist the dear boy's wishes, so granted his request. The latter occupied the much desired chair possibly three minutes, then went out and began to tease his younger brother, who was playing with his sled.

Willie's mother was invited out to spend the day, so of course he must go too; the program would not have been complete without his part in the play. At the dinner table he could not, or would not, taste the hearty food, neither by his mother's or his hostess' persuasion. So after he had sulked awhile, the mother said in a plaintive, encouraging voice:—

"Mother knows what Willie wants. Willie wants his pie."

It was given him, and a large piece, too. He readily, if not voraciously, ate it, then settled into his former mood. In a short time the same plaintive voice was heard saying:—

"Mother knows what Willie wants. Willie wants Mother's pie."

It was given him, and as he had not had access to the food closet, he ate the whole of it.

The hostess did not replenish her guest's pie, concluding that she had more enjoyment in seeing Willie eat it.

This unfortunate boy could not eat a slice of bread unless it was cut to suit his fancy. He could not do any work, for the very reason he did not want to, and surely such kind parents could not compel him to work. Later on, after her husband was ill, she brought the water, prepared the kindlings, brought in the wood, and took care of the cow, and besides helped buy their food by her own labor.

So he had had liberty, as well as an inclination to follow the dictates of his own fancy. If he chose to sit up late, or to be out late, he could lie in bed till noon, or later. He must not be disturbed or crossed in anything; he was too nervous, or too high tempered to bear it, and besides he was growing, and must have a proper amount of sleep.

He lived on in the same manner even after his father's death, and when at the age of twenty he had never done a fair day's work; but the mother had worked early and late, at very fatiguing work, in order to obtain their necessary food and clothing.

His early acquired habits of indulging in confectionery, smoking, pleasant drinks—and stronger drinks when they could be obtained—made quite a drain on her washboard money.

When he was past twenty-one she asked an acquaintance—who was a sister to the one who dealt out the pie—the question, What do you suppose makes Willie do so?

The prompt and candid reply was, "It is because you have overindulged him from his infancy."

The unexpected reply struck a heavy blow on the mind of the injudicious mother, and probably the wound has not healed yet.

We will also state that he is twenty-three, and is still supported by her hard earned money. He is not sick, but is fearfully diseased—has suffered much from indisposition; or in other words from chronic laziness, and has long been a hiss and a byword among his acquaintances.

A sound mind in a sound body is the greatest riches one can possess; but neither will remain sound unless rightly used. Overindulgence will surely cause ruin.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

OUR DISTRICT CONVENTIONS: SHALL THEY BE DISCONTINUED?

THE TROUBLE, CAN IT BE REMEDIED?

About fifteen years ago it was my experience to assist for several days and nights by the bed of a sick woman. One evening she seemed better. She did not seem to have so much distress. That night I sat by her alone and she was as quiet as a little child at rest.

But that night the sufferer died and my inexperience was taught the necessity of discriminating between the quiet of healthful rest and the quiet of approaching death. A quiet condition is not always the most promising condition. Life and health are usually active. It is sleep and death that are still.

And so for one I have not been satisfied of late with our district conventions. It is true a quiet spirit has prevailed in our meetings. We have had no contentions or jarrings and business has not appeared to be marred by friction of any kind.

If to have a quiet time is our aim, we have attained a high degree of perfection in that line.

But in my opinion that is not our aim and the quiet and inactivity that have prevailed have been too strongly suggestive of sleep or death. Even a little friction would be better than such quiet, for, if kept within proper bounds, benefit arises from diversity of ideas, even though it may bring in some friendly opposition of one against another, for "as iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend."

The attendance at our recent conventions has not been what it should be. It has not been as good as it was a few years back. We have been losing instead of gaining. The interest, too, has been decreasing, as is evidenced by our small attendance and by the lack of animation and life in our meetings. These two things act and react upon each other. A small attendance has a depressing influence upon those present, and lack of life and animation in the meetings in turn causes the attendance to be still further decreased. The most faithful ones will continue for a time in any losing cause, but even their ardor finally becomes cool and the cause is abandoned. Can any of us reconcile himself to such a prospect when we remember that this is the Lord's work and that we are called upon to labor diligently while it is called today, for the night soon cometh wherein no man can labor?

What is the trouble? Inactivity, slothfulness upon our part. What is the consequence? Increasing spiritual drowsiness, a forerunner of spiritual death. Who are to blame for the trouble? Every one of us who does not do his duty. What are our several duties? If we are officers in the district association, we have special duties outlined in the constitution. If we are members we should faithfully assist the officers so far as is in our power.

How can we assist the officers? If they appoint any of us to do committee work, we can attend to it promptly and conscientiously, doing the very best we know. If we are appointed on program, we should take the part assigned cheerfully and fill it as best we can. If we know we cannot possibly appear upon the program we should at once notify those who appointed us that the place may be otherwise filled. Under no circumstances should we ignore the appointment and cause a blank in that number of the program. It is neither courtesy nor good management to do so. It breaks the harmony of what the committee planned to have presented.

As schools we should be wise in our appointment of delegates. We should make our selections, not to place honor or preference upon any one especially, but to secure sensible service in our business meetings. We should not appoint those who cannot or will not go. Those who permit themselves to be appointed should feel that a trust is committed to them which they have no right to neglect after having accepted it. This matter is often treated too lightly and attendance at the convention is regarded more as a matter of pleasure than as a matter of business and duty and is perhaps as often decided by our own inclinations as by our regard for the responsibility we permitted ourselves to assume.

When we attend the conventions what good do we do, how well do we represent our school, how much do we do to keep the work going, if we never utter a word or take any part in the proceedings? What reason have we for expecting the work to move on if we never lift hand or voice to help move it? How can we expect to have spiritual prayer meetings if each waits for another to offer the prayers, bear the testimonies, and relate experiences? How can we expect profitable business meetings, if one or two must frame all the resolutions, and no one ventures to vote against them, even if his own judgment tells him he ought to, if we all go passively with the current like so many leaves on a sluggish stream? Why should we laze our officers with the burden of making our work a success when we will not so much as touch it with our fingers?

Have the officers a burden of work? Yes, a great one, if we do not support them and a responsible one even when all work together. What is their burden? Upon them rests the care of the district and of all the children in it, for they are to keep alive the schools already formed and to organize new ones, so that all the children of the district have opportunity to hear the word of God.

Can they do so great a work as this? Not alone, but by our united help and the assistance of the heavenly Father they may do much in that direction.

I never pass along a country road on the Sabbath and meet a little boy or girl trudging along or catch a glimpse of them at the door or window or in the woods that I do not wish in my heart that our district work could be so active that it could reach out and place the bread of life within the reach of those small hands, that we might awaken in those young souls the desire to know God, that early in life they might walk in wisdom's ways, that they might grow beautifully into the stature of perfect men and women. If they only knew the ways of righteousness they need not go in the ways of death but might enter upon that more abundant life that comes only by the knowledge of God and his Son, Jesus Christ.

Our trouble, what is it? Lack of faithfulness to our duties. Let every member of every school in this district just resolve that he would do his whole duty, however small it might be, and there would be such spiritual awakening and advancement and joy as we do not now know, and much fruit might be gathered into the garner of the Lord, many children might be instructed in the knowledge of the truth, and this is pleasing to God.

But each one must do his duty to make our work a success. We must be workers, not idlers; workers, not dreamers; workers, not mere talkers; workers, not merely good wishers.

From the president of the district to each individual member of each school we need to take the advice given by the Lord to the church some years ago, "Let every man learn his duty." Knowing our duty, we should conscientiously perform it.

THE WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

On Thursday, November 2, I left Independence, Missouri, for St. Louis, on my way to Alma, Illinois, to commence a debate with Rev. Clark Braden on Tuesday, the 7th. On the night of the 5th, while in St. Louis, I had the following dream:—

I saw myself in a fierce battle with a heavy and aged rattlesnake. Two or three smaller snakes were assisting it, but did not amount to very much. Many people were standing around watching the fight, some few saints among the crowd. The fight was confined to a small piece of ground, which seemed to be covered with small brush, old rags, and old pieces of carpets; these furnished a refuge for the snakes during the conflict. Directly over my head was a wire which extended from tops of poles which were set in the ground similar to telegraph poles, but not more than twelve or fifteen feet apart. Close by two of these poles, I noticed two books bound in black, which were fastened to the wire (that extended from one pole to the other) with the same material as the wire; the books hung below the wire, one close to one pole, the other close to the other. Seemingly I had been put in charge of this wire and these two books; it seemed the whole fight was over the books and the wire.

This large snake was determined to pull the wire down and by doing this would trail the wire and the books in the dust under our feet. I was determined this should not be done. I had an old-fashioned hoe in my hand and during the fight I used this to pull the old carpet and rags off from the snakes where they would hide after the large one would make a desperate struggle to bite me and his efforts were repelled. At times I saw the rattler dodge under an old piece of carpet, thinking he would escape my eye, but I pounced upon him with both feet and could feel him squirm and twist under my feet, at which time the people would be laboring under great excitement, yet none offered aid nor resistance at that time; but the smaller snakes kept dodging around and seemed greatly agitated; but I kept my eye on them, so not one made even a single wound on me. Even the large snake which I had the direct fight with, did not at any time get his poisonous fangs into me, as I repelled every stroke he made, though they were desperate.

While the battle was at its height and all was excitement, a pleasant-looking messenger came rushing into the ring and handed to me a large teakettle full of hot water; I could see the steam pouring from the spout. "Use that," said he; and he disappeared. I took the kettle in one hand and the hoe in the other; with the hoe I would pull the rags and brush off the snakes, then I would pour onto them the hot water. I paid special attention to the large one and I scalded him till I could see the skin coming off in spots, and he commenced to weaken. Presently he rushed into the rags, dirt, and trash, attempting to hide, when I poured the whole contents onto him through the rags and dirt. The people cried out, "He's dead!"

At this point I looked and I saw one of the snakes running to get away. At this juncture my messenger appeared again with a fresh teakettle of hot water and quickly handed it to me and I rushed after the escaping reptile and caught him. I saw the skin was all scalded off from tip of tail to the middle of his body and I poured the hot water on his head and extended it down till it met the other. The snake coiled up and expired. I went back and some one said: "There is the hole where the large snake has his rendezvous." I stepped up to the hole and emptied the contents of the teakettle into it. This ended the battle.

I felt tired, worried, and very much fatigued, and said: "Well I don't like such dirty fights as that." I stood leaning upon my hoe handle to rest; then the people rushed around me to congratulate me for my great victory that I had won. Saints and friends both stood there and poured in cheering words to me, but I said: "Too much physical and mental work in that for me; others may have all the glory that there is in it, if any." One friend that stood by said, "Look there!" I raised my eyes and there was a large mansion before me and there was myself standing on the first step looking at me and the crowd where I stood. I looked! Surely it was myself standing dressed in a clean nice suit though in my shirt sleeves. The shirt was white as snow and around my neck was an exquisite fine chain fastened in front at the collar button with a fine gold locket; this was fastened together by a delicate gold padlock and the key was in the lock. Below this about where the first stud would come was a gold medal about the size of a twenty-dollar gold piece; below this where the second stud should be was another gold medal the same size; I could see the letters stamped in them, but was not close enough to read what it was. "There," said the people; "see what you have gained!" saying further: "While it is a physical and mental strain upon you, but look at the good it is for others and the wonderful prize for yourself!" While all of these words of cheer came from the many, yet I felt to say: "Let others have the glory, if there is anything in it." At this I pointed them to the wire that hung over my head and said: "I am sorry to see the wire pulled down like that." The battle had been so fierce that my enemy during the fight had succeeded in swagging the wire in the middle; yet it was securely fastened to the top of either pole and the two books were yet intact. The friends said: "That will all straighten up in time and the wire will be as straight and nice as it ever was." This I believed, but yet that did not fully satisfy me; however, I thought what we cannot help we will have to endure; one thing I was satisfied with and that was, I felt I had done my duty in trying to preserve the wire and the books and should try and trust the happenings to God's care. At this I awoke, and it was a dream! It is written in my soul to stay.

I felt sure that this dream had something to do with the coming debate to be held at Alma, Illinois. While in one way it gave me cheer, yet I felt the fight would be of no small moment. Braden was in his home, and president of the Christian college there. I felt a desperate effort on his part would be made to down me and sustain himself in his assertions that he was the only man that could successfully meet "Mormonism." He had extensively circulated in circular form, that "Clark Braden has held thirteen debates with nine representatives of Mormonism, and one of his opponents said: 'He understands our history, literature, and sacred books better than we do ourselves.'" "Every preacher in Southern Illinois should bear this discussion, and learn the truth and facts in regard to Mormonism, that has injured many churches in Southern Illinois, and more especially congregations of 'The Churches of Christ,' as a result of the ignorance of preachers and the people, in regard to the most stupendous, impudent fraud of the century." This advertisement called together some fifteen or twenty preachers all told, I suppose.

I arrived at Alma on the 6th, and learned on alighting from the car that Braden had lectured the night before upon "Mormonism" in the very house where the debate was to be held; and that he was announced to continue the lecture that night. Presently I saw Braden at the other end of the platform and I walked up to him and offered my hand and said: "Well, Mr. Braden, I understand you are attempting to pave the way for the debate as usual by giving a lecture or two beforehand upon what you call Mormonism." "Yes," he replied in a gruff way. Braden looked mad as I turned from him.

Early next morning I was accosted by "that committee" and asked to sign a "tight-jacket" agreement (gotten up by Braden) before the trustees of the Christian Church would allow their church used for the debate! I told "that committee," that I had signed all the agreement I intended to sign before I left my home at Independence, Missouri. I happened to have an agreement in my pocket which said the debate would commence on Tuesday, November 7, at ten o'clock, in the church of Christ at Alma, and this contract was signed by Mr. Braden and myself. Braden had written to me that he had secured the house and if they now wanted to back out of the debate they could show the white feather in the way they were attempting to "tight-jacket" me.

Presently the hour came and we appeared on the battle ground with moderators, chairman, etc. The meeting was opened, but Braden arose and said there was a matter that had to be attended to before the debate could go on; and then read this new agreement; asked me if I would sign it, as that was the only ground on which the house could be used. I got the floor and read the agreement that caused me to come from my home to meet Braden in this house, and said: "Mr. Braden, you will meet me on that, or not meet me at all. The debate will be declared off right here, and the reasons why fully published." Twenty minutes were spent before an agreement was reached. The old agreement was honored without a change. One member of "that committee" (the professor of the college) told me they were more afraid of "Bro. Braden" than they were of me; they had heard from "Orchardville."

I opened with one hour's speech upon, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?" I had excellent liberty. I used a new line of argument in many ways from what I did at the Orchardville debate. This was on purpose to throw Braden off of the old beaten track. I used a new twenty-four foot chart that greatly assisted me in riveting my argument upon the minds of the people.

Braden in his answer asserted that "Jo" Smith (Braden never says "Joseph") pretended to translate the Book of Abraham and published it in the Times and Seasons as a revelation from God. "Jo" also pretended to translate the Kinderhook plates, which plates afterward were proven to be a hoax. The King Follet sermon was published in Times and Seasons as a revelation, and now the Reorganization goes back on it all. Hence out of their own mouth they prove "Jo" a fraud. The papyrus from which "Jo" pretended to translate the Book of Abraham was proven to be a hoax, which had been palmed off on the "inspired Jo." That one Mr. M. Deveria had since translated the genuine Book of Abraham, which showed up Jo's fraud. Said the Book of Commandments that was printed at Independence, Missouri, in 1833, as revelations from God through Jo, had been tinkered up to suit later developments. This was the Mormon god revising himself.

In my next I produced the Book of Abraham, which was a small concern as to size—only making a book of ten pages. That Joseph Smith was committed to its translation I would agree. But it was never published as a revelation from God, nor was it ever acknowledged by the church as such; and I challenged and defied him to show a single statement from any of our printed works different from what I stated. This, in all of his later speeches, he never once attempted to do.

I showed that Mr. Deveria's Book of Abraham had not one half the authentic backing as to its being genuine as did Mr. Smith's. Mr. Deveria was a young Frenchman of no wide reputation and fell out of public view at once.

Showed that Professor Nathaniel G. Bonwetsch, of the University of Goettingen, had in 1898 gotten a roll of parchment from the Library at Moscow, Russia, and translated it as a veritable Book of Abraham. That other scholars hold that this antedates Christianity in its original form, and in it we have the oldest specimen of apocalyptic literature that has been discovered. All of this was proof that Mr. Smith knew something of what he was doing. That the papyrus that Mr. Smith translated the Book of Abraham from was not "hid away as a hoax," but remained in the saints' possession for a number of years, and found its way to Woods' Museum, in Chicago, and probably perished in the great fire of 1871, as they have never since been heard of.

As to the Kinderhook plates, they were brought to Mr. Smith while he was at Nauvoo for his examination, but were taken away by the finder of them, and never returned, and Mr. Smith never translated one word of them; nor did he pass his opinion as is anywhere published as to their genuineness.

I challenged Braden to show one solitary sentence from Smith's pen that he ever claimed to translate a single word from the Kinderhook plates. If assertions proved, we would as well end the debate now, and award Mr. Braden the victory. His whole speech from commencement to end was a string of assertions, and I defied him to prove one single statement he had made against Mr. Smith. One of the rules in our agreement is: "All other evidence [outside the Bible] to be received upon its merit, subject to the rules governing such testimony before our civil courts." "Civil courts" do not receive assertions for evidence.

As to the King Follet sermon, Mr. Smith was some two hours in delivering it. At the time of delivering it, it was not reported, neither in longhand or shorthand; but some months afterwards, when Brigham Young commenced to show his cloven foot, the King Follet sermon was written up and tinkered to suit some of Brigham's peculiarities and then published. As to its length as published, I could read the whole thing in twenty minutes; yet it took Mr. Smith some two hours to deliver it. As to it being called a revelation by the saints, that is, like all of the rest of Mr. Braden's assertions, not a grain of truth in it.

As to the Book of Commandments which I held in my hand with the Book of Covenants of 1835 and two later editions I have this to say: If the Mormon God has been so anxious to revise himself, I wonder why he don't show his cloven foot occasionally since the 1835 edition? But no, Mr. Braden doesn't want reason to rule in this debate. When the brethren were arranging to print the Commandments at Independence it was under peculiar and adverse circumstances. Mob violence was threatened them on all sides. Our people were hunted down like wild beasts while the Book of Commandments was in process of being printed and compiled. The original of the revelations were at Kirtland, Ohio, in the custody of the President of the church, printing at Independence being done from transcribed copies alone. Before the book was gotten out the press was destroyed by a violent mob. There was no part of a revelation in it later than September, 1831, when the press was thrown into the street; the last printed form was at the forty-seventh paragraph almost in the middle of the sixty-fifth section. After the mob dispersed some of the leaves of the unfinished book were picked up in the street and put together without a further investigation, reading of proof to correct the many errors that would almost unavoidably be made in such a work while being done under such adverse circumstances. There were many typographical errors, and others by transcribing manuscript, which were readily detected by the competent committee that had been appointed by the church to examine it and prepare the book for publication. These mistakes were found because the committee had access to all the "original" manuscripts and did not have to rely on mere "transcripts."

By a careful examination of all these books they carry the conviction readily that there was no fraud perpetrated in the compiling of the 1835 edition. A man to look at it in any other light must be hard pressed for evidence to defeat his opponent.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in Southern Nebraska District; Greeting:—As my vocal organs have been somewhat affected for some time, and the exposure in doing missionary work is such in your district, that I have felt for some time unable to do what was required of me as a sub-missionary in charge; therefore, I requested a change to a field of less exposure. This was kindly granted by the First Presidency and our esteemed missionary in charge, Bro. James Caffall, when I was appointed to the city of Detroit, Michigan, during the conference year.

It is with a feeling of sorrow that I leave Nebraska as a missionary, for it will be seven years next spring since I began laboring among you, and during that time I have learned to love the noble-hearted souls who have been so kind and considerate to me. But as separating from friends and loved ones is a part of the experiences of the missionary, I hope that we may be able to so live that when the race of life is run, we may be found worthy to abide "a celestial glory." I shall ever remember the kindness manifested, and I pray God to abundantly bless you for your thoughtfulness and generosity.

I arrived here November 10 and hope to be able to accomplish some good in this great city of 340,000 inhabitants. My address is No. 365 Grand River Avenue, Detroit, Michigan. Your colaborer for Christ,

W. E. PEAK.

ROGERS.—At Sandwich, Illinois, November 8, 1899, of diabetes, Bishop Israel L. Rogers, aged 81 years, 7 months, and 4 days. He was born April 4, 1818, in Rensselaer County, New York, being the oldest of fourteen children born to David and Betsy Allen Rogers. All these children lived to maturity and had families, a total of sixty-two children being born to them. At the age of eighteen Israel thought best to start out for himself, so he agreed to pay his father one hundred dollars for the remaining three years of his minority, which he did by labor in the quarries and on the canal. Before he was twenty-one, February 24, 1839, he married Miss Mahala Salisbury, of Chenango County, and they were companions over fifty-two years, until her death, September 22, 1892. In 1841 they moved to the West, coming into the Fox River country, into the very neighborhood where all his subsequent life was passed. By hard labor and good management he laid the foundation of the competence he afterward enjoyed. And he became widely known for his honesty and integrity, in those times when he and others experienced the privations and adversities incident to the early settlement of new regions. While yet in New York, just at the beginning of manhood, he accepted the restored gospel, and united with the Church of Jesus Christ. But during the dark times, after B. Young and others assumed control, he remained quiet, until he became satisfied that the church reorganized was of God. He accepted it because of the witness that God gave him concerning it. In April, 1860, he was chosen and ordained as the Presiding Bishop of the church, which office he held for twenty-two years, and he devoted much time and largely of means to the spiritual and financial success of the work. He was greatly loved and held in honor, and for his deeds of kindness his memory will continue to be so held by many. To Bro. and Sr. Rogers were born six children, of whom five still live: Bro. George W. Rogers, who resides at Independence, Iowa; Mrs. Mary M. Darnell and Harriet A. Sprague, of Randalia, Iowa; and Bro. Lewis I. Rogers and Sr. Delia A. Wallace, of Sandwich. Martha L., who married Bro. Melvin Howard, in 1862, died in 1870. Of the twenty-five grandchildren born eighteen are living. On October 16, 1893, Bro. Rogers married Sr. Rachel Trout, widow of Bro. G. W. Trout, and she is now again a widow. Bro. Rogers' children were all present at the funeral, with the most of their children, also two of his brothers, two sisters, several nephews and nieces, and other kindred. According to Bro. Rogers' request, the sermon was preached by Bro. E. A. Stebbins, who came from Lamoni for that purpose, the services being at two o'clock on Friday the 10th. Bro. E. M. Wildermuth was present and assisted, and the Plano choir came over and rendered the service of song. Then a journey to the old cemetery near Fox River, where the wife of his youth, and many friends besides, were at rest, and the coffin was laid in a box made of great slabs of stone, prepared for the purpose by his son Lewis. It was sad to part with one so long and well known, and a large procession of sympathetic Sandwich citizens accompanied the family and the saints to the place of burial.

BARNETT.—At the residence of his son, at Taylor Ridge, Illinois, Joseph R. Barnett, aged 70 years, 6 months, and 1 day. Bro. Barnett was born in Clarion County, Pennsylvania, April 28, 1829. On January 23, 1854, he was married to Catherine Cadman, who died November 1, 1888; to this union fourteen children were born, two of which died in infancy, and twelve remain. Bro. Barnett was baptized September 7, 1879, and remained a faithful, earnest Latter Day Saint. The most of the children are members of the church with him. He died in full hope of a glorious resurrection. The funeral was in charge of the M. E. minister of Taylor Ridge; the sermon by Elder D. S. Holmes.

BROWN.—At the home of his sister, Watsonville, California, October 23, 1899, Elder Daniel Brown, aged 77 years and 21 days. The funeral was at the house of his sister, and conducted by Rev. E. L. Rich, a Presbyterian minister. He was buried in the Watsonville cemetery by the side of his mother, where they both await the resurrection of the just at the coming and call of their Redeemer. Bro. Brown has traveled many miles in trying to spread the news of the restoration of the gospel of the Son of God. His example in life was worthy of imitation by all the race of man.

WELCH.—At Luce, Minnesota, on the 26th day of October, 1899, John W. Welch passed peacefully away. He was born January 25, 1812. Peace be to his ashes. Funeral sermon by Elder I. N. Roberts.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale. Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Address, FRANK CRILEY, Business Manager, LAMONI, DECATUR CO., IOWA.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.)

Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

THE FUTURE OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

The Rev. Dr. Henry R. Percival, an Episcopal clergyman of the diocese of Pennsylvania, gives some arguments drawn from his observation of religious forces in this country and abroad to show that the coming religion is to be neither Protestant nor Roman Catholic, but a modified "Catholicism," possessing a dignified liturgy and ritual, and a sacramental system not dissimilar to that of the moderate High-Church body in the Anglican communion at the present time. He says (in The Nineteenth Century, September):—

The so-called "crisis" in the Church of England, which to us on the other side of the Atlantic looks like a very small quasipolitical affair, partaking largely of the nature of a "tempest in a teapot," seems to me to be but one manifestation of that spirit of which I propose to speak, a spirit which, unless I am entirely misinformed, is sweeping over the whole Western world, America included.

In taking, then, a careful view of the state of Christianity, three things seem to me to be absolutely certain:—

1. That among civilized nations the form of Christianity nourished by Rome, which is ordinarily called "popery," is making no headway.

2. That the distinctive doctrines of every Protestant reformer are being more and more universally rejected.

3. That there is in all Protestant Christendom (the Anglican church being, perhaps improperly, included in that category) a distinct movement toward Catholicism and a most evident desire for ceremonialism.

While each of these statements may be doubted and denied by some people, he says, yet for all that they may be true, and he proceeds to give his reasons for thinking so. In relation to the first assertion, he makes use of much the same arguments as did Mr. Walter Bagot in his article on the decline of Roman Catholicism in the Nuova Antologia (see the Literary Digest, September 16) supplementing them by a consideration of Roman Catholicism among the Latin nations, where, he says, the number of persons who are not only not Catholics but who are actively opposed to Christianity "is positively appalling." As to his second point, the decline of Protestantism, he says:—

Here I need not ask the reader to take my word for anything, for his own experience will bear out the truth of my statements. Where are those who believe, as Luther taught it, that doctrine of imputed righteousness which he called "justification by faith alone"? The doctrine is extinct. What person calling himself a follower of Luther would dream of advising a penitent to sin all the more in the name of Christ, because "where sin abounded there did grace much more abound"? Who to-day believes the doctrines of Calvin on reprobation, etc.? Most of these dogmas are as extinct as the famous dodo. And as for Puritanism, that mighty power which for a time overthrew both altar and throne, and founded a religious tyranny in New England in these western lands, what remains of it to-day except a pale, emasculated, swiftly dying sabbatarianism?

Even old-fashioned orthodox Protestantism is in America on the wane, and while the law of William Penn's own Pennsylvania still by statute fines those who speak against or insult the Holy Scriptures of God, many Protestant ministers in the hundreds of pulpits of Philadelphia find no more interesting and exciting theme for their Sunday preachments than the showing the word of God to be the erring and often immoral and ridiculous word of man!

It is no exaggeration to say that Protestantism is rapidly disintegrating, and is losing its hold as a teaching power. And in this connection it must always be remembered that Protestantism was from its inception as distinctly a teaching institution as ever Catholicism claimed to be. To be sure, with a glaring inconsistency, it declared the "right of private judgment." But if anyone dared in the exercise of that right to arrive at conclusions opposite to those of the Protestant leaders, he must suffer accordingly, and therefore Luther informed Calvin, or Zwingli (which was it?), that because he disagreed with him in regard to the Supper he would go to hell! And Calvin burned Servetus at the stake because he did not agree with the Geneva doctrine of the Incarnation!

Who to-day holds fast by the Westminster Confession? Or by the Augsburg Confession! Or by the Book of Concord? Who but a handful among old-fashioned Tractarians considers himself bound to accept the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England? An American bishop, whose diocese is in the wilds of New England and contains but twenty-seven clergymen all told, has recently written a letter to a church newspaper in which he makes the highly interesting assertion that the clergy are not bound even to believe the statements they make in the prayers of the church service, which they offer out of the prayer-book to the God of truth! The bishop would seem to be a fair match, in this respect at least (although not in others), to the rationalistic German professor, Adolf Harnack, who made a similar statement with regard to the Lutheran ministers of the state church, who were obliged to accept the Apostles' Creed, which they did not believe!

It is not too much to say, then, that Protestantism as a system of positive religious belief is dying out, and that its professors are for the most part able to continue in its ministry only through some device of casuistry, which in any other matter would be considered by themselves, as it is in their case by almost everyone except themselves, dishonest and dishonorable. It is manifest that this state of things cannot go on, and that the only final result of "progress" in this direction, so far as faith is concerned, must be unbelief, and, so far as organization is concerned, decay and dissolution.

As to his third point—the existence of a strong movement back to "Catholicism," but not to Roman Catholicism—he says that anyone who remembers the common method of conducting service fifty years ago cannot fail to be aware of a mighty change. This is not only true in the Anglican church, but among the Presbyterians, Methodists, and other leading Protestant bodies. Even north of the Tweed in Scotland, he says, a large number of ministers in the church of Knox are "out-and-out Ritualists." In Scandinavia and in Lutheran Germany it is the same. Among the Lutheran churches on this side, which two decades ago could hardly be distinguished from those of the Methodists and Presbyterians, we often find now an altar with retable, a cross and flower vases, and sometimes—chiefly in the West—crucifix and candles. A highly developed form of liturgical prayer-book has, he says, been set forth by the two largest bodies of American Lutherans. He continues:—

This wave, however, of which I am speaking is not a mere wave of ceremonialism; it is likewise a great wave of doctrine, bringing back, or at least drawing attention to, the doctrines and practices of the church which had been lost sight of or rejected at the Protestant Reformation. Dr. Harnack has written well and most truly upon this point in his recent little book, which has been translated into English. His conclusion is that orthodox and believing Protestantism is becoming Catholicized: that the un-Protestant idea of the church as an institution with power to control the conscience and teach the intellect is daily gaining ground, and that this inclination, if continued, will end in the overthrow of Protestantism altogether, which of course Harnack looks upon as a great misfortune.

I have a firm belief that this is God's good way of leading the nations back to Catholicism—not to the Catholicism of medieval and modern popery, but to the Catholicism of primitive prelacy.—Literary Digest, Nov. 4, 1899.

NEW LIGHT ON BIBLICAL CHRONOLOGY.

The most telling arguments made of late against the radical Biblical critics have been based on the archeological finds, especially those made in the Nile and the Euphrates valleys. The use made of these discoveries by Hommel of Germany, Sayce of England, and Halévy of France, has done much to strengthen belief in the historical reliability that formerly by general consent was accorded the Scriptures. The recent discovery of a number of papyri in the old stamping-ground of Egyptian archeologists, the district surrounding Heracleopolis, the modern Ahnas-el-Medineh, has brought to light data that seem to show that the Biblical chronology of the Exodus and the sojourn of Israel in Egypt are in harmony with non-Biblical sources. A full account of this find and its bearings on Egyptian and Biblical history we have from the pen of the famous Arabian traveler, Dr. Eduard Glaser, in the "Beilage" of the Munich Allgemeine Zeitung (No. 213), from which we glean the following particulars:—

One of the perplexing problems of Egyptian chronology has been the date of the opening of the era generally known as the "Middle Kingdom," which included the famous eighteenth dynasty and covered the period which runs parallel with the beginnings of the Israelitish people, especially the times of the Patriarchs. As Egyptian research had all along maintained that this period antedated the events described in the chapter in Genesis referring to these times, a conflict has been supposed to exist between Egyptian and Biblical chronology. The new papyrus find shows that the trouble all along has been an incorrect computation on the part of the Egyptologists with reference to this historic period. Professor Meyer has maintained that it began in 2130 B. C.; Brugsch, in 2466; Petrie, in 2778; and Unger, in 3315, so that the difference between the highest and the lowest was one of about twelve hundred years; yet not one could be brought into agreement with the Biblical records. The new papyrus shows that the beginning of this famous period is to be placed between 1996 and 1993 B. C., and its close between 1783 and 1780, or fully one hundred and fifty years later than even the low computation of Meyer puts it; and a space of less than fifty years now exists between the current Biblical chronology and that of the Egyptologists, where formerly there was a difference of centuries, and a reconciliation seemed impossible. The near approach of the two chronological systems has been caused entirely by the discovery of errors in the Egyptian calculations, and not in the Biblical.

The way in which the readjustment of these chronological data has been effected is deeply interesting and instructive. The papyri in question consist of temple archives found in the ruins of a sanctuary erected by King Usertesen II., and include letters, official documents, etc., of all kinds. With the information here secured is also the statement that in the twenty-fifth day of the seventh calendar month of the seventh year of King Usertesen III., the "early ascension" [Frühaufgang] of the dog-star Sirius would take place on the sixteenth day of the following or eighth month. It so happens that on the basis of similar astronomical statements in other documents and on the basis of an exact knowledge of the beginning and end of the Egyptian year, the commencement of the preceding era of Egyptian kings, the so-called Older Kingdom, has been carefully calculated. Dr. Brix, an authority on this subject, in accordance with the method of Oppolzer, has calculated the beginning of the Middle Rule and reached the later conclusions mentioned above, which must be regarded as reliable.

On these premises, the whole early history of Israel, including also the period of the Patriarchs, assumes quite a natural place among the ups and downs of that remarkable age. It appears now, because of the readjustment of the chronology, that the mysterious Hyksos or Shepherd Kings, reported by Manetho made their appearance in Egypt shortly before the rise of the Israelites. From many sources in Egyptian documents it is reasonably certain that at this time the Phœnician power was extending its borders wonderfully, aiming practically at the acquisition of a world-supremacy, the traces of this being found in Babylon in the East and in Egypt and Northern Africa, and even in Southern Europe, in the West. The Hyksos episode was included in this general movement. Within the limits of this great political upheaval, the Hebrews, who in reality were little more than a Phœnician tribe in their primitive history, take a natural and easy place, and from this new perspective the chronology of the Biblical accounts concerning the Egyptian sojourn agree in a most unexpected manner with the data taken from other sources. "There can be no doubt that now the oldest period of the history of Israel has been placed in a clear light by the Berlin papyrus."—Translation made for the Literary Digest.

SUMMING UP A CENTURY.

A review of the achievements and disappointments of the closing century was begun by Dr. Emil G. Hirsch of Sinai Congregation in his sermon yesterday morning.

"Surveying our century, the first thought which will crowd to our lips is that ever since earth performed its circling part in the economy of the planetary family, no hundred years have wrought so richly and so wisely," said Dr. Hirsch. "But after a little while spent in a rapid and necessarily superficial review this impression changes. The truer focus is found. The consciousness grows that after all the majesty of the panorama is produced by the emphasis of the higher points, and by them alone.

"This is the first beneficial lesson which the survey of the century's work presses home. We have, under the influence of an exclusively mechanical interpretation of life and world, come to believe that all values lie in bulk or mass. Personality and its highest exponent, genius, largely have been regarded as negligible quantities. Studying the true propelling forces of progress as brought out in the results of the century's labors we cannot but become aware of the truth that the impression of high elevation is due to the fact that beyond and above the mass rise ambitious peaks. The great men and minds, not the vast masses and numbers, have been the parental energies of civilization. Because they pushed on their race was enabled to take a stand on higher ground. The mystery of genius refutes the dogma of mechanical materialism. Our civilization has deepened simply because our time was blessed with a larger company of elect prophetic souls.

"There is no doubt we have come into larger and fuller life. The larger is always the better and sounder life. By the range of one's sympathies the measure of one's life's soundness is gauged. The annihilation of time and space due to our technical triumphs enabled us to enlarge the play of our humanitarian sentiments. The world has become smaller and man correspondingly larger. The wider scope of commercial interests and enterprises was the accidental, the wider reach of our sympathies the essential result of our electrical appliances. Such a spectacle of universal indignation as we beheld last week is conclusive proof that barbarism, which is rooted in exclusiveness, has given way before civilization, which runs toward inclusiveness.

"Our life has also grown to be more intellectual. The ignorant life is the cramped life. The more we know the fuller is the current of our life. The fuller life is always the better life. The one anxious question which is put: Have men become better in this century? may on these grounds be answered without hesitation in the affirmative."—Ex.

"SCIENCE FALSELY SO CALLED."

Mr. Andrew Lang, "At the Sign of the Ship," in Longman's Magazine, tells the following story: "Two geologists were geologizing in some lonely highland place. One of them, looking about with a field glass, beheld the other occupied all day in rolling a great rock or boulder to the edge of a hill, whence it rolled down a considerable distance. At dinner he asked his friend what on earth he had been about. The friend declared that he had only been rolling the stone for exercise, but, being cross-examined, at last gave out the truth. 'The confounded thing,' he exclaimed, 'was two hundred feet too high to suit my theory.' " Mr. Lang declares that every now and then the devotees of physical science need to be called back to the severity of literary methods!—Chicago Tribune, Nov. 13, 1899.

"WAS JOSEPH SMITH A POLYGAMIST?"

Recently we wrote an article under the above caption which was published in the HERALD for August 2, 1899, and afterwards published in tract form. This article is taken up and discussed by The Kinsman, of Salt Lake City, Utah, a publication issued we believe, in the interests of the Presbyterian Church, in its issue for September, 1899.

We thank the Kinsman for a comparatively fair statement of our position, and for its liberality in quoting so largely from our article. But we wish to remind the Kinsman that it has either misunderstood our purpose in quoting the testimony of certain witnesses, or it has resorted to an attempt to mislead its readers.

We quoted from Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and from the writings of certain individuals in other church publications, not for the purpose of proving that Joseph Smith was not a polygamist. On this point we distinctly stated as follows:—

The rules of evidence do not require anyone to affirm a negative, hence we do not affirm that he was not guilty, but call upon those making the charge to establish their affirmation; but we claim the right to examine the testimony offered. This we consider legitimate and fair.

Our purpose in presenting the testimony we did, as the Kinsman ought to know, was to sustain the two following points as clearly set forth in our article:—

First. That there can be found no word in favor of plural marriage in church publications issued before the death of Joseph Smith, June 27, 1844.

And:—

Third. That after the death of Joseph Smith the existence of polygamy and plural marriage was universally denied, even by Brigham Young and his associates, until August 29, 1852.

That the testimony we cited did sustain these points the Kinsman did not deny, nor will it do so. If it wished to disprove our position it should have shown, either that the church publications did speak in favor of plural marriage before June 27, 1844, or that Brigham Young and his associates did not deny the existence of polygamy prior to August 29, 1852.

If the Kinsman wishes to take up the question and attempt to prove that Joseph Smith was a polygamist, we are willing to hear and consider the nature of the testimony, and the character of the witnesses introduced; but we shall hold the Kinsman responsible for the testimony of its own witnesses.

But the Kinsman introduces the following:—

If the truth possesses Mr. Heman C. Smith, why does he state so carefully that "only our estimate of Joseph Smith as a man can be affected by his conduct," and call for the proof of Joseph's connection with polygamy when that proof was under his nose as he quoted the testimony of Wm. Marks? On the very next page of volume 1 of The Saints' Herald, Mr. Smith, no doubt, read the testimony of Isaac Sheen, which throws much light on that of William Marks. It reads:—

"The Salt Lake apostles also excuse themselves by saying that Joseph Smith taught the spiritual wife doctrine, but this excuse is as weak as their excuse concerning the ancient kings and patriarchs. Joseph Smith repented of his connection with this doctrine, and said it was of the Devil. He caused the revelation on that subject to be burned, and when he voluntarily came to Nauvoo and resigned himself into the hands of his enemies, he said that he was going to Carthage to die. At that time he said that, if it had not been for that accursed spiritual wife doctrine, he would not have come to that."—Saints' Herald, vol. 1, p. 24.

If this is the Kinsman's idea of testimony, we do not wonder that it did not comprehend our article, or its purpose.

There is no judge of evidence that can point out one word of testimony in it. There is an admission upon the part of Isaac Sheen that Joseph Smith had some kind of connection with "the spiritual wife doctrine," what that connection was, or upon what testimony this admission was based is not stated. This testimony, as a basis for such admission, is what we called for in our article, and what we now call for. If the Kinsman can supply this testimony, let it step forward and do so, and cease this questionable pettifogging.

It may be that Mr. Sheen believed that Joseph Smith had some connection with this doctrine, but his opinion is no more proof than is the opinion of the Kinsman; nor does Mr. Sheen state what, in his opinion, Joseph Smith's connection with the doctrine was, whether it made him a polygamist in theory or practice, or not. Mr. Sheen does not state that he ever saw anything in Joseph Smith, heard him say anything, or ever read anything from his pen to indicate that he ever had any connection with this doctrine. He does not state that he ever at any time or place saw in him, heard, or read anything from him, to indicate that he had repented of this undefined connection. He does not affirm that he heard Joseph Smith say "it was of the Devil." He does not affirm that he was present, or knew anything about the burning of the revelation. He does not affirm that he was present and heard Joseph Smith say that "if it had not been for that accursed spiritual wife doctrine, he would not have come to that." Yet the Kinsman calls this proof.

Mr. Sheen as well as the Kinsman may have been mistaken in his opinion, and so far as the quotation is concerned there is no more evidence that one knew any more about it than did the other. Even should we concede all that Mr. Sheen states as his opinion, it would not furnish the proof that Joseph Smith was a polygamist; for he does not state what his connection with the spiritual wife doctrine was, nor in what way it contributed to his death.

What we demand is not the opinion of Mr. Sheen, or the Kinsman, or of anyone else; but we require testimony—unimpeachable testimony, and, as before, patiently await the verdict of the jury—the public.

The reasoning of Editor Sheen cited by the Kinsman, whether it be philosophy or sophistry, truth or error, has nothing whatever to do with the facts in the case, and is immaterial; hence we do not discuss that feature.

Though our identity has nothing to do with the merits of this case, it may be well to correct the Kinsman, by informing it that Heman C. Smith, the writer of this and the former article, is not a grandson of Joseph Smith; nor is he, to his knowledge, related to him by blood; hence it is not "zeal to make a good case for his grandfather" that has prompted this defense.

The Kinsman concludes in a sentimental strain, saying:—

The corner stone of our Christian civilization is the home; the true home is where one wife and only one reigns as the crowned queen of the household. Mormonism in doctrine, in spirit, and in practice is a menace to this fundamental principle.

Methodist missionaries and those of other churches came to Utah thirty years ago to lay the foundations of this essential home idea. Congress compelled by public sentiment from time to time legislated to this end.

To the first sentence of the above we heartily agree; but we respectfully invite the Kinsman to point to one sentiment or doctrine published with indorsement, in any of the church publications during the life of Joseph

Smith, which is a "menace to this fundamental principle." We wish also to remind the Kinsman that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints sent missionaries to Utah thirty-seven "years ago to lay the foundations of this essential home idea;" that as early as 1853 it publicly and officially condemned polygamy; and that as early as 1875 by action of General Conference it petitioned Congress to abolish polygamy in the Territories. Thus was it the leader in crystalizing that "public sentiment" which compelled Congress to legislate against it.

Now let the Kinsman and everyone else take notice that our position is that polygamy and the plural or spiritual wife doctrine is wrong, whether taught by David, Solomon, Luther, Melancthon, Joseph Smith, or anybody else; and we are only interested in the facts concerning Joseph Smith's possible implication in it in the sense that we wish to know the truth of history, and hence call for the evidence.

Let us here kindly suggest that if the Kinsman would fight the principle, as such, instead of being so much interested in blackening character, it would make a better impression for sincerity on the minds of its readers.

A TRUTHFUL CONFESSION, HOPEFUL SIGN.

A leaf from the Christian Evangelist for November 9 has the following clear answer to a query.

The effect of the so-called "higher criticism" is to force many to the conclusion that an acceptance of the straight statements of the Scriptures in passages like the one cited, is the only safe refuge of the true believer in the word. The acceptance of one truth opens the way to another.

"Please give an explanation of James 5: 13-20. MARTIN CRIM."

This passage directs those who are suffering to pray. What could be more natural? It directs those who are cheerful to sing praise. This, too, is so natural as to need no explanation. Perhaps the part concerning which explanation is needed is that which directs that if anyone be sick he should "call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him." It is this prescription of prayer, together with the anointing with oil in the name of the Lord, that seems out of joint with modern methods of medication. And yet, is it not probable that we have vastly underestimated the remedial power of prayer in sickness? This anointing with oil was a part of the religious feature of the treatment, and was in harmony with the custom of the times. We do not understand that this passage prohibits the use of such other remedies as science and experience have taught to be valuable in the treatment of disease, nor must we understand that every case of sickness can be healed. We must interpret this passage of Scripture in the light of others and in the light of reason. With these qualifications we have no hesitancy in saying that the apostle's advice might be followed to-day with great profit.

As an illustration of the power of prayer the instance is cited of Elijah praying "that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." This example of Elijah is quoted to encourage prayer.

The epistle closes with the statement that if any err from the truth and one convert him he shall thereby save a soul from death and shall cover a multitude of sins. This is said to encourage a practice that is too often neglected, of seeking to win back to the truth those who have fallen into error.

THANKS TO ELDER CLARK BRADEN.

News reaches the HERALD that Bro. J. D. White on last Sunday, November 19, baptized two at Alma, Illinois, the scene of Bro. I. N. White's debate with the Rev. Clark Braden.

During the month succeeding the Braden-Kelley debate at Lamoni, Iowa, there were fifty-one baptisms, some of which were undoubtedly due to the influence the discussion had on the minds of those baptized, as we learned from their own statements.

We believe that at some other points where Elder Braden has made efforts to "down Mormonism," as he calls it, there have occurred baptisms into the church represented by the elders of our side of the controversy; a result which neither the HERALD, nor the elders are wishing to attribute to the ability of the disputants on the part of the church; but will attribute to the value and force of the truth itself.

It is certainly encouraging to know that in every place where this chosen champion of the Disciple or Christian Church has met the elders, no loss of either prestige or members has occurred to the church known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The HERALD makes no claim for superior ability on the part of the men who have successively stood for our cause against Mr. Braden, from Brn. Elvin, Gillen, Kelley, to Brn. Scott, Williams, and White; but we do claim that these several brethren have stood for the truth in doctrine and in fact; hence, their ability to stand successfully against the man-made institution established by Messrs. Alexander Campbell, Barton Stone, and others, though they may have been a band of believers, "having the form and seeking for the power" of godliness.

RELEASE FROM MISSIONARY DUTY.

On account of physical disability and at his own request Elder Willard J. Smith, of Detroit, Michigan, has been released from duty in the missionary field for the present and ensuing conference year, by Elder W. H. Kelley, missionary in charge.

KAISER WILHELM.

Berlin, Nov. 19.—Kaiser Wilhelm has utilized a request for his autograph for a publication reviewing the nineteenth century to formulate his theory of an absolute monarchy, writing:—

"By God's grace is the King. Therefore, he is responsible to God alone. This idea must control all his actions. The fearful responsibility which the King bears for the people entitles him to his subjects' loyal co-operation. Therefore every citizen should feel he shares the responsibility for his country's welfare."

The Freisinnige Zeitung remarks that such views leave little room for responsible Ministers or an independent Parliament.

The foregoing is taken from the Chicago Tribune of the 20th. How do our readers like the sentiment? Is not this another way of saying that the Emperor is the whole thing? Is not even Deity (not to mention the German people) made subservient to Wilhelm's caprices in his personal interpretations of privilege and duty?

However, let the German Emperor proceed a little further upon such lines and he will make comparatively short work of his throne.

The people are learning to assert their rights, and ere long the imperious young man who now champions the so-called "divine right of kings" will find himself minus a throne. Already the specter of a European democracy grows into substantial proportion.

Later news reports that the Reichstag has "ignominiously tossed another of the Kaiser's pet measures into the waste basket" in its refusal to pass the "anti-strike bill."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Sister Alice P. Dancer, Matron of the Home, at Lamoni, acknowledges the receipt of a set of eight lace curtains for the front parlor windows of the Home, donated and sent by the St. Louis, Missouri, Religio Society. On behalf of the inmates of the Home and herself, Sr. Dancer expresses thanks for the timely and beautiful donation. The Bishop and the Editor saw the curtains on a late visit to the Home and are sure that taste and good will of the St. Louis Religio are well shown in the selection of so appropriate a gift.

Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, is quoted as saying that the only permanent solution of present labor troubles lies in a practical application of the golden rule.

"Bishop Moulin, of Canada, preached favoring union of Christ's Church into one compact body." Like others, he sees trouble and is hunting for a remedy.

Bro. H. A. Goreham, Decatur, Illinois, writes of experiences in the work that strengthen his faith. He orders church literature for distribution among neighbors.

Mr. T. S. Martin, Omer, Oklahoma, writes of labor done by Brighamite elders in that region, who aroused little or no interest, and, as usual, declined to investigate points at issue with our people.

Rev. D. L. Pelton, formerly a Presbyterian minister at Bloomington, Illinois, has entered the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, was obliged to cancel his engagements at Kansas City because seriously ill with heart trouble. He was taken East to his home, and is now reported as improving.

Wives of congressmen are said to be at work, under Helen Gould's advice, with a view to influencing their husbands to vote against seating B. H. Roberts.

The deadly bubonic plague has reached New York, by a foreign vessel. Is America to be always exempt or immune from European and Asiatic scourges?

Clippings from various newspapers throughout the country are sent to us, giving account of the general crusade against the seating of B. H. Roberts. While in sympathy with the sentiment that Mr. Roberts should not be seated, we are not in sympathy with the sectarianism that prompts much of the opposition against him, which has largely taken on the character of a crusade against "Mormonism." If the crusade is to be directed against polygamy or other forms of wrong, let it continue, and on proper grounds, by legitimate methods; but if it is to degenerate into a wholesale attack on the religion of Mr. Roberts, as such, we have no sympathy with it. Those who oppose Mr. Roberts on the ground of his religion but weaken their cause; those who oppose polygamy and its concomitant evils as represented by his candidacy, have a good case against him.

A sister, Amelia Topliss, writing from Anaconda, Montana, would like to see an elder devote some of his time and ability in that city. Any elder who may go there, call at 519 Birch Street. She sends a clipping respecting a Mormon conference there, wishing it replied to, but there is little chance to keep replying to such misrepresenting articles. Life is too short, laborers too few. Lying newspaper writers are abroad by the hundred, and to write untruths is their daily work, and newspapers are too ready to publish them.

Bro. Stephen Butler succeeded in getting a correction of a misleading article on Mormonism published in the Wichita Daily Eagle, Wichita, Kansas, for November 11, 1899. The article was copied from the New York World.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—PART 3; NO. 3.

THE SEQUEL.

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.—Isa. 8:20.

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.—1 Thess. 5:21.

If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, [contrary to the law, given in the case, ye shall "have no other gods before me,"] which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul. Ye shall walk after the Lord your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and cleave unto him.—Deut. 13:1-4.

The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet cometh to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him.—Jer. 28:9.

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.—Matt. 7:15-20.

Such are the prophetic tests given us in the Bible. God would not send prophets and inspire them and his Son to foretell the coming of true and false prophets (Matt. 17:10, 11; 24:11, 24), and not give some definite rules or tests by which we may be able to try them and not be deceived. The only prophet, barring all false Christs, that we are aware of, that has appeared in this age, that men have not been willing to try and condemn by the foregoing tests, is Joseph Smith, the Palmyra Seer, who appeared claiming to present the original gospel message, restored by angelic ministration in A. D. 1823-1830, in Western New York.

As a test of his fidelity to the truth, he taught that we must have an active, living faith in God, Jesus the Messiah, and in the Holy Ghost, all as set forth in the Bible, or we cannot be saved. That this Godhead was immutable, and without respect of persons, infinite in power, knowledge, wisdom, justice, mercy, truth, and love. That God being unchangeable, would communicate in love and mercy to his obedient children now, in the line of their salvation, just as the Bible represents that he always had done, and as he has promised he would do, on the conditions laid down in the gospel, through the media of the Holy Ghost, angels, and prophets. He taught that there is none other name given among men under heaven whereby we must be saved but the name of Jesus Christ. And that as man cannot be saved in his sins, he must repent of all sin, "cease to do evil and learn to do well, and this too with all his heart, that he may be saved" from his sins.

And, further, that having believed with his heart unto righteousness, and having determined by God's help to walk no more in the ways of sin, and having by this genuine faith and repentance died to the world and its sins, he must then break off his allegiance to the world and sin, by being buried with Christ in baptism, at the hands of the called and authorized servants of God, for the remission of his sins, and rise therefrom "to walk in newness of life." (See Luke 1:76, 77; 3:2, 3; Mark 1:1-4; Acts 2:37, 38; Rom. 6:17; Col. 2:11-13; Heb. 10:21-23; Matt. 28:19.)

Joseph the Seer also claimed and taught that the authority to administer the ordinance of laying on of hands of the ministry for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and for other gospel purposes, was now restored through the medium of angels; and as this was a gospel ordinance, it must now be practiced. The revelations given through him so declare, and this harmonizes with "the law and the testimony," as the Bible affirms. (See Acts 8:15-17; 19:1-6; 1 Tim. 4:14; Heb. 6:2.)

Also, the resurrection of the dead, brought about through the atonement of Christ, is a fundamental gospel principle; also, the doctrine of the eternal judgment is a necessary part of God's government, and is to follow the general — second — resurrection, and whereby all will be "judged according to their works;" and that all the wicked and impenitent will answer to God for their own individual sins, each individually. (See John 12:47, 48; Acts 17:30, 31; Rom. 2:14-16; Rev. 20:5-15.) He taught that the same kind of church organization as established by Jesus and his ancient apostles and prophets (Eph. 3:5; Acts 13:1-5), with all its spiritual gifts and endowment should, by virtue of the restoration now opened up, now be reestablished and enjoyed by the people of God, as by those anciently (Matt. 16:16-18; Luke 16:16), that the organized body or church of Christ, like the human body, is not all of the same grade of office, or one member, but many, and all do not perform the same office; but that the officers differ in gradation, power, and official rank. (See Rom. 12:4, 5, 8; 1 Cor. 12:12-31; Eph. 4:4-13.)

When the reader shall have studied the scripture citations, he will have discovered that Joseph Smith taught no new gospel, no other Christ, no new plan of salvation; but that he taught the people to "walk after the Lord your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments," as said Moses, the prophet of God, to ancient Israel.

The doctrinal "fruits" here advocated by Joseph Smith cannot be condemned by the Bible. The only opposition that can be brought against this position is the old threadbare tradition that the most of these gospel truths and principles are restricted to the apostolic age. They dare not say his teachings are not true, lest their position on these points run counter to God and condemn Jesus' teachings. But if the opposers of the teachings of Joseph Smith are correct, the Bible ceases to be the standard of trial, and their tradition usurps its place, and we are left without any divine standard to try the spirits and their teachings, and are left to the caprice of changeable and varying human minds, and the deception of devils and evil spirits!

In these last days of doctrinal divisions, contradictory theories, deceptive spiritual manifestations, and miracle working devils, it is in harmony with the character of the immutable Jehovah, that he "lift up" his "hand to the Gentiles, and set up my [his] standard to the people," and that "he shall set up an ensign [his gospel banner or flag, in the hands of authorized banner bearers] for the nations" (Isa. 11:11; 49:22), that the honest seeker after the truth may have a sure refuge from darkness, deception, and error; and this, God has promised, as we see by these prophetic utterances he would do, in the day of Israel's restoration to the land of Palestine, the land of ancient promise. And this he is now setting "his hand" to accomplish. He is moving on the hearts of kings and queens to favor them, and their return, as in Germany, and on other nobility.

The hearts of the Jews are being wrought on as in the days of good Nehemiah and Ezra, to the restoration of their people to their fatherland, as seen in the unprecedented Zionistic movement among them, and their returning financial greatness in the eyes of all nations. These events are so well known and understood by the people that we need only refer to them. But our object in citing attention here is, to cite the further fact in the connection of these events, that God's "standard" and "ensign" was to be raised up before Israel's regathering. God's hand was to be set, or in other words, new revelation was to be given of God before these events take place; yet in the age of their fulfillment, angels were to appear to a "young man" and announce to him (Rev. 14:6, 7; Zech. 2:1-5), before Jerusalem was builded up "without walls," "and having neither bars nor gates" (Ezek. 38:11), that those events were at hand to be fulfilled. In connection with the restoration of the gospel and the divine authority to administer it, Joseph Smith, only sixteen to twenty-five years of age at the time he was authorized and began the work, rebuilding the church in harmony with the New Testament constitution and form, announced by revelation "that a great and marvelous work" was "about to come forth among the children of men" (Doctrine and Covenants 4:1; Isa. 29:13, 14), that it included not only the restoration of the gospel and the church, in this age, but also the reading of a sealed book (to read a sealed book implied translating it, nothing short of that; see Ps. 85; Ezek. 37:15-20), and more than this, it included a great preparation on the part of the people of the Lord for his second advent, and "also the restoration of the scattered Israel," and how that they are to "be gathered again," at the fullness of the Gentile times (Doc. and Cov. 45:3, 4).

That the fullness of the gospel as restored, a record of which is found in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, is "sent forth in these last days; the covenant which I have sent forth to recover my people, which are of the house of Israel." (D. C. 39:3; Rom. 11:25-27.) Surely the signs of the times strongly vindicate the claims of Joseph Smith to divine authority and revelation.

To the ministry authorized and sent out to preach in this "dispensation of the fullness of times" (Eph. 1:8-10), through Joseph Smith, the Lord said, in 1831:—

Go ye into all the world; preach the gospel to every creature, acting in the authority which I have given you, baptizing in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; and he that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned; and he that believeth shall be blessed with signs following, even as it is written [referring no doubt to Mark 16:16-20; 1 Cor. 12:1-11]; and unto you it shall be given to know the signs of the times, and the signs of the coming of the Son of Man.—D. C. 68:1.

Here again, in the teachings of Joseph Smith concerning the signs following the believer, is harmony with the "law and the testimony" of Jesus Christ; but how fatal it would prove to his (Joseph's) mission should the signs fail to follow those who receive it, if the promise as here renewed failed in its realization! How the honest ones, after testing it and finding it false, would come out declaring its falsity to the world! No claim that a false prophet could set forth could be more fatal to his claim—could more completely condemn it than this. What false prophet or false christ ever set forth the promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost, and that the signs promised by Jesus Christ to follow the believers in the gospel, would follow his false claims?

Herein is a great marvel, that among the one hundred thousand believers in the divinity of claims to divine authority to a dispensation of the everlasting gospel, none are honest enough to expose the falsity of the claims on this ground, if they are false! Events that in this age are in their prophetic order being accomplished, are vindicating his claims.

1. The restoration of the gospel, by the hand of the angels of God, in 1823 to 1830, A. D.

2. The reading—translation—of the sealed book, the Book of Mormon, the stick of Joseph (Ezek. 37:15-20; Hos. 8:11, 12; Isa. 29:17), containing the gospel record as delivered to the descendants of Joseph of Egypt, on the land of America, anciently, some of the prophecies of their prophets, and the history in part, of the dealings of God with Joseph's seed.

3. The reestablishment of the church of Jesus Christ, in accord with New Testament order, with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, bishops, deacons, helps, and governments, and the proclamation of the gospel as restored to the nations, with signs following the obedient believers, who live faithful.

4. The restoration of "the former and latter rains" to Palestine, that have been withheld so long (Isa. 5:6, but were restored in 1846-1853; Joel 2:17-23), as attested by living witnesses.

5. The consequent restoration of the fertility of the land, as is now the fact, and all this, that sixthly, the ancient covenant people, the Jews, may be restored; their cities, including the beloved Jerusalem, may be builded up preparatory to the second advent of Jesus may occur, as prophets both ancient and modern have declared.

And it shall come to pass that he that feareth me shall be looking forth for the great day of the Lord to come, even for the signs of the coming of the Son of Man; and they shall see signs and wonders, for they shall be shown forth in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath; and they shall behold blood and fire, and vapors of smoke; and before the day of the Lord shall come, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon be turned into blood, and stars fall from heaven; and the remnant [of Jews, or Israel] shall be gathered unto this place [Jerusalem]; and then they shall look for me, and behold I will come; and they shall see me in the clouds of heaven, clothed with power and great glory, with all the holy angels; and he that watches not for me shall be cut off."

Thus it was revealed through Joseph the Seer, March 7, 1831, Doctrine and Covenants 45:6.

But does the fulfillment of Joseph Smith's prophetic statements bear out his claims to divine call and appointment? They surely do, so far as time has developed the events predicted. The great increase of evil on the earth during the last fifty years, the increasing tendencies to war, among the nations of that period, and the visitation of calamities that are coming thicker and with greater destructiveness of life and property, are among the important subjects of prophecy among his revelations.

On this point we refer to the following. Of his revelations we find recorded in section one, paragraph seven, Doctrine and Covenants:—

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

For all flesh is corruptible before me, and the powers of darkness prevail upon the earth, among the children of men, in the presence of all the hosts of heaven, which causeth silence to reign, and all eternity is pained, and the angels are waiting the great command to reap down the earth, to gather the tares that they may be burned; and, behold, the enemy is combined.—Revelation given January, 1831, D. C. 38: 3.

Has evil greatly increased among men during recent years? Let the court records of criminality tell the story, and the judges testify. Divorces too numerous to calculate. What unmeasured influence does the National Liquor Association exert in our own land? Adultery, fornication in high and low places, theft, murder, burglary, robbery,—all hold high carnival and almost go unchecked. What means the cry of religious and civic societies for municipal reform, if evil is not taking the lead? What of the efforts of the Henrys and the Parkhursts in the leading cities of the world, crying, "reform," "put down the evil." "Let the people arise to the rescue," if all is well in Zion?

"By a vote of 121 to 78" the Episcopal Convention of October, 1895, held at Minneapolis, Minnesota, refused to appoint a committee to consider "the question of the alienation of the masses from the church and the relation thereto of the breach between capital and labor." Why are churches losing power with the masses? One half of one per cent, or only one person in every two hundred, attend the religious services in the city of Chicago! This was Chicago's estimate in 1896. (See the Times-Herald for May 6, 1896.)

The people of the United States of America alone are robbed of over ten millions of dollars annually by bank wreckers, defaulters, and bank plunderers.—United States bank examiner Barrett, in Arena, Boston, October, 1895, on "An Era of Crime."

At the Social Purity Congress, held at Washington, D. C., October, 1895, Mrs. Charlton Edholm, president, reported 230,000 fallen females in the United States. Their average time of life in sin is five years. Forty-five thousand of them are carted to the potter's field every year, and hundreds of homes are desolated every year to fill their ranks.

The Medical Progress, for April, 1895, quoting from the report of Commissioner Mills, on Internal Revenue, states that for the year 1892, patrons of the saloon paid $1,226,259,460, for whisky and beer! Interest on that amount at 6 per cent per annum, would be $73,575,567.60. That sum would more than clothe the poor of our country, and pay largely on our national debt. There is a liquor dealer in the United States for every 280 men, women, and children. Omit the women, children and temperance people, and we have a liquor dealer for every ninety-three men.

According to a circular recently issued by the Fidelity Insurance Company, it appears that the defalcations for 1893 alone was over $19,000,000; and in 1894, $25,000,000; in 1895, not less than $30,000,000; all misappropriated by faithless custodians of other people's funds. This great loss was distributed generally among the various kinds of business, and the question then asked, "What line of business is exempt from the hands of wretches?"

We leave these facts to tell their own story. This being true of our own country, what horrors would confront us should the story of the whole world be delineated relative to its criminal condition? Is it any wonder that silence reigns with angels in heaven over the wickedness of the world! It may be that this is the work of the little stone kingdom, and that Satan is being bound by the patriotism of the United States; but if so, may the ghosts of the patriots of 1776 pity us when the Devil is loosed after the little season!

A THEME FOR THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving for the gospel and its ministry is uppermost in our hearts to-day.

To be sure, they have not the enjoyment of a great name in the world. They are not invited to be present at the popular functions, and in vain we bespeak for them ovations in a public way.

Although not engaged in founding a new dynasty, they are humbly helping to establish a kingdom on the earth that shall never end; and, though not enjoying the glamour of the world, they have, as promised, the authority to preach and an unction from on high.

In the silent watches of the night we meditate upon this glorious work.

For ages men groped in darkness, and sorrowing and loving hearts longing for a better hope, laid down their armor in despair, because solace and light had been withdrawn from the earth; but ah! the prayers and faith of the remnant of God's people were not to be despised, and there burst forth such a light as heaven alone could shed.

O, the glorious light of God! How sweet its influence, and how thankful and diligent ought we to be beneath its rays. It is said that before the thing that we do is always the thing that we are; and again, "Fate is but the deepest current of one's nature"; but says the loving Savior to our hearts, "Abide in me."

How well he knew that condition and circumstance, education and honest purpose, are things we all must create and have much to do with the attainment of a higher life; but the path of life can only be successfully trod through faith and prayers and obedience. He has defended us against all the world and its mighty powers with his precious blood; and from ourselves, if we will he will also save to the uttermost all that put their trust in him.

Let us arouse our nobler selves. We are not enslaved in an unsounded abyss of darkness and error, thank God; neither have we to go forth as strangers, with our King as a mortal enemy; but the way is bright before us and his loving hand will guide us all our journey through.

So then, let praise and thanksgiving be upon our lips because of the Light, the Truth, and the Way.

WAR. WHEN JUSTIFIABLE.

War is a terrible thing in itself, and its evil consequences are so appalling, and far-reaching, that they cannot be fully estimated. It is only necessary to read the "Laws of War" among civilized nations, to convince us that this extremely abnormal condition should always be avoided when it can possibly be done without sacrificing the best interests of humanity. Therefore, no trivial causes, or things of ordinary importance, will justify any people or nation in going to war.

Viewed from a moral standpoint, I think there are but few causes, or conditions, that will justify war, and these may be summed up about as follows:—

1. When a people or nation are in bondage, it is their privilege, and sometimes their duty, to take up arms and fight for their liberty.

2. When any nation or people are held in bondage, and are unable to secure their freedom by their own efforts alone, it is right and commendable, for those who are able, to take up arms and fight for their deliverance, that the yoke of bondage may be destroyed.

3. When needed, it is right to take up arms and defend our wives and children, and our homes, which have been legally and honestly acquired.

4. When civil and religious liberty are greatly threatened, and their destruction positively attempted, and the enemy cannot be removed except by force of arms, it is, I believe, allowable to fight.

The question may arise, Why do the above-mentioned causes justify war? The answer is, Because the rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are divine, and it is the Lord's will that all men should enjoy them. It is not the privilege of any people, no matter what their power may be, to stand between God and the people and hinder the exercise of these rights. Without true liberty, which positively implies the right of choice, there can be no true development, nor can the people be justly and fully held accountable to God for their deeds in the day of judgment. Unless we can possess our homes in peace, with wife and children about us, we cannot be happy. Is it not strange, and anti-Christian in the extreme, that any people should desire to deprive any other people, or nation, of these God-given rights!

In the light of the foregoing statements, it is not strange that our patriot forefathers, fired with a love of justice and liberty, and inspired of God, we believe, should have framed that immortal document of which all true Americans are justly proud. I refer, of course, to the Declaration of Independence. The sentiment contained in this document will live when the sordid and mercenary purposes of men, plausible as they may try to make them appear, shall have sunk into eternal oblivion. One quotation from this document will suffice:—

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; and that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation, on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

Our Constitution, which is the fundamental law of our government, is based on the principles set forth in the Declaration; and whenever good and wise men are in charge of our government, they appeal directly and honestly to these immortal documents, holding them to be the leading standards of authority. Therefore, I now appeal directly to the word of God, given to his people in these last days, in order to show (1) the remarkable harmony between it and the Declaration and Constitution of the United States; (2) to prove that the application of this principle of human liberty is universal; and (3) to show (which is very important) just what estimate the Divine Being places upon our Constitution, and constitutional law.

In a revelation given in August, 1833, the Lord said:—

Now, verily, I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, It is my will that my people should observe to do all things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifieth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil. I, the Lord God, maketh you free, therefore, ye are free indeed: and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these, cometh of evil.—D. C. 95:2.

In the following December, among other things, the Lord saw fit to present the following:—

Those who have been scattered by their enemies, it is my will that they should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and Constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.—D. C. 98:10.

These paragraphs are full of important points which should be carefully studied by the saints; and, after careful consideration, those who read and fail to see any evidence of divinity, are surely not acquainted with the present and real situation; or in other words, they are not able to read "the signs of the times." Let us note a few of the points:—

1. The Constitution and constitutional laws are strongly indorsed.
2. To whom does it apply?

That law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me.

The liberty guaranteed is "for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles," etc., and "should be maintained."

3. It was the Lord's will that our Constitution and government should be established, and he raised up wise men for that very purpose. Question: Did these "wise men" do their work well?

4. God justified the shedding of blood to establish true freedom, as defined in the Declaration of Independence; for it is contrary to his will "that any man should be in bondage one to another."

In Doctrine and Covenants 95:6, the Lord refers to the law which he gave to Nephi, Joseph, Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham, and to his ancient apostles and prophets, directing what their conduct should be towards those who endangered their lives, and who inflicted physical injury upon them or their families. Also the law that he gave to his ancients, instructing them that they should not go out to battle against any nation, kindred, tongue, or people, save I, the Lord, commanded them. And if any nation, tongue, or people should proclaim war against them, they should first lift a standard of peace unto that people, nation, or tongue, and if that people did not accept the offering of peace, neither the second nor the third time, they should bring these testimonies before the Lord; then I, the Lord, would give unto them a commandment, and justify them in going out to battle against that nation, tongue, or people, and I, the Lord, would fight their battles, and their children's battles and their children's children until they had avenged themselves on their enemies, to the third and fourth generation; behold, this is an ensample unto all people, saith the Lord, your God, for justification before me.

The above instruction is made to apply to "all people," by the reading of the last sentence; and it serves to show how careful the Lord is to avoid war and bloodshed if they can be prevented.

The Book of Mormon teaches us that the Nephites went to war with the Lamanites, and those who desired to enslave them, in order to defend their homes, their wives and children, and to preserve inviolate their civil and religious liberty. (2 Nephi 4:3; Enos 1:5, last sentence; Mosiah 6:2-6; Alma 21:6-10.)

Our duty is to believe and advocate the truth; to obey the truth in our lives. We can never come out of Babylon by believing, advocating, and practicing that which is contrary to God's revealed will. Nothing less than the truth will develop true character, and nothing less than true character will secure unto us salvation.

So SPEAK ye, and so DO, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty.—James 2:12.

CATHOLIC DOCTRINE.

"It is the general teaching of Catholic theology," says a Catholic priest in Donohue's Magazine, "that among the scenes and places of man's future habitation will be this planet, not as we have it now, with its winters and summers, with its biting winds and enervating atmosphere, but as it will be after the great day of judgment, when, according to the clear teaching of holy scripture, the world is to be deluged by fire, and in the purifying elements of fire the world is to be renewed and regenerated. The world will then be transformed into a scene of changeless and surpassing loveliness, a fit dwelling place for glorified man."

Letter Department.

FULTON, Iowa, Nov. 16.

Editors Herald:—Wife and I just returned from Muscatine, Iowa, where we attended a two-days' meeting. We drove through with our team; the distance is seventy-five miles. The weather was all that we could ask for, very pleasant. Elder W. A. Smith and myself were present of the district. The missionaries of Illinois helped our district out. Brn. J. W. Adams, A. J. Keck, Russell, Holmes, and Needham were present. I felt to praise God that we had such young men, who seem to be so earnest, ready to leave all, and labor for the Master. May God bless them.

The meetings were good; the Spirit of God was present to a marked degree. On Sunday afternoon we had a splendid saints' meeting; the Spirit was present in the gifts of the gospel. There is a noble band of saints at Muscatine. By the faithful labor of our missionary, Bro. W. A. Smith, and the honest lives of Bro. and Sr. Dyke, these people were made to see the light of the gospel, and obeyed the same. They are earnest, valiant in testimony. Even the young take up their cross and testify to the truthfulness of the work. May God keep them from evil.

The Lord said through prophecy that others would obey there. The saints were cheered up. Tears flowed freely through most every meeting. This two-days' meeting will long be remembered by those present. O, it is good to be a saint in latter days! All seemed to linger and were loath to leave the last evening. Let us live so that we may have life eternal, and have it abundantly. Brn. Smith and Keck will continue meetings all this week.

JOHN HEIDE.

MUSCATINE, Iowa, Nov. 16.

Editors Herald:—Our two-day meeting at this place was a success; we had a good spiritual time, and a good attendance from our neighboring saints. There has been a time when Latter Day Saint ministers were scarce at this city, but the church was pretty well represented at these meetings, on the 11th and 12th. The following ministers were present: Elders A. J. Keck, J. W. Adams, F. A. Russell, D. S. Holmes, Bro. Murdock, F. Needham, J. L. Terry, John Heide, Bishop's agent, and the writer. Priests C. G. Dykes and young Bro. Holmes. So you see that we had quite a ministerial force. Our meetings opened Saturday, the 11th at eleven a. m., Sr. Louise Suman presiding at the organ. Preaching by Elder John Heide, assisted by W. A. Smith. It was encouraging to the saints. Preaching in the afternoon by Elder J. W. Adams, assisted by Elder F. Needham; and in the evening by Elder A. J. Keck, assisted by W. A. Smith. Preaching on Sunday morning by Elder F. A. Russell, assisted by J. W. Adams. Prayer meeting in the afternoon, Brn. J. Heide and C. G. Dykes in charge, and the Spirit of the Master was present, and it seemed as though they were all united as one family; the spirit of prophecy rested on Bro. Holmes, and the Lord spoke unto the saints, and we were all blessed and encouraged, especially the writer. When I look back about one year ago, when I came to this city, and now look and see the witnesses standing and bearing testimony that they know that this is the work of God, O how my heart is made to rejoice that the good Lord had blessed my labors at this city. Preaching in the evening by Elder A. J. Keck, assisted by W. A. Smith; the inspiration of God was present, and we were all blessed.

At the close there were many good-byes, and thoughts expressed that they had such a good spiritual time, and hoped that we would all meet again, if not in this world, in the sweet by and by, and I saw tears on some faces as we parted.

Bro. Keck will assist the writer in the meetings here this week, and perhaps longer. Prospects fair for the organizing a branch here soon. Remember me before the Lord, that I may act wisely in the matter. I feel encouraged with the prospects of the work in this district. Then, saints, let us press on to the end; the great prize lies at the end. And if we should miss it, how great the loss would be.

Your brother in Christ,

W. A. SMITH.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Nov. 20.

Editors Herald:—While we read with keen interest of the progress of the cause in various localities, the Rock Island branch has not attained to such conditions as we would desire, but most all are doing fairly well, considering the disadvantages with which all have to contend. The membership in and around this immediate vicinity number near fifty. About ten of this number are as yet connected with the disorganized Davenport branch. We trust, however, that ere long all may be united, which no doubt would have been done long ago, if a proper understanding of law and duty had prevailed.

We usually have prayer and sacrament service on the first Sunday of each month, and preaching each Sunday afternoon, the burden of which is mine to bear, except when visiting brethren kindly accommodate us along these lines. All such are welcome, and are requested to aid and assist us whenever it is wisdom and expedient for them to do so. Opportunity here for a protracted effort, or a series of meetings, does not seem to be the best. It seems that the right way to advance in a general way is for all to take an intense interest in the weekly meetings, bringing others with you, and coming resolved to perform every known duty.

Let me suggest, that while we think of the gathering, consecration, and all things common idea, that in teaching as ministers and as those who stand as overseers to feed the Church of God, we do not forget to continually impress upon the minds of those we teach pure and sincere worship; to increase a burning desire for such; to insist upon the essential need of attendance to the regular church service; to be ready and willing and waiting to do our duty. It may be a hobby of mine, and I do not know but may be some of the branch over which I preside tire of me speaking so often of these things, but somehow I cannot at present point one duty above another more necessary to the general welfare of the spirituality of the saint than to strictly observe that which is given for you and me, as found in Doctrine and Covenants, especially the clause which says: "And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day."—59:2.

Saints, especially those of you who heretofore have been careless or indifferent about your attendance at church, let me ask you to think of these things sincerely. How many times we hear brethren or sisters say in speaking of the branch in which they live, "Yes, we have sixty members in our branch, but only about twenty of them are to be seen at services." What about the other forty? Then comes the excuses; no excuse ought to be given from anyone for such a cause, which we could not conscientiously give to the Savior himself. Christ wants us to unreservedly follow him, and these excuses we make are very, very many times to us as wolves in sheep's clothing. Remember what is taught in Luke 9:57-62. We hear from another brother or sister, "Yes, we have a nice little branch of twenty-four members, and our meetings are just splendid. Every one is right in their place to the minute when it is time for meeting to begin, and the elder in charge never has to urge any to perform their duty. All are willing and eager to do so, and our Sunday school is just fine, and the Religio is not a whit behind."

What is the chief cause of all this? Is it not because of the persistent, individual faithfulness of those who compose the branch? We manifest our slothfulness and show the lack of a proper appreciation of God's provisions for our eternal welfare when we remain away from the house of prayer. Saints, we are living in a progressive, practical age of the world. We need to develop ourselves. We need discipline. We need order at home, in the church, and with ourselves personally. Awake, arise, and shine, and exemplify in our character the life and likeness of the Master. We are to work out our salvation, to fight the fight, to endure the cross and despise the shame. Let us do so boldly, manfully, honestly, and uprightly. Then we will grow up a delightful people unto the Lord, and he will love to bless and prosper us in every way, and when the time comes for the gathering, the Lord will not tarry, because we will be ready and waiting, and he will not have to say to us as he did in the revelation given on Fishing River, June 22, 1834: "Behold, I say unto you, Were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now."—102:2.

I must not forget to mention that through the sterling integrity and wisdom of Bro. and Sr. Johnson, our treasurer Sr. Potter, Bro. Strang, and others, a forward move in a systematic way has set our financial affairs on a safe basis.

Our Sunday school moves along. The genial superintendent, William R. Norris, has left us. I know not where. Come back, Bro. Norris, we need you. The Religio is ably conducted by Sr. Louise Isabel Suman, and is in good condition.

I must not fail to mention that the visit of Bro. H. A. Stebbins will not soon be forgotten by us. His timely counsel and godly advice was a source of strength to me, indeed. Come again, Uncle Henry.

That we may each one remain steadfast and secure in the one common hope, not comparing the sufferings of this present occasion to the glory that shall hereafter be revealed in us, and that the Lord may now move Zion to diligence and duty, is the earnest desire and prayer of your brother in the everlasting covenant,

WILL E. LARUE.

MALAD CITY, Idaho, Nov. 15.

Editors Herald:—Elders J. W. and D. W. Wight are here with us, and it seems that there will be nothing left of Brighamiteism when they get through. They have billed themselves here for this week. J. W. takes the subject of polygamy, and D. W. Wight that of the succession. The church house here at Malad City is quite large, but it is too small for the crowd that is coming to hear; and the books are open, and Brighamism is judged out of the books. But the Brighamites have no counsel here to defend their side of the question. They are asked to get some, but I think they will be here after the danger is over. We are going to canvass the valley before they leave.

Yours truly,

W. L. JOHN.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., Nov. 18.

Editors Herald:—Am now laboring about three miles southeast of here. This is one of the counties in South Missouri which has had but very little preaching, and openings for preaching are very few. I sometimes wish that for the spread of the gospel the saints were more widely scattered than they are in these United States; though I do not want to convey the idea that I am opposed to the principle of the gathering, this will be brought about in its time—God is at the helm.

I have preached eleven discourses here, and have very fair hearing every night. Many are interested; some grasping me by the hand, admitting that it is the truth; yet they have not the courage to obey,—popularity has much to do with it. I sometimes say, if I was a member of one of the popular churches of the day, that I would have reasons to believe that I was not in the "narrow way," for Christ said that few there be that find it. Much prejudice has been removed and friends made to the cause. I am domiciled with Bro. Shue and his noble family; also with Bro. and Sr. Hickman. They shall not lose their reward.

Am trying to effect a new opening; and if there are any of the saints knowing where an opening can be made, they will confer a favor by informing me at my home. Address—Weir City, Kansas, box 116.

I am of the opinion that the ministry should be furnished with tracts for free distribution. Freely ye have received; freely give. Hoping that the tract fund will be revived and replenished, for the printed word in some instances can accomplish more than the elder.

KIDDER, S. D., Nov. 15.

Editors Herald:—Since my last from Bottineau, North Dakota, I have been on the move, or ready for action; but as before-stated, during the months of August, September, and October, the necessity for a certain amount of work by the farmers, consisting of harvesting, threshing, etc., little missionary work can be done except on Sunday, and then some work so hard during six days, that they are indisposed to worship on Sunday. As per arrangement, I returned to Clifford, North Dakota, October 11, to commence a series of meetings, leaving Bro. S. Swenson at the Table Mountains. But the weather was quite unpropitious, raining, misty, not quite as dense as a London fog, but very unpleasant, dark nights, held but one meeting on the 15th. It will be remembered that the saints in South and North Dakota are not situated as saints in towns and cities, who can perambulate or walk on plank or brick, under the glare of gas or electric light. So far from this, that many have to travel six and ten miles to meeting, under the dim light of the stars or moon, and sometimes in the absence of the light of the latter, a lantern or lamp fixed in front of the wagon or buggy, and I have seen a lantern attached under the body of the wagon in Kansas in the seventies.

I held meeting at the house of worship of the Star Hope branch, with meager attendance from the 19th up to October 30, during which time I frequently visited Sr. E. Thompson, daughter of Bro. W. and Sr. Thompson, who was sick from lung disease, and who departed this life on the night of November 1, at which time I met Bro. Swenson, and as per previous arrangements, I left Clifford on Thursday, the 2d, for the above point; Bro. S. to attend to funeral ceremonies. Sr. E. Thompson was an excellent young sister, being near or having reached her majority. She suffered long and was patient. She very frequently requested being administered to, which seemed to comfort her, affording temporary relief. After being administered to a few days before her demise, she offered a most fervent prayer, in which she evinced a spirit of resignation in a most remarkable manner. It was very affecting. I felt a holy sensation creeping over me while in her presence. She clung to life, yet expressing herself in an affecting manner, ready to depart if God so willed. Having left the locality two days before her death, I here offer my condolence and sympathy to the survivors: father, mother, brothers, and sister.

I arrived at Clifford, November 3, being the recipient of much kindness from Bro. J. Bierleine and family. Went twenty miles west to Hecla, with Bro. J. B., where I met Bro. W. Sparling, and abode there until the 9th and by Bro. Sparling's politeness held forth three times to fair audiences in the schoolhouse situated in the little village of Hecla. On the 7th, with Bro. S., went six or seven miles west of Hecla and visited several families, who gave us a warm reception. In this locality Bro. S. did considerable ministerial work, and created a good interest, and about a score were thinking seriously of baptism; but it being in midwinter, the rivers and creeks were frozen solid, so precluded the possibility of baptism. He was to have returned to this locality last June, but was prevented perforce of circumstances.

On the 9th I was brought back to this point from Hecla, by Bro. Landport, twenty miles, part of which was a comparative desert; the morning was bright, clear, and promising; but before nine o'clock, (we were rolling by six a. m.) it became hazy, misty, chilly, and threatening, but the anticipated storm of rain or snow held off.

In Kidder and Newark, I have held six meetings, missing one appointment through inclement weather. Saturday night, the 11th, a snow storm, about three inches. Sunday, 12th, snow melted. Monday, mist and rain. Weather, as I write, mild and pleasant. Wiseacres predict an open winter for the Dakotas.

Now I wish to state, with Kidder, or near there, as headquarters, within a radius of ten miles, there opens a good field for ministerial labor; points for preaching may be secured, five miles a part, which distance may be reached by a young man by pony shanks, if no other mode of travel offers. But the brethren in South and North Dakota are ever ready to bring their buggies and teams in requisition. I have received no response at present to my suggestions about ministerial work in South Dakota. I wonder if it escaped the notice of all our young elders? And it would be little use to respond if it is not possible to sacrifice home pleasures for a year, at least, and start into the ministerial work as if they meant to hang on, success or no success, evil or good report. A novice may pramble on the ship's deck in a calm, but when winds blow and the storm becomes furious, waves rolling mountains high, it requires an expert to keep erect and do the needed work.

There is no prospect of the life of a traveling elder being desirable, that I know of, aside from the pleasure and satisfaction arising from a consciousness of discharging a sacred duty toward God and man. So that if anticipations are cherished beyond this, all having desires for ministerial work as a General Conference appointee, had better pause and reconsider. The faith of endurance is a most essential trait in the character of a traveling elder.

I have been the recipient of much kindness, deference, and consideration in view of advanced age, by the saints in North and South Dakota, which I shall always appreciate. And please say to Bro. L. Gamet, of Clearwater, Nebraska, that his interest in my welfare, expressed in a recent letter is much appreciated. Thus: "I hope you are well and able to stand the rigor of that climate. It almost makes my [his] teeth chatter to think of it." But up to date I have not experienced any of that teeth-chattering rigor; weather being mild. But in anticipation of a teeth-chattering rigor, the brethren of North Dakota kindly furnished me with a fur coat. I knew nothing of this until being invited to a four mile ride by one of the brethren, led into a store, introduced to a big pile of fur coats, and ordered to fit myself, etc., to which I offered no resistance, for under such circumstances my resignation is quite visible. Then I feel indebted to the brethren of Central Nebraska district who at their February conference at Inman, decided that I needed a fur coat, and contributed a sum of money for the purpose, but the winter being so advanced, I made no effort to secure one, but offered the money contributed to the brethren at North Dakota when learning of their project; but they bid me to use it for other needfuls.

Then I would remind Bro. Gamet of some teeth-chattering rigor in Nebraska, at a time when straw was brought into a lively requisition as a fuel—in the days of yore, notably on one occasion when I gave him credit for being an efficient stoker, in keeping a fair heat with straw, which he kept stuffing into a stove.

SHELTON, Neb., Sept. 9, 1899.

MR. JAMES CAFFALL,

Council Bluffs, Iowa;

Dear Brother and fellow laborer in the gospel: This writing finds me at Bro. J. Smith's, very unexpectedly to myself. A week ago I was two hundred miles from here, and did not know whether I should ever come to this country. I was impressed to come to Shelton, not realizing the importance of the work here, or the work that the evil one had made. He had been permitted to enter in among the church and lead astray some of our brethren and sisters.

On arriving here I found that such had been the case; and I am sorry to say that the individual who did this bad work was J. S. Lee, my uncle. And what to me makes his position so much more ridiculous, was that he commenced his work among the weakest members of the church here: and further, in order to wield more of an influence with them, and to get them to accept his position, he represented to them that I was in harmony with his move, and would come here and take up his work and carry it through. Since coming here I have gone to the bottom of his work, and find it is without solid foundation; neither is it backed up by the Spirit of God, and is altogether out of harmony with the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

And, my dear brother, after having carefully examined the position taken by my uncle, I have been impressed, from a sense of duty and love to my fellow man, not only to fight it to the bitter end, but to reclaim, by God's help, those loved ones who had been led astray by a false teacher. To this end I ask your hearty support and faith and prayers, as also the church, for what labor I shall do in this direction will be as nearly in harmony with the church as I know, and with no other purpose in view than the up-building of the work of God, that I so dearly love.

While working in harmony with that love, God has blessed me in this work; for I am happy to say that while laboring with those that had been led off, they confessed to me that they had been deceived, and felt that they were out of the kingdom of God. Ever hoping that God will bless me, and enable me to carry this work to a glorious victory, and that it will be the means of the children of God seeing the importance of living near to God, that Satan will have no power to enter in among us and scatter the flock and lead any astray.

And now, asking God to bless all of his children, I close. Your brother and collaborer in the gospel of Christ,

C. E. BLODGETT.

PIN OAK, Ill., Nov. 20.

Editors Herald.—I thought I would drop you a few lines to let your readers know some things in regard to the late debate between I. N. White and Clark Braden, which was held at Alma, Illinois, from November 7 to 12, in the Christian church. I was chosen as moderator for Bro. White, and Rev. Honey for Mr. Braden, and Mr. Earley Marshall was selected as chairman. Large crowds were in attendance, as Alma is situated in a large Campbellite community, where the Southern Illinois Christian College is located, with Mr. Braden as president.

I think the discussion was a great success to the Latter Day Saints, as Bro. White was enabled to present the grandeur of our work to hundreds of people who otherwise would not have been blessed with such an opportunity; and it gave the enemy a fair chance to overthrow our position, before this great concourse of people, and to bring forth his strongest reasons against our claims. But it was plainly and clearly manifest that Elder Braden's argument against us would not stand the test in the light of God's eternal truth. I think if it had been left to the people to decide by vote as to which disputant had the better argument, that more than one half, if not two thirds of the audience, would have voted in favor of our side.

Our people have nothing to fear, so far as the tactics of Elder Clark Braden, are concerned. He has made a special study of our work, and is well informed in our books, and this seems to be thoroughly understood among his people; so when we down this great champion, we have the whole Campbellite fort captured.

This is the second debate that Bro. White has had with him in our mission of late, and we know that both of them have been a great success to our work, and Braden was downed both times. His arguments were so inconsistent, although being well informed in our positions, that when his positions against us were overthrown, that it made our work shine the more brighter. We give God all the glory for those things rather than to rejoice, just because Elder Braden was so completely discomfited and felt his utter defeat so keenly, right at his own home and before his own people. We have Braden challenged to debate the same propositions at every city, town, and hamlet where he may raise his voice against our work.

And I would advise our people to send to Bro. White for a lot of those challenges, which have been printed in pamphlet form, and distribute them in every vicinity where Mr. Braden may lecture against our people. He has a fashion of going into communities and handing out his literature, which is very poisonous against us, and lecturing a few times and telling the people that our elders dare not meet the real issue in oral debate, and this is the reason why that we have printed those challenges with the propositions in pamphlet form.

Our district conference closed here last night, and everything passed off in our business meetings with a pleasant spirit. F. M. Slover, J. D. Stead, and James A. Ferguson were chosen as delegates to the General Conference.

Your brother,

F. M. SLOVER.

CLINTON, Iowa, Nov. 20.

Editors Herald.—Have just closed a series of meetings at Clinton, Iowa, with a full house of attentive listeners, and a very good feeling seemed to prevail with all, and some inquiries concerning the work. Some expressed themselves, saying: I am pleased; I wish we could have had more meetings; I like to go. But we could not have the hall any longer at this time. The saints seemed to all feel well. I think the branch is in a better condition, with prospect for a better time for them. It does seem good when you go to a branch and hear all speak well of each other. May the Lord help them to go on and grow in grace, and arise above all the past, is my prayer.

I go from here to Fulton, Iowa, to attend to the Master's business. I felt that I was blessed in my efforts here, and the kind saints are glad and seemed well pleased. I hope and pray that the Lord will assist them in their efforts, that they may all be able to build a character that will be above reproach, and come up higher in the scale of perfection. I can see here a move in that direction. May it continue to increase, not here only, but in all the branches the world over. I feel that I need to be sustained by the prayers of God's people.

C. E. HAND.

MT. GROVE, Mo., Nov. 22.

Editors Herald.—I have just closed a meeting in Douglass County, in the neighborhood of Bro. Jarvis Huntsman, who moved from Lamoni. During this meeting the two oldest girls of Bro. and Sr. Huntsman were baptized. I trust they will make good saints. In October the two oldest boys of Bro. Huntsman died. Their names were Orval and Riley. These boys died in their youth, they being fourteen and twelve years. Their parents were stricken with grief by reason of the death of their sons.

Some of the other children are not well. Will the saints kindly remember them in their prayers.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

BEVIER, Mo., Nov. 13.

Editors Herald:—In response to the action of district conference held at Salt River, October 14 and 15, I went to Moberly to look after some Brighamite elders, who were preaching there on the streets. I listened to Elder T. H. Chambers on the 18th, on "authority." At the close of his meeting I spoke on the same topic, giving a brief history of the church, the apostasy, and claims of the different factions springing out of same. To this the elders, six in number, took exceptions, which called forth a challenge from me to meet the issue. The following propositions were agreed to for November 6:—

1. Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with Joseph Smith, son of Joseph Smith the Prophet, as its president, the legal successor of the church organized by Joseph Smith the Prophet and his coworkers, April 6, 1830?

2. Is the church in Utah, known as the Church of Jesus Christ (commonly called Mormons), of which Brigham Young, John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff were presidents, and of which Lorenzo Snow is now president, the legal and true successor of the church organized by Joseph Smith the Prophet and his coworkers, April 6, 1830?

On the 6th inst., in company with Elder R. M. Elvin, we made our way to the battle ground; were met by Bro. Summerfield, who had preceded us a few days, and rented a hall. I went to the rooms of the elders to see if they would be on hand, and found them ready to meet any man we had. So I asked them to let Bro. Elvin take my place, to which they agreed. On returning I told Bro. Elvin what I had done. He cheerfully acquiesced, and chose me for moderator.

In the evening the battle began, with R. M. Elvin and T. H. Chambers in the points. Bro. E laid a strong foundation stone, stating the laws governing from 1830 to 1844, the unchangeability of God, and his recognition of those who obeyed his commandments. Elder Chambers admitted the argument as correct, and made a rambling talk for twenty-three minutes. Bro. E. continued his full time, (thirty minutes), impressing on the minds of the congregation the necessity of law to govern, and that our salvation depended upon our obedience to the law. He touched briefly on the rejection of the church and the cause for it. Elder Chambers then continued for ten minutes, seemingly nonplused. Then he bore his testimony of Joseph Smith being a prophet and the Utah Church being the church of God. This testimony bearing was a prominent feature throughout the debate.

Second night. Bro. Elvin continued with the rejection of the church, its disorganization, and the necessity for its being reorganized. Elder Chambers fought this by assertions, but no proof. He set himself up in contradiction to P. P. Pratt on "reorganization" (see "True Succession in Church Presidency"); also to the "Epistle of the Twelve," written at Winter Quarters, December 23, 1847 (see ibid., page 85). When confronted with this evidence and the dropping of the prefix "Re" by B. H. Roberts in "Succession in Presidency of Church" (page 94), he seemed very much surprised.

On third night Bro. E. continued with "History of Reorganization," its acceptance of Joseph Smith as a president, his right to that place, and his ordination, citing an abundance of evidence from the books (Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants), also history. Elder Chambers floundered around, trying to make some objections, but failed. To our mind Elder Chambers is a very weak debater, and very poorly versed in the church books and church history.

Second proposition: Elder Larsen versus Elvin. He spent his half hour in trying to prove that Jesus was an apostle, and that he chose twelve apostles, and they were properly ordained. The only objectionable feature in his speech, worthy of mention, was that Jesus was ordained an apostle on the mount of transfiguration, that that was what he went there for. What think ye elders of the Reorganization about that? As Elder Larsen did not touch his proposition, Bro. Elvin had to affirm and then deny. It was noticeable to we elders that Elder Larsen was trying to keep as far back of 1844 as he possibly could—most of the time back with Christ and the apostles. Bro. Elvin had me place on the blackboard the articles of faith they carry (printed on a card with their name and address on it), and in contrast to that the innovations of B. Young et al.: polygamy, Adam-god, blood atonement, Christ not conceived by Holy Ghost, rogues, liars, thieves, meanest devils, etc., etc., because they were living in the light of God and had the holy priesthood. This contrast had a good effect upon the congregation, but fairly wilted the Utah elders. Elder Larsen said that came from their enemies. Bro. Elvin showed it was from the sermons of B. Young, but was willing to admit he was their greatest enemy.

In conclusion I will say they are poor defenders of their faith. I believe the debate will result in good in Moberly, for the people are very much prejudiced to both sides. Bro. Elvin continues meetings there, and reports fair attendance and interest on Sunday night following debate. Will say, I am still for the Reorganization.

In bonds of love,

J. A. TANNER.

GLADSTONE, Ill., Nov. 20.

Editors Herald:—I am in wonderment to read of what is called the "higher criticism" of the Holy Scriptures by the learned clergy. It is strange that they always look backward in trying to look forward. The Savior said, "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear." That being the true pattern of creation then, first the tree, then the apple, peach, acorn, or anything that grows that has within itself seed after its kind; first the man, then the woman, full grown. They did not grow from babes; they were created full grown; and it would be a greater miracle to make a blade of corn grow without any corn to plant to germinate the blade, than to quench the fire, or to stop the lion's mouth, or to cause the whale to become sick of his meal. I am just simple enough to take God at his word.

The great subject of creation in its holy order should be enough to convince all of the majesty of the Creator of the universe. We understand by faith that the worlds were framed. The Spirit of the Lord moved upon the face of the deep, and the earth was without form and void—matter evidently in chaotic state endowed with wisdom by his Spirit, and when spoken to obeyed the word of the Lord, and by obedience to his word was created into a full grown planetary system or system of worlds,—the wonderful planetary system revolving in space; yes, in the boundless bounds of space, all receiving light according to their movements from that great luminous body, the sun.

The great God controls all the universe, as he controlled "first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear." He said to his disciples, "O ye of little faith!" then arose and rebuked the wind, for it obeyed his voice and the sea was calm.

Now in this great day of wonders, and display of iniquity and erring in spirit, the prophecy of Enoch is being literally fulfilled before their eyes: "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints" "to convince all," and he will destroy the works of the "man of sin" by the spirit of his mouth, and by the brightness of his coming. The Spirit of his mouth is the word. And now the spirit has come, and the bride says come. The bride, the church, says Come, and in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers; after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, diversities of tongues; and through all these gifts, the Spirit says, Come; and the Bride says, Come, and take of the waters of life freely; making wise the simple, giving a sure hope founded on a sure foundation.

A brother,

MIDWAY, Ark., Nov. 19.

Editors Herald:—I am still living, but am down with rheumatism. I have been down two months; have been suffering three months. I suffer so at times I have to take morphine before I can get any rest. I have prayed to God to send Bro. Erwin or Bro. Jackson or some elder to administer to me, but they have not yet come.

My request to the Prayer Union is to pray that I may soon be relieved of my suffering if it be God's will.

Bro. J. D. Erwin, if you see this come if you can.

Yours in bonds,

MRS. C. C. JUDKINS.

WATERVLIET, Mich., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—Held cottage service at this place last eve. Have been at Hartford for ten days; good interest in meetings at that point.

Sunday last, we led into the water four elderly people (three from the Disciple Church) and buried them beneath the waves. They will doubtless prove a great help to the cause there. Bro. E. L. Kelley will remember two of them, Mr. and Mrs. Averill. Others are near.

Hopefully,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

GUY, Okla., Nov. 21.

Editors Herald:—The good news from the mission fields is received joyfully each week by us in Oklahoma, and we hope the principle of "expansion" will continue to grow till all will be within the fold of Christ and bask in the sunlight of liberty. However, while I read of the activity of others, I am reminded of my own—well, inactivity. For while my earnest desire is to be constantly in the field, it seems that there is much to hinder. But I am still hopeful of better conditions.

Since the latter part of June our baby, Edda, has been very poorly. Our faith has been tried and our hopes of her recovery dimmed. She is improved some now, so we feel encouraged. We earnestly desire the prayers of the saints that the Lord will restore her to health.

I hope to meet with the saints in conference in December, and trust that the Spirit of the Master will be present. There is need of local work being done by those in charge of branches. Cooperation is what is needed; that means the assistance of all, both ministry and members.

Pray in your homes. Saints, parents, you should not fail to have family prayer! Sometimes I go to the homes of the saints and am invited to retire at night without any reference to prayer. They don't hold family prayer themselves, and when the elder comes their neglect is made manifest.

Saints, the Lord has commanded you to pray. How can we expect to please him and receive his blessings when we "do not the thing" which he says?

Again, I see children who have grown to manhood and womanhood, raised by parents with years of experience in the church, and sometimes the father is an elder, a missionary perhaps, and these same children have grown from childhood without having been taught to pray at the family altar!

Saints, I am convinced that that is wrong, a sad neglect. Teach your children to pray as soon as they learn to talk, and keep them in sympathy with prayer as long as they are under your care, then you have done your duty in that regard. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

In gospel bonds,

R. M. MALONEY.

BLACKWELL, Okla., Nov. 21.

Editors Herald:—I drop you a line to let you know where I am and will say that I am still in the faith. The town of Blackwell is situated near the center of Kay County, in Northern Oklahoma. The soil is rich, the land nearly level. Claims partially improved three miles of Blackwell sell at twenty-seven hundred dollars.

Blackwell has a population of about three thousand people, but only six Latter Day Saints. We came here first. It was in May, '98. Then Bro. and Sr. Henry Bivins, of Blue Kapids, Kansas, came; and in October '99, Bro. and Sr. A. F. Lambert moved here from Okarche, Oklahoma. We expect Bro. R. W. Davis here most any time to preach for us.

I think saints south or west of here would do well to see our town and county, then locate with us and form a branch. Write us.

Your brother,

W. D. MCKNIGHT.

P. S.—I am making a fine circular chart Kingdom of God (Church of Jesus Christ).

DOW CITY, Iowa, Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—Congregations at Mallard were rather small during last week, owing to the rush of husking and other farm work necessary to be done in order to get ready for winter, though we closed meetings Sunday evening with a full house.

Last Sunday about forty persons met at the saints' chapel at Mallard and the writer organized a union Sunday school with Bro. Joseph Fish superintendent, Bro. John Truog, Jr., assistant, Sr. Della Feaster secretary, Bro. John Fish treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Fish organist and Miss Zeigler assistant, and Bro. Fredrick Cross janitor. The school will be known as the "White Chapel Union Sunday School" and we see no reason why it should not prosper and accomplish much good.

Bro. Fish has had many years of practice in Sunday school and they have a goodly number of bright young people to take part in the Sunday school work. The writer did his work at the request of the saints and the district superintendents.

One thing that is very encouraging is, that Bro. Fredrick Cross having consented to act as janitor will see to it that the house is open and in good condition for services in ample time.

The Winnowed Songs and Quarterlies are new to nearly all, but with the necessary perseverance they will not only become accustomed to the Quarterlies and songs, but will learn to like them. This school should be visited by one of the district superintendents at their earliest convenience.

Monday evening I spoke to the saints and some of their friends at the home of Bro. and Sr. J. M. Reed, at Rolfe, and the saints seemed to enjoy the services. Tuesday I administered to Sr. James C. Christenson, who was very ill with dropsy, at her home, five and one half miles southeast from Rolfe. She seemed to get immediate relief, and we sincerely pray that it may please God to spare her life for some years yet.

It is a good thing to trust in God "who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." He is able both to heal and to save.

Hopefully yours,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

PECATONICA, Ill., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—On the 13th inst. I closed a seventeen-days' effort at Courtland, DeKalb County. Attendance rather limited, but a few interested. Bro. F. M. Cooper was with me part of the time.

I have held ten meetings in the Universalist church here, and will likely continue over next Sunday. Interest seems to be increasing. Some of the preachers are attending. Bro. C. H. Burr had held six meetings here before my coming.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 18.

Editors Herald:—Everything is moving along nicely here; the work in Los Angeles is in much better condition than I have ever known it to be. Attendance at the Sunday services quite good; many outsiders present.

I was at Newport last Sunday, Bro. G. T. Griffiths occupying here. I expect to go to Redlands for a time to assist Bro. Chatburn, while Bro. Barmore will occupy here for a Sunday or two.

Bro. Barmore has succeeded in stirring up a fair interest in Cucamonga. Bro. Chatburn is "waking up the natives" in Redlands. Bro. Griffiths left for Stockton Wednesday night. Bro. Dana goes north for the winter to work in connection with Bro. Keeler in the Santa Marie country. We now expect, if all goes well, that we will get permanent openings in several new points in Southern California before the winter is over. Expect to try Redlands, Riverside, Pasadena, and Santa Ana, if we can.

A new impetus has lately been given to the branches and we are very hopeful for the future. There is a perfect agreement among all the officers of the mission, district, and every one of the branch officials, so far as I know. We have been working for months to effect this and it gives us pleasure to so report.

Yours ever in the faith once delivered to the saints.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

For burns where the skin is not broken, I have found nothing better than common cooking soda, thickly put on dry, and the burn done up in cotton batting; some treat a burn with flour instead of soda. If the skin is broken, dress it with cotton batting saturated with sweet oil. A burn needs to be kept from the air, and these applications accomplish this, besides soothing the pain, which they do sooner than any application of laudanum or other opiate.

For boils, use a tomato cut in two, binding one half on the boil and renewing frequently. If tomatoes are not to be had, treat the boil with bread and milk or slippery elm poultice. The first necessity to a boil, sore, or wound, is to keep it moist; this allays inflammation and affords relief. It is cruel to allow bandages or poultices to become dry and stiff upon a sore of any kind.

For a felon, the quicker it is opened by the lancet the less danger of injury to the bone and pain to be suffered. A real felon commences to mature at the bone; the matter must be liberated; if allowed to work its way to the surface, it sometimes brings fragments of the bone with it, or so diseases them they are discharged.

A whitlow, or "gathered finger," can usually be checked in the beginning by immersing the finger in weak lye in a cup on the stove, and holding it till the lye as nearly reaches the boiling point as you can bear it.

Where poison has been swallowed send instantly for a doctor; and while he is coming, lose no time in attempting to produce vomiting by tickling the throat with a feather and giving copious draughts of tepid water in which mustard is stirred. Meanwhile, think quickly what is the nature of the poison swallowed, and act accordingly. All animal poisons are acid and are neutralized by alkalis; when any acid poison has been taken give ammonia in water; we knew a case where a life was apparently saved by administering plaster picked out of the wall and pulverized, it being the only alkali at hand. If the poisoning is by laudanum, paregoric, or any other preparation of morphine, give a cup of the strongest coffee you can make, clear. Use every endeavor to keep the patient awake by walking him about, shaking him, pinching him, dashing cold water in his face alternately with dashes of warm water; do any and everything to fight off the fatal stupor. The antidote for morphine poisoning is sulphate of zinc.

If the poison was arsenic, after producing vomiting by the mustard, give several spoonful of finely powdered charcoal; or if that is not at hand, a large dose of olive oil. For corrosive sublimate, give at once the whites of several eggs, or if these are not at hand, stir wheat flour into sweet milk and give to drink of it freely; sweet milk alone, drank freely, is good in many cases of poisoning, and injurious in none.

In cases of drowning, empty the water out of mouth and nostrils, and if possible, restore circulation by rubbing, and respiration by artificial breathing. Lay the patient on his back; with head and shoulders slightly raised; grasp both arms above the elbow, raise them gently and steadily upward till they meet above the head, then bring downward and press gently on sides. This should occupy two seconds, making fifteen times a minute. Continue this steady movement with the rubbing till signs of life appear, or you give up hope. If a galvanic battery can be procured it can be used to advantage in starting action at the nerve centers.

Fainting fits are due to lack of blood in the head, hence lay the patient down flat, or with the head slightly lower than the heart; loosen the clothing at the throat and waist if it in any way impedes circulation, and dash cold water in the face. This, with plenty of fresh air, is usually all that is necessary.

A variety of ailments, arising from widely different causes, are known to mothers under the generic name of "fits;" it is well to distinguish between them. Convulsions are always alarming, but not always dangerous. Some children have convulsions from indigestion and from worms, especially while teething. This tendency passes away with the second year of the child's life, and he may grow up robust and strong. For convulsions, put the child as quickly as possible into a warm bath, temperature about ninety-eight degrees, blood heat; put a napkin wrung out of cold water on his head, and immerse the body up to the neck in the warm water; keep its temperature up by careful additions of hot water at the side of the tub. Let him remain ten or fifteen minutes, then take him out, wrap him in a warm blanket, and usually he is all right. Guard against recurrence of convulsions by exercising greater care over his diet.

If the convulsions are accompanied by frothing at the mouth and blood tinge, it is usually epilepsy, and there is little to be done but to keep the patient from hurting himself. The tongue is liable to be bitten; guard against this by putting a piece of cork or rubber or wood between the teeth. Epilepsy is seldom cured or outgrown.

If the person falling in a fit struggles, it is usually hysteria. This and the following cases are diseases of maturity rather than of children. If instead of struggles there is utter unconsciousness with a flushed face instead of the pallor of fainting, it is a graver matter; if there be paralysis and absence of motion, it is probably apoplexy. These are cases for instant medical aid, while a faint or childish convulsions usually come within the power of the mother to handle, if only she have the necessary knowledge and self-possession. Remember, in every emergency it is better to act than to cry, no matter how great the strain on your sympathies.

Mothers should learn to distinguish symptoms as shown by the pulse, the tongue, the breath. A soft pulse, like a woolen string vibrating, is a safe pulse; if it is like the vibrations of a terse, thin wire, it indicates danger. A quick, bounding pulse indicates fever; a sluggish, yet full pulse, want of nervous energy; a slow pulse, when not constitutional, denotes debility; or in children it frequently indicates a tendency of blood to the head. In infancy and early childhood the normal pulse beats from one hundred and twenty to one hundred times a minute; in healthy adults about seventy-five a minute, being a little quicker for women than for men; in old age it sinks to sixty or seventy. These figures are subject to considerable variation even among healthy people, hence we must take into consideration the person's constitutional pulse before judging of his condition by the number of pulse beats.

Respiration is closely connected with circulation; the manner of breathing gives indication of the character of disease. Short, hurried breathing indicates inflammation of the lungs; if the chest muscles alone come into play in breathing, it indicates trouble in the stomach and bowels. The tongue is another indicator; covered with a dirty white coating, it shows a disordered stomach; a thick, yellow coating indicates a disordered liver; a thick, white coating with the red papillæ appearing through, is a symptom of scarlet fever. Other symptoms of this dreaded disease are, great heat of the skin, sore throat, a bright scarlet rash, which usually presents no inequalities to sight or touch. Mothers are sometimes at a loss to distinguish between scarlet fever and measles; it is necessary to do so at the very start, as the treatment required in each differs from that needed for the other, measles needing to be kept warm and have warm drinks, while scarlet fever patients should be kept cool, and like other fever patients, allowed to drink water freely.

Both need plenty of pure, fresh air; in measles great care must be taken to have this air warm before it enters the room. Proper care and good nursing will usually bring measles out all right, but if through carelessness the patient takes cold, serious lung troubles follow. We have known many cases of consumption directly traceable to colds taken while having measles, especially if the patients were adults.

Usually scarlet fever is much more serious than measles; when it makes its appearance a physician should be summoned at once, meanwhile excluding the other children from the sick room, for fear of contagion. Here are some of the symptoms by which you may decide whether the disease is scarlet fever or measles. Measles commence like a cold with catarrhal symptoms, watery discharges from the nose and eyes, sneezing, and a dry, hard cough, symptoms usually easily distinguished from those before-mentioned as indicating scarlet fever. The rash is different, being rough to the touch, in measles; physicians' test to decide between the two is to draw the back of the nail over the rash; if it be scarlet fever, this leaves a distinct white streak, which lasts two or three minutes; if it is measles, the streak is not uniform, and lasts but a few seconds.

They catalogue three forms of scarlet fever, varying from the simple form, which is seldom serious if properly cared for, to the malignant, which is generally fatal. We shall not describe these various forms and their treatment, as any case of scarlet fever is a case for a physician. We speak of it here only to emphasize the necessity of thorough ventilation, isolation from the family, guarding against infection, and great care when the patient is recovering against taking cold. Even simple cases which presented no dangerous symptoms during their continuance, have resulted fatally or in loss of sight or hearing from cold taken by exposure after the child was supposed to be well. Keep him in the house and watch him carefully for a month, even if he seems as well as ever before that time expires. Nor can you guard too carefully against contagion by isolation and disinfection. One of the most distressing cases of scarlet fever we have ever known resulted from playing with a doll that four months before had been the solace of a little girl during her convalescence from scarlet fever.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN WALES.

Conference was held at Llanelly, September 2 and 3; Elder F. G. Pitt chosen to preside, Cathrine Treharne secretary. Bro. Alma Bishop was given the right to take part in conference. Moved and seconded that no brother in the district be sustained in office when addicted to using tobacco or strong drink. Tabled. Communication from church recorder was read. Resolved that the secretary of each branch write out a copy of names and items on their record and send to district secretary, to forward to church recorder. Bro. Alma Bishop was given the right to speak for a few minutes with regard to the purchasing of a van for traveling to preach the gospel. Resolved that a committee of two be appointed to cooperate with Eastern district, to consider the propriety of having the van. Elders John G. Jenkins and Lot Bishop were appointed committee. Treasurer's account was audited and found correct, showing a balance in hand of 10s. 10½d. Moved and seconded that we sustain the authorities of the church in righteousness before the Lord. Carried. Moved and seconded that we sustain Bro. Pitt in our faith and prayers as missionary in charge. Carried. District officers appointed as follows: John G. Jenkins, president; David Thomas, vice president; Evan Lewis reelected treasurer; Cathrine Treharn reelected secretary, Eliz. A. Lloyd assistant secretary. Moved and seconded that we sustain Elder J. D. Jenkins as missionary in Wales. Resolved that the vote be deferred until Sunday. On Sunday afternoon a short business session was held, in which the matter of sustaining Elder J. D. Jenkins again came up, when Elder F. G. Pitt, as president of mission, stated that no good could come from further discussion of this unpleasant matter, and that on account of the long continued and determined opposition to the missionary labors of Elder Jenkins, resulting in both district and mission conferences refusing to sustain him, it seemed necessary that the brother should be released from his appointment, and that he was now so released. He regretted the necessity of this action, but added that nothing in the release was intended as a reflection on Bro. Jenkins' moral character, and that he knew of nothing to interfere with the brother continuing to labor in his office as an elder, as circumstances would permit; and hoped he would continue to so labor, and by a godly walk and conversation win back the confidence of his brethren. In this he would assist him all in his power. By a large majority the conference endorsed the action of the missionary in charge in releasing Bro. Jenkins and in the sentiments expressed concerning his moral character. Saints' fellowship in the afternoon was enjoyed by all. Eloquent sermons in the evening by Elders Alma N. Bishop in English and J. D. Jenkins in Welsh. Adjourned to meet at Llanelly the first Saturday and Sunday in February, 1900.

The following resolutions obtained: Be it resolved by this the Southern California district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in conference assembled; That we earnestly protest against the allowing of our national banner to float over any territory that permits the sacred laws of marriage (i. e. one husband and one wife) to be violated, and that we protest against any person being allowed to take their seats in the halls of congress of the United States who are knowingly guilty of adultery or polygamy. Whereas, there does not exist a general agreement in the church to-day on the question of the gathering, consecration, and equality; and whereas, the Lord has commanded his elders to assemble to agree upon his word, therefore, be it resolved, that we, as a district conference, instruct our delegates to the next General Conference to endeavor to secure a council of the priesthood of the church, where calm and prayerful deliberation shall obtain, and that a general understanding may be arrived at as to the present scope of gathering; how far it applies now; in what does consecration consist, and to what extent the principle of equality is to obtain in the church to-day. Resolved further, that we send greeting to the Presidency of the Church, and ask them to consider our petition, and if compatible with the promptings of the Holy Spirit, that they grant our petition and provide for said gathering. Whereas, the Santa Marie branch is of more easy access to the Central district, resolved that we, as a district conference, request the missionary in charge to originate such measures as will secure such change of boundary which will include said branch in the Central district. The ex officio clause of the delegate system was amended so as to read, "All parties holding priesthood shall be ex officio members entitled to voice and vote." Sr. Lucy Wright gave an outline of work for the third district Sunday school institute, to be held at Veve, December 15 and 16. Sunday school and prayer service at the usual hours on Sunday were well attended and enjoyed, there being a pentecostal shower realized in the latter in two tongues, prophecies, and visions. After which meeting, Bro. J. C. Foss led five precious souls into the waters of regeneration, two of the number being Sunday school volunteers. Preaching by J. C. Foss, R. T. Walters, and F. C. Keck. Adjourned to meet at Coal Hill chapel, February 10, 1900.

NORTHEASTERN TEXAS AND CHOCTAW.

Conference opened November 11, at ten o'clock, and from that hour to the close of the last session on Monday, the Spirit of the Master was with us in power. Besides Brn. J. D. Erwin, E. A. Erwin, Earl D. Bailey, Ellis Short, J. W. Jackson, Peter Adamson, and others, we had with us Bro. F. C. Keck, of the Second Quorum of Seventy. The word was preached in demonstration and power, and the fruits of labors of all have been seen in that ten more have been inducted into the kingdom of God on earth. In Cove, alone, there have been thirty baptisms in the past twelve or fourteen months, since the work was opened up in this place through the instrumentality of Brn. Ellis Short and A. L. Newton, and we believe the way is made clear for many others. It was stated by the Spirit expressly, that in these hills and valleys many, in the near future, would obey the gospel. Many of our saints in these parts had never before heard the "gifts" of the gospel, and they were overjoyed when the gifts of tongues and prophecy were given through the aged father of A. Z. and H. A. Rudd, formerly of Independence, Missouri. Strong men and women were moved to tears of joy when they beheld with their eyes and heard with their ears that for which they had prayed for years to experience. Through the "gifts" Bro. Short's efforts in and about Cove, were especially commended. Bro. and Sr. A. L. Newton also have done faithful work. Through these three, as instruments, God has changed this place, in twelve months, from superstition, and ignorance of the gospel, to a place where faith and confidence in God has been established, and where it is not asked in vain, "Know ye the Lord?" Our district is composed of some three hundred saints, and from the efforts being made by the elders in this part of God's vineyard, we will soon be able to show many more fruits of honest labor. The financial condition of the district is good, $1,423.85 having been paid in since last report, $1,300 of which came from our worthy brother, Ellis Short. We have a surplus still of $143 71. Bro. Earl D. Bailey, of Standley, was sustained for district president, Bro. E. A. Erwin was chosen vice president, and J. Cole Moxon chosen district secretary. Our next conference is to be at Wilburton, Indian Territory, on the 10th of February, 1900.

Miscellaneous Department.

THE WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

In setting forth the claims of Joseph Smith, I first gave what he claimed for himself. He claimed he was an instrument in God's hand to restore the church to its original organization (of eighteen hundred years ago) and to restore to the church its former doctrine and practice. He professed to have had angelic instructions from heaven to assist him in this work. I am here to defend Mr. Smith's claims as being in harmony with former dealings with God's people. Also invite a close examination of what Smith claimed, and of his organization with its doctrine and practice.

The Bible is the standard of evidence in this debate. By it let Mr. Smith stand or fall. If we depend upon hearsay, newspaper reports, and histories written by enemies, Smith's claims will stand the test with all the prophets of past ages.

1. Smith believed the Bible—all Bibles; thought they contained the word of God so far as correctly translated.

2. He believed in the Book of Mormon; this book he claimed came forth in fulfillment of the Bible; and was the word of God to the people that inhabited ancient America. This book is equal to the Bible in its advocacy of morality; its doctrine of faith and repentance is certainly equal to anything that has ever been placed before an intelligent people as a Bible. Since its introduction in 1829 and 1830 its statements in regard to the dealings of God with the people of this continent have been most surprisingly confirmed by American archaeology.

Smith believed in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. This book contains covenants and commandments to govern the church similarly as does the M. E. Discipline to the M. E. Church, and the Christian System to the Christian Church. The difference is, we believe God has had something to do with our book, and these other parties believe their books are gotten up by the wisdom of good men.

Mr. Smith believed in searching all good books for knowledge. Mr. Smith, we claim, came in the right time and in the right way to entitle him to the appellation, "a prophet of God." Braden said he objected to the Book of Mormon being a revelation from God, because it had hundreds of grammatical blunders in it. I showed the Bible was no exception to that rule. The New Testament had been tinkered at for hundreds of years, yet there were one hundred and fifty thousand readings in it. This Braden denied. I then read from Professor Roberts, one of the committee that assisted in the Revised Translation, page 1, as follows: "The number of various readings in the New Testament has been differently estimated at different times. . . . While the varieties of reading in the New Testament were reckoned at about thirty thousand in the last century, they are generally referred to as amounting to no less than one hundred and fifty thousand at the present day."

The Book of Mormon did not claim to be perfect in all of its phraseology; yet in all of its writings it is preserved from error in its morals and doctrine, which is a wonderful evidence of its divinity. Moroni says: "If there are faults, they are the mistakes of men." He copied largely from mere historical writings; i. e., written mostly as history; being true, yet the phraseology may have been somewhat imperfect.

Professor Roberts says on page 11: "Biblical critics have adopted two great principles as guides to a decision with respect to the true text of Scripture. The first is, that a difficult or obscure expression, nay, even an almost unintelligible term, or a wholly ungrammatical construction, is generally to be regarded as the genuine reading, in preference to another which is easy, familiar, and correct."

Joseph could not have been the desperate man that my opponent claims him to have been.

The Book of Mormon is claimed to be a production from the hand of Mr. Smith; and in all of its writings it has been so superintended that they have been winnowed completely of error in doctrine and moral inculcation. This is one great evidence in favor of Smith's prophetic calling. A corrupt fountain cannot send forth pure water, is a truism as applicable to Mr. Smith as to any other man that made such claims as he did.

Mr. A. Campbell says in the Campbell-Owen debate, page 141: "There are a thousand historic facts narrated in the Bible which it would be absurd to regard as immediate and direct revelation from the Almighty."

If this statement be true, and considering a large per cent of God's prophets and apostles that wrote in the Bible unlearned and ignorant men, it is easily reckoned why there are "grammatical blunders" found in the Bible, and the Book of Mormon too. The Bible and Book of Mormon writers were not trained rhetoricians, nor even practiced writers. They show the greatest variety of culture and of style.

The Editor of the Christian Evangelist in Vol. 29, p. 802, says: "That there are historical and chronological errors in our present Bible no intelligent and candid person will deny. That some of these errors are the result of copying, is probably true; but that they all so resulted, and that the original autographs were absolutely free from error in all minor details, is what no man on earth knows or can prove, as the manuscripts are not in existence."

In "Horne's Introduction," p. 521, we have this same thought carried out in these words: "But with respect to the choice of words in which they wrote, I know not but they might be left to the free and rational exercise of their own minds, to express themselves in the manner that was natural and familiar to them, while at the same time they were preserved from error, in the ideas they conveyed. If this were the case, it would sufficiently account for the very observable diversity of style and manner among the inspired writers. The Spirit guided them to write nothing but truth concerning religion, yet they might be left to express that truth in their own language."

The Reorganization acknowledges that there are grammatical errors in the Book of Mormon, according to our present understanding of correct grammar. But in every paragraph where a grammatical mistake is found, the text is preserved from error as to doctrine.

As other writers say of the Bible, we say of the Book of Mormon; some of these mistakes may have been made through copying, and some may have occurred because the sacred penmen were permitted to write as their several tempers and common use of their faculties suggested. The committee that was appointed by the General Conference of 1884, to examine or compare the Palmyra and our present edition of the Book of Mormon, with the manuscript that was in the hands of Mr. David Whitmer, says:—

"We found between the Palmyra edition and the manuscript, many of which we believe were typographical errors, and were overlooked by the proofreaders."

No book probably in existence, is perfectly free from some such mistakes; and to now make an exception of the Book of Mormon, alone, is not reasonable nor charitable. The committee further states, that the differences "do not affect the doctrine taught, or destroy the sense in any respect."

Hence, to assert that Joseph Smith is a fraud, because errors have crept into the Book of Mormon by editors, proofreaders, copyists, etc., is to say the least, beyond all reason and logic.

If the doctrine and morals of the book are proven out of harmony with that found in the Bible, then there might be some grounds to claim Joseph Smith a fraud.

Braden said he charged the Book of Mormon with fraud, because it had four hundred verbatim quotations from the New Testament before the New Testament was written. I positively denied such a number as that; however, acknowledged that it would not be strange, as the same God gave the Book of Mormon on this far-away continent, that gave the New Testament on the other. God certainly knew his own doctrine and had used scripture in the Old Testament that afterwards was made use of in the New, without an attempt to quote it from the Old.

Braden in an attempt to find his verbatim quotations from the New Testament, would assert that it was so, when there was but a semblance of thought. For instance; he asserted that a stanza of Watts' hymn was found in the Book of Mormon. Here it is: "But, behold, the righteous, the saints of the Holy One of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy One of Israel; they who have endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it." In this, Braden had no difficulty in seeing, "Am I a soldier of the cross," etc. The same tactics were used to find his verbatim New Testament quotations in the Book of Mormon. What straits these fellows get into to make their case!

Braden then tried his hand on the "pet phrases" found in the Book of Mormon, such as "came to pass;" "behold;" "more part;" "matchless power;" "it supposes me;" "yea," etc. I had no difficulty in finding his "more part" in the Bible (Acts 19: 32; 27: 12); and as I read it he seemed astonished and asked: "Where is that?" Then I made the following argument upon the peculiar expressions found in Book of Mormon, peculiar and common to each writer. For instance: "His matchless power" by King Benjamin, pp. 142, 144, 150. Not one "came to pass" in all of his writings. "Matchless power" is found only in one other instance in the entire book, (p. 337.) Mormon on p. 139 uses, "it supposes me," and "came to pass," pp. 141, 142, 154, 155, 156, and 158. On p. 156, King Limhi speaks, but not one "came to pass;" but on p. 158 Mormon commences to speak again and we have his "came to pass, which is so peculiar to him."

On pp. 201 and 202 Mosiah writes an epistle, but not one "came to pass" in it; but the writer immediately before and after him uses the "came to pass." (203.) Alma, the son of Alma in his exhortation (pp. 215-221) uses "yea" eight times; also "behold;" but not one "came to pass." But at the very introduction of next chapter by another writer we meet with the "came to pass." (221) and not one "behold," and but one "yea" and that really in quoting Alma, who often used it. But in introducing the next chapter by Alma we run against the "behold" and "yea" right in its introduction and then continue throughout his epistle. But at the introduction of another writer we meet with the "came to pass" again (225), and Alma comes in again (227), and commences with his peculiar phraseology of "behold" and "yea;" but in commencing verse 8, Mormon is introduced again and he comes in with his peculiar "came to pass;" but before the verse closes Alma commences again, and closes up with his "yea," and Mormon comes in again at verse 9 with his "came to pass."

Alma on p. 227:7 makes use of the "came to pass" for the first and only time in all of his writings; and at this time it could scarcely be avoided, as it was the very language that should be used. I showed in Mark that the word "immediately" occurred forty-one times and was peculiar to that speaker alone.

This is all I introduced in debate but it could be carried out at length. I pressed this hard as one of the best evidences that the Book of Mormon was not gotten up by Joseph Smith, as in his youth and illiteracy he could not have thought of such a deep-laid plan of trickery as this would have been. The very idea of an illiterate boy brought up in the backwoods to have written a book of more than five hundred pages, having dozens of characters figuring in it, two often in one verse, and then keeping track of all the peculiarities of each character, is, certainly, and really more than we are prepared to believe of Joseph, unless he was just what he claimed, "a prophet of God."

Braden said there was a great ado over Masonry in "Jo's" time and the Book of Mormon was full of Masonry, and it had the Masonic white apron in it. I asked if there were any Masons in the assembly and some nodded their heads there were; I told them I would read where Braden found his Masonic white apron. Reading, "And they were girded about after the manner of robbers; and they had a lamb-skin about their loins, and they were dyed in blood; and their heads were shorn; and they had head plates upon them." I asked if that resembled the Masonic white apron, and the same heads shook no!

Braden here got the floor and took the time to read his circular of more than fifty allegations against Mr. Smith wherein it asserts Smith was "a lazy loafer and idler; a vagrant and vagabond; a drunkard; a notorious liar; an impostor; a pretended fortune teller; a pilferer and thief, and a leader of a gang of thieves; swindled the people out of over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in the Kirtland Safety Bank scheme; gave a revelation in favor of polygamy," etc., etc.; then says: "Will you [White] face before a mutually chosen committee of lawyers an investigation of these issues?" I told Braden I was here to try this case before this intelligent assembly; they to act as jurors in the case, and I would trust to their competency to weigh the evidence if he had any to present in favor of his allegations. I had challenged him to a debate at Alma because he had asserted in his lectures and circulars such things were true of Mr. Smith. I was here to prove that one and all of these allegations were false and a low-down nefarious attempt to slander a good and humble people; and even an attempt on his part to take it from before this people to a "committee," was to say the least, cowardly, and gave his case away. I did not fear the issue, and challenged him to bring forth his proof—not assertions; but I wanted evidence that would stand the test before our civil courts.

Braden made one effort on the so-called "bank swindle" and said if "Jo" had not stolen Bill's coat, he would have gone to the penitentiary! That is, "Jo" changed coats with "Bill," and thus eluded the officers. This was the beginning and end of his argument about that enormous swindle of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars! I showed the people what a good thing it would have been to have preserved "Bill's coat." Bankers could have stolen all the people's money deposited in their banks, and just slipped on "Bill's coat," and stepped over into another State, like Joseph did, and live there in peace (so far as that theft was concerned) for years, and no power on earth would dare to molest them! It was a pity they didn't preserve that coat of Bill's—a coat that outgeneraled all the officers in the State of Ohio, and also in the United States. A wonderful "coat" indeed! (Applause.)

Well, Braden said, "Jo" was arrested many times for his blasphemous fraud and villainy. I wanted to know why he did not find his way to the penitentiary? All in the world they lacked to send him there was they did not have Braden there to tell the courts that tried Smith, that he was a scoundrel and a villain of the deepest dye. What a pity Braden had not been there. "Jo" and all of his posterity would have been hung as high as Haman. Braden either brings scathing allegations against the courts that tried Smith, for letting him go scot-free, when he was such a villain, or else must exonerate them in doing what they did, wholly because they didn't have I, Clark Braden, there to testify; Which? This commenced to open the people's eyes, and they commenced to weigh the difference between "assertions" and evidence.

Braden said the Book of Mormon was a fraud, because there were not a name of a river, country, or town in it, that could be found in any of the American antiquarian works. If such rivers, towns, etc., as found in Book of Mormon were ever in existence, some of their names would now be found in the antiquarian works. I stated that had there been names just alike in both works, it would have proven the Book of Mormon a fraud, since the language it was written in was a "sealed language;" a language not now known to any man on earth. Hence if these names had agreed the book would certainly be a fraud. I read in support of this, volume 2, number 2, page 89, of the American Antiquarian: "The mounds that, with rare exception, crown every eminence fronting the great Father of Waters on the east and west, whether they be of temple, town, pyre, or dwelling, are all that time has left us of a people who have long been extinct. Who they were we know not, where and when they originated as a distinct people is equally obscure; their language is as dead as their bones."

Also on pages 33 and 34, volume 2, number 1, says: "Their works, with the rude architecture which they practice; their relics, with traces of their art and handicraft upon them; or occasionally an emblem or symbol inscribed on some vase or vessel, or built into some great earth mound; these are all that they have left behind, but no record attends them. Their hieroglyphics, if found, are obscure, and no key is left for their interpretation."

Braden tried hard to create a laugh about the "poisonous serpents" spoken of on page 518, of Book of Mormon. He told about the snakes "rounding up the cattle all over North America and driving them into South America, and their feat was as great as were some of the vast armies, etc. I showed that the feat performed by the Book of Mormon "snakes" was laid in the shade when put into comparison with the "hornets" of the Bible as recorded in Exodus 23:28; Deuteronomy 7:20, where they "rounded up" a whole nation and drove them from factory, store, and home, chasing the women, men, and children out of the land. This was "expansion," and had we a few such fighting hornets now, we would send them over to the Philippines to assist General Otis, and they would soon clear out Aguinaldo and his band and relieve our boys in blue. (Applause.)

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Oklahoma district will convene with the saints at Oklahoma branch, near Mathewson P. O., Canadian County, December 15, continuing over Sunday. Monday following will be devoted to the interests of Oklahoma district Sunday school convention. Those interested in the welfare of the Sunday school in Oklahoma, please take note of this, and come prepared. We desire especially the presence of all those of the ministry, and as many of the laity as will come, to stimulate to greater activity on the part of all. We need your presence. Don't fail to come. The work hinges on our activity. And by the cooperation of all, Zion's cause will prosper exceedingly.

NOTICE TO THOSE HOLDING PRIESTHOOD IN THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DISTRICT.

The following circular letter is addressed to everyone holding the priesthood in the district. The object of this circular is to learn the spiritual standing and desires of those on whose shoulders the burden of the work rests.

We earnestly hope that this will receive your immediate attention. A failure to respond on your part will be construed to mean that you are not willing to fulfill the heaven-ordained obligations which belong to your calling, and we shall feel at liberty to ask that you comply with its terms, or relinquish your license; said license being granted to you for action.

It is not our desire to obstruct or arbitrarily debar any man from doing what he wishes, but rather to stimulate all to action; yet, as God has said to us, "Ye shall see that my law is kept" (D. C. 41:2), and as a part of that law is, "Let every man learn his duty;" and, "With some I am not well pleased, for they will not open their mouths, but hide the talent which I have given unto them, because of the fear of man. Woe unto such, for mine anger is kindled against them. And it shall come to pass, if they are not more faithful unto me, it shall be taken away, even that which they have."—D. C. 60:1, 2.

Again, "Verily I say unto you, that every man who is obliged to provide for his family, let him provide and he shall in no wise lose his crown; and let him labor in the church. Let every man be diligent in all things. And the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repents and mends his ways."—D. C. 75:5.

Therefore we cannot shrink from our part, in upholding the law of God. It is our constant prayer that all men holding license from the church will resolve to fulfill their calling, thus relieving us of the unpleasant duty of demanding their license.

We however give notice, that we will not tolerate official indolence, and will expect every man to acquit himself in the work which God has assigned him to perform.

You will please write Bro. Carmichael, stating whether you are willing to do your duty or not. Respectfully submitted,

G. T. GRIFFITHS,
Missionary in Charge.
T. W. WILLIAMS,
Sub-Missionary in Charge.
A. CARMICHAEL,
District President.

ADDRESSES WANTED.

Those among the ministry, and others, who can use back numbers of Herald, Ensign, and Hope, can be supplied if they will forward addresses to George Snively, Lamoni, Iowa. Bro. Snively is chairman of good literature committee of Lamoni local of Zion's Religio-Literary Society, and has more literature than he has addresses.

A. B. HANSON, Pres. Lamoni Local.

PRIMARY LESSON ILLUSTRATION CARDS.

They are outline pictures, representing the incidents of the lessons, to be colored with crayon or water colors, by the children. Full directions for their use will be given in the Quarterly. These cards will be furnished FREE to every school, as many as they have of primary pupils. As there are more primary children than the number of Primary Quarterlies used, it will be necessary for each school to send an order for the number of cards needed to supply each primary pupil.

Orders should be sent at once, as these cards are for a part of the lessons of first quarter of 1900. Let superintendents and secretaries, as soon as they see this announcement, take the necessary steps to send the order at once. It is desired to make a thorough test of the practicability of this feature of work.

Send orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa. 4

BORN.

VOELPEL.—To Bro. E. W. and Sr. Dolly E. Voelpel, of Clinton, Iowa, a son; born November 5, 1899. Blessed November 19, by Elder C. E. Hand, and named Lyman Verna.

CHRISTENSEN.—At Eagle Grove, Iowa, October 28, 1899, to Bro. and Sr. Peter Christensen, a daughter. Blessed November 19, by Elder Eli Hayer, and named Marie Annie.

DIED.

WOOD.—At Lamoni, Iowa, November 18, 1899, Bro. Stephen Wood, in the sixty-ninth year of his age. Bro. Wood was born at Rickmansworth, Hertfordshire, England, February 2, 1831. He was baptized in October, 1848, by Elder James Caffall. In 1852 he emigrated to Utah, where on November 8, 1854, he was united in marriage to Miss Martha McLean. In the spring of 1857, they removed to Washoe County, Nevada, where they became acquainted with the Reorganization, and Bro. Wood renewed his covenant, receiving baptism at the hands of Elder E. C. Brand, July 5, 1868. In 1868 he was ordained a priest, and in 1869 an elder, both ordinations being performed by W. W. Blair. In 1870 he removed to Manti, Fremont County, Iowa, and in 1882 to Lamoni, Iowa, where he has since resided. He leaves a widow, one brother, one sister, and other relatives. The funeral was from his residence. Elder J. R. Lambert was in charge of the services, Elder Heman C. Smith preaching the discourse.

STEVENS.—At Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania, October 16, 1899, Mrs. Harriet S., wife of Dr. T. J. Stevens, aged 63 years, 2 months, 14 days. Her maiden name was Stebbins, she being a sister of Bro. Henry A. She was born in Chardon, Geauga County, Ohio, being the fifth child and only daughter of Charles and Julia E. Stebbins. She was married to Dr. Stevens on April 15, 1833. Her husband, aged 76 years, writes feelingly of his sorrow and loneliness. He states that she had great confidence in the doctrine of the literal resurrection of the dead and in Christ as the Redeemer of the world. She felt that these were the important facts of the Christian life. The funeral was largely attended, and the sermon was by Elder Yost of the Mennonite body, of which she and her husband were members.

KINNAMAN.—John Thomas Kinnaman was born October 14, 1829, in Woodson County, Indiana. He was married August 8, 1852, to Miss Mary Bear. United with the church in 1870; was soon after ordained an elder. Was chosen president of the Third Quorum of Elders; was also president of the Far West, Missouri, district for a number of years. He was well known throughout Western Missouri as a man of sterling integrity. He was blessed with an uncommonly sweet voice in singing, and was known favorably throughout the church as a leader in vocal music. He was a prominent figure in all the general church assemblies, not only by his stature, but his singing qualities, and was a pioneer in church circles in the neighborhood where he lived. His death occurred October 28, 1899, near Stewartsville, Missouri, and his funeral took place from the saints' chapel at Stewartsville. The sermon was preached by Elder Hyrum O. Smith, to an audience that taxed the seating capacity of the church to its utmost, many remaining outside and in the entrance. His body was laid to rest in the cemetery adjacent to the German Stewartsville church. He leaves a wife and six children and seventeen grandchildren to mourn.

PEEK.—Ruth Florence Peek was born January 17, 1876, near Winston, Missouri; baptized January 17, 1894, in St. Joseph, Missouri; died November 17, 1899, at Maysville, Missouri. Sr. Peek had a bright mind, and after her baptism was an earnest worker in the cause she had espoused. The Sunday school and Religio work were her especial delight. She was hindered much by ill health from doing all she would liked to have done, but of her we believe it can be said truly, "She hath done what she could." She was loved and respected by all who knew her, and those who knew her best loved her most, and the esteem in which she was held was evidenced by the large number of people in attendance at the funeral which, by her request, was held at her father's residence in Maysville. The sermon was preached by Elder Hyrum O. Smith.

ROBERTS.—At her residence, New Wortley, Leeds, England, September 22, 1899, Sr. Elizabeth, beloved wife of Bro. James Roberts, aged 62 years, leaving five sons and three daughters (six of whom are members of the church). Sister Roberts was born in Knaresborough, Yorkshire, August 16, 1837; baptized October 1, 1857, at Leeds. Funeral services by Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., assisted by Elder Henry Greenwood. She was a faithful wife, a loving mother, and a true Latter Day Saint, respected by all who knew her.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrepresentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and conclusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah missionaries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

(Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES.

We present the following accumulation of religious news, taken from various issues of the Chicago Tribune. Though some items are not very recent in date, they furnish instructive information concerning the general commotion and drifting of the sectarian world:—

There is a rapidly growing agnostic element in the United States, made up of individuals who no longer belong to any sect, and who may be called "nothingarians," or people without definite religious dogmatic opinions. This element draws quite as large a proportion from the Catholic sphere of influence as from the Protestant, but the Catholic backsliders are not counted out [in church statistics], while the Protestants are.

MOVEMENT AGAINST BIBLE CRITICS.

New York, June 18.—A movement against the recently developed higher criticism of the Scriptures will be begun in this city to-morrow. It will be in the nature of a series of outdoor services under the auspices of the combined churches of the evangelical denominations in greater New York. The services will be held in a big tent pitched on the vacant lot at the corner of Fifty-sixth Street, and Broadway.

The tent will seat 1,500, and when the sides are opened out fully 4,000 people will be enabled to see and hear the services. An organization has been perfected with William Philips Hall as its President, which has a membership consisting of clergymen and laymen from all sects. President Hall says:—

"This movement is for the purpose of stamping out the so-called higher criticism of the Bible, which has for its object the destruction of religious principles and the substitution of a philosophy which has no foundation outside the perverted minds of a few theological pedants."

The movement was started by Dr. MacArthur shortly after Easter, when he began preaching a series of sermons having for their subject "The Inspired Scriptures." The sermons were widely quoted and great audiences gathered to listen to them. The officers of the Anti-Criticism society are:—

William Philips Hall, President; J. L. B. Holme, of Calvary Church, Treasurer; George E. Bemis, Church of the Strangers, Secretary; the Rev. Dr. E. S. MacArthur, the Rev. E. S. Halloway, the Rev. John H. Elliott, the Rev. Leighton Williams, and James Talcott, Executive Committee. Mr. Moody, the great evangelist, will preach in July.

TO REFORM PREACHERS.

New York.—In a new tent at Broadway and Fifty-sixth street, across the way from the gospel tent, on Sunday next, a missionary will begin a month's service for the "salvation of preachers." This novel crusade will be led by the Rev. J. C. Hogan, a regularly ordained preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who two years ago attracted the attention of the whole country by publicly burning his decree of ordination and declaring that thenceforth he should preach to reform preachers.

Mr. Hogan does not believe in "hired preachers," and expresses his sentiments on this subject with a freedom and pointedness which promise to make his first sermon to preachers next Sunday "mighty interesting reading for them."

"It is impossible to imagine the Christ of Paul," he says, "consenting to preach a trial sermon before a pulpit committee in the hope of thereby securing a 'call' from a congregation of politicians to preach at them for from $1,000 to $5,000 a year."

Mr. Hogan believes that a preacher should be independent of the hire of his congregation, and to prove his words he has, with his brother, opened a little temperance restaurant in Eighth Avenue.

A theological right-about-face has occurred in historic Plymouth Church, Brooklyn. For ten years the Rev.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, as pastor, has made steady progress toward liberality in religious views. Famous among his many series of sermons was one on St. Paul, in which he was charged with holding Unitarian views, intermixed with a large measure of mere intellectuality. The situation has had light shed on it by the recent preaching in Plymouth pulpit by Dwight L. Moody, and the beginning last Sunday by the new pastor, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, of a second series of sermons on St. Paul, in which, in the opening sermon at least, a position directly opposite to that announced by Dr. Abbott was taken.

Laymen in the congregation are now foremost in saying that sound Bible teaching, and only sound Bible teaching, is to be the future deliverances from Plymouth.

October 1, 1899.—. . . A straw, and an interesting one as bearing on this point, is interviews just had with twenty leading delegations from Scotland and England to the Pan-Presbyterian council at Washington. Without exception they report the High Church or Catholic party in the Church of England, as viewed by non-Anglican and yet close observers, to be the active and ascendant party, adhering strictly to Bible and church. Without exception also they declare the higher criticism wave in England, as represented by Professors Briggs and McGiffert, Lyman Abbott, William R. Harper, and others here, to have passed by.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 26.—At today's session of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church the report of the Committee on the State of Religion aroused much discussion. The report, among other things, said:—

"The increase in membership has been small. Last year's percentage of gain was so pitifully small that it has been shameful."

There were 954 more "removals" than were reported last year. From the years 1860 to 1865 was the nearest period of the church's history in which so small a percentage of gain appears, while the times of commercial perplexity through which the nation has passed have usually been seasons of exceptional spiritual revival, the report continued. The matter was referred to a special committee.

New York, Aug. 20.—The official figures for the Presbyterian Church in the United States have just been prepared by the stated clerk of the General Assembly, the Rev. Dr. W.

H. Roberts. The following shows the growth in communicants year by year since 1894: 1894, 40,908; 1895, 26,907; 1896, 20,802; 1897, 17,195; 1898, 14,966; 1899, 8,030. The number of baptisms also shows a decrease. In 1894 there were 56,263, while in the last year they were 32,680.

Last year and this there appear the totals of dismissed and dropped, but these do not appear for previous years. The number of these exceeds 50,000 a year. They do not affect the baptisms, nor can they affect the number annually received on confession of faith. The latter were in 1894, 74,826; and in 1899, 48,259.

Of ordained ministers living by the church there are 7,312. The net increase in church membership last year was 8,030. The average number of converts by each minister was 1.09.

A year and a half ago a forward movement was inaugurated, which had for its object the adding of 500,000 new Sunday school scholars to Presbyterian schools, by January, 1901. The time is a little more than half passed. The scholars in Presbyterian Sunday schools for the three years numbered as follows: In 1897, 1,024,462; in 1898, 1,034,164; and in 1899, 1,029,229.

There are 7,657 Presbyterian churches. A net growth of 8,000 members would give to each church 1.06 new members.

M'GIFFERT'S CASE DROPPED.

New York, Nov. 13.—The case of Professor Arthur C. McGiffert, of Union Theological Seminary, charged with holding views at variance with the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church, came before the presbytery to-day and action was taken which probably will result in a reference to the General Assembly, which meets in St. Louis next May. The General Assembly prepared expressly for Professor McGiffert's case an outline of the fundamental principles of the church. These were:—

1. That the statements of the Holy Scriptures are absolutely truthful; i. e., free from error when interpreted in their natural and intended sense.
2. That in Jesus Christ there were two whole, perfect, and distinct natures, the God-head and the manhood being inseparably joined together in one person, without conversion or confusion, so that he was in no particular liable to error.
3. That the Lord's Supper was instituted by the direct and personal act of Jesus Christ, to be observed in his church unto the end of the world.
4. That God justified men by imputing the obedience and satisfaction of Christ to them, they receiving and resting upon him in all his righteousness by faith, which faith they receive as the gift of God.

It is only the last of these statements that Professor McGiffert accepts as it stands. The committee to which the matter was referred made a voluminous report, at the conclusion of the reading of which Professor Francis Brown, the Rev. Dr. Howard Agnew Johnson, and the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke read suggestions in which it was advised that the controversy be dropped.

PRAY FOR HEALTH BY FAITH.

New York, September 3. — A striking feature of the convention of the Christian Alliance now in progress on Nyack Heights is the gathering of devotees of the organization who are in ill health and who believe in the theory of divine healing as set forth by Dr. A. B. Simpson. At the meeting held to-day after the regular tent meeting Dr. Lelacheur spoke on the subject of divine healing. He said that the belief of the alliance followers was directly opposed to that of Christian scientists. He believes that sickness and disease exist, but that those who have faith can cure themselves of bodily ills without the aid of worldly physicians.

"Divine healing is healing through faith," he said, "and those who believe can be healed."

A chorus of "amens" greeted Dr. Lelacheur's remarks. Several persons arose, told of their ailments, and expressed faith that they would be healed. One young girl, who said she was from Ohio, and who looked to be ill unto death, kneeled on the floor and prayed for renewed health.

Several robust looking women testified that they had been cured through faith.

WON BY CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 20.—In the district court this morning the Christian Scientists gained a victory by securing the dismissal of the grand jury indictment of Mary Brockings and Albert P. Meyer on a demurrer. The defendants were charged with violating the State law by practicing medicine without a license. They demurred on the ground that as they gave no medicine and administered no treatment they could not be said to practice medicine.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LEGAL.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 8.—Attorney General Akin rendered an opinion to-day that the medical practice act of 1899 does not prohibit the treatment of disease by mental or spiritual methods by Christian Scientists or others where no medicine is used, and that where a person dies during such treatment it is not an offense under the criminal code of Illinois.

MINISTER DENIES THAT BIBLE IS SACRED.

New York, Oct. 26.—Dr. Briggs was outdone to-night at the Church club, which is composed of laymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church, by the Rev. Dr. L. W. Batten, the youthful new rector of St. Mark's, just here from Philadelphia. Dr. Batten denied that the Bible was a sacred book, or inspired, or the foundation of the church. Many of his hearers applauded him. The topic was the "Higher Criticism."

"I have heard," said Dr. Batten, "that the Bible is the foundation of the church. I, for one, don't want to place my religion in a book. Jesus Christ didn't send his apostles out into the world to write a book. There is no part of the New Testament that was written to become a part of a sacred book. St. Paul had no more idea of making a contribution to a sacred book when he wrote his 'epistles' than any clergyman here has when he sits down to write his sermon. What he did is being kept up in precisely the same way to-day. Where are you going to draw the line? Was all that he wrote inspired, and that of St. Clement not?"

"No man," continued Dr. Batten, deliberately, "can be a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church and believe that the Bible is the foundation stone of the church. The church flourished before the scriptures were thought of or before one got the idea that they were sacred."

CITY EVANGELIZATION.

In the June number of the Missionary Review the editor-in-chief recalls the remark of the late Dr. John Hall, that "in Britain the population is divided between churchmen and dissenters; in America between churchgoers and absenters." The writer makes the confession that there has been little effort on the part of the church to gather in the "absenters" or even to provide accommodation for them. He states that modern churches have taken on the character of luxurious religious clubs. "Can we blame the poverty-stricken multitude for having the impression that they are outcasts from these elaborate temples with their elegant garniture and furniture?" The writer goes on with appreciative sketches of the work of three city evangelists, Chalmers of Glasgow, Spurgeon of London, and Wanamaker of Philadelphia.—Tribune Editorial.

"The lights of Presbyterianism are going out all along the borders of Manhattan Island," says the Evangelist. "Many that have for a long time flamed with steady radiance begin to flicker. At the present rate of progress, in ten years' time there will be few Presbyterian churches left, and those few will be in the prosperous and fashionable portions of the city."

The Holy Synod of Russia has decreed that the insurance companies are not obliged to pay losses incurred during anti-Semitic riots. They did not say the companies are not to pay to Jews, but it is well known that in these riots the Jews only suffer loss, and so, by this measure, Jews alone are afflicted.

CONGRESS AND B. H. ROBERTS.

It is but a few days now until the American Congress will be in session, the one strongest and best representative lawmaking body the world has knowledge of in the government of the nations and peoples of the earth.

Of course, as a matter of interest and necessity, everybody in this union of American States, of which Utah is the youngest and latest received into the sisterhood, is curiously or anxiously expectant to see what the assembled members of the House of Representatives will do in the matter of Brigham H. Roberts, member-elect from the State of Utah, who is an openly avowed polygamist in the practice of plural marriage relations with two or more wives in the State which he has been chosen to represent. Will he be allowed to take and retain his seat in the House? is the question.

We are quite as much interested in the result of the inquiry likely to be made in this case as are any outside of Utah; and possibly for different reasons. The church which the HERALD represents is a practical result and reorganization of the church which was organized in 1830 by Joseph Smith and others; which church by its eldership continued to preach the gospel under a proper confession of faith, until the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, June 27, 1844.

In that confession of faith, as in all the public sermons, articles, and statements of belief up to the death of those two men, there was no teaching, profession of faith, warrant for, or sanction of the doctrine or practice of plural marriage.

B. H. Roberts, however good a man he otherwise may be, claims with others that they are members of the original church and entitled to represent it everywhere; that the men whom the HERALD represents are but a religiously disreputable body of reprobate and apostate men, wholly unworthy of membership in such original church, and not entitled to membership therein.

Our position and contention are that polygamy was not any part of the original faith of the church, and that the introduction of the belief and practice of polygamy or plural marriage into any faction of the divided and scattered believers in the original faith was contrary to the fundamental tenets of the belief, and in contravention of the laws, usages, and customs of the church; and hence fraudulent and vitiating, no matter by whom it was done.

Mr. B. H. Roberts, by the claim made for the sanctity of the dogma and practice of plural marriage, puts an unjustifiable stigma upon the founders of the original church of 1830, and attempts to fasten an unjust reproach upon the Prophet Joseph Smith, and upon all those who were members of the church in his time who have refused to believe the doctrine, including the sons of the prophet.

Had there been no plural marriage it is probable there would have been no need for a reorganization. But as it is, there was necessity, and the Reorganized Church became a fact. It is also a fact that as a church, we are as a body opposed to the doctrine and practice, both of the "ceremony of plural marriage," and the living of a man with more than one woman as a wife at the same time.

In consideration of this attitude we are more than ordinarily interested in the question whether Mr. Brigham Henry Roberts will be allowed to sit in the council chambers of the nation as a lawmaker. And we are also much interested in what Mr. Roberts has to say in his own defense, why he should not be excluded from the council chambers of the nation.

It appears that Mr. Roberts does not deny that he is a polygamist and has been living in domestic relations with two or three wives, whom he claims to have married under the rites of the Mormon Church rules prior to 1890, and that in so doing he was not transgressing any United States law, or doing violence to the real or supposed compact made by the people of Utah and the United States.

Mr. Roberts, in an article lately published in the Deseret News, official organ of the church in Utah, November 23, states:—

It is falsely charged that the Mormon church has broken faith with the government of the United States in regard to polygamy; that is, it is charged that the practice of polygamous marriages has been resumed by the church.

It seems that the Enabling Act demanded that the constitutional convention should provide by ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State, . . . that polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited.

In pursuance of this demand, the convention made such provision, defining it to mean the act of marrying more than one woman.

There were laws on the Territorial statute book punishing "continuous living in polygamous relations after the illegal marriage relations have been formed." This was by both Congressional and Territorial enactments made a misdemeanor.

This law . . . the convention cut in two, and made the part punishing polygamous marrying part of the constitution, while the part of the law defining and punishing continuous living in polygamous relations was discarded. Why? Because there was nothing in the Enabling Act that demanded the disruption of those existing marriage relations which had been entered into under the sanction of the "Mormon" Church. It only required that "polygamous or plural marriages" should be prohibited for the future.

Mr. B. H. Roberts and some others took advantage of this condition of things to continue in the practice of "continuous living in polygamous relations" with two or more wives. And Mr. Roberts says in his plea that

The . . . disrupting and discontinuing those polygamous relations was no part of the compact. It was not demanded by the enabling act. It was not any part of the action of the constitutional convention, but, on the contrary, steps were studiously taken not to disrupt those relations by constitutional provision, by discarding the parts of the anti-polygamy law which would have brought about that result. And, indeed, was not that a just and statesmanlike settlement of the vexed question? What good would come to the people of the United States by a disruption of those plural families? What good would come to either morality or religion to turn those plural wives and their children adrift? . . . And let it be remembered that the home and family of that plural wife was established under the sanction of—to her—a holy church ceremony, and with the approval of all her people. A broad mind and a Christian spirit will approve of the settlement that was made of that question. The fountain of the evil was dried up,* the people of the United States can be generous enough to allow the streams that flowed from it to take their course until lost in the oblivion of death.

Of this plea we notice:—

No demand has been made upon Mr. Roberts, or any other polygamist, to "cast his plural wife or wives adrift," without care and without support and adequate provision and protection. This plea and pitiful presentation of it is a bit of unnecessary sentiment, and ought not to be considered for a moment. It was expected of those men that they should make such adequate provision for their dependent wives and children, in proportion to their ability and property; but it was also expected of them that they should cease "the continuous living with them in polygamous marriage." This was the case in all the cases of arrest, trial, and conviction from 1882 to 1890, when both polygamy, the marrying of more than one wife, and polygamy, the "living in polygamous marriage relations," were crimes punishable by fine and imprisonment.

But, supposing that there were cases in which the husband was the sole breadwinner for all the wives and children, how about those cases in which the mother was the true laborer and support of the family of children—would they be any worse off if left to themselves than they would be with the husband at the table now and then? And such cases are by no means rare in Utah. We remember seeing the wife of an apostle in Utah, who was sick and suffering, and was cared for by the neighbors, one of them a Gentile. In the very nature of some cases, there could not be that near relation and dependence of more than one wife in the household that characterizes the home where one only is the housewife, the wife and companion.

Further than this, Mr. Roberts states that the relation of the plural wife was formed under the sanction of—"to her—a holy church ceremony." And that "a broad mind and Christian spirit will approve of the settlement of that question."

Jesus said, "Why call ye me Lord, and do not the things that I say?"

Jesus told the Church of Jesus Christ, long before the death of Joseph Smith, that it was "lawful for a man to have one wife;" and this was the law from the beginning, hence when Mr. Roberts married more than one, and lived with them as his wives, he was doing contrary to what Christ had said, and it is very certain that, however broad a mind a man may have, if he has the Spirit of Christ in sufficient degree to make him a Christian, he will not approve of a settlement of the question at issue that dishonors the law of God.

It may be pertinent to ask, If the ceremony by which polygamous relations were established between a woman and a man already married was "to her a holy ceremony," could it be so considered to the man? The manner of Mr. Roberts' statement leaves room for a doubt on this point.

If Mr. Roberts and other polygamists had, at the issuing of President Woodruff's Manifesto, taken it as that aged president stated, that he intended it to cover and include the abandonment of polygamous relations with plural wives, and they have lived afterwards with but one wife, there would have been no necessity for a studious avoiding of making any provisions in the Constitution by which "existing relations should be disrupted." And if Mr. Roberts and others who found themselves in such "existing relations" had been contented to deal fairly and honestly with the nation, the people of the United States, and severed those "polygamous relations . . . with their plural wives, though they might still have cared for them and their children, in cases where wives and children were dependent on the polygamous husband and father, this much of good would have "come to the people of the United States." Mr. Roberts could then have been elected to the Congress of the United States, and no one, either in Utah or out of it, would have raised an objection. There would not then have been this festering plague spot to vex any of the people. The people of the United States would then have accepted the protestation made by Mr. Roberts and others, that the Mormons were acting in good faith; whereas, few can and do so believe now. This is "what good would have come to morality and religion;" answering Mr. Roberts' question by wholesome facts; wholesome in the estimation of all good citizens.

There would have been no putting of the Mormons under surveillance to catch them breaking the law; no watching to discover whether the "fountain of the evil" (how true the name given it by Mr. Roberts!) had been "dried up," or had been but partly choked, to break out in evil streams to flow into larger and pernicious pools to stagnate and poison anew the body politic.

Mr. Roberts well writes referring to Utah,

The whole nation has watched her.

Why should not the nation watch Utah? The nation had tried to take measures to suppress the practice of polygamy, marrying and living in polygamous relations, beginning with 1862, and ending in a solemn assurance by the people of Utah that polygamy should be no more, only to find that the faith of the nation had been tricked by a play upon words, which left a few men to continue their "polygamous relations with their plural wives," because of their consciences. Mr. Roberts states it thus:—

And yet all they can truthfully charge is that some men—the number is few and rapidly growing less—who entered plural marriage relations previous to 1890 . . . have felt it morally binding upon their consciences to fulfill the obligations of their marriage vows to those polygamous families.

The right of conscience is of course sacred to every man; but when a man's conscience has been falsely educated, and by reason of this leads the man into practices out of harmony with existing rules of right action, then is the exercise of the right of conscience a wrong to society and to the State. In the light of this view, the United States cannot afford to be generous to the streams that have flowed from this "fountain of" "evil" with national sanction in any form. And Mr. Roberts and all polygamists, practical and theoretical, to the contrary notwithstanding, the permitting of Mr. B. H. Roberts to retain a seat among the nation's lawmakers will be a tacit indorsement of the right of polygamists to "live in polygamous relations with their plural wives" in Utah; and if in Utah, why not in Iowa, Illinois, and the District of Columbia? We believe that there is not a "Mormon," from the venerable President Lorenzo Snow to the humblest elder sent out to preach by the Utah Church authorities, but what would so consider it.

Mr. Roberts states further:—

The struggle for toleration of a plural marriage system, running through half a century, attended as it was with the suffering inflicted upon the "Mormon" people under special legislation and vindictive crusades, with its enforced exile and imprisonment for those who out of an honest thought believed they were but doing God's will—all this, and more, is not forgotten. The "Mormon" people know the views of the people of the United States on that subject without testing it again.

Mr. Roberts should know that the legislation of Congress, yielding to the "views of the people of the United States," was directed at the "continuous living in polygamous relations with plural wives," rather than at the idea of a religious ceremony under the claim for celestial marriage, and that the people of the United States cannot consent that a moiety of "two per cent" of the men of the Utah "Mormon" Church shall now be permitted to live in persistent defiance of the public sentiment of the country, upon the plea of conscience. The fight "for toleration" was made for the right to live with plural wives in polygamous relations, as much or more than for the privilege of performing the "holy ceremony." It was this sort of living that formed the basis of most of the complaint against those "Mormons" who suffered prosecution and imprisonment under the operation of law; and this Mr. Roberts knows. Why then does he, Heber J. Grant, Angus M. Cannon, Paul Poulsen, Joseph S. Horne, and others, continue to test the question of toleration on the part of the people of the United States by continuing in such practice as brings them before the people's courts, not for the infraction of the law in being parties to polygamous ceremony of marriage, but for the "living in continuous polygamous relations with plural wives?" Does Mr. Roberts, do these men, few or many, expect the people of the United States to take such conduct as indicative of their desire to keep the law of the land? Is not the living with plural wives "in polygamous relations" a misdemeanor? Are not misdemeanors infractions of law? Are there not penalties attached to such breakings of the law? Misdemeanors are punishable in Iowa, Illinois, and other States, and are supposed to be in Utah.

If Mr. Roberts' right to a seat in the House of Representatives is contested, either before or after he shall be sworn in, and we understand it cannot be properly done until he is sworn in and becomes a member of the House, upon the charge that he is a polygamist, and living in the practice of it, as the people of the United States understand the term, we hope that he will be able to show that he is not guilty of the charge, and so be left free from moral stain in the eyes of the nation. But, and if, such charge is made against him, and by reason of proofs it is sustained, and he is found guilty of it, then we hope that the House will by a clear vote, not upon party lines, refuse to let him remain as a member of the American Congress.

We deprecate the sort of warfare a part of the religious sects of the period are making upon the "Mormons" and Mr. Roberts, for the reason that it is waged in a decidedly wrong spirit, to our thinking, and recognizes no good in the system, or people, and persistently misrepresents both, which is wrong.

Neither are we in sympathy with Mr. Roberts' fling at the corruptions which he alleges exist in society, outside of Utah, when he alleges that the danger to the American home "does not lurk in the sun-blessed valleys of Utah;" but that "the good people of New York City and other cities can find it much nearer home;" "within any thousand feet square" of said city of New York, "may be found more that menaces the American home than ever existed, or I hope ever will exist in the whole State of Utah."

There may be corruptions in New York and other cities; there may be men living in those cities who disregard laws made for the peace, liberty, and safety of society, and who are guilty of gross immorality; but these men do not ask for recognition and tolerance of their evil-doing at the hands of the nation. They break the laws knowing that they are lawbreakers and are liable to punishment upon discovery and prosecution. Mr. Roberts' plea for safety does not rest upon the supposed or real fact that other men are as guilty as he is accused of being and may be, but lies in the fact of his innocence of wrongdoing if he is innocent, and such innocence must be shown if accusation is followed by evidences of guilt. The plea is born of weakness of defense, or possible consciousness of inability to prove himself free.

Mr. Roberts closes his statement thus:—

It is falsely charged that Roberts was elected to crowd polygamy down the throats of the American Congress and people, to fulfill an alleged prediction of Brigham Young that it would yet be done.

I challenge first of all the existence of any such prediction. Familiar as I am with all that Brigham Young ever said or wrote that is on record, and familiar as I am with his contemporaries, I never saw or heard of any such prediction until this absurd charge was made a few months ago in a New York paper, and repeated recently by a minister at an anti-Mormon meeting in Boston.

Whether President Brigham Young ever stated in plain words that he, or the Mormons would "crowd polygamy down the throats of the American Congress and people" or not, it is certain that he did say what is given below.

It was stated by President Young on the occasion of presenting the, so-called, revelation on celestial marriage, the supposed basis for the practice of polygamy, August 29, 1852, at Salt Lake City, Utah:—

You heard Bro. Pratt state, this morning, that a Revelation would be read this afternoon, which was given previous to Joseph's death. It contains a doctrine, a small portion of the world is opposed to; but I can deliver a prophecy upon it. Though that doctrine has not been practiced by the Elders, this people have believed in it for years. . . .

The Revelation will be read to you. The principle spoken upon by Brother Pratt, this morning, we believe in. And I tell you—for I know it—it will sail over, and ride triumphantly above all the prejudice and priestcraft of the day; it will be fostered and believed in by the more intelligent portions of the world, as one of the best doctrines ever proclaimed to any people. Your hearts need not beat; you need not think that a mob is coming here to tread upon the sacred liberty which the Constitution of our country guarantees unto us, for it will not be.—Supplement to Millennial Star, 1853 (Vol. 15), p. 31.

With this prophecy of President Young to ring in the ears of Mr. Roberts and the American Congress we leave the settlement of the issue of the matter subject to them.

THE Investigator of Stewartsville, Missouri, F. W. Kurk, editor, has an epitome of the faith and a poem on the Book of Mormon, in its issue for November 9, with a breezy editorial of the editor calling attention to it, in the following terms:—

All comes to him who waits, and the kingdom of the Lord's is no exception. So read the tenets of faith of one of this earth's denomination—printed on another page—and be convinced. You may learn something therein. The article in question was taken from an unknown exchange; and, as a great many in this vicinity are highly imbued with thoughts religious, we copied same for their edification.

GENEALOGY OF CHRIST.

SANTA ANA, Cal., Aug. 11, 1899.

Editors Herald:—The following has been handed to me for an explanation. I prefer you to answer it through the Herald. I must confess it is a puzzler to many of us. Without any comment upon my part here it is:—

AN EXPLANATION WANTED.

Matthew 1:8 tells us that when "Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost."

When Joseph and Mary went to the feast of passover they missed Jesus for three days. He had run away. They finally found him disputing with the doctors. Mary reproved him, saying, "Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing."

Now, who knew best, Matthew or Mary, whose child Jesus was? If Joseph was his father, the lack of divine parentage invalidates the whole Christian scheme. If the Holy Ghost was his father, then he was not of the "house of David," which again invalidates the scheme.

In addition to the foregoing, may I ask, Does the first seventeen verses of the first chapter of Matthew establish the lineage of Jesus Christ?

This puzzler is like some other things found in the Bible and history of the world; and rests for its puzzling character on one passage of scripture containing an incidental saying, spoken after the manner of that day as well as this.

Any stepfather or stepmother is called father or mother, as the case may be, in reference made to either by the other. Mary was no exception to the rule. The word "parents" is used in reference to Joseph and Mary in Luke 2:41, and this notwithstanding the historian had stated previously that he was "Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:11).

John, also, in writing of Jesus, makes Philip say to Nathanael, "We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph."

Nathanael, when he saw Jesus, said to him, "Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel." Philip spoke according to the custom of men, Nathanael by the testimony of the Spirit of truth.

Peter called him "the Christ, the Son of the living God," and this by the revelation of God.

Matthew 1:8, has nothing in it respecting Jesus; 1:18 has. The remainder of the chapter shows the divine intervention of the Holy Ghost, to all of which Joseph was a party in knowledge; as the reputed father of Jesus.

Mary, the mother of Jesus, would have used no other language to Jesus upon questioning him when he was found disputing with the doctors, though it does not appear that the boy had "run away," as our querist states, but had been left behind. This is as it is stated in Luke 2:48, but not in Matthew's relation.

It is singular that anyone should think that the question so flippantly raised, "Who knew best, Mary or Matthew," when both Matthew and Luke tell the same story concerning the nativity of Jesus. Matthew starts his book thus: "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham;" making two steps, one from Abraham to David; the other from David to Christ. This query that the Christian scheme is invalidated in either event, i. e., whether Jesus be of David's line, or of divine parentage; for the reason that if the latter, then he is not of David's line; and if the former, is not of divine parentage, is not new, but has been urged many a year ago by skeptics and those disposed not to accept the plain recitals of Matthew and Luke.

The birth of both John and Jesus, one, the son of Elizabeth, the other the son of Mary, had been heralded by angel messengers; one, as stated in Matthew 1:20, informed Joseph beforehand what the child would be and what his name and office; another, as stated by Luke, appeared unto the shepherds and informed them that in the city of David there had been born unto them "a Savior, who was Christ the Lord."

If there were no way of explaining the puzzle of lineage, it is sufficient to know that the prophecies point to the fact of such a character by just such a birth. The attendant circumstances identify the individual, so that in case there is a failure to understand the complexities of human logic and argument, that will in no way invalidate the Christian scheme; or more correctly speaking, the Christ idea.

But when the lineage is fully seen, it shows that following the custom of Jewish families Joseph had espoused Mary, his cousin, daughter and heir of his uncle Jacob, and that both Joseph and Mary were grandchildren of Matthat, whose name appears in the lineage as given by Luke. The two lines of Matthew and Luke both running to David, so that if not the son of Joseph Jesus was still of the lineage of David through his mother Mary.

The lineage as stated by Matthew in first chapter goes to Abraham, the one in Luke goes to Adam. We have no reason, that we know of, to take the one in Matthew to the exclusion of the one in Luke; or to discard Matthew and accept Luke. Both are probably approximately correct, and are given by the two writers according to the register each may have had access to; and the one may have traced through the supposed father, the other through the mother. In either event the lines crossed in such good degree that a common parentage is found for Jesus in both lines. It is not unreasonable to trace through the mother, as custom permitted this in case of failure of succession in the male line. So whether the son of the Holy Ghost, or of Joseph, Jesus was the son of David, of the seed of Abraham, the only begotten Son of God this side of Adam.

We should say then that the genealogy, as given by Matthew, may not fully establish the lineage of Jesus, the Christ.

We accept fully the sonship of Jesus, the Christ. It is enjoined upon us in the Book of Mormon, and reënjointed upon us in the revelations of God to the church; and the conscious assurance to the believer of the fact that Jesus is the Christ is the grand principle upon which the church as a whole is to be built, that the "gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

DONATIONS TO COLLEGE MUSEUM.

The museum of Graceland College has been enriched by a number of valuable donations received from the East, through Bro. A. H. Smith. They are as follows: Two large swordfish beaks—the projections of the upper jaw, which form the distinguishing weapon; from the Isthmus of Panama; donated by Bro. Albert W. Bowers, Roxbury, Boston, Massachusetts. One view of the Boston Public Library; two fine specimens of Australian sea shells, from Sr. Martha Bowers. One silver match safe, two hundred years old, from Bro. Frederick Bertelsen, Boston. #### EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. I. N. White, St. Louis, Missouri, November 29:—

I got to the city last night from Illinois. Been very busy. Remain here two days and go to Barnettts, Missouri, to hold a few meetings and assist Bro. R. T. Walters in straightening up some branch affairs. You will find enclosed the remainder of my manuscript of the White-Braden debate. Have written much of it under adverse circumstances, but I shall not offer any apologies. Others may have done better, but to debate, then preach every night, answer the vast correspondence we generally have, and write up a debate from notes and memory is certainly putting a man's hands full. I am feeling well and am encouraged to know that truth is triumphant. I preach to-night.

Bro. J. D. White sends us the following correction of our mistake in regard to baptisms at Alma, Illinois. We insert with confession of our error, inasmuch as we did Elder Clark Braden wrong:—

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23, 1899.

Bro. E. L. Kelley:—Your favor of yesterday to hand. I reply promptly to correct a misunderstanding. There are two towns in Illinois named "Alma." The Alma where I was preaching and baptized two Sunday is not the same place where debate was held. They are about fifty miles apart.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bishop E. L. Kelley informs us that he received as thank offerings, of Sr. Anna A. Dancer, for the college five hundred dollars. Of Bro. W. P. Pickering, thank offering, for church use, one hundred dollars. For these and other things favorable to the work, it behooves us to be duly thankful. A number of offerings were presented for the Home, the items of which will be noted hereafter, when received.

Marked copies of the present HERALD containing President Joseph Smith's editorial on the Roberts case have been sent to editors of leading secular and religious journals throughout the country. We trust its sentiments may become widely known, to the good of all whom it may concern, nationally and individually.

Pres. A. H. Smith arrived home during the past week, from an extended tour in the Eastern mission. Other recent arrivals include Bishop Kelley and Brn. C. Scott, from Western Iowa; F. M. Weld, from Texas. Bro. Heman C. Smith has returned to Michigan.

The mixed races comprising the Empire of Austria have become so deeply involved in quarrelings growing out of conflicting interests and policies that Emperor Francis Joseph, the aged ruler, is having his hands full to prevent serious race conflicts, of an open and violent character, as in the past. The Emperor is making personal efforts to reconcile the contending factions. It is not believed that the patched up policies resorted to will long keep the contending forces content under one rule. Division and disruption involving the integrity of the realm, are threatened.

Thanksgiving Day services were held by the Lamoni saints who met in a service of fasting, prayer, and testimony from ten o'clock a. m. to noon. A profitable season was enjoyed.

Some matter crowded out by special demands upon our space will appear next week.

Bro. T. R. White, Lowry City, Missouri, was a caller at the Herald Office on the 1st inst.

Washington items report the consensus of opinion that B. H. Roberts will not be sworn in, but that his case will be referred to a committee, before which he will be given a chance to defend himself. Representative Taylor, of Ohio, reports this as the line of action marked out at a caucus of leading Republican members; also that Roberts, in the judgment of the meeting, was "not relieved of the disability placed upon him for violating the Edmunds act;" that he "is ineligible because he has been convicted of polygamy and has served a term in the penitentiary." Congress will meet on the 4th, when the matter will be finally decided.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—PART 3; NO. 4.

In 1835, A. D., the following was addressed to the elders of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, by revelation and commandment:—

Wherefore I, the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow-man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.—D. C. 1:4.

The reason assigned as to why the predicted "calamity" is to be sent on the inhabitants of the earth is, they have, during the dark ages, "strayed from" God's "ordinances," and broken his "everlasting covenant," the gospel covenant. (See Isa. 24:6; Heb. 13:20, 21.)

As late as 1830 to 1835 A. D., they were not seeking "the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall."—Par. 3.

Not only was and is the religious forms and many of the ceremonies of human origin, and hence idolatrous; but the divisions, every one walking in his own way, wrong. And furthermore; men, churches, were counseling, educating, and authorizing their fellow men, and with aid of colleges, universities, and scholastic institutions, and scientific ornamentations, and a pandering to the world-glamor generally, are seeking to build up churches for God, advocating their claims by "the wisdom of the world;" and by these means seeking, as they said, to return to the old paths again, from which they had wandered in the gloomy ages.

But so far as preaching the gospel of Christ and building the church to the salvation of man is concerned, the natural sciences, the precepts of men, the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God. And by attempting to second God's effort at saving men by the gospel,—they add addendas thereto, consisting of scientific and worldly wisdom,—they but nullify the effect of the cross of Christ (1 Cor. 1:17). The learned "teach with their learning," and the power of the Holy Ghost is left out of the account; and flesh—man—is left to glory in man.

For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of [in the estimation of] the world, and things which are despised [by the world], hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence."—1 Cor. 1:26-29.

Paul here sets forth God's way and means of carrying on the cause of Jesus Christ, and gives his reasons why! God changes not. His ways are not as our ways (Isa. 55:8, 9), and hence it was written in the prophets of old, as we have quoted, concerning the great latter-day work (D. C. 1:4), God was to call, and has called on "the weak things of the world," that his "everlasting covenant might be established," and that they "might speak in the name of [or in other words by the authority and wisdom of] God the Lord," instead of counseling; that is, authorizing and qualifying their "fellow-man," simply their equals! But "that the fullness of my [God's] gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers."

The fact that Joseph the Seer moved out in the opening up of this work as he did, and laid the foundation in harmony with God's immutable will, instead of man's evil way of doing a work supposedly for the Lord, is an additional evidence of his divine calling as a prophet.

From the same section of the book of his revelation we quote:—

And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth, I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh, for I am no respecter of persons, and willet that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh, the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth.—D. C. 1:6.

This is a strange statement to have been uttered as a prophecy in the name of the Lord in A. D. 1835, near sixty-five years ago, when public sentiment—both religious and social and political—was that a moral wave of such huge dimensions and grandeur was soon to sweep over the earth through the agency and influence of the churches, the Bible and tract societies, civilization, and scientific advancement, and the missionary organizations, as was calculated to bring about in a short time a universal millennium of peace and glory over the whole earth! How all the ministry quoted the prophecies relating to the reign of peace after the second advent of Jesus, crying, "Peace, peace;" and saying the time is at hand. Editors and book writers, and the poets wrote and sung of the day then at hand, fifty years ago, that "nation would not lift sword against nation, neither should they learn war any more." False prophets joined in the chorus of "peace, peace, to all the earth," and so strong was the peace sentiment that many yet hold to the tradition!

There is no prophecy in the papers, books, or sermons of forty to fifty years ago setting forth a description of the gigantic armed cruisers, such as now reign over the seas. None then dreamed of the deadly repeating rifle of this day. The deadly torpedo; the destructive shell was not conceived of.

Kind reader, does it not now seem to you as though the hour is now at hand when peace is about to be banished from the earth? What means the war cry so characteristic of all the club addresses, political speeches, telegraphic dispatches and editorial predictions? What means the cry of distress arising from the populous of the nations burdened with taxation to support large standing armies? What means this scientific contest that tries the inventive genius to its utmost tension to construct arms offensive and defensive? Are the nations thus bent just to prove Joseph Smith a true prophet? Hardly. Yet his prophetic utterances are being verified!

Of the unparalleled development of evil and abominations among the Gentile nations, of a religious and other character, that is now being brought to light, and the deceptions now being manifest, Joseph Smith was moved to prophesy as follows sixty-eight years ago:—

And it shall come to pass, that there shall be a great work in the land, even among the Gentiles, for their folly and their abominations shall be made manifest, in the eyes of all people; for I am God, and mine arm is not shortened, and I will show miracles, signs, and wonders, unto all those who believe on my name. And whoso shall ask it in my name, in faith, they shall cast out devils; they shall heal the sick; they shall cause the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak, and the lame to walk; and the time speedily cometh that great things are to be shown forth unto the children of men; but without faith shall not anything be shown forth except desolations upon Babylon, the same which has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication. And there are none that doeth good except those who are ready to receive the fullness of my gospel, which I have sent forth unto this generation. Wherefore, I have called upon the weak things of the world, those who are unlearned and despised, to thresh the nations by the power of my Spirit.—D. C. 34: 3, 4.

By the foregoing we learn that while God's marvelous work is being accomplished, and human creeds are having their errors exposed, and human dogmas and false doctrines turned down, and the gospel as restored in its fullness is being proclaimed with authority, and all this by an uneducated ministry (in the popular sense), God's power and wisdom is to be manifested to the faithful, obedient followers of Christ. And desolations are to visit Babylon, and the abominations of the Gentile nations are to be laid open to the gaze of the world, horrified at its awful self! while the wisdom of its wise men perish. Look back some few years since at the Panama canal scandal, the robbery of the treasury for that enterprise in France, that disgraced in the eyes of the civilized world some of her brightest political lights, causing some of them to commit suicide. Bank robbery, and plundering and wrecking, by faithless custodians of the people's hard earnings; burglaries, murders in high and low places, and domestic scandals, till editors get weary and would fain draw the veil of silence over the sickening record of Gentile wickedness. We should not forget the slaughter of Armenians by the callous-hearted Turks, or the late Spanish barbarities in Cuba and Porto Rico. Surely the horrid development of wickedness and abominations that now appall the civilized world is enough to most fully convince us that the prophecy above-quoted is divine, and that the prophet through whom it came was sent of God.

Of the calamities to come on the world through natural agencies, and which at the time the prophecy, through Joseph Smith, was revealed, though it would not have been foreseen by the natural mind of man then, —A. D. 1831 and 1832,—and as an evidence that God had commenced his work unto the saving of the honest from the deceptions now so strong and universal, and after the ministry then sent to warn, preach the gospel as restored, and testify to its verity, to them it was predicted:—

And after your testimony, cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion; and surely men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people.—D. C. 85: 25.

It is almost a work of supererogation to invite the attention of the reader to the items of this prophecy in detail. Earthquakes are occurring to the number of about sixteen per week, according to the latest statistics on the subject; and many of them are visiting parts of the earth not frequented by them before in the history of their occurrence, causing "groanings" or subterranean noises in the earth; and the destructions by many of them are great in the loss of life and property. For some reason, not to be accounted for easily, "the thunderings and lightnings" during the last twenty years have become very terrifying to the people. They fear greatly when clouds and lightnings make their appearance in the heavens; and many seek safety in cellars and caves! Why is this? I, myself, can well remember when such a thing as fear when it thundered was not thought of. But, alas! this prophecy has "come to pass"!

"The testimony of tempests," or destructive winds. Of this we need only mention the dark, roaring, whirling tornado; and the revolving, whizzing cyclone; their unparalleled frequency for the last twenty years; and then, the cyclone caves that are being constructed in many parts of our country. Companies of men are formed in many places to travel and construct these caves of cement and other suitable materials.

"Waves of the sea heaving themselves beyond their bounds." By the tidal wave that swept over the islands at the confluence of the rivers Ganges and Brahmapootra, in October, 1876, attended by a cyclone, it is stated that two hundred and fifty thousand lives were lost. The wave went twenty miles inland, and was twenty feet high.

By the inundation of the waters of the River Nile, in Egypt, the Damietta branch, in October, 1876, one hundred and twenty square miles were inundated, and twenty villages and about one thousand lives lost. Tidal waves have wrought great destruction of life and property at the Island of Saint Thomas, and on the Sandwich Islands, and along the entire west coast of South America, since 1868. The last mentioned, in August of that year, destroyed fourteen towns, six hundred lives, and twenty million dollars worth of property. "All things shall be in commotion," said the prophet in 1832. Are the nations looking with suspense for something, they know not what, to come next? Is it a crisis of the Eastern question? Is it national revolutions in South and Central America? Is it a general uprising over the labor-capital question?

Is a general war among the nations of Europe approaching just behind the political horizon? And will America be involved in it?

Why are the nations looking, trembling, and awe-stricken, while looking at the mysterious uninterpreted handwriting on the wall?

A terrible fate is impending, and wise men cannot decipher it, "and all things" are "in commotion," as with the prophecy. "And the hearts of men" are failing "them for fear," and for looking after those things that are coming. I feel satisfied and will now risk the statement, that men, so far as they have opportunity to learn of this and other prophecies in this article, feel and realize and can see, beyond reasonable doubt, that they are being fulfilled!

In addition to these prophecies given directly through Joseph Smith, and the one from the Book of Mormon, quoted at the head of this paper, we now present another from the Book of Mormon, remembering that that volume was translated from the reformed Egyptian language, as used by the peoples of ancient America, by Joseph Smith, and by him published to the world A. D. 1830. The prophecy reads as follows:—

But behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles; yea, behold, all the nations of the Gentiles, and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land, and those who shall be upon other lands; yea, even upon all the lands of the earth; behold, they will be drunken with iniquity, and all manner of abominations; and when that day shall come, they shall be visited of the Lord of hosts, with thunder and with earthquake, and with a great noise, and with storm and with tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire.—2 Nephi 11: 63, large print edition.

This prophecy is so plain, and being so palpably fulfilled in the present age, that comment is useless. The wickedness and abominations of the nations are before us, and the predicted judgments to follow are beginning to be so plainly seen, so keenly felt and realized among the people, that the prediction needs only to be quoted to be recognized as being true. Our Bible test of a prophet is, "when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him." And, "by their fruits ye shall know them."

There is no necessity from any standpoint, then, that anyone who investigates the claims of Joseph Smith, especially with an open Bible, his revelations and the history and facts of the times before them, be deceived. God always has, does, and will in time to come so develop his work in truth and righteousness, that it will exclude error and deception; and that the honest-hearted, and all who love truth and right, may walk in the light of the Lord unto life eternal.

We have traversed the religious realm but limitedly, in our effort to discover the extent of Deception's Reign, and error's deadly influence, but our effort would have lacked an essential had not the truth and the light been presented in contrast.

The great work of God, preparatory to the second coming of Christ to redeem his waiting people and glorify them, as foretold by all the holy prophets, is now inaugurated and advancing. Divine light is spreading like the rays of the sun at the dawn. The gospel, as restored by the Holy Ghost and the ministrations of angels, is being proclaimed; and by its divine truth, deception, error, false doctrines of men and devils are being laid bare; honest people of contrite spirit are being redeemed and brought to God. God has "set his hand again the second time" to gather his ancient covenant and long dispersed people to the lands of their inheritance. His power is being made bare in the midst of the nations in this "the hour of his judgments," to the preparing the way of the going forth of the warning voice, to the accomplishment of his purposes in this "the dispensation of the fullness of times," that the reign of falsehood and deception may forever end, and the reign of righteousness, peace, truth, virtue, godliness and of Jesus, in glory, majesty, and power, over the whole earth may come in. Amen.

PREREQUISITES TO THE GATHERING.

SOLEMN ASSEMBLY; SCHOOL OF THE PROPHETS; ENDOWMENT OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

DO THESE PRECEDE THE GATHERING OF THE PEOPLE?

Many articles of value and interest have recently appeared in the church papers respecting the "gathering." These articles have very properly directed attention to the necessity of securing means to purchase lands, as already provided for by revelation; to the need of personal preparation on the part of the saints, that they might reach the high spiritual plane essential to a successful execution of the law of consecration; to the advisability of those moneyed men, who are also leading spiritual authorities in the church, setting the praiseworthy example to others by consecrating of their means for the building up of Zion, etc.

The importance of explaining the matters referred to above, and emphasizing them until they are thoroughly understood by the church, is quite apparent. But do not the "solemn assembly," the "school of the prophets," and the "endowment" of the priesthood demand at least coördinate, if not first, consideration? Indeed, I doubt that the former, though much to be desired, ever can or will be accomplished until the priesthood receives the "endowment" promised in the revelations; through, as the writer understands, the training and discipline of the "school of the prophets," in the "solemn assembly." Yet I have seen very little written concerning these latter. I therefore essay the pleasant task of calling them up for consideration and discussion. Concerning

Doctrine and Covenants 92: 2, 3:—

Yea, verily I say unto you, I gave unto you a commandment, that you should build an house, in the which house I design to endow those whom I have chosen with power from on high, for this is the promise of the Father unto you; therefore, I commanded you to tarry, even as mine apostles at Jerusalem; nevertheless my servants sinned a very grievous sin; and contentions arose in the school of the prophets, which was very grievous unto me, saith your Lord; therefore I sent them forth to be chastened. Verily I say unto you, It is my will that you should build an house; if you keep my commandments, you shall have power to build it. . . . Now here is wisdom and the mind of the Lord. . . . Let the lower part of the inner court be dedicated unto me for your sacrament offering, and for your preaching; and your fasting, and your praying, and the offering up of your most holy desires unto me, saith your Lord. And let the higher part of the inner court be dedicated unto me for the school of mine apostles, [prophets?] saith Son Ahman; or, in other words, Alphas; or, in other words, Omegas; even Jesus Christ your Lord. Amen.

Doctrine and Covenants 102: 10:—

Verily I say unto you, It is expedient in me that the first elders of my church should receive their endowment from on high, in my house, which I have commanded to be built unto my name in the land of Kirtland; and let those commandments which I have given concerning Zion and her law, be executed and fulfilled, after her redemption. There has been a day of calling, but the time has come for a day of choosing; and let those be chosen that are worthy; and it shall be manifest unto my servant, by the voice of the Spirit, those that are chosen, and they shall be sanctified; and inasmuch as they follow the counsel which they receive, they shall have power after many days to accomplish all things pertaining to Zion.

From the above citations we learn:—

1. The Kirtland temple was built by command of God.
2. For an endowment of the priesthood therein.
3. That "the higher part of the inner court be dedicated unto me for the school of mine apostles" (prophets?).
4. Through their endowment and sanctification "they shall have power after many days to accomplish all things pertaining to Zion."

This last clause shows the absolute necessity of a special endowment, in order that God's servants might have "power" "to accomplish all things pertaining to Zion." This leads us to inquire further in regard to the ##### NECESSITY AND NATURE OF THE ENDOWMENT.

Doctrine and Covenants 102: 3:—

Therefore, in consequence of the transgression of my people, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, that they themselves may be prepared, and that my people may be taught more perfectly, and have experience, and know more perfectly, concerning their duty, and the things which I require at their hands; and this cannot be brought to pass until mine elders are endowed with power from on high; for, behold, I have prepared a great endowment and blessing to be poured out upon them, inasmuch as they are faithful, and continue in humility before me; therefore, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season, for the redemption of Zion.

Concerning the necessity of the endowment, the above should be conclusive.

Regarding its nature, in its most sublime and significant aspect, this heavenly endowment of power contemplates that those who are pure in heart shall behold the Savior! As proof of this I cite Doctrine and Covenants 85: 18, 19:—

Therefore, sanctify yourselves that your minds become single to God, and the days will come that you shall see him: for he will unveil his face unto you, and it shall be in his own time, and in his own way, and according to his own will. Remember the great and last promise which I have made unto you ["that you shall see Him"]: cast away your idle thoughts and your excess of laughter far from you; tarry ye, tarry ye in this place, and call a solemn assembly, even of those who are the first laborers in this last kingdom.

For statement of Joseph the Seer respecting endowment, please examine Church History, volume 1, pages 602-3, from which I briefly extract:—

But if we are faithful, and live by every word that proceeds forth from the mouth of God, I will venture to prophesy that we shall get a blessing that will be worth remembering, if we should live as long as John the Revelator; our blessings will be such as we have not realized before, nor in this generation. . . . All who are prepared and are sufficiently pure to abide the presence of the Savior, will see him in the solemn assembly.

As this all-important "endowment," so essential to the ultimate success and triumph of God's kingdom in the world, is to be bestowed in a solemn assembly, we may, with pleasure and with profit, inquire of the revelations of God for information respecting it and the "school of the prophets," with which it seems to be closely allied.

SOLEMN ASSEMBLY AND SCHOOL OF THE PROPHETS.

Doctrine and Covenants 43: 3:—

And now, behold, I give unto you a commandment, that when ye are assembled together, ye shall instruct and edify each other, that ye may know how to act and direct my church how to act upon the points of my law and commandments, which I have given; and thus ye shall become instructed in the law of my church, and be sanctified by that which ye have received, and ye shall bind yourselves to act in all holiness before me, that inasmuch as ye do this, glory shall be added to the kingdom which ye have received. Inasmuch as ye do it not, it shall be taken, even that which ye have received.

Doctrine and Covenants 85: 20, 21, 23, 36, 37, 45:—

I give unto you who are the first laborers in this last kingdom, a commandment, that you assemble yourselves together, and organize yourselves, and prepare yourselves, and sanctify yourselves; yea, purify your hearts, and cleanse your hands and your feet before me, that I may make you clean; that I may testify unto your Father, and your God, and my God, that you are clean from the blood of this wicked generation, that I may fulfill this promise, this great and last promise which I have made unto you, when I will.

The promise referred to here evidently is, "you shall see Him" (verse 18). That this promise might be fulfilled, the Lord commands them to "call a solemn assembly," and proceeds to give them full instruction how to prepare for such assembly, as also in verse 21:—

Also, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth. And I give unto you a commandment, that you shall teach one another the doctrine of the kingdom; teach ye diligently and my grace shall attend you, that you may be instructed more perfectly in theory, in principle, in doctrine, in the law of the gospel, in all things that pertain unto the kingdom of God, that is expedient for you to understand; of things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of the nations; and the judgments which are on the land; and a knowledge also of countries, and of kingdoms, that ye may be prepared in all things when I shall send you again, to magnify the calling whereunto I have called you, and the mission with which I have commissioned you.—Verse 21.

Therefore, tarry ye, and labor diligently, that you may be perfected in your ministry, to go forth among the Gentiles for the last time, as many as the mouth of the Lord shall name, to bind up the law, and seal up the testimony, and to prepare the saints for the hour of judgment, which is to come; that their souls may escape the wrath of God, the desolation of abomination, which await the wicked, both in this world, and in the world to come. Verily, I say unto you, Let those who are not the first elders, continue in the vineyard, until the mouth of the Lord shall call them, for their time is not yet come; their garments are not clean from the blood of this generation.—Verse 23.

Call your solemn assembly, as I have commanded you; and as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith. Organize yourselves; prepare every needful thing, and establish a house, even a house of prayer, a house of fasting, a house of faith, a house of learning, a house of glory, a house of order, a house of God.—Verse 36.

Therefore cease from all your light speeches, from all laughter, from all your lustful desires, from all your pride and light-mindedness, and from all your wicked doings. Verse 37.

And ye shall not receive any among you into this school, save he is clean from the blood of this generation; and he shall be received by the ordinance of the washing of feet, for unto this end was the ordinance of the washing of feet instituted.—Verse 45.

Briefly recapitulating, the solemn assembly and school of the prophets were commanded of God.

1. "That ye may know how to act and direct my church how to act upon the points of my law and commandments, which I have given."

From this consideration alone, do we not need a solemn assembly "just now"? Let an extract from Herald editorial of September 6, 1899, page 570, which only represents the well-known fact that there is lack of unity, answer:—

This is the problem, and how shall it be solved? Bro. Hilliard has one way; Bro. T. W. Williams has another; and several have others, all more or less differing one from another.

2. "To prepare the saints for the hour of judgment, which is to come; that their souls may escape the wrath of God." If such "judgments" and "wrath" were imminent in 1832, when this revelation was given, are not these perils still impending?

Is the ministry of the Reorganization "perfected;" or any number of us, so as to "bind up the law and seal up the testimony," and prepare the saints for and deliver them from the threatened "judgments" and "wrath"? Can we become perfected, as contemplated in these revelations, if we treat lightly the things which we have received? (D. C. 83:8.) Or, rather, will we not, like the first organization of the church, "remain under this condemnation until they [we] repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written"? Would it not be doing "according to that which is written," to establish "a house of faith, a house of prayer, a house of fasting, a house of learning, a house of God"? If not, let some of the wise men of Zion show, by the revelations of God or other competent authority, that the Lord does not require this at our hands! Until this is shown, I insist that the "school of the prophets" and the "solemn assembly" should be absorbing themes of the priesthood, and that the members thereof should begin at once to prepare themselves, as the revelations of God direct, for their covenying and establishment. If we defer or neglect the personal preparation essential to admission in the school of the prophets, and so necessary that the "solemn assembly" may be recognized of God, it is possible the Lord will speak to us concerning them as he recently did respecting another matter:—

It is the will of your Lord and your God that this should be done. It should have been done before, but the adversary hath hindered, desiring to prevent the success of my work in the earth.—D. C. 122:13.

What hinders us from at once establishing a school of the prophets? Let us see. We have already learned that God commanded the building of the Kirtland temple, with the express design that the "higher part of the inner court be dedicated unto me for the school of mine apostles" (D. C.

92:3). Therefore, we do not lack a building in which to hold the school.

Have we any candidates who are prepared to enter this school? Again we appeal to the revelations. Doctrine and Covenants 85:19, 23, 45:—

Tarry ye, tarry ye in this place, and call a solemn assembly, even of those who are the first laborers in this last kingdom. . . . Verily, I say unto you, Let those who are not the first elders, continue in the vineyard, until the mouth of the Lord shall call them, for their time is not yet come; their garments are not clean from the blood of this generation. . . . And ye shall not receive any among you into this school, save he is clean from the blood of this generation.

Has the Reorganization any "first laborers in this last kingdom" who are "clean from the blood of this generation"? If so, we do not lack pupils with whom to supply the school. If not, does not the duty of the hour imperatively demand that we begin at once to make the necessary preparation; to study closely, in this connection (D. C. 85:19-21, 37), to "cease from all light speeches," "excess of laughter," "all lustful desires," "all pride" and "light-mindedness;" to "cast away your idle thoughts," and not forget to "continue in prayer and fasting from this time forth"?

The writer is thoroughly convinced that the "school of the prophets," the "solemn assembly," and the "endowment" of the priesthood are matters demanding primary and present consideration. Nor do I believe that any effort or combination of efforts to redeem Zion, let them be made when, where, or by whom they may, will ever meet with any success worth naming, unless God's plan is fully honored. And do not the matters briefly examined in this article constitute a part and an all-important part of God's great plan for the redemption of his people? What think ye?

AN ELDER.

Letter Department.

WATERFORD, Ont., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—This is the first time I have written you this year. Constant employment in other branches of the work, and the knowledge that other pens can do better work than mine, have been the reasons for my silence. But several complaints have reached my ears, like this, "Why don't the Canadian missionaries write to Herald and Ensign?" Some tell me they have dropped these papers, because there is no Canada news in them; others say they have written, and sent newspaper clippings of importance, but they have found their way to the "waste basket." All this serves to injure the subscription list, and undoubtedly hurts the work in general.

Feeling that I am guilty of some of the above charges, I here and now attempt to bring forth evidence of repentance for past negligence.

I am glad to inform you that the work in Canada is increasing spiritually, numerically, and financially. A goodly number have been baptized. The branches, in the main, are enjoying the blessings of heaven, and tithing and offerings were never so great as this year. I have not heard a complaint regarding a single missionary now acting in the mission, and the local staff, with but few exceptions, are doing splendid work.

We have had four conferences this year. Three of them were the largest I ever attended in this mission. I have been called upon to preach dedicatory sermons in three new churches since June; all deeded to the church, free from debt. Two more new brick churches are being built. One will be opened in about a month, the other before spring.

Personally, I am well and happy. On the go as wisdom may direct. Have done a great deal of newspaper work in defense of the work, and in reply to attacks made upon it. By request of several I send you some letters for publication. Some points therein are thought to be helpful and worthy of preservation. Should you decide they are unworthy of publication, please return them, as I wish to have them, as they are the only copies I have.

While in London (my home) on four different occasions, during the famous street car strike this summer, I was called up to speak on five different occasions. If newspapers are correct I addressed over thirty-five thousand people in those four meetings. Twice I spoke in the grand opera house, twice in the largest building in the city, a skating rink, and the day of the great mob, when the mayor and alderman with the city police could not disperse the mob. The mayor stood in his carriage amid the wild, surging mass of humanity, when I was called for. The mayor and alderman requested me to mount the carriage, saying, "Elder Evans, for God's sake get up here and talk, or there will be bloodshed!" God was with me then; I never felt better. My little speech won the crowd, and they retired in peace. I regret to add that the mob, stung to madness by cruel injustice, reassembled the same evening, doing great damage. Our work was brought before the public in consequence of my speeches, as it never was before. Since then when in London my meetings have been largely attended.

I have been requested to become a candidate for alderman in January, but have declined. O. W. Cambridge, our worthy Sunday school superintendent, is out for municipal honors, and, I think, bids fair to win. I may add that since October 1, fifteen have been baptized in London, the result of the good conduct of the saints in general, and especially the splendid work of the London branch officers.

In closing let me say, I arrived in Waterford on 17th. I have preached every night, twice on Sunday, also a funeral sermon Tuesday afternoon. At every meeting the church has been full, and several times standing room was taken up. Since my debate with Rev. Wilkinson in 1888 the saints then and since baptized have paid rent for the church much of the time.

Old Bro. Smith, whom I baptized in 1888, was proprietor of the church. Last Monday, while talking with him, he suddenly looked up and said, "Elder Evans, if you will promise to have the church veneered with brick, and fixed up, I will give you a clear deed." "Done," said I, "let's be off to the lawyers for the deed." So saying Brn. Smith, Yerks, and self were soon at the lawyer's, and now the church is the property of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It is a frame church, in good condition, size 32x42, stone foundation, and the lot is 35x105, a corner lot on Main Street.

The repairing will cost about two hundred dollars. Already I have carpenters, stone masons, brick masons, laborers, painters, and teamsters who have signed to do the work free, also free sand, and yesterday I had ninety-two dollars on my list for the material. So goes the good work. Brn. Yerks, Longhurst, Garvey, Deueling, and R. C. Evans are the committee on church repairs, and we will see that all material is on the ground by early spring, and have it ready for dedication in June, (D. V.)

I expect to baptize a few, and will leave for other parts on the 29th.

Yours in the conflict,

R. C. EVANS.

Editors Herald.—In your issue of October 18, page 676, Elder William Newton, of the missionary staff, now in this country, has given public expression to his opinions of the past and present action of the local ministry of the church in this corner of the vineyard, from which we gather that he was much disappointed at the manner and method adopted by us in the transaction of the business at our recent mission conference.

He considers that we—that is practically an overwhelming majority of the elders present (our brother and his supporters being in a small minority on the vital questions before the body)—were wanting in humility, striving for mastery, determined to have our own way, and "not subject to the powers sent of God," finding fault with us because some of our members expressed the opinion that there was no further need for the church to send missionaries from America; further charging the leading local ministry with having neglected the flock at Broadclist and Plymouth ever since he, Elder Newton, left there in 1889, asserting that none of the local ministry had from that time paid any attention to them "in any shape or form."

The foregoing seem to us to be very serious charges, and if true would very properly subject us to forfeiture of the confidence and esteem of all right-minded men and women in the church.

We, therefore, as the chief representative local ministers in this country ask for space in our respected church paper, the Saints' Herald, to reply to the aspersions cast upon us and our administration of the church affairs by the statements made in the letter before alluded to.

In regard to our manner and conduct at the mission conference we are not conscious of any wrongdoing. We did not think that a manly and intelligent use of the reason which God has given us—used according to our best understanding of what is right and just—was wrong. If this manner of conducting ourselves is wrong, we have yet to learn it.

We had thought that the days of blind "obedience to counsel," "follow your file leaders," and "unquestioning obedience" to the powers "sent of God," had passed away forever, except so far as they are represented by the church of Brigham Young. We have, however, expressed our opinions, and as such they are upon record, and we propose to stand or fall thereby, even though we may be accounted by some as unfaithful ministers of the Church of Christ.

The charge of neglect of duty, in the cases of Plymouth and Broadclist, we deny, and call our brother's attention to the fact, which he must have known when he wrote the charges against us, that Broadclist and Plymouth are both outside of district organization, and consequently outside of district control. Therefore, whatever responsibility there may be attaching in this matter, it must of necessity attach to mission authority, as having charge of the whole.

We have it upon the brother's statement that he left here in 1889, at which time the presidency of this mission was vested in local ministerial authority, and so continued to be exercised after his departure until the appointment of Apostles Gillen and Griffiths by the General conference of 1892. Therefore, the responsibility has been in the hands of the American missionary appointees from that time to the present, and we assert that during this period of local control, the saints of Broadclist and Plymouth were in perfect harmony with the mission authority, and reported themselves to the mission conferences without any complaint whatever having been made of want of attention or neglect.

In 1892, as before stated, this responsibility ceased, so far as local ministerial supervision applied, and has been since that time to the present with those designated by Elder Newton as "the powers sent of God."

In concluding this part of our subject, we present the following queries for consideration:—

1. During the eighteen months that Elder Newton has been in this country, since his appointment, twelve of which he says he has labored at Plymouth—within fifty-five miles of Broadclist—has he at any time shepherded or visited the "sheep and the lambs" that he alleges we have so much neglected at Broadclist? If not, why not?

2. Why does he so persistently charge us with neglecting Broadclist and Plymouth during 1889, '90, and '91, and yet make no mention of the neglect of the American missionaries from 1892 to 1899?

3. Have not Elders Caffall and Pitt both visited Broadclist? and in effect reported, "No chance for preaching."

4. Is it not passing strange that Elder Caffall never mentioned anything about the licenses alleged to have been withheld from the officers of the branch at Broadclist?

5. From what quarter does Elder Newton get his information? Is it from the saints at Broadcliff, or where?

And now just a word or two in reference to American missionary laborers in this country.

The incidental manner in which our brother mentions this matter, and the laborious way in which he afterwards endeavors to prove his case by making unfounded accusations against the "local ministry" is, to our minds, much to be deprecated, and can but result in injury to himself and loss to the work which has been established here by dint of labor and sacrifices of local laborers, male and female, past and present.

We cannot say that we have approved of all that our American brethren have done in their missionary capacity while among us; yet we do say that with one or two notable exceptions they have won our confidence and esteem, as representatives of the church, and we feel the better for having met with them, and we earnestly commend their example to Elder Newton and others for their imitation.

On the other hand, we have no sympathy with busybodies and meddlers, even though they may claim to be "the powers sent of God," but who are to the local presiding ministry a source of weakness rather than "pillars of strength." Of such as these we say, "There is no need for them" within the branches and districts represented by your brethren in Christ.

YOUNGSTOWN, Iowa, Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—One month ago to-day I left Caney, Kansas, where I had lived for nearly eleven years, and started for this place. Part of my family came by railroad; myself and two boys traveling by team to Mound City, Missouri, where I had a brother and sister whom I had not seen for years. There I found Bro. Robert Ross anxiously waiting for me to do some preaching in the Christian church four or five miles north of the city. Meanwhile he had written to Bro. J. Arthur Davis to come there. I began meetings in the above house, preached four or five times before Bro. Davis came, then preached once or twice after. At first the people did not turn out very well, but we noticed an increase nightly, and last Sunday night the house was nearly full. I left on Tuesday morning, Bro. Davis to continue. We had the best of order; some going out from the city to hear what we had to say. Some appeared to be interested, and I think if Bro. Davis will continue there, he will reap a few sheaves and remove much prejudice, as many were heard to say, They preach the Bible. One man told me at the close of Bro. Davis' second effort, that the preacher hews to the line.

I see by late Herald that Bro. A. M. Baker had been to Caney, looking after the Brighamites there. Those wily chaps came the Saturday before we left. I did not hear of them until late Sunday, and we were all ready to start on Monday. I could not go to see them, and they could not be coaxed to come and see me. I was not afraid of their hurting anyone, as I had preached all summer in the schoolhouse they were to occupy. Had I been there, Bro. Baker would have had one more to preach to. As soon as I can see the branch officers in Des Moines (only five miles away), I will begin weekly meetings here in the schoolhouse, as I would rather wear out than rust out. W. F. CLARK.

ARGYLE, Wis., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—I left Janesville, after enjoying a profitable time with saints and coworkers in the field gathered in reunion, and arrived at Bro. Gregory's, by whose assistance I a few days later obtained a hall for preaching in a village by name of Woodford, where I commenced meetings October 7, preaching nearly every night, and had good interest and very good attention, although the attendance was not very large except Sundays.

Sunday, October 22, I brought my meetings to a close there with an attendance of sixty, believing it wisdom to do so, as the turnout during week evenings was rather small. Some became much interested and invited me to come again.

After remaining with Bro. Gregory a few days, I commenced another series of meetings in Stewart, or better known as Postville, Thursday evening, October 26, and here I preached every night till November 12 with fair attendance and good attention. One lady played the organ for me, while some of the young people made up the choir, and they faithfully performed this task every meeting as cheerfully as if they were paid for their work. This was very kind of them, all being strangers to me, not any of them being members of the church, and I felt sorry to part with the people there without bringing any into this glorious work, which brings us so many blessings.

The people of Stewart treated me more than kindly, made me welcome to their homes and to all their comforts, so one could not help but feel at home or sad to depart. Long shall their kindness be remembered, and I hope that the seed sown will develop and bear fruit in the future. God's Spirit was with me during all the meeting, imparting knowledge and wisdom, while unusual liberty was enjoyed in presenting the word and thus made the work a pleasure rather than a task.

After preaching twenty sermons, I bade those kind people good bye, receiving many good wishes and invitations to come back. After the last service a collection was taken up for me, whereby was realized seven dollars and twenty-five cents, which was a good help to defray future expenses.

Leaving Stewart in order to go to Yellowstone, my way led through the old historic "Zarahemla," now Blanchardville, where the Reorganization experienced some of its infant's days; how this world is full of changes, and thanks be to God it is so. At Yellowstone I preached a few sermons to the saints in a private house, as no other place was obtainable. While there I went out one day to secure a Norwegian schoolhouse and to my great astonishment received permission to occupy, but alas! that honor did not last long, for as soon as the first meeting was over I was kindly informed that I could not hold more meetings, it being against their (Lutheran) religion to attend the meetings of other denominations. Having secured another schoolhouse six miles west of Yellowstone, another series of meetings will begin to-night, and I hope the duration of these meetings will be more lasting than the other.

I feel happy in this latter-day work; it grows brighter day by day, and my only desire is to become more useful in rescuing those whose minds are blinded by Satan and his host of coworkers. May the time speedily come when all the slumbering ones will awaken and do their duty, so that the world may behold the light of Zion as the only harbor of safety. In bonds,

P. MUCEUS.

LOGAN, Iowa, Nov. 27.

Editors Herald:—Last night I closed a series of meetings at this place, being assisted part of the time by Brn. James A. Donaldson and George Montague, during which time twenty-one services were held. A good attendance was present the most of the time, and at the closing service the largest attendance of all. It is said by those best acquainted with the work there that the most interest was shown that ever has been during a series of meetings at this place. While none were baptized, several are near the kingdom. This branch is in the best spiritual condition at the present time it has ever been in to my knowledge.

Bro. W. R. Davison and family met and partook of sacramental offerings yesterday morning previous to their departure for their new home in Virginia, about thirty miles from Washington, D. C., where Bro. Davison has a father living, to which place they go to-day. They will be missed from the assemblies of the saints and from the business circles of Logan, Iowa. Previous to coming here I held a week's meetings at Bigler's Grove, where I found a number of good, honest, and liberal-hearted people, several of whom are young in the work, yet in practical saintly duties in their homes are far in advance of many older and more experienced saints. While these people have passed through a severe spiritual trial, yet God is giving them grace to endure with fortitude with the prospect that all will recover their devotion for the work, with added knowledge by reason of their experience that will make them more useful in the service of God; for this I labor and pray.

At Sloan where tent meetings were held previous to the reunion at Woodbine, and a series of meetings have been held in the Christian church since reunion, there is some little interest. During the latter series of meetings I held there I baptized two, one who had formerly been a member, but for some cause, the cause not shown, the records said "cut off," and her faith was such that she could not rest until she had her name reinstated; hence was baptized, and continues to rejoice in the faith and love of her youth. The other sister baptized had been raised a Catholic, but some years ago became convinced that that church was in error, and not finding a church whose teachings could be fully believed by her, entered into membership in the M. E. Church, but was always seeking more light from God than she found there, and through prayer was instructed largely in the Scriptures, and would often inquire of the people with whom she then associated why they did not believe more of the Scriptures. More and more did her dissatisfaction increase until in seeking the Lord to lead her to his people and church if it existed on the earth she received this answer: "Would you believe if I would show you the truth and my people?" She answered, "I will, Lord." This occurred not long previous to the tent meetings being held there by Bro. H. Case and myself. She said she little thought that the Latter Day Saints were God's people, but when she came and heard she was shown clearly that these were the people of God, because of which she entered into service with God and his people, even before she was baptized, taking an active part in all the services, when her former church associates tried to persuade her otherwise. But her faith was in God, and like a rock stood the test of persecution. Since her baptism she has been to see the pastor of the church of which she was formerly a member, and he was anxious to know why she had left the M. E. Church and became a Latter Day Saint. She told him because she was led by the Lord to do so. This seemed to surprise the minister, but he recovered sufficiently to tell her she was deceived, and hoped to see her back in the church some time.

Since these baptisms, the Christians have had a series of meetings conducted by an evangelist by the name of Morrison, of Des Moines, who represented that he had been an evangelist for about thirty years, and who during his meetings seemed to take especial pains to contradict our faith, and during a private conversation stated that he did not debate with women privately, but if the sisters would furnish a representative, he would debate. The conversation was not had with any idea of a debate, but for the purpose of better understanding his views, and to drop a testimony if thought advisable. It is possible if the minister did not say what he did not mean that there will be a discussion in the near future.

The missionaries, Brn. H. Case and George Montague, are active and rejoicing in their work. Bro. C. Derry has been ailing for some days, but was again in the active work yesterday, and will continue this week, going to Carroll to-morrow. Bro. A. M. Fyrando is slowly gaining, being able to be at the services yesterday forenoon. May God speed his recovery.

Local laborers are becoming more active, and perfect harmony exists between the local and general church laborers, and the prospect is brighter for this district and mission.

I only need to say that all are kind to me, both in ministering to my temporal wants and spiritual encouragement, except a few indifferent ones, whose indifference causes sadness, and a slight spiritual depression, because of the loss that is accruing to them, and the disadvantage it is to those who will work, by reason of this indifference and inactivity. Sunday school and Religio departments are progressing nicely, yet not so rapidly as we had desired. Much good is being accomplished by these departments, but much more good could and would be accomplished if those who are in authority in the branches, and the parents, who should have more interest than anyone else, would give these departments their support as they could and should. Hope the day will soon come when this will be the case.

I go from here to assist with a series of services to be held in Missouri Valley, beginning last night, to be conducted by Elder George Montague, who though upwards of the three score and ten mark, is yet young in spirit, and gives his support practically to both the Sunday school and Religio departments; in fact this can be said with much satisfaction of all the missionaries in this mission.

I go from there to begin a series of meetings about eight miles east of Woodbine. My interest in this work increases, if possible, as I increase in years.

With bright hope of the ultimate triumph of Zion's warfare, and the soon coming of Jesus Christ, I am,

Your brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

"I know that love never is wasted,
Nor truth, nor the breath of a prayer;
And the thought that goes forth as a blessing
Must live as a joy in the air."

BLACKFOOT, Idaho.

As the good book tells us not to light a candle and put it under a bushel, I feel it my duty to write, first, to thank Sr. Emma Burton for the good words she has written to us from time to time in Beatrice Witherspoon. Often when I have read her good words, and the Spirit has borne witness of the truth, have I sought the seclusion of my chamber to ask God's blessings to attend you, dear sister, and lengthen your days, that you might long be a light and blessing to us. My husband and children, and others not of the family, have been greatly benefited also. It was your writings in Beatrice Witherspoon that first touched me deeply and caused me to take an interest in the Reorganization. I was a disgusted Brighamite, almost an infidel. I have better health since joining the church, and the darkness and unbelief have been greatly removed, thanks to our heavenly Father for such great blessings; and I thank all who have prayed for me.

Once while reading in the Book of Covenants, the darkness was all removed, and I said to myself, "O how good of the Lord to open up my understanding in this way! O how thankful I am! Now I will be no longer dull, but will be like other people, and be able to converse intelligently, and especially on the scriptures." But the day following I was no wiser than usual. Then, wondering if I had offended the Lord, the answer came to me, "The light was given to show me the covenants were true and of God." And remembering that I had at times felt a little troubled on some things it contained, I was deeply sorry for my want of faith, and truly thankful for the Lord's goodness to one so unworthy.

Once, after reading a letter in the Herald, from Bro. Charles Derry, the feeling of love and pity filled me, and I thought, O if I only could do something to cheer and comfort! So sitting down, wrote a letter to a brother and sister. But at second thought decided not to send it, but went into my bedroom with the letter in my hand, and kneeling, prayed the Father that an answer to it might appear in the Herald, either the next week or the one following. The next week I was disappointed, but the week following the answer was as perfect as if the sister that wrote it had read my letter. Her name was Amanda Woods, if my memory serves me right. The Heralds we send to others as soon as we read and study them, but I am correct about the name, I think. And how the Spirit thrilled me as soon as I began to read that letter.

Bro. Graves wrote a letter in the Herald, in which he referred to revelation, section 116. As I sat pondering about it, the light came, telling me it was all right, the Lord knew best; and thoughts ran through my mind like this: How much of the white man's blood had been shed to break the chains that bound his colored brother, and all things would work together for good in the Lord's own time.

If this letter is printed, think not, dear saints, that I write with a boastful spirit; but only wish to tell what has been given to me, that it might be a comfort to others. May the Lord's blessing rest upon all of us, from our beloved Bro. Joseph down to the least and lowest member in this church, is the prayer of your sister,

JANE HEATON.

LORD, LET THY LIGHT SHINE.

O Lord, let thy light shine;
O let it shine brightly,
To lighten, I pray thee,
This pathway of mine.
O fain would I rise
O'er the darkness that binds me,
And dwell in thy glorious
Light, pure and divine.

How oft doth the clouds
Gather darkly about me;
How dense is that darkness,
No light can be seen.
Then away to my chamber,
In solitude kneeling,
I pray for the light,
For just one single gleam.

And oft while I kneel there,
The tears start unbidden;
They seem to refresh,
Like a cool summer rain.
But I wipe them away,
That each trace may be hidden,
For the clouds have blown by,
And I'm happy again.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

FROM THE FIELD.

In a circular letter sent by the General Superintendent to the several district superintendents of the association is the question, "What are you doing to increase and maintain an interest in the Sunday school work in the several schools of your district?" We frequently hear from district superintendents giving us the work they have done for their schools and sometimes commenting upon the success it has been. Most of the work is done by circular letter. An object lesson, an outline for review, a few suggestions upon teaching certain lessons, etc., are worked out by the district superintendents and sent to the workers of the several schools for their use in the school. A large majority of what we have received possess a good amount of real merit. We present herewith one of these circular letters sent out by Bro. F. M. Pitt of Chicago to the workers of the Northern Illinois district. It is one of four sent me at one time. He sends them in the same manner to the schools. This is what he is doing "to increase and maintain an interest in the Sunday school work." We can all do something if we only try.

THE BOTTLE SERMON.

Have five good sized bottles, with three quarters inch ribbons of different colors tied around the necks and bottoms of the bottles. Keep the bottles hidden from the audience until you bring them out one by one in the illustration. Give them names as follows:—

Mr. Christian.
Mr. Moralist.
Mr. Hypocrite.
Mr. Passion.
Mr. Sinner.

1. Mr. Christian. Pure, clear water in the bottle. No matter how much he is tossed about by the storms of the world, he always appears bright and sparkling and pure,—always the same.

2. Mr. Moralist. Water with clean sand in it. The sand having settled at the bottom of the bottle is hidden by the ribbon. Moralist looks as well, dresses as well, is worth as much, and claims to be as good as Christian. But when he is tossed about, "turned upside down" by adversity or trial, we can see the impurities in his life.

3. Mr. Hypocrite. Water with mud in it. Mud settles at the bottom of the bottle. Hypocrite claims to be all right, good as other people, etc. But trials, disappointments, etc., reveal his impure nature. Matthew 13:47, 48 verses, in the parable of the net cast into the sea shows that the bad as well as the good will go into the net. Because bad people are in the church, some excuse themselves for not joining, which is a great mistake. Let us suppose a case. A fine pickerel and a catfish are swimming side by side in the stream, when they come to the net. The catfish goes in; the pickerel says I won't go in that net, because the catfish is there. The net is drawn to shore, the bad fish is thrown back into the stream, and so they remain together after all.

4. Mr. Passion. Clear water. To the cork of this bottle a small piece of sponge is fastened with a pin. The sponge is saturated with aniline (red ink may be used). When the bottle is shaken, the water comes in contact with the sponge, and the aniline gives it a scarlet color. Passionate or intemperate men, when shaken up, get red in the face, get angry, drink, etc., and thus their lives are spoiled.

5. Mr. Sinner. Put a drop or two of the tincture of iron, and a drop or two of the solution of nutgall in this bottle. This will make the water as black as ink. Have this ink made before the illustration is given. To the cork of this bottle, with a pin, fasten a small piece of sponge thoroughly saturated with oxalic acid. Be careful not to let the black water touch the sponge until the moment you make the application of your lesson. (The oxalic acid comes in a small box; place some of it in a separate small bottle, pour some water in it, and make a strong solution, and then apply it to a sponge. The safest way is to have no cork in the Sinner bottle while talking, and then when ready to make application, take the cork from the smaller bottle and put it in the Sinner bottle, and shake as per instructions below.) This man is better than the hypocrite, because he is bad, but he does not pretend to be good.

He makes the acknowledgment that there is good in Christianity, and he has been listening to the gospel as preached, and it appeals to his reason, and he decides that he will embrace the truth. He realizes that he is a sinner, and he desires to have his sins washed away. In the sermon he has listened till he finds repentance necessary. He deserts his bad habits, stops smoking, using tobacco or strong drink, and in this way he truly repents of all his sins. At this juncture you might tear the ribbons from the neck and bottom of the bottles; if they are stuck on with paste they will stick, showing how difficult at times it is for us to leave off sin. He has heard about the power of God to cleanse him from all sin, and he desires to yield obedience to that principle which will cause his sins to be remitted. Now put your cork with the oxalic acid in the bottle, and lay the bottle in the Bible, and then apply the different texts that remission of sins is obtained by baptism. While you are talking, toss the Bible with the bottle on the inside to and fro. The acid in the sponge will decolorize the ink in the bottle, and when you open the Bible the blackness will be gone. Apply this to the condition of every sinner who will truly come in contact with and obedience to the word and Spirit of God. (Some may call this a trick, but you can explain it to be a simple explanation of what scientists can do with a few chemicals.) You do not understand the law or the principle that caused that black water to turn light. You simply complied with the instructions and the result followed. Neither do we know how baptism can wash away sins, but we know that God has given those instructions, and the desired results are sure to follow, and he will transfer our hearts and lives, which sin has blackened into clean hearts and pure lives.

Christian—Gal. 5:22-26; Matt. 7:24-36. Moralist—Acts 10. Hypocrite—Matt. 13:47, 48. Passion—Prov. 23:29-31. Sinner—Acts 2:38; Acts 22:16; Mark 1:4. Above acids can be purchased at any drug store, or for fifteen cents I will send all that is necessary for the different illustrations.

NORMAL WORK FROM OCTOBER TO FEBRUARY, 1899.

HENDERSON, Iowa, Oct. 4, 1899.

Desiring to see the workers of the district more familiar with the Bible, we have decided to change the plan of work, and have outlined a course of study for the next quarter. Peruse carefully and prepare yourself to answer, at the close of next quarter, a list of questions based on the subject matter therein contained. One session of the next convention will be devoted to the normal work.

NORMAL OUTLINE.

4. Name eighteen of the most important authors.

5. What three versions of the Scriptures are now in common use?

This is a work that not only the teachers and superintendents should give their attention, but all the adult members as well. Even some of the youth will find it interesting. We wish each of the superintendents to see how many of your members you can get to do this work, and report to the February convention.

The following-named members prepared papers and speeches: Sarah Parker, Peter Anderson, L. G. Gurwell, Lilly Munns, Elmiah Miller. Sarah Parker, treasurer, reported $5 74 on hand. Adjourned to meet on Friday before the next conference.

PRIMARY LESSON ILLUSTRATION CARDS.

They are outline pictures, representing the incidents of the lessons, to be colored with crayon or water colors, by the children. Full directions for their use will be given in the Quarterly. These cards will be furnished FREE to every school, as many as they have of primary pupils. As there are more primary children than the number of *Primary Quarterly*s used, it will be necessary for each school to send an order for the number of cards needed to supply each primary pupil.

Orders should be sent at once, as these cards are for a part of the lessons of first quarter of 1900. Let superintendents and secretaries, as soon as they see this announcement, take the necessary steps to send the order at once. It is desired to make a thorough test of the practicability of this feature of work.

Send orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa. 4

INSTITUTE NOTICE.

Clinton district Sunday school association will hold an institute with Veve, Missouri, Sunday school, beginning December 15, and continuing over Sunday. Friday evening will be devoted to Religio work, in charge of Lebeck local. The program for Saturday is 9:30 prayer service; and ten, qualifications, duties, and responsibilities of superintendent, assistant, and secretary, librarian and libraries. Two o'clock, visiting committees; teachers' meeting; intermediate class drill; how to use Quarterlies and other helps; needed improvements. At seven, teachers and teaching; primary class drill; what we shall teach and how; our duty to the Sunday school.

Sunday, at ten, Sunday school; 2:30, Sunday school and Religio prayer meeting, and at eleven, and seven, preaching on the subjects of Sunday school and Religio.

The Sunday school district officers have set apart December 10 as a day of fasting and prayer, that we may be prepared to do acceptable work, and that we, through the institute, may become more thoroughly acquainted with Sunday school work, and be able to help bring the work to a higher standard. We hope all Sunday school workers in the district will observe this. Let all study the subjects to be presented and come prepared to talk on them. We expect several from the ministry to be with us, and would be glad to see all. Those coming by rail will leave the train at Dederick, on the Walker and El Dorado road, and go to Bro. Hardacre's, where they will be met by conveyances to take them to the church.

THE WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

Mr. Braden, as usual, tried his hand on the Inspired Translation. He was more determined to down it than at the other debate; but he went down hard and abandoned the fight when only fairly commenced. He held the book up and said Jo had put in whole verses and almost chapters in places in order to get in his doctrine. As to the gospel and Christ being preached before Christ's first coming, I met him as I did in the Orchardville debate, and did it successfully; which also was an eyeopener to the hearers. As to whole verses and parts of chapters being added in a few places, I showed by authenticated writers that the oldest manuscripts were minus whole verses and parts of chapters, that never had been fully supplied. This could not have been known to the young, illiterate Joseph Smith when he was translating the Bible, and for him to have staggered on to such a thing and supplied the text would be harder to believe than it would be to believe he was a prophet of God.

To prove that the original text had been tampered with, I quoted from the Gospel Advocate, Braden's own church paper, as follows: "In the very best manuscript (the Sinai) Tischendorf indicates five different classes or kinds of variations. On this point all the authorities, whether translators or manuscripts, need careful editing; they all stand on precisely the same ground. Now apply these principles to a single case by way of illustration. The last chapter of Mark's Gospel, from verse 8 onward, is omitted in the Sinai Manuscript and the Vatican Manuscript, but is contained in the Alexandria. . . . It is a remarkable fact, not to be lightly estimated, that a whole column of space is left blank in the Vatican Manuscript, as if the copyist had intended, but for some reason had omitted, to fill it with the text."

Professor Smyth says in his "Old Hebrew Documents": "The ancient scribes, too, had a peculiar trick in writing their manuscript. . . . If they were near the end of the line, and the next word was a little too long, they took it down unbroken to the next line below. But it would not do to leave the blank thus caused at the end of the line. So they filled it up with some other letters, usually those at the beginning of the long word that had been moved down. . . . There was just a chance, of course, that a stupid copyist might sometimes blunder over these, especially if the letters could by any possibility be mistaken for any part of the previous word, and so errors might arise in the manuscript." (Pp. 18, 19.) He says further: "There is no need of further pursuing this subject. The reader who remembers his own frequent slip and erasures, even in writing an ordinary short letter, will easily think of many ways besides in which errors may arise, and will see at once the improbability of the Old Testament manuscripts having escaped absolutely flawless through a transmission of thousands of years. If, even with all the advantages of the printing press and its multitudes of trained proof-readers, many discrepancies exist between the different editions of our Authorized Version, how can we wonder that it should be so when every copy had to be made by the slow laborious process of writing it out letter by letter? True, God might have quite obviated this danger. He might have miraculously preserved the original autographs of the inspired writers as a standard by which copies could be corrected forever, or he might have directed the minds and fingers of Bible-copyists before printing was invented, and of printers and compositors in after days, so as to secure this perfect transmission. If he had seen fit thus to make fallible men infallible, of course he would have done so. But it does not seem to be God's way anywhere to work miracles for men where their own careful use of the abilities he has given would suffice for the purpose. And the Old Testament text is no exception to this rule. . . . Never did any writing come down through the ages so pure as we have reason to believe did our Hebrew Bible; but that it has come to us word for word as it left the hands of the inspired writers long ago, the evidence will by no means allow us to believe." (Pp. 20-22.)

Mr. Braden presuming upon the ignorance of the assembly, said, the original Hebrew and Greek manuscripts did not read like the Inspired Translation had it. I asked him to produce an "original" manuscript, would he? A scholarly man like him, and a president of a college, should know what he is talking about, and especially when before such an intelligent crowd of people as we have here. Now, since he did not seem to know that there were not an "original" manuscript in existence, I would take the liberty to inform him what Bible students said about the "original." Prof. J. Paterson Smyth, LL. B., B. D., in his treatise on a "Perplexing Discovery," says: "That the oldest Hebrew manuscript in existence is of date little earlier than William the Conqueror!" He then states: "Let us realize what this means. (1) That of the early Old Testament books, written more than 3,000 years ago, we have not a single copy 1,000 years old; or, in other words, that the earliest Old Testament manuscript in existence is as far from the time of the original 'writers as would be a New Testament manuscript written to-day." (p. 31.) I told Braden he would have been just the very man to have assisted the seventy or eighty scholars who got up the Revised Version of the Bible—he could have given them the original! And what a pity it was that he had not been there. This was a hard lick for Braden while in the midst of students and professors of the Alma College. I here showed the great conflict going on in the world over translations, higher criticism, etc., and quoted Professor Roberts, who was one of the committee that assisted in the Revised Version, upon the impossibility to produce a correct translation of the Bible without divine help. He says: "We now conclude, humbly commending our labors to Almighty God, and praying that his favor and blessings may be vouchsafed to that which has been done in his name. We recognized from the first the responsibility of the undertaking; and through our manifold experience of its abounding difficulties we have felt more and more, as we went onward, that such a work can never be accomplished by organized efforts of scholarship and criticism, unless assisted by divine help."

This very thing was recognized by young Joseph Smith, more than fifty years ago; hence he went forward and accomplished that work, and honest critics have admitted his translation superior to any that have as yet appeared before the public. At this juncture I produced some of the differences that are found in the text of the Inspired Translation and that of some others.

I can say of a truth: There is no need to be timid in introducing and defending the Inspired Translation. You have only to study it thoroughly, and post yourself upon the mistakes of the old manuscripts, and ask and attempt to answer the questions of how and where did we get our Bible? Braden saw he was losing his influence with the assembly, as they commenced to wonder if it could not be just possible that Joseph Smith was a true prophet? Now, Braden took the grounds that all true prophets worked miracles. (Unless it was John the Baptist; this one he excepted, as I had caught him on that in my Eldorado Springs debate.) Here I read slowly and carefully from Hayden's History of the Disciples, page 250—Braden's own book—of how Mr. Smith had walked across the floor and taken one Mrs. Johnson by the arm and said: "Woman, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, I command thee to be whole;" and the woman's stiffened and rheumatic arm was instantly healed. The historian says it is a "well attested fact." Mr. Smith did this in the right name and in the right way. It was in harmony with the "law and the testimony" and attested as a "fact" by Braden's own historian. This was met by Braden with his old white sow story; but he failed to get the laugh that he expected, and I simply scorched (scalded) Braden over his "old white sow." I made miracles performed in the sacred name of Jesus Christ such a solemn and sacred affair that even Braden's own people felt ashamed of their man.

Braden has before this made all manner of fun about people pretending to have the Holy Ghost, and getting happy, etc. He called it "hypnotic drunks." I told Braden we had a few of his class who called in to see the disciples on the day of Pentecost, who classed their Holy Ghost influence as "drunks." Peter and the disciples were on one side, while those that accused them of being "hypnotic drunks," were on the other side; and so it was now. Braden and his kind were loud professors, and as Timothy would have it, "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." So it was with him and his followers; while other good honest-hearted people dared to obey God's word, and in keeping with his own promise to them they enjoyed the presence of the Holy Spirit, Braden was here to tell all such that it was nothing more or less than a "hypnotic drunk" they had gotten on! About this time it seemed every soul that ever knew anything about the Christian religion, was ready to drop Braden. I ask, Why not? The closing article in this debate will reveal the secret.

We had a long siege on Isaiah 29. Braden read between the lines to make his point; and when I accused him of it, he blustered forth and said: "It's a falsehood!" The chairman now for the first time had to call order. I sat down to await the decision of the chair; but seeing he was not posted thoroughly upon the twenty-ninth chapter so as to tell what Braden had read into it; I arose and said: "Mr. Chairman, I will read one verse as Braden read it, and if he says he did not read it so, I will not press it." This was agreed to and I read: "Stay yourselves ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and wonder; cry ye out, and cry: all ye inhabitants of Jerusalem are drunk, but not with wine; all ye inhabitants of Jerusalem stagger, but not with strong drink." Braden cries out: "Don't it mean inhabitants of Jerusalem?" "That's not the point," says I. "Did you read it in there, is the point to be settled?" After some parley he said: "I read it in there because it should be there." The chair then ruled Braden the one out of order. Braden's attempt was to confine the whole fulfillment of this twenty-ninth chapter to Jerusalem; hence no "sealed book" could be found in America. But, when I explained his "inhabitants of Jerusalem" to be "all nations" it put a different light upon it. Braden then positively denied of there being any book spoken of. All there was of it, was "That the dark benighted state the people were in, was like the words of a sealed book to them—no book at all there." I read: "And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned." Once more he denied a book being spoken of and I read: "And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book," etc. Braden then saw he was down and in his next speech he held up the Bible and said: "There is the book, that Isaiah is speaking about." Braden was reminded of the dutchman's flea; and I asked: Which position will you stick to? No response! Braden is always found writing at such times; and by the way, he writes pretty often.

Now, since I got Braden to take the position that the Bible (Old Testament) is "that sealed book," I commenced to press him to show who was the "learned" man that said he could not read a sealed book? And who was that man that claimed to be "not learned;" the one the "book is delivered to?" Braden saw the predicament he had gotten into, and to extricate himself says: "The whole twenty-ninth chapter is a parable!" I shoved him along the line for an application of his "parable." If ever a man was put to, hunting some way to get out of a bad job Braden was. Who ever heard before of the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah being a parable? Don't get flustered, readers; Braden pretends to head the list in the Campbellite Church, as being the only debater that can down Mormonism. Don't let it be forgotten in all other debates, with his church, that Braden says, "That sealed book of Isaiah, twenty-ninth chapter, is the "Old Testament;" and the whole of the twenty-ninth chapter is a "parable." Braden now attempts to apply his "parable." The "Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field" (v. 17); was when Cyrus, King of Persia rebuilt the temple, and placed the Jews back into their lands. The time that the land lay in a state of "desolation" was the seventy years of Jewish captivity; from the time the king of Babylon took Jerusalem till the recapture by the king of Persia. The reader will remember that Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon took Jerusalem 606 B. C., and Cyrus, king of Persia, wrenched it from the Babylonian power 536, B. C. Braden was never able to tell when God would commence a "marvellous work among this people" (v. 14); and that just a "little while" (v. 17) before Cyrus the king of Persia took Jerusalem from the king of Babylon. Nor could he tell who the "learned man" (v. 11) was that could not read a "sealed book." Nor was he able to point out the "unlearned man" (v. 12) whom the Lord delivered the book to.

I pressed Braden so hard along this line that it was really amusing to see how the learned president of the Alma college had to dodge and twist to evade my questions. He changed his position so many times, that I told him he was making a regular turning lathe out of himself; and I advised him to put up his sign somewhere here upon the wall, that "all kinds of twisting and turning done here, by Clark Braden." (Applause.) At this stage I introduced Martin Harris' testimony, how he took the words of the Book of Mormon (the "sealed book") to Professor Anthon, a learned linguist of New York, and that this celebrated linguist said, "I cannot read a sealed book" (v. 11). Also read Professor Anthon's own testimony given in Howe's work against the Mormons, of how some years ago a plain, apparently simple-hearted farmer called on him requesting him to decipher some peculiar, crooked characters which the farmer claimed had been transcribed from a "gold book consisting of a number of plates of gold fastened together in the shape of a book," etc., all of which was in the possession of a young man (the unlearned Joseph Smith) who had some kind of spectacles (Urim and Thummim) to assist him in translating the book. I asked: Can it be possible, that this young, illiterate, backwoods boy, who did not know a noun from a verb, and hardly understood even the first rudiments of our common arithmetic, and could scarcely write his own name, and knew as little about what was in the Old Testament, as we know of the man in the moon; yet, was so shrewd, sharp, and tricky, as to outstrip the learned professors and presidents of colleges, in so completely fulfilling the stipulations found in the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah that it now puzzles the learned to answer his exegesis of that chapter, even so much that the wisdom of the wise perish just as is noted in the fourteenth verse! This alone, without another argument would prove to me that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God.

I showed how Braden's "parable" of the seventy years' captivity failed in its fulfillment of turning "Lebanon" into a "fruitful field," since the twenty-second verse says: "Jacob [the Jews] shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale;" the very thing that happened to Jacob's posterity at the siege of Jerusalem seventy years after Christ; which has continued with the Jews up to this time; but the day commenced to break to them, right away after the Book of Mormon came forth; since 1830 Jacob has received more or less favor at the hands of the different nations, until he is now occupying some of the most important places among the nations, and the veil that caused his face to wax pale, is now lifting, and will continue to do so until God's prediction of him is fulfilled, as found in Romans 11: 26: "And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." And then, "Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale." I showed this agreed with the Lord's saying in Luke 21: 5, 6, 24: "And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said, As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. . . . And they [Jacob] shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." This is a glorious future for the Jews and the very thing they are now preparing for.

I showed as to the fertility of Lebanon spoken of in Isaiah 29: 17, having its fulfillment at the time of Cyrus' captivity in 536 B. C., the condemnation of sterility had not yet reached Lebanon; and did not, until more than seventy years after Christ. Quoted Isaiah 32: 13-17 to show what sterility was meant to overtake the Jews' land; to wit: "Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers; yea, upon all the houses of joy in the joyous city: because the palaces shall be forsaken; the multitude of the city shall be left; the forts and towers shall be for dens forever, a joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks; until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest. Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness, and righteousness remain in the fruitful field. And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever." When the "sealed book" of Isaiah 29 came forth in 1830, Lebanon was yet under condemnation, and as barren and unfruitful almost as a desert. But, Isaiah says in 29: 14, God will proceed to do "a marvellous work;" a "sealed book" shall be given (v. 12) to an "unlearned" man, and in a very "little while" Lebanon would be turned into a fruitful field. The young, illiterate Joseph Smith, now comes with his masterly tact, and produces a "sealed book," and sends the "words of the book" to Professor Anthon, the learned linguist of New York, to read; and Anthon says he cannot read a "sealed book" (v. 11); but acknowledges in his letter to Mr. Howe, who was getting up a work to down Mormonism because his wife had accepted the truth, that a "simple-hearted farmer called on him;" yes, with the "words" of a "gold book consisting of a number of plates of gold fastened together in the shape of a book." The "simple-hearted farmer" wanted him to "decipher" these "crooked characters;" but this farmer says Professor Anthon wanted him to bring the "book;" but he is informed part of the book is sealed, and he dare not bring it, and this "simple-hearted farmer says Professor Anthon says: "I cannot read a sealed book;" the very thing Isaiah said the "learned" would say (v. 11). But now comes the sticker to all of this. The young illiterate Smith, and Isaiah too, makes God say (v. 17), that in "a very little while," after this "sealed book" comes forth (in 1830) he (God) commences a "marvellous work" (by calling this young illiterate Smith to the prophetic office). He (God) will turn Lebanon into a fruitful field.

Here I told Braden I would be forced to connect God and Smith together in getting up the "most stupendous fraud of the nineteenth century," i. e., to let him tell it. But here is a prediction made by Isaiah; and Isaiah claims it was given to him of God; and it was to the force that some "unlearned man," was to have a "sealed book" given him; and through this means God was to commence a "marvellous work;" and in a "little while" afterward he would turn Lebanon into a fruitful field; and that this illiterate Smith comes with what Braden calls a "stupendous fraud," a veritable book—the Book of Mormon; and now God locks hands with Smith in his fraud, to make it stick; and in 1852-53 he raises the curse from the land of Lebanon, only twenty-three years—the "little while" after the "unlearned man" tells to the world that he has found a "sealed book."

I acknowledged there might be a possibility of Smith being sharp enough to deceive men and women; but the idea of him having power with God to lift the curse from the land of Palestine that had been there for near eighteen hundred years, on purpose to make his deception or what Braden calls a "stupendous fraud" stick, is a little more than sane men and women can believe! So God must be connected with this affair in some way, or else Smith had power over the elements to move all nature. Which? Here I read the following statements to show how Palestine—Lebanon—was in 1830, when the "sealed book" made its appearance through young illiterate Smith:—

"Eighteen centuries of war, ruin, and neglect, have passed over it. Its valleys have been cropped for ages without the least attempt at fertilization. Its terraced walls have been allowed to crumble, and its soil has washed down its ravines, leaving the hillsides rocky and sterile. Its trees have been cut down and never replaced. Its fields have been desolate. Its structures pillaged and all its improvements ruthlessly destroyed. A land of ruins without man or beast. Everywhere on plain or mountain, in rocky desert, or on beetling cliff, the spoiler's hand has rested."—McClintock and Strong's Encyclopedia; Art. Palestine.

I argued this was the condition that Lebanon was found in when Joseph Smith in 1830 commenced his work. Smith stoutly affirmed that Palestine would become a "fruitful field" in a "little while"; but he went to his death in 1844 by a ruthless blackened mob without seeing any change take place in the land of Palestine. At the time there was bitter opposition regarding the land ever being restored to its former fertility. The saints that took Smith for a prophet still cling to the promise and as stoutly maintained it would be thus restored in fulfillment of Isaiah 29:17. They patiently waited; and now I introduce history to show what has been done since Mr. Smith's tragic death. I shall first read from the Christian Evangelist for January 19, 1893, Mr. Braden's own church paper:—

"We have noted the completion of the railway from Joppa to Jerusalem. This is apparently only the beginning of a new era for Palestine. The land that has been buried in slumber for eighteen hundred years is awakening. . . . Is Palestine to enter upon a new era of prosperity? That now seems probable. Will it be under Gentile dominion, or 'are the times of the Gentiles fulfilled?'"

We shall now introduce the findings of a "prophetic conference," that was held at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, July 15, 1895, in charge of the Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist denominations, who were represented by such men as Prof. W. G. Morehead, of Xenia College, and the Rev. Dr. W. J. Erdman, of Philadelphia. Also Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, F. H. M. Parsons, Prof. A. J. Stiffer, of Crozier Seminary, and the Rev. Dr. James H. Brooks, of St. Louis, and Prof. E. F. Streater, of New York, as was reported in the Chicago Inter-Ocean for August 17, 1895.

In speaking of the Jews and Palestine they say: "Another sign is the return of the Jews to Palestine. There are more of them there now than there were after the return from the Babylonian captivity. . . . A sign which is undeniably miraculous, too, is that Palestine is again becoming fruitful, after years of desolation, during which scarcely anything would grow. It was under a curse and the curse is being lifted."

I read the following extract from Rev. Hugh Stowel, in Scottish Presbyterian Magazine, for 1853: "I know not whether you are aware of the fact, but it is one that is fully authenticated, that the 'latter rain' returned last year to Mount Zion—a rain that had been withheld, so far as our information goes, ever since the dispersion of the people. And he who has brought back the 'latter rain' in its season, will also give the 'former rain' in its season; and these returning showers of earthly blessings are the harbingers of returning showers of spiritual benediction from on high."

This should satisfy the most skeptical that God has had a hand in turning Lebanon into a fruitful field, since the day that Joseph Smith published to the world the Book of Mormon.

That there may be no escape from this conclusion I wish to introduce one more witness, Louis Van Buren, who visited Palestine in the year 1867. He says: "It is a fact that the rain and dew are restored; recently, in 1853, the former and latter rain were restored, to the astonishment of the natives." Now, I have this to say: Since there has been such a wonderful fulfillment of Isaiah 29 in Mr. Smith's work, is it unreasonable to claim for him what he claimed for himself—"a prophet of God." If the Book of Mormon is not that "sealed book," and Smith is not that "unlearned man," I ask Mr. Braden to produce the book and the man, that will come in harmony with the text. Will he do it, and forever set at rest this controversy over Isaiah 29. This Braden never attempted to do; and I stoutly affirmed that I would still be found advocating that Joseph Smith was the "unlearned man," and the Book of Mormon the "sealed book," till he or some one else should produce a better solution of that problem than did Mr. Smith. And I reminded Braden that it was too late in the day to expect a fulfillment of it yet in the future, as it was to be a "little while" before Lebanon was turned into a fruitful field, which thing had occurred in 1853. He, and all others must look back of that date to find the man and the book. Braden was anxious to get away from the 29th of Isaiah, and made several attempts, before he succeeded. It worried him, and well it might.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

Dear Saints of Little Sioux District:—As the year 1899 is nearly closed, we appeal to all who love the Lord and his work to respond in tithes and offerings. Every member of the district should have their names enrolled on Bishop's books. Is your name written there? We recently heard a good old brother testify in social service, and among other things said, "When I was in the West not long ago, a Brighamite put this question to me, 'If you are the true church, and the "gospel is to go to all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come," how are you going to get in there? What are you doing as a people in tithing? You are just as well to do in proportion to numbers as we, but look at our missionaries how numerous, and the wealth of our church.' He said, It struck me hard."

Well I hope it will strike you in like manner. If you drink coffee, and get out, what do you do? Buy more. All other luxuries or necessities in same way. Why? Because you want it. Now you can begin to tithe yourselves if you want to. If you love the things of "taste" or "comfort" more than to aid in spreading the gospel, your spiritual stomach is out of fix, your appetite is waning, your digestive apparatus fails to assimilate, and you will lose strength.

Enough has been said about scriptural texts by many writers; but don't talk consecrations and gathering, if you haven't faith to give one tenth. I believe tithing to be a stepping-stone, a sort of leaven, to get us to be more willing givers, and be ready to comply with the whole law.

One brother in our district has paid about $1,200 tithing—feeling he could not pay more and call it that, because he had tithed all. He now sends in freewill offerings to the amount of $50. He has learned obedience, loved its results, and "can't quit." God bless him, and bless us all.

We have the following sub-agents in branches: Woodbine, S. B. Kibler; Logan, Lillie A. Williams; Missouri Valley, A. L. Parker; Mondamin, William Stuart; Little Sioux, G. M. Scott; Persia, Joseph Seddon; Moorhead, Sarah Hoffman; Smithland, F. E. Cohrt.

So it need cost you nothing to remit; or if you choose, send direct. These will be continued another year, unless a change is necessitated. We hope to give each branch separately in annual report. I hope the Lord may continue to bless this department as he has done. It requires $164 per month, or $1,968 annually to keep up allowance of elders' families, and about $50 annually for poor. This has been met. $565 of debts paid in last three years, and now we can easily do this for 1900, and send a few thousand to Bishop for aid of other districts. We write mainly because physical debility has hindered our visits to you, but ask prayers to be given health to see you, and 'put you in remembrance."

Yours for Zion's upbuilding,

A. M. FYRANDO.

Box F, MAGNOLIA, IOWA.

TO THOSE CONCERNED.

This is to certify that Elder W. E. Peak who, since the conference of 1898, has been acting as sub-missionary in Southern Nebraska district, has been transferred to Detroit, Michigan, owing to a disease of the throat. It was thought a climatic change might be beneficial. We much regret the circumstance necessitating the change, depriving us of his valuable labors, and trust he may accomplish good in that part of God's moral vineyard. A few more changes in our ministerial force and we shall be like Tom Moore, who was left alone in his glory. Until General Conference of 1900, I may be consulted, if a necessity exists, on church matters, at 306 Oak Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

JAMES CAFFALL,

Missionary in Charge.

CHALLENGE.

At close of debate, and before taking my seat, I read and put into the hand of Elder T. H. Chambers, the following challenge: "To Elders T. H. Chambers and Jacob N. Larsen: I herewith invite and challenge you or either of you to repeat this debate at Higbee and Bevier.

Respectfully,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

MOBERLY, MO., Nov. 11, 1899.

Bro. J. A. Tanner authorized me to pledge in behalf of Bevier, a free house, lighted and heated, the attendance of an audience, and free board during the discussion. I gave due notice that wherever in my field the Utah elders attempted to preach, I would use all honorable means to have the people understand the difference between them and the Reorganization. No answer as yet.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

HIGBEE, MO., Nov. 24, 1899.

DIED.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refutation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrep-resentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his associates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and con-clusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah mission-aries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.)

Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES.

We present the following accumulation of religious news, taken from various issues of the Chicago Tribune. Though some items are not very recent in date, they furnish instructive information concerning the general commotion and drifting of the sectarian world:—

Bishop Fallows, Chicago: "Abraham in his going out had to leave his ancestral faiths as well as his home. The call of God to his church is to go forth to the larger and grander views which the life and teachings of the Christ are continually unfolding to the reflective mind. The Bishop of Ripon, Dr. Boyd Carpenter, predicts the religion of the future, on account of the going forth of the men who are God-inspired and God-led, will be neither Protestant nor Catholic, but Christian. "The dogmas of the churches which have separated communion from communion will fall off as autumn leaves before the fresh winds of God."

"But I wish to emphasize the truth that in thus going forward there will be no need of going out of the one living church. Bishop Brooks was asked why it was that with his liberal views he could remain in the Protestant Episcopal Church. He replied: 'Every time I get a new idea I do not think it necessary to found a church upon it.' Yet, sometimes there must be separation from a particular communion in order to secure the larger union of Christian believers. And there will be a 'United Christian Church,' in spirit at least, from the going forth of worshipers out of the narrow bounds of their limiting beliefs."

THEOLOGIANS AND CHRISTIANITY.

What proof of the existence and of the laws of that unseen and unseeable world is there or can there be unless it is furnished to men by inspiration from God? Obviously God alone can tell of it, for he alone knows of it. When, then, priests of religion and teachers and expounders of theology themselves deny practically any heavenly inspiration and insist that what assumes to be such is nothing more than a fabrication of human authorship—incredible often, imaginary, contradictory, childish in the palpability of its errors—what are men who are not professional theologians going to do? What else remains for them except to express dissent or to say, with the agnostic, that "I do not know, and as it is impossible for me to know or anybody to tell me, I dismiss the whole problem as insoluble and all consideration of it, therefore, as hopeless waste of thought?"—New York Sun.

BAN ON CHURCH LOTTERIES.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—Judge Barker, of the Criminal Division of the Circuit Court, created a stir today when in instructing the May grand jury he said:—

"It is public gaming that we want to prosecute. Otherwise there would be trouble among our best people and you would indict a majority of the community.

"I want you to make no distinction between church lotteries conducted for charitable purposes and the lottery man who is out for the money there is in it for himself. I will sanction the prosecution of any church operating this form of gambling."

SIX-YEAR-OLD BOY EXHORTER.

Trenton, N. J., July 23.—A sudden outburst of religious fervor on the part of Charles Tisher, a six-year-old boy, has aroused the people of Groveville to a high pitch of excitement.

Young Tisher discourses on the Bible with the understanding of one far beyond his years and the eloquence of his exhortations have aroused many men and women who consider him inspired.

At the age of five years the boy began to attend the Sunday school connected with the Groveville church and from the first he took a deep interest in his lessons.

The Bible was read to him by his parents and the boy memorized whole chapters. He surprised his parents by getting up in prayer meeting one night and exhorting those who had not confessed Christ to do so.

DESPLAINES CAMP MEETING.

July 27.—"Laughing" Bodley, who is mingling his loud guffaws with the sounds of worship at the Desplaines camp meeting this week, is one of the best known characters in the assemblage. His laughter is a feature of camp meetings in Illinois. It does not denote levity and is not considered a disturbing element. It is Bodley's way of evincing his satisfaction at the points made by an exhorter or the effect of the exhortations in bringing large numbers to the anxious seat.

Bodley is from Kankakee County, where he is a farmer. Years ago he was converted at a camp meeting, and when the "scales fell from his eyes" he burst out laughing with joy. He has been attending camp meetings at every opportunity since then, and his laughter grows louder and more sonorous with long practice.

The Rev. Thomas Harrison, known as "the boy evangelist," was preaching at the Desplaines meeting when Bodley made his presence known. The audience was gradually becoming enthusiastic when the loud laugh of the Kankakee farmer was heard. Then the enthusiasm burst its bounds, and cries of "Amen" and "Hallelujah" drowned the voice of the preacher and the people began singing "Rescue the Perishing," which some one started.

PASTOR WEBER STEPS DOWN.

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 25.—The Rev. William Weber, who for the last eleven years has been the pastor of St. Paul's Free Protestant Church in this city, has resigned and his resignation has been accepted. The cause of the retirement of the minister was the policy of the church trustees in regard to the sale of beer. About half the expenses of the church in the past have been paid from the proceeds of the sale of beer at a ball held every winter and a picnic given each summer. The Rev. Weber has never approved of this manner of raising church funds, and has objected to it, but he always was overruled, and the custom, which is an old one, maintained. This fall, however, the pastor decided to put his foot down. When the preparations began for the annual ball he inquired as to the sale of beer and was informed it would be sold as usual. As a protest against this policy he remained away from the entertainment and later, after thinking the matter over, concluded to resign. His resignation was accepted at once, and Mr. Weber will go to a church in New Haven, Connecticut, which recently tendered him a call. The members of the congregation say they can see nothing wrong in the sale of beer at their annual entertainments and the practice will be continued.

CHURCH OF SPIRIT COMMUNION ORGANIZED.

New York, Nov. 19.—The Church of Spirit Communion was organized to-day in the hall at 744 Lexington Avenue, with Dr. W. Harlow Davis as pastor. Dr. Davis was recently ordained by the church at Denver, Colorado, which has been in existence for some time. The creed is spiritualism. Psychic manifestations, without any pretense of materialization, called "tests," constitute the services. Believers assert that they are able to demonstrate the fact that there is a life beyond the grave. There will be morning and evening lectures on Sundays by Mrs. Brigham on ethical subjects.

SCARCITY OF GREAT MEN.

At the annual meeting of the Congregational club in the Palmer House last evening the Rev. Dr. Daniel F. Bradley of Grand Rapids, Michigan, delivered an address on "The Christian College."

In beginning his address Dr. Bradley spoke of the problem of securing and having in seminaries men who shall be leaders in the Congregational churches, and said it was "not to be solved by mere gift of money, by increasing the curriculum, by enlarging the range of studies, by the introduction of the increased electives in Semitic lore and philosophical speculations.

"These are excellent and necessary," he continued, "but a deeper question than that is to be determined as to how we shall get into our seminary to begin with a man whose heart and mind have been thoroughly and completely surrendered to the mind of the Master, and whose training has been saturated with Christian truth.

"The centuries waited in darkness till a Luther could be found with courage and brains to start the Reformation. There never has been a time when the demand for leaders in the kingdom of God has found sufficient supply; there never was a time when tactful, competent, trained leadership was not so scarce as to amount practically to a dearth."

CHURCH UNITY.

Sept. 27.—The unity of all Christendom in one church was discussed yesterday by the clergymen in attendance at the summer meeting of the Northeastern Deanery of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago at Highland Park. The Church of Rome was pointed to as the agency that alone can bring unity out of the present multiplicity of creeds.

The discussion of Christian unity followed a paper read by the Rev. W. C. Richardson of Trinity Church on "The Roman Idea and Church Unity." He said that unity could come only when the doctrine of the infallibility of the Pope had been given up. The Episcopal Church is willing to recognize the primacy of the Bishop of Rome, but not the supremacy of the Pope.

"The age," he said, is one of centralization and combination. The secular and the sacred tend toward centralization. I look on the Roman Church as having more centralizing power than ever before. In case a reforming Pope arrives we might expect to see this centralizing influence. It seems now almost as if the people wished a reforming Pope."

The Rev. Edward A. Larrabee said: "It is hard to think of a unity in which the Roman Church did not take a leading part and in which the primacy of the Bishop of Rome was not recognized. But experience has shown that a reforming Pope does not have the Jesuits in his power. The Church of Rome is managed by a system which has nothing to do with the system of Christ. It is a political system pure and simple."

INSIST ON FOUR PRINCIPLES.

Dr. Francis Hall, of the Western Theological Seminary took the position that the Episcopal Church always would insist on the four principles that had been laid down by the Bishops in the sacred deposit. These are: The historic episcopate, the two sacraments of baptism and holy communion, the Holy Scriptures, and the Apostles and Nicene creed. It was announced that recognition of these four essential elements as a part of the Christian faith would be the only ground on which the Episcopal Church would consider Christian unity.

Dr. W. J. Gould of the Western Theological Seminary and the Rev. H. C. Kinney of Holy Trinity Church also spoke.

R. A. WHITE ON THE NEW CREED.

Oct. 30.—The Rev. R. A. White, at the Stewart Avenue Universalist Church, said the new Universalist creed "is the most vital thing that has happened to the denomination in many a year.

"The new Universalist creed is simple," he said: "It merely holds to the fundamentals of the Christian faith. It proclaims the fatherhood of God, the spiritual leadership of Jesus, and the certainty of punishment here or hereafter for sin. Latitude is left to each individual to interpret these claims into the language of his own soul and mind.

"Furthermore, it is not made a necessary test of fellowship in the denomination or of church membership. Adherence to the spirit of the creed is considered sufficient. Each church can make its own creed. In other words, the Universalist Church returns to the denominational position of thirty years ago—that is, to congregationalism as regards creed. It is a radical and, I believe, a helpful step in the right direction. It makes Universalist practice run with its claims for being a liberal and tolerant church. It makes the Universalist Church a free church."

In the Review of Reviews for December Dr. Albert Shaw writes on "The School City—A Method of Pupil Self-Government." This is a system now in operation in many public schools throughout the country by which training is given in the practical duties of citizenship. Dr. Shaw sets forth the working principles on which the system is based and gives many interesting facts of actual experience in the schools which have developed these principles in practice. The article is illustrated.

EVANS VS. KRUPP.

Bro. R. C. Evans had a tilt in the Stratford Herald, published at Stratford, Ontario, with a Rev. Krupp, who undertook to warn the people of Rostock against "Mormonism," which he assumed that Bro. Daniel MacGregor was engaged in preaching. Bro. MacGregor challenged him; but he wrote to the Herald misstating the history of the Book of Mormon, but declining Bro. MacGregor's challenge. Bro. MacGregor had gone to British Columbia; so Bro. R. C. took up the "cudgels," and the Herald kindly published attack and counter attack. We give Bro. R. C.'s second letter, for the reason that it contains one of the shortest and best summaries of the Spalding claim for the Book of Mormon, and its refutation we have seen for some time. It will be interesting reading to many.

BOOK OF MORMON.

ELDER EVANS GOES AT LENGTH INTO QUESTION OF ITS RESEMBLANCES TO THE SPALDING MANUSCRIPT.

The following letter was received a few days ago from Elder R. C. Evans, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of London. It is in reply to the last letter of Rev. Mr. Krupp, of Rostock. The Herald would intimate its hope that the controversy will not be permitted to extend over many more letters. Mr. Evans writes:—

Editor Stratford Herald: Dear Sir:—I notice S. Krupp, of Rostock, has another letter in your paper, of September 7, regarding my letter, "New Light on Mormonism." The Book of Mormon, and the "Spalding Manuscript Found." The man admits that "there are minor errors in Miss Dickenson's narrative." Now I am prepared to show that there are dozens of errors in her book. In many points she contradicts the best encyclopedias and other works published on the same subject; and worse than all she contradicts herself, and tells stories that are impossible to have occurred. In her book she says Joseph Smith was killed in Nauvoo. After a time she says he was killed in 1846, then she says he was killed in 1844, and she has him in jail, for debt in 1817. He was only twelve years old, they trusted him early in life. I could fill your paper with her mistakes, proving her work is unreliable.

I defy Mr. Krupp to debate the merits of the book with me on the public platform. Mr. Krupp will refuse to indorse much of her book. He only stands by her when she relates the Spalding story or some nasty yarns against Joseph Smith. When she speaks in favor of the Saints he refuses to believe her, when speaking of the church of which I am a member, and of the sons of Joseph Smith she says: "Please understand that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is in no way connected with Salt Lake Mormonism." "The Reorganized church has done more to put down polygamy than any other denomination on the face of the earth." "The Book of Mormon denounces Polygamy." "The most forcible arguments that have yet been adduced on Mormon polygamy, are furnished by the pens of the three sons of Joseph Smith." "The sons of Joseph Smith deny that their father practiced or approved of Polygamy." "Polygamy originated with the leaders of the Utah Church." With all this and much more of the same kind in this book, yet Mr. Krupp has by pen and voice tried to stain the fair name of the church with the foul crimes of Brigham Young and Salt Lake Mormonism.

Now a glance at the "Spalding Manuscript Found." The supporters of the story relate it about like this: Spalding was a Presbyterian minister; his health failed; he left the ministry,—kept tavern, wrote his story commencing 1809, placing it in the hands of Paterson, a printer in Philadelphia, for publication, 1812. Spalding died in 1816.

But permit three reverend gentlemen of high standing to tell what became of the Manuscript Found. In the Congregationalist for October 24, 1877, the Rev. Tyron Edwards, D. D., of Philadelphia, says: "The Book of Mormon in substance was written by Solomon Spalding, a Presbyterian minister. Beginning in 1809 and writing at intervals, as he did, he often read parts of the work to his neighbors, and among the listeners was Joseph Smith who not only attended the readings, but borrowed the manuscripts, as he said, to read to his family at home. In 1812 the completed manuscript was placed in the hands of the printer, with a view to publication. The printing was delayed; Spalding died in 1816. Sidney Rigdon was working as journeyman printer in the office, and it is supposed that he, having copied the manuscript, with Smith concocted the idea of the new religion." The reader will notice that Joseph Smith was born December 23, 1805, so that the reverend gentleman above quoted, would have us believe that Joseph Smith somewhere between the age of four and seven years, was a "neighbor" of Spalding's, "an attentive listener" to the reading of Spalding's romance, and "that he borrowed it to read to his family." Not many boys between four and seven years of age have a family. Surely Smith was a smart boy if the Rev. Dr.'s story is true. Again, "Rigdon was a printer in the office." The family record shows that Rigdon was never a printer, never lived in Pittsburg till years after, and then, as pastor of the Baptist Church.

Rev. Samuel D. Green wrote an article, entitled, "Joseph Smith the Mormon, (see Christian Cynosure, December 20, 1877.) When letters were written to him correcting his false statements, he replied: "Smith borrowed Spalding's manuscript, Spalding sent for it, Smith refused to give it back, Smith told Spalding, and I heard him, that he had made a Mormon Bible of it. I saw Mr. Spalding as late as 1827, and I have a letter from William Jenkins, that he saw Spalding in 1829."

Now, Mr. Editor, Spalding's widow, and all true history shows that Spalding died in 1816, yet one of the reverend gentlemen talked with him in 1827, the other in 1829. Thus you see the vilifiers of Joseph Smith often make him more remarkable than his friends do. Surely it is a Spalding romance.

Miss Dickenson gives the testimony of E. D. Howe and D. P. Hurlbut, yet her own book says Hurlbut was a liar; and Howe's character, upon inquiry, was found unsatisfactory—"Howe was himself a half Mormon." She repeatedly gives the testimony of men against the Book of Mormon, then slanders them.

Now for the real facts about the "Spalding story." Spalding wrote a story in 1809-12, gave it to the printer in 1812, left Pittsburg 1814, died 1816. The manuscript was returned by the printer to Mr. Spalding's widow, she placed it in a trunk where it remained till 1834. (The Book of Mormon was in print and thousands of copies were circulated over the world in 1830). D. P. Hurlbut was excommunicated from the Latter Day Saint Church for bad conduct, and swore vengeance. E. D. Howe was angry because his wife joined the church. He was an infidel and wrote a book against the Bible. Now these two men, full of spite and unbelief, decided to write a book against the church. D. P. Hurlbut went to Spalding's widow, procured the "Manuscript Found," promised to return it, gave it to Howe, then to spite Joseph Smith, and make money by the sale of their book, they got Wrights, Millers, Lakes, and others, with the Book of Mormon in their hands to make up statements, that the Book of Mormon and Manuscript Found were similar, and contained same names, etc. Howe fills his books with these statements, which were false, and manufactured to deceive; hence we have "Mormonism Unveiled," by E. D. Howe.

In order to cover the trick, they refused to return "Manuscript Found" to Spalding's widow. Howe hides it, among other manuscripts in his printing office, he forgets where, tells Spalding's widow it and other manuscripts were burned. In 1839-40 he sells his printing office to L. L. Rice. The transfer of the printing department was accompanied with a large collection of old manuscripts. Years passed away. L. L. Rice moved to Honolulu, Sandwich Islands. In 1884-85 President Fairchild, of Oberlin College, Ohio, visited Mr. Rice. Looking over old manuscripts, they discover the long lost "Manuscript Found" written by Solomon Spalding. It had been in Mr. Rice's possession over forty years and it is now on exhibition in Oberlin, Ohio, College, with the following endorsement on the manuscript: "The writings of Solomon Spalding, proved by Aaron Wright, Oliver Smith, John N. Miller, and others. The testimonies of the above-named gentlemen are now in my possession. (Signed) D. P. Hurlbut." Here are Miss Dickenson's witnesses, referred to by Mr. Krupp. Will this satisfy him, or will he continue to "believe a lie rather than the truth?"

In closing, please notice the testimony of L. L. Rice: "Two things are true; first, it is a genuine writing of Solomon Spalding; and, second, it is not the original of the Book of Mormon." "There is no identity of names of persons or places, and there is no similarity of style between them."

Thank God the "Manuscript Found" is discovered, and such men as Howe, Hurlbut, Miller, Wright, and Krupp have been exposed.

Trusting that the "Dear" Evangelist will see the truth, cease to misrepresent facts, and refrain from slandering an innocent people, I am, yours in hope of sweet rest beyond,

R. C. EVANS.

STOPPED AT THE THRESHOLD.

The House of Representatives decided by a vote of 302 to 30 not to permit Mr. B. H. Roberts, Congressman-elect from the New State of Utah, to take the oath of office and be sworn in as a member of the House.

The case was referred to a committee of members of the House with instruction and authority to inquire into the question of Mr. Roberts' guilt or innocence of the matters alleged against him.

If Mr. Roberts is not a polygamist according to the understanding of this committee it will so report when their work is done and Mr. Roberts will take his seat. If he is found to be guilty, then the committee will so report and Mr. Roberts will not be seated. In the language of a newspaper note, "It is now not a question of law, but a question of fact." Is Mr. Roberts guilty or not guilty?

IMPORTANT discussion! in Hamilton Hall, corner of Thirteenth and Jefferson streets, Oakland, December 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, (commencing each evening at 7:30,) between Miles Grant, of Boston, and F. M. Sheehy, of San Francisco. Subject: Resolved, "That the Bible and science teach that man is wholly mortal, and utterly unconscious between death and the resurrection." Admission free.

The above reprint of a handbill, sent us by Bro. Sheehy, indicates what is transpiring in that portion of his field.

Miles Grant has been for years a leading champion of Adventist theories and Bro. Sheehy is likewise a representative advocate and defender of the latter-day work; hence this discussion will doubtless prove interesting and profitable.

We have sent for and hope to receive a report of the main points and features of the debate.

ELDER M. A. HUGHS, of the Holiness people, from Kansas, lectured in the saints' church, Lamoni, on Wednesday evening, the 6th inst. on the subject of water baptism; to which Bro. J. C. Clapp replied on the following evening. The position taken by Elder Hughes was: that from the exodus to the destruction of the Jewish temple, 70 A. D., the law of Moses was in force; that the Christian dispensation opened at Pentecost about A. D. 33, but was overlapped about thirty-seven years; hence until 70 A. D. baptism and other ordinances taught by the apostles (which he claimed were included in the ordinances of the law) were taught and enforced until that date, after which men were brought into communion with God without recourse or obedience to any ordinances whatever; that the word world, in the great commission (Matt. 28), from the Greek aiton, should be rendered age, hence referred only to the "Jewish age;" that Paul preached a separate or another gospel from that preached by the other apostles.

Bro. Clapp clearly refuted the erroneous positions assumed, with little difficulty. The lecture and reply resulted from some efforts looking toward a debate between the Holiness and our people, one of which was held near Lamoni about two years ago.

Since the foregoing was written we have the following announcement:—

A discussion will be held between Elder M. A. Hughes, of the Holiness People; and Elder J. R. Lambert, of the Latter Day Saints, at the Brick Church, in Lamoni, Iowa, commencing Monday, December 11, 1899, at 7:15 p. m., and continuing for four consecutive nights, upon the subject of water baptism.

THE Bishop, Bro. E. L. Kelley, received on December 4, from Hon. W. P. Hepburn, Congressman from the Eighth Iowa district, a consignment of twenty-five books, comprising:—

Report of the Geological Survey, Vol. 17, parts 1, 2, and 3.

Annual Reports of the Bureau of Ethnology, four volumes, from 1892 to 1895.

Bulletin of the United States Fish Commission.

Report of the United States Commission, Fish and Fisheries.

United States Geological Survey, Water Supply and Irrigation.

United States Consular Reports, volumes 53, 54, and 55.

Report of Secretary of the Interior. Commerce with Europe; four volumes, 1790 to 1890.

Smithsonian Report, part 1, 1895.

War of the Rebellion, records of the Union and Confederate Navies, series 1, volume 5.

Commercial Relations of the United States with Foreign countries. Volume 2, 1895-1896.

Papers Relating to the Foreign Relations of the United States, 1896.

Thanks are hereby extended to Hon. Hepburn, for this timely and valuable addition to the Library force of books.

WE are permitted to read a letter from E. August Mehrkens, to his mother, Sr. M. L. Douglas, Ukiah, California. The letter is dated Fraga, Sarnianto, August. Bro. Mehrkens went out with the soldiers to Manilla. He writes quite feelingly of his stay at Honolulu, Hawaii, and of the brethren, Waller and Greene, and others, whom he met there.

He was disgusted with his stay on shipboard, and proposed to visit Yokohama, Japan; thence to Europe and Argentina. He proposed to go from Japan to Zurich, Switzerland; thence after a six months' visit, to Buenos Ayres, and the Argentine Republic.

He writes thus to his mother touching his personal conduct and welfare:

Don't trouble yourself because of me. I know that if I live the life of a saint I shall have nothing to fear. And by the grace of Jesus I shall be able to endure. I can, if I am only willing, Jesus being always willing. Is it not so?

A young man with such determination carried out in his life will surely succeed. His letter was very interesting.

THANKSGIVING OFFERINGS TO THE HOME.

At Bishop Kelley's request Sr. Alice P. Dancer, matron at the Saints' Home, has furnished us the following list of donations to the Home Thanksgiving Day: From Sr. Jessie Smith, six ducks, dressed; from Bro. D. F. Nicholson, a bunch of bananas; from A. G. Mumma, merchant, one goose; from Bro. Dan Anderson, one turkey. Receipt gratefully acknowledged.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Abner Lloyd, Eldorado Springs, Missouri:—

We have been constant readers of the valuable Herald since the year '70, and that dates back to the year of the baptism of my wife and self, and with a degree of sadness we look back on the changes taken place, more especially in the ranks of the gospel workers who have been called home from their labors. Yet the Herald comes enlarged and heavily laden with precious news and very interesting matter, which so much helps us along life's rugged road; and may God bless all your efforts, that it may continue in its useful message.

Bro. H. G. Dutcher, Tarry, Michigan, December 1:—

I am glad I am still in the latter-day work and feel that God blesses me from day to day. I am striving to live right in this life that I may be worthy of the kingdom of God. Would ask the saints to pray for me and for my family that we may be able to bring forth fruit to perfection.

Of the Sheehy-Grant debate we have the following, from Bro. D. A. Anderson, Oakland, California, December 5:—

The Sheehy-Grant debate began last night in Hamilton Hall, Oakland; good crowd, excellent attention. The outlook for listeners is splendid. The first evening gives us great hope of a glorious victory for truth. We all rejoice in our blest cause. I am well and cheerful in the conflict. Will send more particulars later.

Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, December 5:—

December 4 was the first day of the theological battle between Miles Grant, of the Adventists, and Bro. Sheehy. There were about three hundred and fifty persons present. Grant tried to prove that when the brain ceases to act the man is dead. Bro. Sheehy showed that his proof was obsolete and the man of science who gave utterance to some statements had since changed his mind, facts compelling him to do so. This was a "stunner" for Grant. We are confident of good to a certain degree. Bro. Sheehy is a "full team."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. James Caffall addressed a communication to the editor of the Enterprise, White, South Dakota, in which the position of the church and the methods of some of its opponents were ably stated. The editor declined to publish. Bro. Caffall is earnestly pushing the claims of the work upon the attention of the people, so far as possible, in his field.

Bro. E. B. Welch, Farwell, Michigan, writes in evidence of his love for the work, in which he finds truth and comfort. His parents and some of his children have died in the faith, and he is sustained in the hope of the gospel that life and immortality will crown the faithful in the time to come.

Bro. D. R. Baldwin, Ravenden Springs, Arkansas, offers two dollars and fifty cents for a copy of the Palmyra edition of the Book of Mormon. We note at his request.

Sr. Jennie Page, of Brice Hospital, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, writes of her appreciation of favors shown herself and friends in the hospital. One who addressed her with a remittance failed to give name and address, which she desires. She would be glad, with others, to meet Bro. Turpen again. Limited space prevents insertion of letter. Some are investigating and hope to obey the truth in due time.

Sr. M. A. Bartmess, La Grande, Union County, Oregon, reports a sugar factory and a settlement of Utah Mormons at that point, where she thinks elders of the Reorganization could do good. She has circulated tracts. "Inquire of A. Jackson for Thomas Bartmess."

Sr. E. A. Lester, Valentine, Michigan, writes renewing for the HERALD and expressing her gratitude for the messages of comfort it brings. She circulates the church literature among her friends and hopes some will obey the truth as a result.

Bro. Albert Stone, New Canaan, Connecticut, secured insertion in a local paper of an article written by him to correct misrepresentations of a public lecture against the church. The editor in his comments commended both the Reorganized Church and Bro. Stone as a man. Good.

Bro. Criley, the HERALD Business Manager, requests us to state that by reason of a breakdown in the machinery of the stapler, some of the HERALDS went out with only a part of them stitched. It will be repaired as soon as possible and HERALDS thereafter stitched. Those who received HERALDS not stitched will know how it occurred.

In writing the statement of Bro. Kelley in regard to donations of thank offerings, we omitted a cipher, in stating Bro. Pickering's amount. We should have stated it: Bro. W.

R. Pickering, one thousand dollars, instead of one hundred.

Bishop Kelley who recently returned from a trip to Sandwich, Illinois, left home on the 8th for St. Joseph, Missouri, accompanied by Bro. William Anderson. He returned to Lamoni on the same day.

Continued contributions show the Saints' Home has many friends, as that worthy institution deserves. Sr. A. M. Stivers, Irvington, California, has forwarded ten dollars with which to purchase "small spoons, clock, or whatever you may think most useful to the inmates." Sr. Ella Baird, Bangor, Michigan, sends one dollar for filling a quilt, which she also sends. Due acknowledgment is made on behalf of Bishop Kelley.

Bro. Frank Russell with Brn. J. W. Adams and A. J. Keck were laboring at Moline and Rock Island, Illinois, and in that vicinity of late, having good attendance and interest at public services. They would continue there until about the holidays.

Russia is to construct railways in Persia and to have a free hand in that hitherto unopened domain. Germany has secured important concessions from the Sultan of Turkey and will build a railway to Bagdad and connect Constantinople with the Persian Gulf, in addition to securing other important advantages that will tend to strengthen German influences and lead to the dismemberment and final dissolution of Turkey. Watch the fulfillment of prophecy.

"Distress of nations with perplexity": Passengers from the west coast of South America report an ominous outlook in connection with the spread of the bubonic plague, which is slowly but steadily working its way westward. To this is added the general condition of political unrest. "Chile is on the eve of a financial crisis, and possibly a revolution. In Peru and Bolivia serious revolutions are going on. These are disorganizing trade. Ecuador is in a condition of incipient revolt, and a strong revolutionary movement, directed by the clerical party and supported by a majority of the people, is said to be in course of organization on Peruvian soil. In Colombia civil war is raging. The plague and the wars are reacting seriously on trade and industry. The most significant indication is the turning backward of the stream of English, German, and other European commercial travelers. The coast trade thus far has suffered little, but from Chile to Colombia internal trade is almost paralyzed, and the steamers are sailing with little or no return freight."

As a direct result of the agitation of the Roberts case there is a movement on foot to give Congress the power to enact legislation providing for a uniform marriage and divorce law. A resolution has been introduced in the Senate proposing an amendment to the Constitution with this end in view, and to enact a law to provide punishment for its violation.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat in its issue of the 30th makes favorable mention of the work done by the Reorganized Church—this in comments on the Roberts case.

Dr. DeCosta, formerly an Episcopal clergyman, for forty-seven years, has been received into the Roman Catholic Church. He defends his change of faith in a late issue of the New World, a prominent Catholic organ.

Chancellor Hohenlohe, true to his promise, but against the wishes of Emperor William, has consented to the passage of legislation removing restrictions from political associations in the German Empire, thus permitting them rights and privileges of cooperation. Thus larger liberties among the people are secured and further progress assured.

Many Christian ministers are affirming a larger faith in the Bible despite the higher criticism.

Thanks to all the good brethren, sisters, friends, who send us newspaper and other articles. We use what we can, and what we only scan aids us in the general summary of conditions. We desire to receive such attentions continuously, for the general good. Please remember us.

London dispatch, November 20, to Chicago Tribune: Professor Stein, of London, who lately announced a cure for blindness by means of electricity, reports two more remarkable cures of blindness; of a man and a girl blind fourteen years, five years respectively. Several other cases have been reported where persons partly blind have been enabled to see perfectly.

Ten thousand Finlanders have arranged to leave their native land, because of oppressions by the Russian government. They will settle in Alberta, British Columbia. "The commissioners say that, under the new army laws applied to Russian Finland, the last flimsy pretense of Finnish independence is swept away and the inhabitants are reduced to a condition little better than that of serfs." "Joseph's land" again offers a home to the oppressed of another realm.

There is little or no waste in the economy of nature. Each function in its great mechanical system is performed, under normal conditions, with little or no loss of force or power. Each feature of service is rendered by forces admirably adapted to the work designed. There is no confusion, no misdirection of energy. The same adaptation of means to ends should be observed in the moral and general movements of the race.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS.

John says the church went into the wilderness clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

There has been much said and written about the apostasy of the church, some holding that the church has continued on the earth in its organization from the days of John the Baptist until now; others holding that the church went into the wilderness and mounted the scarlet colored beast with seven heads and ten horns, and wrote upon her forehead, "Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots."

To my mind both theories are wrong and misleading. I say misleading, because the Bible, the written word, teaches differently. The Bible abounds with evidence showing us of the night-time known as the 1260 years of the Dark Ages.

Perhaps it would be well to give a few passages of scripture to prove such a time was to exist in some age of the world. We are told by Daniel that a power would arise and make war with the saints, and prevail against them until the Ancient of days came and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom. He was to speak great words against the Most High and wear out the saints, and think to change times and laws; and they were to "be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time." Here is shown very clearly that the saints would be overcome, worn out, or, in other words, put to death. Not that they would prove traitors to their Lord and divorce themselves as a church from him, as some would have us believe.

To make this a little stronger we will turn to Revelation, chapter 13. Here we learn a similar power would make war with the saints and overcome them, and would cause all that would not worship the image of the beast to be killed. And this power was to continue 1260 years, corresponding with Daniel 7:25.

Again: Jesus tells us: "From the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it [the church] by force." Not that the church would become violent or corrupt, but the violent or corrupt power would take the church by force, or as Daniel says, wear them out; or as John says, they would be killed, or put to death. Jesus referred to this same time when he told his servants to work while it was day, for the night would come when no man could work. They were called to work in the vineyard of the Lord, or church, but the night would come when they could not work.

Now if you will trace the history of the church for 570 years you will find what in history is known as the ten persecutions that the saints endured, during which thousands were put to death. The tares choked out the wheat; not that the wheat simply turned to tares. Everything brings forth of its own kind, you remember.

Paul informs us that grievous wolves would enter in among the flock, or sheep, not sparing them. Now what is the wolf likely to do with a flock of sheep? Does he turn them to wolves or goats? No, sir; he kills them. That is the way the wolf does his work.

We will now turn and notice the woman, or church:—

And there appeared a great wonder in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: and she being with child cried, travelling in birth, and pained to be delivered.—Rev. 12: 1, 2.

This, I understand, was the condition of the church of God before Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea. You remember Paul tells us that Christ was with the church in the wilderness. Again, the law of Moses was added to the gospel as a schoolmaster to bring them to Christ. Now could the church exist without the gospel, or the gospel without the church? You would tell me, No. Very well, you remember the law of Moses was very grievous or painful to the people of God. But when Christ came, the church was delivered of her pains and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ. (Rev. 12: 7). You can see the time now had come for the church to rise above the moon or lesser priesthood. Hebrews 7: 11 informs us that perfection could not be reached under the Levitical priesthood, for under it the people received the law. Verse 12 says, "The priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." But when Christ came and offered himself a sacrifice to satisfy the law, he became a high priest after the order of Melchisedec, "who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life." This priesthood was the greater, by which perfection could be attained. Christ was separate from sinners and made ruler over the heavens (Heb. 7: 25). Again, Jesus tells us when he rose from the dead all power was given into his hand, both in heaven and in earth. So after the Lord had spoken unto them he was received up into heaven, or caught up, and sat on the right hand of God. What about the man child? John says it was caught up unto God and his throne. Did not Jesus overcome and sit down with his Father on his throne? What was the man child to do? Rule all nations with a rod of iron. Does not the Book of Mormon teach that Christ will rule all nations with a rod of iron?

"But hold on," says one. "Christ brought forth the church, so you see he was not the man child." But who said he brought forth the church? Tell us, if you please. The child had to be begotten before it could be born. Was not Jesus begotten by the Father before he was born? Mark you, the child was to rule all nations. Now if this child is the authority, you see it would be greater than the one who gave it. So I prefer to believe Christ is the one who will rule all nations with a rod of iron. He is to be King of kings and Lord of lords.

Notice: When the child was caught up to heaven the war between Michael and the dragon, or Devil, began. Mark you, this war was in heaven, and the dragon prevailed not against Michael, neither the child, nor the woman, which was the church of God, who had been delivered of her pains and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ. You see, here, Christ began to exercise the power that had been delegated to him by his Father. You remember Christ told his disciples that he would go and prepare a place for them, that where he was they should be also. Now it seems to me that the preparing of that place would simply be to cast out that old serpent, called the Devil, and his angels, where he could not trouble the saints of God. John says after the Devil was cast out of heaven he heard a loud voice, saying,

Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ.—Rev. 12: 10.

Now you must remember the church went to the place which God prepared for her. She was to remain in her place; was to be nourished 1260 years. But when the Devil saw he was cast down to the earth, he came with great wrath. Why? Because he had been overcome in that great battle fought with Michael and his angels. They had overcome him by the blood of the Lamb, for they loved not their own lives, but kept the testimony even unto death. Therefore the heavens were made to rejoice. Not much forming an alliance with the Devil in that. What think you?

But when the Devil saw he was cast unto the earth he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child. Now in what way could the Devil persecute the church of God? You remember Saul went about, having letters of authority to bind the saints and to have them stoned to death, and while on his way to Damascus, Christ appeared unto him and said, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" You see how Saul was persecuting the church of God. It was in this way the Devil persecuted the woman that brought forth the man child. But remember, to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might flee into the wilderness, into her place, which God had prepared for her, that she should be nourished for a time and times and half a time, from the face of the serpent; that is, away from the Devil, where he had no power over her, in the place which God had prepared for her, that she might remain there until the appointed time, or until the end of the 1260 years.

Now it seems the Devil's first work was to put those holding the priesthood to death. This of course would be his aim, to check the leaders first. Those who have read the history of the early church know very well this was the case. So when this was accomplished, the Devil went to make war with the remnant of her seed which kept the commandments of God and had the testimony of Jesus Christ, and the Devil caused all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hands or foreheads. All who failed to receive this mark were put to death. Now when this was accomplished, the nighttime had come when no man could work.

Having shown that the church, together with all of its officers, was put to death, overcome, worn out, it must be evident that the people of God or church holding the priesthood must go somewhere, to some place; and from just where the church went, we must look for its return at the end of the 1260 years, or when the time comes for the saints to possess the kingdom. God's kingdom is an everlasting kingdom. It has no end. Now if the church went into apostasy and formed alliance with the Devil, divorced herself from Christ, out of apostasy and from the Devil she must come. And if the Devil has been ruling the church and feeding her from his face or mouth for 1260 years, at the appointed time the Devil must give the church up, and she must be washed of her filthiness, and pardoned of her fornication; sober up from her drunkenness; surrender her divorce; rub off the superscription from her forehead; throw down her purple and scarlet colors and precious stones, together with her golden cup; dismount from the scarlet colored beast, and come forth "clear as the moon and fair as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners;" for I understand the same organic church that went into the wilderness was to come out of the wilderness at the end of the 1260 years.

But I hope I have a brighter side to present than the one referred to. It is this: The Melchisedec priesthood has no beginning of days nor end of life, and all those who are ordained unto this priesthood are made like unto the Son of God, abiding a priest continually. (Heb. 7: 3, I. T.) While the Devil had power to wear out, overcome, and kill the saints of God, he failed to have power to wrest from them the priesthood. Paul says:—

But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant. . . . Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear.—Heb. 12: 22-24, 26-28.

This puts it beyond a doubt that there was a connecting link between the church in the days of Paul and the one written in heaven. Even things in heaven and on earth were to be shaken. But the kingdom with its priesthood was not to be shaken nor moved. It was to remain somewhere. Let us turn to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and see just where it was to remain:—

Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you [Joseph Smith], with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God: wherefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.—D. C. 84: 3.

You see the priesthood continued, remained. Now where was the priesthood to remain? Just where Joseph's life was, the priesthood was to be. Did not Joseph's life come from God? Yes, his life and the priesthood were hid from the world with Christ in God. So here I understand was the place which God prepared for his church, hid from the world with Christ for 1260 years. So at the appointed time the angel came from heaven with the gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, to every nation, tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, "Fear God, and give glory to him." (Rev. 14: 6.)

You see the angel comes from heaven. What do we see next? The church coming out of the wilderness, "fair as the moon and clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." Coming from Babylon? No! Coming from heaven, where she had been hid from the world for 1260 years. The gates of hell cannot prevail against God's work.

The works, and the designs, and the purposes of God, cannot be frustrated, neither can they come to nought, for God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round.—D. C. 2: 1.

Yes, the church has been again restored to the earth with all its officers, gifts, helps, and governments, to gather together his people to fight the great battle that is to be fought on earth with the Devil that the earth may be prepared for a thousand years of peaceful reign for the saints of God, while the Devil will be bound and cast into the bottomless pit. Could I but sound aloud as with the voice of an archangel, I would say to the people and nations of the earth, "Repent and come out of Babylon and accept the gospel, which is able to save with an everlasting salvation, which is an anchor to the soul, which reaches within the veil, where our Forerunner has gone."

So may the time soon come when the watchmen of Zion shall see eye to eye, and lift up their voices together, and be of one mind, that the world may know that God has sent them. Ever praying and working to build up the kingdom of God on the earth, I remain, as ever, your humble servant in the one faith.

TITHING THE LAW OF GOD.

Honor the Lord with thy substance, . . . and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.—Prov. 3: 9, 10.

The law of tithing is a tax that God has levied on the members of the kingdom of heaven to defray the expense of his government. God being the embodiment of all wisdom, knew that the kingdom could not be carried on without means, consequently made ample provision for carrying on his work, and thus established the law of tithing. Christ Jesus said, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." It is an easy thing for us who have embraced the new and everlasting covenant to break the bark of baptism over the head of a Methodist or United Brethren, but how is it with us? Are we keeping the whole law, or are we keeping only a part of the law? We read in Doctrine and Covenants:—

And again, verily I say unto you, That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willet to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore, they must remain filthy still.—D. C. 85: 8.

We thus see it is by keeping the whole law of God, that we will be permitted to enter the celestial glory of God, the highest of all. We notice that Abraham paid tithes of all he had, to Melchisedec the priest of the most high God:—

And Melchisedec king of Salem brought forth bread and wine: and he was the priest of the most high God. And he blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth: And blessed be the most high God, which hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand. And he gave him tithes of all.—Gen. 14: 18-20.

Away back in this early period, this law was taught; it did not stop with Abraham. We next notice his grandson following this same example, doubtless taught him by his progenitors.

And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it. And he called the name of that place Beth-el; but the name of that city was called Luz at the first. And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God: and this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.—Gen. 28: 18-22.

Jacob was willing to comply with God's law, and by so doing he received great blessings from the hand of the Lord. When he made this covenant with the Lord he was very poor, insomuch that a stone was his pillow. But look at what he possessed on his return, when he met his brother Esau. (See Genesis 32.) And again in Numbers, where the Lord spake to Aaron, that the children of Levi should receive all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance:—

And, behold, I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.—Num. 18: 21.

This was the financial law that God gave his people. They were to observe this law and keep it, and when they failed in keeping this law, they were in transgression. And the Lord rebuked them for not keeping this part of his law, and by so doing they had gone away from his ordinances. And further, in Malachi 3:8-12, we find that the Lord finds fault to that whole nation, and accuses them of robbing him, because they would not pay tithes and offerings. Now it would be very harsh for us to say that a Latter Day Saint was stealing from God if they did not pay their tithing and offerings; nevertheless it is true, for one tenth belongs to the Lord. If we keep that that is not ours, we are taking something that does not belong to us, and Malachi calls that stealing. Let us hear what Malachi says about it:—

Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings.—Mal. 3: 8.

And the Lord said they were cursed with a curse. It was wrong, and a transgression of God's law for them to keep back that which belongs to the Lord. The Lord makes a promise to them; if they will bring all their tithes into his storehouse, he would bless them, and that he would open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing that there would not be room enough to receive it; and that he would rebuke the devourer for their sake; and that all nations should call them blessed. Why would they not pay their tithing and offerings? They had lost their faith in God. Perhaps they reason in this way, that they did not think it was necessary, and if they gave up a tenth it would make them poor, and perhaps they would need it before they got the blessing from the Lord; and that which they had they would keep; so you see it was all for the lack of faith. Paul, viewing the situation, admonished the saints in his day, saying:—

Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them; but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.—Heb. 4: 1, 2.

Well, says one, we know that God required one tenth in olden times, but he does not require it now. Under the New Testament times, when Christ came, he did away with it. Let us see.

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.—Matt. 23: 23.

This needs no comment, for the Savior here emphatically teaches the law of tithing, that they ought pay and not to leave the other undone. This is the law God gave in order that the poor and needy in his church or kingdom should be provided for, and for the sustenance of the ministers' families while they were out representing God's kingdom, that the work of the ministry might go on. In first John we read:—

But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?—1 John 3: 17.

The inference here is that the love of God does not dwell in him. Then how can a man or a woman be saved in that kind of condition? The chances seem to be slim for the celestial kingdom.

Yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.—D. C. 101: 2.

Here the Lord tells us if we impart not our portion according to the gospel law, which is the law of tithing and offerings, we have not complied with this law. We should ask ourselves the question, Can we attain to a celestial glory without living in obedience unto the whole law? The Lord says that if we do not comply with this part of God's law we (Latter Day Saints) shall, with the wicked, lift up our eyes in hell, being in torment. This is a horrible condition for one to get into, after they have embraced the truth. It would have been better to not have known the way of truth than to turn from it. And again, we read in the Doctrine and Covenants:—

Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning: this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, Tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts.—D. C. 64: 5.

There are none who want to be burned when the Lord shall come. Then had we not better make the needed sacrifice, so we can escape and not be burned? The Lord says man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

These are commandments of God. How can we escape his punishment if we do not keep his commandments? Why do you call me Lord, and do not the things I command you?

Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.—1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.

Why not take the advice of Paul and do as he says? Is not this in harmony with the revealed word? We say we want a celestial glory, and we cannot get it unless we abide a celestial law. When we do what the Lord commands, then he is bound; but when we do not, he is not bound.

Well, some say, I would pay my tithing and give my offering, but they do not use it as they ought to. If they do not use it as we think they ought to, or as it should be, does not God know it? Are you afraid that God won't take care of it? He commands us to pay it. It is our duty to pay it, and God's business to see it is properly spent. That is his part of the work, and our part is to see that we pay it. God is able to take care of his work. If we do not work to suit him, he will drop us out, and raise up others to carry on the work. I have got faith enough to believe that God will take care of it. I would say, Let us prove the Lord with our substance.

BRIGHAM YOUNG'S REBAPTISM.

There is a law prevailing in orders and societies, that if a person leaves that order, he loses all the honors—or authority—he received in, or held while a member of, that order. If he violates his obligation, or transgresses law, he must pay the penalty. There are different degrees of punishment. He can be reprimanded, suspended, or expelled. In either of the first two penalties he does not lose his honors. But if he does anything that would place him outside the order, or put him in a condition where it becomes necessary for him to be initiated again, he loses all the honors he had obtained, and must enter again as any other initiatory member.

There have been cases where an individual has transgressed law, and being ashamed to acknowledge it, has absented himself from the lodge for a certain length of time, and then been initiated again. Thus making a new start, but in so doing he lost all his past honors, and entered as a common lay member. There have been cases where persons were so far in arrears for dues, that rather than pay up, they have let time expire, and then be initiated again; but in doing this they lost all honors.

The point we wish to make is this, that no matter how high a position a person may hold in any order, no matter what authority he has in the order, if for any cause he ever allows himself to become initiated over again; by so doing he loses all the honor or authority he held, and begins again as a lay member. The new initiation makes all the past null and void.

The above must most certainly apply also to the church.

Let us briefly show the condition of Brigham Young and his followers in Utah. The Lord told the church at Nauvoo in 1841, that unless they built a house to his name in a certain length of time, they should be "rejected as a church." (D. C. 107: 11.) They did not do the work, so they were rejected.

Again he told them that if they would labor with all their might, and listen to his voice, and the voice of his servants, they should "not be moved out of their place"—Nauvoo. (Ibid., par. 13.) They did not heed these instructions, so they were moved out of their place and driven away.

The Lord had previously told them that "the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away." (D. C. 64: 7.) They were sent away to Utah—out of the land of Zion. So they were "the rebellious."

God had also said,

Pray for thy brethren of the twelve. . . . Let them be admonished for all their sins. . . . And after their temptations and much tribulations, behold, I, the Lord, will feel after them, and if they harden not their hearts, and stiffen not their necks against me, they shall be converted, and I will heal them.—D. C. 105: 5.

This places them as sinners, and unconverted before God.

From the above quotations, we must conclude that when that body of people reached Utah, they were in the following conditions, especially if we let the Twelve represent the people: They were "rejected as a church;" "moved out of their place;" "rebellious;" "cut off out of the land of Zion;" "sent away;" and in a condition that they must "be converted."

Remembering this, let us call your attention to the following from the "Life of Brigham Young" by Tullidge, which he quotes from "the historian Woodruff." On pages 180-182 he says:—

On the 6th of August, the Twelve were rebaptized. This we considered a privilege and a duty. As we had come into a glorious valley to locate and build up Zion, we felt like renewing our covenants before the Lord and each other. We soon repaired to the water, and President Young went down into the water and baptized all his brethren of the Twelve present. He then confirmed us, and sealed upon us our apostleship, and all the keys, powers and blessings belonging to that office. Brother Heber C. Kimball baptized and confirmed President Brigham Young. The following were the names and order of those present: Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Orson Pratt, Willard Richards, Wilford Woodruff, George A. Smith, and Amasa Lyman. . . .

During the same evening the Twelve went to City Creek, and Heber C. Kimball baptized fifty-five members of the camp, for the remission of their sins; and they were confirmed under the hands of President Young, Orson Pratt, Wilford Woodruff, George A. Smith, and Amasa Lyman; President Young being mouth.

On the next day (Sunday, August 8th), the whole camp of Israel renewed their covenants before the Lord by baptism. There were two hundred and twenty-four baptized this morning, making two hundred and eighty-eight re-baptized in the last three days.

This was continued for years—all members of the church going to Utah were compelled to submit to this rebaptism, no matter where they had been baptized, nor by whom.

What was all this for? Woodruff says in one place it was for "renewing our covenants," and in another place, which we have italicized, that it was "for the remission of their sins." According to this, the two hundred and eighty-eight gathered there renewed their covenants before the Lord by baptism, and that baptism was for the remission of their sins.

Let us now view the transaction from a point touching authority. Brigham Young baptized all of the Twelve there present—six in number. When he had baptized all six of them, they were then only initiatory members of that church. They were not full members. They had only been born of water. All the authority or priesthood they had previously held, they had unknowingly laid aside, and they stood there shorn of all their God-given authority. They were unintentionally entering that church as lay members. This is proven by the fact that, after they had all six been baptized by Brigham, Woodruff says, "He then confirmed us." The effect of this confirmation was—if Brigham's authority was good—to make them full-fledged members of the church—only this and nothing more. They were then still simply lay members, holding no priesthood. Brigham then sealed upon them their apostleship, etc. Now, then, all the priesthood these men or their successors have since held, begins from that ordination received under the hands of Brigham Young, all their previous authority having been lost and blindly cast aside. But how good was this new authority? Brigham Young, here officiating, needed baptism as much as any of them—for the remission of his sins. It will not do to say his baptism was for the renewing of his covenant, and the baptism of the people was for the remission of sins. The baptism was the same for one and all. Brigham Young in his blindness had no more respect for what he had received, than the rest, for we read, that after the six had been rebaptized, reconfirmed, etc., "Brother Heber C. Kimball baptized and confirmed President Brigham Young." When he baptized Brigham, Brigham was then only an initiatory member, only part member, of the church. He was shorn of all authority. He was only born of water. Then Heber confirmed him. To what did he confirm him? A member of the church. Then before that confirmation he was not a full member. He was then taking the first steps to enter the church.

Mr. Woodruff does not tell us whether Brigham was reordained or not. He says nothing about the apostleship, keys, powers, etc., being sealed upon him. Is it possible that they overlooked that in his case? But suppose Heber C. Kimball did ordain him. What then? Why, all the authority he has since held began with what he received under the hands of that man. He held that and nothing more, and all that Heber had to give him was what he had himself received there that day. And it is under this authority, this alone, that he afterwards became the president of this shorn and deluded people.

But are they and their successors apostles of our Lord, as they claim? They say, Yes. We say, No. Then who are to be the judges in the matter? Hear what the Lord says:—

It shall come to pass, that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion; and liars, and hypocrites shall be proved by them, and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known.—D. C. 64: 7.

The inhabitants of Zion, those who live in Zion, are to be the judges in the matter, and they are to prove that certain ones who claim to be apostles and prophets are not. And "the inhabitants of Zion" positively declare that the so-called apostles and prophets of Utah are not apostles of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The people of Utah are not to be judges in the matter. They are not inhabitants of Zion, they are not in Zion, but on account of their transgressions they were driven out of Zion, and in their apostate condition they cannot or will not see the truth. They are not able to judge concerning their leaders, and alas! too many of them are not willing to listen to those whom God has called to judge for them.

Those who led them "caused them to err," and they have hardened their hearts, and stiffened their necks against the Lord, and are not willing to be converted. May God soon open the eyes of their understanding, that they may see their true condition, and return to the fold, is my prayer.

AUBURN, Iowa, Nov. 29.

Editors Herald:—By invitation of saints and permission of district president, the writer has been occupying in these parts for the last month. Many are the calls for labor, and one feels touched at such expressions as, "Can't you come and preach for us; the elders seem to have forsaken us?" The harvest is indeed great for the two General Conference appointees who are out in the field; when to human appearances, there should be forty in this district.

The writer has found it true, as Bro. Herman C. Smith is reported to have said, "It is hard to preach the gospel, but it is harder not to." We may be "better adapted to the local than to the missionary department of church work; but there is no true comfort derived only by doing all one can for the truth; especially when "words ring in" your "ears" that make you feel as did the apostle, "Woe unto me if I preach not the gospel."

Satan still rages, and the people imagine vain things. Saints should be very careful what they say and do, lest the adversary gains control over them, and the honest in heart be prevented or hindered from coming into the fold. The tongue that is loosened by the Spirit of God to preach, rebuke diseases, or prophesy, as the case may be, ought never to be loosed by the spirit of the evil one to tattle or parade the faults of others before those who should not know them.

The writer dreamed once, long ago, that a member came to him and forthwith began to tell the faults of an elder (and he was guilty), when, without forethought, we said in a forcible manner, "I wish there wasn't half the tattling going on in the church there is, and I want to go upon record that I don't approve of it!" We shall long remember this nightly impression, and especially the color of shame that came over the face of the accuser at this unexpected rebuke. The writer may have forgotten himself and said things about others that he should not; if he has he is sorry, and will try to do different, as he wants to go upon record that he does not approve of such—what shall we call it—abominable work?

Ever praying that we may all come up higher,
JOSEPH CARLSON.

INMAN, Neb., Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—Sunday forenoon, November 26, Elder Levi Gamet, of Clearwater, preached a characteristic whole-souled sermon in the Latter Day Saints church to an attentive audience, principally saints. Bro. Gamet had not trained his singers in vain. After the service the greetings were hearty, as all felt it was good to be there. In the afternoon the people again began to gather at the church for worship. Herald readers will doubtless remember the interesting letter from Elder H. O. Smith, telling of the work begun here through the instrumentality of Elder E. Downey, of the preaching by Apostle James Caffall, Elders E. A. Davis and W. E. Peak; of his own labors, baptizing thirteen, among whom were Methodists and unbelievers; of organizing a Sunday school and prayer meeting; and now the letters come from Elder J. F. Mintun, telling of persecution led by ministers, of his defense of the truth, and efforts to get the public to listen; persecution more firmly united the saints. At this time the Helping Hand Society was organized, later developing into a Zion's Religio-Literary Society. At the district reunion held here, three more were baptized by Elder H. O. Smith. The work was carried on the best we could. Services were held in the schoolhouse and in private houses.

The need of a church was keenly felt, and a desire that we be able to build was the leading thought, and many humble prayers were offered that we should be prospered. We accordingly set to work. The committee were often surprised at their success. Catholic, Protestant, and unbeliever donated generously; and our people did their whole duty to a man. A building 24x36 feet, best grade of lumber, brick foundation, double floor (top floor hard pine oiled), wood work hard oiled, plaster hard finish, three gothic stained glass windows on each side, building painted white, and seated with chairs. The house is completed at a cost of about $800, and in every way does credit to the efforts put forth.

The climax was reached when at two o'clock Elder G. H. Hilliard preached the dedicatory sermon. He made particular mention of the stars and stripes artistically draped; of the motto, "Liberty," in red, white, and blue. Visitors from O'Neill and several families of saints from Clearwater were in attendance. Bro. Hilliard in no way disappointed his audience. Clearwater choir, assisted by neighbor Kirby and wife, furnished the music. Bro. Levi Gamet offered the dedicatory prayer. The simplicity and humility of the petition was thrilling to those who love the truth. Two children were blessed. Other officiating elders were: W. W. Whiting, missionary in charge, of Glidden, Iowa, and E. Downey, of Inman, Nebraska, president of Inman branch, organized in March of this year, with a membership of twenty-seven.

In the evening, Sr. Mae Downey, president of Zion's Religio-Literary, called the house to order and the Religio program was rendered in full; after which Bro. Hilliard again preached. The whole day was one of rejoicing. Services have been held each evening, conducted by Bro. Hilliard, presided over by Elder Whiting. He will again address us at eleven o'clock this morning. We truly feel that we have much to be thankful for.

Yours in the one faith,

BELLE WISDOM.

Editors Herald:—The Black-Baldwin debate was closed Friday evening; and as debates have become so commonplace, and so frequently conducted by those so much better qualified than those engaged in this one, I presume it should hardly occupy the valuable space it would require. Suffice it to say that it has paved the way for preaching in a new place, for at the close Elder Black's moderator, (Prof. John L. Fry, our county assessor,) shook hands with me and urged me to come to Oconee and preach. This I have agreed to do. I do not think he is convinced that we have the truth, but he wants to investigate. He wants one of the first edition of the Book of Mormon. Elder Black of course told us that the first edition "was such a bundle of blunders that it had been wiped out of existence—exterminated." I told him it had simply gone out of print, and that the many changes he told us of were on the title page and in his head. Mr. Fry does not know which one of us to believe, and he will gladly pay $2.50 for one of the first edition, to compare with the one he has. Therefore, I ask you to please insert the within notice in the Herald.

Very respectfully,

D. R. BALDWIN.

WHITE, S. D., Nov. 28.

Editors Herald:—Arrived here on the 23d inst., with the intention, as per request, of giving a series of discourses, beginning on the evening of the 25th; and by the consent given, to occupy the M. E. German church, our anticipations to continue the ensuing week were raised. But alas! on reception of the key, in time for the requisite preparation for service, we were informed that the doors were to be closed against us after the service of the above evening; and so they were. No other place procurable save Bro. and Sr. Delap's private residence, and that they were not willing to accept.

I have found small railroad towns the most difficult places to introduce the gospel. Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, orthodox-evangelical, and other influences generally predominate; and if these unterrified orthodox object to meeting an issue publicly, some are quite potent in prejudicing the mind of the public through other measures, and some minds are quite susceptible; so that if we enter any of these well orthodox fortified cities and succeed in getting a few interested, we should stick there, until evidence develops that the interested one will fall in with the overtures of God's mercy or altogether turn therefrom, then go elsewhere. To labor and get some interested and leave them, perhaps for months, is a bad arrangement, with headquarters there, while there may be two or three schoolhouses secured within a radius of ten miles. A little systematic preaching so as to concentrate labors, must be more effective than much desultory or spasmodic labor.

EXETER, Mo., Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—Indeed we had a fine conference at Cove, Arkansas, November 11-20; the best ever held in the South. Much and lasting good will flow from it. Bro. F. C. Keck came down to assist us while the conference was in progress. I was one night meditating where to go from conference to labor, having several calls to fill. Taking the matter to the Lord in prayer that night I saw myself go north and arriving near a beautiful lake and walking along the lake I came in contact with a black snake. I hit it a severe blow and left him about dead. A day or so passed and Bro. F. C. Keck asked me to come with him to Exeter, Missouri, and debate with some one of the Campbellite order. Not knowing the man, I tried to beg off by insisting on Bro. Keck to meet the man himself, trying to get him to believe he would be a good debater. Bro. Keck's lungs were in no condition for debating, hence I concluded I had better come up and help him out. We arrived at Bro. James Grimes' house in Exeter, November 22, and Bro. Davis came in for us next day, and we drove out to Oak Ridge next day and found one W. W. Blalock on hand for debate. Proper arrangements were made and we went at it for eight nights. I closed my thirty-first debate last night and left Campbellism bleeding and dying at the feet of truth. W. W. Blalock had met I. N. White, T. W. Williams, J. F. McDowell, W. C. Cather, and Pender, hence is pretty well posted in our books and what we believe and teach. If they can say he is a fair and honest debater they can say a great deal more for W. W. Blalock than I can, because he is tricky, mean, and perverting. He got so hard pressed before the debate ended that he and his brethren got together and made it up to vote that I had contradicted myself, and in one of his speeches called on all that heard me say so and so to say "yes," which some few answered to his trick. This injured them with all thinking people. I did not hesitate to roast him about it.

He claimed we put Joseph Smith in Christ's place and teach it to the people. This I exposed to be untrue and read from Doctrine and Covenants that there is no other name under heaven or among men whereby we can be saved.

When we reached his proposition I read from T. W. Grafton's life of Campbell to prove they claimed him to be a prophet just as much as we claim for Joseph. This seemed to be a new one to him. Also how the first ones were baptized; Thomas Campbell had them to wade out in Buffalo Creek up to their arms and he went out on an old root and stuck their heads under the water. (T. W. Grafton's life of Campbell.) When I turned the "Crimes of Preachers" on his church it was just like when a boy I put fire to a yellow jacket's nest—mad as get out. But Bro. Keck moderated nicely, being assisted by a good chairman.

The debate passed off nicely and a complete victory for the truth. Some came to me at the close with tears in their eyes and gave me money, one of their preachers with the rest.

I left Bro. Keck on the battlefield to baptize and preach, and Campbellism to die completely out in five years at least.

I am ready for the next debate necessary. W. W. Blalock wanted to affirm the Missionary Baptist Church after the debate, but not being baptized as yet by that people, I informed him he did not represent them.

Editors Herald:—Am still striving to battle for gospel triumph, in the Pottawattamie district. God has greatly blessed us, both in sowing and watering the seed sown. The greater portion of the last two months, we have sought to revive the work in and around Fontanelle, Adair County, having the hearty cooperation of the saints, making my home principally with Bro. and Sr. J. H. Baker, they doing all that could be done to make it pleasant for us.

While there we led six into the waters of regeneration, doing preaching in various schoolhouses, in the regions round about. Interest generally good.

Leaving Fontanelle, 24th ult., we arrived at Macedonia, where we had the pleasure of meeting Bro. W. H. Kelley, he being called there by illness and death of his brother. We thence made our way to attend the conference of above district, which convened at Wheeler 25th and 26th, where we met our sub-missionary in charge, the ever-genial, busy Bro. Henry Kemp, also J. S. Strain of Council Bluffs, and other workers of the district. We enjoyed a pleasant session. Bro. S. Butler, one of the veterans of the cause, located at Fontanelle, is firm in the faith, and he and his amiable wife have treated me kindly.

From Wheeler to Carson, thence home via Council Bluffs to partake of Thanksgiving bounties both temporal and spiritual.

Left Magnolia, the 2d inst., for Crescent, where we expect to remain a week, thence to eastern points in the district.

We recently received word from Bro. James Abbey, of Carson, in which he states that on October 2, he had two fingers cut off in a cane mill, and did not experience any pain whatever in the loss, or recovery, and feels it was due to prayers of the saints and his gospel obedience. We baptized him last winter, and he desires his testimony to appear, that it may be a testimony to others. Determined by the Holy Spirit's assistance to continue for salvation of souls, I am,

Yours in hope of triumph,

D. R. CHAMBERS.

HILO, Hawaii, Nov. 15.

Editors Herald:—This finds me on the island of Hawaii, the largest of the Hawaiian group. The trip over from Honolulu was the most unpleasant experience of my life. Have been seasick many times, but never knew one could suffer so much and live. The little "Kenau" can jump and plunge like a bucking horse; then she climbs up a wave, suddenly dropping till you wonder where she will bring up. You soon find out however. For fear this would become monotonous she rolls while you brace both feet and hands to keep in your berth. This exercise is varied every few moments by your stomach disgorging its contents, and your liver throwing off its bile. Handy little soup dishes (I used two) are attached to the side of your berth to hold your contributions to the fish food fund. Little did I care how much water came in through the open port or how soon she took a header and went to the bottom of the sea. My cogitations were like these: Call this ocean Pacific? peaceful indeed! I wish old Balboa was where I could tongue lash him for deceiving people with that lie. Well; may I live through the ocean trip to America, and then I pray my days of sea voyaging will be over.

From my window I can look upon Mount Mauna Kea, 13,800 feet high. The snow upon its top is a reminder of home and conditions soon to prevail there. The cool land breezes sweeping over the mountains make this a more delightful climate than Honolulu. Mauna Loa, that celebrated the Fourth of July by a grand eruption, is in plain view. I walked to the lava flow of 1887, which is within one mile of town; black, twisted, broken, once a mighty river of fire, awful to contemplate.

Ere leaving Honolulu we were promised the use of a little chapel on the edge of the town, and occupied it for four services. Then the native Christians with the spirit of their New England Congregational missionaries, said we were not of them, so must not hold other services there. The news spread. Members of the Utah Church hearing of our difficulty came and offered the use of their church as often as we wanted it. Learning of a hall near by, the owner, after an interview, offered its use freely, we paying for use of electric lights. Audiences are not large, but are becoming interested. It seems like an American missionary experience, with fair prospect of establishing the work here.

While looking for a building, called upon the Japanese Christian minister and asked to rent his church. He is appointed by the Hawaiian board of Missions, and as his living depends upon obedience he found an excuse. Through him I learn of the decadence of modern Christianity in Japan. Among the educated class they have studied the Higher Criticism and Evolution until they graduate full-fledged infidels. The world by its wisdom cannot find out God, but praise to his holy name, those obeying the gospel message for which Jesus suffered on Calvary, are recipients of the Holy Spirit and thus obtain a knowledge of the doctrine; become God's witnesses to this generation, and are able to stand firm midst the machinations of both men and demons! Have had several pleasant talks with a priest of Buddha at his temple. He appears anxious for information concerning the faith, while I am learning of Theosophy. Frequent requests come from the Japanese for information; we have nothing in their own language for them. It seems to me an opportune time for the church to prepare articles setting forth the fact that there is a God and that the gospel reveals his will unto men. We can have it translated, and thus begin to feed the hungry souls among the Yankees of the West. They tire of sectarian husks. Shall we as a people leave them to starve for the bread of life which we freely offer to others? Many thousands are in these islands now, and thousands more coming. Bro. Waller, assisted by Bro. Ingham, is looking after the English and Hawaiian services in the city. They are full of courage under trying conditions. Bro. Poepeo is assisting on the Evening, our church paper, by setting the type, after which he will join me here. Bro. Keawe-haku, an employé at the custom house, is assisting in the meantime. The months of August and September were made pleasanter by the presence of Bro. Fred Mills and wife, of California. After two days' experience in the real thing Bro. Fred decided he was not built right for a missionary. I bade them good-bye with a heavy heart and wished, how I wished, that the steamer was to carry me towards the loved ones at home.

Hopefully,

U. W. GREENE.

Editors Herald:—Our Thanksgiving Day is over here, but I feel to thank God every day for blessings of a loving Father. Dearsaints, praise ye the Lord all over the land, praise the Lord, our souls. While we live will we praise the Lord. O sing praises unto our God while we have breath. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose help is in the Lord his God.

I spent the day of Thanksgiving at No. 3477 Cottage Grove Avenue with the saints, returning home in the evening with a basketful of provision given me by the noble saints, may God always bless them. And about 5:45 o'clock the colored saints gathered at No. 1802 Armour Avenue with roast chickens, mince pies, and cakes, and cooked vegetables, and a dear sister, Sr. Joseph and her lady friend who are not members of my mission, but goodhearted. We hope ere long to see them members of the Saints' Church. She brought a fine roast turkey and a pail of gumbo soup with rice and fruits of different kinds and the saints and friends and wife and the writer sat down to a fine evening dinner. And O such eating! Surely we can say it is good to be a saint in latter days.

At 8:15 p. m. the writer preached a Thanksgiving address; text Psalms 50:14, 15.

I had the pleasure of preaching the evening of November 27 in the south part of the city at a private house—upper crust colored people. I hope to some good in that part of the city. Pray for us.

BAXTER SPRINGS, Kan., Dec. 4.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned to this place after a month's sojourn in the Indian Territory. The work is moving slowly under the faithful labors of Elders S. W. Simmons, Smart, and Haden. I labored for one week with S. W. Simmons at Fairland. Six were added to the church at this place. I preached for one week at the home of Bro. J. D. Kelley, twelve miles south of Fairland on Grand River, and also one week at the Ballard schoolhouse, five miles further south. I had quite fair crowds at the above-named places and trust some good was done.

I was glad to notice that quite a number of the saints were of Lamanitish origin. I had the privilege of hearing Elder Noah Carhoo preach. He is of the Wyandotte tribe, and I believe he is destined to do a good work among his people.

My experience in this field will prove valuable to me, I think, in the future. I am now conducting a protracted meeting at the Mount Hope schoolhouse with Elder W. Doty. There is a good interest manifested and I look for good results. I see no reason why the cause should not flourish throughout this country.

My health has not been of the best since coming here; still I have not been hindered to any great extent; have felt well in the gospel and hope to continue faithful to the end. All concerned will take notice that I am laboring in this field by the consent of the First Presidency and Bishop. My mission address is Baxter Springs, Kansas.

I. P. BAGGERLY.

WILTON JUNCTION, Iowa, Nov. 29.

Editors Herald:—We arrived at this place last night to see if we could get a place to hold meetings, but have failed so far, but don't know yet how the outcome will be.

We have just closed a series of meetings at the city of Muscatine, last Sunday night. Was assisted by our worthy brother, A. J. Keck, who gave us some good instructions. We met according to appointment last Monday night, the 27th, to see about organizing a branch in that city. The house was called to order by the writer. After the usual opening exercises it was provided that the writer act as president pro tem., Bro. A. J. Keck as secretary. The saints then expressed themselves that they desired to see a branch organized, and the Spirit of the Master was present. Bro. C. G. Dykes was chosen presiding officer, Bro. William Whal clerk, and Bro. R. R. Ankens treasurer. Rules to govern the branch were then adopted. The Spirit of the Master was with us during the entire session.

And now when I look back a year ago when I came to the city and there was not a saint there to testify of this glorious work, only Bro. C. G. Dykes and the writer at the first meeting, and now we have a branch with seventeen members and more to join, I feel to rejoice. When I left there last Tuesday for other parts of the district, I felt sad to think I had to go, perhaps never to meet again in this life. It seemed some like leaving home.

Dear saints, at Muscatine and near by, remember that there is a warm spot in my heart for you; and the pleasant times that we have had in the gospel work cluster around my memory and I hope that they will ever linger there; and I thank God that my labor has not all been in vain the past year; and I hope and pray that that loving Spirit that was there during the night of the organization may ever abide with you and all the children of God and my loved ones at home, and when we are through with this life that we will meet in that sweet by and by where parting will be no more.

Your brother in Christ,

W. A. SMITH.

GRAND VALLEY, Pa., Nov. 29.

Editors Herald:—I last wrote you from Philadelphia, in August, where I was trying to keep cool, while the saints of the Massachusetts district were enjoying the pleasures of the reunion at Dennisport by the sea.

On August 14 I received a telegram that my little girl was very sick, and to come home immediately. When I arrived home I found the little spirit had departed; could not wait to say good-bye to Papa. On September 12 another little girl came to our home to gladden our hearts, and we trust it may be the will of our heavenly Father to allow her to remain.

I labored in the Massachusetts district until November 3, then left for Warren County, Pennsylvania, via Philadelphia. The saints in Philadelphia were glad to see me, and I certainly was glad to see them. The Sunday school convention was a success, and all seemed to enjoy the services. The writer talked on the methods of teaching in the morning service, and preached to the people at night. On Monday night I baptized two young men in the cool waters of the old Delaware, and trust they may be an honor and help to the church. Tuesday night we met the young people of the Religio, and found them anxious to do all they could for the advancement of the work.

Wednesday night I boarded the train for the western part of the State, and arrived at Grand Valley at noon the next day. Found Sr. Kelley at home and received a welcome. As I heard Bro. F. C. Smith was at McGraw, I thought I would walk over and join him at the above place. I stopped at Bro. Hartrup's and then called on our staunch friends, Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead. At night I listened to a gospel sermon by Bro. Smith; the next night the writer preached at McGraw and Bro. Smith at Hemlock, a new place. My heart was made glad to meet again our kind friends of former years, Mr. and Mrs. Sampson, who came a number of miles to hear the preacher. They were the first ones to care for the writer when nearly all the people about McGraw were opposed to the work, and are still friends to the cause. I continued at McGraw over Sunday.

We could not do much the following week on account of bad weather. Preached to full house at McGraw on Sunday eve, November 19, then went to Gossville and Excelsior Union church, and began meetings on Tuesday evening, Bro. Smith continuing at Hemlock. I wish I could report big crowds and big interest, but if I speak at all I must speak the truth, and there is neither the crowds nor the interest there was in this section of the country two years ago. Bro. Smith came over to Gossville day before yesterday, and preached at the Union church last night, while I tried the temper of the people on Goodwill Hill, a new place, a short distance from Grand Valley. We will continue here as wisdom and interest may warrant.

Mr. Kelley does all he can for the work, and entertains the elders at his home. If the time ever comes when the elders are to testify of the goodness of those who have fed, clothed, etc., the servants of God, I certainly will have a good deal of testifying to do. While at Gossville I was called on to bless two children of Bro. and Sr. Gregory, and three of Sr. Maburn's. The Holy Spirit was there to bless, and we felt surely all of the ordinances of the house of the Lord are necessary, and how good it is to have the special care of the Lord over our little ones. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, of Gossville, are as kind as ever, and the elders find a warm welcome at their home.

The saints in this section of the country are willing to do all they can for the work, but are scattered over quite a territory, and it is rather hard for them to get together. However, they have a Sunday school in the vicinity of McGraw and are doing well in this way. Sr. Melon is the superintendent and is faithful in her office. Bro. Burdick and family are doing well and are firm in the faith. The preachers and people still tell a good many stories about us, but none seem to have courage enough to oppose openly.

Yours in bonds,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

PEORIA, I. T., Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—This little mining camp has never before heard this great latter-day work. They seem to be well pleased with it. I came here alone and without money and it was hard to get a place to stop on account of a man by the name of Smelker who came through here preaching for the Christian Church and he beat some in one way and some another, and finally they got after him and he left his horse and ran and got away; so they are afraid of strangers.

Well, I let the merchant and justice of the peace read my license, which is recorded at Muscoga, Indian Territory, and also my certificate of appointment, and when they read I. N. White's name as the one by whom I was ordained, a nice, pleasant young man says: "I know that man White, for I heard him and Braden debate at Eldorado Springs, Missouri." Then he took my horse and put it in the livery stable, and got me a place to stay. Now the doctor of the town is my friend and everybody else; I can stay as long as I want to. I feel free, just like the free bird, and may I ever after this keep myself just this way.

Well, the work is moving onward here. This is one of our finest openings. May it be protected and not neglected. I have tried not to lounge around the saints, but open up the work the best I could. May the good work go on.

Yours for truth,

W. H. SMART.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.

After returning from this morning's services, we took down from the book shelf "Heroes of the Revolution" and read, under the caption, "Declaration of Independence," the "facts" proving George of Hanover's "object" to be "the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States."

The reading of this document is generally given on the courthouse steps later in the year, even as it was first presented, in July 1776; but the sermon to-day, November 30, 1899, led us to the contemplation of those early days when redcoats with shilling buttons were plentiful in the Colonies. There were, they tell us, only two or three hundred present to hear it "and not ten decent coats in the crowd," (that's about the number out to hear the gospel declared a few hours ago.)

Be that as it may, all honor to the tall and strong farmer heroes, for with their long rifles they won the victory; and they didn't have hot flapjacks and huckleberry pie in their mess, nor get palaces for their pay when they came home from war.

The saints have all along, like the followers of Penn and Fox, believed that "let who will be king, we shall be his subjects;" but we have, we hope, moved many steps higher, for their creed tended to "cramp enterprise, limit the innocent joys of life, and to render progress impossible and submission to every base man or government a duty."

Much is said in the Letter, published in this city, about a "New Republic," the public ownership of lands, and the advocacy of the principles of justice and equality. The signs of the times begin to look more favorable, for, like the sturdy colonists, the people begin to disbelieve in many things such as the "depriving of the benefit of trial by jury," "mock trials," and "pretended legislation." But we will bring to mind the things for which the preacher Bro. W. T. Bozarth was thankful this morning.

The anthem, "Lift up your Heads," was sung with much vim, and the 9th Psalm, beginning with "I will praise thee, O Lord with my whole heart; I will show forth all thy marvelous works," was read, and then among other good thoughts expressed were these. We as a people have met to thank God for the rights and privileges we to-day enjoy, and among them of worshipping without being molested or in fear.

If the people of this nation in the past under the unfavorable conditions in which they wrought could be thankful, how much more so should we be with our pleasant homes, our colleges, and institutions of learning, living 'neath the banner of liberty without harm.

He spoke of the advancement made in all departments of life. Trials are necessary, and if we as a nation have been called to pass through the scourges of war and various calamities the great Creator has designed that his people should be educated and disciplined for their higher development.

We are under obligation to praise God for our national rights; but above and beyond all, that we have been enabled to rear this place of worship, and that our Father meets with us, encouraging us with the promise that he will assist us through all the conflicts of life.

Who should be so thankful as we with the great gospel light shining upon our souls and having the testimony that this glorious work is true?

Tongue cannot express the many obligations we are under; and may we on this occasion and always be enabled to express our gratitude and praise to God.

After a season of thanksgiving and testimony, in which several took part, being thankful for life and health and happiness for living in this age of the world, for peace and prosperity, for answers to prayer, for the spirit existing among us as a nation and as individuals, for blessings in our homes and for the privileges of his house, and after singing "America" and dismissal was the cordial greeting and friendly good-bye.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 4.

Editors Herald:—The saints in Brooklyn have been cheered and strengthened once more by the preaching of our esteemed friend and brother, Elder Joseph Luff. Although our brother was suffering to a great extent physically, yet when he entered into the sacred desk one could scarcely discern any defect whatever. The same earnest and fervent zeal for the Master's cause was foremost. Every eye was opened, hearts were stirred, and all were eager to catch the words as they flowed from our worthy brother's lips. We have all been blessed and edified.

The work in the city of Brooklyn is in a much better condition than for some time. The condition of things in Utah and in connection with B. H. Roberts is bringing the work before the people, and causing them to make investigations, and to see if these things are as reported. So we are hopeful that we shall soon be properly understood.

I enclose a clipping sent to me by Elder A. E. Stone, of New Canaan, Connecticut, so you can see how the work is moving in that part of the field.

There is some sickness among the saints at present, but the Lord is mindful of his people and is blessing by the administration of the elders.

Your brother in Christ,

ELDER JOSEPH SQUIRE.

We publish a letter from Albert E. Stone, of this town, who is an elder in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, of the Latter Day Saints. Mr. Stone denies the imputations that Miss Ludlum, who spoke in the Congregational church Sunday evening on "Mormonism," cast upon his church, when she classed them with the Utah Mormons. Mr. Stone writes a plain straightforward denial of the truth of her statements made concerning the creed of which he is an earnest and consistent follower, and we print it cheerfully in justice to Mr. Stone and his church. His life among us since his attachment to this church has been everything that morality and good church membership could call for. We have attended meetings of the Reorganized Church and heard nothing but good orthodox religion expounded. We did not hear Miss Ludlum's address, but we incline to the opinion that she was mistaken when she attacked the motives and doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ.—Messenger, New Canaan, Conn.

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—I wish to let those of you who are concerned know through the Herald of our whereabouts. When we left Vera Cruz, Douglas County, Missouri, one year ago last May, we went to Lawrence County, but not liking it there we did not expect to stay long, and we did not know of any branch near us.

Elder J. C. Chrestensen was at our house while there and said it was not necessary to write about our letters until we were settled, so we have now come six miles south of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, near the Huntsville road, but are not permanently settled yet; and if there is a Latter Day Saint within fifty miles of us we are not aware of it. However there may be. If there are any, we would be glad for them to call on us, or address us, telling us how to find them. My son and his family are here and in all there are five of us belonging to the church.

Your brother,

A. J. SEDORIS.

NELSONVILLE, Ohio, Dec. 5.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since there has anything appeared in the Herald from this part of the field, but though we have no great victories to report, yet we have been trying to do what we could in the interest of the work.

I have spent some time in this section of country in connection with Elder G. W. Hull, trying to spread the work, and open up in new places; and we have had some success. We opened in a new place two and a half miles from here, and although our congregations were small they were very attentive, and some have expressed themselves as being satisfied that the doctrine is true, and I think in the near future some will obey.

I have also done some work at Sand Run, where at one time there was a flourishing branch, but a number have moved away, and others had become discouraged, and they had discontinued their meetings, except Sunday school; but they have now covenanted to renew their efforts, and have begun holding meetings and feel much encouraged. Last Sunday I baptized four into the fold. Notwithstanding I am presiding officer of this district I had not visited that branch for about twelve months. I am almost alone except what the officers of branches are doing, some of whom are doing well, and about all they can, and others are doing but very little. I have been trying to open up the work in new places, and also to regulate the membership, and at times have acted as high priest, seventy, elder, priest, and teacher, and in so large a district with so few laborers the work will suffer more or less.

Bro. G. W. Hull, since locating here, has been active in trying to get the work before the people of this place. He has applied for admittance into every hall and churchhouse in this place, and was refused by each and every one, until last Sunday he applied for the colored M. E. chapel, and after hearing him preach at their hour of service they agreed to let us use the house one week, and the Lord willing we will begin there tonight, and Bro. Hull will likely report the results later on.

I expect to labor in this vicinity until the 14th, then I will go to Coalton and Weldon, to attend to some matters there; then on to other parts of the district, as there are branches I have not visited for more than twelve months. I have been looking for help for some time, but so far have looked in vain. I am often asked why the ministry do not go forth two and two, and what should be my answer? I have asked that question at different times, and have been answered, "We have not enough men to send them two and two." Then I have wondered if the Lord did not know how many there were. And again I have been answered, "It is not wise to send them out by twos for the reason that their abilities are not equal; some can outreach others and the people would prefer the best preacher and thereby cause jealousy. Then again I wonder, Did not the Lord know just what kind of material he had to work with? I think if two ministers cannot go out to labor together without jealousy, and if they have not enough of the Spirit of the Master to endure the success of fellow ministers, one or both ought to go home and go to work at something else, and make room for those who can labor together without being envious of each other's success. I think the time is now too short to stop to parley or get jealous over another's success.

A few days ago I visited a retired minister of the Christian Church. He is in his eighty-third year. About twenty-five years ago I was immersed by him; he was then a minister of the Christian order or church. They do not baptize for the remission of sins, and I told the old man that when I united with the Christian (Campbellite) Church they received me on the baptism I received at his hands, and I said, "Does that not look like you Christians had no authority?" He said, "I know we have none." I then said, "What do you think about us having the full and complete system?" He said, "If you have what you claim you have, you have it." My prayer is that he may yet obey the gospel.

Work in this coal field is booming; work enough for all. Well, I hope to continue in this great work, and that I may do much good. I am,

Your brother in the conflict, and still hopeful,
JAMES MOLEK.

WEST PLAINS, Mo., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed find death notice of Elder C. M. Bootman, of West Plains, Missouri. In him we have lost a valiant worker in the gospel field in this district. He was a power for good, and a man of fine mind, with a strong will power, full of love for the work.

For the past six months or more he has been a great sufferer and in all this time of pain and agony he has manifested the patience and faith of a Job, having oftentimes been blessed through the means provided to that end. But like Paul or Timothy, the thorn was not removed, but by the grace of God he endured the pain, being tenderly cared for and nursed by the hands of loving children and friends. He expressed no fears of death, but had a desire to live to see all of his children within the fold of the kingdom, but was willing to submit to the will of the Father.

The West Plains branch is now left without the head that has for so long a time given life and wise counsel to the body; but as God is at the helm of the great ship of Zion we shall trust in him and his ability to turn and overturn all things to the good of all who love the Lord. We have oft heard the remark, "What would become of the church if Joseph should be taken away—how can the Temple Lot be secured and a temple built?" That has given me no trouble, as that will be the Lord's own business.

In gospel bonds,

J. C. CHRESTENSEN.

EXETER, Mo., Dec. 6.

Editors Herald:—The debate between J. D. Erwin and Mr. Blalock, of the Christian Church, held five miles east of Cassville, closed last Thursday night. Debate lasted eight nights, four sessions on each proposition; each one affirming his church; house filled to overflowing every night.

Our cause was ably defended by J. D. Erwin. We consider it a complete victory for truth; removing much prejudice and religious ignorance that is in the minds of the people. We heard some threats of hanging during debate, but at the end we had many friends on our side. About all the argument Blalock had was the usual criticisms on Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. They do that to dodge the real issue—church organization.

Yours for truth till conflict is over,

F. C. KECK.

God is he who stands at the end of all science, the unknowable mystery we call life or force; the wisest cannot get far enough in wisdom to find him, but God also stands at the beginning of life, the first, simplest, sweetest of all knowable things—love. How much easier to find God therefore, at the beginning of life than at the end of knowledge!"

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

A PRAYER.

"The work of our hands, establish thou it,"
How often with thoughtless lips we pray!
But he who sits in the heavens shall say:
"Is the work of your hands so fair and fit
That ye dare so pray?"

Softly we answer: "Lord, make it fit,
The work of our hands so that we may Lift up our eyes and dare to pray:
'The work of thy hands, establish thou it,' Forever and aye."

WEBB CITY, Mo., Nov. 20.

Dear Sisters:—Why is it the letters are so few in the Home Column? Is it possible they find place in the waste basket? Or is each one waiting for someone else to write? It has been a long time since I have tried to make a visit, and during that time I have had sickness and many other disappointments, such as are common in life, and at times it has seemed hard to hold fast to the rod of iron which leads to the tree of life. Yet I can say to-day that my hopes are brighter, and I feel determined to press on to the end of the race; and if there is anything that gives me strength and courage, it is to read two or three good letters from mothers, written for the Home Column, for mothers know how to sympathize with each other.

I will be fifty-nine this month, and have raised five children. All have married and left the home nest, yet all but one linger near. He is far away in Clintonville, Wisconsin. It seemed very hard to see him go, and I thought of the many sisters who have given up their sons and companions for the gospel's sake, and I said if it was only for the gospel I could give him up. Then these thoughts came to me, Worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. They were as a balm to my aching heart, and I tried to turn my affections more upon our Savior, and then peace and joy came to my relief, and I thought perhaps there were others who were grieving over their children that might find comfort the same way. It is but natural we should love our children, but we should love the Lord above all else; and he says, If you love me you will keep my commandments. And he will be with us, and we shall not be barren nor unfruitful, as to the things of God and his Spirit.

Dear saints, let us take courage and press on, for the battle is not to the swift, but to those who endure to the end. And when sickness comes, let us put our trust in him who says there is not a sparrow falls to the ground without his care. Then, are we not of more worth than a sparrow? I can testify I have proved and know that God will hear and answer our prayers, and that this glorious gospel has been restored again with all its gifts and blessings, inasmuch as we live worthy to receive them. May the Lord help us all to live worthy, and put forth a greater effort to serve him, is the prayer of your sister,
R. M. BRADLEY.

GOD IS TRUE.

Though kinship seems to fail you,
And your real friends are few;
Though scoffs and sneers assail you,
Cheer up, for God is true.

Though skies look gray and cheerless,
As oftentimes skies will do,
Faith that is firm and fearless,
Hold fast, for God is true.

The arm of flesh will weaken,
But God's will strengthen you;
Our watchword and our beacon
Be ever, God is true.

FROM THE FIELD.

We have received several reports of the Sunday school work done at the various reunions of 1899. Some of them are very interesting, from the fact that they give the methods of conducting the work in the various localities, and also show to some extent the interest of the saints in the welfare of the children and youth.

We are made to wonder, sometimes, how it is that so many well meaning people among us can close their eyes to the eternal welfare of our children and youth. They are so very anxious to hear "preachin'" that they allow a sort of selfishness to creep over them, and they want all the time spent in preaching, forgetting that there are perhaps more youth and children on the camp grounds of our reunions than there are adults. These children are not able to understand the preaching. Many of the youth either cannot or will not content themselves to stay to hear. In the Sunday school, they are attracted, held, and interested. At least a very large majority of them are.

At one reunion last year, after we had worked long and hard to increase the interest in the Sunday school work, and had swelled our attendance from a little over one hundred to over four hundred and sixty at the regular sessions of Sunday school, and after we had occupied three, only, of the regular sessions of the reunion, a good old sister kindly remonstrated with us for "using so much time that should have been devoted to preaching." It seemed that some one had come in from the country that afternoon to hear some preaching, and was disappointed. We tried to reason that the work of the Sunday school must be built up for the good of the church, and that it was necessary to work for it when we were together at these reunions. And that while we very much regretted that anyone should miss hearing the word when they wanted to, we could not but feel that the interest of the whole church could not be sacrificed for the satisfaction of some one person who, perhaps, had been hearing for these many years, and had not heard enough yet to get them to the moving point. Look at the facts and decide for yourself, whether or not the best interest of God's work were conserved. There were thirty-nine regular sessions of the reunion. Of these the Sunday school and Religio occupied three, prayer service nine, preaching twenty-six, and one business session. Can it be possible that the Sunday school work was "occupying too much time?" There were several other sessions of Sunday school and Sunday school institute work, but they were all at "off" hours, hours that would not have been used otherwise.

Think again. Our children go to the reunions, and are kept there for eight or ten days, with nothing but fun and frolic for their entertainment. No, that was once the program, but it is changed now. We say "nothing but fun and frolic," because they can understand no part of the services. And to ask a child to go to the benches and sit through four sessions daily, of which they understand nothing, is asking too much. You would not do it yourself. The hours are long and tiresome, coming four a day. The thought of going to church becomes repulsive to them. They do not go willingly. Our more elderly people will often go to sleep during services, and often some will go away, because they cannot stay awake. Better to have some variety of services, a change more often. Many of the reunion committees are recognizing the fact that three sermons a day for ten days is too much, and are dispensing with the afternoon preaching service. We believe this to be an advance step. This done will greatly assist the Sunday school and Religio work. Heretofore it has been the custom, in most places, to hold Sunday school and Religio work at off hours, either before the regular work of the day began, or after the afternoon session, or both. This is much better than no work at all, but it is very tiresome upon some of the workers. Regular hours secure fuller attendance and better interest—a better success in every way. When will all reunions extend to us the helping hand?

BRO. J. J. BILLINSKY, writing of the St. Louis district reunion, says: "Brother Robinson reached here Saturday morning, and reached the grounds a little before noon. He was delayed in getting out there by not making good connections. He arrived there, however, in time to put in a good talk before the close of the morning meeting. . . . They all spoke very highly of Bro. Robinson's talk in the morning, and all seemed to be pleased with the afternoon meeting. The evening meeting was very good, and seemed to be enjoyed by all, except some thought the Sunday school Advocate too long and "dry." It took about eighteen or twenty minutes to read it. We have a number here yet who look for an entertainment, and do not prepare to do any hard thinking. But I think I can see considerable improvement in this respect in the last two years. Bro. Robinson gave us an excellent talk of about thirty minutes, throwing out many valuable suggestions. He also helped me out in the Sunday school Sunday morning with suggestions and a nice little talk. I was very anxious to have him give us a lecture on Sunday school work Sunday morning, but those in charge, or some of them at least, thought the interest so good that they ought not to give up the preaching for anything, and I thought they seemed to think it was too bad that the Sunday school had Saturday evening.

The only concession I could get for Sunday school, on Sundays, was from 8:30 to 9:30; and the first Sunday we were very much disappointed in getting in the seats, and it was nine before we could begin the Sunday school. We had a short session, however, and all seemed to enjoy it, especially the children.

"I did not overlook your suggestion to hold Sunday school sessions during the week, but the trouble was in having someone to take charge of it."

Of the Sunday school work at the Mission reunion held at Independence, Missouri, our general secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, sends "minutes," and adds his comment. You will notice that it is not the quality or amount of work done that disappoints him, but the fact that there were not the ones present that needed the work most. The "stand-bys" are always on hand. You may depend upon them to be ever ready to do their part. And if there is any good thing to be passed, they want their portion. We do not see how the work reported could be done and do but little good. But of course it would do many times more good if the ones that needed it were there to get it. He says: "I'm not proud of it. There were so many opportunities of different kinds to take away interest that but little real good was accomplished, according to my notion. The old liners who always attend institute were there, but we cannot interest those who are absent simply the stand-bys being present. I am not over pleased. I hope I am in error."

"It is a great thing to be a master and to make men weep and laugh by your genius, but it is greater to be a genuine man and to make men hopeful and gentle just by living among them."

PRIMARY LESSON ILLUSTRATION CARDS.

They are outline pictures, representing the incidents of the lessons, to be colored with crayon or water colors, by the children. Full directions for their use will be given in the Quarterly. These cards will be furnished FREE to every school, as many as they have of primary pupils. As there are more primary children than the number of Primary Quarterlies used, it will be necessary for each school to send an order for the number of cards needed to supply each primary pupil. Orders should be sent at once, as these cards are for a part of the lessons of first quarter of 1900. Let superintendents and secretaries, as soon as they see this announcement, take the necessary steps to send the order at once. It is desired to make a thorough test of the practicability of this feature of work.

Send orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa. 4

NOTICES.

To the Sunday School Workers of Chatham District; Greeting:—Our fall convention is past, and as we each take up the duties imposed upon us, let us do so with the determination to cope with the long, dreary winter season just before us. If we love our work as we should, this task will neither be arduous nor unsuccessful. Instead of "letting the school drop for the winter," let us resolve to work as we never worked before.

Through the persistent efforts, the untiring zeal and love of officers and teachers, we are certainly coming to the front. So let us continue, saints, to be united in our efforts.

Superintendents, please don't forget to let me hear from your schools by the first of each month, according to previous request, as this is really a benefit to the work in our district.

I have not been able to do much Sunday school work since October, but expect after Christmas to be more at liberty, and expect to devote nearly all my time to Sunday school work.

There is much to be done in our district, and if we go hand in hand and heart to heart, a glorious success will be the result. Your sister, Jessie A. Hackett, Superintendent of Chatham district Sunday school association. Buxton, November 29.

THE WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

My exegesis of Matthew 20 and 22, Mark 12, and Luke 20 from my chart puzzled Braden, and he had only one answer for all and that was: If Jo Smith was the man at the eleventh hour, he had to stand there all the day long—from Adam up to this day. This was his first and last except to put the following interpretation on Matthew 20: It was to show that Christ was no respecter of persons, but all, both saint and sinner, had a right to come to him and receive of his rewards. This went back on him when I compared it with Luke 20 and Matthew 22. I showed how God commenced his work with Adam "early in the morning;" how the people strayed from him and they were destroyed by the flood for their transgressions; how God in the third hour called a Noah and started his work anew; how they were led by prophets, and presently a large majority of the people grew wicked and these were under the hand of the Pharaohs, and the more righteous ones led by Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, till they in later days became wicked and God suffered them to be sold into Egypt; and how in time a Moses was raised up for their deliverance in the sixth hour; and an angel appeared unto him in the burning bush; and how God reinstated them; and how they were led by prophets afterwards, till they commenced to stray away from him again. Here comes in the ninth hour by an angel appearing to Zacharias, and John the Baptist is raised up like another Moses to "straighten up the crooked paths;" and how the "Son of God" was here introduced, as found in Matthew 22 and Mark 12 and Luke 20. How there was a "falling away" afterward, and John was cast upon the Isle of Patmos, and was permitted to see the corruption of the church; and in chapter 4 see a door opened in heaven and a voice said: "Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter;" how he saw the church go into the wilderness, and afterward "another angel flew in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel." This the eleventh hour and the time that Mr. Smith claimed to receive a message from an angel.

On my chart was a fine picture of an angel coming to Moses, another one to Zacharias, and another to young Joseph Smith as he was kneeling imploring of God to show him which of all the churches were right. I struck Braden hard along this line, and asked him to explain to the people about this angel of Revelation 14:6, 7, since it was an event that had to be "hereafter"—from the day John saw his vision. Braden simply ignored it, till I crowded him so hard on it and he abruptly said: "Let White prove that that angel was Jo Smith, and then I will examine it." Well, it did not take me long to tell Braden that I did not believe that angel to be Jo Smith, as he called him, any more than I believe the angel that appeared in the burning bush was Moses; or the angel that appeared to Zacharias, was Zacharias. The people had no difficulty to see the strait that Braden was driven to. When I showed that Joseph only claimed, like Moses and Zacharias, that the angel had visited him, and delivered a message; then Braden said: "Let White prove that the angel came to Smith, then I will examine it." While Martin Harris, David Whitmer, and Oliver Cowdery, were eyewitnesses to the fact that an angel did appear to Joseph Smith, yet there were no eyewitnesses to Moses seeing an angel, nor to Zacharias, more than their bare statement, and they both condemned the world by their testimony. I reminded Braden that he was not the first man who had rejected such testimony; but that a whole nation rejected it in Moses' time, and so did the Jews in Zacharias' time. They would not believe Moses nor Zacharias because they had not seen the angel themselves. This was a point that took well and it was easily seen that Braden was at sea for an answer. Yet, at this time I turned to my chart and showed how Moses, Zacharias, and Smith had each fulfilled predictions that were to be found in the Bible in the introduction of their respective work. This Braden could not meet; and did not even make an attempt.

Braden during the first proposition, charged Joseph Smith with being the father of polygamy; but brought no proof more than mere assertions. Said, since White has not denied it, it was true; and if I did he would prove it from our own mouth. I let Braden rest easy with his assertions till the last session, when in my opening speech I denied Joseph having any connection with polygamy, more than to both speak and write against it, and challenged Braden for the proof to the contrary. The fight was on in earnest, as Braden commenced to think perhaps I dare not deny it. Braden threatened me with this and that, but I told him plainly to march his evidence out if he had any, as I was here to look after it, and I expected to apply our agreement for all it was worth right upon this part of the issue. Reading the agreement: "In the discussion of the questions the Bible is to be the standard of evidence. All other evidence to be received upon its merit, subject to the rules governing such testimony before our civil courts."

I informed him that no hearsay testimony would be received, as such kind of testimony would not be received by any civil court in our land. Braden, as usual, presents Isaac Sheen's article found in Vol. 1, No. 1, of Saints' Herald. I put Sheen's article through a close cross-examination. Sheen says: "He (Smith) caused the revelation to be burned." I showed that such a statement from Sheen was evidence that he spoke from hearsay altogether; as this was the verbatim language of Brigham Young, when confronted with the facts that his so-called revelation on polygamy was not in the handwriting of Joseph Smith, nor of any of his secretaries or scribes ever employed by him; but in the handwriting of one of Brigham's colleagues, and not one witness to attest its genuineness as being a certified copy of the original. It relied wholly upon the bold statement of the notorious Brigham Young.

I introduced the testimony of Mrs. Emma Smith-Bidamon, Joseph Smith's wife, to the fact that she never burned any such a purported revelation; nor did she ever see such a one. It was all a hatched up story of Brigham's. Sheen quoted from hearsay—relying upon Brigham's statement—which statement Emma Smith vehemently denied when being confronted with it. Sheen gave Brigham and his followers the benefit of the doubt, and pleaded that Joseph "repented of his connection with this doctrine, and said it was of the Devil." Why did Sheen use such a statement? He had been informed by President Marks, and others, that Joseph said "he would go before the congregation and proclaim against it, and I [Marks] must go into the High Council, and he would prefer charges against those in transgression, and I must sever them from the church," etc. Thus, admitting, for argument's sake, Brigham's statement of Joseph being the instigator of the revelation, and then turning upon Brigham with his own witness where he afterwards repented of it and called it a doctrine of the Devil. Sheen had sense enough to know if Joseph was the instigator of this "Devil's doctrine," and was in polygamy himself; he would be the last man to call on the president of the stake at Nauvoo, and High Council, William Marks, and ask him to go before the High Council and he would prefer charges against all those that were connected with that doctrine, and he must sever them from the church, when he himself (Joseph) was one of the very parties himself that would be severed from the church. The idea of a head leader of a lot of criminals standing up in court against all of his pals! It is too preposterous to believe for one minute.

I here read an open letter by Charles W. Wandell to the President of the United States. This letter was prepared by him on the Utah problem. It reads: "These monstrous doctrines are all included in a mock revelation of Brigham Young's, ascribed to Joseph Smith; but which has never been traced back to him; and, indeed, cannot be by any rule of evidence admissible in a court of law or equity." Here I introduced the "Plaintiff's Abstract" of the late Temple Lot suit, which contained between fifty and seventy witnesses testifying before the "civil court" upon this very question; as the Respondents in this Temple Lot suit attempted to connect Joseph Smith with polygamy, hence making Smith's connection with polygamy one of the chief corner stones on which they expected to gain their suit. I held the large book up before the people to show the inexhaustible evidences that had passed through the civil courts to convict Joseph Smith of the very doctrine that he said when alive, was "of the Devil." Here I picked up Judge Philips' decision—the very man who had heard the case, and had carefully read and weighed every evidence that could be scraped up in the United States—not even leaving out Salt Lake City—Weighing Sheen's, Marks', Emma Smith's, and of nearly a hundred of others, and here is his decision, reading: "A considerable number of the officers and members of the church at Nauvoo did not ally themselves with any of the factions, and wherever they were they held onto the faith, refused to follow Brigham Young to Utah, and ever repudiated the doctrine of polygamy, which was the great rock of offense on which the church split after the death of Joseph Smith. . . . It is charged by the Respondents as an echo of the Utah Church, that Joseph Smith, 'the Martyr,' secretly taught and practiced polygamy; and the Utah contingent furnishes the evidence, and two of the women, to prove this fact. It perhaps would be uncharitable to say of these women that they have borne false testimony as to their connection with Joseph Smith; but, in view of all the evidence and circumstances surrounding the alleged intercourse, it is difficult to escape the conclusion that at most they were but sports in 'nest hiding.' . . . No such marriage ever occurred under the rules of the church, and no offspring came from the imputed illicit intercourse, although Joseph Smith was in the full vigor of young manhood, and his wife, Emma, was giving birth to healthy children in regular order, and was eniente at the time of Joseph's death."

That this congregation may know that I am not reading from hearsay I shall read to you the last statement in this Decision—reading: "I, John F. Philips, Judge of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a copy of the opinion handed down by me in the above-entitled cause. Witness my hand this 16th day of March, A. D., 1894.

"JOHN F. PHILIPS, Judge."

There were six attorneys employed in this famous case, and but one that belonged to my church, hence this congregation can see that there was no lack of legal ability to probe this thing to the bottom; and you have heard the decision of one of the most eminent judges that ever decided a case in one of our civil courts. Now, all on earth they lacked to prove that Joseph Smith was a polygamist was the testimony of my opponent, I, Clark Braden. If the Utahs and Hedrickites had only thought of Braden, they could have turned this case topsy turvy! What a pity that they hadn't had Braden's testimony—a man that knows all about it! I challenged Braden to produce one single sentence, syllable, or word from Joseph Smith's pen, where he favored polygamy. Braden knew me too well, to even make such an attempt. If any man was ever snowed under, that attempted to blacken Joseph Smith's character with polygamy, Braden is that man. One of the leading men of the town told me afterwards: "You lifted a load off from Joseph Smith's shoulders, in your argument upon polygamy."

I produced other fine evidence upon this subject that I do not give here on account of space, yet it would be vital and good for the reader if not posted on these points.

This ends the first proposition; and never in all my life did I feel better over the defense I made in favor of Joseph Smith being a prophet of God. The Book of Mormon is almost a new book to me; in its defense gleams of light would burst in on my vision till it seemed my very soul would magnify God for the precious word given to us in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. In the place of Braden's arguments weakening the saints, it was only a source of strength to them to see so able a man fall before the truth. To God, our Father, be all the praise.

I. N. WHITE.

BISHOP'S COURT PROCEEDINGS.

A special session of the Bishop's Court will be held in the office of the Bishopric, Lamoni, Iowa, beginning at 8 o'clock a. m., December 18, 1899. All parties having business with the Court please take notice and present such business by letter or in person or by proper counsel.

E. L. KELLEY,
Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 8, 1899.

SABBATARIAN THEORY A DELUSION.

I have just read Elder A. Haws' book on the Sabbath question, and can say that many of his arguments have not only the merit of being original, but most pointed and clear.

Bro. Haws has not left an inch of ground for the Edenic Sabbath to stand on; and I will say that anyone that wants to see the complete defeat of the chief theme of the Adventists, could not do better than to send twenty-five cents, the price of the book, and secure one of them. Send to A. Haws, No. 922 Third Street, Oakland, California.

J. C. CLAPP.

HALF FARE PERMITS FOR 1900.

The Western Passenger Association and the Central Passenger Association have both been notified that certificates of appointment from the General Conference of 1898 hold good until the General Conference of April, 1900. All general appointees have therefore been indorsed for half-fare permits, hence applications may be made at any time.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

Applicants located in Alabama, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Sonora (Mexico), Tennessee, and Texas, should address C. M. Pratt, Chairman Southwestern Passenger Bureau, Room 1320, Union Trust Building, St. Louis, Missouri. Those in other Territory of said association address Eben E. MacLeod (successor to B. D. Caldwell) Chairman, No. 77 Jackson Street, Chicago, Illinois.

All local ministers are referred to their respective missionaries in charge for indorsement, as heretofore.

Application blanks, ready about December 1-5, may be obtained from the Chairman, or from local agents. Little if any changes in rules have been made.

CENTRAL ASSOCIATION.

The following from Mr. F. C. Donald, Commissioner of Central Passenger Association, Monadnock Building, Chicago, will explain itself:—

On or about November 15, application blanks for joint annual clergy certificates entitling the holders to the reduced fares accorded to clergymen by the railway lines operating in the territory of the Central Passenger Association during the year 1900, will be in the hands of the various ticket agents. Commencing with the first of January, 1900, an important change will be made in the form of the annual clergy credential, concerning which we would, if consistent, be very glad to have you inform the clergymen who read your valued paper.

The card clergy certificate which has been used since the institution of the Clergy Bureau of this association three years ago will be entirely discontinued, and in its stead will be issued a book certificate of convenient size to be carried in the pocket, neatly bound in leather, containing one hundred consecutively numbered orders or requests for clergy tickets, one of which the holder of the certificate will be required to sign and deliver to the ticket agent for each ticket purchased.

The principal reason necessitating a change in the form of the certificate is as follows:—

Under the old system the lines constituting the Clergy Bureau have no knowledge of the annual certificates issued by this office, while, on the other hand, this office has been unable, without great inconvenience and expense, to obtain a record of the passage tickets issued by the agents on the annual certificates. As a result it has been possible for unscrupulous persons to counterfeit the card certificate by the photographic process with comparatively little fear of detection. It will readily be seen that this will be impossible under the new plan, as the agent will have a signed and numbered slip for each ticket issued, which slip will eventually reach this office, be compared with our reports, and, if spurious, the fraud immediately detected.

The cost of printing and mailing the book certificate will be many times greater than that of issuing and distributing the old-style card, and it will also be necessary to materially augment the clerical force of the Clergy Bureau. To meet the added expense it is deemed necessary to increase the fee required from those applying for the certificates from fifty cents to one dollar. In view of the importance of safeguarding these valuable credentials, the necessity of which is, I am sure, as fully appreciated by the clergy as by the railways, and of the great convenience afforded by the new certificate which will be available on fifty-one important lines of railway in the territory of the Central Passenger Association, we believe that the increased fee will not be regarded as a hardship. The holders of certificates who exhaust the entire one hundred requests and desire an additional supply, may obtain same by sending the covers of the original book to the undersigned accompanied by a remittance of fifty cents, covering the cost of issuing the new credential.

The annual clergy certificate of this Association will be issued on proper application to those coming within the requirements of the Clergy Rules, residing in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Wisconsin, West Virginia, and also in the following cities of New York and Pennsylvania, and points west thereof in the latter States: Allegheny, Pittsburgh, Erie, Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, and Salamanca; also at such points in the Province of Ontario as may be authorized by the roads operating therein.

Time clergy certificates, available for a limited period, will be issued to proper beneficiaries residing at any point in the United States or Canada who have occasion to remain more than thirty days in the territory of this Association.

Arrangements have also been consummated whereby the undersigned will issue, in behalf of the various railways belonging to the Clergy Bureau, trip permits to clergymen residing in Chicago, Illinois, or without the territorial boundaries of our Association.

Further particulars concerning trip permits may be obtained by application to local railway agents, or to the undersigned.

Respectfully yours,

F. C. DONALD, Commissioner.

CHICAGO, Illinois, November, 1899.

In bonds,

R. S. SALYARDS,
Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, December 6, 1899.

NOTICES.

Inasmuch as it is quite probable that a number of our missionaries will be passing through St. Louis between now and the time of the General Conference, we desire to extend an invitation to such to stop over Sunday in St. Louis and address us. Through the courtesy of the daily papers here we advertise our meetings in four of the daily papers, and if you will kindly notify us three or four weeks previous to your coming, when you expect to pass through, we will arrange to have your visit advertised through the papers. We trust that none will feel backward about notifying us about their coming, as we assure you that it will be highly appreciated. This notice is given with the approval of the missionary and sub-missionary in charge. By the president of St. Louis branch.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church Historian. It is a complete answer to and refuta- tion of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrep- resentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his asso- ciates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and con- clusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah mission- aries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

BURLINGTON'S "FAST MAIL" MAKES A RECORD-BREAKING RUN.

Another record-breaking run of the "fast mail" train of the Burlington road was made a few days since. The train, pulled by the famous engine 1592, left Burlington, Iowa, thirty-six minutes late and arrived in Chicago on time. The distance is 206 miles, and was covered in 209 minutes, including all stops. The run of eighty-three miles from Mendota to Chicago was made in seventy-six minutes—the best time ever made between those points. The forty-six miles between Mendota and Aurora was covered in thirty-nine minutes. Nearly all the way there was a heavy head wind and the train was unusually heavy, having a big lot of foreign mail. Deducting the time for mail and water, the average rate of speed of the train was about eighty miles an hour. During some spurts it is believed that a speed of ninety miles an hour was attained.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Rev. Matt S. Hughes, of Kansas City, simply convulsed the Methodist Episcopal Congress, Bishops and all. Dr. Hughes has the face of a humorist. . . . Dr. Hughes, too, spoke of Christian science, but only from a religious standpoint, taking Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy's book, "Key to the Scriptures," for his text, which he declared to be the "Koran of the Christian Science Cult." He said the cult claimed "to take the Scriptures as the guide to eternal life," but that should be amended to read, "We take Mrs. Eddy's interpretation of the Scriptures as a guide to eternal life." This claim of reverence for the Scriptures should not be given a fictitious value. Orthodoxy of declaration often accompanies infidelity in use. In her book Mrs. Eddy makes the "Key to the Bible" a sort of side show to the three-ring circus of Mrs. Eddy's own theories of Christian science. "The Key to the Scriptures" is a misnomer, for the work deals with only two books of the Bible, Genesis and Revelation, save in a desultory and semi-occasional way. The Bible is a library of sixty-six volumes, and no student may become familiar with it who reads only two. "The Key" should be made to fit, not two, but sixty-six locks. Think of a "key" to the Bible which contains only four brief references to the Gospel according to Luke.

Here the speaker referred, with infinite irony, to the magnificent Bible foundation upon which the Christian Scientists founded their cult. Atlas supporting the earth could not be compared to it. This entire volume of Mrs. Eddy's, said the speaker, with its seven hundred pages, charged with the mission of reviving Apostolic Christianity and restoring the lost power of the church, actually mentions the Acts of the Apostles four times. One mention is, "In him we live and move and have our being." Again, "Go thy way for this time, and when I have a more convenient season we will call for thee." Another is, "Is not mortal mind ignorant of God's methods?" This is really unfair, said Dr. Hughes, to thus impugn and misrepresent quotation in a manner not intended by the writer, but without any of these aids one might say with the Apostle, "None of these things move me."

The speaker referred to Mrs. Eddy's method of "skipping" in Bible quotation, and said it reminded him of those "Bible reading" which are facetiously referred to as "grasshopper exegesis," only he would "substitute kangaroo for grasshopper." She leaps from Genesis into the twelfth chapter of Revelation, husbands her waning energies for a couple more airy flights, and, lo! "the key to the Scriptures" is ready for a waiting world.

ANGELIC BOOK AGENT.

"We are" said Dr. Hughes, "curious to notice what peculiar features in these isolated Scriptures invite the earnest attention of Mrs. Eddy. In the first passage, in the tenth chapter of Revelation, it is 'a mighty angel come down from heaven.' We are asked to notice that 'he had in his hand a little book.' Mrs. Eddy asks: 'Is this angel or message from God, Divine Science, that comes in a cloud?' Later, she writes: 'Did this same little book contain the revelation of Divine Science?' Then follows an exhortation: 'Mortal, obey the heavenly evangel. Take up Divine Science. Read it from beginning to end.' In other words, the angel to Mrs. Eddy is a book agent, and his message is an advertisement. The mighty angel is sent to urge upon the attention of mortals 'Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures,' copyrighted by Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, cloth, single copies, prepaid, $3.18; sheep, $4; Levant, divinity circuit, Bible paper, gilt edges, round corners, calf-lined, silk-sewed, prepaid, $6; Morocco, convenient for pocket, prepaid, $5. Address all orders for the little book advertised by the mighty angel to Joseph Armstrong, C. S. D., publisher, 95 Falmouth Street, Boston, Mass. There have been a great many startling and unique interpretations of Revelation, but we venture to affirm that this may claim the palm.

"From these few verses in the tenth chapter, calling attention to 'the little book' of nearly seven hundred pages, we leap with Mrs. Eddy into the twelfth chapter. This, she says, 'has a special suggestiveness in connection with this nineteenth century.' Then she points out 'one distinctive feature, which has special reference to the present age.' This she does, quoting the first verse:—

"And there appeared a great wonder in heaven—a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars."

"In the tenth chapter she found an advertisement of her book, but in the twelfth chapter she finds a portrait of herself. Some lingering traces of modesty or sanity prevent the abrupt avowal that Mrs. Eddy is 'the great wonder in heaven'; that she is clothed with the sun, standing on the moon, and crowned with stars. But, with a great deal of ingenious circumlocution, the woman in her conflict and triumph is identified with Christian Science, and the end is attained without direct assertion. This, together with the exposition of three verses in the twenty-first chapter, constitutes the contribution made by Revelation to the key to the Scriptures through Mrs. Eddy. She does not pause to point out the majestic figure of the Savior in the Gospels, but, instead, she finds a 'woman clothed with the sun' in Revelation. She does not give an exposition of the apostolic message as found in the Acts of the Apostles, but, instead, she finds 'a special suggestiveness in connection with this nineteenth century' in the mighty apocalyptic angel with 'a little book.' From all this it would appear that the part of the New Testament that has 'special reference to the present age' is not that part which tells us of the life and ministry of God's dear Son, but that which advertises 'a little book' identified as 'Science and Health,' and that which fastens our eyes upon 'a woman clothed with the sun,' presumably Mrs. Eddy. Of the Holy Spirit it was declared by Christ: 'He shall glorify me.' That which is inspired of God either as scripture or its interpretation may be known as divine by its exaltation of the Master. The key to the Scriptures does not abide this test.

"IN THE BEGINNING."

We may also briefly notice Mrs. Eddy's treatment of the book of Genesis. There are fifty chapters in the book, but the student of Christian Science notices that the Key to the Scriptures does not carry the interpretation beyond the sixteenth verse of the fourth chapter. Notice the interpretation of the first passage upon which Mrs. Eddy exercises her skill:—

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."

That declaration has heretofore seemed reasonably clear and definite. That simple, majestic sentence has been extolled as a marvel of lucidity. But Mrs. Eddy makes it a riddle. She says the "word beginning is employed to signify the first—that is, the eternal unity of God and man, including the universe." She furthermore asserts that: "This creation consists of spiritual ideas and their identities, which are embraced in the infinite mind and forever reflected."

The difficulty is that the plain statement of the first verse of Genesis destroys the foundations of Christian Science. It is, therefore, necessary not that it be explained, but that it be explained away. The secret of the refusal to credit the plain statement that God created the heaven and the earth is found in Mrs. Eddy's unbelief in matter. She says: "Matter is neither self-existent nor a product of spirit."—475. She declares: "All must be mind or all must be matter. Neither can produce the other."—543. She asks: "Is spirit the source or creator of matter? Science reveals nothing of which to create matter."—174. And, therefore, because Christian Science "repudiates matter," and because so far it "reveals nothing in spirit out of which to create matter," we cannot accept the plain statement that God created the heaven and earth. The Bible is Mrs. Eddy's only text-book and the Christian Science movement derives its sanction therefrom, but this child of the Bible, like some other children, is wiser than the parent. As suggested in the beginning, you cannot always know just what is meant when persons loudly protest their loyalty to the Scriptures. The fact is that it would have been as easy a task to write a new Bible as to inject Christian Science into the one we possess without doing violence to every canon of interpretation.

One more instance of the splendid loyalty to the text-book is even more to the point. Mrs. Eddy carries the interpretation of Genesis down to the fifth verse and then the waters become too deep for her theory. She cannot explain the statements away as she has other scripture. At this point she writes:—

"The reader will naturally ask if there is nothing more about creation in the book of Genesis. Indeed there is, but the continued account is mortal and material."—514. She announces: "This latter part of second chapter of Genesis, wherein spirit is supposed to cooperate with matter in constructing man, must be based on some hypothesis of error."—515. The difficulty lies in the seventh verse of the second chapter:—

"And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

It does seem actually unkind for a textbook to interfere so radically with a student's notions. It is discouraging to attempt to derive a sanction for a movement from the Bible and then have the Bible utterly demolish its pretensions. Naturally, Mrs. Eddy resents that sort of thing, and she does it in these plain, unequivocal terms:—

"How can the non-intelligent become the medium of mind, and error be the enunciator of truth? Matter is not the reflection of spirit, yet God is reflected in all his creation. Is this addition to his creation real or unreal? Is it the truth? Or is it a lie concerning God and man? It must be the latter, for God presently curses the ground."—517.

In short, the text-book lies. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that publish the lying statements of the Bible! How sublime is that reverence for the Scriptures that boldly tears the mask from its face and brands its false statements for coming generations! It is a great pity that Mrs. Eddy did not give us a polychrome Bible, in which the truth and falsehood, with all the varying degrees of inaccuracy between the two extremes were indicated by colored inks.

In the light of such treatment given the Bible, we may inquire what is meant by the declaration that it was Mrs. Eddy's only text-book, or that divine science derives its sanction from the bible!

One typical gem in this collection we may notice before we pass. It is illustrative of the sanity and scholarship of Mrs. Eddy's method. She says:—

"The word Adam is from the Hebrew adamah, signifying the red color of the ground, dust, nothingness. Divide the name Adam into two syllables, and it reads a dam, or obstruction. This suggests the thought of something fluid of mortal mind in solution, of the darkness which seemed to appear when 'darkness was on the face of the deep,' and matter stood as opposed to spirit, as that which is accursed."—233.

There you are allowed to see the wheels go round. You gaze upon Christian Science in the making. Notice the process. The English translation of a Hebrew word is divided into two syllables. From this division of a word signifying dust or nothingness we get something substantial in the shape of a dam—a mill dam, no doubt. It is the feat of a magician. It is like seeing the performer take live pigeons and rabbits out of the hat of a surprised individual in the audience.

Dr. Hughes concluded his address amid a storm of applause.

Prof. Rice and Rev. M. W. Gifford were given each a few moments for reply and rejoinder, and the congress adjourned to the afternoon session.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Nov. 30, 1899.

THE GOSPEL.

In order to be in harmony with our conception of the character of the Creator that he is omniscient and omnipotent, that is, he knows all things and has all power, it is necessary for us to believe that when he in the divine council in which the fate of the world was to be decided, after the fall, and provision made for the redemption and salvation of man, knew the condition into which the race has fallen; and also knew what was needed to develop the good in man and save him. Anything less than this would be to detract from our understanding of that attribute which we endow him with in our conception of his supremacy and majesty.

We must, also, believe that God also knew what would be necessary and effectual as a means to accomplish the object had in view, the salvation of man; and that in the wisdom of that council he would propose and institute the very best and only means at his disposal for the purpose and would give to the plan in all its different parts force and power to enable those to whom it was entrusted to successfully perform the work to be done in the great scheme of human redemption. We cannot avoid these conclusions, and be consistent with our understanding of the law of demand and supply, cause and effect.

It is equally true that we must believe that the divine Son of God, the chosen instrument to whom as a "Witness," a "Leader," and a "Commander," the prosecution and accomplishment of the work was assigned, was, also, fully aware of the condition of man, the need for redemption, and the means necessary for its accomplishment. If we cannot concede this, we destroy in some sense our conception of the responsibility he assumed, the integrity of his character, and the nature and greatness of his mission; none of which we can afford to do, and still hold him as the Savior.

Good old Simeon, who was waiting the fulfillment of divine promise unto him, while standing in the temple and in the presence of the child Jesus, said of him: "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."—Luke 2: 29-32.

Being satisfied in this conclusion that God and Christ did know the condition in which man was left by the entrance of sin into the world "and death by sin," and that both knew what was needed to remedy the evil; and that the best means to that end had been decided upon by the divine council, and measures adopted to elaborate the plan and carry it into effect, it leaves the way clear for an inquiry, What was the plan of Redemption? What was the scheme of Salvation?

Whatever we may think about the days of Enoch, Moses, Abraham, Noah, the days of the patriarchs, the rule of Moses, and the Judges, the coming of the Messiah, the mission of Jesus, and the ministry of the apostles seem to be very clear.

One of the first notices we have of the interest of the Son of Mary in the affairs of men is found in Luke, where in answer to his mother's inquiries touching his absenting himself from the family, he stated, "How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"—Luke 2: 49.

The text is in the following terms, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."—Luke 4: 18, 19.

We next notice his baptism by John, as stated by Matthew, which act John was induced to perform by the emphatic plea made by Jesus, "Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."—Matt. 3: 15.

This we follow with the statement of Jesus, as recorded by John, "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel."

This then was the means devised in the council, the "gospel of the kingdom of God." Jesus had been commissioned to preach, and began his ministry by beginning to preach, accompanying the preaching of the word by the healing of the sick, casting out of unclean spirits, giving sight to the blind, and hearing to the deaf.

John being "sent of God," taught baptism for the remission of sins; and the record of events as given by John shows that in keeping with the statement of John, the one who was sent "to prepare the way before him" who was to come, to the effect that John was to decrease, but Jesus to increase, the latter with his disciples engaged in performing the same rite. He had himself submitted to the ordinance under John's administration, in order to fulfill righteousness, and why should not he who was to be "Witness," "Leader," and "Commander," the supreme lawgiver of the new and Christian dispensation, himself be subject to the law himself had come to proclaim? Surely it was a gracious act, and full of significance; the type and example for all believers from thence to the end of time.

John wrote, "And after these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized."—John 3: 22.

It is found in the marginal readings of some versions that "Jesus baptized not, but his disciples;" or, Jesus baptized none but his disciples; but this does not affect the issue, for the reason, that, if Jesus was in the company of his disciples, superintending their work, and witnessing their teaching and ministration of the rite, he was consenting to their acts as his agents, men whom he had called, ordained, authorized, and empowered to administer the ordinance, and thus carry out one of the principles—an integral part of the gospel scheme of salvation. So that whether in his own person or by his own chosen agents he was "baptizing." John was beheaded, thus ending his ministry, but the baptism of John, endorsed, accepted, adopted, and submitted to as being from heaven was formally and fully instituted and established for all time to come.

WAS IT A DOCTRINE?

Jesus taught unlike the Pharisees, Sadducees, or any other of the Jewish sects. There was no mistaking his attitude toward the prevailing religious thought. He taught affirmatively and authoritatively. This was recognized by the people, as it is stated in Matthew, "And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes."—Matt. 7: 28, 29.

In John's account of the gospel, it is stated that noticing that the people were not only astonished at his teaching but marveled at the doctrine, because they supposed he had not been taught in the schools, Jesus answering to their surmises said, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me."—John 7: 16.

Whatever he taught was therefore the doctrine of his Father, or more properly, the doctrine he was teaching was what he had been sent by the Father to teach, and the Father was jointly responsible with the Son to mankind for the doctrine taught them by the Son.

This then fixes the character of that system of faith, and faith and works known in the Scriptures and among men as the mission of Jesus, and the identity, purpose, and power of the gospel.

THE WAY.

John was sent as a forerunner to give notice of the man that was to come, the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." It was his business and mission to make the paths of the Lord "straight," to "prepare the way before him," who was to come after him, who was to be "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."—Luke 2: 32.

It is consistent with the idea of salvation to believe that if the Christ knew the object he was sent to accomplish, and the means which had been devised for that purpose, to also believe that John and his mission were parts of the plan; and that when Jesus Christ, the Redeemer, the Lamb of God, should come, he would go to John, recognize him as the preparatory laborer and identify himself with the "man sent of God" and his way, the straight way.

This He did, by visiting the place where John was baptizing and demanding the performance of the rite at John's hands.

This act of Jesus settles two points. 1. That John's mission was the opening work of the scheme of salvation, or gospel dispensation. 2. That baptism as an ordinance was an essential and doctrinal part of the plan; so recognized of the One sent as minister extraordinary to man.

WAS IT AN ACT OF FAITH?

We do not read how it happened that Jesus went to John to be baptized; that is to say, the record does not recite any given precedent explanation or reason why Jesus should do this; but the words of the Savior himself, at the time of the baptism, throws light upon it: "Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."—Matt. 3: 15; Mark 1: 9.

It was an act of sublime faith on the part of both Jesus and John. We are not permitted to read the recorded instructions of the Son prior to leaving the courts of the Father in regard to the details of his duty and what he should do and how do it; but we do know that he stated, in reference to his work: "My Father worketh hitherto and I work."—John 5: 17.

"The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise."—John 5: 19.

"Then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things. . . . For I do always those things that please him."—John 8: 28, 29.

"But the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak."—John 12: 49.

It was in the interest of mankind that Jesus came. It was the will of the Father. But, in carrying it on, "in his humiliation his judgment was taken away;" hence he was left to the exercise of his now almost human judgment and decide what his words and acts should be upon his recollection of what the Father had told him, and leave the result with the Father. Hence his faith in what he did, confidence in the word of God. In the exercise of this faith he faltered, but once: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"—Mark 15: 34. His faith was sufficient for the hour of his extremest trial, and in his hour of temptation. By it he was able to say, "It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."—Matt. 4: 7.

It was an act of faith in John to the extent that when Jesus came to his baptism he recognized him as the one of whom the Holy Ghost had testified; and, upon the demand of Jesus for the rite, he yielded, and in faith, nothing doubted, baptized the one who was to increase, while himself was to pass and perish. It was a sublime faith, an act of unsurpassed human trust. It completely filled and illustrated the principle announced by Paul, "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek." "For without faith it is impossible to please God."—Heb. 11: 6.

We here have manifested in the teaching and incidents in the life of Jesus that faith is what the Apostle Paul meant in placing the principle of faith in the catalogue of principles called by him, "The principles of the gospel of Christ."—Heb. 6: 1.

We can, also, comprehend what the Savior said to his disciples, "Have faith in God."—Mark 11: 22. Also, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me."—John 14: 1.

By this it is easy to identify the teachings and doctrine of Jesus, the chosen Messiah, as being the same as those taught by Paul, in writing to the Hebrews, 6: 1. Faith and baptism, being two of them.

CHRISTMAS.

In publishing Bro. A. J. Keck's article in regard to the observance of Christmas as the birthday of Jesus, we do not indorse the idea that we are not to observe that day for the purpose of commemorating his birth, for the reason that the origin of the observance on the 25th of December as the day may have had heathen origin.

The fact that it is not known just what day of the year his birth occurred on is conceded at the outset, and hence any conjecture is likely to be wrong, and as it is the intent, spirit, and purpose in which the day is kept that makes it effective; and as we cannot know the exact day of the year without revelation, the fixed and acquiesced in so long ago approximately correct will do very well until it may please the Lord to tell us when it was. The year is also in doubt, as there is a difference of opinion as to the date of the Nativity.

As to discarding the observing of the birth of the Savior entirely because that the fixing upon the day of the year on which such birth occurred, would be out of character for us who are dependent on him for life and salvation, unless we are prepared to ourselves fix the day correctly. We had much better to continue to observe the day on December 25, than not to observe or keep his birth in memory at all.

If we are to do nothing which has first been done by heathen, Christian, or sectary, we will neither sing, pray, nor preach, as all these were done long before we of the Reorganized Church began to preach, pray, or sing. Our order of ordinary service on the Lord's Day is almost a replication of the M. E. service.

As to the manner of the observance of the day, there is room for everybody to suit himself, as there is no established rule or custom. The most striking, and in some ways the most affecting, is a custom in countries where the Greek Church is dominant. They gather to the house of prayer the evening before the 25th, and there hold service till near the midnight hour, when rising and standing with bowed heads until the hour passes, the congregation waits the signal from the patriarch, or priest, who announces the hour by the words, "Christ is Risen," upon which a scene of joy and gladness ensues. Each man turns to his neighbor on the right or left, and clasping each in arms, reiterate the priest's words, "Christ is risen; he is risen indeed!"

All distinctions are for the time lost sight of. Prince and peasant, rich and poor, those of rank and those in humblest walks in life, clasp hands, embrace, and cry in ecstatic joy, "Christ is risen; he is risen." After this scene ends, all disperse to their homes, the night passes, and on the next day all pass the time as each chooses; the usual services and observances as elsewhere obtain with local differences, as the case may be.

The church has no set rules for the observance of the day. Each branch follows the bent of leading minds; and the exercises differ according to locality and inclination, and we believe it is best so.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Why do not the Latter Day Saints practice feet washing? Are we greater than our Lord? Did he not show love for his disciples? Is that not the way to show love for one another? Is it wrong for a lay member to try to preach the gospel, or take part in a union prayer meeting?

Our inquirer has asked a number of questions, all based upon what is written in John's Gospel 13:5. This occurred at the supper, before the betrayal of Jesus by Judas, and is told thus:—

And supper being ended, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him; Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God; he riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head. Jesus saith to him, He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

It seems that John is the only one of the four writers of the Gospels who mentions this feet washing incident, nor does it appear that it was given the disciples only as an act of humility on Jesus' part, and they were told that they ought to wash each other's feet, as he had washed theirs.

In those eastern lands men wore sandals, a protection for the soles of the feet, leaving the top of the feet and the legs bare. This exposed the feet to the dust of the roads, and rendered frequent washing of the feet necessary to both cleanliness and comfort.

It was the custom of the country to offer to the guest and traveler a basin, or ewer of water for the washing of the feet, as well as for the face and the hands. The disciples were in a sense the guests of the Master. And he desiring to impress the lesson of humility and true greatness upon them, took the occasion to do this by performing for them an act of service usually performed by a servant, or some member of the family.

It was evidently not intended to become an ordinance for the church, to be attended to as a rite, or to be taken as an act commanded of Jesus for the church to observe.

Luke 7:44 gives a statement how that a certain woman washed the Savior's feet with her tears, and wiped them dry with her hair. Of this scene the Savior made a rebuke to the Pharisee, at whose table he was eating and whose guest he was, by asking him a question about a man's debtors to whom he forgave those debts, the one to whom most was forgiven being supposed to hold the greater love for his lord who forgave him his debt. The Savior told the Pharisee that he had given him no water to wash his feet, but the woman had done this hospitable duty by bathing his feet with penitential tears, finishing her work by wiping the feet dry with her hair, and then anointing them with ointment; an act so gracious and humble as to obtain for her the Savior's gentle words, "Thy sins are forgiven thee." She, as a sinning woman impressed with her need of repentance and pardon, sought the Lord's presence, to manifest her recognition of her needs and his mercy and power.

The Pharisee saw neither for himself, but would gratify his own sense of importance by having the preaching Nazarene to eat with him. But this was not a religious rite; it was the spontaneous tribute of a suffering soul to the Lord of Life.

In 1 Timothy 5:10, there is Paul's injunction regarding the qualifications of those who were to be taken into a certain order among them. A widow must not be taken in who was not sixty years old, and noted for having done certain good offices, among them thus, "that she had washed the saints' feet" (saints' clothes, Holy Scriptures).

The rendering of the Holy Scriptures, or inspired version, seems to be more in character and keeping with the sphere and proper vocation of woman in the household.

Away back in Abraham's time, the offering of water to wash the feet was observed, and for the same reasons that it was rutable in the Savior's day; the wearing of sandals for the road, with no other protection from the dust of the roads.

In none of these passages is there an establishing of a rite for the church to observe. Not nearly so much as Paul's injunction, "Salute one another with a holy kiss," found in Romans 16:16, or 1 Corinthians 16:20, 2 Corinthians 13:12, and 1 Thessalonians 5:26, "Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss;" and Peter's "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity." —1 Peter 5:14.

These were loving requests attached to the epistles of Paul and Peter, indicating the fellowship of the apostles for their brethren; but in no sense to be taken as instituting a church custom and ordinance or rite.

The Reorganized Church does not practice the washing of feet, for the reason that so far as is known to the church, it was not instituted either by the New Testament teaching, by the teaching of the Book of Mormon, or by the revelations to the church, except as a custom in the School of the Prophets, upon certain occasions. (a) We are not greater than our Lord, therefore we do not institute what he did not choose to do as a church custom or rule. (b) He did show his love for his disciples by an act which should admonish us that we are not too good, and should not be too proud to take thought for our brethren, and do for them such kindly offices as cleanliness and comfort might demand and opportunity afford. (c) To wash another's feet would be one way to show our love for him; and we should do that when need requires. But there are many other ways in which we may show our love, and for which opportunities are frequent. Nor do the conditions and customs of the country here demand this particular exhibition of love to one another. Indeed under most circumstances to offer to wash the feet of a fellow member would be an act of such peculiar ostentation in its nature as to partake of Pharisaism, a needless exhibition of humility, not warranted by either command or conditions.

We do not practice feet washing for similar reasons that we do not practice the "holy kiss" as a salute.

It is not wrong for "him that is warned to warn his neighbor," for this the law and the command require. At the same time a "laymember" cannot officially represent the church. He would not be authorized to represent the faith and doctrine as one having authority and known to the church as having such authority. He could nevertheless give his views and express his opinions, state his beliefs, and give the reasons for them, whenever opportunity offered and occasion was favorable.

A laymember may take part in a union Sunday school, or a union prayer meeting, and do no wrong in so doing; providing his conduct and teaching in such places are consistent with his faith in Jesus Christ, and a godly walk and conversation as a member of the church.

LAMBERT-HUGHS DISCUSSION.

As announced in our last issue a discussion was held in the Saints' church, Lamoni, Iowa, December 4-7, between Elder M. A. Hughs, of the Holiness people, and Bro. J. R. Lambert, of the Reorganized Church.

The discussion grew out of statements made by Elder Hughs that he desired a further investigation than was possible in the discourse preached by him and the reply by Bro. J. C. Clapp.

The propositions discussed were:—

1. Do the Scriptures teach that water baptism was obligatory in the Jewish age only? M. A. Hughs affirms, J. R. Lambert denies.
2. Do the Scriptures teach that water baptism, as taught in the New Testament, is a part of the gospel plan, in the Christian dispensation, and that it is essential to a complete salvation? J. R. Lambert affirms, M. A. Hughs denies.

Mr. — Allen acted as moderator for Elder Hughs, Bro. F. A. Smith moderator for Bro. Lambert.

Elder Hughs, in both his affirmative and negative arguments, took the ground that "the Jewish age" or "law age," as he designated it, was the period of time when the old covenant was binding upon the Israelites; that the "law age," "Jewish age," or "old covenant," was one and the same thing. That said "Jewish age" continued from the beginning of the Jewish year (Exodus 12:2) "until the destruction of the Jewish temple A. D. 70." That the Christian dispensation did not begin with John, but began on the Day of Pentecost A. D. 33. Hence that the Mosaic economy, "or law age," overlapped the Christian dispensation from A. D. 33 until A. D. 70, a period of thirty-seven years. That from John's ministry and during that period of thirty-seven years which he designated "the lap of those ages," or "lap of the ages," the law of Moses was in force; hence the teaching of John the Baptist, of Christ, and of the eleven apostles, concerning baptism, was binding only up to A. D. 70, after which the law was no longer in force, hence no ordinances whatever were taught or obeyed after that date. That Christ was baptized to fulfill the law of Moses, as were all baptized by him and the eleven.

He also claimed that the word "world" in the commission of Matthew 28, Mark 16, should be translated "age," hence the promise was to the "consummation of the age," or as he would insert the word in the text "of the Jewish age," "or until A. D. 70."

He claimed from Galatians 2: 7, 8, that there were two gospels; that Peter and the rest of the eleven were sent out under a commission to the Jews and Jewish age, while Paul's commission was another, to the Gentiles, without any ordinances whatever, "and hadn't a drop of water in it," hence was a "free" gospel—free from all Jewish ordinances, of which he claimed baptism to be one. That Paul was sent not to baptize, but to preach the gospel, and that those whom Paul addressed in his epistles, written before A. D. 70, except that to the Hebrews, were in all cases "Judaized" Gentiles—that is, those who had become under obligations to the law of Moses by becoming converted as Gentiles to the circumcision or Jewish order, and that Paul was seeking to bring them out of that Jewish order into the freedom of faith without ordinances which would be ushered in at the end of the Jewish age, etc.

Bro. Lambert gained a complete victory on both negative and affirmative propositions. He proved clearly the beginning of the gospel dispensation with the mission of John, including that of Christ and the apostles. A very brief outline of his general positions is about as follows: That the "gospel" or "plan of salvation," was set forth in the New Testament. That other phrases designating the same thing were, "the truth," "the word of truth," "the word of God," "the perfect law of liberty," "the doctrine of Christ," etc., etc.

That included in these terms we have "water baptism," which we are required to obey; that the gospel is God's unchangeable plan, that it is for "all men," wherever salvation is offered to the race. He proved the universal character of the commission of Matthew 28, Mark 16, and that Paul's commission was to preach the same gospel, and that Paul preached to and baptized Gentiles; that Christ had "fulfilled the law" of Moses, nailed it to his cross, and broken down the middle wall of partition between Jew and Gentile "thus making one," etc.,

He showed the general character of the statements of Paul in Ephesians 4: 1-6, that the "one baptism" was as general and applicable to the Christian dispensation, to the plan of salvation, as the "one faith," the "one Spirit," "one God" and "one Father" etc.; in fact that baptism was binding throughout the Christian dispensation whenever salvation was proclaimed to man.

We regret that we cannot give more than a very meager report of the discussion. Every argument of Elder Hughs was overthrown, while Bro. Lambert maintained every point in his negative and affirmative.

The discussion was attended by a large audience throughout.

GRANT-SHEEHY DEBATE.

We publish elsewhere reports so far received of the Grant-Sheehy debate at Oakland, California; from Messiah's Advocate for December 6, published at Oakland, and a letter from Bro. D. A. Anderson.

The Advocate also contained a front page "view of a portion of the city of Oakland" including "Hamilton Hall" where the debate was held. We hope to receive a written report or summary of leading lines of evidence presented.

THE following Berlin cablegram may indicate one of the forces that are leading to "the segregation of the Jew" in Palestine, where he is destined to find a final home:—

The anti-Semitic movement has been lagging the last twelve months. Dr. Giese, the anti-Semitic party leader, proposes to instill new life by beginning a campaign for the exclusion of the Old Testament from religious instruction in the public schools. Giese also proposes that all nations join in segregating the Jews to themselves. He is not quite sure of the efficacy of this scheme, but he courageously faces its possibility as the only effective solution of the Jewish problem without the extirpation of the race.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Denver, Colorado, according to copies of the Rocky Mountain News, has of late been the scene of a sensational storm center. It appears that one Rev. H. W. Pinkham, popular as a pastor of Bethany Baptist Church, that city, a man of liberal views, broke away from some of the traditional beliefs of the Baptist Church and was finally regarded as guilty of heretical tendencies, and expelled, with his congregation, which stood by him, from the State Baptist Association; hence another "independent" congregation is added to the long list of independent churches. Following this, Dr. C. M. Coburn, a prominent Methodist minister, took up the cudgel in defense of Rev. Pinkham, and was in turn censured. Others publicly expressed themselves on the controversy, for and against Rev. Pinkham. Such are the conditions existing and the forces at work to undermine and destroy sectarian organizations as such. May the truth reach and save the people everywhere.

A late issue of the San Antonio, Texas, Express made very favorable mention of the labors of Bro. J. W. Bryan who was also referred to in a friendly spirit. The article included a summary of the faith—"What we believe."

A late issue of the Seattle, Washington Times contains a lengthy account of a large Mormon colony located at Cardston, Manitoba. The correspondent, writing from Winnipeg, states that the colony, though composed of Utah Mormons, is entirely nonpolygamous. We hope the statement is correct.

Bro. W. S. Taylor reports good work done of late at Sherwin, Kansas, by Bro. J. A. Davis, who was well received by the people.

The Catholic News, New York, claims that its "mission for non-Catholics" at Salt Lake City, a comparatively recent movement, has received fifty converts, among them "some eminent Mormons." We simply note the statement.

Franklin D. Richards, President of the Twelve and Historian of the Utah Church, died at Ogden, Utah, December 12, in his seventy-ninth year. Apostle Brigham Young will succeed Elder Richards as President of the Twelve. This also places Brigham Young next in line in succession to the Presidency of the Utah Church according to past action in succession.

Advices from Japan report an earthquake at the Island of Ceram, November 2, followed by a tidal wave, by which five thousand people were killed. Masses of mud, bowlders, and stones, changed the topography of the country. The exact number of dead can never be known.

Bro. D. J. Krahl, St. Joseph, Missouri, points out an error in large-type Book of Mormon. In Enos 1:29 it reads: "I say there is," etc. It should read was, instead of "is," as in the small-type edition.

Hypnotism is not an educative process; it does not add anything. Abundant experiments made everywhere show that people with weak wills have their will power still more weakened by submitting to repeated hypnotism.—Dr. Sanger Brown, Chicago Tribune, May 2, 1899.

"Christian Science is but a jaunty theosophy which first places its dupes under obligation by relieving their physical infirmities and then takes advantage of their position to force down their throats its mystifying works—a sort of witch's caldron in which every conceivable heathen and Christian heresy is found seething and simmering to produce the subtle essence called mental medicine."—Dr. John Duncan Quackenboss, A. M., M. D., Columbia University.

The HERALD editors are receiving a number of newspaper accounts of the recent death of Mrs. E. D. P. Young one of the wives of Brigham Young, and whose name is also connected with Joseph Smith as having been married to him in Nauvoo. The late tract, "Was Joseph Smith a polygamist?" contains a clear refutation of this sensational and untrue statement. Our readers will find that tract an opportune one to have at hand to meet and correct such erroneous statements. All saints should be well read in the literature of the church.

CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION.

One of the most natural and easy things to do is to fall into the customs and habits of the people with whom we are surrounded. And because it is the easiest thing to do, most people thus enter into conditions and observances formed by the hands of others, without pausing to question into the precedents of such forms and customs. Hence tradition becomes the groundwork of life, whereas truth should be the basis of all action. He whom the wisdom of God made for our great pattern, spoke with no uncertain sound in regard to such practice:—

Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition? . . . Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.—Matt. 15:3, 6.

The observance of tradition is not always a violation of the law of God; but the habit of following tradition in ignorance of the origin of it, or without considering its relation to the truth, is always damaging, and can easily lead to a violation of divine law. It is in view of this thought, and in love of the truth in all things, that I essay to put before the Herald readers a few facts in relation to Christmas and its celebration.

1. THE NAME.

The average Protestant or Latter Day Saint would hardly wish to be included with the worshipers at any service called "mass," because the use of that term stamps the service as originating with the apostate church; yet the title of this day, supposed to be the birthday of Christ, bears the same stamp of its evident origin. Note the following, from Johnson's Universal Cyclopaedia:—

Christmas, so called, from an especial mass, the "mass of Christ," that was celebrated on that day.

2. THE DATE.

If we knew on what day Christ was born, we might well celebrate it annually, regardless of who might or might not observe the day. But we don't know, and are indebted to the apostate church for the establishment of the "Christmas" of December twenty-fifth. Chambers' Encyclopaedia says:—

It is nevertheless almost certain that the twenty-fifth of December cannot be the nativity of the Savior, for it is then the height of the rainy season in Judea, and shepherds could hardly be watching their flocks by night on the plains.

The Britannica says:—

There is, however, difficulty in accepting this as the date of the nativity, December being the height of the rainy season in Judea, when neither flocks nor shepherds could have been at night in the fields of Bethlehem. . . . Although an ingenious argument [?] in behalf of the month of October has been made out from what is known of the course of Abia (Luke 1:5), it does not seem possible to arrive at any certain conclusion.

Johnson's Universal Cyclopaedia:—

The exact date of Christ's birth appears not to have been known to the early church, and cannot now be determined. (Italics mine.)

Jacob of Odessa (obit A. D. 578) is quoted as saying:—

No one knows exactly the day of the nativity of the Lord. This only is certain from what Luke writes, that he was born in the night. Still it is possible that the church in early days, was led by the possession of actual historical evidence to assign as it has done from the remotest past, December 25 as the date of the nativity. Between the middle of December and the middle of February there is generally in Palestine an interval of comparatively dry weather. . . . Thus there might have been shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem watching their flocks by night at the time when "all the world keeps Christmas Day."

From these uncertain and conflicting testimonies we discover that history does not inform us at what time of the year Christ was born. Then follows the question:—

3. WHO FIXED THE DATE?

Encyclopaedia Britannica:—

By the fifth century, however, whether from the influence of some tradition, or from the desire to supplant heathen festivals of that period, such as the Saturnalia [devoted to the heathen god Saturn], the twenty-fifth day of December had been generally agreed upon. Augustine especially mentions that date (De Trin. 4:5), and Chrysostom seems to speak of it as a custom imported from the West within ten years.

Johnson's Cyclopaedia:—

The observance of December twenty-fifth is ascribed to Julius, Bishop of Rome, A. D. 337-352. The Eastern Church had previously observed January sixth in commemoration both of the baptism and of the birth of Christ. Before the end of the fourth century, the East and West had exchanged festivals; the West adopting January sixth in commemoration of our Lord's baptism, and the East adopting December twenty-fifth in commemoration of our Lord's birth.

Chambers' Encyclopaedia:—

Among the causes that cooperated in fixing this period in the popular mind, perhaps the most powerful was, that most heathen nations regarded the winter-solstice as the beginning of renewed life and activity of the powers of nature. . . . At the winter solstice, the Germans and Norsemen held their yule feast, and believed that during the twelve nights reaching from December twenty-fifth to January sixth, they could trace the personal movements on earth of their great deities. Many of these usages naturally passed over from heathenism to Christianity, and have partly survived to the present day. The church sought to banish the deep-rooted heathen element.

It appears, then, that the date of December twenty-fifth was fixed upon because of the prevalence of heathen festivals of that date, and was fixed by the authorities of the apostatizing church, not because it was the real date of the nativity, but as a compromise with heathen people and their customs.

4. CHRISTMAS PRACTICES.

Chambers' Encyclopaedia:—

The Christmas tree would seem to be traceable to the Roman Saturnalia, and was not improbably imported into Germany with the conquering legions of Drusus. It is noteworthy that "the Christmas tree," with its pendant toys and mannikins, is distinctly portrayed by Virgil [a heathen writer who lived B. C. 70-19]. "Oscilla exalta suspendent mollia pinus."—Gorg. II., 389.

Encyclopedia Britannica:—

The houses (in England) were decked with evergreen, especially with mistletoe, to which traditionary sacredness has attached since the days of the Druids.

The Druids were heathen priests or priestesses in England, before Christianity made its advent there.

The central features of ordinary Christmas observance, the "Christmas tree" and evergreens, appear to have been borrowed from the heathen as well as the time of its observance.

5. SANTA CLAUS.

Samuel Jackson in Johnson's Universal Cyclopedia, St. Nicholas:—

Born—; died December sixth, 326 A. D. Was Bishop of Myra, in Asia Minor. Was a great miracle worker(?). Three girls were to be prostituted by their bankrupt father, to support him. Saint Nicholas gave each a purse of gold and saved them from a life of shame. Hence, he became regarded as the children's patron saint. "Santa Claus" is a corruption of the Dutch name of Saint Nicholas.

Summing the matter up, we find that the evidence obtainable indicates that Christmas and its chief features of celebration were derived from the heathen world and sanctified (?) by the approval of the apostate church, which attached to the day the name of the Savior and sufficient of supposed Christian observance to disguise its heathenish origin.

Shall we celebrate the birth of Christ? I suggest that if we do, we choose another day and other means of celebration.

Devoted to the truth,

Letter Department.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 6.

Editors Herald:—From April to November first, I remained at home on account of matters requiring my attention. About the time I could free myself from home cares I felt my work lay in the direction of Virginia. I arrived at Staunton and commenced meetings at the residence of Bro. Coffman, and held three services on Saturday and Sunday, then again on the following Saturday and Sunday, baptizing one. I will return there, accompanied by Bro. P. P. Stark, and hold a conference of the few saints who may be able to get together, appoint delegates to the April conference, and get the records in better shape in the district. We hope to secure the attendance of a few outside the church in that neighborhood, although they seem to be incased in a shell of impregnable prejudice.

Bro. and Sr. Coffman and myself had invitations to visit at a few places, which opportunity we gladly availed ourselves of, one of which we desire to make special mention. At Mr. Will Coffman's, (cousin to Bro. C., and members of the Dunkard Church,) arrangements had been made with their minister from Ohio, who was holding a protracted meeting in the vicinity, to come on the day we were to make the visit, and as it were "chaw" my ears. I feel sure they expected Mr. Rosenbarger to show me and my friends the beauties and harmonies of trine immersion, the feast of the Paschal lamb, the holy kiss, etc., as the room where we occupied soon filled with his members, some three of whom were ministers. Well, we were glad to meet them, and for something over two hours we interested our little audience. We returned home well pleased with the interview, and asked him and his friends to visit us, and we would continue our friendly and pleasant investigation. But no, he could not accept it.

We arrived in Richmond on the 28th, meeting our genial and earnest brother, Dr. P. P. Stark, who gave us a hearty greeting and welcome, and provided us with some necessary means for our happiness and comfort while we might remain in the city. Receiving a card from Mrs. A. R. Corson, formerly of Genito, but now of Richmond, I immediately wended my way to her residence, and for the first time met her and her family. The saints no doubt remember the struggle this sister (she has been awaiting baptism for some time) has had in her search for truth, and the articles she has written in the Ensign under the caption of "Notes and Comments," and a portion of her inquiries, and my answer in "Notes and Diversions." There now seems a chance to open up the work in her old neighborhood near Genito, where I will go to-morrow; also here in Fulton, a suburb of Richmond, where she lives, and where I now have a pleasant home, I hope to get the message before the people. There is a split here in the Baptist Church, and one minister, Mr. Daugherty, with a membership of about a hundred here and a few members in one or two other places, with three preachers in all, claim to have been called out of Babylon, and call themselves the Apostolic Church(?). I have attended some five meetings, three prayer and speaking meetings and two preaching services, taking opportunity to tell them I had a message to deliver from the Master, being introduced by Sr. Corson to one of their number and by him to several others. She is an earnest worker and lets no opportunity pass to say a word for the Master. She is not ashamed of the profession of her faith, though not yet in the fold. Two are ready for baptism where she formerly lived, and I believe some are here. One man told me he believed Joseph was a prophet of God, and the Book of Mormon true, and said he had read it about thirty years ago, and had believed it ever since. He is one of the dissenters and wants the church opened up for me to preach in. The Lord has delivered the following message to Sr. Corson through one of his servants, which I here copy:—

"Thus saith the Lord your Redeemer; I will make you a mighty instrument in my hands for the salvation of many precious souls in the city of Richmond, if you show yourself faithful and truly loyal in the love of your heart to my laws. Therefore seek daily to purify yourself before me, and learn how to possess your vessel in sanctification and honor to me, your Savior. Your righteousness shall go before you as the morning light. I have given mine angels charge concerning you; therefore, walk with me with a perfect heart. Let your eye be single to my glory, and your whole body shall be filled with the light of my truth. You can have no higher mission than to use your powers by tongue and pen to win souls to me. How great is your power for good, even greater than you feel, and your powers shall be increased as you use the ability—now yours—wisely in my service. I am able to make you strong, and flood your mind with heavenly light. Behold! how vast is the harvest, and how few the willing workers. Now great shall be your reward in my Father's house, if you will labor diligently to win souls to me. I am filled with compassion for mine erring children. Will you open your mouth freely in defense of the way of truth? Come up higher, as I grant you privilege. Fear not, but be courageous, and I will lift you up, and my love shall enfold you. Your days of despondency are passed away. Mine eyes are upon you by day and by night. Seek to win your children to me by a godly walk and conversation, so shall you be blessed in basket and in store, in body and in spirit. Choose me your daily counselor and comforter. In the city of Richmond you can wield an influence far and wide, as the days go by."

Who will say that God is not willing to have his work and message delivered by women as well as men? If they are to speak by tongue and pen the message of life, the gospel and its powers, should they not receive ordination? Is not the restraint after all only a social condition? Is God a respecter of persons in the sense of sex? May the Master open up the way for a great work in this mission, is my prayer, that many tongues may speak his praise.

Truly yours,

J. L. GOODRICH.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—Owing to sickness and scarcity of money I was obliged to drop the Herald for the past year, but I feel that I must have it the coming year, so you may send January 1st., as I shall be at home by that time.

I have tried to be about the Father's business this fall. In October I began a meeting at Ransom's schoolhouse, near Neola, which I continued for four weeks, resulting in six baptisms, and arousing a new interest in the hearts of many who had grown cold and neglectful of duty. Bro. Isaac Carlile, Jr., assisted during the meetings by prayer and exhortation, and also administered the rite of baptism. Elder Thomas Thomas, an old veteran in the work, rendered us good service, and Priest Samuel Underwood did all in his power to hold up our hands. When our meeting closed, many more were almost persuaded to accept the gospel. I think seed was sown that will yet bring fruit.

After a short visit at home, we went to conference at Wheeler's Grove, and had a very pleasant and profitable time. At the close of conference, Bro. Kemp remained this week, preaching every night save Tuesday and Wednesday. The writer came to Carson on Tuesday, and visited until Thursday, when Bro. Kemp came over to assist in our Thanksgiving service, which was held in their beautiful little chapel. After the song, Bro. Kemp offered a fervent prayer of thanksgiving to God for all his mercies. The writer then spoke to the people of the goodness of our dear Father in heaven to us.

We then dispersed to partake of the good things prepared by the sisters. At night the young people of Religio and Sunday school held a social entertainment at home of Grandma Fenn, and a delightful time was had; singing, conversation, and a number of fine recitations were given by the young people, followed by a select song; the whole concluding with a fervent prayer by Bro. Kemp. The little band of saints at Carson are nobly sustaining the gospel work in this creed-bound village by their godly walk and conversation. Bro. Elswick conducts their service, and is one of the most devoted men I know of. We shall likely continue our meetings over Sunday at least.

Yours in bonds,

J. S. STRAIN.

Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote you, more than a quarter of the year has rolled away, and ere '99 shall close accounts and wind up its affairs, I pen this missive bearing humble evidence that I am still in the faith and hope of the gospel, and on the fighting line for the truth.

As askance the glittering sheen of the setting sun cast beauty o'er lake, field, and wood, August 23, I led one into the water of baptism, that the crown of eternal life through obedience might be obtained.

On invitation of our kind and thoughtful, wide-awake missionary, I hied me away to Washington Park, situated betwixt the "center spot" and the busy mart—Kansas City, there to dwell for ten days 'mid the tents of Israel and take part in the first reunion held in the Independence (Missouri) district. I was scribe for the gathering, and when appointed, sounded the gospel trump. Those who had this gathering in charge were alert and faithful to make it a success, and although campers and attendance were not up to expectation, the opinion obtained that some good was accomplished, and a committee appointed to provide a reunion next year.

On account of indisposition I lingered with loved ones at Independence. A sweet little granddaughter is quite an attraction to one whose dearest love has gone hence.

September 9 and 10, was in attendance at district conference at Kansas City. I was impressed with the few in attendance to do business for a large district. Perhaps worldly cares was the occasion of the small number present, but I could not banish the thought, This is a work of sacrifice.

The next Sabbath was spent with the saints of Lee's Summit, and although not in a prime condition for preaching, and the rain militated against a large turnout, nevertheless I felt blessed in breaking the bread of life to the faithful few in attendance, and have not forgotten the kind invitation of old and new formed acquaintances, Come again.

I spoke twice in the stone church in Independence, and on the 24th, led two Cricks into Schultz's pond, and thus the army of the Lord was increased to the joy of saints and friends. My part of the work was the watering of seed planted by other watchmen of Zion's cause.

Thence to Pollock, where there was an increasing interest and attendance, which was abruptly closed by telegram to attend the funeral of my aged and respected mother-in-law, who for sixty-two years had stood faithful to the angel's message. Many of those who have been in the active ministry for the past thirty or forty years will remember her home as a quiet resting place for the weary missionary. While at home I preached twice and attended the district conference; nothing was done only to receive written reports.

Thence to Independence where I was confined to the house for over a week.

Spent a few days at Bevier, and preached for the few who had courage to attend meeting, for it was a time of trouble, and the white and Afro-American miners were hunting each other with guns. The constant barking of the guns revived the memory of the civil war in the days of our youth. It is no easy task to hold the attention of a congregation while men go scurrying past with gun in hand, intent upon shooting a fellow-being, made of the "same blood." The poor women and children occupied dooryards in clusters, excited and weeping, while the men filled the streets in the center of town. None were killed that I learned of. These are events that cause deep and searching thought of the times in which we are living.

In company with Bro. Joseph A. Tanner (to whom belongs the most credit for our success in the debate), went to Moberly and engaged in a six nights' discussion with Elders T. H. Chambers and J. N. Larsen of the Utah Church. I pity those who have left the path of truth. My faith and confidence in the Reorganization was in nowise damaged, but the rather grew brighter. Friends to our cause were made, and many learned that we and the Utah Church are not the same. I have more than ever seen that a great deal of the hindrance that prevents our reaching the people is caused by the evil and false doctrine of that people of the West, who seek to deceive the people under the name of Latter Day Saint. We have nothing to fear in debate from that organization. After the discussion, continued meetings for a week. There are mountains of prejudice in this place, and a few interested investigators.

Our work at Higbee has suffered on account of removals caused by the lockout of the miners. However, there are some who are steadfast to their duty, and trying to keep the "camp fires blazing;" and to aid them in this good work I preached for two weeks with signs of interest upon the part of some. How slow is our progress in getting the gospel to the people, and what patience and stick-to-it-iveness is required, that we may acquit ourselves before God with the assurance that we have done our work faithfully and acceptably unto him.

December 1, I went to Boonville to administer to a little sufferer, who has been afflicted with dropsy for about a year. While there I held a cottage meeting, and felt blessed in speaking to the few. They desired that I continue a week or more, but other appointments prevented complying.

Living at Higbee is a Sr. Harriet Davis. For more than a year, prior to last July, her health was constantly failing with what the doctor called consumption. August 1, she completely collapsed, and the neighbors swarmed into the house for several days watching for her demise; and the doctor informed me that it was only a matter of a few days. Three times did the damp, clammy sweat of death rest upon her; and it was a sad scene to witness the farewell to children at midnight, and to hear the anxious wish for husband's presence. A letter and three telegrams had been sent him. Bro. R. R. Jones and I pled with God that she should live until the arrival of her husband, and she lived and still lives; and last Sabbath walked to church three times, the distance covered was over three miles. How good is our heavenly Father. Who can answer?

My last visit to Higbee has done more to establish the difference between us and Utahism than all the preaching I have hitherto done. We cannot shut our eyes upon the fulfillment of the words of 2 Peter 2: 1. Perhaps there never was a time when those moved by the spirit of the world desired the truth, but on account of the actions of those bearing the name of Christ has there been stumblingblocks set up in the pathway of those who would otherwise hear the angel's message of the restored gospel.

I saw in the news of to-day that the vote in the House of Representatives was 302 for and 30 against seating Mr. Roberts, and referring the case to a committee of nine for investigation. That does not look as if Brigham's prophecy that they would "cram polygamy down the throat of the Nation," was to have its fulfillment this year. May the Lord open the eyes of those who are in the fog of apostasy is my humble prayer, and that they follow the counsel of Isaiah, "cease to do evil." Then, and not until then, will the words of Joseph be fulfilled: "I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety." Our religion will not be popular, or the ruling religion of the world, till Christ reigns as King of kings, and Lord of lords; but as citizens we may stand in safety in any mart, court, or congress, without shame, and receive the respect accorded to our fellow citizens of other creeds. There have been eighty cases of scarlet fever here the past few weeks, with six deaths therefrom; diphtheria is likewise claiming victims among the children. Smallpox is alarmingly near in several towns. These with the usual prejudice and religious indifference which is upon the increase, together with the people's worldly cares and the ever-present allurements of multifold amusements, make the duties of the missionary not only a task of arduous labor, but of wise strategy in offsetting the cunning of our arch-enemy and his willing imps. The most discouraging feature in the conflict is when Satan finds aid from those within our ranks. Save us, O God, from the pitfall of sin in the day of our trial!

I am here to hold cottage meetings to advance the cause of saving truth, if it be possible. Only four saints in this city of twelve thousand.

On duty,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 6.

Editors Herald:—This morning I took a retrospect of the past and attempt a horoscope of the future.

There has been much along the journey to discourage and depress; summits to climb and bogs to cross; yet we still exist as a church, with indications that, through persistent efforts, we may succeed. The Satanic forces have been waging a seductive and insidious contest within the fold, and too often effective encroachment has been discernible and the baneful influence of their machinations have been clearly evident.

One of the Satanic plans has been the destruction of confidence 'twixt the representative and administrative forces and too frequently there has not been that cooperation and unanimity that should, and in fact must characterize a victorious host. Without unquestionable proof, insincerity should never be imputed to any man, no matter how incongruous and inconsistent his policy may appear to us. Environments can, and oftentimes do, dwarf the intellect and bias even the best of minds. The history of the past reveals the greatest devotion of character when men have been wofully out of harmony with the principles for which they apparently stood.

We cannot, as men of God, permit anything save palpable sin or human perversity to alienate our affections or to effect an estrangement, for the Good Master has said, "Except ye are one, ye are not mine." The zeal of youth and the caution of age do not always blend, and while age may sometimes deem the rising stalwarts in Zion's host as possibly incorrigible and oftentimes over-officious, the young may, at the same time, adjudge the aged as wantonly indifferent to the needs of the present hour.

Experience has taught me that Ian Maclaren is right when he says, "For one thing—and it is a very serious one—a minister after a certain age is almost impervious to new ideas. . . . With the average man there comes a time when his mind is crystallized and his beliefs become absolutely fixed. He may not resent the discoveries of younger men; he certainly will not assimilate them. He may not oppose new methods of action; he certainly will not adopt them."

Very few of the aged will admit this, but it is one of the dynamic truths of history which cannot be refuted. It would be folly on the part of youth to charge age with insincerity because of this.

The future of the church lies in the hands of our young people and, as the Infinite God bequeathed to our sires a heritage of toil along certain lines and in which they have merited general acquitment, so we are called upon to conduct the campaign along other lines which will but perfect the divine purpose in its application in the affairs of men. The young men of the present will, under the superior generalship of that peerless leader—the Galilean Prophet—carry the work forward into a broader and wider field of action.

The conservatism of age will serve as a brake on the radicalism of youth. It will keep us from too rash action lest, in our impetuous zeal to arrive at a good thing, we frustrate our own purpose by shattering the bark ere we enter into port.

The impetuosity of youth and the conservatism of age each have their place. I am thankful indeed to note a growing inclination to recognize this truth in church work. The young should in nowise diminish their enthusiasm, nor lessen their endeavor to secure that which hope pictures as of possible attainment. Age should not be censured as being true to itself and its grooved conception of things, even though it might plant itself in the road of progress and contest every forward step. Strategic points taken in the face of opposition only make our position the more impregnable and impervious to future attacks.

In many places I have noticed a tendency to lethargy in the rank and file, but with proper effort such can be stirred to action. As a church we must recognize the force of Patrick Henry's words, "We must hang together, or we will hang singly." We cannot retreat now. The road we have traveled is accessible from below, but entirely impassable for a return trip. Every man who has attempted it has been hurled into oblivion. We must advance or be captured by the enemy. To falter means irreparable loss.

Courage, fellow comrades! A loving Father is at the helm, and though occasionally adverse winds may blow us out of our course, and though once in a while the compass does not work as we would like, yet God will bring us safely through. A brighter day is just ahead. The day of our deliverance nears, and, if we are only faithful to our trust, all will be well. The next few years promise to be the most propitious in the history of this dispensation. And, unless my spiritual conception is blurred, many stirring and sweeping changes are just ahead of us. God is marvelously working among the nations of the earth. The seeds of disintegration have already taken root in the Brighamite fold, which promises to eventually disrupt the whole institution. Out of this demoralized scatterment we can gather thousands of honest, though misguided, souls. With us too many human anchors have held us back, but in the immediate future God will order the ropes cut, the compass will readily respond to the divine magnet, and with a united and disciplined crew we will sail on to ultimate, yea speedy, triumph.

Temporal salvation is the dominant theme in the world to-day, and if we can but come together in the spring of 1900 and as men of God agree upon the plan of divine action, we then can satisfy this world-wide hungering for present salvation, and at the same time disclose the broader hope of a future life.

Let us imitate the children of Judea when dispersed and far away from home, and bow with faces turned towards the promised land and pray for deliverance. A united effort along this line means deliverance now. It is ours for the living. Will we fit ourselves for occupancy, or lose our birthright, like Esau?

With a firm conviction that the future will be brighter than the past I subscribe myself as one who loves God, likewise my fellow man.

Later: We succeeded in making a good impression at Redlands, and I look for accessions there if the work is followed up. Bro. Chatburn is at Riverside this week. We shall make a protracted effort at Santa Ana soon. Bro. Dana writes from Santa Marie that the openings are good and there should be two or three missionaries there. This part of the field has been neglected for a number of years, resulting in a disorganized branch and a discouraged people. It is a mistake to bring people into the fold and then entirely neglect them. We will see what we can do to resuscitate them.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

FULTON, Iowa, Dec. 4.

Editors Herald:—Having returned home for a few days, I thought it might be of interest to some in the district to know what I have been doing, and where I will be preaching during the month of December. My last effort was made at Cedar Rapids, and it was the first encouraging effort I have ever made at that place. I had the pleasure of baptizing two ladies whom I believe will be of much credit to the work there. I have no doubt that not far hence there will be a branch in or near Cedar Rapids. I endeavored to rent a church building owned by the United Brethren Church, and though it has stood unoccupied for over one year, yet they would not rent to us. Could we procure a suitable place for holding meetings in the Rapids, there would soon be an ingathering there.

The work in the district presents a better appearance than for a long time heretofore; but there is one thing above another that militates against the work here, and that is the lack of more complete organization. In some of the branches there is only one official, and that is the president. Could there be better organization, the members composing the respective branches would be kept in a better spiritual condition. As it is, many months pass by without one visit from a branch official. Sometimes saints will get careless and fail to keep up their family duties, while if there were a visiting priest to step in and impart a few words of exhortation, I believe a greater degree of spirituality would prevail throughout the district.

I will return this week to Cedar Rapids in company with C. E. Hand, where we will hold forth a season, after which I will go towards the northwest part of the district. The Lord has blessed me greatly while preaching the word, and I hope to continue striving lawfully, that much good may come of my ministrations.

I have also tried to help the Sabbath school work in the district. Our last Sunday school convention, while not very largely attended, was a well directed effort. May the good Lord bless the work throughout the whole vineyard, is the prayer of your humble servant,
J. R. SUTTON.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Dec. 13.

Editors Herald.—My last communication to your periodical was written from Sacramento, in the latter part of September. The conflict is still on. The cause of Christ is gaining ground slowly but surely. The brethren of the ministerial force are battling away in the interest of the salvation of their fellow men; and the local ministry are renewing their diligence in the service of the Master in most places. Hence we look for quite an improvement along spiritual lines in the near future. Of course there is ample room for improvement.

The saints in Oakland have decided to erect a small chapel. A suitable lot in a convenient part of the city has been secured by the building committee, also cost of building decided, which will come within the limit of the means they have in hand. So the building can be dedicated as soon as completed. It is a very difficult thing to procure a suitable hall in cities nowadays, where services can be held in peace and quietude; and most halls are occupied during the week by various lodges, giving us the use of them only on the Sabbath. On Sunday evening, the 3d inst., while we were holding service, in the hall joining us—only a partition between us—a dance was going on at full blast. The sound of music and dancing affected some of our attendants like band music affects some of the old war horses. It is quite a task to keep a person's feet still, let alone concentrating the attention on what the preacher is saying, under such circumstances. We feel glad in our heart when we think the saints there will not have to endure such unpleasant scenes much longer.

Well, the great discussion between the renowned Rev. Miles Grant, of the First Adventist Church, and F. M. Sheehy, the Douglas of the Reorganization, is a thing of the past. The questions of the immortality of the soul, and the final destruction of the wicked, were the points of controversy. Bro. Sheehy acted the part of a perfect gentleman throughout the debate and made an able defense for the truth. The reverend gentleman got a little raspy two or three times, but Bro. S. reprov'd him in a very mild and loving spirit, which made many friends to him and the cause. We have cause to be proud of our brother, and the cause of truth will never suffer defeat in the hands of Bro. Sheehy as long as he is humble and faithful. We believe that much prejudice was removed and many friends made to the cause, and that much good will result to the church from the religious affray.

Rev. Grant is a marvel for one of his age, being over eighty years old. He accounts for his vitality by saying that he abstains from the use of meat, tea, coffee, and eats but twice a day, and rises early and retires early. Surely his example in many regards is worthy of imitation on the part of our people generally; and the Lord advises in the "Word of Wisdom" that our life will be prolonged by living in obedience to said instruction.

Bro. Anderson and I are holding nightly meetings in this city, in counseling the saints regarding their duty to one another and to the Lord. Bro. Taylor is the president and is assisted by Brn. Adamson (priest), Keifer and Parks (teachers). The deacon has lately removed to San Francisco. Mr. Tupper and his excellent wife (a sister) provide a home for the ministry during their sojourn here, which is highly appreciated by us. While Mr. Tupper is not in the church, there is no Latter Day Saint who is more hospitable to the missionaries of our faith. He will surely get his reward.

I expect to make a tour of San Jose, Santa Cruz, Monterey, and Gilroy, of the Central district, during the first of the new year.

The missionaries are reporting success in their respective fields.

We have been having considerable rain of late, but the weather is lovely to-day. It is a grand sight to see the flowers in bloom this time of year. I am well and hopeful, with love to all, I remain,

Yours in the one faith,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

ELKHORN, Idaho, Dec. 8.

Editors Herald.—Since coming to the West my faith in the work, especially as it relates to the Reorganization, has been greatly strengthened. By dream, by the Holy Spirit's influence, and by the harmonious blending of the law, I have been made to realize that the cause we represent rests upon the solid rock of truth. Indeed, so far as the law is concerned, when I consider the many points therein to be taken into consideration, and the degree of deception that entered into the church after the prophet's death, the record of the Reorganization seems miraculous to me, defensible as it is from every standpoint of view.

So far as my own brief experience is concerned, I can say that God has not forsaken me when I have remained humble and faithful. At other times I have felt the weakness of my own strength.

We occasionally meet with peculiar experiences in our contention with the predominant church here, and I have been at times shocked at the irreverence displayed during sacrament service, and the general carelessness in conduct, and disregard for the sacredness of religion.

Personally, I believe it will take generations for this people to climb out of the ditch into which they have fallen. While here and there we discover those who are in a condition to receive light, the great body of the people seem to be dull of comprehension, and unwilling to accept anything different from what they already have.

Thousands are in the church for policy's sake and it is not hard to judge about how much real religion there is in that class.

Many are dissatisfied with conditions, but don't know where to turn to better them; and a great many more are unstable in their ways wherever they are. A large per cent of the younger class find the church an easy home because they are licensed to pursue the ways of pleasure to an almost unlimited extent, and hence are content without asking the why of matters. This last is the saddest of all. Think of it! Children, and almost all of them, too, systematically educated in the dance from toddling infancy; taken where their childish ears are saluted with the profane word, and their eyes greeted by all the concomitants of such a place and that in the name of religion!

While I have a half-definite opinion of what the future of the church as an organization will be, I bother myself very little with speculations relative to the final outcome, believing it our duty to warn the people and leave results in the hands of God.

I think Bro. Joseph Lambert's exposition of the law and testimony peculiarly applicable to conditions here. We meet an abundance of testimony, but very little law.

In Fairfield, Utah, last winter I heard an elder, while preaching, bear a most emphatic testimony to the divinity of the work, and then before his conclusion stated that he had never read the books enough to know whether the work was of God or not. At the same meeting another elder bore a like faithful testimony and before concluding said the reason he knew the work was of God was because he was educated in it from a child. On another occasion at the same place a young elder stated that he didn't know whether that which he was preaching comported with the books or not, but he believed it just the same; but the local bishop, equal to the emergency, made it all right by bearing testimony to the truthfulness of the young man's gospel.

It is just such testimony as this, coming in many instances from immoral sources and unsupported by evidence, that makes religion a hiss among the outside element, and as a consequence this class generally turn to us a deaf ear.

I think that among ourselves we can profit by the lesson to be drawn from this. The very best testimony, in my estimation, is a true life, and when wisdom prompts us to speak of our faith, we ought, as Peter says, to be able to give a reason for our hope.

As indicative of conditions here I present the following thoughts as I have heard them presented from the pulpits the past summer: That the saints were driven from Missouri and Illinois because of their transgressions, and that they must now be more faithful in tithe paying for several reasons. One is, that their homes here may not be taken from them; another that they may be permitted to return to Jackson County, and build the temple; and, also that the church debt may be paid.

In explaining tithing I heard one man preach that if they hire a church member who is a tithe payer, no tithing on wages paid him is required; but if some "tramp" is hired, they ought to tithe every cent. (The thought emphasized with language considerably beyond the borders of slang.) See the point?

Again on two different occasions, "It is none of your business what becomes of the money." Have also heard it preached from the stand that Jackson County is growing up in weeds and the people are leaving the country. Is that so?

On the other hand there is a bright side to the picture. Nearly everywhere we go we are treated in about as friendly a manner as could be expected considering our plain talk, and in some instances have been the recipients of much appreciated favors from our opponents. The most of the elders I have met in public have deported themselves as gentlemen, and while in Layton last summer I was the welcome guest over night of Mr. Francis Nalder, the young elder who occupied our churches in St. Joe and Independence last winter. He gives a standing invitation to our elders to share his hospitality. And by the way, it seems to me that this is right, and my desire in this respect would be that wherever these elders go among our people they might meet with hospitality and kindness.

So far as I can discover, the returned missionaries bring pretty correct reports of the treatment they have received, and while, as relates to the "Josephites," these reports are generally good, some of them react against us quite seriously.

I don't advocate hospitality for policy's sake, but because I think it is right. I do not think the statement of John to "receive none such into your house" has any reference to hospitality, but rather to an acknowledgment of doctrine presented. If he does refer to hospitality, then the "Golden Rule," Paul's injunction in regard to the entertainment of strangers, as well as other scriptural injunctions of the kind, are rather contradictory to his position.

On account of the terrible prejudice which now exists in the minds of the people against Utah Mormonism, there is an opportunity for us to appeal to that prejudice, and there is a possibility that we may be inclined to do so. I believe that we should fight wrong wherever we find it, fearlessly, and upon legitimate grounds; but it seems to me that just so surely as we step from our dignity as men of God by appealing to popular prejudice, we shall eventually reap as we sow.

Just now Cache County, Utah, is in a furore of excitement over the thirty-one affidavits sent to the attorney by C. M. Owen. Some of these accusations are against the most prominent Mormons in the valley.

At present I am laboring as best I can in Malad Valley, with a degree of interest. In spite of the obstacles in the way of spiritual progress, we have some noble workers and I think some of God's best saints in this western mission. Their kindness to the missionary throughout Utah and Idaho will never be forgotten, and I pray God to sustain them until the conflict is over.

With commendable zeal the saints in Provo, with the hearty assistance of the members elsewhere, have erected a neat chapel on a lot donated by Bro. Wannberg, and now feel that they can worsnip in their own home. All present seemed to greatly enjoy the annual mission reunion very much. Meetings continued for a week after reunion, and as a result of some controversy crowds were very large. Through the blessing of God as manifested in the efforts of our missionary in charge, truth shone bright, and the other side felt keenly the stinging blows that were delivered.

My hope is in the gospel and I trust I shall be able to endure till the end.

If this epistle has reached undue length I will try to atone by lapsing into extended silence.

My permanent address is Pleasant Grove, Utah.

Editors Herald:—The Sheehy-Grant debate is ended and the cause we are engaged in has lost no ground, but on the contrary it has gained friends. With the exception of a few scraps of sarcasm from our opponent, the combat was gentlemanly throughout.

Although Bro. Sheehy had the international champion of the subjects to meet, he was enabled, by the understanding which the inspiration of God gave him, to present an abundance of proof to simply overwhelm the opposing evidence. As results, a goodly number have since come to services in our hall, and manifest a degree of interest.

The Seventh-day Adventists have rented the hall, in which the debate was held, and will for four nights review the debate. Bro. Sheehy will attend and, if need be, reply.

Bro. Griffiths and I came here on the 9th inst., and are finding room for work, as is found in most places. Many more earnest laborers are in demand.

Hoping and praying for the time when contentions shall cease and unity prevail, I am, Hopeful of triumph,

Editors Herald:—I will inclose an article I copied of Bro. E. A. Stedman's writing, in which you will see the reason why it was written. If you think it is wisdom to let it appear in the Herald, we should be pleased, for certain reasons in this part of the field if no more.

All goes well here now. We held meeting last night in the Bally schoolhouse; shall commence to-night in one two miles north of here, in a new neighborhood, also a new opening. I am well and hopeful. ELI HAYER.

"AFTER THE WAY THEY CALL HERESY."

Editor Preston Times:—If you will grant me space in the columns of your paper, I would like to present a few thoughts upon the above question. I ask this favor, because some in authority at this place have denied us the use of a public place, in which I desire to preach the gospel of Christ, their excuse being that we taught principles of heresy. It is no new thing to be called a heretic, for I read that some in Paul's day brought the charge of heresy against him, because he did not teach as the hireling priests in the Jewish religion did. But was he a heretic in fact? How are we to decide? Webster says, "A heretic is a person that holds and avows religious opinions contrary to the scriptures." The scriptures then are the standard by which to try all religious questions, and with this thought in mind I offer the following as principles of truth believed in and taught by myself and coloborers in gospel work.

1. We believe in God and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost. Matthew 28: 19.

2. We believe in repentance. Matthew 3: 8-11; Mark 1: 14, 15.

3. Baptism for remission of sins. Matthew 3: 6, 7-11; Mark 1: 4, 5; Luke 3: 3; Acts 2: 37, 38.

4. Laying on of hands. Acts 8: 14-17; Acts 19: 1-7; also 9: 10-17.

We also believe in the resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment, which provides that all men shall be rewarded for the deeds done in the body, or according to their works. Hebrews 6: 1-3.

Now, Mr. Editor, all these principles were taught by the Savior and the apostles, including the great apostle to the Gentiles; and it was because he taught this as the means of salvation that he was charged with teaching heresy. Paul in making his defense before Felix, said, "But this I confess unto thee, that after the way they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets." It was because he believed more than the priests and rulers did that he was arrested, and branded as a heretic, so it is but history repeating itself now.

We believe all things written in the law and the prophets, and in the God of our fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who was and is a God of revelation unchangeable in his nature, and we believe as willing to bless his children to-day, as in the past.

We believe also that the gospel has not changed, but that it is now as when Paul preached it—the power of God unto salvation to every one that believes it.—Rom. 1: 16, 17.

This is the gospel we wish to preach to the people here at Greenleaf and other places. But some have denied us the use of places controlled by them, and we now refer to the Dunkard brethren. They refuse to let us occupy places controlled by them, because they say we preach principles of heresy. They say by their acts that they alone have the truth, and all that do not agree with them are heretics, as well as we are. They should be willing, if they think that we have not the truth, to meet us in public discussion, and show from the scriptures where we are wrong. This we have offered to do upon two different occasions, but they seem to be afraid to meet the issue as men should, especially those professing to represent the Christ and his work.

If this people has the truth they cannot lose anything by an honest and open examination of their faith in the light of the scripture, but themselves would be the gainers by publicly showing the errors of others. It is because they have attacked our faith, and refuse to give us a hearing, that I write this, that the public may know the truth of the matter. After agreeing, upon two different occasions, to meet us and discuss the differences in faith, they now say that we are not worthy of their notice, so pass us by. The Jews were more manly than this, for although they believed Christ to be an impostor and a deceiver, yet they would let him preach in their synagogue, and would listen to him. But the Christ said to disciples, They shall put you out of their synagogue, and you shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake. If they can afford to do as they have done here, we can afford to let them, and shall continue to preach the gospel to men.

E. A. STEDMAN.

GREENLEAFTON, Minn., Dec. 5.

Editors Herald:—I returned to my appointed field of labor November 27, and coming to the Chatfield vicinity, I learned Bro. E. A. Stedman had been at Sr. Butts' a few days previous, and passed on to the southern part of the county, where I now am. Bro. Stedman expected to find me here, but on account of stopping over Sunday at my old home, Eagle and Head Grove, Iowa, where I was urged to continue meetings during the week and over another Sunday, in which I preached three times, is the reason Bro. Stedman did not find me as expected.

I found our brother battling for the truth in the Bristol Grove schoolhouse, where I tried to tell the story at eleven different times last winter. Brn. Stedman and Morris had tried to secure the Prairie Queen schoolhouse, where I also preached three times last January, but they were refused, on the ground that I had been preaching heresy there. These parties challenged us for a discussion, but when they found out we would make arrangements to that end they backed out; and now after Brn. Stedman and Morris made arrangements again, the same thing occurred, admitting our question for debate was fair on both sides, but wanted sufficient time to secure one of their ablest men, and allowed us the same privilege, and enough time also to make all necessary arrangements, but backed down after all, with the excuse that it was of little consequence, that their cause was not suffering, and when it did it was time to defend it, and at the same time afraid of a heretic preaching.

They are known as the Brethren, or commonly called Dunkards. While they appear to be honest and sincere, they truly fail to understand the gospel of Christ as a means of life and salvation. It is sad indeed to see good, honest people groping their way in darkness.

I trust the way may be opened, in which they may be able to see and comprehend God's truth in full, and enjoy the benefits of the same. To that end I hope to labor and work, and strive to be instrumental in doing good among men, so that my reward may be secured. For the triumph of truth, I remain, Yours in Christ,

ELI HAYER.

SEILING, Okla., Dec. 10.

Editors Herald:—We are striving to let our light shine. Being located some distance from the branch, we seldom meet with them, but keep up regular appointments in the town hall every second Sunday in the month. Being connected with the union Sunday school we have opportunity to exchange views in a kindly way with those of several religious denominations, but our views are answered generally with silence.

Bro. R. M. Maloney has been holding some meetings nine miles southwest of this place, which has awakened quite an interest with some, while others scoff and ridicule; but truth is mighty and will prevail. We believe the effort should be continued.

Having received several letters of inquiry (some coming at times when I was very busy and may not have been answered satisfactorily) I thought well to address them through the Herald, as I believe there are good openings here for those who want to get homes, and who have a few hundred dollars, which would be but a drop in the bucket toward buying in old settled countries, but would get them a good farm in this country. There is but little deeded land here, but anyone who has not used their homestead right is better off (to buy claims and get the benefit of the seven years' exemption from tax) than those who buy deeded land. Like all other new countries, taxes are high. We raised good crops of almost everything planted the past year, and the land will be in fine shape for spring crops. We are getting an abundance of rain this fall and winter.

If a few more families of saints were to come here, we could soon have a branch. It is too far from the meeting place of the present branch to meet with them. Some may say, O, but they are talking of the gathering soon, and that is so far away. Well, but we have been admonished to secure homes for ourselves, and then this is a new country, and land advancing; and should the command come to gather, the way will open up for that to be accomplished. So let us obey the admonition and await the command.

All letters of inquiry will be answered as promptly and completely as circumstances will permit. Address, with stamp,

H. F. DURFEY.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

The humblest man or woman can live splendidly. That is the royal truth we need to believe, you and I, who have no "mission" and no great sphere to move in.—William Gannett.

CATLIN, Wash, Nov. 17.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—I thought I would write a piece to the Herald, although I kept putting it off, thinking others could do better; but the more I put it off the heavier it would bear on my mind, so I thought it well to do the best I could.

I joined the Church of Jesus Christ when but young, and am trying to live a Christian life and do the best I know how. I attended church and Sunday school and prayer meeting every Sunday I could. Of course I could not go every Sunday, for it was quite a distance from home. We had no church of our own until 1899; the elders had to preach just where they could, but now we can be independent. Our church was dedicated by Bro. Joseph Smith.

Since we moved to Washington we do not hear the gospel preached, for there are no elders here, but I hope and pray that the way may soon open when we can have an elder, for I believe there would be a great deal of good done here, for some have never heard the gospel preached, and some have and not obeyed. O how can they be so blind when the wide fields of harvest are waiting for them to enter in? Papa and Mama take the Herald, Autumn Leaves, Hope and Ensign, and I like to read them very much, especially the letters and "Jots by the Wayside." They are very interesting for young people to read and learn of the truth.

Pray for me that I may ever be found faithful and not faint by the way. I believe going to prayer meetings and hearing our testimonies with one another is the happiest part of our life; for I know there is a crown laid up for us in heaven if we live faithful to the end. Pray for me and I will pray for you.

Your sister,

JULIA ROSS.

NO TIME TO PRAY.

No time to pray!

O, who so fraught with earthly care
As not to give to humble prayer
Some part of day?

No time to pray!

What heart so clean, so pure within,
That needeth not some check from sin,
Needs not to pray?

No time to pray!

'Mid each day's danger, what retreat
More needful than the mercy seat?
Who need not pray?

No time to pray!

Must care or business' urgent call
So press us as to take it all,
Each passing day?

No time to pray!

Then sure your record falleth short;
Excuse will fail you as resort
On that last day.

What thought more drear

Than that our God his face should hide,
And say, through all life's swelling tide,
No time to hear!

Cease not to pray;

On Jesus as your all rely.
Would you live happy, happy die?
Take time to pray.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REUNION.

Minutes of the Sunday school session at the reunion at Washington Park, Missouri, August 27 to September 3. The first session of the Sunday school was held Sunday morning at 9:30. The local schools at Independence, first and second Kansas City; Armstrong, and Chelsea, having been abandoned to participate in the union school. The weather for the morning was disagreeable, the rain having fallen until eight o'clock. J. A. Gunsolley, assistant general superintendent, was in charge, with William Clow and W. N. Robinson as associates. Classes were arranged throughout the large pavilion. An interesting session was held. The total attendance of officers, teachers, and pupils was 441. The collection was $4 49.

At 4:30 p. m., Monday, the first session of institute work was held, in charge of J. A. Gunsolley. The subject of "Qualifications and Duties of Sunday School Teachers," was discussed. Quite a fair attendance was had, and good interest was the rule. The outline of the subject was developed, covering the points brought out.

Tuesday at 4:30 p. m., the subject of "Duties of Officers" was discussed, in charge of W. N. Robinson. Especial attention was given to the superintendent, secretary, and the librarian.

On Wednesday afternoon, William Clow had charge of the teachers' meeting, for the preparation of the lesson for the coming Sunday. At this meeting the practical work of the preparation was had, and it was expected that criticisms and the discussion as to the needs of the teachers' meeting, and the practical manner in which it should be handled, would be the theme for another hour, but on account of the time being taken up for other meetings on Friday and on Saturday, the opportunity was not had.

Thursday afternoon and night, the reunion committee had set apart for especial Sunday school work, and at half-past two a large attendance was present, and highly entertained by a discussion by Miss Eunice Winn, of Kansas City, on the theme "Primary Department." She discussed the subject in detail, giving her experience, and the methods she employed in handling the little ones, and showing the success that could be attained by proper application, and example of one's self. A vote of thanks was tendered to her, by those present, for the able and entertaining manner in which the subject was handled.

William Clow discussed the "Relationship of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants Classes to the School." This was quite thoroughly treated. The speaker convinced most of those present that there is great need for deeper study of these two books, and that the relationship is coequal with the Bible. The third topic of the afternoon, was the discussion of the "Uses and Abuses of the Blackboard in Sunday School," by W. N. Robinson. It was shown that simple illustrations and maps form great aids in classes, as well as in the school at large.

In the evening, H. O. Smith, of St. Joseph, occupied about forty minutes in the discussion of the subject, "The Mission of the Sunday School in the Church." Many present complimented the speaker, and thought no finer effort had been made at any time in behalf of the Sunday school. Following Bro. Smith, the other half of the general topic, "The Mission of the Sunday school in the world," was concisely discussed by J. A. Gunsolley. Time was not had for the enlargement on the number of points, but numerous strong points were made in rapid succession.

At the Sunday morning session of the school, the weather was brighter, and the total attendance was 575, with a collection of $5 64. W. N. Robinson was in charge, assisted by E. Etzenhouser and William Clow, and the general review was given by William Clow. There were forty-four officers and teachers present.

W. N. ROBINSON, Acting Sec.

[Up to this time, the largest session ever held by our people, to our knowledge, was at the Woodbine, Iowa, reunion in 1898, when four hundred sixty-five were present. But look out, Bro. W. N., or we will pass your mark next year. We have the people. All that we need is power to get them out.—ED.]

"OUR DISTRICT CONVENTIONS: SHALL THEY BE DISCONTINUED?"

"THE TROUBLE, CAN IT BE REMEDIED?"

I read in Saints' Herald of November 22, 1899, an article under above caption, which calls forth the deepest thought of every alive and active Latter Day Saint. If after reading the article we are not stimulated to thought and actions more than we have been heretofore, then, I believe, we have serious cause for examination of ourselves to see whether we have that love within our hearts that God says we must have to be his children.

"The trouble; can it be remedied?" In the Sunday school we are continually coming in possession of new material to build up the additions to the Sunday school and repair whatever breaches may be made by the various causes.

What seems to be the most serious obstruction to progress in the work is the lack of knowledge how to use this new material. I mean new members or, even members who have been engaged in the work for years, but have now for the first come to have some of the care and responsibility of the Sunday school resting on them. Such ones often are not gifted with speech, therefore could not take part in making the conventions a success. They may not have the education or refinement that some others may be privileged to have. Those individuals remind me of a tree in the forest, nothing to admire from outward appearances. The beauty is in the usefulness to which it can be put, by working it into the many beautiful articles that adorn our homes. So with our new material.

There are many who feel too timid or have not the confidence in themselves to do anything, but when they are made to feel at home, and, a portion of the work assigned to them, we are then often surprised with the result. My prayer is ever for the onward progress of the work and that the district conventions may continue and grow; and I believe they will. S. W.

Adjourned to meet at call of president in January, 1900; and January 14 and 15 is the time, and Wilber the place.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music and which, when touched, accidentally even, resound with sweet music.—Phillips Brooks.

Sunday School Associations.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Sunday school association met in Nebraska City, September 8 and 9. Superintendent W. M. Self in charge; E. D. Briggs, secretary. At eight p. m., Daughters of Zion occupied the time by giving an outline of their work. A large audience present. Convention held three sessions on the 9th, and some good work was done, and those present took an active part; also a number of good papers were sent in by those not attending. Zion's Religio society work was also introduced, and the work being done in that line was represented and outlined. Reports were read from superintendent, secretary, and treasurer, and from schools at Fairbury, Fairfield, and Nebraska City. A motion carried, that each school take up a collection on the first Sunday of June and December of each year, for district expenses. The Sunday school newspaper was very good and interesting. Next convention will be held in Wilber, January 12 and 13, 1900, when district officers and delegates to General Convention are to be elected.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Southern Nebraska district Sunday school association will meet in Wilber, January 12, at 7:30 p. m. Entertainment will be given by Union Band Sunday school. Business and normal work at 2:30 on the 13th. Reading of newspaper, short talks, and short papers on Sunday school work in the evening. ### PRIMARY LESSON ILLUSTRATION CARDS.

They are outline pictures, representing the incidents of the lessons, to be colored with crayon or water colors, by the children. Full directions for their use will be given in the Quarterly. These cards will be furnished FREE to every school, as many as they have of primary pupils. As there are more primary children than the number of Primary Quarterlies used, it will be necessary for each school to send an order for the number of cards needed to supply each primary pupil.

Orders should be sent at once, as these cards are for a part of the lessons of first quarter of 1900. Let superintendents and secretaries, as soon as they see this announcement, take the necessary steps to send the order at once. It is desired to make a thorough test of the practicability of this feature of work.

Send orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

SECOND PROPOSITION.

Mr. Braden in his lectures before the debate informed the public that the whole issue in the debate would be Mormonism, even upon both questions. This he attempted to carry out, till people became disgusted with his unfair method. The chairman would have called him to time, but I thought best not to do so. I made good use of this breach of honorable controversy.

Braden in his opening speech said: "We have nothing to do with the origin or history of the Christian Church; all that is before us is the differences between the church my opponent represents and the one I do." I had prepared for this, and had Braden's proposition printed in large letters on a large sheet. When Braden took his seat I tacked this up on the wall behind me, and the people read: "Is the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) in fact the Church of God, harmonizing in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice, with the Church of Christ, set up by divine authority, eighteen hundred years ago?" I explained the nature of the work before us, as Braden seemed to try to evade the whole issue. The question does not say: That the Christian Church (commonly called Campbellites) is in, or out of harmony with the church Mr. White represents, but, is in harmony with the church set up by Christ eighteen hundred years ago. For Braden to place his church on one side, and mine on the other, is to acknowledge my church in harmony with the church eighteen hundred years ago. Will he now admit this is his position? If so, he grants that I have sustained my proposition, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?" beyond all controversy, hence the church he was permitted to organize by the direction of the heavenly Master is the church of God in fact.

I thanked Mr. Braden for the position he had taken, as I had thought all along that I had him on the anxious seat; and now, since he has acknowledged his conversion, I hoped he would fully repent of all of his hard speeches against me and my church, and then he would be ready for baptism. (Applause.)

I wanted it remembered that we wanted an honorable debate and no begging of the question, and Mr. Braden should honor his church question, as I did mine. Let him come square up to the work, and I wanted none of this dodging around Robin Hood's barn. For him to say the "history" and "origin" of this Christian-Campbellite Church had nothing to do with this debate shows cowardice upon his part. His people had chosen him to put his church in harmony in organization, doctrine, and practice, not with White's church, nor that of the Methodist, Baptist, or any other church, but that set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago. Braden's Christian-Campbellite Church was on one side, and the church talked about in the New Testament that was set up by Christ and his apostles eighteen hundred years ago is on the other side. For instance,—here is my hand (holding it up) that God created by divine interposition years ago—say for argument's sake, eighteen hundred years ago; now, Braden says he has a hand just like it, in organization, etc. You will see this hand has one thumb and four fingers, a complete hand as good probably as God organized for Adam, and just like completed—yes organized hands of eighteen hundred years ago. Now, I tell you I have another hand organized, yes, just like that one, and here it is: holding up my other hand with fingers and thumb clenched down into its palm. Well, says one, that first hand has a thumb and four fingers, and this last has neither, and how can you argue they are alike, and keep truth on your side? Well, I will do it just like Braden does when trying to harmonize this Christian-Campbellite Church with that one set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago. How is that, says one? Well, by going to work to cut off the thumb and fingers from this first hand. (Here I take down the thumb from first hand, the one I had up for the model; then I take down the first finger, and so on till I have nothing but the fist left; then I quickly shove up the other fist, and said: There! are they not alike?) Now, this is the very thing that Braden has attempted to do before this intelligent audience. He has admitted that God set in the church eighteen hundred years ago, apostles, prophets, etc., and now that he might have some show for this Christian-Campbellite Church that Campbell organized in 1827, he goes to whitening away at the model church of eighteen hundred years ago, then shoves his church to the front and says, "There! is it not like it?"

I am not surprised at him saying the "organization" and "history of the Christian Church has nothing to do with this debate." He would be glad to keep this Campbellite Church that he is pleased to call the Church of Christ, "hid away;" yes, back in the brush somewhere.

Let me tell Mr. Braden that his church, yes, this Christian-Campbellite Church, is on trial here for all it is worth, and don't you forget. The idea of Braden now attempting to crawl into his hole and "hide away" this church he has so boastfully attempted to affirm, is certainly amusing. He might just as well come out with it; if he doesn't I will pull him out, and it too. (Applause.)

This name: "Church of Christ;" very modest indeed! Who placed that name upon this concern Braden calls, "The Church of Christ?" Did God, or Christ? If it is the church of eighteen years ago restored, as Campbell and Braden say, then it has some divine right to that name. But does it look anything like that church of eighteen hundred years ago? that is the question. There is a stove (pointing at it). Suppose I write on it, in large letters, the word "boy." I now argue that it is a boy because of the name on it. Does the name make it a boy? Everybody answers no. Why? You see it has legs; yes, says one; but it has two too many many legs for a boy. Are there any other objections? Yes, it is cold and lifeless—doesn't seem to have the same life power in it as you find in the boy. Now this is just like Braden's "Church of Christ." Campbell got up an organization, and then wrote on it, "Church of Christ." Why is it not the "Church of Christ?" Well, you see, says one, the model for the "Church of Christ" is found in the New Testament; this model is eighteen hundred years old. The model in the case of the boy and the stove, was not in the "stove," but the "boy." Just so in this Christian-Campbellite Church; the model is not in the Campbellite Church, but in the one set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago.

Now to the comparison: "And God hath set some in the church [eighteen hundred years ago], first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." (1 Cor. 12:28) Now, this is the model church of eighteen hundred years ago. Is Braden's church like this in organization? Every reasonable man would answer no. Braden's church is not as near like this as the stove was like the boy. Braden's church has not an officer in it that was "set in" by our heavenly Father; not one! Though we have an unchangeable law, found in the New Testament, which Braden calls the "constitution of the church," which says: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." (Luke 10:2) This law was put into practice in the very beginning of the church eighteen hundred years ago, and kept up as long as the church stood in honest rapport with Christ, its head,

You will see by turning with me to Acts 1:20-26. Here it is fully honored as the "practice" of the church as regard to setting in officers in the church. It says: "And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen." Here Matthias was chosen to the apostleship. This was directly after Christ's ascension; and some years afterwards we have the same law put into practice in regard to calling of Paul and Barnabas. (Acts 13:1-3.) And some fifteen years after this we see it was practiced in the case of putting elders into the church. (Acts 20:17, 28.) Now, why should Braden's church be called the "Church of Christ" any more than the stove be called a boy, when it fails to harmonize in "practice"?

Braden says: "When the Holy Spirit is in a man, it is a superhuman phenomenon." Then he says: "There never were but two instances of baptism in the Holy Spirit;" on the Day of Pentecost, and at the house of Cornelius. What, then, has Braden's church for spirit power more than the stove? Nothing. The stove really has the advantage, as we can fill it with fuel and have a good fire on a cold day; and Braden has just told you, while I was talking about John's saying that when Christ came he would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire, that he didn't want any of that kind of fire. Well, you will remember that I told Braden then, that he need not give himself any uneasiness over that as he was not likely to get any of that kind of fire unless he repented of some of his bad work, but I would guarantee that he will enjoy a goodly portion of that other kind of fire, that the Lord spoke of when he would come in "flaming fire" to take vengeance upon the wicked. (Applause.)

Braden threw on my table the following: "The issue clearly, fully stated." Then follows: "Was the New Testament church, as portrayed in Acts, Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Thessalonians, Hebrews, James, Peter, John, and Jude, merely provisional, preparatory? or was it the completed permanent organization that inspiration perfected to exist during all coming time? Was the New Testament church, as portrayed in Timothy and Titus, the completed, the permanent organization, perfected by inspiration, as it was to exist in all coming time? In attempting to restore and reproduce the New Testament church, should an attempt to reproduce the church as portrayed in Acts, Romans," etc., etc., just as stated in his first as found above, "or should we attempt to reproduce the church as portrayed in Timothy and Titus? Is the church as portrayed in Acts, Romans, Corinthians," etc., etc., the model with which the church to-day should harmonize? "or is the church as portrayed in Timothy and Titus the model with which the church to-day should harmonize?"

Now, Braden squares himself for a fight along this line. He took the position that the church from Acts to Jude was only in its preparatory state—in childhood; but when it reached Timothy and Titus, it was complete—came to manhood. Don't forget that Braden is the only man that the Campbellites have that can defeat and crush what they term Mormonism. The Campbellites are always ready to indorse him as the man to "crush" our people, provided Campbellism is left out of the propositions. He crushes (?) our church, that harmonizes with the church portrayed in Acts, Romans, Corinthians, and on down to Jude, by rejecting all of these fifteen books, and sticking to Timothy and Titus! Now, brethren, don't let Braden, nor any elder in the Campbellite Church get back of this position. Braden is the great "I Am" in the fight of "crushing" out our position taken in Acts, Romans, Corinthians, and on down to Jude. Now, you have only to deal with Timothy and Titus. I reminded Braden at once, that he had to keep his eyes open as he had been contending that the New Testament was the "constitution" to the church and it was that (so he said) "which is perfect," and should remain, while many other things had to "cease" and "pass away" as only "in part" as found in 1 Corinthians 13. It would probably be a bad break for a president of a college to make before professors and students, to repudiate at the very commencement fifteen books of his "constitution"—the very thing that is the "perfect." I here held of the fifteen books, then Timothy and Titus. Braden wilted.

I happened to have some apples in my grip, and I produced three and laid on the pulpit, and took out my knife and cut one apple into many pieces. The whole apple represented Braden's constitution—the perfected New Testament; the very thing that he had contended should remain as that "which is perfect." Now, to remove Braden's fifteen constitutional books, (pieces of apple, and we have only two (Timothy and Titus) left. This certainly cut the apple down to a small concern. Where is Braden's perfect apple—the full New Testament? Simple as this apple argument may appear, Braden did not dare attempt to answer it: it caught the people. I laid the pieces on my table and they remained there till the close of debate, and while I was packing my books, some bystander said: "You should give Braden one piece of that apple." Should he have said two, it would have represented Braden's position.

Braden's position of his preparatory church, as a boy, in Acts, Romans, Corinthians, etc., and the manhood being reached at Timothy and Titus, will not, and did not stand the test of an exegesis along that line. If it was a whole "boy" in Acts, Romans, etc., would it reach a perfect man at Timothy and Titus by an amputation of fifteen parts of the "perfect boy" and leaving only two parts to make the "perfect man" from? The man should have all the parts that were first "set in" the boy, by the handiwork of God; only they should grow to be more hardy, durable, and substantial. Just so with the Church of God. God set into it, in its "childhood," or boyhood days, "first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings;" etc. (1 Cor. 12:28.) Or, "apostles; and some, prophets; and some evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." (Eph. 4:11.) All of this was in the "boyhood" days of the church as found in Acts, Romans, Corinthians, Ephesians, etc.; yes, also in the days of Timothy and Titus, and was to remain with the church through all ages, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." (Eph. 4:13.) This "fullness" or "perfection" was not reached in the days of Timothy and Titus; but will be reached when the church is prepared as a wife adorned for her husband, as found in Revelation 19:7-9. We will be like Christ only when we make ourselves so, by abiding continually in his doctrine till he comes; then as 1 John 3:2 says, "When he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

When this point was reached I turned to my pictorial chart, and referred to Paul and his statement in Galatians 1:8, 9, in regard to men or angels preaching any other gospel than that which he preached, and showed he preached that which was found in Mark 16, where signs were promised to follow the creature in all the world, which had been verified in Philip's preaching in Acts 8:12-17, and at the conversion of Paul, and on down to others that believed in Acts 19:1-6 and 1 Corinthians 12, and Paul in closing his exegesis of that which should "cease" and be "done away" because only "in part" said: "Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that you may prophesy." (1 Cor. 14:1.) At this point I used one of my apples. Cutting it into pieces I showed, by holding up one piece, that it only represented "in part" the whole apple. Now, if I would throw this "part" away, when could I get the apple perfect? I had one part represent the small degree of knowledge we had of God and his vast work—we could only "see through a glass darkly," as Paul said: "we know" only "in part. One piece of the apple represented our meager understanding of tongues, just a gibberish of the perfect language that was enjoyed before the confounding of the language at the Tower of Babel. Now, I showed by the pieces of apples how things would be if I followed Braden's exegesis of Paul's sayings. I took one piece which was "in part" of the whole apple, and laid it to one side. It represented "knowledge," which Braden said should "cease" and be "done away" when Timothy and Titus had the church perfected. Another piece representing "wisdom," was laid to one side; another "faith," another "tongues;" and so on till the whole apple had vanished and then I asked: "Where is Braden's perfect church?" I said: "It is like the boy's bee he was after; as he reached for it, away it flew and some one standing by said: 'Halloo! boy, where's your bee?' 'O it's gone; but, don't you see, I have the buzz left.'" I turned to Braden and said: Braden, your church is gone like the boy's bee; but you have the buzz left. (Great applause.) Then I read what God said his church was, with apostles, prophets, and the wonderful array of spiritual gifts. But, what of Braden's church harmonizing with it? O, yes, Braden, it harmonizes with the buzz, and that's all you have got.

This may seem like a homely way to answer an opponent, but it captured the crowd.

I made a further exegesis with the pieces of the apple by putting them together and showed how a perfect apple could be formed; not by taking away that which was "in part," but by adding piece and piece together till I had the whole apple. Braden took the position, first, that apostles were set in the church to write the constitution, or the word; that was their calling, and after the perfect New Testament was written, which was the constitution, then apostles ceased because there was no more for them to do. Second, that apostles were set in to confer superhuman powers, and when these powers "ceased," apostles ceased. Third, apostles were set in to work miracles. In answer to this, I produce the following: 1. If the apostles' calling was to write scripture, nine out of the first twelve failed to write one word so far as our New Testament is concerned. 2. Luke and Mark wrote extensively, and they were not apostles; therefore, they were usurpers and impostors, according to Braden's own theory. 3. If apostles were the only ones to confer superhuman power by the laying on of hands, as Braden says, then Ananias was a base usurper and impostor for practicing the thing that was meant alone for apostles. 4. If apostles were set in the church to work miracles, then Philip, and Stephen, and Ananias were usurpers and impostors of the worst sort. But, no; I could not believe these men usurpers nor impostors; but this would be the case, if Braden's logic was true. It were better to accept the Lord's interpretation of what apostles were set in the church for. "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, and for the edifying of the body of Christ," etc. (Eph. 4.)

From the day of Pentecost to Timothy and Titus is about forty years, and Braden claimed there was no church during that time; only one in a preparatory state. I quoted Acts 2:47, "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." "Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers," etc. (Acts 13:1.) "And God set in the church first, apostles," etc. (1 Cor. 12:28.) It was a puzzle to the people how God could "add to the church," and how certain "prophets and teachers" could be in the church; and God first set apostles and prophets in, and at the same time be no church. I pressed Braden hard on Acts 20: 28. Acts is one of the books he rejected as portraying any church more than one merely in a preparatory way. Yet it says: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock [church] over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Here Braden's theory dropped out, and he dare not attempt an exegesis of this passage, though I pressed it hard.

Braden's theory is so easily met upon this line, that it is unnecessary for me to give further proof against it, though much more was introduced.

SHEEHY-GRANT DEBATE.

"THE GREAT DEBATE."

"A large audience of about 600 people attended the first meeting of the debate between Elder Grant and Mr. F. M. Sheehy on Monday evening, at Hamilton Hall, corner Thirteenth and Jefferson Streets, Oakland. It is a large hall, and was well filled. The audience seemed to be entirely composed of respectable and thoughtful people, as was evidenced by the absence of any noisy demonstrations. A spirit of the utmost kindness and courtesy characterized each of the debaters, even in their most weighty arguments. If those who attended expected to hear crude arguments from weak men, they were agreeably disappointed. No doubt many were surprised that two such able men were in their midst, without their being aware of it. It would be very difficult to find in the whole country, or any country, two better representatives of their respective views. The chairman, Professor Gilson, conducted the exercises with skill and dignity. The meeting commenced and closed with prayer, Mr. Sheehy offering the opening prayer and Elder Grant the closing.

"The lines of argument were briefly as follows: Elder Grant contended that the Bible and science both teach that there can be no life or intelligence without a material organism of some kind, and that as death destroys the organism of man, life and consciousness must cease at the same time; and he called for proof that anything left the body at death but life; or that God formed any other man than the one which the record speaks of in Genesis 2: 7, the man who was formed of the dust of the ground; and who was condemned to return to the dust, and who subsequently died. Elder Grant also cited various scientific authorities to prove that consciousness is dependent upon the brain.

"Mr. Sheehy admitted that life and intelligence required an organism, but contended that there is a finer grade of matter which he called spiritual substance, of which angels and all spirits are composed. Also that man has an internal organization called 'the inner man,' formed of this spiritual substance, so that he is a dual being, having a material organization endowed with animal life, like the animals, and a spiritual organism like the angels, formed of spiritual substance, which resides at present in his material form, but is independent of it for life and consciousness. Mr. Sheehy's argument from scripture was that it speaks of 'the outward man' and 'the inward man,' also that it declares that "there is a spirit in man," which, he believed, proved a spiritual organism like that of the angels, because the latter are also called 'spirits.' He then brought forward the passage in Revelation 5 which speaks of the souls under the altar, and that in Revelation 22: 8, 9 which, in the old version, makes the angel say to John, "I am thy fellow servant and of thy brethren the prophets." He also claimed that the scientific citations of his opponent were not up to date, and that one of his principal authorities, Professor James, had reversed his former opinion, and that he, with the Society of Psychical Research were affording abundant evidence that thought and consciousness in man could exist independently of the brain. In support of this position Mr. Sheehy instanced several cases where the best medical authority had pronounced people dead, as far as their physical organization was concerned, and yet after several days in this condition they had revived and declared that they were conscious all the time.

"This closed the debate for the first evening. It is not our province in this place to attempt to answer the arguments of Mr. Sheehy; we leave that to Elder Grant. We are now only endeavoring to give a faithful report of the debate, with the arguments on both sides.

"Each contestant occupied twenty minutes, and there were three speeches from each.

"The debate continues each evening until Friday evening."—Messiah's Advocate, Oakland, California, December 6, 1899.

HALF FARE PERMITS FOR 1900.

The Western Passenger Association and the Central Passenger Association have both been notified that certificates of appointment from the General Conference of 1898 hold good until the General Conference of April, 1900. All general appointees have therefore been indorsed for half-fare permits, hence applications may be made at any time.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

Applicants located in Alabama, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Sonora (Mexico), Tennessee, and Texas, should address C. M. Pratt, Chairman Southwestern Passenger Bureau, Room 1320, Union Trust Building, St. Louis, Missouri. Those in other Territory of said association address Eben E. MacLeod (successor to B. D. Caldwell) Chairman, No. 77 Jackson Street, Chicago, Illinois.

All local ministers are referred to their respective missionaries in charge for indorsement, as heretofore.

Application blanks, ready about December 1-5, may be obtained from the Chairman, or from local agents. Little if any changes in rules have been made.

CENTRAL ASSOCIATION.

The following from Mr. F. C. Donald, Commissioner of Central Passenger Association, Monadnock Building, Chicago, will explain itself:—

On or about November 15, application blanks for joint annual clergy certificates entitling the holders to the reduced fares accorded to clergymen by the railway lines operating in the territory of the Central Passenger Association during the year 1900, will be in the hands of the various ticket agents. Commencing with the first of January, 1900, an important change will be made in the form of the annual clergy credential, concerning which we would, if consistent, be very glad to have you inform the clergymen who read your valued paper.

The card clergy certificate which has been used since the institution of the Clergy Bureau of this association three years ago will be entirely discontinued, and in its stead will be issued a book certificate of convenient size to be carried in the pocket, neatly bound in leather, containing one hundred consecutively numbered orders or requests for clergy tickets, one of which the holder of the certificate will be required to sign and deliver to the ticket agent for each ticket purchased.

The principal reason necessitating a change in the form of the certificate is as follows:—

Under the old system the lines constituting the Clergy Bureau have no knowledge of the annual certificates issued by this office, while, on the other hand, this office has been unable, without great inconvenience and expense, to obtain a record of the passage tickets issued by the agents on the annual certificates. As a result it has been possible for unscrupulous persons to counterfeit the card certificate by the photographic process with comparatively little fear of detection. It will readily be seen that this will be impossible under the new plan, as the agent will have a signed and numbered slip for each ticket issued, which slip will eventually reach this office, be compared with our reports, and, if spurious, the fraud immediately detected.

The cost of printing and mailing the book certificate will be many times greater than that of issuing and distributing the old-style card, and it will also be necessary to materially augment the clerical force of the Clergy Bureau. To meet the added expense it is deemed necessary to increase the fee required from those applying for the certificates from fifty cents to one dollar. In view of the importance of safeguarding these valuable credentials, the necessity of which is, I am sure, as fully appreciated by the clergy as by the railways, and of the great convenience afforded by the new certificate which will be available on fifty-one important lines of railway in the territory of the Central Passenger Association, we believe that the increased fee will not be regarded as a hardship. The holders of certificates who exhaust the entire one hundred requests and desire an additional supply, may obtain same by sending the covers of the original book to the undersigned accompanied by a remittance of fifty cents, covering the cost of issuing the new credential.

The annual clergy certificate of this Association will be issued on proper application to those coming within the requirements of the Clergy Rules, residing in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Wisconsin, West Virginia, and also in the following cities of New York and Pennsylvania, and points west thereof in the latter States: Allegheny, Pittsburgh, Erie, Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, and Salamanca; also at such points in the Province of Ontario as may be authorized by the roads operating therein.

Time clergy certificates, available for a limited period, will be issued to proper beneficiaries residing at any point in the United States or Canada who have occasion to remain more than thirty days in the territory of this Association.

Arrangements have also been consummated whereby the undersigned will issue, in behalf of the various railways belonging to the Clergy Bureau, trip permits to clergymen residing in Chicago, Illinois, or without the territorial boundaries of our Association.

Further particulars concerning trip permits may be obtained by application to local railway agents, or to the undersigned.

Respectfully yours,

F. C. DONALD, Commissioner.

CHICAGO, Illinois, November, 1899.

SAINTS' EDUCATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.

A society bearing the above title was organized in the city of Denver, Colorado, on the evening of December 5, by a few Latter Day Saints who are interested in the question of coöperation. Much has been said of late through the church papers on the question of the "gathering," "coöperation," etc., but no plan has yet been presented whereby these things may be made a reality. It is quite apparent that very few persons understand these questions, therefore education seems to be the first step toward a successful movement of this kind.

The object of our society is educational. Our plan is to meet from time to time and study the history of coöperative enterprises of various kinds, observing their weak and their strong points, endeavoring to profit by their successes and also by their failures. A suitable library will be secured, to which all the members will have access. A program committee will arrange to have something of interest for each meeting. Papers on various subjects will be prepared, such as "How to cooperate," "The most profitable branch of business to engage in," "The best place to locate," "The Zionist movement," "The Ruskin colony," etc.

The suggestions presented at our first meeting demonstrate that no one person has all the ideas, by any means. If saints in other places will take an interest in this movement and form societies, in due time a general organization can be effected, through which a colony, or colonies, can be established upon whatever plans future education and research may prove to be most practicable.

Sufficient capital will be forthcoming whenever the people are properly educated. We need not wait for some rich man to die, or to suddenly become very generous, and endow an institution of this kind; but a few persons of limited means, if united, can succeed. The Zionist movement is a living example of what may be accomplished by concerted action.

The Denver society purpose to cooperate in the purchase of their family supplies, such as fuel, groceries, etc., thus realizing some benefits in a local way, while they educate on general lines. To this end a business committee will be selected, who will have charge of the business of the local society. The plan of organization is as follows: A president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, librarian, and business committee. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws in harmony with the above plan of organization.

Correspondence is solicited from those persons who are interested in the question of cooperation, and suggestions will be thankfully received. Those possessing information concerning former cooperative enterprises are especially requested to communicate their knowledge to the society.

Donations of books and pamphlets on subjects of interest to the society are also solicited.

When a permanent organization is formed, and officers are elected, their names and address will be announced through the church papers. A temporary organization was formed with Elder E. F. Shupe as president, and Elder J. W. Gilbert as secretary.

Communications for the society can be addressed to the latter at No. 522 Nineteenth Avenue, Denver, Colorado.

Yours for advancement,

C. R. DUNCAN.

CONIFER, Colo., Dec. 9, 1899.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Southern Nebraska district will be held in Wilber, January 14 and 15. All branches and priesthood bearing members and missionaries in the district will please send full reports, closing with December 31, to Elder C. H. Porter, Wilber, Nebraska.

E. D. BRIGGS, Sec.

NOTICES.

To the Ministry of Southwestern Mission:—Please take notice and report January 1 and March 15. In your March report give report for the year, also the amount required to sustain your family.

Send reports to T. J. Sheppard, Oklaunion, Texas, or to A. J. Moore, Beaver, Texas.

The last report we did not receive reports from four of the brethren in time to go in our report to the Presidency. It is the church that has made the demand to report, and not the missionary in charge. When you fail to report you ignore the demand of the church. Brethren, let us be prompt.

A. J. MOORE.

To the Fifth Quorum of Elders: Will the members of the Fifth please report their ministerial labors to the secretary for the conference year, closing December 31, 1899. This will, of course, cover two years. Blank reports will be sent you; but in case they fail to reach you, report anyway. Don't fail!

FRANK CRILEY, Pres.
F. M. SMITH, Sec.

She rejoiced in the gospel, and was baptized at Maysville reunion, August, 1898. The day before she died she sang, "Nearer, my God, to Thee, nearer to Thee," and pointing upward said, "There is where I'm going, up there." She leaves a husband, mother, father, four brothers, and one sister to mourn. Funeral at the Heath church, and burial at its cemetery.

SERENE.—Dewitt C. Serene was born in Dutchess County, New York, November 20, 1837; he was married to Jane E. Rogers, January 8, 1862, by whom he had four children. He was baptized October 17, 1870, at Plano, Illinois. March 15, 1894, he was married to Miss Maggie Newton. Died at Raudalia, Iowa, November 15, 1899, aged 61 years, 11 months, 25 days. Though afflicted, he had a loving and affectionate disposition, and will be sadly missed by his parents, brothers, and sisters. Funeral in the saints' new church at Mallard, Iowa, sermon by Edmund Ford. Laid to rest in Rush Lake cemetery, to await the resurrection of the just.

RUST.—Henry, son of J. L. and Rachel M. Rust, departed this life November 30, 1899, at Malcom, Iowa. Deceased was born in 1874. He leaves a wife, two children, father, mother, four sisters, and two brothers to mourn. He never embraced the gospel, but seemed to give credence to it.

LOWE.—On November 3, 1899, Sr. Zenia E., eldest daughter of Elder W. H. Lowe, departed this life. She was 23 years, 2 months, and 11 days old. She leaves father, mother, and four sisters to mourn. She was of a sweet, loving spirit, always at her post of duty in the Sunday school and church. Funeral conducted by Abner Lloyd, assisted by Elder R. T. Walters. In peace she awaits the summons of the first resurrection.

RECTOR.—The saints and friends at Union, Indiana, and vicinity, were much shocked to hear the sad news of the death of Elder Samuel Rector. On Saturday, November 18, 1899, Bro. Rector arose, feeling as well as usual, ate a hearty breakfast, chored about his farm during the morning hours, had his dinner, and started to Wirt, a little country town, to purchase nails to use on his barn on Monday following. He left home about noon with wagon and team. He had gone perhaps some three hundred yards from home when his soul took its departure. His horses had drifted to the roadside and were found standing there, with the driver, lying in a half circle over the wagon bed, his face lying on the front wheel of the wagon. He was dead. He was well known by many Latter Day Saints. He united with the church in 1873; was ordained to the eldership soon afterward, serving as president of Southern Indiana district and Bishop's agent. He was 66 years, 3 months, and 8 days old. He leaves a wife, two sons, and one daughter. He served in the war of '61; was a very energetic man in the affairs of life, and a prominent citizen. Funeral sermon by Elder W. C. Marshall; interment in McKay cemetery.

SNEAD.—Sister Snead, wife of Bro. Isaac Snead, Birmingham, England, passed peacefully away November 18, 1899, being 48 years of age. She was baptized about eight years ago. She left us with the fullest hope of a glorious resurrection. During her connection with this latter-day work she has been an energetic worker in the Sunday school, the sisters' Dorcas Society, and in anything she could for the benefit of the work. She simply tried to be a Latter Day Saint both by practice and precept. Bro. Caton read the funeral service, and on Sunday preached the funeral sermon. It has been a great blow to the saints here. She was only ill about twelve days, and it was unexpected. She was a good wife, mother, sister, and friend.

He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn. Funeral sermon in the saints' church by Elder J. Arthur Davis, assisted by Elder R. K. Ross. Remains were laid to rest in K. P. cemetery.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church His- torian. It is a complete answer to and refu- tation of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrep- resentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his as- sociates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and con- clusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah mission- aries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

Archæological Committee's Report, WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS. (Volumes 1 and 2 now ready.) Provided for by action of General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Written and compiled by President Joseph Smith and Apostle Heman C. Smith. Invaluable as a correct historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections urged against the latter-day work. It contains important documents connected with the establishment, growth, and internal and external affairs and progress of the church. The revelations given in this dispensation are inserted, in connection with accounts of the circumstances under which they were given. Biographical sketches, illustrations, complete indexes, sidenotes for ready reference, etc., are some of the features of the work. Volume 1 begins with the birth of Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer, in 1805, and narrates the circumstances of his calling and ministry, the rise of the church in 1830, and until the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 continues the history up to June 27, 1844, —to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith.

NEBRASKA'S BEET SUGAR CROP.

The officials of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad have been collecting some information concerning the sugar beet industry in Nebraska.

Some difficulty was encountered early in the season in securing a sufficient acreage for the two large factories there. But the final result was an acreage sufficient to meet all requirements.

The weather conditions early in the season were favorable for planting and cultivating the beet, so that a good stand was secured. The crop matured in excellent condition, and is making a very large yield.

The factories at Grand Island and Norfolk began operations about October 1, and are making a successful run, with a prospect of a larger sugar output than in any preceding year.

The price paid to the farmer usually is $4 a ton, but the very good quality of this season's crop will secure $5 a ton. The output of the factories in the State this season is estimated to be about 25,000,000 pounds.

A 445 MILLION GALLON RESERVOIR.

One of the largest reservoirs ever constructed is to be built by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for the purpose of supplying its engines and shops with water. It will be located five miles southeast of Galesburg, a division point on the main line, 163 miles from Chicago. The reservoir will be two and a half miles long, 1,500 feet wide, and 20 feet deep, and will have a capacity of 445,000,000 gallons.

AN UGLY PICTURE.

REV. W. W. KING'S PAPER ON THE CHURCH IN THE CITIES.

Rev. W. W. King, of St. Louis, read a paper on "The church in the cities." He began with a reference to Abraham's pleadings with Christ for Sodom, and said he doubted if the American cities of to-day would compare very favorably with Sodom. "A careful comparison," he said, "might result as favorably to Sodom as to St. Louis." The cities, Dr. King said, were the ganglionic centers of our civilization; and that if the cities continue to grow as at present it will not be long until the country will simply multiply by ten the integer it stands alongside of. The church, he contended, was not inadequate to meet the new conditions, that it had simply dozed, and was not able for the time being to prescribe the exact remedy needed. The problems which the city presents are the same which the church had found in the country, greatly intensified.

"For a long time," he continued, "or, in fact, until very recently, the church has labored under the delusion that the only application of the gospel that was necessary to meet the needs of the city was to establish a mission in the slums. This will never meet the needs of the case. The proper application of the gospel means something more than the establishing of missions in the down-town districts. It means the recognition of the social, industrial, educational, and physical needs of the people. When, as has been shown to be true in more than one city, salesgirls and clerks are compelled to work for less than will support them, and, if they make complaint, are deliberately told that they know how to supplement their meager incomes with enough to live on, what good does it do for the church to try to reach them as long as they are left in such a helpless and dangerous condition? What is needed for the church, in addition to its distinctly religious work, is to provide food for the hungry, clothing for the naked, and a home for the homeless. A Frenchman newly landed in New York, failing to secure his especial soup at a restaurant, exclaimed: 'What a country is this, with two hundred religions and only one soup!' We do not need less religion, but we do need more soup.

"Another application of the gospel which the church must make is to civil affairs. It is almost impossible to get a decent man elected to any office. It is almost impossible to get any legislation without a liberal use of money.

"Surely no one will deny that the church is to blame for this condition. The good citizens who want honest government are in the majority. The church has been guilty of teaching the people that religion is one thing and politics another. To the American the stars and stripes ought to be as much actually a part of his religion as the sermon on the mount. What a wicked man will do on election day you can always tell. What a good man will do you can't tell; it wouldn't be surprising if he didn't do anything. It is a singular fact that goodness can't be trusted so confidently as depravity to do what is expected of it. It's not so reliable, and average decency is not so much in earnest as average profligacy. Respectability looks at the weather. Decency is afraid of taking cold. Vice is a good deal spryer than virtue, has more staying power. The church must take hold before it can hope to redeem the city. I think there is already a movement in this direction."

LACK OF CHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

"The purely spiritual work of the church, however, is greatly hampered in what is called 'down-town districts' by a lack of churches and workers. The churches have moved 'uptown.' Those parts which need the most churches have the fewest. Most of our Protestant churches in St. Louis are west of Twenty-seventh Street. All that vast region east is practically without a house of worship. The reason is the spirit of intense denominationalism, which, under the guise of Christian activity and zeal, is one of the greatest enemies to Christianity of the present age. It is scandalous and in many cases absolutely diabolical. You may see the manifestation of this spirit in the little town which, though not able to support one church decently, will have five or six, each one trying to pull the others down. The same is true in the cities, and this spirit is responsible for the general moving away from downtown. The people in the cities move and live on the most fashionable boulevards and in the most exclusive aristocratic sections, who as far away from Christ and as ignorant of Christianity as the people of the lowest slums. To meet the necessities of these new settlements some new denomination builds a church. Forthwith every other denomination begins to figure upon getting another in the same neighborhood, lest this new one should pick up some of its members who live near by. So we have in this and every other great city the spectacle of half a dozen churches of different denominations all located within two or three squares of each other. The solution of this is in Christian cooperation. We must recognize and study the fact that in trying to redeem the cities the important thing is not to get people into this, that, or the other church, but to get them converted to Christ."

RELIGION AND RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Rev. Dr. George Elliott followed with a paper on "Religion and Righteousness." Among other things he said: "The church has failed to consummate her full mission. The church is not yet able to fashion the usages of society, the ethics of trade or the maxims of politics. Religion still consecrates graveyards, and not market places; life is left under the curse and only death is blessed. The house of God is thought holy, but not the houses in which we live. The universal priesthood can be realized only when every human duty becomes a religious service. There are not two worlds—a God's world in which we worship and a devil's world in which we work. The sanctity which fails to consecrate all places, all times and all acts will at last abandon our sanctuaries. Our religion has not yet been able to make the business life of our Christian men righteous according to Christian ideal. They say that while money can only be given away by the laws of Christ, it can be made only by the laws of trade. Our Napoleons of finance are legalized brigands, in whose trails are hosts of plundered weaklings. Great corporations become unblushing violators of both a divine and human law.

Railroads give rebates to favored trusts and their officials escape the penitentiary by charging them to false accounts. Nearly all the large contracts involve bribes, 'rakeoffs' and other forms of blackmail. Time is wanting to tell the sickening story of evasions, subterfuges, adulterations, and lying which make up so large a part of so-called business. Nor is political life to-day in any deep sense Christian. There are no viler cesspools in our civilization than those where crawl, hiss, and lie and cheat those wretched serpents of the shrine called party workers."

SOCIETY.

"Nor can we look with entire satisfaction upon the social world. Custom, with its slavery, fashion with its folly, and wealth with its sordid mercantile standards and vulgar love of display is in full evidence at one extreme, while at the other is the barbarism of the narrow streets and crowded tenements, a more fateful peril to civilization than the savagery of tropic tribes or dark continents. We have indeed become more humane in our theory. A stern, implacable theology no longer condemns irresponsible infants to endless damnation, but thousands of helpless babes die in rotting slums in the very shadow of the temples of Christ. We have no longer an aristocracy of the elect, chosen by arbitrary good will to endless bliss, but we have an artificial selection wrought by the structure of society, which marks these for earthly ease and respectability and those for misery and vice. The kingdom of God has not yet come in power to any heart who does not feel this predestined crime and wretchedness, possible in Christian countries, as a personal stain on his conscience, as a limit to his full religious joy, and as a call of the cross to share the humiliation and passion of his Lord. Religion has not yet wrought social righteousness.

"Nor can the church claim to be undefiled by sin nor unsoiled by selfishness. They are not always clean who bear the vessels of the Lord, when we are more anxious to hush up scandals that 'to cast away the garment spotted by the flesh,' when mistaken mercy condones moral obliquity, while those who denounce sin are made to suffer more than those who commit it. The church has in large measure lost the power of moral discipline. John Ruskin insists we are too much occupied in trying 'to get wicked poor people to go to church,' whereas the real necessity is 'to keep wicked rich people out of the church.'"

Dr. Elliot concluded by declaring that truth and life must be one and religion and righteousness convertible terms.

At the conclusion of Dr. Elliott's address the congress adjourned.—Report of M. E. Church Congress, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, November 30, 1899.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION.

Mr. Geo. W. Swan, of Highland Township, Eighth District Vice President of the Iowa Good Roads Association sends the Gazette office the following call for a district convention in this city on Thursday, January 11, 1900:—

Creston, Iowa, December 18, 1899.—To The Editor:—Under and by the authority of the State Good Roads and Public Improvement Association of the State of Iowa, a convention for the purpose of organizing a congressional district and county association, will be held in this city, January 11, 1900. This is not an arbitrary organization, but one instituted in the interest of good roads and public improvement generally. This does not mean an increase of road tax, but a systematic use of our present tax. Many prominent speakers will be present who will make the meeting one of pleasure and profit. While on account of the weather, we will not be able to construct a section of good, permanent road as has been done in many of our congressional districts, at conventions of this character, but the making of such roads will be thoroughly discussed and explained. After the organization of the district and county associations, the convention will be open for general discussion. We have a double purpose in holding this convention at this time. First, we want to awaken a general interest in this profoundly important subject and thereby inaugurate a system of good road building throughout our state, and second, we want to direct the attention of our people to the expenditure of millions of dollars wasted, annually, in our rivers and harbors, and divert, a part at least, of this fund to the construction and maintenance of a system of national turnpikes. Let the war be inaugurated and waged until Congress will heed the supreme law of the land and the will of the people and instead of throwing this vast sum in the rivers and harbors to be washed out by the first flood that follows, it will be put upon our public highways where all the people may be benefited by its expenditure.

We believe that to secure good roads, agitation of the Good Roads subject is necessary and good country roads will be the means of giving us free rural mail delivery, which would certainly be beneficial to every citizen.

Yours very truly,
G. W. SWAN.

Vice President Eighth Congressional District.

"AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY"

"The Literary Digest is an absolute necessity to those who would keep in line with the progress of thought and achievement. It is really a wonderful success. I do not see how any thinking man can get along without it. The Literary Digest constitutes a record of current history that is unequalled elsewhere."—E. P. Powell, D. D., in "Unity," Chicago.

THE LITERARY DIGEST

"All the Periodicals in One"

THE LITERARY DIGEST has taken the highest rank as a weekly review of current news at home and abroad, literature, art, the drama, politics, philosophy, etc. No other publication of its kind has received such support and commendation. It gives discussion and opinion on all sides of important political and international questions. Its contents are selected and translated from the world's best periodical literature, and are given partly in summary, partly in direct quotation. It covers each week a field so diversified as to make it indispensable to the busy man who desires to keep up with the thought of the times, but who lacks the leisure for such a task. This veritable magazine presents in each issue, in "peptonized" form, the wheat-kernel of current news.

SOME OF ITS READERS AND THEIR OPINIONS

Senator William P. Frye: "THE LITERARY DIGEST will afford immense assistance to the scholars of the country."

Henry Randall Waite, President American Institute of Civics, New York: "An epitome of the best thought of the day."

Edwin Markham, author of "The Man with the Hoe": "I can not afford to miss any numbers of THE LITERARY DIGEST, as it is one of the two or three best journals which come to my desk."

REPENTANCE.

Before a man is, or can be ready to obey the command to be baptized, that he may be received into the church, or kingdom, through the door opened by the Great Shepherd of the sheep, his Father's chosen flock, to whom the porter administered that he might enter, it is necessary that faith in God and belief on his Son shall be followed by repentance, a practical turning away from sinful desires, and evil acts.

In Job twenty-eighth chapter, there is a beautiful and forceful sentiment expressed, inculcating this principle.

But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding? . . . And unto man he said, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding.—Job 28: 12, 28.

This, also, has the sanction of the forerunner who was preparing the way of the Lord, and the Lord himself who followed after in the ways which the forerunner was commanded to make straight.

Mark, at the opening of his history of the beginning of the gospel dispensation, wrote:—

The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. . . . John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.—Mark 1: 1, 4.

After the baptism of Jesus by John, and the singular and beautiful recognition and acceptance of this act of John and Jesus, the one performing, the other submitting to the rite, in the sending of the dove to alight upon him who was baptized, and the Spirit voice in attestation, "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," were seen and heard. (See Mark 1: 10, 11.)

Then followed the forty days of trial, temptation, and triumph, emerging from which that Son of God began his personal, active ministry,

Preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel.—Mark 1: 14, 15.

Smith, in his Bible Dictionary, treats the word "gospel" as being the history of the birth, life, and mission, and acts of Jesus Christ; naming the histories of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John—the "four Gospels."

Webster gives the definition to have been derived from the words "god God + spell story." 1. "Glad tidings; especially, the good news concerning Christ, the Kingdom of God, and salvation." Webster gives this in illustration. "Thus the literal sense [of gospel] is 'the narrative of God,' i. e., the life of Christ."—Skeat.

This belief in the story of Christ involves the theory of repentance, the forsaking of evil, which is understanding.

John's scathing rebuke, as given by Luke:—

O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance. Luke 3: 7, 8.

It is also in accord with the statement of Jesus, as seen in Luke 24: 47, that "repentance and remission of sins should be preached in all the world, beginning at Jerusalem."

Once when Jesus called the disciples to him for instructions and these were ended, they went out from his presence and "preached that men should repent." (Mark 6: 12.) And on Pentecost day, moved thereto by the Spirit, Peter, answering for himself and the rest of the eleven, made a declaration that has been ever thereafter as a tocsin of apostolic labor, wherever the Christ idea is honored and has sway:—

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

One can see from this, that the scheme of salvation is a means given of God by which faith in God, and belief in Jesus Christ, creates in the hearts of men the desire to be saved from sins. And, as nothing to be found in the promises of God to man contains anything suggestive, or conducive to the hope of salvation being attained in sins, the conviction is forced upon the mind that repentance is a pronounced and essential part of the covenant in which salvation is a consideration to be awarded of God, a condition precedent to be complied with before a man is prepared for the new birth; which new birth will give him power to "see the kingdom of God." (See John 3: 3.) He must be able to see before he can enter in. (John 3: 5.)

REMISSION OF SINS.

This is a result to follow in due course the preparatory work accomplished by faith in God, belief in Jesus Christ, and repentance from works that are dead. The statement made to Joseph in relation to the child his espoused wife, Mary, was to bear, was:—

And, thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins.—Matt. 1: 21.

This Jesus corroborated, when speaking of his own work he said:—

I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.—John 12: 47.

There are two ways in which man may be relieved from the consequences of sin. For, as the sentence has been passed, "the soul that sinneth," it shall die, there can be no exemption for those of whom it has been said:—

But the Scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.—Gal. 3: 22.

For these there must be release by reason of the direct personal exercise of the clemency of Christ, as the only one who hath power to forgive sin.

But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sin, (then saith he to the sick of palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house.—Matt. 9: 6.

Or, there must have been some general law and rule enacted of God by which an amnesty for sins could be granted, either by an act of clemency through which the whole race would be made free from condemnation, and hence saved from the consequences of sin; or such an act of Divine judgment and mercy as would permit man to perform some duty of service duly prescribed by divine counsel and subsequent proclamation of it as would give all men included in sin an opportunity and privilege to avail themselves of the offered mercy and be made free as a result.

This last is just what was done. There was an edict of the Divine Council; there was a law enacted by which men as individuals were to be permitted to secure salvation from sin, by the performing of an act of obedience to commandment through which a remission of sin was to be accorded to them.

Of this enactment due notice was given by proclamation, of which angels, wise men, and shepherds were witnesses.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.—Luke 2: 10, 11.

Simeon moved thereto by the Holy Ghost, which bore witness to him, certified to it thus:—

Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.—Luke 2: 29-32.

There followed after this wondrous scene the coming into manhood of this Jesus, his presentation to the people through the forerunner John, who saw the dove descend on him, and bore witness: "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

Then came the preaching of the word, the things concerning the kingdom of God, the gospel of redemption, "Repent ye and believe the gospel," the baptism of repentance, and the remission of sin, the arrest of the Witness, his crucifixion, his sublime ordeal on the cross, his triumph, his endowment of power, and his last commission to his disciples:—

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel unto every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.—Mark 16: 15, 16.

Matthew records it in a little different way, but the commission is the same:—

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.—Matt. 28: 19, 20.

He who hears the gospel, and obeys it, performs the condition precedent enjoined in the covenant; places himself in the position of one who has complied with the commandment to believe the gospel, and the one to repent and be baptized, and hence feels no hesitancy in submitting to the hands of authorized ministers to be baptized for the remission of sins. (See Mark 1: 3; Luke 3: 3; Acts 2: 38.)

When Jesus was baptized, he went down into the water, and he was baptized in Jordan; and after baptism he "went up straightway out of the water." (Matt. 3: 16; Mark 1: 10.)

He could not have gone up straightway out of the water if he had not been first in the water; and Mark 1: 9 states that Jesus "was baptized of John in Jordan."

There is a different statement, so far as the exact wording is concerned, in Mark 1: 11, and Matthew 3: 17, regarding what the voice said. Matthew has it: "And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Mark gives it: "And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Both attest the fact of baptism, and that it was pleasing to God.

To induce John to perform the rite, Jesus told him, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." "Then he suffered him."

The body of Christ, or the man

Jesus who was "called the Christ," was a body of the nature of Abraham's seed, a body subject to the ills of the flesh, and to die. That body, having been prepared for him, must needs be redeemed from the death imposed upon all flesh, as it had been appointed unto all men once to die; and the body of Jesus was to be no exception to the rule. It must be redeemed under the covenant; and sin having been imputed to him who knew no sin, he must secure remission of that imputed sin, by obedience to the law of righteousness, the righteousness which is by faith. He having come to fulfill the one law, and reinstate another, must himself conform to both the old and the new; the old by blood, the new by water. Hence the sin, imputed sin of that "body of the nature of Abraham's seed," was atoned for by blood and remitted by baptism; and the promise of the gift of the Holy Ghost was fulfilled unto that body after baptism, not before.

Baptism in water was the condition of the covenant, the fulfilling of which brought into effect the clause promulgated so strongly on Pentecost day:—

And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

It was for the remission of sins. To this the following bear witness: (Luke 24: 47; Mark 1: 3; Luke 3: 3; Acts 2: 3)

IS IT RIGHT?

No. It is not right to spend money in buying foolish toys for children to break up and destroy, when there are so many ways in which the saints can use their moneys to better uses. Any expenditure of moneys for which no proper equivalent is received is improper. And whether a man has paid his due proportion of church and branch expenses or not, he ought not to waste his earnings in buying things of no profit.

If it is desired to remember children, lovers, brothers, sisters, fathers, and mothers on the Christmas Day, such selections should be made as would be in some way useful, either of need or such gratification of the eye and heart as will prove of lasting good in some way.

After all is said and done, it is not our province to sit in judgment on our fellows and say dogmatically that this is right and that is wrong; as actions are largely the results of motives, and we cannot always determine the motive, not knowing the conditions.

"Then gently scan your fellowman;
Still gentler sister woman;
And if ye ken they're gaing wrang,
To step aside is human.
Try as we may, 'tis past dispute,
We never can adjust it;
For what is done we may compute
But know not what's resisted."

Bro. F. A. Smith, Omaha, Nebraska, December 20:—

I found things here moving in very nice shape. Bro. G. H. Hilliard was here a week ago last Sunday and gave the people a very fine talk both morning and evening. It was very much appreciated by all so far as I have heard. Very little sickness here now. My address will be No. 2207 Farnam Street, for the present.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The annunciation of the Christ by the shepherds was through them the divine benediction of "peace on earth, good will to men," but at no time does the world appear in greater contrast and opposition to this sentiment of loving good will than now, as may be seen in the utterances of the public press. England, the United States, and other leading nations are engaged in war or are preparing for war upon a gigantic scale. England, fighting the Boers of South Africa, has met with such reverses as have delighted her former old-time enemies. France and Russia, as witness the utterances of the press of those countries, also that of Germany, in representative papers generally if not semi-officially announce this an opportune time to attack England in Asia and elsewhere. Great Britain has called out her entire reserves and placed her former veteran of the Crimea and Indian wars, Lord Roberts, in supreme command, with Lord Kitchener, the sirdar of the Soudan, as his chief of staff. Even the British yeomanry are being enlisted and home garrisons depleted to send necessary troops to South Africa. Germany, France, Russia, England, Japan, and other nations are bent on a crusade of territorial acquisition that bodes ill for humanity and the peace of the world. "The signs of the times" should admonish us as a people that the end is drawing nigh and is even at our doors, so rapid is the culmination of events. "All things," at home as well as abroad, "are in commotion." And, where are we, personally and as a body? What is our status before God? Are we at ease in Zion, unconcerned as to her position and our own? It is ours to be "in the light," by knowledge of the situation as it is, in the church and in the world. If faithful to truth we can lift up our heads and rejoice in the signs of our coming redemption in Christ. Though the nations become exceeding "angry," 'tis ours to seek and to proclaim the gospel of peace and good will to all the world. In this may we be faithful.

The status of the Roberts case to date is, that the congressional committee is taking testimony concerning his alleged polygamous relations in Utah. So far, the testimony seems conclusive of his guilt. No doubt a full report of testimony will be submitted with the committee's report of the case. "During the examination Mr. Roberts revealed his probable line of defense by declaring he would hold that the committee had no jurisdiction over him prior to his election to Congress."

Pope Leo has correctly announced the end of the old and the beginning of the new century, as December 31, 1900, at midnight. The German Emperor, however, has a mind of his own, and announces it one year earlier, hence will celebrate it in his royal court at the end of the present year or with the incoming of 1900.

Farmers of New York are organizing an "International Farmers Union"—a farmers' trust, and will send organizers abroad to extend its work. The trust idea bids fair to result in mutual swallowing or eating up of one another by men. Even in Europe the trust idea is growing. Is this part or a leading portion of the evil that will cause every man out of Zion to take up the sword against his neighbor? It looks that way.

This step towards the light is believed to be due to the impression made on the Czar when last in England by the Prince of Wales, who defended the complete liberty given to the newspapers in England and the United States."—Berlin dispatch, December 23, Japan has obtained strong influence over China in behalf of advancement. ### ZION: ARE WE READY?

The question of "Zion" and "the gathering" have been agitated to quite an extent of late by a number of the brethren, so we add a few thoughts on the subject.

One of the brethren writing on said topic found fault with the saints in the extreme east and west for purchasing lots and erecting church houses thereon; arguing that they should contemplate gathering into the "regions round about." This criticism would be justifiable providing it was the opportune time. However, we fail to see the propriety of agitating this question and getting the minds of the saints all stirred up before we are prepared take care of them when they have reached there. I have come across a great many who are poor, but in a position to make a good living and help the work in their present condition. Yet since the agitation of this question, numbers are anxious to pack up and go immediately, which would take every bit of their earthly possessions to get them there, and nothing to go on after they arrive at their destination.

Query: How are they going to live after they get there? Is the church able to supply them with steady employment or provide them with a farm?

The counsel of the Lord and of the elders is for those to gather into the regions round about who have sufficient means to care for themselves and help build up the country. It is unwise, to my mind, to stir up the minds of the poorer saints until the church has devised means to care for such.

Again, the same writer criticised the elders for failing to council together as provided for in the revelation of 1873, which says:—

Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me.—D. C. 117: 11.

In the revelation of 1894 the Lord commanded the First Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric to remain in Lamoni after the adjournment of conference, and counsel together, and agree upon the things of the law and the general affairs of the church [which includes Zion].

It is a fact that the council did meet and did consider the subject of gathering into the regions round about, and made a decision, which is as follows:—

Locating in regions round about. Resolved that all parties wishing to change their location be recommended to correspond with the bishopric for information.—D. C. 123: 12.

This council of the leading elders was appointed of the Lord, and went as far as the law would justify them. For we glean from the last part of paragraph eleven, of the revelation given in 1873, that the Lord reserves the right to speak again on this matter, wherein it says, "Until it shall be otherwise given of me." The above shows that the elders did counsel in the matter, and said council was appointed by direct revelation. Now in case that all the elders composing the various quorums of the church should meet together next spring and counsel together concerning this matter, would they be able to reach a more satisfactory decision than was reached by the special council appointed by the Lord? I will vouch for the statement, that if such a council should assemble next spring, that they would have to finally leave it to the Lord to direct in the matter, just as the preceding council did.

It is evident to me that the Lord is just as much concerned in Zion and her people as I am, or as any other man is, and that when it is an opportune time for the people to gather, the Lord will so manifest his will through his mouthpiece, the prophet. By what authority have some gone to the very center of Zion, Independence, Missouri?

If counsel and direction are needed before entering into the regions round about, is it not much more essential to have counsel and direction before entering into the very center? If such counsel has been given by the Lord, or councils of elders in quorum capacity, will some one please point it out? Or have some been moving without commands?

We learn in section 102 that Zion could not be redeemed until the ministry of the former organization received a special endowment, and the saints have experience, and be taught more perfectly concerning their duty and the things that the Lord would require at their hands. If it was necessary that the elders of the former organization receive a special endowment ere Zion could be redeemed, is it not equally necessary that the elders of the Reorganization receive a like endowment? and the saints in their scattered condition be given time to have the necessary experience, and to be more perfectly taught concerning their duty, and the things which the Lord requires at their hands ere they are fit subjects to dwell in Zion.

We will call attention to some of the things that the Lord requires at our hands before we are entitled to dwell in Zion.

1. We must be pure in heart. How many of us are pure in heart? The pure in heart are those without guile, who have pure love in their hearts for their brethren and all mankind.

2. We must be of one heart and mind. This means that we must do away with all contention, strife, and animosity; or does this mean that where there is a branch of several hundred saints that they should divide up into three or four political parties and run as many of the brethren for the little office of mayor, thus dividing the saints and causing contention and strife where peace and unity ought to obtain? Is that the kind of a city Enoch had, where they were all of one heart and mind? It is evident that if we ever attain to the condition arrived at in Enoch's time, and that the saints must attain to in Zion in these last days, we must drop all political differences, and anything that will create division among the saints. The Lord says that we are not of the world, and that we should separate ourselves from the world. Politics is most certainly of the world. Therefore, we should heed the injunction to come out of Babylon. Just so soon as we demonstrate to the Lord that we are striving to become of one heart and mind, just so soon will he come to his people, and Zion be redeemed, and no sooner.

3. The saints should begin to set their families in order; teach their children to pray, teach them the doctrines of the church, and to observe family prayers. I discover in my travels among the saints that some do not observe family worship, and teach their children in harmony with the commands of God. The saints had better prepare along these lines, for if these things are not observed in Zion, we will be removed therefrom. (D. C. 90:6-10.) It is not good policy to wait until we get there to perform these duties; these are some of the means of preparation. It would be quite a task to enter upon all these duties at once.

4. Are we observing the Word of Wisdom? Have all those who have entered into the regions round about quit the use of tobacco, strong drinks, hot drinks? And are they eating meat sparingly; using herbs and fruits in the season thereof? And are the farmers feeding corn to the ox, oats to the horse, rye to the fowls and swine, and barley to all useful animals? Are those who are scattered, and who are so anxious to gather into Zion or the regions round about, practicing these sayings of the Lord? I meet with numbers in my travels who are continually preaching Zion, who are using tobacco and occasionally strong drinks; tea and coffee, and meat in abundance. Are those people ready for Zion? And if those in the regions round about do not keep the sayings of the Lord, what inducements are there to those who are scattered to gather in if better conditions do not obtain within these regions round about? It must be remembered that it was because of a failure on the part of those who were gathered in Zion and in the regions round about, in the thirties, to live up to the laws of Zion, that they were not redeemed.

Behold, I say unto you, Were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands.—D. C. 102:2.

If it be true that like causes produce like effects, if we are not obedient to the things God requires at our hands, we need not expect to be permitted to dwell in Zion.

5. Are we ready, if the Lord should command us to gather into Zion, to consecrate all our property to the Lord. That is, are we willing to place all in the hands of the Bishop and be content with the portion that would be given us for our inheritance? No doubt but those who have but little of this world's goods will be ready to comply with this command. But what about those who have an abundance? Have they the requisite love for God and their fellowman, to impart freely of their earthly substance for the building up of Zion, and to divide with the worthy poor? These are things that we must seriously consider. I fear that when that time comes that there will be a number of Ananiases appear on the scenes.

The fact should be impressed upon all that contemplate going to Zion or the regions round about, that righteousness—purity of heart—is what constitutes Zion. Again, we are told that only the righteous are to be gathered; therefore, when we have arrived to this condition, as a people, the Lord will surely gather us to the land that he has set apart and consecrated for Zion. The Lord, speaking with regard to the redemption of Zion, says:—

Behold, I say unto you, The redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore I will raise up unto my people a man [not men], who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel, for ye are the children of Israel, and of the seed of Abraham.

So far as I am concerned, I am willing to let the Lord redeem Zion in the way he here intimates that he will, through the man that he said he would raise up for that purpose. In the meantime we should gather into the regions round about, as far as practicable, in accordance with the advice of the Lord and counsel of the leading elders. Hence, those who think they are ready and can live upon their lands in the regions round about, let them inquire of the bishopric, whose duty it is to impart information to such as seek it.

Let us all possess our souls in patience, and await the Lord's own time, who will surely direct all things concerning Zion aright, through the latter-day Moses.

Yours for the right,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

SAVANNAH, N. Y., Dec. 16.

Editors Herald.—As incidents gleaned from among the reminiscences of the last summer's experiences, the following may be read with interest.

On July 24 I reached Scranton, Pennsylvania, just before a hard rain accompanied with heavy thunder. The weather had been hot and dry for some time and this downpour came as a refreshing relief. I was kindly received at Bro. and Sr. Hawkins', where a home was provided while there.

The day following, I preached, morning and evening, and attended the Sabbath school in the pleasant hall occupied by the saints on Lackawanna Avenue. There was a good attendance and good interest, mostly of the young and middle aged. The Sabbath school was conducted excellently.

For some years Scranton has been in the background; lost prestige and influence, though there were some estimable adherents and defenders of the faith who tried to rally the forces, at least at times, and keep them intact, but to little avail. For the last two years a special effort has been put forth to revive interest and thus start anew, chiefly under the guidance and efforts of Bro. Alma N. Bishop, the missionaries aiding him as opportunity offered. Great credit is due Bro. Bishop for the way he wrought in Scranton, and also his family, as they were the leaders at church and the Sabbath school. Bro. Bishop is especially praised for the work he did the last year of his stay in Scranton, and is complimented without stint by his associates.

They were gathering material to effect an organization when a sufficient strength should develop to reasonably insure success. On this visit it was adjudged that the time had fully come to begin at least to organize, and this course had been recommended by Bro. Bishop before leaving for Europe. So that on the evening of the 28th I met with the saints at the house of Bro. and Sr. Jones and assisted in organizing a church, to be known as the "Scranton branch" of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. There were nineteen members present, and others in sympathy with the movement detained from meeting. Acting by the rule of "common consent," Bro. Lallie L. Jones was ordained an elder and selected to preside; Bro. Adam Robertson and Bro. William Hawkins were ordained teachers, and chosen as teachers for the branch; Sr. Charlotte Jones was chosen secretary, and Bro. Stephens treasurer. Peace and harmony prevailed and the voting was a unit on every question. The members of the branch, including the officials, are largely young people and of families of the older saints, who have united together to make the "Latter Day Saint" name and cause honorable and successful in and about Scranton. May their efforts be supplemented with needed wisdom and direction from above, that in time they may more than realize their ideals and desires in that direction. The opposition is strong and the enemy lurks in the way, to overthrow in youth and old age. The exhortation, "Be strong," is salutary here.

July 1, young Bro. Clarence Griswold met me with team at Oxford, New York, and conveyed me to his father's home, at East Pharsalia. The saints have built a very creditable church there, seated and carpeted, ready for use, but not dedicated; and the time was not opportune for a dedication, either the holding of other services; so in company with Bro. Griswold, I went to Spring Valley and spent a day and night with saints and friends, but as at East Pharsalia, harvest was on and evening services were out of the question, but called for later on. There are some very worthy saints and friends in Spring Valley, and the cause should be supported there.

Later on, August 4, I joined Bro. Robley at Philadelphia, and on the 5th, in company with him, J. Zimmerman, Hosea Bacon, and a number of other brethren and sisters, I attended the conference at Baldwin, Maryland. This was a very pleasant meeting; earnest, devoted services and cheerfulness of spirit. It was encouraging to note the interest being taken in the work, and which is receiving the support of both the young and the old. Bro. Robley is well received as a laborer, but if one other could be secured to aid it would be most gratifying.

The reunion held at Dennisport, Massachusetts, came next in order of time, but this has been written up by "Ye Editor" and there is no need of further detail. There were pleasant associations connected with it, yet in some respects it was not up to as high a standard as some other reunions that have been held in the East; but there were not so many in attendance. The people were cheered, however, and encouraged in the faith, and the cause gained.

Being fortunate in securing passage from Boston to New York for one dollar, Sunday, August 20, found me with the saints in Brooklyn, New York. The services were good and also a good interest manifest in the Sabbath school. Brn. Potts, Lester, Cox, Box, Squire, Freman, Clark, and others continue as main supporters of the work there. Bro. Joseph Squire was ordained a high priest, as provided for by resolution of the General Conference. Notwithstanding the conflicts going on Brooklyn has her hopeful side.

Saturday, August 26; I met with the West Virginia district conference, held at Goose Creek. Brn. G. H. Godby, D. L. Shinn, John Carpenter, B. Ball, F. R. Ferril, Joseph Biggs, L. R. Devore, J. B. Russel, and Brn. Smith and Huffman were present representing the ministry. The meetings were well attended, and an excellent feeling prevailed, and an abiding faith was exhibited in the work. Brn. Godby and Shinn seemed to have the armor on and well prepared for the conflict. Bro. Devore was the star of this assembly, as he was the one that introduced the work there and baptized most of them. This was his first visit among them since his return from the islands, and he was received with great warmth of feeling and respect. It was pleasant to note that saints do not forget old soldiers. A saints' welcome and hospitality was extended to all in attendance, and a good impression was made for the cause. Bro. Devore continued the meetings for a week after the conference, with increasing interest and baptized a number.

In the meantime I made a visit among the saints living on Cabin Run. Preached in two schoolhouses with good interest, some of the time. Cabin Run lies among the high hills of West Virginia, verging almost into mountains, yet the gospel message has reached them, found adherents, and maintained itself against a brisk opposition. I received the best of care at the home of Bro. Williams by young and old. Sr. Williams was among the first to receive the message and she has made a successful conflict, exerting a good influence in her home and among her neighbors. Bro. Williams has not yet identified himself with the church, but he has so many good qualities to commend him, we call him brother. There are some fish about Cabin Run and with effort they may be caught. Bro. Ruley's family reside there also, and they have stood for the faith through evil report as well as good. Only for the exceeding hot weather this visit would have been among the pleasantest.

September 7. Young Mr. Williams brought me to Tollgate and I took train for Creola, Ohio. Was joined by Bro. Devore at Cornwallis, and at evening we arrived at Creola and were made comfortable at the home of our enterprising brother, Aaron Kirkendall. The Ohio district conference convened at this place on the 9th, a graphic account of which has already been written by President Smith, who was in attendance.

We remained a few days after the conference and held meeting evenings. On the 11th, four persons were baptized by Bro. James Moler. A good impression was made for the work at Creola, and there are signs of success lingering thereabouts.

On the 14th I reached Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and was placed in care of Bro. and Sr. C. Ed. Miller. This was duly appreciated, as the long siege of hot weather had about retired me. After a day's recuperation, in company with a number of cheerful-spirited saints, I went to Fayette City, on the 16th, to attend the conference. Bro. Joseph F. McDowell, James Craig, Jacob Reese, Francis Ebeling, L. D. Ullom, G. W. Hull, C. Ed. Miller, L. R. Devore, W. H. Forbes were present representing the ministry. The services were all that could have been desired in the way of unity, earnestness, and devotion. Bro. Joseph F. McDowell was chosen district president and Bro. Omohundro secretary. The main objectionable feature of this meeting was there seemed to be too much of a hurry—in a hurry to get there, in a hurry while present, and in a hurry to get away. But of course working people have to be at their post on time, as they are governed by rigid rules.

Fayette City is up in the hills of Pennsylvania on the Monongahela River. Bro. Hull and Perry have been in charge of the little band of saints there for some time. Bro. Hull had arranged to move to Ohio, so it leaves Bro. Perry as leader. "More laborers" seems to be the cry here as well as in most other places. Ample provision was made for all who attended the conference, and an enjoyable time was had.

On Monday following, in company with Bro. Joseph F. McDowell as escort, I took a boat ride up the river to Brownsville. The day was pleasant, the scenery fine, everything new and interesting; one of the most enjoyable days of the year. It lies in the coal mining district and thousands are employed in the coal business. It was easy to see where Pennsylvania gets much of her wealth; that is, out of the "lasting hills" "of Joseph's land."

Editors Herald:—I feel that I should say "dear brethren and sisters," and this I hope to be able to honestly do ere long, as my greatest desire at present is to soon be buried in the waters of baptism by a saint. How I wish Mr. Turpen (I feel that I should say "Bro." instead of "Mr.") could baptize me, as I think he must be a good man, and I trust he (and not only he, but all saints) will ever remember us in their prayers, especially on "fasting day."

Jennie and I greatly desire to be remembered by you all, and words fail to describe how we enjoy reading and appreciate the nice consoling letters written to Jennie by the saints. She so often reads them to us, and, as many may imagine, such sweet advice is not only encouraging to Jennie, but also to quite a number of her friends, who feel delighted, and "expose curiosity" as soon as her name is called by the mail carrier,

I am now near twenty-four years of age, with neither father nor mother, and like Jennie, am terribly afflicted with the "nerve trouble." My sister, with whom I made my home, is a "Methodist," and no doubt but she will feel troubled when she finds me no longer in that faith. Please pray for me, dear saints, that I may continue (as I read the Bible Jennie gave me) understanding the Scriptures, and that I may be given strength to help her (sister) "see the truth." If she and her husband could only see it, and if we could all be baptized at once, wouldn't it be grand!

I can't help believing God caused Jennie and I to meet here, and Jennie's friends to send her all those nice papers, etc., that I might be "shown the truth." Some more of Jennie's friends here so often borrow the papers to read, and my hopes are that they will all yet see it as I do.

We so enjoy meeting in the "big room" to hear the reading, and it causes Jennie and I to feel like rejoicing to see others listen so attentively while she reads either the papers or the Bible. Saints, please ever remember us in your prayers, and especially on "fast day."

I wish we could see and be with you all, especially Mrs. Shaw and Miss Newbury (whose faces are so sweet in their pictures), and Miss Schwartz and others, who write such letters of comfort and sympathy to us.

Your true friend and "future sister,"

CARRIE PORTIS.

SMITHLAND, Iowa, Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—The church work is in much more satisfactory shape than when we wrote you before. There has not been much preaching here in the last year. Uncle George Montague was with us for a few days in July and preached three good, inspiring sermons for us, but we were unable to get any public building to hold meetings, so we were compelled to use private houses, and while the gospel sound was just as sweet to me as in the grandest church building, yet I am sorry to say even the saints did not turn out as they should, so he did not remain long.

Bro. Hubert Case was here for about a week in October, preaching at the Pleasant Valley schoolhouse, near our home and about a mile and a half from Smithland. This made it rather unhandy for the saints in town, as very few of them have conveyances; but our young brother, Roy Parker, kindly went in after them every evening, so that a fair congregation both of saints and outsiders greeted our brother on each occasion, and we received much good instruction, and I think much good was done among the saints at least. On the Sunday that he was here we reorganized our Sunday school, and it is now moving along nicely again, for which we are very thankful, and we now have preaching every Sunday also.

On Sunday evening we were much disappointed by a heavy rainstorm, which prevented our holding meetings at all, for which we were sorry, as it was Bro. Hubert's last opportunity of addressing us for a while at least. He went away the fore part of the week, promising to return in about a month, but has not come yet, although it is several weeks over a month since he was here.

By Brother Hubert's advice we made one more attempt to get the Adventist church in Smithland for Sunday school and preaching services. As we had heard that the Congregationalist committee were to meet the Adventist board of trustees at Rodney on a certain evening, Bro. Cohrt organized a committee of one and was on hand also, thinking that if they let the Congregationalist people have the church for evening services, they could not refuse us the same privilege for the forenoon; but we had reckoned without our host, for when after the Congregationalist people had made arrangements for the church Bro. Cohrt asked for like favor, offering them the same as the other committee had, he received a curt, "No, sir; we have decided not to let your people have the church." When asked their reason for such action when they were willing to grant such privileges to other churches they said: "We know what the doctrine of the Congregationalist people is, but as for your church,——" Well, I guess it was a little too strong for them. Bro. Cohrt at last however gained the promise from them to take a vote on it at Sunday school the next Sabbath, they to write us the result. The next week we received a card from Mr. Fred Barber, one of trustees, informing us that the trustees did not meet on the Sabbath previous but would probably meet the next Sabbath, when we should know the result. It will be noted however that it was the congregation, not the trustees, who were to decide this question, as they claimed to be without power to act of themselves in the matter. As nearly if not quite a month has elapsed since the day last appointed for taking the vote and we have heard no more from them, we suppose that either the vote was not taken or at least we are not to be benefited by it; so we are continuing to hold our meetings in the Pleasant Valley schoolhouse, a few of the saints from town endeavoring to come out each Sunday. We have had fair congregations so far, but they will of course diminish when the weather gets colder. Some children from families outside the church attending, we have four classes.

The saints were somewhat stirred up lately over a magnetic healer, who was in our midst. Some of the saints were rather taken up by him or them, for there were two of them. The majority of the saints, however, were firm against them. They had showed one night in Smithland and announced another show for the next night, but hearing that the boys were going to rotten egg them if they attempted any further public demonstration, they took the first train out of town, and very few I think regretted their departure; and while we do not approve of rotten eggs as argument against anyone, yet we are glad that they were not able to convert many to their way of thinking. As for one I would rather remain sick than to be healed by such a power, even if they have the power of healing, of which I am not so sure.

The saints also hold Bible reading every Thursday evening, from house to house, mostly in town. I have not been privileged to attend yet, as there is little pleasure going out nights with three babies. With love to all the saints, also asking your prayers that I may ever be found faithful, and with prayers for the advance of the cause we love,

Your sister,

CORA B. COHRT.

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa, Dec. 19.

Editors Herald:—I came to this locality the 3d inst. and arranged at once for a series of preaching services, at the church at Head Grove, some five miles east of this little city. I find the remaining members of the branch (now disorganized by removal of members to other branches) still endeavoring to keep the camp fire blazing, by pushing the Sunday school work and holding occasional prayer meetings, though minus ordained officers. Sr. C. F. Hayer, the Sunday school superintendent, though living five miles from the church, perseveres in keeping the school interests going winter as well as summer; and the interest is maintained, as may be witnessed by the officers and teachers, as Sr. Henry Thomason takes charge of the infant class, meanwhile holding her own babe on her lap, her husband acting secretary. Bro. Richard Lewis, his father, and others seconding the good effort as teachers.

I held fourteen preaching services, with an increasing interest to the close, ending Sunday night, the 17th inst. The Sunday morning services will long be remembered by those attending, because of the season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We all felt humbly thankful to be so signally remembered once more of "Our Father in heaven." The subject of discourse was the hope of the saints relating to the future, and saints present were wonderfully confirmed in their hope of glory, to be realized by all the faithful, at the glorious reign of Jesus by and by. The Spirit seemed to rest on the audience like a halo of light, with joy.

Labor has been done here this last fall by Elders J. W. Morgan, district president, and Eli Hayer, that has done good, and is remembered; and they will be welcomed again. We were permitted the pleasure of receiving and blessing a little child Sunday evening, of parents, not members yet, but are investigating the faith, and are evidently not far from the kingdom. A number of the young people here are attentively listening to and investigating the faith, and we hope for their obedience at no distant day.

After preaching the funeral sermon of Sr. Pence, at Runnells, Iowa, as noted in my last to the Herald (Oct. 19th), and baptizing her sister, Sr. Hannah Cottrell, of Prairie City, Iowa, I visited Boone and vicinity; found the condition of the Boonsboro branch improving, as circumstances change. Found Bro. James Clark, who had been a long time discouraged, had gotten out of the quagmire of gloom, renewed his covenant and walking in the line of duty again, and to the encouragement of all. And our aged brother, James Troughere, who had been leading so long, with the official aid of the deacon only, Bro. H. Pratt, now has the additional help of Bro. John Clark, who was ordained a priest, at the last conference, and to whose call the Holy Spirit testified so powerfully and signally to Bro. J. W. Morgan and others while ordaining him, thus confirming the testimony of others to his call.

Bro. John Hall and wife now reside at Boone, and are a help to the work there; and their children aid in the Sunday school work. Bro. John was baptized by "Brother Joseph," at one of the western reunions, he being led to obedience by special leadings of the Spirit. Bro. John is one of the willing workers, believes in paying his tithing and doing other work for the cause besides. We all hope his good children may obey the gospel and rejoice with their father and mother. Thus we believe there are evidences of improvement in the condition of the work in the district.

Dark clouds have hung heavily over some of the branches in this district in the past, causing sorrow and discouragement to the saints. Some little ones skirt the borders yet, lingering for the time; but we trust with experience, patience, and faithful continuance in duty, God may still work with us and help us rise from the gloom and darkness of weaknesses and mistakes, and deliver us from the influence of misleaders, that we all may walk in the light of the gospel of peace.

Some of our local officers, some of whom have but lately been ordained, are enrobing themselves with the armor, and are going forth to battle in the Master's service; among them Bro. Thomas P. Cook, who seeks to improve the opportunities to speak for Christ, and has lately baptized a young man. We are glad to see these young laborers come forward doing battle for our King against the hosts of sin and evil. May "Our Father" send many more, for truly "the harvest is great," and the laborers are few; so many fields ripe and unoccupied, and no one to reap the great harvest of life.

Come on, young soldiers, enlist in the holy campaign; the Father calls for your highest, noblest, holiest, yet humble efforts. He will send his holy ones with and before you! His Holy Spirit in you will lead sinners from darkness, sin, and spiritual death, into liberty, light, and divine justification. Respond to his call, Paul like, and enter into this great soul harvest, and if faithful to your calling to the end, great will be your joy in the never-ending kingdom.

"The Spirit and the Bride say, Come," not only in the letter of the past, but now, today, if you will harden not your hearts, but to-day, even now, the Spirit invites you to the harvest. Behold, the reward is great, after the labor, faithful labor, and the trial.

As the century now old and closing out, with varied experiences of light and darkness, joy and sorrow, its fortunes and misfortunes, its advances and reverses, with its political, civil, and religious revolutions and developments, its defeats and its victories, never more to return, and the new and untried twentieth century comes so bravely and undauntedly to slay and resurrect its millions, will the church arouse itself to redoubled diligence in duty to God, and in his name, by his grace, make a mighty, united, and continued effort to liquidate its debts, chase darkness from its skies, walk out into the bright sunlight of liberty, from all that encumbers it, adjust itself to the new conditions of the incoming twentieth century,—the century of expanding ideas, fortunes, and achievements,—and then let the kingdom of God grow, spread abroad, expand! We all believe in legitimate constitutional expansion. How all the saints would rejoice in the free and untrammelled prosperity and advancement of the church for which we have labored, prayed, and longingly sacrificed. Come saints, let us awake to the situation and the divine demand. "Owe no man anything." Get out of debt and then, inasmuch as "the inhabitants of Zion are to judge all things pertaining to Zion" (D. C. 64:7) let the inhabitants of Zion see to it that the church lives within her income ever after. Can we not cooperate in this one effort, even if necessary by sacrifice, and then let those whose duty it is not to "serve tables," be left "free to wait on their ministry"? (D. C. 120:3; 122:2, 3,) and pushing their ministry into new and additional fields, thus expanding the cause of God, building up the church, and their minds unburdened, with temporal embarrassments. (Matt. 6:24-34.)

How gladly would those upon whom rests "much responsibility" (with all saints for that matter) be relieved of further embarrassment here regarding it, and past experience, no doubt, be sufficient. Is not freedom from temporal encumbrance, or debt, one of the prerequisites to the gathering? And that too, collectively as well as individually? How much easier and free we all will feel relieved of this burden! And with this obstacle out of its way, how much more easy the church will move out on its prosperous journey to success and achievement and victory.

The sooner we do this the easier it will be to do. Brethren, come one, come all, and let us lay down this burden, and move out free! Will not God approve of such an effort? "Pay the debt thou hast contracted." "Behold, it is said in my laws, or forbidden, to get in debt to thine enemies." "And again, verily I say unto you, concerning your debts, Behold, it is my will that ye should pay all your debts." And the way to do this is here pointed out of God, thus: "And it is my will that you should humble yourselves before me, and obtain this blessing by your diligence and humility, and the prayer of faith; and inasmuch as you are diligent and humble, and exercise the prayer of faith, behold, I will soften the hearts of those to whom you are in debt, until I shall send means unto you for your deliverance." (D. C. 18:5; 64:6; 101:13.)

Do not these foregoing statements of law involve the eternal principles of justice and right morally and legally? Do principles ever change? Does God change? Are we not, as a church, bound by this law and these principles? To urge to duty affirmatively does not express or in any way convey the fear of repudiation. Duty is always urgent, especially time-limited duties. Is not this true? God's way of having such obligations fulfilled is here plainly pointed out. It is in the way of legitimate business callings, accompanied with faith in God—faithfulness and diligent, honest, upright labor with prayer to God.

I predict that God's work never will be accomplished by holding pleasure-affording entertainments, gormandizing suppers (see Luke 17:26, 27; 21:34, on latter-day feasting), and "chain letters;" all such but pandering to the natural propensities and contesting ambition—emulation.

A feast for the poor who cannot pay for it is Godlike,—is Christianity. (Luke 14:13, 14.) Feasts other than this are not religious, Christian, either in motive, operation, or purpose.

I refer in this connection mainly to the Graceland College debt.

What may not be done during the next year toward liquidating this burden, if all saints would in faith, and prayerfully devote, like Jacob of old, a specified sum by them (or each) purposed for this object! Surely the Bishop of the church would, as on other occasions, notify the saints when the task was finished, and the obligations of the church relating to this matter fulfilled. After this is done, let such arrangements be made concerning the college and its work as not to allow the church in its great primal obligations, publishing the gospel to all the world, caring for its poor, and carrying into effect the law of consecration, equality, the gathering, and the School of the Prophets, each in its proper order, to be cumbered again in this work, lest, indeed, we be found to be foolish virgins, and so the day come and find us without the "wedding garment on," not having kept our moral obligations.

Difficulties have come because we have allowed our attention and energies to be diverted from our first and great united mission under the law, and energies spent in an endeavor to do that which was not necessarily required of us by the Lord, at least, not yet. Shall we consider these matters and get to work? Who and how many will respond? This work is before us. It must, morally speaking, be done.

Hopefully onward,

C. SCOTT.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—I have visited, by letter, more than a hundred prominent ministers and professors of Bible history in the United States, representing Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant churches with six questions on Isaiah 29, and two on Ezekiel 37: 15-20.

Do you ask why I did it? I answer: If "the wisdom of their wise men" can disprove the interpretation we put on the chapters named, I want to know it and know it right away.

If the "sealed book" and "stick of Ephraim" (Joseph) do not have their fulfillment in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, I believe every saint ought to be apprised of it. I intend giving the Herald readers "the wisdom of their wise men" at no distant day.

I believe no church is wiser in organization, doctrine, etc., than the wisdom of the organizers and perpetuators of that church.

Why not let all Protestantism examine their churches by the above reasoning; then ask, Did Joseph Smith rely on his wisdom alone when directing, organizing, and giving to the church its doctrinal tenets? No; the Lord, angels from heaven, and the Holy Spirit, instructed and authorized him; and as there is no wisdom greater than God's wisdom, the ministry of this church can safely "go into all the world" without fear of being confronted with a gospel reflecting greater wisdom, knowledge, power, and promises than the angel's message. To God be all the praise for this great restoration.

For the past two months I have been laboring at Lake City, Auburn, Sac City, and near Quimby, in this the Galland's Grove (Iowa) district.

I will be at my home in Deloit, Iowa, by New Year's to make out statement of the financial work of the district as Bishop's agent. Let all the saints in the district remember their duty in regard to the temporal law.

Faithfully yours,

C. J. HUNT.

CUCAMONGA, Cal., Dec. 16.

Editors Herald:—The writer has just closed a series of over forty meetings at this place. Although some manifested interest all the way through, yet none have proven themselves wise, since not one soul obeyed the message. When I think of what they have heard I wonder how they could "neglect so great salvation." Because of such things I am sometimes a little discouraged and ask myself if it pays to preach the gospel. It seems like casting pearls before swine in some cases. I can't say this, however, of this place, for I believe good results will yet follow my efforts. This is the sowing of the seed, and the answer to "What shall the harvest be?" may be greater than we now think. It pays then to work for God (1 Corinthians 15: 58) for if not one person should receive the word, yet our reward is sure. We expect better results than this, nevertheless, for all are doing as well, doubtless, as Noah. If not, no one need complain, for if a person should labor a lifetime and be instrumental in saving but one soul, how great would be his joy with that soul in the kingdom of God. If greater success should be his, his joy would be proportionately increased. (D. C. 16: 3, 4.)

Does somebody ask what prospect there is out here for a movement Zionward? If so I will say, it is as good as anywhere. I can't say there is satisfaction for the most exacting. It isn't fair to expect or demand that the saints shall reach the climax of spiritual attainments under worldly conditions. There may be and are extremes in regard to the gathering. One is that we may, every one of us, by our own resolution move in case the General Conference should reach a conclusion in that direction; the other is that every person must first pass muster with the spiritual strength gathered amid Gentile associations. Zion in its first sense means "the pure in heart." To be so doesn't mean to be beyond the suspicious mind or the slanderous tongue, "Man looketh [frequently with a biased mind too] on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart." (1 Sam. 16: 7.) If I were to indulge my propensity for criticising, which I sometimes do, I would find fault and condemn where God doesn't. "There are others." I prefer to believe, for there is evidence of it, the most of the saints everywhere are doing the best they can under the circumstances. They would doubtless do better under other conditions.

To illustrate: A plant which has existed under unfavorable surroundings will more readily absorb nourishment when transferred to a place more congenial to its advancement. Such a place for the Lord's children Zion will surely be, for there are enough good saints to make it so. They will, without doubt, have the balance of power. If this is disputed and it is insisted that every member must get out of range with the orifice through which the would-be critic is aiming his popgun, the gathering will be an extremely difficult question. It would, indeed, be so hard of solution that it never would materialize.

Rev. T. W. Lincoln, the M. E. minister of this town, will lecture to-morrow evening in a little town near by on "What I learned about Mormonism during a seven-years' residence in Utah." No one will dispute the reverend gentleman's right to lecture on that subject, but some think it was called forth by my preaching. We will await results and see if he will make a distinction between us and the Brighamites.

I shall go from here to Los Angeles the 18th inst., where I shall remain for a few days and then move where wisdom directs.

Yours in gospel bonds,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

PICKERING, La., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me well, busily preaching in this town. Bro. W. R. Pickering has built a nice house 32x50 to worship in, and I preached the first sermon in it. The work has never been planted in Louisiana. I hope we will get a good branch here. I have been holding meetings for one week with some interest. Some nice people are living here under the employ of W. R. Pickering Lumber Company.

A missionary should be located at this place another year. The Twelve should see to it, and he could branch out into different parts of the State and open up the work if not like some we already have in the southwestern mission—don't care only to draw money from the church and remain around home,

In bonds,

BEAVER, Texas, Dec. 10.

Editors Herald:—May I say to the saints in this mission, and to all others, that the good Lord is blessing us in many ways. Our district conference near Hearne, Texas, was one of the best I have ever attended. It is wonderful what the Lord has done for our people in Texas.

Had good meetings while in Indian Territory. While at Fairland I met S. W. Simmons, Henry Smart, and Bro. Haden, of the elders, and with their assistance we had a good meeting and organized a branch, with Bro. Wriley as presiding elder. I felt as though the time had come when some of the Lamanites would "blossom as the rose;" and when Sr. Duncan bore her testimony I felt to rejoice and praise God and wonder if the good Lord would not soon "raise up a prophet" from among the Lamanites themselves who would do a "great work." Well, we will await the Lord's time.

All goes well in the Sunny South. May the good Lord bless us all to do our part.

Your brother,

A. J. MOORE.

REQUIRED READING FOR JANUARY MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

Croup is a terror to many households; anything which tends to prevent or relieve it is a blessing. Dr. Felix Oswald thinks that two potent causes of croup are overfeeding, especially with fatty foods, and impure air. These are not the only causes, but deserve mention because, by many, they are not recognized as causes of this fell disease. Parents often confine their croupy children to close, hot rooms, from which all fresh air is excluded for fear of their taking cold, or cover their heads and faces at night, thus necessitating the breathing over and over again of impure air, thinking thus to guard their darlings against the croup, when the fact is, they are supplying the very conditions to bring on an attack. If you have a croupy child be careful of his diet, giving him oatmeal and other strengthening foods rather than those which produce fat; give him more, rather than less, fresh air than the other children, taking care that he is well protected, especially his feet, against dampness; guard, also, against sudden changes of temperature, such as would result from running out of a hot room into a cold one, or out of doors without extra wraps. See to it that, well wrapped up, he spend some part of every sunny day in the sunshine, if it be no more than a ten minutes' run on the veranda, and that he sleep in a well ventilated room at night, and you will greatly decrease his chances of having croup.

Still the attack may come, and you need to be prepared for it, for croup demands prompt attention. Symptoms of its approach are, hot skin, a little dry cough, which the mother soon learns to distinguish from any other, and hoarseness—almost a sure sign of croup in a baby, as it does not cry hoarsely from any common cold. At once apply cloths wrung out of hot water to the throat—you can heat water enough for this over your bedroom lamp or gas jet, if the attack comes on, as it usually does, in the night, when the kitchen fire is out. Remember always to cover the wet bandage with a dry one and renew often, having the fresh one all ready to put on as soon as you take the other off. Give the child a teaspoonful of the syrup of ipecac from your emergency drawer; meanwhile have the kitchen fire built and water heated for a warm bath, which should be given before the fire in a warm room, remembering always to wet the head in cold water and keep a cold napkin on it, while the body is immersed in the hot water. Give the ipecac at intervals of ten minutes till vomiting relieves the child of the phlegm which is choking him. Drinking tepid water at short intervals will produce the necessary vomiting, but it is often more difficult to make the child drink this than to take the syrup of ipecac.

Just here allow a few words concerning the use of water as a remedial agent. No other agent is so easily attainable and of such general application as water. Mothers should learn how to apply it, for there is a right and a wrong way of using it, but the principles governing its use are simple and easily learned. We have already referred to some cautions concerning its use, which we recapitulate: First, before going into any kind of a bath wet the head with cold water; if it be a warm bath, keep a napkin wrung out of cold water on the head to prevent a rush of blood there. Second, cover every wet compress with a dry one, and when the wet cloth is changed have the fresh one all ready to clap on instantly. In placing a wet compress on the chest to remain all night, a capital remedy for cold on the lungs, be sure that the cloth wet is no thicker than will dry during the night, and this without producing any chill. If this caution is neglected harm may result from the wet compress. Used judiciously, there are few cases of illness in which water may not prove a valuable remedial agent. We have spoken of its use in croup; we give these additional suggestions from an experienced physician:—

"A towel folded several times, dipped in hot water and quickly wrung out and applied over the seat of the pain in toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief. This treatment in colic works like magic. I have seen cases that have resisted other treatment for hours yield to this in ten minutes. There is nothing that will so promptly cut short congestion of the lungs; sore throat, or rheumatism, as hot water when applied promptly and thoroughly.

"Pieces of cotton batting dipped in hot water, and kept applied to old sores or new, cuts, bruises, or sprains, is the treatment now generally adopted in hospitals. I have seen a sprained ankle cured in an hour by showering it with hot water, poured from a height of three feet.

"Tepid water acts promptly as an emetic; and hot water taken freely half an hour before bedtime is the best cathartic in cases of constipation, while it has a most soothing effect on the stomach and bowels. This treatment continued for a few months, with proper attention to the diet, will cure any curable case of dyspepsia. Headache almost always yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and the back of the neck."

Diarrhoea and dysentery are the scourges of summer; heat and sudden changes of temperature, even more than improper food, being their predisposing causes. A rise in the thermometer in summer is usually followed by a rise in the death rate among children, especially in great cities, where pure, fresh air is unattainable by so many. Hence, keep your little ones as cool as possible, while guarding against sudden change of temperature, by fine flannel next to their little bodies. Be careful what your child eats till past his second summer. Milk is the safest diet; if there are symptoms of diarrhoea boil the milk. A teaspoonful of raw flour, worked smoothly into a tablespoonful of milk and then stirred into half a teacupful of milk or water, and drank, is a good corrective. We have known obstinate cases of diarrhoea cured by the following simple remedy: Tie a teacupful of dry flour in a bag and boil it two hours. When cold it forms a hard ball, grate this and make of it milk porridge, which give the child in place of regular meals. A quarter of this ball will usually be sufficient for a child under ten years old; if it is not, more can be given at the next meal. Care should be taken not to check diarrhoea too suddenly, especially when children are teething, as a slight looseness of the bowels is sometimes a relief instead of a danger.

Dysentery is always serious. It is distinguished from diarrhoea by great thirst and other signs of inward fever; the evacuations are not so full but are more frequent, and accompanied with much straining; they are more or less bloody, with mucus and sometimes shreds of fibrin, which seem like the lining membrane of the intestines. When these symptoms occur, send at once for a physician, as the case demands his skillful care. In dysentery keep the patient as quiet as possible, lying down in bed, as standing on his feet or making any exertion increases the danger. Keep him covered so as to be warm, for while there is great inward fever the skin is often cold. Allay his thirst by putting pieces of ice in his mouth. Drinking water, or indeed any liquid, intensifies bowel difficulties. Apply flannel cloths wrung out of hot water to the bowels, changing frequently. By the time you have followed these directions your physician has arrived, and we turn the case over to him.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK IN UTAH.

On September 14, 1899, during the mission reunion held at Provo, the Sunday school workers met in convention morning and afternoon. It was the first of the kind, and considerable interest was evinced in the work, while a general desire to see it placed upon a higher basis was manifested. Short addresses from Elders J. W. Wight and Hans N. Hansen introduced the respective sessions. Papers were read from Srs. J. D. Cooper and Jennie Garr, of Ogden, Pauline Higgins and Ida Davis, of Salt Lake City, and Flora Phillips and Miss Hilda Andersen, of Provo. Interesting discussions of subjects treated brought out valuable points along this line of work.

At the district conference an organization of the Sunday school work in the district was effected, which has since been indorsed by most of the schools within the limits, and we confidently look for the remainder to fall into line.

While this branch of the work in this mission is in its incipient stage so far as organization is concerned, and like the missionary work here, has great obstacles confronting it, we trust it may develop sufficiently to accomplish much good.

Excellent talent among the young is being brought to the front, and in several places where nothing is being done at present there is opportunity and latent ability to push the work if proper interest can be awakened.

We take this opportunity of appealing to the saints of Utah, and of Idaho as well, for help. There is room and work for all, and every one should enlist and do what they can. We cannot afford to be idle, for the enemy is on the alert. Where there is not more extended opportunity, home schools can be organized, and surely one's children are as precious to them as the children of strangers.

Let us make a united, earnest effort to have all the old schools in better working condition and new ones organized by the time our next convention shall meet. Superintendents, officers, teachers, parents, pupils, and saints in general, is there not something you can do to help in the work? "We are laborers together with God." Think of it. We expect to write personal letters to many where the needs of the work are known and earnestly invite correspondence from all in relation to anything along the Sunday school line.

Should there be any points inaccessible or unknown to us where either a family or general school can be organized, we trust you will go right ahead as systematically and fearlessly as though thousands were at your command. Please report all organizations to district officers, and if any assistance is desired we will gladly do the best we can.

Will there be a response to this appeal? What are we doing while the Bridegroom tarries?

D. W. WIGHT, Supt.,
Pleasant Grove, Utah.
HILDA ANDERSON, Sec.,
Provo, Utah.

FEELING that most of you and I hope all will agree with me that the Sunday school work is needed, that it is in fact one of the "helps" of which Paul speaks, I have thought therefore to speak more particularly of how that work may become more successful and be more far-reaching in its results.

Like the preacher I have chosen a text and it is, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." I fear that far too many pupils, and teachers as well, do not give the thought and time to the study of the lesson that they should. How can we expect to enjoy the lesson when we give so little time to its preparation?

Every blessing in life requires an effort on our part, and the greater the blessing the more work it takes to secure it. We are told to "work out our salvation," and I believe we must work or lose the reward. I think each one, from the superintendent down to the youngest pupil in the school, has a work to do and a place to fill in the Sunday school and should "study to show" themselves "approved unto God." Every lesson should be so well learned the Quarterlies may be left at home. We need to know the story of the lesson perfectly, and if it be historical, to locate the time and place as well as study all important characters connected with it. If prophecy, find out if possible whether it has been fulfilled as yet, and if so, if the fulfillment was a literal one or not. Since God is unchangeable, we may expect the same to happen in the future as in the past.

And whatever the subject, see what all the writers have to say on it, and thus "in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established."

If we count this work worth anything at all, it is well worthy our best efforts. How much better able we would be to cope with the wiles of the evil one if our minds were richly stored with Bible truth. We might then be able, like the Master, to answer, "It is written." In what better way can we study God's word than in company with others for the same worthy purpose. I can find no excuse for anyone not finding time for the preparation of the lesson. I believe we can find time in all ordinary cases. Therefore, again, Sunday school workers, let me urge you that with the aid of God's Holy Spirit you "study to show" yourselves "approved unto God," workmen that "needeth not to be ashamed."

Orders should be sent at once, as these cards are for a part of the lessons of first quarter of 1900. Let superintendents and secretaries, as soon as they see this announcement, take the necessary steps to send the order at once. Send orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa. 4

CORRECTION.

On page 758 of Herald for November 29, in minutes of Northeast Missouri convention, it reads convention "adjourned to meet with Bevier school the second Saturday and Sunday in February, 1900;" it should read convention adjourned to meet with Bevier school at call of superintendent.

THE WHITE-BRADEN DEBATE.

Braden claimed that the baptism in the Holy Ghost carried no moral influence with it. He cited the instance of King Saul and of Abraham; how they were men who enjoyed the Holy Ghost, yet they did bad things, things that were very immoral. I showed that there were none that did immoral deeds while under the influence of the Spirit, but did when they went away from God, rejecting his commandments, hence lost the Spirit; then it was that they did immoral deeds. Braden cited Baalam's ass as evidence in favor of his position. Said the beast received the Holy Ghost and still he was an ass just as he was before; when the Holy Ghost left him he was as he always had been. In answer to this I showed the nature of the beast was changed when receiving the Spirit. When the prophet beat the beast, if it could have gotten its heels to the prophet, it would have kicked him over the fence; but it received the Holy Ghost and in place of it having its former disposition to kick its antagonist, it commenced to argue its case, and rebuked the prophet for his immorality and downright meanness. (Applause.)

Braden in attempting to answer this, stooped to considerable dirt. Tried to make it appear that "Jo" was like Baalam's ass and that was the way he received his revelations. This being far-fetched and entirely foreign to the question at hand, I threw it back so hard that it made Braden of less note with God than was Baalam's beast. He dare not say that he had ever been honored of God as highly as was that beast. Braden felt the weight of this so strongly that he now said: "We have the Holy Spirit as the Israelites had Moses." When I got the floor I quoted this and asked Mr. Braden if he said it, and he answered, "Yes!" I extended to him my hand and said, "I will shake hands with you on that." This made it very impressive with the congregation. Now I want to make an explanation how the Israelites had Moses with them. Moses was a mouth-piece to Israel; he received the word of God for them; that is, he received the secrets of God and revealed them to the Israelites. Will Mr. Braden say that the Holy Spirit his church has takes the things of God and reveals them unto his church just like Moses did to the Israelites? Here Braden cried out: "I didn't say that; you have misrepresented me!" Well, I asked: "What did you say then?" "I said we had the Holy Spirit, just like the Israelites in the days of Christ, had Moses." All right, we will see about that, said I. Christ accused the Jews (the Israelites) of rejecting Moses and the prophets and said if they would believe them they would believe in him. And now I am frank to acknowledge that is the very way Braden and his church has the Holy Ghost. If they would believe Jesus and the apostles, the Holy Ghost would be received, and these signs would follow them, as spoken of by these men; but they reject Christ and the apostles, just like the Israelites did Moses and the prophets is Christ's day. Hence, God rejected the Israelites for not believing Moses and the prophets, just like he will reject Braden and his church for not believing Jesus and the apostles.

I here told Braden that I was satisfied he would go back on what he said, and that was the reason I shook hands with him; I thought perhaps I would get him to stick to his position for once at least. Braden twisted and floundered around over what he had admitted for his church, but the longer he dealt with the subject the worse it got on him. He saw I had him cornered. The Israelites did not enjoy the Holy Ghost in Christ's day, because they rejected what Moses and the prophets wrote, and Braden and his church do not enjoy any Holy Ghost to-day, just because they reject what Christ and the apostles wrote.

Braden tried his hand on a grammatical analysis of Mark 16, in order to prove "these signs" were alone to the eleven apostles. I met this promptly by reading a "Note by I. N. White," found in the White-Sewell debate, between pages 48 and 49. I showed that Braden made one term, "apostles," the antecedent of two pronouns, one in the second person (ye) and one in the third person (them), and used by the same speaker in the same speech, this being a violation of the rules of grammar. We were before professors and students, and Braden did not dare to deny this, but sought to bolster it up by quoting Matthew 24, where just such a violation of grammar he said appeared, and if admissible in one instance it would be in the other. I showed it was no part of a scholar to try to hide behind a grammatical blunder to make a point. My analysis was so complete that Braden at once dropped the matter. If I remember right, this analysis is largely from the one Bro. T. W. Williams had published in the Herald some two or more years ago. I showed that this analysis substantially agreed with the text as found in A. Campbell's "Living Oracles." Afterward I had a number of calls for my analysis of Mark 16. What desperate straits these fellows get into in trying to dodge the plain statement made by Christ to all baptized believers!

After stripping Braden's church of every possible chance of an identity with the church of eighteen hundred years ago, I challenged and defied him to make an argument in favor of water baptism for his church; but no; not one word could I draw from him. I told him he had now nothing left but the water, and if he would dare to affirm they had that, I would take that from him, and I would leave him as destitute of a foundation as a criminal dangling from a rope.

As the debate was nearing the end, it was easily seen that Braden's church members were getting uneasy; and when he would close his last affirmative speech, and I would rise to make my last answer, a dozen would arise and make a hasty exit. This gave their case away, and was frequently referred to by those not belonging to their church. I felt in my heart to pity them.

Saturday came, and the debate grew so hot, that Braden and his church members put their heads together with a determination to break the force of the debate if possible. It had been agreed and published that the debate would continue right along over Sunday; but something must be done. Without consulting me Braden arose and announced that the debate would be postponed till Monday, and announced one of his visiting elders for eleven o'clock Sunday, and services would be continued at night, and wanted all of their members to come as they had some special business. The honest chairman; yes, a man who thoroughly understood his business, arose and asked: "Has Mr. White been consulted about this change?" I answered, "No; this is the first hint I have had of it." Chairman said: "I have a written agreement in my possession signed by these debaters, and in it we have no such change hinted at; and I cannot agree to this procedure unless both parties mutually agree to it." The time occupied in the debate had been from ten to twelve a. m., and seven to nine p. m. I agreed here to let the debate go over till Monday provided they would give me the pulpit Sunday night; their man occupying at eleven. Braden and the officers of his church put their heads together and after some parley decided they could not do that.

I then announced that I would not agree to the change and the debate would go on. Something had to be done, and the heads went together again, and another change proposed. The debate would continue Sunday at two and seven p. m., and their church meeting would be at eleven. Chairman asked me if I would agree to this, and I consented.

Sunday at eleven Braden put in his appearance with a written document telling how he had accomplished a "crushing defeat" of the "Mormons." He made his speech and insisted on his church to a vote, and all those that were in favor of his document to arise. I was told near one half of his congregation arose. When they sat down, one sister of their church arose and said she could not vote for that; this caused some stir among these pious Christians! Braden told them he wanted to present this vote to the house at the close of the debate at night. But, my! How Braden did get scorched over this, in the afternoon session of the debate. He entirely forgot his brave (?) intentions ere the debate closed at night. Hot was hardly a name for it! The tide was a sweeping one in the wrong way for Braden. This he felt, and he did not dare to venture a vote; it was easily seen that a vote would snow him under as deep as one of the leading citizens said he was at the close of the debate. This man said, "Braden is snowed under so deep that he will not get out before next spring."

That challenge for a debate at Independence had been bothering Braden in nearly every speech he made during the last half of the debate. I only made answer to it by saying, "What has that challenge to do with this debate?" I led Braden to think probably I did not know or remember anything about what had transpired at Independence in regard to his two thousand circulars and "that debate." I was all in the dark; but Braden knew it all. He grew bold over that challenge and the circulating of two thousand circulars "right in" my "home and I didn't dare to open my mouth!" "White had the colossal cheek to challenge me in my home." "He [White] wasn't invited here;" "our people didn't want him here." I thought: Braden, you are giving yourself away. Braden ventured to prophesy once, saying: "I prophesy that White will leave this debate like a coward, and never refer to that Independence challenge." All of Braden's hopes seemed to center in that; that is, I would go away and not say anything about "that debate"—a challenge that had been published in two thousand circulars at Independence more than four years ago, and White did not dare to open his mouth. This "silence" on my part was Braden's prayer; he wanted something to publish that would give him a little consolation after such a defeat at Alma and Orchardville.

He now makes every effort to "shelve" that Orchardville challenge. If he could get out from under that, he could proceed as usual with his nefarious work of lecturing against the "Mormons," without being molested with "that challenge;" but the thought of that "thing" strewed along his pathway just because he wanted to tell the people what I, Clark Braden, can do with the Mormons, is more than he cared to stand.

Braden now writes a petition and gets a number of his visiting elders to sign it, asking me to notice that challenge at Independence. I answered "that committee" that presented the petition, saying: "What has that Independence challenge to do with this debate?" Braden's faith is wonderfully strengthened over my answer; now he is sure that I have forgotten or did not know of that challenge at Independence four years ago, and now he ventures to prophesy as before-stated.

In Braden's two speeches at the last session he takes particular pains to tell the people about "White backing square out like a coward at Independence." "White dare not open his mouth about a challenge that had stood against him for the last four years." When I got the floor I paid my respects to Braden's prophecy. I produced Braden's letter written to me from Alma, Illinois, September 28, 1899; I read: "Four years ago I challenged you to debate in Independence. Two thousand circulars were scattered all over Independence. You did not dare to open your mouth. Now you have the cowardly impudence to challenge me to debate in my home, when you dare not debate in your home." I then produced and read my article that appeared in Zion's Ensign four years ago, where I had accepted Braden's challenge to debate in Independence; also read Editor T. H. Popplewell's article of "explanation" found in the Primitive Christian, Braden's church paper, how I had accepted Braden's challenge right at the time his circulars were being printed, and before they had found their way to the streets of Independence. I had challenged and defied Braden to meet me in debate then upon the same questions that we debated at Eldorado Springs (the same as we are now debating at Alma); that I would furnish our stone church while affirming my proposition, and he to furnish his church while affirming his.

Here I read Editor Popplewell's statement how the deacon of Braden's church had said that while Popplewell was soliciting funds to get Braden to Independence to debate with me, how he would give one dollar to keep Braden away from Independence, as they did not want him there. Now, Braden thinking probably I had either forgotten all of this, or lost track of the correspondence, has been challenging me—defying—bluffing—prophesying and crying "coward," and "backout," and at the same time he has been hid away in his hole, sitting upon his pigeon stool for four long years as silent as a graveyard, and did not even have the manhood to step out and meet his opponent in an honorable debate. This people are now able to see who has been the "coward" and the one who "backed out" from that challenge.

I here walked over to Braden and said, pointing to him: "Thou art the man!" (Applause.) At this Braden cried out, "I never took the Ensign;" and never knew anything about Popplewell's explanation." I retorted: "It was in your own paper, sir; the Primitive Christian, published and edited by Elder Pop-plewell, the very man you had printing your two thousand circulars, and the very man you had there to get up the debate; and now for you to tell this intelligent audience, that you did not know anything about it, but had been sitting around for four years waiting to hear from the very man that was doing your work there, is to say the least, hard to believe. You, yourself, having ignored 'that challenge' for four long years. This has made a change in things, and now the challenge from me at Orchardville to meet you in debate here at Alma, and in every hamlet, town, and city where you may raise your voice against the Reorganization, is in force during my natural life, the Lord willing; and for you to cry 'coward,' and 'backout,' in the face of all of this, is certainly unbecoming a gentleman and an honorable debater."

This was in my last and closing speech, and I introduced and read the following additional stipulations to my challenge, and I give the following reasons for doing so:—

Mr. Braden's deportment during the debate at Orchardville, and Alma, Illinois, was such, and his position on doctrine so conflicting with that advocated by the leading representative men of his church, that I deem it justice to myself, and to his people, and to the public at large, to add the following stipulations to my former challenge; to wit:—

"ALMA, Illinois, Nov. 12, 1899.

"Rev. Clark Braden; Sir:—In all future debates, the following agreement and stipulations shall be complied with:" "Elder Braden is to furnish his opponent, ten days before the debate, a written indorsement from the chief editors of the Christian Evangelist, and the Christian Standard, that he is an accredited representative of their church, sound in the faith as they hold and teach it; and a Christian gentleman to an opponent. This indorsement shall be countersigned and accepted by his congregation where the debate is to be held. Elder White is to furnish his opponent ten days before the debate an equivalent indorsement from the chief editors of the Saints' Herald, and Zion's Ensign, which shall be countersigned and accepted by his congregation. A refusal, or failure, on the part of either party to furnish such credentials as are herein named, shall be sufficient evidence to either party, that his opponent is not worthy to affirm or defend the doctrine and belief of his respective church, in an honorable public discussion.

"I. N. WHITE."

After reading this, I handed the chairman a copy, then turned to Braden and gave him one; and he cried out: "You are a coward; it's a square backout!" Instantly I picked up one of my challenges and said: Ladies and gentlemen, let me read to you what Braden calls a backout (reading with emphasis):—

"A challenge to Rev. Clark Braden. The Rev. Clark Braden is hereby challenged to repeat the debate held with me near Orchardville, Illinois, from September 12 to 18, 1899, at Alma, Illinois. I also challenge him to repeat it at every hamlet, town, and city, where he may attempt to preach or lecture against the faith taught by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This challenge holds good, the Lord willing, during my natural life."

There! does that look anything like backing out? That holds good during my natural life; and let me remind Braden, I am not dead yet.

I here asked the chairman to loan me the copy of the added stipulations I gave him. He did so, and I remarked: Now, ladies and gentlemen, let me reread what I ask this man Braden to do before entering into another debate; reading: "To furnish his opponent a written indorsement from the chief editors of the Christian Evangelist and Christian Standard, that he is an accredited representative of their church, sound in the faith as they hold and teach it, and a Christian gentleman to an opponent." Now, because I require this of him, and just the very thing I offer to do myself, he has stooped so low as to call me a "coward," and says it is a "back out." Now, I have this to say: If Braden cannot be indorsed by his church, as being a gentleman, and an accredited representative of their faith, he is not worthy to appear in a pulpit with any Christian gentleman, and unworthy of my steel. And, if such an indorsement as I ask for, of him, is ground for a "back out" and "cowardice," it is, alone, on his part; as I stand pledged to furnish an equivalent indorsement of myself, from the chief editors of my respective church journals; and my challenge holds good during my natural life.

This ended the debate; more than that I announced, that after closing those that wished one of my challenges or tracts representing our faith I would supply them as they passed out.

The chairman asked the congregation to stand while the Methodist minister would dismiss. The minister said: "We thank thee, O God, for such a grand victory for the truth," etc. This was smarting on Braden, as the minister had both in private and in public stated that Braden was down.

Now came the rush! I handed out with both hands tracts and challenges till every challenge was gone and most of the tracts. Braden stood looking on in amazement. Thus the scene closed and I turned to Braden and offered my hand and said: "Well, Mr. Braden, let us shake hands and separate as friends." Braden blurted out: "You are a coward!" "It's a backout!" I answered: "Braden, I have just closed the debate with you," and turned from him. I realized what my dream meant; and more especially when men and women swarmed around me to congratulate me. But I ask what is that to me, more than to say, To God be all the glory, if there is any in it. I can say, that Braden is a man of fine ability, and he probably tried to be more of a gentleman in this debate than in the one at Orchardville. He fought hard for his side. I left him feeling bad, because he failed to make his promises good to his visiting elders, that he was the only man that could afflict a crushing defeat on "Mormonism." I can't say that I rejoice because he felt his defeat; but I rejoice that God was kind enough to me to assist me in defending the great message sent to Joseph in fulfillment of his precious word as found in the Holy Scriptures. I. N. WHITE.

A CALL.

True Succession in Church Presidency.

THIS is a book just issued by the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, Church His-torian. It is a complete answer to and refuta-tion of Elder B. H. Roberts on "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," and to Elder C. W. Penrose on "Priesthood and Presidency." It follows Mr. Roberts closely and points out his false statements, misrep-resentations, historical inaccuracies, illogical arguments, and untenable interpretations; while answering Mr. Penrose directly and incidentally.

It also takes into account the official acts and teachings of Brigham Young and his as-sociates from June, 1844, to the present, showing conclusively that they departed from the faith, and taught immorality and criminality.

The work of the Reorganization is also presented from an affirmative standpoint, and her standing as the acknowledged Church of Jesus Christ is clearly maintained and the authority of her priesthood and presidency convincingly defended and con-clusively established.

There has long been a demand for this work, in consequence of the Utah mission-aries having used the book of Mr. Roberts, wherever their ministry have operated. This book in the hands of all who desire the truth will be effectual against the influence of their sophistry.

It will make a book of about 160 pages and will be sold at the lowest possible price, as we are more interested in the circulation of the work than in the profit derived from its sale.

Bound in neat paper covers, 35 cents each.

J. H. HANSEN.

In the Nineteenth Century an article on "The falling off in the quantity and quality of the clergy" shows that the number of ordinations in England has been decreasing regularly during the last five years. There are only one hundred curates out of work, the author declares, "and even with these there must be in most instances some sufficient reason why they lack occupation." He is appalled by the fact that fewer university men are now entering the church, and that "the clergy are largely drawn from a lower stratum of society." It is suggested that the root of the trouble is the same as that which Mr. Rider Haggard has discovered to be at the bottom of the migration of Hodge to the towns—namely, an objection to low wages.

Archæological Committee's Report,
WITH MAPS.

Evidences Supporting the Book of Mormon.

This work presents the results of labors of the "Committee on American Archæology," appointed at the General Conference of 1894. The work has been written after much time and special labor in investigating every available source of written information on the subject.

It is divided into three parts. Part 1 contains a preface, and outlines the history of the Nephites. Part 2 is a synopsis of Jaredite history, and includes a summary of the conclusions reached by the committee, with a statement of the evidences upon which said conclusions are based. Part 3 contains much miscellaneous matter of general importance, including a list of early authors on American antiquities, with their opinions concerning the origin of the ancient Americans; a list of authors quoted; also an index of names of lands, cities, rivers, etc.

The committee has summarized the leading archæological evidences obtainable in support of the claims made by the Book of Mormon; evidences have been gathered from sources not accessible to the average reader, making it a manual of defense of its archæological claims.

The preparation of the work has been completed at considerable expense, but the price has been made as low as possible.

Neatly bound in heavy paper covers; price 50 cents, mailed to any address.
