The October Delineator offers many valuable suggestions to women who would like employment at home and notes several instances in which a competence has been acquired by women who have followed such unusual lines of work as marking linen, sewing on skirt braids, making plum pudding, Saratoga chips, paper dolls, favors for weddings, etc.

The recent death of Chief Rabbi Jacob Joseph in New York City called attention to the vast population of Russian Jews who have lately made their homes in American cities. There are said to be over 360,000 of these people in New York City alone. In the Review of Reviews for September, the pathetic story of the late chief rabbi, who died in an alien land, is told by Abraham Cahan, while Doctor Maurice Fishberg contributes an interesting study of the people among whom he ministered, describing their social and industrial traits and their qualities as immigrants.

DOW CITY REUNION.

The reunion at Dow City is over. Bro. R. C. Evans and the Editor are the last of the elders in the field to leave.

The big tent is down, and the "hired canvas houses" are empty, and the camp ground deserted.

Rain fell on the first day of the session, but the rest of the time the weather was dry, and except the nights of Thursday and Friday, the 11th and 12th, fine. Those two nights very cold, heavy frost covering the hills and vales of the Boyer Valley and freezing the green vegetation to an early decline and death. It was rather unpleasantly cold in the cloth houses, in which proper foresight had not provided a needed amount of bed covering. But as no one was hurt, so far as we learned, it passed as one of the vicissitudes of this unusual summer.

The attendance was not so large as heretofore, though there were some twenty-five hundred persons on the grounds the afternoon of Sunday the 14th.

A general report of the occasion would be, that from the organization effected on Friday the 5th, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon to the close on the evening of the 14th, the prayer and testimony services were well attended and quite spiritual, some manifestations in prophecy, tongues and interpretation were had and enjoyed by many. The preaching as a whole was unusually good, each speaker having the due modicum of the Spirit's presence and power.

At organization Brn. Joseph Smith, R. C. Evans, F. A. Smith, and J. M. Baker were chosen to preside and have charge of the exercises. S. B. Kibler, of Woodbine, Iowa, and James Pearsall, of Galland's Grove, choristers; A. H. Rudd, of Dow City, and Oscar Case, of Moorhead, Iowa, secretaries and press correspondents; D. M. Rudd, Brig. Reynolds, Archie McCord, W. D. Bullard, Ichabod McCord, and W. A. Carroll, police. Several short talks were indulged in by Brn. Smith, Butterworth, Rudd, and Baker, after the organization was effected.

Upon convening at half past two in the afternoon, the hour set for afternoon meetings, Bro. F. A. Smith opened the campaign by an excellent sermon, full of cheer and comfort, notwithstanding rain dampened the prospect for camping. President Joseph Smith followed this in the evening, filling the hour appointed, and the Dow City reunion was in full swing.

The prayer services of the 6th were in charge of Brn. D. M. Rudd and Thomas Jones. Bro. A. H. Smith was the speaker at a quarter to eleven, the service being in charge of Bro. F. B. Shumate, a rising young officer. At half past two Bro. James R. Sutton, a missionary of the Eastern Iowa field, occupied, Bro. Joseph Smith presiding. At half past seven Bro. Oscar Case, another of the coming men of the church, occupied the evening hour very acceptably and with profit to those who heard him. Bro. Fred A. Smith, in charge of the mission, presided.

Sunday, September 7, was occupied fully, Brn. C. E. Butterworth and C. J. Hunt presiding at the nine o'clock prayer service. At a quarter to eleven Bro. F. A. Smith was the speaker. The audience was composed of the Saints, not many of the outside world being present. Bro. A. H. Smith presided. Bro. Joseph Smith filled the half past two hour, with Bro. Dorus Hutchings presiding. In the evening Bro. R. C. Evans, of London, Ontario, was the speaker. "Some objections to the Latter Day Work," was his topic for consideration.

Brn. Henry Kemp, O. H. Holcomb, Dorus Hutchings, Thomas Jones, Fred Shumate, and Oscar Case were appointed as administrators to those who felt the need of the ordinance for the sick. Fortunately there were no serious cases of illness during the session.

The succeeding days of the session were occupied as follows: For Monday, September 8, Brn. W. H. Garrett and Archie McCord, prayer service; Charles Derry and C. E. Butterworth at fifteen minutes to eleven a. m.; Dorus Hutchings and R. C. Evans at half past two p. m., and C. J. Hunt and Joseph Smith at half past seven.

Tuesday, September 9. Prayer service, W. D. Bullard and W. T. Fallon; half past two p. m., F. A. Smith and Herbert Lytle; half past seven, R. C. Evans and David Brewster.

Wednesday, September 10. F. B. Blair and Ichabod McCord, prayer service; half past two, Joseph Smith and D. M. Rudd; half past seven p. m., Heman C. Smith and Joseph Ward.

Thursday, September 11. Nine a. m., W. H. Garrett, J. S. Strain; fifteen minutes to eleven a. m., D. M. Rudd, R. C. Evans; half past two, Hans N. Hansen, C. E. Butterworth; half past seven, R. C. Evans, Heman C. Smith.

Friday, September 12. Nine a. m., J. A. Gunsolley, George Jurgensen; fifteen minutes to eleven a. m., F. A. Smith, Henry Kemp; half past two, Heman C. Smith, S. B. Kibler; half past seven, Joseph Smith, Thomas N. Franklin.

Saturday, September 13. Prayer service, nine a. m., F. B. Blair, H. N. Hansen; fifteen minutes to eleven a. m., E. L. Kelley, C. J. Hunt; half past two p. m., a business meeting; half past seven, A. H. Smith, Charles Derry.

Sunday, September 14. This was the day of the session. The weather had cleared, the air was warm and balmy, there was no dust nor heat to annoy, and the people gathered in crowds to the city park, where the camp was pitched. The prayer service was presided over by Brn. Joseph Smith and Joseph Lane. Bro. E. L. Kelley occupied at fifteen minutes to eleven, in one of his happiest efforts, and had a good audience, Bro. J. M. Baker in charge. The afternoon service was in charge of Bro. Oscar Case, the sermon by Bro. R. C. Evans. It was a characteristic effort, "The Celestial Lawsuit," and was well received. The crowd was large, some twenty-five hundred people being on the grounds.

Heman C. Smith occupied at the evening session, Bro. F. A. Smith in charge. Bro. Heman's effort was a strong one and he had an excellent hearing, the order in the tent and around it being very good. "Not every one that sayeth Lord, Lord," was his text. The conclusions were irresistible, and he was listened to with close attention.

The business men of the town closed their places of business for the evenings of the week, except Saturday, in order that no counter attraction should prevent persons from attending the meetings. Many of the citizens attended the meetings, and showed much interest in the affair from first to last. The doors of many received the visiting Saints as guests so that all who came were provided for.

At the business session of Saturday some of the business citizens were present and were quite interested in the question of location for the reunion of 1903. It was decided to hold one next year, and Dow City was again chosen by vote of the assembly. The report of the committee showed that about one hundred fifty dollars would be needed to meet expenses, including a balance due on repair of the large tent. By personal contribution and a collection on Sunday afternoon, one hundred seventy-five dollars were raised, leaving a balance in the hands of the committee as a basis for next year's operations.

The grounds were in excellent condition, covered with a mantle of grass and clover, and it was a pleasant sight on Sunday after the morning session to see the groups of cheerful visitors scattered about in the shade on the green sward appeasing the demands of hunger out of well-stocked hampers. All were good natured and the office of policeman was a sinecure, as no one disturbed the peace.

Eleven were baptized during the session, Brn. J. R. Sutton and D. M. Rudd officiating, while J. M. Baker and J. A. Gunsolley were in charge. They came by twos and threes, but were all welcomed into the covenant of grace.

Patriarchs Alexander H. Smith, Charles Derry, and

Henry Kemp were in attendance, and quite a number received the ministrations of their office.

Bishops E. L. Kelley and Charles J. Hunt, represented the Bishopric and were occupied in the duties of their calling.

The publishing department was represented by Bro. F. B. Blair for the HERALD Office, Bro. W. H. Garrett for the Ensign. Many of the visiting Saints evidently took advantage of their being present to pay up arrears, renew subscriptions, and place new ones, as their tent was a place of attraction during the times of intermission during the services. They are kind and patient agents of this arm of the public service.

Bro. James M. Baker, A. H. Rudd, Charles E. Butterworth, Leonard Butterworth, and Wm. A. Carroll, five of this year's committee, were by vote rechosen for 1903. Bro. A. H. Rudd is secretary. The time of holding the reunion was left to be decided by the committee, of which due notice will be given.

The Sunday-school and Religio, under the care of Bro. J. A. Gunsolley and others, occupied the forenoons of Tuesday and Wednesday, the seventh and eighth, and held daily sessions at eight in the morning and a quarter past four in the afternoon, after their organization on Tuesday. A good interest was manifest.

STATE AID TO SECTARIAN SCHOOLS.

We have received from the Catholic Book Exchange, 120 West 60th Street, New York City, New York, a little pamphlet containing an article reprinted from the Catholic World. It is called "The 'Grievous School Question' Again Discussed," and is by Reverend P. R. McDevitt. It is decidedly from a Catholic standpoint, and constitutes another plea for state aid to Catholic parish schools. The question is handled quite logically, however, and is one of considerable importance to those interested in our general educational system. Mr. McDevitt makes an editorial in the New York Tribune an excuse for opening up the question. He then presents figures showing the enrollment in schools, public and private, and attempts to show by figures that Catholic educational institutions "contain double the number that are being educated in all other schools not of distinctly public character."

Mr. McDevitt says there are two "clearly defined agencies working side by side" in the education of the American youth: "one, the creation of the state; the other, the offspring of private enterprise."

"The dominating thought and purpose," he says, "of both agencies are the same—the formation and development of character, and the instilling of those principles which beget the highest ideal of true womanhood and manhood." But these ideals are, in the opinions of men, reached by various methods.

The writer then discusses the religious element in the development of the child, taking the ground that the necessary religious training can not be gained in the Sunday-schools or church, but must be made a part of the every-day work and training of the child. He tries to make a distinction between a religious training and a training in moral ethics. He quotes from a description of the course of study of the Boston schools, in which it is stated that in the instructions in morals and manners, teachers will at all times exert their best endeavors to impress "principles of piety and justice, and a sacred regard for truth; love of their country, humanity, and universal benevolence; sobriety, industry, and frugality; chastity, moderation, and temperance." He takes the position that while schools may attempt to do this, yet there is something more in religious training not supplied in the public schools. This he thinks the Catholic schools supply. He calls attention to the fact that to-day in our public schools the idea of God, the great Creator, the Father of all, the Source of all, is studiously kept from being discussed by the teacher to his pupils in an attempt to avoid the idea that sectarian ideas and doctrines must not be taught.

He quotes one of the ablest Catholic educators as follows: "However, we do not hold that religion can be imparted as is the knowledge of history or grammar; the repetition of the catechism or the reading of the gospel is not religion. Religion is something more subtle, more intimate, more all-pervading; it speaks to the heart and the head; it is an ever-living presence in the schoolroom; it is reflected from the pages of our reading books. It is nourished by the prayers with which our daily exercises are opened and closed; it is brought in to control the affections, to keep watch over the imagination; it forbids to the mind any but useful, holy, and innocent thoughts; it enables the soul to resist temptation, it guides the conscience, inspires horror for sin and love of virtue. It must be an essential element of our lives, the very atmosphere of our breathing, the soul of every action.

"This is religion as the Catholic Church understands it, and this is why she seeks to foster the religious spirit in every soul confided to her, at all times, under all circumstances, without rest, without break, from the cradle to the grave."

He then adds that the parish schools of the Catholic Church contend for the union of secular learning and religious training. He thinks there are dangers in state "paternalism" in that there might be the attempt to take from the parent some of his natural rights. He then calls attention to the fact that the Catholic Church stands for law and order, and makes a plea that they have liberty to educate as they deem best; and that while they as citizens have the right to use the public schools they also have the right or privilege to establish their own institutions. And if they do not care to avail themselves of the privileges afforded by the public schools, they can send to their own schools, wherein their children may be educated according to their own standards of education. And while they are thus keeping up their private schools they are also giving aid by taxes for the support of the public schools; and he makes the plea that because they do contribute to the public fund for maintaining the public schools, they have a right to say how these funds shall be expended to a certain extent, and hence his plea for state aid for Catholic schools. To offset the great demand which would be made upon the public fund for aid for private institutions by reason of various denominations claiming aid for their schools, he suggests that the state fix a certain standard to which these schools must attain before they shall be considered worthy of state aid. He claims that when these schools thus attain that standard and succeed in fulfilling all that is required of them by the state, they become of material aid to the state in educating its young, perform a part of the work of the state in education, and are entitled to aid.

The writer also claims that the Catholic Church is not alone in its opposition to education without religion, but quotes from authorities outside of the Catholic Church to show that others are remonstrating against an education in which science, literature, and history, and other subjects are taught with a "studied absence of reference to the 'Divine intelligence at the heart of things.'" He also makes the claim that the state is practically unable to educate all the children, and cites an instance where in Philadelphia alone there are not adequate schools for thousands of children who are not Catholics, and that the Catholics alone are educating thirty-five thousand children. "Were these schools to be closed," says Mr. McDevitt, "thirty-five thousand more would be on the streets."

He thinks there is a danger of monopoly in education, and that it is one of the most dangerous of all monopolies.

He calls attention to the fact that Catholics are not an unimportant minority, but they are indeed a strong factor in the educational system of this country.

He says that a common objection to the appropriation of money for the denominational schools is that such an act would be a violation of the fundamental law which recognizes no religion or sect. "Does it ever occur to those who insist on this view," says Mr. McDevitt, "that the very policy excluding religious instruction from schools maintained by a general taxation is a de facto class legislation in favor of unbelievers and agnostics, and utterly opposed to the principles of Christian denominations?" He thinks that Christians may justly protest against a "system which permits any state institution becoming tacitly an agency for the spread of infidelity."

He closes by claiming that the Catholic school system can not be ignored; that it is becoming so strong a system and so strong a factor in public education that it can not be ignored. Whether they receive aid from the state or not, they will still continue their educational work, and he hopes that the day will soon dawn when Americans will appreciate or recognize what the Catholic Church has done in her parish schools for the "family and state by jealously safeguarding the moral, religious, and intellectual welfare of the child, and when all will recognize the necessity and the permanence of the Catholic parish school."

Whether or not we sanction what the author of the pamphlet has written concerning the Catholic parish schools, we nevertheless realize that it is a question which sooner or later is going to become of importance to Latter Day Saints, for we can not but believe that the time is not so very far distant when we shall have schools of our own, instituted by us for much the same reason as the Catholic schools are. And hence it becomes of vital interest to us. However, that does not change the justice of the case one way or the other, and the question should be treated fairly and squarely, and not upon selfish principles. However, we are of the opinion that religion and good morals can be taught in our public schools without the instruction of a special theology. We mean by that that it is not necessary for the tenets of any particular church to be taught in the schools in order to inculcate the religious idea within the heart and soul of the youth of our land.

While it may be true that the exclusion of religion from our public schools may be a profession of irreligion, as claimed by Mr. McDevitt, it is also true that it would not be right for the public funds to be expended for the propagation of the tenets of one church; and this would be the case were the state to furnish aid to denominational schools in which are taught the catechisms or doctrines of any one particular church. Why should the public at large pay for the propagation of Catholic training in Catholic schools, or Presbyterian training in Presbyterian schools, etc.?

The question of religion in the public schools should be separate and distinct from that of furnishing state aid to private institutions. And although there may be a lack of religious training in our public schools to-day, we are inclined to think that the remedy will not be found by the appropriation of state funds towards the aid of sectarian schools.

THERE is only one real failure in life possible, and that is: not to be true to the best one knows.
—Farrar.

THE following clipping from the Christian Herald has been sent us:

W. G. S., Grange, Maryland. Enclosed find clipping from an English paper (the Andover, Hampshire, Advertiser), which, if true, deserves to be published.

The clipping describes the morals of Martinique and says:

"The people of Martinique are a very wicked crowd. The Kennet [relief-ship] arrived at Fort-au-France on Sunday afternoon. They found the town all excited. Some election was going on. Bands of music were playing in the streets. The theatre was open ready for the play in the evening; a masked ball was to be held. The Acting Governor asked first who was to pay the freight, and even wanted the gentlemen to pay duty for the things they were giving them. They said, 'Yes, St. Pierre is gone,' and were perfectly indifferent. 'It seems ridiculous,' they added, 'sending one cent to Martinique. What for? The people are all dead.' On Good Friday the mob killed a pig, hung it upon a cross, with a crown upon its head, representing our Savior, then buried it; they dug it up on Easter Sunday, and dressed it as a priest, making a mockery of his death and resurrection, and yet on His Ascension Day they were called to their account. . . . Sodom and Gomorrah must have been similar to Martinique."

Charges of godlessness and immorality have been made in many quarters against the people of Martinique, and especially the people of St. Pierre. If these are facts, the truth should be known, as a warning to other cities.

THE following appeared in the Semi-Weekly Deseret News for August 14:

IN AUSTRALIA.

Elder J. C. Call, writing from Islington, Newcastle, Australia, June 23, says in part:

"Elder Wm. Wheeler, of Lewiston, Cache County, Utah, and myself have labored here since the fore part of January of this year. We have baptized one brother, John Wilks, and have a few investigating. We meet some opposition from the Reorganized Church. On the 31st of March we attended their reunion. Alexander H. Smith was in attendance. He is one of the sons of the Prophet Joseph. We attended three meetings. The one at two in the afternoon was a testimony meeting. During the course of the meeting one Mrs. Lewis, wife of Bishop Lewis of that denomination, came and placed her hands on Elder Wheeler's head and pronounced a blessing on him. Among other things she said that he would yet preach the truth in this land and that his prayer had been answered. Then the whole congregation wept for joy."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Fannie M. Montgomery wrote from Soldier's Grove, Wisconsin, September 15: "Our Sabbath-school is progressing finely. Last Sunday we had an attendance of forty-two."

S. S. Smith wrote from Charley, Oklahoma, September 16: "I am here endeavoring to instill in the minds of the people the true gospel of Jesus Christ. I have made many friends to the cause and have enjoyed good liberty, and especially on the subjects of the Book of Mormon and latter-day prophets and prophecies. I know if I put my whole trust in God I have nothing to fear, so I feel confident of final victory."

Under date of September 1, William R. Armstrong wrote from Manchester, England: "The work is slowly forging its way ahead here. Three were baptized during our mission conference at Birmingham. Four have just been baptized at Leeds, several have also recently been added to the work in Stockport and East Manchester. I have spent a week preaching with our missionary brethren, J. W. Rushton and Thorburn, in Scotland, at Hamilton and Glasgow. Hard, earnest work is being done there. Large crowds earnestly listen to the work there for one and one half and two hours at a time, and this interest is redoubled when opposition is aroused. I have seen my brethren enthusiastically supported by the crowd when they have been maligned and insulted by men who say they are 'saved by grace.' Some are beginning to inquire there. I hope my brethren will pardon these allusions to their labors, but such work as our Bro. Rushton and his staff perform must succeed, God helping them."

Under date of September 4, Isaac M. Smith wrote from Attleboro, Massachusetts: "Am here with the district tent. Audiences not large, neither is the interest anything extra; but I am trying to enlighten the few. Our reunion at Silver Lake was splendid; all seemed happy, cheerful, and hopeful."

Under date of September 15, D. I. Wyatt writes from Rosendale, Missouri, remitting money for subscription to HERALD for a person in Rosendale of whom he says: "He is one that was convinced of the truth by hearing Brn. J. S. Snively and J. D. Stead while they were with the tent here in August. They removed prejudice and malice in this vicinity. May the Lord bless them."

By letter from Bro. George H. Graves, of Chicago, we learn that his wife died September 15, at her home. We extend to Bro. Graves our sympathy.

Bishop Kelley informs us that the pure "Elwood Cooper" olive-oil can be had by the Saints at his office for sixty cents per bottle.

By letter from James E. Kelley, dated September 15, we learned that he was at Oakharbor, Ohio. His meetings had been small, but attention good. He was expecting S. W. L. Scott to join him soon.

By letter from F. M. Cooper, we learn that Adam J. Keck has resigned his missionary appointment. We regret to see Bro. Keck leave the field.

D. J. Krahl, who was this year appointed to Pittsburg, was released from his mission, and is at work again in Bishop Kelley's office.

Joseph Smith and R. C. Evans, who after leaving the Dow City reunion went to dedicate a church at Pisgah, Iowa, Sunday the 21st, are expected to reach Lamoni to-day.

William Hooper Young, a grandson of Brigham Young, is being sought by the New York police, suspected of murdering Mrs. Anna Pulitzer, whose body was recently found in the Morris Canal, New Jersey. Evidences point strongly to his guilt.

Heman C. Smith, who has been away for some time past looking after the affairs of his mission field, has been at home of late. He has been at work in the Historian's office. He came to Lamoni from the Dow City reunion.

Brn. E. L. Kelley and A. H. Smith returned last week from the Dow City reunion, and Brn. Elwin and Salyards from the Stewartsville reunion.

Our bright and interesting exchange, the Paradise of the Pacific, is rejoicing in anticipation of the coming of the Pacific cable which will connect Honolulu, where that excellent monthly is published, with San Francisco. It will be cause for us all to rejoice, for when our Island Territory is in instant communication with the mainland it will seem much nearer, and hence our interest will grow. Already we have, largely through the medium of the Paradise of the Pacific, found our interest in development of the Hawaiian Islands growing. Success to Hawaii and the Paradise.

The Stewartsville Record for September 11 contains an account of the Stewartsville reunion.

We have received marked copies of the Lowry City Independent, of Lowry City, Missouri, issues of September 5 and 12, which contain an answer to some questions concerning this church. The editor has also reproduced a published sermon by Joseph Smith. The Independent is owned and published by Bro. Willis Kearney, son of Sr. M. E. Kearney, well known to many Saints through her writings.

The Sunday-school superintendents will please take notice that the Quarterlies for the last quarter of the year have been mailed. If any have not received their supply it would be well to investigate, as their subscription may have expired.

The Book of Mormon Quarterly will probably be mailed this week. Those who have ordered the paper and have not remitted should send their money at once if they wish to be placed on the mailing list. No names will be put on the regular mailing list unless the subscription is paid in advance. The subscription price is thirty-five cents per year—low enough, indeed.

Bro. F. E. Cochran, who for over a decade and a half was in the employ of the HERALD Office, is now doing successful work as a traveling salesman for the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company, of Davenport, Iowa. Bro. Cochran began work in the HERALD Office as "devil" shortly after the plant was moved to Lamoni. He worked his way up the scale, having worked as "devil," "feeder," "comp," in the business department, and proof-reader. When he quit the fore part of last month he was acting as assistant editor on the Autumn Leaves and Hope, and copy preparer on HERALD. The office has lost a valuable man, and his fellow workers were confident of his success in his new undertaking, so it is no surprise to them that he succeeds. We wish him continued success.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS.—No. 1.

BY ISAAC M. SMITH.

(All quotations are from the Inspired Translation of the Bible, large print edition of the Book of Mormon, and the 1897 edition of Doctrine and Covenants.)

Without an understanding of what is meant by "the church" and "the wilderness," we can not investigate this subject intelligently; can not hope to arrive at correct conclusions, unless it should be by mere chance. If I investigate with the understanding that "the church" means one thing, and my brother investigates with the understanding that it means something else, something different, we shall certainly reach different conclusions. And what is true of "the church" is true of "the wilderness."

The first thing I shall attempt, therefore, will be to define these terms; and I shall go to "the law and the testimony" for my definitions.

The Church of Christ: What is it?

1. The church is the house of God:

"But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God."—1 Timothy 3: 15.

"But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end."—Hebrews 3: 6.

"Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house."—1 Peter 2: 5.

"For ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."—2 Corinthians 6: 16.

"In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."—Ephesians 2: 22.

2. The church is the body of Christ:

"And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all."—Ephesians 1: 22, 23.

"And he is the head of the body, the church."—Colossians 1: 18.

"And fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church."—Colossians 1: 24.

"Now ye are the body of Christ."—1 Corinthians 12: 27.

3. The church is the body of baptized believers who follow Christ:

"And they who were baptized in the name of Jesus, were called the church of Christ."—Nephi 12: 11.

"And after they had been received unto baptism, and were wrought upon and cleansed by the power of the Holy Ghost, they were numbered among the people of the church of Christ."—Moroni 6: 4.

"Behold, this is my doctrine: Whosoever repenteth and cometh unto me, the same is my church; whosoever declareth more or less than this, the same is not of me, but is against me; therefore, he is not of my church."—Doctrine and Covenants 3: 16.

"All men must come unto him or they can not be saved; and they must come according to the words which shall be established by the mouth of the Lamb; and the words of the Lamb shall be made known in the records of thy seed, as well as in the records of the twelve apostles of the Lamb."—1 Nephi 3: 126.

Those who repent and come unto Him, "according to the words which shall be established by the mouth of the Lamb," are the church of Christ; but we must come according to that word. And the fullness of the gospel has been sent forth in these latter days, "that they may know how to come unto him and be saved."—1 Nephi 4: 11. Question: Were people coming unto him, according to the words of the Lamb, and being saved with a gospel salvation, before the angel brought the gospel from heaven?

4. The church must be called in Christ's name: "Take upon you the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness, and as many as repent, and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved. Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby man can be saved; wherefore, all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called at the last day."—Doctrine and Covenants 16: 4.

"Therefore ye shall call the church in my name; . . . and how be it my church, save it be called in my name? For if a church be called in Moses' name, then it be Moses' church; or if it be called in the name of a man, then it be the church of a man; but if it be called in my name, then it is my church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel."—Nephi 12: 16, 17.

From the last thought, expressed in the above quotation, we get this important fact:

5. Christ's church must be built upon the foundation of his gospel:

"But if it be called in my name, then it is my church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel."—Nephi 12: 17.

"Now this is the commandment; Repent, all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me and be baptized in my name, that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost, that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day. Verily, verily I say unto you, this is my gospel."—Nephi 12: 23, 24.

"Wherefore, if you shall build up my church upon the foundation of my gospel and my rock, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you."—Doctrine and Covenants 16: 1.

And the gospel and the rock are the same:

"Build upon my rock, which is my gospel."—Doctrine and Covenants 10: 11.

"Yea, repent and be baptized every one of you, for the remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost. Behold, verily, verily I say unto you, This is my gospel, and remember that they shall have faith in me, or they can in nowise be saved; and upon this rock I will build my church; yea, upon this rock ye are built, and if ye continue, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you."—Doctrine and Covenants 32: 2, 3.

"Then it is my church, if it so be that they are built upon my gospel."

"And this is my gospel: repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things, and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom."—Doctrine and Covenants 39: 2.

Yes, the church of Christ must be built upon this rock; but men could not build upon this rock if they did not have it, and the rock is something more than the word alone. In May, 1829, the Lord said:

"Behold, I command you, that you need not suppose that you are called to preach until you are called: wait a little longer, until you shall have my word, my rock, my church, and my gospel, that you may know of a surety my doctrine."—Doctrine and Covenants 10: 8.

Wait till you have the gospel; and wait till you have "my church;" wait till you have these essentials before going out to preach. And in harmony with this the Lord said in November, 1831:

"And also those to whom these commandments were given might have power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of obscurity, and out of darkness, the only true and living church on the face of the whole earth, with which I the Lord am well pleased, speaking of the church collectively and not individually."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 5.

If Christ had a church hid away somewhere "in the wilderness," it must have been built upon some other foundation; for these men were called and authorized to lay the foundation of this church, and were commanded to wait until they should receive the gospel of Christ, the rock upon which the church must be built, or in other words a knowledge of the gospel of Christ, before attempting to build. And, if this church, in 1831, was "the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth," the only church built upon Christ's gospel, his rock, then I should like to know upon what that "church in the wilderness" was built; and was it a dead church? In 1830, April 6, the Lord said to Joseph Smith:

"Behold, there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church through the will of God the Father, and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ; being inspired of the Holy Ghost to lay the foundation thereof, and to build it up unto the most holy faith; which church was organized and established, in the year of your Lord eighteen hundred and thirty, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month, which is called April."—Doctrine and Covenants 19:1; also 17:1.

The Lord called men to "lay the foundation" of the church and to "build it up," and it was "organized and established," April 6, 1830. I have shown that the church of Christ is the house of God, and I never knew a house to exist, as a house, before the foundation was laid and before it was built up; I never knew a house to exist, as a house, before it was "organized and established." The material existed, but not the house. And in this case they had to wait for the gospel, the rock upon which the church was to be built, before even the foundation could be laid. The rock, the gospel, was sent down from heaven; but the church was organized, established, and built up, here on the earth. "And they who were baptized in the name of Jesus, were called the church of Christ." They must be baptized "in the name of Jesus;" that is, by virtue of the authority received from him, before they are "called the church of Christ." The material, even when made ready, is not called the church, as is witnessed by the following:

"And now since the coming of Ammon, king Limhi had also entered into a covenant with God, and also many of his people, to serve him, and keep his commandments. And it came to pass that king Limhi and many of his people were desirous to be baptized; but there was none in the land that had authority from God. And Ammon declined doing this thing, considering himself an unworthy servant; therefore they did not at that time form themselves into a church, waiting upon the Spirit of the Lord."—Mosiah 9: 153-155.

Please note that they entered into a covenant with God, "to serve him, and keep his commandments;" but, because there was "none in the land that had authority from God," they did not at that time "form themselves into a church." They waited for "authority from God." And I confess that I am not able to see how a "church of Christ" can be established, organized, built up, or exist, without this "authority from God"—authority to baptize "in the name of Jesus."

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies: they become the sons of Moses and of Aaron, and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom and the elect of God."—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 6.

They became the seed of Abraham: they became the church of God; they became the kingdom of God; but they are not the church of God nor the kingdom of God until they become such, and they do not become such until they obtain these two priesthoods; "authority from God" to baptize "in the name of Jesus."

The church of the Firstborn is clearly defined in Doctrine and Covenants 76: 5, and also in section 90, paragraph 4. Please carefully read both texts.

The church of Christ, then, is the house or temple of God in which he dwells; it is the body of Christ in which the Spirit of Christ dwells; it is the body of men and women who believe in Christ, repent of their sins, are baptized for the remission of their sins, and are cleansed and sanctified by the Holy Spirit; it wears the name of Christ, and it is built upon the gospel of Christ. And, as shown in the last text quoted, it becomes the church of God when it obtains the Melchisedec and Aaronic priesthoods. This is the church of Christ as defined in the books. If the Lord has another church, hid away in the wilderness somewhere, I should like for some one to define it, with a "thus saith the Lord," and tell us wherein it differs from the one described in the books.

But, says one, the wilderness represents paradise; and the church of Christ, because of its being so bitterly and hotly persecuted, was given two wings of an eagle that it might fly away into paradise, the place which God prepared for it, and be fed there by the angels for twelve hundred sixty years. And this theory makes it necessary to define "wilderness," as the word is used in the Bible. I have by me a small dictionary, and it defines "wilderness" as "a desert; a tract of land or region, uncultivated and uninhabited by human beings, whether a forest or an open plain; a waste; a part of a garden left to grow waste." But I shall not ask any one to accept this definition; the Bible defines that word too clearly to be misunderstood.

"And made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof; and opened not the house of his prisoners."—Isaiah 14: 17.

"Thy holy cities are a wilderness, Zion is a wilderness, Jerusalem a desolation."—Isaiah 64: 10.

"I beheld, and, lo, the fruitful place was a wilderness, and all the cities thereof were broken down at the presence of the Lord, and by his fierce anger."—Jeremiah 4: 26.

"Many pastors have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot, they have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness."—Jeremiah 12: 10.

"Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon; yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited."—Jeremiah 22: 6.

And the reason assigned for this is:

"Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord their God, and worshiped other Gods, and served them."—Verse 9.

"Flee, save your lives, and be like the heath in the wilderness."—Jeremiah 48: 6.

This was spoken of Moab and in verse 9 he says:

"Give wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away; for the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein."

"Moab also shall wallow in his vomit, and he also shall be in derision."—Verse 26.

"For every head shall be bald, and every beard clipped; upon all the hands shall be cuttings, and upon the loins sackcloth."—Verse 37.

"And Moab shall be destroyed from being a people, because he hath magnified himself against the Lord."—Verse 42.

"For thy sons are taken captives, and thy daughters captives."—Verse 46.

Moab, with his sons and daughters in captivity, with every head bald, wallowing in his vomit, in derision, destroyed from being a people, is represented "as a heath in the wilderness." But wings were given unto him that he might flee and get away, "save your lives;" and their lives were saved, for the Lord says:

"Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the Lord." Verse 47.

But being in the wilderness, or "as a heath in the wilderness," is not much like paradise, even though a people may be fed and preserved there, not as a nation, nor as a church, but as individuals for many centuries.

"O generation, see ye the word of the Lord. Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness?"—Jeremiah 2: 31.

"And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground."—Ezekial 19: 13.

"Wilderness," then, when used figuratively in the Bible, means darkness, drought, desolation, captivity, and confusion; and I can not believe the Lord would choose a word of that meaning to represent paradise. Surely inspiration could find a more appropriate word to represent the place of rest prepared for the righteous.

Having defined "the church" and also "the wilderness," let us now examine Revelation 12: 1-17:

The writer says he saw "a great sign in heaven;" but this sign was "in the likeness of things on the earth." It was "a woman clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars."—Verse 1. This woman "brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God and his throne."—Verse 3. "And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and three score years."—Verse 5. This woman "was the church of God," and she had "brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ."—Verse 7.

The woman fled into the wilderness, that is, the church fled into the wilderness, after the man child, "the kingdom of God and his Christ," had been "caught up unto God and his throne." I have already defined "the church" and "the wilderness;" but it is just as necessary that we understand what is meant by "the kingdom of God," which the woman brought forth, as it is to understand what is meant by "the church" or "the wilderness;" hence I shall now attempt to define "the kingdom of God:"

"For unto you the kingdom, or in other words, the keys of the church, have been given. Even so. Amen."—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 18.

This is plain, clearly stated, and easily understood. The kingdom is "the keys of the church;" and "keys" means authority:

"For the firstborn holds the right of the presidency over this priesthood, and the keys or authority of the same."—Doctrine and Covenants 68: 2.

"The bishopric is the presidency of this priesthood, and holds the keys or authority of the same."—Doctrine and Covenants 104: 8:

"Keys" and "authority" are used in both these texts as representing the same thing; they are the same. Hence "the kingdom" is the authority of the church. It is given to the church:

"Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—Luke 12: 35.

"Hearken, O ye people of my church, to whom the kingdom has been given."—Doctrine and Covenants 45: 1.

"For I have given unto you the kingdom."—64: 2.

"The high priests of my church, to whom the kingdom and power has been given."—72: 1.

"But verily I say unto all those to whom the kingdom has been given."—83: 12.

"And whoso receiveth you as a little child, receiveth my kingdom."—96: 1.

"Behold, the kingdom is yours and the enemy shall not overcome."—38: 2.

"Fear not for the kingdom is yours."—38: 4.

"Behold, the kingdom is yours."—62: 3.

"The kingdom is yours and the blessings thereof are yours."—77: 4.

"For even yet the kingdom is yours."—81: 6.

Does the Lord ever say: "I have given you the church," or "the church is yours"? I do not remember it, if he has. No, the church is the body of Christ; those who are baptized "in the name of Jesus;" but the kingdom is "the keys of the church," the "authority from God" which has been given to the church. Hence, when the man child, "the kingdom of God," was "caught up unto God and his throne," the church was stripped of her authority, and was no longer the church of Christ. She might remain a church; but not the church of Christ. No wonder she fled into the wilderness, "a land of darkness," when the kingdom was caught up to God; that is just where one would expect her to go.

FOR WHAT WAS CHRIST'S BAPTISM?

What was Christ's baptism for? Was it to remit the sins of the world? I say not. It was to fulfill all righteousness. How is righteousness fulfilled? By keeping the commandments of God, is it not? He came to do his Father's will; to keep the gospel law; to show the world what they must do to be saved. I understand he made faith perfect by works. "Faith without works is dead." Baptism is not for the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience towards God, by the resurrection of Christ. Christ came to do his Father's will, or else how could he have said "it is finished;" "I have been obedient to all thou didst give me to do"? He did just what his Father told him to do. One thing he was commanded to do was to go to John and demand baptism at his hands. Remember, though Christ was a Son, yet he learned obedience by the things he suffered. Being then made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation. If he had not done his Father's will could he have become the author of eternal salvation? He was to be a leader and a commander unto the people, hence he was to prove his faith in the power of baptism by his examples. We hear him say to Nicodemus, "Unless a man be born of water and the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." Being born of water and the Spirit is the door to the kingdom of God. John was the porter to open the door to let Christ pass into the kingdom of God. Do not take too much authority and say that baptism by water is to remit sins only, for it will not do that; it is the answer of a good conscience, if I understand the Bible correctly. No wonder those who think so are trying to prove Christ was baptized to remit the sins of the world; if he tied upon him the sins of the world and was baptized for the remission of them, then when he came up out of the water of the Jordan, the sins of the world were remitted; in other words they were canceled, or blotted out of the book of remembrance. If this be true, why then was he crucified? Notice, he was crucified for the sins of the world and not to remit them (Doctrine and Covenants, section 46, verse 5). Or why did he shed his blood for the remission of sins as taught in the Bible? Now, if Christ was baptized for the sins of the world and remitted them in baptism, why then baptize now, if Christ has already remitted them? It seems there would be no more remembrance of them, hence it would be useless to baptize with water now for the remission of sins. Why did Peter tell the people to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, if Christ had already been baptized to remit them?

I understand Christ was baptized to fulfill all righteousness, just like you and I and every other man must do, if we fulfill all righteousness, because baptism is a part of the gospel law. It is one of his commandments to us, together with faith and repentance, and when a man has faith and repents of his sins and is baptized by a man sent of God to baptize for the remission of sins, he then has entered into the kingdom of God by the proper door; he then is in the sheepfold, and if he continues faithful unto the end he will be saved. But if he rebels or falls away and is cast out from the sheepfold, then he is not in a saved condition, but is in danger of the second death. What is the second death? We read "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power." Now, here two deaths are spoken of. The gospel finds man dead in trespass and in sin, or, in other words, separated from God by his sinful acts; so Christ comes as he said that we might have life (spiritual life) and that we might have it more abundantly. When a man obeys the gospel, he then is made alive in Christ, and if he continues faithful unto the end, he will never die; so we have the statement from Christ, if we live and believe in him, we shall never die. The reverse: If we do not live and believe in him, we will die.

In Christ is life, spiritual life; hence we have the statement, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." My belief is that after a man has been made alive in Christ (as the Bible puts it, has passed from death unto life), then if he falls away or commits the unpardonable sin, as Paul puts it, both spirit and body will die; or as John says in Revelation, "shall be cast into the lake of fire." This is the second death. Doctrine and Covenants, section 28, verse 11, says: Man was cast out from among them, because of transgression, "wherein he became spiritually dead; which is the first death, even that same death, which is the last death, which is spiritual, which shall be pronounced upon the wicked when I shall say, Depart ye cursed." Then they will be as Jude says, twice dead; plucked up by the roots. So there is no more sacrifice for that sin, that being the second death. As I understand it no person knows the condition of those who die the second death.

If Christ was crucified or shed his blood for the sins of the world, why then baptize now for the remission of sins? Christ was crucified for the sins of the world. He took on himself the sin of the world, and was crucified for the sins of the world, not baptized in water to remit the sins of the people. This is made very plain in Doctrine and Covenants, section 76, verse 4: "And this is the gospel, the glad tidings which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us, that he came into the world, even Jesus to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness; that through him all might be saved." Now, he tells us just who will be exempted by the shedding of his blood: "And it shall come to pass, because of the wickedness of the world, that I will take vengeance upon the wicked, for they will not repent; for the cup of mine indignation is full; for, behold, my blood shall not cleanse them if they hear me not."—Doctrine and Covenants, section 28, verse 4.

So you see the conditions are if they will hear him. In order for a man to get a remission of his sins through the shedding of Christ's blood he must hear Christ. Hence the statement, "he that loveth me, heareth me." So Christ wrought out the plan of man's salvation, and completed it in shedding his blood. So we have the statement, "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." Here we see that Christ shed his blood for the remission of sins, to perfect the plan by which all mankind could be saved. He tasted death for every man, and through his atonement all men will be drawn unto him, whenever they hear. And we understand that at the feet of Jesus every one shall bow and confess to the Father; so after a man has been saved by Christ's blood, then falls away, there is no more sacrifice for him, but such will go away unto eternal punishment.

The Plan.

'Tis Sabbath now, sweet day of rest,
From care our minds are free
To think upon his righteousness
Who died on Calvary.
It fills our souls with joy supreme,
To think upon his word;
To meditate upon the theme
As taught by Christ the Lord.
This plan of life is what we need,
To teach us how to live;
To shape each thought, each act, each deed,
In harmony therewith.
It takes man from the lowly walks,
Corrects his evil ways;
Like Enoch, with the Lord he talks,
For God heareth when he prays.
May we who have this foretaste had,
Appreciate the same;
Accept all good and shun the bad,
In our Redeemer's name.

The Man Without the Hoe.

Ay, he's the man to pity and point the tale of woe,
Who hath no place to plant a seed and help to make it grow,—
Whose heart is brick and mortar,
Whose life is soulless barter—
A million miles from God's sweet world,—the man without the hoe.—Country Life in America.

DIGESTION AND ASSIMILATION.

"We live not upon what we eat, but upon what we digest." Food as we buy it in the market, or even as we eat it, is not usually in condition to be made into the body structure or used as a body fuel. It must first go through a series of chemical changes by what is called digestion which prepares it to be absorbed, taken into the blood and lymph, and carried to the parts of the body where it is needed. Digestion takes place in the alimentary canal, partly in the stomach, but more in the intestine. As the result, the useless portions are separated and rejected, while parts which can serve for nutriment are changed into forms in which they can be absorbed, taken into the circulation and utilized.

"The alterations which the food undergoes in digestion are brought about by substances called ferments, which are secreted by the digestive organs. The saliva in the mouth has the power of changing insoluble starches into soluble sugar, but as the food stays in the mouth only a short time, there is generally little chance for such action. The saliva, however, helps to fit the food to be more easily worked on by the stomach. The gastric juices of the stomach act on the protein, and the pancreatic juice of the intestine on the protein, fats, and carbohydrates. The action of all the ferments is aided by the fine division of the food by chewing and by the muscular contractions, the so-called peristaltic action of the stomach and intestine. These latter motions help to mix the digestive juices and their ferments with the food. There are parts of the food which the digestive juices can not dissolve and which therefore escape digestion. . . . The digested food finds its way through the walls of the alimentary canal, and at this time and later it undergoes remarkable chemical changes. When finally the blood, supplied with the nutrients of the digested food and freighted with oxygen from the lungs, is pumped from the heart all over the body, it is ready to furnish the organs and tissues with the material and energy which they need for their peculiar functions; at the same time it carries away the waste which the exercise of these functions has produced. It is a characteristic of living body tissue that it can choose the necessary materials from the blood and build them into its own structure. How it does this is one of the mysteries of physiology. The body, as we have learned, has also the power of consuming not only the materials of the food, but also parts of its own structure for the production of muscular work, or heat, or to protect more important parts from consumption. How it does this is another mystery still to be explained. . . . The real nutritive value of a food, then, depends not simply on the proportions of nutrients which it contains, but also on the amount of these nutrients which can be made available to the body by digestion for building material and for fuel. . . .

"It is difficult to determine the actual digestibility of food, though it is comparatively easy to determine the apparent digestibility, and to know how long different foods remain in the stomach. Experiments of this kind have recently been made by Penzoldt. He found that the amount and consistency of food have a marked influence on the rate of digestion in the stomach. Fluids leave the stomach more rapidly than other material. From six to seven ounces of water or other common beverages leave the stomach in one and one half hours. Seven ounces of boiled milk leave the stomach in about two hours. Hot drinks do not leave the stomach more quickly than cold ones, nor does the quantity have much effect. Solid matter in solution or suspension delayed the passage of the fluid from the stomach somewhat. The consistency of solid foods thus seems to have more effect upon digestibility than the amount consumed. The quantity eaten increases the length of time the material remains in the stomach, but not proportionately. . . . Generally speaking, the most readily digested animal foods were material of soft consistency. White meats, for example, chicken—leave the stomach more quickly than red meats or dark meats—for instance, duck. The method of cooking also exerts a very marked influence on stomach digestion. Fresh fish was found to be more easily digested than meats."

We want to call particular attention to the statement that the method of cooking has a marked influence on stomach digestion, because it reminds us that we may have much to do with the digestion of our own households, since we are the ones who prepare, or have oversight of the preparation of their food. We might stop and consider whether from carelessness or ignorance we have been placing on our tables foods so prepared as to induce indigestion, that source of so much suffering to the human family.

"As regards vegetable foods in general, the consistency and the amounts of solid material were again the principal factors affecting the time required for digestion in the stomach. Mealy potatoes, for instance, were more easily digested than waxy ones, and mashed potatoes more readily than potato cut up in pieces. Fine bread was more quickly digested than coarse bread. There was not much difference in the time required for bread crust, bread crumbs, toast, new bread, and stale bread to digest in the stomach, provided all were equally well chewed." To our mind this last requirement, that of thoroughly masticating our food, has more to do with our digestion and what agrees with us than almost anything else.

"It must be remembered that digestion continues in the intestine and that the total time required for the digestion and absorption of the nutrients of any given food material is not shown by such experiments. They find their chief application in prescribing a diet for invalids, as in such cases it is often desirable to require of the stomach only a limited amount of work. . . .

"Digestibility is often confused with another very different thing, namely, the agreeing or disagreeing of food with the person who eats it. During the process of digestion and assimilation the food, as we have seen, undergoes many chemical changes, some of them in the intestine, some in the liver, muscles, and other organs. In these changes chemical compounds may be formed which are in one way or another unpleasant and injurious, especially, if they are not broken down (as normally they are) before they have opportunity to act. Some of the compounds produced from the food in the body may be actually poisonous."

Different persons are differently constituted with respect to the chemical changes which their food undergoes, and the effect produced, so that it may be literally true that "one man's meat is another man's poison." Milk is for most people a very wholesome, digestible, nutritious food, but there are persons who are made ill by drinking it, and they should avoid milk. The writer knows a boy who is made seriously ill by eating eggs. A small piece of sweet cake in which eggs have been used will cause him serious trouble. The sickness is nature's evidence that eggs are for him an unfit article of food. Some persons have to avoid strawberries. Indeed, cases in which the most wholesome kinds of food are hurtful to individual persons are, unfortunately, numerous. Every man must learn from his own experience what food agrees with him and what does not.

How much harm is done by the injurious compounds, sometimes formed from ordinary wholesome food, is seldom realized. Physiological chemistry is revealing the fact that these compounds may affect even the brain and nerves, and that some forms of insanity are caused by the products formed by the abnormal transformations of food and body material.

It is easier to criticise the best thing superbly than to do the smallest thing indifferently.—Henry Drummond.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills County, Iowa.

Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to Editors HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa

IMMEDIATELY after the close of the reunion at Silver Lake, Massachusetts, the General Superintendent left for the districts in Maine to try to revive the interest in district organization there. The two districts were at one time united in an association, but distance from meeting places, together with other circumstances, rendered it impracticable to keep up the meetings, and the association was abandoned; but now a good interest seems to be manifested by many of the workers. They are desirous of building up the schools now running and of organizing others. And to do this the need of a district association is felt. The question of organization was considered at a special meeting held during the district conference at Marlboro, Maine, and it was decided by a unanimous vote to "proceed to organize." An organization was effected, and the work placed in the charge of Bro. E. D. Brann. We bespeak for him and the new endeavor, God's richest blessing, and assure him and his associate workers that our earnest solicitations are for their prosperity and advancement. May every Saint in that region rally to the support of the Sabbath-school work and make the new district organization a success from the inception.

We left matters so that the missionaries can effect an organization in the eastern district of Maine, too, if it seems proper when the forthcoming conference shall have convened.

On our return trip we made stops for "one night only" at Boston, Fall River, and Providence Branches. Good, attentive audiences greeted us at these places. The work was very enjoyable all along, but especially so the evening we spent at Fall River, Massachusetts. The good Saints and Sunday-school workers there sought to give us a happy surprise, or welcome, and right well did they succeed. Their neat and commodious chapel was beautifully decorated with flowers and festoons and mottoes. A beautiful "Welcome" was the first thing that met our eyes as we entered the room. It was suspended directly over the pulpit and surrounded with flowers. It was a complete key to the evening's entertainment. For by word and song and flowers, a thrice hearty welcome was given. Refreshments were served at the close and a pleasant social hour spent. It was a very much appreciated innovation upon the wearying and sometimes unpleasant conditions attendant upon a missionary's work, and served as a fitting climax to the very pleasant associations of the late reunion at the beautiful Silver Lake. These associations will not soon be forgotten by us, we assure you. May God bless you, every one.

The next day Bro. Thomas Whiting very kindly took us down to see the beautiful and popular summer home of the wealthy, Newport, Rhode Island; a beautiful twelve-mile drive along the shore of the old ocean, wherein we pass many of the summer homes of multi-millionaires; a sumptuous "shore dinner;" our introduction to one of America's most popular bathing beaches, and a long cross-country trolley ride completed the day's amusements—one of both pleasure and profit to me. Thanks, Bro. W.

We are also indebted to Bro. C. O. Leeka, who is temporarily sojourning in Boston for a day, "seeing" that historic place. It seemed like getting near home again to be with Bro. L., he and I being from the same locality, though we were many hundred miles away.

A day and a night brought us to Wheeling, West Virginia, where the convention of the Pittsburg District was in session. We succeeded in surprising them completely, no notice of our coming having been given. We like to see people with their working clothes on once in a while. The convention passed off very smoothly and with profit to the work. A faithful continuance of the work begun, will bring good fruits soon. May they be blessed.

WHAT an opportunity Rally Day opens to the church! The pastor should see his opportunity to strengthen the church through the ingathering efforts in behalf of the teaching department of the church. There can be no surer road toward the fulfillment of the church's mission than in this part of the "vineyard." Wherever the petty "dear-little-children" idea of the Sunday-school is absent, and the communicant membership of the church, to a greater or less extent, is found in classes in the Sunday-school, the pastor will not be found worrying over the problem of reaching the masses, because the church is reaching the masses. In Philadelphia, for instance, one of the largest churches in the world has been recruited from its Sunday-school. In this case the teaching service is emphasized as the principal service of the church, and not relegated to a place a good deal lower than the pulpit. When pastors fully appreciate the situation, and are willing to concede that there is no teaching unless some one learns, then will come an era when men will go to church, and old as well as young will be enrolled in the Sunday-school.—Sunday School Times, Philadelphia.

DES MOINES, Iowa, September 16.

Editors Herald: Inclosed you will find reference to a play ["Corianton"] founded upon the Book of Mormon, which in the execution of it reflected injuriously upon the book, so reported by one of the brethren who was present one evening to determine what the nature of the play was, and how we might take advantage of it to call the attention of the people to the nature of the book itself; but after hearing of the nature of the play concluded I could not use this advertisement of the Book of Mormon to any advantage.

I am now doing tent work in the city, and will continue this week if weather permits. Only slight interest as yet. Saints seem to be making a commendable effort to increase interest. Circulation of literature has begun, and good is already resulting. One Brighamite woman has been in attendance, and told me she was desirous that her children living in the city should become interested in the work we were representing.

Elder Bays is still corresponding in regard to form of proposition he is to affirm. He sent me the following as the proposition he wished me to deny: "The church to which I belong, the Church of Christ, is identical in doctrine, organization, and ordinances with the Church of God as completed by the Apostles of Christ." I wrote an inquiry to know to which Church of Christ he belonged, and he replied, the "Church of Christ;" the "One Body" as spoken of in the New Testament. I have informed him that I am put to a disadvantage if I am to assume to which Church of Christ he belongs, and I will not admit that he belongs to the "Church of Christ" as represented in the New Testament and then deny that it is identical with the "Church of God as left completed by the Apostles of Christ." I now await a reply to my last communication. We have agreed to the form of our church propositions, and to two other propositions; viz., "Is the Book of Mormon a Gross Fraud?" and "Was Joseph Smith a Prophet of God?"

On account of illness while at Grinnell the week following the Des Moines District reunion I did not accomplish much, but through relatives I was invited to occupy in a new place, which I will comply with soon as convenient. Week before last I occupied in the tent at Newton, but on account of cold and damp weather but few attended, but the few who attended seemed quite interested. Had a very spiritual social meeting on Sunday forenoon, when I administered the sacrament to the few Saints there. The Saints were much blessed.

Interest in church work is increasing, with still brighter prospects ahead.

Brn. McCoy and Peters report excellent interest in Warren County, where five have been baptized of late, one of whom was formerly a Holiness minister, I believe.

I am very hopeful of the work in this city. Some are drifting, some are indifferent, but those who abide are taking a firmer hold, and are more intelligently and unitedly operating for the spread of righteousness than at times in the past, which is having its attractive influence, and leading others from darkness into increased light.

SYDNEY, Australia, August 21.

Editors Herald: Bro. Barmore and self arrived here the 16th inst. all safe, the voyage being rough one day beyond Auckland and two days this side. Bro. and Sr. Anderson and Brn. Tucker and Hanson made poor sailors; Bro. Barmore and I stood the trip well. Brn. Tucker and Hanson shipped to Dunedin the day of our arrival at Auckland. They would go thence to Kaitang'a-ta, New Zealand, where they may be addressed.

The Saints presented each of us an illuminated address of welcome here, the Wallsend Saints wiring their welcome. Bro. Wells goes to Brisbane, Queensland, and I to Wallsend, while Bro. Barmore remains here for a time. Bro. Haworth is in Melbourne, Victoria, where some have recently been baptized and where he is to have a discussion with a Christian preacher. I am to discuss with a Christidelphian on the sleep of the soul with the prospect of other debates to follow in the city.

Bro. Butterworth has been in the southern part of New South Wales preaching. He is better. Bro. Jones has opened the work in Adelaide, South Australia, the capital of that State—and baptized three. He will likely be put in the field as also Bro. C. Avery. The prospects seem good.

Bro. Wells and I visited the Registrar General to-day and he agreed to gazette me as a minister without the usual formula of twelve signatures; my being in charge cut the red tape. We can not celebrate marriages without being gazetted.

Wallsend, New South Wales, care George Lewis, will be my mission address, and I will be pleased to hear from all who may desire to write. One half ounce in weight calls for a five-cent stamp, and if the postage is short we are charged the deficiency as well as fined. Will appreciate American papers also, as we get very little news of that country in the papers here. The drought is very serious here.

Editors Herald: Leaving home August 18 I started for San Jose to labor in the interest of our Sunday-school. Desiring to accomplish as much as possible en route, I thought best to work my way up the coast. Arrived at Casmalia at half past one in the morning, and was met about seven o'clock by Sr. John Houk, Bro. John having been summoned to Santa Barbara to serve on a jury.

It is needless to say that I received a royal welcome. For years Bro. John's home has been a haven to the weary servants of the Master; and what is best of all to him who toils in the ministry, the welcome received was not embittered with the thought that those so hospitably entertaining had done ought to bring disgrace on the grand cause. Everywhere the names of John Houk and wife are synonymous of uprightness and truth. God speed the day when this can be said of all of us!

Finding everybody so busy, I simply looked over the situation, taking notes preparatory to the effort which Bro. T. W. Williams and self intend to make in the near future, and passed on to Arroyo Grande.

All through this part of the country I find evidences of a good work having been done by such Brn. as Burton, Harris, Holt, Keeler, etc.

At Arroyo Grande, I made my home at Bro. C. E. Carpenter's. Here again I found a welcome, which coming from the heart, puts the traveler at his ease.

Found Bro. and Sr. Carpenter busily engaged in their fruit, but notwithstanding Bro. C. was more than willing to take his team and pilot the writer around to places open to the gospel message.

The next day Bro. John Houk came up and the rest of the week was spent visiting the isolated Saints and finding places to preach.

The Methodists were holding a protracted meeting; this combined with the busy harvest and a spirit of indifference, brought us a small audience. We enjoyed a goodly portion of the Spirit while preaching.

Bro. C. kindly carried me to San Luis Obispo, to catch the north bound train. Here I stayed all night and in the morning took the train to Kings City, thence on to Metz, where I was met by Cousin Nat and Brother William. A roasting drive brought us at last to the "auld hame" where my childhood had been spent and from which I had been separated for many years. As I step off of the wagon and pass through the front gate, the years of the past come surging back, and in all of the sunshine and shadows they have brought I can see the golden thread of God's love woven.

More anon.

Editors Herald: It may not be altogether proper for me to report things as I find them out of my own field of labor, but I thought perhaps a few words from here might not be amiss. My wife being quite sick, I left the Tri-Cities some time ago, and after a brief stay in Grinnell came with her to this place thinking perhaps a visit with the home folks would be beneficial to her. At present she seems to be improving.

Since coming here I have not been idle all the time. There is a schoolhouse in the immediate vicinity and I made an effort to secure it for a series of meetings. In this I was disappointed. The first director I asked gave me to understand that they did not need any more church in this community, and so far as he was concerned, was not willing for me to use the house. Finally he said that if the others did not object, he would not. The next one I saw gave his consent apparently against his own feelings in the matter. The third one was away from home, so I had to wait. Well, the next night I was waited upon by "director number two," who informed me that he had changed his mind and would now have to object. That settled it. But not quite. For the depot platform was plenty large enough for me, so we announced meetings accordingly. My wife's father is the agent here; not a member of any church, but liberal enough to hear and aid others to hear. Have now preached twice on the platform to good crowds both times. The people here are mostly Swedish, and Lutheran is the prevailing religion. If Luther's teachings really make such people as some we have met recently, it would be difficult for me to believe he would be classed with those who helped to establish religious liberty. You may imagine my surprise when on yesterday at the close of a conversation with the Lutheran minister, he handed me a dollar to help me in my work. I confess I can not fathom the motive in such giving. If he indorsed what I had been telling him was our belief, there was no evidence of it. He signified a wish to read the Book of Mormon, so we will see to it that he has one. Anyway, if he misrepresents us now, he will do it knowingly. We hope he will not do this, but instead, that he may seek to know the truth.

This being but a small place, we thought when the schoolhouse was closed against us that we would be compelled to give up. But things are brighter now. A large lumber-shed which is now being erected was yesterday placed at our disposal for meetings after next Sunday. So unless something happens to change things, we expect to begin meetings there next Sunday. I do not know who the missionary in charge of this field is. If he will just make himself known to me, I will make due confession to trespassing. We hope to be able to let the people know that there is a religion that will not make men selfish and bigoted.

It seems that I have been greatly hindered in my work this year. And from human standpoint it appears but little has been accomplished. We are informed that four have been added to the branch in the Tri-Cities since we were there. Our hope and prayer is that these shall be "fruit which shall remain."

While in the cities I had the Utah elders to meet on the streets. And do you know it makes no difference to me whether I am on the street or in the finest church ever erected, just so I have some to listen. It seems to me that the hard part to street work would be to get the crowd together. Have had no experience in this yet, to speak of. Felt well in street work and am only sorry that I was compelled to quit so soon.

This is enough for the present. You may hear from us again if we get to work here. Our faith and confidence in God and his work is still sufficient to cause us to desire to do our part. Pray for us.

To Bro. E. L. Kelley, Lamoni: Having noticed that others are sending small amounts in aid of college, I also, although among the poor to whom the gospel is preached, desire to contribute my mite; for "if every Saint would send one dollar, not only would the debt be wiped out, but there would be the means on hand to furnish educational aid to some who, without such aid, can not hope for the blessings of our college to become theirs." I therefore send one dollar on college account.

Yours in the hope of deliverance,

SISTER MARY NELSON.

DONIPHAN, Missouri, September 2.

Editors Herald: Notwithstanding the great amount of malaria and prejudice that we find in Southeastern Missouri, Bro. Harry Thomas, my colaborer, and myself, are still battling for the Master. Although we are trying to live humbly and faithfully, there is so much opposition it is hard to preach many sermons in a place, hence we can not effect the amount of good in such places that we otherwise could. We preached thirty sermons in the month of August, but this is some more than we usually preach in a month.

We just closed a meeting among the Holiness who teach that water baptism is a part of the Mosaic law. We stopped with their preacher, Mr. Maynard, who treated us kindly. We are to begin meeting to-night in the upper room of a school building. I wish the church success. Satan tries very hard to keep the missionaries from spreading the gospel. May God help us all, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

OWENS HILL, Tennessee, September 8.

Editors Herald: We are in this vicinity trying to keep the banner of Prince Immanuel unfurled as best we can; but it is very hard work, sometimes, to get a place to preach. We have had one church and two schoolhouses closed against us in this vicinity, and our meeting broken up by a mob at another schoolhouse. We secured the Mount Union schoolhouse and began meeting last Friday night. Saturday some one secured several gallons of spirits so they could have a lively time. There was quite an amount of noise around the door during services on Saturday night, and when we went out of the house to start home we found one of our buggy wheels off and gone and a tap off another. We found the wheel and tap, but the wrench was thrown away. We put our buggy together and started off, when the writer received a blow upon the shoulder with an empty bottle, but it glanced off and did not hurt. Thinking it was our buggy wrench that they threw at us, we called for a brother to bring his lantern back, and we got out and made a search, but only found the bottle. We started on again when they yelled out, "Go it, preachers, and don't you come back on this hill any more."

We went back on Sunday and began meeting, which was disturbed by a parcel of drunken demons (if that is not too hard a word) coming in and acting so as to cause the crowd to be restless, and some of the women began to get out of the house. None of the men who lived in that neighborhood made a move to settle them, so one of our brethren went and took one of them out of the house; but there were so many drunk that we could not get the attention of the crowd any more, so we closed our meeting.

A Baptist preacher had asked us to give him half the time, to which we agreed, but when I closed he refused to say anything, and after we dismissed he came to us and said he did not want us to think he had anything to do with it. That he was opposed to such work. But he was heard to say, while on the ground, that we ought not to be allowed to preach there. That we would come there and preach Joe Smith as a prophet of God, and the people would come out to hear us and they did not need us. So to-day I wrote him and asked him to meet us in fair, honorable debate. I doubt very much of his accepting propositions. I hope the citizens will handle the mob with the law, and that some good will be done in that vicinity.

We have been harassed by mobs and locked out of houses and the cold shoulder turned toward us so much that it makes a man feel that he would like to go home and see the wife and babies and enjoy the hospitality of loved ones for a while. Some may think that the missionaries have a lovely time, but if they will go through with what some of us have to go through, they would think quite differently, I am sure. But I do not want to be found to be a chronic grumbler, for the promise is to the faithful, and I want to be found among that class. So if we fight a good fight and keep the faith we surely will receive the crown. My heart's desire is to be humble and faithful, and to assist in establishing the righteousness of God in the earth.

I hope the Saints of this district will come to the reunion, October 4, near Fulton, Kentucky. Come prepared to camp on the ground, as there are only two families of Saints living there.

Your colaborer,

W. R. SMITH.

St. Louis, Missouri, September 1.

Editors Herald: The Saints in St. Louis are endeavoring to let their light shine by their works, viz., their attendance at and assistance in the tent gospel work, their attendance and work at the church in preaching, prayer-meetings, and Religio and Sunday-school. The financial mountain that was before them a short time ago has been gradually disappearing, until it is now but a hill; soon the rough places will be made plain, the valleys exalted.

All are proud of their church. Credit is due them, and it is recognized by those who appreciate God's work of sacrifice. I find it is not how much we do in this great work, but how well. A few Saints well equipped with God's power are more mighty than the multitudes if they are lukewarm. If we were in harmony with the law of God, we might say, "Know ye not that I could pray the Father, and he could presently send me more than twelve legions of angels?" We then would see Zion flourish throughout the world. The man Daniel prevailed above the one hundred Princes. (Daniel 6.)

Consecration is now the watchword; not only finances, but our bodies as living sacrifices. Leaving all ungodliness, we should live in meekness before God, all desiring to perform their duties.

Reverend Hall, Mr. Dowie's follower, who has charge of the work in St. Louis, has just been arrested. He is warring against the Catholics. In conversation with their evangelist here, I learn Mr. Dowie and his followers expect to begin warfare against the Lutheran Church this autumn; then the Greek Church, Catholic, and continue until his work is done. All are expected to take their lives in their own hands. Surely, as the revelator saw, they "shall eat her flesh and burn her [Babylon] with fire."

The district tent was located at 4343 Easton Avenue on August 10. We will move elsewhere September 6. While the world is "racked and distracted," we can find comfort in the thought that we are not "tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine." The everlasting covenant has power to save all who live in obedience to it.

L. G. GURWELL.

PITTSBURG, Kansas, September 14.

Editors Herald: Since moving to this place a year ago last June we have been isolated from any of the Saints, not knowing that there were any Saints here; and as we were entire strangers in a city of about seventeen thousand we had no means of learning if there were any. But about three months ago we made the acquaintance of Bro. and Sr. George Royer, and about a week ago Bro. Christy hunted us up and through him we learned that there are about twenty members here. Bro. Christy intends moving here in October, and as he is an elder we hope to be able to organize a branch and have regular services. There is a little church building just across the road from us which I think we can secure for preaching once a month.

We rejoice greatly to think we can again attend a good prayer-meeting where the Lord has promised to meet with us and bless if we only come aright.

Inclosed please find post-office order for two dollars which my husband and I send as our share on the college debt.

I ever pray for the welfare of the work here as well as elsewhere.

Your sister,

N. M. HEMPEL.

501 North Fairview Street.

WILDERSVILLE, Tennessee, September 14.

Editors Herald: As we (Saints) have made a covenant with the Lord to follow after his teaching, let us examine ourselves along this line and by so doing we can see where we stand, whether we are in harmony with God's word or not; if not, why not? It is not because we have not been rightly taught along this line. We have been faithful hearers of God's eternal truths.

Remember the statement the Apostle James makes on this line. He says: "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only." Listen to the statement Jesus Christ makes, that the hearers of the law are not justified by hearing the law, but by doing it. And again we find a statement like this: "He that knoweth the law and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes." So we see that it is only worse for us to know the law and do it not. We ought to examine ourselves along this line.

Why should we lose faith in our prayers when James said that the prayers of faith will save the sick? Have we been obedient to the law? It is not the hearer who is justified, but the doer. Be ye doers of the law and not hearers only; so if those blessings for which we call on the Lord our God is not granted, we may blame ourselves, not the Lord, for he is not slack of his promises, as some men might call slackness. And if we expect blessings, we must live for them, or else we will not receive them. Remember this point, "Be ye doers of the law, and not hearers only."

As we cultivate our fields and gardens to grow and develop that which is necessary for our physical welfare, so must we cultivate that which is necessary for our spiritual welfare, else the gospel will not have wrought perfect work in us, and we must lay the blame to ourselves.

Saints, I ever ask for an interest in your prayers that I may hold out faithful unto the end, and be led by the Holy Spirit of truth.

W. R. RUSH.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Australia, August 23.

Editors Herald: Monday, July 14, found the writer at Orange County Park, California, at the Southern California District reunion. Here we met Brn. Joseph Luff, G. H. Hilliard, J. C. Foss, T. W. Williams, and A. Carmichael, of the regular ministry, and several local officials. The reunion was very much enjoyed, permitting as it did the renewal of old acquaintances and the forming of new ones. None love as Saints do, nor remember so surely and kindly. Saturday, the 19th, went to Cucamonga, and preached that evening and the following forenoon, also held a prayer and sacrament service in the afternoon. In the evening preached at Los Angeles and the next day went to San Francisco. Preached at Oakland Tuesday evening and attended prayer service at 'Frisko Wednesday night. Here I again beheld kind and familiar faces and clasped hands extended by love that has not and never will die. Here, too, I met those who were to be my companions while on the mighty deep. They had preceded me by a few days. There were now six of us all told. They were Bro. and Sr. David Anderson, for Hawaiian Territory; Brn. D. E. Tucker and P. M. Hanson, for New Zealand; and Bro. J. W. Wight and the writer bound for Australia. Our ship, the Ventura, was to leave at ten in the forenoon, July 24, but because of delay of the English mail did not leave until nearly seven in the evening. Quite a number of San Francisco and Oakland Saints, also Brn. Joseph Luff and G. H. Hilliard, were at the wharf to see us off. They waved at us and we at them as long, in fact longer, than we could see each other. We then repaired to our cabins and began to compose ourselves for the trip. Supper soon came on and most of us were able to sit down and eat as usual. However, Brn. Tucker and Hanson were sick in about an hour. I did not feel any effects until the next morning and then only a slight sensation. I was not positively sick but was physically indisposed and had a deep feeling of resignation. A fear of being entirely upset caused me to lie close to my berth. I soon learned that sitting is the worst thing, standing or walking some better, while a reclining position, especially on the back, is best of all. Not feeling strong enough on my "sea-legs" to go out to breakfast I decided to have the steward bring a lunch. It tasted decidedly "moreish," and made me wish I had ordered more or made a stronger effort to get to the table. My disability soon ended and I went there regularly from then on. I never ate more in any equal period. The salt air seemed to make me hungry. The same was true of Bro. Wight, but his food did not agree with him so well. I succeeded in holding fast to all that was given me, but he held out faithfully till August 9, when he succumbed to the inevitable. His case was similar to another, although it was not so serious. Once upon a time a man went to sea, and in recounting his experience afterward said he "was not the only man that was sick" as he heard the captain tell one man to "go for'ard and heave up the anchor," and bad even as he was he knew that he could not do that. We were close by once when Bro. Wight bowed to Neptune, and can testify that he too was not that bad.

As to how Bro. and Sr. Anderson fared in reference to sickness we did not immediately learn. We did not see nor hear from them until Sunday forenoon at church. This was the first time they had been out. We learned they were both sick within half an hour after leaving. Our sick fared some better. They were comparatively well by Saturday. Bro. Tucker soon recovered entirely, but Bro. Hanson was at times disabled more or less all the way. However, Bro. Tucker is not in love with "life on the ocean wave" and was so favorably impressed with his native State and its memories that he kept Missouri time all the way. Bro. Hanson would not give standing room in Iowa for all he saw while at sea except the sights at Honolulu. Bro. and Sr. Anderson think there are some nice sights on the ocean if one could only be well enough to enjoy them. Under the circumstances they much prefer land. Sr. Anderson was not well enough to attend the service held by us. By request of Bro. Wight, the writer was the speaker at said service. The sermon lasted only twenty-five minutes and was a presentation of our liberal views relative to the future condition of mankind. The audience was very civil and paid close attention. In fact, our fellow passengers were sociable throughout and gave no apparent evidence of discrimination against us because of our religion. The other service referred to was conducted by a young clergyman of the Episcopal Church. It consisted of nothing more than the ritual very inharmoniously rendered, with the appearance of sea-sickness on the part of the minister.

We reached Honolulu at one o'clock in the afternoon of July 30, where our ship remained till midnight. This gave us a good chance of sight-seeing and we made good use of it. We were met at the wharf by Srs. Simpson and Lyman, and Bro. G. J. Waller. The last immediately ordered an automobile for which we sincerely thank him. It was managed by a young man of native African descent. We glided along drive-ways with coconuts, bananas, and other tropical fruits and verdure on either side. Bro. Hanson and I were demonstrative, Bro. Tucker was somewhat conservative, while Bro. Wight—who had been there before—said nothing except in giving explanations. Among other things we saw Diamond Head and Pali Point. The former is the crater of an extinct volcano and the latter is an abrupt declivity of one thousand feet over which a native king once drove five thousand rebels to certain death.

We returned to the ship for supper, after which we went to prayer-meeting, which was very much enjoyed. It was composed of both whites and natives and consisted of prayers and testimonies offered by both. The latter were interpreted by a native young woman. These natives bear a close resemblance to our American Indians and are evidently of Lamanite origin. In their patriarchal blessings their lineage is located with Manasseh. Soon after this service we were off to the ship again, retired before she moved out and when we awoke were plowing away through the surface of the deep blue. We were now minus two of our company as well as most of our sociable passengers.

August 6, we reached Pago Pago, Samoan Islands. This was the last of our country's possessions along this route. A government collier was using the wharf, so our ship anchored in the bay. Bro. Wight was the only one of our company who went ashore. At this place the natives came round the ship in boats and sold fruit and their wares to the passengers. Some of the latter dropped money into the water just to see them dive after it. Between this point and Auckland, a day is lost going westward and one gained going eastward. The philosophy of this will be understood by people who are posted in mathematical geography. Various speculations were rife among the passengers as to what day we would lose. It proved to be Sunday, August 10. We, therefore, went to sleep Saturday evening, slept only one night, and yet awoke Monday morning. Bro. Wight gained a Sunday when he returned to America, in 1894, so this made him even. The rest of us may never recover this day, so if we are not as good hereafter as some others there will be a reason for it.

We arrived at Auckland early August 12. We were due there the 11th, but were belated because of having encountered a gale the afternoon and evening of the 9th. Our ship lost one hundred miles and Bro. Wight two meals. Here an ideal morning and a lovely scene met our gaze. There is no doubt about Auckland and vicinity having a picturesque appearance. Our ship remained here for twenty hours. We investigated the country and its customs, and soon convinced ourselves that a public debt of $323.85 per capita is not a good recommendation, especially since the colony is only about sixty years old and has but eight hundred thousand people. At this place we parted with Brn. Tucker and Hanson. They took passage for Dunedin, which meant another five days on the water. We had a smooth sea the rest of the way here, where we arrived at eleven in the forenoon of August 16. We were met at the wharf by Brn. G. R. Wells and F. Haworth, and were escorted to the home of the former, where we took dinner. We were later assigned to our regular stopping places. Sunday, the 17th, we attended all the services at our chapel, and Bro. Wight preached in the evening. Monday evening a reception was given in our honor at the church, which was a pleasant occasion for all concerned. The Australians are affable, and apparently much like the Canadians and Americans, especially the former. More anon.

Postage rates between here and the United States and Canada are five cents per half ounce. Correspondents will please take notice.

With love to all in the office, and elsewhere.

I am, yours in bonds,
ALMA C. BARMORE.

Conference Sunday at Independence.

Sunday morning, September 14, which dawned bright and beautiful, was honored at the Stone Church by a full school of happy children and their instructors to the number of three hundred fifty one which received the addition of fifty-six visitors, total four hundred seven. The primaries numbered one hundred eight. The interested little tots in the north room called forth the admiration of the visitors present, among whom were sisters from Lee's Summit, Lone Rock, Gaylord, Kansas, Holden, and Argentine, also Kansas City.

At the morning service about seven hundred fifty were present. Bro. Walter W. Smith preached acceptably to an attentive audience from text in Matthew 5, "Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father in heaven is perfect." The stake president, assisted by Elder William H. Pease, in charge of meeting.

There was a very pleasant scene presented at half past one in the afternoon, when about a hundred gathered at the church to witness the baptism of three candidates, Elder G. H. Hulmes administering the ordinance, and J. D. White in charge. Confirmation by stake president and Elder Ellis Short. Those baptized were Grace Emery Small, granddaughter of Elder John E. Page of the early days, born August 26, 1881, at Rosedale, Kansas, receiving the promise through G. H. Hulmes, also Florella Lane, born October 3, 1891, in Douglas County, Missouri, and another bud of promise, Maggie Luella Lane, born in same place July 9, 1892, each under the blessing from the hands of Elders Short and Hulmes respectively. The afternoon meeting was conducted by Elders G. H. Hulmes and J. D. White, over five hundred fifty being present. It was a peaceful and comforting service at which all seemed to enjoy the Spirit; six songs, three prayers, and twenty-four testimonies graced the meeting, some of which were inspiring.

Father George Hawley, who had just returned from the West, bore his testimony on this, his seventy-eighth birthday, also G. W. Rogers, son of Bishop I. L. Rogers, not long since passed over, was with us; and while beautiful sunbeams rested upon the oil painting hanging over the baptismal font, and on the flowers on cushioned pulpit, enlivening and making lovely the scene, many from different parts of the stake told the glad, old story of what the latter-day work had done for them.

Sr. Ida Stewart, of Chelsea Park, who had received the testimony that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, had been impressed with the idea of the necessity of baptism, and taking God at his word went forth in years ago, and now seeing that he had multiplied blessings unto her, her exhortation was to go forth and obey, and have "knowledge and discernment, joy and satisfaction" given, even as they had been given to her. Bro. W. O. Hands had received the word that the time for preparation was short, and he "longed to see the time when he might be instrumental in doing more for this work."

But the incidents of the afternoon were the ordination of Bro. Geo. Hidy to the office of an elder; the confirmation of the candidates who had been baptized; and the blessing of the sweet infant son of Mr. Alfred and Sr. Lula A. Barnhard, named Henry, by Elders Hulmes and White.

Bro. Hidy had heard the voice of the Spirit more than once since reaching his thirteenth year, calling him to prepare himself for the ministry; and now, after regretting he had not heeded the voice before, asked the Saints to pray for him that he "may not misrepresent, but represent the work of God." Bro. J. D. White attested to the call, and in words dictated by the Spirit said, "I know that you will be blessed and comforted in being instrumental in leading others into the way of light, and of presiding over many of God's children." The sermon in the evening by Elder H. O. Smith was listened to attentively by an appreciative congregation, although many of the delegates to conference had returned home. Bro. Henry Resch, of Holden, assisted.

The meetings of the stake Sunday-school convention on the 12th, also conference sessions of the 13th and 14th were well attended and interesting throughout; the Spirit of peace generally prevailing.

ABBIE A. HORTON.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, September 15.

BELOIT, Wisconsin, September 11.

Editors Herald: I am in Beloit, Wisconsin, with my husband. I left home, Sioux City, Iowa, August 23; rested up for a week, and on the Saturday following, August 30, left for the Northern Wisconsin reunion, five miles north of Janesville, Wisconsin, at Bro. and Elder Dutton's farm called Mount Pleasant, a beautiful place and a beautiful family. I enjoyed the company of the Saints very much.

The only elder there whom I had met before was Elder T. W. Chaburn of Independence, Missouri. He was cheerful and happy with the rest of us.

There were four baptized, Sr. Heel's husband and oldest son. She was truly a happy sister. She lives at Janesville, Wisconsin. Also a Mrs. Marshall was baptized and Bro. McDowell's youngest child. The gifts were manifested and we had a glorious time. It was the first reunion I ever attended and I have been a Latter Day Saint for over twenty years.

We have friends here, who are very much interested. We have given them tracts, and we intend to give them all they want to read. Mr. Harris is especially interested. He went to the reunion, and he said he was all taken up with our people. The Lord is truly working with him and I hope he will be a Saint. He is dissatisfied in the church of which he is a member.

I do not know how long I shall stay here. My husband wants me to stay all winter, but I sometimes feel lonesome for home in Sioux City, Iowa, but as my husband can do better here, at present, we may have to stay for a while. We may help to spread the gospel in this place. One woman said she thought Mr. Townsend too smart a man to be a Latter Day Saint. But she does not know this work or she wouldn't have made such a remark. I hope we shall live so we can let her see that we are truly what we claim to be, and also to the world, although we have made mistakes in our past lives. The mistakes have been a lesson to us, and have made us stronger in the cause of Christ.

Our address at present is 1042 Church Street, Beloit, Wisconsin. Home address, 116 Bluff Street, Sioux City, Iowa.

Your sister,

M. E. TOWNSEND.

34 Denison Street, ROZELLE,

New South Wales, Australia, August 22.

Editors Herald: The work is progressing here, we expect greater results now that we have an increased missionary force. Brn. J. W. Wight and A. C. Barmore arrived here safely on Saturday last. They were entertained by the Balmain Branch on Monday evening, and were each presented with an illuminated address of welcome. A telegram was received from the Wallsend Branch welcoming them to our shore. Brn. Hanson and Tucker left the boat at Auckland, New Zealand, where they will labor. They will be the first missionaries of the church who have labored there. There are about three members of the church there. There was a little seasickness among the elders coming out. Bro. Barmore is writing quite an interesting letter about their trip where full particulars can be obtained.

The Saints are very pleased to see Bro. Wight as it is now eight years since he left here. He is booked for a debate with Mr. J. Bell of the Christadelphians next month at St. Marys, thirty-nine miles from Sydney. The subject for discussion is, "The truth as found in the Bible teaches that man is wholly mortal." Mr. Bell affirms, Bro. Wight denies.

Bro. C. A. Butterworth is at present in Berrigan, New South Wales, where he is staying for a while for the benefit of his health; and I am pleased to say that he is getting better. Bro. G. R. Wells leaves for Queensland in a few days where he will labor for a while. My brother, W. J. Haworth, is at present laboring in Victoria, but will be returning to New South Wales in about a month or so.

Bro. Barmore does not see much difference between the American people and the Australians, although in England a good deal of misconception prevails. The people there have peculiar ideas about the colonials, but have learned that Australians generally are bipeds, if not white, although it is said that a rustic who recently visited a peep-show and saw a Kangaroo exhibited as an "Australian native," was heard to remark: "Heavens! And to think that I have a sister married to a thing like that!" About twenty years ago an Aboriginal Cricket Team was sent to England and were pictured in the illustrated papers almost everywhere. It gave the black Australia a long lease of life.

The Gospel Standard, our missionary paper, is getting along nicely, and is productive of much good, as it is a silent preacher and goes where a preacher could not get.

The Melbourne Branch are circularising their members for donations toward building a place of worship there; and although it is only about a fortnight since the letters were posted, thirty-two dollars and forty cents has already been received and another thirty-two dollars promised. The Lord has told us that if we are faithful we should see thousands gathered into the church on this island of the sea. We realize that "the hastening time is upon us." The Lord will do his part in this great work if every Saint will do his. Should any of your readers feel disposed to help the Melbourne Branch in this connection, Bro. W. Mackie, of 30 Dover Street, Richmond, Victoria, Australia, will be pleased to receive any help, no matter how small.

Bush fires and drought have played havoc with New South Wales, and cost of living has gone up to a very high rate. Chaff at the present time is realizing one hundred ninety-seven dollars and ninety-six cents per ton. This is about three times the usual price. What little rain we have had has been principally coastal.

My prayer is that God will abundantly bless his people, and especially the missionaries who are laboring here, and that they may be instrumental in bringing many honest ones to a knowledge of the truth and that his children may be more firmly united and strengthened in the one faith. I love to see the good work go on, and we should take hold of it firmly and go on and on.

Yours for Zion's redemption and glory,

F. HAWORTH.

TALOGA, Oklahoma, September 13.

Editors Herald: After our reunion at Dover, ending August 18, I went to Geary, traveling in buggy, preaching by the way, wife traveling with me; preached two weeks at Geary on streets; good interest. Went southeast to Nicely, where we left many very much interested last spring, but interest seems to have died out, and all so busy in thrashing and haying that we preached over Sunday, returned to Geary, preached on streets until next Sunday, then to Nicely, preached twice on Sunday, baptized three, returned to Geary on Monday.

Elder Powell, who is a practicing physician in Geary, but whose family lives at Nicely, was to preach there the next Sunday; and Bro. James Yates, who is living in Geary with family, was to go to Nicely the next Sunday. Those baptized at Nicely were promising members of the Baptist Church; have all sent for Ensign. We returned home to Dewey County last week. Came here to county-seat, first of week, intending to preach on street, when a man opened his house and I am preaching therein. He sends for the Ensign. I go to visit his father-in-law to-day in the county, who is a First-day Advent preacher. Seventh-day Advents held two-week meeting in tent here of late, and are to return Monday. They have some interested here, whom they are to visit on their return, among them the family of Bro. James Vrooman, whose brother, Elder Frank Vrooman, left the Saints last fall, and has tried hard to get them out. Bro. James, wife, and eighteen-year-old son, who have been in the church but a short time, heard but very little preaching, and the Advents made the Sabbath so plain to them that they are to visit and show them all about the "Sabbath of the Lord," and "the Pope's Sabbath."

I preached one night on, "Why we reject the Jewish Sabbath;" and one on, "Why we keep the first day," and they and others see the truth and are rejoicing in it. Bro. Vrooman is going to invite his neighbors into his house to hear them expound the Sabbath, and I will be present, and will then be asked to state my reasons for rejecting the Sabbath. They being unacquainted with me, will speak freely, no doubt, and I hope good may come by our reasons for honoring the "Lord's day." Think we may go back to Nicely in October. Think a branch should be organized there, as there are seventeen members in a fifteen-mile circuit, an elder, and good material for other officers. I feel sure that if a branch had been organized there last spring and properly cared for, near a dozen would have been added to them, who were talking of baptism then. But not a meeting was held there since I left in August.

D. S. CRAWLEY.

MANCHESTER, Texas, September 15.

Editors Herald: Bro. Henson and myself are striving to get the gospel before the people in this country. We have been busy holding meetings all the summer. Have had the pleasure of leading some noble men and women into the waters of baptism; but when I look out over the country and see the vast amount of people, and when I see how few people accept the gospel, I ask myself the question, When will Israel become great? I can only think it will be when the Lord will give his servants a greater endowment. To this end we ought all to pray, in order that we may do the work which the Lord has called us to do.

There is another feature in the gospel, and that is to take care of the Saints after they have been brought into the gospel. It does no good to go over the world and gather the people in the gospel, and then leave them to drift back in the world. We Saints down here in Northeastern Texas and Choctaw District have seen the results of branches not being properly looked after, and I think that is the reason the Lord has appointed certain men over his work. I visited one branch this year that had not met in branch capacity for about two years; and now that same branch in the last four months has built a beautiful church house, and is moving out on the line of duty.

I know of another branch that is in a bad condition. This affects the whole district, and to some extent is hindering the progress of the work. Such ought not to be. God has given his church a grand law, and that law ought to be enforced.

We want a high priest to preside over this district, and I pray by the time we meet at Wilburton, Indian Territory, on the 5th of December, in district conference, as it is the meeting to elect officers, that provision will be made for us to have and elect a high priest to look after the work. The district is large and will require all the president's time to look after the work in the district.

I think if we will act wisely, and faithfully discharge our duties, this district in the future will have thousands to sing the songs of Zion and to represent the gospel.

Your brother,

E. A. ERWIN.

PINE, Colorado, September 17.

Editors Herald: I am still in the faith of the gospel and trying to do all I can to advance the glorious cause of the Master.

It afforded me much pleasure to attend the last General Conference, it being seven or eight years since I had the pleasure of so doing. Indeed, I need not say it was one of the grandest conferences ever held—to me at least—and if ever there was a day of Pentecost, we had one there. I feel to thank the Lord that he is mindful of his children, and does not forget to answer when they call upon his most holy name in "faith believing, nothing doubting."

I left Lamoni April 19, for Tabor, Iowa, to see my brother George and family, and while there preached at the Elm Creek Schoolhouse twice, and blessed one child; then moved on down to Thurman on May 4, and occupied the church, but on account of rain only held one meeting. I was made happy and comfortable at our beloved Bishop Leeka's home. He was not present, but I had a good visit with his family, and found them feeling strong in the faith. My next move was to Nebraska City, where I met an old friend, Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, likewise his family, and Uncle Mark with his family. I visited about all of the families of Saints in the city; preached twice on Sunday, May 11, and had good congregations. The Saints seemed well pleased. I left them feeling good. I also attended one prayer-meeting there; met our beloved Bro. Caffall, on his way to Brownville.

On the 13th I went to Wray, Colorado, and attended a wedding, where two happy young persons were made one. From there I went to Pine, to see a very sick daughter, Sr. Sarah Dark, who had been at the point of death, but through the prayers of the Saints her life was spared, and she has so thoroughly recovered as to be able to do her own work, although at one time it was feared she would be a cripple for life. While at Pine, I preached in the Methodist church, and attended one meeting of the Methodist preacher's. I assisted him in his services.

Sunday, June 1, I occupied the Methodist church on Elk Creek, and at Conifer Schoolhouse at night. On June 3 I blessed one child, and on the 6th went to Denver; attended meetings there; preached once, and administered to two sick. The 11th found me at "Ni Wot" where I was domiciled at Bro. and Sr. Hutchins' for about ten days, preached eight times, and held one prayer and sacrament meeting; administered to one sick. On the 28th returned to Conifer; preached on Sunday, 29th.

July 5 baptized one young lady; preached at the latter place again on the 6th, and the 7th went again to Denver, and from there to Cheyenne. Not finding any of the Saints there, I went on to Egbert, and found Bro. Frank Limpus with his mother, firm in the faith, and alive in the work, because they keep themselves posted by taking the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves, besides the Sunday-school Quarterly. This is as it should be. Stayed with them three days; preached on Sunday to a very attentive audience. The people were well pleased. The 15th found me at a place called Wheatland, about one hundred miles north of Cheyenne. Here I found two lonely sisters, Mary Chute and her daughter, Sr. Cathin. The former is the wife of Bro. George W. Shute, formerly of Kansas. While there I got the use of the schoolhouse and preached two discourses to small congregations. On the 23d I went from Wheatland to Cassa to visit one Mr. Ragan, whose wife was once a member of the church in her youthful days, but had drifted away from the church, but not from the faith. They received me very kindly and treated me well. I spent two days with them talking and visiting; still they were not ready to be baptized. They took me in a buggy over to "Gurnsey," a distance of fourteen miles, and there I found Bro. Sampson and his family, Sr. Peterson, the mother of Mrs. Ragan, and also Sr. Alice Roberts, who is a sister of the latter. I found a hearty welcome with those few scattered Saints. We succeeded in getting the use of all the churches in town—two; one a Congregationalist, and the other a Methodist. Preached twice in each church. The people were well pleased, and also the minister, so we made friends to the cause, and removed some prejudice from the minds of the people.

I met Doctor Webster formerly of Independence, Missouri, whose wife formerly belonged to the church. He was well acquainted with the heads of the church: Brn. Joseph Smith, his son-in-law, Joseph Luff, F. G. Pitt, etc., and also brother Henry. I had a splendid visit with him and he graced my audience with his presence, and did not forget that I could not travel alone on air, as did also the kind Saints who remembered my wants, for which may the Lord truly bless them.

The 30th found me at Sterling, Colorado, where I spent a few days with Bro. G. E. McConley and family. They expressed themselves as pleased to see me, after an absence of seven years. From there I went to Wray to attend our district conference which convened August 16 and 17. While there I preached twice, blessed one child, and had the pleasure of meeting our Church Recorder, Henry A. Stebbins. We enjoyed a good conference, and all went home feeling well repaid for coming. Since the conference I have made a visit to the Highland Branch, which is located in the eastern part of this State. I spent two weeks there preaching six times, also attending one prayer and sacrament meeting. Blessed one child and administered to the sick. The Saints were cheered and comforted. So the good work moves along in this mission, to which we form a part.

North Missouri Reunion.

The tenth annual reunion of North Missouri was held September 5 to 14 inclusive, in the beautiful pasture of Bro. Benjamin Dice, about one mile southeast of Stewartville.

Officers of reunion: T. T. Hinderks, president, Charles P. Faul, secretary and treasurer. Reunion committee: T. T. Hinderks, Charles P. Faul, A. W. Head, B. J. Dice, and A. St. Lewis. Bro. Wm. T. Ross, chorister, and Sr. Carrie Lewis, organist. A squad of police on duty to keep order in the camp.

The tabernacle and camp was on a hill facing the north, mid the forest trees of oak, hickory, walnut, etc. All told there were twenty-seven tents, and two wagons occupied as dwelling-places.

To try our faith and patience, as also our health, there were rain, wind, frost, and cold, but the Saints were equal to the task, and were ever cheerful, so that not a service was missed. But little sickness experienced, and the appointed means gave blessing and relief to the sufferers.

OAKLAND, California, September 4.

Bro. C. P. Faul and the Glorious North Missouri Reunion, Greeting: While here in sunny California, I am transposed in memory to the enchanted spot above all other spots, which has afforded some of the greenest spots, in my spotted life—the grove of your assembly, where I see your happy faces, in your social camp life, and hear the "thunder of the word," and the "two-edged" testimonies. While no doubt there are strange faces there, yet methinks I see the happy patriarchal face of Bro. Temme, the "essential fixture;" the happy countenance of genial "Charley;" the all-around busy, not-afraid-of-work, happy A. W., who always stands as the Head in reunion work; also we see Ben with his steady, humble, unpretentious efforts, but "where duty calls" is always there; I see "Ephraim" seated in his chair at the door of his tent, like Abraham of old, awaiting the fulfillment of the promises made to Israel, when the prodigal shall return and be clothed in the best robe—all right "Ephraim," "the strength of Israel will not lie nor repent" (1 Sam. 15: 29); I see also an "Andrew" filling a vacancy made by the removal of one of old Far West's most ardent admirers; others I see also, each happy in the gathering together, but I see vacancies, and my ear fails to catch familiar voices in song and social chat. That "Father of singers" is not there, whose voice I have often heard in the beautiful song,

"And when on earth I breathe no more,
The prayer oft mixed with tears before,
I'll sing upon a happier shore;
Thy will be done, Thy will be done."

Bro. John now sings upon a happier shore. Another face is not seen, and a voice not heard who delighteth in gathering around the bonfire at night and singing, "And when the battle's over, we shall wear the crown"—then kneel and pay a tribute of thanks to the source of all good, for the joys of the day. His voice is still heard in the north, neither hushed by death, nor by luke-warmness—faithful T. W.

Rejoice, dear Saints, sing praises to Jehovah, proclaim his name aloud for his blessings to you; cultivate the spirit of contentment; your lot is among the most favored; plant your roof-tree; make for yourselves a home, and make it an holy place by faithful living. Do not be disturbed by any flowery report of flowery California as though God had made a mistake in locating Zion. I can assure you no mistake has been made, and "Zion shall not be moved"—the chief reason being there is no necessity for it.

I greet you gladly and rejoice with you. The greatest hindrance to my complete joy is that I can not be with you in person. Peace be with you and all the Israel of God.

Yours in Christ,

MR. AND MRS. J. M. TERRY.

Preaching was by Elders Joseph A. Tanner, Alfred White, Joseph R. Lambert, E. L. Kelley, A. H. Parsons, Ammon White, Wm. E. Haden, I. N. White, Noah Karahoo, R. May, R. S. Salyards, and R. M. Elvin. The local ministers were active and alert in assisting, and in charge of prayer-meetings. The Religio workers held a number of meetings, as did also the Sabbath-school, and Saturday the 13th was children's day. Nature smiled 'neath the genial sun, and both youth and age seemed full of cheer and thankfulness. The day most pleasant, attendance large, zeal and earnestness in all the exercises. The Bynum brass band, of Stewartville, came out both forenoon and afternoon and gave zest and delight to the children.

During the reunion seven were baptized, and thereby a Solomon was added.

At the business session it was decided to hold a reunion in 1903, and the same ground was chosen, and the same committee to be in charge. Receipts, $242; expenses, $240. There was usual good order and attention throughout the services, and the speakers will not soon forget the ringing cry of: "Here Watch! Here Watch!!" and the ever-jolly, everywhere-present Charlie.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Wisconsin Reunion.

Convened Saturday, August 30, at 7.30 p. m., at the farm of O. N. Dutton, five miles north of Janesville. An organization was effected as follows: W. A. McDowell and W. P. Robinson, presidents, M. F. Gowell, secretary, W. P. Robinson, treasurer, Jasper O. Dutton, chorister, Mrs. Madge Blackman and Mrs. Henry Woodstock, organists, T. W. Chatburn, policeman. At the inception of the reunion the attendance was small, but increased daily until the close. The regular routine of services each day was: Prayer and testimony meeting 9 a. m., preaching 10.30 a. m., and 2 and 7.30 p. m. Additional to the regular order which was carried out, the Religio came in for representation on Sunday, August 31, at 4 p. m., with a Book of Mormon lesson taught by Sr. Audrey Hadley of the Janesville Branch. This branch is widely scattered, but the Home Class, of which Bro. J. O. Dutton is superintendent, meets twice a month and is doing a grand and good work for and among the young people, all being considered young, who belong to the class which now includes the membership of the branch. A further Religio exercise was held on Thursday, September 4, at 4 p. m., the feature of which was an interesting paper and talk by Sr. Marie Clark on American Archæology and the Book of Mormon.

Another special service, a mother's meeting, was held Wednesday, September 3, at 3.30 p. m. A splendid spirit prevailed at this profitable meeting.

The reunion proper ended with the Friday night (September 5) preaching service, which was especially for the children, Bro. F. G. Pitt being the speaker. On Saturday morning, the 6th, Bro. F. M. Cooper administered the ordinance of baptism to four candidates.

Conference business of the Southern Wisconsin District had the right of way for the remainder of the day until evening, when an entertainment under the auspices of the young people of the district was given. A fine program, moral and elevating in its tone, was carried out.

On Sunday morning, the 7th, from 9 to 10.30 a. m., confirmation, sacrament, and prayer and testimony occupied the time. The Spirit was present to a marked degree in this meeting.

Elders F. M. Cooper, F. G. Pitt, A. J. Keck, C. H. Burr, W. A. McDowell, T. W. Chatburn, A. L. Whiteaker, J. E. Wildermuth of the missionary force were present, and did the preaching. The dining tent on the cooperative plan was a success. Bro. and Sr. F. Richards, of Madison, assisted by Sr. Stevenson and others, managed the culinary department to the satisfaction of all. The cost of meals was made to regular boarders ten cents, to transients fifteen cents. Larger patronage would have reduced the rate, or would make the rate still lower another year. The committee, W. A. McDowell, W. P. Robinson, and C. C. Hoague worked indefatigably to make the reunion the success that it was. Bro. O. N. Dutton's house, and even barn, were, ere the meeting closed, taxed to the limit to make room for those who had not made provision for camping, including the visiting elders.

Harmony, order, peace, love, joy, and good will prevailed throughout. Inspiration characterized most of the services to a satisfactory, and some to a marked degree.

It was voted to hold the next reunion at East Delavan. As a committee J. O. Dutton, W. A. McDowell, W. P. Robinson, C. C. Hoague, and C. H. Burr were chosen.

The influences of good to the enjoyment and strengthening of all, were such that a larger attendance and a still better time may be safely predicted for another year. M. F. Gowell.

Crumley; Priests D. E. Stitt and J. R. Clark; Teacher J. H. Hunt; Deacon S. N. B. Hunt. C. E. Crumley reported as committee appointed to confer with Bishop on matter of the old accounts of agent before district was organized. An agreeable conclusion was reached and conference approved his work. The Bishop's agent's report, owing to unfortunate circumstances not easily controlled, did not arrive in time. A communication to district president, from Bro. Alma Morris, Bishop's agent, in which he expressed the desire to be released from his office, was presented. It was moved that his resignation be accepted and that his report be received by the district president, to be audited by him and the incoming agent. This action was approved by Bishop Hilliard. The matter of organizing a district Sunday-school association was considered and postponed until next conference. C. E. Crumley reported the purchase of a district tent for missionary work. Arthur Allen, custodian of tent funds, reported: Cost of tent $50.25, cost of seating, lighting, transportation, etc., $14.87, or total expense, $65.11. Donations received, $62.45, making balance due A. Allen, $2.66. A collection was taken and this balance paid, leaving $3.95 in tent fund. A motion passed establishing a district tent fund, with district president as custodian, said fund to be used for moving tent, seating, lighting, etc. A collection of $3 was also taken up for district treasury. C. E. Crumley was chosen district president and R. A. Cribbins secretary and treasurer. Bro. N. T. Chapman of Hood River was recommended to Bishop as agent for Oregon. Bishop Hilliard announced that he would authorize him to proceed in that office. C. E. Crumley was sustained as district historian. Conference adjourned to meet at Condon subject to call of district president.

Ohio.—Convened at Creola, Ohio, September 13, at 10 a. m., with U. W. Greene and S. J. Jeffers presiding, J. W. Goodrich and H. E. Moler secretaries. Ministry reporting: H. E. Moler, V. M. Statement.

We wish to inform the Saints and friends of education that we are sending out a circular of "Special Announcement" of Graceland College. Have mailed packages to some one in each branch of the church. The parties receiving them will confer a favor upon Graceland by distributing these circulars to the members of the church and to those interested in an advanced education. To those who may be considering the sending of their children to some college, we can assure you that we have procured a strong corps of competent teachers. Saints, give us your aid by sending us students. The demands for fuel made by the near approach of winter, and the wages of professors, compel us to request help of you to meet the running expenses. We, your servants, ask that you furnish the wherewith, so that we need not run into more debt. Hear and answer.

On duty,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

Change of Bishop's Agent for Oregon District.

Notice is hereby given that at the late conference of the Oregon District, the former agent, Bro. Alma Morris, resigned, and Bro. Thomas Chapman, of Hood River, Oregon, was recommended for appointment by the conference. Pursuant to said recommendation, concurred in by Counselor G. H. Hilliard, who was also present at the conference, Bro. Thos. Chapman, of Hood River, Oregon, is hereby duly appointed Bishop's agent for the district of Oregon, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Bro. Chapman is authorized to receive and receipt for funds and perform the duties usually incident to the work of a Bishop's agent. We also take pleasure in extending thanks to Bro. Alma Morris for the efficient manner in which he has discharged his duty as agent in the district in the past, and wish him success in other duties.

In behalf of the Bishopric,

E. L. KELLEY,

Presiding Bishop.

Notices.

All Saints, as well as the Prayer Union, are requested by Bro. and Sr. Bartles, of Lawton, Oklahoma, to earnestly offer up supplications unto God for the restoration of their son, Henry Herman, to a sound mind and health. The young man's affliction dates from boyhood, when an accident caused a derangement of the mind, causing spells of insanity. The father and mother have faith that if all Saints will humbly petition God in his behalf, the affliction will be relieved. Please remember this afflicted one and petition God in his behalf. S. S. Smith.

Notice is hereby given that the first session of the priesthood meetings will be held at St. Marys, Saturday, 8 a. m., October 18. It is expected that papers bearing on important topics, such as "How to build up a spiritual branch," and "Obstacles in the way of missionary work and how to overcome them" will be presented and read by Brn. Buschlin, Seaton, Fligg, Shields, Gregory, Knisley, and A. E. Mortimer. The local ministry are particularly requested to be present. R. C. Longhurst. D. MacGregor.

The Mt. Grove Branch of the Southern Missouri District having been disorganized, I am now prepared to issue letters of removal to any or all who were members thereof, upon application and name of branch to which you may wish to unite, the nearest and most convenient, as per General Conference resolution. J. C. Chrestensen, district secretary, Beaver, Douglas County, Missouri.

Died.

GRAVES.—Anna Graves, wife of Elder George H. Graves was born in Fayetteville, New York, October 23, 1859, died September 15, 1902, being 42 years, 10 months, 24 days old. Was baptized by Elder J. A. McIntosh, in the city of St. Thomas, Canada, in the year 1879, into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Her afflictions were borne with commendable fortitude. She leaves husband, mother, 3 sisters, and 1 brother to mourn. Funeral sermon by M. H. Bond, assisted by Elders Strange and J. H. Lake.

JENSEN.—At the home of her daughter, Sr. Mary C. Dice, Stewartville, Missouri, September 5, 1902, Mrs. Catherine Jensen, formerly Catherine Gregerson. She had been a member of the Reorganized Church since 1877, and was interested in her life in doing good. She was born in Tondern, Germany, April 13, 1815; married to Andrew Jensen, February 10, 1839, at Hogel, Schleswig, and had lived a widow for 45 years. Three children survive her, all living in Dekalb County, Missouri. Sermon during the Stewartville reunion. Brn. J. R. Lambert, T. T. Hinderks, and E. L. Kelley having charge.

BLAKESLEE.—On the 8th of September, 1902, at her home in Galien, Michigan, Sr. Lydia Blakeslee, widow of the late Bishop George A. Blakeslee. Sr. Blakeslee was sick but about 24 hours, and passed away quickly and quietly without a struggle. Sr. Blakeslee, formerly Miss Lydia Alcott, was born in Lane End, Staffordshire, England, October 20, 1832, and came to America with her parents, landing in New York, May 21, 1841. She was married to George A. Blakeslee at Voree, Wisconsin, February 13, 1848. United with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Amboy, Illinois, April 7, 1859. All of her surviving children, one son, and six daughters, together with 14 grandchildren were present at the funeral, which was attended by a large number of old neighbors and friends. Sermon by E. L. Kelley, assisted by Warren E. Peak.

NISSEN.—At the family residence, 307 Lincoln Street, Portland, Oregon, September 8, Lloyd Murray, second son of John and Cenie Nissen, aged seventeen years. Interment at Bozeman, Montana, September 12.

FOWLER.—Sr. Pearl M. Fowler, maiden name Williams, died at her mother's home in St. Joseph, Missouri, September 13, 1902. Born September 23, 1877, at Hartford, Michigan. Lived at Lamoni, Iowa, nearly all her girlhood days. Married twice, and was the mother of two children who died in infancy. A husband, widowed mother, brothers, and sisters are left to mourn. Funeral services conducted by Elder M. Shaw.

KELSO.—At his home in Red River County, Texas, July 9, 1902, Arch Kelso, from heart trouble, aged 67 years, 4 months, 14 days. He was baptized by E. A. Erwin, May 11, 1899. He tried to live a Christian life. His house was a home for the elders and he always did all he could to make them comfortable. He leaves a wife, 11 children, and a host of friends to mourn. He was a loving husband, kind father and friend, and a noble servant of God.

MCCORMICK.—Virginia B. McCormick was born July 4, 1856, at Wheeling, West Virginia, died at Bethesda, Ohio, September 10, 1902. Was baptized by Elder James Craig at Lampsville, Belmont County, Ohio, June 19, 1876. Funeral services at the house by D. L. Allen. She leaves husband and 5 children to mourn their loss.

RICE.—Amos Rice was born at Kingsville, Ohio, September 16, 1832, died at Higbee, Missouri, September 2, 1902, being 69 years, 11 months, 17 days old. Was married to Sr. Armet Call in 1855, and to this union 6 children were born. He became identified with the Reorganized Church in 1881, and was afterwards ordained a teacher. Since that time he has borne a faithful testimony to the divinity of this latter-day work. Wife and 3 children are left to mourn. Funeral services in charge of Elder Wm. Chapman, sermon by Priest Wm. Kelso.

HAWLEY.—Albert Marion Hawley was born December 25, 1856, in Bexar County, Texas. He came to California in 1884, and left San Francisco for Seattle, Washington, May 24, 1902, where he died September 4, 1902. He leaves a wife and six children in San Francisco.

CORNISH.—John Cornish was born in England, December, 25, 1823, and died at his home in Garfield, Clare County, Michigan, August 11, 1902. He was baptized by Elder A. Barr, at Lakeport, Michigan, November 21, 1889. He served in the Union Army during the Rebellion. He leaves to mourn a wife, daughter, and three sons, one of whom is Elder J. J. Cornish. Funeral sermon by Levi Phelps.

SCOTT.—Susie Lizzie Scott, daughter of J. M. Scott, was born February 7, 1890, near Borden, Clark County, died of typhoid fever August 29, 1902, at the age of 12 years, 6 months, 22 days. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, June 30, 1901. She endured her sickness without murmuring or complaining. She leaves a father and mother, 3 sisters, and 3 brothers who deeply feel their sad loss of a loving little daughter and sister. Funeral sermon by J. W. Metcalf.

HUNTSMAN.—Wm. Huntsman was born in Ohio, May 23, 1822, and died August 25, 1902, at Emerson, Iowa, where he had resided since 1852. Eight children, seven of whom were present at the funeral, are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father. His companion preceded him to the better land twenty-two years ago. Our deceased brother was baptized twelve years ago at Emerson by Elder Henry Kemp and died in the faith. A large concourse of friends and neighbors were present at the funeral services which were held in the Baptist church, August 27, at 2 p. m., conducted by Elder D. Hougas.

The October "Arena."

Two important additions to its board of associate editors are announced in The Arena for October—the Reverend Adolph Roeder and Mr. Carl Vrooman. The former contributes a remarkable article on "The Civic Oversoul," which will especially interest students of psychology. The opening paper is by Doctor R. Warren Conant, of the Chicago Bureau of Charities, who gives a most interesting description of "Anarchism at Close Quarters." Professor John Ward Stimson has a lengthy but valuable essay on "The Democracy of Shelley and Keats," and a most important feature is Leonora Beck Ellis's article on "The Movement to Restrict Child Labor." James Allman considers "Russia as a Social Factor," and B. O. Flower contributes the second paper of his series on "The Divine Quest." Eugene Del Mar discusses "Individual Freedom," and W. E. Copeland describes the "Coöperative Brotherhood" at Burley, Washington. "How to Meet the Trust Problem Through Coöperation" is most ably treated by George F. Washburn in a "conversation." "Saved by a Panther" is the title of a thrilling story by W. J. Colville. Editor Flower's departments of "Topics of the Times" and "Books of the Day" are of more than usual interest. Editor McLean announces that Archdeacon Glover, of Oregon, will contribute an article on "The Personal Power of the President" to the November number.

Sometimes a plant is on the sick list, but we can find no good cause for its unhealthy condition. In such a case, I would advise a sort of starvation treatment for a time, with water just enough to keep the plant from dying. No matter if it does lose its leaves. By and by, in many instances, it will show a disposition to grow, and then it can gradually be brought back to ordinary treatment by giving more water. I presume that the cause of ill health is an unnatural condition of the soil. Allowing it to dry out corrects the evil, whatever it may be, and makes it possible for the roots of the plant to secure proper nutriment from it, after a time. It is a good plan, however, to repot such a plant in fresh soil as soon as it begins to grow.—Eben E. Rexford, in Home and Flowers.

The Galveston News of September 1 contains a synopsis of the commerce of the port of Galveston for the trade year just closed, and shows in spite of the unprecedented hurricane which visited Galveston in 1900 that business is being conducted on a greater scale than ever before. Galveston's total cotton receipts for 1901-02 were 2,090,710 bales, against 2,177,983 bales for 1900-01. Galveston's bank clearings for the year just closed amounted to $382,238,800, compared with $360,369,000 for the preceding year. During the season of 1901-02 the total shipping business of the port of Galveston was valued at $260,837,354, against $246,567,247 for the preceding year, showing an increase of $14,270,107. The resumption of business on such a scale would have been impossible if Galveston were not the most accessible and economical port for an enormous traffic. Galveston is the natural outlet for more than one fourth of the area of the United States. The county of Galveston has voted to issue bonds to the amount of $1,500,000 for the purpose of securing funds to build a concrete seawall around the gulf front of the city. This wall is to be 17 feet above mean high tide. It is to be 17 feet thick at the base, with a piling foundation, the depth of which will be 30 to 50 feet, thus insuring the wall against undermining. The top of the wall will be five feet thick. Filling behind the wall to its full length will extend back 150 feet and will be paved with bricks, so as to give more strength to the wall and at the same time afford a magnificent driveway. The people of Galveston have already subscribed for over $1,000,000 worth of the bonds, and the county is now advertizing for bids, to be opened on September 5, when the contract will be awarded and the work pushed to completion. It is estimated that in 15 to 18 months the wall will be completed, thus positively insuring Galveston's safety against the fiercest hurricane yet known to mankind.

The State Legislature has donated to Galveston a portion of the State tax for a period of two years, for the purpose of raising the grade of the city. The next Legislature will be asked to continue this donation of part of the State tax for an additional period of 15 years. This request has already been indorsed by the Democratic State convention.

Educators and thoughtful citizens generally have been discussing with much interest one of the declarations made by the National Educational Association at its late annual convention. It has reference to the study of the Bible as literature rather than as theology in the public schools. While the question is not new, the formal utterance upon it of a representative body of educators is deemed significant. It runs as follows:

"It is apparent that familiarity with the English Bible as a masterpiece of literature is rapidly decreasing among the pupils in our schools. This is the direct result of a conception which regards the Bible as a theological book merely, and thereby leads to its exclusion from the schools of some States as a subject of reading and study. We hope and ask for such a change of public sentiment in this regard as will permit and encourage the English Bible, now honored by name in many school laws and State constitutions, to be read and studied as a literary work of the highest and purest type, side by side with the poetry and prose which it has inspired and in large part formed."

Doctor Butler, the president of Columbia University, delivered a spirited address at the conference in which the same suggestion was elaborately argued. Doctor Butler pointed out that without a knowledge of the Bible it is impossible to appreciate the finest and richest literature of the English-speaking nations, or even to understand the basic elements of Anglo-Saxon civilization. He contended that the Bible has been driven from the schools, and largely from the homes, of the American people in consequence of "sectarian bickerings and unprofitable disputations over interpretation of isolated passages," and he pleaded for the subordination of all minor differences to the great object of restoring the Scriptures, a well of English undefiled, noble, impressive, and stately, to the public schools and the minds of the growing generation.

While the force of this plea is generally recognized, several lay editors express the fear that the proposal is impracticable, since it implies that the Bible is viewed by most Christians primarily as literature. Agnostics, it is said, might agree to have the Scriptures studied as mere literature, but would this be approved by the conscience of earnest and devout believers? Would not, it is asked, the effect of such treatment of the Bible be prejudicial to religion in that it would familiarize the pupils with the idea that the Bible was nothing but literature?

These are serious objections, but it is not clear that the present policy is less inimical to religion. The subject merits the careful consideration of the educators of the country.—From "Highways and Byways," in The Chautauquan Magazine for September.

TROUBLE IN "ZION."

According to a statement made in the Inter-Ocean, of Chicago, for September 26, 1902, it would appear that the financial affairs of John Alexander Dowie are in somewhat of a critical condition. Mr. Dowie has been collecting in various ways and in large amounts and has invested in various transactions, ostensibly for the benefit of the "Christian Catholic Church" as a body; but it would appear that the enterprises in which these moneys have been invested are in the name and under the control of John Alexander Dowie.

It must needs be that he should have more than usual business sagacity to avoid the common failures that attach to business ventures, especially where the amounts involved are so large that ruin may come in a day. Dowie's methods have involved the expenditure of money almost without stint, and he seems to have the faculty of calling upon his followers to meet any apparent necessity to avoid embarrassment. These calls, if long continued, would necessarily weaken the individual membership if complied with, and hence weaken the whole body. It is no wonder then to us that he should have fallen into financial distress.

We may hope for the sake of consistency that the story of his embarrassment may not be so unfortunately correct as stated in the Inter-Ocean. It is stated that the inhabitants of this modern Zion along the shore of Lake Michigan are under obligation to purchase their supplies from general stores of which Mr. Dowie is the ostensible proprietor. When it is considered that Mr. Dowie has put no capital into this Zionistic movement except his stock as a religious leader, the ordinary observer can not help but wonder how he has carried his enterprises along so far as he has. But it is known that hundreds have put in moneys for the good of the movement for which they have no possible hope of ever receiving a return except it may be some spiritual benefit which they may derive from their association. But these benefits are not assets in the business world, and as building materials, food products, and the goods, wares, merchandise which are necessary for the sustenance of the people must be largely derived from contact with the outer and business world, it can be but a question of time when the lines will be sharply drawn, and if Mr. Dowie does not meet his obligations there can be but one end to his financial career. Should the tide once turn against him and the general character of his movement be found to be the personal advancement and laudation of John Alexander Dowie, his followers must necessarily lose confidence in him and disintegration will be rapid.

If we may credit the article in the Inter-Ocean the credit of Mr. Dowie is already suffering among the wholesale dealers in Chicago; and this can be but the beginning of the end unless Mr. Dowie's followers are sufficiently forehanded as well as being willing to rally to the falling fabric of the Zion movement now being carried on in Illinois.

As Elijah II Mr. Dowie may be a spiritual leader and might have continued his spiritual effort for an indefinite time, but when he essayed to be a millionaire financier upon the contributions of his followers, he has certainly undertaken a role that but few men have ever successfully carried on to any great extent without disaster of some sort following after.

For the sake of those who have been willing devotees heretofore, who must suffer with him in the losses to the general community, if it is possible that there can be losses to the body from losses incurred by Mr. Dowie, we hope that the apprehensive article which we have read may not be correct, but that Mr. Dowie may be successful in overcoming his present disability.

We are impressed with the thought that if any such movement had been undertaken in the Reorganization, and similar exhibitions of personal desire for aggrandizement had been manifested by those having spiritual and temporal charge in the church, it would have met rebuke at a very early stage of its development. It is therefore a pleasant thought, looking back over the history of forty-two years and better, to know that we are personally but very little better off in this world's goods than when we began work in the interest of the church, and have neither bank stock, large merchantile institutions, nor extensive landed interests over which we hold personal control.

It may be that the overshadowing sentiment, "In temporal things he shall not have strength," has had its influence in preventing the rise of an ambition to control in such affairs; and it is certain that the disastrous failures of similar ventures in the past, passing under our observation, have been a constant warning against doing business upon other people's means gathered under the veil of spiritual standing and value. We have always known that the business world did not deal in spiritual assets and that such were not quoted as of marketable value.

We shall await the issue of Mr. Dowie's trouble with considerable curiosity, and with some regret if he fails, as each and every such failure tends to weaken the possible success of other efforts made in behalf of the people. We believe Mr. Dowie's claim to be Elijah is a mistake and more likely to produce failure than to promote success.

So far as we read the history of Elijah in the Bible he did not parade through the streets of the populous cities of the past in a fine coach, splendid horses, attended by guards and liveried footmen, nor live as the wealthy live; but that when he had finished his work upon earth he was granted the chariot of fire with celestial outriders as attendants, and started on his heavenly journey, leaving a mantle of authority to his Elisha.

We admired Mr. Dowie for the help he gave the distressed and afflicted, so long as this continued; but we have been fearful ever since he assumed the role of Elijah that the end would be disastrous to him and unfortunate for his followers.

IN REGARD TO SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

We are sometimes met with the proposition urged by some that Latter Day Saints ought not to attend union or sectarian Sunday-schools, either in places where the Saints have and control a school, or in places where there are none. Some have had serious objections to urge against any persons belonging to the church attending any Sunday-school other than those controlled by the church officers. In some instances this objection has gone so far that it has been applied to members who have opened up their private houses for the purpose of holding Sunday-school with their own children and the children of their neighbors as scholars.

We believe such objections to be unfortunate and out of place, and we are clearly of the opinion that members of the church should be at liberty to hold preaching meetings, prayer-meetings, and Sunday-schools in their own private houses, where there are no public places agreed upon by the schools themselves and those who may desire to attend preaching and prayer services. There is a clause in the law which states that men should of their own selves strive to bring to pass much righteousness, for the power is in them so to do. The Bible is not taught in the public schools, nor is any form of religion allowed to be taught in the public schools by any denomination. If our faith is what we believe it to be it is legitimate that members of the church should teach their children and their neighbors' children, if opportunity permits, the principles of the doctrine of Christ as the church understands them, and that they may do this according to the opportunities afforded them, in public buildings or in private houses; and that, too, without the unnecessary interference of any of the officers of the church, whether local or traveling—always provided that they do not interfere with local organizations already existing for the same purposes.

We believe the Sunday-school movement to be of great value in teaching the children the principles of the doctrine and the faith of the church; and we believe that any persons qualified to interest and teach the children may engage in such Sunday-school work.

MILES B. MANN DEAD.

The following obituary was handed us. The paper it is clipped from we do not know, but presume it is some Illinois paper:

Squire Miles B. Mann is dead at Carthage, Illinois, aged 89. He was prominently connected with early Hancock County history, having settled in Carthage in 1839. He was business partner of Frank B. Morrell, who was killed by Mormons in 1845. He witnessed the killing of Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet, in 1844.

Those acquainted with the early history of the church will remember that Worrell (not Morrell) was killed by a member of the sheriff's posse, the sheriff ordering the firing. Hence it is unfair to blame the "Mormons" for Worrell's death.

DEDICATION AT PISGAH.

There was a church building erected by the Saints and their friends at the new town of the ancient name of Pisgah, Harrison County, Iowa. This house was finished, ready for dedication this fall, and we were invited to attend and assist in the dedication of it to the work of the purpose of its erection. Accordingly, in company of Bro. R. C. Evans, of London, Ontario, we went to Pisgah, on Saturday, September 20, to be ready for the dedication services which were set to take place on the 21st. We found Brn. Charles Derry and Hans N. Hansen en route at Mondamin, on the 19th, whence we went to Pisgah in company.

Bro. R. C. Evans went to Moorhead, for services on Friday night, but came back to Pisgah on the morning of the 20th.

We were cordially received by Mr. Van Eaton and Sr. Van Eaton, she being a daughter of Bro. Derry—and were at home near the village.

At the hour set for the service Sunday morning, the house was full to standing room. Bro. Hans N. Hansen, missionary, was in charge. The opening prayer was by Bro. R. C. Evans, the sermon by Bro. Joseph Smith, dedicatory prayer by Bro. Charles Derry. The song service was by the Woodbine choir, Bro. Frank Hupp, in charge. It was very good.

The entire service was well received and will be followed by good results. Bro. R. C. Evans spoke at the afternoon service, at Pisgah, and went to Mondamin, eleven miles away, by team, with Bro. Wm. Coffman, of Sandy Point, and filled the evening appointment there. The Editor remained and filled the evening appointment at Pisgah. All three services were well attended.

The house thus dedicated is 28x48 feet in size, is well located, and is truly a pleasant and commodious house of worship. The cost, exclusive of volunteer labor, was $1,160. The volunteer labor was considerable, but could not well be estimated.

The committee were Brn. John W. Shearer, Joseph W. Lane, and Mr. Simpson Van Eaton, the husband of Sr. Pearl Van Eaton.

The gathering of means, the work done, money expended, furniture secured, were all accomplished in quietude of spirit, and harmony of action, and makes credit due to the committee, the Saints, and their friends not of the church.

Bro. Joseph W. Lane has been looking after the spiritual well-being of the Saints in that immediate vicinity, and from the reports we heard he has been doing a good work faithfully and well. Bro. Derry has also been laboring there at times, and was to stay, and, in company with Bro. H. N. Hansen, occupy during the week following the dedication, weather and health permitting. He is seventy-six and feels the burden of increasing years.

REMARKABLE RECORD OF SEISMIC DISTURBANCES.

The New York Herald for September 7 contains an article telling of some of the most important volcanic eruptions and earthquakes in the past five months. In the article appears the following table of seismic phenomena:

DISTURBANCES OF EARTH'S INTERIOR MANIFESTED WITHIN FIVE MONTHS.

- April 10—News received of volcanic activity at Unalaska, Aleutian Islands.

June 8—News received of the eruption of Tacana, in Guatemala, accompanied by violent earthquakes, which razed many buildings in several towns. One thousand persons killed.

June 9—Columns of steam rise from Mount Rainier, in Alaska.

June 14—Discovery of slight elevation of localities in Pennsylvania.

June 14—Still another violent eruption of Mont Pelée.

June 15—Strong earthquake shocks in Sicily.

June 19—Mass of slime ejected from Pelée, practically destroying the town of Basse Pointe.

June 20—Disastrous earthquake shocks in Tyrol.

June 21—Volcano of Pichincha, in the Province of Manabi, in Ecuador, becomes active.

June 22—Violent earthquake shock at Cassano al Jonio, in the Department of Calabria, in Italy.

June 24—News received at San Francisco of the eruption of the volcano at Kilauea, near the City of Hilo, Island of Hawaii.

July 1—Earthquake shocks in Salonica, European Turkey, causing heavy loss of life and great damage to property. On the same day, also, earthquake shocks were felt simultaneously in twenty towns in Asia Minor, causing the collapse of many houses.

July 7—Large boulders and gases ejected from Tulsa, a small volcano in the Indian Territory.

July 7—Guvesne and Zelisova, in European Turkey, partially destroyed by an earthquake.

July 8—Tidal wave at New Orleans, Louisiana, forces salt water up the Harvey Canal, killing countless millions of fish.

July 8—Volcanoes of Miravallis and Ricond de la Vieja, in Costa Rica, reported to be in active eruption.

July 9—Severe earthquake shock at Bunder Abbas, Persia, doing much damage.

July 9—Three severe earthquake shocks at St. Vincent, Danish West Indies.

July 10, 11, 12—Loud detonations from Soufriere volcano.

July 11—Fresh eruption from Mont Pelée.

July 12—Violent earthquake shock in Caracas, damaging towns of Guarenas, Guatire, Valencia, and La Guayra.

July 17—Other severe earth quakings at Kingstown, St. Vincent, Danish West Indies.

July 27—Destructive earthquake shocks in California, doing much damage to property in Los Alamos, San Maria and Santa Barbara. Simultaneously a series of severe shocks was felt in Nebraska, the Dakotas, and Western Iowa, and did damage to property.

August 13 to 15—Island of Torishima, Japan, destroyed and 150 persons killed.

August 15—Mont Pelée begins another eruption.

August 21—Serious earthquake shocks in the Philippines.

August 30—Fresh eruption from La Soufriere.

August 30—Two thousand more killed by eruption of Mont Pelée, which destroyed villages of Morne Rouge and Ajoupa Bouillon.

August 30—Strong earthquake shock felt at Campano, in South America, accompanied by noise, heard along the whole Caribbean shore.

September 2—Heavy earthquake shock in Algiers.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Under date of September 21, writing from Dekalb, Illinois, F. M. Cooper says: "Our late conference at Chicago was both a pleasant and profitable gathering. Peace and unity prevailed."

Under date of September 22 U. W. Greene wrote to the First Presidency from Columbus, Ohio: "Good reports are coming in from nearly all the brethren, and our hearts are glad. About twenty-five baptisms the past month."

Bro. D. D. Babcock, in remitting money on renewal and noting change of address from Wilburton, Indian Territory, to Eufaula, Creek Indian Nation, writes: "I think to better my situation temporally and spiritually. Temporally, because of a good opportunity to farm, with a good prospect of presenting the gospel in that region which has had but little preaching done there. I am still in the faith, notwithstanding some severe trials in the past summer."

Bro. J. F. Grimes, writing from Pickering, Louisiana, September 22: "The work is progressing nicely in this field. Bro. Macrae and I are busy all the time. More calls than we can possibly fill. I never saw a field so ripe for the harvest. We closed our meeting near Collinsburg the 14th with good interest. Two baptized; others near the kingdom. I think some will be baptized when we return there. We began meetings at this place Saturday night. Will continue until the first of October, then we go to Beaumont, Texas, and Vinton, Louisiana, for a while. Weather hot."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A brother writes from Lamoni, asking: "By whom were the 'Lectures on Faith' given, and when were they given?" It is generally supposed that they were given by Sydney Rigdon, about 1835.

Bro. Griffiths has sent us a marked copy of the Llanelly Mercury for September 11, in which he has an article setting forth the differences between us and the Utah church. He also advertises the place of meetings, and cordially invites investigation. The article is concise and unequivocal.

Bro. Isaac M. Smith's article in this issue, entitled "A Word to the Ministry," is worthy a careful reading. His admonitions are timely and considerably worded. Let us heed them, brethren.

Bro. W. H. Hunter writes from Grindstone City, Michigan, September 15, that on that morning at half past five o'clock, he, in company with his wife, and father-in-law, and his family of some seven others, saw a balloon-shaped cloud of bright appearance pass across the sky from south to north, leaving a train of light in a wavering line of writing of some sort, which remained visible for near a half hour. It was quite a sign as seen by these persons. The writing was not decipherable to them.

An appropriation of six hundred thousand dollars insures a good Philippine exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair. Dr. Niederlein has been selected to gather the exhibit, and his long experience in this line insures a representative exhibit. It will be of considerable interest to Americans especially.

A WORD TO THE MINISTRY.

Dear Brethren in Christ: Yesterday and to-day my mind has dwelt very much upon the present condition of God's chosen representatives upon the earth, and my love and my prayers go out to and for you in this great and responsible work; more, seemingly at least, than ever before. And I seem to feel more keenly than ever before my own unworthiness and unfitness to represent the meek and lowly Jesus of Nazareth. When I examine my own heart, peer down into the very depths of my own soul, using the Spirit of God as the light by which to examine all that I find there, honor compels me to confess that I find more self and selfishness, more covetousness, more envy, more jealousy, and more evil thinking, than I really expected to find. And these are things which I hate or, at least I have tried to hate, and I have flattered myself that I did hate them; but I have learned, to my sorrow, too, that the flesh clings to its idols with a tenacity which staggers the power of conception; and even when we think those idols are dead and buried, or in other words, when we think we are fully dead to them, we awake and find ourselves again worshiping at the old shrines. Well might the Savior say that a man must hate his own life in order to be a true disciple of the Master.

If I understand the nature of our calling, brethren, (and I think I do,) all those evils mentioned, and every other evil that is mentionable, or even imaginable, should be banished from our souls, and the doors of our souls should be closed, barred, and locked for ever against them. Simply to put up a sign, "No Admittance," will not answer: the adversary will never turn away until he has thoroughly tried every door and every window, and then if he fails, he will put some of his faithful detectives on our track and they will follow for weeks, watching for an opportunity to get in and reestablish some idol in our soul.

The Lord knows how difficult it is for one man to stand alone when confronted by the world, the flesh, and the Devil; and he knows, too, the great accumulation of strength which comes to his servants by their being perfectly united: by their being of the same mind and of the same judgment. And knowing this he has admonished and plead with his servants in all ages, to allow nothing to separate them one from another. In 1894 the Lord said: "My servants have been harsh one with another."—D. C. 122: 1.

And in the same revelation he said: "Yea, verily, thus saith the Lord, unto the elders of the church; continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end. Amen."—D. C. 122: 17.

Unto whom was this spoken? It was spoken to "the elders of the church," to "my servants" who "have been harsh one with another." And have we heeded the admonition? Have we been more kindly disposed one towards another since then? I fear we have been very much like the old deacon who went to his brother deacon with whom he had been "at outs" for a long time, and said: "Brother, I think we should settle our difficulty; it is causing division in the church, and is bringing disgrace upon the cause we both love so dearly. I have fasted and prayed over the matter, and I am thoroughly convinced that you are in the wrong, and that it is your duty to give in." And so we have fasted and prayed over matters and, like the old deacon, we come to the conclusion that the other fellow is in the wrong and that he "must give in." The Savior said, "I am meek and lowly of heart."—Matthew 11: 29. And when "he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously."—1 Peter 2: 23. And it is in the same chapter that Peter says, "But if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God." If ye "take it patiently." But if you do not take it patiently, then what? "But if ye bear it not patiently, it shall be accounted unto you as being meted out a just measure unto you."—D. C. 95: 5.

It is folly, brethren, for us to deceive ourselves with the hope that we shall be rewarded for suffering for Christ's sake, if we retaliate: when we take the matter in our own hands, and say as bad things of the other fellow as he says of us, we do not "take it patiently." Christ left us "an example," that we "should follow his steps," and, "when he was reviled," he "reviled not again." And if this language of the apostle applied to the whole church, to all the saints, how much more so to the ministry. Peter says for the elders to be "ensamples to the flock" (1 Peter 5: 3), and Paul said to Titus:

"In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that can not be condemned."—Titus 2: 7, 8.

And to Timothy he said: "But be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity."—1 Timothy 4: 12.

The responsibility is great, indeed, and the apostle might well say, "What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness."—2 Peter 3: 11.

To represent Christ means more than simply to preach eloquent sermons from the pulpit: it means to preach Christ in our daily walk, in our conversation, in charity, in purity: it means to be examples in all the Christian graces. Before the first Twelve in this church started out on their first missions, after being ordained to this high and holy calling, they voted to "forgive one another every wrong that has existed among us, and that from henceforth each one of the Twelve love his brother as himself, in temporal as well as in spiritual things, always inquiring into each other's welfare."—Church History, vol. 1, p. 560. I like that: it looks Christ-like. Blot out everything that would separate God's servants one from another, and every one "love his brother as himself." As himself. Easily said; but are we doing that to-day? I have heard men say that they did not want to fare any better than their brethren; and, in my heart, I do not think I do; but the flesh keeps up an everlasting warfare, and is continually placing self and selfish interests before and above everything else. Paul said:

"And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves."—2 Timothy 2: 24.

Yet I have been in business-meetings, in General Conference, where the servants of the Lord did not exhibit much patience, and they lacked a great deal of being "gentle unto all men," too; and then we go out and preach to the world that they must obey every command, observe every ordinance, and, in fact, "live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Is it more necessary to be baptized than it is to be "gentle unto all men"? Is it more necessary for a man to observe the ordinance of laying on of hands than it is for him to "love his brother as himself"? If others can not get into the kingdom of heaven by saying Lord, Lord, then upon what grounds do the servants of the Lord expect to enter, if they strive and contend one with another? If I really love my brother as I love myself, I will seek his good and his happiness as much as my own: I will be interested in his salvation the same as I am interested in my own salvation. And I will be as ready to defend his honor and his good name as I am in defending my own. I have known elders to preach eloquently, and in very strong terms, against tattling and evil speaking; and then I have heard those same elders say dirty, mean things of their brethren and sisters, and that too behind their backs. Perhaps you are thinking that I neglected or shirked my duty in not rebuking them; and so I did. It is my duty, and it is your duty, too, to refuse to listen to a scandal-monger: and any man or woman, elder, apostle, prophet, or prophetess, who goes around speaking or relating evil things about a brother or sister, is a scandal-monger. He may not mean to be, and he may not think he is; but he is, just the same. If I love my brother as myself, I will be as clear of telling anything to hurt his reputation or influence as I would of telling that which would injure my own reputation or influence. If he suffers, I suffer; and the church suffers, too. Every time I lower a brother or sister in the estimation of others, by tattling or evil-speaking, I injure the cause of Christ: I am pulling down, instead of building up. And when I wound the feelings of a brother or sister, by harshness and bitterness of speech, I am hurting the cause of Christ, and am deliberately ignoring the command, "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men." And, if the elders ignore this teaching, the members are apt to do the same thing. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—John 13:35. And if our loving one another will convince men that we are his disciples, then the absence of this love will certainly convince them that we are not his disciples.

Brethren, there is too much work lying before us and too much responsibility resting upon us to admit of our stopping to wrangle over differences of opinion. The Lord says, "And if ye can not fully agree on all the points of my law, be patient and be not contentious; so far as you can agree work together without heat, confusion, or malice."—D. C. 122: 16.

And if we can not agree upon other things, why not do the same thing: work together, so far as we can agree, without heat, confusion, or malice? Latter-day Israel is very much like former-day Israel: slow to hearken unto the word of the Lord, especially when the Lord's will differs from ours. Humanity, and sometimes that which is lower than humanity, shines out all along the line, keeping the divinity of this great latter-day work hid to a great extent, and reflecting to the world too much of self. The work can never be brought to the glorious consummation so devoutly looked for and prayed for, until the elders learn to put more of Christ and less of self into their work: until they lay aside light-mindedness, light speeches, foolish talking, jesting, envy, evil-speaking, jealousy, and everything else which is contrary to the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus. We must be more fully consecrated and dedicated to God and his service. God is in the work, and it is his; but he works through means, and if the instrument used reflects more of self than of Christ, the beauty, the grandeur, and the glory of the work will be partially eclipsed. I love this blessed work; I love my brethren; and most of all I love my Savior: I want to dwell with him in the great hereafter and to dwell with his people. But I realize that I have much to overcome: I have a hard fight, a bitter struggle before me.

Brethren, I want your help; I need your prayers; and I shall try to help you with my prayers, and in all other ways I can. I long to see the time when the Lord's watchmen shall see eye to eye. I long to see the time when God's people shall be one, both temporally and spiritually. May God bless his ministry, and also his Saints who are not of the ministry. May all work together in the spirit of unity and love. May zeal, perseverance, an abiding love for the truth and an eye single to the glory of God characterize the labors of all God's people.

With a strong determination to strive to live nearer to God, and to be more like my Savior; and with a firm resolution to strive harder than ever before to love my brother as myself, I am your brother and coworker in the cause of truth.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS.—No. 2.

BY ISAAC M. SMITH.

(All quotations are from the Inspired Translation of the Bible, large print edition of the Book of Mormon, and the 1897 edition of Doctrine and Covenants.)

I am not yet done with "the kingdom." The question may arise in the mind of the reader, as it did in my own: If "the kingdom" is "the keys of the church," then what is meant by "the keys of the kingdom"? Jesus said to Peter:

"And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven."—Matthew 16:20.

"The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth."—Doctrine and Covenants 65:1.

What is meant by "the keys of the kingdom"? The Lord says to the church: "I have given you the kingdom," "the kingdom is yours;" but I fail to find where the Lord says he has given "the keys of the kingdom" to the church, or where he tells the church that "the keys of the kingdom" are yours. I fail to find it. But, in a revelation given to Joseph Smith, March, 1833, I find this:

"Therefore thou art blest from henceforth that bear the keys of the kingdom given unto you; which kingdom is coming forth for the last time."—Doctrine and Covenants 87:1.

And also this:

"The keys of this kingdom shall never be taken from you, while thou art in the world, neither in the world to come."—Doctrine and Covenants 87:2.

And this:

"And they [S. Rigdon and F. G. Williams] are accounted as equal with thee in holding the keys of this last kingdom."—Doctrine and Covenants 87:3.

"I have given unto him [Joseph Smith, Jr.] the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed."—Doctrine and Covenants 34:4.

"No one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jr."—Doctrine and Covenants 27:2; 43:1.

In a revelation given to "ye elders of my church," September, 1831, we have this:

"I will be merciful unto you, for I have given unto you the kingdom; and the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom, shall not be taken from my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., through the means I have appointed, while he liveth, inasmuch as he obeyeth mine ordinances."—Doctrine and Covenants 64:2.

The kingdom was given to the elders; but not the keys of the kingdom; the keys of the kingdom belong to the president of the church and his counselors:

"My servant Joseph Smith, Jr., unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood."—Doctrine and Covenants 80:1.

We have seen that Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams were "accounted as equal with thee in holding the keys of this last kingdom."—Doctrine and Covenants 87:3.

Joseph was to be a "presiding elder over all my church, to be a translator, a revelator, a seer, and a prophet;" and, with his two counselors, was to "constitute a quorum and first presidency, to receive the oracles for the whole church."—Doctrine and Covenants 107:39.

This "quorum and first presidency" holds "the keys of the kingdom, which belongeth always unto the presidency of the high priesthood." Section 80, paragraph 1. But what "keys" do they hold?

"Verily I say unto you, I now give unto you the officers belonging to my priesthood, that ye may hold the keys thereof, even the priesthood which is after the order of Melchisedec, which is after the order of my only begotten Son."—Doctrine and Covenants 107:37.

The Lord then gives him

1. The patriarch of the church. (Verse 38.) 2. The quorum of the first presidency: the president of the church and his two counselors. (Verse 39.) 3. The quorum of the twelve. (Verse 40.) 4. The high council. (Verse 41.) 5. The high priests. (Verse 42.) 6. The elders. (Verse 43.) 7. The seventies. (Verse 44.) 8. The bishopric. (Verse 45.) 9. The priests. 10. The teachers. 11. The deacons. (Verse 46.)

And then he says: "The above offices I have given unto you, and the keys thereof, for helps and for governments, for the work of the ministry, and the perfecting of my saints."—Verse 46.

The "presidency of the high priesthood" holds the keys of all these offices; and the keys of these offices are the keys of the church, hence the kingdom of God; that which was "caught up unto God and his throne." And when the keys or authority to officiate in these offices, "the kingdom of God and his Christ," was caught up to God, taken from the church, there was nothing left but the dead body; nothing left but an empty house; a temple with no God in it. That body could not live upon the earth, for the life has gone to God and his throne; and a church with no authority from God; no first presidency, no patriarch, no apostles, no bishop, no high council, no elders, no seventies, no priests, no teachers, and no deacons, would hardly be fit for paradise. Take away the keys of all these offices from the church to-day, the authority to officiate in them, and where would the church go? It would go "into the wilderness," and it would go there as fast as "two wings of a great eagle" could carry it, too. And what does "wilderness" mean?

"Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness?"—Jeremiah 2: 31.

"And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground."—Ezekiel 19: 13.

There is such a close resemblance between this last illustration and the subject now under consideration, that it might be well to notice it more closely. Israel is represented as "a lioness;" she brought up one of her whelps "to catch the prey; it devoured men;" but the nations took him "in their pit" and "brought him with chains unto the land of Egypt." Then "she took another of her whelps and made him a young lion;" but the nations took him in their pit and "brought him to the king of Babylon." And then the Lord says:

"Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood, planted by the waters; she was fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters. And she had strong rods for the scepters of them that bare rule."—Ezekiel 19: 10, 11.

"But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the east wind dried up her fruit; her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them. And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground. And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so that she hath no strong rod to be a scepter to rule. This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation."—Ezekiel 19: 12-14.

Just so with the church of God; she was "clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars; a glorious church. She "brought forth the kingdom of our God and his Christ," a man child who should "rule all nations with a rod of iron." But her "strong rods were broken;" the man child, "the kingdom of God," was taken from her, "caught up to God and his throne," and, like Israel, she had "no strong rod to be a scepter to rule;" and, like Israel, when bereft of her authority, she "fled into the wilderness;" in "a dry and thirsty ground," "a land of darkness." If the church went to paradise, then Israel went to paradise; they both went into the wilderness.

But say some: "'In the wilderness' is simply out of sight; where it can not be seen." And one has the church of Christ hid away from the eyes of the world, somewhere here on the earth; and another has the church of Christ hid away from the eyes of the world, in paradise; but both parties rely on the same text to sustain the theory just stated, that is, that "in the wilderness" is simply where the world can not see it. That text reads as follows:

"Behold, that which you hear is as the voice of one crying in the wilderness; in the wilderness, because you can not see him."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 17.

Does the Lord say, "that which you hear is the voice of one crying in the wilderness"? He does not; he says it is "as the voice of one crying in the wilderness." The illustration is just about the same as if he had said, "as the voice of one crying in the heart of the earth; in the heart of the earth because you can not see him." But, if he had said that, and you had then read that "the Son of Man shall be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth," would you interpret "the heart of the earth" to mean paradise, or just anywhere out of sight? I am quite sure you would not. And yet "wilderness" is as clearly defined in the Bible as "the heart of the earth" is: "Have I been a wilderness unto Israel? a land of darkness?" "That which you hear is as the voice of one crying in the land of darkness; in the land of darkness because you can not see him." You would hardly contend that "in a land of darkness," is just anywhere out of sight—up in paradise. And yet "a land of darkness" is the sense in which the Lord uses "wilderness." The Lord was really in their midst: "I am in your midst and ye can not see me."—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 2.

It certainly does great injustice to this text to say that it interprets "in the wilderness" as simply anywhere out of sight, in paradise, or in heaven. It does not define "wilderness" at all; makes no attempt to do so. "In the wilderness," as used in the Bible, means desolation, captivity, destruction, ruin, waste, darkness, dry and thirsty; and that corresponds with the definition given in the dictionaries, too.

Another thing: This woman, which was the church, is represented as fleeing from the devil (see Revelation 12: 13, 14); while James says, "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."—James 4: 7. And Peter says, "Whom resist steadfast in the faith."—1 Peter 5: 9.

No church of Christ, that is fit for paradise, would ever have to flee from the devil. When the church goes into sin, then it has to flee from the devil; but the church of God which was "clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars," had "power over devils and unclean spirits and over all the power of the adversary." See Matthew 10:1; Mark 6:9; Luke 9:1; Luke 10:18-20; and many other places. He gave them power over "all devils" and over "all the power of the enemy." That church, while pure, never fled from the devil: that was the church of God, the body of Christ, the house of God, the temple of God; and God was in it. And that church could not be hid in the wilderness, either, for it was given unto them "to be the light of the world;" and "a city that is set on a hill can not be hid."—Matthew 5:16.

Perhaps the reader is saying to himself: "The church that brought forth the man child is the same church that fled into the wilderness." In one sense it is; but in another sense it is not. If God, to-day, should take to himself the kingdom, "the keys of the church," and leave the church without any authority to officiate in the offices of the church, would it be the same church it is now? It would be the same men and women and, in one sense, the same body; but it would be a dead body; the life, the soul of the body, that which makes it the church of Christ, would be gone. It would then be a human body, governed by human authority; Christ would not be "the head of the body" any longer; that is, of that body. That body would take on another head, a different head from the one it has now; it would be governed by a different power, and hence it would be a different church, even though it should be composed of the same men and women. And it would live a different life, too.

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling . . . they become . . . the church and kingdom and the elect of God."—Doctrine and Covenants 83:6.

If the "obtaining these two priesthoods" and "magnifying their calling" is the means of causing a people to "become . . . the church . . . of God," then a failure to magnify their calling and, as a consequence, the losing "these two priesthoods," would certainly cause that same people to cease to be the church of God. And we have learned (Doctrine and Covenants 107:37-46) that the offices of the priesthood, and the keys thereof, are the offices and the keys of the church; hence the kingdom. And we have also learned that the kingdom was caught up to God and his throne; so it is clear, to my mind at least, that "these two priesthoods," which caused them to become the church of God, were taken from the church, and she was left to depend on the strength, wisdom, and authority of man. And when she lost these two priesthoods, she lost everything, so far as authority is concerned. Of the Aaronic priesthood the Lord says:

"The power and authority of the lesser, or Aaronic, priesthood is, to hold the keys of the ministering of angels, and to administer in outward ordinances—the letter of the gospel—the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, agreeably to the covenants and commandments."—Doctrine and Covenants 104:10.

"And the lesser priesthood continued, which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel, which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments."—Doctrine and Covenants 83:4.

And of the Melchisedec priesthood the Lord says:

"And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live."—Doctrine and Covenants 83:3.

"The power and authority of the higher, or Melchisedec, priesthood, is to hold the keys of all the spiritual blessings of the church; to have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven; to have the heavens opened unto them; to commune with the general assembly and church of the Firstborn; and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father, and Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant."—Doctrine and Covenants 104:9.

When "these two priesthoods" were taken from the church, "caught up to God and his throne," that church had no authority to baptize, "in the name of Jesus" "for the remission of sins;" no communion with God, and no communion with Jesus; the power of godliness could not be manifest unto them; they, as a church, were dead. Christ had moved out, and the communion between the head and the body had ceased. How any church, bereft of "these two priesthoods," as they are described in the above texts, can continue to be the church of Christ, either on the earth or in paradise, is more than I am capable of comprehending. I can see how it might continue to be a church; but I can not see how it can continue to be Christ's church, according to the definitions of his church as given in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. And the very fact that "these two priesthoods" had to be restored to earth by angelic ministrations is sufficient proof that they had been taken from the church. The Aaronic priesthood was restored through John the Baptist:

"Which John I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, Jr., and Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto this first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordained even as Aaron."—Doctrine and Covenants 26:2.

And the Melchisedec priesthood was restored through Peter, James, and John:

"And also with Peter, and James, and John, whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry; and of the same things which I revealed unto them; unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times."—Doctrine and Covenants 26:3.

And with the foregoing agrees this:

"For unto you (the twelve) and those (the first presidency) who are appointed with you to be your counselors and leaders, is the power of this priesthood given, for the last days and for the last time, in the which is the dispensation of the fullness of times, which power you hold in connection with all those who have received a dispensation at any time from the beginning of the creation; for verily I say unto you, The keys of the dispensation which ye have received, which have come down from the fathers; and last of all, being sent down from heaven unto you."—Doctrine and Covenants 105:12.

The keys or authority to officiate in this priesthood, or "these two priesthoods," in our day, was "sent down from heaven;" and, as "all other authorities, or offices in the church are appendages to this priesthood" (Doctrine and Covenants 104:2), then from the time that the keys of this priesthood were "caught up unto God and his throne" until they were "sent down from heaven," there was no authority, officer, nor office in the church, the church that went into the wilderness. I mean, no God-given authority, officer, nor office; it had, of course, the authority of man, and officers placed there by man, but none from God. And that is just the condition predicted by the Apostle Paul:

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."—2 Timothy 4:3, 4.

It will not do to say that this prophecy refers to the world, for the world would "not endure sound doctrine" when Paul wrote this; the world, at that time, did "turn away their ears from the truth;" the world, then, was "turned unto fables;" and the world did then "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." Had Paul been writing of the world, he would have said, "the time is come when they will not endure sound doctrine." But he says "the time will come;" showing that he referred to those who, at that time, did "endure sound doctrine," and did have teachers sent of God. And when the church turned away from the doctrine of Christ, made their own teachers, and turned away their ears from the truth, where would you expect it to go? The Lord says:

"Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm; and the man whose heart departeth from the Lord. For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited."—Jeremiah 17:5, 6.

And what is true of one man is true of a body of men—the church. When the church turned from the truth and would not endure sound doctrine, she departed "from the Lord;" and when she heaped to herself "teachers, having itching ears," she put her "trust in man" and made "flesh her arm;" and, when she did this, "the kingdom, or in other words, the keys of the church" was "caught up to God and his throne," and the church, with nothing left but the power of man with which to contend against the dragon, "fled into the wilderness." Not into paradise, but into the wilderness: "shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited."

"And will make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness."—Zephaniah 2:13.

Not only did the church flee into the wilderness, but she was "cursed;" for she put her "trust in man" and made "flesh her arm:" heaped to herself "teachers," instead of giving heed to what God had said.

But I am told that when the church fled into the wilderness, "she had a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand and two hundred and three score years."—Revelation 12:5.

Yes, there is a place prepared for her; but what kind of a place is it? We have just learned that those "whose heart departeth from the Lord" are to "inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited;" and that those who "trust in man," "heap to themselves teachers," are "cursed;" and, as the church did both these wrongs, it is certainly legitimate to conclude that she was "cursed," and that she went to "inhabit the parched places in the wilderness," the "place prepared of God" for her while in that condition. And this seems the more reasonable from the fact that she did go "into the wilderness." To assume that she was still the church of Christ, simply because "she has a place prepared of God," is an unwarranted assumption. God has a place prepared for all, even for the devil and his angels:

"And they were thrust down, and thus became the devil and his angels; and, behold, there is a place prepared for them from the beginning, which place is hell." Doctrine and Covenants 28:10; see also 85:35; 1 Nephi 4:26, 27; 2 Nephi 12:20; Mosiah 11:108; Matthew 25:42.

And there was also "a place prepared" for those who were destroyed in the flood; and it was for their good, too:

"And, behold, I will shut them up; a prison have I prepared for them, and that which I have chosen has plead before my face; wherefore he suffereth for their sins, inasmuch as they will repent, in the day that my chosen shall return unto me; and until that day they shall be in torment."—Genesis 7:44, 45; Doctrine and Covenants 36:7.

But, when the Savior was crucified, and arose from the dead, "the saints arose:"

"And as many of the spirits as were in prison came forth and stood on the right hand of God."—Genesis 7: 64; Doctrine and Covenants 36: 11.

"And then cometh the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming; who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh."—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 28.

These people were not the church of Christ; but there was "a place prepared" for them, and it was a place where they might be, and were preserved from the devil, too; a place where they would have to suffer for their wrongs, and afterwards have a chance to repent and return unto God. Hence it will not do to say that the church which "fled into the wilderness" was the church of Christ, simply because "she has a place prepared of God" unto which she can go. But, you say, this church was fed there in her place and was nourished "from the face of the serpent." Yes, but who fed her, and upon what was she fed?

Jesus said to Peter: "Feed my lambs." "Feed my sheep." "Feed my sheep."—John 21: 15, 16, 17. But he gave to him "the keys of the kingdom of heaven," that he might know how to feed, and what to feed them. And Peter said to the elders of the church: "Feed the flock of God which is among you."—1 Peter 5: 2.

And Paul admonished the elders of the church at Ephesus, "to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."—Acts 20: 28.

And he said to the Corinthian saints: "I have fed you with milk."—1 Corinthians 3: 2.

In the church of Christ there were men appointed of God, men to whom he gave the kingdom, and the keys of the kingdom, to feed the church. But, when "the kingdom, or, in other words, the keys of the church" was "caught up unto God and his throne," there were none in the church holding "the keys of the kingdom;" there were no apostles, no seventies, no high priests, no bishops, no high council, no elders, no priests, no teachers, no deacons, and no patriarch; these "keys" are the kingdom, and they were caught up to God. These keys have again been "sent down from heaven," and men are again called to "feed the church of God;" but who fed this church in the wilderness from the time the keys were "caught up to God" until they were again "sent down from heaven unto you"? The Bible says that "they shall feed her;" but who are "they"? I do not pretend to speak authoritatively; but it does seem to me that, inasmuch as the church was to depart from the truth and "heap to themselves teachers," it is quite reasonable to conclude that those man-made teachers would do the feeding; and I believe the records will bear me out in this conclusion.

"But behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles; yea, behold all the nations of the Gentiles, and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land, and those who shall be upon other lands; yea, even upon all the lands of the earth; behold, they will be drunken with iniquity, and all manner of abominations."—2 Nephi 11: 63.

But what is the cause of this? One cause is:

"For as much as this people draw near unto me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men, therefore, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people; yea a marvelous work and a wonder."—2 Nephi 11: 84; Isaiah 29: 26.

"All the nations of the Gentiles, and also the Jews," when this "marvelous work" shall come forth, are to be "drunken with iniquity," and are to be "taught by the precepts of men"—fed by man.

"Yea, they have all gone out of the way; they have become corrupted."—2 Nephi 12: 11.

Not all corrupt at heart, but in doctrine.

"They have all gone astray, save it be a few, who are the humble followers of Christ; nevertheless, they are led, that in many instances they do err, because they are taught by the precepts of men."—2 Nephi 12: 14.

"And my vineyard has become corrupted every whit; and there is none which doeth good save it be a few; and they err in many instances, because of priestcrafts, all having corrupt minds."—Doctrine and Covenants 32: 1.

NARROWNESS OF THE CHURCH.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(By courtesy of the New York American, Copyright 1902 by W. R. Hearst.)

"Dear Madam: I am a Methodist, born and bred, but sore wounded to see, what at least seems to me, the church falling simply into a great political or social organization, without unction, love, or even sympathy in it, while to my feeble observation, the hearts of the people, especially the middle classes and poor, are yearning after something to fill the void in their souls that the church of to-day seems inadequate to supply, because, shall I say, they are too selfish and grasping for the almighty dollar.

"METHODIST."

Yes, the churches are becoming great "trusts" where fashion reigns and class distinctions are pronounced. While God-loving and humanity-loving souls can be found in every church, the church as an institution is doing less for the advancement of the world toward a higher humanitarianism to-day than any other of our large organizations. The press, science, the schools, the coöperative societies, the women's clubs, even, are all more useful factors in modern progress.

The creeds of the churches are broadening, but they have broadened through outside influences brought to bear upon them—not through their own consciousness of the need of greater liberality.

The press has been a tremendous force in this respect. The American newspaper has dared to be outspoken, and allowed others to be outspoken, on religious subjects.

It has helped people to think for themselves—something which the old orthodoxy is opposed to.

The attitude of the church is not greatly changed in that respect, but public opinion will eventually force it to right-about-face and take up its march in the line of progression and brotherhood.

A young theological student was recently worried by the church into a state of nervousness, which no doubt augmented a fatal illness because he had expressed his belief that Adam was a mythological character. How any body of intelligent, educated men can cling to the belief that Adam was the first man ever created on this earth, which science proves is billions of years old, is amazing to any thinking mind. So is the idea that any sane being can write himself down as ignorant and blasphemous enough to still believe God flings new-born infants into a lake of fire and brimstone.

Yet in the recent conference of the Presbyterian Church, where the articles of faith were being stretched out a wee bit to cover modern needs, one man so distinguished himself.

Nevertheless, it proves how the world is improving, since people now living remember the time when that disgusting and shameful creed was universally believed by all good orthodox Presbyterians.

The world is passing through a great spiritual crisis, and humanity is growing too intellectual and too reverential to put up with a theology that was only fit for the dark ages.

Men to-day want a cheerful and helpful religion. They want to worship a loving God, and they want to respect him, and themselves as his workmanship.

They want a religion which means brotherhood.

Christ gave it in the Golden Rule, but the churches, founded on Christ's name, have never concerned themselves so much with the Golden Rule as with worn-out dogmas and useless fables. They are beginning to see their mistake by the decreasing membership and attendance, and the wise pastors are feeding their flocks on more nutritious and palatable mental food.

People who go to church want to come away cheered, encouraged, and strengthened for life's trials. They want to believe in a God of love—and in their oneness with him. They do not want to hear discussions of ancient fables, but of modern problems, and to be helped to meet them.

The times are not degenerate. Man's faith
Mounts higher than of old. No crumbling creed
Can take from the immortal soul the need

Of that supreme Creator, God. The wraith
Of dead beliefs we cherished in our youth
Fades but to let us welcome new-born Truth.

Man may not worship at the ancient shrine
Prone on his face, in self-accusing scorn.

That night is past. He hails a fairer morn,
And knows himself a something all divine;
No humble worm whose heritage is sin,
But, born of God, he feels the Christ within.

Not loud his prayers, as in the olden time,
But deep his reverence for that mighty force,
That occult working of the great All Source,

Which makes the present era so sublime.
Religion now means something high and broad,
And man stood never half so near to God.

THE ACCORD OF SCIENCE WITH THE BIBLE.

It is equally a mistake to go to the Bible for science, or to science for the historical and moral teachings of the Bible. But in each case we can go to the other for confirmatory evidence. In history and morals the Bible is the main witness, while in the realm of natural philosophy science is the main witness. But the evidence for the moral teachings of the Bible may be strengthened by studying the analogies of nature, and as a historical witness the Bible may be cross-questioned to see if its statements conform to the natural conditions implied. On the other hand, science may be cross-questioned to see if its purported conclusions conform to the plain teachings of the Bible regarding morals and history. In this paper I will submit some of the most important portions of Bible history to the cross-questioning which is made possible by scientific investigations.

1. The Bible most unequivocally makes the universe the work of a personal God. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." To this bold statement, which heathen philosophers never dared to make, science can not only make no valid objection, but must add the support of her own positive testimony. Among physicists there are no greater names than those of Lord Kelvin, Faraday and Clerk-Maxwell, all of whom are, or were, devout believers in the Bible. Two famous sayings of Clerk-Maxwell voice the sentiments not only of these, but of almost all profound students of chemistry and physics. After tracing the protean forms of matter down to the ultimate atom, with which the chemist deals in all his formulæ, Clerk-Maxwell affirms that they bear every mark of being "manufactured articles," and, after having traced to its limits every variety of evolutionary theory, he affirmed with the utmost confidence that every one of them must have a God to make it work. Thus are these philosophers brought back to almost the identical opening words of Genesis as the statement of their highest philosophy.

2. The first verse of Genesis is followed by a more detailed statement, indicating that the original creation was followed by an orderly development, progressing from the simpler forms of matter and life to the complex forms which we see at the present time. This involves periods of time, even if one should restrict the meaning of the word "day" to twenty-four hours, which is by no means necessary when one considers the great latitude given to the meaning of the word "day" both in the Bible and in general literature. Now it is a most striking fact which can not be lightly disregarded, that the order of the creation brought to light in the first chapter of Genesis is so closely parallel to that which is brought to light by modern science, that even the most carping critics can find but little fault with it; while a large array of our most eminent geologists, like Guyot, Dawson, Dana and Winchell, emphatically declare that the scheme is so perfect as to preclude the idea of its being of human origin.

No inspired man, 3,000 years ago, could have hit upon such a scheme, according so closely as this does with the ripest fruits of modern science. The criticisms of Huxley and others are based upon such small matters, involving such a doubtful interpretation of literary phrases, that they are scarcely worthy of notice. The production of such a scheme, so accordant with the actual facts, by a Jew 2,500 or 3,000 years ago, without the aid of divine inspiration, would be a greater wonder than its production through divine inspiration.

3. In the story of the Flood the Bible indicates a period of instability in the earth's crust such as does not now exist. Hence there has been a strong tendency either to regard the story as entirely unhistorical, or to minimize the event to such an extent that it loses its significance. The Bible says that the Flood was largely occasioned by the breaking-up of all the fountains of the great deep, which is a very good geologic phrase for the subsidence of the land. It also affirms that the destruction was so extensive that an ark was necessary to preserve not only Noah and his family, but the species of animals most closely associated with him.

But it is to be noticed, in confirmation of the account, that the dimensions of the ark are scientific in their proportions; its length, breadth and depth being almost exactly the same as those of the latest steamships made to cross the Atlantic. That such correctness of proportions could not have been ignorantly obtained by guesswork is shown by the fact that everybody else who has dealt freely with the subject has destroyed the harmony. The cuneiform tablets make the vessel so broad and high that it would be utterly unseaworthy, while Berosus makes it 1,200 feet broad and Origen claimed that it was 135,000 feet long and 3,750 feet wide. What kept the biblical writer from making a fool of himself as these others have done? The simplest answer is, that he confined himself to the facts which had come under his observation.

Returning now to the scientific question of a recent abnormal instability of the earth's crust, such as is implied in the biblical account of the deluge, let me cite as evidence the well-known geological facts that all the high mountain systems of the world belong to the latest geological (the Tertiary) epoch and received their main elevation shortly before the advent of man; while there is abundant evidence that since man came into the world there have been extensive oscillations of level fitted to cause extensive catastrophes beyond anything of which we have had modern experience.

More and more of these oscillations of land level are seen to connect themselves with the glacial epoch, which came on at the close of the Tertiary period and, continuing until after the advent of man, ended in a series of rapid changes of level affecting a large part of the northern hemisphere. The general public has yet scarcely begun to realize the extent of the tremendous shifting of forces which took place during this epoch. Six million square miles of territory in the northern hemisphere was covered with ice a mile deep, making sixty million cubic miles. This ice was formed by the accumulation of snow which represented water evaporated from the ocean and was sufficient to lower the ocean level two hundred and fifty feet the world over. In weight the ice was twice as great as the whole of the North American continent, amounting to twenty-four thousand million million (24,000,000,000,000,000) tons.

Anyone who appreciates what it means to have that amount of weight transferred from the ocean beds to a limited portion of the land surface of the northern hemisphere will have such a sense of the instability of the earth's crust at that time, that Noah's flood will be easily credible from any point of view. The means for its accomplishment will be seen to be so ready at hand that the calamity will make no excessive demands upon our credulity. The means and the end will not be disproportionate. If there is any plasticity to the earth's crust, such a loading and unloading of a portion of it as occurred during the glacial period and at its close is clearly seen to be a cause capable of producing almost any changes in land level.

Still, we do not, by this deductive reasoning, prove the Flood. We simply accept the evidence of the Bible, and by this means remove the exaggerated objections to the occurrence of the event which have hindered belief. The Bible narrative is brief and aimed principally at giving the moral effects of the catastrophe. Still, the sobriety of the account goes far to establish its genuineness and accordance with fact.

4. In like manner, recent studies into the geology of the Jordan Valley go far to confirm in a remarkable degree the biblical account of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah and of the crossing of the Jordan by the children of Israel under the leadership of Joshua. In both these accounts it is to be observed that there is a remarkable brevity, leading to the exclusion of all superfluous matter and of everything which is out of harmony with physical conditions. One who is familiar with the general tendency of the human mind to enlarge such narratives, by the addition of explanatory comments and legendary surmises, can not read these Bible accounts without being convinced that they are the records of eye-witnesses with which no one has ventured to tamper.

The Jordan Valley is a great crack in the earth's surface along which the western edge has slipped down to the extent of four or five thousand feet. This is what the geologists call a "fault," and, all things considered, it is probably the most remarkable of its kind in the world. Along the line of such a fault further movement is likely to continue and be connected with earthquakes which would lead to openings in the depths of the earth. In this case the movements are in an exhausted oil and gas district the signs of which are abundant, both in the existing rocks and in the large quantities of bitumen or asphalt which are found about Jericho and the Dead Sea.

The description of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah fits so perfectly to the explosion and burning of such a combustible reservoir that it could not have been invented, but must be the simple tale of an eye-witness. It is a striking commentary upon the matter-of-fact character of this description that in a recent number of the National Geographic Magazine, Mr. Robert T. Hill, who was sent by the society to Martinique to report upon the recent calamity there, opens his report with the graphic words of this Bible story: "The Lord rained fire and brimstone and the smoke of the country went up as of a furnace."

Thus, in general, it may be confidently affirmed that the Bible history is so in accord with the physical conditions involved and is so far from making extravagant demands upon our belief in the miraculous, that its credibility is supported rather than lessened by scientific cross-examination. Space forbids my showing this here respecting the crossing of the Jordan and of the Red Sea, the experiences of Israel in Egypt and numerous other crucial instances, but all would tend, in a similar manner, to confirm the general credibility of Old Testament history.—Professor G. Frederick Wright, D. D., Oberlin, Ohio, in Northwestern Christian Advocate, for September 17, 1902.

My Heart and I.

Enough! we're tired, my heart and I.
We sit beside the headstone thus,
And wish that name were carved for us.
The moss reprints more tenderly
The hard types of the mason's knife,
As heaven's sweet life renews earth's life
With which we're tired, my heart and I.

You see we're tired, my heart and I.
We dealt with books, we trusted men,
And in our own blood drenched the pen,
As if such colors could not fly.
We walked too straight for fortune's end,
We loved too true a friend:
At last we're tired, my heart and I.

How tired we feel, my heart and I!
We seem of no use in the world;
Our fancies hang gray and uncurled
About men's eyes indifferently;
Our voice, which thrilled you so, will let
You sleep; our tears are only wet:
What do we here, my heart and I?

So tired, so tired, my heart and I!
It was not thus in that old time
When Ralph sat with me 'neath the lime
To watch the sunset from the sky.
"Dear love, you're looking tired," he said:
I, smiling at him, shook my head:
'Tis now we're tired, my heart and I.

So tired, so tired, my heart and I!
Though now none takes me on his arm
To fold me close, and kiss me warm
Till each quick breath end in a sigh
Of happy languor. Now, alone,
We lean upon this graveyard stone
Uncheered, unloved, my heart and I.

Tired out we are, my heart and I.
Suppose the world brought diadems
To tempt us, crusted with loose gems
Of powers and pleasures? Let it try.
We scarcely care to look at even
A pretty child, or God's blue heaven,
We feel so tired, my heart and I.

Yet who complains? My heart and I?
In this abundant earth no doubt
Is little room for things worn out:
Disdain them, break them, throw them by!
And if, before the days grew rough,
We once were loved, used,—well enough
I think we've fared, my heart and I.

—Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

The first installment of Mrs. Barr's new love story, Thyra Var- rick, appears in The Delineator for September, and judging from this first chapter it will hold the reader's attention to the end by its fine characterizations, beauty of thought and language and spirited action; it is superbly illustrated. The second section of The House that Jack and Jill Built tells about the old-fashioned garden and how it was made, and the pictures are delightful. The influence of the noble Vittoria Colonna on the life of Michael Angelo furnishes material for a notable addition to the series of Authors' Loves by Clara E. Laughlin. An interesting paper on Julia Ward Howe, lovingly called the grand old woman of America, also appears in this number. There are two spirited short stories by well-known writers, innumerable articles on fancy work and domestic interests; stories and pastimes for children, window gardening, home entertainment, etc., etc.

When I Have Time.

When I have time so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded with care;
I'll help to lift them from their despair,
When I have time.

When I have time the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with sweetest words of praise,
When I have time.

When you have time the friend you loved so well
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent;
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content,
When you had time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend! no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so drear;
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time.—Exchange.

Idle Words.

That foolish talking and jesting and idle speeches are indulged in to a very great extent in these latter times, is a fact too plain to be denied. Were this harmful practice confined to those who have never obeyed the gospel and never been cleansed from their sins it would be bad enough, but when it is indulged in by those who bear the name of Saint it is surely worse. "The tongue is an unruly member" and how true this is in unguarded moments. We oftentimes speak words that we afterwards wish had been left unsaid, but they can not be recalled. It may be an unkind word, a foolish one, or something said just for fun, but whatever it may be it is not edifying and only serves to bring reproach on the name we bear. In Matthew 12:36 we read these words, "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." If we could but impress ourselves with the full meaning of these words of the Master our conversation would be more pure and upright. In the Bible the young are exhorted to be sober-minded, and to have sound speech that can not be condemned. To be sober-minded does not mean that we should wear a long, gloomy face and make life a burden by the absence of sociability. To my mind Saints should, above all others, be happy, considerate, sympathetic, and ever mindful of the good of others, taking a delight in making others happy. Their conversation should be pure and free from the many slang phrases which are in such common use in the world to-day, for by our words we are justified and by our words are we condemned.

Some people think they must indulge in foolish talking and jesting in order to be sociable and make themselves agreeable. To my mind this is not the kind of popularity Saints should seek. By being sober-minded and using sound speech our company may become objectionable to some, but on the other hand there will be those who will be glad to associate with us, and their companionship will be far more desirable than those who delight in idle words. No Saint can indulge in these practices without bringing reproach on that worthy name by which they are called. The advice and opinion of the thoughtful, sober-minded person will be sought for far more frequently than that of the careless and light-minded, and the words of a person of sound speech are edifying and there is something in them with which we may enrich our minds; but the words of the foolish and unthoughtful are as chaff blown by the wind. Then let us examine ourselves and see that our conversation is at all times pure and undefiled and let us remember we are surrounded by a host of witnesses and will be judged by them according to our actions and words. Claiming as we do the name of Christ the world expects something better from us than idle words and when such things are practiced, those who are watching us think there must be something wrong with the religion we profess. Then let us as children of the living God take a firmer hold of the divine Hand and walk close to God through this life until we reach that heavenly shore.

Never in our inmost thought
Alone in the dead of the night
That the ear of God hath not caught
And he knoweth it if it be right.

Never a word we speak
In the crowd or alone with a friend,
But the sea of eternity wakes,
In a wave that shall never end.

Father who hearest our prayer,
Help us to do and say—
Yes, and to think what will bear
The light of the judgment day.

Explanation of Plan of Work Done at a Former Convention of the Des Moines, Iowa, District.

I trust I may be able to get my idea of convention work clearly before you, so that you may understand the line of work I desire to see taken up in this district.

First, we will consider what it takes to get us assembled together for convention work. First of all it takes a desire to be present. Next it takes sacrifice; for some, more, for others, less. Most of us belong to the laboring class of people, depending upon our daily labor for a livelihood. We are obliged to sacrifice the cost of getting from our homes to the convention and back. We are obliged to sacrifice the wages we could earn during the time spent in convention had we remained at home. It is a loss all the way round so far as worldly affairs are concerned. To many this is no small sacrifice. And what do we get by making it? After having made the sacrifice, attended the conventions, returned home, can you tell me how much better off we are, so far as teaching qualities are concerned, than we were before? After you returned home from our conventions in the past were you any better qualified to teach your class so far as methods of presenting the lessons were concerned? Did you have a much clearer understanding of what was required of you as a teacher? Don't you think you ought to have been better equipped for your work? Was not that what you attended the conventions for? You may have received some enthusiasm, sufficient to keep you plodding along, but that is not sufficient. Enthusiasm alone will not make you a successful teacher. I might have a great desire to teach a certain grade in one of our public schools, think it one of the grandest works on earth, be thoroughly enthused with it, but if I made no preparation to take up that work, made no effort to acquaint myself with the best methods of presenting the work to my pupils, do you think I would make a success of it? If no place had ever been provided for instructing the teachers along these lines, do you think the public schools would have made the advancement they have? Will our Sunday-schools ever make the advancement they should if there is not a way provided for instructing our teachers along these lines? Answer that question for yourselves. I don't believe there is an individual in the house who can stand up and conscientiously answer, "Yes, they will." If there is I would like to know it and have a talk with him. I don't believe the height to which such a person would have the Sunday-school attain could be very great. If they can not make the advancement they should without this way is provided, why not provide the way? This is what I would hope to accomplish, with the hearty support of my coworkers, should you feel disposed to retain me in the office of superintendent. I would hope to make of our conventions regular Sunday-school teachers' institutes, making of them a place where the teachers and officers may prepare themselves along lines of better methods of conducting their work, a place for mutual improvement.

I believe this work should be divided into three divisions; viz., primary, intermediate, and senior. Those doing primary work, or intending to, should study and be instructed in primary methods. The same with the intermediate and with the senior. I believe teachers should make special preparation for special work, the work they expect to follow. You can not use the same methods in all three grades if you hope to be successful, therefore teachers should decide what grade they desire to work in, which they are best adapted to, and then prepare for it. We would surely have better teachers and better schools and far more learned scholars if they did.

Right along with our institute work in the conventions there should be some special work done during our reunions, having what we would term in the public school-teacher's vocabulary, a "summer school." In these the teachers of the different grades should take up the study of the ensuing lessons and devise the best methods of presenting them to their pupils, and at the same time become better acquainted with the lessons themselves. Some may raise the objection that this would benefit only the teachers who were present. True, so far as we have gone. Have our conventions of the past been benefiting those who were not present? If not, then we are not losing anything and are giving far greater benefit to those who are present, and are making preparations that will be for the good of our pupils, the very ones for whom the Sunday-school Association was instituted.

The question should be, "How can we reach all our workers to benefit them?" This can be done by getting up a list of normal questions and normal work, with space after each for answers, these to be gotten up by the district officers and a supply sent to each local superintendent prior to each convention and distributed by the superintendent among the teachers of his or her school. These would be filled in by the teachers and officers and returned to the superintendent or secretary to be used in the institute work of the convention. Of course a different list would be sent out each time, taking up normal work in a systematic way. Those who were present and had filled out a list and sent it in could give their views in person and their answers would not need to be read, only reading the ones of those not present. This would benefit all, both those who made the effort to answer them in writing and those present to answer and hear the answers of the others read. The thoughts of some absent one might be better than those of any present. It is not always our best workers who are present. Those not present may be just as good, or better, may have as great a desire to be present and to help advance the work, but circumstances will not permit. Why not give them a chance? They need help as well as others, if not more so. The questions will give them new thoughts and they will not feel they are left alone.

Some may be of the opinion that this plan has been tried in our district and failed. I will endeavor to explain the difference in the plan that has been tried here and the one I desire to see tried. Heretofore programs have been arranged and sent out in which certain ones have been asked to write a paper on a "select subject," or, perhaps, a subject given them, and they required to write a paper on that subject; but never since I have been working in the district, or before, that I can learn of, has a list of normal questions, or questions relating to methods of presenting work, been sent out to the teachers or officers. It is a great task for some, even the best of workers, sometimes, to choose a subject and write an entire article, or to write an article on a subject given them. This plan has been tried and proven a failure, I agree, hence the need of something better. It would not be considered such a task to give their views in a few words on questions before them, or to relate their experience with certain methods of work in the space provided; hardly any would refuse to give them attention and fill them in the best they could.

In speaking of the work of the past I do not wish to be understood that I am in any way finding fault with the workers or the work they have done. I have been one of them. I believe all have been doing what they thought was for the good of the work, what they thought was for the best. If we can see wherein improvements can be made, it is no discredit to the efforts of the past to make it known and endeavor to do better in the future.

To The Canadian Saints.

Editors Herald: Please permit me to express a few thoughts to the Canada Saints, through the columns of the HERALD.

Dear Saints: Since leaving Canada I spent a few days in Grand Haven, Michigan, and Chicago, Illinois, arriving at Dow City, Iowa, the evening of September 5, where I remained till the close of the reunion, tenting with President Joseph Smith.

Leaving Dow City in company with President Joseph Smith, we visited and preached at Council Bluffs, Omaha, Moorhead, Mondamin, Pisgah. We found in each place good, true-hearted Saints.

We spent one night at St. Joseph, Missouri, and arrived at Lamon the afternoon of the 24th. I am located at Liberty Hall, where all is sunshine.

I expect to arrive at Independence, Missouri, in time to take part in the silver wedding of Bishop Roderick May and wife on Saturday evening. Will remain in Independence until the morning of October 2, when President Joseph Smith and self will take our journey for St. Louis, Missouri, and Xenia, Illinois, where I leave Bro. Joseph and take my departure for Canada. Will arrive in Ridgetown in time for the conference.

Bishop Kelley gave me the items from his books this morning which show that Canada has given over five hundred dollars to the Graceland College debt. This includes the special donation by the London Branch of some years ago, and the lists up to date, which will be published in due time. This college debt we trust will soon be paid in full. To this end may all Canada Saints come to both October conferences prepared to contribute their mite, and if deprived of attendance at conference, send to those instructed to collect. Do it; the honor of the church requires it.

The President of the Board of Publication placed in my hands this morning bills due the HERALD Office by Canada Saints. I do hope that each one who owes accounts for church books, tracts, Quarterlies, or other publications will meet me at the conferences and settle said accounts, or not coming to conference, please send me the money and I will receipt and mail you the bill. The HERALD Office has expended over three thousand dollars on machinery this year, and it is thought that better work will be done by the office in the future, and that if standing debts are paid the management will be able to reduce the cost of books. Let us all do our part to accomplish this desired end.

I sincerely hope that many hundreds of Canada Saints who do not now take the church papers will realize it to be a duty and esteem it a privilege to subscribe therefor. Do it now. Just think! the HERALD costs but $1.50 a year, the Ensign $1.00, the Hope 50 cents, and Autumn Leaves $1.00—four dollars per year buys all the church papers, and all for a little more than one cent a day.

Brn. J. H. Tyrrell, of Chatham, N. Overholt, of Selkirk, and William Faulds, No. 142 Peter Street, Toronto, have made special arrangements with the HERALD Office to supply every church book at the earliest notice. Send in your orders. Bro. Faulds has made arrangements so that he is now authorized to bind any church book for you, and is also willing to rebind any books you may wish rebound.

We regret to state that conditions obtained that made it necessary to release Bro. G. H. Henley from the missionary staff.

Bro. R. B. Howlett has been compelled to step out of the missionary field to attend to home duty, but we are glad to inform you that he will take the field after the October conference.

We are pleased to inform the Saints that a long-felt want is to be supplied in that High Priest R. C. Longhurst, president of the London District, is making arrangements to take the field shortly. He will be a blessing to his district, and by his careful, wise counsel and instruction will loose the hands of other missionaries, thus permitting them to wait on their ministry to the world, as directed by the Lord (see Doctrine and Covenants 22:7).

May the dear Lord help us all to do our work wisely and well, in my prayer.

Editors Herald: We came here last evening from Bro. John Erters, president of the Maumee Branch. Bro. Wilson Gaston brought us over to Bro. John Alshouse. We visited the Saints and called them together and held a sacrament meeting on the 21st. This makes eight communion meetings we have held this quarter, and only three members present have failed to avail themselves of the benefits of the meetings. We think it essential that the branch officers look after all scattered members and try to have them attend sacrament meeting as often as they can. It is one means of bringing about peace and union among members and fortifies them against wickedness of every form.

We want every branch secretary in the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District to get all the old branch records in their hands so we can get all dates and historical matter needed when we come. As ever,

Yours in the one faith,

G. A. SMITH.

CHRISTIANSAND, Norway, August 20.

Editors Herald: I am pleased to be able to announce having arrived safely in my field, Scandinavia. I attended the British or European conference at Birmingham, August 2-4. All seemed to agree that it was one of the best and most important ever held in that country. Certainly it was spiritual, and it could hardly be otherwise, considering the earnestness, zeal, and devotedness manifested by the Saints over there. By a renewal of acquaintance with several of the ministry, meeting with many whose names have been familiar for a number of years, and the spiritual, lively meetings, it was to me one of the pleasantest experiences of my life. All seemed to be in good spirits and hopeful of success for the work there.

Bro. Enge attended the conference and feels renewed and encouraged. Together we started for Norway, August 8, arriving there early Sunday morning, the 10th, after a rough voyage of about thirty-six hours across the North Sea.

On the 13th we went to Homborgsund, near Bro. Enge's birthplace, and here, standing in the heather on a rocky hill overlooking the Skagerrak, I preached my first sermon in "Norge," to about twenty very attentive listeners. On Saturday we went to Grimstad, where Bro. Enge has done some good work, and here on the following day, Sunday, August 17, we organized the first branch in this country, to be known as the Grimstad Branch. It contains six members. At ten o'clock in the forenoon we met for prayer and to partake of the sacrament. God's Spirit was present from the beginning. As this was the beginning of the work here, I had prayed much that I might be directed in the selection of officers, and while no immediate manifestation was had directing their selection, I proceeded according to my best judgment, and was pleased to receive the confirmation of the Spirit to the work done—I have never been blessed with more of the Spirit in ordaining than on this occasion. Besides, the brethren ordained afterwards testified to having received manifestations pointing to the work to which they were now appointed. Bro. Nikolai Kronberg was ordained elder, Bro. Adolph Sojland priest, and Bro. Bernt Larsen teacher. The Saints there are certainly receiving the confirmation of the Spirit, and realize it, to their joy and satisfaction, and Sunday's experience will long be remembered by them. In the afternoon we spoke in a garden. About fifty were present and paid good attention. Bro. Muceus came over next day to hold some meetings through the week, while Bro. Enge and I returned here to start the work and to publish my "Address to the Scandinavian people," which, by the way, makes a good tract wherever Scandinavians are found. Bro. Muceus reports favorably from Porsgrund, and we hope to organize there ere long.

Thus the work is being established in this country, and I feel that the Lord's time for this work has come. But to prosecute it properly, to build up the Saints, and to meet the opposition and misrepresentation that will come, we must have the standard books in our language, also a periodical; and after consultation with the brethren here, I have concluded to start Sandheden's Banner again this fall—8 pages, twice a month—and now ask Saints in America to begin to labor in its interest by subscribing and obtaining subscribers, also donating to the paper to make it a success. Cost of paper to America will be seventy-five cents per year; and in order to lessen cost of sending it is desirable that all subscribers living in one neighborhood should make out a list, and have their papers all sent to one address. Isolated subscribers will have their paper sent direct to their address.

Saints in America can hardly realize the situation here. Over there you have all the church books and papers to read, here they have nothing, and if you could only see how eagerly those interested seek to obtain information concerning the history and doctrine of the church, you would gladly aid us in furnishing them with all they need. Printing is very cheap comparatively. We have ordered twenty thousand copies of the address, a good sized four-page tract cost twenty dollars, only one dollar per thousand. Certainly, at that rate, we can afford to sow with a liberal hand. If only all who are, or should be, interested in this mission will take this matter in hand at once by sending us their subscription and contribution, be it much or little, the work here can be made a success. But do not delay, act at once, so that we may act according to the needs of the work here, and know what financial support we can depend upon. Bro. Peter Muceus, Porsgrund, Norway, will receive subscriptions for the Banner, also all contributions for the paper and mission, and keep a careful account of all means received and expended. Subscription price in Scandinavia will be one krone; and Saints in America, who wish the paper sent to relatives or friends here, can have it sent to them direct, at that rate. In sending money, use only postal money orders. One krone equals about twenty-seven cents.

Bro. Muceus will furnish the ministry and Saints in America with copies of the address to be circulated among the Scandinavians over there, if you will make your wants known to him. It will enlighten them relative to our position and doctrine, and should be used wherever those people may be found. I think there are quite a number of them in New Zealand, and we will furnish our missionaries there, if they will make their wants known.

Bro. N. C. Enge wishes to be remembered to his friends in America and other places.

In bonds,

PETER ANDERSON.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, September 23.

Editors Herald: My long absence from the HERALD is not because I have lost interest in the restored gospel; or if it is, I am not conscious of it.

On August 25 I went to Des Moines, Iowa, not to do church work, but for a purpose more unpleasant and embarrassing in its character. At night had the pleasure of listening to Bro. Joseph Smith in the Saints' church. He, Alexander, and Fred A. were on their return from the Newton reunion.

By request of the branch president, I spoke on Tuesday night, and again by request of the branch on Wednesday night. It was Fair time. The congregations were small, but I trust some good was done, and no harm.

From September 5 to 15, I was in attendance at the Stewartsville, Missouri, reunion. Spoke four times and gave twenty-eight blessings, the latter being my first work in that line.

The reunion was a good one, and the efforts made by the committee, the speakers, and the Saints, to contribute their respective parts to the success of the meeting, were indeed commendable. To me it was a time of trial, responsibility, and reception of precious blessings from God, that I shall not soon forget.

We found two stenographers on the ground, Sisters Edith Palfrey of Macon, Missouri, and Fannie I. Morrison of St. Louis, Missouri. These sisters had been accustomed to writing from dictation in offices, but had never done any work in this line. However, they promptly and cheerfully consented to try. The important part of the work performed by these good sisters, free of charge; the faith and gospel effort which they put into their work, together with the success attained, is highly appreciated, and remembered with gratitude to Him who hears and answers prayer.

My wife and I are now enjoying a visit with our only daughter and her husband, Bro. and Sr. A. H. Mills. I spoke in the Stone Church last Sunday forenoon at eleven o'clock, and have been kindly invited to speak again next Sunday. Bro. Henry Kemp gave us a good talk on Sunday night. Indeed we had a pleasant time, both in the morning and at night.

Expect to be at home on or before October 20.

In gospel bonds,

J. R. LAMBERT.

LLANELLY, South Wales, September 12.

Editors Herald: I remained a week in Cardiff, during which time we held nightly meetings. There was not much of a turnout, for the people of Cardiff do not take to the latter-day gospel. They prefer to be fed by the husks in the different churches built by men, than by that manna from heaven, that comes to those who are faithful in the church of the Firstborn. Bro. Gould and family, and the Bivens and family have been holding the fort here for many years. They have labored hard and faithfully to keep the camp-fires blazing in that city. They have rented a very neat and commodious little hall, and that at a sacrifice, because of the few to keep up the expense. They also have a live little Sunday-school. Bro. Trapp, one of our intellectual and spiritual young men, is residing there at present, and is rendering them all the help he can within his power. This young brother has been appointed to labor as a missionary in the Eastern District, and will also labor at Portsmouth, South England. We have every reason to believe that Bro. Trapp will make an efficient and effectual worker in the capacity of a missionary.

My next move was to Dinas, Tonypandy, and Gilfach-Goch. Brn. Lewis and Pierce were with me during my sojourn at those places, and together we crossed the high and long mountain from Penygraig to Gilfach on shanks pony. However, it was a very pleasant journey, notwithstanding it made us perspire and puff. The scenery was grand and delightful along the mountain sides and in the valleys and has to be seen to be appreciated. At one spot we could count no less than eight towns, so this will give you an idea how thickly Wales is populated. Our meetings were cheering and profitable, and we hope that some good was done. Brn. Lewis, Pierce, and John Davies have labored faithfully during this summer to get the gospel before the people by tracting the houses and preaching on the streets of these respective places, and I can assure you it is no easy task to preach on the streets in this country, as many of the people who gather around are rough in their demeanor. It takes considerable patience and courage on the part of the ministry to keep up this part of the work. May the Lord continue to bless them in their earnest efforts to win souls to him.

I arrived at this place some three weeks ago and found the few Saints here struggling along against many odds which they have to encounter. Bro. Dewi Chwefror, president of the district, met me here and reports progress in the district. He seemed cheerful and alive to the interest of the work. Brn. Gwilym Davies, David Thomas, Edward Williams, Morris and Philips of Pontyates spent last Sabbath with us, and we had a very enjoyable time together in the services of the day. These brethren have striven hard to keep the standard of King Immanuel before the people in their vicinity. They are strong in "the faith once delivered to the saints."

We have some good, faithful sisters in this little branch, who, by the grace of God, have borne the heat of the day; namely, Srs. Treharne, Thomas, Morris, and Davies. Sr. Elizabeth Lloyd, who with Sr. Eleanor Treharne acted as deacons for the branch for several years. These two have often held meetings by themselves, which shows what sisters can do when they are interested in the work of the Lord.

Bro. Arthur Edwards is enjoying fair health. He was badly afflicted for some time. His wife and son are getting along nicely. Sr. Elizabeth Lloyd has gone to Portland, Oregon, to live with her brother, who is quite a prominent person in that city. Her address is 208 North Union Avenue, Portland, Oregon. If there are any Saints living in the city, or any of the traveling ministry stopping over there, will they please call on Sr. Lloyd, as she desires to get acquainted with the Saints in Oregon. Will Sr. Cobb of Lamoni, Iowa, please make a note of this as I understand she has relatives in the church living in Portland, or near there. We take great pleasure in recommending Sr. Lloyd to the fellowship of the Saints.

Bro. William Lewis and family have moved from Cardiff to this place, and we are of the opinion that the change will be very profitable to this branch. Bro. Lewis is one of our standby's, being a wise and considerate man. In fact, he is the right man in the right place, as missionary to Wales. His wife is very contented with her lot. Little Ruth is doing well, and is getting to be a real Welsh girl, for she can say "yes, indeed, to goodness to you now." By the way, she was baptized into the church with two others last Saturday, making fifteen who were baptized in the mission within the last week or so. Hence it is that the work of the Lord is moving along slowly, but we think, on sure and solid basis. Cheering reports come to hand from Bro. Rushton, Sheldon, Greenwood, Ecclestone, Davies, Jones, Thorburn, and Arber, of the missionary force.

I leave to-morrow for Aberdare, Nantyglo, and other points northward. Bro. Henry Ellis and family have moved here from Lydney, and he was elected president of this branch last Sunday. Also his brother William was baptized here last Saturday. These brethren will be a great strength and help to the work here. I must not forget to mention the kindness of Bro. Lot Bishop, David Edwards, and David Morris of Dinas, for their kindness to us. These Saints are active, doing all they possibly can to establish the work among their neighbors.

Yours hastily,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

GRINNELL, Iowa, September 21.

Editors Herald: I have never written to the HERALD before, but have often thought I would like to. I love the church papers, and feel a loss when we are without them. I also love this great latter-day work, and feel so glad and grateful when I think that I was led to see the light of the restored gospel, for so many are blinded that they can not see the light. I feel sorry for this kind of people, and feel that I would gladly show them the way if they would but listen; but so many will not even listen. I am glad that my eyes were not blinded by Satan, but God permitted me to see the light. Having entered the narrow way, my desire is to continue therein until the race is run. I feel my weakness to do anything for the work, but I am glad to do what I can, and am desirous of becoming stronger that I may be of more service to the Master.

I love the company of the Saints, and how I did enjoy our last reunion, held at Newton, Iowa. It seemed to me I never enjoyed anything better in my life. It seemed indeed to be a saints' reunion. I was strengthened much by the preaching and prayer-meetings, and I have a broader view of the work of God, and more of a desire to do my duty, be it small or great, and to come up higher and be more worthy of the blessings God has in store for those who love him.

Your sister,

BELLE WALLS.

HIGHLAND GROVE, Ontario, September 19.

Editors Herald: I believe the last I wrote for publication was August 11. Since that time four more were baptized at Gooderham, and three at what they call the Billings settlement—heads of families, Mr. Charley Billings and wife, and one Mrs. Smith of the town of Lindsay.

On the 10th instant I came to this place, twenty miles east of Gooderham; held services at a farmhouse that night, and on the 11th I walked twelve miles, and secured the schoolhouse there. Held services in the same farmhouse that night, and on Sunday the 14th, held two services in the schoolhouse, and then the schoolhouse was closed on me, because of some mischievous persons spitting tobacco on the floor.

I visited on the 15th and 16th, and walked twelve miles. Had word from Elder T. A. Phillips to-day requesting me to come to Fenelon Falls to assist him. Will return to Gooderham and finish up my work there; then on to join Bro. T. A. at Fenelon Falls.

The farmers are very busy in harvest here. Everything in that line is late, and the wet weather has also interfered considerably.

I am feeling quite well in body this summer. Think my restup last winter was of much benefit to my health. This is a hard field. We have to rough it and tough it and pray for grace and courage, but through Christ we are able to master all things.

SAMUEL W. TOMLINSON.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario, September 18.

Editors Herald: Silence is golden; but then we are admonished not to be selfish, so I have determined to break the silence and pen a few thoughts relative to our past and present conditions, and the circumstances that have produced them.

Appointed to the Niagara Falls District, by the June conference, London District, in company with Elder Gregory, we proceeded to Hamilton, there, to make the first effort. Conditions in the city not being suitable, owing to disturbance in the branch, we decided to separate for a time. Coming to Niagara Falls about the first of July, I have since then been endeavoring to spread the gospel as circumstances would permit. In this old settled portion of country there is a great deal of conservatism to contend with, and I have found it difficult to get places to preach in, but more difficult to get the people to talk to, after having secured a rostrum. Hall rent is high and schools are not open for religious service, as the people have churches "galore." But then, the "Mormon" never expects to get them and he does not.

We counseled with the Saints and decided to try street work at the town of Drummondville some two miles distant. There for one week and a half we waged war upon evil and error and talked the gospel of Jesus Christ to those who would listen. Our vantage ground was the historic Lundy's Lane, where in days ago the struggling "Yank" and British forces contended for supremacy. The results of the physical conflict have passed into history; and as to the spiritual one, I believe there is recorded upon the archives of heaven, "It was preached as a witness." My voice failing, owing to the excessive damp, in part produced by the scenic Falls, I discontinued, and interest did not warrant securing a hall.

While laboring here I have been assisted by many of the Saints who rallied to my support and with their songs did much to attract the audience for the speaker. Neither did they forget that the elder had physical wants, and as a pleasant surprise presented him with some of the "essential" in this land of pay.

On the second and third days of August I met with the gathering of Saints at Waterford, where a successful and pleasant two-day meeting was held, and came back strengthened for the battle. I secured a hall in the town of St. David's, six miles distant, and next day I called upon many of the inhabitants, delivered some tracts, and sold a number of sermon pamphlets, and talked as a Latter Day Saint only can. My audience, small at first, continued to increase, until the preachers finding their craft in danger succeeded in getting the hall closed against me. Not another place was available, so I talked twice on the street, but could not continue, as my throat will not stand open-air work. Bro. Bennett, who had been laboring to the south of me, at this juncture, put in an appearance. He had exhausted all mean's trying to secure an opening in his country, so we counseled together and resolved to get a tent for the rest of the season, and be independent in regard to a place to preach in. Even then we could not get a spot in St. David's to put-up tent, so we moved on to the next town, Stamford, and began. However, I continued to visit the interested ones at St. David's, and have had the pleasure of baptizing two, and I think there are more to follow.

On July 27 I rebaptized a Bro. and Sr. Warren. They had been baptized in England in 1847, by Glaud Rodger, but on coming to this country shortly afterwards, they refused to follow the Utah heresies, and not knowing of the Reorganization were forced to wander alone, without the companionship of Saints. Through the long, lonely years that followed, their love for the gospel did not abate, and when for the first time, in 1897, they heard the same message of purity, the glow in their hearts burst into flame as they realized that God's work was still in the earth. However, being baptized in the troublous days of disorganization, they decided to renew their covenant, and so asked for the ordinance to be performed.

We are at present located at the town of Chippewa, another historic battle-field. Last night, our first, a fair audience greeted us, but there is a disposition not to get too near the tent. I hope it will disappear—not the tent, but the prejudice—and allow us to tell the story. We feel better talking to people than empty benches.

Yours in the fight,

ALEXANDER McMULLEN.

CLAY CROSS, England, September 10.

Editors Herald: Before leaving America for this country we promised to write to the Saints through the HERALD, but four months have nearly gone without. We have no excuse to make only that we have been negligent; but if we have not written we often talk about you all and the kindness shown to us while amongst you. And for the most enjoyable times we had, we return you all our best thanks for the same.

We set sail from America to Liverpool May 21 last; landed in Liverpool May 29, after a very pleasant voyage, neither of us being seasick. We reached home the same day, and most all were surprised to see us. Our brother, Thomas Holmes, and wife and child safely landed from America to Liverpool, September 3, after a very pleasant voyage on the White Star Line on the ship Oceanic. They are not in the church yet, but we do pray that they may see the true gospel before long, and obey.

We are both well, and Sister Carrie has never been better for years, than she is now. Hope the Saints who were sick belonging to the Brooklyn Branch have recovered. You all have our prayers in your behalf. Your brother and sister,

GEORGE H. AND CARRIE HOLMES.

MISSOURI VALLEY, September 22.

Editors Herald: When I last wrote, Bro. Hansen and I were at Sloan with the tent, but Brn. Crabb and Smith came and took charge of it, and have been with it ever since. I started out by myself to new fields of labor. I felt somewhat discouraged, but started out for the north part of district stopping over Sunday with the Saints in Sioux City, and Monday morning bade them good-bye, and started on my journey feeling lonesome; but I found an opening north of the city, about fifteen miles, where there was a union church called Belle Vista. It was harvest time. I stayed there about a month, and told them the gospel story. I left some interested. I expect to return sometime this winter. I was kindly cared for by Mr. and Mrs. John Pike, not members of the church.

From there I went to Smithland, the brethren securing the hall, and paying one dollar a night for it. I occupied three nights, with fair interest; but we could not stand the expense, so I closed, and as I could not find an opening, I visited the Saints scattered around in those parts, and tried to cheer them up. I trust I did some good.

My wife and I attended the reunion at Dow City, which was a source of strength to me. While there I received my patriarchal blessing. In it I was told that my heart had been sorely troubled on account of trials, temptations, and by reason of the environments that had been placed around me, when my faith stood in the balance. How true it was, and how grateful I feel to the Lord for his protecting care and deliverance! I left the reunion feeling greatly strengthened again to enter upon my duties in the mission field with a stronger determination to do all I could to help roll on this grand and glorious work, which is dearer to me than life. The longer I am in this great work, the grander and clearer it appears to me. I can see my own faults and weaknesses, and without God's help I know I can never overcome them.

We should always be on the watchtower, and shun the very appearance of evil, for Satan is always on the alert to overthrow us. He is never slothful in his work and never neglects his business.

D. A. HUTCHINGS.

FARMINGTON, Iowa, September 22.

Editors Herald: I noticed some mistakes in Bro. J. W. Peterson's article "Who was Joseph Smith" number 9, published in HERALD of September 10, which I think should be corrected. He says in speaking of the prophecy concerning the rebellion, "Ann Mullholland Davis who died recently at Lyons, Wisconsin, had the original manuscript in her possession, in the winter of 1838-39, and carried it concealed about her person. William Mullholland was Joseph Smith's private secretary, and during the persecution which arose in Missouri it was thought best by Joseph Smith to give the manuscript to his secretary, who, in turn, placed it in the hands of his sister, Ann Mullholland." While the circumstances are true, the names of the parties are not correct. It was Ann Scott Davis, my mother's sister, who died some years ago, at Lyons, Wisconsin, who had the original manuscript and other important church papers in her possession, during the persecution in Missouri.

James Mullholland was Joseph Smith's private secretary. He was my uncle by marriage; he married my mother's youngest sister Sarah Scott. My father and mother were with the church at Far West, in 1838-39, and I have frequently heard my mother say that her sister, had the important church papers in her care during the trouble there.

SUSAN WARNOCK.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, September 22.

Dear Herald: As I have not seen any news from this part of the Lord's heritage for some time, feel it my duty to write and let our readers know something of the work at this place.

As we have no church or any established place of meeting here, it is a hard matter to get the gospel before the people.

As we are told in the Scriptures to give honor to whom honor is due, I feel to speak of the effort being put forth at this place by our missionaries. Some three weeks ago Bro. John Harp received permission from Mrs. Conner to hold meetings in a pavilion in her park. On learning that Bro. Harp received no compensation for preaching, she agreed to let him have the use of it free of charge. Whereas Bro. John Harp, assisted by Brn. Charley Harp, E. W. Nunley, and David Parmer, held a ten-day meeting. The speakers were blessed with good liberty and there was good interest shown throughout the meeting by outsiders, and also some of the members attended regularly and rendered what assistance they could. I feel that the work has revived at this place and there are some near the door of the kingdom. I trust it will not be long ere we will have a church built in the city of San Antonio and all the honest in heart will be gathered out.

Our district conference, which was held at Crockett Schoolhouse, Bandera County, under the supervision of Bro. John Harp, our district president, was quite a success. Others of the ministry present were Brn. W. H. Davenport, Charley Harp, and David Parmer. A spirit of unity prevailed among the Saints, and the Lord blessed us with his Holy Spirit, causing our hearts to rejoice in the holy One of Israel. There are some true Latter Day Saints in that part of the district, and when conference was over, we were loath to part with them. Sr. Love furnished her organ, and the young people took great interest in the song service, and the Spirit of the Lord seemed to be in every song. One soul was inducted into the kingdom by Bro. John Harp, and I believe there are others who will soon follow the example.

Brn. John Harp and W. H. Davenport remained in that part of the district, and Brn. Charley Harp and David Parmer returned to the city and have preached several times with good interest.

Wherever there is good to be done, Satan is always on the alert and ready to put in his work. Not long since there was a union Sunday-school organized by a Presbyterian minister. Some of the Saints sent their children to the Sunday-school and when the superintendent found out there were some Latter Day Saints attending, he sent off and had a lot of tracts printed, giving ten reasons why they should not fellowship with the Mormons, as they call us. They are trying to make the people believe our church and the Utah church are the same. Bro. Charley Harp asked for permission to speak at the place where they were holding the Sunday-school, that he might explain the difference between our church and the Utah church, but was denied the privilege. So last night he talked in the pavilion, showing the difference between the two churches. He was blessed with the Spirit and made it plain to be seen that we had no affiliation with the people in the West. I would that our accusers could have heard him, but they made themselves scarce.

May the Lord bless his people throughout the land and country and strengthen them that they may be able to withstand the fiery darts of Satan is my earnest prayer in Jesus' name.

Yours for truth,

RUTH GIFFORD.

Convention Minutes.

Southern Nebraska—Sunday-school association convened with the Wilber Branch. An entertainment was given on the evening of September 12. Three sessions were held on the 13th. Meetings were instructive and good was done. The Sunday-school workers were strengthened, and our duties to the young were thoroughly canvassed. Peace and harmony prevailed throughout the entire convention.

Pastoral.

According to previous promise, made through the HERALD, I will now state to all whom it may concern, that on my return home I hope to be able to give patriarchal blessings as may be requested by the Saints. However, this can not be done except when the services of a proper stenographer can be secured, as it is desirable that a complete record be kept of all blessings given.

I expect to be at home on or before the 20th of October. All who desire blessings at my hands, can make application to me, and we will then see what arrangements can be made. Any information desired, concerning this department of church work, will be freely given, so far as I am able to impart it; that is, in my own field of labor. I would not presume to speak for the evangelical ministers who have been ordained until they have spoken for themselves. As I understand it, the presiding patriarch is the one to speak for them until they have the opportunity of speaking for themselves when assembled in council.

I commenced the work of giving blessings at the Stewartville, Missouri, reunion, and am now anxious and determined to press forward and do what I can to discharge all the duties which belong to my office and calling.

I am fully convinced that all Saints who feel the necessity of help through this ordinance, applying with intelligent convictions and pure desires, will meet with solid satisfaction; and because of the experience had, will become able to testify that this, too, is a divine ordinance, the purpose of which is to bring us nearer to God.

Bro. Alex. H. Smith, presiding patriarch, and Bro. E. C. Briggs, who was ordained to this office at the same time that I was, are both residents of Lamoni. The Saints who may prefer to receive their blessings at their hands should feel entirely free to do so. I would much prefer that they should go to them with confidence than to come to me with any degree of doubt.

May faith, knowledge, and good works increase among the people of God, is the earnest wish and prayer of

Your brother in the truth,

J. R. LAMBERT.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, September 23, 1902.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent in and for Utah, Salt Lake District.

To the Saints and friends of Salt Lake District, Utah, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, please take notice: That former Bishop's agent, Sr. J. D. Cooper, of Ogden, Utah, has resigned the position of agent in and for said district, and by recommendation of the district conference of said Reorganized Church, Bro. Guy L. M. Brokaw, of Provo, Utah, has been duly appointed agent of the Bishopric for the Reorganized Church in and for said district and State of Utah. All contributions for the benefit of the church and the preaching of the gospel, made by the Saints and friends in and for the State of Utah, should be sent to Bro. Guy L. M. Brokaw, 558 E. 4th N. Street, Provo, Utah.

It is hoped also that every one who has membership in said Reorganized Church in and for the State of Utah, will be alive to the interests of the work, and contribute according to the law of God, and see that their names are placed upon the Bishop's record showing the discharge of duty, if only the mite. The Lord commended the giving of the mite. No one is exempt from a proper compliance with this law, no more than they would be from complying with any other law that has been given of God for the good of his children. The compliance, however, is voluntary on the part of each and every one, so that the reward, whatever that may be, may attach to the "doers" of the law.

The special thanks of the Bishopric are extended to Sr. J. D. Cooper for the faithful manner in which she has conducted the work and position of agent in the past, and we hope and trust that the Lord will specially remember and qualify her for the special duties in the new work in which she shall engage in the future.

In behalf of the Bishopric,
E. L. KELLEY,

LAMONI, Iowa, September 27, 1902.

Married.

LONG—SOWREY.—At the home of the bride, the residence of Bro. Thomas Stuart, Lamoni, at 5 o'clock p. m., September 17, 1902, Bro. Elmer E. Long of McArthur, Ohio, to Sr. Laura (Stuart) Sowrey, of Lamoni, Iowa. Bro. Long is one of our worthy missionaries in Southern Ohio, and the bride one of Lamoni's excellent young sisters. The couple took the evening train for their new home, McArthur, Ohio, and the good wishes of their many friends go with them hopeful of their happiness. E. L. Kelley officiating clergyman.

LANE—BELL.—At six o'clock the evening of September 17, 1902, at the residence of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. Thomas J. Bell, Lamoni, Iowa, Bro. J. Arthur Lane to Sr. Clara M. Bell, both of Lamoni, Bishop E. L. Kelley, officiating. A large gathering of relatives and friends were present to speed the young couple on their way, and all indeed went merry as "the marriage bells." Sr. Clara Bell for a long time has been a worker among the HERALD force, and carries the good will of all with her. Bro. Lane was formerly a Graceland College student, but now is employed in the mercantile business. They left on the morning of the 18th to visit the groom's parents at Little Sioux, Iowa. A happy couple and they will win success.

WHITE—SMITH.—At 7.30 p. m., September 24, 1902, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smith, Lamoni, Mr. A. Otis White, son of missionary, Elder D. C. White, and Miss E. Louise Smith. Ceremony by Bishop E. L. Kelley. This was a quiet family wedding, the guests being almost wholly of the two families represented, but there were sufficient of these to tax the fine residence of Mr. Smith to accommodate them. Everything was enjoyable and the young couple started upon the long journey of a hopeful life, full of joy and hope. Both are excellent young people, and we certainly wish and expect that they may ever be happy.

Died.

HAAS.—Annie Caroline Haas was born December 18, 1875, at Henderpomer, Germany, died September 23, 1902, being 26 years, 9 months, 5 days old. Came to United States in 1890, was baptized in 1897 in West Pullman Branch by Elder Francis Earl, and lived a faithful Saint. She bore her two weeks affliction with great fortitude, and was ready to take her flight when the time came. Her mourners are her husband, 3 children, father, mother, 2 sisters, and 1 brother, all present at funeral, besides a host of friends who had learned to love her. Funeral sermon by Elder W. Strange, assisted by Elder P. Pement.

EVANS.—Alice, infant daughter of Bro. and Sr. F. A. Evans, at Bevier, Missouri, September 18, aged 2 weeks. Services from house in charge of J. A. Tanner.

TAYLOR.—Sr. Marie, wife of W. S. Taylor, was born in Canada, January 30, 1837, died at Sherwin, Kansas, September 19, 1902. She was baptized at Newark, Wisconsin, July 6, 1852, and was married to W. S. Taylor, March 6, 1855. Of this union there were 8 children born, 7 daughters, and 1 son. All are alive but 1 daughter. Services in charge of T. S. Hayton, sermon by E. A. Davis.

STUDY.—David Study was born in Richland County, Ohio, December 2, 1826, died September 20, 1902, near Thurman, Iowa. With his parents he followed the body of the church to Missouri and Illinois, and in 1846 he went with the great emigration to Council Bluffs where he enlisted in the Mexican War. In 1849 he was married to Mary A. Ettleman and settled near Thurman. He united with the church when a boy and renewed his covenant with the Reorganization in 1897. A wife, 2 sons, and 4 daughters remain to mourn his loss. Funeral service by M. H. Forscutt at Saints church near Thurman.

Books Received.

The "Ideal School" is a little sixty-four page pamphlet sent out by Higginbotham Bros., of Faulkton, South Dakota, in which is incorporated in a little story, some of the principles of the faith and beliefs of the Millennial Dawn people. This little pamphlet fixes the date of the beginning of the Millennium in 1874, and October 1, 1914, as the time when they expect to see all existing governments overthrown. "We believe," says the pamphlet, "the Savior came in 1874 and is superintending the harvest period of the gospel age which overlaps the Millennial age forty years, and that this harvest period will be completed in 1914 and the kingdom fully set up." Scriptural passages are introduced in the story to support the positions. It is interestingly written.

Twenty-five House Plans For Twenty-five Cents.

We have just received from the publishers a copy of their new book containing plans and specifications, with perspective and sectional views, for twenty-five houses of various sizes from two rooms up. This handy, compact and very useful volume contains, in addition to the foregoing, valuable information relative to building, such as the number of shingles required in a roof, amount of plaster for a house, quantity of materials required for building a house, and many other facts of permanent and practical value. It is useful to every architect, builder, mason and carpenter, and particularly to those who anticipate erecting a new or remodeling an old dwelling, as it may save hundreds of dollars. With the assistance of this little volume, an architect's services may be dispensed with, as any contractor can erect a building from the plans and specifications it contains.

The booklet is published by Geo. W. Ogilvie & Co., 166 to 174 South Clinton Street, Chicago, Illinois, price twenty-five cents.

Chandler in Guatemala.

World's Fair, St. Louis, September 15.—John Rice Chandler, World's Fair Commissioner to the five Central American countries writes from La Antigua, Guatemala, as follows: "The Governor and other authorities of this prolific district of Central America show more than ordinary interest in St. Louis. San Antonio, Sta. Lucia, Cotzumalguapa and Chimaltenango (on the way to the lately destroyed Quezaltenango) have also been visited by me and they promise even better and larger exhibits, each in their own department, than Antigua itself. Although this section is especially notable through its production of coffee, it is quite a producer also of cacao, cana, rare woods and medicinal plants and orchids. Antigua, which has been destroyed by earthquake and rebuilt more times than I care to count, is at the very foot of Volcan de Agua and is surrounded by bristling active craters like Fuego, Acatenango, etc. It is on the lower flanks of these monster volcanoes where the best coffee and similar products are grown. All the surrounding country can also make splendid exhibits of rubber, cacao, fiber-plants like the yucca and arrow-root series which easily produce two crops per year in these sections. All through here there are numberless fruits practically unknown at home. Very good preserves are made by the natives from chilacayotl, guavas, figs, and tamarinds. Immense quantities of old-style roses are grown about Sta. Maria half way up Volcan de Agua, and many other flowers are likewise used for perfumery and in the arts. Much of the cotton grown on the flats is dyed by the aid of native plants and worked by the Indians in rude looms which make remarkably strong goods. But the principal modern factory is at Cantel (near Quezaltenango), which also suffered during the recent earthquakes. Other fibers like ramie, pita, lechuguilla and similar products of the agave family are manufactured into hammocks, rope, mats, etc., etc., in all the districts from Escuintla, through Chinautla and as far north as Coban.

In the dark jungles around Cotzumalguapa are the obelisks and other archæological remains and monuments of a lost race. Although mostly buried in the ooze of the tropical swamps, the portions of human figures, jaguars and other animals in stone, still visible, are from twenty to thirty feet in height. The government has promised me they will exhibit all of the above-mentioned which can be removed, as also reproductions from the famous Quirigua, Sta. Cruz and Zac-uleu ruins of the obelisks, from palaces, etc., of extinct aboriginal civilization."

Water in which a little soda has been dissolved is excellent for cooling and comforting a fever patient. Sponge the patient frequently with the solution.

Bro. F. C. Warnky writes that Sr. Warnky's address, for six weeks, will be at Bountiful, Utah. She will be pleased to see any of the elders and Saints. She will attend the general conference of the Utah church October 6.

D. R. Chambers wrote from Council Bluffs, Iowa, October 4: "Everything is moving along nicely here in the city. My health is not very good at present."

"Concerning John Alexander Dowie" is the title of an article in the November Autumn Leaves that ought to be of use and benefit to missionaries, as it contains many quotations from Dowie's writings showing his work and teachings.

Editorial.

EGGS, EGGS, BAD EGGS. WORSE ARGUMENT.

Here is a touch of old-time argumentation. The Ravenden, Arkansas, Hustler, for September 4, has this to say by a Martins Creek correspondent:

THE MARTINS CREEK EPISODE.

Elder D. R. Baldwin was delivering some splendid sermons at our schoolhouse each night last week, and while he was warming up to one of his favorite themes on the night of the 26th, the color of shame and remorse was brought to our face by the cowardly attack of what we believe to be some foolish boys.

Spat! Spat! Whiz! Spat! came some eggs through the open windows just missing the speaker but smearing the object-lesson on the board. Down went the windows. The elder proceeded as though nothing had occurred, and ingeniously used the dark, ugly spots on the board to help illustrate his subject. Elder Baldwin is hoping the guilty parties will not be found out. He says, "The poor fellows should be educated, not punished; they have nothing against me personally nor the cause I represent; it was only a little juice out of a few bundles of green, wild oats. Let it pass."

We are not feeling so lenient, and it will not go smooth if they can be spotted. E. F. R.

Bro. Baldwin's philosophy deals with principles and their results, not with resentment, or revenge for the acts of men resulting from the influences of false environments. It sometimes happens, however, that sins unrebuked and unpunished ends in the sinner assuming it as his right to continue in sinning.

A NEW THEOLOGICAL METHOD.

Professor Orestes U. Bean, of Richfield, Utah, has written a play entitled "Corianton." It is represented to be a spectacular historical play having for the object the presentation of some features of the faith of the church in an esthetical and attractive form to the play going, and theater loving public from the stage, in an auxiliary effort to aid the ministry of the forum and pulpit.

From references to the play seen in the press of the day we gather that the usual features of a noble hero, a lovely and virtuous heroine, a villain, and an unfortunate wreck of woman, with the necessary support of such characters to make up an attractive stage setting, are all found in this play.

The remarkable feature of the play, other than the reputation and faith of its author, is that the histrionic talent engaged in its theatrical presentation, including some excellent play actors, all, or nearly all members of the church in Utah.

It was long since decided in some religious circles not to permit the devil or the outside barbarian public to monopolize all the spirit stirring music, instrumental, or vocal; and now, if theater going is wrong, and the play house an anteroom to the Devil's workshop, as some religious devotees have it, an attack upon his Satanic majesty's camp-followers by an organized band of actors who are members of a church is decidedly an innovation rather in advance of the Salvation Army, or American Volunteers.

And if this same theatrical company have in view the exploiting of the dogmas of the belief, and propagate the views of the priesthood it is a unique movement and ought to meet a measure of success by reason of its peculiarity and its audacity.

The theater is no new thing in the Utah church, and this play of Corianton need only to be followed by a corps of dancers in costume to attract the attention of the theater-going world whether converts to the faith are made or not.

THE COAL MINERS' STRIKE UNSETTLED.

President Roosevelt has been making efforts to effect a reconciliation between the coal mine owners and the striking anthracite coal miners. A conference between the labor leaders and the coal barons called by President Roosevelt in Washington on October 3, in the temporary executive mansion. The attempt at settlement was a failure. Pres. Mitchell for the strikers offered to submit differences to a committee of arbitration and abide by the resulting decision, but the coal barons refused. So the contest is still on, and the long-suffering public will have to pay for the stubbornness of the contestants.

We in the West can scarcely realize what a continuance of this stubborn contest means for the people in the East. Here we can fall back on our plentiful soft coal supply, for the users of hard coal in this part of the country are not numerous; but in the East anthracite coal is almost the universal fuel, especially among the poorer classes, and hence the exorbitant prices at which anthracite will surely be sold makes its use quite prohibitive to the very classes of people who need it most. There is sure to be much suffering because of this strike, and it is to be regretted that a speedy adjustment can not be made.

President Roosevelt has done about all he can do, unless he should call a session extraordinary of Congress, and this will probably not be done until it is apparent that Pennsylvania is powerless to control the situation. From present indications it looks as if such a contingency will ultimately arise and drastic measures by Congress become necessary. The situation is becoming critical. The editor of the World's Work in a recent issue remarked that such disturbances as the anthracite miners' strike are "feeding socialism as coal does a fire." And so they are. Already thousands of people are clamoring for Uncle Sam to step in and take the coal mines into his full charge and protect the people from such sufferings as will result from the present strike.

Even if the differences over which the strikers and mine operators are contending be adjusted by arbitration, it is likely to be only temporary and in another short time the strike be on again in all its bitterness. Carrol D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, in a recent speech stated that in his opinion arbitration at its best is only a temporary settlement of strikes. Religion, he says, is the only true solution. He said:

In religion we find the highest form of solution yet offered. Next to religion comes constructive evolution, that evolution which believes in the potency of effort. The economic man is growing into the coördinative man. We are to have a new law of wages, grown out of the religious thought.

The old struggle was for existence; the new struggle is for a wider spiritual margin. The application of this religious idea is the true solution of the labor problem. The whole question must be placed on an altruistic basis. Man's average of conduct is not better than his character. His treatment of his fellows is consistent with his sense of justice.

This expression by Mr. Wright appeals strongly to all students of labor troubles and social conditions. Human nature must always be considered as a strong factor in all social conditions, and changes within men themselves are sure to make changes in social conditions. Let humanity remain unchanged, and forced changes in surrounding conditions only bring greater disturbances.

The lessons of the anthracite will be anxiously watched.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

The following from a late letter from Bro. W. H. Kelley, in Utah, may be of interest: "The Utah reunion, held in this city September 5, and concluding on the 14th, was a very enjoyable meeting. A goodly number of the Saints from adjacent places were present, although the congregation was not large at any time. Respectful attention and good order prevailed at all of the sessions. Good fellowship and the spirit of unity prevailed throughout. Brn. W. S. Pender, F. L. Sawley, A. M. Chase, Swen Swenson, and D. C. White, of the general ministry, were present. The speakers were equal to the demands of the hour and the word was preached with power and force. The Saints took a very active part in the meetings. The prayer services were well attended and participated in by all present, or nearly so, the Spirit being present to encourage and comfort. The business of the conference was transacted on the 12th and 13th with unity and dispatch. Nearly, if not everything done, was by unanimous consent. The meetings all through were a pleasant surprise, when I thought there was a good opportunity for failure; they were of excellent tone and prompted by the liberty of the Spirit, all satisfactory and comforting to the Saints. The meeting was so well enjoyed that a unanimous voice came for a reunion to be held in 1903. All returned home satisfied, cheered, and comforted in the faith, and newly resolved to go on in the work. There are good Saints in Utah as well as elsewhere. An occasional member of the dominant church here comes into the meetings. One evening Ex-congressman John T. Coine was present, whom I met a number of years ago in Kirtland, Ohio. He seemed to enjoy the services, was very respectful, gave me his card and invited me to call on him. Yesterday morning, the 16th, Bro. D. C. White and I made a friendly call on President Joseph F. Smith at his office. There was present with him at the time his two counselors, John R. Winder and Anthon H. Lund, John Henry Smith of the Twelve, and Hyrum Mack Smith of the Twelve, and Charles W. Penrose editor of the Deseret News. The president received us very cordially, introduced us to those present, and we all joined in a run of desultory talk."

Bro. Waller, of Honolulu, writes: "Bro. and Sr. Anderson are staying with us, and through their efforts an increased interest in the work is being taken by the members. We prize the services of Sr. Anderson especially valuable in the Sunday-school work and among the sisters. I hope that we may be able to establish branch Sunday-schools in different parts of the city. The one started among the Japanese some time ago is flourishing. Mrs. Waller and the children are well after their return from California, and I am glad to have them with me."

Elder Peter Anderson, in charge of the Scandinavian Mission, writes from Porsgrund, Norway, September 17, of the work there as follows: "I have traveled a great deal in the Central and Western States, but nowhere have I seen such opportunities as are now afforded us of reaching the people in these countries; and if I could only make the Scandinavian Saints in America understand the situation, I believe they would more than supply us. We do not and can not afford to spend our time here without the necessary means to work, and until we get a better foothold our supply must come from America. Printing is cheap here, and whatever is invested in publishing the Book of Mormon, would soon be returned to the church; for there is now a demand for the book here and in America. I have printed twenty thousand tracts, cost only twenty dollars. While in Porsgrund we spoke on the street Sundays, several hundred present, and eager to get tracts. One more has been added at Grimstad, and two at Porsgrund, and several are interested in both places; also at Christiansand."

Mrs. Orpha Berger writes from Shaw, Kansas, as follows: "I do not belong to any church, but would like to, as soon as convenient. I know of no elder anywhere near. My parents united with the Latter Day Saints Church in Elk County. My father's name is T. R. Berger. I have always been raised in that belief and faith. My husband united with the Christian Church about a month ago, but I do not see it as he does, so will just wait until I can unite with the church I believe in."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A beautiful wreath of seaweed and moss and shells, made by Sr. Annie McMullin, daughter of the late Elder D. S. Mills, of Newport, California, has been presented to the Saints' Home by the hands of Bro. and Sr. Elbert Smith.

Bro. T. J. Chatburn baptized four August 31. He wrote from Janesville, Wisconsin, September 3.

In the General Church News column of the Deseret News, for September 16, the following notice of the visit of Brn. W. H. Kelley and D. C. White to President Joseph F. Smith, of the Utah church, as referred to in his letter, extracts of which appear elsewhere: "Elder William H. Kelley, president of the Twelve Apostles of the Reorganized Church, accompanied by Elder D. C. White of the same body, made a friendly call on the First Presidency this morning and engaged in an interesting conversation. Elder Kelley has been in attendance on a series of meetings held by that denomination in this city, and is now about to depart for other sections."

Bishop Thomas Taylor, of Birmingham, England, has sent to Bishop Kelley an additional contribution from the English Saints for the college debt. This contribution was made by the East Manchester Saints and amounts to eleven dollars and seventy cents, and Bishop Taylor says there is more coming. Good for the English Saints!

Joseph Smith, R. C. Evans, and E. L. Kelley left Lamoni last week bound for the reunion at Xenia, Illinois. They were probably in St. Louis, Missouri, last Sunday.

Bro. Chas. H. Fish reached Lamoni Tuesday morning from Lansing, Michigan. He comes to take a position as proofreader in the HERALD Office. He has had a long experience as proofreader, and we welcome the brother into our midst and to the office.

Under date of October 3, D. MacGregor writes from Wabash, Ontario: "The work is progressing encouragingly. The missionaries are sacrificing nobly, while unity and harmony pervades the mission. Have been laboring in Chatham District this summer and have had the pleasantest association of Brn. Knisley and Baggerly. Canada has been considering the propriety of running a mission paper. Definite action will probably be taken at our coming conference."

THE BOOK OF MORMON AND THE INSPIRED TRANSLATION: DO THEY AGREE?

The statement has frequently been made, and in fact I have accepted it, that the quotations from the Old Testament made by the Book of Mormon, mainly agree with the King James Translation; while the Inspired Translation makes many corrections in those same chapters. The prophecy of Isaiah is largely quoted from, and we have heard the charge made by those both within and without the church, that "whole chapters are quoted from Isaiah with little alteration from the King James Version;" and some say, "the quotations are just as they are in the King James Version, while the Inspired Version makes corrections in those same chapters quoted." For years I have accepted the foregoing as the facts in the case, and believed that such was the case. But now I feel ashamed that I accepted conclusions without a more thorough examination.

Now I have learned that there is danger of reasoning from an incorrect premise or basis. If our premise is wrong, our deductions or conclusions are very liable to be incorrect. So I fear that we have been too ready to accept objections which our opponents have brought against the Book of Mormon; and using their objections as a premise, we have started out to reach conclusions that have not been altogether satisfactory.

I am prepared to state that those objections referred to are not correct. I took the Book of Mormon quotations made by Jacob, 2 Nephi 5:3-11, and by Nephi, 2 Nephi chapters 8-10, inclusive, and compared with both the King James and the Inspired Versions, and made the following observations: In those quotations from Isaiah, I find one hundred two corrections or revised readings that are in exact harmony with the Inspired Translation; the Book of Mormon makes thirty-two omissions that are found in both the King James and Inspired Versions just the same; there are seventeen revised readings or corrections from the King James Version that are not found in the Inspired; one reading is transposed different from both the King James and the Inspired Versions; and there are only two instances where there are corrections made in the Inspired text, and not found in the Book of Mormon—just two words that read as the King James Version, while the Inspired reads differently. Jacob quotes from Isaiah, part of chapters 49, 50, 51, and 52. Nephi quotes from chapters 2-14 inclusive, as we now have it.

It is noticeable that where the sense of the reading is affected the Book of Mormon agrees exactly with the Inspired Translation. In view of the foregoing facts, we fail to see how any one can consistently charge Joseph Smith with copying from the King James Version when he was translating the Book of Mormon. The Book of Mormon was translated and published some years before the Inspired Translation was made, and yet it reads very differently from the King James Version, and agrees with the Inspired Version.

To my mind the fact that the Book of Mormon does not read as the King James Version of the Bible reads, nor exactly as the Inspired reads, but agreeing with it so far as the sense goes, is one of the best indications that Joseph Smith did no copying, neither in translating the Book of Mormon nor the Bible.

Now in regard to the two instances I have referred to in which the Book of Mormon reads as does the King James Bible, and not as the Inspired: This is found on pages 68 and 69, small edition. On page 68 the Book of Mormon and the King James Bible reads "The Lord hath opened my ear." While the Inspired says "Hath appointed mine ear." And on page 69, "These two sons are come unto thee; who shall be sorry for thee." The Inspired uses the word they instead of who. The sense of the sentence is not materially affected either way. But we have no positive proof that either Jacob or Nephi quoted Isaiah's prophecy verbatim as contained in the "plates of brass." There are many of the ministry who do not make word for word quotations, and yet do no violence to the text. And then again, even if the quotations were made verbatim as they were in the "plates of brass," we are not assured that there were not some changes made in copying upon the plates; for it is evident that Isaiah, or his scribe, wrote the original. I understand the Inspired Translation to be a correction and revision, by the Spirit of revelation, as well as a translation, and is made to represent the word of God as he gave it; not as it was written, transcribed, or copied from time to time, but corrected so as to properly represent the intelligence God revealed unto his people. God is not so particular about the language that is employed to convey his word to men, as he is regarding the thought and intelligence conveyed by the language.

Brethren, have any of you been puzzled regarding this matter? If so, let me advise you to take the Book of Mormon, the King James Translation, and the Inspired Translation of the Bible, and compare these quotations word by word as found in the three books, mark all the corrections and the differences, and sum them up, and the question will be for ever settled in your minds.

In making this comparison a flood of light came to my mind, and enabled me to see the hand of divinity in the Book of Mormon as I had never seen it before. The Book will bear investigation.

Be sure your premise or base is correct, then make your deductions. H. E. MOLER.

RADCLIFF, Ohio, September 27, 1902.

Later.—Since writing the foregoing article, I have been looking at the first edition of the Book of Mormon (Palmyra Edition) and find that where the Lamoni edition, 2 Nephi 5:6, disagrees with the Inspired Translation and agrees with the King James Version "The Lord hath opened mine ear," the Palmyra Edition reads "The Lord hath appointed mine ear," just as it reads in the Inspired Version. See Palmyra Edition, page 76. This now leaves one instance only where the Book of Mormon reads as does the King James Version, and differing from the Inspired. A still further evidence that Joseph Smith did no copying in the matter. The Nauvoo, or "third edition," reads as the Lamoni edition as far as I have examined. We expect to continue this examination farther.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

It were difficult, I think, to find anything pertaining to man's spiritual growth more conspicuously set forth in God's revealments than individual responsibility, which is compatible with the fact of God having appointed a time for a righteous retribution. And however conspicuous the fact of God's design in establishing a system of government among men, which is compared (1 Corinthians 12) to the physical organism, the whole being made up with integral parts, its well-being perpetrated by the several integral parts, properly performing its assigned functions, in no way tends to lessen individual responsibility.

"Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."
—Isaiah 55:3.

If it be a fact that where the everlasting gospel is given the everlasting covenant abounds, then without doing violence to any word reflective of God's will, I may believe that our acceptance of the everlasting gospel brings us within the bonds of the everlasting covenant, our loyalty to God being evinced proportionate to our diligence in a practical observance of the stipulations of this everlasting covenant.

To my finite mind, between the right, by the exercise of our will-power, to enlist under the blood-stained banner of Christ, and the power to change or modify any of God's revealments, there is a material difference, and an intelligent discrimination between the two is most essential with a view to a proper conception of individual responsibility before God.

Paul, as it would appear, was confronted with exigencies attributable to some evincing a zeal not according to knowledge. Then, too, we hear another of our predecessors, who lived some centuries before Christ's birth, say:

"Therefore my people are gone into captivity, because they have no knowledge: and their honorable men are famished, and their multitude dried up with thirst."—Isaiah 5:13.

Surely there must have been a visible contrast between this captivity attributable to a lack of knowledge and the liberty resultant upon a reception and retention of a God-given knowledge as a result of a practical submission to God's revealed decrees; the one gendering to bondage, the other stimulating in the exhibition of godly zeal according to knowledge, making a spiritual growth visible because of an intelligent conception of individual responsibility. Nothing, therefore, could be more absurd than the claim to a spiritual growth, gospel unity, etc., not practically demonstrated.

But the fact of this similarity between the physical organism and Christ's mystical body (the church) is not preclusive of the thought that while the integral parts of the former are the result of God's power exhibited according to immutable law, they but act as being acted upon, therefore evince a passiveness not attributable to the integral parts of Christ's church; nor does this fact collide with the thought that the intelligent part of man may materially aid the respective parts of the physical organism in their functionary work. While it may be claimed that the integral parts of the latter act per virtue of an intelligence resident in them, therefore, in the light of the revealed fact that God has set every member in the body as it has pleased him, that there should be no schism in the body, every member may cooperate according to the gifts and calling of God, to prevent schism, or create schism in the body.

I know of nothing coercive in God's revealed economy; but there is a God-given restraint. Nor is the fact obscured to the God-fearing Bible student, as to consequence to ensue, in the event of a failure to practically observe this restraint. Hence the significance of Christ's declaration; namely, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

To my mind, there is a sublimity in the subject matter reflected in the first three verses of Galatians, third chapter, evincive of a desire to adopt principle as the guiding star, instead of adopting some policy for present prestige, to the avoidance of principle. Paul says:

"O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you; that you should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you? This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?"

The above teachings are made more formidable in chapter five, in which is found, in language adapted to an ordinary mind, a distinction between the works of the flesh and the fruits of the Spirit. Those indulging in the former can not inherit the kingdom of heaven; while those practically giving evidence of the latter are above the law, or against them there is no law. (Galatians 5: 17-25.)

In a due study of the foregoing, to the God-fearing Bible student there is presented a necessity for calling into requisition the powers of mind for a proper discrimination between that which bringeth into bondage and that which stimulates in the work of spiritual progress. Hence in view of these facts, the necessity for an intelligent conception of individual responsibility is made more apparent.

All the members of the body, to a greater or lesser extent, have influence for good or evil, and though the idea of having men's person in admiration is very frequently condemned, yet the possibility exists for being involved in such a God-forbidden vortex, especially so when with but a partial or a too limited conception of individual responsibility, we move, act, and decide.

A knowledge of the ever-blessed gospel raised human anticipations to a future bright with hope and the assurance of immortality and eternal life, to which all may aspire; but the only participators in such an ultimate are those making their calling and election sure. With but a partial conception of individual responsibility we may fail in making an intelligent discrimination between natural impulses and spirit impressions, which may lead and inveigle us into realms of sentimentalism, wild excitement, sensationalism, etc., in which event we might lead those thinking us exemplars away from gospel integrity, as, on the other hand, they would be confirmed therein if witnessing a gospel-imposed rectitude, evincive of an even tenor as a preventive to God-forbidden and demoralizing extremes.

Deeds that may appear potent for good, without evidence of a gospel character, will prove futile in the consummation of a permanent good approved of God; hence the acceptance of the everlasting gospel involves the essential work of character building; hence with a view to a proper discrimination between gold, silver, and precious stones, wood, hay, and stubble, an intelligent conception of individual responsibility is among the essentials, being assured that we do not confound essentialities with that which only pertains to a gratification. (1 Corinthians 3:12.)

In conclusion, a conception of individual responsibility is the one thing needful in view of the fact of antagonizing influences abounding among men, of which our predecessors were not ignorant, hence the following:

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Galatians 6:7.

A due study of the following will injure none:

"In character men and women are on a level with their affections. In real worth, we stand neither above nor below this plane. The standards of living we possess are merely our inmost desires, and to their level we inevitably tend. It is impossible for one to rise above a given point, so long as that point remains the guiding star of conduct." — HERALD, September 4, 1901, in an editorial under the caption of "Standards."

The above article in its entirety would by no means be an unprofitable lesson for several evening or morning exercises around the family altar, it being so compatible with the spirit and genius of Christ's gospel, therefore sound and valid.

THE CHURCH IN THE WILDERNESS.—No. 3.

BY ISAAC M. SMITH.

(All quotations are from the Inspired Translation of the Bible, large print edition of the Book of Mormon, and the 1897 edition of Doctrine and Covenants.)

Speaking of the last days, Mormon says:

"And there are none, save a few only, who do not lift themselves up in the pride of their hearts, . . . and your churches, yea, even every one, have become polluted because of the pride of your hearts." —Mormon 4: 40.

There are a few individuals who, although they are led by priestcrafts and "taught by the precepts of men," are striving to follow Christ; but the churches, "even every one," have become corrupted and polluted.

"And there are none that doeth good except those who are ready to receive the fullness of my gospel, which I have sent forth unto this generation."—Doctrine and Covenants 34: 3.

So the few who are doing good have not obeyed the gospel; but they are honest and are ready to receive it; willing and anxious to receive it. But they are "taught by the precepts of men," and hence have become corrupt in mind, not knowing the truth.

"Wherefore I will that all men shall repent, for all are under sin, except them which I have reserved unto myself, holy men that ye know not of."—Doctrine and Covenants 49: 2.

Those holy men whom ye know not of are evidently those who were changed and permitted to remain on the earth till the Savior comes; and, excepting them, "all are under sin."

As a further evidence that this condition of sin was to be brought about by false teachers, those whom they should heap to themselves, Paul says:

"For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."—Acts 20: 29, 30.

And again, speaking of the coming of the Savior, he says:

"Let no man deceive you by any means; for there shall come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God."—2 Thessalonians 2: 3, 4.

And the apostle says, further, that "the mystery of iniquity doth already work," and that when he is "taken out of the way:"

"And then shall that wicked one be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. Yea, the Lord, even Jesus, whose coming is not until after there cometh a falling away, by the working of Satan with all power, and signs and lying wonders."—2 Thessalonians 2: 8, 9.

There is to come a falling away, grievous wolves are to enter in among them, they are to reach that point where they will not endure sound doctrine, heap to themselves teachers who will turn away their ears from the truth, and, finally, this "man of sin," this "son of perdition," is to sit "in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." And, as Paul says, that "ye are the temple of the living God" (2 Cor. 6: 16), I am driven to the conclusion that this "son of perdition" is to sit in the church of Christ, when they reach that condition that "they will not endure sound doctrine," and that he is to dictate to the church as though he were God. If not so, then what does the apostle mean by the above language? But, when this condition of apostasy is reached, Christ would not dwell in that temple, for he dwelleth not in temples that are unholy; hence the "man child," "the kingdom of God and his Christ" was "caught up unto God and his throne." And when "the kingdom," or in other words, "the keys of the church," which God had given to qualify men to feed the church was taken from the earth, who would do the feeding? As already shown, the keys of the different offices in the church is the authority from God to officiate in those offices; and when "the keys of the church," that is, "the kingdom of God," was taken from the earth, there were no apostles, prophets, evangelists, bishops, high priests, elders, seventies, priests, teachers, nor deacons, left in the church, with authority from God to "feed the church of Christ, which he has purchased with his own blood." And, as the apostle Paul said, they would "heap to themselves teachers," that "grievous wolves shall enter in among you," and that "the son of perdition" should sit "in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God;" and, as the Lord says, in ushering in of this latter-day work, that they are all "taught by the precepts of men" and are thereby corrupted, or "have corrupt minds;" it seems far more reasonable, to my mind, to conclude that "they" who fed the woman during the twelve hundred sixty years she was in the wilderness, were the teachers whom she heaped to herself, than to conclude that "they" who fed her were the angels of God.

In the parable of the tares and the wheat the Savior says:

"But when the blade sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also." Matthew 13:24.

"Brought forth fruit." But what "fruit" did this good seed bring forth? Jesus said unto his disciples:

"Therefore seek ye to bring forth the kingdom of God."—Luke 12:34.

And John the Revelator, says:

"The woman which was the church of God, who had been delivered of her pains, and brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ."—Revelation 12: 7.

Jesus told his disciples to "seek to bring forth the kingdom of God;" and John says that the church "brought forth the kingdom of God and his Christ." Jesus says that when the good seed "brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also;" and John says that, when the woman brought forth the man child, and it was caught up to God, "the woman fled into the wilderness." So the tares springing up among the wheat, and the church going into the wilderness are very closely connected, so closely connected that the one is the cause of the other:

"Behold, verily I say that the field was the world, and the apostles were the sowers of the seed; and after they had fallen asleep, the great persecuter of the church, the apostate, the whore, even Babylon, that maketh all nations drink of her cup, in whose hearts the enemy, even Satan, sitteth to reign; behold, he soweth the tares, wherefore the tares choke the wheat and drive the church into the wilderness."—Doctrine and Covenants 84: 1.

It is Satan, reigning in Babylon, who sows the tares; the tares are sown after the apostles fell asleep; the tares choke the wheat, that is, "the children of the wicked" (Matthew 13:36) choke "the children of the kingdom;" and, when "the children of the wicked" choked "the children of the kingdom," they did "drive the church into the wilderness." The church does not go to a different place; but into a different condition: into the wilderness, "a land of darkness." "The children of the kingdom" have been choked out or killed, the tares have gotten control and heaped "to themselves teachers having itching ears," and "the son of perdition" has come in and "sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God;" and then "the kingdom, or in other words, the keys of the church," is "caught up to God and his throne," and the church is soon in the wilderness of midnight darkness. But is it the church of Christ, after "the children of the kingdom" have been choked by "the children of the wicked," and the kingdom, or the authority to administer gospel ordinances, has been taken from it? Not if we are to take the definitions of "the church of Christ" already given. If some man should plant a vineyard and then, for some cause, leave it grow wild and uncultivated for many, many years; leave it until the briars, thorns, wild vines, and trees, choke the grape-vines which were planted; and, after two or three hundred years, you should pass through that wilderness and find a few scrubby grape-vines, the remnants of that old vineyard, growing in their wild and uncultivated state in the wilderness, would you call them a vineyard? You might take those vines and, by grafting, resetting, and proper care, bring them out of the wilderness and form them into a vineyard; but they are not a vineyard while they are in the wilderness. They are the seed, however, or the remnant of the seed, of the original stock; and they have been hid away in the wilderness for all these many years: the seed, from the original vines, has been preserved. Now, as the briars, thorns, brush, and trees, choked the true vines in this vineyard, and drove the vineyard into the wilderness, so "the children of the wicked" choked "the children of the kingdom," and "drove the church into the wilderness." But the seed, from the original stock, has been preserved:

"Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God: therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began."—Doctrine and Covenants 84: 3.

These men were "lawful heirs, according to the flesh;" but what would that benefit them, or the world either, if they did not live so as to receive the keys of the priesthood? The sons of Eli were "lawful heirs, according to the flesh;" but they were "sons of Belial." (1 Sam. 2: 12.) * Peter said to the Jews:

"Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed."—Acts 3: 25.

They were "lawful heirs, according to the flesh;" but the Savior said:

"The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matthew 21: 45.

It was not, then, simply because these men were heirs, according to the law of lineage; but it was because of their placing themselves before the Lord in the proper manner, that he chose them. And, while it is true that "the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers," we must not forget this thought:

"The keys of the dispensation which ye have received, have come down from the fathers; and last of all, being sent down from heaven unto you."—Doctrine and Covenants 105: 12.

In other words, their being "lawful heirs, according to the flesh," did not give them authority to officiate in gospel ordinances: the kingdom, and the keys of the kingdom, had to be "sent down from heaven unto you," before they could "lay the foundation," organize and establish the church of Christ. As the seed of the original vines, in our illustration, was preserved in the wilderness, so the seed of the original church of Christ has been preserved in the spiritual wilderness. As the few wild vines found growing in the wilderness, after several hundred years, may, by transplanting and grafting, be again formed into a vineyard, so the few who have been found in the spiritual wilderness in these last days, who are "lawful heirs, according to the flesh," may be "organized and established," "by the will and commandments of God," into the church of Christ. But they were no more the church of Christ, while in their natural state, than the few wild vines, found in the wilderness, were a vineyard. These men were in the wilderness; in a state of nature, and that means death:

"For the natural man is an enemy to God, and has been, from the fall of Adam, and will be, for ever and ever."—Mosiah 1: 72.

"For behold as in Adam, or by nature they fall."—Mosiah 1: 70.

"And were by nature the children of wrath, even as others."—Ephesians 2: 3.

Hence the Lord says:

"Marvel not that all mankind, yea, men, and women, all nations, kindreds, tongues and people, must be born again; yea, born of God, changed from their carnal and fallen state, to a state of righteousness, being redeemed of God, becoming his sons and daughters; and thus they become new creatures; and unless they do this, they can in no wise inherit the kingdom of God."—Mosiah 11: 143.

Those men who were "lawful heirs, according to the flesh," were no exception to the above law: they had to be born again, just the same as you and I. "But if he yields to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, and putteth off the natural man, and becometh a saint, through the atonement of Christ, the Lord."—Mosiah 1: 72.

Those men, who were "lawful heirs," had to "put off the natural man," and had to become saints, just the same as others: they had to be grafted into the true vine, Christ, before they "become the church and kingdom and the elect of God." The Lord said to Joseph Smith, July, 1830:

"And thou hast been delivered from the power of Satan, and from darkness."—Doctrine and Covenants 23: 1.

And the same of the church:

"And also those to whom these commandments were given might have power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of obscurity, and out of darkness."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 5.

Nephi, speaking of Israel, in the day when the Lord shall "proceed to do a marvelous work," says:

"Wherefore, he will bring them again out of captivity, and they shall be gathered together to the lands of their inheritance; and they shall be brought out of obscurity, and out of darkness: and they shall know that the Lord is their Savior and their Redeemer, the mighty one of Israel."—1 Nephi 7: 13.

Isaiah, speaking of the same time, says: "And the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity and out of darkness."—Isaiah 29: 30; see also 1 Thessalonians 5: 4; Colossians 1: 13; 1 John 1: 6; 1 Peter 2: 9; John 8: 12; John 12: 46.

And Nephi, speaking of the same time, says:

"For the kingdom of the devil must shake, and they which belong to it must needs be stirred up unto repentance, or the devil will grasp them with his everlasting chains, and they be stirred up to anger and perish."—2 Nephi 12: 18.

From the above text, and many other similar ones, it strikes me that all were in the kingdom of darkness, which is the kingdom of Satan; and they are represented as being blind, in captivity, drunken, taught by the precepts of men, having corrupt minds, and in a state of nature, which is a state of death. They all had to be brought out of the wilderness, a state of nature, and "translated into the kingdom of his dear Son." They all had to be "delivered from the power of Satan, and from darkness;" that is, called "out of darkness into his marvelous light." And last, but not least, they all had to be "born again:" they all had to be "born of God;" that is, "born of water and the Spirit," before they could either "see" or "enter into the kingdom of God." Hence I can not believe that they, while in this drunken, blind, corrupt, dead state, in the wilderness, were the church of Christ. They are only a remnant of the woman's seed, who have survived the dark ages; and they are now brought out of darkness and formed into the church of Christ; or, "by the will and commandments of God" (Doctrine and Covenants 17:1), "form themselves into a church" (Mosiah 9:155). But it is sometimes asked: How could the Lord bring his church "out of the wilderness" if he did not have a church "in the wilderness"? My answer is something like this: A man goes into the forest, fells trees, saws them into logs, hauls the logs to the mill, has them sawed into lumber, and, of that lumber, he builds a house. Now he can say, and say truly, "I brought my house out of the forest." But you would not conclude that it was a house, while it was in the forest, would you?

Or, if he should go to the quarry, take out stones, and build a stone house, he would say: "I brought my house out of the quarry." And so he had; but it was not a house while in the quarry. Like the church, it had to be "organized and established:" the man had to "lay the foundation" and "build it up" before it could properly be called a house: before it was one. And the stones, as they came from the quarry, in their natural state, could not be used in the building of that house, either, until they had been converted into the proper shape; nor could the material which Christ "brought out of the wilderness" be used, in its natural state, in his church: it, too, had to be converted, put "off the natural man," cleansed and purified, and "born again," before it could become "lively stones" in this "spiritual house." (See 1 Peter 2:5.) While the church remained in Christ, and in his doctrine, it was safe; but, when it turned from the truth, and went "into the wilderness," it went back into a state of nature; and "the natural man is an enemy to God, and has been, from the fall of Adam, and will be for ever and ever."—Mosiah 1: 72. That the church did go into a condition or state of nature, becoming like the world and of the world, is proven, to my mind, by the parable of the "tame olive-tree," recorded in the Book of Mormon, Jacob 3: 24-119. This parable is quite lengthy and I shall have to abridge to save space. The Lord says:

"I will liken thee, O house of Israel, like unto a tame olive-tree, which a man took and nourished in his vineyard."—Jacob 3: 24; see also Jacob 4: 1.

Keep this in mind: Israel is the tame olive-tree. This tree "green, and waxed old, and began to decay" (verse 24); and the servant was told to "pluck the branches from a wild olive-tree" (verse 28), "pluck off the main branches" (verse 28) of the tame olive-tree, and "take thou the branches of the wild olive-tree, and graft them in, in the stead thereof" (verse 30); and he "grafted in the branches of the wild olive-tree" (verse 31). In the meantime the Lord took some of the "young and tender branches" (verse 29) of the tame olive-tree, and planted them "in the nethermost parts of the vineyard" (verse 35). "A long time passed away" (verse 36), and the Lord of the vineyard "looked and beheld the tree, in the which the wild olive branches had been grafted; and it sprang forth and began to bear fruit" (verse 39); "and the fruit thereof was like unto the natural fruit" (verse 40). And the "young and tender branches," "in the nethermost parts of the vineyard" (verses 43-51) were bringing forth good fruit also. Whom does the wild olive-tree represent?

Paul says: "For I speak to you Gentiles."—Romans 11: 13.

"And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive-tree, wast grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive-tree."—Romans 11: 17.

And again:

"For if thou wast cut out of the olive-tree which is wild by nature, and wast grafted contrary to nature into a good olive-tree."—Romans 11: 24.

This leaves no doubt that the Gentiles are the wild olive-tree. And Jesus said of the Jews:

"And the kingdom of God shall be taken from them, and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof; (meaning the Gentiles.)"—Matthew 21: 53.

Paul and Jacob both say that the Jews were broken off, and the Gentiles, "branches from the wild olive-tree," were grafted in; and Jacob says they "brought forth tame fruit," as we learn from verse 41. But they did not bring forth this good fruit until after they had been grafted into the good olive-tree, and had partaken "of the root and fatness" of the same. Before this, Paul says:

"Wherefore remember, that ye were in times past Gentiles in the flesh," and "that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."—Ephesians 2: 11, 12.

The above represents the condition of the "wild olive-tree." Do not forget it, for I shall refer to it again. Let us now come back to the parable: "A long time had passed away" (verse 55), "the time draweth near, and the end soon cometh" (verse 56): "the last time that I shall prune my vineyard" (verse 102); and the Lord and his servant went again into the vineyard. "And they came to the tree whose natural branches had been broken off, and the wild branches had been grafted in; and behold, all sorts of fruit did cumber the tree" (verse 57); "and there is none of it which is good" (verse 60): behold, there are all kinds of bad fruit" (verse 61). He has preserved "the roots, that they are alive" (verse 63), and he says, "I know that the roots are good" (verse 65); but he also says, "the tree profiteth me nothing; and the roots thereof profiteth me nothing, so long as it shall bring forth evil fruit" (verse 64). He says "the wild branches have grown, and have overran the roots," and that this is why it has "brought forth so much evil fruit" (verse 66). On going to the "nethermost parts of the vineyard," the Lord finds that those natural branches, which he planted there, have "all become corrupt" (verse 69); and then he makes this sweeping declaration: "And now, all the trees of my vineyard are good for nothing, save it be to be hewn down and cast into the fire" (verse 74).

"All the trees of my vineyard;" and the vineyard "is the earth and the inhabitants thereof."—Matthew 21: 56. The "roots" of the original tree, and also the "roots" of the natural branches, planted in the nethermost parts of the vineyard, are yet alive; and hence the record says:

"And it came to pass that they took from the natural tree which had become wild, and grafted in unto the natural trees, which also had become wild: and they took also of the natural trees which had become wild, and grafted into their mother tree."—Jacob 3: 97.

The "natural tree," and also the "natural trees" planted in other parts of the vineyard, had all "become wild," and that means, as we have already seen, to be "without Christ, being aliens to the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."—Ephesians 2: 12. No wonder he says that "all the trees of my vineyard are good for nothing, save it be to be hewn down and cast into the fire." They have "become wild," by "taking strength unto themselves" (verse 88), and are "without Christ, being aliens to the commonwealth of Israel," and, like the Gentiles, the wild olive-tree, they must be grafted in again. Hence the Lord says, after grafting them in, "I have grafted in the natural branches again, into their mother tree" (verse 100).

"Again." But why did they have to be grafted in "again"? Because they had "become wild," and had to be "took from the natural tree" (verse 97), or "took from the natural trees," and regrafted. Just as the Gentiles had to be "cut out of the olive-tree which is wild by nature, and wast grafted contrary to nature into a good olive-tree," so these were cut out of the natural tree, "which had become wild," and were "grafted into their own olive-tree" (Romans 11: 24). Paul says, "but if thou be a breaker of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision" (Romans 2: 25), which is simply another way of saying that the "tame olive-tree," through apostasy and turning from the truth, becomes a "wild olive-tree." And why not? If the Gentiles become "fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel" (Ephesians 3: 6), then why not Israel become Gentiles, "without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," by disobedience?

"For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel."—Romans 9: 6.

"And if ye are not Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Galatians 3: 29.

And those who "have been baptized into Christ" are the ones who "have put on Christ." (Galatians 3: 27.)

"Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham."—Galatians 3: 7.

"For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, . . . they become . . . the seed of Abraham." — Doctrine and Covenants 83:6.

Hence, if there were those upon the earth, at the time the angel message came from heaven, who had been "faithful unto the obtaining these two priest-hoods" and "the magnifying their calling," they were "the seed of Abraham." But, if there were none who had obtained "these two priest-hoods," then there were none who were "the seed of Abraham," only after the law: the seed of Abraham according to the flesh. They had all, both Jews and Gentiles, "become wild," and hence he "took from the natural tree," or "trees," and "grafted in the natural branches again, into their mother tree." You may say, "There was something there which had life into which they could be grafted;" and so there was. The "roots" of the tree were good; and there was life in them, too. If you ask me what is meant by the "roots" of this tame olive-tree, I confess that I do not know. But I do know one thing: I know that the "roots" of a tree are not its "branches." So, whatever opinion you may entertain as to what is represented by the "roots" of this "tame olive-tree," just keep in mind that the "roots" are not the "branches." The trees and branches, all of them, have "become corrupt," and they are "good for nothing, save it be to be hewn down and cast into the fire;" but "the roots are good." I have a theory, which I will briefly state, and you can take it for what it is worth. Paul says:

"Who are Israelites; of whom are the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises which are made unto the fathers: and of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ was, who is God over all, blessed for ever. Amen."—Romans 9:4, 5.

The adoption, glory, covenants, the law, service of God, and the promises, are all of Israel; and Christ also, as concerning the flesh. And Paul says again:

"That the Gentiles should be fellow heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel."—Ephesians 3:6.

And again he says, as already quoted:

"And thou, being a wild olive-tree, wast grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive-tree."—Romans 11:17.

He says the Gentiles, with the Jews, "partakest of the root and fatness of the olive-tree;" and that they are "partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Hence, why not let the "roots" represent the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the service of God, and the promises, which God gave to Abraham, the father of the Israelite nation? And then, when "baptized into Christ," whether Gentiles or Jews who had "become wild," all become partakers of these blessings; that is, "of the root and fatness of the olive-tree." The "roots," whatever they may represent, are that which gives life to the tree and the branches: they are not the tree nor the branches, neither do they become corrupt when the tree and the branches become corrupt. And the covenants and promises which God has given to Israel, through Abraham and others, centering back in Christ, who is the "root of Jesse" (Isaiah 11:10) and "the root and offspring of David" (Revelation 22:16) have been the means of keeping and preserving Israel. Hence I am inclined to believe that they, and that which attaches to them, are the roots of this tame olive-tree; and they "are good," and have been good all through the wickedness and corruption of the dark ages. And when we are grafted into that covenant, and become "partakers of his promise in Christ," we become the seed of Abraham, and branches of the true Israel of God.

Some one may say: If all those trees have become corrupt, dead to God, then what good could come of taking dead branches, from a dead tree, and grafting them into live roots? My answer is: None, whatever. A dead branch will not grow, nor bear fruit, even though it be grafted into a living tree. No, these branches must be "born again," that is, "passed from death unto life" (John 5:24 and 1 John 3:14) before they can become living branches of this tame olive-tree:

"And the Lord said unto me, Marvel not that all mankind, yea, men, and women, all nations, kindreds, tongues and people, must be born again; yea, born of God, changed from their carnal and fallen state, to a state of righteousness, being redeemed of God, becoming his sons and daughters; and thus they become new creatures; and unless they do this, they can in no wise inherit the kingdom of God."—Mosiah 11:143.

No, reader, God makes no such blunders as grafting in dead branches: men often do this, or try to, but the dead branches will not grow. They must be begotten "with the word of truth" (James 1:18), "through the gospel" (1 Corinthians 4:15), and then "born again;" and when they are thus begotten and born again, begotten of God and born of God, they become branches of the true and living vine: "they become the sons of Moses and of Aaron, and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom and the elect of God." But they are certainly not "the seed of Abraham," "the church," "the kingdom," nor "the elect of God," only through this heaven-ordained means.

Another difficulty may arise in the mind of the reader like this: If "the kingdom of God" is "the keys of the church," and it was "caught up unto God and his throne," and then "sent down from heaven unto you," given to the church, then how could the church bring forth the kingdom? My understanding of that is explained in the history of the church of Christ, in our day. In 1830 the church was organized with six members, and "the kingdom" or "keys of the church" was given unto them; but they did not and could not fill all those offices which, with "the keys thereof," God has placed in the church. As the church grew and developed, through her "travails," "pains," and struggles against sin, God directed her to place men in those offices, bringing forth one part of the kingdom after another, until, in 1837, he set men in all the offices mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 107: 37-46. The kingdom was given to the church in 1830, but it had to be "brought forth" by the church just the same. In 1833 the Lord said, "which kingdom is coming forth for the last time."—Doctrine and Covenants 87: 1.

"Is coming forth." It was being brought forth by the church, as already stated, one part or one feature after another; but the church had the kingdom, and the first presidency held the keys of the kingdom. I do not understand that the kingdom was fully brought forth, in every respect, even when the Lord placed men in all those offices, and gave them "the keys thereof." In 1831, the Lord said to the church, "that inasmuch as ye do this, glory shall be added to the kingdom which ye have received."—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 3. They had received the kingdom; but through faithfulness, diligence, and holiness, on the part of the church, "glory shall be added to the kingdom." And, in the same verse, he tells them, "if ye desire the glories of the kingdom," and "if ye desire the mysteries of the kingdom," they shall uphold and sustain the one whom God had chosen to hold the keys of the kingdom. Hence, I believe the admonition to "seek ye to bring forth the kingdom of God," is still applicable to the church. May the Lord help us so to do.

And now, reader, in conclusion, I ask you to examine what I have presented, compare it with the books, and accept nothing only what is in harmony with God's word. There are other things, in connection with this subject, of which I had thought to speak; but this article has already extended beyond the length intended, and so I shall not indulge my inclination to discuss the matter further at this time.

May peace, unity, and the love of God prevail.

In the faith,

AMERICAN ARCHÆOLOGY.

As was defined, a few sessions past by Bro. Grainger, the word archæology means the study of ancient, that is, very, very old buildings, remains of people, and things that they have left, which things are called relics. You may ask, Why do we want to study about these old buildings, relics, etc.? Those people are dead, and what do we care about them? I will try to explain, in the course of this paper, why we ought to be interested in them.

You understand that when we say "American Archæology" we mean the study of those things left by the people who once lived in America, their living descendants being the Indians.

Many of the wise and learned men of the world have tried to explain how the Indians happen to be, but hardly two of them can agree on the question, but we Religians may be able to help them some day. How? By first reading the Book of Mormon, then studying American Archæology.

Who wrote the Book of Mormon? Did Joseph Smith write it? You answer, No. It was written by different men who lived in America long before we or Joseph Smith were in existence. They wrote it on plates made of gold in a different language from ours. When they were through writing it a certain man was commanded of God to hide it in the earth. This he did a good many hundred years ago. Then one day, about eighty-two years ago, the Lord sent an angel to a young man named Joseph Smith, and told him about the Book of Mormon being hid in a hill in New York. He took it from there, and through the help of God copied or translated it into our language.

Do you believe all this about the Book of Mormon, Joseph Smith, and the angel? You certainly do, but Latter Day Saints are the only people, however, who do believe it. It is our duty then to use every means to show the people in the world that it is true. I will try to tell you a few things to help you.

The first thing to remember is that Joseph Smith had the Book of Mormon printed in 1830, seventy-two years ago. At that time people did not know as much about America and her relics as they now do. Here in Missouri wild animals, such as the bear, wolf, elk, deer, etc., roamed, and but few white people lived here. Everything beyond Missouri was wild country. People had not dug much in the earth to study archæology, so that nearly all we know about it has been discovered since, so you see Joseph Smith could not possibly have known about what was in the earth or in the forests of Central and South America. Now notice the different things the Book of Mormon tells about, and then see how what has been found proves what the Book of Mormon says is true, and these things have been discovered by people who do not belong to the church and do not belong to the church and do not believe the Book of Mormon.

One place in the book tells where a great storm came up with thunder and terrible lightning, such as they had never seen before. The dirt was carried up upon one city, so that instead of a city, there became a great mountain; other cities were buried under water, and the "whole face of the land was changed." Now, that sounds to worldly people, like a foolish story, but men in digging in the earth, have found a city "buried up." If you could take a ride on the Union Pacific Railroad, through the state of Wyoming, you would think that at some time the whole face of the land was surely changed. The land plainly appears to have been the bottom of an ocean, or rather an inland sea.

The Book of Mormon says the Nephites had fair skins. It is hard for people to believe this because Indians are dark and have black hair. We can prove by archæology that light haired people did live here, because a large number of skulls have been found buried deep in the earth, which appear to be very, very old, and they had different shades of light hair on them.

We have learned, by coming here to Religio, that those ancient people were smart and intelligent. That they could read and write; that they built large, beautiful palaces, temples, etc.; made tools of all kinds. "Their women did toil and spin, and did make all manner of cloth of fine twined linen and cloth of every kind." People said surely if those people were so intelligent, the Indians would be more or less intelligent also. Now, we know that the Indians know but very little. Could scarcely build anything larger than a wigwam, and their cloth consisted of skins of animals. Surely not much fine twined linen in that. Archæology helps us again. Some men have found down in the earth four hundred, five hundred, and even as low as fifteen hundred feet in the earth, relics left by the people the Book of Mormon tells about. One man in Colorado in 1891, found human bones and some arrow-heads down four hundred sixty feet in some silver ore. Being in the ore, shows they must have been there a great many years. Others have found copper axes, chisels, arrow-points, needles, combs, cups, finger rings, and hundreds of other things, some of which we do not know the uses of, also pieces of carpets, mats, pots, vases, jewels, and dishes. Remains of wonderful buildings, and of great cities have been discovered. These cities are in the middle of big forests and are overgrown with trees, etc.

Joseph Smith said the Book of Mormon was engraven on gold plates, but he was ridiculed for saying so, for people could not believe any one intelligent enough to mold metal plates had ever lived in this country. But one day in Kinderhook, Illinois, some men were digging, when they found six brass plates which were fastened together by two iron wires. There were writings on them somewhat like those on the Book of Mormon plates. They were so old that when the iron wires were pressed hard by the fingers they crumbled to pieces. If they could make brass plates, they surely could make gold ones.

Those people could do one thing we can not, and that is, dye cloth that will not fade. Some of their cloth, which has been buried in the earth hundreds of years, still retains its bright colors.

The traditions of the Indians will also help us to prove the truth of the Book of Mormon. Some may not know what I mean by the Indian traditions. They are stories they tell which were told them by their fathers and have been handed down from father to son for hundreds of years. Of course, they are not altogether true, but there is some truth in them.

One tribe of Indians have a tradition "that their fathers had a sacred book which was kept for a long time, and at last hid it in the earth, and ever since they have had to be servants to their enemies." Another tribe says "that some bearded white men came from the East in ships.

There are hundreds of other things in archæology which prove the truth of the Book of Mormon; it would take a long time to tell them, but there has never been anything found that would prove it false, and we know nothing will be found which will do so.

I Might.

I might have said a word of cheer
Before I let him go,
His weary visage haunts me yet;
But how could I foreknow
The slightest chance would be the last
To me in mercy given?
My utmost earnings can not send
That word from earth to heaven.

I might have looked the love I felt;
My brother had sore need
Of that for which—too shy and proud—
He lacked the speech to plead,
But self is near, and self is strong,
And I was blind that day,
He sought within my careless eyes,
And went, athirst, away.

I might have held in closer clasp
The hand he laid in mine;
The pulsing warmth of my rich life
Had been as generous wine,
Swelling a stream that even then
Was ebbing faint and slow,
Mine might have been (God knows) the art
To stay the fatal flow.

O, word and look and clasp withheld!
O, brother heart now stilled!
Dear life, for ever out of reach,
I might have warmed and filled?
Talents missed and seasons lost,
O'er which I mourn in vain—
A waste as barren to my tears,
As desert sands to rain!

Ah, friend! whose eyes to-day may look
Love into living eyes,
Whose tone and touch, perchance, may thrill
Sad hearts with sweet surprise,
Be instant, like our Lord, in love,
And lavish as his grace
With light and dew and manna fall,
For night comes on apace.—Selected.

I Have a Right to.

"You need not trouble yourself about my affairs, I am old enough to manage my own business without any of your help," remarked a thoughtless youth in an irreverent manner to his kind mother who was giving him good counsel. Her tender loving heart was so wounded she could not speak and he continued: "I want you to understand that I intend to say what I please, and do as I please, and I have a right to, too—this is a land of liberty you know."

This was said in a saucy, impertinent manner, and he went out to join the company he had learned to follow. He was seeking pleasure for himself, regardless of his mother's happiness, in thought, word and deed—even the empty water pails, and empty wood-box were not thought of—but the dinner would be in the time appointed, and fault found if it was not to his liking. In our imagination, and also by observation, follow the career of such a youth, of either sex, and we shudder for him or her. Dear ones, there is only one way to escape, and that is to repent and reform. Such unwise doings are not confined to the young alone, ah, no; and sadder still it is, to hear people of many years, indulge in harsh, discordant talk; and worse, still, in obscene and profane language, and before ladies and children, too. 'Tis awful—'tis awful to hear, and more awful will be the influence it will have in the world, and the most awful feature of the case is, what will the settlement be. Such people think they have a right to say and do as they please, and especially on their own premises. We, too, honestly think that every one has a right to say and do as he pleases—if his talk and acts are right—that is, if they injure no one in anyway, if they are based on the golden rule, "Do as we would be done by."

We have no more right to say that which will injure a person's reputation, or wound his feelings, and thereby rob him of his happiness, and perhaps cause him to sin, than we have to rob him of his goods. Neither have we any right to contaminate our own souls by such indulgences. They are ours it is true, ours to develop and prepare for a higher life. I claim that it is a sin for one to spend time and breath repeating low stories that others have told. It is like putting filth in clean dishes. We are commanded to speak only that which is edifying. Now what is there that is edifying in low talk? It is feeding the soul on husks instead of the fatted calf. How can a Saint indulge in such a habit, and enjoy the Spirit of God? Yes, we repeat it, how can he or she be walking with God, and have a mouthful of filth? Right here we feel like breathing a prayer: O God, our dear heavenly Father, help us all to so think and to so speak that the words of our mouths may be accepted in thy sight. The writer has been somewhat tainted with the habit in question, only in a small degree though, and knows that it always brings leanness of soul. The habit of slinging the faults of others in their faces is a sin, too, for it brings a wrong spirit into the heart of the slinger—whether the fault is real or supposed—and such a course never planted or cultivated a good spirit in the heart of the one to whom the missile is hurled. Think what the harvest may be, and think who sowed the seed. Where do we get a right to do such things? From the same source that the Catholics get the right to sell their followers the right to indulge in sin, and from the same source that the cheat, the thief, and the murderer get their right to follow the dictates of their own evil minds.

No person of any age ever had a right to intentionally wound the feelings of others, or to sow evil seed in the hearts of others. If they have, of what use are the commands and the promises of the Lord? If parents will do such things what can they expect in return? "That which ye sow shall ye also reap," is as true to-day as when it was spoken to the world. My mother often repeated the saying: "It is of no use for an old crab to find fault with her young for going sideways." We firmly believe in the divine injunction, "Children, obey your parents," and all the scriptures that harmonize with it, and we also firmly believe in the one that says, "Parents provoke not your children to wrath." Why dwell on the former and omit the latter? It is every word that proceedeth from the mouth of the Lord—not a few that will just suit our own selfish liking.

Often evil propensities are hereditary, as diseases are, transmitted from one generation to another. A parent, who has not cultivated and governed himself, or herself, is not prepared to govern the young. Such think that by their harshness they can drive out of the offspring the very evil that has been placed there by their own evil indulgences.

O, what a sad mistake! You are only feeding the germ of sin that you have planted. May such repent, and call on God for forgiveness and for wisdom to rightly undo the terrible evil they have done. These ideas are based on facts that have come under our observation. Reader, no doubt you know of similar instances. We once visited a woman who had two sons and one daughter. She took particular pains to show us how smartly her second boy, about four, could swear. She seemed to manifest much pleasure, and a degree of pride in his smartness in showing off his accomplishment. A few years later his mother became so lame in the joints she could not rise from the bed. Her husband kindly waited on her, and at length lay down on the lounge in her room as usual, and died with his clothes on—his disease was consumption. She was left alone with the children—the girl the youngest, and not old enough to look after the work. That same smart boy, George, had retained all his smartness and added much to his stock invested, and he made it a special point to hurl his anathemas at his afflicted mother. She eventually died, comfortless, and the children were separated. George believed he had a right to think and do as he pleased, so chose low company and sank deeper and deeper in sin, and when he was of an age to be useful he died. The world is full of similar cases and they all go to prove that people do not have a right to sin, and that whatsoever one sows he shall also reap.

Prayer Union.

The prayers of the Saints are requested in behalf of Bro. James M. Scott and son Freddy, also for his granddaughter, Velta Castins. They are sick with typhoid fever and desire that those who can will fast and pray for them on Thursday, October 9.

Sr. Caroline Shearer requests prayers for her son Wesley, who is so sick with typhoid fever, also for herself, that she may be given strength for this and other trials.

How to Retain the Interest of the Young in Sunday-School Work.

"How?" There is the question!

Make the Sunday-school interesting, is the answer. But as that would be an abrupt ending, we continue. It would seem from the manner of stating our subject, of "How to retain," that the interest has been gained, or attained. Why, then, to retain it is only to continue by former means; to keep possession of what you have. But we draw from the query a central thought and need, How to interest your pupil and maintain it. So we shall indite a few thoughts.

ALL THE OFFICERS AND TEACHERS MUST BE WORKERS, like bees, each coming to the hive laden with their due portion of food for feeding the young. We naturally partake of our environments, and if officers and teachers are busy themselves,

"rustlers" and interested, they will see the disease more catching than gaping during a long, dry sermon. Right here, stop! Sing verses one and two of No. 201 of Hymnal. Now as you have heard it's not "On flowery beds of ease," determine to sail on turbulent, troubled seas, be in your places early, late, hot or cold, wet or dry if possible. Come with a cheering smile; be a child among children. Conclude right now that success or failure does not depend wholly on the superintendent, but on every officer, teacher, and pupil to interest each other and all.

Now think deeply for a moment on the saintly

SUBJECT OF PRAYER.

Pray for individuals of your class and the school as a body. Work as you pray. Pray for the erring and disinterested ones. Work and pray outside during the week as well as in the school on the Lord's day. Meet as officers and teachers to devise ways and means to interest, and retain it. We can not in a paper recite all the varieties for interesting work that individual schools may need. Study the habits and temperaments of your individual pupils, their regard or disregard of your counsel, apply a soothing lotion with tender hands as each case may demand.

NOW FOR "MY PET" IDEA.

As the Sunday-school is said to be the nursery to the church, and many are brought to full membership thereby, let me suggest a nursery to the Sunday-school. Where is it? In the cradle, of course. I saw a suggestion of a cradle roll some time ago, but its suggestion brought to my mind new thoughts. So here they are: When a child is born within the limits of your school, let the teacher of infant class, or superintendent, or both, at proper time visit the parents, ask permission to enroll the name on a specially provided roll, giving name, date of birth, etc., hang up this roll, that its name may take the place of its presence until its little mind develops. The parents, if able, may be invited to give an occasional penny; not for sake of cash as much as for a later reason. On each birthday, present such child with a pretty card with teacher's name and school. Ask the parents to bring the little pupil when convenient, seat to be given at rear of its class. At close of school let its class members and teacher get acquainted.

Now for the

GOOD OF "CRADLE ROLL."

You can not begin too young. It grows up naturally a member of your school. It early learns it has a right from its earliest existence. The cards given it, a record of its name, date of enrollment, its donation of pennies will be a source of gratification from the age of five to the end of life. It may be of interest to its parents, and it may be a partial solution of a perplexing problem, "How to interest the parents in the Sunday-school."

But now I imagine I hear some fastidious sister say,

WHAT, BRING A SQUALLING YOUNGSTER TO CHURCH AND SUNDAY-SCHOOL?

Yes, do so, for it may be the beginning of saving a soul from death. I imagine if such critic had stood near by, when "Jesus was here among men," and had sought to hinder a mother from bringing her precious charge to him, in loving tones he would rebuke, by saying, "Forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

THE PRIMARY CLASSES MUST BE CONSIDERED.

How? Mothers, when you wish to please a little tot of five to eight or even more years, do you do it by a long, serious, dry talk of big words? No; but by baubles, playthings, a song, a short story, or picture. Why? Because you have learned you must please the eye. So, primary teacher, if you would interest and retain the child, please the eye as well as the ear. A little song, a short story, a picture, drawing, colors, flowers, grasses; draw a lesson from it, weave it into your lesson, and see how well it is retained. Why, even you older children, who form this convention, often remember the illustration of the preacher's sermon, especially if it amuses you, much better than the text. My little niece, in her first "story book," could repeat every verse, though she could not read a word, providing she saw the accompanying picture, but cover the picture and she was lost. Simplify your lessons. Be a child yourself. When in their presence, live over your childhood's happy days.

CARRY THIS SAME IDEA INTO YOUR INTERMEDIATE CLASS WORK,

adding a little more of true dignity, in keeping with the age of your pupil—more solid food. Let each receive his share of attention, of questions, and encouragement. Talk of life's responsibilities and duties that will soon rest upon each of them. You are probably dealing with boys about sixteen years of age, who get an idea that they are too old for Sunday-school. Combat this. Use them in various little ways. Help to develop such talents as they may possess; choose them for minor offices; visit them occasionally; have little friendly confidential chats; pray with them if need be. This applies to young ladies as well. Take your class for a day's outing, or to your home for an evening. If in your class any are too forward, gently check them; if backward, gently push them by little leadings and words.

One great trouble is

WE OFT THINK OUR DUTY DONE

when class exercises are over. If you have a dull, homely, ill-clad child, or one whose parents may have "gone wrong," take the love of the Master to enlighten you, to lighten their burdens. Do not wear the Pharisee's shallow pretense of being better than your neighbor. Much better to remember the Sadducee's beautiful robe of humility, when he prayed, "be merciful to me, a sinner." "If you love those that love you, and hate those that hate you," what evidence do you give of having learned of Christ? None. The children of Satan do that. So if you find you favor certain ones because they are Bro. A's children, you treat shabbily others, being Mrs. B's children, be sure the evil one has a pretty good hold on you, and that you are not yet fit to teach others. I speak of this because some scholars are not retained because they are slighted. Of course we make an exception, those who always pout.

GRADUATE A CHILD

when he or she has earned it by good lessons. Don't unequally yoke a studious sixteen or eighteen-year-old child with a careless twelve or fourteen-year-old one. Let all sing, all read, all show an interest in the prayer. Get books properly distributed. Let teacher ask special questions, and superintendent have special, as well as general questions in review.

Now, while I feel I have no doubt failed to meet the demands of this paper, yet I trust I have disturbed your minds and set you to thinking "How?" and that in framing your work, the great Architect of our lives may assist us to build wisely and well, out of the abundant material furnished in the rising generation.

A New Kind of Passenger Car.

A new style of passenger car has been introduced on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. It is a combination of parlor, dining and observation car and will be attached to the fast mail train which leaves Chicago every morning for Omaha and the Northwest. The parlor is in the rear of the car. It is furnished with arm chairs, luxuriously upholstered, and opens on to the observation platform, which is separated from the room by large plate glass windows. Two sleeping berths are provided for invalids.

Off from the parlor is a comfortable smoking room, and toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. Beyond is the dining room, a charming affair, holding four tables. The kitchen and pantry are large and very complete. The cars are a distinct advance on anything of the kind yet used in this country, and their use will add greatly to the comfort of passengers.

LITTLE SIOUX, Iowa, October 1.

Editors Herald: The result of the labors of W. A. Smith and the writer in tent work this last summer has been, as to baptisms, two at Akron and three at Smithland, Iowa, which places are in the Little Sioux District. While it has rained from one to two or three times a week from the last of June up to September 29, we have not been rained out except on about four or five occasions. The attendance has been from good to extra; and the order and attention has been all that could have been wished for. I find W. A. to be a zealous worker, and an earnest contender for the "faith once delivered to the Saints."

When W. A. and the writer get a little way from home, where we are not so well known, the people take us to be preachers.

By the way, I sent for and received one of the cheapest editions (65 cents) of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and I found in it an excellent quality of print, paper, and binding for the price. May its mission never grow less.

Success to the ministry and the HERALD, and Saints in general.

In the faith,

J. C. CRABB.

CONDON, Oregon, September 27.

Editor Herald: In a letter from Bro. S. D. Condit, Bates, Idaho, of date September 1, he makes reference to a letter written by me, August 13, wherein I stated that the Brighamite elders had told me that at St. Anthony, Idaho, the Josephites had flatly refused to debate with them. I received such information from Elder Gustave F. Janson, Independence, Idaho. He did not, and said he could not remember the names of the Josephite elders who so refused, but insisted that such was true. Thus my letter to the HERALD. I tried to get him to use our tent in which to publicly refute (or undertake to) what I had said in his presence concerning the rise of the church, the departure by Brigham Young, et al., the introduction of the Adam-god theory, blood atonement, polygamy, and so forth, none of which was taught by Joseph the Seer. Mr. Janson said he did not feel himself competent to undertake the task, but their missionary in charge, a Mr. Bramwell, was a very able man, and would meet any Josephite upon those questions. Mr. Janson also tried to set aside some of the sayings of Brigham Young by saying that Bro. Brigham was a jolly man, a great hand to joke, and when he said he would set the women all free in two weeks he was only joking, or when he said he would unsheath his bowie-knife and conquer or die he was only joking. Rather a tame way of evading the issue.

Hoping Bro. Condit may find in this the information desired, I am as ever,

Your brother in hope,

PLATTE VALLEY, Nebraska, October 1.

Editors Herald: Conference of the Northern Nebraska District closed at Columbus on the 28th ult., though not largely attended, passed off quite pleasantly, and seemed to be much enjoyed by the Saints of that locality. Those attending from Omaha, Valley, and Blair will long remember the hospitality of Saints and friends at Columbus; prominent among whom were, Bro. and Sr. Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and daughter, and Sr. Mills. Also those who stayed with Bro. and Sr. George Galley seemed to appreciate the kindness received. Bro. Henry J. Hudson seemed full of life and zeal, but the condition of Sr. Hudson's health would not permit her doing much to entertain conference visitors, though any one could tell that her will was good.

It is good for Saints to meet together and labor harmoniously for the good of the work of Christ and the development of each other; for under such circumstances the Holy Spirit is sure to be present and felt, even though no outward gifts are manifested. That flow of the Spirit which brings joy to the soul and fills the mind and heart with love for God and man, and drives away the clouds and makes each and all happy and cheerful in the Lord, is much needed, and should be appreciated by those who partake of its sanctifying power. It is the Spirit that bears witness that Jesus Christ is the Savior of the world, and the gospel of God's dear Son, is still "the power of God unto salvation" to every one who believes and obeys its glorious precepts. One ounce of truth, or one point clearly stated by the Son of God, of which the Spirit bears witness, is, in the writers estimation, worth more than a train-load of speculative theory, or a volume of nicely adjusted sentences which only bring doubt and fear to the mind.

That which makes one clean and pure within and without, and removes every form of hypocrisy from the soul, and ennobles one to do unto others at all times and under all circumstances as he would have them do unto him, is Christianity put into everyday practice, and will stand approved of God in the day of burning, after the dross is all consumed. The truth will make us free when it is known and conformed to, and may reach and have its effect upon all who seek for it, whether they are rich or poor, high or low, white or black, bond or free, and we thank God for the knowledge that it is so. God is ever on the side of the right, and his sons and daughters can not, knowingly, abide in error.

The truth shines forth so bright and clear,

It makes us know that God is near;

We feel his power in the soul,

As on we press toward the goal.

O, who could stay, or wait behind,

And never try such good to find,

When to each soul the fountains free,

And all who will may come and see?

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

DES MOINES, Iowa, September 30.

Editors Herald: Closed tent meetings in the city, and for this year Sunday night, there being present the largest audience had during the entire series of nearly three weeks, and the deepest of interest was shown, both by the attention to what was said, and the material help rendered to aid in the mission work. Elder F. E. Cochran was present and his presence and assistance was fully as much enjoyed, as he seemed to enjoy being with the Saints in the services. The growth of interest in the city has been slow, but it is of the more satisfactory character, and portends the unifying of the official forces, and the removal of the hindering causes that have been felt here for such a length of time, and has wrought such discouragement as has been felt.

The distribution of literature has begun, and prospects for its continuance is in sight, and the existing demands for such work is becoming more and more apparent, resulting from inquirers and statements that have been made during the past week.

I go to Youngtown, a suburb of Des Moines, to-night, to minister the word, and encourage the few Saints living there.

Missionaries report everything encouraging except the weather and indifference, the latter being largely the result of the former, and of waywardness on the part of some of the Saints in the past. The work being done in Warren County is especially encouraging, as is also the conditions of the work at Dallas Center, where Sunday-school and social services are being held and several are interested in investigation, a Mr. Reist being already convinced of the truthfulness of our message, and will sooner or later accept.

Progress is being made in the prospective debate with D. H. Bays, the propositions now being agreed to, but he thinks indorsements are all "red-tape" and unnecessary, but viewing it differently, I await indorsements from him before considering rules. I just learn from W. C. Earhart that he has had another article published in the Baxter, New Era, of which it is said "I think his braggadocio is simply disgusting." I will reply to it with facts when examined. I do not think but what Bays will agree to satisfactory rules, and send proper indorsements, so that the discussion, I think, is only a matter of time. He has imagined that I wanted something inconsistent of him in the nature of the proposition, or pretended to, but he finally conceded to a large extent to what I requested. I have tried to make a record that even my enemies can not say but what it is fair, and God being my helper, such a record will be made through the discussion.

Just examined The Religio Quarterly, and see in it a force that certainly will aid the young of the church, and others who take advantage of that provided for their help, in intellectual and spiritual development.

May God speed his cause and every department of it.

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

SEATTLE, Washington, September 30.

Editors Herald: By the pen of Bishop G. H. Hilliard a knowledge of my whereabouts and work for the last three months has been furnished. We have been associated since July 11, at which date we met at the Southern California reunion. This has, to me, at least, been an unusually enjoyable privilege for Bro. Hilliard has not only the intellectual and spiritual but also the physical ability to occupy untiringly with interest and profit wherever he goes. This, combined with his constant readiness and willingness, has made it a picnic for me, as compared with my usual experience. When, from any cause, I am under the necessity of remaining inactive or silent, the trumpet still sounds, and I am privileged to rest and listen. I have felt many times thankful that a kind Providence has so ordered affairs for me this year. But like many other good things this pleasure is soon to end. We expect to part in a few days; he to move on to other mission points, and I to retrace some of my steps and work alone.

My health has varied; has been better on the whole than formerly, but some of my poor seasons have been rather discouraging to me. However, I am still on deck and doing what I can to help the workers.

On Sunday last, and for two days before, we held services in our little chapel at Roslyn, Washington, which the few Saints there have succeeded in building and paying for. It is twenty-four by thirty-six in dimension, and was completed and furnished at a cost of six hundred sixty-eight dollars. At their request, the dedication of the chapel was attended to by Bro. Hilliard preaching a very fitting sermon, and the writer offering the dedicatory prayer. The services were impressive and comforting, for the good Master was there.

We have operated at Condon and Hood River, at Looking-glass and Bandon, in Oregon. At the last named place an enjoyable and profitable reunion was held. Brn. C. E. Crumley, A. Allen, and W. A. Goodwin, of the missionary force were present, and with ourselves and the local force kept up the regular order of meetings. On the way to and from Bandon Bro. Hilliard and self held meetings at East Fork and Remote.

At his request, for what we consider good reason, Bro. Goodwin will cease his labors as a general missionary for a season. He desires to shape some business matters with a view to uninterrupted labor thereafter, and it is possible he may not resume missionary labor again during this conference year.

Castle Rock, Washington, was visited by us for a couple of days. A very nice chapel has been erected there, and only requires a few more touches to complete it for dedication, and it is free from debt. I should have mentioned that the Saints at Hood River, Oregon, have also a fine building about ready for dedication. These are evidences of commendable zeal and interest, and we hope that good will be the outcome.

We are now trying to offer a few words of advice and encouragement to the few Saints in Seattle. Brn. D. E. Powell and N. V. Sheldon, whom we met at Roslyn, have gone on to Laconer, where an opening for work seems to exist. From here we expect to start in two days for Spokane, and when our labors end there, unless some change in the program seems warranted, Bro. Hilliard and I will separate. I regret this very much, for he is a genial, generous, and faithful worker and companion. Alone I may not hold up long, and may return eastward for the winter. This seems probable now.

Bro. J. B. Roush is mustering the forces in the Colorado mission, and is finding ready assistance from Brn. Morgan and Stubbart, backed up by the earnest few who are associated with them. Brn. Foss in Southern California, and Etzenhouser in Northern and Central California, are doing what they can to hold present possessions and acquire more, though California is a poor country for proselyting work. Their corps of assistants is limited as to number, but fully up to the standard in zeal, fitness, and general adaptation. I would that we had more such.

Oregon and Washington ought to have at least twenty laborers in each, instead of having six or seven for both and with British Columbia to make draft on their time. Here is an excellent field for work if sufficient laborers could be had for systematic effort. Will we ever have them assigned?

I started from California to this point, expecting to cross to British Columbia, after doing what was demanded along the route, but the published letter of Bro. J. W. Roberts, who is in charge of Washington and British Columbia, has changed my mind as to that. It would seem folly with such a representation of conditions (which fully agrees with what I learned from the brethren preceding him there) to squander more money in going there, at least while one is there and more than equal to all the opportunity revealed.

The gospel work possesses an indiscible charm for me, and my glory is in its advancement. I would that more strength was mine to prosecute it vigorously. It is barely possible that I may go across to Montana with Bro. Hilliard for a week or less. That is in Bro. W. H. Kelley's field. I wonder if he will "kick." Somebody ask him and let me know.

In the harness, as ever,

JOSEPH LUFF.

SWEETWATER, Texas, September 28.

Editors Herald: My husband and I are doing a little grubbing as it were, and breaking the clods as best we can, and by right living, smooth the way for others who are more qualified. We are getting along slowly in gospel work, as Mr. Wight is sorely afflicted. His eyesight being so bad as to hinder him from reading, but thanks to our heavenly Father for a good memory. He gets along fairly well. He is now at a little town called Roscoe, on the T. P. R. R., on what used to be called the Staked Plains, where he used to drive cattle when he was a young man in the prime of life. He is the only one of our faith who has preached there, and was very kindly treated before, and we trust he will be this time. We still trust and pray that if it is the Lord's will his sight may be restored, so he can get about the Master's business better. We would be so thankful and would give him all the praise. We know he can, for he has all power, and with one breath of his lips it could be done if he but wills it. In humility I ask the sisters of the Prayer Union to remember him before the throne of grace.

This country is in a prosperous condition at present, after a very hard and stormy spring, storms of hail and sand, until it was almost too late to raise anything, but now everything is smiling in the way of feed for stock, plenty of water and grass. No frost yet, but cool and pleasant. MRS. SOPHIA WIGHT.

LAWTON, Oklahoma, September 29.

Editors Herald: I am still in the faith and am trying to do what I can for the advancement of the cause of the Master. I have a business to manage and do not get much time to preach. I have a regular appointment seven miles east of Lawton, every fourth Sunday, at eleven. I was out there yesterday, the 28th; preached to an interested congregation of about thirty hearers; had excellent liberty. This is a place where Bro. S. S. Smith began the work and made some friends for the cause. Bro. Smith is a faithful worker for the cause, and I believe will be instrumental in doing much good, if faithful.

Now, I would like for some one of the brethren, say Bro. H. O. Smith, to come and open up the work here in Lawton. I believe we could find a house to preach in, and if we can not get one here in town, we can find plenty of them near town. I could get lots of places to preach, if I could get away from the store, but times are dull here now, and I have to stay close to business. If I could get a good trustworthy pharmacist to conduct the business, I could put in most of my time preaching.

We would be glad to see any of the elders raise the gospel banner in these parts. We will do what we can to assist them in any way, so come ahead, brethren, and sound the gospel trumpet in this town of sin and vice. I would like to correspond with any of the Saints in this part of the country to learn their location and the prospects for preaching where they live, as I may be able to do more preaching in a few months.

Praying that the Lord will help me in getting into active service for the precious Master, I remain,

J. N. PERKINS.

LITTLE BLUE, Missouri, September 27.

Editors Herald: I have not been very successful of late in getting new subscribers for the HERALD, but I have done the best I could. Bro. G. H. Hulmes and myself have made a very successful tour through the stake with our large gospel tent this summer. We visited Holden, Knobnoster, Warrensburg, Post Oak, Lees Summit, and now here at Little Blue. We have but a few scattered Saints here. At each place we had the hearty coöperation of the local authorities and Saints, and with but one exception, that being at Knobnoster, we were greeted by large congregations of outsiders, who heard us gladly, especially at Warrensburg. Very many times our tent was crowded full, and as many more on the outside, and many buggies and carriages in the street, filled with attentive listeners, to hear the fullness of the gospel as restored by the angel in this our day. (Revelation 14: 6, 7.) Many who never heard it before, received it gladly, and in time to come, some will embrace it. Those of the brethren and sisters, who rendered us such excellent assistance, are too numerous to mention, therefore will omit all except Sr. N. Abraham and three daughters. They are good musicians, both vocal and instrumental. They live six miles from town, and nearly every night for weeks, regardless of rain, bad roads, or dark nights, they were at their post of duty, with their cheerful faces and sweet voices to help make the meetings a grand success. Oh that all Saints would manifest such zeal and willingness to do what they can! With but few exceptions, all the Saints done what they could, and their labors were appreciated by us, and God will reward them in the sweet bye and bye. We were also very nicely assisted in preaching by Elders W. H. Garrett, editor of Ensign, R. May and A. H. Parsons of the stake bishopric. They rendered us good service which was well received and appreciated.

I came to this place two weeks ago. On account of other business, Bro. Hulmes could not come with me. I was immediately made to feel that I was not wanted. We have but one member here, and that old ignorant prejudice seemed to be so dense that I could almost kick it with my feet. Finally a Mr. Henry consented for me to put the tent up on a vacant lot he had. After the first night, we have had good congregations, and that old opposition is all gone, and nearly the whole community seems to be my friends, and friends to the church; indeed a wonderful change has come over them. Many are investigating, some are believing and are glad. One lady, Mrs. Rittenhour, has asked to be baptized, which we will attend to to-morrow. There are also others who are standing near the door of the kingdom, and may come in. On Monday, we intend to take down the tent and close our tent labors for this summer, and sing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," realizing that our summer's campaign has been directed by God, and that good has been accomplished. We are satisfied and happy.

Yours in gospel bonds,

F. C. WARNKY.

MANCHESTER, Texas, September 28.

Editors Herald: We are wonderfully blessed by the Lord when we put our trust and faith in him, though we are weak; but he is able to bless above measure. We are thankful to his holy name, that we can exclaim in the voice of the Prophet Job, that we know that our Redeemer liveth, and is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever, and will hear the prayers of the faithful. We are thankful that our prayers on a certain occasion were heard and answered: On the 18th day of September, about four o'clock in the afternoon, I received the greatest blessing that I have ever experienced since joining the church. I had been sick for several days, and it seemed to me, that my time was up, and that it was impossible for me ever to get well, but I still had faith in God, and hoped that I might live to raise my baby girl that the Lord had put in my trust. While we were by ourselves, in the darkest moment of my life, my husband stepped in another room for something, and there appeared at the foot of my bed two personages dressed in men's clothing; one at one corner, and the other at the other corner. I asked if the one on my right was not Bro. E. L. Henson, and he said to me No, that it was Peter, and the other one was John, and said to me "Have faith in God. Ask your husband to pray for you, and pray for yourself and you will get well," and then disappeared. So my husband stepped in, and I told him what I was told to do, and of course we obeyed the command that was given us. We bowed down in prayer. He offered prayer for me, and then I prayed. We believed God would do just what he said, and in less time than one hour, the fever had all gone, and I wonderfully relieved, and am able now to do my work. We know that God will do just what he promises, and I ask the prayers of all God's children that I may live to raise my child up aright, that she may walk with God continually. My testimony is that I know this work in which we are engaged is of God, and will save to the uttermost, if we but put our trust in him. I love the work and all of God's children, and pray God that the time will soon come when we will all meet in Zion to part no more.

COOKS POINT, Texas, September 25.

Editors Herald: I went to Grimes County last week to preach at a place by the name of Cross in a church owned by the Free-will Baptists. After I arrived in the vicinity of the church I saw some of the Free-will brethren going to said church. They invited me to go to church with them. As I had already traveled many miles that day, I did not go with them, but told them I intended to attend meeting the following night, as they told me their pastor was going to preach also at night. So after noon, I saw the same people coming from meeting, and their preacher with them, who informed me that he had taken cold, and was not able to attend meeting at night, so he had published an appointment for me to preach at his church, which I appreciated very much, and thanked him for his kindness. I met a good turnout, who seemed to be very much interested. Sunday following, which was the day I expected him to be on hand to fill his appointment for the day, I learned about eleven o'clock that day that he had been called home Saturday night on account of sickness in his family, so he could not be on hand to fill his appointment. There was a large turnout, so I was informed that I would have to preach again for them, which I did with good liberty. Everybody seemed very much interested, so I announced meeting for Sunday night. One Free-will brother said they would hold a prayer-meeting first at night, then I could preach. I agreed to it, so at night we met. They waited some time for some cause, then came to me and said they had decided to postpone their prayer-meeting and I could go ahead and preach, which I did. Congregation seemed to be much interested. Bro. Franklin said, after meeting, that even the babies did not cry at the meeting.

After services were over, the main kicker against us heretofore, came to me, and said he did not want any better preaching, and invited me to come to his house, and to come and preach for them. He said he had been prejudiced towards us, but it was because he took us to be the same as the Utah people. Oh, my! When will the time come when the way of truth will not be evilly spoken against on account of the doings of the Utah Mormons? I will be as patient as I can be, and wait the own due time of the good Lord, for he will put an end to all wrong-doing some time. The innocent will be honored.

I will say, God bless that Free-will Baptist preacher; he is a good man. He has a lot of good people in his church. I hope to be the means of teaching them the way of truth more perfectly.

I am yours,
E. W. NUNLEY.

SHABBONA, Michigan, September 25.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa;

Dear Brother: Not having written to you or the HERALD for some time, I think I should give a little account of our work in Michigan. I have been spending several weeks in the eastern district attending several two-day meetings, and assisting the brethren in different parts of the district. At Richmondville five were baptized by Bro. Hawn during the two-day meeting. At Harbor Beach, Bro. Wm. Davis baptized one, and has also baptized some since, and here and there, now and then, some are obeying the gospel.

Bro. Joseph, you will perhaps remember the M. E. minister who arose and spoke in the fellowship meeting at Shabbona during the conference, and said, "This people shall be my people, their God my God," etc.; he has been baptized and confirmed, and is doing well so far as we can see.

The prejudice that existed twenty years ago has gone; at the same time people are not obeying the gospel as they did then. I notice that nearly all of the older heads, who obeyed the gospel when I first came here twenty-four years ago, are in the faith, and their children and grandchildren are growing up in the same faith, and want no other. And many who did not obey it then, who are alive yet, say, "If I were going to belong to any church, that would be the one." Mr. Procter, with whom you stopped while at Shabbona, speaks well of you. Your writing back to him did good.

Our work has been hindered considerable on account of rain, some places it is, and has been very muddy for some time. The brethren have not had a good year for their tent work on account of wet, cold nights, damp ground, etc., yet the attendance has been better in the tents than we generally have, under such conditions, in halls or schoolhouses. Taking it as a whole we think we are getting along fairly well, and the work is onward. Can you come again and give us another visit? Many of the outside people and all of the Saints would be pleased to have you repeat your visit.

J. J. CORNISH.

*Yes, Bro. Cornish, when conditions favor.

HAMILTON, Missouri, September 30.

Editors Herald: Without the HERALD to read, methinks I could not keep house. It comes laden with so many good thoughts, suggestions, and questions and answers. Many a letter giving peace to our minds. The article, "Who was Joseph Smith?" is instructive and inspiring. Would love to see the circulation larger in our (Kingston, Missouri), Branch.

With good wishes to the HERALD force,

We remain as ever,

BRO. AND SR. J. H. SNIDER.

ATTLEBORO, Massachusetts, September 27.

Editors Herald: It is a long time since you had news from Attleboro, but we hope you will hear from us more often in the future.

Bro. Isaac Smith has just closed a series of tent meetings in this town. He had the assistance of Bro. Robley three or four times and H. J. Davison once. Bro. Smith has won favor with the Saints, and with many outsiders. The people were heard to say as they were leaving the tent, "that man preaches the Bible anyway, and he backs his statements by the Bible." We realize that we have been fortunate in having such an able defender of the work with us. The Saints have been edified, and we are sorry to part with him. Some of the outsiders were wishing he was our minister all the time, but that would not do. Others are wanting to hear him, and our loss will be some one else's gain.

One amusing feature in the tent meeting was, one evening, the Reverend J. W. Denton of the Advent faith came in soon after Bro. Smith had commenced to preach, with his Bible under his arm, (probably it was his intention to see if Bro. Smith was using the King James Translation of the Bible;) anyway he opened his Bible at the first text Bro. Smith gave out. Any one who knows Bro. Smith's style of preaching will realize what a chase he would give any one, and so it was with this man. He no sooner had found one place than there was another waiting for him, but he soon gave up the chase, (a sadder and wiser man, I suppose,) but he and his friend were given a supply of tracts, to read at their leisure, as they left the tent.

We can not say that we have had the tent full every night, but I think I can truly say that some good has been done, and we can only wait patiently and see what the future will bring. We feel good has been done and we are rejoicing in the work.

There is one thing that I must not forget, and that is about our new church which we are trying to build. We have the cellar all finished, and we hope to start on the woodwork soon. It will be a building that the Saints need not be ashamed of. The cost is estimated to be about fifteen hundred dollars. Of course, we would accept a donation from any one, especially those who have a little more money than they want. Yes, we are begging, if we can beg, that is what we are here for, and the object we have in view. We know as a general thing the Saints have all they can do in paying their tithes or offerings, or to help Graceland. We do not wish any to neglect this part of the work, but we ask to be next on turn.

Things seem to be encouraging here, but the price of coal. What a blessing for Zion, they have got a coal mine of their own. These times remind us of the word spoken in these last days, about fleeing to Zion. We are more able to realize the wisdom of our kind Father in providing such a place in these perilous times. We realize that things in the world are waxing worse and worse, and it requires a stronger effort to be faithful. We have had a few discouragements here, but they are not worth mentioning. Our Father's grace has been more than sufficient for us, and we are rejoicing in the work.

Ever praying for the redemption of Zion.

JOHN SIDDALL.

BYRNEVILLE, Indiana, September 26.

Editors Herald: As I take up my pen to-night, the verse of song which runs, "Let us tell of the good we are hoping," is foremost in my mind. It is of the "good we are hoping" to result from our "Ladies' Aid Society" of which I wish to write you. Some of our energetic sisters, not content to "keep the even tenor of their way," but anxious to work, urged among the Saints here to organize a society for the purpose of raising money for church purposes. Our first meeting consisted of ten members. Present membership, seventeen. To inform your readers of what so small a society can do I just add that by having an ice-cream supper the proceeds realized amounted to $16.25. This to buy singing books for Sunday-school and improvements on the church house (no thanks to the brethren who offered discouragement) we are now contemplating an oyster supper. After that we may do other things, such as making quilts to sell, etc. We are glad that this work has entered our minds and it shall be our earnest endeavor to continue in it by sustaining our worthy president, Sr. Lydia Jenkins, of whom we can truly say, "A better could not have been chosen." We all feel our inability to do much, but hope that by the addition of our mites to be blessed.

"We have not wings, we can not soar;
But we have feet to scale and climb,
By slow degrees, by more and more
The cloudy summits of our time."

May we work together for good till our work on earth is done.
I write as secretary of this worthy movement.

EDNA K. MOSIER.

WAYNE, West Virginia, September 25.

Editors Herald: Being one of a committee appointed by our district conference to wait upon State superintendent of schools, Thomas C. Miller, I went from Goose Creek to Charleston, the State capital, on the 22d inst. Arriving in the night, about nine o'clock, I took lodging at the Hotel Washburn. On the next day, the 23d inst., as I understood the arrangement, we were to meet and call upon Mr. Miller. I waited for the appearance of the other two members of the committee, Brn. Godby and Odell, until about three o'clock in the afternoon. I had, however, previously called on Mr. Miller and set the time for an audience, and, thinking that they were not coming, I called on Mr. Miller alone. I stated my business and he gave me audience in a private room. I there endeavored to make clear to his mind the difference between "the Mormons," or the church in Utah, and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He kindly gave attention to my discourse. I told him that his official ruling on the subject of whether the Mormons were a religious denomination, in the sense contemplated in the school law and constitution of West Virginia, affected us as a church very seriously, and that I was sure he did not intend it to reach any but the Utah people. He said they were the only ones excluded from the schoolhouses. I gave him the resolution of our district conference, sent to our congressman, R. H. Freer, against giving B. H. Roberts a seat in the house of representatives, and various other documentary evidences showing the difference between the two churches. He carefully noted it all, took the names of our President and Presiding Bishop, and their addresses. He said he believed the discrimination was unfairly against us, and promised to publish an official statement that his ruling was only intended for "the people in Utah who had been guilty of the practice of Mormonism;" i. e., polygamy. Mr. Miller seemed to take great interest in the matter and invited me to "call in again." He said the Utah elders had called upon him and undertook to argue the case to prove that their church was a religious denomination in the sense of the law, etc.

The same day, about five o'clock, I met Bro. Odell on the street and he took me to the Hotel Carny, where I met Bro. Godby also. The next morning I again called upon Superintendent Miller and introduced the other two members of our committee, who bore witness to the facts as before given him. Our interview was a very pleasant one, and, if Mr. Miller does what he promised, will have been a very successful one.

Bro. Godby and I expect to remain here till the 3d of October. We will go to Ripley, in Jackson County, and thence to Belgrove, the happy home of our worthy district president, where we are told, is a new boy named after the writer, who will be expected to furnish, in due time, the red-top boots.

The mobbers in this community are about to receive summary punishment from the court now in session.

The gospel is still sounding in these parts, and the God of grace and glory is giving strength and boldness to stand for "the righteousness of faith."

D. L. SHINN.

ROSLYN, Washington, September 26.

Editors Herald: I drop you a few lines again to let the readers of our valuable paper know that the Bishopric does not forget the few Saints in the northwest part of the United States. When I wrote before, I was at Lookingglass, Oregon. Although there has been a great deal of preaching done there, prejudice still exists, and our audience at that place was small. If we had such a preacher as Bro. Joseph Luff to stay and preach for a month or two, they might feel differently, and turn out better.

We have only a few members living there. Some of those seem very devoted, earnest workers, trying hard to let the gospel light shine, so the world may see in their life and character the beauty and power of the gospel. Then some are not quite so energetic in gospel work as they might be. Some have not yet put away the tobacco habit, which is certainly detrimental to spiritual advancement.

Wednesday, August 20, we started by team to Myrtle Point, Oregon. We stopped by the way, at Minerdo Mill, and held meetings each night, and on Sunday the 24th. Elders Arthur Allen and W. A. Goodwin were with me at this place and did their part; Elder Goodwin going on to another point and preaching over Sunday, Bro. Allen and myself holding the fort at Pleasant Hill. There is no organization at this point, but several good earnest Saints living in the neighborhood, and plenty of good material for more, if some one can go and do the necessary work, and it should not be neglected. On Monday the 25th we arrived at Myrtle Point, where we met Brn. Luff and C. E. Crumley, who had gone another road and held meetings over Sunday at another place. On Tuesday, we all took the boat for Bandon to attend the reunion. Wednesday night attended the branch prayer-meeting, and preached Thursday night. We then attended the reunion at Bandon, which lasted over two Sundays, doing our part as best we could. Brn. Luff and Crumley presided over the reunion to the general satisfaction of all, I believe. The presence of Brn. Allen and Goodwin of the missionary force, together with Luff and Crumley, and the local brethren, was sufficient guarantee that the reunion would be a success.

We have a good lively branch at Bandon, presided over by C. E. Crumley. He has some excellent helpers in that branch, in fact most all there seem alive to the work. The clear, plain way in which those brethren presented the evidences of the truth of the gospel, and the duty of Saints must surely result in great good to all who heard, both in and out of the church.

I heard much favorable comment on the efforts of Luff, Crumley, Allen, and Goodwin. Three were baptized and others said they would be soon. About a dozen outside the church bought the Book of Mormon.

After the reunion we went back to Pleasant Hill, and held two meetings, myself and Bro. Luff speaking; then on to Lookingglass, where we preached one night. Bro. A. J. Mayes took us to Lookingglass, then Bro. Orson Buel on to Roseburg. Much travel has to be done by team in that part of the country, and those brethren are ready and willing to assist by taking the elders from one place to another, or pay their way on the stage. Our next point was Portland, Bro. Luff and the writer going there, while Bro. Allen dropped off at Eugene to preach awhile. Very few Saints live in Portland, and we only tarried over night and went on to Hood River. Held meetings at Hood River Saturday night, three times Sunday, and Monday night. At this place there seems to be considerable prejudice, hence our audience was small. Our people have a very good church building there nearly completed, in which we held meetings. By a united effort prejudice may be overcome and good done there.

Bro. N. T. Chapman lives at Hood River. He is now Bishop's agent for the district, and we trust all Saints may call on him for receipts for tithes and offerings this year yet.

On September 16 we started for Condon. It was easy to get to Arlington on the train, then we had forty miles to drive through the dust. And oh! How dusty it was. We could spit real estate out of our mouth, blow it out of our nose, and wash it out of our hair that evening. And yet two sisters made that eighty-mile drive to take the elders out to preach, the men all being busy thrashing. Held meetings at Condon, until Sunday, the 21st, and after meeting Sunday night we drove forty miles to Arlington to catch the morning train. This was hard on Bro. Luff, he being ill, but we thought we must do that in order to reach our next appointment on time. You know the elders must not disappoint the people, if they have to go without sleep, and drive all night. At Condon, our people have a neat little church-building, and a fairly good branch of earnest workers. Many outside people attended our meetings at Condon, and I trust our efforts did some good. Two brave sisters again volunteered to go with us to Arlington, and take the team back; and Srs. Tharp and Goodwin took the eighty-mile drive this time, and Srs. Tharp and Wallace the first drive. The men all had to be at the thrashing machine on Monday. I do not know what this church would do if it were not for the energetic, willing workers among the sisters. In many places they are in the lead on Sunday-school and Religio work, and largely so in general church work.

This closed our efforts in Oregon. We were well received by all the Saints in Oregon, where we have been. They willingly and royally cared for us and helped us along. Bro. Crumley is in charge in Oregon, and seems to be getting along nicely. Brn. Allen and Goodwin, the missionaries with him, are willing workers, and doing what they can. Many more elders could be profitably used in Oregon. Men who can stand long trips in wagon, hack, on horseback, or on foot, ought to be sent to this northwest country.

I pray God to bless all his Saints in Oregon, as well as every other part of the world, in every effort they make to advance the interests of truth and righteousness among the people.

We are now in Washington, and will soon be through our work here for the present. Will give a report of Washington later on. With love for God's work and all his people, I hope to be found trying to do my part as best I can while life shall last.

Hopefully at work,

G. H. HILLIARD.

GIBRALTAR, Ontario, October 2.

Editors Herald: On July 12 I arrived at this place by request of Sr. Maggie Lindsay, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, formerly of Stratford, Ontario, who was visiting her relatives here, for the purpose of winning them to the true faith. I made my home with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. Andrew McKean and wife, who proved to be a noble couple, and with whom I could feel at home.

I applied for the schoolhouse to preach in, but the trustees said different religious denominations had applied for it for night services and had been refused, and they said they were sure I could not keep order if I did get it; but they consented to grant me one chance. I took it and preached on "Believe on Christ." At the close the trustees handed me the key and said to go ahead. I did so, having a full house and the best of order. Then the preachers whose crafts were in danger began to cry "polygamy," etc. I sent them challenges to come out and meet me, but they would not come and then I lectured on their different beliefs. The trustees now ordered the school closed, but the people said no, and consequently it was to be decided by a majority vote of the people. Mr. John Graham and I went to the people with a petition for them to vote for or against me using the school, for five sermons every week, the rest of the time to be given to other denominations, the Latter Day Saints to choose their own time of meeting.

We got a large majority, and now the matter is settled and our enemies are very wrathful. During my stay at that place, I baptized Mrs. McKean and a Mr. Fields. The people three miles north of this school now requested me to preach in their church known as "Rock Union" or "Jesse James" church. I attended one of their prayer-meetings in the church and when Jesse James, the preacher, closed his meeting I asked the privilege to say a few words, but Jesse told me to take my hat and go home, as it was his meeting and I must not speak in it. I asked him if he had closed it, and he said yes. "Then have you opened another?" said I; and he said no. Then, I said it was my meeting as much as his, and I would speak as well as he. The people demanded the privilege to be granted me, and at last he consented. When I was through speaking the people said they wanted to hear me every night. The trustees were present and contended stubbornly against me, but the people insisted that I use the church as it was built for all Christian denominations. At last they granted me it for two weeks. I began September 4, and at the expiration of the time the trustees said I must leave there, but the people said they would put it to a vote and abide the majority's decision. The vote stood fifty-three against two in my favor. The trustees said they would not unlock the door, so when a large crowd congregated next evening the trustees sat on the door-step and would not open the church. However, the trustees were ushered aside and our party used keys of their own, and unlocked the door and we had a splendid meeting. Next night when we arrived a new spring lock was on, and we had to stay out. The trustees were again present and the crowd pelted them with clods and stones, until they had to leave for more agreeable quarters.

I was offered several private houses in which to preach and accepted the offers, but on Sunday afternoon we went to the churchyard where we had a very enjoyable service. On the following Thursday the church door suddenly disappeared and consequently we went in and occupied. Our party then put on a rough door, and put up notices through the country for an election of new trustees on Saturday, September 27. But alas, when we arrived, there stood the county constable at the door to forbid the people opening it. He told the people that was his errand, but for all he did not forbid them doing so. However, the door was suddenly jerked open and all rushed in, but the trustees had to again fly before a volley of stones. The constable was in favor of the people, and said he would not arrest any of them.

The meeting was called to order by a Mr. James Latter, who it was claimed was legally one of the trustees, as those three who were now opposing us were never elected, but merely assumed the office of trustee. The motion being put it was unanimously carried, that I act as chairman of the meeting. Having accepted the honor, I proceeded to business. A vote of condemnation and censure was unanimously carried disapproving the action taken by Jesse James and his associate so-called trustees. Three men were now elected to be trustees, James Latter being reelected. By a vote of a full house I was requested to continue my services in the church. I was thanked for the kind, able, and gentlemanly manner in which I filled the chair.

They also by a full show of hands agreed to present me with a purse of money at my next service.

The next day I baptized James Latter, one of the new trustees, also Miss Hazel McArthur, a daughter of another of them, and Miss Lillie McArthur, a niece of same trustee. In all I have baptized eight grown people in this vicinity. Four of them being heads of families, and several others are almost decided to obey. I expect to organize a Sunday-school here about the last of this month, and I believe a Zion's Religio would also be a great benefit, as there are a great many young people here who could be reached by that society; so if wisdom seems to direct I will also organize a Religio.

The boys of this community got the name of being absolutely beyond all control of any preacher; but since I came they have attended in large crowds and have not made the slightest trouble for me in any form.

I ever pray for the advancement of our beloved cause.

Conference Minutes.

Utah.—Reunion and conference were held in Salt Lake City, Utah, September 5-15. The Sunday-school association convened on Thursday, September 11. Officers elected: Guy Brokaw superintendent, Pauline Higgins assistant superintendent, Sr. Proctor, of Ogden, secretary, Jennie Garr treasurer, and John Vanderwood librarian. A district Religio association was organized with F. L. Sawley president, Charles Wardle vice-president, Flora Phillips secretary, and Guy Brokaw treasurer. The reunion and conference were presided over by W. H. Kelley, Swen Swenson, and A. M. Chase. It was decided by the conference to hereafter hold two conferences a year. The next conference is to be held in Ogden, some time in March, 1903. Officers elected: A. M. Chase president, T. Thorensen vice-president, Sr. McClaine secretary and treasurer. The reunion was considered by all a success in every way. The preaching was instructive and encouraging. Prayer and testimony meetings were held each day to the edifying and instruction of all present. The Sunday-school and Religio were given each afternoon, during the week days of the reunion, in which alternate sessions were held, a goodly number taking an active part. The weather was fine. All kept well with but one exception. All the meetings were held in the Saints' chapel. Several camped on a vacant lot just across the street. The most pleasing feature was the good nature manifest by all and the zeal of the Saints in all working in unity to advance the interests of the work. It was decided to hold another reunion next year and a committee was appointed to decide on time and place and arrange for the reunion of 1903.

Spring River.—Conference met on August 21 and 22, at Angola, Kansas, reunion, I. N. White and J. T. Davis presiding. Statistical reports from eleven branches showed an aggregate of 904 members, a gain of 23 over last report. Nineteen elders, 1 priest, 3 teachers, and 1 deacon reported. Bishop Short reported: Received, $646.83; expended, $588.45; balance on hand, $58.38; consecrations received, $22. The Maysville Arkansas Branch was declared disorganized and members of the same are requested to get letters of removal from district secretary. It was decided to hold a district reunion in 1903, time, place, and all arrangements left in the hands of missionary in charge, district president, and Bro. J. M. Richards. It was decided to hold the next conference at Joplin, Missouri, on Friday, 10 a. m., on or before the full moon in December. Sr. A. C. Silvers, district historian, resigned, and the conference recommended M. S. Frick to succeed her.

Northeastern Illinois.—Conference convened September 13, at 216 E. 35th St., Chicago, at 10.30 a. m., F. G. Pitt presiding, J. F. Keir secretary. Branches reporting: Wilmington 68, De Kalb 50, Plano 175, First Chicago 152, Sandwich 72, Ladd 22, Mission 119, Central Chicago 89, Unity 25, West Pullman 43, referred to branch president for correction. Ministry reporting: E. J. Lang, H. Southwick, F. J. D. Earl, F. M. Cooper, G. H. Graves, A. J. Keck, Jerome Wildermuth, M. H. Bond, and A. F. Sherman. District treasurer reported: Balance on hand, tent fund, $16.30; district fund, 67 cents; total, $16.97; audited and found correct. Bishop's agent reported: Balance on hand last report, $478.54; receipts, $658.88; total, $1,137.42; disbursements, $547.05; balance on hand, $590.37. Auditing committee elected: A. J. Keck and James F. Keir, they to report to next conference. Resolved, That hereafter all elders and presiding officers be requested to report to the district conference, failure to comply with this rule for three consecutive conferences, without sufficient reason, shall subject them to a call for the surrender of their licenses, by district authorities. Recommendation of Sandwich Branch for ordination of Bro. Geo. Howard to office of elder referred to district president and missionary in charge with power to act. F. G. Pitt's branch president report blank form adopted by conference. Preaching by John H. Lake, M. H. Bond, and F. M. Cooper. Adjourned subject to call of district president.

Southwestern Texas.—Conference convened at the Crockett Schoolhouse in Bandera County, on Friday, September 12, John H. Harp and David S. Parmer presiding, W. H. Davenport and Ruth Gifford clerks. Ministry reporting: Elders John H. Harp and W. H. Davenport; Priests Charley Harp, David S. Parmer, and E. B. Bennett. Branches reporting: San Antonio 73, no change; Medina City 56, gain 7; Bandera, no report. Officers elected: John H. Harp president, David S. Parmer vice-president, W. H. Davenport reelected clerk, Ruth Gifford assistant, Sr. E. J. Crow treasurer. The delegate system was adopted for this district. A motion prevailed that no one be ordained to any office in any branch in this district unless he is first recommended by the branch to the district conference and such ordination provided for. Preaching by John H. Harp, Charley Harp, David Parmer, and W. H. Davenport. Adjourned to meet at San Antonio, Friday evening, February 6, 1903.

Pastoral.

To the Saints in My Mission Field, in Western Iowa: Beloved members of the household of faith. Having been called and ordained a patriarch and evangelist in the Church of Christ and realizing the great and solemn responsibilities of that calling, I have moved with caution therein lest I should act presumptuously or be led by a false spirit to utter that which the Holy Spirit did not dictate; and lest some should interpret my caution to indicate a lack of faith in that calling or a desire to shirk a duty, I desire to be understood that while I feel my unworthiness to occupy such a sacred duty or calling and fully realize my utter incompetence to stand as a mouthpiece for God unto his children, I fully believe in the divinity of that work, as a part of the great work of the restitution of all things spoken of by the prophets; and am determined to discharge my duty in that calling and leave the result with God. To this end I ask a deep interest in your prayers that the Holy Spirit may qualify me for that sacred duty. It will be to the interest of all who may require my ministrations to hold me up before the throne of grace continually. It will also be the duty of all so to live before God and all mankind that they may be worthy of the blessings they seek whether at my hands or at the hands of others so set apart to comfort and encourage the Saints. So soon as I can with safety to my health I expect to visit the branches, and will notify each branch of the time of my visitation so that as many as desire may receive them. While I do not realize that it is an absolute necessity to keep a record of such ministrations—other than that individuals keep their own for their own benefit—it may be well to do so, but whether such general record is kept or not it will be necessary that they be taken down for the benefit of the recipient and a copy received by them, hence it will be necessary that a stenographer be found who can write the blessing with exactness. He or she should be one of our own faith for obvious reasons. It would be good if some enterprising youth or maiden, in every branch, would make themselves masters of that science so that their services may be available when needed—it would be a very useful accomplishment in many ways, and would be remunerative in other callings, if not in evangelical work. I desire to work in harmony with branch authorities, and if those who desire my ministrations will confer with those authorities, I have no doubt they would notify me, and if several were so interested I could notify the branch president when I would be there. Earnestly seeking the guidance of the Holy Spirit, I remain,

Your brother in the kingdom of peace,

CHARLES DERRY.

Nebraska Leads in Literacy.

A statement recently issued by the census office at Washington, showing the percentage of persons in the different States between the ages of 10 and 14 years who were able to read and write in 1900, places Nebraska at the head of the list, with a percentage of 99.66.

White Clover.

Some time since, Sr. Audentia Anderson, of Lamoni, Iowa, composed and copyrighted the music to the beautiful song, White Clover. She has now turned the entire issue over to the trustees of Graceland College, for the benefit of that institution.

This will make, for a lover of music, a very handsome Christmas gift, and as we offer them at twenty-five cents, being half price, we hope that the friends of Graceland will soon avail themselves of this opportunity of procuring a high standard piece of music, and thereby aid the college.

Send all orders to Box 224, LAMONI, Iowa.

Died.

CLEMONS.—Horatio Clemons was born February 6, 1826, in England, baptized November 18, 1889, by J. J. Cornish, died September 15, 1902, of paralysis. Funeral at Farwell Congregational church, sermon by Elder J. A. Grant.

SMITH.—John W. Smith was born July 1, 1824, near St. Catharines, Ontario, baptized July 12, 1888, by R. C. Evans, died September 22, 1902. He spent the last 22 years of his life in Waterford, Ontario. When Bro. Evans went there to open up the work, Bro. Smith owned a church, which he opened for preaching and was one of the first to obey the gospel and afterwards gave the building to the Saints. He enjoyed fairly good health till the last, when he was stricken with paralysis and died in a few hours. Funeral sermon by Elder J. A. Blackmore assisted by Elder M. Yerks.

CAMPBELL.—Lyman Campbell was born January 16, 1834, in the state of New York. Married Caroline M. L. Hartwell August 31, 1856; to this union six children were born, four sons and two daughters. He became identified with the church March 2, 1861, baptized by E. C. Briggs, confirmed by W. W. Blair. Ordained to the office of elder, January 9, 1892, by Cornelius Macintosh. Died September 16, 1902, being 68 years and 8 months old.

Again dark clouds hang o'er us,
We feel a chast'ning hand;
Our father is taken from us
To dwell in the spirit land.

Yes, his earth life now is finished,
His words of council given;
And now may we look for guidance
To our "father who art in heaven."

May we strive to do his bidding,
And be faithful to the end,
So when our earth life's finished
We will reach that happy land.

There to greet our loved ones
Who have gone on before,
Free from sin and sorrow,
And our parting will be o'er.

MANDSLEY.—M. G. Mandsley was born October 20, 1834, at Lancaster, England. Died September 22, 1902, at the home of his daughter, Maquoketa, Iowa. He was baptized February 10, 1862, at Maquoketa by Elder H. Bartlett. Ordained an elder in 1863, at Amboy, Illinois, by Edmund Briggs. Funeral sermon by Warren Turner.

HOIE.—Hakon Hoie, near Colorado Springs, Colorado, on train en route for home, September 24, 1902. Bro. Hoie was born at Finestead, Norway, and was 26 years, 10 months, 24 days old. He leaves a young widow, one child, a father, 3 brothers, and 1 sister. Was baptized May 3, 1896. He had gone to Colorado hoping to regain health, but too late. Starting to return home, they were only one hour on train, when Sr. Hoie found him at rest in his berth. Services at their home, sermon in Saints' church at Mission, Illinois, September 28, by M. H. Bond.

MCKEOWN.—William McKeown was born in upper Canada on the 7th of March, 1828. He was the son of William and Jane McKeown. His father came to Quebec, Canada, in 1815. Mr. McKeown died October, 1827, leaving his wife and three children; namely, Thomas, deceased; Jane, the wife of Robert Gardner, and resides in Utah; Elizabeth, wife of Robert Brice, who resides in Canada. William, the subject of this notice, was born after his father's death, and never knew parental care and protection. When he was a year old his mother married James Kilfoyle. They came to Pottawattamie County, in 1848. Bro. William McKeown left home at the age of 12 years with the consent of his mother and worked as a laborer, his earnings going to her support. In 1847 he came to Pottawattamie County, Iowa, and on May 9, 1848, he was married to Eliza Jane Hall. To this union eleven children were born, eight of which are living. On February 4, 1870, his wife died and he was left to care for the children. On February 11, 1873, Bro. McKeown married Jennet Kirkwood, the daughter of Robert and Mary Kirkwood, residing at Crescent City. By the last marriage ten children were born, three sons and seven daughters. Four of the daughters having passed on before. Bro. McKeown became a member of the church in 1845, being baptized by William Gardner, and on May 11, 1862, he became a member of the Reorganized Church, being baptized by C. G. McIntosh and confirmed by him and ordained an elder the same day he was baptized, and was chosen president of the North Pigeon Branch, and served in that capacity about two years. Just before he died he said, "My faith is strong in the gospel of Christ; in fact stronger to-day than it ever was before, and I long to be freed from suffering and pain." On July 4 the summons came and he passed away without a struggle. He leaves to mourn his departure, a loving wife, seven sons, and five daughters, and a host of friends. At the time of his death he was 74 years, 3 months, and 27 days of age. Sermon by Elder Joshua Carlile.

A Farm in Nebraska

If you are perfectly willing to live all your life where you are. If you have made ample provision for your sons and are entirely content, then NEBRASKA will probably not interest you.

But if you are renting a good farm and pay high rent, practically working to make somebody else rich. Or if you own a poor farm and can't get ahead on it, then let me send you a copy of our book about NEBRASKA. It won't cost you anything and it will tell you about a country where if you are worth shucks you can soon become prosperous. Nebraska stands to-day as one of the very first agricultural States in the Union, and for a little while land there can be bought for about half of what it is really worth. Send to me to-day for the book about Nebraska—free.

On October 7 and 21, round-trip tickets will be sold to Nebraska and other western points for half rates, plus $2.00.

In almost every married life there comes a time when a readjustment of earlier ideals is necessary. It may come suddenly with the first quarrel or it may gradually dawn on the husband or the wife, and on the resulting adjustment the entire future happiness of the family often depends. Lavinia Hart discusses in a brief essay in The Cosmopolitan for October the shattering of immature ideals evolved from the haze of romantic dreams and the building of new ideals on the firmer foundation of common sense.

MR. MAHAFFEY'S RARE (?) DISCOVERY.

We have lately received clippings from various papers giving an account of how one Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, of Granitesville, South Carolina, has discovered (?) the origin of the Book of Mormon. Dispatches from Columbia, South Carolina, report Mr. Mahaffey as having made the following statements over his signature. We quote from the Globe-Democrat for September 29.

The age of strange things has not passed away. When Mormonism was first organized and the Book of Mormon circulated in Conneaut, Ohio, many of the friends and acquaintances of Reverend Solomon Spalding affirmed that it was the writings of that gentleman, who had been dead about fourteen years. Attempts were made to secure his writings at that time and compare them with the Book of Mormon, but either through lack of interest by the proper persons, or through some trickery of the Mormons, the attempt failed its purpose and rather resulted in a victory for the Mormons.

All of Spalding's writings mysteriously disappeared, and over seventy years have passed away and nothing further of any consequence has been done in this direction. The Mormons have gone on deceiving and being deceived with Joseph Smith's tale of angels and golden plates until to-day they have a membership of nearly 500,000. During the past ten years they have gained 96,982 members. During last year alone they gained 65,000 members in the East. They now have 2,000 missionaries in the field, and are fast becoming the most formidable element in modern civilization. They hold the balance of power in seven of the United States and are adroitly colonizing in half a dozen others.

But truth is coming to the front at last. The original Spalding manuscript has been found. It was resurrected in Honolulu, Hawaii, our new possession, and is now deposited in the library of Oberlin College, in Ohio, and through the kindness of that institution I have had the loan of it for the purpose of examination and comparison with the Book of Mormon. A careful examination of the two documents shows more than twenty features of perfect identity. Lack of space forbids their appearance here in full, but the following examples briefly stated will give an idea of how they stand. For example:

Both stories pretend to be translations or abridgments of older and more elaborate records found buried in the earth.

Both stories trace the ancestry of the American Indians from the old world, and give tragic accounts of their providential passage across the ocean to the American continent; their settlements; the rise and fall of nations; their political divisions; terrible wars, etc.

Both stories cater to the use of the same little transparent stone, through which sights could be seen, hidden treasures translated, etc.

Both stories contain the same account of an army contending in battle, and painting their foreheads red in order to distinguish themselves from their enemies in times of confusing excitement.

Both stories are characterized by the same tale of a "sacred roll," which was believed to have been of divine origin, and which formed the basis of religious belief and teaching.

Both stories contain accounts of the discovery of other nations who had preceded them to the American continent; and that some of these other nations were in a savage state, but were soon educated and restored to civilization.

One more important feature is this: The hieroglyphics of the "plates" described by Joseph Smith are identical with the literary style of a people described in the Spalding Romance. The identity here is perfect in every respect.

These are only a few examples of the many features of identity, some of which are threefold in detail, and will bear even the closest analytical subdivision—all proving conclusively that either the Book of Mormon is a plagiarism of the Spalding manuscript, or the manuscript a plagiarism of the Book of Mormon. It is either the one or the other. But as a result of eight years of careful and painstaking work, I have collected abundant reliable proof that Spalding wrote and rewrote his romance on this subject several times between the years 1810 and 1816. Smith says he got in possession of his wonderful document in 1827, and had known where it was for four years previous to that time. The evidence at hand indicates that Smith appropriated a final revision of Spalding's Romance from an old hair-covered, moth-eaten trunk which was left at the residence of Mr. Sabine during Smith's employment at that place as teamster, about the year 1820, and had doubtless known where it was ever since that time.

The evidence also shows that Sidney Rigdon got in possession of another copy which had been left in Patterson's printing office in Pittsburg in 1815, and a perfectly plain connection is established between these two gentlemen through the mediation of Parley Parker Pratt, showing how they finally got together and inaugurated their wonderful scheme of deception, which is undoubtedly the greatest religious fraud that has ever been perpetrated.

I wish to say, in conclusion, that I do not believe the Mormons of to-day are aware of their error. I believe they are ignorantly sincere in their beliefs and labors, and nothing I have said or done is to be construed as a reflection on the honesty or sincerity of those who are living up to the light they have. But it is our solemn duty to give them the true story of their delusion and fortify others against being led astray.

We are glad Mr. Mahaffey gives the "Mormons" credit for being honest, though ignorant of their deluded condition. But really, the presence of the "Spalding Romance" in the library of Oberlin College has been known to the majority of believers in Book of Mormon for years, and we have for many years kept for sale at this office published copies of this famous "Manuscript Found." We fear Mr. Mahaffey is somewhat behind the times in his "discovery." We think, too, Mr. Mahaffey has made several errors in his figures. However, such articles as Mr. Mahaffey's are so numerous that it scarcely pays to give them any attention whatever. Our best way is to press steadily forward and pay no attention to such misrepresentations until we are compelled to.

Readers of the Autumn Leaves will be pleased to learn that Bro. Alexander H. Smith has consented to write a series of articles for that magazine, along reminiscent lines. They will include an account of his trip to Australia and the islands, and will be well worth the subscription price of Autumn Leaves for one year. The first installment will appear in the November number. Do not fail to read it.

DECADENCE IN THE RUSSIAN ARISTOCRACY.

That there is a notable tendency to the final supremacy of the people in other countries than the United States is discoverable in the following which we gather from the St. Louis, Missouri, Globe-Democrat for October 4.

It is a fearful thing to contemplate that so great a number of the so-called noblemen of the Russian nation should for any reason be under the ban of the law, for a reason so peculiar as the one assigned as the cause for the confinement of twelve thousand men in the public prisons of the country.

It is bad enough to think of the base and ignoble becoming the subjects of prison discipline, but when it comes to those accounted as of noble blood and birth, it is much worse. Let us hope that in the outcome of the evolutions going on in the political world a cure for these crying evils may be discovered.

Emperor Nicholas of Russia has become so much alarmed by the rapidity with which the estates are passing out of the possession of the Muscovite nobility that he has given orders for the organization of a special division in the department of the interior, which is to occupy itself exclusively with the welfare of the aristocracy and with the endeavor of retaining the latter in the ownership of its lands.

In certain provinces no less than fifty per cent of the territorial possessions of the aristocracy have passed by means of foreclosed mortgages and sales through the credit banks into the hands of the peasantry, of course in small parcels, and both the czar and his government are afraid that if matters go on at the present rate it will not be long before all the land in European Russia is owned in freehold by the moujik, while the nobility without estates or means of existence will be converted from a bulwark to the throne into the gravest kind of a peril thereto.

The discussion thereto has led to the official announcement that the hereditary nobility of Russia, much of it untitled, numbers 14,000 families all told, 5,000 of these families having estates of less than 100 acres in extent, and heavily mortgaged at that.

In this connection it is interesting to turn to one of the most authoritative of French scientific reviews, which, according to carefully compiled statistics, shows that there are at the present moment no less than 12,000 members of the hereditary aristocracy of Russia doing time in Muscovite prisons. That is to say that nearly every one of the houses of the Russian titled and untitled nobility is represented by one of its scions among the criminally convicted classes. This extraordinarily large number of Russian nobles serving out terms of penal servitude is ascribed by the writer of the article to the fact that the Muscovite aristocracy, having been to a great extent deprived of its territorial possessions, are now entirely without means and compelled to resort to crime in order to avert starvation.

"SURVIVALS IN ELECTRICAL SYSTEMS."

The Electrical Review comes to our desk regularly, laden with news items and articles from able pens dealing with the developments of what has now developed into an extensive branch of engineering,—the application of electricity to practical uses. To many who are not posted in this fascinating branch of science there seems to be a bewildering amount of electrical appliances brought out under a seemingly endless string of new patents. Developments in the science are rapid, and to the casual observer old electrical appliances are rapidly being thrown out of use by radical improvements and changes. Hence it is that to us bewildered ones there is somewhat of consolation in the following editorial which appeared in the Review for October 4. From this we gather hope that we can keep somewhere within hailing distance of our brothers in the electrical field.

SURVIVALS IN ELECTRICAL SYSTEMS.

One of our contemporaries calls attention to what seems to be a remarkable survival of one of the early applications of electricity to practical use.

Says this journal: "Nothing in the electrical field has held its own as has the direct-current series arc lighting system. The system of to-day is quite similar to that of the early days of electric lighting. The constant-current machine to-day is very similar to the machine of that time, and the up-to-date series arc lamp differs from the original lamp very little, except that it now generally has an inclosed arc."

At first thought this does seem somewhat striking, but does not further consideration reveal a similar condition for other successful applications of this great civilizing agent? In what essential does the low-voltage incandescent lighting system of to-day differ from that devised by Edison, except in the extent of the system, the size of units, and in the addition of a few auxiliaries which secure better and more economical service?

The trolley system, the extraordinary growth of which has been the cause of much remark and speculation, is practically the same as that installed by Sprague upon the Richmond road in 1887. We still have a series motor on a constant-potential circuit. Here, also, the great development has been in the direction of increase in size and the adaptation of auxiliaries which permit an economical extension of the system.

In what way does the telephone, perhaps the most important of all modern inventions, differ except in details of construction and application from the system devised by Bell?

And the oldest of all the useful applications of electricity, the telegraph, is practically the same in the vast majority of its uses as that devised and put in use by Morse. Has not our wonderful progress during the last fifteen years been rather along the lines of improving the old systems and devising new applications, rather than in replacing the old systems by new?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

J. G. Morgan writes from Harbor Beach, Michigan, September 30: "We have been having a feast of good things here on the thirteenth and eighteenth of this month. Elder Wm. Davis and Elder O. J. Hawn pitched the tent, and held a two-day meeting. They also held meetings for two weeks. Baptized seven, and left others near the kingdom. Much prejudice was removed, and many friends made to the cause.

The elders parted with warm hand-shakes, and the Saints here feel encouraged."

John T. Girdham sends about nineteen dollars from Leeds, England, to apply on college debt. That amount represents the subscriptions of the members of the Leeds Branch. Bro. Girdham says: "We wish every success for the college, hoping the wish of its founders may be realized to supply a long-felt want of many members of the church for their children to receive a good education amid pure and elevating surroundings."

W. E. La Rue wrote from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 6, as follows: "We had a splendid sacrament service yesterday morning. Everything is moving along nicely, and we are hopeful. We expect Bro. Sheehy to come this way before long and hold a series of meetings in our church here."

Frederick A. Smith writes from Dow City, Iowa, October 10, saying: "I am at Bro. Oliver Holcomb's for the conference here. Weather fine now. We go to Mallard Monday, where Bro. C. J. Hunt enters into debate with a Mr. Shaumberger, of the Dunkard or German Baptist Church. Bro. Hunt is feeling well. Will try and attend the "antimormon" meeting of the Christians in Omaha, the 20th, if it is so I can."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Scientific American for October 4, 1902, contains an article on "Prehistoric Mexican Sign Writing," by John G. Rothermel. Those interested in such subjects should read it.

Bro. William R. Armstrong, of England, has sent us a marked copy of the Manchester Evening Chronicle for September 15, containing an account of some scenes which occurred on September 14 on Clapton Common at the church of the Agapemonites. Reverend Smyth Pigott, the pastor, has announced himself as the Messiah, and the crowds hoot and jeer him as he attempts to address his audience. The conduct of the crowd at the services September 14 was disgraceful. Why not let the man make his claims in peace?

Under date of September 30 Bro. Mintun wrote that he visited the City Library of Des Moines, Iowa, that day, and found the librarian had catalogued the books presented to the library by the Des Moines Branch. He found them under the heading "Latter Day Saints," numbered and marked according to the classification used by the library. He says he recently called and found the Doctrine and Covenants in use.

Bro. G. H. Graves recently sent some money to Bishop Kelley to apply on college debt. He suggests that all societies in the church having money in their treasuries send in such money to Bishop Kelley as a loan to the church without interest. The money Bro.

Graves sent in was secured this way. He also urges the Saints to buy the standard books of the church and take the HERALD. He says that in a little over a month he sold ten dollars worth of books while preaching on the streets.

A letter was received from Bro. George W. Thornburn too late for this issue. He was at Springburn, Scotland, when he wrote and seemed to be hard at work. His letter will appear next week.

The coal strike is absorbing much of the public attention, and seems far from a settlement. The operators steadily refuse to recognize the union of the miners in any way.

According to the Chicago American for October 13, Dowie has acknowledged his inability to meet some of his obligations. A number of accounts against Dowie have been placed in the hands of a collecting firm, and that firm on October 13 received the following from Dowie's financial manager: "Gentlemen:—The claims which have been placed in your hands for collection can all be settled satisfactorily without your entering suit if you will give us a reasonable length of time. But we can not meet your peremptory demands." Present indications point to serious financial trouble for Dowie.

Conference of the Lamoni Stake was held at Pleasanton, Iowa, October 11 and 12. Among other things done, the selection of R. J. Lambert as second counselor to Bishop William Anderson was approved. This will leave another vacancy in the stake High Council.

We are daily expecting our new press now, and our readers may be sure we are anxious to see it at work. The work in our pressroom has been congested for months. How about those new subscribers our business manager has asked for? How many have you sent in?

We see no reason why our subscription list should not be nearly twice as large as it is, and we trust the Saints will give the HERALD better support than ever before. It will pay you to do so, Saints.

The St. Louis World's Fair buildings and grounds will be formally dedicated April 30, 1903, and the Fair opened one year later. The approximate cost of the Exposition is forty million dollars. St. Louis has appropriated five millions, the United States over five millions, and Missouri one million. Several millions more have been raised by the sale of bonds, etc. It will cost an enormous sum, but it will be a wonderful educator, being a splendid means for showing the progress of the past few years. St. Louis has about six hundred thousand population, is the fourth city in size in the United States, has an area of sixty-two and one half square miles, has twenty miles of river frontage, has eight thousand factories, and is the center of twenty-four railroads.

F. B. Blair, business manager of the HERALD Office, was in Chicago Sunday, returning Tuesday.

The Scientific American for October 11 contains an article on the "Chinese Press in America," and in it is the following interesting paragraph: "The American typesetter is obliged to be familiar with twenty-six letters, ten figures, and a few signs and symbols, as periods, dollar marks, etc., but the Chinese compositor must be familiar with eleven thousand characters of this archaic language, about which Professor R. K. Douglas says: 'Every word is a root, every root is a word. It is without inflexion or even agglutination; its substantives are indeclinable, and its verbs are not to be conjugated; it is destitute of an alphabet, and finds its expression on paper in thousands of distinct symbols.'"

Bro. and Sr. A. M. Merrill wrote from Washington, District of Columbia, inquiring if there are any Saints there. They have recently moved there, Bro. Merrill taking charge of the Forest Lake Cemetery. Their address is Good Hope Post-office, Washington, District of Columbia.

The October Annals of Iowa has reached us, full of interesting things, as usual. The Annals is among our most welcome exchanges. The work that its efficient editor, Charles Aldrich, is doing in the interest of Iowa history is little appreciated by the citizens of Iowa as compared to what it will be in time to come. We trust he may be spared to us for many years yet, to keep the "good work going."

Lovers of mathematics and the history of the subject will be interested in an article in the September Open Court entitled "The Foundations of Geometry," by Dr. George Bruce Holsted, vice-president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

From various causes, "Mormonism" and its allied subjects are receiving a great amount of public attention, judging by the number of press articles and books which are appearing on these subjects.

Dodd, Mead & Co., of New York, have placed on the book market, at the price of one dollar fifty cents per copy, a book entitled "The Founder of Mormonism," by I. Woodbridge Riley. It comprises a thesis offered by the author to Yale University for his degree as doctor of philosophy, and is introduced by George T. Ladd, professor of psychology at that institution. It purports to be a "psychological study of Joseph Smith, Jr.," in which the author traces, to his own satisfaction at least, the causes of Joseph Smith's "visions," "revelations," etc., to a diseased brain due to epilepsy which, the author claims, was in the Smith family for five successive generations, culminating in Joseph Smith's eccentricities and religious fanaticisms. We will give our readers a more extended account of this book soon.

BLESSED ARE THEY THAT DO.

Words by P. P. Bliss.

The musical score consists of two systems of music. The first system has a treble clef and a 3/4 time signature. The second system has a bass clef and a 3/4 time signature. The music is in a key signature of two flats (B-flat and E-flat). The score includes various musical notations such as notes, rests, and dynamic markings like 'p' (piano) and 'crescendo'. There are also tempo markings: 'Andante, with expression' at the beginning, 'Rit.' (ritardando) in two places, and 'a tempo' in the middle. The lyrics are printed below the notes.

DIFFERENT DISPENSATIONS OF GRACE.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR.

Some months ago there appeared an article in the HERALD fixing the early morning hour of Matthew 20, as Adam's day; the third hour with Noah; the sixth hour with Moses; the ninth hour with Christ, and the eleventh hour as the last, or "dispensation of the fullness of times."

The following thoughts occur to my mind:

First, there seems to be more evidence in the Bible that God covenanted with Abraham and restored the gospel in his day, than with either Noah or Moses. Galatians 3: 8, 17, 19 seems to teach that God confirmed the covenant in Christ with or to Abraham, four hundred thirty years before the law of Moses was added, and that this was the gospel covenant.

Second, Melchisedec seems to have been the king of righteousness, king of peace, holding the highest priesthood: an Elias sent from God to bless, or ordain, or confer the same on Abraham.

Third, eternity will hardly be ushered in short of a full cycle of time, and time when compared to a day will have twenty-four hours. Therefore, the eleventh hour is too early for the fullness of time.

Fourth, if time consists of but twelve hours, three o'clock postmeridian would be too late for Christ's hour, for he came in the "meridian of time," or middle of the day. If time be divided into twenty-four hours, three o'clock p. m. would have been too early for the "meridian" of time. But, if we recognize Abraham's hour as the "sixth," and Moses' hour as the "ninth," this would bring Christ's hour in at five o'clock postmeridian, the last hour of daylight, just before the ushering in of the dark night of apostasy.

Fifth, the Scriptures not only tells of a third, sixth, ninth, and eleventh hour, but of a "midnight" hour as well, which will bring the second advent of Christ, the "marriage supper," the ushering in of the one-thousand-year reign, the millennium. The complete cycle of time will not have passed and eternity begin, until the expiration of the thousand-year time. "Then cometh the end, when he [Christ] shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father." —1 Corinthians 15: 24.

Sixth, if the "dispensation of the fullness of times" began on the eleventh hour it will last longer than any two of the preceding dispensations, or from five p. m. to midnight, or seven hours instead of one, for there is to be no entire falling away, or complete apostasy between the opening of the last dispensation and the midnight marriage feast. Therefore, I have arranged my notes as follows:

- Early in the morning, Adam, Abel, Enoch, six a. m.
- Third hour, Noah, nine a. m.
- Sixth hour, Abraham, twelve, noon.
- Ninth hour, Moses, three p. m.

Eleventh hour, Christ, five p. m.

The preparation hour, gathering dispensation, beginning of the fullness of time, end of Gentile reign, etc., just preceding the midnight hour, Joseph Smith.

If any are particular to have the day of time divided into distinct epochs, or watches, we may approximate or speculate still further as follows:

Fifteenth hour, Joseph Smith, nine p. m.

Eighteenth hour, coming of Christ, Millennial dawn, twelve, midnight.

Twenty-first hour, the "little season" (Revelation 20: 3), three a. m.

Twenty-fourth hour, end of time, dawn of eternity, six a. m.

But as the parable does not divide the time equally, I see no need of splitting hairs relative to the future. And yet it is an admirable effort on the part of Israel to see eye to eye.

SHALL WE EXACT INTEREST?

An excellent opportunity was overlooked by our Sunday-school Quarterly editor sometime ago to educate the children along lines which are engrossing the minds of the present generation. The lesson was from Nehemiah, chapter 5, which reads:

And there was a great cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews. For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat and live. Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth. There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards. Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children; and lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought into bondage already; neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and our vineyards. And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words. Then I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them. And I said unto them, We, after our ability have redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to answer. Also I said, it is not good that ye do; ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies? I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury. Restore, I pray you, to them . . . oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them. Then said they, we will restore them and require nothing of them.

Truly, history repeats itself: The state of the world, saint and sinner, is very similar to what it was in Nehemiah's day. That there is something materially wrong in the economic realm, every thinking man, though he may be a political partisan, must admit.

As to the cause of the world's unrest, we are divided. A careful study of the rise and fall of nations clearly reveals the cause. When Egypt went down, two per cent of her population owned all of the wealth; a corresponding ratio existed at the time of the dissolution of all of the old world powers. But a few thousand families controlled Rome, when she commenced her perilous descent into oblivion.

Given one advantage to any man over his fellows, the power to bequeath such special privilege to posterity, and the heritage of all others is as surely slavery as that the rivulet trickles its way to the sea.

God never intended that one man should possess one material advantage over another, and a social system which legalizes or even ignores such disparity between men is distinctively anti-Christian and should be decried by every Latter Day Saint.

What was the cause of the trouble in the time of Nehemiah? Inequality brought about by some men having advantages over others and possessing the power to tax and demand tribute, through usury on money and lands, thus bringing the less favored ones into slavery. This, Nehemiah condemned, saying: "It is not good that ye do; ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?" And he commanded them to restore that which they had taken. And it is recorded that the people acquiesced because of "the fear of the Lord."

We gather from the foregoing text: First, that there were two classes of people in Israel. Second, one class monopolized the land and controlled the natural resources and as a result levied usury on their unfortunate brethren. Third, the latter class were reduced to penury and slavery; and owing to the mortgages on their lands they were compelled to give of their crops each year, so that when the dearth came they had nothing: the mortgages were foreclosed and the people homeless.

This has been, and always will be, the result following a society governed wholly along the line of profit; legalizing the obtaining of something for nothing.

Now what is usury? Says one, "Unlawful interest." Ah, but what is unlawful interest? Every State has its own law, and is it not possible that in the legislative halls usurers may be in the ascendancy and thus enact laws favorable to themselves? Or is it not possible that legislators may be bribed (given hush-money) by those who thrive, leach-like, off Labor's groaning form?

Usury, from a Bible standpoint, even according to our friend's definition, would be the taking of interest not legalized by Scripture.

Very well. Cruden says, "By usury is generally understood the gain of anything above the principal, or that which was lent, exacted only in consideration of the loan, whether it be in money, corn, wares, or the like."

According to this any return demanded beyond the principal is "usury." The Hebrew term for usury signifies "biting."

"The law of God prohibits rigorous imposing conditions of gain for the loan of money, or goods, and exacting them without respect to the conditions of the borrower, whether he gain or lose; whether poverty occasioned his borrowing, or a visible prospect of gain by employing the borrower's goods."—Cruden.

I turn now to the Encyclopedic-dictionary. Under the head of "Usury" I find, "Any premium or interest paid, or stipulated to be paid, for the loan of money, without any insinuation that the interest asked was exorbitant."

In the ancient world, interest was always usurious as it is in the East at the present day. The Mosaic law prohibited taking interest from Hebrews (Exodus 22:25; Leviticus 25:35-37; Deuteronomy 23:20) and Christ's words. "Give to him that asketh thee," (Matthew 5:42), seem to be of still wider application. The early Christian fathers regarded interest as usury and therefore as a specie of robbery; and this opinion prevailed in the church till the sixteenth century, and numbered Luther and Melancthon among its defenders. Calvin appears to have been the first theologian who propounded the modern distinction between interest and usury, "which is an excessive or exorbitant interest or premium paid, or stipulated to be paid, for the loan of money."

The North American Cyclopaedia says: "The practice of requiring in repayment of money lent anything more than the amount lent, was formerly thought to be a great moral wrong, and the greater the more was taken. But for many years this opinion has ceased to exist, or at least has lost much of its practical or legal force. It is no longer deemed more wrong to take pay for the use of money than for the use of a house, or a horse, or any other property. But the lingering influence of the former opinion, together with the fact that the nature of money makes it easier for the lender to oppress the borrower, has caused nearly all Christian nations to fix by law the rate of compensation for the use of money. Of late years, however, the opinion that money should be borrowed and repaid, or bought and sold, upon whatever terms the parties should agree to, like any other property, has gained ground everywhere." Webster says, "It is a premium paid, or stipulated to be paid, for the use of money; interest."

I affirm with no fear of successful controversy that the taking of interest on money, land, or merchandise, is contrary to the eventual plan and purpose of the gospel.

"By the sweat of thy brow [not another man's brow] shalt thou eat bread," is the true legal heritage of man.

The exacting of interest on money develops inequality and eventually places the borrower at the mercy of the lender, a thing both unjust and unscriptural, and distinctively unchristian.

To hold land for the sole purpose of renting and taxing the tiller of the soil for its use is at the same time both unjust and antichristian.

To deal in merchandise for the purpose of making a profit on goods beyond that which is contributed in actual service, simply because they pass through one's hands, is demanding from man that for which you do not render an equivalent and is evidently subversive of the higher morals.

So, I affirm as a minister for Christ that when the spirit as well as the letter of the gospel law shall obtain among men they will abolish, first, the taking of usury on money or goods; second, the renting of lands which God has given as a free gift to all men; third, selling goods for profit, beyond the actual cost of handling.

Certainly in our scattered condition we can not at once inaugurate such a wholesale innovation from present cannabalistic business methods, but there is not a man, surely, in the church who will affirm that after the gathering is thoroughly effected brethren in Zion will exact interest one of another. As all men will have their inheritances there will be no renting of land. There can not be a profit system in vogue in Zion, so our contention is sustained. We are aiming for the ideal. This will materialize in Zion redeemed.

We should, however, seek so far as possible to inculcate in our lives here and now, those principles which will distinguish the "pure in heart" from the rest of the world. We can not bring about Zion by following the ways of the world. We must do more than theorize. All of us must endeavor to emphasize the perfect principles of the gospel.

If it is right to hold land to oppress the helpless tenant now, it will be right in Zion. If it is right to exact interest of our brethren to-day it will be right in Zion. If it is right to get something for nothing under the profit system now, it will be right to get something for nothing in the "sweet by and by." A thing can not be right at one time and wrong at another. Study closely the plan laid down in the law of God and you will there find the only legalized, just rule of action.

We may do certain things now beyond the pale of that law because of supposed expediency, but we can not justify the conditions which demand the expediency.

Back to the "usury" question again. According to the best known authorities, some already quoted, the primary meaning of "usury" is interest taken in any form. It has always been so recognized until the last few centuries. The Bible declares against it. In Exodus 22:21-25 we read: "Thou shalt neither vex a stranger nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. Ye shall not afflict any widow, or fatherless child. If thou afflict them in any wise, and they cry at all unto me, I will surely hear their cry; and my wrath shall wax hot, and I will kill you with the sword; and your wives shall be widows and your children fatherless. If thou lend money to any of my people that is poor by thee, thou shalt not be to him as a usurer, neither shalt thou lay upon him usury."

This, we understand, is the law of Moses, an inferior law. Do you, kind reader, think that the gospel law would be less merciful and just than this? Would to God that the Christian people of the last nineteen centuries had kept this feature of the law of Moses even. How far advanced would we be if our brethren in the church had observed this injunction.

Again, in Leviticus 25: 35-37: "And if thy brother be waxen poor, and fallen in decay with thee; then thou shalt relieve him: yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee. . . . Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase."

And now to make the matter move definite, and to preclude the possibility of cavilling, I offer the following emphatic command: "Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother; usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of anything that is lent upon usury."—Deuteronomy 23: 19.

We have thus proven from the Bible that God commanded Israel to relieve their poor brethren; they were to exact no interest from them for money loaned; they were finally prohibited from taking interest on "anything that is lent upon usury" from any of their brethren.

In verse 20 we read: "Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all that thou settest thine hand to do in the land whither thou goest to possess it."

It may be asked, "Why this difference? Why take usury from a stranger and not from neighbors and brethren?" There is this difference: Israel was as one family, each member of the commonwealth was pledged to conserve the interest of each and every other member. Had they lent their money and commodities without interest to the heathen nations around, this policy would have soon bankrupted them; hence there must be some safeguard for national protection. God had previously told them, however: "And if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not vex him. But the stranger that dwelleth with you shall be unto you as one born among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt: I am the Lord your God. Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment, in meteyard, in weight, or in measure. Just balances, just weights, a just ephah and a just hin, shall ye have."—Leviticus 19: 33-36.

Even though they were privileged to take usury from a total transient stranger, they were not privileged to vex him. Should he eventually take up his abode among them he became one of them, and no usury or interest could be exacted of him even though he should need money.

It is contended by many that they can not afford to lend their money to a poor Saint and charge no interest. What of the following? "If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother: but thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth. . . . Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him, because that for this thing the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou putteth thine hand unto."—Deuteronomy 15: 7-10.

Can anything be plainer than this? Can we, dare we, urge that the gospel plan would be less benevolent, more selfish than the Mosaic economy? It may be argued that this law as to the taking of usury or interest only applied under the Mosaic regime, and that therefore we are at liberty to do as we please for, if God had desired its continuance, he would have reiterated it in the new.

Very well, turn with me first to one of David's psalms. The Psalmist here enumerates the prerequisites of inheritances in Zion: "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord: sweareth not falsely to hurt any man, and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved."—Psalms 15: 1-5, I. T.

This is a crucial test and may cause some of us to wince, but I did not place it in the Bible and can not now consistently see how we can compromise its application or minimize its effects. We must either accept or reject the foregoing psalm; which will we do? In close harmony with the above comes the prophecy of Ezekiel: "Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the Father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die. But if a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right, and hath not oppressed any, but hath restored to the debtor his pledge, hath spoiled none by violence, hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment; he that hath not given forth upon usury, neither hath taken any increase, that hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, hath executed true judgment between man and man, hath walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; he is just, he shall surely live, saith the Lord God."—Ezekiel 18: 4, 5, 7-9.

The prophet goes on to describe one who "hath oppressed the poor and the needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath committed abominations. Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase, shall he then live? he shall not live; he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die; his blood shall be upon him."

Startling as the above language may seem the following conclusions are inevitably forced upon us: He who "hath not given forth upon usury neither hath taken any increase," God says of him, "He is just, he shall surely live;" whilst he who "hath given forth upon usury and hath taken increase" hath done "abominations" and "shall not live."

Please note that the taking of any usury or increase is classed as an "abomination" before God. Is it possible that such a standard should be erected by the Almighty in one age and discarded in another? Verily, no.

In Ezekiel the twenty-second chapter we have a "catalogue of sins in Jerusalem," one of which was "Thou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbors by extortion, and hast forgotten me, saith the Lord God. Behold, therefore I have smitten my hand at thy dishonest gain which thou hast made."—Ezekiel 22: 12, 13.

We now turn to the New Testament: Christ said: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away."—Matthew 5: 38-42.

Luke quotes Christ thus: "Love your enemies, do good to them who hate you, bless them who curse you, and pray for them who despitefully use you and persecute you. And unto him who smiteth thee on the cheek, offer also the other; or, in other words, it is better to offer the other, than to revile again. And him who taketh away thy cloak, forbid not to take thy coat also. For it is better that thou suffer thine enemy to take these things, than to contend with him. Verily I say unto you, Your heavenly Father who seeth in secret, shall bring that wicked one into judgment. Therefore give to every man who asketh of thee; and of him who taketh away thy goods, ask them not again. And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. For if ye love them only who love you, what reward have you? for sinners also do even the same. And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what reward have you? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again. But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great; and ye shall be the children of the Highest; for he is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil. Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven. Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye meet withal, it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6:27-33, I. T.

For all that people in general observe the above to-day it might as well never have been written. How many of us attempt complete observance? Echo answers, "How many?" Where is the man who lends, "hoping for nothing again"? If we but apply the Mosaic plan and limit its application to brethren, even then we fall far short of the mark. Though we lend to the stranger for usury we should have more consideration for our brother.

You may ask, "Is it just for a man to lend to another a large sum of money to speculate upon and receive no returns, when at the same time he is running a great risk?" If money is used for the accumulation of gain it would seem consistent that the one who supplied the means should be a participant in the benefits; but as Zion is built up the necessity for such things will become less and less and the field for benevolent uses for our money will be multiplied. This thing of taking advantage of others' necessities in order to acquire "increase" is subversive of the highest and best that there is in man.

I contend that at this period of our development it would be far better for those of the brotherhood who have means, to use it for the furtherance of Zion and her people and, as rapidly as possible, withdraw their holdings from speculative and wordly enterprises and place it where the Almighty can give his blessing.

There is more in this life, brethren, than acquiring wealth and increasing in the world's possessions. The Father is pleased when his people are frugal and have plenty of all that is necessary to sustain life, but principle is of far more importance to him than the accumulation of wealth. The returns accruing to you from the loan of money to a poor Saint who desired a home in Zion but could not pay interest in dollars and cents would far outweigh in genuine satisfaction and godly approval any amount of usury you might make from any other investment.

I again repeat that it is wrong for any Saint to thrive off others' misfortune. It would be far better to look around and discover where our means could do the most good to others, not ourselves, and apply it accordingly.

I have this confidence in most of the men of means in the church, and particularly those who have been thoroughly converted, that they will be ready to assist their unfortunate or poor brother. Of all things, brethren, we should not raise that wholesale and indiscriminate contention that simply because a man has some means he is a bad man. Inordinate selfishness is found in the hovel as well as the castle.

May we all learn that to give is better than to receive; that true happiness consists not in acquiring the world's wealth but in disbursing to others of our bounty and alleviating the misery, squalor, and pain of God's unfortunates.

THE VALUE OF KINDNESS.

"Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous."

We recognize this passage as from 1 Peter 3:8, and we ask, How can one express love, be pitiful, or act courteously if the heart is inclined to produce unkind deeds, and the tongue to utter bitter words? "I think the first virtue is to restrain the tongue," says Cato. The Golden Rule teaches us to do to others just as we would have others do to us. Do we desire to be illy treated? Do we desire to have unkind, harsh words uttered to us? Why should we not strive to cultivate lives of cheerfulness which will yield nothing but sunbeams that will flit about and light upon the sorrowing, the downcast, the discouraged?

A smile is but a small thing. A kind word costs simply nothing, and may awaken in the soul of an individual new energy, new courage, new life. A smile, a kind word, a gentle act, like fragrant flowers, are cheering in our pathway and sweeten the very atmosphere about us, while frowns and bitter words are like thorns and thistles which wound and scar.

One may not realize the power of one kind word, may not realize how like a star-beam it can brighten a weary hour. One may not realize how a cruel word will disquiet the sunniest disposition. A kind act, a tender word is like balm to the soul; unkindness, like a dagger in the heart. Every thought, every speech, every act, sheds its influence upon the world. Influence never dies. How beautifully Longfellow illustrates this in one of his lyrics:

"I shot an arrow into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where.

I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where.
Long, long afterward in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke.
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend."

Let us heed the apostolical injunction, and as we speak, as we act, let us do good, and in kindness, love, and mercy write our names in the hearts of all with whom we come in contact. Let our deeds shine as the stars in heaven.

MISSIONARY WORK.

This question comes to my mind, Are we doing all we can, and are we doing it according to the pattern that God has given? I believe all true Latter Day Saints have in their hearts a desire to see the work make rapid advancement, and would like to lend a helping hand in some capacity for its progress, so that unitedly they can make this work do all that God has intended it to do.

It is not my desire to speak of local work, but I wish to mention for the consideration of my colaborers, a few points pertaining to pioneer missionary work.

For four years I have been lifting my voice in defense of the rights of the people of God, and trying to the best of my ability, and by the assisting grace of God, to persuade people of the world to accept the promise of salvation that Christ has placed within the reach of all men. If it were necessary for me to establish a reputation as an earnest, active, and trusty servant of God, in the eyes of my colaborers in charge, and whose right it is to know the ability of each appointed to labor in their charge, by the number they have baptized, I fear I should have been laid aside as a slothful servant. This, however, is not the case.

I have had a desire from a child to be a public speaker, and the desire has increased with my years. I would rather preach a sermon than to eat a meal when I am hungry. I wish the circumstances were such that I could preach two sermons in the future, where my past record has shown one. The happiest and most contented hours of my life are when I am busiest at the Master's work. I do not fear opposition, and try always to be ready to defend the latter-day work in every detail. God has wonderfully blessed me in preaching; yet there is something lacking. Paul said in 1 Corinthians 1:17: "For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel." Admitting this to be the case, somebody must do the baptizing. There are local elders who have not reported one fourth the number of sermons that some of the missionaries have, yet their number of baptisms was far larger.

We read in Psalms 50:5: "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." We can not always follow the dictates of our minds and expect to please the Master. Many times we have to crucify our desires and make a sacrifice in order to please the Lord.

Moses was slow in speech and had to take a spokesman with him. Exodus 4:10-17. Now Moses was the wise counselor, the mediator through whom divine knowledge was given, the great leader and commander; yet Aaron was the speaker. In the restoration of the gospel Joseph Smith, Jr., was the prophet of God, the forerunner and foreordained apostle and instrument in the hand of God in bringing about this latter-day work, yet he was not necessarily an orator. History only repeats itself; for in like manner as Moses took Aaron with him as a spokesman, so Joseph Smith was commanded to take Sidney Rigdon as a mouthpiece. Doctrine and Covenants 97:3. If in the pattern that God has given it is necessary that the great leaders travel two by two, why is it not necessary that the missionaries do likewise? "It is God's way; his will be done."

Jesus sent the seventies out two by two; Luke 10:1. In the latter days, God through Joseph Smith, Jr., sent the elders out two by two. Doctrine and Covenants 52:3: "Let them go two by two, and thus let them preach by the way in every congregation, baptizing by water, and the laying on of the hands by the water's side." Still later, in the Reorganization, they were commanded to travel two by two. Doctrine and Covenants 115:1: "And moreover it is expedient in me that my elders in going to declare my gospel to the nations, shall observe the pattern which I have given. Two by two let them be sent, that they may be a help and a support to each other in their ministry." Some may say, we read in Matthew 9:37, 38: "Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." Hence let us send them out single-handed and we can do double the work and the expenses of one missionary will by only half that of two: Let us see. God has given us a pattern. We are commanded to follow it. If we do it God's way, will he not provide for his servants? Psalms 50:10-12; Luke 10:9, 10. Again, Is it not a less expense to send two and do the work according to the pattern, than to send one and then send one again and again at other times, and still not according to the pattern?

Others have said it is better to send them singly because if they are not of equal abilities there will be strife if two travel together. This is not God's way. I really believe if we as missionaries are traveling for the work's sake, and have the work at heart, we will be pleased to see our colaborers excel; and if we learn the lesson that Jesus learned, Hebrews 5:6-9, Luke 22:42, and then take Peter's advice, 1 Peter 2:21, 22, the work will advance as God would have it. So far as this world is concerned as an individual I am willing to travel alone, if it is the Master's will, and to my selfish delight might preach more sermons; but, for the work's sake, and for the satisfaction of knowing that we are in harmony with the pattern, I long for a traveling companion who has the gift, either naturally or divinely given, who can persuade people to be friends to the cause, and convince them of the divine authenticity of this work and baptize them. I shall be contented if I never baptize another member into the church if there is some other servant of God to do the work.

If we follow the pattern in every particular and only get over one half the territory that we would by going singly, and be sure that we are doing the work as God would have it done, is it not much better?

It is my opinion that if we were not overzealous to see the work move so fast and to reach too many people at once, and would be sure that what we do we do according to the pattern, God will raise up laborers and means to support the laborers in his way if we leave the result in his hands. In our own wisdom we are apt to try to advance beyond the purposes of the Almighty. Read Isaiah 55:8-11, which assures us that his word that goeth forth from his mouth shall accomplish what he has intended it to do.

What I have written is not for the purpose of criticizing, grumbling, or finding fault, but I believe that this work is nearer and dearer to me than anything else on earth, and as in all of my preaching I do not baptize many, and as I believe each of us desire to do the work correctly and in perfect harmony with the pattern that God has intrusted in our hands, so when God may relieve us from further duty in this life we can say like Paul, 2 Timothy 4:6-8, and then hear the Savior make the welcome cry, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Ever laboring and praying for the redemption of Zion, and praying for God to add his blessings to every move that we may make in harmony with the pattern given in the law, I am,

Your colaborer,
J. B. WILDERMUTH.

In the October McClure's, Miss Stone concludes the account of her "Six Months Among Brigands" and makes such a strong finish that one is half inclined to wish the brigands had not let her go so soon. As it was, however, the release was sensational enough, for the brigands were at that time so hotly pursued by the Turkish soldiery that to venture near enough to a village to free their captives was to risk the death of all. At length, when they had almost given up hope they were freed—in the dead of night, at the bottom of a desolate valley—and the next morning with difficulty they made their way to a town and announced themselves; whereupon it seemed as if half the population of Macedonia turned out to greet them. In addition to Miss Stone's paper, Mr. S. S. McClure contributes a brief sketch of A. A. Gargiulo, the first dragoman of the American Legation at Constantinople, to whom, more than to anybody else, is due the credit of Miss Stone's release.—October McClure's.

"THE SUN DO MOVE."

The recent death of Reverend John Jasper, the widely known colored preacher, has caused the republication of his sermon, "The sun do move," which made him famous. One of the notable passages in the sermon was the following:

"Bredren, ef de Bible say de sun rise an' set, den it do rise an' set! An' how ken it rise an' set ef hit don' move? In de tenth chapter o' de book ob Josh-way, an' de twelf, thirteenth, an' fo'teenth verses, dar is proof strong ernuff for us all. De Lawd said, 'Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, moon, in the valley of Ajalon. And the sun stood still and the moon staid until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. And there was no day like that before it or after it.' Bredren, ef de sun stood still once when 'twas a movin' an' den stahted to movin' ergin, hit is a movin' now. Dey say de earth is roun'; dat aint so, bredren, it can't be so, for de book o' Revelations, chapter 6, verse 1, read: 'And I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth.' An' now, bredren an' sisters, we is livin' on a fo' cornered earth; an' ef de earth is got fo' corners, how in de name of Gawd ken it be roun'? Ef de worl' is roun' an' turn over ev'y night, how we hol' on? Is we got claws on our feet like woodpeckers?"—Northwestern Christian Advocate, October 9, 1901.

The Pilgrims.

We are passing through a valley
Where the shadows linger long,
Where no tender voices greet us,
Nor joyous burst of song.

The tall trees bend above us,
Their spreading branches meet
And obscure the lonely pathway
Where press our weary feet.

But there's One who knows our sorrows
And lights our darkest night.
Most tenderly he's watching—
He speaks, and there is light.

We are trusting in this Shepherd
Who so truly loves the sheep
And leads them safe and gently
O'er places rough and steep.

Oh! why, then, should we murmur,
Though sore our spirits grieve?
He has said he ne'er will leave us—
That sweet promise we believe.

So like weary little children
That sleep on mother's breast,
We lean upon his bosom
And feel our souls at rest.

We Know Not The Hour.

We know not the hour of the Master's appearing Yet signs all foretell that the moment is nearing
When he shall return—'tis a promise most cheering—
But we know not the hour.

There's light for the wise who are seeking salvation,
There's truth in the book of the Lord's revelation;
Each prophecy points to the great consummation—
But we know not the hour.

We'll watch and we'll pray, with our lamps trimmed and burning,
We'll work and we'll wait till the Master's returning,
We'll sing and rejoice, every omen discerning—
But we know not the hour.

The Coming King.

The coming King is at the door,
Who once the cross for sinners bore;
But now the righteous ones alone
He comes to gather home.

The signs that show his coming near
Are fast appearing year by year,
And soon we'll hail the glorious dawn
Of heaven's eternal morn.

Look not on earth for strife to cease,
Look not below for joy and peace,
Until the Savior comes again
To banish death and sin.

Then in the glorious earth made new
We'll dwell the countless ages through;
This mortal shall immortal be,
And time, eternity.

The World's Work for October is remarkable for its wide range of interesting subjects and uniformly fine illustrations. The relations of Labor and Capital are given a prominent place by M. G. Cunniff's second article on Labor Unions—this one concerning "Union Restriction of Industry," a description of the Life of a Coal Miner by Rev. John McDowell, who was a miner himself until he was badly hurt, and a discussion by George Maxwell of whether a Fixed Wage is just or not. There are four strikingly illustrated articles on varied and timely subjects: Americans in the Raw, by Edward Lowry, made up of stories of the immigrants who crowd their way to America for fortunes; Ocean Steamships, by Lawrence Perry; A Day's Work in a New York Public School, by William McAndrew; and the personal story of the Making of a Real Home, by Thomas Dixon, Jr. The pictures which illustrate these articles are by Harry Coutant, Florence Maynard, Arthur Hewitt, and Dr. Dixon. Franklin Matthews tells the story of the aims and achievements of the New York Chamber of Commerce; Dr. Floyd M. Crandall relates some noteworthy facts about the new diseases modern men must fight; Booker T. Washington tells what the Negro Business League means to do; Assemblyman E. Ray Stevens, of Wisconsin, describes the La Follette-Spooner Campaign, which is now coming to the last and most interesting weeks. Chalmers Roberts tells stories of Americans in England, which show the new recognition the United States has won abroad, and Prof. Hull, of Cornell, writes intimately of Andrew D. White. A double page map of the new Rapid Transit conditions in New York City is supplemented by full-page pictures which show how New York is being built both up and down. The financial article for the month is about Life Insurance Companies' Surplus. Both The March of Events and the World's Workers are longer and even more interesting than usual.

Mothers' Home Column.

Dear Sisters: It has been some time since I have penned any words to you, and I thought some one might be interested to hear something about our Prayer Union and how it was started and it may encourage some one to press onward. When the Prayer Union was first organized there were no members here, outside of our family, nearer than forty miles, so I resolved to keep the hour alone. About four years ago the tent came to Bazine with Brn. Pender and Mannering conducting meetings. There was quite a number baptized, among them some ladies, so in a short time I mentioned the subject of a Prayer Union, and they all thought it would be quite a help to them. Before our union was organized, about three years ago, while visiting home folks at St. Louis, I visited the sisters' union. During meeting a sister arose and delivered the following prophecy, telling me the Lord was well pleased with the desires of my heart, in regard to the Prayer Union and that it would be the means of doing much good in this part of the Lord's vineyard; also that I should have a trial that would make my heart sore. When I returned home I felt rather reluctant about starting the Prayer Union as I thought the trial would come through it, but finally, through prayer, I overcame the fear, and we organized at one of the sisters' homes, there being only a few there and some of them very indifferent at the first. But during the time we spent there in organizing there seemed to be a better feeling prevail, and we had an enjoyable time. Our meetings were appointed every two weeks, alternately at the different sisters' homes; but we never appointed a meeting at our home as I lived eight or nine miles from any of the sisters. Our meetings were poorly attended. Some seemed to forget when it was Prayer Union day, others did not think it necessary. Finally we decided to meet at a sister's home permanently as winter was coming on and every one would know where the next meeting would be held. Once or twice there were two sisters besides myself and the sister whose home it was, but still I did not give up. We then sent word we would meet at a sister's who had not attended very often. She seemed somewhat interested. She lived about fifteen miles from our place. All of the sisters were anxious to go.

On Tuesday before the Thursday for our meeting the thrashing machine came to our place, and on Wednesday night they all told me it would be an utter impossibility for them to get through before Thursday night, if then. What was I to do! As I had tried repeatedly to have some of the sisters lead and had only succeeded in getting one, and this one was depending on my calling for her as she had no way to go. I could not bear the thought of disappointing any of them, for if I did not go there would be no meeting, so I took it to the Lord in prayer, asking him if it was in accordance with his will that the prayer-meetings should continue, to open a way for me to go. Thursday morning came. I began as usual to prepare dinner for the men, feeling confident that all was well. At about half past nine o'clock in the forenoon the horse and buggy was ready for me to go, and as I drove away the thrashing machine was ready to pull to their next job, having thrashed more in that short time than they had thrashed all the day before. I went to meeting, met a number of sisters, had a splendid time, returned home about eight o'clock in the evening, having traveled thirty miles. Many times when I have been greatly discouraged, the Lord has made it known to me that it was his will to have me continue the meetings. We kept the meetings up till there would only be myself and the sister at whose home we had decided to meet, so one day I proposed closing for a while, but with tears she begged me not to, saying, "you don't know what a comfort it is to me;" so I still kept going; the sister and I would have our meeting till finally she thought we had better close till spring. In the spring and summer two families of Saints moved in our neighborhood, and I thought they would be quite a help, so we again began to have our meetings, and also our drawbacks. Some of our missionaries would encourage us and tell us it would all come out right, and others thought differently. But at last we have succeeded and we have a good Prayer Union and the sisters are willing to take turns in leading the meeting. It has been the means of doing much good as many of the sisters can not attend other meetings. It has drawn us together in love. Pray for us, dear sisters, that jealousy and other evils may not creep in and destroy our unity.

I have written this hoping it may encourage others. Let us all strive to do what little we can to build up Zion. With love to all God's people, I remain,

Your sister,

CLARA M. EBERT.

Prayer Union.

The faith and prayers of the Prayer Union are earnestly requested by one who is sorely afflicted both in mind and body. Ask God that she may be healed and comforted, if it be his will.

Sr. Annie Harris desires the prayers of the Prayer Union that if it is the Lord's will their little child may be healed; also that the sisters will remember her family in its isolated condition.

Sr. Annie Hanson requests the prayers of the Prayer Union in behalf of her little girl. She is afflicted with spinal disease and her mind is also affected.

Sunday-School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills County, Iowa.

Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to Editors HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE following is from a letter written by a brother who is district librarian, to the missionary in charge of the field. By him it was referred to the General Librarian and by her to the General Superintendent. We give here such parts of it as will conserve our purpose at this time. While it was written in a jovial strain, it is nevertheless cutting, and we wish in justice to all concerned, to offer the explanation that follows.

"As you are aware I am district librarian of the ——— District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (did I leave out anything?), but I am in a great dilemma. I want to do some work along this line, but am unable to find out who the General Librarian is. Can find no one who knows. Can find nothing in the HERALD or Hope which will give me a clue as to who she or he might be. Consequently I address you on this subject. First, however, let me say that I think it a shame that our church publications are so crowded for space that they can not afford one inch in which to publish the names and addresses of the officers of the Sunday-school Association. Especially does this apply to the Hope, the Sunday-school organ. If I ever get to a General Conference I should most certainly kick on this until I was black in the face, after which I would kick no more.

"But then, apropos (you know what that word means), I have put in about fifty books into our library here at ———, of which I am just common librarian. I want to do a little work out in the district. I also understand that the General Librarian has been corresponding with other district librarians around here, for instance, Miss ——— of ———, and sending them literature, but I am unable to find that she—the General Librarian—has ever recognized this district in any way.

"Now you know we are very independent up here, and if the General Association does not want to recognize this district we can run it ourselves without any aid or anything else from them. What they can do for one district, they can for another.

"Now, please be good enough to send me the General Librarian's address. The duties of such general officer are, 'He shall secure all needed information relating to the establishing of libraries in schools and a library for the General Association and (note this) secure and impart such information as will assist in establishing of libraries in the various schools in the General Association.' See—a direct statement, and nothing done so far as the ——— District is concerned.

"All I wish to know is this: Does the General Association care for this district or not. If so, let them send us literature like they do other districts. If not, let us know and we will paddle our own canoe, and probably just as gladly, too. (Ha! see the poetry. Oh! I'm getting worked up when I go off into such an exquisite rhyme as that. Don't you think?)

"But say, —, don't you think it neglect? As missionary in charge of this part of the country, won't you kindly shake up the old bones and let them know we are alive and trying to do something?"

The brother says he can find nothing in HERALD or Hope to tell him who the General Librarian is. This is simply the old story repeated. He has not been reading the HERALD regularly or he could not have failed to know. True we do not keep the list of officers standing the year round, but there has not been a HERALD, for some years, that did not have the name and address of the General Superintendent at the head of the Sunday-school Department. He will at any time gladly furnish any information he may be able to furnish.

The published minutes of the General Convention in both HERALD and Ensign gave the complete list of officers. In the Sunday-school Department, page 491, another mention is made of who she is.

The minutes of the convention at which the brother was elected librarian simply stated "——— librarian." No post-office address given to any of the officers' names. The General Librarian lives in a distant city and is an entire stranger to the brother, I think. How could she write him? No official notice was ever sent to any of the general officers of the officers elected for the district. How can we reach you till we know who and where you are?

Our General Librarian at one time sent out letters to all the district librarians whose addresses he had, or that the General Superintendent had, and from some forty-five districts, received ten replies. He sent again and raised the number to twenty. We are given to wonder at times why the work does not move faster, but this will explain it in part. People will not write when they are written to; that is, some will not.

Yes, the General Librarian has been corresponding with many district librarians and will gladly continue to do so. But I venture this guess, that she will never write to any one whose name or address she does not know. The fault lies with the district officers who did not see that the general officers were furnished with a complete list of all district officers. Even to this day not one of the general officers has a complete list of the officers of that district, unless it be of very recent sending. The General Librarian may never have "recognized that district," simply because she could not, not having the proper information at hand. Besides, the sister who now holds the office, was elected last April. She had not at that time had the opportunity to get started in the work. The work at best is a new one. There has never been any literature printed by us on the library subject. That is, no leaflets of instruction. There is nothing but hand-written letters to send out. And if the brother will think that to write personal instruction to about fifty district librarians is a task that can not be accomplished in a few days, he will at once understand why no literature was sent him. I think I would be safe in saying that no one has written for information on that line that did not get it.

The brother may honestly feel that the General Association does not care to recognize the district, but he forgets that the district has had two personal visits from the General Superintendent, at one of which the brother was present. And this, too, without receiving one penny to defray expenses. And we shall go again when occasion demands or permits. We are interested in that district as in any other. We will do for it all we can as we would for any other district; but district workers should remember that the general workers can not do it all. We must have the cooperation of the district workers if a success is to be made. We have several times published notice, asking the districts to send us complete lists of their officers, and have never yet gotten replies from one half of them. If you expect to hear from us you must answer when called. We have sent out letters to every district association we knew of and in no instance have had replies from more than four fifths of them.

No, it is not a matter of "neglect." It is only an instance of nothing being done because there was nothing to work upon. The General Librarian had no literature to send them had she known who they were. And taking the facts together make it doubly impossible for her to have done as the brother expected. The brother has not been in possession of the facts and has drawn his conclusions without them, and of course his conclusions are wrong. His zeal and desire to do something for the library work in his district is very commendable. I wish that more district librarians had the same desires. But the spirit of the letter is more likely to wound the feelings of the workers who have done literally all they could for the work than to bring about the desired results.

From this we can learn four things. 1. If you wish to hear from us, you must let us know who, what, and where you are. 2. That it is necessary to read the church papers if you would keep in close touch with the work. 3. That when call is made upon us, we should promptly respond. 4. We should not make the charge of neglect till we are certain where the neglect actually existed.

Letter Department.

POMONA, Missouri, October 1.

Editors Herald: It is with many thoughts flying through my mind that I take my pen in hand in these hurried moments of life, to send you a few lines from this, the boasted land of big, red apples. Yes, and still more, the land of Zion; the home of the blessed. And while I am proud of, and thankful for, all the Lord has said for Zion and her redemption, yet when I see how far beneath the standard we as a church stand, I feel like the one who said, "Yet in Babylon, yet in the wilderness;" and until the officers of church, stakes, districts, and branches step out with law in hand, and thereby cry out, "Come out of her, O ye, my people," how far can we be distinguished from Babylon? Until we elders can make effective impressions on the minds of the Saints to dodge the landshark and counsel the Bishop, to not pay out their money for supposed mineral fields as though there were gold and silver in every rock pile and gulch in the land, until the sick will call for the elders instead of answering some medical advertisement, that we may gorge our stomachs with the rotten preparations of the day; in fine, until every shade of fraud and evil is cried down, instead of covered up, the homeseekers will find poor homes; miners will find no mines, and the sick should not hope for anything but heart trouble and sour stomachs. To sum up the whole matter, we may expect to pipe and have no dance.

I sometimes think that we are not a whit in advance of the theory, What is to be, will be, if it never does happen. O ye who bear the priesthood of the Most High, how can you escape the chastening hand of God, when you seek to excuse yourselves for indulging in the spirit of greed and gain, by saying you can thereby do more for the church of Christ than by preaching his gospel? Yea, nor do I wonder at the woman of Revelation, twelfth chapter, crying in pain to be delivered of the kingdom of our God and the power of his Christ. (See Inspired Translation.)

Oh may the angel soon cry aloud, Babylon is fallen, is fallen; come out of her, O ye chosen of the Lord! The only way that I can see that the people of God could be in Babylon is by partaking of her spirit, and the nearest way out of her is to put on the robe of the righteous.

So long as this church sends me into the field to preach this gospel, my warning to the Saints shall be, Be wise; see that no man deceive you, and if any man brings unto you a "bonanza," beware of such a one. Mark them who cause divisions, contrary to the doctrine. A sinner is a sinner, no odds if he is a Saint.

The work is moving slowly in this district, yet some encouragements are along the line, so we labor on.

JAMES T. DAVIS.

TALOGA, Oklahoma, October 1.

Editors Herald: This is the county-seat of Dewey County, ten miles from Seiling, and seven from Guy, where there are branches of the church, yet the place has been sadly neglected. Never any preaching done here till three years ago when I preached once, and Bro. James Yates once this fall. Two weeks since, Bro. Crawley and I came here and I began preaching on the street, when we were invited to preach in a hotel sitting-room. Bro. Hubert Case, passing through, preached once. We, the Seventh-day friends, and the Utah elders are striving for the ascendancy here. Adventists had tent in July and August.

Sunday the 21st we went four miles Southwest thinking to preach after Sunday-school exercises at ten o'clock in the forenoon, but the Utah elders were ahead of us day and evening, so I left an appointment for Sunday the 28th, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon and went eight miles southeast where the Seventh-day minister preached at three o'clock in the afternoon, thinking to preach at night, knowing they were to be at another place that evening; but the Utah elders were ahead of me again, so we returned to Taloga and preached and expect to remain the week. Crowds here now, county fair going on.

Seventh-day preacher, a lady, has been two weeks three miles southeast of here at a schoolhouse, but is troubled about us preaching against the seventh day, turning from her some she had much interested, so she is to preach here in the hall, on "Reasons for keeping Seventh Day," and by special request, I am to give some of our reasons for keeping the first day as a rest day. She threatens me that if I continue teaching the first day rest she will get me before the people and make me so ashamed that I will never teach it again, although I have talked upon it but little and that to those she had troubled in mind. She offers to talk half hour about with me all day, at Bro. James Vrooman's, who lives here and whom she has troubled some about the Sabbath, but wants no others to hear. I tell her to put her "light on a candlestick;" go before the public, or as she is a woman, Mrs. Crawley will meet her at Bro. Vrooman's, and talk the matter with her.

We have made many friends here, and in adjoining country, some talking of baptism after reading Book of Mormon, if they find it as we say, mostly first-day Adventists. One, a preacher, who read Voice of Warning three times in a week, says it is all right. Have two subscribers for the Ensign. I sold one Book of Mormon, three copies of Voice of Warning; have loaned copies of Book of Mormon, four copies of Voice of Warning, and numerous tracts.

Since the reunion at Dover, August 18, we went to Geary and preached on streets, then went to Nicely, fifteen miles southeast and preached two days; baptized three of the Baptist faith; got four subscribers there for Ensign; one for HERALD. Think to get back there as soon as we can, but some one should stay right in this part all the fall. Am invited to come to places fifteen and twenty miles away, by those who have heard on the streets here.

There is an Advent preacher, lady, going around here showing families where the Book of Mormon teaches polygamy, as she learns it from the Utah elders, with whom she is very friendly; such as pages thirty-six and thirty-seven, where they speak of "our women," proving that they had more than one, when page thirty-three shows that Nephi and Zoram each had but one of Ishmael's daughters, and Nephi's brothers also married the daughters of Ishmael. Drowning people will clutch at straws, however.

D. S. CRAWLEY.

ST. CHARLES, Iowa, October 5.

Editors Herald: The work is moving onward here at St. Charles. I have baptized five noble Saints here lately; four of them heads of families; one has formerly been a Holiness minister. I began preaching last evening at Science Hill Schoolhouse, two miles east of St. Charles, with a full house. I preached here some last summer, and saw some of my former converts out last evening paying good attention, and saying they were coming every night.

Though alone, the Lord is standing by me, which causes me to rejoice. The Saints here are generally striving to come up higher. Most all attend our Sunday-school and Religio regularly, and take a good interest. May God bless his people, and help them to come up higher, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

WOODBINE, Iowa, October 8.

Dear Herald: In harmony with the appointment from General Conference, I spent the latter part of June and until the 21st of July in the Pottawattamie District, visited and preached in Council Bluffs, Crescent, Boomer, and Hazel Dell Branches and was gratified to find them all in fair condition, holding fast to the "rod of iron which surely leads to the tree of life." It was good to see those who had weathered the storm for many years, having manfully stood for the truth, still standing firm in the warriors' ranks, and although feeling the weight of years, and the consequent bodily infirmities they relax nothing of their former zeal for the progress of truth. Their hearts are, if possible, more susceptible to the divine influence, as one could see by the earnest, sparkling eye, and the radiant smile as they drank in with intense eagerness the precious drafts of the waters of life. The younger members too seemed equally zealous and deeply in love with the cause of God. I speak for the membership in general. Of course there are exceptions to be found everywhere. I would be glad if I could say that every one who had entered into covenant with God were ever mindful of that covenant and exerted all their power to keep it inviolate; but this would be more than we are warranted to expect since "the net gathers every kind."

I found the places of many were vacant having been called away by the "pale messenger," but, I trust, having "fought the good fight, and kept the faith," had finished their courses with joy. I was blessed in my labors among them.

I returned and continued my labors in Little Sioux District, preaching occasionally in Woodbine, where I am glad to say the branch is improving and the attendance increasing. We have had of late the services of Brn. A. H. Smith, F. A. Smith, and J. S. Strain, all of whom labored acceptably and with benefit to the Saints. I visited the little branch in Bigler's Grove, where I find a very earnest band of Saints under the watchcare of Elder Frederick Fry. These few have this summer built a new church-house, which I learn will soon be ready for dedication. I had the pleasure of occupying it. It has been for them a task, but it was a "labor of love," and I have no doubt they will be manifoldly repaid by the reception of many and great spiritual blessings within its walls. It is proper to say that other branches, Woodbine among them, have assisted them in their work, but to what extent I know not.

The days of long journey's on "shanks pony" are past with me; and as the needful is not always on hand to give me a right to Nahum's chariots, our good Bro. Sidney Pitt fetched me on the 16th of August to his home, from whence, after enjoying the generous hospitality of himself and wife, he took me to Persia on the 17th. Being greatly blessed in my effort to preach the gospel that morning, I endeavored to perform a similar duty at night, but was not as well satisfied with my effort and I learned that a good, candid sister was not either; but there was some recompense when others volunteered their gratitude for the light they had received. It did me good to learn that feeble as my effort seemed to me, some had been blessed by it. If in humility we seek divine help, our labors will not be in vain.

On the 18th I was requested to visit Father Collins, a fellow traveler across the sea with me from Liverpool to New Orleans, on the good ship "John M. Wood," in 1854. I found him poor in this world's goods but strong in the faith of the restored gospel, and sorely afflicted in body. It was his earnest desire to have me administer to him. I did so, but am satisfied the Reaper has marked him for the grave; and while there seemed no hopes of a prolonged life, this gracious promise still remains: "If he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." (James 5: 15.) And again: "If they die they shall die unto me." (D. C. page 144.) I sought to give such words of comfort as God had given to his children.

I preached in Persia also on the 18th, but as the people were busy I thought best not to continue there. On the 24th Father Johnson, of Logan, kindly offered to take me to Magnolia, as I had been informed that Father Caleb Benson, of Magnolia, desired to obey the gospel and requested that I should bury him with Christ in baptism. He has long been a friend to the cause, his wife and several of his children being staunch members of the church. He was nearing his seventy-sixth birthday. I had the pleasure of baptizing and confirming him a member of the church, and I pray that grace may be given unto him to enable him to finish his journey through life to his eternal welfare and to God's glory.

Bro. Sidney Pitt wrote me that an old friend of his, and one who was once a member of the church, had kindly consented to buy a tent in which to preach the gospel, said tent costing eighty dollars, and I was requested in company with Elder H. N. Hansen, to go and preach in it. Brother Pitt was authorized to purchase the tent and the friend paid for it.

Elder Hansen and Bro. Pitt set up the tent or tabernacle on the 30th, and opened it for public services on the 31st, near Yorkshire, Harrison County, Iowa. I arrived there on September 1, and they laid the burden of preaching on my shoulders, which I bore until the night of the 4th inclusive. The nights were dark and farmers busy, so that attendance was not large, yet on the last night I had a good hearing. But having promised the committee of the Dow City reunion that I would be there to help, I kept my word. But while at Yorkshire we visited the neighbors, conversed with them and invited them to the tent. We found a number of old members of the North Star Branch, but they had slumbered and slept, and their lamps had well nigh gone out; but upon close examination we found a little oil left. Will it be kindled to a flame? Surely such generous treatment as we received would indicate that that tabernacle was not purchased in vain. We were made welcome at their homes and received the kindest of treatment and especially from the friend who so generously paid out the eighty dollars for the tent.

One little incident that will ever remain fresh in my memory was as follows: On the morning of September 5 I had gone to the depot to start for home, Bro. Pitt having given me means to get home with, and my ticket was in my pocket. It happened that the post-office was in the depot. Mr. Jesse Stoker followed me down, went into the post-office, and coming out found me on the platform and said: "Mr. Derry, you have not got your mail." I told him I did not expect any mail there. "Why, here is a letter for you," and he handed me the missive, to my surprise. I opened it, it being addressed to me, and to my greater surprise I found a five-dollar bill in it, put there by the friend who handed me the letter. Was I grateful? I was to God and the friend whose generous impulse had led him to help a stranger on his way. May God grant that he may not only be one of those to whom the Master will say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me," but that he may also see the power, beauty, and blessedness of the truth preached in that tabernacle, and gain the full reward of eternal life through obedience to it. I left Bro. Hansen and Bro. Pitt to carry on the services so long as they thought it wisdom; and I went to the reunion, the history of which you have been told.

You have already been informed of the dedicatory services of the Pisgah church. That building is a monument of what may be accomplished by a few earnest souls when they unite their efforts. The male members are not entitled to all the praise; the sisters rolled up their sleeves and rendered noble service in the work. And thanks are due to Moorhead, Little Sioux, Magnolia, and Woodbine Branches for generous aid in the work. The stranger was not backward, either, to lend a generous hand, and I pray that it may be a Bethel to every soul there seeking spiritual rest. I did not feel able to attend our quarterly conference last Sunday, so I stayed and preached to goodly audiences in Woodbine, and was greatly blessed.

Yours for truth,

CHARLES DERRY.

OELWEIN, Iowa, October 5.

Editors Herald: According to the branch record, Grove Hill Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized October 23, 1892. The missionary in charge, J. S. Roth, called the Saints together for the purpose of organizing a branch, at Bro. M. Dewald's, near Oran Center Schoolhouse, in Fayette County, Iowa. At the opening of the meeting Bro. C. S. Shippy was ordained to the office of priest under the hands of Elders J. S. Roth and J. B. Roush. The following officers were elected: Bro. C. S. Shippy, president; Bro. H. D. Miller, presiding priest; Sr. Anna B. Goodrich, secretary and treasurer. The branch was named the Grove Hill Branch. Bro. H. D. Miller was ordained a priest May 24, 1892, before the organization of the branch.

The branch flourished, considering the scattered condition, for a number of years; but finally interest began to wane and some of the members sold out and left and some others entertained ill-feelings, if not anger, toward others, and consequently spirituality became quite low. At last our president, C. S. Shippy, sold out and Bro. J. R. Sutton was elected president. But he had the missionary business of the Eastern Iowa District and the Sunday-school business, and his farm and family on his hands, and the branch was sadly neglected; and as I told some of the elders, all we needed was to "have our funeral preached and bury us." But Elder Sutton said there was material in the branch and in the Lord's time it would be made manifest. And thus he encouraged us. But there was a long time we had no prayer-meeting or sacrament, and but very little preaching, and it seemed as though we were spiritually dead, or in the condition of the church of Sardis: "I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead. Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God. Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard; and hold fast, and repent. . . . Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white; for they are worthy. . . . He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."—Revelation 3: 1-4, 6.

I believe the servants of our branch will "be watchful, and strengthen the things that remain, and are ready to die," and that this branch will revive and others will yet be added to us. Bro. J. R. Sutton has been branch president since Bro. C. S. Shippy sold out; but I anticipate a change at our next branch meeting. Two weeks ago to-day Bro. Robert Smith was ordained a priest. I believe he will be faithful. The name of the Grove Hill Branch was changed to Oran Center, with Fairbank for post-office, August 18, 1901.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us. We need the prayers of the faithful, that that which remains may be strengthened.

J. G. HODGES.

RICHMOND, Virginia, October 7.

Editors Herald: Since the latter part of May most of my time has been spent in Scranton, Pennsylvania, and have only recently left the anthracite coal region where the strike has been going on since May 12. It was thought at the time that it would not last to exceed three or four weeks, but it is now well on to five months, which, of necessity, works many hardships, and affects all avenues of business, making people very restless. It is to be hoped that the end is not far in the distance.

Am sorry to see church conditions in these regions so bad. There is now left only the Scranton Branch in the populous Lackawana and Wyoming Valleys, and many of its members do not want to be disturbed by a missionary or make any restitution or amends. The church has suffered much through the conduct of some of the members in these valleys. The drink habit seems to be the greatest curse that ever touched the earth, and its blighting effects is seen here on every hand, even tarnishing the fair name of the church in many instances. Am glad that measures to remedy such conditions are contemplated by those in charge.

I left Scranton the latter part of August, and came to Plymouth, where Sr. Isaacs and her mother, Sr. Jones, reside, and was made welcome at their home, while I tarried, preaching several times with very fair interest, and was very thankful for their hospitality, as also to Bro. and Sr. Hoover for the royal treatment received while preaching in their neighborhood. From here I moved on to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where Bro. J. R. Gibbs and his two noble and accomplished daughters reside who always receive an elder like one of their own family. Bro. Gibbs is setting about to start the work in the Pennsylvania capital. He is a worker and a Saint indeed.

Just arrived here, according to direction of Bro. U. W. Greene, for a short time. Found Doctor P. P. Starke and Sr. Alice P. Corson, who are staunch members and willing helpers, which is indeed very encouraging to the traveling missionary. Will try to visit other points while in the "Old Dominion." I learn there are but few Saints in the State.

Will be thankful if those wishing any labor done in their particular localities would notify me at my address.

Editors Herald: Our first conference has now become a part of the history of the development of the work in this part of the Lord's heritage. Conference convened September 27 and 28, and despite the fact that it rained or threatened rain nearly all the time from Friday morning until Monday morning we had a fair attendance. About twenty came from Valley Junction, others from North Freedom, Sparta, and Porcupine, beside the missionaries and officials of which C. H. Burr, sub-missionary in charge; W. P. Robinson, district president; High Priest W. A.

McDowell, Elders E. M. and J. E. Wildermuth, A. L. Whiteaker, M. F. Gowell, and Livingston were in attendance. These with our local Saints and neighbors made a goodly crowd, considering the fact that we live ten miles from a railroad and also that we as a branch have only been in existence a little over a year. This is a new and sparsely settled country, too, which must all be taken into consideration when we say this number of people was a good crowd.

Sunday morning, at nine o'clock, Priest A. J. Fisher led seven souls through the waters of regeneration, these being the first fruits of the devoted labors in this vicinity.

While singing the opening hymn at the riverside the sun suddenly broke through what seemed a solid gray sky, bathing the candidates and onlookers in a flood of golden glory that seemed like the approving glance of a pleased Father.

Others are investigating our doctrine, being dissatisfied with their present spiritual condition. We think much prejudice has been removed; and one thing at least is certain we have been able to present our claims to more people than we can reach by our regular services.

Elders Burr, McDowell, and Robinson remained a week after conference, preaching every night in the tent to small but apparently interested audiences. Elders E. M. and J. E. Wildermuth also remained with us and expect to be here for some little time yet. The other elders have gone to their work in other places. The Brn. Wildermuth have relatives here whom they are visiting and in the meantime will also assist our local force in presenting the word.

While through the errors of human nature there have been some unsatisfactory elements in our conference, yet we consider it a success and hope it will not be the last to be held in our branch. I ever pray that God will bless and help each individual who is earnestly striving to do his will.

Your sister in the faith,

MRS. IVY FISHER.

Dear Herald: I am where I do not get to see your pleasant face. I am so anxious to peruse your dear pages again. Since our reunion in August I have been in new fields all the time. Bro. Lee Quick and I went to Parsons, Kansas, and tried to get a church to preach in, but one of the preachers said we were not Christian or orthodox. We tried two days and gave it up. We secured the A. O. U. W. hall for two nights, the rest of the time it was occupied. Bro. Lee Quick went home and I commenced on the street. I stood in a dray wagon and preached to large crowds of attentive listeners. Bro. Cochran opened the meetings for me while in Parsons. Our meetings stirred the people and made many friends to our cause. When I left some followed me to the train to talk the gospel. When I read of Brn. Peterson and Russell being in such prejudiced places I felt sorry for them. This year in every place I have been, doors have been opened up. While in Chautauqua County, I opened two new places to interesting congregations.

One night I was preaching on the renewal of the earth, when a professor exclaimed, "Can it be possible?"

So far this year has been one of the most remarkable in my missionary work. Having the endowment of the Spirit to preach and administer the ordinances in the house of God, I never felt better spiritually, mentally, or physically, or more determined to press on in this work.

Bro. C. P. Welsh and I are holding meetings here in the country in a large new school building, to very large crowds of attentive listeners. Last Sunday night over one hundred carriages and different kinds of rigs were out. I never witnessed as many at a protracted meeting. The country is stirred for miles around. How brethren who have received evidence of this work can quit the ministry I can not understand. What we need in this field is more preachers.

F. C. KECK.

WINFIELD, Kansas, October 5.

Editors Herald: I am yet alive and in the faith. I have been in it for nearly thirty-nine years and still love it as much as I did at the first. Although developments have not come so fast as I expected, they have come and are yet coming.

I read in your columns this morning the article by Bro. Isaac M. Smith, and felt to thank the Lord for such men and such instruction as was contained in that article. I have been here three years the third of last March. Soon after I got things adjusted about home I began to look for a place to preach, because I felt it my duty to warn my neighbors. I secured the use of the Fairview schoolhouse, two and a quarter miles from my home, where I spoke a few times, once on the difference between the Reorganized and the Utah Churches. But the people did not seem to be interested in what I said, and as I was expecting some of the ministry to come this way at that time, I waited a while and then tried again; but they had got enough and did not put in an appearance, so I gave up there. I then tried to get the Baptist church at Hackney, in order to reply to a lecture that they permitted in the church on Mormonism in which the speaker had classed the Reorganized and Utah Churches as one and the same. But about that time the Baptist folks had received instructions not to receive the "Mormons" into their houses, or let them have their churches or schoolhouses to preach in. So I was refused the use of the house. I then tried for the schoolhouse that was near at hand, was refused again, and then for another, with the same result.

Last summer I preached in the dwelling-house of Bro. and Sr. George Eastin in Arkansas City four or five times, and then the brethren thought a room could be secured in the city; but none was obtainable until this summer when we were permitted to use a schoolhouse in the southeastern part of the city, where but few attended.

I am trying to find something to do in this work of latter days, and I live in hopes that I shall yet do more. I have thought of preaching on the street, but have not mustered courage for that so far. I am trusting some of the traveling ministry will come this way and I can then assist them some at least.

Now, dear HERALD, tell the dear Saints with whom I am acquainted and with whom I have associated at Plano and other places that I am yet in the faith and have not forgotten them and ask them to continue faithful to the end that we may all meet in that happy land where parting will be no more, which reward is sure if we are true and faithful.

W. VICKERY.

LINDSAY, Ontario, October 4.

Editors Herald: I believe the last time I wrote for the HERALD I was at Highland Grove, or Deer Lake. On the 18th I left for Gooderham, remained there for a few days, preached my farewell sermon there on Sunday, the 21st. The schoolhouse was filled with people, and several outside. I remained there until the 24th, and held a business meeting, and with the assistance of Elder Staley, the president of the branch, we straightened up some important matters in the branch, and I made out their report for conference and got their Sunday-school to unite with the General Association, and after a good-bye to many who had endeared themselves to me, I boarded the train for Fenelon Falls in answer to the call of Elder T. A. Phillips, missionary in charge.

There I was met by Elder Felix Northay, and R. Braden; after refreshment at Bro. Northay's, we drove over to Bro. Joseph Perrin's near Cameron to prayer-meeting. Here we met poor T. A. suffering with a lame leg caused by a fall, having been laid up for nearly two weeks.

Poor Tom, his experiences and trials in this North country will no doubt never be forgotten by him. I felt sorry for him. We had a very good prayer-meeting. Bro. Robert Braden was ordained to the office of priest, having been called through Bro.

T. A. Phillips some time before. We all felt that the good Spirit witnessed the ordination, and believe Bro. R. will do much good if faithful.

The 25th I posted up notices of services in the Cameron church for Sunday evening, the 28th; subject, The different rewards.

Bro. T. A. done a good work among the Saints there, and at Fenelon Falls. I occupied at seven p. m. on the 28th; church well filled. Bro. Thomas being unable to get around with his lame leg, we talked the matter over together, and deemed it best for him to return home and rest, so he left for home on the 29th. I accompanied him as far as Lindsay and began services that evening at Sr. Smith's, and continued at her home, and Bro. J. J. Perrin's every night but Tuesday; baptized a Miss Oliver from Little Britain. I returned to-day to Cameron to fill an appointment there to-morrow the 5th.

I am feeling quite well, and hopeful for the work in this mission.
SAMUEL W. TOMLINSON.

MAXWELL, Indian Territory, September 24.

Editors Herald: There are but three Saints at this place, Sr. Meryman, myself, and daughter. It is ten miles from here to Bro. and Sr. Duncan's, and eight miles from there to the homes of Brn. James and Sam Malone. The latter were baptized by Bro. W. M. Aylor, who came here a short time ago, and preached for them a few nights. Baptized those two young boys, the choice of the neighborhood, so a Christian man told me. There are six others ready for the waters of baptism, and the Christian people are telling all kinds of falsehoods to those who believe, but who have not yet come into the church.

Campbellites have been holding meetings at Seven Shooter, telling the people that the Latter Day Saints are cowards; that they will not defend their cause, for they challenged Bro. T. J. Sheppard to debate, and he backed out, and they are doing all they can to destroy the good seed that has been sown. If some elder could come and baptize those who are now ready, I think that we would get along better.

The writer and Bro. J. S. Reed went up to Bro. Duncan's on the 10th. The writer spoke to a small crowd. I went back last Sunday, but it rained all the morning, and I did not preach.

I ever pray for the advancement of this glorious cause of Christ.
J. M. CRAWFORD.

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, October 4.

Editors Herald: The following extract from a letter of a young German friend may be suggestive and prove interesting, especially to the German Saints:

"The tract you sent me I read, and found some good matter in the same. However, in some things I differ. For instance, one passage reads: 'Hence if we will count upon a reward from God for our good works, we must first believe that he is.' Our church teaches me, in accordance with the word of God, differently: 'We are unprofitable servants.' And if we obey God and do much good, we then do only our duty and can expect no reward for it; but much rather do we hope to be saved only by faith in Jesus Christ, who is the mediator between God and us. Of your church's opinion are the Catholics and even Protestants (who are only Christians in name), but according to the word of God this theory is wrong. In another part of tract I find some passages copied from Genesis, for instance, chapter 4, verse 9: 'On that day fell the Holy Ghost on Adam.' This passage is not to be found in our Bible! As a great contradiction appears to me the passage cited from Genesis 5:2: 'And as many as believed on the Son!! and repented of their sins should be saved.' How could the first men believe on the Son, since Christ was not known to humankind then? Think of it! Jesus came to earth four thousand years later!

"And by the laying on of hands do you think that those that do not have the hands laid on them do not receive the Holy Ghost?"

As the only effectual means of dealing with people is to deal with them in harmony with their understanding and their feelings, and as without knowing the same we can not expect great good to follow our efforts to benefit mankind, however much our hearts may go out in love towards them, I thought (since not every one is always given the Spirit to know, without effort on his part, how to act or speak at the opportune moment) the above might suggest to us to study our surroundings, to study all things with which, and every person with whom we have to do, that we may act understandingly, that is, seek wisdom, which is to knowledge, in purity and simplicity, a crown of perfection.

PORCUPINE, Wisconsin, October 8.

Editors Herald: As I am a reader of your valuable paper, I wish to bear my testimony to the same, although I have never written before. There are many who read it here. We loan our HERALD, Hope, and Ensign, and sometimes send them to distant friends, hoping thus to get the gospel before the people, and prepare the way for the elders.

I would say to the missionary who has charge of the work in Chautauqua County, New York, to call on Otis James, who lives seven miles from Jamestown. His address is Boomertown, New York. The gospel has never been preached in that place, and I believe there are some honest-hearted ones there. We have some willing Saints here, who are trying, I believe, to come up higher, as they have been admonished to do from time to time. My prayer is that all may come to a more perfect knowledge of God's law.

Dear Saints, let us try to be more obedient and faithful in the future than we have been in the past, and to our faith will be added those Christian graces which are enumerated by Peter. Then we can enjoy the blessings of God, feeling we are worthy of the same.

I ever pray for the welfare of Zion.

Sirs: Received card announcing the expiration of my subscription to Autumn Leaves, and in reply to "Do you wish it continued?" say most emphatically, Yes! Would feel lost without it. It is getting better all the time and I am sure it is a factor for good in the work. Please find inclosed subscription price.

Your sister in the faith,

(MISS) ALICE M. JOSLYN.

BALMAIN, N. S. W., September 12.

Editors Herald: Your readers will be glad to learn that as a result of a ten-day "mission" Bro. Barmore baptized eight last Tuesday, seven o'clock in the evening. I returned from Wallsend in time to assist in the confirmation and at the request of Bro. Barmore I spoke to the people, that being the closing night of the series. Was led to talk in a reminiscent strain and the Saints wept tears of joy. I am certain that true inspiration was behind Bro. Barmore's appointment to this field.

The following night we met in the Protestant hall, St. Mary's, twenty-nine miles west from Sydney, and for two hours and fifteen minutes Mr. Bell, of the Christadelphians, and the writer measured theological swords before an audience of more than five hundred people. His demeanor was of the kind that on one occasion brought forth hisses and groans. He interrupted his opponent and said he was telling an untruth. The audience did not take kindly to such language. I am satisfied that the discussion has opened the way for us to preach there. Bro. F. Haworth paid our return fare—first-class—and we were kindly entertained by Bro. and Sr. J. E. Parkes, they having been instrumental in fully advertising the matter. I inclose some newspaper clippings in regard to this and us as a people.

I found a spiritual dearth at Wallsend and Newcastle except among the Saints, and these I believe are trying to do their duty. Additions in both these places since we left eight years ago, and both localities now have chapels of their own in which to worship. The crying need is pastoral work. Some localities are "run down" because of not having a minister.

I expect to go to Melbourne for the Victorian conference 27th instant. My thoughts turn to the reunion at Dow City. My mission address hereafter will be G. P. O. Sydney, N. S. W., Australia.

J. W. WIGHT.

CLINTON, Iowa, October 8.

Editors Herald: I have never written to the HERALD before. It is not because I have not been interested in this latter-day work. I rejoice that I have heard the restored gospel, as God in his mercy has seen fit to bless mankind. I am trying to do all I can for the cause at this place. We have Sunday-school and Religio in this branch, but things are in such a condition that it seems hard to do much good. I am trying to keep up the study of the word of God, hoping that Satan will not gain the victory. Of late we have a few Home Class members in the district.

I would like to see the missionaries help us in this work here as there is only one local in this the Eastern Iowa District. It seems to me that those in the field have a good opportunity to get this work started with the scattered members. There have been four Utah elders here for some time, but so far I know of no converts.

If there is a member of the church who doctors with roots and herbs I would like very much to hear from him, as I have been sick for some time with what is believed to be stomach, kidney, and liver trouble.

Editors Herald: I am now the farthest from home I have ever been. Bro. Tucker and I are nearly at the extreme south-east end of the South Island, about ten thousand miles from home.

Our company, including myself, Brn. Wight, Tucker, Barmore, David Anderson and wife, set sail from San Francisco, July 24, for our appointed fields. Bro. Anderson and wife stepped off the boat and bid us adieu at Honolulu. Having never been in the tropics before I was enraptured with what I saw there. Banana-trees with bananas on, cocconut-trees with cocoanuts, and date-palms with dates were seen. To the edge of Honolulu is a crater of an extinct volcano, around which I and the brethren went. I wanted to go to the top of it and see what was in it, but the brethren said it would take too long a time. I guess I was born inquisitive. I beheld with awe and wondered with admiration at the greatness of God's creation, "How wonderful are thy works, O, Lord!"

Passed the Samoan Islands August 6. The boat stopped at Pago Pago for several hours. It had anchored a short distance from the land but a little while when it was surrounded by about two hundred natives. Many of them were tattooed over half their bodies. More than a few had bleached their hair with lime which gave their naturally black hair a reddish color. They were large in stature and well formed. They had for sale, and urged us to buy of them, native-made cloth, fans made of cocconut fiber and brilliantly dyed, bananas, shells on strings, and cocoanuts. They lived in huts, opened at the sides, along the shores. The Samoans, Hawaiians, and Maoris are much alike in color. It was said to be midwinter here at this time, and yet it was only cool enough to be pleasant, with an occasional shower which soon passed by. It was a restful scene for me to see the islands covered as they were with tropical verdure—cocoanuts everywhere.

After a wearisome journey, wearisome to me, we reached Auckland, August 12. A heavy frost was on the deck in the morning. When we reached the post-office, there was a letter for Bro. Tucker from Bro. Thomas Dixon of Kaitangata, requesting us to come there to enter upon our work. After a little consultation we decided to do as requested, and at two o'clock in the afternoon went on board the Waihoia, telling Brn. Wight and Barmore good-bye—they to go to Sydney and we to Kaitangata.

Since coming to this end of the world I have noticed many things seem out of order. Here I can see in the heavens the southern cross. In Iowa you can see the north star, but not the southern cross. There the sun rises in the east and goes to the southwest; here it goes from the east to the northwest. Fall is there and spring is here. Just the reverse here to what it is there. Santa Claus comes in the winter there and in the summer here.

The New Zealand people are fine people, speaking of them collectively. At first I could hardly keep my eyes from their red cheeks, roses were on each of them. I marveled at the pictures of health I saw; people not puny and pale, but rugged and strong. I admired their beauty of dress, the beauty consisting in simplicity. Very little finery is worn, hence a rain will not keep them from church. Here is found a people in touch with the revelation which says, "And again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of thine own hands;" and yet they know nothing of the revelation of God! They dress much alike and dress well.

No obscene pictures on bill-boards. No places of business opened on Sunday, except hotels and drugstores and then only at certain hours. Employers in stores or factories are compelled by law to give their employes a half day recreation each week. No strikes, everything settled by arbitration. Commodities are about the same in price as in the United States, perhaps a little more expensive in some respects.

On the way from Auckland down here while we stopped in port, I visited the museum at Christchurch, said to be the best museum in the colony, and saw many things of interest. I saw several skeletons of the Moa, a very large extinct bird of New Zealand. Some of the skeletons of that bird are fifteen or sixteen feet high, think of it; an ostrich is very small in comparison. One of the best Maori collections in the world is found here. The Maoris, the aborigines of New Zealand are mostly in the North Island. They are of fine physique, and are regarded as a bright race of people.

Two elders of the Utah church, one a missionary to Australia the other to New Zealand, were on board the Ventura with us. They had full faith in their leaders, and would accept the teachings of their leaders though the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants taught differently. I inquired of them concerning their work in New Zealand, and found that their stronghold was among the Maoris; that they had never been able to do much among the whites, in fact that they had done almost nothing. They have been run out of several towns here. In Christchurch they were forced to go under police protection. The people of New Zealand will not countenance polygamy. As soon as the elders say they believe in polygamy or ever practiced it the people are on them. It is next to a waste of time for the Utah elders to labor among the whites in New Zealand.

Kaitangata is a mining town of about fifteen hundred inhabitants, mostly Scotch. Four denominations are represented here, but since we have come the "Church of Christ" has been the most noisy. We engaged the Masonic hall for preaching Sunday evening, August 24, and announced our meeting accordingly. The hall was full. Bro. Tucker and I both spoke, occupying two hours. We then announced meeting to be held on the street every night through the week. Street preaching is respected here. Many denominations are represented in the larger cities on the streets. Tuesday night Mr. Greenhill, evangelist of the "Church of Christ" attacked our faith and the Book of Mormon, after I was done speaking. A vast throng surrounded us. When he was speaking the crowd would look on Bro. Tucker and I as though we were being buried; as many afterwards told me, they thought we would not have a word to say in reply. When he was done he stepped out of the ring into the audience. I then told the people to give me their ears and I started out like this, to him: "Are you an elder in the 'Church of Christ?'"

"No, sir."

"Do you hold any office in that church?"

"I am an evangelist."

"Why do we have evangelists in the church now?"

"Because we read there were evangelists in the church of old."

"We read there were apostles in the church of old, then why not have apostles? Mr. Greenhill, you come before us as an evangelist of God; produce your credentials. Where is your authority?" I in this way pulled him out of the crowd, exposed him to the people, then let the word of God fall on him. While I was replying to him and bringing forth our work I abruptly stopped and turning to him, I said, "Mr. Greenhill, do you wish to refute what I am saying?"

"Yes, sir," he said; and taking a small book from his pocket as he came into the ring said, "I will read from their own books." He read three or four lines concerning the fulfillment of some prophecy which did not have even a remote connection to what I had said, giving neither the name of book nor page. Noticing the size of the book I asked to see it, but he started to walk away putting it in his pocket. He would not let me see it. Then, turning to the people all around me I said, I doubt! (Commotion in the crowd, and cries of that's right.) The majority of the people turned to our favor, so he had either to produce the book or have them all against him. So he reluctantly produced the book, which I at once found was from Utah. Amazement was on the faces of many, for their pastor had been proven dishonest, for he knew, and the people knew he knew, that we had no connection with the publications of the Utah church. The strength of our positions was only revealed, and the weakness of his own made manifest. From that time some of his members, best members, have been with us in belief and I think will soon be in number.

There have been repeated attempts to overthrow our work at this place, but the Lord has smiled on us, and we have not been confounded in our work. Opposition was revealed before it came in one instance especially, and when we met together one evening though the powers of darkness seemed to rest on every one in the crowd, causing disorder and uneasiness and seemed about to have control, the Lord stepped forth with his power and wisdom, and those who sought our overthrow were made to sneak away almost disgraced.

The postmaster who has just come here from Christchurch, came out one night against us, but was hooted down by the people by a hoot of no uncertain sound. The leader of the Christadelphians came out one night and sought to confound us with certain questions which I answered by sometimes asking questions, but he soon slunk away, and when I said now let me ask you a few questions he said, "I'm done" and off he went. Several tried to hold him, but he said he was done. Last Sunday evening at the hall, I spoke to a large audience on the subject of the Book of Mormon. In the course of my discourse, after bringing forth the Scriptures and other proofs to sustain it, I said, "What will you do then, with the Book of Mormon?" One spoke out, "Burn it." At once cries were heard, "Burn him, burn him, throw him out!" I do not fear violence at this place, for by far the majority of our hearers are friends to our cause. At first it was embarrassing to go on the street; we were scrutinized so closely. Now, friends everywhere greet us.

We have held meetings on the street now nearly three weeks, being prevented only twice by the rain from filling appointments. We hold meetings every Sunday evening in the Masonic Hall. Those attending have thus far given more than was due for rent.

How we shall be regarded by the people in other places remains to be seen. The people do not know the difference between the Utah church and us, hence they may bounce a stone on our head thinking they have hit an emissary from Utah.

I trust that those whose sacrifices have helped send us to this island of the ocean may live to see a great work done here, and rejoice in the thought that they have helped lay the foundation thereof.

We have been stopping most of the time with Bro. Dixon, who has in the years gone by done what he could to hold out our work for the people's consideration. Our desire is to get our work well started in Kaitangata, and then branch out.

What shall I say in closing? Everything considered, in my estimation, there is no place like Iowa or Missouri. No wonder the Lord appointed the stakes of Zion there. New Zealand has no climate in some of its parts, only samples. One can sometimes see rain, snow, sleet, and sunshine all in one day.

My address is Kaitangata, New Zealand. Bro. Tucker and I are feeling well in spirit and body.

PAUL M. HANSON.

TACOMA, Washington, October 6.

Editors Herald: It is now several years since I became associated with this latter-day work by making a covenant with the Lord in baptism, at Salt Lake City, Utah, on the 17th of August, 1884. I received the testimony of the Holy Spirit that the latter-day work revealed from God, through Joseph Smith, was true; and as long as I lived a pure life I felt blessed; but how true is the parable concerning the sower recorded in Luke 8:5-8. During all these years since 1890 or 1891 I have neglected my duties to God, and have, even at times, tried to deny the faith and disown my Savior. I can now see how loving and kind our heavenly Father is to the erring ones. If one of his children is lost on the road to bliss, and drifts out in the forbidden paths which lead to destruction, he follows that lost one, and calls on him until he comes back again; and just so it has been with me. Saints, pray for me that I may be faithful to God, and that I may so live before him that all unbelief may be banished from my mind.

I am getting the HERALD regularly now, and it is a blessing to me to see that God is doing his work in his own wonderful way. Slowly but surely the gospel is marching onward. I am glad to see that my native country, Norway, is remembered, and I believe that many Saints in that country as well as in Sweden and Denmark, will yet be gathered into the fold of our Lord Jesus Christ. May the Spirit of God be with Bro. Peter Anderson, who was sent to the Scandinavian mission, and may God bless all his children everywhere, that we all may so live that our lives shall be a testimony to a degraded and demoralized generation in which we live, is the prayer of your humble servant in Christ.

Afield in October.

Bob White! Bob White! Thy challenge rings
 Across the stubble brown.
 Bob White! Bob White! The north wind brings
 The challenge into town.
 The littered pages on my desk
 Do rustle in the wind
 As if of crisp October leaves
 They fain would me remind.
 They whisper me of copse and wood;
 Of sumac's flaming red;
 Of field and meadow brown and sere
 Since gentle summer fled.
 They whisper me—Ah, who can fail
 To take the challenge of the quail!

Rich. A vote of thanks was tendered the choir for services during conference, also the Jonesport Saints and friends for hospitality. Adjourned to meet at Indian River, December 6 and 7.

Convention Minutes.

Pittsburg.—Convention convened at Wheeling, West Virginia, with Superintendent O. L. Martin in charge. Delegates were present from all the schools. To our surprise, Brn. T. A. Hougas and D. J. Krahl of the general force, made their appearance and imparted valuable instruction. Business session passed off nicely, adjourned to meet at Fayette City, Pennsylvania, February 28, 1903. An entertainment was rendered in the evening. Brn. U. W. Greene, T. A. Hougas, D. J. Krahl, and D. L. Allen, of the missionary force, made short addresses. A paper by Myron E. Thomas and a recitation by little May Clarke were well received.

Northwestern Kansas.—Convention was held on camp-ground at Gaylord, Kansas, September 4, Theodosia, Cook, district superintendent, in charge. Those taking part in discussion of "Ways to benefit and good to be obtained from zeal and love for the Sunday-school" were Srs. Drovetta and Sellers, Brn. J. C. Vaughn, I. N. White, Samuel Twombly. A Mr. Curtis, not a member of the church, told of good done by a Saints' Sunday-school in his neighborhood conducted by Sr. Cook and interest taken in his children. Said if more of the members of the church would take an interest in children of those outside of the church it would advance the interests of the cause. Motion carried that the superintendent appoint a program committee of three for following year, also to hold a convention Friday evening before next conference at Baker Schoolhouse, Osborne County.

Northeastern Kansas.—Convened at Netawaka, Kansas, September 26, at 1.30 p. m., Bro. J. W. Burns district superintendent in charge. All the district officers were present and reported. Schools reporting: Seranton, Atchison, Fanning, Idylwild, and Netawaka. A paper, "Some thoughts on teaching" by Sister Elmira Miller, was read. "Suggestions to the Sunday-school senior scholar" Lillie Munns. An illustrated blackboard talk on "Character building" by James Burns. Brn. Madden, A. H. Parsons, Beebe, H. Green, Gurwell, Burns, Joseph Green, Dunnington, Arthur Smith, and Edward Williams gave interesting speeches on Sunday-school work, How the old and young can encourage one another in this work, and the qualification of officers and teachers in the Sunday-school, making the meeting a profitable one. In the evening a program was rendered. Adjourned to meet prior to and at the same place as next district conference.

Study Hour Discontinued.

After due consideration the officers of the General Sunday-school Association have decided to discontinue the publication of Study Hour. And as some will very naturally wonder why, we make the following explanation: 1. The committee appointed at the convention to prepare the work resigned. We made extended search and could find a committee to take it "for one quarter only." Hence we are now without editors thereof. 2. We have made extended efforts to get it introduced and with very few exceptions have met with nothing but indifference or discouragement. 3. We have failed to get subscribers enough to enable us to enter it at the post-office as second-class matter. It requires book postage. 4. It has from the beginning been put out at a great loss, and there is no prospect of it being any better.

From the above conditions we conclude that it is not only inadvisable but impossible to continue it.

To those who have overpaid credit slips for the amount due will be issued receivable upon Quarterlies only if you request it, and the amount is for ten cents or more. But as the amounts are so very small, no minute will be made of it unless you call for it.

T. A. HOUGAS, Superintendent.

California Reunion.

The reunion of the Northern and Central California Districts was held in San Jose, September 12-22, in charge of Elders R. Etzenhouser and A. B. Phillips, presidents of the districts. The ministry present were Elders R. Etzenhouser, A. B. Phillips, J. M. Terry, A. Carmichael, J. B. Carmichael, E. Keeler, C. A. Parkin, and A. Haws, beside local elders. The reunion was a success and a very pleasant and profitable time was enjoyed. The sisters of the San Jose Branch donated their services in the restaurant, kept on the ground, thus helping very materially in this direction. The Sunday-school was represented by Elder A. Carmichael, Second Assistant Superintendent of General Association, and two very instructive sessions were held. The Religio also held two sessions in which interesting programs were rendered. The sisters held one meeting of Daughters of Zion and one of the Prayer Union. There were five baptisms, children of Saints, one child blessed, and thirty-nine administrations. The reunion of 1903 will be held in Oakland. Mrs. E. Keeler, Secretary.

Died.

MADISON.—Elder Ole Madison was born in Denmark, April 20, 1833, died in Nodaway County, Missouri, September 8, 1902. He emigrated to Utah in 1862. Becoming dissatisfied there in about three years, he joined the Reorganization, moved to Iowa in 1865, and to Missouri two years later. Bro. Madison was an earnest and faithful local worker, holding some branch or district office most of the time, and did much to establish the work in Nodaway County. He did not fear the end but was ready and willing to go. His hope and faith were firm in the promises of the gospel. He leaves a wife and one daughter, two sons having preceded him. Funeral sermon by J. S. Snively.

REYNOLDS.—Bro. Francis M. Reynolds died at his residence, 426 Des Moines St., Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday the 4th inst., at 6 a. m. Funeral services were conducted at the residence by Elder J. F. Mintun. Bro. Reynolds was, with his companion, baptized March 6, 1898, a member of Christ's body. He was aged 47 years, 2 months, 10 days. His aged companion is left to mourn his departure.

LARSON.—Moren Stine Larson was born April 23, 1825, in Denmark, died August 26, 1902, at the age of 77 years, 4 months, 3 days. She came to this country in 1882, became a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints about 16 years ago, and has proven herself to be a true Christian. She was the mother of 2 daughters, Sr. Hans Peterson, of Hazeldell, and Mrs. Maggie Christensen. She was a friend to all and died firm in the faith of our Lord. Sermon by D. R. Chambers.

CRANDALL.—Delilah Smith was born November 4, 1811, at Geneva, New York, died at the home of her daughter, Sr. D. Handbury, near Defiance, Iowa, October 3, 1902, being 90 years, 10 months, 29 days old. About the year 1832 she was baptized by Parley P. Pratt. She married Patrick Crandall, and they passed through the trying scenes experienced by many of the Saints in Missouri and elsewhere. Five children were born to Bro. and Sr. Crandall. The husband and three of the children preceded the mother to the other side. Funeral at Galland's Grove church October 5. Sermon by C. J. Hunt, assisted by A. Jackson and A. E. McCord.

Writing for children, in the November Delineator, Charles McIlvaine, author of a well-known work on mushrooms, gives this concise description of the edible and the poisonous fungi.

"Never eat any toadstool found growing in the woods or shady places, thinking it to be the common mushroom, because the latter does not grow in the woods but in open fields and pastures. If you look at a mushroom's gills or plaits you will see that they are a light pink, growing darker, as it ripens, until they are almost black; it also has a veil, and the cap is rough, scaly-looking on top, but there is no sheath at the bottom of the stem."

The October-December number of the Forum which, it will be remembered, is now published quarterly, contains articles by specialists, reviewing the progress of the last three months in various departments of thought and activity. Henry Litchfield West deals with "American Politics," devoting special attention to the President's speeches and the Congressional campaign, while A. Maurice Low treats of "Foreign Affairs," including the changes in the British administration, the renewal of the Triple Alliance, and the continued unsettlement in China. A. D. Noyes writes on "Finance," Henry Harrison Suplee on "Applied Science," Frank Jewett Mather, Jr., on "Literature," and Henry T. Finck on "Music." Russell Sturgis' paper on "Sculpture" is an exhaustive analysis of recent tendencies in this form of art as practiced in America. The subject of "Education" is divided between Ossian H. Lang and Dr. J. M. Rice, the former discussing the general outlook, and the latter giving an account of some special investigations into the teaching of arithmetic. The concluding articles in this number are a paper on "The Political Situation in Russia," by Isaac A. Hourwich, and a criticism of Herbert Paul's book on Matthew Arnold, by Professor W. P. Trent.

Country Life in America for October superbly illustrates the varied out-door pursuits of the best month of all the year. Among the leading features, "Yachting—A Personal Experience," is written by Thomas Dixon, Jr., about life on an eighty-foot schooner-yacht in Southern waters, which he found cost less than living ashore; "The Upbuilding of a Golf Course" considers conditions necessary for the best courses; "Grapes on a Suburban House Lot" deals with varieties of prize fruit; and "Two Lizards of the Desert" is about those weird beasts of the Southwest that live without water; while two English games for the lawn, "Jack of the Green and Quoits," is the subject of an article with suggestions for American players. Two important articles deal with camping out: "Camp-keeping as a Fine Art" is about summer life among the redwoods of California for those who do not care for the rough side of camping; while "Camping Out," an article by the editor, L. H. Bailey, is a plea for real camping, not confined to the pleasant months. The country estate feature this month is the seat of Anson Phelps Stokes on Stockbridge Mountain, in the Berkshires, near Lenox. Many small articles deal with timely subjects, from the care of flowers and the making of a window-garden to hunting, birds, and nature study of the month. This unique and beautiful magazine is now a year old and has proved its place among the best American periodicals.

An official of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad made the statement recently that 70,000 people had gone to Colorado on tourist tickets during the season just passed. Thousands of others have made the Yellowstone Park trip, and the prospects for an unusually heavy California business this fall and winter are remarkable. Asked for the reason of it, he said: "The American people are just finding out that here in America we have in Colorado the most attractive country in the world for seekers after health and pleasure. The mountain scenery, the superb climate, and the excellent hotel accommodations can not be excelled, and as people find out that it takes only two nights on the road to go from the Atlantic Coast to Denver, is it a wonder that Colorado has entered the field as a competitor of Europe for summer travelers? And as for California, where in all of Europe or America is the winter more delightful? Since we started our weekly 'Personally Conducted' parties from Boston, Chicago, and St. Louis to the Pacific Coast, great numbers of people, and people of moderate means, too, make it a yearly practice to spend some months in California. The expense is small and living in California is remarkably cheap."

The first book printed in the United States was an almanac published at Cambridge in 1639 by Stephen Daye, who established the first printing-press in this country. The second publication was a slip containing a poem, entitled "The Freeman's Oath." The next book was a metrical version of the psalms, known as the "Bay Psalm Book," in 1640. Copies of the latter are now very rare. It is one of the most valuable books in the world.—October Woman's Home Companion.

A leaf is composed of a great number of cells, the walls of which are brown. In the spring and summer these cells are all filled with fluid, colored with minute grains of red, yellow and other pigments, which, mixed together, appear green. In the autumn, through the cold, oxidation and other changes take place in the leaf-cells, destroying more or less rapidly certain of the color-elements. As soon as one of these elements is gone the leaf no longer appears a normal green, but assumes the shade of the remainder of the color-elements mixed together. When only the red element is left the leaf is red; when the yellow alone remains the leaf is yellow, and when all the coloring-matter has gone the leaf is brown.

Frost is not the sole cause of the changes of color, but it is an important cause. The more gradual changes of temperature from summer heat to winter cold, the greater will be the variety and brilliancy in the coloring of the autumn leaves.—October Woman's Home Companion.

No two events in British history of the closing year offer such a striking contrast as the Coronation in Westminster Abbey and the meeting of the Colonial Conference which was held in London about the same time. In the former everything that the artistic imagination of the British race could suggest or employ was done to create a superb spectacle. In the other everything was devoid of the accessories of pomp and splendor. Half a dozen men in plain clothes met in private conference in one of the rooms at the Colonial Office. Yet the scene in the Abbey was without political significance; whereas at the Colonial Conference the men of the present were shaping the destinies of the future. In The Cosmopolitan for October W. T. Stead writes an article on the significance of the Coronation as opposed to that of the Conference, and incidentally reveals the mental attitude of the British sovereign, and compares American institutions with those in Great Britain in so clear and complete a way as to hold the interest of the reader to the end.

Perhaps the most interesting character in the story of the American Revolution is Alexander Hamilton. A study of the man, his characteristics and guiding motives, was prepared by John Fiske before his death, and appears as the leading article in the October Cosmopolitan. No paper could illustrate more clearly the difficulties through which the American Union had to pass on its way to the excellence already attained and the perfection which it must ultimately reach.

THE LAST WALKING ON WATER STORY.

Time seems to bring in its reverses, revenges, and revealments. It is now fifty-eight years since Joseph Smith died as faithful to his mission as man can well be, and it remains for an Iowa newspaper to fix the locality and time when the so often alleged walking on the water feat was attempted. The following is from the Boone County, Iowa, Democrat, for September 19. It is headed "Joseph Smith's Attempt to Walk Upon the Water as Remembered by One of Iowa's Pioneers. By C. L. Lucas:"

John Carrell of Madrid has lived as long upon Iowa soil as any citizen of Boone County. He moved with his parents from Clay County, Indiana, to Jefferson County, Iowa, in March, 1843. This was before there was any settlement beyond the borders of the Black Hawk purchase, and two months before Captain Allen located Fort Des Moines at the Raccoon Forks, and three and a half years before Iowa was admitted into the union.

His father located south of Fairfield near the Lee County line and lived there one year, then moved to Wapello County and remained there until the spring of 1848, when they moved to Boone County.

It was during the summer of 1843, and while the Carrel family still lived in Jefferson County, that Joseph Smith made his rather famous attempt to walk upon the waters of the Mississippi River. The Mormons were then located at Nauvoo, Illinois, only about thirty miles from where the Carrell family lived. Joseph Smith was then in the zenith of his glory, for he held all the chief positions of honor among his followers. At the time we now speak of, he was the seer of the Mormon religion, president of the Mormon church, mayor of the city of Nauvoo, and commander-in-chief of the Nauvoo Legion, a body of armed men numbering fifteen hundred.

In granting a charter to the city of Nauvoo, the State officials of Illinois made the fatal mistake of allowing the Mormon prophet and his coworkers to put a provision in the charter for organizing and arming this body of men. It is said that this was a political deal and it doubtless was, for the Mormon vote held the balance of power in the congressional district in which Nauvoo was located. Doctor John C. Bennett wrote this famous Nauvoo charter and went to Springfield and successfully engineered it through. He was a very shrewd and cunning man, and at that time was a full-fledged Mormon and stood very close to Joseph Smith. After the death of Joseph Smith he aspired to be his successor, but was defeated by Brigham Young. This defeat so completely soured him upon Mormonism that he abandoned the cause and moved to Iowa. He was among the first settlers at Polk City, where he was a practicing physician for a number of years and died there some time in the seventies.

When the word went out that the Mormon prophet would walk upon the waters of the Mississippi, and the day named on which he would perform this supernatural act, thousands of people gathered upon the banks of the Great Father of Waters to witness the performance. We say supernatural act, because he expected to imitate the act of our Lord, when he walked upon the waters of the Sea of Galilee.

Mr. Carrel says that hundreds of people went from the counties of Jefferson, Van Buren, Lee, and Des Moines to be present and see what would happen. These took a position on the Iowa side of the river, while on the Illinois side crowds could be seen for a long distance up and down the river.

Around Joseph Smith stood, first, the elders and chief men of the Mormon church, second, the Nauvoo Legion in all their military toggery, third, the rank and file of the faithful, and fourth, the doubting gentiles who stood at a respectable distance to look at what they termed a miserable farce. In the arrangement of things it will be seen that no unbeliever in the supernatural power of Joseph Smith, was allowed to be near him. A careful scrutiny of what was to be done was the thing to be avoided.

When everything was in readiness the prophet moved off upon the surface of the water and advanced out toward the main channel about twenty-five feet and as he thus advanced the elders lifted their eyes heavenward and cried, Behold the divine power of our prophet! This was taken up by the lesser lights and repeated until the hills reverberated with their shouts.

At the end of twenty-five feet he came to a halt and turning around, lifted his hand in a commanding way and then all were silent. Listen, said he, to what I am about to say. You have seen me walk thus far upon the water. If there is one among you who doubts my power to walk upon these waters anywhere and everywhere, let him speak now and say so. All were silent. "I take it for granted then," said he, "that you all believe I possess the power to do so." There was a general response in the affirmative. "If you have full faith in me," he continued, "that is all the Lord requires of you and it is therefore needless that I should do more than I have done to convince you." Saying this he returned to the shore amid the shouts and congratulations of his followers.

While this thinly disguised manifestation of divine power seemed to be accepted as a veritable truth by the faithful followers of Joseph Smith, the doubting gentiles, who stood afar off, refused to be convinced without further investigation. So, as soon as the Mormons had withdrawn a short distance, half a dozen skiff loads of those doubting gentiles pulled to the spot where Joseph had done his miraculous walking. They found the water to be quite deep there and they further found that some timbers had been placed on supports just below the surface of the water, and on these, and not on the water, Joseph had done his miraculous walking. This burst the supernatural bubble, causing the gentiles to go away more disgusted with Mormonism than ever. Never in the history of our greatest river was a more sacriligious act performed upon its waters.

We do not remember that any one has fixed definitely, the time and place where this remarkable test of credulity, or exuberant and triumphant faith, took place.

It appears from the story that the place was the city of Nauvoo; the scene, the banks of the Mississippi River; the waters those of that majestic "Father of Waters;" the time, the summer of 1843. If the month and day had been given then the story would have been complete as a story.

Now that we have a definite statement of when and where this attempted feat of walking on the water was performed, the consideration of a few hard facts is in place.

1. The water at any point for a mile of the river frontage at Nauvoo runs at the rate of from four to six miles an hour, at any time when the water is at an average stage; when it is at a high stage it runs still faster; the force of the current is very strong.

2. The deeper the water the stronger is the current.

3. In 1843 there was no improvement dams on the river from St. Paul to New Orleans; hence none at Nauvoo to check the rapid flow of the current.

4. No possible arrangement of beams, posts, or plank of sufficient stability to bear the weight of a man weighing two hundred and more pounds, as Joseph Smith did in 1843, could have been built in the river at any point along the city water front but what would have been seen at a glance by any person near enough to the scene to have seen what was going on; as not even a fishline could have been stretched across the current within a foot of the surface that would not have created a ripple to show where it was submerged. The idea of an arrangement of beams and plank is an absurdity on its face.

5. The Mississippi River was from one mile to two miles wide opposite Nauvoo; and for a good part of the way at the upper bend of the river was sheltered from the view of those on the Iowa side by a heavily wooded island, bordered by a low shore line a long way from the bluffs.

6. It would have been impossible for any one standing on the Iowa side to have looked across to the Illinois side and distinguished persons and determined what they were doing, without the aid of the very best of field instruments, which at the time were not very prevalent among the farming community of Iowa.

7. We were living at Nauvoo, and was a daily visitor along the riverside, during the summer and winter of 1843, and up to 1846, and know that no such gathering of people ever took place. We are pleased, however, that somebody has at last suggested that the attempt to walk on the water was not a failure but a success.

8. The man who tells this story ought not to give himself or any other of the gentiles the credit of having slipped around in skiffs and discovered the device of beams and planks which made the attempt to seem to be a success; as neither Joseph Smith nor any of his abettors in such an imposture would have been fools enough to have left such evidences of their fraud to discovery.

We beg our readers' pardon for noticing this latest invention of foolish men, but as it offsets several similar stories that have preceded it, we thought it might be well to give it.

Portions of Missouri were visited by a destructive storm on October 12. Hail fell at St. Louis and Kansas City, and many places in Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, and Indiana were greatly damaged by severe wind-storms.

REUNION AT ZENITH, ILLINOIS; DEDICATION AT ELDORADO SPRINGS, MISSOURI, ETC.

By invitation of the officers of the Southern Illinois District we attended their reunion held at Zenith, six and one half miles south and east of Xenia, on the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad, where on Saturday, October 4, the conference of the district convened.

At Independence, Missouri, en route, in company with Bro. R. C. Evans, of London, Ontario, we attended the wedding of Bro. Charles Williamson, of Independence, and Sr. Mary Hildreth, of Chatham, Ontario, at the home of Sr. Hall, where Bro. R. C. Evans officiated in making the young couple husband and wife on the evening of October 1.

We went to St. Louis and filled appointments there the evenings of Thursday, the 2d, and Friday, the 3d, reaching Zenith on the morning of the 4th. We stayed with them, filling appointments for Saturday night, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, 5th to 8th, and returning to St. Louis the evening of the 8th, attended the prayer-meeting of the branch there. On Thursday evening of the 9th Bro. R. C. Evans spoke in the new stone church, corner of Glasgow and Dixon Avenues, where a full house greeted the visiting brethren. Bro. R. C. was in one of his best moods and gave a fine discourse from the text, "Beware of false prophets," showing the futility of the cry against prophets made in these degenerate days.

A reception was held at the house of Bro. John E. Dawson in the evening of Friday, the 3d, and after the service at the church, in which quite a number of the Saints participated in songs and recitations, interspersed with instrumental music by some of the young people, which were very good and very much appreciated by the visitors. At this reception the visiting brethren received substantial tokens of the interest of the Saints in the welfare of the ministers and the caring for their railway expenses in visiting from place to place.

Bro. R. C. Evans left St. Louis the evening of the 9th for conference of the Chatham District at Ridgetown, Ontario; and on Friday, the 10th, we left St. Louis for Eldorado Springs, Cedar County, Missouri.

Responding to an invitation from the branch there, through Bro. James Moler, sub-missionary in charge of that portion of the field, we visited them, arriving on the morning of Saturday, the 11th, in time to be present at the conference of the Clinton District, held in the little chapel which they have secured and which was to be dedicated. As a preliminary, extended notice had been given for services to be held in the court-house, Eldorado Springs being a sort of twin county-seat at which the courts of the county sit at stated times. To our surprise the house was crowded, many standing, many failing to get in. We here addressed the audience on the subject of the domestic relation as instituted by the Lord as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the later revelations to the church during the lifetime of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. The effort was well received, and we believe will be productive of good.

At fifteen minutes till eleven Sunday morning the Saints gathered at the chapel, which is situated just at the eastern edge of the town, and proceeded to the service of dedication. Bro. James Moler was in charge; the song service was under direction of Bro. Jacob Andes, with Sr. Parsons, of Nevada, Missouri, organist. The opening prayer was made by Bro. Richard T. Walters, of the missionary force in the Southern Illinois District, who was visiting home prior to the winter campaign. A statement was made by Bro. Arthur Lloyd concerning the method of securing the chapel and paying for the same, with the cost thereof and that it was free from incumbrance. We then preached the sermon from Matthew 24: 42, 44: "Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come;" "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." At the close of the sermon we offered the dedicatory prayer, and the chapel was dedicated to the service of God, with the motto, "A Free Pulpit and an Open Bible," as the watchword.

Eight years ago a reunion was held at Eldorado Springs at which quite a large number of Saints were present. During the preaching services a prediction was made by one of the speakers that the Lord had planted the work there, that the adversary would seek by all the efforts in his power to prevent the Saints obtaining a foothold at Eldorado Springs, and that this effort would fail signally and that the cause should triumph in that region of country. Not long after this the Christians, commonly known as Campbellites, instituted an effort to defeat the onward progress of the work. It resulted in a discussion between Elder Clark Braden and Bro. I. N. White, held in the Christian church in the village. The final result is that there is quite a large branch of the church there under the presidency of Bro. Abner Lloyd, who is well qualified for the position and who is ably seconded by others in teaching by both example and precept. The Saints are in good repute among all classes, and though poor, are regarded as honest, earnest men and women, which opinion is freely expressed by the citizens.

In the evening of Sunday, the 12th, service was again held in the courthouse, the house being filled to its seating capacity. This effort was in regard to the gospel, from the text furnished by the incident of the meeting of Jesus with the Samaritan woman at the well, the text being, "But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him."—John 4: 23. This effort was well received and very much appreciated by the Saints; indeed, the expression of the Saints was to the effect that never in the history of the branch or district had there been a more memorable day.

Bro. F. C. Keck, missionary, was in attendance and offered prayer at the Saturday evening services in the court-house, and had charge of the afternoon prayer service in the chapel on Sunday. He is, with others in the field, very much alive, and continued at Eldorado Springs for the week or longer as circumstances might determine.

The song service was quite good, though it took some little time for the young people to get their voices modulated to sing together. They showed an excellent spirit and a desire to excel, which is very commendable.

Much might be said in praise of the work in the Clinton District, but suffice it to say that Bro. James Moler, in charge, has been faithfully at work, and has a good corps of helpers, though they are few in number. It has been a difficult field; much prejudice has been encountered, and several discussions held in the district in which the work has been assailed in much bitterness, but such discussions have resulted in bringing the gospel prominently before many. It will but require steadfastness and grim determination to hang on, with good conduct on the part of the Saints, and the victory will be won.

It has seldom been our lot to spend two weeks more profitably than the time occupied in visiting the reunion of the Southern Illinois District at Zenith and the dedication at Eldorado Springs, together with the calling visits at St. Louis, Missouri. The reunion at Zenith was held at what is known as the Brush Creek Branch, a branch raised up largely through the influence and labor of Elder Thomas P. Green, who was ordained at Nauvoo in 1842 and sent into Wayne County, Illinois, to preach and build up the work. He was ably assisted by a number, among whom was Isaac A. Morris; later George H. Hilliard, our genial and indefatigable bishop, now so well known throughout the church. This Brush Creek Branch was one of the existent factors in the reorganization of the church, the roster of the names being presented and received as a whole at one of the General Conferences held by the Reorganized Church, thus continuing an organization begun in the days of the Martyr. We think the number of names was forty-two. They had received the gospel pure and simple with the church in its organization as existing under the regime of the Prophet Joseph and the Patriarch Hyrum Smith. They knew no other, and would submit to no other, and were ready when the time for reorganization came. There are now some three hundred members in the branch, so that it may be seen that we had a rousing time at the reunion.

Bro. I. N. White was in attendance at the reunion and took charge by vote of the assembly and would continue during the week after Elder R. C. Evans and the Editor left, and would be assisted by Bro. F. M. Slover and Brn. Davis and Bozarth, the two latter being young men in the service, evincing a considerable degree of ability. The Saints who assembled were warm-hearted and enthusiastic and enjoyed the services greatly.

Bro. I. N. White expected to go north and attend to matters pending in the district, there being some prospect of one of his usual debates, for which he seems to have plenty of opportunities. He was in excellent health and feeling and we presume will see that the reunion is properly represented in the church publications.

Bro. I. A. Morris is a veteran defender of the faith and is well liked both by Saints and those outside.

The Saints at St. Louis are now under the presidency of Bro. Russel Archibald. They have succeeded in changing their place of worship from No. 2518 Elliott Avenue to the corner of Glasgow and Dixon Avenues, where they now have an excellent stone church, originally built by the Presbyterian people and allowed to get into decay for want of use, but now revived under the fostering care of the branch and made an attractive place to which they may invite strangers. Under the skillful management of Brn. Archibald, Dawson, Elliott, and others, young men in the work, they have not only renovated the building, but have made the grounds adjacent to the building proper pleasant to look at, thereby increasing the attractiveness of their possession. It is in an excellent locality and the Saints are entitled to great credit for their successful management. They have succeeded admirably so far in meeting their half-yearly payments, and prospects are good that they will pay out in time and be able to dedicate their building under prosperous conditions.

Bro. R. C. Evans and ourself were met at the station at both of our visits and were taken to Bro. Dawson's by the kindness of the family of Bro. S. R. Burgess, who seemed to take pleasure in seeing that the missionaries were properly cared for. Through their kindness we were permitted to visit the site of the World's Fair, where it is anticipated St. Louis in 1904 will outdo Chicago. The buildings are vast enough in extent, and it is simply astonishing what effects may be wrought by a combination of wood and cement. Our stay with the St. Louis Saints was a very pleasant one, and we hope will be productive of good. Altogether, the prestige of the Saints at Zenith, St. Louis, and Eldorado Springs is excellent, and we trust nothing may occur to cause any relaxation of effort or bring disrepute upon the work.

We met two elders of the Utah people; John Walker, of Lewisville, Idaho, and O. L. Rider, of Mill Creek, Utah, who were present at our services at Eldorado Springs. They are young men, and on their first mission. They were treated courteously by our people so far as we know.

CORIANTON COMPANY DISBANDED.

The play entitled "Corianton," written by Professor Bean, of Utah, evidently with a view to interest the public in the Book of Mormon story of the Aztecs, and the early dwellers of the Western Continent, has failed; that is, the play has failed to please the theater-going public, and the company collected to exploit it on the stage has been disbanded at Kansas City, Missouri.

It was of a too serious cast to attract the general public upon whose patronage the stage depends for its financial support.

HAVE YOU SENT IN NEW SUBSCRIBERS YET?

Two weeks ago we sent out a supplement to the HERALD asking each one of our subscribers to send us a new subscriber for the HERALD. We wish to thank those who have complied and urge those who have not done so to make the effort at once. Some have manifested their love for God and their zeal for the advancement of his cause by sending in two and three new names.

We are not asking for donations, but we want your assistance now to increase the number of our subscribers. Will you give it?

THE following taken from the Church Union and therein credited to the Troy News, may be of interest to our singers and musicians in assisting them to define an "anthem:"

Speaking of anthems reminds me of the story of two old British sailors who were talking over shore experience. One had been to a cathedral, and had heard some very fine music, and was descanting particularly upon an anthem which gave him much pleasure. His shipmates listened for a while, and then said: "I say, Bill, what's an anthem?" "What?" replied Bill, "do you mean to say you don't know what a hanthem is?" "Not me." "Well, then, I'll tell yer. If I was to say to yer, 'Ere, Bill, give me that 'andspike,' that wouldn't be a hanthem. But was I to say, 'Bill—Bill—Bill—giv—giv—giv—giv me, giv me that—Bill, giv me, giv me that hand, giv me that hand, handspike, spike—spike—Bill, giv—giv me that—that hand—handspike, hand—handspike, spike, spike, ah—men, ah—men!' why, that would be a hanthem."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

I. N. Roberts wrote from Fulton, Kentucky, October 10: "Our reunion is on in full, with fair attendance. Meetings are spiritual; preaching good. Bishop Kelley is giving us great help by his wise counsel and good sermons."

T. W. Chatburn wrote from Elmwood, Wisconsin, October 12: "I baptized four more here to-day: Bro. Lawrence and his son Benjamin, also Bro. James Pout and Miss Edna, his sister. Others are near the door. The first snow of the season to-day."

Under date of October 12, Bro. Charles Albertson wrote from Albion, Idaho: "I have to-day baptized and confirmed Eva Howell and Z. Sawyer, my daughters. We have appointed the first Sunday, at two in the afternoon, for sacrament services. Am pleased to see the old heading restored to the Hope, though slightly altered. I think it improved."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We are in receipt of a letter written by a brother in New South Wales, in which the work of Bro. J. W. Wight there is spoken of very highly. We are indeed glad that the wisdom of sending Bro. Wight into that mission is being made manifest.

We recently noted that a theatrical company from Salt Lake City was putting on the boards a play called "Corianton," founded on scenes from the Book of Mormon. By a copy of the Kansas City Times for October 13 we note that the company had disbanded at Kansas City, but the play would be produced in New York by a new company, the leading actors of the disbanded company going with the new.

Mrs. Orpha Cline, Shaw, Kansas, writes that she would like to have an elder call and see her as she desires to obey the gospel, and thinks that there are some others who would be interested. Missionaries in this field please take note.

In the Oak Park Reporter for October 16 Bro. M. H. Bond has a short article on the belief of the church. Oak Park is a suburb of Chicago.

The Dominion, a paper published at Ridgeway, Ontario, in its issue for October 16 devotes two columns to a report of the conference of our Canadian Saints held there from the 9th to the 13th. The report is signed by James M. Baggerly.

The United States will have one of the most extensive and complete exhibits at the St. Louis World's Fair it has ever made. The experiences of the Columbian Exposition and the Pan-American will appear in the St. Louis exhibit in great improvements. The United States Government's exhibit alone will be well worth the cost of attending the great fair.

Our Sunday-school officials, the general officers, have taken steps to assist Graceland. The Saints throughout the church are probably quite generally aware of the scheme by this time. Besides the notice published in the last HERALD, circular letters have been sent out calling for the Sunday-schools to take a special collection on a certain Sunday, for the running expenses of Graceland. We are glad to see this movement, and trust the Sunday-school officers will realize therefrom all they anticipate.

Under date of October 16 T. W. Chatburn wrote from Chetek, Wisconsin, that we had misread him concerning the four baptisms. They were performed by F. M. Cooper, not T. W. Chatburn. Bro. Chatburn says, though, that he baptized four on the 12th at Elmwood.

WHERE IS THE LAND OF CUMORAH?

(Book of Mormon quotations taken from large edition.)

The belief has obtained among some Book of Mormon students that the land of Cumorah is south of what is known to us as Northern Mexico. How and why such a conclusion has been reached is a puzzle to the writer. Nowhere within the lids of the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, or Bible can we find one word as proof for such a belief. In this contention one of two lines of thought must obtain: Either the land of Cumorah was in that part of the country known to-day as the state of New York, or the records were divided and separated many miles apart, thus necessitating that the most precious parts of these records be lost to the world for ever, no more to be had among men, for we read that Mormon hid up in the hill Cumorah all the records which had been intrusted to him by the hand of the Lord, save it were these few plates which he gave unto his son Moroni. (Mormon 3:7.)

Now, if Mormon hid up the records intrusted to him in some far-distant land to the southward, and Moroni the few intrusted to him at the place where Joseph Smith found them, it is a foregone conclusion that Mormon's records have not come forth as yet, and, as far as known, never will.

Nephi saw by the Spirit that in latter times a book would be brought forth by the power of the Lord, and that in this book there would be a revelation from God from the beginning of the world to the end thereof, and that this portion would be sealed and kept in the book until the own due time of the Lord. (Second Nephi 11:65-82.) The record that contained this revelation and those records that Mormon took his abridgment from, were the ones intrusted to him by the Lord; and, if Cumorah, the place where he hid them up, was not in that portion of the country known as New York, where are they? Where is the proof that they will ever be given to the children of men? There is not one word of prophetic evidence in any one of the three books as proof that there are any records to come forth at any time, except the sealed portion of the records delivered to Joseph by the angel. These records were returned to the angel after Joseph had finished the work assigned him by the Lord, and will yet be brought forth in God's own due time.

The writer is willing to concede that there were two sets of records hid up, one by Moroni, the other by Mormon; but not that they were hid up at different places, although hid up by different men and at different times.

The advocates of this southern theory place the land of Zarahemla too far south by locating it in South America. They seem to overlook or ignore the fact that there are two lands of Nephi spoken of in the Book of Mormon: one in what is now South America, the other in Central America. Omni records the fact that about the year 320 (from the time that Lehi left Jerusalem) the more wicked part of the Nephites were destroyed, and that Mosiah was warned of the Lord that he should flee out of the land of Nephi, and, as many as would hearken unto the voice of the Lord should also depart out of the land with him into the wilderness. And they departed out of the land into the wilderness, as many as would hearken unto the voice of the Lord. (Omni 1:6-17.) Thus the first Nephite nation, the one in South America, became disorganized, as the subjects of this nation were either all killed or departed out of the land. There must be four considerations to complete a nation: territory, subjects, laws, and the authority, or those holding the authority, to administer the laws and statutes of the nation. In this case no part of the nation remained except the territory. Hence there was no longer a Nephite nation, neither could be until they again procured territory upon which to found a new nation. This they obtained after being led by the power of the Lord through the wilderness until they came down into the land of Zarahemla. (Verse 18.)

Mormon, in his abridgment, when writing of the people of Zarahemla, states that after they had landed on the shores of Desolation, they came from there up into the southern wilderness. (Alma 13:64, 65.) It can readily be seen by the reader that "up" and "down" when applied to the north and south points of the compass were used just the opposite by them to what they are used by us to-day; so there is no need to get mixed on this matter. Up with them meant south, down meant north.

In proof of the statement that there were two lands of Nephi we quote from Alma 13:61: "Now the more idle part of the Lamanites lived in the wilderness, and dwelt in tents; and they were spread through the wilderness, on the west, in the land of Nephi: yea, and also on the west of the land of Zarahemla, in the borders, by the seashore, and on the west, in the land of Nephi, in the place of their father's first inheritance."

Three lands or countries are here spoken of; two lands of Nephi, the "land of Nephi" and the "land of Nephi, in the place of their father's first inheritance," and "the land of Zarahemla."

The second nation of Nephi was organized under the hand of Mosiah, he uniting the people who came with him from the land southward with the people of Zarahemla, they choosing him their king. The Nephites who came with him to this country settled in the land Bountiful (Alma 13:68) which lies to the south of, or between Zarahemla and the land of the Lamanites, for it is written that "Moroni caused that his armies should go forth into the east wilderness; yea, and they went forth, and drove all the Laman-ites who were in the east wilderness into their own lands, which were south of the land of Zarahemla;" and he caused fortifications to be erected. "And thus he cut off all the strongholds of the Lamanites, in the east wilderness: yea, and also on the west, fortifying the line between the Nephites and the Lamanites, between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi; from the west sea, running by the head of the river Sidon; the Nephites possessing all the land northward; yea, even all the land which was northward of the land Bountiful, according to their pleasure. And it came to pass that the Nephites began the foundation of a city; and they called the name of the city Moroni; and it was by the east sea; and it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites."—Alma 22: 5, 8, 10.

Here we are informed that the land of the Lamanites lies to the south of the land of Zarahemla, but not adjoining it; for Moroni caused that the line between the Nephites and Lamanites be fortified, thus placing the land of Nephi next to the land of the Lamanites. The line between the land of Nephi and Zarahemla was also fortified, thus placing the land of Nephi between the land of Zarahemla and the Lamanites.

The city of Moroni was in the south by the boundary line between Lamanite and Nephite; thus we can plainly see that to locate Zarahemla in South America would be placing it in Lamanite territory and under Lamanitish rule.

Again, if Zarahemla was south of the narrow passage or neck of land dividing the land northward from the land southward, how was it possible for the five thousand four hundred men with their wives and their children to have departed out of this land two hundred twenty-six years after the people under Mosiah had left the original land of Nephi and united with the people of Zarahemla? If they had been Lamanite subjects they would not have been permitted to depart out of the land.

There were two lands of Nephi recognized by both Lamanites and Nephites as late as the nineteenth year of the reign of the judges, being two hundred eight years after their departure out of their former home. In the book of Alma we read that there was a man by the name of Amalickiah, an evil-designing man who desired to be king, and he drew many of the Nephite nation away, or caused that they should follow him; and he, seeing that they were not strong enough to cope with the armies of Moroni, fled into the land of Nephi, which was a part of the land of the Lamanites. Moroni not deeming it wisdom to let him depart out of the land, sent his armies after Amalickiah and headed his armies off, and Amalickiah fled with a small number of his men, and went up into the land of Nephi among the Lamanites, and did stir up the Lamanites to anger against the people of Nephi. (Alma 21: 21-55.)

We have in no wise exhausted the proofs that Zarahemla was not where it is located on our Book of Mormon map. The prehistoric remains of cities and fortifications of an extinct people known as the Cliff-dwellers, found in Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, and Utah, attest to the fact that this land, and the Nephite nation (of this date) were north of the line fortified by the Nephites, which extended from the east to the west sea. These ruins are nothing more or less than the strongholds of the Gadianton robbers who infested the land of the Nephite nation for years, and were not destroyed until nineteen years after the coming of Christ. There is no evidence of any kind, either modern or ancient, that these robbers were ever in South America. We are aware that the claim is made that the face of the land was so completely changed during the three days of darkness that we can not depend upon the description given in the Book of Mormon in locating the different countries and cities of the land before this time; but this is a mistaken idea.

This description was given by Mormon while writing his abridgment of the records then before him; he not only drawing from these records, but from his own knowledge of the country, as he wrote his abridgment many years after this great change came over the land (see words of Mormon), it being four and a half centuries after the three days of darkness. In proof that we are not guessing in reference to this matter, but simply giving stern facts, we will give Mormon's own words after he had finished one of his descriptions of these lands: "And now I, after having said this, return again to the account of Ammon, and Aaron, Omner, and Himni, and their brethren." There is a difference of four hundred fifty-two years between the time that Mormon wrote the above citation and that when the first verse of the next chapter was chronicled by Alma. Mormon copying it verbatim.

Book of Mormon students, as well as Bible scholars, must be careful in their perusal of this book; if they are not, they will get their dates mixed, as Mormon, all the way through his abridgment of the records of his people, and Moroni, in the abridgment of the book of Ether, often dropped from the original narrative of things that took place many years before, to happenings in their day. Our only excuse for dwelling so long on this part of our subject is the desire to properly locate these countries, especially Zarahemla, as it was from this country that the people came who settled in the northern country, the first colony departing in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of the judges. We learn that five thousand four hundred men with their wives and children departed out of the land of Zarahemla to the land northward this same year, and many of the Nephites went to this northern country with Hagoth the shipbuilder the next year, he being an exceedingly curious man, therefore he went forth and built an exceeding large ship on the borders of the land Bountiful by the land Desolation and launched it forth into the west sea by the narrow neck which led into the land northward, and behold there were many Nephites who did enter therein, and did sail forth with much provisions and many women and children, and they took their course northward. In the year 38 this man built other ships, and the first ship returned and many other people entered into it, and they also took much provisions and returned again to the land northward. In this year many people went forth into the land northward in search of homes. (Alma 30:1, 13.) An exceeding great many departed out of the land of Zarahemla the year 46 and went into the land northward to inherit the land, and they did travel to an exceeding great distance, insomuch that they came to large bodies of water and many rivers, yea, and even they did spread forth in all parts of the land, and they did multiply and spread and did go forth from the land southward to the land northward, and did spread insomuch that they began to cover the face of the whole earth from the sea south to the sea north, from the sea west to the sea east. (Helaman 2:3, 6.)

Inasmuch as the Nephites were spread over the entire northern country, even as far north as the great lakes (large bodies of water), it was necessary, if Cumorah was in southern climes, that the armies of the Lamanites surround them driving them back to this southern land from whence as a nation they came four hundred seventy-five years before, as it was an utter impossibility for Mormon to have gathered them back from this vast country to the land of Cumorah in so short a time as it was between the time that he asked permission of the king of the Lamanites to gather his people to the land of Cumorah and their destruction.

The Nephites and Lamanites were fighting continually for twenty-four years, and for nine years they were on a forced march, and part of the time fleeing so fast that the weaker ones were left behind.

The Nephites and Lamanites made a treaty the year 350 from the coming of Christ; the Lamanites to possess the land south of the narrow passage leading into the land southward, the Nephites to hold all north of the narrow passage. (Mormon 1:59.) Ten years later the Lamanites gave the Nephites battle, but did not prevail against them until the year 363. After this date many of the Nephites fell, and many of them were taken prisoners. The year 375 found the Nephites a whipped and a ruined nation, for the second time, they gaining no more power over their enemies, but fleeing before them, taking all those who would go with them, the Lamanites destroying all who would not,

In the year 384 the Nephites reached the land of Cumorah (Mormon 2:1-32; 3:1-14) making a total of twenty-four consecutive years of hard fighting, from 360 to 384, and after 375 they did not gain a single victory over their enemies, but fled before the Lamanites as fast as it were possible, yet not covering a distance of three thousand miles in nine years, if Cumorah was located anywhere south of the present boundary of Northern Mexico. The Nephites started in their flight before their enemies from the city of Desolation during the year 375, averaging less than 334 miles per year, or less than one mile per day. If they had averaged five miles per day, Sunday's excepted, they could have traveled more than half way around the globe in this time; so distance will not be taken into consideration in this article. The fact that Mormon asked permission of the king of the Lamanites to gather his people together in the land of Cumorah is ample proof that they were driven to the last extremity, and that there was no chance for further retreat. Another substantial reason for believing that Cumorah was in that part of the country known to-day as New York is that Cumorah was a land of many waters, rivers, and fountains. (Mormon 3:5.)

Where is there a land that so completely fills this description? Is it Mexico, or any other southern clime? No, if we know anything about the topography of the Western Hemisphere, nowhere on the two continents do we find a portion of the country that any nearer fills the description given by Mormon than the northeastern portion of what is known as the United States, especially the state of New York. This part of the country can not be surpassed for its beautiful lakes, lovely streams, and finest of springs. Inasmuch as the records that the Book of Mormon was translated from were found in this part of the land, the writer believes it reasonable to locate the land of Cumorah here; if not, Moroni had to travel many hundred miles, alone, through a hostile country where it was death to a Nephite if found, and would not deny Christ (Moroni 1:2), burdened with the records intrusted to him by his father, in danger of losing them, as the Lamanites were determined to destroy them if possible. Besides, he abridged the book of Ether during the time from the destruction of his people to his demise, and finished the work intrusted to him by his father.

We do not claim that Mormon could not have accomplished this and even traveled to what is now known as New York during the thirty-six years that he remained on the earth, after the destruction of his people; but we do say that it was an undertaking uncalled for. The idea of a man traveling this vast distance, crossing rivers, wading swamps, in danger of wild animals, evading a blood-thirsty foe, when it would have been much more sensible, more like a man of wisdom to have stayed where his people fell, and his father hid up the records intrusted to him by the Lord.

Our contention is that the records hid up by Mormon were never removed to any distant land, but remained where he placed them, Moroni having access to them; and, after he had finished his records he placed them with his father's, sealing up the stone box or receptacle that Mormon had prepared for them.

Moroni says, "And I, seal up these records, after I have spoken a few words by way of exhortation unto you." (Moroni 10:2.) We understand by this statement that it was the stone box prepared by Mormon, and not the records that he sealed up. Moroni had nothing to do with the sealing of any portion of the records obtained by Joseph Smith. If he did, we know that the above quotation was no part of the sealed portion of these records; for, if it had been, the writer could not have used it in this article, as no part of the sealed portion was translated by Joseph. The fact that we now have the record before us that he was then writing is positive proof that he had in mind the sealing of the stone box that Joseph found them in, and not the records.

We will be pleased to hear from others on this subject.

IF NOT, WHY NOT?

BY ELDER F. M. WELD.

Motto: "To the law and to the testimony; and if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isaiah 8:20.

Text: Matthew 22:35-40, Christ's answer to the lawyer: "Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

By this we understand that all of God's laws and commandments are founded upon these basic principles, and in all ages whenever the holy men of God were moved upon to speak to the people, they did so by the same spirit that established these great principles.

Then in the study of God's word and dealings with his people we must bear in mind these principles as the foundation or underlying thought. To this an honest soul or an unbiased mind will find no objections, but take pleasure; and we who have accepted the "angel's message" should be glad to thus conform our lives and our acts, perfecting ourselves, as it were, "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," that our examples and teachings may be in perfect harmony with Christ's.

The Lord told Oliver Cowdery, "Trifle not with sacred things." To us there is no doubt that all who enjoy the true spirit of this latter-day work feel the force of this statement, and in their teachings desire to present nothing to the people but what may be in complete rapport with the "law and testimony."

The Lord, like himself, was and is good to his people and led them step by step, from the very beginning of this dispensation, as a kind father would lead his children, and giving them instructions just as they needed them and as fast as they developed to use his instructions were others given. Thus we see the early ministers in this church were not left in doubt, but taught the people understandingly, and upon any question there was doubt or a difference of opinion they would come together and discuss and ask God to give them a proper understanding, as we understand the provisions of the law to be. Why not?

The Lord seems to have desired to impress the idea of his unchangeability and the perpetuity of the gospel, or his laws, at the very commencement of this church; not only in statements of this character, "everlasting gospel," "everlasting covenant," and "what I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same; for behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth for ever and ever;" but by comparison or example also as we find in revelation given June, 1830, Doctrine and Covenants, section 22, "The words of God which he spake unto Moses," etc. Revelation given September, 1830, section 26, paragraph 2, "Behold, this is wisdom in me," etc.; and the revelation given December, 1830, section 36, containing an extract from the prophecy of Enoch. This prophecy was given later in the Inspired Translation of the Bible, Genesis 7, but is not to be found in King James' Version. In this we are taught how God dealt with Enoch and his band and how he showed Enoch the future generations even down to the coming of the Son of Man, at the end of the world; and how the people kept falling away from time to time, but all would have to come back to the same principles and laws that Enoch and his band lived by when they were taken up into heaven, even the very principles enunciated in Christ's answer to the lawyer (Matthew 22:36) in order to be saved.

Not only in this but in later revelations (sections 77, 81, 93, and 101), is Enoch and his band or the laws given to them made an especial example to the Latter Day Saints. If God is unchangeable and it took such laws to redeem Enoch and his band, will it not take the same to redeem us? If not, why not? As early as December, 1830, section 37, the Lord began especial preparations to prepare his people to receive his law. In this revelation, paragraph 2, we read: "And again a commandment I give unto the church, that it is expedient in me that they should assemble together at the Ohio, against the time that my servant Oliver Cowdery shall return unto them. Behold, here is wisdom, and let every man choose for himself until I come. Even so. Amen."

We here read that the Lord tells the church it was wisdom for them to gather at the Ohio at the time stated, but did not tell them the purpose; no doubt to teach them the important lesson, he gives no commands but what are for the good of the people. Still he recognized their agency by saying, "Let every man choose for himself until I come."

Again in his second command to gather to the Ohio; revelation given January, 1831, section 38, paragraph 7: "And that ye might escape the power of the enemy, and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameless: wherefore, for this cause I gave unto you the commandment, that ye should go to the Ohio; and there I will give unto you my law," etc. This time the people were told why they were to gather at the Ohio, and that if they did they should escape the power of the enemy and be gathered a righteous people, "without spot and blameless;" with the provision, of course, God always gives with all of his promises, that if they would keep the law they would then receive.

In the latter part of the same month, in a revelation to James Covill, the Lord gives the people a third command to gather to the Ohio, and a promise of great blessings, section 39, paragraph 4, such as is not known among the children of men, and after they should receive their endowment they, like the apostles of old, were to go forth to all nations.

Next we come to where they are gathered at the Ohio, as instructed, and on February 9, 1831, section 42 of Doctrine and Covenants, the promised law was given.

The Lord begins this revelation: "Hearken, O ye elders of my church, who have assembled yourselves together, in my name, even Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, the Savior of the world, inasmuch as they believe on my name and keep my commandments; again I say unto you, Hearken and hear and obey the law which I shall give unto you; for verily I say, as ye have assembled yourselves together according to the commandment wherewith I commanded you, and are agreed as touching this one thing, and have asked the Father in my name, even so ye shall receive."

With this introduction he proceeds to give the law, which we trust our readers will read, and reread until the Spirit of truth makes it clear to them, as we understand this to be the law to the church, and all else given later to be a simplification or explanation or a further extension of some parts of the same law, and based upon those same principles enunciated in that answer of Christ to the lawyer recorded in Matthew 22: 36, and in harmony with what was given to Enoch and his people, or that given to God's people in any age, and a direct command to the Latter Day Saints, as we quote from the introduction: "Again I say unto you, Hearken and hear and obey the law which I shall give unto you." If God gives a direct command to a people, is it not binding upon them? If not, why not? In this revelation we find subjects enough for a great many articles, but we wish to confine ours to that part which pertains to the finances—God's instructions to his people regarding the use of temporalities.

Beginning at paragraph eight we read: "If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose."

In this paragraph the Lord for the first time to the church, speaks of the principle of "consecration" of properties for the poor, and makes the statement that if we love him we will consecrate that which we have to impart to the poor with a covenant and deed which can not be broken, and inasmuch as we did impart of our goods to the poor, we would do it unto him.

Paragraph 9 reads: "And it shall come to pass that after they [the properties] are laid before the bishop of my church, and after that he [the bishop] has received these testimonies [covenant and deed which can not be broken, or, in other words, a legal deed according to the laws of the land] concerning the consecration of the properties of my church, that they can not be taken from the church, agreeable to my commandments; every man shall be made accountable unto me [the Lord], a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration [how much?], inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family."

In this paragraph we learn that after we deed our properties to the bishop, he deeds to us our inheritance, that we may be made stewards over our own property, or that which we have received by consecration as he says in the last part of the paragraph. The conjunction or, we understand to be used here in the sense of explaining the same thing in other words. To show that this is the meaning intended, let us go to the revelation given in May, 1831, section 51, given three months later, when the people began gathering into Kirtland from the East, and it became necessary for the Lord to give further directions.

See Church History, volume 1, pages 191, 192. In this revelation the Lord speaks as follows: "Hearken unto me, saith the Lord your God, and I will speak unto my servant Edward Partridge, and give unto him directions; for it must needs be that he receive directions how to organize this people, for it must needs be that they are organized according to my laws [section 42, as this is the only law given covering this ground to date, and is in harmony with the one given to Enoch our example as we will show later], if otherwise, they [the people] will be cut off; wherefore let my servant Edward Partridge, and those whom he has chosen, in whom I am well pleased, appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs; and let my servant Edward Partridge, when he shall appoint a man his portion, give unto him a writing [legal deed] that shall secure unto him his portion, that he shall hold it, even this right and this inheritance in the church, until he transgresses and is not accounted worthy by the voice of the church, according to the laws and covenants of the church, to belong to the church; and if he shall transgress, and is not accounted worthy to belong to the church, he shall not have power to claim that portion which he has consecrated unto the bishop for the poor and the needy of my church; therefore he shall not retain the gift, but shall only have claim on that portion that is deeded unto him. And thus all things shall be made sure according to the laws of the land."

In this revelation we find two things sustaining our position: First, "Even this right and this inheritance in the church;" thus naming the portion received (inheritance), "or that received by consecration." Second, showing that all must first be deeded to the bishop, before he can deed back that part the individual is to have claim on in case of transgression, etc., or his inheritance.

In paragraph 9, section 42, and last line, we find the question how much each individual is to have, answered: "Inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family." This we understand to be the rule for every man, and the only law God ever gave his people in this dispensation, and is the only law of absolute equality known to man. If not, why not?

As proof of our position, turn again to section 51, paragraph 1, and we read: "Wherefore let my servant Edward Partridge, and those whom he has chosen, in whom I am well pleased, appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs."

Again, in August, 1831, section 58, given three months later, the Lord makes it still plainer by using Martin Harris as an example. In paragraph 7, we read: "And now I give unto you further directions concerning this land. It is wisdom [will we suffer when the Lord says it is wise?] in me that my servant Martin Harris should be an example unto the church [not a part or any specific locality, but general in application], in laying his moneys before the bishop of the church. And, also, this is a law unto every man that cometh unto this land, to receive an inheritance, and he shall do with his moneys according as the law [section 42] directs."

Yes, but this was only for those who came up to Zion for an inheritance, says one. Let us see. What did Martin Harris do? In section 18, paragraph 5, we read: "Impart a portion of thy property; yea, even part of thy lands, and all save the support of thy family." Is not this the same principle as that found in section 42, only the Lord had not as yet given this law, so that he (Harris) could get his inheritance? possibly because the people were not yet ready for it; but notice the strong language used in the forepart of the paragraph: "The last commandment, . . . and misery thou shalt receive, if thou wilt slight these counsels; yea, even the destruction of thyself and property." Here the Lord is only claiming his own, as we are simply stewards; all belongs to God; and what is appointed unto man is simply what he needs, his "wants are to be amply supplied," and the rest he (God) wants to carry on his work, and expects men to consecrate their lives to his service, and work for the good of each other and the glory of God: thus overcoming self and selfishness and living in harmony with our text, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind, and . . . thy neighbor as thyself."

Martin Harris was not in Zion, as this revelation (sec. 18, D. C.) was given March, 1830; still the Lord said Martin Harris was to be an example to the church, and according to the clause, "And, also, this is a law unto every man that cometh unto this land," etc. It was of special importance that all that went up to Zion should comply, as he says in the last line of verse 4, section 58: "For verily I say unto you, my laws shall [not ought to] be kept in this land."

Now go with us to section 70, paragraph 1, revelation given November, 1831. Here in verse one the Lord is speaking to several individuals by way of commandment, and appointing them stewards over the revelations and commandments, and says: "An account of this stewardship will I require of them in the day of judgment."

Verse two: "Wherefore a commandment I give unto them, that they shall not give these things unto the church, neither unto the world; nevertheless, inasmuch as they receive more than is needful for their necessities, and their wants, it shall be given into my storehouse, and the benefits shall be consecrated unto the inhabitants of Zion, and unto their generations, inasmuch as they become heirs according to the laws of the kingdom."

By this we learn God is no respecter of persons. Even these leading men of the church were to only have their wants and necessities supplied. Anything received above that was to be turned over to the storehouse or bishop. If not, why not?

Verse 3: "Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. [Does this exempt any?] And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God [now, who is exempt?]; yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent, who keepeth the Lord's storehouse; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things [which includes all worldly pursuits]; . . . nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall [not ought] be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall [not may] be withheld."

What stronger language could the Lord have used than the above to impress upon us that he does not intend any one individual to have any more of this world's goods than his brethren, but all to be equal; "to have their wants amply supplied," "according to his wants and needs, inasmuch as his wants are just," "according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs," and kindred statements?

That the reader may understand our reasons why we do not believe this law was to be, or is applicable only in Zion and her stakes, let us again go back to section 57 and begin to read at verse 2, and reading to end of chapter you will find the same law was applicable in any branch of the church. Verse 5: "Behold, this shall be an example unto my servant Edward Partridge, in other places, in all churches."

If it were not so, to selfish man, would it not be putting a premium on staying away from Zion? "For according to the law every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion."—Section 72, verse 3.

Again, section 102, verse 3: "I speak not concerning those who are appointed to lead my people, who are the first elders of my church, for they are not all under this condemnation; but I speak concerning my churches abroad; there are many who will say, Where is their God? Behold, he will deliver in time of trouble; otherwise we will not go up unto Zion, and will keep our moneys."

Thus we find the law to be binding alike on all, and surely none will say this is not just. If not, why not?

Again, in section 42, page 10, we read: "If there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants. Therefore, the residue shall be kept in my storehouse, to administer to the poor and the needy," etc.

Here we have further instructions, as we understand it, that after we have received our inheritance, and the windows of heaven are opened and the blessings of God are poured out upon us and ours, if perchance we should accumulate upon our inheritance more than is needed for "our support," "our necessities," our just wants, we are to turn it over to the bishop, or "consecrate it unto the bishop" from time to time for "the poor and needy," etc. Read entire verse.

When we take into consideration that our inheritances are not to be a stingy allotment, but an ample portion, one that is safe and sufficient and perfectly satisfactory to both the individual and the church, and that God does not expect any one to be set off with a scanty portion, but all are to be equal and have ample for every need and just want; we can see the justice in this (the law), and the perpetuation of equality, as the conditions and circumstances will keep changing by death, birth, marriage, and the like, and of necessity, if equality is to continue, there must be some rule to govern, as haphazard methods will never perpetuate equality. God expects every one to pay for what he gets, and all are to have sufficient so they can, "according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs."

Section 42, paragraph 14: "Thou shalt stand in the place of thy stewardship; thou shalt not take thy brother's garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother; and if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my storehouse, that all things may be done according to that which I have said."

Section 70, paragraph 2: "Nevertheless, inasmuch as they receive more than is needful for their necessities, and their wants, it shall [not may] be given into my storehouse," etc.

Section 81, paragraphs 4 and 5: "Behold, here is wisdom, also, in me, for your good. And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God. This order I have appointed to be an everlasting order unto you and unto your successors, inasmuch as you sin not."

In this fifth paragraph we learn this order was to be everlasting, and of course the rules governing the order must be everlasting, thus showing that equality will and must be kept up if we expect to please God.

Read section 77, paragraph 1: "The Lord spake unto Enoch, saying, . . . for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things."

THE METHODISM OF TO-DAY.

Jeremiah on Jerusalem was cheerful and sprightly compared with Munhall on Methodism. "Thousands of Methodists are courting the world and conforming to its fashions;" "they have put steeples on their churches;" "they have brought choirs into their services;" "they have lost faith in the Bible." Here are charges various, serious, and by no means to be passed by without comment. What Mr. Munhall says, other Methodists say, too. There is a feeling on their part that the Methodist Church is not what it used to be. Perhaps they are right.

The observer, not a Methodist, has probably noticed that in at least three respects the Methodist Church is changing. There is a tendency toward indulgence in amusements which used to be discountenanced; there is a tendency toward the introduction of ceremonies which used to be regarded as vain pomp and repetition; there is a tendency toward a neglect of "conversion" and "the witness of spirit." As conservative Methodists would say, the church is now eaten up with worldliness, ritualism, and liberalism. There has been a change in manners, in worship, and in theology.

In manners, it may be enough to recall the action of the last General Conference committee in recommending the removal of the rule condemning "dancing, playing of games of chance, attending theaters, horse races, circuses, dancing parties, or patronizing dancing schools." In worship, would it be possible for the prairie Methodist of fifty years ago to find much to his taste in the service of certain city Methodist churches where the worshiper never kneels, seldom stands, and is in most respects indistinguishable from an auditor at a lecture or concert? In theology, how many Methodists in Chicago ever follow the custom of the original Wesleyans and testify publicly to their having been born again into the kingdom of God? Yet if Methodism stood for anything it stood for just that.

One can hardly convict Mr. Munhall, therefore, of crying wolf in the absence of the object of his cry. The wolf is in full view. What would Mr. Munhall think, however, if the wolf should turn out to be really a sheep, a sheep in wolf's clothing? Is it not possible that the Methodist Church is doing more good at the present time in its present condition than it could possibly do, if it had retained all its primitive characteristics? Might not its changes in manners, in worship, and in theology turn out to be useful and necessary developments? The Methodists began with being eclectic, almost esoteric. They were a body of "saved," "converted" people. They went out from among ordinary Christians into a smaller circle of picked comrades. Now one may become a Methodist by hereditary prejudice or simply through a desire to have some kind of religious affiliation. The idea of the thing is different.

The Methodist Church is beginning to take children in much as the Episcopal Church takes them in, not because they are converted but because they ought to have steady, religious training, and because unless they are taken into the church they will be without that training and will suffer in their religious nature. In other words, church membership ceases to be a public confession of godliness and comes to mean only that the person concerned has a connection, which it is hoped will be for his good, with a religious society. It is evident that this means a larger membership and, in a way, a larger influence. If the Methodist body had remained what John Wesley originally thought it would, a kind of supplement to the national church, it might have continued to be a rigidly defined and limited group of devout, converted, testifying men and women. When it set up as a church on its own account it naturally got into a new position, and has had to adapt itself to people at large rather than to a particular few. The Methodists now are not a coterie. They are simply what Matthew Arnold would call "human beings organized together for the cultivation of the religious life."—Editorial in the Chicago Tribune, August 24, 1902.

It's As Easy.

It's as easy to smile
And win hearts by your wile,
As to darken the world by a frown;
It's as easy to greet
Those with cheer whom you meet,
As to pass them forlorn and cast down.

It's as easy to say
Gentle words on your way,
As to always be sullen and growl;
It's as easy to speak
To the lowly and meek,
As to give them a glare or a scowl.

It's as easy to press
In a genial caress,
Any hand as to brush it aside.
It's as easy to grasp
Grouping souls in your clasp,
As to let them drift on with the tide.

It's as easy to brighten
Darkened lives by your light,
As to wound 'till the hot teardrops start;
It's as easy to do
All the good within you,
As to torture the ill in your heart.

Success.

'Tis the coward who quits to misfortune,
'Tis the knave who changes each day,
'Tis the fool who wins half the battle,
Then throws all his chances away.
There is little in life but labor,
And to-morrow may find that a dream;
Success is the bride of Endeavor,
And luck—but a meteor's gleam.
The time to succeed is when others,
Discouraged, show traces of tire;
The battle is fought in the homestretch—
And won—'twixt the flag and the wire!

A "New Song."

Praise ye the Lord! "I've found
A land that doth abound
With fruit as sweet as manna;"
The more I eat, I find,
The more I am inclined
To shout and sing Hosanna
My heart is all aflame
With love; I bless the name
Of Christ, my Lord and Savior.
His praises I would sing,
Adore him as my king,
Whose throne endureth ever.

Oh, wondrous is the love,
That brought down from above,
A full and free salvation:
Oh, wonderful the name,
Whose glories we proclaim
To every tribe and nation.
Oh, wonderful the grace
That seeks a fallen race
With words of peace and favor:
And wonderful the light
That makes my pathway bright,
And guides me to my Savior.

Oh, how I love to sing
The praises of my king,
Who lives and reigns in Zion;
I love his precious word,
The sweetest ever heard,
A word we can rely on.
His will shall be my joy,
His work my pow'rs employ;
His smile, my fears doth banish;
His grace supplies each need,—
So gently doth he lead,
All doubts, dark shadows, vanish.

Oh! precious thought to me,
That even I may be
A saint by heaven's calling;

And would I make it sure,
And to the end endure,—
No faltering or falling,—
My feet must never stray
Beyond the narrow way
My Savior walked before me;
I would shelter by his side,
Whatever may betide
And keep his banner o'er me.

Then let them mock who may,
I choose the narrow way,
The way that leads to glory;
Let those deride who will,
My faith grows stronger still,
And sweeter still the story.
And oh! that all might see,
And taste, and know with me,
How good the Lord and gracious;
That all might hear his voice,
And make his will their choice,
And prove his love so precious.

From henceforth I rejoice
That I have heard his voice,
And knew it from a stranger's;
And I will follow on,
Until the goal is won,
Love-sheltered from all dangers.
The open door I see,
The place prepared for me,
Though all unworth the favor;
Where, on joys I now but taste
My soul shall freely feast,
With Christ, my king, for ever.

On The Other Side.

We go our ways in life too much alone,
We hold ourselves too far from all our kind;
Too often we are dead to sigh and moan,
Too often to the weak and helpless blind,
Too often where distress and want abide,
We turn and pass upon the other side.

The other side is trodden smooth and worn
By footsteps passing idly all the day,
Where lie the bruised ones that faint and mourn,
Is seldom more than an untrodden way.
Our selfish hearts are for our feet the guide—
They lead us by upon the other side.

It should be ours the oil and wine to pour
Into the bleeding wounds of stricken ones,
To take the smitten and the sick and sore,
And bear them where a stream of blessing runs,
Instead we look about—the way is wide,—
And so we pass upon the other side.

O friends and brothers, gliding down the years,
Humanity is calling each and all
In tender accents, born of grief and tears!
I pray you, listen to the thrilling call!
You can not, in your cold and selfish pride,
Pass guiltlessly upon the other side.

—The Deaf Hawkeye.

Selections.

STARVED SOULS.

Starved souls! What a long array of earth's children this thought brings up.

How many, oh! how many lives are never "lived," but dragged out, or endured. Some from lack of early advantages; some because heavy duties, common drudgeries, demand their time, while every fiber in their beings is strung for finer things.

Some seem to feel the fires of genius burning within.

At times these slumbering embers glow with a heat that is almost mind-consuming; and still the earthen body holds the yearning soul so tight that the flames may not break through.

Some have been touched by poetic genius, some with that of music; but the poet-soul can not express itself except in tame prose, and the musical spirit must lie dormant.

What shall we say of those who have talent and could use it, if the grosser things of life did not claim their minds and strength? What an agony of soul some of these endure! The plodding one, who has never had a thought or wish for anything beyond this work, can never realize what agony, what sorrow, uninterrupted hard working, struggling for a bare existence, brings to the man or woman, who has an artist's soul! Whose love for everything of beauty is deep, whose every heart-chord vibrates to the sound of fine music; to the burning of sunset's fire; to every hue, and every trembling light and shade, that they perceive in nature's fairest scenes; to the leaping of ocean waves; to everything that speaks to the artistic sense!

And sorrowful again is the one who yearns for music and its cathedral tones, who must wait for heaven and its raptures of sound to gratify the yearning! When they would delight in cultivating the art of music; when they long, with a deep longing, for a concord of sweet sounds, and must listen to the clanking of life's coarsest machinery; when they must ever let ear and voice go untrained, must be denied the exquisite bound of the heart, the deep soul-thrilling, as the well-trained fingers press the yielding keys of the symphathetic piano, or the grand, swelling, deep toned organ, and bring forth sweet sounds that seem to come from and draw one near to heaven.

And still to be pitied, are those who long for knowledge; those to whom books are more than treasures of earth, almost more than those of the other world.

How starved is the soul that so longs to delve into books; to glean from the musty tome the secrets of past ages; to search for traces of ancient kingdoms, races, and arts; to explore the wily paths of scientific research; to walk all ways that the field of books points out! And yet they must forego it all; must live on, leaving all they pine for, and devote their lives to others' work.

It seems unfair; it is sad, but the stern fact remains that we must do what is at hand. Duty first, always.

Is there no compensation? Not here.

But let us hope that, in a future existence, there may come to them what they have missed here.—Imogene E. Johnson, in Woman's Work.

Prayer Union.

Mrs. A. Mellon again asks an interest in the prayers of the Prayer Union and of all God's children who may read this, that if it be God's will Lura Corl may be entirely healed of her affliction, which is nervous trouble. She has not had any trouble since she wrote before until lately, and then not so bad as she had been before. She is a nice, bright girl, and is teaching school and greatly desires to be healed.

What hear the ears that death has sealed?
What undreamed beauty passing show
Requites the loss of all we know?"

Text-Books for Sunday-Schools.

Foreword.—It is conceded that all the argument is not on our side. It is insisted that the question has two sides. We believe that our side has the most and best argument. If we show that it has, the probability is that we are right. If we fail to show that we have the best evidence on our side, we expect the verdict to be in accordance with the evidence. Whichever way the verdict goes, we believe it is right that the majority should rule, and we shall be found, as in the past, working with the majority.

The Gospel Unchangeable.—We all believe that the restored gospel is identical with the gospel in the days of Adam, Enoch, Noah, Moses, and Christ. Nothing can be put to it, and nothing can be taken from it—"the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," "one eternal round."

Standard Books Unchangeable.—We do not expect any change in the books recognized as our standard books, except as the Lord may add revelations from time to time. What we now have will always remain the same, and nothing in the future must conflict with them.

Each Scripture Must Contain the Same Truth Always.—There is no more truth in the Sermon on the Mount to-day than when it was spoken by the Master, and no less. Different persons may see different truths, or different degrees of the truth; and the same person may see differently at different times and under different conditions and circumstances; but so far as being an expression of truth is concerned, it is unchangeable.

Nature Unchangeable.—The great book of objective truth—God's handiwork in nature—is permanent. The oak which suspended the king's ungrateful son in mid-air was no different from the oak of our present forest, so far as we know. Whatever changes may have been thought to have transpired in these creations are the result of the influence of man, the changeable being.

Permanency of Lessons.—Will we not be more in harmony with God's way of working, when we reach a permanent and definite course of lessons. What advantage is there in editing and reediting again and again lessons upon the same portion of God's eternal plan? We do not see why the lessons prepared under the spirit of revelation should need revising to any considerable extent in order to be applicable two or three years hence. Any discoveries of fact or science could be utilized by means of a Sunday-school column or periodical.

Definite Course.—Lessons should be prepared with a view to carrying out a definite course. In a gospel education, as in a secular one, system and definiteness facilitate thoroughness and effectiveness. There should be an objective point in view all the time and the entire course should bend to that point. "To know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent," is life eternal. This comprehends the entire curriculum. To know them in history, experience, and prophecy—past, present, and future; to know them in plan, purpose, and practice; this is the objective point. To this all our efforts should tend, all our energies should be directed. Then "we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

A Beginning Point.—Such a course and plan provides a place where beginners can "begin." For a new school, or class, to begin in the middle of a series, or consecutive course, whether it be consecutive in doctrine or history, places them at a very great disadvantage. For a whole school, consisting of classes of various grades of information, intelligence, and capacity, to start by all studying the same lessons, is like serving matured beefsteak to the infant, middle-aged, and the old alike, with the exception of its being dished up in a little different style. Why should not a gospel course have a place of beginning, where the "sincere milk of the word" could be administered to the beginners, and "apostasy and restoration" to those of mature minds? Why starve the infants with "strong meat," or surfeit the men and women with "milk"? to say nothing of the danger of mixing much of "husks" with both. "Husks," did we say? Yes, for in our efforts to "keep up with the times" there is danger of paying too much deference to commentators and D. Ds., even to a compromising of the word of God.

An Ending Point.—A definite course of study allows the completion of a definite amount of work. By this plan provision can be made for regular promotions from one grade to another, and for graduation upon finishing the course. Not that all shall have been learned, but that a definite and specific amount of work shall have been done. Of course, all who can do so should remain in the Sunday-school after passing through the grades, doing post-graduate work in specialization. A course that begins somewhere and ends somewhere, allowing all beginners to begin at the beginning; and makes the completing of a definite amount of work, and the reaching a specified end possible, has many advantages.

Advantage to New Schools.—Think of a new school being organized, and starting in with Hebrew history at the crossing of Jordan under Joshua, knowing nothing of previous history. What a disadvantage as compared with the privilege of starting at the beginning! The same may be said of other series of lessons both in the Old and the New Testaments.

Makes Grading Possible.—This plan makes grading possible and practicable, because it contemplates a number of series of lessons, prepared with a view to adaptation in the selection of subjects and in the method of treatment. It will never be necessary to drag the primaries through the mazes of Sinai versus the New Covenant, nor to cram the Roman letter and the book of Revelation into the undeveloped minds of the intermediates. All can have such as shall be "meet" for them.

Facilitates Promotion.—A specified amount of work done in the different grades of the various departments admits of regular promotions at stated periods. This in turn suggests promotion day, graduation day, etc., lending inspiration, enthusiasm, and encouragement to the work. By grading and regular promotions more thorough work is secured. This certainly goes without question.

Will Improve Teachers' Meetings.—Contrary to the opinion held and advocated by some, that the adoption of such a plan and the use of text-books will destroy the effectiveness of the teachers' meetings, or at least lessen it, it will have the opposite effect. Instead of the teachers resorting to a teachers' meeting to study the lesson, and the whole evening being devoted to that object, the time could be devoted to the consideration of methods, plans, discipline, etc., giving attention to only such points in the lessons as the teachers in their preparation of the lessons have found perplexing and upon which counsel and advice is desired. This would give opportunity to introduce normal work and the reading of good books on Sunday-school work, such as Trumbull's Teachers and Teaching, etc. The result will be more wide-awake teachers, more enthusiastic teachers' meetings, and a better interest generally.

Review Work More Thorough.—The benefits of the school review are greatly overestimated. The average review of the whole school by the average superintendent is a "fake." The superintendent who can review the whole school each Sunday upon the lesson of the day in ten minutes so as to pay for the time used is not the rule by any means. And if more time be taken it only makes matters worse. There are a few notable exceptions to the rule, of course; but these notable exceptions could give a general object lesson, or elucidate some thought from some of the lessons with equally as great success. Besides, a thorough class review conducted by the teacher who knows what points need emphasizing to each pupil is much more effective. Many so-called general reviews are not reviews, but only a rehearing by the superintendent.

Freshness Depends Upon Teachers.—The idea that freshness depends upon lessons newly edited is not true. It must be admitted that much more depends upon the teacher than upon the editor. With the same lesson and the same class one teacher will have the pupils all aglow with enthusiasm, while another will need to appeal to the superintendent to keep order while the lesson is being taught. No plan of lessons can control this feature, but a plan which admits of adaptation of lesson to pupil will do more than anything else to facilitate its accomplishment.

Missionaries and Transients.—Just two points are to be considered and both have for their foundation the convenience of the missionary and the transient. Let this question be answered: For whose benefit are the Sunday-schools primarily? If less convenient to these members but of more benefit to those for whom the Sunday-school work is intended, which principle should govern in the matter? Of course it will add a few small volumes the missionary would like to carry about with him. But it is supposed that the missionary is somewhat familiar with all the subjects likely to be treated; and if he is not, he can acquaint himself, as he may have opportunity, in a short time; so that he could intelligently participate in a discussion of any of them at any time or anywhere. What missionary is not sufficiently familiar with the leading characters and incidents of the scriptures, or with the principles and doctrines of the gospel, to join in an intelligent consideration of them? It is not likely the subjects treated in this course of study would be unlike those the missionary would investigate before his congregations in the world and in the branches of the church. Of course he would be at some disadvantage by not having the opportunity to carry with him all the books likely to be used. He is at a disadvantage, too, by not being able to carry a library of histories, biographies, encyclopedias, and works of science with him in his missionary work; and yet he makes his work a success. And so he will continue to be a successful help and a blessing to the Sunday-school in spite of this inconvenience.

The other matter of inconvenience is that all schools will not be studying the same subjects or scriptures on the same day, and thus he will not be prepared upon the lesson. This objection has been largely answered in the foregoing. Further, let us say that inasmuch as subjects are to be taught and not text-books nor authors, this objection is of smaller proportions than it at first appears to be. There need be no fear that any devoted missionary will cease to be useful in helping on the work because of such inconveniences. Their help has been appreciated in the past, and we would not think of dispensing with their valuable assistance, but it is not a matter of injustice to them if our work can be made more effective, nor is it an indication that we do not appreciate their help.

Allows for Advanced Work in Lesson Writing.—This plan admits of advanced work in lesson writing. Instead of repeatedly working over the same ground, we can direct our talent and means toward developing and cultivating new ground. Why should we not as a Sunday-school sometime make as the basis of our study the gospel as applied directly to the latter-day dispensation as revealed in the revelations to the church restored? To put off doing so is to permit this department to be one factor in delaying the culmination of those conditions which will make the coming of the Son of Man possible.

Mission of the Sunday-school.—What is the primary object of Sunday-school work? All answer at once, To teach the gospel. Is it to teach it more especially as applied in ancient days, or as a gospel restored in the latter days to prepare a people for the coming of the Savior? Certainly the latter. Then which is the better, to teach it in the light of ancient conditions and say to the child, It is just the same now; or to teach it in the light of present conditions, and then say and show that it was the same anciently? Certainly the more direct is the better way, and that is the latter. The missionary teaches the world that God is; not only was, but is now. Why should the greater part of our time and energies be devoted to a study of the gospel as it was rather than as it is now, as applied to human redemption? Suppose that some not of our faith do not attend our schools because of their not accepting the books of the "new covenant," shall we withhold from our own people that kind of instruction which alone can bring about the much desired conditions contemplated in Zion's redemption, or make such teaching round-about, incidental, and secondary, instead of direct and of first consideration, for fear of offending some not of our faith? Ah, no. Let us, rather, fear to offend "one of these little ones" by not providing that which will the most directly, effectually, and speedily fit them for celestial conditions. Let it be our daily effort and prayer, who have undertaken to cultivate the nursery of the church, not the world, to see that our work is to so cultivate as to produce stock fitted to dwell in a real Zion upon this earth peopled by real people, not in the dim and distant future, but now. Should the elder whose mission is to the world refrain from teaching those things which are distasteful to the unbeliever, because they will not attend his meetings, we should call him home. What should be our attitude, then, whose mission is to the church and not to the world? There is no justification for us to withhold that which would bring the best and most speedy results.

Shall We Let Well-enough Alone?—No, not if we can have better. Suppose it is only a dissatisfied minority that are stirring up this investigation (however, many of us feared from the expressed sentiment at convention last spring that if a vote had been called this proposition would have carried, and hence we favored postponement) it is the dissatisfied ones who inaugurate improvements always. It will hardly do for those who are opposing the text-book proposition to say that the majority are necessarily right and the minority wrong, for recollections of the International Texts proposition have not altogether faded from memory. Of course, we believe it is right that the majority should rule, and we believe further that if a thing be right, finally a respectable majority will favor it.

The Financial Side.—Even on this topic there may be some favorable points. Let a few figures be submitted. Suppose an individual enters school at three years of age and remains until he is sixteen, a period of thirteen years, five of which are in the primary, four in the intermediate, and four in the senior departments. Quarterlies for this time would cost \$1.88, or 14 $\frac{2}{3}$  cents a year average. This amount would pay for five text-books at an average price of 37 $\frac{3}{4}$  cents each. Take into consideration that just as many pupils could use a text-book as could use a Quarterly at the same time, and the further fact that a text-book can be passed from the older to the younger members of a family, which is not true of Quarterlies, and there is not much argument against the text-book as regards cost to the individual. Concerning furnishing revenue for the General Association we can not submit figures; but taking into account the fact that the cost of editorial work on the books has to be paid but once, and typesetting but once, a very small profit on each book would net us an amount sufficient for a safe working basis. Then, too, the cost of clerical work paid the Publishing House would be materially lessened because there would be no mailing lists to keep. We fail to see any danger from this point of view.

Let Us Not Be In Haste.—Though fully convinced of the superiority of this plan of a graded course of study and of text-books, we believe its introduction should be gradual and not radical—an evolution and not a revolution. If it be right, we can afford to wait until a respectable majority are in favor of it; and if wrong a respectable minority had better be disappointed. Let us pray for unity, and work for it—that unity born of an effort upon the part of all to come to the light.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, October 9.

Editors Herald: At last writing we were at Deer Lodge, Montana. We left there at half past two Wednesday morning, August 27, and arrived at Butte about half past five; the train being four hours behind time. Having missed train connection here, we soon found the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shroder, and Sr. Sund, No. 227 Colorado Street, where we received a welcome. The forenoon was spent in securing needed sleep and rest; and in the afternoon Sr. Sund showed us about the city. We met also with Bro. Atkinson of Lamoni. Butte is said to be the chief mining city in Montana, hence worth seeing.

The town is built on dry ground. No grassy lawns, trees, or flowers are to be seen, yet it is well built, and shows the accumulation of wealth and business activity and success. A number of smelters are conspicuous, and no doubt so long as the "lasting hills" continue to yield the coveted ores, Butte will continue a growing and a wealth-accumulating place. In the evening, in company with the above-named parties, except Bro. Atkinson, we visited the park, east of the town. Shade trees, flowers, and grasses were growing there. An attractive place and pleasure resort where all kinds are found—a kind of miniature "Coney Island." We took some time to study again the ways and tendency of the popular public hall and round dances, as there were some two hundred fifty or three hundred actively engaged on the floor, only to be confirmed in our former opinion that their tendencies are to evil.

The popular ballroom should be labeled "Fool's Paradise," and the round dance relegated with the roller-skate craze. The Methodist conference declared against the round dance, and the writer of this stands with the Methodist conference in its action. If round dances are to be indulged in, it should be with husbands and wives, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, or some near relative or near and known friend. The mother who gayly dresses her daughter for the round dances and public ballroom, to be placed in the arms of men indiscriminately, starts her on an easy toboggan to tophet. She may be strong-minded enough and sufficiently discerning to see danger in time, and avoid it; but the weaker and less discerning are in danger all the time. The ballroom is poor soil in which to grow Saints, or to bring out the best there is in people. Down with the popular ballroom and the round dance, and come out of Babylon and be happy!

Here in Utah where dancing and the public ball have been encouraged and indulged in by all who wished, for years, I have been credibly informed that the discerning ones see they have made a mistake. A leading representative recently admitted publicly that their young people were not up to the Gentile standard in the East, and it is a fact that the ballroom is a leading amusement here.

The 28th, at half past four, we left Butte and arrived next morning, about half past eight, at Ogden, Utah. Went to the home of Bro. Wells Chase, No. 1509 Washington Avenue. Here we found friends. Met Bro. A. M. Chase, a collaborer, who had been interesting the people on the streets with gospel lessons. Twenty-seven years ago I was in this city. Since then it has improved; is much larger and better built. The streets are paved and being paved, and the electric cars are running. The evening was spent with Sr. Ella Redfield, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Browning, of pleasant memory, now deceased, with whom I made my home when here before. She was then a young girl, now she has a good-sized family, the oldest girl being married, husband deceased.

At half-past ten o'clock next morning we were at Salt Lake City; called on Sr. Alice Wilson and mother, and soon after was kindly received at Bro. and Sr. Barrows' as our stopping place. Salt Lake City is much larger and better built. The citizens seem to be busy, and an air of thrift and prosperity is easily discerned. Sunday the 31st, I preached, morning and evening, in the Saints' chapel, assisted by Bro. L. Thorensen, branch president, and in the afternoon attended the Mormon meeting in the Tabernacle. It was their stake conference and Sunday-school gathering. A number of speeches were made, largely complimentary, and encouraging the Sunday-school work. The school had met in the forenoon. Then followed the sustaining of officers. Their president, Joseph F. Smith, was sustained as a prophet, seer, and revelator, by a show of hands. The same person was also sustained as trustee in trust of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in all the world. Then came the sustaining of the patriarch and twelve apostles of their organization as prophets, seers, and revelators. What struck the writer as exceedingly comical was that they keep on hand such a flock of seers, prophets, and revelators, and have nothing revealed, but what might be brought to light by any good pair of eyes or natural good sense. But this was explained by one of their members, a bright lady teacher, in this way. "What do you want revealed? If it is necessary to reveal anything it will be revealed." Fifty years have passed, however, without a line being revealed that is in sight, and it is as likely that fifty more will pass in oblivion with similar results; yet these men pose before their church, and the world as divinely inspired, and divinely sent and holding the keys of light and power. It has the appearance more of a game of bluff than serious work.

The 22d, I called alone on the patriarch, John Smith, and was pleasantly received by himself and wife. This was his birthday. He was seventy years of age. But why call on these men at all? Well, because they are representatives of the people here, and as such entitled to consideration and respect. Then it is a good thing to brush up against people sometimes to see what they are made of. Courtesy and respect should be shown to every one. "He that would have friends must show himself friendly." "The whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

With Bro. Swensen, on the 24th, we visited the Saints at Murray, administered to some who were ailing; made some acquaintances. Bro. Swensen returned home at evening and I was kindly cared for at Doctor Everitt's over night. Sunday morning, the 27th, I attended the Saints' Sunday-school and preached in the church at Ogden, and in the afternoon Sr. Nana Chase conveyed me by private conveyance to Plain City, ten miles out, where we held a meeting; attended the Sabbath-school of the Saints, and returned to Ogden in time for the evening services. The Saints at Plain City are very worthy; are trying to show their faith by their works; by keeping up their meetings and living the faith. Bro. A. M. Chase held forth at North Ogden in the evening speaking to a good-sized and attentive audience. During the week I met with the Saints in business meeting and aided Bro. A. M. Chase to complete the organization in Ogden, and put it in better working order, and returned to this city with the intention of attending some of the services of the semiannual conference of the Mormon church, which convened at the Tabernacle on the fourth instant. Thus we are trying to move along in this land of mixtures, dust and drought.

Editors Herald: There are some of us here quite alive yet, and still hoping that God will bless his work here. Some have been laboring a great many years and are not yet tired, although age is creeping on and we can not but notice their white hair which indicates that their labors will ere long come to a close. And we pray that many may be ready to take their places in rolling on this glorious work, for I realize that it is God's work.

Through surrounding conditions the work here is rather difficult at present, but we hope by divine guidance we shall be able to overcome every obstacle which tends to prevent the success of the work.

We have with us now Bro. Sheldon, who is doing his best to help the cause, and we desire that all may remember him and the work here in your prayers that men and women may hear and obey the unadulterated word of life. In this large city we have lots of professing Christians, but not nearly so many possessing the true knowledge of God and his ways. We hope that through the efforts that our sub-missionary in charge, Bro. Sheldon, is putting forth with the local ministry that many may be bold enough to come and stand for the truth, as I believe that if the prejudice could be removed and people would only listen to the truth many would be only too glad to obey. I long for the ultimate triumph of this work; and while I long for this it impresses upon me the necessity of living faithful to the covenant which was made in waters of baptism, and I realize that no Saint will ever be sorry for having lived a good, sober, and upright life. But if we become careless and do not do that which is right we shall not only be sorry but we shall come short of the blessings which we might have received. It seems to me that if all the Saints only realized what a powerful influence is wrought through their lives it would help them to keep themselves unspotted from the world.

I long for the time when the Saints will be gathered home to Zion, but I know that time will never come for me without I can abide the law and live right now. So to me the best way to hasten the gathering is to bring my life in harmony with the teaching of the law.

Now, Dear Saints, if we all would do this we would hasten the gathering time, and place ourselves in a condition where God's Holy Spirit could manifest itself through us more plainly to the world. Is this not worth striving for? Let us all take courage and stand firm and immovable and God will aid us.

SPRINGBURN, Scotland, October 1.

Editors Herald: After an experience of nearly five months in Scotland I desire to make a few statements in regard to our work here. As there are but few Saints in Scotland, and hall rent very high there is nothing left for the missionary but take the streets to present the angel's message. There is no trouble to get a crowd from fifty to three hundred, and while we can not see very much fruits of our labors as yet there is one comforting thought, we are preaching it as a witness. (Matthew 24: 14.) Of course we must sow before we reap. Bro. Rushton has been sowing for over two years in this country with a liberal hand, and the results of his able efforts with the help of the Lord are just being made manifest.

There have been four baptized recently, and one more to be baptized on the fourth of this month. And those who are coming in are a very fine class of people; not rich in this world's goods, but rich in faith, humbly desiring to know their duty to God and do what they can to spread the work. Shortly after arriving here and "viewing the landscape o'er," I saw that there were lots of chances to wear out shoe leather, so I made my wants known to some of my friends and Saints, and the result was I got a wheel. I thank them all for the kindness. The first time I tried to ride it, I was coming down a big hill, and I got what the Scotchman would call a "caupe." I cut my face a little, but it was nothing serious. Bro. Rushton and I took a run of sixty miles on our wheels up into Fifeshire. We went through Larbert, Fankirk, and crossed the Firth of Forth at Kincardine Ferry, and then rode for about ten miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth. It was a beautiful run, and then we went north up through Dunfirmline up to Kelty. Bro. and Sr. Pratt live there. They used to live in Boone, Iowa.

We held some meetings while there with good interest. Bro. Pratt is doing what he can to get the work before the people, in the way of distributing tracts and by fireside talks, and above all by his godly walk. We were treated with courtesy and kindness wherever we went. I expect to go back some time this month. While there Bro. Pratt took us up on the Hills of Benarty and from there we got a good view of Loch Leven. In the center of the loch is a little island, and on that island is built Loch Leven Castle, from where Mary, Queen of the Scots, made her escape in about the year 1560. She came around the foot of Benarty Hills and the English got after her, so she and her horse hid under an old bridge (it still stands to-day) while her enemies passed over the top. About fifty yards from the bridge is a spring from which she and her horse drank, so we stopped and sipped too. The Scotch take great delight in singing a song about the Hills of Benarty.

EAST ELKPORT, Iowa, October 13.

Editors Herald: I noticed in the HERALD for October 1 a letter from Sr. Warnock, of Farmington, Iowa, criticising an article written by me while in the Society Islands, or rather revised by me while there. I am glad to get the criticism, and thank Sr. Warnock for it. I could not take many books with me on that trip, and therefore was compelled to trust to my memory in many things. I have discovered other mistakes, both of my own as also typographical, and some quite serious ones, too. There may be others yet; so if any one has discovered them I would be pleased if any of the elders or others will send me such criticisms or corrections as they have noticed, as I intend to publish it in pamphlet form sometime and therefore desire to have it as nearly correct as possible. I will therefore be thankful for any correction or any criticism, or any additional light on any point. I will return the postage to any one thus sending me corrections, criticisms, or additional light. We are all interested in the further spread of knowledge concerning the latter-day work, and to help and instruct each other should be our aim. I am anxious for instruction and ready to receive criticism on the article "Who was Joseph Smith," recently appearing in the HERALD.

Very kindly,

J. W. PETERSON.

MEBOURNE, Victoria, Australia, September 11.

Editors Herald: Since last writing I have crossed the border into my native State; for though by adoption I am a "New South Welshman," or "cornstalk," I am by birth "a gumsucker" or "Victorian." I arrived in this city June 10, and have been busy ever since trying to get the angel's message before the people. We have opened a mission in Richmond, so that there are services held in two centers in Melbourne. Quite a number of the brethren and sisters of the Melbourne Branch have assisted in making our mission what it is. We succeeded in getting some strangers out to hear. As the weather is getting warm again, we anticipate beginning on the streets. We had to give up street preaching some time ago because of the extreme cold.

We have distributed thousands of hand-bills, tracts, and Gospel Standards within the last three months. Several of our sisters have done yeoman service in this respect. Every Saturday afternoon, a little "Amazon army" issues from the home of Bro. Mackie, armed with church literature, and with hearts loyal and true, make their ways in different directions, canvassing from house to house. They have much indifference, some snubs, and a little downright impudence to put up with; but if they keep going there is no doubt that they will accomplish much good. We feel proud of this little band, and only wish there were more like them in the church. What makes the work more difficult, is that there are several Utah elders canvassing the same ground, and the people view us with suspicion because of them. One of them told me recently that they had thirty-four missionaries in Australia, and fifty in New Zealand. I wish we had as many of our elders working in this field as they have. Our work is much stronger here than theirs, and we are dreadfully short-handed. Just fancy six men with three million square miles of territory to work. We have nearly a thousand Saints here, but we have not done much labor far away from the coast. Then we have not taken in one fifth of the coast line; and the part we have gone over has only been imperfectly worked. We need a strong force of earnest, energetic missionaries here and I believe that this would be one of the best fields in the world.

Bro. Wight is now busy with a debate on the subject, "Is man wholly mortal?" For some time I have been negotiating for a debate with a "Disciple." He seems to be very wary, and is trying a "bluff game." He debated with Bro. Mackie a few months ago, and the public verdict was in favor of our man, but now he "wants to meet an apostle," and does not consider the writer a "foeman worthy of his steel." Bro. Mackie says it would be a real shame to let an apostle meet him, for that would be like "firing off a cannon at a canary."

Yours in the fight,

WALTER J. HAWORTH.

IRONTON, Ohio, October 9.

Editors Herald: Bro. S. J. Jeffers and I are at this place and have been since the 3d inst. A few are interested. We have had two of the Utah elders in attendance at four of our meetings and discussed some of our differences in a very friendly manner. Both of them are young missionaries and I believe sincere and honest in their belief, but very much in error in their priesthood and in their belief. They maintained the belief that polygamy is a righteous principle, and that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Covenants teaches the doctrine, but that it is not now practiced in the church because they are required to be "obedient to laws of the land" which forbid it. They leave to-day.

We expect to baptize some here before we leave. I will go to Meigs County next week, and try to effect a new opening there, after which will go to Highland County with Bro. Jeffers.

J. L. GOODRICH.

BYERS, Ohio.

RAYMOND, Idaho, October 8.

Editors Herald: Since I last wrote you, I have been busily engaged in the various duties that fall to the lot of a missionary, and although I have not preached as many sermons as some who are laboring in other missions, on account of conditions being different, yet I have tried to labor wisely, and as well as I could, deeming it just as necessary to visit and instruct the scattered Saints in their homes where public preaching could not be done, as it was to try to convert those not of the household of faith, or to preach to Saints in organized branches. To this end I visited Cokeville, Wyoming; also Dingle, Montpelier, Soda Springs, Pocatello, Blackfoot, Idaho Falls, Iona, Ammon, and the Teton Basin in Idaho, trying to strengthen and encourage the Saints in their scattered condition, or to preach the gospel to both saint and sinner.

I found one brother who had been away from the church and church privileges for about twenty years, and although he had to some extent drifted away from the church into some of the evil practices of the world, yet he had not lost all his first love for the true faith, but still desired to do the will of God. And before I left him he expressed a determination to live nearer to God, and he proved his sincerity by assisting me financially, also gave me some money for Graceland College, and renewed his subscription to the HERALD. Another brother had drifted away from the church and had united with the Utah church through the influence of relatives, and because of being isolated from the true church. After I had talked with him for a while he told me he still believed with us, and desired to be a member of the Reorganized Church. I told him that he not having been a member of any branch, his name was still on the church record, and I considered him still a member of the church. He was promised to learn this, and promised me that he would try to live a faithful, consistent Christian life, and would never deny the faith.

I also found a sister who had been isolated from church privileges so long that she finally united with another church; but after I had talked with her for a while, and knowing that she was one of our scattered members (having been baptized in unorganized territory, and never having united with any branch of the church) I told her that her name was still on the general church record, and that I still regarded her as a member of the Reorganized Church. To this she replied, "Bro. Layland, I want my name to remain there, too," and before I left she asked me to bless her baby, which I did.

I mention these cases to show the necessity for a diligent search being made by the missionaries for isolated members of the church, and that we ought to devote a portion of our time to the instruction of those who may have become careless or indifferent to the cause of Christ, through being isolated from church privileges, even if we do have to spend considerable time in private conversation instead of being in some other part of the mission preaching to the public. I am often reminded of the parable of the lost sheep mentioned by our Savior, and of the Good Shepherd leaving the ninety and nine sheep safe in the fold, while he went upon the mountains and in the desert to search for the lost sheep, and when he had found it took it safely to the fold. And I believe that all we who have been appointed as shepherds unto Christ's sheep should be very careful lest any of his sheep should stray away from the fold (the church) and be lost through neglect on our part to search carefully until we find the sheep that has strayed from the fold and lead it gently back to the fold.

On the 13th and 14th of September I attended the Idaho District conference which convened with the Cedrine Branch in the Teton Basin in Fremont County, Idaho. It was a good conference, and although not largely attended, yet it has never been my lot to meet with more kind-hearted and hospitable Saints than those whom I met in the Teton Basin. May our heavenly Father bless them for their kindness unto me while I sojourned with them.

It was thought best by my colaborers, Brn. S. D. and J. H. Condit, that I should remain in the basin for a short time to assist in settling a little trouble that had arisen in the Cedrine Branch, and to do what I could to instruct in the ways to eternal life. The trouble was easily adjusted, for all parties concerned were willing to do what was right. This is as it should be in every branch of the church, and God will bless those faithful Saints who are willing to obey his law and submit to the will of the majority in the church, and try to do all in their power to assist in carrying on this great work of redemption.

I only remained in the basin about two weeks, and then came down into the Snake River Valley (on my way to Wyoming, which is a part of my field of labor) where I baptized the two youngest sons of Bro. and Sr. Lars D. Larsen, who live in the vicinity of Blackfoot, Idaho. Came home on the 4th of October; will remain here until after the 12th inst. to look after some branch business, and then I expect to labor in Wyoming for a while. The outlook in this part of the Rocky Mountain mission is encouraging.

A. J. LAYLAND.

GARRETSVILLE, Ohio, October 10.

Editors Herald: Though I have been long silent I have not forgotten the cause, or those of the dear Saints with whom I had the pleasure of personal acquaintance in the years that are past. My prayers are for all of God's people, that his choicest blessings may ever be with them. It is my greatest regret that my temporal circumstances are such that I have not been able to do anything in an official capacity, since receiving recognition by the First Presidency, yet I have tried to do what I could in a quiet way, by conversation and bearing testimony to the verity of the angel's message, as given to man in these last days through the latter-day seer, Joseph Smith.

I will be glad to cooperate with any of the missionary force who may feel called upon to come this way, but have not felt that it was wise to attempt to make appointments for any one without knowing who, and when they would come. Further, my wife being an invalid, and therefore unable to entertain any one who might come, it would be necessary to trust in God to provide for the temporal wants of his servants who come to this place on the Lord's business.

I hope the time may soon come when the gospel trump may be sounded in this place, and that it may be received with joy and gladness.

ROBERT FULLER.

ENYART, Missouri, October 15.

Editors Herald: Tent-meeting in this place and for this year was brought to a close unexpectedly to us by a heavy rain Saturday evening which raised the west fork of Grand River, making it impracticable for us to continue longer. We raised our tent on the banks of this river September 20; and in the twenty days our tent was in this place it rained and raised the river till it overflowed its banks seven times. We managed to get in twelve discourses in the time. While the elements were against us, the Lord was with us and we feel our effort was not in vain.

This place seems to be quite a stronghold for our Sabbatarian friends; and when Bro. D. C. White was here about a year ago they thought he was trying to take their holy Sabbath day away from them and it raised no small stir among them; they threatened him with their best man, but they never come together and the Sabbath question was not settled with them when I got there. It being a year later they had got quieted down. I found them real friendly and disposed to want to learn more about our belief; they thought it was such a pity that people who had such good doctrine would not keep the Sabbath. They have taken me into their homes and entertained me royally. I told some of them they wanted to sleep too long to suit me—till the resurrection—and we differed about that some.

Since the middle of August I have been alone with the tent, and some of the time I had all I could handle. Near McFall, the last place before coming here, there were some who seemed determined to break up our meetings, but the good people stood guard on the outside while I dispensed the word to those on the inside. The trouble-makers succeeded in cutting some of the ropes and chairs, and treated us to a shower of eggs. The last night some in my audience were struck by eggs, but the preacher escaped unhurt. The citizens assured me nothing would be left undone that could be done to bring the offenders to justice. I have learned since leaving there that a number of names have been sent to the grand jury with a view to ascertaining who the guilty parties are. I baptized two and left a score or more interested and a number very near the kingdom. Seventeen sermons were preached during my stay in that place. I made my home with those outside of the church, but have never been treated better by those in the church. May the good Lord bless those who so kindly administered to our wants and needs.

Our first place to raise the tent was at Sheridan. Bro. Joseph Vaughn and the writer went there on June 20. We were joined in a few days by Bro. J. S. Snively. We had scarcely got started in our work there when Elder J. D. McClure, of Albany, appeared in priestly attire to "show the cloven foot of Mormonism" as he called it; invited us into the Christian church to preach, subject given, "The identity of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The writer occupied with fair liberty to a large audience. When we were through Elder McClure stated to the audience that he was disappointed. He had expected me to make use of our inspired books to identify our church, and I had not done as he thought I should, therefore he was going to expose our so-called inspired books. We were afraid to bring them before the public, we kept them back till after we got the people into the church and then we would teach them the mysteries of Mormonism from our inspired books. He announced publicly his intentions and when he would commence his lectures. We told the people we were against entering into an agreement to come before an intelligent people to wrangle over that on which we differed, and would not be guilty of such a thing unless we were forced into something by way of defense; stated our willingness to discuss our differences in an honorable way, sign propositions that were fair to both, and cover the whole ground in dispute between us. He would not sign propositions we read to them, but was going to expose what he called "Mormonism," and commenced his lectures about a week later. Bro. Snively and the writer stayed to see what would be done by McClure and what could be done by us as matters developed; his pretense to fairness—as he thought to manifest in inviting us to preach to his congregation and very courteous treatment in introducing me as the speaker—proved to be later the basest kind of hypocrisy, and the fair-minded people were made to see it. I was on to his tricks, having had to deal with him last winter, and was prepared for the worst he had for us. Bro. Snively and I exposed him—where he did not expose himself—so completely all could see his unfairness and misrepresentations, that I heard before I left Sheridan that there were not more than three men in the town who would stand by him. If the Saints have never heard McClure tell how mean they are, had they been present at these lectures they might have concluded they were meaner than they had thought for. As far as I am concerned, J. D. McClure is welcome to all the glory he gets or ever will get for such work.

We left McFall with an invitation to come back. One man expressed himself as being convinced we had the truth, and thought he would obey, after stating he was very prejudiced when we first came there. Ray was the next place we took the tent. There we lost one of our associate laborers, Joseph Vaughn, which we regretted very much, as our laborers were few. He was called to another field. Nothing more of interest occurred while we were there unless, as Bro. Snively said to one who seemed to regret our meetings had not been better attended, we were scaring the goats terribly, if we did not catch the sheep.

From Ray we went to Rosendale; and there we saw the prediction of Bro. Snively more completely fulfilled than at Ray, one old man putting in all his time warning his flock against the delusion, as he thought; but he was not very successful, they were not all goats; quite a few attended our meetings first and last. From the interest manifested by some while we were there, and from the tone of a letter recently published in the paper from that place, the call for the sheep may not be in vain.

From Rosendale we went to Barnard to our reunion. Our labor at that place has once been reported through the HERALD, so we pass that by. At the close of the reunion we were handed propositions by Elder Horace Hinds, of the Church of Christ, for discussion, forwarded from Thompson, Nebraska, by one Elder Denton Collins. We have arranged with Elder Collins for a debate to commence November 10, in the building of the Church of Christ at Barnard, Missouri. Two propositions of six sessions each will be discussed. Each will affirm the church he represents to be in complete harmony with the New Testament teachings in origin, organization, faith, doctrine, and practice.

I think I have put in the closest time since coming to this district, to do the least preaching, since I have been in the ministry; if my work so far is to be measured by the number of sermons preached it will not count up very fast. I console myself in the thought I have done the best I could under the circumstances. My association thus far with the Saints in Nodaway District, I am pleased to say, has been very congenial indeed, and I trust it may continue to be such throughout the conference year. I have been pleased to meet so many good and true-hearted Saints, who, I believe, are willing to bear their part of the burden. They have assisted the missionary in many ways necessary to his comfort and the spread of the gospel. May the Lord bless them for their goodness. Will start for conference in a day or two in Holt County.

J. D. STEAD.

Garfield, Oregon, October 9.

Editors Herald: My husband and I are the only Saints in this county so far as I know, but there are quite a number interested around Garfield. Bro. Crumley was here last spring and baptized myself and daughter, and we look for him again this fall.

There was quite a serious fire burned over this part of the country a month ago; but the Lord wonderfully preserved us and our neighbors. In some cases the fire burned within a foot or two of the buildings and went out.

Our settlement lost nothing of any great value except our schoolhouse where Bro. Crumley preached when here, and one barn and some hay and grain. We are very thankful for our heavenly Father's loving care and tender mercies over us.

We loan our HERALDS and Ensigns to every one we can get to take them. I gave a bunch of Ensigns to an Indian a few weeks ago. I love the church papers very much. I get so much from them, I would not like to be without them.

Your sister,

MRS. ALMA L. COOP.

Conference Minutes.

Northern California.—Semiannual conference convened in Saints' chapel, Oakland, California, October 4. Called to order by President A. B. Phillips. Organization effected by electing the following officers: A. B. Phillips, president; R. Etzenhouser, assistant president; E. S. Chase, secretary; Chas. Day, janitor. President A. B. Phillips reported the work "onward" in many portions of the district, while in other places there is a necessity for faithful overseers to be over the flocks; this condition obtaining from a lack of available material to supply the want. Treasurer C. A. Parkin reported balance from last report $1.25; expended for tent work $4.75; balance due him for cash advanced $3.50. Tract agent reported balance due agent as per last report $3.61; receipts $4.05; balance to credit of fund 44 cents. Branches reporting: San Francisco 211, gained 10; Oakland 165, gained 6; Sacramento 218, gained 11; Stockton 73; Irvington 30. Branches not reporting: Santa Rosa, Lower Lake, Humboldt, Mountain Home, and Alma. Conference will convene at Santa Rosa the second Saturday in March, 1903.

Southern Nebraska.—Met with the Blue River Branch at Wilber, Nebraska, September 14 and 15, J. W. Waldsmith, district president, presiding. Sunday, the 14th, was occupied with preaching and testimony meetings. Elders Ed Robertson and Mark H. Forscutt were the speakers, and Brn. Lippincott and W. M. Self presided over the social service. A Mr. Wm. Grub was baptized and confirmed, and his child was blessed, the Spirit bearing witness to his acceptance. The secretary being absent, assistant secretary, J. S. Meyers, was chosen secretary of the conference. The following-named persons reported personally, and some others in writing. High Priests J. W. Waldsmith, and Mark H. Forscutt. Seventies Wm. H. Self and C. H. Porter. Elders Lippincott, Savage, Robertson, Broliar, and Baker. Priests R. White and J. S. Meyer. The officers of the district were all sustained, also those appointed by the Bishop and Historian of the church. The Bishop's agent's report was read, audited, and approved. A kind spirit was manifested throughout the conference, the preaching was of the ordinary kind and grade, the fellowship meeting was one of joy and gladness, free from any undue excitement, and all went home seemingly feeling better for what the dear Lord had done for them.

New York.—The semiannual conference of the New York District, convened September 13 and 14 in the Saints' hall, 199 Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, New York. District president, Jos. Squire, chosen to preside, with Elders W. W. Blanchard and

Wm. E. La Rue associates; Samuel Guilfooy secretary; Sr. Violet Squire organist; Elder H. J. Davison chorister; Frank N. Lester usher. Statistical reports: Brooklyn Branch, number last report 134, present number 131; Broad River Branch, number last report 46, present number 49. Ministerial reports: Elders Jos. Squire, A. E. Stone, W. W. Blanchard, H. J. Davison, H. H. Robinson, Geo. Potts, J. H. Newstead, W. T. Rush-ton; Priests James Cocks, I. W. Burgett, Samuel Guilfooy. Elder W. E. La Rue also reported concerning the work in the Philadelphia District. The financial reports were referred to an auditing committee consisting of A. E. Stone, H. J. Davison, and H. H. Robinson. District secretary's report: Collections, etc., last conference $10.01; expenditures $5.42; on hand $4.59. Bishop's agent reported on hand last conference $20.03; received since last conference $186.85; paid out since last conference $305.00; due agent $98.12. Tent committee received since last conference $26.71; paid since last conference $28.18; due committee $1.47. The district officers were continued in office for ensuing six months. Next district conference will be held in Brooklyn, New York, at call of district presidents. Preaching by H. J. Davison, W. E. La Rue, and W. W. Blanchard.

Mobile.—Convened September 12, at Three Rivers, Mississippi. Meeting was opened with song and prayer; minutes of last convention were read and approved. Three Rivers and Theodore schools reported. Three Rivers reported present number 58; Theodore, present number 31. Present officers of district were sustained for three months ending December, 1902. I. N. Roberts made a short talk concerning the Sunday-school work and the good spirit was present. A short convention or entertainment was carried on in charge of I. N. Roberts. At the close of the convention G. W. Sherman congratulated the children on their recitations. Adjourned to meet Friday night before the next conference.

Convention Minutes.

Little Sioux.—Convened at Moorhead, Iowa, October 3, at 2.30 p. m., with Sidney Pitt, assistant superintendent, in charge, Annie Stuart secretary. From the schools reporting we have an enrollment of 707. Quite an interesting discussion on "text-books" was had showing a general interest for the advancement of the work. The Lord was with us, by his Spirit, and we feel the convention was one of profit to all. Adjourned to meet at Little Sioux, Iowa, February 6, 1903.

The November number of the Autumn Leaves is filled with interesting articles. Cecily Tinsley leads with an account of a trip to the Yellowstone National Park. The article is accompanied by an excellent picture of one of the great geysers. C. M. Mills writes a very interesting scientific article concerning the sun, reviewing the "Nebular Hypothesis" touching the manner in which the solar system came into existence. The work of John Alexander Dowie is considered from the standpoint of his own teaching. Macy Campbell contributes an account of a unique adventure in the Oregon mountains. Frederick M. Smith writes of a visit to old Fort Niagara, the scene of many stirring events; this is an interesting article, illustrated with some nice half-tones. A short sketch of the Pilgrim Fathers and the origin of Thanksgiving Day is also illustrated with pictures of the Plymouth Rock and the embarking of the Mayflower. Alexander H. Smith begins a very interesting series of articles along reminiscent lines, telling of his trip to the South Sea Islands and to Australia.

Rallying Day.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AND RELIGIO SOCIETIES.

The Trustees of Graceland College are determined to make the work of the institution such that it may be a credit to the church. To be a credit to the church means to be a credit to each of us as individual members of the church. Something, therefore, depends upon each of us. As individuals we are each called upon to do his part or else the credit will be ours unworthily. Do any of us wish to share in that which we have not earned? Surely, no.

Effort is being made to put the college work upon a stronger basis this year than ever before in an educational sense. To do this an additional outlay in salary has been necessary. It is no exaggeration to say that the school is qualified to do all that is promised in the catalogue, having a competent corps of instructors.

The Sunday-school and Religio Associations, representing as they do, the work of the young people more especially, are most directly interested in the success of the college, because it is an institution intended to assist in the development of the young and fitting them for success in life. The presiding officers of these associations, therefore, representing the welfare of the young people, feel justified in making the following appeal:

Thanksgiving Day this year is set apart as GRACELAND RALLYING DAY. Every Sunday-school and Religio society is requested to make an effort upon that day by having an entertainment, supper, box-social, donation party, or other legitimate undertaking, and apply the proceeds to the running expenses of the college.

A circular letter has been sent out to all these organizations through their officers, such letter having a blank "remittance sheet" attached, requesting them to join in this commendable effort.

Now, dear Sunday-school workers and Religians, we have it in our power to relieve this embarrassment in educational work. Shall we not do it? The debt not being all paid yet makes it more difficult to raise running expenses.

Let every district and local officer of these organizations, and every member, unite with a willing hand and come to the help of the trustees of our college and make its work a splendid success.

In the work,

J. A. GUNSOLLEY.

Conference Notices.

Conference of Northwestern Kansas District will convene at Baker Schoolhouse, four miles east of Osborne, November 15 and 16. All reports must be sent to E. M. Landers, Concordia, Kansas, not later than two weeks before date.

Convention Notices.

The Massachusetts District Sunday-school Association will convene in the Saints' church, Fall River, Massachusetts, November 8 and 9, 1902. Business session, 2.30 p. m., November 8. Please forward reports and credentials to secretary ten days in advance of convention. Ora Holmes Whipple, Diamond Hill, Rhode Island.

Notices.

All presidents and clerks of branches in the Northern California District are hereby notified that the following resolutions were sustained by the late district conference held in Oakland, October 4 and 5. Resolved, That the delegate system of representation be reaffirmed and hereafter that system be the rule of the district when in conference assembled. Resolved, That all the branches in the district be instructed to establish a fund for the maintenance of all tents operated in the district.

Married.

GARDNER—SMITH.—At the Latter Day Saints' church, St. Joseph, Missouri, August 27, 1902, Bro. John Gardner to Sr. Pearl J. Smith, Elder Heman C. Smith officiating. The bride is a daughter of Elder H. O. Smith of the Southwestern Mission.

Died.

ANDERSON.—Jens Edward, son of Mr. Jens and Sr. Edith E. Anderson was born September 30, and died at their home, 1913 Paul Street, Omaha, Nebraska. Funeral services were conducted at the home on the 10th by Elder C. E. Butterworth. The remains were laid to rest in Forest Lawn Cemetery to await the call of Jesus.

MORGAN.—David Lewis, infant son of Bro. John L. and Sr. Ann Ellen Morgan, of Cleveland, Iowa, was born March 2, 1901; blessed March 24, 1901, by W. E. Williams and E. B. Morgan; died September 16, of appendicitis, aged one year, six months. Funeral sermon preached at Saints' church by W. E. Williams, assisted by John Jarvis; interment at Fry Hill Cemetery.

WIGHT.—At Sweetwater, Texas, October 6, 1902, Sister Sophia (Layland) Wight, wife of Elder L. L. Wight. She was born in Liverpool, England, January 16, 1836. Emigrated to America with her parents when about six years old. Her father died in St. Louis, Missouri, while en route to Nauvoo, Illinois. At the time of the western exodus the family accompanied Bishop George Miller to Nebraska, and thence to Texas. Her mother and brother dying in Texas, herself and two sisters lived in the family of Lyman Wight, and on the 6th of September, 1856, she was married to his son, Levi L., whose faithful companion she was until her death. She united with the church in her childhood, and renewed her covenant January 28, 1884, at Medina City, Texas, being baptized by her nephew, Heman C. Smith.

She was the mother of six children and twenty grandchildren. Her life was consecrated to the service of God, and she died loved and respected by all who knew her, leaving an aged husband, five children, eighteen grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends who sincerely loved her. Funeral services at the grave conducted by Reverend W. H. Harris, of the Methodist Church, and Reverend W. R. Hammock, of the Presbyterian Church.

HARTSHORN.—Anna C. Hartshorn was born May 11, 1853, at Davenport, Iowa; was united in marriage to Horatio A. Hartshorn in 1878. She became a member of the Reorganized Church by baptism, February 11, 1893. On October 15 she passed from this life leaving a husband and seven children to mourn her loss. She was a woman of sterling integrity, possessing a loving disposition that won her many warm friends who mourn with the family by reason of her departure. The funeral was held from the Saints' chapel in Davis City, Elder F. B. Blair being in charge.

PRICE.—Sr. Ann Price, wife of the late Bro. Philip Price, died at Maerdy, South Wales, August 15, 1902, aged 78 years, from a paralytic stroke. She was one of the first members of the church in Wales. During an explosion in a coal mine at Maerdy, when over a hundred lives were lost, she received the consoling promise by the Spirit that her husband would arrive home in safety. The funeral was in charge of Elder Wm. Lewis, assisted by Elder F. J. Pierce. Her remains were interred at the Maerdy Cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

The October number of the Open Court contains the following: "Richard Wagner," by Professor E. P. Evans, Munich; "The Misinterpretation of Tolstoy," by Aylmer Maude; "The Doctrine of Mithraic Mysteries," by Franz Cumont, Ghent, Belgium; "The Trinity," by the Editor; "The Hope of the Negro," by John L. Robinson; "Alpha and Omega," by the Editor; "The Mahayana Doctrine and Art," by the Editor; "Conference of the Asiatic Creeds," "Elisha Ben Ahuya," "Book for the Young," "Mr. Maude's Article on Tolstoy," "Book Reviews," etc. The Open Court occupies a unique field, and can not but prove interesting reading to those who love good solid matter. Doctor Paul Carus is a man "with an opinion," and the work of such men is always interesting, whether we agree with them or not.

In the issue for October, the editor of the Biblical World discusses the question of "The Bible and the Common Schools," reviewing the causes which led to the exclusion of the Bible from the schools and the losses which result therefrom. He then discusses the Bible as literature, and thinks the Bible should be restored to the schools for the purpose of teaching therein religion and morals. Among the articles in the October Biblical World are "The Ancient Circuit of Argob," "The Medical Language of St. Luke," "True and False Prophets in 1 Kings, Chapter 22," "Jesus the Perfecter of Faith," and "A Proposal for a Graded Bible School."

World's Fair News-Notes.

It is estimated that the attendance at the World's Fair at St. Louis in 1904 should average 173,000 daily. The estimate is based upon the population within 500 miles of the city in comparison with the population within the same distance of Chicago and the attendance at the Columbian Exposition of 1893. While Chicago had a greater population within her city limits St. Louis will have a much greater exposition and the people will have better facilities for travel.

A plan is under way for a thorough protection of visitors to the World's Fair in 1904. If the arrangement is carried out in its completeness thousands of reputable citizens will wear a badge indicating their membership in an organization formed for the purpose of directing visitors to reliable hotels, boarding houses and private houses where lodgings may be procured at reasonable rates. With reasonable care any visitor may escape being victimized by confidence men and other crooks who are unavoidably present during such events as the great expositions.

The question of which State shall be first to start the construction of a State building at the World's Fair seems to rest with Kansas, Iowa, and Illinois. All three are about ready to let their contracts. Colorado is also among the leaders.

The Government of Ceylon has set aside $17,500 for that island's representation at the World's Fair of 1904. Application has been made for space, and it is proposed to have a large Ceylon Tea House with supplementary exhibits illustrative of Ceylon and its industries.

The Future of the Home.

Most of those who think the forms unsuited to present needs suggest changes which shall make it possible to pass over to public enterprise the work of food preparation and the responsibility for the care of houses, thus releasing in woman's life energy for individualization.

For these changes, we are in some measure ready. The good food that is served in first-class restaurants, hotels and clubs shows that food can be satisfactorily prepared in much larger quantities than it is in private houses. The fact that surgical operations which demand scrupulous cleanliness are more successfully performed in large hospitals than in the most immaculate of private houses, shows the advantages of having cleaning done by specialists under expert direction, as it is in hospitals. There are still needed certain social adjustments, and certain practical problems connected with transportation and serving are still unsolved. Is it reasonable to suppose that there is not in the world enough organizing ability and inventive skill to make these adjustments and to overcome these difficulties if the demand for the change were sufficiently great?

In passing, three points which frequently lead to misunderstanding should be noted. First, the opportunity to make these changes would not involve the obligation to do so, while now the absence of the opportunity forces the choice between laborious individual housekeeping and the publicity of hotel or boarding-house life. Second, the preparation of food in public kitchens would not necessitate the abolition of private dining-rooms. Third, housekeeping and child-training are two distinct functions of home life at present, and the passing of one function to society would not involve the passing of the other.—From "Home Problems from a New Standpoint," in The Chautauquan Magazine for October.

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY INAUGURATES PRESIDENT JAMES.

On October 21, there occurred an event which caused considerable comment in the press. It was the inauguration of Edmund J. James as president of Northwestern University, Evanston-Chicago. The exercises occupied in all three days, beginning October 19 and closing the 21st. A great number of distinguished guests were present, nearly all the leading institutions of higher learning in the world being represented. It was really a notable occasion, indicating as it did the greater interest which has been awakened in this country in the past few years in the cause of higher education.

Northwestern University is a Methodist school which received its charter in 1851; since then some eight thousand students have been graduated from it, and thousands of others have received instruction which did not lead to a degree. It has had a healthy growth, and for the school year of 1901-02 there were enrolled in the degree-giving departments of the school some twenty-four hundred students, under the guidance of two hundred eighty-one instructors.

The inauguration of President James was, of course, a very important event in the history of the University; and owing to the position it occupies among other schools, the event is of considerable interest in the history of the western universities. President James comes to the school with a well-established reputation and good record, and Northwestern is fortunate in securing as her head so good a man. His inaugural address was delivered on Tuesday, the 21st, and in it he discussed "Some Features of American Education." His address was marked by thoughtful, logical discussion, important features of educational work and past and present conditions being carefully noted. He called the attention of his hearers to the excellency of our industrial development, then pointed out how by careful, consistent, and organized effort our educational work can be made as excellent and as far-reaching. He closed with these words: "Surely we may rejoice if we can help to win for our country the same proud position in education and science which our fathers and brothers have won for it in industry."

We wish space would permit us to reproduce the address in full.

ANCIENT CITY FOUND NEAR OAXACA, MEXICO.

The Kansas City Journal for October 20 contained an extract from the New York Sun which purports to be an account of the discovery of an ancient city near the city of Oaxaca, in Southern Mexico. The discovery is said to have been made by Leopoldo Batres, government archæologist of Mexico. The account as taken from the Sun reads:

The ruins of a great city, older than any previously discovered on the American continent, have been uncovered. The objects found in the temples and tombs thus far excavated seem to link this city with both Egypt and China.

The ruins are more extensive than those of Mitla, only a few miles distant, and appear to have been covered with the dust of ages before Mitla was begun.

The explorers went to Oaxaca last winter for the purpose of excavating certain old Zapotec mounds or tombs. Important finds were made in these tombs. Professor Saville was obliged to return to New York in May last, and Senor Batres started work in a new direction.

The ruins uncovered by Senor Batres are situated upon the summit of Monte Alban, which rises about twelve hundred feet higher than the valley of Oaxaca, and is about six thousand feet above the sea level. The mountain is only a few miles from the city of Oaxaca.

Its sides and top have been cultivated by the natives for years. The patio, or courtyard of what may prove to be the greatest temple ever built upon the American continent, was covered with a corn-field, and a very good one, for the dust of thousands of years had made a rich soil.

The top of the mountain was covered with mounds, or mogotes, as they are called in Zapotec, in systematic arrangement. They appear to be of the character as hundreds of others dotting the great valley of Oaxaca into which Professor Saville and Senor Batres have been digging for the last five years and were thought to be ruins of the same Zapotec civilization.

The mountain top covers a wide area. On its center a group of mounds are ranged about a great square, several acres in extent. The square proved upon excavation to be the patio or court of a great temple and the mounds were the covered ruins of the smaller temples ranged about it.

Senor Batres spent about three months in cutting the timber and underbrush and clearing the earth from the ruins, having hundreds of workmen employed. The dust of centuries had covered the wall in some places to a depth of thirty or forty feet.

Great trees had grown up on the mounds. In some places the wind instead of covering the walls with earth had kept them bare and the stones had been utilized for building walls, surrounding the fields on the mountain top and sides.

Very little more than this preparatory work of clearing off the mountain top roughly had been done thus far. It is true that hundreds of tons of specimens have been removed from the mounds and brought to this city, where they will rest in the national museum as soon as the new building which has been planned for them is constructed; but only a few of the mounds were excavated and it may be said that the great city has only been scratched over as yet.

Four pyramidal-shaped mounds run down the center of the great patio. These were, in the opinion of Senor Batres, the central altars of the great temple.

In addition to this purpose they served as tombs, probably for the monarchs of the builders of this city, suggesting the pyramids of Egypt. In one of these an excavation was made. Here was made the greatest discovery of all.

The first object encountered was a great obelisk of porphyry, slightly resembling the Egyptian obelisk known as Cleopatra's Needle in Central Park, New York. The obelisk is four meters in height, sixty centimeters across its face and forty centimeters across its sides.

It rises with perpendicular lines to within forty centimeters of its top, and from there assumes a wedge shape. On the face of the obelisk is an elaborate figure with a death's head, evidently the portrait in bas-relief of a dead monarch.

On one side are figures of two priests speaking, with several rows of hieroglyphs, and on the other side a single priest speaking with more hieroglyphs. The back is covered with hieroglyphs. No attempt has been made to translate these hieroglyphs as yet.

The similarity of the mound to the pyramids of Egypt is at once seen—the tomb in the pyramidal shape and the obelisk at the entrance to the tomb, with the portrait of the dead sovereign on its face and what appears to be his biography on its sides and back. This obelisk has been brought to this city, where it will be placed in the national museum.

This was the last find of Senor Batres and the work of excavating this mound has not yet been finished. Important matters recalled Senor Batres to the capital and his work has been temporarily stopped.

During the work of clearing and in some minor excavations many great slabs of stone with carvings in bas-relief were found. Some represented men, some animals, and some were covered with hieroglyphics.

Some of them covered the entrances to tombs. One shows the figure of a monarch or prince, apparently, wearing a royal head-dress, sitting on a mountain or high place, with the sign of the speech extending from the mouth and rows of hieroglyphs following. This stone is three meters in height by two meters in width.

Next in importance to the discovery of the obelisk was the finding in another mound of a jar made of jade and containing some sixty fine specimens of jade. Pieces of jade have been found in all parts of Mexico for the past century and archæologists have regarded them as evidences of a former communication of the prehistoric races of Mexico with the Chinese.

These jade ornaments have been found in all of the Nahuan or so-called Toltec ruins, and in the later Aztec ruins. Since the Aztecs had little or no communication with China they probably obtained the jade as a heritage from earlier peoples and evidently prized them just as highly as their predecessors.

The specimens found at Monte Alban are the most beautiful in color, the most elaborately carved and the most highly polished ever found in Mexico. The workmanship upon them is exquisite. With what tools these people worked yet remains a mystery.

More significant than this was one of the pieces found. It was about as large as the palm of the hand, of a rich deep blue color, and with the face of a Chinaman, almond eyes, queue and all most delicately and perfectly carved upon it.

A small silver figure of a Chinaman found in the southern part of Mexico is now in the Smithsonian Museum at Washington, having recently been presented to it by W. W. Byam, of Washington, who has large land interests in Southern Mexico and is an enthusiastic amateur archæologist. This was pronounced by archæologists at the time of its discovery, to be the best proof thus far adduced of prehistoric communication between America and China. The jade discovered at Monte Alban is still stronger proof.

It is the opinion of Senor Batres that the ruined city which he has uncovered on the summit of Monte Alban was a sacred city of the people who built it. The area excavated is three kilometers in length by half a kilometer in width. Mounds of less importance cover surrounding mountain tops, but these have not yet been touched.

The walls thus far uncovered on Monte Alban appear to have been the bases or foundations of the great structures which surmounted them. Time has apparently obliterated the buildings themselves though some of their stones may be uncovered by further excavation.

Senor Batres believes that the city was destroyed by the great upheaval which sunk the continent of Atlantis, possibly the Biblical deluge.

It was the opinion of archæologists that Mitla, the great sacred city of the Nahuans or Toltecs, was destroyed some time between the beginning of the Christian era and the year 500 A. D. It is evident that the builders of Monte Alban lived long before the Toltecs came to inhabit the neighboring valley.

There is nothing in common between the two sets of ruins. There is nothing in the Mitla ruins resembling in the slightest degree the ruins of Monte Alban.

It seems, indeed, that Monte Alban had been so completely destroyed before Mitla was begun that the Toltecs knew nothing of its existence. Certain it is that the earliest Spanish pilgrims to that region saw the ruins of Mitla and described them in detail and that they did not see the ruin on the summit of Monte Alban only a few miles distant.

Senor Batres will be sent by the Mexican government to the coming congress of Americanists in New York early in October. He is busily engaged at present preparing a full account of his discovery to present to the congress.

Pictures, drawings, plans, and specimens, together with a full description of the work and the discoverer's observations and conclusions thereon will be submitted for the consideration of the distinguished archæologists of America.

Excavations at Monte Alban are to be resumed next winter. If a key can be found to the hieroglyphic writings of the builders of the city, American history may be extended backward some thousands of years.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

In submitting his quarterly report to the First Presidency, Bro. Sheehy writes: "The truth that we are in the 'first dispensation of the fullness of times,' and that God is in the latter-day work, is maintained by accumulating evidences."

Sr. Emeline McClellan, widow of Doctor William E. McClellan, and formerly of Independence, Missouri, wrote from Denison, Texas, October 14: "My mind remains unchanged with regard to the work of the last days. I feel that I am near the end of life's journey. I am ninety-two years old, have good health, but not very much strength. Am alone, so far as church privileges are concerned. Can do but little reading."

J. W. Roberts wrote from Seattle, Washington, October 17: "Baptized one young man the 12th instant. So we move slowly but we trust safely."

Under date of October 22, I. N. White wrote: "I am glad to report the work moving forward; more prosperous than at other times. I am now at Parrish, Illinois, and go to Tunnelhill on the 24th. Have preached every night since I was at Zenith. My trip to Illinois has been good for the work, and the visit of Brn. Joseph Smith and R. C. Evans has seemed to give a new impetus to the work here. They both endeared themselves to the hearts of the Saints."

F. A. Smith reports one hundred baptisms in his field the second quarter of this conference year. He wrote from Sioux City, October 23: "There seems to have been more interest the past quarter than before, and the missionaries write more hopefully and seem to feel more encouraged. I will go to the Black Hills country about the 1st of November, to try to open up the work there. I am feeling well in body and spirit, and the Lord has blessed me to a wonderful degree in preaching."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The last note in the soprano of the piece of music entitled, "Blessed are they that do," published in HERALD for October 15, should be a instead of c.

We have received from the United Prohibition Press, 92 La Salle Street, Chicago, a copy of the "American Prohibition Year Book for 1902." It is a compilation by Alonzo E. Wilson, and contains a large amount of statistics on the drink question, as well as a number of short pithy essays on subjects allied to prohibition. It is a valuable book in the hands of temperance lecturers, etc. Its price is fifteen cents.

National Reciprocity is a monthly magazine published by the National Reciprocity League, of Chicago, Illinois.

Wisdom is the name of a monthly magazine which is being published at Boston, Massachusetts, at the remarkably low price of two cents per copy, or twelve cents per year. The standard of the magazine is good.

The British are having trouble with the "Mad Mullah" in Eastern Africa. In a battle fought October 6 the British lost two officers and fifty men, and were forced to retreat.

In a race riot at Littleton, Alabama, October 19, three whites and eight negroes were killed.

Advices from Caracas, Venezuela, October 18, state that General Castro, in command of the government forces, after seven days of bloody battling, won a sweeping victory over the revolutionary forces. Three thousand rebels were killed.

As an instance showing how the missionary can help the HERALD Office, one of our worthy missionaries who is anxious to see our new press paid for sends in five new subscribers, and says that he will send more. Figure out the result that would follow if each one of our three hundred and more missionaries would do as well. Now is the time.

William C. Cummings, who recently moved from Chicago to Coalgate, Indian Territory, writes us under date of October 19, that he is well pleased with the change, and has experienced no inconvenience in change of climate. He is interested in seeing the work develop there, and is doing what he can to help.

Sr. M. J. Kling, of Akron, Ohio, writes that she has recently sold fourteen copies of the Book of Mormon, and expects to sell more soon. Good! There are many who can do as well if they only make the effort.

R. M. Elvin has presented to the Church Library a copy of a book called "Thirteen Chapters on First Day Observance," by John M. Vankirk, LL. B., a Christian minister and attorney-at-law at Kinross, Iowa. The work constitutes an able defense of the first day observance, and is also a sharp attack on the Battle Creek Adventists.

U. W. Greene reports forty-seven baptisms in his field for the three months ending October 1. I. N. White reports ninety in his field.

The University of Chicago board of trustees has decided upon segregating women and men at the Midway school. When the plan is in full operation there will be no mixed classes. Coeducation at Chicago University will be no more. There is a great diversity of opinion as to the wisdom of the movement.

Last week we noted the fact that the Sunday-school authorities had called a Graceland Rallying Day. Bro. Gunsolley called our attention to the fact that it was by the Sunday-school and Religio together. We gladly make this correction for the Religians have been staunch supporters of Graceland College and we want to give them full credit.

At the close of the district conference held at St. Marys, Ontario, this month, the young people of the Religio presented R. C. Evans a birthday present as a mark of appreciation and respect. So writes Sr. Floralice Miller.

Bro. Sheehy sends us a leaf from a folder of the Maine Central Railroad. On this page is a list of attractions along the Maine coast, and among other things is "Jonesport with its flourishing colony of Latter Day Saints."

L. S. Holman writes that on receipt of slip he at once canvassed his branch for subscribers, securing four. There are others, he says.

ANTI-MORMON MEETING AT OMAHA.

Brn. F. A. Smith and C. E. Butterworth have furnished us with the following synopsis of the "anti-Mormon meetings" held by the ministers of the Christian Church, at Omaha, Nebraska, October 20 and 21.

FIRST MEETING, OCTOBER 20.

John W. Darby was chosen chairman, Mr. West, secretary. Scripture reading by the chairman, prayer by D. H. Bays.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting briefly, which was to form an organization to meet successfully the Mormons or Latter Day Saints. He then called upon J. T. Bridwell, who responded in substance as follows: "As the chairman of this meeting has stated, this meeting has nothing whatever to do with the great International Convention now in session in this city. I believe that it can be truthfully said that no more important work can be done in Omaha than this work. In the early part of this century when the great work of the restoration of original Christianity began, another religious, or irreligious movement as we term it, began in Western New York and Northeastern Ohio. That other movement was the Latter Day Saint movement, that finds perhaps its largest following in Utah, and is also found in the Reorganization. It has representatives in the Eastern States, and it is claimed that many of the first organization, perhaps a large majority, were Disciples of Christ. The work to-day is an aggressive work, directed in a great number of places against the Disciples of Christ. We have not been in position to meet the Saints always to the best advantage. They have gone to rural communities where the churches were weak, and our ministers were not well equipped with the necessary evidence to meet them, but the Latter Day Saint ministers are always fully equipped.

"Our subject is to put men to the front who have studied the question of Mormonism, and who can always meet these people. To meet the Latter Day Saint question, it is necessary to get well-informed men, who have studied their literature, and who can thoroughly sift the evidence upon which they depend. That can only be done by organization. Our welfare should be called into question or considered, as there is no greater evil than the evils that are centered in the question of Mormonism. I not only speak of the branch of the Reorganization, but of Utah and all the branches of the church, and we should organize our forces and plant our cause in the Western States. We should have a board who have the oversight of every State in the Union, and can furnish men who can discuss the issues of Mormonism.

"In the past few years they have made a phenomenal growth. There are now about three hundred thousand members in the United States, which means three hundred thousand people who put Joseph Smith and his revelations between them and Christ; three hundred thousand people who are slaves to the claims of Mormonism, whose religious freedom has been taken away from them by the teachings of the Mormon hierarchy. A great majority of those would be useful servants of the Lord Jesus Christ."

J. D. McClure was then called upon by the chairman, responding briefly about as follows: "The first Latter Day Saint preacher I ever heard was in Southwestern Iowa, and he was a saloon-keeper in a little town called Egypt. Another good elder told him he better stop that, and he said he would when he got enough to keep him.

"Now these people are intelligent people. Their men are prepared; when their men are sent out they are indorsed from headquarters. They have an organization that gives them an opportunity to go into a community, stay any number of weeks as a missionary, fully equipped, absolutely cared for, and everything furnished from headquarters. If they want anything, they must only tickle the wires to headquarters, Lamoni, Iowa. I have been associated with these people thirty-eight years, since I was eighteen years old, so now you can tell how old I am. They never come into a community wearing their own clothes, they use the King James Translation. In General Conference at Galland's Grove, Iowa, 1868, was passed a resolution, that these people indorse the Inspired Translation, translated by Joseph Smith, Prophet, Seer, and Revelator of the latter days, and the Book of Mormon which contains the fullness of the everlasting gospel, and the Doctrine and Covenants as containing the revelations of God to the church.

"They have taken more people from our ranks than all other religious people. No one can preach faith, repentance, and baptism better than they. The Methodists and Presbyterians, with their Holy Spirit, are not within a thousand miles of them. They are at home anywhere.

"There is no more Christianity in Mormonism than there is in Mohammedanism."

The speaker here referred to the Doctrine and Covenants teaching another Christ, in reference to Joseph Smith and through his seed the people should be blessed. He then read propositions for debate formulated by himself, first, second, and third class, which he said were fair, a copy of which is in the hands of Bishop E. L. Kelley, and had been sent to him some months ago but he had never heard from him. "A man who meets a Latter Day Saint meets a man who is prepared for business."

D. H. Bays was then called upon by the chairman, and spoke about as follows: "The object of this meeting is to secure an organization to meet Mormonism. Heretofore there has been no concerted action of any kind of all our brotherhood to meet the Mormon heresy. In any college in our land we can find young men, mere boys, there are scores of them, who have not completed their education, who with proper instruction can meet their best men. It takes a little experience to be sure to meet these men. They used to think that all that was necessary to meet Mormonism was to say 'old Joe Smith,' 'Mormonism,' 'He stole a sheep,' or something of that kind; and we met defeat nearly every time.

"These men go into a community where Mormonism has not been heard, but only heard of, and they come to the people and say, 'We want you to understand now, that we have nothing to do with the people of Salt Lake more than other churches, such as the Presbyterian, Methodist,' etc. They say they are two separate organizations; but they are exactly alike, they are organized just alike, only the Utah people believe that Brigham Young was the head of the church, and the Reorganization believes that Joseph Smith is the head of the church.

"As far as citizenship is concerned, no people stand better in the community than the members of the Reorganization. They accept the Bible where it is translated correctly, and they are the judges. There is not a man among them who can translate a Greek sentence; at least I don't know of any one, and I know them all except some new ones.

"I have never known one of them to present their organization as it is, not from Joseph Smith down to the least toad in the puddle, which is misleading the minds of the people. It takes a thorough understanding of Mormonism to meet it successfully."

W. T. Hilton raised a point of order, stating that they were not there to discuss the errors of Mormonism, but to do business, and moved that the chair appoint a committee of three to devise methods and ways to meet Mormonism, to report at another session, at one o'clock, October 21. The chairman appointed the following committee: D. H. Bays, J. D. McClure, and J. T. Bridwell.

By separate motion J. W. Darby was added to the committee. A question was asked by one in the audience as to what would be the best methods to pursue, to meet them in debate, public lecture, or educate our people to let them entirely alone. Mr. Bridwell stated that he believed they should be met in debate, lecture, by books, tracts, or by silence, as the case might demand. To do this an organization was needed with means to meet every emergency.

SECOND MEETING, OCTOBER 21.

Thirty-seven Christians present at opening of meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman who read from the Scriptures, 3d chapter of 2 Timothy. Prayer offered by G. M. Walker.

Committee appointed yesterday repaired to side room to prepare report. Names of parties who were willing to join the anti-Mormon movement were taken.

The committee appeared and reported as follows:

"First. The name of this organization shall be the National anti-Mormon Missionary Association of the Disciples of Christ.

"Second. Its object shall be to carry on the work of the Lord Jesus Christ in every community, where the Mormon delusion has obtained a foothold, or is likely to do so, by the distribution of literature, by lectures and tracts, by discussion, by the work of itinerant and other missionaries. We shall endeavor in every way to assist our congregations and missionary societies to promote the general interests of the cause of Christ.

"Third. The membership of this association shall consist of all persons contributing to its general or other funds.

"Fourth. The general oversight of the work shall be intrusted to a board consisting of five members, together with such ex officio members as shall herein be provided for. This board shall serve for one year, and shall be selected at the time and place of the International Missionary Convention of the Disciples of Christ.

"Fifth. A president and treasurer shall be elected at the same session, each to serve for one year, and to perform the duties usually pertaining to such offices. They shall be ex officio members of the General Board.

"Sixth. There shall also be a general secretary selected by the board. It shall be the duty of the board to ascribe his duties and provide for his salary.

"Seventh. The board shall select a corresponding secretary for each State and Territory in the United States, and Canada and the other countries, and also district secretaries and assistant secretaries be appointed or selected to complete the work."

A motion carried that the report of this committee be discussed clause by clause. The first clause was then read. A motion prevailed that the words "Disciples of Christ" be stricken out, and the words "Churches of Christ" be put in their place. A motion carried that the clause be adopted as amended.

Second clause read and adopted.

Third clause read, and amended as follows: "The membership of this association shall consist of all persons interested in the overthrow of Mormonism, and contributing to its general and other funds." Adopted.

Fourth clause read, and amendment offered to strike out the words "Disciples of Christ" and insert the words, "Churches of Christ." Carried as amended.

Fifth, sixth, and seventh clauses were read and adopted, and the report as a whole adopted.

Motion prevailed that we now proceed to elect officers under the newly adopted constitution. Motion sustained that the chair appoint a committee of three to nominate the members of the board in harmony with this conference. Committee appointed: W. T. Hilton, D. H. Bays, J. D. McClure.

A motion was sustained that this conference invite a member or members of the Reorganization, who may be present to occupy fifteen minutes. A motion carried that the permanent or general secretary who shall be elected shall forward Mr. F. A. Smith, of the Latter Day Saint Church, a copy of the proceedings of this conference.

The committee reported the following names in nomination as members of the Board: J. W. Darby, chairman; J. T. Bridwell, secretary; W. T. Hilton, treasurer; D. H. Bays, J. D. McClure.

A motion prevailed that the above-named parties be elected, as nominated.

Adjourned.

Bro. F. A. Smith used the fifteen minutes granted. He writes:

I tried to occupy during the fifteen minutes granted us, but could not make any defense in that time, but stated to them that I hoped when we met, if we ever did, in debate of these questions it would be in the spirit of fairness, and as Christians in spirit, as brothers in the flesh, or from the standpoint of humanity. My talk provoked some boastful statements which evinced the fact that most of them had rubbed up against what they are pleased to term "Mormonism," and as a result had some sore spots. Messrs. Darby and Bridwell were the leaders and agitators of the movement.

MY ADORATION.

Moderately slow and stately.

1. My Savior dear; my own, my all;
I'm filled with soul felt love to thee,
To think that thou for me didst die
A shameful death on Calvary's tree.
2. My Savior dear; my soul is drawn
Into a closer walk with thee;
Until by eye of faith I see,
Thy loving face smile down on me.
3. How ineffable; how grand the joy,
That fills my raptured soul with bliss,
Gives a sweet foretaste of my home—
A hallowed foretaste, yea, is this.
4. O, love divine! O, Savior mine!!
Thee to adore my spirit craves;
To worship, honor, and to feel—
To feel indeed the love that saves.
5. For thou art worthy to receive
What praise my feeble tongue can give.
Aye, worthy! worthy!! aye, indeed;
For thou hast died that I might live.
6. Dear Lord accept this meed of praise,
That rises upward from my soul,
For I am lit up with the love
That conquers, inthralls, makes me whole.

Original Articles.

IS THE LORD'S SUPPER FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS?

I have heard several of the brethren teaching that the above sacrament "is for the remission of sins." Is this a tenet of the faith? If it is, I am much afraid that it is one which is not accepted by the majority of communicants of this church, the writer among the number. When was it made a tenet of faith? Who authorized those who teach it to do so? I have seen an answer in the HERALD to a question, asking if the above was the belief of the church. He answered, No; and still the brethren go on teaching their own opinions upon this question as the doctrine of the church. This ought not to be. Before any doctrine is taught as the belief of the church, the church should legislate upon it.

To teach that the Lord's supper is for the remission of sins seems to be out of harmony with our repeated warnings that none should partake unless they have been reconciled to their brethren, and to God. If we transgress against our brother or our sister we should be reconciled to him or her before we partake of the sacrament. Could we call it a reconciliation unless there had been free and full forgiveness? No! Very well, if we have offended God we must confess our sin, ask forgiveness for it, and be reconciled to him before we are worthy to partake of the sacrament. Can there be reconciliation without forgiveness? Certainly not; and if we must be reconciled and forgiven before we partake of the Lord's supper, that sacrament can not be for the remission of sins. Christ is spoken of in the Scriptures as "a Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world." In the Jewish temple at Jerusalem there was practiced a ceremony which was a figure of Christ's death and sacrifice. (Hebrews 9 and 10.) Every day of the year, save one, the priest went into the outer tabernacle and there offered sacrifice for the sins of the people (Hebrews 9: 6); but upon one select day in every year, he entered in beyond the veil into the holiest of all with the blood of a goat (emblematic of the blood of Christ) which he sprinkled upon the mercy seat. (Leviticus 16: 15; Hebrews 9: 7.) He then came out of the holy place, and conferred the sins of the people upon the head of the scapegoat (typical of Satan) and sent him away into the wilderness bearing the sins of the people. (Leviticus 16: 20-22.) Christ opened up a new and living way into the "holiest of all." (Hebrews 9: 8.) He offered himself, that the mercy seat of heaven might be purified by his own blood. (Hebrews 9: 23.)

"For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us."—Hebrew 9: 24.

As our high priest he entered in once for all into the most holy place, and purified it by his own blood. There he now sits at the right hand of God "to make intercession for us" (Romans 8:34), and now if we sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous. (1 John 2:1.)

Must we who are members of his church first take the sacrament before Christ will intercede in our behalf? Perish the thought, "a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise."—Psalms 51:17. Here our "sacrament remission" brethren quote 1 John 1:7, "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." From this they reason that we must first walk in the light, "obey the gospel, and partake of the sacrament," and that then the sacrament cleanses us from sin. I fail to notice any reference whatever to the sacrament in the above text. It is the blood of Jesus Christ which cleanses us, and to make that mean "sacrament," we must embrace the Catholic doctrine of transubstantiation. Will any of these brethren affirm that we drink the actual blood of Christ? If the object of the sacrament is "the remission of sins," why do we eat the emblems of the body when it is the blood alone which cleanses us?

A great play is also made on the word fellowship in the above text. Can we not have fellowship in any other way than by taking the sacrament together? "If we walk in the light," methinks we will do as the law of God directs and affect a reconciliation, in which forgiveness will play a prominent part, between ourselves and those whom we have offended whether it be God or man. God will forgive us through the blood of Christ, and then we may partake of the sacrament in remembrance of Christ's death, and as an emblem whereby we acknowledge the efficacy of the blood which has cleansed us from our sin.

Matthew 26:28 K. J. is also often quoted: "For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." The brethren seem to adopt the doctrine of transubstantiation for the occasion, and then reason that the blood of Christ is drunk for the remission of sins. In the Inspired Translation this passage is rendered, "For this is in remembrance of my blood of the new testament, which is shed for as many as shall believe on my name, for the remission of their sins."

Brethren, when you read the above, remember that the sacramental cup is taken "in remembrance" of the blood which was "shed" (not drunk) "for the remission of sins."

The following is the light in which the writer views the sacrament: The Savior has said that unless we partake of it "we have no eternal life abiding in us." He has also said that, "He that eateth and drinketh, unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation unto his own soul." It is therefore essential: 1. That we partake of it. 2. That we partake worthily. 3. That to partake worthily, we must forgive and be forgiven our transgressions. 4. We feel that we must therefore keep ourselves in a proper condition before the Lord, that we might be worthy to partake of these emblems.

My object in partaking is: 1. That I might have eternal life. 2. That I might remember that I am a member of Christ's body, and as such, must suffer and rejoice with him. 3. That I might remember that my sins have been forgiven through his intercession, and through his blood. 4. That I might renew the covenant made with him in baptism. 5. That I may always remember him and keep his commands, and fit myself to eat and drink with him when he comes in his kingdom.

We conclude by asking, If the sacrament is for the remission of sins, why will it be administered when sin is banished, and when Christ reigns over his people?

IF NOT, WHY NOT?

BY ELDER F. M. WELD.

Thus far we have given an outline of the law as given direct to this people; now let us turn to Enoch and his band (Genesis 7:1, I. T.): "And it came to pass, that Enoch continued his speech, saying, Behold, our father Adam taught these things, and many have believed, and become the sons of God." This shows that Adam understood and taught the same as Enoch, which takes it back to the beginning of man here on the earth. On reading the entire chapter we find the people were greatly blessed in obeying Enoch's teachings; and in the 23d verse we read, "The Lord called his people, Zion; because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them."

This could scarcely be unless they had "all things common," as the Book of Mormon people had, page 424, verse 3, large edition; or as the "law," section 42, contemplates. We find on further examination that Enoch's people kept the law of consecration and gathering so closely that when the wickedness of the surrounding world became so great God took the city of Zion unto himself, which, according to the Doctrine and Covenants, is to be a part of the city John the Revelator saw coming down out of heaven. (Revelation 21:2.)

Sections 77, 81, and 101, Doctrine and Covenants fully establish the fact that Enoch's band lived under the all things common plan. If the reader will read these sections it will require no comment on our part. God works the same at all times.

Now let us go to New Testament times (Acts 2:44, 45, I. T.): "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." This was immediately after Christ's ascension, while the apostles and followers of Christ were in their first love of the work, immediately after they had walked and talked with, and sat at the feet of Christ and received his personal instructions. And will we dare say they were not doing or carrying out the work and methods of living, that Christ while here, and afterwards the Holy Ghost, had taught them, to the best of their understanding? If not, why not?

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need."—Acts 4: 32-35, I. T. Is not this the same plan and the same equality that is taught in the Doctrine and Covenants, God's instructions directly to this people?

We do not understand the all things common plan to be the same as being taught by some, especially some organizations of the world, namely, an equal amount of dollars, but an absolute equality; that is, each individual shall have equal rights on the treasury, according to their families, according to their necessities, their needs, and wants inasmuch as they are just.

Not only was this the God-given plan to govern the finances of the church in Adam's day, Enoch's day, and the apostles' day; but in the Book of Mormon times we find the same thing taught, the same unchangeable God carefully providing for his people by the same law; and whenever they heeded his counsel and followed the laws he had given, they were always blessed and prospered, but as soon as they became careless and indifferent to his instructions, they began to dwindle and go down; and instead of peace and happiness, came contention, strife, wars, famine, and suffering.

Alma 1, page 183, large edition Book of Mormon, beginning at paragraph 22: "And when the priests left their labor, to impart the word of God unto the people, the people also left their labors to hear the word of God. And when the priests had imparted unto them the word of God, they all returned again diligently unto their labors; and the priest, not esteeming himself above his hearers; for the preacher was no better than the hearer, neither was the teacher any better than the learner; and thus they were all equal, and they did all labor, every man according to his strength; and they did impart of their substance every man according to that which he had, to the poor, and the needy, and the sick, and the afflicted." Reading the next few verses we find they were wonderfully blessed and prospered of the Lord until "they began to be exceeding rich;" "far more wealthy than those who did not belong to their church."

This is the promise to God's people in any age; providing, however, they will do as these people did, live meek, humble lives before God, and not be lifted up in pride, and setting their hearts on riches; but rather trying to lift up mankind and to do good to all, not wearing costly garments, but neat and comely; clothe the naked, feed the hungry, minister to the sick; "both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, whether out of the church or in the church, having no respect to persons as to those who stood in need;" and as Joseph Smith answered Richard Savery, February 2, 1842 (Times and Seasons, volume 3, page 732): "He is to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to provide for the widow, to dry up the tear of the orphan, to comfort the afflicted, whether in this church or any other, or in no church at all, wherever he finds them, to believe and obey all that God has revealed, does reveal, or will reveal, to do good unto all men, to be a member in good standing in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Does this not agree with our text: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and . . . thy neighbor as thyself"?

In book of Nephi, chapter 11, page 417, large edition, beginning at the first verse we find Christ expounded the scriptures unto them and commanded that they should teach what he had expounded, and he commanded them to write the words the Father had given to the Prophet Malachi, which he (Christ) would tell them, and he proceeds to give the 3d and 4th chapters of Malachi; this scripture the Nephites had not had up to this time. This was at the time when Christ made his appearance on this continent immediately after his resurrection, when he organized the church upon this land and chose his first twelve apostles here. It must have been necessary for Christ to give this scripture or he surely would not have done so, and in it he says even this whole nation had robbed him, and he commands them to bring their tithes into the storehouse and try him and see if he would not open the windows of heaven and pour out a great blessing upon them, and also rebuke the destroyer in their behalf, all the while giving them his personal instructions regarding the gospel and its laws.

In the next chapter we find his apostles and the members of the church, who were numerous already, trying to carry out his instructions; or bringing their tithes into the Lord's storehouse. Beginning at paragraph 8, page 418, large edition, we read: "And it came to pass that the disciples whom Jesus had chosen, began from that time forth to baptize and to teach as many as did come unto them: and as many as were baptized in the name of Jesus were filled with the Holy Ghost. And many of them saw and heard unspeakable things, which are not lawful to be written: and they taught, and did minister one to another; and they had all things common among them, every man dealing justly, one with another. And it came to pass that they did do all things, even as Jesus had commanded them." Here again we find that when the saints carried out the law governing the finances of the church under Christ's immediate command and directions it brought them to the selfsame plan that it always did, of all things common, "according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs." As long as the saints remained humble and faithful to God's plan they were blessed and prospered, and the church increased in numbers greatly.

Reading on to the end of this book of Nephi and taking up the first chapters of the next book, the book of Nephi the son of Nephi, one of the disciples of Jesus Christ, we find they lived in peace and close to God and observed this law closely for one hundred sixty-six years, and they had become exceedingly rich and numerous; the whole nation had been converted. But alas! the weakness of man began to show; they could not stand prosperity, and they began to be lifted up in pride, which has been the beginning of the destruction of God's people in all ages when they have fallen. It would be well for the reader to read several chapters to get a full understanding of the history.

In chapter 1, verse 3, page 424, large edition, we read: "And it came to pass in the thirty and sixth year, the people were all converted unto the Lord, upon all the face of the land, both Nephites and Lamanites, and there were no contentions and disputations among them, and every man did deal justly one with another; and they had all things common among them, therefore they were not rich and poor, bond and free, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gift." How nicely this agrees with Enoch's band (Genesis 7: 23, I. T.): "And the Lord called his people, Zion; because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them."

What a grand system! Who can say aught against it, or think it not of divine origin, with all of this scripture in evidence before us? Remember the motto we started with: "To the law and to the testimony; and if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." We must especially admire this system when we examine the history of this people further and see what peace, yes, Godly peace and happiness they did enjoy for one hundred sixty-six years, until they began to get careless and indifferent to duty and permitted the adversary to blind them to the goodness of God, thus permitting pride to come in. "And now in this two hundred and first year, there began to be among them those who were lifted up in pride, such as the wearing of costly apparel, and all manner of fine pearls, and of the fine things of the world. And from that time forth they did have their goods and their substances no more common among them, and they began to be divided into classes, and they began to build up churches unto themselves, to get gain, and began to deny the true church of Christ." Read, beginning at verse 19, page 425, on to end of chapter. Oh, the proneness of man after such great blessings! Ungrateful man! No wonder you are often cursed, and your conscience smites you!

Joseph Smith wrote to W. W. Phelps as follows, on Tuesday, November 27, 1832: "It is contrary to the will and commandment of God, that those who receive not their inheritance by consecration, agreeably to his law, which he has given, that he may tithe his people, to prepare them against the day of vengeance and burning, should have their names enrolled with the people of God; neither is their genealogy to be kept, or to be had where it may be found on any of the records or history of the church; their names shall not be found, neither the names of the fathers, the names of the children written in the book of the law of God, saith the Lord of hosts, yea, thus saith the still small voice. . . . These things I say not of myself, therefore, as the Lord speaketh, he will also fulfill."—Times and Seasons, volume 5, pages 673, 674; Church History, volume 1, pages 259, 260. In this quotation we have the Spirit telling us through the Palmyra Seer, in unmistakable language, what is meant by tithing his people: "receive not their inheritance by consecration, agreeable to his law" (section 42), that is, to turn over all to the Bishop with a deed and covenant that can not be broken, and then the Bishop to deed you your inheritance in return. Undoubtedly this refers to the law given in section 42, as the Lord always refers to this section as the law; besides this letter was written only about twenty months after the law was given, while fresh in their minds, and most likely a common subject of conversation.

The importance of consecrating and getting our inheritances is made clear in the fact that if we do not we can not have our names enrolled with the people of God, neither our posterity. Can we doubt this duty any longer? If we do, what could God say for us to believe him? "If you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you."—Doctrine and Covenants 77: 1.

Some may still object (as we have heard some), on the grounds that they would be afraid the Bishop would not allow them large enough inheritances and possibly not where they would like it, etc. Let me disabuse your minds of any such idea, for as we have said previously, this is adjusted upon reason and justice.

Brother Edward Partridge; Sir: I proceed to answer your questions, concerning the consecration of property: First, it is not right to condescend to very great particulars in taking inventories. The fact is this: a man is bound by the law of the church to consecrate to the Bishop before he can be considered a legal heir to the kingdom of Zion; [How many legal heirs are there to-day?] and this, too, without constraint; and unless he does this he can not be acknowledged before the Lord, on the church book [Is baptism more necessary?]: therefore, to condescend to particulars, I will tell you that every man must be his own judge how much he should receive, and how much he should suffer to remain in the hands of the Bishop. I speak of those who consecrate more than they need for the support of themselves and their families.

The matter of consecration must be done by the mutual consent of both parties; for, to give the Bishop power to say how much every man shall have, and he be obliged to comply with the Bishop's judgment is giving to the Bishop more power than a king has; and, upon the other hand, to let every man say how much he needs, and the Bishop be obliged to comply with his judgment, is to throw Zion into confusion, and make a slave of the Bishops. The fact is, there must be a balance or equilibrium of power between the Bishop and the people; and thus harmony and good will, be preserved among you.

Therefore, those persons consecrating property to the Bishop in Zion, and then receiving an inheritance back, must show reasonably to the Bishop that he wants as much as he claims. But in case the two parties can not come to a mutual agreement, the Bishop is to have nothing to do about receiving their consecrations; and the case must be laid before a council of twelve high priests; the Bishop not being one of the council, but he is to lay the case before them, etc.

—Church History, volume 1, pages 300, 301.

Still we think we hear the grumbler say, Well! I do not want to give in my hard earnings to be squandered on those indolent and lazy fellows that won't work, etc. Now, my good brother, be careful and not make the saddest mistake of your life in taking such an unwise and dangerous position. What does God say on the subject?

Woe unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation, and of judgment, and of indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved! Woe unto you poor men, whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, and whose bellies are not satisfied, and whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, who will not labor with their own hands!—Section 56, paragraph 5.

Every person who belongeth to this church of Christ shall [not ought] observe to keep all the commandments and covenants of the church.—Section 42, paragraph 21.

Let every man be diligent in all things. And the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repents and mends his ways.—Section 75, paragraph 5.

In this quotation the Lord is simply emphasizing what he had given two months prior in section 68, paragraph 4: "And, again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, . . . for the idler shall be had in remembrance before the Lord. Now, I, the Lord, am not well pleased with the inhabitants of Zion, for there are idlers among them. . . . These things ought not to be, and must be done away from among them; wherefore let my servant Oliver Cowdery carry these sayings unto the land of Zion."

"Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer."—Section 42, paragraph 12.

Right here it might not be out of place for us to ask our readers to read very carefully section 46, and you will find that, "to every man is given a gift by the Spirit of God: to some it is given one, and to some is given another, that all may be profited thereby." Here we notice these gifts are not given to the different individuals, for their personal good alone but that all, that is, the entire body may be profited thereby; and in harmony with this reasoning we are forced to conclude that the Bishop, in the line of his duty, for the good of all, that is, the body, the church, is entitled to the spirit of discernment to detect these idlers and those who would come up to Zion or any of her stakes, to live upon the church, or "eat the bread of the laborer." Paragraph 7: "And unto the Bishop of the church, and unto such as God shall appoint and ordain to watch over the church, and to be elders unto the church, are to have it given unto them to discern all those gifts, lest there shall be any among you professing and yet be not of God."

So, dear brother, we find the Lord has made ample provisions for our protection against any imposition if we will only "right about face," and carry out his laws and "keep all of his commandments."

Again the objector says: "That is fine theory, but it isn't practicable; we could not adopt such a system in this great day of competition," etc. My dear reader, whose judgment is the best, ours or the Lords? Can we afford to take the position that the Lord would give us something not practical? No! But it is the only true basis and just plan that an infinite God could establish for man, wherein absolute equality can and must prevail to receive God's approval.

I, the Lord stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handiwork; and all things therein are mine; and it is my purpose to provide for my saints, for all things are mine; but it must needs be done in mine own way; and, behold, this is the way, that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my saints: that the poor shall be exalted, in that the rich are made low; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel [section 42], unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.—Section 101, paragraph 2.

By this we see that it is the plan ordained by the Lord and also learn the great penalty if we reject it.

Let me ask the objector where the people of the world get their idea of the "all things common" plan? Where do the trusts get their idea for combining to do business? Is it not based upon the idea "in unity there is strength;" "a house divided against itself can not stand"? Is not the prevailing sentiment in the world to-day that of unity or uniformity, only in their blindness they can not see it? Is not this what God taught away back in the beginning? "And the Lord called his people, Zion; because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them."—Genesis 7: 23, I. T. Enoch taught his people the same as Father Adam taught his, as verse one of the same chapter tells us, and they being prophets of God taught what God commanded. Hence we have God's instructions at the very beginning of man presenting this idea, this plan; and as long as the people observed it and lived close to God, they were blessed. But when wickedness prevailed, man's ways and ideas were introduced, and we see not only in the Bible, but in the Book of Mormon, the people under such conditions, from time to time; until they became so exceedingly wicked that the Lord saw fit to chastise them in some manner, until they were brought to their senses, and turned about and repented and again adopted the Lord's methods, when they were blessed and prospered as long as they continued faithful. But poor, weak, mortal man could not stand prosperity, and soon began to be lifted up again and forgot God and soon fell into his old ways of sin and wickedness. Is not this the history of mankind from the very beginning of creation? Not only individuals, but nations.

As early as January, 1831, section 38, paragraph 6, the Lord began to teach this people this very important lesson: "I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one, ye are not mine." And this idea or principle is constantly kept before the people in God's revelations from that time to this. Is this not a reëcho of our text, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, . . . and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself"?

Everything in this world belongs to the Lord, and he has a right to say how it is to be used:

And again, a commandment I give unto you concerning your stewardship which I have appointed unto you; behold, all these properties are mine, or else your faith is vain, and ye are found hypocrites, and the covenants which ye have made unto me are broken; and if the properties are mine then ye are stewards, otherwise ye are no stewards. But verily I say unto you, I have appointed unto you to be stewards over mine house, even stewards indeed.—Section 101, paragraph 10.

But the objector comes up again with the statement, Under such a system the opportunities for our development would be cut off; besides there would be no incentive to try to improve. Listen to the Lord upon this point, section 81, paragraph 4: "And all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God." How nicely it agrees with our text. While this is speaking directly concerning temporalities, the same principle is true in any other line, physical, mental, moral, or spiritual.

Under this system it will be necessary for us to have our farmers, mechanics, merchants, teachers, ministers, and individuals engaged in every legitimate and necessary occupation of life. What is to hinder a man from developing, in any line; if he is appointed a steward over a large farm, or small one either, and at the end of the year after he has had his every need and ample support, to then turn over the balance to the storehouse; why not? The church will need many farmers to till the ground and supply the necessities of life. What is to hinder a man who is a mechanic, from developing as much then as now? as we will need all classes of skilled workmen, every man is to get his needs and wants amply supplied for his labor, and the rest is to go to the Lord's storehouse, every person realizing he is equal before God, "and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God."

We will need factories of all kinds, and men to place in charge of them. If the church appoints a man a stewardship over a factory that may require several hundred thousand dollars capital, it will not be his; he is simply appointed to manage its affairs and to get his just wants supplied for his labor, and the rest goes into the storehouse or treasury. The same with a merchant. If a man is appointed a stewardship over a large store, it is not his, but to look after and run for the best good of the church and he to be like all men in whatever occupation they may be engaged, get their just needs and wants, all working for the one grand and unselfish end, to please God. The same with the teacher, the minister, etc.

When we remember that the Lord has promised his people if they do these things or work in his way, we can then realize to a degree the pleasure there would be in so working as in the case of the Nephites of old and others of God's former saints, the special blessings of God would be ours to enjoy and we would be constantly happy and find great pleasure in our labor, feeling the presence of God's Spirit burning within our breasts all the while; besides our labors would be blessed and we would be able to accomplish very much more than now, and not have to work one half as hard as some do at the present time and then can scarcely make a living. God never intended man to work so hard nor so many hours as many have to now under man's plan.

Shall we go back to this plan so we can have his protection, his love, his Spirit's direction, and bring our tithes into the storehouse? And prove me "if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts."—Malachi 3:10, 11.

If we could only drop self and selfishness out, and think of the goodness of God, and the great eternity that we are heir to if we do his bidding, and all because Christ died upon the cross for us, we would love our God with all our hearts, and with all our souls, and with all our minds, and our neighbor as ourselves, and "every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God." "For if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things."

Well, what about the tenth? The reader will have learned by this time that we do not understand that when the Lord spoke of the law of tithing, or of tithing his people, that he meant simply the tenth, but the entire law governing the finances of the church. True, Abram paid tithes to Melchisedec; but what was it for? Abram simply made an offering to the Lord for helping him to bring back his brother's son. We have failed to find any command from the Lord for this. Will some one please show where the Lord commanded Abram to pay a tenth?

Again, Jacob is said to have paid a tenth. The Bible tells us Jacob vowed a vow, if the Lord would be with him in his journeyings, and give him bread to eat, and clothes to wear, and permit him to come to his father's house again in peace, he would pay the Lord a tenth of all he would give him. But where is the command from God for the tenth? Can any one tell where any of the prophets of God taught the people to observe the tenth? True, some of them speak of individuals giving the tenth; but where was it taught?

Could it not have been some special sacrifice that was offered in case of some special blessing from God? Again, might it not have been permitted after the higher and better law given to Adam, Enoch, etc., was rejected, to act as a schoolmaster, in that branch of the work, the same as the Mosaic law (or a part of the Mosaic law), to lead them up to Christ's time when the better law was again taught as we have shown.

What about section 106, Doctrine and Covenants? Well, if we are to accept that at all, we can only make it to be an after consideration; after the law in section 42 has been carried out, and then a special sacrifice.

Dear reader, this is a subject in which we are all deeply interested, or should be, and the writer has been seeking light from every source known to him, and presents these thoughts for your consideration and the express purpose that wherein he is not in harmony with his motto: "To the law and to the testimony; and if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them," that he may be shown his errors and put in harmony.

We do not think for a moment that this article will meet the approval of all, neither do we make any claim of superiority in presenting it, purely in the interests of truth and light. "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord."—Isaiah 1:18.

Thus we trust it may be received in the same spirit in which we intend, and that none may jump at conclusions, or spurn the idea without careful and prayerful consideration. None of us in this great latter-day work are so big or so perfect we can always trust our judgment or understanding alone. What we want is to subjugate self and selfishness and adopt God's plan in all things. Therefore we trust this article may be considered in the light of our motto, Isaiah 8:20, and Paul's statement to the Thessalonian brethren, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good," and with our text, Matthew 22:35-40, constantly in their minds.

Those who have given the subject any study know we have but simply commenced the subject, and that many more texts bear upon the same; but for fear our uncouth manner of handling the subject may tire you we conclude for the present, praying God may bless the effort for the good of the cause and forbidding any injury thereto.

CRITICISM ON THE HIGHER CRITICISMS.

That the so-called higher criticism of the Scriptures of this day is very absurd in many respects was demonstrated by Doctor Eaton, editor of the Western Recorder, some time ago. The doctor shows in the proof of his position that their theories are far-fetched in the extreme; and furnishes two illustrations to prove it: "At the Baptist Congress, in Detroit (1894), Doctor Howard Osgood, the greatest Hebrew scholar in America, in the presence of men who were well informed on the subject, and who were quite favorable to the alleged 'results of the higher criticism,' stated what those 'results' are, as told by their advocates. He asked to be corrected if in any particular he erred; but no correction was offered. From slips of paper he read statements of these 'results,' and when all present had assented to the correctness of the presentation, Doctor Osgood startled them by saying that all his quotations were from Thomas Morgan, a Deist of the early part of the eighteenth century, and from Tom Paine, the well-known infidel of the latter part of that century."

"Not long ago two leading ministers in the North united in writing an account of a great religious gathering and they sent their combined article to a number of higher critics, requesting that they separate it into the two documents giving to each of the two authors his portion. Their failures were most egregious, and no two of them agreed, because they worked independently. And yet these men, utterly unable to resolve an article, avowedly written by two men, in plain English, and written in their own time and country, into its original documents, these men are cock-sure they can correctly divide a book, written in Hebrew thousands of years ago, with no evidence of composite authorship, so as to give each supposed author his exact portion. And they claim to do this so accurately that they divide a single sentence among three authors, with perfect confidence."

Thoroughness, and accurateness are to be commended in all vocations of life, but in our pursuance for a correct knowledge of the holy laws and prophecies of an all-wise Creator, we should not go beyond the border into the absurd, in contradistinction to the only sure way that is positively right in rendering interpretations to his word. We may reach the high pinnacle of human genius and greatness that the world may be awed in looking at our grand and extensive knowledge of things; we may wield the scepters over universities and great seats of human learning; our minds may be crammed with the lore of centuries and become cyclopedias of knowledge; but if we take God's inspired word, and apply our vast worldly knowledge in rendering an interpretation to things therein contained, without any aid from heaven, we will make many mistakes, and it will be accounted a failure. God has a specific way of giving individual man a correct understanding of his ways: by complying to the plain conditions of his law and abiding therein; by an upright and charitable conduct toward others, and a pure humble consecration to his demands, asking and doing those things in life that will bring God's Holy Spirit to enlighten our mind to a correct comprehension of his revealed will; and when we curtail the miraculous from God and his ways we are wresting from the world the very key that will unlock the storehouse of knowledge, which is above all other knowledge in the world.

Truly did God say through his prophet, Isaiah, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways, my ways, saith the Lord." And in so delivering it he for ever establishes a decree unchangeable in nature which is as important to this generation as then. Paul declares to the Corinthians: "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" How true the statement when we consider the history of those times and see the perverted ideas entertained by those hypocritical Jews regarding the coming Messiah. They were skilled, many of them, in the profoundest learning of the day. The Talmud rendered valuable aid in their way of studying the scriptures; but yet in their exalted stations and understanding, they did not hinder God in bringing about his purposes.

"For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."

The prophets and teachers of the past largely were a class of men not thoroughly educated in worldly ways, but when called, and in their teachings and understanding of the utterances of the prophets, they demonstrated a unity of belief. Why? Because the same spirit emanating from the divine mind in giving it, was also enjoyed by the one rendering the interpretation. It is the same to-day that it was then; and if we wish to have a perfect understanding we must first get hold on the means that brings it to man.

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God." Does the world follow this admonition? If not, then they are fallible guides and not worthy to render interpretations and lead others; for if the "blind lead the blind, both will fall into the ditch."

S. S. SMITH.

CO-OPERATION.

We were much pleased to learn by HERALD and Ensign of the formation of a coöperative society in Independence, and do most sincerely hope that it will prove successful and accomplish all its most ardent friends can desire.

While I do not pretend to know all about the proper methods of carrying on such societies, yet I have observed a few things which tends to enhance the care and anxiety of those who are appointed by a society to administer its affairs, and as other societies of a like character may soon be organized, I may be permitted to call attention to a few of those things.

There have been many similar societies formed, and many plans made to avoid failure; and when failure has ensued, it generally is not by reason of errors in the organization, or in its laws; for it is not so difficult to organize such a society with its laws, by-laws, or what not, but the difficulty remains in carrying into effect the intentions of the society, and of abiding within its limits, in the doing of which some discretion must be allowed its administrators in the details of its working. And there lies one of the rocks upon which many societies have been wrecked, not because of the errors of its administrators so much as by a continual harassing of such officers by those who through fear of failure, or of overweening pride, judge that such and such things are going wrong, and being unwilling to trust to their laws for correction of real or supposed mistakes seek a remedy in evil insinuations, and out of their hypochondriacal minds, of mole-hills make mountains of trouble, and sow the seeds of distrust, discredit, and suspicion which gendereth to failure.

However strong an organization may be, however much it may be hedged about with laws, failure will ensue if there is a manifest unwillingness to obey those laws and honor its administrators; therefore obedience to laws, and consequently to their administrators, is absolutely essential for the proper development of any institution; and while this may not be a panacea for all its perils, it is a necessary feature in its success, for no society can be successfully conducted except by close obedience to properly ordained laws and qualified officers.

In Doctrine and Covenants 102:2 we read: "Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer." The principle of the celestial kingdom is obedience, which must be learned by suffering if not by counsel; and the mandates of the King of Zion must be obeyed in every item of his laws, and—by consequence—his officers respected and obeyed, ere Zion can be redeemed. Redeemed from what, and to what? From the sin of the world, which is willful disobedience, which in the nature of things can not be forgiven but must be overcome; and to the principle of obedience to law and its administrators; the celestial principle, by which all the creations of God on earth and in the starry firmament are governed and controlled, except man, who with the adversary and his angels are rebellious and disobedient, and consequently are in bondage; for strict obedience to law and its administrators is the only principle by which liberty can be maintained. And it is indispensable, and an eternal principle, that he who becomes a true administrator of law must himself be obedient to law.

In all rightly constituted societies there are rules, regulations, and laws by which the society is guarded and preserved from the unjust use or abuse of power by its officers; and if just suspicion arises in the minds of any, these laws should be appealed to in their proper time and place, and member and officer be obedient to them.

In coöperative societies there is naturally a certain independence of spirit among its members, which in the case of the inexperienced and unthoughtful, or the evilly disposed easily drifts into a self-sufficiency which, from first intimating, soon passes into dictating what ought to be done, and when, and how; and if not listened to and obeyed will by misrepresentation of truth, and insinuation, and if, and if, bring their fellows into disrepute and cause discouragement and finally failure. That selfishness which has manifested itself in envy and jealousy of authorities has existed from the time when Lucifer, a son of the morning, was cast out of heaven by reason of it, until now; and his followers may be known by the fruits of their lips, for with the poison of the asp under their tongue, and in the pride of their hearts, they willfully despise dominion and speak evil of dignities; they are the very antithesis of those who exercise that charity which thinketh no evil. Thus in the parable in Doctrine and Covenants 98:6: The servants of the nobleman planted the olive-trees, built the hedge round about them and set the watchmen as they were commanded; but they were also commanded to build a tower, and the knowing ones among them thought they did not need a tower, so they began to murmur, saying, "What need hath my lord of this tower?" and so the tower was not built, and the enemy came in and destroyed their works. Therefore if a society would be prosperous, let them persistently refuse to listen to the spirit of murmuring against their leaders or their directions; for if they are disrespected, evilly spoken of, disobeyed, or distrust brought upon them by insinuations, then, as in the parable, the enemy is upon them and will destroy their works.

But we are persuaded of better things of Zion and her children; for the "Independence Manufacturing Company," composed of honorable men, have chosen wise, capable, and upright men as their officers, men who with all the powers of their minds will seek the good of Zion and her redemption and development; and the whole church will help, and hope, and pray that they may prosper as did Enoch and his band, until all the children of the King shall be equal in temporal things, all willingly and joyfully yielding obedience to the King of Glory and all his representatives; and with true brotherly love, help them, uphold them, sustain them, as the children of a well-ordered family upholds their parents, then shall peace and prosperity reign in Zion, and the children of the King rejoice.

If this society and other kindred societies in Zion and the regions round about and in other lands are successful, they may assist the Saints to organize themselves by a bond and covenant that can not be broken; that we may all become equal in earthly things for the obtaining heavenly things; for if we are not equal in earthly things we can not be equal in obtaining heavenly things; and when we are thus bound together by a bond and covenant that can not be broken by transgression, except judgment shall immediately follow, there will be no poor among us but we shall all have equal claims on the properties; every man according to his wants and needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God, and gaining other talents even an hundredfold to be cast into the Lord's storehouse to become the common property of the whole church. This surely is God's plan of coöperation, and is the reverse of the thought that every man may do as he may choose with the properties, for instead of this it means an absolute obedience to law by officer and other member, and perfect discipline which is willing obedience to the properly qualified officers.

"Every man shall receive according to his wants, inasmuch as his wants are just;" this notifies us that some person or persons must judge whether the wants are just or not. And in that day he who transgresses that covenant will at once be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, and shall not have power to bring evil upon the people; for they shall be ruled with a rod of iron which is the word of God, disobedience to which causes one to be cast out; obedience to which leads to the tree of life eternal.

May Zion flourish. And in seeking to obey the Master's injunction, "Be one," ask ourselves what is meant by being one or how we can become one, and apply these to every phase of the command, and in humility of heart bring ourselves in mind and soul and body in accord with the instruction recorded in the three books which he has given to us, and thus attain to that oneness which exists between the Father and the Son, who said, "I and my Father are one," and who was so completely one with the Father, that with perfect reverence he informed others, "My Father is greater than I," and who also prayed that his disciples might be one, even as he and his Father were one. May God hasten the day when all who love Zion may be one as the Father and the Son are one; then with perfect reverence will we be willing to yield obedience to law, and honor the administrators of that law.

Success to the Independence Manufacturing Company. May it continue to prosper until it be merged into God's perfect system of finance, and all the children of the King rejoice in perfect liberty, and in oneness of desire, seeing eye to eye.

Original Poetry.

[The following little poem has found itself in our hands. Who its author is we do not know.—ED.]

The Cyclone.

O boisterous wind, whence comest thou?
 Thy abiding place is where?
 Dost thou live in some dark clime,
 With storm wrecks everywhere?
 Do gentle breezes never blow
 In the land thou callest home?
 And do the evening zephyrs there
 At twilight never come?
 Thou seemest here a child of wrath,
 Sent by destruction's wing,
 To leave but discord in thy path
 And desolations fling.

Of sunny homes, so fair to see,
 With beauty spread around,
 Thou leavest but a barren waste,
 Of homeless, desolate ground.

Where all hearts once beat high with hope,
 Where the loved and loving stray,
 Thou leavest there a mangled corpse
 To mark thy storm-wrecked way.

Fair cities thou dost bring to naught,
 The land with mourning fill;
 Is it by chance thou doest this,
 Or dost thou do God's will?

Soliloquy of "The Spanish Hamlet."

Professor Hubert M. Skinner, of Chicago, is a close student of Spanish literature, and has brought out some very excellent translations of Spanish gems. By his permission we reproduce his translation of soliloquy of "The Spanish Hamlet," as read by Professor Skinner at the association of Western Writers at Winona Lake, Indiana, on July 2. This soliloquy is found in one of Calderon's plays. Calderon is styled the "Shakespeare of Spain."

This translation is made from the drama "La Vida Es Sueno" ("Life is a Dream"), and occurs in the fore part of the first act. Prince Segismundo is confined like a beast in a cage, in order to thwart a prophecy of evil to the throne of Poland.

Mr. Skinner's translation was reproduced in the Chicago Record-Herald for July 6, accompanied by the following explanation:

"Greatly as this drama is admired throughout the Spanish world, it is not easy for the Anglo-Saxon to appreciate it without divesting himself of his preconceived ideas of dramatic art. Accustomed to the strong lines of Shakespeare's blank verse, he is apt to consider light and trivial the short lines of the Spanish drama, with their smoothly flowing rhymes.

"The dramas of England and Spain have been so different in their development that they possess little in common, and must not be judged both from one and the same standpoint.

"Calderon stands second only to Shakespeare among the great dramatists of the world. In this translation there is an attempt to reproduce the "Soliloquy" in the metrical form of the original. This is a characteristic feature of Professor Skinner's translations from the poetry of foreign lands."

SEGISMUNDO'S SOLILOQUY.

Oh, miserable me!
 Miserable and luckless one!
 Oh, God, since thus my life I spend,
 Shall I assume to comprehend
 What crime it is that I have done—
 What crime beneath the sun?

My only crime was that of birth;
 I sinned, alas, in being born.
 In that I've learned the cruel scorn
 And hate of all the earth.

Yet this I seek to know:
 That sin aside, what is there worse,
 That could incite a deeper curse,
 A deadlier import show?

But were not others born, like me?
 What rendered them immune?
 What privilege that, later or soon,
 My life shall never see—
 That never is to be?

The bird is born, with plumage gay,
 And when 'tis scarce a winged tuft

PREPARATION, CARE, AND ECONOMY OF FOOD.

It spreads its blithesome wings aloft,
And floats in joy away,
To greet the broadening day.

It leaves its warm and tender nest,
And, silent, soaring far above,
Its nature and its powers to prove,
It cleaves the air with zest—
It knows no rude behest.

The bird can seek its goal,
Unlimited and free;
While I, endowed with human soul,
Have less of liberty!

The brute is born, with spotted hide—
No sign of favor of the stars,
Its shining coat with pictured bars,
But of its Painter's pride—

And then begins the hunter's chase.
Humanity in fierce pursuit,
Awakens fierceness in the brute;
Its life the issue of the race,
It grows in cruelty apace—
The monster of the place.

The brute can seek its goal,
And from its hunters flee,
But I, endowed with human soul,
Have less of liberty!

The birthless fish its form
Assumes from eggs and slime,
A scaly float; yet from the time
It feels the waters warm
It glides where'er it will,
It threads the waters vast;
Its happy lot is cast
In freedom of its power and skill.

The fish can seek its goal,
Wherever it may be,
But I, endowed with human soul,
Have less of liberty!

The crystal stream bursts into life,
And winds among the sylvan bowers,
A silvery serpent, mid the flowers,
In fields with beauty rife.

The brook can seek its goal,
And laugh in rippling glee,
But I, endowed with human soul,
Have less of liberty!

Soul, soul of man, that burns
Like Ætna's awful crater high,
With pent-up fires that will not die,
But sleep and rage by turns!
I am an Ætna—I,
And burning lavas pour
Forth from a soul that, meant to soar,
Can not in durance lie!

Nay, I would burst apart,
And pour my soul in air!
From my hot bosom I would tear
The fragments of my heart!

What law, what power, what word
Of right or reason can deny
To strong and proud humanity
The right that God supreme conferred
On fish and brute and bird?

It is not our purpose in these readings to prescribe for our sisters a plan of living or a course of diet; but simply to state some facts relative to the requirements of the body, and the properties of different kinds of food, which we ask our sisters to consider carefully in connection with any other reliable information they may be able to obtain on these subjects, whereby they may be better fitted, each one for herself, to exercise care, judgment, and skill in providing for the daily needs of her family.

In taking up the subject of "Preparation, Care, and Economy of Food," we quote again from Bulletin No. 142:

"The cooking of food has much to do with its nutritive value. Many articles which, owing to their mechanical condition or other cause, are quite unfit for nourishment when raw, are very nutritious when cooked. It is a matter of common experience that a well-cooked food is wholesome and appetizing, while the same material badly cooked is unpalatable. There are three chief purposes of cooking. The first is to change the mechanical condition so that the digestive juices can act more freely. Heating often changes the structure of food material very materially, so that they are more easily chewed and more thoroughly digested. The second is to make it more appetizing by improving the appearance or flavor, or both. Food which is attractive to the taste quickens the flow of saliva and other digestive juices, and thus digestion is aided. The third is to kill by heat any disease germs, parasites, or other dangerous organisms it may contain. This is often a very important matter and applies to both animal and vegetable foods. . . .

"Scrupulous neatness should always be observed in keeping, handling, and serving food. If ever cleanliness is desirable it must be in the things we eat, and every care should be taken to insure it for the sake of health as well as decency: Cleanliness in this connection means not only absence of dirt, but freedom from undesirable bacteria and other minute organisms, and from worms and other parasites. If food raw or cooked is kept in dirty places, peddled from dirty carts, prepared in dirty rooms and on dirty dishes, or exposed to foul air, disease germs and other offensive and dangerous substances can easily get in. Food and drink may indeed be very dangerous purveyors of disease. . . . This danger is not confined to animal foods. Vegetables and fruits may become contaminated with eggs of numerous parasites from the fertilizers applied to them. Raw fruits and vegetables should always be thoroughly washed before serving if there is any doubt as to their cleanliness. If the food is sufficiently heated in cooking all organisms are killed.

"Sometimes food undergoes decomposition in which injurious chemical compounds, so-called ptomaines, are formed. Poisoning by cheese, ice-cream, preserved fish, canned meats and the like has been caused in this way. The ptomaines often withstand the heat of cooking. . . .

"Dainty ways of serving have a usefulness beyond their esthetic value. Every one knows that a feeble appetite is often tempted by a tastefully garnished dish, when the same material carelessly served would seem quite unpalatable. Furthermore many cheap articles and 'left-overs' when well seasoned and attractively served may be just as appetizing as dearer ones, and will usually be found quite as nutritious. . . .

"For people in good health and with good digestion there are two important rules to be observed in the regulation of the diet. The first is to choose the things that 'agree' with them, and to avoid those that they can not digest and assimilate without harm. The second is to use such kinds and amounts of food as will supply all the nutrients the body needs and at the same time avoid burdening it with superfluous material to be disposed of at the cost of health and strength.

"For guidance in this matter nature provides us with instinct, taste, and experience. Physiological chemistry adds to these the knowledge—still new and far from adequate—of the composition of food and the laws of nutrition.

"In our actual practice of eating we are apt to be influenced too much by taste—that is by the dictates of the palate; we are prone to let natural instinct be overruled by acquired appetite, and neglect the teachings of experience. We need to observe our diet and its effects more carefully and regulate appetite by reason. In doing this we may be greatly aided by the knowledge of what our food contains and how it serves its purpose in nutrition. . . .

"When more food is eaten than is needed, or when articles difficult of digestion are taken, the digestive organs are overtaxed, if not positively injured, and much energy is thus wasted which might have been turned to better account. The evils of overeating may not be felt at once, but sooner or later they are sure to appear—perhaps in an excessive amount of fatty tissue, perhaps in general debility, perhaps in actual disease. . . .

"The best physiological evidence implies that moderate quantities of food taken at moderate intervals are more easily and completely digested by ordinary people than larger quantities taken at longer intervals.

"The cost of food being the principal item in the living expenses of a large majority of the people, and the physical welfare of all being so intimately connected with and dependent upon diet, the question to be considered here is this: Of the different food materials which are palatable, nutritious, and otherwise suited for nourishment, what ones are pecuniarily the most economical; in other words, what ones furnish the largest amount of available material at the lowest cost? In answering this question it is necessary to take into account not only the prices per pound, quart, or bushel of the different materials, but also the kinds and amount of the actual nutrients they contain and their fitness to meet the demands of the body for nourishment. The cheapest food is that which supplies the most nutriment for the least money. The most economical food is that which is cheapest and at the same time best adapted to the needs of the user. . . .

"It is quite evident that the market price of food materials is not regulated by their actual value for nutriment. For instance, an ounce of protein or fat from the tenderloin of beef is no more nutritious than that from a round or shoulder, but it costs considerably more. The agreeableness of food to the palate or to the buyer's fancy has much to do in deciding current demand and consequent selling price. One point to be especially noted here is the difference in the cost of nutrients in foods already prepared for use and in the same material not so prepared. For instance, wheat made into ordinary prepared breakfast cereal might contain no more available protein or energy than the same wheat made into white or graham flour, but the breakfast cereals cost more per pound than the flour. At the same time the breakfast foods afford a pleasing variety in the diet and often require little or no cooking and are therefore very convenient, while the flour must be made into bread or other food at more expense of labor, fuel, etc. . . .

"A common mistake in purchasing food is in buying the more expensive kinds when cheaper ones would serve the purpose just as well. This is often done under the impression that there is some peculiar virtue in the costlier materials, and that economy in diet is detrimental to dignity and welfare. Unfortunately it is too often the case that those who are most extravagant in this respect are the ones who can least afford it. On the other hand there is frequently a desire to economize, but a lack of knowledge of the best method of doing so. Many a housekeeper who sincerely tries to do the best for those to be provided for, but whose every cent must tell, buys eggs at twenty-five cents a dozen, or sirloin steak at twenty cents a pound, when for the same amount of money, it would be possible to get twice as much nourishment from a cheaper cut of meat which, with a little skill in preparation and cooking, could be made into a tasty dish such as persons in far easier circumstances would not hesitate to set upon their tables.

"The difficulty is the ignorance of the simple principles of nutrition. That ignorance results in a great waste of money. The maxim 'that the best is the cheapest,' as popularly understood to apply to higher priced materials is not true of foods. The larger part of the price of costlier foods is paid for appearance, flavor, or rarity. While the dearer articles are often more pleasing to the palate, and are sometimes more easily cooked or possess a finer flavor they are no more digestible or nutritious than the cheaper ones. . . .

"The plain substantial standard food materials, like the cheaper cuts of meat and fish, milk, flour, cornmeal, oatmeal, beans and potatoes are as digestible and nutritious and as well fitted for the nourishment of people in good health as are any of the costlier materials.

"We endeavor to make our diet suit our palate by paying high prices in the market rather than by skillful cooking and tasteful serving at home. The remedy for this evil will be found in an understanding of the elementary facts regarding food and nutrition, in a better knowledge of cooking and serving food, and in the acceptance of the doctrine that economy is not only respectable but honorable.

"It is commonly remarked by those who study the conditions of living of people of limited means in different parts of the country that for substantial improvement of their household economics two things are needed. They must be informed as to the high nutritive values of the cheaper foods as compared with the costlier kinds, and the methods of cooking must be improved. A great deal of fuel is wasted in the preparation of food and even then a great deal of the food is badly cooked. To replace dear food badly cooked by cheaper food well cooked is important for both health and purse. To make the table more attractive will be an efficient means for making the home life more agreeable."

"Last Offering."

This morning I read in the Patriot, of Lamoni, of the passing away of Sr. Anna Hartshorn, of Davis City, and it calls to mind a statement she made to me.

Sunday, August 31, I was at Davis City by request of Bro. John Smith to fill the appointment. After the morning service went home with Bro. Hartshorn to administer to his wife, and have dinner. Before I left for the afternoon meeting Sr. Hartshorn came into the sitting-room, her lips trembled, tears stood in her eyes, her thin hand extended, she deposited a five-dollar bill in my hand with the statement: "This is my last offering to Graceland."

I can not soon forget that noble, God-fearing woman, saintly in her suffering; trusting in the promises. Peace to her ashes.

ADRIAN, Illinois, October 18, 1902.

HUNT, Arkansas, October 21.

Dear Herald: I am at present at Hunt, preaching to interested crowds. Prejudice is giving way. This is where Bro. Erwin got the eggs. They have threatened the writer, but he will stay with it. Expect to baptize some in the near future. One has already given in her name, Bro. Knick's daughter. I go from here about ten miles on the mountain.

S. D. LOVE.

BOZEMAN, Montana, October 21.

Editors Herald: I again come with a statement in brief of my work while in Washington. Tuesday, September 23, Bro. Luff and I began at Castle Rock, remaining only two nights. There have been hindering causes there which prevented the progress of the work, to some extent; but we have a number of good Saints living there, and they have a house of their own, and by proper work being done great good can be accomplished.

Our next point was Roslyn, where we remained from the 25th to the 29th, dedicating their new church on Sunday, the 28th. The notable feature at the dedication was the prayer offered by Bro. Luff. All were deeply impressed, and many moved to tears during the prayer. Surely God heard that prayer. There is quite a good branch and a number of good workers at that point.

Our next meetings were held at the house of Bro. G. E. Ward, in Seattle. Bro. Ward is the presiding elder in Seattle Branch but he was not at home. His wife, and the other branch officers were equal to the occasion, and we held four interesting meetings there. If they had a public house in which to meet, and an elder there who could devote his whole time to the work, great good might be done and many added to the church.

We went from Seattle to Spokane, where we held three meetings; then went out to Deep Creek Branch for two nights. This branch is twenty miles from Spokane, and is under the care of Bro. J. M. Puckett. I baptized Bro. Puckett in Illinois many years ago, and I was glad to find him and his excellent wife still firm in the faith, with most of the children in the church, and alive to the interests of the work. Bro. Puckett's son and daughter came to Spokane after us with a rig and drove us out, then the son took us back to the city again where we held one more preaching service, and succeeded in settling some difficulties that existed among some of the members in Spokane Branch, all parties signing an agreement to stand by the settlement made and not revive the trouble again. It seems a great pity that all Saints could not so conduct themselves as to bring credit instead of disgrace to the church. I trust all concerned will in the future so live as to reflect the light of Christ to the world; and if they do, a good work will be done in Spokane.

Here Bro. Luff and the writer separated after nearly three months of labor together. It is indeed pleasant to be associated with one so able and willing to do the Master's work intelligently, and one whose whole intent is to do the Father's will. It seems a great pity that he can not have physical ability commensurate with his fervent desire to do service for the Master. In him we have an example of patience and perseverance under affliction that is commendable, and must serve to stimulate others to duty under trying circumstances. My soul goes out in prayer to God for my brethren who have to labor under so much physical disability; but I must believe that all will work for their good in the end, so when the work is done and the returns all in, we will see in the distribution of rewards, God has not been unkind.

From Spokane I went to Anaconda, Montana, to be present at the district conference, where we had a very pleasant time. From here, in company with Bro. D. C. White, we went to Deerlodge and Woodside Branches. Leaving Bro. White at Woodside to continue the work, I went to Butte and preached once in the Advent church, then on to this place where I preached three times last Sunday in the courthouse. I go to-day with Bro. Gomer Reese, out fifteen miles to Reese Creek where we will preach two nights, then back here where we expect to preach Friday night and twice next Sunday. Where I have been the Saints have universally listened attentively and treated me kindly. The good Lord has also remembered me kindly, and at times has given me a goodly portion of his Holy Spirit. I hereby thank the Saints for their kindness, and God for his goodness and mercy to me. I desire so to live as to meet the divine approval; but I am aware that I make mistakes and blunders along the way, but I hope to improve.

Praying God to bless and prosper his work and people, and hoping to continue to try to do my part, I am, as ever,

At work,

G. H. HILLIARD.

MITCHELL, Ontario, October 21.

Editors Herald: Our district conferences are past, the latter one adjourning yesterday in St. Marys. For the first time I had the opportunity of attending both.

I just arrived here to-day. This is the southern limit of the field assigned to A. E. Mortimer and me, Kincardine being the northern. I am to preach to-night; and glad indeed I am to get to work again after a couple weeks of branch visiting. Only one family of Saints here. Am feeling after a suitable place for a serial effort, hence may move right on. My field address will now be Box 648 Stratford, Ontario. My correspondents will please take notice.

ALVIN KNISLEY.

WATONGA, Oklahoma, October 21.

Dear Herald: I have never written to you before, but will attempt to encourage some of the scattered ones, as I am one such. I never hear a sermon except through your dear pages. Though away from all Saints, I am striving to do what I can to serve God and obtain a home in the better land. Let us not cease the conflict, and let us put our trust in the God we love.

Your sister,

MRS. JOHN HUGHES.

GLEN JEAN, West Virginia, October 20.

Editors Herald: As I write this morning, I feel more and more impressed to press forward unto the mark of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus, and run with patience the race that is set before us.

Being isolated, with the exception of one man whom I baptized yesterday, makes it rather a lonely journey, with only the church literature to read and the Spirit to guide. The man whom I baptized is intelligent, and will, perhaps, be a useful man in the church. So you see the work is beginning to open up step by step in this part of the Lord's heritage.

The Lord does nothing in haste, but works in a sure, systematic way. "Line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little." God did not complete the earth and the things therein in a day, neither do we complete our travels on the "narrow way" in a few days, but a whole lifetime is embraced therein. We ascend one round of the ladder at a time go up step by step, until finally we will reach, if persistent in the effort, that stage of perfection which Christ designs that we shall reach. (See Ephesians 4: 13.)

We understand that we have a race to run, and those who are successful will receive the prize; viz., eternal life. God gives us this eternal life, and it is something above this earth life. Christ told the woman of Samaria that "whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."—John 4: 14. So we see this "everlasting life" comes through Christ, and in and through him only can we be saved; that is, by complying with the requirements of the gospel which is promised to be a lamp to our feet.

I am prepared to say that it takes a strait walk to walk the narrow way: "Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—Matthew 7: 14. Christ says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life."—John 14: 6. And to find that way and walk therein is to have the greatest blessings obtainable. Why? Because it leads to everlasting life. Some might ask, "How are we going to get on that way?" This is the most important question of all. The intent and design of the gospel is that men might be saved by complying with its precepts.

In order to enter the narrow way, the first thing necessary is to have faith; that is, believe the gospel. After we come in possession of faith, we are admonished to repent, cease to do evil and learn to do well. Then after that we realize that it is necessary to be baptized in water, by those having the authority, for the remission of sins. After that, have hands laid on for the reception of the Holy Ghost. By complying with the aforesaid brings us into the kingdom of God, and puts us in a saved condition, if we continue. "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32.

This is a new place here, as far as preaching is concerned, there having been but little preaching done in these parts. There are many good, honest people who, no doubt, could be reached with the gospel. This is a mining county, and the coal strike still continues, which is affecting the country in general everywhere; but there are some possibilities of it being settled soon. Some of the coal barons are signing up according to the miners' terms.

I ever pray for the advancement of the cause of Christ.

O. E. SURBAUGH.

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Missouri, October 20.

Editors Herald: Last night Bro. Keck closed his series of meetings; and while none was baptized, I am sure more people are convinced we have the truth than at any time in the history of Eldorado Springs. The little church was crowded last night, good audiences all week, good attention. I hope the good work will continue until all the Lord would have enter his kingdom will be gathered in. Surely the field is ripe. Eldorado Springs is in the extreme northwestern corner of the county. I know I could get many places in Cedar County for our elders to preach if we just had the men. I hope to be able to do some preaching myself some time. I hold a priest's license, but the cares of life have held me bound for years. Some incidents during the week while Bro. Keck was preaching indicated that the adversary was not asleep.

E. W. LLOYD.

KANSAS CITY, Missouri, October 18.

Editors Herald: While looking over the HERALD this morning I was somewhat impressed with the statement of the editors that the HERALD should have twice the number of subscribers that it has. I believe this is my first attempt to speak for myself for publication, having been simply the instrument through which others have spoken, a great many times. But I feel like intruding myself upon your notice so far as to say that it seems to me there is not a family in the church that can afford to do without the church papers. First and foremost of all, the HERALD should be in every home; not simply because it is our duty to support the church publications, but because of the good that it does us, because we can keep up with the progress of the work by a perusal of its pages, and because it keeps us "alive" to the work in all its departments. The Ensign, Autumn Leaves, Hope and Quarterlies are also indispensable, if we really want to keep bright in the work, and the expense is so small compared with the benefits received that we should use our utmost endeavor to be the recipients of all the good that comes from these sources.

The only difficulty that occurs to me in writing these sentiments, is the fact that the very people we would like to impress with these thoughts are the ones that will not be so likely to read them. The ones who already are readers and subscribers are not the ones who need the urging in that direction; but we may hope that the influence will go out through those who read, that we may be energetically engaged in trying in this way to do some good.

There is the question of expense in connection with this that confronts us all, but the "value received" from the outlay is so much greater than the expenditure, that, from a business standpoint, we can not afford to reject the proposition. Can we not make a little more sacrifice in some directions, if necessary? Can we not do without something that we think to be necessary for our pleasure, and have our minds strengthened and enlightened? Can we not make our bodies a "living sacrifice" in this direction by not adorning them unnecessarily nor feeding them, to the neglect of the adornment and the feeding of the soul?

Is there not too much of a disposition on our part to feel injured when there is to be a collection taken up, or necessary expenses met, or any new movement started, if it has any relation to our pocketbooks? Why do we not awaken fully to the thought that we are the beneficiaries all the time of God's mercy, and that here and now is our opportunity to show what we are willing to do to repay all his kindness, and to accomplish good in the world, even if we have to do without some of the temporal necessities? Those of us who feel that we are too poor to do anything are laboring under a mistake, it seems to me. If poor, do we not need the mercies of God, just the same? And if we would please him we must cultivate faith to believe what he says, and having cultivated that principle, then we should move out and work a little by taking him at his word and "try" him and "prove" him, as he has said, to see if he will not be true to his promises, and bless us temporally as well as spiritually.

My earnest desire is to be found acceptable to God, to keep alive in the work, to work while I have the opportunity, that I may have the benefit of that precious gift of the Holy Spirit that is promised to his people, which will comfort them in their sorrow and cheer them on the way, and enable them to accomplish the good that he desires they should.

Yours in the covenant,

BELLE ROBINSON JAMES.

GLADSTONE, Illinois, October 21.

Editors Herald: I would like if some of the missionaries could arrange to pay Gladstone a visit. We have a good many gospels preached here, but none that the people may distinguish the gospel from a gospel. It makes me feel sorry rather than boastful. I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe. It is the unchangeable plan of salvation, which plan has in it all the diversities of gifts of his Spirit, the channels through which God manifests himself to the body, the church. Then, as I understand it, the gospel is the power of God made alive in the body by the manifestations of its gifts. It is a living gospel, the lively oracles of God and our Lord Jesus Christ, blessed for ever and ever, and whosoever has this faith has a living faith with God and Christ.

Brethren, one and all, pray for me that I may ever have that faith that is ready to give an answer of our hope, and that I may so live that my life will come up to that answer. My pathway has been beset with many dangers and trials, but in the gospel I take courage.

JACOB L. RUST.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, October 22.

Editors Herald: I never tried to write for the HERALD before, but papa takes the HERALD, Ensign and Autumn Leaves, and I love to read them. I can not see how a Saint can do without them. Those who do not take the church papers do not know what they miss.

I was baptized four years ago by Elder J. S. Roth, at Burlington, Iowa, and I am so glad that I belong to the church which our Savior organized. I want to serve him the best I can.

We live so far from town that we can not go to church as often as we would like to. But we are having a season of rejoicing now, for Bro. Roth is holding a series of meetings in our schoolhouse, and whoever heard him preach knows what that means. He came here on the 6th, and will continue till the last of the month. When the weather permits, the house is full. There is a good interest; the order and attention could not be better. Bro. Roth has such a pleasant way of presenting the gospel to people that he gets their attention, and then holds it before they are really aware of it, in a way that no one can take offense. If we only had more like him.

When it rains so he can not have meeting, then he is restless and walks the floor. Our congregation is composed of Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, Catholics, infidels, and no church at all; but all pay good attention, from the oldest to the youngest ones. All agree he is the best preacher they ever heard. Bro. Roth preached seven sermons on the subject, "What is true religion; and how shall we get it?" Well, it seems to me it should have convinced any one that the religions can not all be true, but only the one which the Savior and the apostles taught. We will see what the harvest will be here, after the grand meetings close. Papa was shown that some would obey, but not right now.

Bro. Roth opened a new place near Yarmouth, where three of my brothers live; he baptized my two sisters-in-law. We all were glad when they were both baptized. One used to be a strong Methodist, but when she saw her mistake, and that the Methodist Church was not the true church of Christ, she was ready to obey. Now our whole family belong to the true church; my papa, mamma, six brothers, two sisters-in-law and I. How glad we are! O, I wish everybody could see the true light of God and obey the gospel. Some of the people at Yarmouth told my brother that a man who could preach like his preacher ought to have two thousand dollars a year. The sectarian world does not seem to know the difference between filthy lucre and the love of God. May God bless all his servants.

MISS EMMA L. KAISTNER.

ROSALIE, Texas, October 13.

Editors Herald: I wish you and all the Saints success and many blessings. We Saints in this part of the country had the pleasure of listening to Bro. H. O. Smith Saturday night and yesterday, twenty miles from here at "Midway," an inland schoolhouse about five miles north of Detroit, Texas, in a splendid neighborhood. Two Baptist preachers were out to hear Bro. Smith at night. Good order prevailed. May our heavenly Father bless the people to receive the truth.

We read the letters in the HERALD with pleasure and delight. We pray for the Saints, knowing they are sending up petitions for us. The Lord bless us to be of one faith, one heart, one mind, as Jesus has said, "If you are not one, you are none of mine."

J. E. TOWNES.

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania, October 19.

Editors Herald: I was baptized April 2, 1899, and my wife the following July. Since then we have been made to rejoice. We have been married ten years, and my wife has been sick ever since that time; has been under the doctor's hands until I came in the church, and was in critical state of poor health. She was administered to by Brn. Parsons and Robley, and has been made whole, now enjoying good health. It makes me feel to exclaim like the Psalmist of old, Truly, the Lord is our shepherd! I do not record this as boastful, but that it may help some one on the pathway of life. I feel to trust my heavenly Father at all times.

Dear Saints, my experience in this work is that if we try to keep the commandments of the Lord, and keep out of the institutions of men, such as lodges and other things, and take that money and pay in the storehouse of the Lord, he will bless us more. I believe if Saints would keep out of those things they would have less trouble and the good Master would bless them more. I feel my weakness at times, but I want to say, like the disciples, Oh Lord, increase our faith! I hope these few lines will cheer some one who is under trial to put trust in God, who is able to bless. I pray that we all may have more faith in God and rely on his promises.

WILLARD HETRICK.

Editors Herald: I left home on July 30 to visit my brother in Iowa whom I had not seen for thirty years, and on my way back called at Chicago to see another brother, Joseph, who went with me from there to Iowa, to the home of our other brother, Robert. I lost no time in talking to them of the gospel; and although they were very much prejudiced against the truth as we believe it, and particularly against the Book of Mormon, before we parted Joseph said he would like to get the Book of Mormon. On my way coming home, when I was at his place in Iowa, I left him a copy of the Voice of Warning. I think if an elder would go there with the gospel my brother might accept it.

I received a postal from Bro. D. MacGregor saying he was thinking of coming up this way for preaching. I am at home now and will be glad to see him come at any time he can. My desire and wish is to see all people obey the gospel of our Lord and Savior, and to this end I am trying to do what I can in my weak way, ever praying for strength and grace to help in every time of need.

On August 21 I went with the first harvest excursion to Manitou, Manitoba, to see another brother whom I had not seen for over twenty years; he keeps the Manitou post-office. While there I sent for a copy of the Book of Mormon for him; then Robert came there on a visit, and before he left he said he would like to get the book. Robert lives at Ida Grove, about a mile from the station.

To-day I asked a brother and sister in the church to take the HERALD, but they said they were taking other papers, so could not take the HERALD. I hope the SAINTS' HERALD may always prosper.

HENRY HUSTON.

Editors Herald: The reunion at Fulton, Kentucky, is a thing of the past. It was a time long to be remembered by those in attendance. At first the crowds were small on account of the unfavorable weather. However, after the first two days it cleared up and the weather was fine the remainder of the time. Some who were expecting President Smith with us were a little disappointed. This disappointment vanished when on Monday evening Bishop E. L. Kelley arrived. The order of the meetings as observed with some variations, to suit conditions, was as follows: At nine o'clock in the forenoon, prayer services; at a quarter to eleven, preaching; at half-past two in the afternoon, preaching; also preaching at half-past seven in the evening. This was the order till Wednesday, when the nine o'clock prayer services were changed to half-past two in the afternoon.

The preaching at the reunion was done by I. N. Roberts, W. R. Smith, C. L. Snow, D. W. Cook, J. R. McClain, S. H. Fields, and E. L. Kelley, and was well received by both members and outsiders. Surely those who were in attendance can have no doubt as to the position taken by the speakers. We are confident that much prejudice has been removed from the minds of the people, and we trust that the people of Fulton and vicinity have a better understanding of the Latter Day Saints as a people, and of what they believe as a church.

Several of the leading men of Fulton were in attendance and expressed themselves as well pleased. The very best of order prevailed throughout the meetings.

One gentleman who is president of the City National Bank, of Fulton, after listening to Bro. Kelley's discourse on Sunday morning said: "We need more such men as that." Bro. Kelley surely made a fine impression on the people, and the grand lessons which were taught were a source of strength to the Saints.

The prayer-meetings were especially fraught with the good Spirit to a degree, as never experienced by a great many of the Saints before.

It was unanimously voted to have another reunion next summer, the latter part of July, as the weather is too uncertain so late as October.

There were seven baptized and others "almost persuaded."

The writer had the pleasure of baptizing his father, aged fifty-eight, and a little boy aged eleven. It brought to my mind very forcibly the language of the poet: "God is calling now to battle both the aged and the youth."

On account of the inclement weather on Friday before our district conference, which was set for Saturday, the 4th, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, was postponed until Monday, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

On Friday night, before preaching, W. R. Smith was ordained to the First Quorum of Seventy by I. N. Roberts and E. L. Kelley.

It is hoped that at our next reunion all will come prepared to camp on the grounds. It is the experience of those who camped that it is much easier and pleasanter to remain on the grounds. Let us begin now to prepare for the next reunion.

J. R. McCLAIN.

"Anti-Mormon.

"An anti-Mormon meeting will be held at the North Side Christian church in Omaha on Monday, October 20. Although this will be held during the Christian convention here, that denomination is not connected with the affair. John T. Bridwell and James W. Darby of McArthur, Ohio, will be in charge of the meeting."

OMAHA, Nebraska, October 23.

Editors Herald: The above appeared in the Omaha World-Herald for October 16, the first public notice we had that such a meeting would actually be held during the great Christian convention.

Brn. F. A. Smith, H. N. Hansen, D. R. Chambers, and the writer, with a number of the Saints, attended the first meeting. The meetings were held in the North Side Christian church in Omaha, on the 20th and 21st, and, as the notice reads, they were a side issue entirely.

Brn. Hansen and Chambers did not attend the second meeting, but Bro. Smith and myself did, as also a few of the Saints. The attendance of the Christian ministers was very small at the first meeting, and not very large at the last.

However, they treated us with a fair degree of courtesy. Notwithstanding these meetings were held in the Christian church, and the ministers of that body were the only ones to take part in the work done at these meetings, by which a standing board was chosen for one year, and the inclosed resolutions were adopted, and the successors to membership on this board are to be chosen at each general convention of the Christian Church, we were given distinctly to understand that the great "International Convention of the Christian Church" was in no sense responsible for said "anti-Mormon" meetings, or what was done there.

In fact, D. H. Bays said, among other things: "I want it distinctly understood that we do not think this Mormon question of sufficient importance to engage the time, attention, wisdom, and scholarship of this great convention."

J. D. McClure stated in his speech that the Latter Day Saints have "the most complete and perfectly organized priesthood in the world," which seemed to be a source of worry to him.

While on the way to the "anti-Mormon" meeting on the 21st, the writer was overtaken by a minister, who said: "Are you going to the anti-Mormon meeting?" I answered, Yes; then he said: "That's right. They all ought to go. Those fellows are getting the old Jerusalem gospel down to a fine point, and it is necessary to do something, isn't it?"

I replied, "Yes, they are right, are they not?"

He said, "Who are you, anyway?"

I answered, "I am a minister located here in the city."

He said, "Yes, but what church do you belong to?"

I answered, "I am a Latter Day Saint, and pastor of the church down on Twenty-first Street."

"O! You are?"

The object of those working in said "anti-Mormon" meetings, as we see it, is to utilize the labors of all those who can be enlisted in a warfare against "Mormonism," if they will help to defray the expenses of such a work, no matter who they are, or where they come from, or how much they may be at war among themselves upon other points. They seem to be unwilling that Christian ministers should debate what are known as church propositions. A letter from Clark Braden read at the meeting, just at the close of the second meeting. Among other things he said about as follows: "Brethren, what are known as church propositions are a humbug, and should never be debated."

The impression made upon the writer's mind is that these men intend to make a desperate effort to keep the so-called Christian Church and all its imperfections so hid and under cover that it will never be seen or heard of during the time of debate, or the people made acquainted with the facts as they exist.

Such propositions as those discussed by E. L. Kelley and Clark Braden at Lamoni, Iowa, are about the only kind these Christian gentlemen seem to think should be discussed.

We inclose a brief report as taken by our reporter. You may publish so much of it as you may consider of sufficient interest to our people to require space in the HERALD.

There is one point that seemed to be quite prominent to the mind of the undersigned, to-wit: J. T. Bridwell has written a book on Mormonism, so has D. H. Bays; and we were given to understand by the letter from Clark Braden that he expected to publish his manuscript on Mormonism in the near future; so of necessity there must be a sentiment aroused against "Mormonism," to create a demand for these wonderful books. "Surely, of making books there is no end." We have always courted fair and candid investigation, and have always stood ready to defend what we have believed to be the truth, and expect to continue along the same lines.

Ever praying that the truth may prevail,

Yours in gospel bond,

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

Conference Minutes.

Northeastern Kansas.—Convened at Netawaka, Kansas, September 27, S. J. Madden presiding. Ministry reporting: Elders S. J. Madden, H. Green, R. Warnock, A. H. Parsons, A. Smith, Wm. Menzies, Wm. Gurwell, Hopkins, H. Parker; Priests C. E. Tillinghast, G. W. Beebe, John Cairns, J. G. Stewart; Teacher Oxendale; Deacons Robinson, Geo. Johnson, J. W. Burns. Resolved, That the priesthood write their reports and send them to the secretary at least 10 days before each conference. Bishop's agent's report: Balance, $113.62; tithing, $296.30; expended, $295.00; balance $114.92; audited and found correct. Branches reporting: Atchison 88, Topeka 25, Netawaka 64, Centralia 19, Scranton 100, Fanning 78, Idylwild 85; Blue Rapids report returned for correction. The district officers were sustained. The cases of Maggie B. and Mary Bell Engelhart as tried by an elders' court were recommended to be excommunicated from the church, and they were excommunicated. The court on the Griffith George case reported him guilty, and he was expelled. A vote of thanks was extended the Netawaka Saints for their kindness. Preaching by A. H. Parsons and S. J. Madden. Atchison was chosen as the place of holding our next conference in February, 1903.

Southeastern Illinois.—Convened in the Saints' chapel of the Brush Creek Branch in Wayne County, October 4. Bro. I. N. White was chosen to preside over the conference, assisted by I. A. Morris, and F. M. Davis as secretary pro tem. The minutes of last conference were read and approved. Branches reporting: Parrish, Brush Creek, Dry Fork, and Tunnelhill. Officers reporting: F. M. Slover, I. A. Morris, J. E. Bozarth, M. R. Brown, F. M. Davis, P. G. McMahan and Jesse W. Paxton. Bishop's agent's report was read and ordered to be spread on the minutes subject to inquiry. I. A. Morris was elected president of the district for the following year, F. M. Davis assistant president, and P. G. McMahan secretary. Talks were made by Brn. Joseph Smith and R. C. Evans. Brn. I. N. White and I. A. Morris were chosen to preside over the reunion. Conference adjourned to meet at Springerton, Saturday before full moon in February, 1903.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana.—Convened with the Clear Lake Saints, October 18-20, with A. S. Cochran and G. A. Smith in chair; Wm. Shaub and O. H. Story secretaries. Branches reporting: Clear Lake 181; Coldwater 122, loss 1; Galien 129, loss 1; Maumee 18, loss 3; Buchanan 42; Marcellus 14, gain 1; Hartford 46; McCords, new branch, 14; Sparta, new branch, 21. Bishop's agent reported: Balance on hand last report, $10.36; receipts, $435.76; total, $446.12; disbursements, $431.27; balance due church, $14.85; audited and found correct. A committee consisting of E. L. Kelley, Wm. Naab, and F. Granger appointed to examine records in regard to delegate system, did so and presented the following: 1. That they failed to find that any action or rules touching the matter has been entered upon district records, but that brethren who claim to have been present at the time state that resolutions were passed at a conference providing for representation by delegates. 2. That the representation by delegates has never been carried into effect by the district. We therefore recommend that until a system of rules to govern and regulate the holding of delegate assemblies has been adopted and entered on record to govern in holding delegate conferences that membership and good standing in church and district are the only qualifications necessary for a member of conference. Ministry reporting: Elders A. S. Cochran, G. A. Smith, S. W. L. Scott, Samuel Stroh, E. K. Evans, J. Emerich; Priests G. D. Washburn, F. Granger, G. F. Weston, O. H. Story, and Wm. F. Shaub. Officers of the district elected: A. S. Cochran district president, G. A. Smith assistant, Wm. F. Shaub secretary. Sr. J. H. Royce was recommended as district historian to release Bro. G. A. Smith for mission work. Delegates to General Conference: G. D. Washburn, G. A. Smith, Samuel Stroh, W. E. Peak, F. Granger, O. H. Story, S. W. L. Scott, A. S. Cochran, D. B. Teeters, Elsie Lockerby, Sr. J. H. Royce, Cynthia Granger, Ella Davis, E. K. Evans, E. A. Blakeslee, Sr. W. E. Peak, Priscilla Smith, Jonathan Emerich, Alta Stroh, J. A. Cavanaugh, Nettie Naab, Mollie Pierson, W. D. Ellis, Wm. Shaub, Wm. Naab. Next conference to be held at Coldwater, Michigan. Conference adjourned to meet the second Saturday and Sunday in June, 1903, at Port Huron, Michigan.

An Appeal.

To the Saints of Utah District; Greeting: Having been lately appointed Bishop's agent for said district (see SAINTS' HERALD for October 1, page 974), I feel it my duty to refresh your minds on the subject of tithing. We find by reading 1 Corinthians 9: 14, that the Lord hath ordained that they which preach the gospel shall live of the gospel; and we read in Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8: "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry, and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all." There is something for each one to do in this great work. This is a day of sacrifice and a day for the tithing of my people saith the Lord. (Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.) The gospel came to us all free, but some one had to make a sacrifice to give it to us; now the question with us is, are we willing to make a like sacrifice to give the gospel to others? Let us remember the words of our Savior who said to his disciples in former times, freely ye have received, freely give. By doing according to these words we will receive the promised blessings. It is written of Abraham that he paid tithes of all he possessed to Melchisedec, a priest of the most high God; all the riches he possessed that God had given him more than that he had need. (See Genesis 14: 39, Inspired Translation.) In connection with this read Alma 10: 1. This, so far, is according to the order of the gospel. Now after we have commenced right we should continue by paying one tenth of the increase annually. (See Doctrine and Covenants 106.) I desire to present some figures for you to think about, not to cause and ill feeling but that we may know the position in which we are placed. From September 1, 1901, to September 1, 1902, there was about $330 drawn from the Presiding Bishop, E. L. Kelley, for the benefit of this district. I do not want to place the fault on any one in particular but I do believe if every one belonging to the church in this district will do his part in the work intrusted to all there will be better results attained in this part of the field. The families of the missionaries need to be supported if the men continue in the field of labor, and sometimes it is necessary that the missionaries receive a little to bear their expenses in going from one place to another; all will be taken account of you can be assured. It is the prayer of your servant for Christ's sake that the Lord will bless every one in this mission that will strive to do according to his will. Yours for the advancement of truth. G. L. M. BROKAW.

Pastoral.

To the Saints of Manitoba and Northwest Territory; Greeting: I have been appointed to labor in this part of the mission by the London District conference and desire to enlist your support in advancing the cause. I expect to reach my field next month and earnestly request the Saints or friends to write me as to opportunities for presenting the gospel in your neighborhood. We are laborers together; therefore, Saints, let us unitedly strive to win the approbation of the Christ by presenting the means of salvation to men. I await communications. Address me, Winnipeg, Manitoba. J. L. MORTIMER.

Notices.

The members of the Pottawattamie District are hereby notified that the action of the priesthood and members, who met at Boomer on September 1 and appointed the next district conference to meet at Crescent on Saturday, November 29, 1902, has the approval of the district presidency; and it is so ordered. All officials will please take notice, and forward their reports for this quarter, as usual, one week before conference, to the secretary, J. Charles Jensen, 102 Broadway, Council Bluffs. J. P. Carlile, President.

Conference Notices.

The Western Maine District conference will convene at West Ellsworth, November 14 and 15. Eugene Braun, secretary.

Convention Notices.

The Sunday-school convention of the Western Maine District will convene at West Ellsworth on the Friday before the convening of the district conference, November 14. Margie E. Closson.

The Philadelphia District Sunday-school association will meet in convention on November 1 and 2, at Ontario and Howard Streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Business session on the 1st, at 3.30 p. m. E. B. Hull, secretary.

Died.

SYLVESTER.—Mr. George Sylvester was born in London, England, and died at his home at 3335 Ames Avenue, Omaha, Nebraska, October 15, aged about 84 years. He had long been a believer in Christ and the restored gospel but for some cause he had neglected to be baptized. His house had often been a home for the traveling missionary. Funeral services were conducted at the home on the 17th instant by Elder C. E. Butterworth.

PICKETT.—Matilda Driver Pickett was born in Carroll County, Maryland, April 8, 1817, died at the home of her daughter, Sr. Mary Jump, October 10, 1902, at Ashmont, Erie County, Ohio. She was baptized May 27, 1894, by Elder Henry C. Smith. Funeral services by D. L. Allen.

FISHER.—Near Graysville, Monroe County, Ohio, July 7, 1902, Sr. Margaret J. Fisher, aged 72 years, 6 months, 27 days. She was buried beside her husband and children, after a faithful life to God and mankind. She received the gospel in 1874, being baptized by Elder James Craig, September 26. Bro. L. R. Devore gives account of her death and we suppose that he preached the funeral sermon. He says that she was an able defender of the latter-day work.

LARSON.—Alma Edward, son of Bro. and Sr. Lars Larson, was born September 15, 1901, at Blackfoot, Idaho; died October 12, of pneumonia. Funeral from Baptist church, Blackfoot, October 14, conducted by S. D. Condit; sermon by J. H. Condit.

MCDONALD.—Robert S. McDonald was born in Scotland in 1838, died October 13, 1902. Was baptized in Detroit, Michigan, in 1895, and since then has lived a consistent Christian life. He manifested wisdom as a teacher in the church. The mayor of the city, Judge Phelan, the police commissioner with a corps of police, the Woodmen of the World, and a large gathering of the Masonic fraternity attended the funeral services at the house and the grave. The mayor and judge, with many others, were moved to tears during the sermon. Funeral sermon by R. C. Evans.

A magazine which stands for up-to-date ideas both in mechanical makeup and literary ideas is the Critic. "Lounger" is one of the best as well as impartial critics, and "Lounger's" monthly talk on books and authors is a fairly good index to the month's developments in book-making. Each number of the Critic seems to surpass the last, and its reproductions of portraits of authors and men of the hour have become par excellence.

Sunset, a "magazine of the border," is a bright monthly published at San Francisco, California. It is printed on heavily calendered paper, and is profusely illustrated with a high grade of half tones. It presents a variety of subjects as the following contents for October will show:

"Outlook of University of California," by Benj. Ide Wheeler; "The University of California," by V. Henderson; "Discharging a Philippine Army," by Captain John P. Finley; "City Duck Farming," by Ednah Robinson; "The Old Ranch House" (a poem); "Danby of San Pedro" (a story); "After the Rain" (a poem); "At Mission Santa Clara;" "San Francisco" (poem in part); "An Alpine Lake in the High Sierra;" "Championship Fly Casting;" "California's October" (verse).

A succinct and unbiased statement of the points at issue in the famous "Pious Fund" case now before the Hague arbitrators will be found in Mr. W. T. Stead's article, entitled "The United States and Mexico at the Opening of The Hague Court," in the October Review of Reviews. It is an interesting fact that the first case to be arbitrated by the Hague tribunal should be brought to it by two American nations, and that the matter involved should be the disposition of church funds. Portraits of the arbitrators accompany Mr. Stead's article.

In the matter of adapting themselves to new conditions, the intelligent are sometimes but little in advance of the less intelligent masses. People are just beginning to learn that new conditions of life demand new methods of living, that sedentary lives within brick walls are producing effects which their grandfathers never experienced. The regular summer vacation or a tramp in the mountains was then unnecessary, for the people, even of the cities, walked or rode horseback most of the time. The men of old computed their business in thousands; they walked home at noon and ate dinner in a rational way. They required few vacations. The men of to-day compute their business in millions; they eat that abomination known as "quick lunch," and employ a labor-saving machine called a typewriter, which enables them to write six times as many letters a day and thus load their mental faculties with six times as much business. Golf, tennis, and the bicycle, as well as outings and summer vacations, are expressions of rational appreciation that the times have changed.—Dr. Floyd M. Crandall, in The World's Work.

Proposed Convention at Jerusalem.

The proposition to hold the next World's Sunday-school Convention in Jerusalem in 1904 has received such hearty approbation that a large gathering there is already assured. Even business men, not known to have been interested in Sunday-school work, are writing to the Boston headquarters of the International Committee, saying that they are already making plans to go to the Holy Land in the year named, in order that they may attend the convention. The project has only sentiment behind it, but its approval shows that sentiment has a strong hold on the people. The committee is already working on the practical problems of transportation, the providing of hotel accommodations, and a meeting hall. It is now expected that the sessions of the convention will be held in a tent. Efforts are being made to enlist not alone International Lesson interests, but also the Sunday-schools of the whole continent of Europe, Australia, and of Africa.—From "Highways and Byways," in The Chautauquan Magazine for October.

Editorial.

"STRIKES AND LAWLESSNESS."

We give below an editorial article from the Farmer's Call, an agricultural paper published in Quincy, Illinois, of the issue for the week ending October 25, under the caption above given. Our over-sensitive friends of the laboring man have no need to throw the HERALD down when they read this heading, under the impression that the article is a screed against the laboring man, for it is one of the fairest and most impartial articles on the subject suggested by the late strike of the miners of the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania, that we have seen in print since the strike began last May.

The editor of the HERALD is necessarily a friend of the workers of the world, being one of them himself, and it is for this reason that he can commend so fair a statement concerning both sides, and which reproves the spirit of lawlessness exhibited by both, drawing a nice distinction between the subtlety of the one and the open harshness of the other.

In their statements to President Roosevelt the presidents of the coal carrying railways charged lawlessness in connection with the strike, and President Mitchell acknowledged the lawlessness, but tried to shift a part of it to the criminals, as he called them, that the coal operators had hired to work or guard the mines. Mitchell was probably right; and the lawlessness certainly exists. Herein is something for the farmer to consider.

It would be strange if there were not lawlessness in connection with any extensive, protracted strike, for a strike is a thing of violence, resting on ill-will between representatives of labor and capital. Such ill-will is without reasonable grounds in this country, and nine tenths of it is and always has been due to foreign immigration that has not yet absorbed American ideas, on the one side, and the narrow, stubborn, colossal self-conceited spirit of a very few capitalists. Capital and labor ought to be the best of friends. If they were wise and reasonable they would be the best of friends. Each needs the other. Each is helpless without the other. The beautiful sentimental lines that Longfellow wrote of man and woman might be applied to them—

"As unto the bow the string is, Helpless each without the other."

Who is the capitalist in this country? In nine cases out of ten one born in honest poverty—let us be proud that nearly always he was reared on the farm—who in his young years worked for wages and earned them, who was not mortally afraid that he might work a little overtime, who was not up on racing form, who went to church much oftener than he went to the theater—and one of the reasons for this was that the church cost less—who wore his clothes till they were worn, who spent his evenings in study and not in a saloon, who has not forgotten to-day the muscle-ache in earning a dollar. Who is the American workingman? The man that may be a capitalist twenty years hence, if he wills. How utterly unreasonable, then, these labor wars, and how fearlessly should we condemn the lawlessness that so frequently characterizes them. The lawlessness that is open, that is manifested in the beating of laborers or police, is the most prominent. It is to be condemned. It is more to be condemned because it is the lawlessness of those in places of great responsibility, who are under the greater obligation to obey the laws. It is more to be condemned because it is so much the more dangerous. The most dangerous criminal is not the deluded degenerate, though an anarchist, that shoots down a president, but the multi-millionaire that buys street railway franchises from city councils and the professional politician that sells them, those that bribe tax collectors and assessors and those that are bribed, those that have hired, secret agents in state legislatures and congress and those agents, those that deviously put their attorneys in judges' seats and those judges. It is well that we fear the anarchists, that boldly, in broad daylight, shoots down a man; but we may well fear more the man, though rich and respectable he may be, that shows his utter contempt for law by hiring the shrewdest lawyers to guide his actions safely within the letter of the laws, while putting under his feet the spirit of the law that he may oppress and rob the people. Many strikes are due to the fact that not only the laborers but the public believe that the capitalists have evaded the laws and piled up enormous fortunes because lawyers can devise means of escaping laws as fast as legislatures will make them. If we would end labor wars, with all their evils, we must root out this lawlessness that engenders so much of the enmity towards capital and enterprises and that, most unfortunately, does not discriminate and take account of honest capital and legitimate enterprise. We expend nine tenths of our energy in making laws and one tenth in enforcing them. We must reverse that. Our cure-all is a law, enacted, then neglected. Our hope lies in fewer laws, only wise laws, and those relentlessly executed. In this country the people are the lawmakers. If they are not, they are shirks. If the laws are not good we alone are to blame. Of all peoples we should most respect and reverence the laws. The law is our constant protector, so faithful and unobtrusive that we do not regard it. It fences about our fields with security, against despoilers; it locks our doors against the intruder; it guards the sleeping farmer, merchant or laborer; it watches over us in our homes—over the old couples in the homes that their lives of labor and thrift have gained, over the little children that play about the doorstep, over the babies at the fireside; it touches our daily, commonplace, homely life at a thousand points. We have no arbitrary power to help or harm us—only the laws we have made. No phase of the labor problem should have our consideration more than that which has its origin or manifests itself in lawlessness. For one form of lawlessness undermines insidiously and the other strikes directly at our safety, our security, our institutions and our liberties. Let us consider what the law does for us and then we may well exclaim, Great is the law. The law shall be supreme. The law and our liberties for ever!

ONLY ONE NAME.

“Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.”—Acts 4: 12.

That name is Jesus Christ. “Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand before you whole.”—Acts 4: 10,

Corroborative testimony. “And now behold, my beloved brethren, this is the way; and there is none other way nor name given under heaven, whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God.”—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 13: 6.

This name is Christ. “Wherefore, if ye shall press forward, feasting upon the word of Christ, and endure to the end, behold, thus saith the Father: Ye shall have eternal life.”—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 13: 5.

Further testimony to the Saints; and to the world, a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death.

“Take upon you the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness, and as many as repent, and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby men can be saved.”—Doctrine and Covenants 16: 4.

This is a threefold cord that is not easily broken.

W. C. T. U. REPORT ON HARMFULNESS OF CIGARETTE HABIT.

On October 22, at Portland, Maine, Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, superintendent of the Anti-narcotic Department of the W. C. T. U., in her report to the convention gave it as in her opinion that in ten years the cigarette would be driven out of existence. In the report she said:

A careful statistical examination has been made by educators of boys drawn by lot. This table shows the average efficiency of non-smokers is ninety-five per cent—that is, ninety-five per cent out of one hundred probably would acquire a good education. On the other hand, only six out of one hundred cigarette smokers could hope to battle successfully against the mental inefficiency produced by the cigarette habit. Of smokers sixty per cent had poor memories; forty per cent were untruthful; sixty per cent had bad manners; ninety per cent were slow thinkers.

Our rallying cry is “Five Million Boys Pledged Against the Tobacco Habit Before November, 1903.” This year we have pledged forty thousand nine hundred thirty-two boys and many girls.

THANKSGIVING DAY PROCLAIMED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

On October 29 President Roosevelt issued the annual Thanksgiving Proclamation, and appointed Thursday, November 27, as Thanksgiving Day. The proclamation is as follows:

By the President of the United States of America.

A proclamation:

According to the yearly custom of our people, it falls upon the President at this season to appoint a day of festival and thanksgiving to God.

Over a century and a quarter has passed since this country took its place among the nations of the earth, and during that time we have had on the whole more to be thankful for than has fallen to the lot of any other people. Generation after generation has grown to manhood and passed away. Each has had to bear its peculiar burdens, each to face its special crises, and each has known years of grim trial, when the country was menaced by malice, domestic or foreign levy, when the hand of the Lord was heavy upon it in drouth or flood or pestilence, when in bodily distress and anguish of soul it paid the penalty of folly and a froward heart. Nevertheless, decade by decade, we have struggled onward and upward; we now abundantly enjoy material well-being, and under the favor of the Most High we are striving earnestly to achieve moral and spiritual uplifting.

The year that has just closed has been one of peace and of overflowing plenty. Rarely has any people enjoyed greater prosperity than we are now enjoying. For this we render heartfelt and solemn thanks to the Giver of good; and we seek to praise him, not by words only, but by deeds, in the way which we do our duty to ourselves and to our fellow men.

Now, therefore, I, Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, do hereby designate as a day of general thanksgiving, Thursday, the twenty-seventh of the coming November, and do recommend that throughout the land the people cease from their ordinary occupations and in their several homes and places of worship render thanks unto Almighty God for the manifold blessings of the past year.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-ninth day of October, in the year of our Lord 1902, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-seventh.

(Signed) THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

By the President:

(Signed) JOHN HAY, Secretary of State.

A SAFEGUARD AGAINST IMPOSITION.

Whatever may be said about the folly, deception, or fanaticism of the Latter Day Saints, or the human founder of the church, Joseph Smith, it must be conceded that he gave to those who in faith and doctrine became his companions in belief, a most excellent safeguard against imposition in doctrine, good even against himself. It was this; that every member of the church was entitled to and might receive of the spirit of revelation in such way and form as would be calculated to give to him the knowledge whether the doctrine was true or not.

It is true that this safeguard was first stated by Jesus while here in his ministry. But the Christian having "turned heathen again," as was stated by John Wesley, acceptance and belief in the provision were covered up by the passing of time and the falling away; so that when Joseph Smith began his career there were few to credit his report. Nevertheless, he at once put himself at the mercy of those to whom he taught the angel's message by boldly telling them what the Master had stated, He that will do the will of my Father shall know of the doctrine, whether it is of God, or I speak of myself; and avowing his absolute faith in the proposition that if any one who was really honest, and earnestly desired to know, if he went to God with full purpose of heart asking for knowledge, conviction, or direction, would be dealt with fairly by the Lord, and receive a knowledge for himself that the doctrine was true. No reformer ever did this. None ever so completely put confidence in the word of Jesus Christ. No one of them chose to so trust the issue of his cause to the answer to be given to prayer. But Joseph Smith did so teach; and to-day those who accepted his teaching and followed the direction to appeal to God for evidence of its truth have for three quarters of a century been putting the matter to the test, and multiplied thousands to-day rise up to testify that their faith and trust has been answered by testimony of the truth.

Put it to the test again, and be happy in the Lord.

PILGRIMAGE OF THE DOUKHOBORS.

About one thousand six hundred Doukhobors, a body of Russian religionists who had settled in Assiniboia and built up thriving little villages, became greatly enthused by a Russian who came among them and propagated strange and fanatical religious ideas, and recently abandoned their farms and homes, turned loose all their horses and cattle, and started on a march across Canada to "convert the world" to their extreme vegetarian ideas. A dispatch from Winnipeg, Manitoba, dated October 29, states:

The pilgrimage of the Doukhobors was inspired by a Russian who came into their colony some months ago. He taught them from Romans 8:22, "For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now," because of sin, and that even brute creation had been made to suffer because of the sins of man. The conclusion reached was that man ought to bear his own burdens, and let the cattle go free.

Carrying this argument to its extreme conclusion, as the Doukhobors always do, the affected ones drove their stock to the hills, discarded their leather boots, their woolen stockings, leather peaks in their caps, and every other article of clothing which had its origin in animal life, and substituted therefor rubber boots, plaited binder twine shoes with wooden soles, and clothing made from linen and other vegetable product. Then, attaching themselves to the wagons in place of horses or oxen, they started out to convert the world to their vegetarian belief.

Agents of the Canadian government compelled the pilgrims to leave the women and children in the care of government officials, but the men in their zeal continued their march. Government officials also gathered up much of the abandoned horses and cattle, and sold over $30,000 worth. The money will be used to relieve some of the great distress which is sure to follow the reckless conduct of the religious fanatics.

"WHATEVER ENTICETH TO DO GOOD IS OF GOD."

It is a fact potent for good to the Latter Day Saint, that he is by revelation assured that the causes which incite men to do good and lead them into the way of doing it are of God. And to the contrary of this, the causes which lead men to do evil are from the adversary.

When God thus advertises himself to his people, what is there that can make them afraid? He has stated in regard to himself, "I change not;" therefore, every son of the first man, whether near or remote in the history of the world, is warned that when God has once revealed himself upon any subject that revelation is for all time; and whenever, wherever, and to whomsoever any subsequent revelation is given to man on the same subject, such revelation will not controvert, deny, nor be contrary to what had been previously given, but will conform to and confirm that already given.

For an instance of this see Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 13: 6:

"And now behold, my beloved brethren, this is the way; and there is none other way nor name given under heaven, whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God. And now behold, this is the doctrine of Christ, and the only and true doctrine of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, which is one God, without end. Amen."

This is the revelation of God to the Latter Day Saints, direct, in their own language and in their own time; therefore, any subsequent revelation on the topic of the doctrine essential to the salvation of man would not make this one void by the introduction of some other doctrine, but would confirm and establish the one previously given.

What a comfort and assurance this is. What a source of strength to the minister in his work, to the member in his every day life of struggle and endeavor.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

E. H. Durand wrote from Goose Creek, West Virginia, October 27: "A week ago I baptized three noble young ladies, in Doddridge County. The branch here is looking up, and interest increasing. There are several more that ought to go forward, as they are deeply interested. I hope soon to report further additions."

J. R. Epperson of Des Moines says of "Book of Mormon Talks:" "I like it very, very much, and have highly recommended it to all the young people here and the older ones as well. It should be in the hands of every Book of Mormon student."

Under date of October 24, L. S. Holman wrote from Conneautville, Pennsylvania: "Our conference on October 4 and 5 was one of the best ever held in the district. Our branch is in fine working order."

J. S. Strain wrote from Lynch, Nebraska, October 29: "Request scattered Saints to let me know their addresses, so I may visit them. There are some in Boyd and Knox Counties."

W. R. Odell wrote from Wayne, West Virginia, stating that his family and F. A. Smith's family, both of Wayne, were expecting to move at once to Holden, Missouri, "their future home." Bro. Odell wrote: "The work in the West Virginia District is onward. The mob spirit in this (Wayne) county is still quite prevalent. We succeeded in lodging an indictment against one of the parties that attacked Bro. Godbey and myself last winter. If justice is done he will get a trip to the penitentiary at our next term of circuit court. We have engaged the best legal talent in this part of the State to prosecute the case, and feel that justice will be done."

W. E. La Rue wrote from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 30: "The people here are beginning to find us out, and most every one knows we are not Utah 'Mormons.' The Brighamites held a conference in this city last Saturday and Sunday. They told some of our folks who attended that I was 'a dirty low-lived wretch.' Shakespeare said, 'Tell the truth and shame the Devil;' so no wonder they get their 'Dutch up.'"

J. W. Wight wrote from Richmond, Victoria, Australia, October 1: "I am to commence an eight-night debate with Mr. Blair, of the Disciple faith, next Monday night, here in Richmond. This is one of the suburbs of Melbourne, a city of half a million. Our conference here passed off pleasantly last Saturday and Sunday. I am quite well, and enjoying the mission."

Bro. Fred A. Smith writes from Inman, Nebraska, October 28: "I will be here all this week, preaching every night. They need some encouragement here. Will go from here to the Black Hills; the folks there have sent for me. Held some interesting meetings at Sioux City. They have rented a small hall, fitted it up neatly, and are in a fair way to do some permanent good; but will need some help there for some little time. I will seek to have the missionaries in Little Sioux District help them so far as they can."

Frank A. Russell wrote from Swedeburg, Nebraska, October 27, that owing to the sickness of his wife he is detained from his field. The affliction is a severe pain in her right side and back. He states that they had expected to go to Grinnell on the 29th, but thought that they would not be able to for a time.

Bro. E. Gerber writes from Bessemer, Alabama, October 23, stating that there is plenty of work for pattern-makers there at present, and that the wages are three dollars and twenty-five cents per day, with prospects of going higher. He is foreman at a foundry there, and he says that they are needing six or eight pattern makers at once.

We have received a marked copy of the Nepean Times, published at Penrith, New South Wales, Australia, issue September 13, which contains quite an extended account of Bro. Wight's debate with Mr. Bell, which was held at St. Marys, September 10. The report is very fair and unbiased.

According to the advance sheets of "Poor's Manual" for year ending June 30, 1902, there is now in the United States one hundred ninety-eight thousand miles of railroad, one hundred ninety-five thousand of which are being operated. The increase in mileage over last year is 4,453 miles. The companies have a total of 39,729 locomotives, 27,144 passenger coaches, 8,677 mail and express cars, and 1,409,472 freight cars. In 1892 there were 21,889 locomotives, 14,934 passenger coaches, and 730,435 freight cars. Locomotive works and car shops are behind with their orders, and though there has been such a wonderful increase in the amount of rolling stock, still traffic on the roads is congested.

W. H. Kelley reports twenty-two baptisms in his field for the quarter, and H. O. Smith reports seventy-two. The latter reports that nineteen men in his mission have preached seven hundred sixty-five sermons, an average of a little over forty.

A missionary sends us two new subscribers for the HERALD and says, "I mean to do all I can for the HERALD. It should be in every family of the Saints. No one can keep pace with the work without it."

The November Arena contains an article by Joseph F. Smith on the "Real Origin of American Polygamy," which is written in reply to President Joseph Smith's article which appeared in the August Arena on "Origin of American Polygamy."

The Chicago Record-Herald in its issue for October 29, in its department, "Answers by Experts," has an article by President Joseph Smith on the question "Polygamy in America," in which he clearly shows that the original "Mormon" church was monogamic, and that Brigham Young and not Joseph Smith was responsible for the so-called revelation on polygamy. The same article has appeared in other daily papers containing these "answers by experts."

We received the following note recently: "By action of the Board of Curators of the State Historical Society the series of the Iowa State Historical Record has been concluded with the October, 1902, number. Beginning with January, 1903, the quarterly publication of the society will be issued under the title of the Iowa Journal of History and Politics." This brief note announces an important change in Iowa publications. For many years the Record has been making its appearance regularly, as has also the Annals of Iowa, the two journals being conducted somewhat along the same lines. The new publication of the Historical Society will occupy a field by itself, and the Annals will carry on the work it has so long been doing. We are of the opinion that the change will do much for the advancement of the historical interests of the State; and while the readers of the Record will be somewhat loath to see the passing of their long-time friend, we venture the prediction that they will soon be greatly pleased with the change when the new publication has fairly introduced itself.

JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH.

"Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."—Romans 5: 1. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; . . . not of works, lest any man should boast."—Ephesians 2: 8, 9. Because of these and other scriptures of like import, many are led to believe that justification is obtained by faith without works, notwithstanding numerous scriptures teach otherwise. In James 2: 14-26, we read that "faith without works is dead;" that if faith alone could save men, the devils would be saved, for they "believe also, and tremble;" that our Father Abraham was "justified by works;" that "faith wrought with his works, and by works was his faith made perfect." "By works a man is justified, and not by faith only." To disprove this positive evidence, with numerous others as plain, men in trying to establish their faith without works (salvation) will quote the following: "For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God. For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness. Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works."—Romans 4: 2-6.

Well, by this and other texts they really do succeed in proving a positive contradiction between Paul and all other Bible writers, and with himself also, as he wrote: "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."—Philippians 2: 12. They prove their position by placing their own private interpretation upon it. Wresting, as Peter says of Paul's "epistles," "in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest [pervert], as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction."—2 Peter 3: 16. Only by wresting the above writings of Paul can any contradiction be made between him and others. If we notice to whom Paul and James were writing, and the different subjects they were writing upon, we will see their perfect harmony. James was writing of the works of the gospel covenant; Paul to those who had been converted from among the Gentiles, to whom the Jewish converts had taught, "That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses" (Acts 15: 5), denying the necessity of keeping the law of Moses with its works; urging the all sufficiency of the gospel law with its "works of righteousness" to bring salvation. "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John 1:17.

Those "unlearned" in regard to these two systems of law, each with its respective works, one "by Moses," the other "by Jesus Christ," are no doubt the ones "wresting the Scriptures to their own destruction" to whom Peter referred. Against this Mosaic system Paul wrote in almost every epistle. No doubt it was the greatest cause of his writing. He began his Roman letter by declaring the superiority of the gospel law "for therein is the righteousness of God revealed" (Romans 1:17); all that God required of men, to be righteous, to be saved; not in the law of Moses. "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight. . . . But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed [testified] by the law and the prophets."—Romans 3:20, 21. All that was given by Moses, was superseded by the "grace and truth that came by Jesus Christ." Hence Jesus said, "The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached" (Luke 16:16); the gospel law.

Paul asks the Romans, "Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law [were they saved]? of works? Nay; but by the law of faith."—Romans 3:27. Not by Moses' law or the law of works, but by Christ's law, the law of faith. "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith [the law of faith, the gospel law] without the deeds of the law [the law of works, Moses' law]."—Romans 3:28. That those old laws with all their works could not bring forgiveness of past sins. That in the past by complying with them, they did only what they were indebted to do; and that the reward for doing them was "not reckoned of grace, but of debt." For the reward of grace or obedience to the gospel law, was freedom from past sins; but the reward for doing these works of the law was only freedom from the sin that would exist if they failed to obey them.

For instance, when God commanded Abraham to circumcise himself and household it was not to free them from past sins, but for a very different purpose; but still he was under obligation to obey it or be condemned for disobedience. Paul referred to it as a debt, and obedience paid that debt. So in regard to the law of Moses, he argued the same; but after these laws were all done away in Christ, Paul could truly say, "But to him that worketh not [these dead works], but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly [or who did not keep the old law], his faith is counted for righteousness."—Romans 4:5. As these works could not justify Abraham, or ancient Israel of past sins, much less could they justify those after Christ; not even binding as a debt upon them.

But that salvation came only by faith in Christ Jesus (Romans 3:24), "through faith in his blood," "for the remission of sins that are past." (Verse 25.) "For ye are not under the law [of works], but under [the law of] grace" (Romans 6:14), the gospel. In chapter 7 he shows that those in Christ are as free from the law of Moses as a woman from her husband when he was dead (verses 1-3); and in verse 7 says, "I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." The ten commandment law. They were "dead to the law," and the law dead to them. All of that law not commanded by Christ, was null, dead. He taught all in an improved form, only the fourth commandment, "Remember the Sabbath day," the greatest good work of which may be boasted. Hence Paul wrote to the Ephesians, "God . . . hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved);" (the law of grace) that God might "show his kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus [not through Moses]. For by grace are ye saved through faith [the law of faith]; and that not of [the law of] yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast."—Ephesians 2:4-9. That this time is true is proven by the context: "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto [or for the purpose of doing] good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Verse 10. God had before ordained good works for them to walk in. When? James says, "Faith wrought with his [Abraham's] works, and by works was [his] faith made perfect."—James 2:22. Hence there were works of a justifying nature connected with Abraham's faith or he could not have been justified by that faith, as it would have been imperfect. Was "made perfect by works." Paul says, "And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed."—Galatians 3:8. Hence the same gospel that was afterwards to "justify the heathen through faith," was actually preached to Abraham. And he was justified before circumcision, that he might be the father of all the uncircumcised, "Who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised."—Romans 4:12. "Who also walk," "also," means, as Abraham walked; or he could not have been justified. The Ephesians were of the heathen that were to be "justified through faith," hence the "good works before ordained, that they should walk in them," were, "the steps of that faith of our father Abraham." And after all the wresting by skeptics making Paul and James so contradictory, this scriptural view perfectly reconciles their teachings; both correct; writing upon two different subjects. Paul writing against salvation by circumcision, and keeping the law of Moses, as taught the Gentile converts (Acts 15:5). James writing of the necessity of obedience to all the works of righteousness included in the gospel law.

Now, if we can learn just what the steps of that faith of Father Abraham were, then we may know just what good works God had before ordained that they should walk in them, or do them, at Ephesus; instead of the dead works of the law of Moses, that some were evidently boasting of being saved by. Jesus said the same gospel "should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."—Luke 24: 47. When men there asked after preaching by Peter, "What shall we do?" then Peter declared the steps of repentance, and baptism for remission of sins. (Acts 2: 38.) The same steps were commanded the heathen, or Gentiles. (Acts 10: 48.) And Paul was commanded to "Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins" (Acts 22: 16), or be thus cleansed, or freed from sins. John the Baptist sent to "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight" (Matthew 3: 3), preached "the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." (Mark 1: 4.) "And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified [obeyed] God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected [disobeyed] the counsel of God against themselves [to their condemnation], being not baptized of him."—Luke 7: 29, 30.

Jesus says, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord [yes, we believe], shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."—Matthew 7: 21. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5. "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters," etc.; like the Pharisees and lawyers who rejected baptism by John. Paul said to the Romans: "But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."—Romans 6: 17, 18. What form of doctrine? "Therefore we are buried with him [Christ] by baptism into [the likeness of] death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should [arise to] walk in newness of life." "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him."—Colossians 2: 12. The form of the burial and resurrection of Christ. Baptism. He was writing to baptized believers, so nothing else could have been referred to as "that form of doctrine." Peter said that Noah and family "were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us."—1 Peter 3: 20, 21. The figure was, that as Noah by obedience in building the ark was saved by faith and works, so Peter reasons that we by faith and works by repentance and baptism are also saved. Yet, "Baptists immerse those only who profess to be dead to, or freed from sin."—D. B. Ray, in Baptist Succession. They baptize them because they are freed from sin, saved. O how different from all the Bible writers! Again 1 John 5: 1 is quoted and wrested, in order to prove salvation by faith without works. "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." There, don't you see that by faith only we are born of God? they ask. By reading all this epistle, the only way to rightly understand anything, we find this conclusion altogether untrue. But that none were to be considered true believers, only those who kept all his commandments. For before this John had said, "Every one that doeth righteousness is born of him."—1 John 2: 29. "Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God."—1 John 3: 10. "Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love."—1 John 4: 7, 8. "And hereby we do know that we know him, [How? By believing? No. But] if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him."—1 John 2: 3-5. Here is a scathing denunciation of all that claim salvation by believing that Jesus is the Christ, without keeping all his commandments. But to make it more terrible, if possible, after their favorite text, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God" (1 John 5: 1), he goes right on and shows who are believers. "And every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him. . . . For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous."—1 John 5: 1, 3. If one can be born of God, without loving him, then, and then only can he, without keeping his commandments. Jesus says, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, . . . teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."—Matthew 28: 19, 20. "And whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven."—Matthew 16: 19. In obedience to this, Peter commanded to "repent and be baptized every one of you;" on Pentecost. "And he commanded them [the Gentiles] to be baptized."—Acts 10: 48. It was the will and counsel of God; and Jesus says, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."—John 7: 17.

As John says that none but "he that doeth righteousness is born of him," let us inquire what is doing righteousness. Jesus said when demanding baptism, "Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."—Matthew 3: 15. If it became Jesus thus to do right, O, how much more it becometh poor sinful creatures! And as he that "doeth not righteousness is not of God," how can we hope for the blood of Jesus Christ to cleanse us from all sin, "if we walk not in the light, as he is in the light," (1 John 1:7) or as he walked in the light? Light is truth, and as God gave Jesus for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people (Isaiah 55:4), so where Jesus bears witness, that baptism is a part of the fulfillment of all righteousness, when he went as a leader in that path of duty, and when he gave commandment "repent and be baptized every one of you," on Pentecost (the same to Cornelius), and said, "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; and he that believeth not [consequently not baptized] shall be damned," should we not therefore heed the testimony of this great witness, follow in the steps of this almighty leader, and obey this grandest of all commanders? Paul's faith did not save him without righteous works, although seeing the Lord, hearing from his own mouth "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest."—Acts 9:5. Who has greater faith now than he had? Yet three days after this he had to "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins" (Acts 22:16), or cause their removal, thus be freed, cleansed from sin. But the greatest difference between those who claim salvation by faith alone, and the New Testament church, is in regard to the "Promise of the Father, which, saith he [Jesus], ye have heard of me."—Acts 1:4. "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:39. This is so plain that to evade its force, they wrest this scripture, saying it was not the baptism of the Spirit that Peter referred to when he said, "And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," but something very different; that the New Testament scriptures are the gifts promised.

When Jesus said, "wait for the promise of the Father," he continued, "for John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence."—Acts 1:5. On Pentecost this promise was received, causing the gathering of those to whom Peter preached; to whom he said that if they would repent and be baptized, they should also receive the Holy Ghost, the same gift as the apostles had received; as he said when he perceived that God had granted salvation to the Gentiles, "Of a truth I perceived that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."—Acts 10:34, 35. How? In the same manner. And when making his defense for going to the Gentiles, he said, "Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, . . . what was I, that I could withstand God?"—Acts 11:17. "The like gift," of "the Holy Ghost." Also in Acts 10:45 we read, "On the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost," as "he did unto us," said Peter. Did not the apostles have the gift of the Holy Ghost poured out upon them? And were they not baptized with the Holy Ghost? And if so, was not the gift and the baptism one and the same thing, "the promise of the Father"? O Lord, how long wilt thou allow thy holy word and promise to thus be "wrested," perverted, and the people "tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of man, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive"? Ephesians 4:14. But say they, "the real baptism of the Holy Spirit always endowed the possessor with the gift of tongues, or inspiration" (D. B. Ray, Baptist Succession, page 12); and denies that there has ever been any spiritual gifts or inspiration since A. D. 96. If this be true, tell us how any one has ever obtained salvation since that time; for Jesus says, "and this is life eternal [salvation], that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."—John 17:3.

And Paul says that when Jesus comes he will take "vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel" (2 Thessalonian's 1:8); because all that obey the gospel receive the knowledge of God through the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Jesus says, "All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."—Matthew 11:27. The only way the Son reveals his Father is through the Holy Spirit. His last great commission was, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned. [Was this all the gospel? Listen.] And these signs shall follow them that believe."—Mark 16:15-17. He then enumerates the signs and was received up into heaven. "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen."—Mark 16:20. "Confirming," making known the truth of the word, the gospel preached, that Jesus was the Christ and Jehovah the only true God. Without signs following no confirmation or knowledge of God; without that knowledge, no eternal life. So if signs following believers ceased, pray tell me how the word has ever been confirmed since, or any one obtained eternal life? Or has another plan of salvation ever been revealed? Jesus says, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself [make myself known] to him."—John 14:21. That means any one now, as well as then. Jesus said, Go teach all nations, and lo, I am with you even to the end of the world. This was upon the conditions that they were baptized and kept all his commandments. (See Matthew 28:19, 20.)

Paul teaches the same "unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. . . . I thank my God . . . that in everything ye are enriched by him, . . . even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you; so that ye come behind in no gift. . . . Who shall also confirm you unto the end."—1 Corinthians 1:1-8. Unto the end of the world; "all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord," fulfilling God's promise that under the new covenant, "shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest."—Jeremiah 31:34. Not by anything written on tables of stone or with ink upon paper, but written by the "Spirit of the living God;" upon the "fleshly tables of the heart." (2 Corinthians 2:3.) This being true, no man can know there is a God by reading anything or everything "written with ink;" but only by the inspiration of the living God, upon the "fleshly tables of the heart." And no other way was ever revealed to accomplish this, only by confirming the word with signs following. And without these, no eternal life, as signs followed everywhere. (Mark 16:20.) They followed at Jerusalem; and the laying on of hands must have been administered there also, although not mentioned, even as the signs following were not mentioned by the writer of the Acts. But as the same gospel was to "be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24:47), and after baptism at Samaria Peter and John were sent there from Jerusalem, to lay hands on those baptized, before God would send the Holy Spirit upon them (and not until they had complied with this "step of faith," did God send the spirit upon them, and "confirm the word with signs following"), reason teaches that God, who is no respecter of persons, required the same of them at Jerusalem.

Peter spoke in Acts 5:32 of the "Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him." God had to be obeyed in all things taught before giving the Spirit; and the last act of obedience required was the laying on of hands, as "Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given."—Acts 8:18. Paul also was filled with the Holy Ghost by the putting on of the hands of Ananias. (Acts 9:17.) And he was not an apostle; likely an elder. Then Paul laid hands on the Ephesians, and "the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied."—Acts 19:6.

Paul wrote to Timothy, "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery [a body of elders. — Webster]." — 1 Timothy 4:14. "Wherefore I put thee in remembrance, that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands."—2 Timothy 1:6. And Paul mentions the laying on of hands, with the other "principles of the doctrine of Christ." (Hebrews 6:1, 2.) And neither men nor angels were to preach any other gospel (doctrine) without being accursed. (Galatians 1:8.) "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine [of Christ], receive him not into your house."—2 John 1:10. God being no respecter of persons, and those baptized at Samaria having to wait until the news was sent to Jerusalem for help, and two apostles had to be sent down there to assist Philip in his ministry, and those men being authorized to teach all Christ's commandments, and nothing more, taught the laying on of hands with prayer in order that those baptized believers might receive the Spirit; is it not contrary to all reason and common sense to believe that they would teach different at Samaria, and require of those people different from, and altogether more than was required at Jerusalem, when the gospel was to be preached to all nations alike? Make the wearisome journey to Samaria to pray for them and to lay on hands, and neglect it at Jerusalem, where there were a dozen apostles, and about three thousand baptized; especially when the word was confirmed everywhere with signs following, surely at Jerusalem? Or that Paul after laying on hands at Ephesus, on Timothy and others to confer the Spirit, would neglect to lay hands on the jailer's household (Acts 16) that they might receive the Spirit. Preaching one gospel or plan of salvation at Ephesus, another at Philippi, and then pronounce a curse upon men or angels who should preach any other gospel! No, it is unworthy of the belief of any reasonable mind. As the word was confirmed everywhere with signs following, common sense teaches that the same gospel was preached everywhere, as Jesus said it should be.

Only one instance where the signs followed before laying on of hands, or baptism for the special purpose of convincing the Jewish saints that the Gentiles were also entitled to salvation. For after these manifestations, then answered Peter to those who opposed the Gentiles being baptized, "can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized."—Acts 10:46-48. Speaking of those manifestations in his defense for going to the Gentiles, he says, "What was I, that I could withstand God" (Acts 11:17), after seeing all this. Eight years before, they were commanded to go to all nations (Mark 16:15), but had "withstood God" all this time, and then Peter had to have a vision from God to induce him to go to Cornelius. (Acts 10:11-16.) No other exception to God's invariable rule is given; and this was recorded, no doubt, just because it was an exception. What was there then or is there now grievous about the laying on of hands? As John says, "And his commandments are not grievous." The apostles were to teach the people to observe all things whatsoever Christ had commanded (Matthew 28:20); and they taught and administered the laying on of hands at Samaria and elsewhere, in obedience to Christ. Paul said that what he taught and practiced was "not after man," neither was he "taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." (Galatians 1:11, 12.) And he teaches the laying on of hands, with faith, repentance, baptisms, resurrections of the dead, and eternal judgments as the foundation principles of the doctrine of Christ. (Hebrew 6:1, 2.) And John says, "if there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine" of Christ, he is an evil-doer. (2 John 1:10, 11.) It was not only for the gift of the Spirit, but for blessing children, as he put his hands on children and blessed them (Matthew 19:15). Also for ordination: "And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away."—Acts 13:3. Also for healing the sick. As Jesus said of believers, "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover."—Mark 16:18.

James in teaching all things Christ had commanded (Matthew 28:20) says, "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up."—James 5:14, 15. In Acts 2 we learn that Peter commanded repentance and baptism for remission of sins; but James, himself one of those told to teach Christ's commandments, wrote this commandment of Christ. And not only was the Lord to raise sick up, but furthermore, "and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." (James 5:15.)

Paul wrote to the saints at Corinth, that because of sins, "Many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep [or die]."—1 Corinthians 11:30. The command to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins was to those not of the church; but the one to call for the elders of the church in order to obtain the forgiveness of sins, was to the church, after being baptized into Christ, and becoming Abraham's seed. (Galatians 3:27-29.) It seems all with the least intelligence should understand this, as James wrote to Israel scattered abroad (James 1:1). The one through James to send for the elders when sick is just as binding on Israel scattered abroad, the church of Christ to-day, as the one to repent and be baptized for remission of sins is upon the unconverted. Yet it is rejected and scoffed at by millions who profess to love the Lord, when John says, And this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not grievous.

The seed of Father Abraham believed in this, taught it by their fathers; the King Asa "sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians," and died. (2 Chronicles 16:12.) Jacob laid hands on Joseph's sons, and blessed them. (Genesis 48:14.) And hands were laid upon the Levites. (Numbers 8:10.) And Moses laid hands upon Joshua. (Numbers 27:18-20.) And Joshua was full of the Spirit, for "Moses had laid hands upon him." (Deuteronomy 34:9.) And although the claim is so strongly made without a shadow of evidence, that the laying on of hands ceased with John in the year A. D. 96, yet all the Christian fathers testify otherwise.

Tertullian A. D. 200 says, "After baptism succeeds the laying on of hands with prayer, calling for the Holy Ghost." Repeats it many times. In the third century Cyprian says, "Our practice is that after baptism they should be presented, that by prayer, and the imposition of hands, they may receive the Holy Ghost."—Epistle 73. In the fourth century Chrysostom says, "That confirmation gives us the Holy Ghost." Augustine in the same century says: that they "still do what the apostles did at Samaria, when they laid their hands on them, and called down the Holy Ghost." Mosheim says, the laying on of hands in confirmation was practiced in the third century. (First Century, part 1, chapter 4.) Also in his other books. Eusebius, called the father of church history, in book 7, chapter 2, says "Members were received into the church, with prayer, and the laying on of hands." And in book 6, chapter 26 says, that one Novatus was not permitted the laying on of hands because of improper baptism. This in the third century. "After baptism the Holy Ghost is given to every one that believes, as in the case of the Samaritans."—Anti-Nicene Fathers, volume 5, page 669; Gahan's Church History, page 93, says laying on of hands in confirmation was practiced in the third century. Martin Luther in sermon, page 67, says "laying on of hands after baptism was practiced by the Papists." The churches after the first century. "Furthermore as I confess that the laying on of hands was a sacrament."—Calvin's Commentary, page 211. "The laying on of hands followeth prayer."—Calvin. Bingham's Antiquities, volume 2, page 178, speaks of historians "who particularly observe this [the laying on of hands] to have been the general practice of the whole church, eastern and western." "For the apostles only laid hands on men, that the Holy Ghost by prayer might descend upon them; which custom the church has now observed and practiced by her governors also."

Should the united testimony of all this cloud of witnesses, harmonizing with all the Old and New Testament writers, be rejected because there are those who scoff at it, saying they do not believe in salvation by works? These scoffers ask what this means: "He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation."—John 5:24. "He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16. "He that believeth on him is not condemned."—Verse 18. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."—Verse 36. It means just what it says; harmonizing with all other scriptures; referring to believers like Abraham, whose "faith wrought with his works, and by works was [his] faith made perfect."—James 2:22. "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only."—James 2:24. Only a perfect faith brings salvation, perfected by good works. Jesus said, "And these signs shall follow them that believe."—Mark 16:17. That is the only faith that will bring salvation. The Samaritans believed Philip's preaching (Acts 8:12), repented, no doubt, and "were baptized, both men and women." Did that save them? No. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."—Romans 8:9. And all their faith, repentance, and baptism in the name of the Lord Jesus (Acts 8:16) did not give unto them the Spirit, and they were none of Christ's. Another work of righteousness had to be done, for Jesus had said, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."—Matthew 4:4. That other word of God necessary was the laying on of hands. Then, and not until then, did they become Christ's by receiving the Spirit. (Acts 8:17.) And the word was confirmed unto them with signs following. (Mark 16:20.)

We have shown that Abraham was justified by faith in Christ, before the law was given. "And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham" (Galatians 3:8); through obedience to which he was justified. The same gospel by which the heathen or Gentiles were afterwards to be justified, by walking in the steps of that faith of Father Abraham, of which James says, "Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect. . . . Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only."—James 2:22, 24. By what works was his faith made perfect? By walking in the steps of that faith that was afterwards to be preached to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem; in order that the heathen Gentiles also might know how to walk in the steps of that faith, that they might be justified. As Paul wrote, that "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto [leading to] righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Romans 10:9, 10. As the eunuch confessed before baptism "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."—Acts 8:37. Because true faith in the heart leadeth to obedience. "Knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance."—Romans 2:4. "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?"—

Romans 10:14. True faith is therefore the moving cause of obedience that brings salvation; hence Paul truly said, "Therefore being justified by faith" (Romans 5:1); that "faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect."

On Pentecost, faith in Peter's preaching the resurrection of Jesus, was the moving cause that made men cry out, "What shall we do?" Prepared them to act. Then Peter pointed them to "the steps of that faith of father Abraham," repentance and baptism for the remission of sins; with the promise of the Holy Spirit, to be obtained by obedience to another step of faith, the laying on of hands, administered there, no doubt, after water baptism, although not mentioned by the writer of the Acts; as neither was the signs following the believers there mentioned, and we would have no record of it only for Mark 16:20, where he records the fact that they followed everywhere. The writer of Acts records it at Samaria, in Paul's conversion, and at Ephesus, as I have shown before. O, that all would heed the warning of the great Master: "Take heed that no man deceive you" (Matthew 24:4); or of Paul, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Galatians 6:7. Let "no man deceive you," neither deceive yourselves with the idea that you "believe from the heart" "that Jesus is the Christ;" or that you are "born of God," "passed from death unto life;" or that you really "love God," unless you are sure you have kept all his commandments. For, "he that loveth not, knoweth not God."—1 John 4:8. "And this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments."—1 John 5:3. "He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."—1 John 2:4. "Who-soever doeth not righteousness is not of God."—1 John 3:10. From all these it is easy to see that the only true evidence of our believing in Jesus Christ is the keeping of his commandments. And all who believe otherwise will meet with bitter disappointment. And the first of these commandments, or "steps of faith," are repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, or as said to Paul to "wash away thy sins," then the laying on of hands by those authorized of God for the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Without obeying these, walking in these first "steps of faith" it is in vain, and we are deceiving ourselves to hope for the remission of our sins or for salvation. There are other commandments to obey, as partaking of the Lord's Supper, adding to your faith virtue, and to it knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, etc. (2 Peter 1:5, 6.) But to undertake to obtain salvation by doing these without first obeying the first three would be like a child undertaking to read before it had learned the alphabet. Paul had both false faith, by believing false evidence, and wicked works by persecuting the saints before his conversion; and true faith by believing true evidence, and righteous works by repentance and baptism to wash away his sins, etc., after accepting the truth.

All the antediluvians perished because of false faith and wicked works by believing false evidence regarding the message God sent to them by Noah, except eight who were saved by true faith and righteous works. Yet we must all admit that God never sent a message into the world without sufficient evidence with it to convince all of its truth, if sought for in his own appointed way. To "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." Has given ample instructions how to prove it. The antediluvians must have rejected the counsel of God, through Noah, as the Pharisees rejected the counsel of God through John, not being baptized of him. And Jesus said, "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matthew 24:37. Is this true? If so God must send from heaven a warning message of the coming of his Son, "taking vengeance on all them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Thessalonians 1:8. As he did through Noah; as "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7. As testified to also by John that God would send an angel from heaven with "the everlasting gospel," in the hour of his judgment. (Revelation 14:6.)

Hundreds of thousands since 1830 have testified and are still testifying to the fulfillment of this prophecy. And that Christ's promise is just as true now as when made, that "If any man will do his will [obey the gospel], he shall know of the doctrine."—John 7:17. As he said again, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him."—John 14:21. Harmonizing with this, James says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."—James 1:5. Why not do as Jesus said, "Search the scriptures," and believe all the promises of God?

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars for evermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here has spurned—
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet—
Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue,
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true."

River Dell Ranch, BLACKFOOT, Idaho.

Dear Home Column: It is a long time since I have written to you, but to-day I long in my heart for the sweet communion of Saints, and find in reading the HERALD many words of comfort and good cheer; so I am thankful for the HERALD and for the privilege of reading it. Dear Saints, if ever I have wronged any of you in word or deed, I am sorry and ask your pardon. I know I often have done wrong, but when I see that I have wronged any one I am so very sorry for it. It is my desire to do good. I am trying to be humble and prayerful, and am trying to be more patient. Pray for me that I may continue faithful to the end, and also pray for my dear husband and family, that if it be God's will we may yet get away from here and have a home in Missouri.

May God bless his children everywhere is my prayer.

Your sister,

JANE HEATON.

Dear Home Column: I feel that I ought to write a few lines to the Column to let the sisters of the Prayer Union know that, in answer to their prayers, God in his mercy has removed that lump from off the wrist of my niece for which we give him the praise. I trust that it may be the means of helping her to put her trust in God to such an extent that she will be led to obey the gospel. For this I hope you will all pray. About a year ago I requested your prayers in behalf of my husband that he might turn from his intemperate habits and be led to see the truth as it is in Christ. There was a while he did not drink so much, but this summer it seems that the appetite for strong drink has overcome him again. He keeps drinking every day and I ask of all who may read this, that believe in prayer, to ask God to help him to see the folly and wickedness of his ways, and give him strength and courage to overcome his evil ways, and that he may be brought to obey God. Pray for me that I may get nearer to God, and that I may strive to overcome all evil.

Your sister in the one faith,

MRS. A. M.

Autumn Reveries.

The rain is falling on the yellow leaves,
Like summer showers;
The drops so welcome in the early months
To trees and flowers.

It touches gently as from heaven it falls;
O blessed rain!
You patter, patter softly as you may,
'Tis all in vain.

No shining sun, no tender drops of rain,
No evening dew
Can ever to those drooping leaves restore
Their lustrous hue.

The breeze moans sadly, as from branch to branch
It sweeps along
And wakes the silent slumbers of the night
In mournful song

The moon that keeps her lonely midnight watch,
Saw the cold hand
That brushed across the face of Mother Earth
And o'er the land

Spread out its frosty crest with chill intent.
O treacherous night!
Thy radiant beauty sparkling everywhere
So cold and white.

Like blighted lives are leaves touched by the frost
In passing by.
Some fall direct, some struggle bravely on,
Then droop and die.

Ah, yes, there is a charm about those leaves:
Red, gold, and brown;

A charm that's sad and deep as to the earth,
They flutter down.

They seem to touch a cord in human life
As thus they fall.

They seem to vibrate on the inmost soul
And to recall

Old memories, the scenes of other years
Almost forgot,

And whether scenes of pleasure or of pain,
It matters not.

For like some distant chime those echoes ring,
Resounding fast;

Those falling leaves have struck a silvery cord
Out of the past.

The Shamberger-Hunt Debate.

The opera house in Mallard, Iowa, was well filled on the evening of October 13, when the debate was called to order by H. B. Richards, Esq., who acted as chairman. Elder O. J. Beaver, of the church of the Brethren or German Baptist, sometimes called Dunkards, was moderator for G. A. Shamberger, and Bro. J. M. Baker, acted in a like capacity for the writer.

The churches' propositions, as to the identity of each with the New Testament, were the questions agreed upon for debate. Twelve sessions had been arranged for, but I would not consent to two sessions a day, so only eight were held. My opponent said he had promised to accompany his family to California, and could not remain longer than to hold eight sessions.

The Brethren Church had, without the consent of the disputants, engaged a shorthand reporter, intending to publish the debate; but the noted court reporter came to his table full of whisky, and of course I gave him notice that he could not report my speeches.

Elder Shamberger opened the discussion by affirming his church. He was a pleasant speaker, and quite winning in his deportment, but was very slow in bringing his church in organization and peculiar doctrines before the people. His first speech was principally on "Christian graces," giving a brief history of the beginning of their church in Germany in 1708; also declaring that they had no creed but the Bible.

To his great surprise I presented their "Church Manual," (price fifteen cents) a revised edition, which was authorized by their annual conference and published last year, which, according to Webster, was a creed, and a strong one too, as was seen by reading the instruction to ministers, on page 26: "The church will not allow you to depart from the order of the general brotherhood in faith and practice; but will hold you to the faith and practice of the Scriptures as defined by the Brethren in annual meeting assembled." This book of sixty-four pages, together with a book written by Alexander Mack in 1713, and published in English in 1888, proved to be of true worth in proving that the Brethren Church were not "successors" or "restorers" but reformers. Mr. Mack was the real founder of their church. His book is called "A Plain View of the Rites and Ordinances of the House of God." It contains eighty-nine pages. The price is ten cents, and can be bought of the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Illinois.

Any one having their "Church Manual," and Mr. Mack's book, together with a liberal supply of their tracts, can soon be able to refute their position on church organization, doctrines, etc.

As the discussion continued I brought their church out, and examined it by the light of God's word, and their standard church books. (I use the term "their church," for about fifteen of their ministers were present.)

I found that Mr. Mack, their accredited founder, was formerly a Presbyterian, and the man who baptized him (Mack) by trine immersion had never been so baptized, neither had he been authorized by heavenly direction, nor do they now know that man's name; and as nearly two hundred years have passed since the transaction, the church will remain in ignorance on that point.

As they failed to prove that Mr. Mack, their first minister, was ever ordained, I asked the following questions: Can an unordained man legally ordain? Can an illegally ordained man legally perform the sacred rite of water baptism? Can an illegal baptism and an illegal ordination be made right and legal by the vote of a company of illegally baptized and illegally ordained men?

The questions fell hard on the so-called Brethren ministers. I pressed my opponent for answers. He referred to Christ's commission, Matthew 28: 19, as their authority for preaching and baptizing. I asked if he was one of the "eleven"? He said no. I then asked if he or Mr. Mack were in direct line of authority in calling and ordination from the "eleven"? No reply. I repeated the question with emphasis, but no answer came. I then proved to them that their church was without divine authority; and I believe the majority understood it.

Elder Shamberger finally took the position that their church was a part of the "wilderness church," or "remnant" of Revelation, chapters 12 and 13. When asked to tell who the "man child" was that "was caught up unto God, and to his throne" (12: 5), he very embarrassingly answered, "The Martyrs." Then he guessed again, saying, "The Christian Martyrs was the man child that was taken up to heaven."

Much was said on both sides which was of special interest, but can not be reported here. I then presented what is, I believe, the generally accepted belief of the ministry of our church that the "man child" of Revelation 12: 5 is the authority, the priesthood, and that the "remnant" of Revelation 12: 17 was eventually "overcome," as indicated in Revelation 13: 7. I do not think Mr. Shamberger mentioned the "wilderness church" again.

They deny the priesthood in any form, yet ordain in order to give authority. They claim that "Christ was a priest, but the apostles were not," and did not hold any priesthood. I presented a few questions before the debate to Mr. J. H. Moore, editor of the Gospel Messenger, which paper is their church organ, and now published at Elgin, Illinois. Question: Does the church of the Brethren, or German Baptists, receive into church fellowship and membership those who have been baptized by trine immersion by other church ministers? Mr. Moore answered: "They do not. It has been their rule not to recognize any form of baptism administered save by their own duly authorized ministers."

The answer just recorded placed my opponent in a position to defend his church as being the only true church on earth, or he must go back on their beloved editor. This worried him, for he could not court favor from other religious societies, nor could he make a point (?) against us when we took a position on baptism, and who was authorized to administer.

Question to Mr. Moore: Is baptism accepted if the ordinance is administered by an unordained man or woman? Answer: "Among the Brethren there are three orders in the ministry; elders, those in the second degree, and those in the first degree. Ministers in the second degree and those ordained to the eldership are authorized to administer baptism, while those in the first degree, just beginners in the ministry, are not authorized to baptize. They do not accept baptism administered by women."

Question: Please name the officers in the church both as to name and precedence? Answer: "The order of the officers in Brethren Church stands thus: First, the elder; second, ministers in the second degree; third, ministers in the first degree; and fourth, deacons. They occupy positions of authority in the order named, and this includes all of the regular officers required in our methods of church government."

The reader will see from the above statement that my opponent's church is very poorly organized.

Elder D. L. Miller, of the Brethren Church, wrote me they did not teach the laying on of hands for the blessing of children. They claim to teach and practice the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick, but in their "Church Manual," page sixteen, they declare that "Brethren, also, who are not ordained may administer it in case of necessity."

Mr. Shamberger tried to dispose of the last quotation, but could not.

The important question of trine immersion was introduced by the writer, and my opponent was asked to take a position on it, but he did not seem anxious to do so. I soon presented their form of water baptism as given me in a letter from a prominent and careful writer among them, Mr. Carman C. Johnson, of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. He said, "The Brethren Church teaches and practices trine immersion; that is, they baptize all candidates by leading them into water until the water comes a little below the waist, the candidate then kneels, and after answering certain questions as to belief he is dipped three times face forward while the commission is repeated."

I then proved from their own works that they counted baptism a "burial," and a "resurrection," a real coming out of the water "grave." I took the position that their mode of trine immersion did not baptize, "bury," the candidate in the name of each of the trinity, for the whole man was buried but once; and one fifth, the head and shoulders, twice. The going into the water with the candidate, the repeating the ceremony, the burying the candidate, and the coming forth out of the water with the candidate constituted the complete mode.

I tried to show the fallacy of their mode of trine immersion by the following: Jones, Brown, and Blair own a five-acre field of corn. The field is one acre wide, and five long. They hire a man to cultivate that corn three times. The man takes a team and corn-plow, and plows the first four acres, then plows the fifth acre, then plows the fifth acre the second time, then the third time, which would mean that he had plowed the full five acres but once, while the fifth acre had received three plowings. I believe the people saw the point, and my opponent said but little on that line. Surely if one burial would answer four fifths of the man, it ought to answer the whole man.

Their standard works claim trine immersion can be traced to the apostles' time. I challenged the proof, telling them at the same time that I could prove that it could not be done. Mr. Shamberger did not attempt to prove that Polycarp and Justin Martyr were in direct succession of John the Revelator, and that they had been immersed three times.

About the first if not the first writer that mentions trine immersion is Clement, of Alexandria, who lived about A. D. 160-260. Clement said, "Ye were conducted to a bath just as Christ was carried to the grave, and were thrice immersed," then said the reason for the "thrice" was because Christ lay in the grave three days. Not a word favoring the "commission," by Christ. Tertullian is their favorite historian, and flourished from A. D.

160 to 220. This learned man, however, called trine immersion "as somewhat amplius pledge than the Lord appointed in the gospel."—Ante-Nicene Fathers, volume 3, pages 94, 95.

Mr. Shamberger claimed "baptizing" (Matthew 28: 19) was translated from "baptizo," meaning repeated action. I asked how many repeated actions would satisfy the meaning of the word; three, twelve, or one hundred. He could not answer.

The Greek preposition eis was translated by Mr. Shamberger, "into the name of," etc., but it had no special weight with the people. His next effort was to divide the "commission" by the repeated use of "and" (verse 19) in order to prove trine immersion. I then proved that the frequent use of "and" (Matthew 8: 11) was common to Matthew's style of writing. He did not attempt to prove that trine immersion was practiced before Christ's crucifixion.

It is evident that J. H. Moore, editor of the Gospel Messenger, had been telling his readers that John the Baptist practiced trine immersion; but when the proof for his assertion was demanded he said: "It will be observed that the teaching of the Messenger regarding the form of John's baptism is largely from inference."—Volume 40, page 670.

Of the many Bible proofs we used favoring single immersion was Luke 7: 29, 30: "And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him."

I argued that Christ was in "the counsel of God" when John's baptism, which was single immersion, was authorized and accepted, and that he would not and did not teach contrary to that "counsel."

Any of the elders or members wishing to study the history, arguments, etc., of trine immersion, will be greatly benefited by getting the SAINTS' HERALD, volume 36, number 34, and seven numbers in volume 25.

Feet washing. "We practice it just as Christ and the apostles did," is the statement of J. H. Moore, of the Brethren Church, in a widely circulated tract.

I asked my opponent to prove that their mode of feet washing was scriptural. He tried to evade the issue, for he knew there was no scriptural proof for their custom,—the women washing the women's feet, and the men, not of the priesthood, washing the men's feet,—as a church rite.

I contended that the "holy kiss" spoken of by Paul was simply a "holy salutation," and that their practice of the "kiss," and the peculiar head-veil or bonnet worn by the sisters, threatened the overthrow of their church, for the young men and women had for years been petitioning their annual conference to remove those "customs" from the church articles and covenants. Mr. Shamberger did not deny my contention.

Many minor questions grew out of the positions assumed by Elder Shamberger for their church.

I found my opponent just as Bro. H. O. Smith wrote of him; quite pleasant as a speaker, but unscrupulous in his arguments.

On the evening of the 17th I affirmed our church to be in harmony with the New Testament, and for four sessions endeavored to maintain our positions. I was aided by the good Spirit in presenting the church of New Testament times, the apostasy, the restoration, the latter-day apostasy, the reorganization, also presenting the three standard books of the church, the need of present revelation from God, and a complete church organization.

The question of patriarchs in the church was brought out; but when I read the name from several places in the Bible, and history, and lastly from revelations to the church, my arguments seemed satisfactory.

Elder Shamberger read, in his first opposing speech, several pages from D. H. Bays' work. When I got the floor I told the people that I met Mr. Shamberger with their own authorized publications, and that I would not stoop so low as to do what he had done. I then read from "Truth Defended," by H. C. Smith, where Bays denied the inspiration of the Bible, also other facts against him. I saw on his table the Braden-Kelley debate, and took advantage of it by reading Mrs. Braden's appeal for a divorce. One part pleased the audience very much where it reads, that "Braden kicked her out of bed and squandered her money." We heard nothing read from Braden during the debate, and not many more pages from Infidel Bays.

Elder Shamberger tried to make the usual objections to the Inspired Translation of the Bible, by Joseph Smith, and prided himself as having found something "funny" when he read who Cain's wife was, and where he found her. This "funny" spell was turned when I read volume 40, page 521, of the Messenger, in an editorial, that in a certain locality their "ministry" were "more concerned about who Melchisedec was, or where Cain got his wife than . . . about the conversion of sinners or the training of members in the duties of Christian life."

Great and repeated stress was put on the Book of Mormon as being "another gospel;" but when asked to tell wherein it differed in gospel teachings to that of the Bible, he could not or did not tell.

One of the questions presented to Carman C. Johnson, of the Brethren or Dunkard Church, by letter, was this: What does the word "ensign" mean in Isaiah 11: 12; 18: 3? Mr. Johnson answered: "An ensign simply means a standard or flag, a pennant or banner, or some mark by which to locate the position of the Lord's headquarters. The language is figurative, and is simply used because the hosts and forces of the Lord are spoken of in military terms."

This definition was used to good effect, together with that found in HERALD of July 9, 1902, page 679.

Elder F. A. Smith was present four sessions, and gave us timely aid and counsel, so also did Bro. Baker. The latter sold several copies of the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Inspired Translation, all of which, I believe, were taken by opponent's church ministers. One of the most prominent among them stated publicly that "their church had no head," which fact we proved while his church was on trial.

The cost of the opera house for the eight sessions was sixty dollars, each side paying their half cheerfully. Great credit is due the Saints at Mallard for the manner in which they defrayed all expenses. Bro. and Sr. D. King roomed and boarded from three to six for ten days.

Time alone must tell of the good or evil that will result from the controversy.

I am not an experienced debater, as this was my second effort. My very soul delights in the blessed gospel restored in these latter days, and my former faith in the angel's proclamation was greatly confirmed during the debate.

KAITANGATA, New Zealand, October 6.

Editors Herald: I herein send you a clipping from the Bruce Herald, of Tuesday, September 30, published at Milton, Otago. Bro. Tucker and I are the apostles referred to. The clipping is as follows:

"Writes our Kaitangata correspondent: For some six or seven weeks past two apostles of the Latter Day Saints Church have been laboring here, and let me add, with success. Their advent here somewhat roused the ire and revealed the bitter militant spirit of the local disciples of another faith. When finished speaking in public, questions were usually invited by the strangers in a spirit of candor and meekness, which should have disarmed suspicion and animosity. When questioned, usually on irrelevant topics, and in a harsh disposition, their replies were always couched in pure English, and with a seeming desire to observe the gentlemanly amenities. The disciples usually got flattened out, it was gall and bitterness to them to see their heaviest local gun spiked. A Long Tom was imported from Melbourne, and by lecturing in the public hall it was thought that the Saints would be blown to smithereens. The lecturer came, a crowded hall listened to a torrent of harsh recrimination and abuse of persons who simply differed from him in opinion. The Saints are increasing in number through gentlemanly address and civility, the disciples are decreasing through vitriolic utterances and the methods of the prize ring."

I am to meet this "Long Tom" in debate here in Kaitangata, after which Bro. Tucker will meet him in Dunedin in a twelve-night discussion. McKay's hall will be used here for the debate, and the Christian tabernacle, which seats about one thousand, in Dunedin. Dunedin is a city of about fifty thousand inhabitants. We do not know a soul there, but we trust in Him who is worthy to be praised.

DIGHTON, Kansas, October 25.

Editors Herald: There are a little band of six Saints out here, but we have our prayer-meetings. Last Sunday the Spirit was with us all in a large degree, and was poured out upon us until very nearly all in the house were in tears, and we rejoiced, for we knew it was the Spirit of the Lord.

We had our baby boy blessed and the speaker said he would be a good man, which makes our hearts glad, for we have hopes in God and in children.

The way to enjoy the blessings of God and to have his Spirit is to be humble and obedient as much as we can and know. May all the honest be gathered into the fold, and may the time soon come when all of God's people will be gathered home to Zion, is the prayer of your humble servant.

J. L. SAWYER.

LOUISVILLE, Kentucky, October 27.

Editors Herald: It has been some time since I have written to your valuable columns. We are battling along as best we can. Since we have closed our tent-work, it is difficult to secure places to preach at all the time, as we only use the hall for Sunday services and the rest of our work has to be done on the street and in private houses. I have preached on the street a few times, with very good interest. I followed the closing services of a lot of Baptist students on the street last Saturday night, with just splendid interest. I had an opportunity to preach to the railroad men in the Louisville and Nashville shops last Friday, and Elder W. J. Smith will speak to them next Friday. He is a splendid man.

We have just rented a hall in the west end of the city, where we have awakened some interest. We hope to build up the work in the west end while Bro. W. J. is with us. I hope we will be able to reach a good class of people to strengthen the work here.

The work here has had a struggle this year from within and without. It is not so hard so long as the enemy is on the outside, but when he is working on the inside it is a serious thing.

My prayer is that every one may learn his duty and do it, which naturally will bring about perfect order in God's house. I shall still labor to build up Zion.

Dear Readers: We are doing what we can to spread the gospel in these pleasant fields, and the good Lord is blessing his servants in their labors, as I hear many good reports from the elders in different localities. Last Saturday your scribe and his collaborer, Lee Quick, baptized two precious souls and we left others seeking the kingdom.

C. P. WELSH.

DALLAS, Wisconsin.

Dear Herald: Came here at the request of A. V. Closson. Found the schoolhouse locked against us. With an extra key the door was opened, and we occupied to the joy of friends and disgust of enemies. The next day directors met and resolved that the house should not be used by any one for preaching services. One Mr. Burch opened his house for preaching and we held forth a week. Results: Mr. and Mrs. King and Mr. Burch were baptized. Such is life, and still we linger.

T. W. CHATBURN.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. Wales, Australia, October 2.

Editors Herald: Since the writer arrived in this mission he has tried to keep himself busy, and has surely succeeded. Instead of requiring me to go to Melbourne, as first intended, Bro. Wight and Butterworth were pleased to have me begin my labors in Sydney and suburbs. The branch at Balmain, which is one of the suburbs, felt inclined to try a series of meetings, called "a mission" here, in the church. Consequently a handbill was printed announcing a ten-day mission to begin Sunday, August 31. The writer was assisted in distributing the bills by all the Saints, so far as they could, especially by Bro. Joseph Smith. His zeal in all kinds of gospel work is worthy of special mention. It would really be more appropriate to say we assisted him in advertising the meetings; for being well acquainted with the city he took the lead. By thus noising abroad our effort a fair attendance and interest were maintained throughout. The Saints did well both by their presence and aid, and from time to time a number of nonmembers showed themselves and reverently listened. Tuesday evening, September 9, eight were baptized in the font at the church. One was a married woman, five were young ladies, and two were little girls. Here, as elsewhere, the gentler sex takes the lead in religious interest. These accessions, however, were not wholly due to this mission. They had been attending Sabbath-school and church services for some time. Their baptism was the harvest resulting from seed previously sown. But even in that case we thank God for having been able to carry on work already begun. In other words, we feel that no harm was done. Bro. Wells said to me when he left for Brisbane, August 26, "You will be sure to do some baptizing if you preach rightly." However, he may not have expected quite so many. Another thing, we believe seed was sown, the results of which will be reaped in the future.

Bro. Wight came in from Wallsend the evening referred to, and had charge of the baptismal and confirmation services. He gave the candidates some very good instructions concerning their duties, as required in Doctrine and Covenants 17: 18. He also preached after the confirmations were concluded. His talk, instead of being a common sermon, consisted of reminiscences relative to the history and progress of this mission. A large audience was present, and the general surroundings were favorable to an effort of this character. The next day Bro. Wight, several of the Saints, and the undersigned went to St. Mary's, where the first engaged in a debate with Mr. John Bell, of the Christadelphians. Mr. Bell confessed he did not answer all Bro. Wight's arguments, but pleaded as his reason a lack of time. Bro. Wight agreed to let him have more time, which he himself desired of Mr. Bell before the debate began. The latter refused it, saying public interest would not last for more than one night; but I am sure he was mistaken in this. Over five hundred people were present and gave as much evidence of interest as any audience. The subject discussed was "The truth as found in the Bible teaches that man is wholly mortal." Mr. Bell took the affirmative, of course, while our brother was on the negative side. The Saints were well pleased with our part, and Mr. Bell's people were, I suppose, as is usually the case, sure their man was ahead. Concerning the latter, however, I am somewhat doubtful.

All of us, except Bro. Wight, returned to Sydney that night.

While waiting at the station for the train I tried to overhear what Mr. Bell and his friends were saying, and yet did not move out of my way to do so. He said in substance to one man: "My word, but he is a quibbler."

"Yes," said the other, very distinctly and somewhat sharply, "but I wish you could have answered his last speech."

Bro. Wight in closing emphasized the fact that several of his arguments had remained untouched.

Bro. Wight is now in Victoria, where he will remain until about Christmas. The writer came here, which is one hundred miles north of Sydney, September 13, and will remain in this section a month.

Editors Herald: I think the HERALD one of the best papers published. I wonder how any Latter Day Saint can do without it. I am surprised at myself, to think all these years, thirty odd, that I have belonged to the church, and only the last two years have I been a subscriber for the HERALD; but, the Lord willing, I shall continue to take it the rest of my days, for I gain very much information from its pages. I love to read what the missionary force is doing. God bless the missionaries, for they are doing the Lord's work, which is a noble calling. I wish I was where I could go to Latter Day Saint meeting. Pray for me, dear Saints, that I may have that blessed privilege ere long. It seems as though we might have some of the elders here to give us a taste of the bread of life occasionally; but God's will be done, not ours. In his own due time shall we be permitted to hear more of his precious truths.

Dear Saints, I request your earnest prayers in behalf of my mother, that she may be healed of the disease preying on her, and that she may be blessed abundantly with health and strength; also that her life may be long in the land, for much good to the Master's cause. I ask also that I be remembered.

I ever pray for the welfare of the Saints of Zion.

Your sister,

MRS. ALICE SAVAGE.

LONDON, Ontario, October 27.

Editors Herald: We have held fifteen preaching services and distributed about nine hundred tracts; have had audiences from fifty to three hundred on our Market Square. On Saturday evening, after work, when weather would permit, Elder Howlett and myself, with one or two of the brethren, would go to the market, Elder Howlett with a little organ. We would sing two or three hymns, and when a good crowd would gather we would tell the people the subject of a tract we were going to give them, also tell them something of what it contained; then invite them up to accept one. The eagerness was wonderful sometimes. After this we would preach about twenty or thirty minutes. Then Sunday night after preaching services at church we would repeat the same program, and in this way told a great many the gospel story and delivered some good gospel facts to the people.

One of the members of the Plymouth Rocks especially opposed us, and stated that Elder Evans' tract on "Was Joseph Smith a Prophet of God" put Joseph Smith on equal footing with Jesus Christ. Well, Bro. Evans was in the crowd and I told them he would defend himself and his tract. His reply was grand. He spoke the following evening (Sunday) to a big crowd. The demands for his tracts on the Book of Mormon and the above-named was very large and the Plymouth brethren bothered us no more, but continued to hold meetings on the opposite corner.

Saturday night was always the best from a standpoint of numbers. You could hear the Salvation Army, Local Labor Party, Plymouth Brethren, Christadelphians; Latter Day Saints, and the medicine man, all on the Market at the same time, but far enough away from one another so as not to add to the confusion. So in this way a good work was done, and it is expected that further means will be raised by the Religio to follow up this good work when weather permits. Bro. William's tract on "Latter Day Saints, Who are they?" is also a good tract for this kind of gospel work. It was asked for frequently after we had distributed all we had. The Religio members of the branch having purchased about thirteen hundred for this class of work we had quite a variety.

We have had no ingathering as yet, but believe and hope for the best results.

Bro. Howlett has left us for the field work; he is very faithful and will do a good work. We, as a branch, are pleased to hear of his appointment as delegate to General Conference from the Chatham District.

Have just returned from our conference in St. Marys; had a good time, but doubtless others will write of it.

Our branch work is in good condition. Meetings are well attended. We expect a visit from R. C. Evans for a couple of Sundays at any rate. As a rule he is here to-day and away to-morrow.

Editors Herald: I have been sick over three months, but I am feeling better by the help of God and by being administered to by Bro. J. E. Bozarth. I tried doctors and other remedies; all failed to do any good. I sent for the elders and was anointed with oil and was administered to, as we are commanded in the fifth chapter of James. I am still striving for the faith once delivered to the Saints. I have been a member of this church for about ten years. I have not regretted the step I made.

I was baptized by Bro. I. P. Baggerly, and have rejoiced in this good latter-day work, and have been healed many times, and had my children healed. One of our little girls was afflicted for a long time, so she could not see how to help herself. The doctors did not give her any relief. Bro. T. C. Kelley administered to her, and she received her health and eyesight at once.

Our nearest branch is fifteen miles. No Saints at this place but us,—my husband and myself and daughter. I have three more children I hope will soon come into the fold. They are convinced that this is the right work of God. I hope we shall hold out faithful to the end, that we will be worthy to enter in at the strait gate with the rest of the Saints, is my humble prayer. I have been made to rejoice many times by reading the letters from the dear Saints when I was so far from any of them. The HERALD is a welcome visitor at our home. We are glad to see a new HERALD every week.

Your sister,

M. A. SIMMONS..

BLISS, Idaho, October 29.

Editors Herald: I and my family have changed our place of residence to Bliss, Idaho, which will be my permanent address. Saints in district who want an elder to visit them, write me. I will try to visit all in western part of State during the winter. There were some fifteen Saints here. I have not seen all yet. What I have seen were in line of duty. Brn. J. E. Condit and M. J. Durffe were keeping up the Sabbath-school, which caused me to rejoice. Will hold a series of meetings here before I leave, if nothing prevents. I then propose to move on west.

Saints, let us all try so to live that we may have the Spirit of our God to guide, then we will find that our own faults are great, and that our time is limited to correct those of our brethren.

I feel that the Lord has blessed me in the mission by enabling me to be a help to others. I rejoice in the gospel and in the progress that the church is making and thank the Lord that he has raised up so many to stand for the truth.

JOHN H. CONDIT.

MULBERRY, California, October 26.

Dear Herald: Two weeks ago to-day Brn. Albert Carmichael and Hiram L. Holt preached here in Live Oak schoolhouse to a goodly number of Saints and neighbors. Bro. Carmichael at eleven o'clock in the morning displayed upon blackboard and proved by logical reasoning and from the Bible the utter impossibility of all the so-called Christian churches uniting upon a common basis, as is contemplated in the present Christian movement toward the "union of churches." His argument was conclusive, and was listened to with marked attention and interest by all. At night Bro. Holt spoke upon the "golden rule," and Jesus the Christ as the Savior of all, through the ordinances of the gospel. His was a good effort, and one man present who seldom ever attends church said to my son Ray: "If this is what they call 'Mormonism,' I have been a Mormon all my life, and did not know it."

Bro. Holt came home with me and hulled almonds all the next week, and the next Sunday, one week ago to-day, preached at Willow Grove schoolhouse at eleven o'clock in the forenoon and half past one in the afternoon, to some thirty-five people, mostly those who heard for the first time our faith expounded. All brought their baskets, pans, and boxes, and spread one common table, from which all were filled with the good things which perish with the using. Those were two very able efforts.

Come again brethren.

G. H. LAWN.

DALLAS, Texas, October 24.

Editors Herald: The HERALD is a welcome visitor in our home. We could not get along without it, as we are isolated. Oh, how I long to meet with the Saints! I have been trying to get new subscribers for the HERALD, but have not succeeded yet. Hope I may in the near future. I have received many blessings; have been instantly healed several different times. This is the work of the Lord.

Ever praying for the redemption of Zion, I remain,

MRS. M. A. HERRON.

Editors Herald: We live away down here in the rocks and hills, but we have the gospel preached to us. We had a good conference and all enjoyed it. Peace and good will were with us all through. I could continue taking the HERALD if I could sell some of our apples. Here, green apples are fifty cents per bushel at the orchard; dried apples five cents per pound. We have about fifteen hundred bushels,—two hundred bushels of good winter apples, and no market for them.

Your sister,

MRS. MARY A. ANWAY.

FAIRLAND, Indian Territory, October 20.

Editors Herald: I have enjoyed great success. Never enjoyed greater success in missionary work than I have in this conference year thus far. The dear Lord has been so good and kind to me. He has never left me alone, and for this I feel thankful. I have been made to praise and magnify his holy name.

My labor has seemingly been crammed with success. I have labored principally near the town of Vinita, Indian Territory. In new fields wherever I have gone I have found souls who were hungering and thirsting for the gospel. I have preached in some places where nearly all of my hearers were Lamanites. Usually my soul is filled with inspiration when I preach to this "God's people." Knowing what we do about them, we can look into their hearts and souls with pity, and say, "God speed the day when they can bask in the sunlight of this great latter-day work." This work is all to me, and may God bless our lives with Christlike eternal principles. The gospel is winning its way among this people as never before.

I have baptized a few Indians and some white people since I came back to this field. Bro. T. H. Thurman and I have just closed a very encouraging meeting at Fairland, at which place there are a number of dear Saints. People came from far and near to hear the gospel. Saints and all seemed to have a blessed time. I am sure good was done. One noble mother came to me at the close of one meeting and said, "Bro. Haden, I am converted and want to be baptized, but will have to leave in the morning, and I want you to come to where we live and baptize both my husband and myself." She stated further, that one time her husband wished for Bro. I. N. White to baptize him, and she stood in the way and now felt sorry for what she had done. Oh! how many hundreds of fathers and mothers are there in this world like that? Dear Saints who live their religion in their homes are preaching some wonderful sermons. May God bless his dear children, especially those who are isolated.

I earnestly beg for you to remember me in your devotions.

Your brother in Christ,

W. E. HADEN.

SAN BERNARDINO, California, October 21.

Editors Herald: Our conference at this place held last Saturday and Sunday was a splendid one. On Saturday evening, Bro. Nelson Vanfleet was the speaker. Sunday morning, a very good social meeting was held, during which time I ordained Bro. Frank Vanfleet, a priest, assisted by his father, Nelson, and Elder T. W. Williams. At eleven o'clock we listened to a splendid logical discourse by Bro. T. W. Williams. As I looked at him, I could not but think of the marked difference now, and when I saw him, when he was but eleven years old. What rapid progress he has made! God bless little Tommie. He is making his mark in Southern California.

At two o'clock in the afternoon Elder Earl gave us a sermon on the "Second Advent of Christ." He did well. The writer spoke at night "On the blessings coming to God's people in all ages by the laying on of hands," to a filled house. The meetings closed with a splendid feeling. As they passed out many of the dear Saints knew that the missionaries had to purchase tickets to get out of town, so they found their pocket. Thank you, good people. To-morrow at three-thirty in the afternoon, I join Bro. T. W. Williams at Los Angeles, and go to Arroyo Grande.

Editors Herald: I have been a member of the Latter Day Saint Church but two years. I was baptized when I was ten years old, and I have not regretted the step. My papa and mamma are members of the Latter Day Saint Church. We sent for the HERALD and have been reading it to-day.

I am now twelve years old, and I want the dear Lord to give me faith to hold out to the end. I want all the brethren and sisters to pray for all of us. We are by ourselves here. We would like to be among the Saints.

I was blind once and afflicted with bowel trouble, and was healed by the help of God.

Your sister in bonds,

E. E. SIMMONS.

SANDCOULEE, Montana, October 25.

Editors Herald: My last letter to the readers of the HERALD was dated August 26, while at Hamilton, where I closed my tent meetings for the season. Brn. Johnson, Burrows, Whitney, Jemison, and others were very kind to me while laboring in that section of country. May the Lord abundantly bless them. "By their works ye shall know them."

September 1 I called on Sr. George Dildine, of Missoula, the only family of Saints in that city of four or five thousand. From there I went to Deerlodge, eighty-five miles, arriving at Bro. A. Christoffersen's twelve o'clock at night, feeling quite sick, having lost sleep for two nights. Had just got into bed when I was called up to go four miles to administer to a very sick child of Bro. Frank Christoffersen. The physician had said the child could not live; but there has been no funeral sermon preached yet, and I hope there will be no need of one soon.

September 5 I made a short visit at Butte, calling on Sr. Carrie Sunds, A. M. Dempster, Smith, and others. Found them all in the faith. Took train on the evening of the 5th for Utah, to attend the Salt Lake City reunion. Met Brn. W. H. Kelley, A. M. Chase, W. S. Pender, Swen Swenson, and F. L. Sawley, all of the missionary force, and many others of the noble-hearted brothers and sisters of that district. I spent about two weeks in the Salt City, being entertained by Bro. and Sr. Ethan Barrows. Preached a number of times, and assisted in other church work.

I made a trip to Provo City, preaching for them six times; four times in their little church and out in the country twice. Met there my old colaborer, F. L. Sawley, and his newly-married wife. Enjoyed a short visit with them. I called on Bro. and Sr. Swen Swenson at Sandy, and one night in that town gave me enough "sand" to last me the balance of my stay in Utah.

I returned to Salt Lake City, September 25, preaching for the Saints over Sunday. From there to Ogden, remaining about a week preaching in the city and out at Plain City, administering the sacrament at both places. Bro. A. M. Chase has done an excellent work at Ogden and Plain City. Just the man for the place.

October 9 I returned to Butte, Montana; held one meeting there at the home of Sr. A. M. Dempster. Hall rent too high, and it was hard to get a church. Went from there to Anaconda to attend district conference, 11th, 12th. There met Brn. J. H. Wells, Gomer Reese, and G. H. Hilliard, who gave the Saints some good counsel on the temporal law, and the wisdom of "gathering into the regions around about." Will they profit by it? O, may God help the Saints to wake up! I am sure many of them are "dozing," if not asleep. There are many lamentable things among "our people;" i. e., so many do not read the revelations that God has given to the church; and numbers of them have neither Book of Mormon nor Doctrine and Covenants in the house. I found one family that had no Bible, and they told me they thought their property, if sold, would bring about eight thousand dollars.

Bro. Hilliard and I visited Deerlodge and he gave the Saints a fine sermon. From there we went to Bitter Root Valley, and Bro. Hilliard gave us two more stirring sermons, then leaving for Bozeman, where he will spend a few days. I remained in the valley, preaching over Sunday the 19th. We tried then to get an opening at Victor, but failed. I went then to Helena, arranging with Sr. L. P. Benedict to hold a few services in her house, if a church is not obtainable. On the 21st instant I came to Great Falls, about one hundred miles northeast of Helena, a town of fifteen thousand, lying out in the broad prairie. Valley lands; fine country for stock, and would be fine for farming if water could be had. For day laborers they pay two dollars and fifty cents and more per day; twenty-five dollars per month for board is charged. Here I met Srs. L. P. Shafer and George Turner. I spent a day or so to find a place to preach in, but failed. Tent or street preaching is the only way to reach this place.

I came here to Sandcoulee last week, and am now holding meetings in a first floor hall. Hard to get the people out. Whisky, beer, and the dance is the "order of the times." Here is where Bro. and Sr. G. S. Stewart live, with a little family of five boys. I also met here Miss Ida White, of Canada. She is acquainted with Brn. Fred Gregory and R. C. Evans. She attended my preaching in company with another lady friend, and seemed much interested. On yesterday, 26th, I preached two sermons, and blessed Franklin M. and Joseph A. Stewart. Tuesday, 28th, I returned to Helena for a few days, and then on to Bozeman.

I am feeling well in body, and blessed in spirit, and have great assurance of the final triumph of this work.

Forest Fires.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 30, 1902: The reports of recent forest fires in Washington, Oregon, Wyoming, and Colorado, in which many lives were lost, will add to the interest in a special study of the subject which has engaged the Bureau of Forestry for several years. The results of this study, in the form of a bulletin entitled "Forest Fires," by Alfred Gaskill, will be published soon. By impressing the public with some idea of the peril it suffers from forest fires, and the enormous damage they do, the Bureau hopes to induce more effective legislation in suppressing them.

Investigation has shown that, in an average year, 60 human lives are lost in forest fires, $25,000,000 worth of real property is destroyed, 10,274,089 acres of timber land are burned over, and young forest growth worth, at the lowest estimate, $75,000,000, is killed. A special canvass of the country by the Department of Agriculture in 1891 discovered 12,000,000 acres of timber land destroyed by fire.

These figures are mere estimates, which fall far short of showing in full the damage done. No account at all is taken of the loss to the country due to the impoverishment of the soil by fire, to the ruin of water courses, and the drying up of springs. Even the amount of timber burned is very imperfectly calculated, and the actual quantity destroyed is far in excess of that accounted for. Forest fires in this country have grown so common that only those are reported that are of such magnitude as to threaten large communities. The lumbering industry in remote sections of the country may be ruined and people forced to flee for their lives without a mention of the disaster beyond the places near where it occurred.

The fires that burnt this year in Washington and Oregon were uncommon only in the number of lives lost. The burning of logging and mining camps and farm buildings, the loss to the country in the destruction of timber and young tree growth, is of yearly occurrence. Every fall, not only in Washington, Oregon, Colorado, and Wyoming, but up and down the Pacific Coast and all over the Rocky Mountain country fires burn great holes in the forests and destroy the national wealth. The air of the mountains over hundreds of miles is pungent with the smoke of conflagration, and navigation on Puget Sound has often been impeded by smoke. The following comment by Doctor Henry Gannett, of the United States Geological Survey, should convey a fair idea of the damage done in the state of Washington: "In less than a generation two fifths of the standing timber has been destroyed in one of the richest timber regions on the continent, and of the destruction more than half has been caused by fire. Assuming that the timber would, if standing, have the value of 75 cents per thousand feet, not less than $30,000,000 worth has gone up in smoke, a dead loss to the people of the State."

According to the Bureau's records, the most disastrous forest fire in the history of this country occurred in October, 1871, simultaneous with the burning of Chicago. It extended all across Northern Michigan and Wisconsin and into Minnesota. At least 1,000 persons were burned to death and 15,000 were made homeless. The property loss has never been calculated. The Hinckley fire of 1894, which destroyed Hinckley and five other Minnesota villages, burned to death 418 persons, destroyed $750,000 worth of farm and town property, and about 400 square miles of forest. A fire in Southeast Michigan in 1881 burned the forest on 48 townships, destroyed $2,000,000 worth of other property, burned to death 125 persons, and made homeless 5,000. Another Michigan forest fire, which occurred in 1896, made homeless 2,000 persons and destroyed town and farm property worth $1,250,000. Wisconsin lost by fire in May, 1891, 100 square miles of forest and other property worth $2,000,000. In 1894, in Wisconsin, 13 persons lost their lives and 3,000 their homes, and $2,000,000 worth of town and farm property was destroyed in the Phillips fire.

The enumeration of great forest fires could be extended almost indefinitely. One feature, however, is common to them all: They were small fires before they grew uncontrollable, and with little trouble might have been extinguished. For example, the Hinckley fire smoked as a ground fire for weeks and nobody paid it serious attention. But one day the wind rose and fanned the smouldering embers into flame, the flame caught in a dry underbrush, leaped into the trees and became a fire of so terrible a volume that no human power could stay it.

Legislation, even in the East, has done little toward solving the forest-fire problem. Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Massachusetts, and New York are possible exceptions. The best forest-fire laws are probably those of Pennsylvania, which makes an annual expenditure of $15,000 in support of them. State constables serve as fire wardens in their townships and receive extra pay for their services. Minnesota, brought to a sense of responsibility by disasters, of which the Hinckley fire was the most terrible, has established an efficient forest-fire system. Massachusetts has had good legislation in the matter. The New York forest-fire laws, though generally limited in their effect to State reserves and parks, have brought good results. West of the Rocky Mountains little is done toward the suppression of forest fires, except by the forest rangers on Government reserves, who are employed by the Department of the Interior.

The creation of a sentiment against forest fires is the first step toward their suppression. Legislation is necessary, but it must be accompanied by the cooperation of the people and the officers charged with the enforcement of the law. The fall and the early spring, before vegetation has begun, are the dangerous seasons for forest fires in most densely-wooded parts of the country. At such times special precautions should be taken and the people should be kept alert by constant reminders of the peril. An excellent idea, as Mr. Gaskill suggests, is to placard trees along roads and trails with notices of the danger and warnings of penalties to be incurred by those who violate the fire laws.

Miscellaneous Department.

An auditing committee reported the accounts correct. Upon recommendation of the Thurman Branch and approval by the conference, Charles M. Roberts was ordained an elder by M. H. Forscutt and H. Kemp. The district officers, bishop, and counselors, and historian were sustained. The secretary's report showed a membership in the district of 734, including 1 patriarch, 1 bishop, 1 seventy, 22 elders, 17 priests, 14 teachers, 10 deacons; a total of 66 officers. Of these 15 elders, 12 priests, 6 teachers, and 3 deacons reported. Those reporting have preached 298 sermons, presided over 254 other meetings, baptized 10, confirmed 9, ordained 1, performed 2 marriages, administered to sick 161 times, administered the sacrament 39 times, blessed 20 children, and made 21 official visits. The secretary presented a bill for $2 for report blanks and postage which was allowed, a collection being taken to pay same. Preaching by Henry Kemp and M. H. Forscutt. Adjourned to meet at Tabor at the call of the president.

Florida.—Conference convened with the Calhoun Branch, October 11, Elder S. D. Allen presiding, Asa E. Bailey clerk. The minutes of the last conference were read and approved. Elders reporting: I. N. Roberts preached 30 times, baptized 23, confirmed 17, assisted in confirming 10, administered to sick 3 times; S. D. Allen preached 24 times in district, baptized 4, confirmed 11, assisted in confirming 15, ordained 1, assisted in ordaining 1, administered to sick 3 times, and traveled 559 miles in buggy as missionary to the world, opened some new places, and done all he could to assist the cause; Priest John H. Johnston preached 5 times, assisted 3 times, held 2 prayer-meetings and one sacrament-meeting. Branches reporting: Mt. Olivet, Calhoun, Open Head, Pleasant View, no change. S. D. Allen reported as Bishop's agent, received since last report, $53; paid out $50; on hand $3. Bishop's agent's books audited and found correct. Conference adjourned to meet with Santa Rosa Branch on Saturday and Sunday nearest preceding full moon in February, 1903. Bro. S. D. Allen was reelected as president, Asa E. Bailey as clerk. Preaching by S. D. Allen and John H. Johnston.

London, Ontario.—Convened at St. Marys, October 17. Elder George Buschlen presided, assisted by President R. C. Evans and Elders MacGregor and R. C. Loughurst. Sr. Maggie MacGregor acted as secretary pro tem., assisted by Bro. James Pycock. The following schools reported: London, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Stratford, Humber Bay, St. Marys, Port Elgin, Mitchell, Proton, Delhi, Owen Sound, Ellice, Vanessa, Stokes Bay, Limestone Point, Cameron, Egremont, Waterford, Colpoys Bay, Arthur, Selkirk, East Garafraxa, Cedar Valley, Clavering, Low Banks, McKillop, Tory Hill, Riverston, and Spy Hill. Number of schools in district 33, total enrollment 1,172. Officers elected for ensuing term: Elder George Buschlen superintendent, Maggie MacGregor and Thos. Bennett, assistant superintendents, Floralice Miller secretary, James Pycock treasurer. The following resolutions prevailed: That convention for routine business and reporting be held once a year and once for institute work; that Home Class work be taken up, that Sr. Floralice Miller act as Home Class superintendent, that Elder George Tomlinson be delegate to General Convention, and that said delegate be instructed to vote for the continuance of Quarterlies in present form. In the evening an interesting and instructive program was rendered; President R. C. Evans delivered a short address, "Reputation versus Character;" Elder George Buschlen gave a talk on "Duties of Parents to their Children;" Sr. Maggie MacGregor on "How to Teach the Lesson." The program was interspersed and enlivened by recitations and music—vocal and instrumental. Adjourned to meet at Waterford prior to district conference in June, 1903.

Kentucky and Tennessee.—Conference convened near Fulton, Kentucky, October 4, in our new tent, Bro. J. R. McClain presiding. Minutes of last conference read and received. Branch reports: Sedalia 127, Haley Creek 56, Foundry Hill 59, Eagle Creek 30. Bishop's agent's report read, books audited and found correct. Conference adjourned to meet at the call of the district president, at Oakland, Kentucky. Our annual reunion held in connection with our conference was a grand one. The Saints seemed to enjoy it very much and some of the outsiders were much interested; one Methodist preacher spoke in our prayer-meeting, called us Christians and bid us God-speed. Some of our prayer-meetings were very spiritual and comforting to the Saints the good Spirit prevailing throughout. There were seven baptized during the reunion and others who were present will follow soon. We were very glad to have Bro. E. L. Kelley with us. His instructions were just grand and I hope well received. Come again, Bro. Kelley. Our reunion will meet again next July. Please notice this Bro. Joseph Smith we want to see you down here also. Please note the date. We want to see the Kentucky and Tennessee District advancing in the Master's cause as well as elsewhere.

Minnesota.—Conference convened October 18 and 19 in Saints' church, Audubon. Meeting called to order by T. J. Martin. Minutes of last conference read and approved. Branches reporting: Minneapolis 62, loss 4; Oak Lake 66, gain 3; Audubon 72, gain 3; Union 97, gain 2. Ministry reporting: Elders E. A. Stedman, T. C. Kelley, H. B. Fay, F. D. Omans, and T. J. Martin; Priests W. W. McLeod and F. G. Barnes;

Teacher J. Harpster. Bishop's agent's report read, audited, and approved. Resignation of F. D. Omans as Bishop's agent read and accepted; W. C. Griffin recommended for the position. T. C. Kelley, F. D. Omans, J. C. Nunn, and Srs. F. D. Omans, Wm. Nunn, and M. L. Hawley elected delegates to General Conference. The majority of these delegates present at General Conference are to cast the full vote of the district. Saturday evening and Sunday were occupied with preaching services. Elders T. J. Martin, T. C. Kelley, and F. D. Omans were the speakers. One baptism Sunday afternoon. A vote of thanks was tendered the Saints and friends at Audubon. Conference adjourned to meet at the opening session of the reunion to be held at Clitherall, Minnesota, next June. The meetings were well attended.

Convention Minutes.

Fremont.—Convened at Thurman, October 9 at 8 p. m. The district superintendent appointed C. Fry to take charge. Bro. A. Madison led in prayer. Address, "Progress of our Work," by C. Fry. Short talks were given by different workers of the district. Normal Drill, Study of the book of Romans, in charge of C. Fry. One hour was given Friday morning to prayer and social meeting. The Spirit being present, no time was wasted. After a five-minute recess business was resumed. Minutes of evening session, and librarian and secretaries reports were read. The secretary and superintendent's bills were read and allowed. Discussion: Quarterlies or text-books, which? led by Sr. Emma Hougas. Moved and seconded that this question be discussed on Friday afternoon at our next convention. Paper: "Graceland's Rallying Day," written by General Superintendent. The next convention will be held Thursday evening prior to the next conference.

Eastern Michigan.—Convened with Pigeon River Branch, October 3, with Superintendent O. J. Hawn in the chair, assisted by Elder Berve. All visiting members were given privilege to take part. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Reports of superintendent, treasurer, and secretary were read and approved. Officers elected: O. J. Hawn superintendent, E. J. Goodenough assistant superintendent, Sr. F. C. Stephens treasurer, Sr. Grace McInnis secretary, Sr. Maud Wilson, Sr. Berta Johnson, and Bro. James Davis were appointed as program committee. Motion prevailed that the officers of the Sunday-school association confer with the officers of the Religio as to the time and place of holding the next convention.

Northern California.—Sunday-school association convened at the Saints' chapel, Oakland, October 2. The day's work opened with a prayer service in charge of A. B. Phillips. Although few in number, the spirit of peace and unity prevailed and was present throughout the entire convention. At 10.30 the business session was called to order. After the usual opening exercises Sr. M. A. Saxe was chosen president, Sr. L. Day, secretary. Reports of officers read and accepted. Reports of the following schools were read: San Francisco, Oakland, Irvington, Stockton, Chick, and "All Truth" mission of Oakland. Two reports were submitted to a committee for correction. A motion prevailed that all money drawn out be so ordered by secretary and president. The resignation of Bro. C. C. Joehnk was considered and accepted. Sr. M. A. Saxe was elected to fill the vacancy. A motion prevailed that the reports be left to superintendent and secretary after convention. Sr. E. Keeler was elected to act as assistant superintendent for the district. The most interesting feature of the convention was the institute work in charge of Brn. J. M. Terry and Albert Carmichael (one of the presidency of the General Sunday-school Association), showing the advantages to be gained by studious work both by teacher and pupil. Adjourned to meet in conjunction with the next conference according to time and place that conference may select.

Clinton.—Convened at Eldorado Springs, Missouri, October 10. Schools reporting: Wheatland, Veve, Ft. Scott, Eldorado, Nevada, Richhill, Coal Hill, Walker, Roscoe, Maple Grove. One new school organized at Deepwater since last convention. The Religio and Sunday-school gave an interesting program in the evening. We feel the convention was one of profit to all. Peace and harmony prevailed.

Northern Nebraska.—Convened at Columbus, Nebraska, September 27, district superintendent, Alice C. Schwartz in charge. District officers were not all present. Schools reporting:

Omaha, Platte Valley, and Columbus. The session was made profitable by much good advice. Adjourned to meet at Omaha, Nebraska, January 31, 1903.

Galland's Grove.—Convened with the Galland's Grove Branch October 10, Superintendent J. L. Butterworth in chair; Floy Holcomb, secretary. Eight schools reported. Mallard and Pilot Rock did not report. Treasurer reported on hand $15.45. The Sunday-school association granted to the Religio society, by request of the latter, every alternate Friday of convention. A motion prevailed that hereafter the Sunday-school association holds but one business session per year and that to be the last one held preceding the General Convention. Adjourned to meet on Thursday, at 3 o'clock p. m., prior to and at same place of district conference.

Convention Notices.

To the Sunday-schools of Pottawattamie District: As the last convention adjourned to meet at the time appointed by the presidency, let each school please take notice our next convention will convene the last of February and not November, or in six months instead of three, as has previously been our time of meeting. Jennie Scott, Secretary.

The Sunday-school convention of the Mobile District will convene with the Bay Minette Branch, December 13 and 14.

Died.

TRUMBLE.—Samuel Adelbert was born September 2, 1855, at Hamilton, Van Buren County, Michigan. Was baptized August 17, 1877, at Hartford, Michigan, by Elder Columbus Scott. Died at Hartford, October 8, 1902. Funeral services by Elder W. E. Peak.

SMITH.—Sarah Wilkinson Smith was born in Greensburg, Green County, Pennsylvania, October 30, 1830, and died at the old homestead, near Elkport, Iowa, October 21, 1902. She was a member of the Osterdock Branch having been baptized in June, 1895, by O. B. Thomas. She leaves a husband, five children, one brother, and two sisters to mourn her loss. Her husband and one sister are members of the church. She was married to Winfrey M. Smith, November 6, 1853, near Osterdock, Iowa. Funeral by J. W. Peterson at the residence.

MORGAN.—William H. Morgan, was born at White Croft, Gloucestershire, England, July 4, 1830; died at Hollis, Republic County, Kansas, October 25, 1902, of asthma, terminating in dropsy. He joined the old church in 1852, and the Reorganization in 1868, emigrating to this country soon after, and finally locating, in 1874, at the place where he died. He was ordained an elder soon after coming into the church. He was married to Elizabeth Morgan, November 17, 1851, who remains to mourn his loss. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder Arthur Smith, Sunday, October 26, to a large congregation.

THOMAS.—John Thomas was born in California, February 17, 1860, died October 18, 1902, aged 42 years, 8 months, 1 day. Came to Iowa when but a lad and has lived near Neola for a number of years. September 11, 1894, was united in marriage to Mrs. Clara Gaylord. He and his wife united with the Latter Day Saint Church, September 14, 1902, being baptized by F. G. Pitt. He leaves a loving wife, 1 daughter, 1 brother and 4 sisters. Funeral at the Grange church in Boomer Township, October 19. Sermon by Elder D. R. Chambers.

LUNDWALL.—Andreas, son of Bro. and Sr. Martin Lundwall, of Bozeman, Montana, was killed in a railroad wreck near Rapids, Montana, on the morning of October 4. His body was almost incinerated in the wreck. Andreas was a noble young man, exemplary in his life. He united with the church at the age of 11 and remained true. Funeral services were held at Bozeman in the Christian church in charge of Reverend O. F. McHargue and Elder Gomer Reese.

Addresses.

A. C. Barmore, 120 Beattie Street, Balmain, Sydney, N. S. W., Australia.

There is probably no part of a building, small or large, that plays so important a part as the staircase, says Country Life in America. While the staircase is primarily utilitarian and an absolute necessity in a more than one-story house, at the same time it is susceptible, to an almost unlimited degree, of variation and elaboration in a purely artistic sense. Take away the glorious stairways of the best examples of the great modern and ancient private and public palaces, and one of the fundamental parts of the design is lost. The staircase problem is one of the most fascinating features of home-building, and offers a wonderful field for originality and good taste.

Under gray skies, and gowned in neutral brown, enters November. Frost waits upon her and strews her path with memories of summer days. The bugle of the north wind proclaims her coming. A brooding silence reigns in the thickets where the mighty feathered chorus poured forth a welcome to her sister months. Gone are the flowers, save that in some sheltered retreat still lingers the blossom of the skies, the beautiful fringed gentian, or mayhap a sunflower or late goldenrod lends of its gold yet a little while. But from stark bare tree-tops comes the bark of squirrels, fat with much feeding, and it is answered by the merry shout of nut-gatherers gleaming among the thickly strewn brown leaves. The honk of the wild goose floats earthward from the clouds. In the marshes and sedges along the river's edge the muskrat puts the finishing touches on his domicile of rushes and mud against the bitterness of midwinter. The bluejay becomes silent, stealing guiltily about the bursting corn-crib. Through open barn doors is caught the gleam of yellow pumpkins and squashes, with all their possibilities of jack-o'-lanterns and luscious golden pies. From cellar bulk-heads rises the fragrance of ripening fruit. The gobble of the turkey has in it the perfect contentment of desires fulfilled, and the shadow of sacrifice has not yet fallen over the poultry-yard. The spirit of Thanksgiving is abroad over the land and November, in sober gray and brown, walks hand in hand with Good-cheer and Happiness.—Country Life in America.

The November McClure's appears with a permanent addition of sixteen pages of reading matter. Undoubtedly the most important magazine article of the month is the first installment of Ida M. Tarbell's long announced "History of the Standard Oil Company," which it is safe to wager will be the most widely-read serial of the year. In the "Birth of an Industry" Miss Tarbell outlines what had been accomplished in the oil regions before the Standard Oil was born. It is a story that finds its parallel only in the history of the discovery of gold in California. Following Miss Tarbell comes a tale by Conan Doyle, seductively baited with the title "The Leather Funnel," and with gorgeous illustrations by A. Castaigne. Mr. George W. Smalley writes of literary persons, their habits of work and talk as he has known them. His sketches range all the way from Browning and Arnold to Anthony Hope and the authoress of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden." There is no need for picking and choosing among the stories; every one is first class.

The World's Work for November is a birthday number, with handsome cover of blue and gold. Its most striking feature is Andrew Carnegie's article on "Europe versus America." This article is probably of greater international importance than any other private utterance in many years, and it is, as well, one of the most interesting contributions to magazine literature for the last decade. Labor Unions and Trusts are further investigated in this number, the former by M. G. Cunniff, who has been writing a series of articles on this subject in The World's Work, the latter by James H. Bridge, editor of "The Trust, Its Book;" and Frank M. Chapman, editor of Bird Lore, describes the work of the Museum of Natural History in New York. W. S. Harwood tells of the large fisheries on the Great Lakes; Chalmers Roberts, in sequence to the story of "The Rebuilding of New York" published in The World's Work, relates how London is being rebuilt, and Lindsay Denison draws a graphic picture of President Roosevelt on his tour. All these articles are fully illustrated. There is also important comment on the Revolutionary Increase in Gold, by Charles M. Harvey and many short articles on interesting topics. The Real Rulers of Russia, by Wolf Von Schierbrand, Julian Ralph's observations on The Moral Soundness of American Life, an intimate view of John Jacob Astor, by Henry Harrison Lewis; an investigation of Our New Naval Efficiency, by John R. Spears; a description of the new Stock Exchange, by Ivy Lee; a New Decorative Art, by Doctor Paul S. Reinich; the opinions of many great men on "Is American Character Declining?" gathered together by George Perry Morris, and the experiences of an American builder—Mr. James C. Stewart—in England. There is a pertinent editorial article about Arbitration of Labor Troubles, and some interesting comments on the latest books of Miss Glasgow, Mr. Wister and Mr. Hopkinson Smith. There are a dozen or more handsome full-page portraits in the number.

The Arena for November is preëminently a "reform" number. Eltweed Pomeroy, M. A., contributes the first of a series of three articles on "Needed Political Reforms;" Duane Mowry, LL.B., presents "Some Thoughts on Public Reforms," and Alice Rollins Crane discusses "Desirable Reforms in Motherhood" and proves herself a close student of her sex. Mr. Pomeroy's paper is admirably supplemented by George H. Shibley in a "conversation" on "The Optional Referendum and Initiative." The opening article is by Professor Frank Parsons, who discusses "The President and the Trusts;" and this is followed by "Personal Power of the President"—a brief paper by the Venerable A. Kingsley Glover, archdeacon of Oregon. Booker T. Washington considers "The Agricultural Negro," and B. O. Flower contributes the third paper of his series on "The Divine Quest." In reply to one of the August contributions, the president of the Mormon Church describes the "Real Origin of American Polygamy." F. Edwin Elwell presents "The Educational Side of Art," and Winnifred Harper Cooley has "A Dream of the Twenty-first Century." "The Home Across the Way" is an occult story by Laura N. Eldridge. Editor Flower's "Topics of the Times" and reviews of new books are excellent, as usual.

The End of Autumn.

Now Winter comes with shadows to enfold
The earth's bright foliage of red and gold;
The birds' last songs are sung; the night is here:
Fades now the gorgeous Sunset of the Year!

—November Country Life in America.

A Page from the Past.

When the Stockton & Darlington Railway, in England, was opened in September, 1825, the main line and its three branches were thirty-eight miles long. Stephenson drove the engine as the first train started, and an outrider on horseback went in advance to keep the track clear.

In 1829 three locomotives were imported to America, and one was tried at Honesdale, Pennsylvania, upon the tracks of the Delaware & Hudson. It was soon found that they were ill-adapted for use on American roads, where very sharp turns were made. Peter Cooper, that same year, devised an engine which overcame this difficulty.

In 1830, the Mohawk & Hudson Railroad, running sixteen miles from Albany to Schenectady, was opened, and the cars were drawn by horses till the delivery of the "DeWitt Clinton" locomotive, which was built at the West Point Foundry, New York. The first trip this engine made was on August 9, 1831. . . .

From Schenectady, westward, we may take our choice of two means of travel, stage-coach, or packet-boat on the canal. The commodious "Red-bird," as well as boats on several rival lines were plying on the canal, and people who wished to broaden their minds by travel frequently took the trip from Albany to Buffalo. In an old journal, there is the following item concerning the writer's first trip on the "big ditch." "Commended my soul to God and asking his defense from danger, I stepped aboard the canal-boat and was soon flying towards Utica." If the dangers of the raging canal were too great to be braved, an outside seat on the stage-coach gave one an opportunity to see the country. The driver of the stage, as well as the landlord of the public, were persons of great importance. Stage driving was hereditary—it went in families and descended from father to son.

The journey from Boston to Providence, a distance of forty miles, was made in four hours and fifty minutes. This was considered the acme of fast traveling, and an editorial on the performance says: "If any one wishes to go faster he may send to Kentucky and charter a streak of lightning!"—From "Early Rapid-Transit in America," by N. Hudson Moore, in Four-Track News for November.

Religious Census of 1900.

There has been no report made public as yet from the Census Bureau concerning the religious statistics of the country. Bulletins have been sent out on every other conceivable topic, but nothing on so vital a topic as the comparative study of the growth of religious denominations. In this religious census, if accurately done, the Catholic body will show a phenomenal growth. Perhaps at no time in the history of Catholicism in the United States has there been such signs of progress, not only in external appearance as indicated by increasing numbers and growing wealth, but in internal indication of better organization and more perfect equipment. We look eagerly for the Census reports, that will give an official statement of this progress.—Reverend A. P. Doyle in Catholic World Magazine.

Pickin' on Kids.

I've got no use for fellers w'at
Go bullyin' little boys,
A-settin' on their stumicks an'
A-smashin' of their toys;
I used to do it onct myself
When I was only six,
But now I'm big an' seven years
I've stopped those sort o' tricks.

Besides, I saw a feller onct
W'at caught a little chap,
An' pulled his hair an' pinched him, too,
An' thought he had a snap;
But suddintly a great big boy
He come up on a run,
An' walloped him to beat the band,
An' made him howl like fun.

You see, you never know w'at boys
Has got a brother or
A cousin stayin' over night
You never saw before—
An' so I think it's mean to pick
On kids w'at's weak and small,
An' can't defend themselves like men,
But just run home an' squall.

—W. W. Whitelock in the Woman's Home Companion.

"There are tears unwept and songs unsung,
And human anguish keen,
And hopes and fears, and smiles and tears,
But the blessings fall between."

SECRET SINS.

Many of the sins which men commit are open and direct violations of the various commandments beginning "Thou shalt not," etc.

This list is quite long, and comprises about all the wrongs and sufferings in mind or body which man may inflict upon his fellow man.

For these sins, surnamed crimes, felonies, misdemeanors in the statutes, adequate penalties are provided to be visited upon the wrong-doers; and, so far as may be by human means, the sins be condoned, pardoned, or punished, according to their trivial or heinous character.

But there are sins which men may commit for which no penalty is ever affixed in human courts, because the wrong-doers are never accused, never served with notice to appear and answer, never arraigned by human testimony before an earthly judge.

These sins are secret sins, sins committed in such circumstances that human witnesses neither see nor hear to bear testimony against the wrong-doer.

But will the sinner never be known? Will the wrong done never be discovered? Will there never be a tribunal at the bar of which these sinners in secret sinning will be called to have the evidences of their folly or crime presented before a judge against whose compelling presence and searching scrutiny subterfuges, evasions, and self-pitying, justifying excuses will disappear like the chaff from the summer thrashing-floor before the strong wind, or the darkness of the night before the god of day rising in his shining strength?

Ah, no! There is no sin so trivial, no crime so vain or foolish, no wrong so small, no evil deed so dark, no crime so great, be it ever so secretly done, but it must come to the test of examination and be made to appear in the light of day.

Long ago one of the wisest of men wrote:

"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing."

No matter how high, no matter how lowly, he that sinneth in secret, whether alone, or with accomplices, must answer in the day of accounts.

Jesus, long ago, said it was written of olden time,

"Thou shalt not commit adultery: but I say unto you, whoso looketh upon a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart."

Modern revelation is clear, "Thou shalt not commit adultery, nor do anything like unto it."

No secret sin is so degrading, so demoralizing, so deserving of severest condemnation of the good and noble, as the one named by the Savior in the quotation first given above, last clause.

No punishment or penalty is named in the long code called the "Law of Moses," for any other than actual or constructive wrongs. There is no warrant in that law for committed acts. But nothing is given by which he who thinks evil, or commits sins of the imagination, is to be reached, no matter how completely morally debauched the sinner may be, nor how degrading his thoughts of, or desires toward another may be.

In the sentence stated by the Savior it is easy to see that he intended by the use of this reference to the greatest of crimes against the social fabric, adultery, to give a criterion by which to measure the sins committed in secret, not only against the virtue of woman, her honor and chastity, chief charms of God's fairest and best gift to man, but all the calendar of crimes, beginning with, "Thou shalt not."

How subtle the lust of place and power. How strong the chains that bind him who revels in the secret indulgence in coveting what is not his. "Thou shalt not covet:"

1. Thy neighbor's wife.

How sweeping in its comprehensiveness is this command, and how clearly is the covetous and unholy desire pointed out and condemned. The culminated act is first thought out and enacted in the secret recesses of the imagination, and the sin of covetousness is the product, that given opportunity becomes the sin absolutely forbidden. While no human tribunal may, or does call the guilty culprit, stained with the sin of imagination, before it, like as it would the discovered transgressor, there is the mark of sin left on the soul to be read in the judgment day.

"Shun even the appearance of [this] evil."

2. "Thy neighbor's man servant."

Here, again, the sin of desire, the lust of gain, of merchantable good to be acquired from either the labor, or the hire, or sale of the man servant, works in the heart, and the overt act of wrongful acquisition is the result.

3. "Thy neighbor's maid servant."

In those far-off ancient days there was a sort of human slavery among those to whom the command was given, in which the possession of maid servants was permitted; and these might, under certain conditions, not only render service in the household and the field but could be made the companions and con-cubines of the master in addition to the wife he already had.

Here, again, in the command, "Thou shalt not covet," is seen the prohibition against the secret sin of desire, the secret longing, lusting after the handmaiden of another. No wonder the Savior should have hedged the chastity and honor of woman about with the strong declaration, "He that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her in his heart." Shall we not conclude that in the eyes of God the chastity of the maid servant was and is as sacred as that of the wife, mother, sister, or daughter of the master?

4. "Thy neighbor's ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's."

Here a wide range is given to the prohibitive command. And, as every trespass upon the rights of another has its rise and instigation from the secret coveting in the heart indulged in by which another is wronged, it is not difficult to discern that the intention of him who gave the law was to warn those who were to be the subjects of the law, that their surest safety was in avoiding the secret sin; this done, no overt act of wrong would be done, no penalty exacted, no punishment inflicted.

In Exodus 20, the commandment from which we have quoted begins, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house." This surely includes all that may and does attach to the house of a neighbor, by which it is his home, and wherein all that is calculated to make home the one place where confident and continued rest and peacefulness are to be found. Therefore, in the inhibition to covet not, everything appertaining to the home of a neighbor is to be kept out of the way of temptation's attraction by being excluded from the thoughts, thus preventing the inward and secret sin and the subsequent direct and overt crime by taking by force, stealing, robbing, or diverting to one's own uses the things of a neighbor.

He who looketh upon the things of another with a covetous, longing, improper, or lustful desire, has committed a secret sin, and will need to purge himself from that sin by a thorough repentance and a putting away of the desire.

In language equal in meaning to Holy Writ: Think not upon the things of thy neighbor, his house, his wife, his man servant, his maid servant, his ox, his ass, or anything that is his with improper, covetous, or unholy desire; for if thou doest this, it is sin, and may bring thee into danger of the judgment in the great day of accounts.

THE December Autumn Leaves is the holiday number, and will be replete with excellent stories, articles, and poems suitable to the holiday season. The illustrations, also, will be of a very excellent character.

FORGIVENESS OF SIN.

It is thought by some that there is a conflict between the text in Matthew 12: 31, and paragraph 6, section 42 in Doctrine and Covenants. The first reads thus:

"All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men."

The second reads:

"Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come."

One of the first commands ever given to man regarding his conduct towards his fellow man is, "Thou shalt not kill." It is provided in Genesis 9: 6, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man." Cain was a murderer; and, lest some one unauthorized should kill him, a mark was set upon him, so that after a while he lamented, "My punishment is greater than I can bear." (See Genesis 4: 13.)

From that time when the first murder was committed until now, there has been no authority given to men by which the crime of murder is condoned or pardoned. It is a crime that never outlaws. The man who commits murder does it with the full understanding that his life may be lawfully taken as a penalty for such killing. It is then a sin against light and knowledge to commit murder; and whoever may be guilty must pay the penalty, either here or hereafter. Hence John well wrote, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him."—1 John 3: 15.

If there is a conflict between Matthew 12: 31, and Doctrine and Covenants 42: 6, then there is one between the first clause of Matthew 12: 31, and the second clause. For the first clause asserts that "all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men;" while the second clause states that the "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven."

Some slight difference in statement exists in Mark 3: 28, 29, and Luke 12: 10; but it can not be said that there is a conflict.

The force of the statement in Doctrine and Covenants 42: 6 shows a direct respect to the command to "kill not," first given unto man, showing that there is a penalty provided against the crime of murder, and this penalty must be paid; hence this crime is not to be forgiven; that is to say, no ordinance nor means of exculpating a man from the penalty is given unto man; and so the murderer must take his place in the ranks of those who are murderers, sorcerers, adulterers, those who love and make a lie, over on the other side. If they are not met by punishment here, they must answer on the other side.

The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is nowhere specifically defined; that is, no one specific act is given as the sin against the Holy Ghost. It is generally understood that the sin against the Holy Ghost is a sin committed against light and knowledge, and that this sort of sin must be expiated, not forgiven nor pardoned.

If to kill in the sense of committing murder is not a "sin against light and knowledge," there is no value in long continued persistence in uttering and enforcing a command. "Thou shalt not kill," is as old as the world, and whosoever does so kill knows he is committing a sin that will never be forgiven, nor excused, nor outlawed.

The same one who said "but whoso blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven, neither in this world nor in the world to come," had the right to say the same thing in regard to murder; and that too without laying himself liable to the charge of contradicting himself.

It must be understood that we do not in this writing include all phases of killing in the term murder; but have reference to the definition as given "he that kills another with malice aforethought shall be guilty of murder."

We really do not see that the two statements referred to conflict with each other.

"TO FIGHT MORMONISM."

At the late session of the American Missionary Society (Disciples of Christ) held at Omaha, Nebraska, a number of the elders of the Christian Church, in a movement aside from and independent of the "International Convention," was inaugurated under the inspiration of Reverend J. W. Darby, of McArthur, Ohio, the avowed intent and purpose of which is given in the following notice which we clip from the Bee, of Omaha, for October 22:

TO FIGHT MORMONISM.

At the North Side Christian church yesterday afternoon the Anti-Mormon Missionary Society of the Church of Christ was organized with seventy-five members, and with Reverend J. W. Darby, of McArthur, Ohio, who originated the movement, for its first president. Other officers elected are: John T. Bridwell, McArthur, Ohio, secretary; W. T. Hilton, Omaha, treasurer. These three officers and J. D. Ghormley, Portland, Oregon; H. H. Keller, Iowa; R. B. Neal, Grayson, Kentucky, and D. H. Bays, Collins, Iowa, directors.

The avowed purpose of the society is to distribute anti-Mormon literature and place in the field anti-Mormon missionaries, which work will be undertaken at once.

It will be seen that a number of these men are of those who have been in contact with the Reorganized Church in debate, and have reason to know that so far as "the common people" are concerned, they are willing to hear what the elders of the church have to say. We know some of these men; and while we have no sort of ill will towards them, we are impressed with the thought that those who engage in this unholy alliance to "fight Mormonism," as it is so pertinently stated in the caption of the notice, will have sooner or later reason to feel the truth of the saying concerning the work of God, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment, thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord."

The Chicago Record-Herald recently contained the following paragraph:

One of the most distinguished of European scientists, the Duke de Loubat, is here to take part in the congress of Americanists. The duke, who three years ago gave $1,000,000 to Columbia University and has devoted his resources to the promotion of archæological researches, especially in America, is anxious to have an American edition printed of what he calls "The Pre-Columbian Bible." This remarkable book was written in the sixteenth century by Berardino Sahagun, a Franciscan monk. This work has been practically neglected for three centuries, and it is only within recent years that it has crept into the libraries of the best informed Frenchmen in copies of a rare French edition. The manuscript is now in the Library Lorenciana Medici of Florence. The "Pre-Columbian Bible" is the only trustworthy authority on the history of pre-Columbian Mexicans. Part of the manuscript side is written in Spanish and on the opposite side is an account in Aztec.

GOLDWIN SMITH ON JEWISH PERSECUTION.

The Unique Monthly for November quotes Goldwin Smith on the question of the persecution of the Jews, as follows:

My conviction is that the source of Jewish suffering is not, and never has been, to the extent supposed, Christian hatred of the Jewish religion. I believe it is, and always has been mainly to be found in the anomalous position and habits of the Jews as a wandering and parasitic race, not blending with the other nations, into which for commercial purposes they have come, but keeping up a separate nationality emphasized by a tribal mark, avoiding inter-marriage, and, if they are of the strictest sort, association at the same board; while many of them have plied at least among the peasantry of Europe; an unpopular and often oppressive trade. I, of course, recognize the numerous exceptions, not a few of them illustrious in connection with our intellectual progress and our general civilization.

The same view essentially is taken by that not inconsiderable section of the Jews themselves called Zionists, though the Zionist remedy is repatriation. The obstacles in the way of repatriation are evidently great, if not insuperable. The alternative is the renunciation by the Jew of his separate nationality so that he may be completely identified with the community in which he lives. All feeling against him would then cease and the unquestionable gifts of his race would have perfectly free play. In no civilized nation would he now be persecuted or disrated merely on account of his religious opinions.

The belief that Christian persecution of the Jewish religion has been the cause of all the trouble is disposed of by the fact that the trouble existed in full force among the pagan nations of antiquity before Christianity had acquired any power to persecute, and even before it came into the world. It is coeval and coextensive with the wandering habits, the Talmudic separation, and the peculiar commercial tendencies of the Jew.

Religious bigotry has no doubt played its evil part. The mortal conflict between Christianity and Islam which took place at the time of the Crusades was attended by a paroxysm of religious passion in the Christian communities which produced most tragical effects and has been allowed too much to color our views of the whole history. Even then, insurrection against Jewish usury was blended with crusading fanaticism and the belief that the Jew sympathized with Islam.

Nobody, I hope, will be offended by being told that the guilt of Christendom in this matter is less than has been commonly supposed, and that a state of things which everybody must deplore, is due more to the untoward accidents of history than to the malice of nations of men.

COLONEL ASTOR DEDICATES PATENTS TO THE PUBLIC.

Colonel J. J. Astor, who, despite his great wealth, is an energetic and useful worker, has recently taken out a number of patents, both domestic and foreign, on marine turbines. In a letter dated November 1, written to the editor of the Scientific American, Mr. Astor dedicates his patents to the public. Mr. Astor's letter is as follows:

To the Editor of the Scientific American:

All my patents on marine turbines having been granted, I hereby dedicate them to the public, in the hope that the development of the ideal turbine may be hastened thereby.

The turbine is shaped like a funnel, and comprises an outer shell or drum and an inner shaft running axially through it, these parts being relatively rotatable and each having oppositely set spiral blades. The steam is admitted into the outer shell at the small end and passes through the turbine, expanding into the large end of the shell and acting on the spiral blades to rotate the shell and shaft simultaneously and in opposite directions. By allowing both the inner turbine and the outer case to revolve, the speed necessary to insure efficiency, which in ordinary turbines is often inconveniently high, is cut in half. As a result of this construction the weight is reduced practically fifty per cent.

By passing the inner solid shaft through the outer hollow shaft or drum, the structural advantage of running both through the stern-post of the ship is obtained, this being the strongest part. Moreover, the shafts are incased and protected for almost their entire length without changing the shape of the hull. Retaining all the advantages of twin screws, the propellers are little exposed to danger in docking as in a ship with a single screw.

Since both propellers revolve on the same axis, in opposite directions, but little power is wasted in imparting a rotary motion to the water, for after the passage of the ship the water is left entirely dead except for the necessary reaction resulting from driving the ship ahead.

To sum up, the following appear to me the principal advantages: 1, reduced weight; 2, higher steam efficiency; 3, higher mechanical efficiency, by reason of the reduced size enabling the parts to be fitted more perfectly, permitting the diminution of friction and also the reduction of the leakage loss; 4, such a turbine would seem to be particularly suitable in central station work for generating electricity, in which case the field and armature may be driven in opposite directions. This would improve the efficiency of the dynamo and increase its output for a given weight. This principle is obviously also applicable to gas-engines.

Further particulars and details concerning pumps, condenser, etc., may be obtained from the Patent Office at Washington by ordering a copy of patent No. 690,821, granted to me on marine turbines, or from the office of the Scientific American, 361 Broadway, New York City, through which agency I obtained my patents.

The French patent is dated September 28, 1901; the English patent, October 1, 1901.

J. J. ASTOR.

NEW YORK, November 1, 1902.

This action of Colonel Astor is highly commendable, and we certainly trust his hopes that "the development of the ideal turbine may be hastened" will be realized. The possibilities of a very extended use of the Astor steam-turbine seem great, especially, as suggested by the inventor, in marine use and the generation of electricity. We shall watch its development with considerable interest.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

What is to be understood by the phrase "without purse or scrip," in the command of the Lord to his servants in the mission field?

As we understand it, it is to be understood as not providing and carrying with one the money and provisions for self sustenance and support. That is to say, an elder going into the field as a missionary laborer ought not to make provision for food and shelter beforehand, in the way of money in his purse, or food in his scrip, or satchel, or other receptacle for carrying such things when on a journey.

It is not the common rule, nor the custom for the missionary elders of the church to carry "purse and scrip" in the sense of making provision for their daily needs.

They usually and quite universally go into their fields trusting for daily sustenance to the good will (not to say charity) of those with whom as church members, and among whom as those not of the faith their labors are to be carried on.

The elders do carry receptacles in which to carry changes of clothing and the books which are made necessary to the purposes of their ministry by reason of the changed conditions under which gospel work is now carried on. In this sense they do take "scrip;" they do not, however, "provide money in their purses."

We have traveled for years in the requirements of our work, and in but a few instances have we ever made provision for either food or for traveling expenses, beyond the point first to be reached in the field; nor have we even "taken thought" in regard to the matter of food, or the further requirements of the road.

The field of gospel labor is occupied now under the provisions of direct revelation by which conformity is had with existing conditions, where no compromise of principle is required.

In the sense of the words first stated, the elders do go without "purse or scrip," as we understand the matter, and we believe it should be so understood.

Is it right to partake of the Lord's Supper with a gloved hand?

There is no rule that we know of that provides whether the hand shall be gloved or ungloved when the disciple partakes of the bread and the wine. We are of the opinion, however, that if the hand is gloved before the sacramental service is observed for the purpose of avoiding the touching of the bread, or the cup with the naked hand, it would not be right. There is often more uncleanness in a well-worn glove than in an ungloved hand.

It is a matter of personal taste in the absence of rule on the matter. We favor the absence of the glove.

What is to be learned from the statement of Jesus to his disciples as given in Luke 22: 36?

This: First, that as his ministry the disciples were sustained when keeping within the purview of their calling. Second, that as they had been so sustained before his death and under the command not to take purse or scrip, they would be after his departure, and under the permission to take purse and scrip; or a sword, if such were needed. Third, that as they were not to go armed in their ministry, the two swords they had were enough. Fourth, that as the command not to take purse and scrip had been observed and the disciples had been proved under it, the need for that command had passed, and their ministry was to be thereafter conducted under the ordinary and normal conditions existing among the men to whom they were sent.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Under date of October 28, O. Vernon wrote from Adamston, West Virginia: "If any of the elders come this way we shall be pleased to have them call on us. I have learned that Bro. Shinn lives here. We came here the 27th, and expect to make this our home for the present."

Will S. Pender writes from Provo, Utah, October 31: "Unfortunately, or so it seems to me, I have been confined to the house for over a month with abscesses and fever. But I think I will be at work again in a few days. The prospect of this makes me glad."

J. J. Cornish wrote from Reed City, Michigan, November 3: "Our conference is over. It was splendid. Seven more were baptized. Bro. R. C. Evans was with us; we just had a grand time. All well, and everything is moving on nicely."

Sr. M. L. Douglas wrote from Ukiah, California, October 28: "My heart rejoices in this latter-day work. I never realized so much as this summer, the scripture, 'The harvest is great, but the laborers are few.' God is still manifesting himself to his children; all praise is to his name. May we be more faithful, and arouse to the work he has for us to do, is my prayer."

V. M. Goodrich wrote from Youngstown, Ohio, November 4: "Bro. O. B. Thomas and I are at Youngstown holding a series of meetings. Interest is fair but attendance small. I am now visiting the several branches as fast as possible since taking charge of this district. I feel like the work is on the ascendency, in the main, in this district. I am well and feel blessed in my labor. I certainly feel the approval of the Master when I do my part."

I. N. Roberts wrote from Calhoun, Florida, November 3: "I preached three times yesterday. Five gave their names for baptism; will baptize them at two o'clock this afternoon. I preach again to-night and to-morrow leave for Pensacola, Florida. I have so many calls I am sometimes at a loss which way to go, but will not leave a place of interest for another until I am satisfied it is best to do so."

F. T. Dobie wrote from Stewartsville, Missouri, November 2: "We are blessed with L. D. S. churches here. There are four within five miles of this place, and one here. We have a reunion the first Sunday in every month; that is, the four other branches meet here and partake of the sacrament. Some attend regularly in these branches, and others do not. We are commanded to meet on this holy day, and we are commanded to love one another and feed the poor. We should do the best we can and ask of God who giveth liberally. Pray for me that I may be found doing his will, and that I may have my hearing restored."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A. B. Pierce wrote us recently stating that on October 31 the Providence Religio gave a successful entertainment at the home of Bro. and Sr. James McKee. He reports a splendid time.

Our readers will note that the price of M. H. Bond's tract has been reduced from thirty cents per dozen to twenty cents.

By telegram from Willard J. Smith which reached us November 4, from Borden, Indiana; we learned that James M. Scott died on that day. Particulars later.

Mrs. Lovina Dulin, 1703 C. Street West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, would like to have some of the elders call that way.

The spirit of the day is quite nicely illustrated by an occurrence in Chicago last week. One of the teachers in the Andrew Jackson School was suspended by the board. It appears that she was a great favorite with her pupils, and they refused to go to school until she was reinstated. The pupils in three other rooms in the same school joined the young strikers, and refused to return to the school-room, but hundreds of them assembled in front of the building and held meetings in which committees were appointed to wait upon Mayor Harrison and other city officials, asking to have their favorite teacher reinstated.

We have received from the Safeguard Publishing Company, of Portland, Maine, a copy of their pamphlet entitled, "Sanfordism," which purports to be an exposure of the "claims, purposes, methods, predictions, and threats of Reverend F. W. Sanford." The pamphlet brands Sanfordism as a grave peril, and thoroughly describes the workings of it, and suggests a possible remedy for the peril. This pamphlet is one of a number which the Safeguard Publishing Company has been issuing on what they term "Latter Day Delusions." The price of the one on Sanfordism is ten cents, postpaid.

By clipping from the Evening Herald, of Helena, Montana, issue of October 28, we note that D. C. White has been calling attention to the fact that we are vastly different in our beliefs from the Utah religionists.

The Scientific American for November 8 has an article on "The Lansing Skeleton," descriptive of the skeleton found at Lansing, Kansas, last February. The subject was discussed at the International Congress of Americanists, and the "Lansing Man" was on exhibit. The skeleton is said by some to be at least eight thousand years old. This skeleton has caused much comment in the press, and its real anthropological significance is a mooted question.

President Roosevelt is evidently an ardent Free Mason. At an annual Masonic celebration held at Philadelphia, November 5, he was the orator of the day, and in his speech he said that in his opinion what the country needs is the virtues which are tried to be realized through Masonry. He also said that if wage-earners and employers are brought together in lodge the matter of strike prevention and settlement becomes easy. He lauded Masonry very much, as of course he would be expected to do at a Masonic banquet.

The Social Thought is the name of a small sixteen-page paper published at Richhill, Missouri. It is, according to a statement on its title page, "devoted to the development of social thought, particularly in its relation to Religion."

President Joseph Smith passed the seventieth anniversary of his birthday last Thursday, November 6. Those of his children and grandchildren living in Lamoni were at "Liberty Hall" for supper; and later in the evening a large crowd of Lamoni citizens gathered to celebrate the occasion. An enjoyable time was had by all. At the exercises a beautiful poem, written by Sr. Walker, was read. Will publish it next week.

The committee on church history has been holding sessions regularly, giving the final reading to the manuscript for the fourth volume of Church History. The manuscript will soon be placed in the hands of the printers and the work on it pushed until the volume is published.

"ANTI-MORMON MEETING."

In HERALD No. 44, pages 1052 and 1053, under the above heading, I notice some wonderful statements and acknowledgments made by some of the ministers of the Christian Church. Such as, "We have not been in position to meet the Saints always to the best advantage;" also, "They have gone to rural communities where the churches were weak, and our ministers were not well equipped with the necessary evidence to meet them, but the Latter Day Saint ministers are always fully equipped." Good! We always knew that they were not able to meet us and prove to the satisfaction of thinking, Bible-loving people that the doctrine we advocated was false, but that through those investigations hundreds and thousands of people who were in darkness have been enlightened, and from that have gone on to further investigate, until they have been fully satisfied that we had the truth, many of whom have obeyed the same. True, we have gone into rural communities preaching the gospel, and attending to our own business, leaving other people to do the same, until the members and minister have circulated some terrible stories about us, thereby misrepresenting our people, and the faith and doctrine which we represent. Should we not defend ourselves and our faith against the vile attacks of these people? Then if they are "not equipped," and through those discussions get defeated, whose fault is it? I have gone into different places and quietly preached the truth as I found it, not only upon one but upon many occasions, when the Disciple or Christian ministers have challenged, dared, and defied me to meet them and publicly discuss our faith. And because I was (in their estimation) slow to act, they have in private and in public, and often through the press, declared that I was a coward, and that I would not and dare not meet them in discussion. But when we were drawn into it, and met them, and gained the victory by the aid of the Spirit of God, and had baptized from eight to ten or more, and sometimes some of their best members, then we hear them say, "Oh, debate is all they care for;" "They take us unawares;" "We were not well equipped," etc., and, "That minister can not fairly represent our faith," etc., etc. But now they in this meeting at Omaha, Nebraska, October 20, admit that their sifting-machine has not worked to suit them, and failure upon their part has been the result for over seventy years. And they conclude that they must get "well-informed men" to put the sifter in order, and "that can only be done by organization."

As a member of the Reorganized Church and a representative of the same, I would say, so far as their combination of Christian preachers in their "National Anti-Mormon Missionary Association of the Disciples of Christ" is concerned, I will be as able to defend the truth then as now or in the past. That combination will have to face the same arguments produced from the Bible as in the past. The Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants will be the same as in the past, with the exception that archæological evidences will be much more abundant in favor of the Book of Mormon as time goes on, than ever before, and their dodging around when refuted by saying, "Well, he didn't represent us fairly," and "He didn't use the proper arguments; he is not a debater, anyway," will have to be stopped. The "National Anti-Mormon Missionary Association of the Disciples of Christ" will have to take a decided stand, and say what kind of arguments are to be used, and what proof they shall consider proper, and what minister shall represent them, etc., or their combination will be useless and a failure. After they have decided what line of argument shall be followed, and who shall be "well equipped," to meet us, then what? Then we will know just where to find them. Hitherto each Disciple preacher represented himself, and like the flea, when you went to put your finger upon him he was not there. I have known them to represent themselves one way at one place, and when they found they were beaten on that point, they at another time in another place would take an altogether different ground, and as a result get whipped again. But now they are going to get men "well-informed" and "well-equipped," etc. And then what? Then total failure. Why? Because as stated by them in the meeting held at Omaha to organize the association, "No one can preach faith, repentance, and baptism, better than they." Why? I ask again. Because as stated by them in their meeting, "A man who meets a Latter Day Saint meets a man who is prepared for business." If, as they say, "The Methodists and Presbyterians, with their Holy Spirit, are not within a thousand miles of them," how can the Disciple preacher be any nearer when he does not profess to have any Holy Spirit, only as he may have it in the word if he chances to have a Bible with him, just as the liar, thief, drunkard, or murderer may have if he has the Bible with him?

If it is true, as stated by them (and I believe it is), that we have taken more people from their ranks than all other religious people, when they have been dodging around in the woods, so to speak, as they have in the past, what will be the result when they are fully organized and come out in the open field of battle?

Then I expect the question asked at that meeting, as to "what would be the best methods to pursue, to meet them in debate, public lecture, or educate our people to let them entirely alone," will be answered by the unfortunate minister of the "National Anti-Mormon Association of the Disciples of Christ" who may be chosen to do their debating. But inasmuch as they admit that, "As far as citizenship is concerned, no people stand better in the community than the members of the Reorganization," I would suggest that they do not fight against the truth, nor those who represent it, but that they honestly investigate our claims, and when satisfied of their correctness, embrace them, and get up where we are. Perhaps they may think by that statement as Bro. R. B. Brown, of the same Disciple Church, expressed himself in one of our debates when he said, "I guess Elder Cornish would like to baptize me." On the spur of the moment I replied, "Yes, sir, if you will repent." And I did not object to the call to order by the chairman, either.

But as the meeting advances, and on the 21st day of October at this meeting held at Omaha, the matter is settled as to what shall be the final name of the combination. The words "Disciples of Christ" were stricken out, and the words "Churches of Christ" were put in their place. In reality it was amended by the change of one word, Churches, substituted for Disciples, hence the name of the combine is: "National Anti-Mormon Missionary Association of the Churches of Christ."

Now who can be members of the above-named association? Their third clause answers: "The membership of this association shall consist of all persons interested in the overthrow of Mormonism, and contributing to its general and other funds." Ah, there you have it! Anybody, no matter how vile, if he will contribute to the funds, "general and other funds." What, the infidel? Yes, if they can get him; or any one else. The greatest drunkard, or the most blood-thirsty murderer if he will contribute to the funds of that association, the officers of which all claim to be ministers (?) for Christ, can be a member with them. "General or other funds." I understand that to mean not only the money fund, but books, tracts, or "a stock" of anything; a stock of knowledge, or wisdom, etc. Hence the Devil can become a full member of the order, if he will bring in his stock of knowledge into the fund of that association; and as he is a minister, he is eligible to office, and who knows but that he may (if not already) become the president of the "National Anti-Mormon Missionary Association of the Churches of Christ." Usually associations nominate and elect one who is best qualified for the presidency; and as Satan has always been opposed to the latter-day gospel restored, and that which will make "better" men and women as citizens for church and state (as they have admitted), I do not know who they could better place at their head than he. Or, inasmuch as he has made failures in the past in their unorganized condition, will he know that their work of organizing will be a failure also? But if they should succeed in securing his Satanic Majesty as the president of that association, which has been organized to "overthrow" that beautiful system by obedience to which they have admitted "no people stand better in the community than the members of the Reorganization," then I expect he will roar!

If no people "better" than we are, why organize and combine against us? Is there anything in their work that will still better our condition? If so, why are not their members much better than ours? The facts are, there is nothing good in their system but that can be obtained in ours, as Christ gave it to us, and every principle of the gospel of Christ as taught by him and his apostles, both that which the Christian Church believes and that which they reject are all taken up and followed by the Reorganization, not only that which he has given, but that which he may now or in the future give, are followed by us, which makes us "better." For we must "live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

IS DARWINISM ON ITS DEATH-BED?

The persistent opposition of the late Professor Virchow to the teachings of Darwinism has usually been of late years the most important feature of the international conventions of European scientists, of which he was the leading spirit. His recent death has again brought into public prominence the attitude of German and other continental scholars toward this school of philosophy, with the result that the opponents of Darwinism claim that it is practically on its death-bed. One of the prominent advocates of this view is the well-known Christian representative of the natural sciences, Doctor E. Dennert, perhaps the most pronounced representative of that class who maintain that perfect harmony exists between the teachings of the Scriptures and those of nature correctly interpreted. His latest work on this subject is entitled "Vom Sterbelager des Darwinismus" (At the Death-bed of Darwinism), a pamphlet of eighty-three pages, which contains the views of dozens of naturalists, zoölogists, biologists, etc., who are opposed to the Darwinian philosophy. Of the actual status of the present controversy on the Continent, Dennert has this to say:

"Some twenty years ago it was perfectly justifiable to identify the ideas of Darwinism and the doctrine of the descent of man, for at that time Darwinism was the only theory of descent extant. The few who would not accept this could easily be numbered. Only occasionally a scholar, such as Wigand, Kölliker, Nägeli, and a few others dared to raise their voices in protest. Now all this has been changed. Practically all naturalists now make a sharp distinction between Darwinism and the doctrine of descent. A survey of the field shows that Darwinism in its old form is becoming a matter of history, and that we are actually witnessing its death-struggle.

"A fair examination of the leading naturalists of the Continent justifies the claim that the doctrine of descent or evolution is now generally accepted as a demonstrated theory by nearly all scientists. But, on the other hand, it can not be denied that Darwinism, in the sense of natural selection by means of the struggle for existence, is being crowded to the wall all along the line. The bulk of modern scientists no longer recognize it, and those who have not yet discarded it at any rate regard it as of subordinate importance. In place of this, older views have again come into acceptance, which do not deny development, but maintain that this was not a purely mechanical process."

The comments made on the position of Virchow by many periodicals are of the same character, so the Germania says. The same journal adds:

"The great bacteriologist Pasteur was an outspoken opponent of the materialistic explanation of the origin of things known as the generatio aquivoca, or the development of organic beings out of inorganic, in the Darwinian philosophy. He stated his opposition in these words: 'Posterity will one day laugh at the foolishness of the modern materialistic philosophers. The more I study nature, the more I stand amazed at the works of the Creator. I pray while I am engaged in my work in the laboratory.'"

Virchow was not a professed Christian, but he was as much opposed as was Pasteur to the theory of Darwinism. At the last convention of anthropologists, held in Vienna, Virchow said: "The attempt to find the transition from animal to man has ended in a total failure. The middle link has not been found and will not be found. Man is not descended from the ape. It has been proved beyond a doubt that during the past five thousand years there has been no noticeable change in mankind."

Other naturalists have also raised their voices against the Darwinian views. Notably the Zoölogist, Professor Rüttemeyer, who has written a special work directed against Haeckel, the alter ego of Darwin in Germany. In this book, he charges Haeckel with "playing with the public and with natural sciences."

The Strassburg professor of Zoölogy, Doctor Goette, has published in the Unschau a natural history of Darwinism, which he depicts as having passed through four stages of development, namely: (1) the beginnings, when it was received with great enthusiasm; (2) the period in which it flourished and found general acceptance; (3) the period of transition and sober second thought, when its principles and teachings were called into question; (4) the final period, upon which the scientific world has just entered, and when its days will evidently soon be numbered, while the germ of truth it contained will become a permanent possession of modern science.—The Literary Digest, for October 18.

Original Poetry.

We are many, whose love doth burn,
We are many, whose soul doth yearn
To see fair Zion shine;
To see her victor over evil arise,
And for her people win the prize
Of peace divine.

But the battle yet is not all won,
And before the noble race is run
For the prize so dear,
A test our loyalty must stand,
To prove our greed or open hand,
The time is near.

Two sides of life are plain to view,
The spiritual and material too.
Each has its woe,
Does the gospel, then, alone provide
For the ills and woes of the spiritual side?
Ah, verily no.

A balm is given to us, for each;
It is so near within our reach—
A gracious gift.
Let us accept while yet 'tis day,
And use our means, without delay,
To give a lift.

How long shall we grovel in the dust,
How long withhold a saving trust
In the gospel plan?
How long shall we say, "We know it is true,"
Yet long live on and fail to do
All God commands?

A Baby is the Best Possible Investment.

It is pleasing to get such a letter as that which follows:

W. R. Hearst: I want—that is my wife and I want—to give you a merry Christmas. And as to know that you have made some one else happy gives you happiness, I have decided to write you.

Last winter you published an article advising people to take and bring up a baby, and that article decided us. We took one, and you were right. We are happier than we ever were in our lives. That little kid is the best thing that ever came to our house. Strong, healthy, handsome, we believe he will be a great and good man. It must be good to know that the words you have written made one man and woman and one little child's life brighter and better than they were before. Consequently I write you.

F. C. Mc.

P. S.—We think every childless couple should do as we did. He was seven days old when we took him. He is now ten months.

Our friend's letter is indeed most welcome.

It is deeply gratifying to think of that baby, well cared for, giving and finding happiness in a home of kindness and appreciation.

Many unpleasant tasks fall upon a newspaper. It makes many mistakes, it is blamed often and often deserves blame. Its success is made bitter by realization of mistakes committed in the hurry and excitement of hard fighting.

Much disappointment is forgotten and wiped out by the receipt of such a letter, by the picture of that fortunate little human being, welcomed when seven days old by a loving man and woman guided in life by deep affection.

And it is pleasing to know that the happiness of the self-chosen father and mother is only beginning.

They have had the baby from its first conscious hours. They saw it learn to focus its feeble little eyes, and they watched with delight its first dim signs of recognition, its first reaching of fat hands to those who care for it.

Still before them is the wonderful pleasure of watching the unfolding of a human soul and a human mind.

When the small brain begins to guide the short round legs, and the majestic baby sits down, very angry at the law of gravitation, those parents will feel that such a thing never happened in just that way before.

Then will come the first wonderful speeches, the first marvelous imitation of a cat or a dog, the first inclination toward investigation on his own account.

Every day of every year will furnish its new surprises and delights. Of ten thousand million babies, every one is totally different from every other one.

This baby, if God wills, will be a great man, and surely he will be a good man. For it has been his good fortune to find a good man and a good woman to care for him.

We wish him a happy New Year, a happy first birthday in February, we wish him long life and success to his good father and mother.

Their great reward will surely not fail them.

"Whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me."—San Francisco Examiner.

Disposition.

What is one's disposition, of what does it consist, and what does it do? Webster says disposition means order, arrangement, method, and state of mind. We will examine the last definition first. There are many different states of mind exhibited even by one person; circumstances without and emotions within usually speak for themselves. The habitual indulgence in any train of thought, whether good or bad, will take root in the brain and develop itself according to its cultivation, just as vegetables develop, and just as sure. There are germs of the disposition in the makeup of even a new-born babe, and what had he or she to do about them? Nothing; they were inherited from ancestors—sometimes a blessed dowry, sometimes the opposite—the what? Why, a curse. They may have been handed down, as many little streams help form the river, from different progenitors; perhaps back to the first parents. Who can wonder that Jesus excuses little children, and receives them to himself without confession or baptism?

The disposition is affected as much by the habits of those who lived before us, as are our bodies by their sinful indulgences. Why wonder that no two of a family are exactly alike! No two among all the millions of people that inhabit this earth are alike in every respect. Place the eye and the thought on any specie of God's work, and you will perceive infinite variety plainly exhibited. No limit to his vast works, and all governed by fixed laws. None are allowed even an agency, a choice, but his greatest workmanship (mankind), and they are not until their understanding is being developed. A little innocent child is blameless before mortals and before divinity. What, then, is to be done, when their inherited evil-points in the disposition begin to crop out? How shall we answer our own question? Simply by conjecture based on reason, drawn by observation from causes and effects.

Should parents, or any one having the care of children, laugh and applaud their wrong-doings, or should they turn their mind in another direction and thereby arrange the little one's first thoughts in a pure channel of order? If one never heard a vulgar, obscene, or profane word, would he, or could he, use one? Could his tongue utter what his ear never heard? not in a normal state.

O how great the condemnation that rests on those who poison the mind of the rising generation! We feel to groan at the thought, and say, O, Father, give them a renewing touch of thy Holy Spirit! Better deal out poison and destroy the mortal part and let them go to a world of purity than to bring your own soul under condemnation and send them out into the world with their soul qualified only to wallow in sin. Sometimes husbands tease their wives till they are vexed, and then laugh and seem to enjoy the sport at her expense, just as the Old Fellow does to see them stirring up strife. When she realizes that her "liege lord" has forgotten many of his early smooth promises—perhaps he never thought of them again five minutes after they were spoken—but she, with a woman's confiding heart, having pondered them well, arouses herself and tries in a way to her liking to pay him off. No one can rightly conquer in such a way, either in the household or in the church. A smashup is liable to be the last act in such a drama, no matter how artfully it is played. Such cases remind one of the two men who were at variance and met in a narrow pass on the side of a mountain. Neither would give up and let the other pass, but quarreled. A brisk struggle, and what then? Why, they lost their footing and tumbled down many feet below and unitedly made a smashup. No children were there to witness the horrible scene, and it made no impression on the rough old mountain, but it is not so in the family circle.

Every person can, with the help of God, modify the evil-points in his disposition and can develop the good ones just as he cultivates his garden. If not, he is not an accountable being—can have no reward, no punishment. SR. ALMIRA.

From the International Convention.

The St. Louis Republic for June 29 contained the following paragraph:

"The suggestion that the lesson text be not printed in the lesson leaflet, but that the student be referred to pages in the Bible for the text was applauded. The reason given for the proposed change was that it would increase Bible research. The most important innovation recommended was a graduation of classes in Sunday-schools. The plan proposed was that primary, intermediate, and senior classes be formed, with a special course in study for each class, a period of six years' attendance upon one class being required for advancement to another. The present course shall be the one for study by the intermediate class."

Strange it is how such matters can spring up. We were present when the report was read and do not remember any mention of such points. Nor do we find any notes in our book upon this subject. We have mentioned the matter before, but lest some one should think we were mistaken, we submit the following from the report of the International Convention in the Sunday School Times for July 12. You will note that they have nothing of the sort either.

There is considerable of value in the report of the lesson committee, and we suggest that you give it a careful study, as it is not improbable that the international lesson text question will come again before us in the course of a few years. The more we know about it the more intelligently we may consider it either for or against:

"THE REPORT OF THE LESSON COMMITTEE.

"No session of the convention was looked forward to with greater interest than that of Saturday morning, when the International Lesson System was to be discussed, and the Lesson Committee itself was to be heard from. Doctor Dunning's reading of the committee's report was closely followed, and interrupted by frequent applause. It opened with an interesting historical sketch of the work and personnel of the Fifth Lesson Committee, whose term came to a close at Denver. The salient points of the report are given in the following extracts:

"The committee was left free from specific instructions by the convention which appointed it in 1896, except that it was directed to select one Scripture passage for each quarter, to be used as a temperance lesson. This duty it has performed to the best of its ability. At the time of its appointment a six years' course of lessons had been prepared, to be completed at the end of 1898. The committee planned a course of lessons to cover the six years for which it was chosen, following the general outline adopted by its predecessors, but with some important changes. It purposed to follow chronologically, as far as feasible, the periods of history in the Bible, giving prominence to the biographical element. The committee, in this plan, placed first in importance that class of pupils which is by far the largest, who already have some knowledge of the Bible, who are interested in persons, but whose attention could with difficulty be held to the study of ethical and theological treatises such as the books of the Old Testament prophets and the epistles of the New Testament. Having found that the greatest popular interest is in the New Testament, the plan adopted assigned two and a half years to the Old Testament, and three and a half years to the New. Since the story of Christ is told four times in the Bible, while most of the remaining history is given only once, it was decided to study the life of Christ three times at intervals, during the six years' course, occupying two and a half years; to give two and a half years to the story of the Hebrew nation and church, and one year to the story of the Christian church.

"A natural order would be to follow the books as they are arranged in our English Bible, but this would neither recognize the historical succession of events, nor the order in which these books were produced. Nor is any arrangement possible at present on which Bible students could agree, as to all the books which should be successively studied in order to follow consecutively the history of Israel. The committee therefore decided to place first the theme that is of greatest importance, and devoted a year and a half to a study of the life and teachings of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ by a series of outlines arranged from the four gospels. This was to be followed by six months in the study of the first period of Hebrew history from the beginning of things to the Exodus of the Hebrews from Egypt. Next was six months' study of the primitive Christian church, from the resurrection of our Lord to the entrance of the gospel into Europe. A second six months in the Old Testament includes another distinct period in the history of Israel to the beginning of the monarchy under Saul. Another half-year finishes the history of the primitive church in the Acts and epistles. A third six months are occupied with the brilliant period of the monarchy in Israel until the division of the kingdom. Then six months are spent in the study of the synoptic gospels. The fourth period of Israel's history is resumed, to the destruction of the monarchies and the captivity. The gospel of John and the latest period of Jewish history occupy the final year of the course. . . .

"Why does the plan alternate between the Old and the New Testaments instead of following the history continuously, giving the first two and a half years to the Old Testament? Because a very large proportion of pupils attend the Sunday-school less than three years. Multitudes of children and youth with such a plan, would be taught only the Jewish scriptures, and would be left mainly ignorant of Christ and the Christian church. The study of portions of the Old Testament, alternating with portions of the New, does no violence to the mind of the student of the Christian faith. The record of the laying of the foundations of Hebrew morality and the Hebrew church is akin to the record of the early teaching of Christian morality and of the primitive Christian church. The one may be made an illuminating introduction to the other. The study of the building of the glorious kingdom of David passes naturally to the study of the beginnings of the kingdom of God, as revealed by the Son of David.

"Why was the course in the Acts broken off in the middle, instead of being finished consecutively, as was the study of the life of Christ? Because the majority of Sunday-schools, so far as the committee is able to learn, prefer to begin each new year in the New Testament. No way could be devised to meet this preference, in accordance with the general plan, without dividing into two sections the history of the primitive Christian church. The division was, therefore, so made as to correlate, as far as possible, the New Testament with the Old Testament history.

"Your committee believes that it has made substantial progress in promoting the continuity of the study of the Bible. It has planned the courses with this end in view. It has made each quarter, so far as practicable, a distinct period, and has indicated, with each passage of Scripture selected as the lesson, related passages for reading and study in such manner as to include substantially all the historical and biographical elements of the Bible in the course of six years. . . .

"Last year a conference was held by the Lesson Committee with a meeting of invited editors and publishers, as a result of which a joint committee, representing both parties, prepared a Beginners' Course for one year, which was issued in December, 1901. It has met with little adverse criticism, but with general favor. Its use is increasing, especially where it is promoted by primary unions. While it is yet an experiment, not having had opportunity for widespread adoption, its prospects, when adequately treated by editors and publishers, are encouraging. . . .

"Your committee, at its meeting last year, recognizing the importance of definite progress in the study of Sunday-schools, and having in mind the use of advanced courses, voted to recommend "systematic written examinations on the Bible lessons of each quarter. The questions should embrace literary, historical, and practical points of interest. The pupils taking the examinations should be arranged quarterly and annually, according to some scheme of marks and honors, which will recognize good work in all departments of the school, without involving individual competition."

"A sub-committee of the Lesson Committee was appointed last year to present a plan for an advanced course of two years. It did not feel warranted, however, in issuing such a course to the Christian public, involving, as it does, important changes in our plans of Bible study, without further consideration by the Lesson Committee and the approval of this convention. A course has been prepared, and is presented for your consideration. It is intended to cover two years, and takes up themes for which the International series is a preparation, but which it has, in the main, left untouched. . . .

"A considerable and apparently increasing number of Sunday-schools are being led by experienced educators, organized according to public school systems, and provided with their own lessons. We welcome the aid of these men and women who seek to apply the most approved principles and methods of popular education to the moral and spiritual training of the people through the study of the Bible. Through their labors we trust that better systems than those now in use will evolve, which, after having been proved, may be adopted to the worldwide uses of Sunday-schools."

Letter Department.

LOS ANGELES, California, October 29.

Editors Herald: Some time ago I sent a copy of my tract, "The Latter Day Saints, Who are they?" and a special circular letter which I have had published, to several hundred ministers in Southern California. Here is a sample of the replies.

"SANTA MONICA, California, October 22, 1902.

"MR. T. W. WILLIAMS, Los Angeles, California;

"Sir: In a communication this day received from you, you say, 'trusting that I may hear from you at no distant day.' I can not understand why you want to hear from me. I do not wish to enter into a disputation with you. To be frank, I do not care whether you call yourself a 'Mormon' or a 'Latter Day Saint,' whether you originated with Brigham Young or with Joseph Smith. I do not want to have anything to do with you or with anybody connected with you, and I shall appreciate you not troubling me further as I am a very busy man and have no time for this correspondence.

"Yours and etc.,

"JOHN D. H. BROWNE."

Although invited not to do so, I could not resist the temptation to reply to this, and did so as follows:

"REV. JOHN D. H. BROWNE;

"Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your communication of the 22d instant, and the characteristic tone of your communication impels me to make a simple reply. You say, 'I can not understand why you want to hear from me. I do not wish to enter into a disputation with you.' There is a vast difference between friendly exchange of thought and a 'disputation.' I care not for the latter myself. On one thing we can both agree; viz., one or the other of us is in the wrong. If you are the servant of God and I am in error, you surely do not manifest the Christ Spirit when you say, 'I do not want to have anything to do with you or with anybody connected with you.' If I am deluded, as your letter would infer, then it becomes your duty, acting under a divine commission, even to go out of your way to convert me. Christ was aggressive, and always found time to cope with error; but here we have one of his ministers, approached by another asking for a conference looking to a better understanding, and the minister saying, 'No.' The Bible says, 'Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.' Have you investigated 'Mormonism'? If wrong, can you intelligently refute it, or are you dependent on what our enemies have said concerning us? I shall be under obligation to you if you will carefully read the pamphlet I sent you and then show me wherein I am wrong. I have no strings to me, and the moment I am shown that I am in error I will change my course and bless my benefactor. I would say, however, the tone and expression of your letter to me is not calculated to win me from what you call heresy or to inspire me with reverence towards the faith you represent. I would suggest that you read the article from the pen of Joseph Smith in to-day's Times, under 'The Times' Answers by Experts,' entitled 'Polygamy in America.' It may open your eyes to some things of which you are not informed.

"Very truly yours,

"T. W. WILLIAMS."

I have just returned from a trip to the central part of the State. Learn that Bro. Luff is in the city, but have not seen him as yet. Brn. Carmichael and Foss have also returned home. The first rain of the season fell last week. Our conference at San Bernardino was above the average in spirituality and good will. No great prospects for church expansion here, but we are doing what we can.

Yours in the faith,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

SHENANDOAH, Iowa, November 6.

Editors Herald: The work in this district is in fair condition so far as we know. The missionaries are doing what they can to move the work along, with fairly good success, both Bro. Charles Fry and Bro. Madison. And as Brn. Scott and Sorensen have been unable to do any labor in the district, we think our labors for the Master have not been in vain. We shall be grateful indeed to our heavenly Father when he in his infinite wisdom shall see fit to so open up the way and heal and restore the afflicted that our worthy brethren may be able to occupy according to the righteous desires of their hearts.

Bro. Fry did well in replying to the two lectures on the "expose of Mormonism" by our Christian brother, Elder Ackens, two miles east of Bartlett. I was with him helping him what little I could by my presence and prayers. J. D. McClure was with us one night, but he is so well known in this community that his presence did us more good than harm. The tide in this little bubble turned in our favor, and made us friends to the cause we love and revere.

I have been here two weeks holding and attending meetings, visiting the membership of this branch, doing the work of an evangelist to the best of my ability, trying to encourage all, both strong and weak, to press forward in the work; to learn their duty, and perform the same, that they may gain the reward promised at the end of the race.

Bro. Badham, our worthy district president, is doing all he can for the good of the work, and we believe all the local force in the branches are moving in line with him.

May God speed the work to its final consummation, and bless every effort put forth to this end.

From here we move on to Farm Creek, and to other places as the way may open and our services be required.

HENRY KEMP.

HOLDEN, Missouri, October 31.

Editors Herald: I find many noble Saints here, with whom it is a great pleasure to be associated in religious services. It is encouraging indeed to see the old and young assemble every Sunday at nine thirty in order to understand the way of the Lord more perfectly. And while Zion does not shine in the perfection of beauty, neither can we say that all is well here; yet as we view the condition of things and see the encouraging features in the church work, our heart's desire goes out in sympathy and love for those who are deprived of the association of Saints, and do not enjoy church privileges.

My efforts this year have been encouraging to me if to no one else, and I am glad indeed to report that I have labored faithfully to advance the principles of our work, and that I can testify that the divine spirit has been my comforter and guide.

I held a four-day debate with W. H. Williams, of Lena, Indiana, a minister of the Christian Church, at Bellair, Illinois. He affirmed the following: "The church of Christ sometimes called Campbellites, is in fact the church of God, harmonizing in faith, organization, doctrine, and practice with the church of Christ set up by divine authority eighteen hundred years ago;" and I affirmed the same for the Reorganization. I was appointed by the missionary in charge to hold this debate, with a statement from him that if I would be humble and prayerful I would come out all right. This, with some things pointed out to me in a dream beforehand, all came to pass. Bro. Jesse W. Paxton, my colaborer, is a witness to the literal fulfillment of my dream. I have no desire to boast of my effort and method of debate, as this was my first experience in that line of work. I am glad, however, to report that for some cause I seemed to have the confidence and respect of the people in my favor. I trust the Lord may bless the effort to the good of his cause.

There were twelve Campbellite ministers in attendance. That anti-Mormon association will certainly think that Elder Williams was very foolish for asserting that their church is in harmony with the church of Christ in doctrine and practice. Bro. R. T. Walters was my moderator, and rendered good assistance. The efforts of those Christian ministers to keep the teaching of their organization in the background when in debate with us, is an evidence that they realize the weakness of their own cause, as well as the strength of ours, and they certainly manifest a spirit of cowardice and dishonesty instead of a disposition to establish righteousness. If all knew the methods of Braden, Bays, and others against our work it would be useless for us to notice them at all. But as the honest in heart in many places are unacquainted with their misrepresentations and unholy attacks against our work, it becomes our duty as servants of the Most High to follow them into every nook and corner where they may lift their voices against the work and expose them where they have not been exposed already.

As men of God, we ask them to confess and forsake and prepare to meet the angel in peace who restored the gospel in this dispensation; for the promise is sure to those who work righteousness. Will they answer or will they remain silent?

Our reunion at Zenith was a means of strength to the work and all who took part were greatly benefited. It was said to be the best reunion ever held in the district. It was decided by vote to have a reunion next year, and a committee chosen to select time and place.

We never felt better and stronger in the faith than we have this year, and it makes us feel proud of the faith and our calling; and yet we know it all means sacrifice and work.

F. M. SLOVER.

RICHMOND, Victoria, October 29.

Editors Herald: We have just concluded our first conference in the city of Melbourne. It was perhaps the most largely attended conference ever held in Victoria, and passed off pleasantly and, we hope, with benefit to the cause. Bro. J. W. Wight was present, and in conjunction with C. A. Butterworth presided.

Bro. Butterworth is still in a very poor state of health and quite unfit for ministerial effort. We appreciate very highly the services of Bro. Wight and feel sure that his visit to these colonies—states, will be productive of great good to the cause. Negotiations are at present afoot for debate with one of the representatives of one of the many churches of Christ. We look forward to it with optimism and feel sure that the truth will triumph.

J. H. N. JONES.

ELLENBURG, Washington, October 29.

Editors Herald: I have been laboring with Bro. D. E. Powell since September 11, and find him very pleasant. We visited the Roslyn Branch and held meetings for over two weeks, with good interest and attendance. We were blessed in our efforts, for which we feel to thank the Giver of all.

From there, in company with G. H. Hilliard and Joseph Luff, we went to Seattle, and stopped over night; listened to Bro. Hilliard, and enjoyed it very much. The next morning Bro. Powell and the writer started by boat for Lacouer and arrived there in the afternoon. Found Bro. Gladwin and Sr. Christensen at the dock, glad to see us. We commenced meetings the next night and continued about two weeks. Our meetings were quite spiritual, though not many outsiders were present. We believe our efforts were appreciated by the Saints and outsiders. We found some good lively Saints at this place and real kind to the missionaries.

From there we went to Clearbrook by request of the sub-missionary in charge, J. W. Roberts. Commenced meetings in the Clearbrook schoolhouse and continued for four or five nights, with splendid interest and a full house; but as there is only one family of Saints near the schoolhouse and they were so busy, we thought it wisdom to close for the time being. This familiar name is Michael Lade. They are very kind Saints, and will do all they can for the advancement of the truth.

We went from there to Seattle again and met Bro. Roberts. He thinks of continuing meetings this week.

I will leave for Tacoma Saturday, and expect to meet Bro. Roberts there, where we will hold meetings for a while; then on to Castle Rock.

There are so many calls for preaching that we can not fill them all. There are a great many opportunities for work in this place, but the laborers are few. I hope the church will be able to send more laborers into the vineyard next year. I ever pray for the welfare of Zion.

N. V. SHELDON.

GOOD HOPE, D. C., November 1.

Editors Herald: We just had a visit from Bro. Davis, he having seen our name and address in the HERALD. He held a meeting, only three being present. We felt sorry to have him go. God bless the ministry of the latter days! Already I am trying to scatter the seed of personal influence in the capital of the United States. People here as elsewhere are in sore distress. Only through the knowledge of the gospel can the true and lasting character be built. By trial of faith, our strength grows. Idleness never produced anything. Work is God's law in heaven and on earth. Lip service is placing on the Lord what he has left us to do. His life was ministering to others not being ministered to. God's mysterious character building comes from intelligence. The commandments of Christ are binding on the membership as well as the officers of the church. The faithfulness of our own lives brings our reward.

As part of the body, I rejoice in the gospel. I thank God for all things that help me to know him, the only true and living God of heaven, and Jesus Christ, his only Son, whom we worship and whose coming we await.

A. M. MERRILL.

STRAIT, Oklahoma, October 30.

Editors Herald: Strait is in a beautiful valley, level as a floor, about three miles wide by eight miles long, about thirty-five miles west of Guy. Sr. Crawley and I reached here yesterday noon; stopped with W. J. Williams, of Iowa. Spent the afternoon in buggy traveling from house to house notifying the people of preaching services, and the result was that at night we had from forty to fifty out to meeting at the schoolhouse. I had good liberty and good interest. I continue to-morrow night.

Sr. Jones lives here, wife of Mr. Harry Jones, who moved here from Iowa last spring. Missionaries please take notice of this place, as I think it a good point. Next week I want to return to Taloga, as it will be court week, and I can do some preaching then.

Seventh-day Adventists and I had much talk there night about for nearly two weeks. They would not talk alternately the same night. Hall rent is one dollar fifty cents per night. The first night a Christian minister proposed to pay the rent to have me review them on the seventh-day question, and he said he never spent money to a better advantage in his life. Adventists obtained the help of a new lawyer who had just located in Taloga. He claimed to be a minister, and boasted of vanquishing E. L. Kelley, Rudolph Etzenhouser, and others. His name is J. W. Jacobs, and he challenged me for a discussion, he to affirm that water baptism and laying on of hands were nonessential to salvation in the present age, and that Joseph Smith was a false prophet, and his teachings unworthy of respect. He was to come indorsed as a minister of the Christian congregation, so on Tuesday the papers were signed; but he did not come.

Fifteen to thirty miles southwest of Taloga are Advent settlements, so I want to visit them soon, as some of them, I hear, are seeking the truth.

D. S. CRAWLEY.

COOKES POINT, Texas, October 31.

Editors Herald: Since you last heard from me I went to Falls County to attend our district conference which met about eight miles east of Martin. We had a very good turnout; adjourned to meet in Houston County; time to be set by the president of district. After conference I met my wife at Hearne, and we went to San Antonio to attend the International Fair. The trip did Sr. Nunley good, and it afforded us opportunity to get acquainted with Saints and friends. The fair was a success.

Sightseeing did not occupy all of our time. I preached five times, attended four other meetings, two prayer-meetings, two business meetings, and one preaching meeting. Bro. John Harp was the speaker. At all those meetings there were good turnouts and interest. I met Brn. John and Charles Harp and Bro. Davenport, of the missionary force. The local officers all seemed to be doing what they could to forward the work. The sisters, too, are doing their part.

Bro. John Harp is very enthusiastic as to the building of a house of worship at San Antonio. He is not by himself, by any means. After staying with them twelve days, my wife and I left for home.

I stayed at home two or three days, then was away again to tell the gospel to the people and leave the results with them and God.

While in Texas we made our headquarters at Sr. Merritt's and Bro. Ed Macrae's, who entertained us splendidly. We visited almost all the Saints in the city, and hope to make them another visit sometime. May God's blessings be theirs to enjoy in abundance, is our prayer.

E. W. NUNLEY.

TUNNELHILL, Illinois, November 4.

Editors Herald: On September 27 I reached St. Louis, and was taken by Bro. S. A. Burgess to his pleasant home. Sunday morning the 28th, I met with the Sunday-school, and at eleven o'clock occupied the pulpit.

Just as I was going to the stand I was accosted by Mrs. Dorothy Kelley, a reporter for the Chicago Liberal. She asked that I speak on "Blood-atonement," and "Baptism for the Dead," since the editors of the Liberal had requested her to visit the Saints' church and report what they had to say about the later murder perpetrated in New York by Brigham Young's grandson. I hastily prepared a few notes while the choir sang, and in my sermon gave our rendering of the subject in hand. The reporter said she was greatly surprised to learn how thoroughly and logically we opposed Brigham Young's theory of blood-atonement. And as to the baptism for the dead, she was simply "carried away" with our rendering of it. She was now past sixty years old, and when a girl of sixteen, she had read Paul's statement, "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?"—1 Corinthians 15:29. She carried Paul's statement to her mother and pressed an explanation. Her mother put her into a close room, and kept her confined there for one half day, to teach her a lesson for meddling with the mysteries of the Bible. This kind of treatment had not killed her curiosity; hence her desires were fully met in my exegesis of that subject. She was really converted to our rendering of it, and said: "This will make me stand alone with my people—my church." I occupied the pulpit Sunday night and every night to Thursday, when President Joseph Smith and R. C. Evans came. I had the pleasure of introducing Bro. Joseph to a well-crowded house that night, and he simply worked himself into the hearts of the people, many going away with the conviction that the prophet of the Latter Day Saints had not come with "cunningly devised fables." R. C. Evans was announced for the next night, while I was to start for Xenia, Illinois, on an early train. Our lady reporter put in an appearance and heard Joseph. She came early, and informed me she had written of my sermon on "blood-atonement" and "baptism for the dead," supplementing it with her convictions of its worth, and forwarded it to the editors at Chicago. She had received a telegram from them that she must submit to having her comments on the sermon "blue-penciled" before they could publish it. She at once replied that she could not do that, as those were her convictions, and she had never been subjected to such a ruling before, and she had been on the reporter's staff for twenty years. At this the company notified a gentleman reporter to visit her and urge that she comply with their request. This was done, so she informed me. At the time she had not fully decided upon what course to pursue. Urged me to send her some literature to read, which has been done through Bro. Burgess.

October 3, I reached Xenia, Illinois, and was piloted to the home of Sr. J. R. Gauger. Rain prevented me going to the reunion grounds near Zenith, six miles away. I tarried till the next day, when Bro. Joseph and "R. C." came. After dinner, Sr. Gauger's hired hack carried us three to reunion grounds, reaching there just in time for the quarterly conference, which was in session. Bro. Morris and I were chosen to preside, both conference and reunion. Conference business was soon a thing of the past. Having cleared the table of everything this session, we adjourned to participate in the reunion.

The reunion is said to be the best ever held in the district. Joseph and R. C. and R. T. Walters were to leave on Wednesday, the 8th, hence they did the preaching, which was of that character that gave prestige to the church as never before in this mission. Bro. R. C., on 6th, baptized a man and his wife, while the banks of the creek swarmed with people. On Wednesday, the 8th, after the eleven o'clock service, the reunionist took the parting hand of these brethren whom they had learned to love for their good deeds—adaptability and congeniality to the surroundings found among the "common people." The "work" now fell upon Brn. Slover, Paxton, Goosetree, Morris, the brothers Davis and the writer. I shifted the presidency onto the shoulders of Bro. Slover, and the consequences were that "I. N." had to preach every night and once during the day. The meetings increased with interest to the last. Crowds also flocked to the services. On Sunday night the reunion closed with three young ladies standing asking for baptism. I announced meeting for next day and night, in order to accommodate those wishing baptism. Bro. Slover officiated, and the sisters were confirmed at night service. Some testimonies were received.

Sunday night after I was through my sermon, I asked if there were any present who desired baptism, and at once Miss Rhoday Brown and two other ladies arose for baptism. Bro. and Sr. Clemons took us, Paxton and I, to Dry Fork church next day, where we held forth for three nights. Then Bro. Walker took us to Fairfield, where we took train for Springerton where we found congregation waiting us after supper. Here we tarried over Sunday, speaking five times, part of the time to a crowded house, with fine interest. It was hard to pull away from the Saints when they begged us to remain longer. Here I found a good-hearted people without a shepherd, he having been enticed by Satan to drink into politics and whisky. Let the Saints beware of this element. To run after either very extensively will destroy the usefulness of any Latter Day Saint.

On Monday, the 20th, Bro. Columbus Lowery took us in lumber wagon to McLeansborough, some sixteen miles. Here we met the Brn. Davis, who took us twelve miles further, and I spoke in a schoolhouse that night to a full house. On the 21st, Bro. F. M. Davis took us to the Parrish church, where we held forth for three nights, and spoke twice during the day. People became much interested. Mrs. Teresa E. Cantrell, Miss Essie H. Johnson, and Mrs. Margie P. Norman asked baptism, and we retired to the "mill-pond" in Parrish, and Priest Jesse W. Paxton immersed the three sisters, many of the Parrish people witnessing the solemn but beautiful ordinance. The three waded arm in arm into the water, and did the same in returning to the shore after baptism.

Life is made up of incidents; and sometimes these things tend to confirm us in the faith, as they did the Saints in the troublesome times directly after the crucifixion of the Savior. Two such I name here: Bro. John F. Simms' family was prostrated with smallpox in a malignant form; house quarantined, neighbors all frightened so they dare not render any assistance, which brought the whole burden of care upon Bro. Simms. It looked to him that death was at the door for the whole family, and especially his dear wife. Not a soul to go to for comfort. He retired to the front room and sat down and wept bitterly, and felt that he would have to give up. Suddenly he seemed to hear a voice say to him: "I'll never leave thee, nor forsake thee." He arose and went to the room where his wife lay prostrated and related the circumstances to her, then bowed by the bed and offered to God a prayer of gratitude. Sunshine at once broke in on them, and in a few days the terrible disease took its flight.

Sr. Mary J. Johnson, while under a terrible mental strain, stepped into her kitchen, and a voice seemed to say: "Be humble, patient, quiet, and content, for I am God."

These are some of the evidences that they have received along life's troublesome road, that God is caring for his children. On Friday the 24th, Bro. Miller took us to West Frankfort, where we took train to Goreville, and were met by Bro. Daniel Casey. We repaired to the Tunnelhill church to find a large crowd waiting to see their missionary for the first time in life. I felt God's comforting Spirit, and the sermon stirred the unconverted sinner; and also was a reminder to the Saints that there was something to do besides sitting with folded hands. I held forth at the church every night up to Monday night, November 3. The house was jammed to its utmost nearly every meeting. At one time there must have been twenty on the pulpit platform; scarcely room for me to stand to dispense the word. It has aroused debate in streets and stores, post-offices, etc., in the towns round about.

On the second night I was here, Saturday, I received a dream, in which I saw myself sitting in the front of what I called a "gospel wagon." This wagon was filled with young ladies and young men, new converts to the faith. The next day, Sunday, at eleven o'clock, I felt constrained by the Spirit to relate the dream to a jammed house of listeners. I told them I expected its fulfillment ere I leave this neighborhood. The meetings proceeded, and such an awakening among the young men and women I seldom ever witness. The whole country for miles around was stirred. Presently they commenced to flock to the standard of truth in ones, twos, and fours. I announced baptism for Sunday, November 2, at two in the afternoon. The procession on the way to the water was more than one half mile in length. The order at the creek during the baptism was amazing; we marveled at the spirit of solemnity that seized the people, though the crowd was such as has never been seen in this whole country for number at a baptizing. J. W. Paxton officiated, and the work was done in the best of order. Those who were baptized are as follows (the ages are found in parentheses): Augustus Webb (16); Hezzie H. Gold (20), a school-teacher; Annettie Sutton (14); Minzora Sutton (16); Samuel L. Smith (30), a teacher; Mary A. Smith (31); Letha A. Burklow (17); Oma Casey (15); Blanche Parks (17); Ollie A. Casey (17); Alice Miles (16); Narcis Webb (21); Martha Ann Simmons (34); Bertie F. Grace (17), and James M. Moore (24.) In all, fifteen.

Elder W. R. Smith, who was on his way to his mission in Kentucky, assisted me at the night service in confirming. When coming from the baptism my dream flashed to my mind, and I looked around from my seat; and to my astonishment there were nine young ladies, and one young man sitting behind me in their wet clothing, all of whom had been baptized a few minutes before. I recognized the whole surrounding as a fulfillment of my dream.

In closing the services last night, by the consent of the branch officers, I announced a young people's prayer-meeting to be held every Friday night.

I was aided in these meetings by the branch officers and others, and by Bro. Paxton, who by the way, is one of our promising young men. I am leaving scores convinced that they should do something to save their souls.

Thus ended one of the best and most awakening meetings I have ever held in the church. I have preached every night since October 8, and some twelve times during the day. Never have had better health, and never felt more confirmed that this word is the power of God to save, and that it will live, let it be ever so much opposed.

I leave to-day (4th) for Jonesboro, Arkansas, where I meet a company of tourists with spades, picks, and shovels, to explore some ancient mounds. You will hear from me later about that trip.

On the move,

I. N. WHITE.

CORMORANT, Minnesota, October 26.

Editors Herald: It is about fourteen years since myself and wife were baptized, and we never have been sorry for the step taken. Have had many seasons of rejoicing and testimonies that prove beyond doubt that this work is of God. But we have not been without trials also, for I believe trials must come. Paul said: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." I believe that we should bear our trials without a murmur or complaint, as the poet says.

I am trying to overcome my imperfections and ever be found walking in the strait and narrow way; and I find it is a narrow way indeed when we come to measure ourselves by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of the Lord. We are commanded to love our neighbor as ourselves; and not only this, but the Savior says, "Love your enemies, . . . bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you. . . . For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?"

Our conference is a thing of the past. I attended only on Sunday. I heard a few testimonies and two good sermons; one by T. C. Kelley, and the other by F. D. Omans. Also attended Sunday-school. I can testify to the gift of healing, and know that it is with the church. Our only daughter when but a very small girl was healed of lung fever. Bro. Andrew Tabbutt administered to her, and she has been well ever since. I have also been healed of a sore affliction, after several administrations.

On March 16 I fell and broke my right arm and did not do any work until July. Just as my arm got so that I could go to work my old stomach trouble came back on me. I called for administration by Brn. Hayer and Thorburn who were preaching at Pelican Lake at the time. This was a year ago last July, and from that hour I began to feel better, and in less than a week was entirely free from that trouble, and have not had any symptoms of it since. How many times I have felt to praise the God of heaven for this!

Tuesday night, October 21, I had a dream which seems to be very much impressed on my mind ever since, and I will relate it: I thought I had grubbed out a piece of timber-land for a brother, and this brother got the timber for fire-wood. I broke up the land, put it in crop, and took care of it until time to harvest it. While I was taking care of the crop, which I supposed was mine, along came this brother and wanted a share of that which I had worked so hard to get. I wondered at this, and thought it strange; and while thinking what to do the words came to me, "This is the condition of the Saints in general." The Spirit said it was from the lack of love and unity. Too much selfishness and not enough of the love of God in our hearts. The Lord has said, If you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded and required of you.

I am far from being perfect, but I hope to grow more in favor with the Lord and keep his commandments and endure to the end, for therein is life eternal.

Let us all be more faithful and learn to do, that we may come up higher.

J. S. McCLELLAND.

BALDKNOB, Arkansas, November 4.

Herald Readers: By the request of missionary in charge the writer came to this point from Jonesboro on October 10. I found here a little band of warm-hearted Saints, but without a shepherd. Bro. Sands, their presiding elder, having found it necessary to recuperate financially, is in Texas for a time, but will soon return.

I commenced preaching at once to a few. The interest increased, and we soon had a respectable congregation, both as to number and attention.

On the night of the 14th one handed me a challenge from a Reverend W. M. Hicks formerly of Winfield, Alabama, now of Roosevelt, Arkansas, who claims to be a Baptist missionary, lecturer, and debater, asking me to debate with him. I accordingly wrote out propositions and mailed to him, copies of which I sent to Bro. Macrae, referring the whole matter to him.

Elder J. W. Jackson joined me on the 21st, and it is a treat indeed to listen to some one besides D. R., for the sound of his voice has somehow grown monotonous to my ears. I think I can see clearly the wisdom of the "two by two" plan, especially where it becomes necessary to endure the labors of the cranky and prosaic for a time, then to listen to the musical ring of a voice attuned by the fire of the Spirit, it brings joy and peace; it inspires with zeal and develops our endurance and helps perfect our patience. I wish we had a J. W. Jackson for every township in Arkansas.

Three were baptized on the 26th. The next day we went to the Ingleside Branch, fifty miles away. Reverend Hicks works himself up to fever heat. He "must have a debate," he can not wait. So he announced a lecture at the place where we had been preaching. A great crowd came to hear him, and he talked three hours.

He was terribly wrought to think that we were making an impression on the good people. He has decided to make Arkansas his home, and he will not condone the Latter Day Saints. He is going to crush them out. He "will clutch the whole thing in an eggshell." He "will follow them to their strongholds and wipe them out." So beware, ye men of Israel, this "Goliath of Goth" is on the war-path, and vengeful indeed is his countenance.

The weather is warm as summer. On the 27th cattle and horses were resting in the shade. No frost yet. But the leaves are brown and sear with age and are beginning to carpet the earth. Flower-gardens smile verdantly. Sassafras blooming for a second crop; hundreds of feathered songsters warbling a cheerful lay; bees still gathering the fruit of flowers; a warm south wind, and gentle growing showers are laying the dust. All are glad to see it rain. I like this better than boreal blasts and chattering teeth.

The Saints here are contemplating building a church. Bro. and Sr. Johnson have fitted one room of their dwelling for Sunday-school where the children of the neighborhood are warmly received and taught every Sunday.

Cotton! cotton! Hundreds of people still picking cotton. I counted twenty wagons at the gin waiting to unload, each having on a bale, or about one thousand six hundred pounds of seed cotton. At another gin it looked as though I might walk over an acre of bales promiscuously rolled out; five hundred pounds in a bale.

We will probably stay here until the excitement over Reverend Hicks attack subsides, and then on to Evening Shade. We returned from Ingleside yesterday, and will commence preaching to-morrow night. The Saints of this Shady Grove Branch are all prospering; several of them are making good money growing strawberries. Baldknob seems to be a strawberry center from whence many carloads of the luscious fruit is shipped.

I am slowly gathering up some interesting items for church history. This work has been hindered for want of postage until I came to Baldknob; but here the liberality of the Saints has relieved me along several lines. They are demonstrating the statements of the Master concerning measure and measuring.

What a wonderful influence is the Spirit of peace. All nature feels it; the birds sing sweeter, the sun has a more congenial warmth; loved ones, though absent, are drawn near, and the strong bond of union intensified.

Praise God for the gospel.

LONDON, Ontario, October 29.

Editors Herald: I left London, after a two-day visit with home folks, Thursday morning last, and arrived in Reed City, Michigan, the evening of the same day, where I spent a pleasant evening at the home of J. J. Cornish.

Friday morning we started for South Boardman conference. We arrived in time to enjoy ourselves in Sunday-school session of afternoon, and by request filled (as well as a small man can fill a large man's place) Elder H. C. Smith's place on the prepared program. First number, "The relation of the Sunday-school to the church;" second number, "The evils of Intemperance." The evening was well spent, a splendid program being well rendered.

Saturday morning at half past seven we had priesthood-meeting for two hours. We believe all present were benefited. Conference proper convened at ten o'clock. The conference business was not specially important; all was conducted in peace and harmony. I was selected to preach Saturday night, and was greeted by an overflowing congregation that evinced great patience, under difficulties, in giving rapt attention to a rather lengthy discourse.

Six o'clock Sunday morning was appointed for priesthood-meeting in Baptist church, which was profitably conducted. Prayer services from nine till half past ten. The speaker for eleven o'clock was Bro. William H. Kelley. He gave us a splendid sermon, brimming with sound argument and good thought. At half past two I preached the dedicatory sermon. The meeting was in charge of J. A. Grant; the dedicatory prayer was offered by J. J. Cornish. E. K. Evans was the speaker for the evening, and he gave us a good sermon.

We had a profitable meeting Monday morning. Business completed, short speeches were delivered by several of the ministry. The verdict as generally expressed was, "This is one of the best conferences ever held in this district."

J. J. Cornish, is called "The Father of Michigan." One thing is certain he is loved and admired as a true servant of our Lord, and we believe he is worthy of the love bestowed and confidence reposed. May he continue to shine undimmed. Leaving South Boardman Monday noon, we arrived at Cadillac; we were the guest of Sr. Hudchin's, our former young friend known to Canada Saints as Sr. Dell Morrison. We preached for the Cadillac Saints the same evening. A full house gave close attention.

Tuesday morning we bade Cadillac friends farewell. Elders W. H. Kelley, E. A. Goodwin, A. Whitehead, and others being at the station to see us safely off. Elder Kelley has been working with Cadillac people for a time and is very favorably referred to. We arrived home last evening finding home folks all well and happy.

HALKERVILLE, Ontario, Canada, November 4.

Editors Herald: I have been laboring for three weeks at Ridgetown, Chatham District, and have been greatly blessed. I have baptized five. Bro. Henry Leatherdale has been called to the office of teacher, and Bro. Almer St. John, deacon, and now the Ridgetown Branch has a full quorum of officers. I left on the 7th to labor in Halkerville, Ontario. As my work did not commence till the 3d I went over to Detroit, just across the water. I went to the beautiful church they now worship in, and preached for them in the morning and evening, and presided over prayer and sacrament service. A good time was enjoyed.

I have commenced my duties here with good results. Expect to baptize before the end of the week, and we are living in hope of seeing a good branch organized here. This is my first labor in the Chatham District.

R. B. HOWLETT.

CARDIFF, Wales, October 25.

Editors Herald: I have read the HERALD many times, but for a long time have not read any correspondence from members of the Cardiff Branch, so thought I would let your readers know that there are some in Wales still "contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints." And truly in this land of Christendom, with its many systems of religion, its many churches, we often have to contend in behalf of the "truth," or be content to hear the opinion of our "friends" expressed publicly, both from the pulpit and in the press against us without retaliation; but this we are not content to do, but as often as we have the opportunity we stand in support and defense of the angel's message, and hope that through our endeavors the same will find favor in the eyes of honest men, and the sound thereof spread from one end of this land to the other. We are not free from the attempts of some who endeavor to paint us the same color as the Utah church; but we are pleased to say we have some good brethren and sisters too, who can rub off all the paint as fast as they endeavor to put it on, and they not only rub off the paint, but some of that which hitherto prevented the truth from coming to the light; namely, prejudice.

Our branch president, Thomas Gould, has done much during his residence in Cardiff to oppose the errors of Brighamism and our Utah friends have good cause to remember him. From the time Brigham Roberts represented that community some years ago in this country, Bro. Gould has often met them in their public meetings and on the streets, their defense as usual on such occasions being a "hasty retreat."

William Lewis and John Davis have done much, by means of street preaching, to remove prejudice, and they have been successful in making friends to our cause. We have missed Bro. Lewis, his wife, and their daughter Ruth, very much since their removal to Llanelly.

The claim made by Mr. Piggot, of London, to be the "Messiah," has created some interest in this country. We are surprised that he actually gained some followers, notwithstanding he has lacked the signs of recognition spoken of by Zechariah the prophet (Zechariah 13: 6), and also that he came not in the way appointed, namely, in the clouds of heaven, etc. The claim of this man has been examined through the press by Bro. J. E. Holford, Lydney Branch, who by this means and his personal endeavors has done much to publish the gospel around that neighborhood and in the "Forest of Dean, Gloucestershire." He is well known there as a representative of this church.

Lydney is the place where a branch was organized in the early days of the Reorganization, and in later years by Gomer T. Griffiths. Some still remaining who are not "ashamed of the gospel of Christ." The writer removed from that branch in the early part of this year, to Cardiff, but he is still endeavoring to uphold the integrity of the church, and to publish the gospel abroad by a good life, bearing his testimony, which he is thankful to have received, and by a systematic method of tract distribution from door to door, and trusts by this means to prepare himself for the work which lies before him, and trusts that he may be able to acquit himself worthily. I labor in the hope of a brighter future for the work.

Traacts and spare literature will be thankfully received.

ERNEST J. TRAPP.

137 Severn Road, CANTON.

ESSEX, England, October 29.

Editors Herald: It is a long time since I wrote to the HERALD, and I thought I would write a few lines to let my friends know that I am alive in the work. I have been very busy since coming to this land, and I have been much blessed in my labors, especially since coming to London. This is a great city, and there is plenty to do. People are not falling over each other in their haste to get at the truth. If there is a falling it is to get away from the truth. I have had much experience in open-air work, both before coming into the church and since; but I have found no harder place for this kind of work than in London. Again, the money at our disposal is very limited, and it takes money in a place like this. Of course money is needed everywhere, but I think that London is the most expensive place I have seen, all things being taken into account. We think that by and by we can develop the work here, and take halls and try to get the work before the people; but this takes money. We are getting our forces ready, and we believe when the time comes the Lord will send us the means.

The main thing at the present time is to build up the work; that is, to get all the ministers and membership into line. As to the ministry, there is now a unity with one or two exceptions; the attainment of this has been very rapid, and we pray it may be permanent. The adversary is trying very hard to overthrow what has been done, but we are apprised of his designs. The work is moving forward of late; and while we are not able to record baptisms, etc., we are not discouraged.

We expect ere long that some will be born into the kingdom; but we feel that it is very necessary to get the house where they are to live into good condition before their coming. Every preparation is made and the home is made comfortable prior to the natural birth; and were the same precaution taken in the spiritual sense, it seems to me that there would be an increased spiritual atmosphere greeting those born "into the kingdom," and lives more spiritual would result. This may be putting it it strongly, but my convictions on this point are very decided. I am of the opinion that the missionary part of our work has had more care than the pastoral part of it, and the work has suffered in consequence. I believe this is generally recognized. The calls for "missionaries" are many, but, are not the calls for "pastors" equally as numerous? The old adage, "A bird in hand is worth two in the bush," might well be applied to our work. It is right to get all into the church we can, but by all means hold all we get. I do not mean to keep those in the church who transgress the law; but were there more pastors there would be less transgressors. I believe the church has seen this and is arising to meet the emergency. This is as it should be.

The work here has suffered because of the departure from the faith in the "dark and cloudy day." The Utah church now has twenty branches in the London District alone. They still hold to polygamy, when pressed upon the point, but refuse to discuss the matter in public. They are willing enough to discuss it, they say, but "they are counseled not to hold discussions, and they have to abide by that." This I have from one of their missionaries here.

I believe the work here has suffered from indiscreet acts of some of the Saints; but this is past, and I believe that all are slowly but surely learning wisdom, and that a brighter day is in store. Personally, I feel like pressing forward, and I think those with me are of like mind.

Many of the Saints are still staying away, and some are beginning to come again. May the Lord bless them all. We may be separated from the church in America by distance, but we have the same Spirit here, for God is near to all those that do his commandments. In this, locality makes no difference; and it makes no difference whether those commandments are baptism, confirmation, sacrament, the coming to the house of prayer on the Lord's day, or the paying of tithing; obedience to the things commanded brings a blessing in every place, while the one that saith, "I know him," and keepeth not his commandments, is one in whom the truth does not dwell; nor does locality ever make this statement untrue. Were this so, God would be a respecter of persons; but as God hath appointed the bounds of men's habitations, it necessarily follows that they must keep the commandments given there, that they may be worthy of inheritance in the bounds of Zion which God hath appointed to be the habitations of the children of the light.

My present address is 22 Eastbourne Road, Vicarage Lane, East Ham, Essex, England. Those interested please take note, for I wish all my mail to come here, as this is my home.

May we all endure unto the end faithful.

T. J. SHELDON.

LEICESTER, England, October 28.

Editors Herald: As per my appointment last conference, I entered the mission field in June last. I have tried to magnify my calling to the best of my ability. Many difficulties we experience in this country, in getting the truth before the people. There are few who seem to have any desire to listen, and still less to obey. We still keep preaching and sowing the seed by the wayside, and waiting with patience for the harvest.

We do a good deal of house to house visiting, talking with the people where we can, and leave tracts and call again in about a week. But many refuse to take the second tract, sometimes the door is closed before a word can be spoken. It seems a hard matter to reach the people in these large towns and cities; but as we are sent out to warn them we must do our duty, however unpleasant.

May the day soon come when the servants of the Lord can be sent out two by two, so that we can stand in the high ways and by ways.

WM. ECCLESTONE.

MANCHESTER, England, October 11.

Editors Herald: We are pleased that we can report progress; about forty have been baptized since the April conference. A good many of these baptisms were performed by the local ministry. The brethren of the traveling ministry are doing good work so far as we can judge. Bro. Sheldon is meeting with success in London. He has not been successful in baptizing many, but has marshaled the local ministry and got them interested in evangelical work, preaching in the streets when opportunities presented. The affairs of the church have not been in a good condition in that city for many years; here we are doing our best to get things into order, and the prospects seem bright for the future. There are more than sufficient to organize a branch at Eufield near Ponders End. We expect to organize a district in London when the branch is organized, which will give the work more prestige there and facilitate the general working to the good of the work in that city.

Bro. William Lewis and staff in Wales are moving along slowly but surely. They have removed considerable prejudice; have preached and distributed tracts to thousands on the streets in various parts of the principality. Some have been added to the church by baptism there.

Wales is a hard mission to proselytize in, because of the reproaches brought upon the church by the misconduct of the Utah Mormons in years gone by; but we are glad to report that prejudice seems to be disappearing before the light of the gospel and believe if the work begins and is continued many sheaves will be garnered home. We have some noble people there who have the work at heart and do all within their power to help the good cause along. Our late conference at Nantyglo was graced by a large measure of the Spirit; this indicating that God was pleased with them and acknowledged their efforts. Brn. Ecclestone and W. H. Greenwood are alive to the interests of the work, and are striving to magnify their calling.

Brn. Thorburn and Arber are doing a good work in Scotland, and we now have about ten members in Glasgow, whom we will organize into a branch between now and the new year. The branch in Hamilton is growing steadily under the efforts largely of the local ministry. A new opening has been effected in Keltie in the east of Scotland where Bro. Pratt and family are located.

We expect to concentrate our efforts there to raise up a branch in that place. We expect to organize a branch at Stockport, also one in Warrington, where we have more than sufficient to accomplish this. Our efforts to push the preaching of the word, and put local affairs into a more perfect conditions are ably seconded by the standing ministry throughout the mission. There are only one or two branches in the mission where local troubles seem to hinder the growth of the work, but a movement is on foot to adjust the difficulties. Therefore, peace and unity seem to obtain generally. The local and general authorities are trying to work harmoniously together for the establishment of righteousness and the salvation of men.

We anticipate putting forth a special effort to establish the work in the city of Liverpool. We have one brother living in the city, also a sister and one brother in Birkenhead just across the river. It is possible in time that one or two of the missionaries may locate there, as there are many facilities for traveling easily and cheaply to the various points of the mission, both by train and water. The Mormons have their headquarters of the European Mission in this city.

We are enjoying good health; feeling well spiritually and still are desirous to help build up the work of God among the sons of men.

Your brethren,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

JOHN W. RUSHTON.

GLADSTONE, Illinois, November 4.

Editors Herald: I would like if some of the elders would write a pamphlet on the subject of the gospel from Abraham to the present, showing clearly the living oracles that were committed unto our fathers; then the law that was added because of transgression, which laws the people were under until a recommitment of the lively oracles. Again through Jesus Christ and the apostles; and again after the apostasy of the church, and then in the fullness of times recommitted by the angel to Joseph, the Martyr.

Your brother,

J. L. RUST.

PONDREEK, Oklahoma, November 27.

Editors Herald: Quite a number are reading our literature. A Jewish merchant and wife have my Book of Mormon, "Restoration of Israel," "Book of Mormon Vindicated" by I. M. Smith, and other literature. I had quite a talk with them and explained the restored gospel to them. He said he was not an orthodox Jew, and that he could listen to me talk all day. As he listened his eye brightened with hope as I explained to him how Jesus came the first time and why he died and rose again. I told him the fullness of the Gentiles would soon come in, that Judah would be gathered home. I also explained the authority of the priesthood and the new covenant.

I think we should have more literature distributed. The Reformed Christian Scientists, Sabbatarians, and others are strewing theirs broadcast. A Catholic priest lectured here over a week. He tried to prove by the Bible and history that they were the only true church having authority, and that the keys of the kingdom were given to Peter; that Jesus said, "Upon this rock will I build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it;" and they were that church. The Catholics must be getting quite strong, as they have a good deal of confidence in their power to talk as plainly as they did here against the Protestants.

MRS. EFFIE McCULLOUGH.

EVERY, Texas, November 4.

Editors Herald: A few words from Eastern Texas. On October 11 H. O. Smith came in our midst and began to sound the gospel trumpet. He had just closed a two-week meeting at Lydia. He was greatly blessed with the spirit of his calling, and delivered some fine discourses which were highly appreciated. He goes from there to Detroit to do a few days preaching, and thence to Manchester, where he will join the writer for a series of meetings. We are glad to have him with us. His preaching will be of much and of lasting good. His close teaching caused the Saints to look into the gospel glass and see their lives, and we pray we will strive to improve our lives all along the line. Zion can only be built up by the pure in heart.

We feel very hopeful of the gospel in Eastern Texas. We know if we will only obey all the commands of God we shall be blessed greatly, as stated in Deuteronomy 11: 13.

I took a trip to Wilburton, Indian Territory, and found a dark cloud had rolled over the Saints there. And while there trying to help drive that evil power away, I felt that the Devil was trying to suppress a good work that was to be done in that town in the near future; but I pray that the Saints will live faithfully and have God's Holy Spirit to drive out all that is evil, and in the near future see a grand branch in Wilburton.

We have set the last Sunday in November to fast and pray for the Lord to bless us with his spirit in our district conference, which convenes December 5. All the branches in the Northeastern and Choctaw District will please unite with us that Sunday in fasting. Pray for the progress of the gospel in this district.

E. A. ERWIN.

BAY CITY, Michigan, October 30.

Editors Herald: We are enjoying some very spiritual meetings at present. The Lord meets with us in power, and many times we have the gifts of the gospel. It is very encouraging to the Saints when the Master sees fit to speak to them. The work is progressing slowly, but those who are in the work have their armor on and are at the front, and are looking for a harvest by and by.

I did not get to conference, on account of my work, but hope to go next spring. It does me as much good as a prayer-meeting to read some of the letters in the HERALD, and though I have only taken it a short time, I feel as if I could not get along without it.

Saints, we must press on with vigor. It is a duty and also a privilege to live so as to know that we are advancing. When we can see no advancement we are certainly going backward. My heart is in this work, and it is my determination to live so as to be a light to those around me and finally be the means of bringing some into the fold.

I hope this good work will find its way to the dark corners of the earth.

JOHN A. DOWKER.

908 North Johnson Street.

OENAVILLE, Texas, October 29.

Editors Herald: I am a stranger to many of your constant readers, but have often thought that I would write a letter to the HERALD. I feel quite alone sometimes, being the only Latter Day Saint in this part of the country. While I am alone in this respect I feel to rejoice that when I was young I was led to accept and obey the gospel, by Bro. D. H. Bays' preaching; one among the first in Texas. I feel sometimes that my loneliness in being away from the Saints is due to my unfaithfulness, that perhaps I have not been as prayerful as I should; but God being my helper I want to live nearer to him each day, and be more diligent in doing what I can for the advancement of his cause.

I have been praying that God would prepare the way and a people at this place, and that we may once more rejoice under the sound of this gospel and that many precious souls may be brought into his kingdom. I have two children that fully understand the plan of salvation, and I feel that if they had the opportunity they would obey. The church papers have been our only preachers, aside from the fireside talks that my father, H. L. Thompson, sometimes give us when he is with us.

Praying for the advancement of Zion, I remain,

FLORENCE BARNWELL.

PITTSBURG, Kansas, November 3.

Editors Herald: The outlook for gospel work in and near the Pleasant View Branch, Kansas, is encouraging at present. Bishop Ellis Short was with us Sunday, October 26, preaching at morning and evening hours. He enjoyed a marked degree of the Holy Spirit in his work, thus making deep impressions in our minds. Bro. Short's earnest, unassuming manner evinces honesty of purpose, and his efforts command the admiration and respect of sensible people, and result in much good to the work of the Lord. He gave our Sunday-school a talk on college debt, which we hope will be an incentive to material action in its behalf.

Bro. F. C. Keck on the 2d closed a ten-day meeting in Pittsburg. He obtained the use of a Sweedish Lutheran chapel which was well filled each evening, and good attention and interest were manifested. Bro. Keck's memory, so well stored with scriptural quotations, his fluency of speech as well as his humility, were attractive features of his work. We are hopeful of good results. There are about thirty Saints living in the city, most of whom are members of Pleasant View Branch.

Bro. John Kaler, of Joplin, Missouri, came and preached in our chapel on Saturday, November 1. He intended to occupy Sunday also, but heavy rainfall prevented. His discourse was very spiritual and interesting. He urged the necessity of faithful service to enable us to enjoy the privileges offered by the gospel. He related many experiences in his labors in the Australian mission, bearing witness to the wisdom of the church sending him there and of the saving power in the gospel. While relating many wonderful manifestations the Holy Spirit testified with him to the truthfulness of his statements, which brought prayers of thankfulness to our lips to our heavenly Father for his merciful and loving kindness to his children.

We have been blessed with splendid work from a number of our missionary brethren, which has been profitable to the work and much appreciated by the Saints.

We have a golden opportunity for missionary work in this part of the district. There are many openings for preaching all around us. There is a continued settlement almost as dense as a city, for twenty or more miles, including several large towns and coal-mining camps. A territory large enough for many missionaries and only now and then one who reaches a small part of this expanse!

May our Father help us to contribute our mite, coöperatively, that the gospel may reach the honest souls in all parts of the world.

Brn. Keck and Kaler went to Moundvalley, Kansas, to engage in a ten-day debate with a Reverend Roberts, of the Christian Church. We are praying for them, and we feel assured the work will suffer no loss in their hands.

We hope to have the help of the ministry from time to time in our branch. Ours is the only church holding services in this vicinity, and we have large attendance of the world's people.

May the Lord help us to stand firm, and labor with a living faith.

Hopefully,

MOLLIE DAVIS.

Conference Minutes.

Eastern Wales.—Convened at Nantyglo, September 20, 21, Apostle G. T. Griffiths assisted by Elder William Lewis and Thomas Gould, presidents of the conference. Charles Kelsey, secretary. Bishop Taylor and Elder Meridith were welcome visitors at the conference. Officers reporting: Missionaries William Lewis, John Davies, and Thomas Jones; Elders Thomas Gould, Thomas Griffiths, and John Jones; Priests E. J. Halford, George Morris, E. J. Trapp, and James Evans; Teachers George Mackey and Charles Kelsey; Deacon Thomas Ellis. Branches reporting: Cardiff 18, Lydney 32, Nantyglo 15; Bishop's agent's (Thomas Gould) report: Receipts, £37 19s. 6d.; paid out, £37 17s. 7½d.; balance 10s. 10½d. Audited and found correct. A petition from the Lydney Branch appealing against the action of last district conference in dispensing with the delegate system at the inception of the conference was read and considered, but by resolution was not granted. A request from the Lydney Branch to be released from the district was referred back for further consideration. A statement and decision in reference to David Edmunds and Grandma Johnson versus Nantyglo Branch by Apostle G. T. Griffiths and William Lewis, sub-missionary in charge, was read and accepted. Resolved, That no new rule be added, nor any of those altered, amended, struck out, or rescinded except by a two thirds vote of the district conference; that all notices for new rules, alterations, amendments, etc., be handed to the secretary in writing at least six clear weeks before the convening of conference at which they are to be presented, and signed by not less than two of the ministry. Resolved, That we add a committee to collect from the district record all resolutions now operative and present them for the consideration of the next conference. Thomas Gould, John Davies, and Charles Kelsey were appointed said committee. Resolved, That the resolution providing for the traveling expenses of the district officials be amended by disallowing their expenses to and from conference. Sunday, 11, a. m., brief speeches were delivered by the following brethren: Bishop Taylor, John Davies, Bro. Meridith, Thomas Gould, William Lewis, Thomas Griffiths, and Thomas Jones; 2.30 p. m., Saints prayer and testimony meeting; 6 p. m., preaching by Apostle G. T. Griffiths. District officials for the ensuing term were sustained after the following order: President, Thomas Gould; counselors, Thomas Griffiths and Thomas Jones; secretary, Charles Kelsey; treasurer, George Morris. Adjourned to meet subject to call of president.

Southern Missouri.—Conference convened in the Saints' (Bethel) church, five miles east of Ava, Douglas County, Missouri, October 11, at 10 a. m. District President A. M. Baker presiding; J. C. #### Convention Minutes.

Kirtland.—Sunday-school convention of the Kirtland District convened at Conneautville, Pennsylvania, October 6. Schools reporting: Sharon, South New Philadelphia, Conneautville, Byesville, Cleveland, Kirtland, and Akron. Moved and seconded that each Sunday-school of the district be requested to take up a collection to defray the expenses of the superintendent or assistant superintendent in visiting schools that need help most. Moved and carried that hereafter the district convention convene the Friday before the district conference. A literary program was rendered in the evening and was enjoyed by all.

An Appeal.

To the Saints and Members of the North and South Dakota District; Dear Brethren and Sisters: I feel constrained to issue a brief appeal to your generosity on behalf of the several church funds. First in importance is the regular tithing fund. I feel to thank those who made noble sacrifice during the past summer, when money was indeed scarce. Through much unselfish aid however, and the blessing of God, we tidied over, and this fall finds most of us in comfortable circumstances and a little surplus. Now what shall we do, wait for a few willing hands and hearts to shoulder the heavy burden? Surely not. We all desire to share the reward. Well, "Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Next in importance is the college fund. Nearly all have paid last year's subscription, but we propose starting a new one and have already received blanks from the Bishop for that purpose.

Thirdly, that new church building we have been talking about all summer. All we have spoken to personally have indorsed the movement as being sound and practical and the committee desires to give all an opportunity to assist in erecting the first Latter Day Saint church building in the Dakotas.

May God help us all to see our duty, and press forward to its accomplishment, with an eye single to his glory.

WM. SPARLING, Bishop's Agent.

Pastoral.

To the Officers and Members of both the Church and Religio of the Northern Michigan District; Greeting: It having been your choice to select us as your servants to have the supervisory charge of the district work, in both these departments of our Master's great cause, and feeling our own insufficiency and realizing how utterly impossible it would be for us to accomplish the work committed to our trust and that which our God would have us do, alone, we therefore solicit the cooperation of all bearing the name of our blessed Master to assist in this laudable effort to promulgate the gospel of salvation. And we know that our efforts will be fruitful and crowned with success when we each strive to bring himself (or the natural man) under subjection to the divine law, heeding the admonition of the inspired apostle, "Offer your bodies as living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God," and also the teaching of our Savior, "Let your light so shine that others seeing your good works may be led to glorify your Father in heaven." If we do these things we then become workers with God. And, Saints, there certainly is no higher or holier calling than to be a worker with God and his Son Jesus Christ. Much is required of us, and the success of the work in the final redemption of Zion depends largely upon the manner of life and conduct of those calling themselves the people of God.

As individuals, we can live so as to be useful and instrumental for good in the work of our Master, or we can become stumbling stones to others. Which shall it be? Are we building our characters of that material that will stand the test in that day spoken of by the Apostle Peter, "and the elements shall melt with fervent heat," or are our works such as shall be burned in that great day? May we all be wise, and by a godly walk and an upright life be ready to enter into the celestial kingdom, is our prayer. We trust the Religio work may prosper and flourish in our district, and to this end, dear Religians, may we all work.

There are some who doubtless would like to take part in the Religio work, but are isolated, so they can not attend a local. To such we would say, You can start a home class, and thus keep pace with the work. If you desire a home class, correspond with the superintendent of Home Class work, Bro. B. S. Lambkin, Kingsley, Michigan.

Those who have church literature that they wish distributed, or desire literature to distribute, inform Bro. C. G. Lewis, Boyne City, Michigan, who is superintendent of Gospel Literature Bureau. District secretary of Religio association is H. A. Doty, 419 North Spruce Street, Traverse City, Michigan, and Anna Harder, Glover, Bay County, Michigan, is treasurer.

Branches of the church and locals of the Religio in our district desiring assistance, please write us at the following addresses.

With good will to all, and malice towards none, we are as ever,

Your humble servants and brethren in gospel bonds,
J. A. GRANT,
Glover, Bay County, Michigan.
AMOS BERVE,
423 North Spruce Street, Traverse City, Michigan.

Silence Rescinded.

As a committee appointed by the Kirtland district conference to investigate and finally adjudicate difficulties obtaining in the Youngstown Branch, we hereby wish to give notice that we consider the action of Bro. Richard Baldwin, district ex-president, in demanding license and giving notice of silence, of elder D. M. Strachan, illegal, and not in harmony with the spirit of justice. Section 153, page 127, Book of Rules, last clause, provides: "In no case whatever should a branch or district president appoint a court to try a case in which he is to be a party, either as complainant or defendant, or in the issue of which he is directly a party in interest." Bro. Baldwin being the principal party aggrieved, we think it out of harmony with justice for him to exercise his official function in this case. Therefore Elder D. M. Strachan is released from further disability in this particular instance. V. M. Goodrich, District President; O. B. Thomas, sub-missionary in charge.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., November 4, 1902.

Notices.

To all Whom it May Concern: Elder John D. Bennett was expelled from the church by action of the stake conference at Pleasanton, Iowa, October 11, 1902, and the same was approved by the Lamoni Branch, November 4, and ordered published in THE SAINTS' HERALD. John Smith, president.

To the Saints and Members of the Mt. Grove Branch, of the Southern Missouri District: This is to again notify you that said branch was on July 12, 1902, declared disorganized, and, as per General Conference resolution, you are required to unite with the nearest or most convenient branch to where you reside; will you therefore kindly inform me as to your whereabouts, giving name of branch and district to which you may wish to unite, and I will forward letters of removal at once. If you know of any deaths, or change of names by marriages that have taken place the past two or three years in said branch, oblige me by sending items in full, and will some one give me the whereabouts of the Mt. Grove Branch minute-book, or forward it to the following address. Please write at once after reading this notice, lest it be overlooked or forgotten. J. C. Christensen, District Secretary, Beaver, Douglas County, Missouri, November 5, 1902.

Died.

CALLEY.—Elizabeth, wife of William Calley, was born September 13, 1878, died at her home in Bowie County, Texas, July 29. Was baptized by E. A. Erwin, May 29, 1900. She lived a Christian life, was a loving wife, a kind mother, and was loved by all who knew her. She leaves a husband and four children, a father and mother, one brother and four sisters, and a host of friends to mourn her loss. Funeral by E. A. Erwin.

Colonel Carroll D. Wright on Labor Unions.

Colonel Wright speaks so clearly and so freely that there need be little difficulty in comprehending the direct and simple tenets of his social philosophy. It is one of balanced optimism springing from a reasoned and deeply-rooted trust in the essential beneficence of the all-pervading and unceasing divine purpose which he perceives, written largely in the history of all ages and all society. He places religion ahead of all other social influences, while asserting that it must progress as men progress, and be refined and spiritualized as the ideals of humanity become more elevated and spiritual. He proclaims, as next in importance, the gospel of individual effort; the doctrine that personal improvement sought and obtained by means consistent with ethical principles must lead to general advancement. His broad eclecticism finds philosophical socialism fraught with an important message to mankind; but he regards it as most valuable, as a criticism which points out the blemishes in the present system. The latter is to be developed and improved, but it is a result of divinely appointed evolution and can not be superseded by any man-made formula. There is no universal remedy; no panacea for social ills; but there is, and must always be, a trend toward improved conditions. These are some of the broader generalizations. Some of his more specific conclusions may be hastily sketched. Labor and capital both have the right to organize, and the former can demand with perfect propriety the privilege of "collective bargaining." For capital to deny this is as absurd as it would be for a labor union to insist on meeting the individual security holders of a corporation, or the several members of a firm. Labor controversies should be avoided by intelligent bargaining, which implies a better understanding of mutual relations; but if, on account of the weakness of humanity, they occur, their settlement should be sought by conciliation or mediation. This implies that employees and employers shall meet face to face, on a common basis; each desiring to deal with perfect equity, mutually recognizing the integrity and manliness of both. Arbitration is, relatively, cumbersome, because it submits the decision of a trade question of possibly fundamental importance to a third party; but when other means fail, it is, in its voluntary form, an eminently civilized recourse. Compulsory arbitration would lead to results more disastrous than follow strikes or lockouts. It would mean the enforcement of wage rates that might be destructive to capital, or the evasion of the law, on the one hand; or driving men to their labor by force, on the other. The problem of labor is a continuing one, which can never be finally settled; which must ever develop new phases and difficulties; its friction can be moderated, but not eliminated. The parties to labor controversies, like those to all contests between intelligent beings, invariably claim that they stand for vital principles. In this contention they are sincere, but mistaken. Thus, in the report on the anthracite strike, Colonel Wright was able to say that although the difference in point of view had led to apparently conflicting statements, these were the consequences of position, and not of a desire to mislead. The fact that labor unions exist, and that workingmen can and do strike, is proof of the growth of intelligence; when intelligence is yet greater, differences will be settled without resort to industrial warfare. In the meantime, labor unions should be incorporated; they should develop a higher average of leadership; and employers should be much more considerate of the rights and welfare of employees.—From "Carroll D. Wright: A Character Sketch," by H. T. Newcomb, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November.

The Christmas (December) number of the Delineator is also the thirteenth anniversary number. To do justice to this number, which for beauty and utility touches the highest mark, it would be necessary to print the entire list of contents. It is sufficient to state that in it the best modern writers and artists are generously represented. The book contains over 230 pages, with 34 full-page illustrations, of which 20 are in two or more colors. The magnitude of this December number, for which 728 tons of paper and six tons of ink have been used, may be understood from the fact that 91 presses running 14 hours a day, have been required to print it; the binding alone of the edition of 915,000 copies representing over 20,000,000 sections which had to be gathered individually by human hands.

A phenomenon which in spite of its constant recurrence never ceases to cause amazement is the transmutation which originally sound educational ideas or plans undergo when introduced in ordinary school practice. Unless thoroughly familiar with the idiosyncrasies of the scholastic mind, one is for ever confronted with unforeseen results. Nowhere is the reign of routine more obstinate than in schooldom. Nor is this altogether evil. It insures, at least, a training in order, preciseness, punctuality, and system—virtues that most of us can not have too much pressed upon us. The exasperating features of it are that reforms are slow in winning an entrance; and when they are finally accepted they are so thoroughly metamorphosed in their practical application that often their very parents have difficulty in recognizing them. And, strangely enough, the more reasonable a proposition appears to the laic mind, the less likely it is to retain its essentials when put through the school mill. In fact, nothing seems more difficult to keep alive in school than common sense.

This is not at all due to pedagogy, as some suppose; for sound pedagogy is nothing more or less than systematized common sense as applied to educational problems. Logic is the real power behind the cast-iron routine. Diagramming and schematization of every form have a strange fascination for people who have been in the scholastic harness for a number of years. Far-seeing reformers have sought to establish newer pedagogical ideals which would annihilate this tendency. Thus it was hoped that psychology would place teaching upon a rational basis. The logic of the new science found almost immediate support, but the psychical part of it failed to receive due practical recognition. The inadequacy of the looked-for results gave birth to child-study. The plan of campaign became to make teachers realize that their business was to teach children, and not the mere logic of the school curriculum. Child-study even became the fashion; but in its transmutation it lost much of its original purpose and began to occupy itself chiefly with diagramming and schematizing.

Nevertheless, the progress from psychology to child-study has been productive of much good. As a result, the living child is receiving increased attention. Gradually the children will be individually benefited by the developing new attitude of teachers. But at best child-study can establish only humane and effective ways of teaching the young. Meanwhile, the problem of what to teach is of no less importance. This is a matter which can never be settled by the views of educators, which are in hopeless confusion. The question must be settled by periodical compromises between the practical and ideal demands of the times and of particular localities, on the one hand, and the results of expert investigations of the capacities and humane interests of the individual children, on the other. It is for this reason that the leaders of the people should welcome the pronounced popular tendencies toward insistence upon practical recognition by the schools of the economic demands of the present age, which have recently come to the surface.—By Ossian H. Lang in the October-December Forum.

THE DISPUTED POLYGAMY QUESTION.

We give below an editorial from the Deseret News, of October 28, 1902. We do this for the reason that some things stated therein are entitled to more than a passing notice:

JOSEPH SMITH AND POLYGAMY.

We publish to-day, in another part of this paper, an article which appears in the Arena for November, by President Joseph F. Smith. It is on a subject that would not have been pressed to the front, just now, but for a misleading, unnecessary, and incorrect communication to the same magazine in August last from the President of the "Reorganized" or "Josephite" Church.

We can understand the objections raised by that gentleman and others who reject the doctrine of a plurality of wives. They are in accord with the great majority of people in Christendom. We are familiar with all the arguments and sentiments entertained and presented against it. That it runs counter to the prejudices of centuries, deep-rooted and strongly grounded in the hearts of the multitude, we are fully aware. We also recognize the force of public opinion, materialized in statutory enactments and made binding upon citizens whether in the majority or in the minority. But we do not comprehend how persons occupying the position held by the leader of the "Reorganized" Church can maintain the notion that the doctrine of plural marriage was not introduced by his honored father now deceased, whose blood was shed by assassins and stains the earth with the blood of other martyrs for the truth.

The evidences that Joseph Smith, the Prophet, both taught and practiced the principle of a plurality of wives, as a divine institution revealed to him, are given in part by President Joseph F. Smith, whose article had necessarily to be brief so as not to extend over more space than that to which he replies. The proofs that have been and might be imparted to establish these facts, are sufficient to put the dispute beyond all question in the minds of fair and unbiased inquirers.

This may not appear to some people of any particular consequence. The real question in most minds when the subject is presented, is the right or wrong, the advisability or inadvisability of the practice of polygamy. But it should be understood that this is not just now up for discussion. The highest tribunal of the United States has upheld the action of the legislative and executive departments of the nation for the suppression of polygamy, and that ends the contention as to its practice. President Smith does not attempt to revive it, nor is there any desire on our part to discuss it on its merits or demerits. It is a simple question of fact which ought not to be distorted, falsified or avoided.

To deny that Joseph Smith, the Martyr, presented the revelation on celestial marriage to the leaders of the church during his lifetime, and showed his faith in the doctrine by his works, is to accuse his successors and their immediate associates, and the good and noble women who have given their testimony on this subject, of deliberate falsehood and in many instances of direct perjury, because they have given their evidence under oath. It was, therefore, eminently proper for President Joseph F. Smith, as the living head of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, to make his statement on this subject, over his own signature, in the same widely read magazine as that in which the misstatements were published to the world.

We commend the article to the consideration of the Latter Day Saints everywhere, although most of them are thoroughly satisfied as to the source of the revelation referred to, and have not the slightest doubt that it came through and was practically observed by the great Prophet, who under the inspiration and commandment of Almighty God and his Son Jesus Christ ushered in the last dispensation. It is also good reading for everybody who takes any interest in this branch of an important subject.

The News states that the article by the President of the Reorganized Church, which was published in the Arena magazine for August, 1902, was "misleading, unnecessary, and incorrect."

In the Arena article referred to, the President of the Reorganized Church gave a statement of facts, all of which are based upon proofs easily furnished, and which will be so furnished at any time and place where and when desired.

One of the questions before the American public is this: Whence the origin of polygamy in America, and who is the responsible human author of its introduction? An answer to this is necessary.

The News asserts that the question is not whether the dogma of plural marriage is right or wrong, but, whether Joseph Smith was a polygamist and taught the practice of it as a church tenet. The News further asserts that it can understand how the practice of polygamy runs counter to the prejudices of centuries, which prejudices are "deep-rooted and strongly grounded in the hearts of the multitude." But it can not "understand how persons holding the position held by the leader of the Reorganized Church can maintain the notion that the doctrine of plural marriage was not introduced by his honored father," etc.

In order to enlighten the editor of the News, and all who may think as he does, we will put the matter in such form that it may be understood by any one who can read and is willing to understand.

The sons of the Martyred Prophet and those who with them are members of the Reorganized Church, have persistently presented and maintained the following points of contention:

1. That the revelation of the Book of Mormon by the angelic messenger reinstated the gospel of Jesus Christ as the same was contained in the New Testament.

2. That neither polygamy, plural marriage, nor spiritual wifery is taught in the New Testament or the Book of Mormon.

3. That the revelations given to the Martyred Prophet and through him to the church and published to the church and the world during the lifetime of Joseph Smith, distinctly provide for the monogamous rule of marriage and command the church to observe that rule, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart and cleave unto her and none else."—Revelation given in 1831 and published in Doctrine and Covenants, in all issues of the book from 1835 up to 1876.

"For marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made."—Revelation given 1831, published to the church and the world in Doctrine and Covenants in 1835, and subsequently up to 1876.

Based on these revelations the church formulated and adopted a declaration of belief in monogamous marriage in solemn assembly, on August 17, 1835. This also was published in Doctrine and Covenants from 1835 to 1876.

4. There is no provision for polygamy or plural marriage in the Holy Scriptures as the same has been given to the church by the "Martyred Prophet."

5. That neither in the Bible, the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, nor the revelations of God to the church and published during the lifetime of the prophet is there specific warrant for the practice of spiritual wifery, plural marriage, or polygamy.

This is sufficient to show that the "prejudice deep-rooted and strongly grounded" against the practice of plural marriage has for its source and continued existence the word of God.

The revelations given to the church commanded a respect for the laws of the land, and an observance of and submission to them, with the assurance, in so many words, "He that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land."

There is no ambiguity in this statement. It is clear and should be easily understood. The News must surely admit this.

This statement, coming from the source it did, and at the time it was received, is susceptible of but one interpretation, that none of the laws of God given or enacted by him up to that date required the doing of any act by the church as a whole, or by any of its members as individuals, the doing of which would require either member or church to disregard or break any existent law of the land. Further, if God spake the truth of himself when he said, "I am God, I change not," then the conclusion is clear that at no time thereafter would God give a command, the keeping of which would involve the breaking of the laws of the land on the part of those to whom the command was given.

If at the time this statement was made God contemplated giving a command which would require the practice of plural marriage contrary to the inhibition which he had already given to the church, and which leads back to the morn of creation, then he was dealing deceitfully with those to whom he was giving commands, and denying his own declaration of unchangeability of character.

It is very strange, and inconsistent as it is strange, that men professing belief in the unchangeableness of God can pretend a faith in the restoration of the gospel, accept revelation as restored with it, contend that the gospel was reestablished in its fullness through Joseph Smith as a prophet chosen for the express purpose of establishing a church which was to be the organized human aggregation to preach that gospel to the world, accept and adopt a principle of faith and conduct prescribed to that church to govern its members in regard to the domestic relation, declared to be the will of God and his law "before the world was made;" and at the same time contend that the prophet through whom all this was done, in his own person, by word and act, disregarded the sacred character of his office and calling, violated the laws of the land he was charged to keep, proved recreant to the solemn vows he made with the wife of his youth, for which he must answer in eternity, and disregarded and broke the laws given of God to the church through him by teaching and practicing contrary to those laws.

It is because of these claims made by the editor of the News and his fellow churchmen that the sons of the Prophet Joseph Smith deny that their father was guilty of teaching and practicing plural marriage as alleged by the News.

The evidence offered by the News is not reliable, to the sons of the Prophet, for several reasons. To them it is incredible that he should have so soon discarded his obligations to teach the faith, doctrines, and practices which had come to him in all the sanctity of "Thus saith your Lord and your Redeemer." They are willing to concede that he was human, fallible, and possibly weak, and that he may have made mistakes. They are not willing to believe him to have been a common criminal, a lawbreaker of both the laws of God and the laws of the land.

At no time in the Prophet's life was he in any State or Territory the laws of which would permit him to marry or to live with, as his wives, more than one woman. If he did so marry more than one woman, or live with more than one as his wives, it was an act of open disregard of the laws of God known to the church, and the statute enactments of the state of Illinois, of which he and the church over which he presided were citizens, or it was an act of secrecy of such a nature as made him a deceiver hiding from the just application and enforcement of the law. Such an act as often as repeated, if it was so repeated, as the News would have the sons of the Prophet believe, would make the life of the religious teacher a double one; one, an open, honest-appearing one to the world and the general church; the other, a secret, hidden life to a few, lawbreakers like himself, shunning the light of day, knowing himself to be a transgressor.

It is because of this that the sons of the Prophet challenge the evidence upon which the News and those for whom it speaks expect them to keep silent, and believe their father to have been a criminal, or worse.

It is because of the position which the son of the Prophet occupies as a "leader," that he maintains the "notion that the doctrine of plural marriage was not introduced by his honored father."

Eight years and two months after Joseph Smith's death, President Brigham Young introduced a document to the attention of his followers in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, which he stated had been under his personal custody. It was not the original, if there had been one, but was an asserted copy. To account for the absence of the original, President Young asserted that Emma, wife of the Prophet, burned it.

The Prophet's wife emphatically declared until her death that she never burned, saw, or heard read that document. She further stated to her sons and to others that her husband had no other woman as a wife, or otherwise, to her knowledge.

The sons of the Prophet knew their father and their mother. Joseph, Frederick, and Alexander were old enough to remember their father quite well. The oldest son was nearly twelve years old, and was as well informed as to affairs of the household as boys of that age usually are. He knew his father as a kind, pleasant, and loving man. He never saw nor heard any sort of quarreling or bickering between his father and mother. He has always revered his father's memory as an honest, straight-forward man. He lived as an inmate of his mother's family until he was twenty-four years of age. He knew his mother to be an upright, honest, truthful woman, one whose word was to be relied on as one who was not afraid to tell the truth, no matter whom it hurt. She had no compromise to offer to evil and wrong.

With these memories of his parents fresh and clear in his mind and the burden of their honor resting upon him, he has dared to believe his mother's statements regarding his father's conduct, preferring to credit her word than to accept the testimony of President Brigham Young, the only man who ever knew his mother and called her a liar. This son of the Prophet has also preferred to believe that his father, as a prophet and man of God, did not, either in teaching or in practice, so disregard the commands of God, and the doctrines revealed by Christ to the church through him, as to become the transgressor he must have been if he did what the News and its supporters state he did.

The News seems to think that "to deny that Joseph Smith, the Martyr, presented the revelation on celestial marriage to the leaders of the church during his lifetime, and showed his faith by his works, is to accuse his successors and their immediate associates, and the good and noble women who have given their testimony on this subject, of deliberate falsehood and in many instances of direct perjury, because they have given their evidence under oath."

What records kept by the quorums of the leaders of the church have ever cited, date and circumstance given, to show that Joseph Smith, the Martyr, presented a revelation on plural marriage, or polygamy, authorizing its practice, during his lifetime?

How does it happen that for over forty years the son of the Martyr has been denying his father's complicity in the teaching and practice of polygamy, and challenging the evidence. And what sort of evidence has been offered? Affidavits. Does not the News editor know that when some of the women whose names were affixed to those affidavits were confronted by a cross-examination they either refused to answer the questions put to them to test the accuracy of their testimony, or so prevaricated that their testimony failed? If he does not know this he is not so familiar with the controversy as he should be.

We feel quite secure in making the assertion that had the son of the Prophet been permitted to be present when some of those affidavits were made, with the privilege of cross-examination by a competent attorney, it would have fared ill with some of the evidences offered.

If the statement of President Brigham Young is not to be questioned, how does it happen that he kept that remarkable document in his possession so long (eight years and two months) after the death of Joseph Smith?

How does it happen that it was not presented to the church before August 29, 1852?

How does it happen that it was not then presented to the quorums or councils, for an examination and approval, or rejection?

How does it happen that when on August 29, 1852, that document was presented, no discussion as to its truth or falsity was allowed, and the matter put to the test, with the affirmative and negative vote called for?

How does it happen that a copy only was presented? How happened it that the original was not preserved?

If Emma Smith burned the original with the consent of the Prophet, her husband, what right had President Young with a copy?

If Joseph Kingsbury copied the original at the instigation of Bishop Whitney, his father-in-law, by what authority did Bishop Whitney order such copy to be made?

Where was this copy during the time elapsing between July 12, 1843, the date it is alleged to have been given, and the death of Joseph Smith, June 27, 1844?

How came this alleged revelation to come into the possession of President Young?

The evidence offered by the News and its supporters is in itself contradictory and unreliable, and taken at its best shows that what was done was done in a secret, clandestine manner. There was nothing about it open and accessible to daylight investigation. The doctrine, if introduced as this evidence states, was so introduced privily, a sort of "mouth to ear" communication. The practice of plural marriage was carried on in secret and clandestinely. The fear of daylight and discovery was always an attendant. If nothing else would challenge the disbelief of the son of the prophet in the evidences he is asked by the News to accept, this element of secrecy is enough.

The News does not hesitate to put the taint of dishonor, deceit, and criminality upon Joseph Smith, the Martyr, accusing him of committing acts, which if he did them, makes him to have been a lawbreaker, doing in secret acts criminal in the laws of God and man. The News not only does this, but asks the son of the Prophet to believe this awful arraignment. The News also virtually asks the son of the Prophet's only wife, his mother, to believe that mother to have been dishonest and untruthful. These things the son refuses to believe. And the News assumes to think it an unpardonable thing in the son of the Prophet, the President of the Reorganized Church, to so disbelieve.

We congratulate the News upon the admission that it recognizes "the force of public opinion, materialized in statutory enactments and made binding upon citizens whether in the majority or in the minority."

This should have been recognized long ago; and if it had been, no such struggle between polygamists and the laws would have been had as has been carried on in the attempt to force the American public to condone and permit the practice of plural marriage. Joseph Smith lived and died in a State where public opinion had thus "materialized in statutory enactments," and his son declines to believe that his father was either fool, or knave enough to disregard or defy those enactments.

There was nothing misleading or incorrect in our Arena article for the August number.

The News states the present legal status of the matter thus:

"The highest tribunal of the United States has upheld the action of the legislative and executive departments of the nation for the suppression of polygamy, and that ends the contention as to its practice."

Does it? We hope so.

But what does the statement of the News mean? It means this, that the high tribunal referred to has declared that the law passed for the suppression of polygamy is constitutional, i. e., it is in accord with the principles of the Constitution of the United States. It follows then that as the Constitution was before the establishment of the church organized in 1830, that church could not adopt, teach, and practice a dogma contrary to, or not in accord with that instrument. Moreover, it is pertinent to the question at issue, Did Joseph Smith so teach and practice? The News says he did; we say that if he did he violated the principle of constitutional law. We believe that he did not do this.

Again, it is pertinent to the issue, God raised up wise men to frame the Constitution. Those men were by so much raised up to announce what God knew to be the constitutional law which he intended to govern all citizens of the United States to be organized under that constitution. The principles of the law to govern in the domestic relation was one of them and that was monogamic. In strict regard to this principle he gave the church what he said was the rule instituted before the world was made.

It is then not only reasonable to conclude that God would not, and did not give a command to the church, or to Joseph Smith, that would require a disregard and violation of the constitutional law of the land which he had by wisdom directed men to frame and knew would be enacted; but it is just to God and to Joseph Smith as well.

Joseph Smith, the Martyr, knew this, hence he would not and did not violate the law as the News avers.

In the language of the revelation given to the church not to break the law of the land, but to keep that law until Jesus came, we close, "Behold, here is wisdom."

"VICTIMS OF ALCOHOL."

Under the above heading the following appeared in the Chicago Record-Herald, for Sunday, November 9. We clip this because the SAINTS' HERALD has always been an advocate of temperance, especially using the word as opposed to the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage. The clipping is interesting as showing some of the evils accruing to society from the abuse of intoxicants, and some of the foolish ways in which it is used to form the evil habit:

London, November 8.—One of the king's physicians touched upon a most important subject, which greatly concerns social conditions in Great Britain, in a recent address upon "Present Day Dangers of Intemperance Among Women and the Best Methods of Meeting Them."

Lack of occupation and childlessness among women whose husbands leave them during the day, worry, bodily weakness, "nagging," and pains which women have to suffer, he mentioned as some of the causes. Cases of heredity were rare, and the encouragement of example in youth was more often the cause. Drink, he said, might become a disease, but it started as an indulgence. Drugs, shampooing, and galvanic treatment were all described as of little use as cures. Rest and removal of the cause were the only real remedies.

Even doctors and nurses, he said, were foolish enough to say, Why deprive women patients of the thing which gives them comfort? It was necessary to stop that sort of talk. It could be done, provided there were no friends who were such criminal lunatics as to smuggle in alcohol. The lecturer would have teetotal doctors and nurses.

Doctor Barlow having dealt with the medical aspect of the questions, the Bishop of London added that he had had case after case of character and life spoiled among the rich by alcohol and morphia. Turning to the East End, which he knows so well, the Bishop said that out of one thousand women in an East End workhouse to-day, five hundred were there from alcohol, and that ninety per cent of women with children in the workhouse infirmary were there through alcohol.

Apropos of the drink question, William S. Caine, M. P., who has discovered some startling facts in connection with the drink question in India, will bring them before the House of Commons. Within the last few years there has been a twenty-five per cent increase in the consumption of liquor in India, although the population has increased only seventeen and one half per cent. Mr. Caine will suggest that the government apply the local veto act to India to support the better class of Mohammedans and Hindus in their attempt to prevent the spread of alcoholism.

Liquor is, of course, a government monopoly in India, and temperance people here are agitating against the continuance of these conditions.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Has a priest a right to read a paragraph or a portion in Doctrine and Covenants, and then speak on it in a prayer and testimony meeting if he is not a branch officer, but a member of the branch? Or has such to be done only from the stand when the presiding officers never speak of those books or their teachings?

Any person a member of the church, whether member, priest, or other officer, may so speak, if he desires so to do. It is quite frequently done in small branches, or at times when the meeting is what is known as "slack;" that is, when members are slow in speaking and time is passing unemployed. The answer to this question is so obvious, we wonder it should be asked.

Did the church intend by resolution that all Saints should join some branch, even if they should be from fifty to two hundred miles from any branch?

It was intended by resolution that all members should be enrolled in branches, where it was at all practicable.

The resolution reads that all members should have their names enrolled in the branch nearest, or most convenient for them. Where members are isolated, distance cuts no figure; they should ascertain the nearest or most accessible branch and be enrolled there, though it might be that they might never live in the immediate vicinity of the branch itself. The enrollment is for the purpose of keeping track of the actual membership.

There are numbers of branches some of whose members reside hundreds of miles from the particular branch where their names are enrolled.

All members of the church are amenable to the branch nearest to where they live for good conduct and may be dealt with by the officers for misbehavior upon proper complaint, with due labor, notice, etc., as provided in the Rules of Order. No member should permit himself to think that he can be dealt with only by the officers of the branch of which he may be a member, and from which he may be absent by distance.

Such absentee members must answer to the officers and membership of the branch or district nearest to him. The branch to which an absent member may belong can not interfere to prevent proper dealing with the absentee by officers of branch or district where the absentee may be residing or sojourning. A member residing in one branch but having membership in another branch may be dealt with, for sufficient cause, and disfellowshipped. When such action is had, the branch where such disfellowshipping takes place, should notify the branch of which the person disfellowshipped is a member. When due and proper notice of said action of disfellowshipping is received by the branch of which the one disfellowshipped was a member at the time of such action being taken, the branch should enter the report of the action upon their record and drop the name from their roll of membership.

A COMPROMISING ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Under the headline of "The Lectures on Faith," the Deseret News of November 10, after stating by whom the Lectures on Faith were delivered, and how they came to be published in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, has the following:

From this it appears that the Lectures on Faith were delivered during the winter of 1834, that is, during the closing months of the year. They were placed in the Doctrine and Covenants and with the revelations and commandments in that book were accepted, the whole volume being received as a law and rule of faith and practice to the church, at a general assembly, held in Kirtland, August 17, 1835. It should be observed that these lectures are not designated as revelations. A course of instruction was given to classes of the elders by several leading church officers, and in that course these theological discourses were delivered, and were subsequently accepted as expounding sound doctrine and principle. The revelations and commandments in the book occupy a different position. They contain the word and will of Almighty God through the Prophet Joseph Smith, and are so accepted by the church.

The question occurs to the ordinary seeker after knowledge that if the "whole volume" of the Doctrine and Covenants as adopted by that General Assembly, August 17, 1835, is a "law and rule of faith and practice to the church," by what rule of law, ethics, policy, or government, was the section on marriage which provides for but one companion in wedlock for either man or woman, except in case of death, taken out of the book and one for plural marriage, or polygamy, inserted in its place, without the action of a similar general assembly authorizing such taking out and inserting?

When, where, and by what authority did "the word and will of Almighty God," as expressed in the revelations and commandments in said book, as understood and expressed by the article on marriage adopted by that General Assembly, August 17, 1835, cease to be operative and of force in the church as "a law and rule of faith and practice," and become void and of none effect?

ESQUIMAUX DECREASING.

The Scientific American for November 15 contains the following interesting note:

"Lieutenant Peary has brought home news of a mysterious epidemic which is raging among the Esquimaux. Indeed, so terrible were the ravages of the disease, that many of the Esquimaux at Smith Sound begged him to take them south. Twelve years ago the Esquimaux numbered three hundred. In 1897 Peary found that their number had been reduced to two hundred thirty-four. It is now probable that these most northern inhabitants of the globe do not exceed two hundred in number. This is but one instance of a great number that may be cited. All through the Arctic region the inhabitants are fast disappearing. The Alaskan Esquimaux have been decimated. When explorers first went among them, their number was believed to be from two thousand to three thousand. Now it is thought that hardly more than five hundred people can be counted from Point Barrow to the Aleutian Islands. The lot of these unfortunate natives has been made harder to bear by reason of the destruction of sea life by the whalers who harried the Alaskan coast. The extermination of the seal, walrus, and polar bear have likewise done their share to embitter the cup of the northern races. In Southwest Greenland a similar condition of affairs exists. The ten thousand natives are barely holding their own, although largely aided by the Danes. Labrador natives are likewise decreasing. Twenty years ago they numbered thirty thousand; now they number barely fifteen thousand souls. Two decades ago the entire population of the North was estimated at thirty thousand. It is probable to-day that the number has been almost cut in two."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

J. C. Clapp wrote from Independence, Missouri, November 14: "Under the weather still, but will soon be in the field."

Under date of September 30, Bro. J. W. Wight wrote to Bishop Kelley: "The work is in very good condition here, and the Saints as a rule are a very devout people. The spirit of gathering seems to be taking a very strong hold here. We expect a twelve-night debate here in Melbourne."

J. M. Baker wrote from Cherokee, Iowa, November 10: "All is moving quite well in our district, except that we have not half enough men to do missionary work. Those who are here are busy as bees. We miss Bro. Sutton, who was compelled to go to look after home affairs for a while. I hope God may so rule that he can return soon."

Sr. Mary Wooding, of Burlington, Iowa, in sending in three new subscribers for the HERALD, says: "I am sure there is no paper more fruitful of lasting good, hence more worthy of patronage."

On November 4, Peter Anderson wrote from Christiania, Norway: "About two weeks ago I came to this place, and feel impressed to make a strong and protracted effort to establish the work here, if needed financial backing can be had. To-night I leave for Porsgrund to start Sanheden's Banner. I shall return here soon and secure a hall and start regular services. To all appearances it is the most opportune time and place for the work I have seen yet; but there will be strong opposition. Bro. Enge is located at Christiansand, in the west, where he reports several interested. At Grimstad, a little farther east, where the branch is located, a few are interested, and Bro. Kronberg, the presiding elder, doing what he can. Bro. Muceus, at Porsgrund, near the center of the southern coast, also reports progress. When I get started here, and we get the Banner going, we expect this to make a fair showing. I printed twenty thousand copies of an address to the Scandinavian people, thousands of which are now in circulation, and calculated to draw the line between us and the Utah people. Much prejudice exists on account of the doings of the Brighamite elders; but when we get the people's ears they seem readily to recognize the distinction. We all feel hopeful of accomplishing a good work."

Sr. Charles Irwin wrote from Sparta, Michigan, November 13, noting change of address, they having moved from Coral to Sparta. She says: "I miss the HERALD when I do not have it. My husband has gone to Knox, Indiana, to labor this winter. It seems a long way from home."

W. H. Garrett, Independence, Missouri, November 15, says: "Everything here moving along fairly well; baptizing quite frequently. Four last Sunday, one or more for to-morrow, besides additions from other branches on letters."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Doukhobors have been taken in charge by the Canadian police and are being forced to return to their homes. Much suffering has been the result of their fanatic crusade.

There seems to be an unusual number of baptisms this last summer and this fall. Nearly every district conference report and elder's letter bring tidings of the moving of the waters. The ministers in the field are as a rule busy in their different places of labor, and report continued support of the Spirit of Master. And why should it not be so? The Master said, "And lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Whoever takes the field to preach the "acceptable year of the Lord," and will keep within the lines of the commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," will, of necessity, preach the truth. And, no matter what forces may combine against him, he need have no fear; the truth will stand, and abide for ever.

B. F. Ordway, of 234 Hancock Street, Peoria, Illinois, on account of lung trouble, has arranged to go to Southern California for several months, expecting to stop in several places on the way out, in New Mexico and Arizona. If there are any Saints in the two last-named States, along the line of the Santa Fe, who keep boarders, he desires to hear from them.

Julius E. Cable and wife, of Broad River, Connecticut, desire that as many of the Saints as desire to do so will fast and pray on the first Sunday in December in behalf of their little boy who has been greatly afflicted for four years. They expect to have him administered to then, and they desire the prayers of the Saints that God may manifest his power.

J. W. Rushton writes us from Hamilton, Scotland, stating he had read G. T. Griffiths' new book, and is well pleased. He thinks it will do much good, if widely read.

L. C. Hamilton wrote from Hamlet, Kentucky, November 12, renewing his subscription for HERALD. He depends upon the HERALD for his preaching, as prejudice among the outsiders there is so high that the Saints have been forbidden to hold preaching services under penalty of having their houses burned and being shot.

The following new tracts are now for sale: No. 36, "Can Belief Alone Save?" Price ten cents per dozen. No. 208, "Teachings in Contrast." The teachings of the Reorganization and the Utah church in parallel columns. Price per dozen, fifteen cents.

Hancock County, Illinois, recently held a special election on the proposition to change the county-seat from Carthage to Warsaw. A majority of the voters favored the change, but not the necessary three fifths did. Hence the county-seat remains at Carthage.

We have received a marked copy of the Davenport Republican for November 9, in which Bro. S. F. Cushman clearly points out how we differ from the Utah church.

Sr. Viola Ritter wrote us on the 11th from San Francisco, California, saying she is now living at 820 Treat Avenue, and would like to have some of the San Francisco Saints call upon her, so she can learn where they meet to worship.

Bro. M. Bramston, Newcastle, New South Wales, Australia, forwards one pound, ten shillings, for the benefit of Graceland College, and expresses the hope that the Saints will rally to the accomplishment of the work of placing the college in a proper state, and liquidating the debt incurred in building, and running expenses. It is a hopeful sign when these Saints in far-off Australia so cheerfully come forward to contribute to the establishment of the educational interests of the church. Are there any near by who have forgotten to perform their part?

Indications are that a number of local Religio Societies will have an earnest, enthusiastic "Grace-land rallying day."

Note the advertisement of HERALD publications on last page of this week's issue. Now is the time to order for Christmas. The business manager reports a large stock of books on hand, and is prepared to fill orders promptly. Send them in.

The Graceland College authorities are arranging a lecture course for this winter. We commend the efforts, and wish them success.

Bro. Joseph Chester has written to Bishop Kelley, remitting two dollars on the college debt, and expressing feelings of sadness that the debt is not paid. He says talk is cheap, and that the thing for us to do is to show how much we love the work by each making his best efforts to do his part in paying the college debt.

By a marked copy of the Platte County Argus, published at Columbus, Nebraska, issue November 12, we note that on November 10 a party of Columbus citizens "surprised" our worthy Bro. and Sr. H. J. Hudson, the occasion being their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary. Bro. Hudson is in his eightieth year, and Sr. Hudson in her seventy-seventh. That Bro. Hudson is still quite an active man is evidenced by the fact that he is at present acting as police judge in Columbus, during the absence of Judge Curtis. We extend congratulations to our worthy brother and sister.

The Brooklyn Eagle recently made the significant statement that within a radius of ten blocks of the Eagle office there are twelve abandoned churches. Some are being used for other purposes; but in about six cases the buildings are idle, dilapidated, and neglected, being advertised "for sale." In the area covered by the twelve abandoned churches the population is greater than ever before. Whether the abandonment of the church buildings is due to decrease of church-goers, or to the congregations moving into better buildings and locations, is not stated. The mere fact that the church buildings have been abandoned means little unless the causes for abandonment are known.

Thousands of Americans are leaving the United States to secure homes in Canada, where special inducements are being held out to farmers to locate upon Canada's immense tracts of undeveloped land.

Bro. J. M. Terry writes from Oakland, California, that on November 9 he baptized Miss Bessie Trenchgrove, the estimable granddaughter of Sr. Moore.

Our new press is here, and the work of putting it in place and working order will progress as rapidly as possible. Hurry up with your new subscriptions, to help pay for the new machine. Note the call, in another column, by the Board of Publication.

The financial law is a question which seems to be agitating the minds of many Saints just now. The comparatively recent organization of stakes, we presume, is largely accountable for this agitation. It is closely allied to the "gathering," anyway. There are new problems ahead to be solved, and unity will be a prominent factor in the solution.

Sr. Ellen Davies, of Bevier, Missouri, sends in three new subscribers and says that she hopes to send more soon. Surely this sister shows her faith by her works.

Sister Allie Thorburn, writing from Glasgow, Scotland, on the 7th inst., reports the organization of a Sunday-school in Glasgow. She is pleased with the prospects.

Bro. Robert Johnson, of Lamoni, has for the past two months been giving his time and attention to superintending the Saints' Home. Bro. Johnson is a good, practical farmer and business man, and his services are appreciated in the Home interests.

WHEN the prophet uttered the words, "Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest to your souls," he knew whereof he affirmed. The old ways, the ways established by the Mighty One, they are the best. Whoso seeketh life therein shall walk safely and find rest to his soul.

NO MATTER how obscure a man may be in the society in which he lives, if he is faithful to his principles, evades no just responsibilities, and does good to those by whom he is surrounded consistently with his profession, that man will, sooner or later, have an influence for good to a greater extent than some who may be in so-called higher walks of life. It is the reward that merit receives at the hands of just men.

EFFICIENCY.

Efficiency is a word which we often hear and read of; but how few pause to give the thought and consideration of its meaning that it deserves. We talk of, read of, and hear of an efficient ministry, efficient prayers, efficient societies, efficient schools, efficient teachers, and efficient programs.

The universal need of the present age in every phase of life, socially, commercially, politically, and religiously is efficiency. Because of the lack of efficiency much disappointment, disaster, and waste is caused. The one great need of the churches of to-day voiced in more or less eloquent complaints from almost every pulpit is efficiency. They need an efficient creed, efficient preachers, and efficient disciples or adherents. The dearth of an adequate and efficient philosophy, creed, or belief produces, as it can only do, inefficiency in preacher and hearers alike. Neither rhetoric, logic, nor eloquence can supply the missing power.

A locomotive may be built as perfectly as is possible for human skill and ingenuity to suggest; yet, lacking the motive power, the steam, or the "efficiency," it is a useless piece of mechanism, an elaborate ornament. But if given the efficiency, the boiler supplied with water, the tubes filled with throbbing steam, the firebox filled with gleaming fuel, this complex mechanism presents a different picture. Across plains and prairies, over hill and dale, through thronging cities busy with commercial life, that snorting, panting horse of iron, breathing fire and vapor of smoke, carries and transports not only multitudes of travelers in the elegant, luxurious passenger-cars, but hurls the ponderous freights of commercial and natural produce far and wide.

The one picture shows an inefficient ornament, the other an efficient means of locomotion.

A few months ago in England and America great anxiety prevailed because one of the Atlantic greyhounds, the "Etruria," had lost its efficiency in the shape of its propeller. Under ordinary circumstances this magnificent steamer, defying wind, and waves, and tides, plows its way through sunshine and storm, day and night, across the trackless deep, bearing its cargo of precious souls and costly merchandise to its destination. But when the propeller had gone, it no longer having the efficiency necessary to accomplish its work, was washed to and fro as helpless as a log, a source of danger to itself and other vessels, until taken in tow by another vessel, and after days of anxiety safely docked to be repaired.

Efficiency means "the power to produce results." We believe that the church to-day needs this power both generally and locally, collectively and individually; also in Sunday-school and in the Religio-Literary Society. Efficiency is what we all desire and are struggling to attain. Philosophers have sometimes called it "the struggle for existence," and to a large extent it is correct. The survival of the fittest simply means the survival of the efficient.

The continued wail of the various churches is but a repetition of history; because of their inefficiency, their unfitness to be of practical help to mankind, they must atrophy and perish; the end is natural and scientific. Only the efficient can survive the test of utility.

We believe that our church and its broad creed of "all truth" is an efficient means calculated to produce salvation, physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually, here and now as well as in eternity. Our branches or local churches are equipped with a set of ministers, as an efficient means, result in the conserving of its interests, the upbuilding and strengthening of its members; and where we find that the branch is spiritually run down, invariably the cause is found in the inefficient performance of duty on the part of those whose duty it is to administer the law given as an efficient means or process of development. The Sunday-school, if efficient, should produce as a result boys and girls, young men and maidens, not only with aspirations for greater usefulness in wider fields of labor opening before them, but also equip them to a large extent with the requisite power resultant from the acquisition of knowledge the Sunday-school is designed to bestow. How very needful it is that the teachers aim to acquire a high standard of efficiency, for an efficient school can only exist where this quality is cultivated by the teachers.

I understand the Zion's Religio-Literary Society was primarily intended to supply a long-felt need, filling up, as it were, the gap between childhood and manhood or womanhood, to take hold of the developing mind just bursting into maturity, carrying it to and through advanced stages of education. What a great mission and responsible occupation this is! Youth is the romantic period of life. At this time how hungry, as a rule, is the mind for knowledge—an almost insatiable appetite for information. To a large extent this period of life is the "turning point," the "parting of the ways," "the pivot" upon which life's history revolves. How often have we seen, heard, and read of lives, which hitherto had been exemplary because of efficient training in home, school, and seminary, that now, because there has been no restraining influence, no guiding hand to steer youth's frail bark out of the elementary estuary of life's stream, across "the bar," into the ocean of life, get caught in the vortex of life's romantic and evanescent pleasures only to be cast up a sorry, ghastly wreck like multitudes scattered upon the shore! All the fair visions of future utility and possible greatness fade away and only the blackness of disappointment and despair remain. Hence we believe that the influence of this society can be, and is, for good; but how great the need for efficiency in this department of the plan of physical, moral, mental, and spiritual salvation! How careful those, upon whom devolves the responsibility of educating, whether in day-school, Sabbath-school, or Zion's Religio-Literary Society, or in the church, ought to be in striving for efficiency as teachers, instructors, ministers, and examples; each and all being capable of producing the results that must ensue from these various means, methods, or processes. The gospel can not be charged with inefficiency, for it emanates from God; but the supreme question is, Are the administrators of the gospel law efficient as such?

The language of Paul in his admonition to Timothy can very oppositely be transposed, making it read "Study to show thyself efficient." How many of our churches are languishing because of inefficient administration? Does not the history of the past bear melancholy witness to the fact that the great ecclesiastical disasters are traceable, not to opposition, persecution, nor even martyrdom from the outside, but to inefficiency within?

To-day, our country (Great Britain) has suffered and been humiliated because of internecine inefficiency. The disasters of the late Boer war were the direct results of inefficiency both of home administration and on the part of the officers, and our press now is clamoring for efficiency, our great national need. Can we not take warning from these sorrowful examples, and in the great conflict with sin and evil gather up our energies and forces in the spirit of efficiency and concentrate them against the serried ranks of moral and spiritual wickedness in high places?

Of course it may be comparatively easy to talk and write of efficiency; but how are we to get it? In two ways: First, by prayer; second, by knowledge. We are all familiar with the saying of James, "the effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much." This is simply another way of expressing the efficiency of prayer, or the prayer capable of producing results. We need more efficiency in prayer to-day; prayer born of implicit faith, unswerving trust, that can, has, and will again, produce the righteous desire in a righteous cause. The secret of the church's strength is in prayer, collectively and individually. It is recorded of the Grecian mathematician that he one time exclaimed: "Give me where I may stand and I will move the world." In prayer we have the fulcrum by which heaven and earth can be moved. No wonder Paul says, "pray without ceasing." Prayer is the life and source of potentiality of the church; a church without the power of efficient prayer is dead, despite elaborate, costly edifices, magnificent organs, whose deep rolling swell fitly harmonizes with the sweet voices of gifted singers, and mellifluous eloquence of the preacher; a church poor in prayer is poor in blessing and bankrupt in power. Therefore strive for efficiency in prayer.

Knowledge. It is now an axiomatic truth, that "knowledge is power." How often do we hear this saying and as often ignore the treasury of information it contains? Knowledge is power, force, energy; to a large extent means life. Knowledge has worked wonders. Science, which simply means knowledge systematized, has revolutionized the world in the last two centuries. It has converted the chimerical alchemy into the science of chemistry; it has produced out of the necromancy of astrology the science of astronomy. Knowledge has chained the forces of nature to her chariots by which we can be transported to the ends of the earth either by the steam-engine or the leviathans of the deep. Knowledge has gathered up the lightning of heaven and upon its swift wings bears our messages to earth's remotest bounds. The wildest flights of Jules Verne's prolific imagination, which to schoolboys used to be the advanced grade to "Alice in Wonderland," have been realized. And to-day men can gyrate at will among the clouds; can play ball (metaphorically speaking) with sun, moon, and stars; turn the prows of their vessels into the ocean caverns, startling the monsters of the deep by the penetrating glare of the submarine vessels' searchlight; can store up the treasured oratory of past generation, or reel off a speech or sermon at will even when the tongue who originated it is stilled in death, with accurate inflection and orthoepy. The past century is a wonderful demonstration of the veracity of the axiom, "Knowledge is power." How essential to efficiency is it that we get knowledge. Knowledge, though, must be sought for, labored for, diligently, earnestly, and oftentimes with prayers and fastings. In the latter-day revelations we are informed that the glory of God is intelligence, and in Paul's epistle to the Corinthians we become partakers of that glory, so the inspired writer informs us, and are changed from glory to glory or from intelligence to intelligence. So that to accelerate the onward march of truth to its consummate triumph, we must become efficient in being able to give an intelligent "reason for the hope that is within us." This efficiency can only be attained by getting into communion with God in whom "is our sufficiency" by and through the medium of prayer, and the obtaining of knowledge.

The glorious possibilities of the future depend upon individual and collective efficiency. Get the power to produce, and the results must follow.

THE holiday number of the Autumn Leaves will contain a very interesting Christmas story by T. S. Brown. Readers of the Leaves are familiar with his excellent writings.

Selected Articles.

PRE-COLUMBIAN CIVILIZATION IN AMERICA.

The most notable contribution to knowledge of the Thirteenth International Congress of Americanists, which has just held its sessions at the Museum of Natural History in New York City, was, according to an editorial in the Sun (New York, October 27), its testimony to the ethnological unity of the Americas, North, South, and Central. Says the writer:

"That similarity in thought, in workmanship, in art, and in religion characterized the various races inhabiting the continents of the New World before its discovery by the white man was shown by every paper dealing with the subject.

"It appears that we have commonly put too low an estimate on the Indian, using the term Indian as inclusive of all the aboriginal inhabitants of this hemisphere. The Indian, these learned men find, was a more intellectual being than has been generally supposed. He was religious, with high sentiments and keen emotions, and he was advanced politically far beyond the degree in savagery where he is usually placed, his political development being measurably influenced by his religion. . . .

"There was an American civilization as definite as the European civilization. Really, there has been a series of civilizations, one overcoming the other and the higher form usually dominating. We were not the first invaders. We were not the first exterminators. America has seen races come, rule, and be swept away in their turn. Where savagery triumphed, as in the case of one race of Mound-builders, when a mild and stationary people were overborne by a more vigorous and restless stock, as in Europe, it usually followed that the conquering race was influenced in time by the culture of the conquered. This has been found written in monuments and tombs. Sometimes there can be traced the evidence of a conquering race's recognition of the superior attainments of the people it has overthrown, and when the different investigators compare notes the history of an ancient invasion is completed.

"In art the pre-Columbian Americans were advanced beyond the stage of development to which they have been assigned. So say the Americanist students. We have been able to consider the art of the Egyptian from the point of view which it was executed, partly because Egyptian monuments and papyri have offered enlightenment as to the daily life, habits, and aspirations of the Nile people. But conquering Indians in America destroyed the temples where their vanquished foes kept their records. Not always did the Spanish conquerors who followed them preserve the ancient archives that survived earlier despoilers. Codices which found their way to European libraries have been deciphered, only to disclose astronomical data or material for the purposes of a calendar. Only now are the students, these scholars of the Americanist congress, beginning to get near a point where, they think, they will be able to judge with some accuracy the standards of art attained by the early peoples of this continent."—The Literary Digest, for November 8.

WHY CARPETS ARE UNSANITARY.

"The possibilities of housing microbes"—that is the terse way in which the objections to carpets are summed up by J. Willson, writing on "Carpet Dangers" (Good Housekeeping, October). Mr. Willson tells us that while in a carpeted room in a tenement-house seventy-five germs settled on a three-inch saucer in five minutes, after sweeping there were twenty-seven hundred! A thick carpet paper or other padding adds to the life of the carpet and gives a spring and soft tread in walking, but it also adds to the objectionable possibilities aforesaid. Mr. Willson proceeds as follows:

"William Morris said the use of a carpet was excusable only when the floor was in bad condition. Yet even that is hardly sufficient reason, for a new floor can be laid over the old one. But if one must have carpets, let them be tacked down at intervals of not less than six inches, and with long tacks driven in only a short distance. Or, better still, have the carpets fitted with brass eyes to drop over nails set permanently in the floor. Then, with some moving of furniture, the carpet can be cleaned frequently in the open air; better yet, have the carpet fill only the central part of the room, showing the bare floor for say one and one half feet near the walls. This means less furniture to move at cleaning time, and therefore more frequent cleanings.

"In making over a carpet that originally fitted the entire room, usually enough good pieces can be secured to make a presentable covering, when allowance is made for this bare floor around the walls. The floor can be painted, if in bad condition, or, what is better, lay a parquet wood border to meet the line of the carpet. . . .

"The modern steam cleaning of carpets is not so good as that of older days, as the airing is desirable. In cleaning a carpet it should be laid on the grass, face down, and then well beaten from the back. This causes the dirt to drop out of the loops where it is so deeply imbedded. Brushing the surface with a broom removes the lighter particles, and washing with a cloth wet in diluted ammonia will both clean and freshen the surface.

"Matting is dirty and expensive for continuous wear. For summer, however, it is highly desirable. Those who have carpets can not do better than to follow the example set by Stephen Girard. Each spring this worthy business man had all his carpets taken up, the house cleaned, and the floors then covered with matting. The carpets were thoroughly cleaned and were placed in hogsheads for storage till fall."—The Literary Digest for November 8.

THE UNEXPLORED UNIVERSE.

The region denoted by this title is not far away, but is that which we ordinarily regard as most familiar to us. It is unknown simply because we do not possess the means of knowing it. In other words, we can know only so much of the objects about us as our senses are able to tell us. Our own highly developed organs give us vastly more information than the lower creatures are able to obtain; but we have no right to conclude that we know it all. If we had a sense that could be affected by electric waves, another for heat vibrations, another for the ultra-violet rays, and still another for the X-rays, nature would be completely changed. These are not merely vain speculations, says the Abbé Moreux, who writes on this subject in Cosmos (Paris, October 11); for they teach us that our neighbor's conception of the universe is not necessarily the same as our own. Nature, he says, is like a piano, all of whose notes we can not hear. Who shall say that every one of us hears precisely the same ones? Comparative anatomy tells us that sensation may give entirely different results in different creatures. Says M. Moreux:

"Let us inquire how certain creatures perceive the exterior world—such, for instance, as have what were formerly known as 'compound eyes' like those of insects. It was long believed that the transparent refracting cones that terminate their retinal rods were so many lenticular pieces, giving each a complete centralized image in the cerebral substance. This had been disproved, but the problem as it now presents itself is insoluble. If each of the cones does not transmit an image, how does the resultant sensation give the form of the object? Do insects perhaps perceive this form in an imperfect way, being sensible only of a confused impression of color? Then how do they image the exterior world, and if touch is sufficient to give them an idea of form, what colors do they perceive? According to the very ingenious experiments of Sir John Lubbock, ants perceive the ultra-violet rays. It would be useless to inquire of what color these radiations appear; but conceive a man endowed with this power; where another would be plunged in darkness he might see a whole landscape brightly illumined with a light unknown to our humanity.

"This supposition of a human eye affected by colors unknown to the generality of men should not appear improbable. The curious affections of daltonism and achromatopsy [color-blindness], whatever explanation we may give of them, show that the sensations of light are very different with certain persons, and even vary, probably, from one subject to another. Most daltonians are incapable of distinguishing red from green or black, especially when these colors are slightly dim; others can not perceive yellow and blue; in some very rare cases the retina is insensible to red, orange, green, and violet. Maxwell's experiments show that for a color-blind person the curves of luminous intensity are not the same as for a normal eye in different regions of the spectrum. . . .

"Suppose that our eyes were attuned to the thermochemical vibrations revealed to us by the bolometer. All the visual scale would be transposed, and instead of seeing the stars that we now see we should perceive those whose light has long been extinguished, whose existence the methods of modern physics have enabled us to prove. The sun would appear surrounded by its corona, changing in form and position every instant, and we should no longer be obliged to wait for total eclipses to study this phenomenon. Currents of hot air would become visible like snow-squalls, and the science of heat would have no more secrets.

"Have beings in their evolution through geological periods passed through a scale of vibrations? Have our senses become more delicate by exercise, up to a certain point?

"Why have we only five senses, and how have these been developed? Would the influence of a different medium have induced the appearance of receptive organs adapted for other undulations? These are questions that science asks without being able to answer them.

"We are surrounded by mysteries. We know very little of nature's laws, and the 'windows,' to use Leibnitz's expression, through which the mind looks out, are neither numerous nor wide open.

"Philosophy has taught us that we build up our idea of the exterior world from fragments; but it has remained for modern physics to show us how fragile, incomplete, and far from reality this construction is. The works of God are even more beautiful than we are pleased to imagine, and in this life our fettered souls must be content to see only a feeble part of the marvelous picture that we call the universe."—The Literary Digest, for November 8.

In what respects will the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, to be held in St. Louis a year from next spring, be an improvement on the great World's Fair at Chicago? This is a question which is of interest to every American. The progress in invention and science has been wonderful. The advance in the comprehension of harmonious architecture has been no less so. New methods have been devised for entertaining visitors of all classes. Ex-senator John M. Thurston contributes an interesting and splendidly illustrated article, touching on all these subjects, to the November Cosmopolitan.

Original Poetry.

At the gathering at "Liberty Hall," the home of Joseph Smith, November 6, to celebrate his seventieth birthday, the following poem written by Sr. M. Walker was read by her daughter, Mrs. Dwight Davis:

Seventy Years.

Seventy years! How brief a span of time!
In retrospect, a day, an hour!
Seventy years, and yet in that brief space
What agencies arise, what power
Lays a strong hand upon the world's sure trend,
Moving above its toil and strife
Directs its destinies, its forces bend,
To the grand goal of human life.

Seventy years since first thy life began
Mid Eastern vale and wooded hills,
Whose solitude, unbroken save by notes
Of singing birds and rippling rills,
Spread o'er thee and around a mantle fair
And tender as a dream of love—
Soft benediction from the realms of air
And space ethereal above.

No joyous bells pealed forth when thou wast born,
Nor sound of trumpets on the air.
No waiting hosts shouted with glad acclaim,
"Behold, behold, the royal heir!"
And yet thy mission, grand as any heir
Of royalty, or any son
Of king or emperor of boundless state
By heritage of earth e'er won.

Seventy years! Ah, how the tide of life
Turns backward from the light of day,—
Turns to find groping in the shadowy gloom
Truth struggling with scarce a ray
To light the spirit searching for her face,
Or point the soul to heaven and God;
With none, not one but thine own sire to say,
"This is the way the ancients trod."

Then stood he as a bulwark strong and sure
'Gainst errors past, and with his hand
Laid firm upon the opening door of truth
Gave to earth's darkness stern command,
"Let thy proud waves be staid," for hitherto
And only there shall darkness reign.
The angel's message shall dispell earth's gloom;
This door shall ne'er be closed again.

Alas, he knew not then the awful fate
Impending; knew not that the blood
Of martyrs should ascend to heaven,
Iniquity come like a flood
Sweeping in wrath each barrier, tearing down
Each strong defense. How could he know
That from the household of his friends should come
The impious, heaven-defying blow?

How could he know that those who ate his meat
And broke with him the bread of love
Should sell their souls God's purpose to defeat,
Defile the message from above;
That in the hour of darkness God would lift
By thee a standard to his name,
Gather his children to the sheltering fold,
And to sin's captives liberty proclaim?

This was thy mission, this, to keep unclosed
The open door of truth, to lend

Thy name, thy youth, thy manhood's unspent strength
God's truth and people to defend.
And though no bells rang joyous at thy birth,
No monarch claimed thee as his heir,
Thousands of loyal hearts honor thy worth
And in thy holy triumph share.

They hail thee as the standard-bearer sent
To lift God's ensign on the earth,
That in each realm, in every field of thought,
Shall freedom, light, and truth have birth.
High is this claim? Men may not grant it, true.
What matter? God the leaven hid
Within the lump to silent work his will—
And bring to pass what he had bid.

And when all secrets are made known, and clear
The light that heaven sheds on our way,
Then too shall men discern whence came the light
To illumine the earth as with a blaze
And for the gospel sent again to man
Give God the honor and the praise,
Will then reveal the leader of God's hosts,
Called in the dark and cloudy day.

Life has not brought thee aught of wealth or state,
As men count wealth—nor honor vain;
But like the Master thou hast trod the path
Of humble ways, hast known the pain
Which is the common lot of mortals here,
Hast wept with those who still must weep.
Thy feet have wearied o'er the toilsome way
Of valleys low and mountains steep.

Thy hair is silvered with the frosts of time;
Thy seventy years of battle strong
Have left thee yet, as in thy manhood's prime,
The ever sturdy foe of wrong.
For this, thy friends, we come to honor thee
Upon thy natal day's return,
To clasp thy hand and add one memory
To others stored in friendship's urn.

And may we say, as here to-night we join
To pay due tribute to thy worth,
And wish thee yet full many a glad return
Of this the day which gave thee birth,
We hold as dearest legacy bequeathed
To us, of travail, toil, and tears
From thee, the fair, unsullied page of these Thy seventy faithful, honored years.

No series which has appeared in any magazine is more interesting than that which the Cosmopolitan is publishing under the title "Captains of Industry." The names of the men included in this series are not only constantly appearing in the news of the day, but their lives almost always illustrate the development of an entire art or industry. Take, for instance, those included in the November number. From Chaldean clay tablets to the movable types of Gutenberg lies a period of ten thousand years. From Gutenberg to Robert Hoe the gap in processes and results is quite as broad, though in time it is only five centuries long. The scribe of Nippur probably produced one tablet an hour. Gutenberg may have finished one sheet a minute. Hoe prints, with his machine, a strip of paper three feet wide on both sides at the rate of one hundred and twenty miles an hour. The life of the late W. S. Stratton, incidentally, is interwoven with the mining development of the middle West; that of James R. Keene illustrates the highest development of the Wall Street speculator; that of Tom L. Johnson casts interesting side-lights on political conditions in Ohio; while the life of Ferdinand W. Roebing can not be written without a thorough knowledge of the wonderful evolution of modern bridge-building.

Trust.

He holds the key to all unknown,
And I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if he trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here,
Without its rest;
I'd rather He unlocked the day,
And, as its hours swung open, say:
"My will is best."

I can not read his future plans,
But this I know;
I have the smiling of his face
And all the refuge of his grace
While here below.

Enough! This covers all my needs,
And so I rest.
For what I can not he can see,
And in his love I e'er shall be
For ever blest.

Should We?

Should we ever have known anything more than an infant knows, if Eve had not played her part in the first scene of the world's great drama?

We think not, and others think the same.

That being so, why do so many of God's professed followers refer to our first mother with irreverence? And why should there be anathemas heaped upon her memory? Why should not we respect her as much as we do Adam? She surely performed her part more promptly and more actively than did her husband. Satan foresaw that fact, so tempted her, and the man followed on in the work and then hid himself from the presence of the Lord, or tried to, and then she followed him. Adam excused himself by laying the blame on his helpmate. She did not blame him (a good example to her daughters), but referred to Satan as her tempter, so she and Adam did not quarrel over the matter (another good example), but took their decreed punishments and made the best of it. He did not sue for a divorce, neither did she, but they were true to each other, and nobly performed their life-work—or we might think so, if Josephus is correct in giving sixty as their number of children. And besides, judging by the number of years they lived, they must have lived chaste, consistent lives. We would like to know if Adam laid all the blame to Eve, during those many years of perplexities and anxieties in raising that great family. We hope not, for if he did, it was a very bad example to come down through nearly six thousand years to the modern Adam. He is considered an angel, who has visited the earth and conferred blessings on those who are the heirs of salvation; so we think he must have shouldered his own sins after that first act, and laid them down at the feet of the coming Christ.

Now, sisters, what can we figure out about our first mother? Can we draw any idea, from the sacred writings, that she or any other woman became an angel? I ask this for information—never thought of it before. Hope grasps the idea embodied in Jesus' words: "All are as the angels," and our faint heart takes courage. Should we censure Eve for doing just what we would have done, had we been in her place? I think not, and hope the brothers also will ever respect our first mother, and thereby develop their veneration.

Second: Should we ever have had our sacred records, if the writers had not had their individual experience, or had not been obedient to the command of God in writing them? Could we estimate for one moment the cost of those precious records—could we realize for only a short time the sorrows, the heartaches, the perplexities, and the persecutions that the writers experienced in giving the words of the Lord to the world? Should we, could we ever treat the great privilege we have of squaring our lives by them, with cold indifference? This is the greatest age for the circulation of the Bible, and the most universal; the poor can have one by saying so—and is not obliged to hide it, as when a few honest souls were trying to crawl out of the darkness of ages. We say right here: How great, how glorious are the gospel privileges of to-day, and how great will be our condemnation if we are not faithful to our calling, or do not accept the free gift of salvation as taught by Christ and his close followers.

True, there are many opinions afloat in the world, in regard to the way to be saved, and O how tenaciously each tries to cling to his own idea—just as a drowning man tries to grasp a straw. While to him who has embraced the gospel of the kingdom, and is living according to its plan, all other forms of doctrine are as floating straws, and he can stand on the firm deck of the good ship Zion, whose captain is Christ, and is borne safely on over the waves of adversity and storms of persecution to the port of peace—the home of the redeemed and the Redeemer. Should we, should any person who has a fair degree of understanding, hesitate to embark on board the above-named ship, after having faithfully and prayerfully studied the word of God? We think not; we are only one, but many thousand who have had a deeper and broader experience in this glorious work than we have had, will joyfully say, "Yea, amen!"

But, say some who are clothed in modesty of a fine texture: "There are many evil and immodest accounts given in the Bible, therefore I do not enjoy it as well as I should if only the pure and good works of mankind were recorded, and in fact I think some accounts are too bad to be put before the young." In taking one view of the matter, one might be so led to believe; but when we study the word, and realize that it is just as necessary to understand the wrong-doings of mortals as it is the right, and also the results of each, then we can weigh the conditions and choose which we will accept. If only the pure and good works had been recorded, I fear we should not have courage to rise above our many evil propensities, but knowing that others by the help of God did rise above their besetting sins and their environments, we feel encouraged and try again and again. Then, should we be more nice, and more wise than the Author of the sacred works? The world to-day is flooded with impure reading matter and impure advertisements, all tending to mislead the young, and what is the object of the writers and publishers? It is to get gain. And yet people, and some of them claim to be Saints, will spend money for this trashy stuff, and find or take time to read it, but have neither money nor time to devote to the church work; don't even know that we have a college, a Saints' home, or how many periodicals we have, etc. Should we thus go on and rob our soul of its pure nourishment and feed it on chaff? If we do, what will be the result? A poor, pinched, shriveled soul, to return to its Maker, whereas it is our duty and our privilege to embrace the beautiful teaching, as given to us in these last days, and thereby have our soul fed and developed into the likeness of our great Master. Not that we shall be equal with him, but that we may become fully developed Saints of the Most High.

One more idea: The sisters will not take this one to themselves, for they have no reason to do so. Should we spend our money in dressing extravagantly, in unwisely gratifying the appetite in a free use of confectionery, or by the disgusting habit of using tobacco? We are on dangerous ground, so forbear. We know that when Ephraim is joined to his idols, he does not wish to be troubled. So we will simply say to such, Should we, should we? and change the subject.

"All who would live godly lives in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecutions;" then should we expect to sail through life on flowery beds of ease? We did when young in gospel work, but by studying the experience of God's most faithful servants, saw that their trials were greater than those who were less faithful, and the Son's the greatest of all.

SR. ALMIRA M. SNOW.

Prayer Union.

Mrs. Almira M. Snow, of Brookville, Maine, desires to be remembered by the Prayer Union, that she may be relieved of a renewed attack of physical infirmities and be given strength to bear with them. She also desires the prayers of the patriarchs. Her hope was to go to the Saints' Home, but is now prevented.

Sr. Sheeler, of Altoona, Iowa, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union in behalf of her daughter, Mrs. Grace Rhine, who is severely afflicted. She has undergone one operation, and the doctors think another will be necessary. Her mother fears she can not endure another. Please remember your sister in the gospel.

Mrs. A. Mellon requests the prayers of the Prayer Union and of all who may read this who believe in prayer that Mrs. Lizzie Miller may have a lump removed from her shoulder if it is God's will. She has given her some Ensigns to read, and also gave another lady some tracts and Ensigns to read and hopes they will be the means of helping them to see the truth as it is in Christ.

From the International Convention.

"DOCTOR POTTS SPOILS SOME ELOQUENT TEMPERANCE SPEECHES.

"Following the reading of the Lesson Committee's report, Dr. John Potts, chairman of the committee, said he wished to make a statement concerning the temperance lessons and certain rumors that had been abroad. He spoke deliberately, distinctly, throwing all the weight of his massive personality and the resonant power of his great lungs into each syllable. As he stood erect before the convention, great in frame, and shaking his head in sturdy emphasis of what he was saying, he seemed the veritable watch-dog of the International System. 'The grandest temperance organization on the top of the earth,' he thundered, 'is the Sunday-school. I think I am safe in saying that every Sunday-school in the world is true to the principles of temperance and total abstinence. Ah! I know'—and the doctor's eyes twinkled—'I am spoiling some very eloquent speeches by what I am going to say. It was a great surprise to me, and to others,'—his voice grew deep with suppressed feeling,—'when a nameless paper announced to the world that there was a conspiracy in the Lesson Committee to do away with the temperance lessons. I have been chairman of the Lesson Committee for eight years, and never once have I heard from any member of the committee so much as a suggestion that the temperance lessons should be done away with. I say to this convention: Choose your Lesson Committee with the greatest care and deliberation, and then trust your committee.'

"The applause was deafening. When he could be heard, President Tyler said with emphasis: 'Doctor Potts has duly killed that thing. I will now proceed with the burial service.' And his further comment put an end to any possible resurrection of the temperance question during the tenth convention."

We append the following from the report of the resolutions committee that you may see the final action of the convention on the matter:

"SOME OF THE RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED:

"Resolved, That the following plan of lesson selection shall be observed by the Lesson Committee to be elected by this convention:

"A. One Uniform Lesson for all grades of the Sunday-school shall be selected by the Lesson Committee, as in accordance with the usage of the past five Lesson Committees; provided, that the Lesson Committee be authorized to issue an optional "Beginners'" Course for special demands and uses, such optional course not to bear the official title of "International Lesson."

"B. Resolved, That at this time we are not prepared to adopt a series of advanced lessons to take the place of the Uniform lessons in the adult grade of the Sunday-school.

"C. The Lesson Committee is urged to consider how far a better continuity of Bible study may be secured by alternating at longer intervals—of one or more years—the selections from the Old and New Testaments respectively.

"D. Resolved, That this convention reaffirm the instruction on the subject of temperance lessons adopted at Pittsburg and reaffirmed at St. Louis and Boston.

"E. Whereas, The International Primary Department has expressed its appreciation of the value of the Primary work of America of the action of the Lesson Committee in providing a Beginners' Course, and has asked that this course be extended to two years; therefore,

"Resolved, That we transmit this request to the Lesson Committee for its careful consideration.'

"Sections A, B, D, and E were unanimously adopted; Section C was referred to the incoming Lesson Committee.

"Whereas, The Bible is not only the inspired word of God, but also the world's greatest treasury of literature, and its reading is now excluded from most of the public schools of America.

"Resolved, That the Executive Committee is instructed to appoint a standing committee whose duty it shall be to consider what means should be taken in the various States and provinces to secure the reading of the Bible without comment in the public schools of our land.

"Whereas, The leading American students of the Bible and publishers of Sunday-school lesson-helps favor the use of the American Standard Edition of the Revised Bible; and whereas, the British and Foreign Bible Society has recently taken action to supply the English Revision of the Bible to those of its patrons who desire it; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That this convention memorialize the American Bible Society to take such action as will enable its patrons to secure the American Revised Bible from that society, if they so desire.'

Letter Department.

MELLIE, Minnesota, November 10.

Editors Herald: This place is about twenty miles north of Duluth, on the shore of Lake Superior, and is composed mostly of those engaged in the lumber business. Five members of the church live here: Bro. Samuel Sloan and wife, Bro. James Hastings and wife, and Sr. W. J. Craven. It was at the request of Srs. Sloan and Hastings, who attended the reunion at Frazee last June, that this opening has been made. At their request Bro. F. A. Smith and the writer first visited this place the 1st of last August. We held a few meetings then, but conditions were against us, as there were several cases of diphtheria in the place. So under the promise of returning when things were more favorable, I came here last Thursday from Bemidji, and began meetings yesterday.

Our evening meeting broke all previous records as to attendance, as we had the largest congregation that had ever been in the schoolhouse. Am billed again for Tuesday night, and shall probably hold all the week. We hope to do some good at least.

While at Bemidji I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. Elmer Anderson, son of Bro. and Sr. Myson Anderson, who accidentally shot himself while handling an old gun. He was but eleven years of age. It was a hard blow for the parents. I also baptized two while there: Bro. and Sr. Harry Evans, husband and wife, who, we think, will rejoice in the work.

I expect to go back there from here and hold more meetings, trusting that it will be more favorable than when there last. Everybody was so busy then that we could not hold night meetings, so came here. Some of the brethren there were making from four to five dollars a day getting out railroad ties, and it was just hurry all the time. Would even get up in the night to eat; but the old saying is that the best time to make hay is while the sun shines, so they had to work when they could get work to do.

Bemidji seems to be having a boom just now, as a large lumber company from Minneapolis is building a large mill there, and a new town site is being platted and lots sold, which makes things quite lively at present. Mr. Porter Nye, husband of Sr. Nye, who is known to many of the Saints, is interested in the town site, as it takes a part of his homestead. They had sold lots to near the amount of two thousand dollars when I came from there. The place has about three thousand inhabitants, electric lights, water-works, a fine new schoolhouse, a new thirty thousand-dollar court-house, and forty-one saloons, with talk of more. Surely it needs the gospel, but it is a hard place to get a hearing at present. It may be better sometime.

I am feeling well in the work, and in the main having good liberty in preaching the word. Am hopeful for the future and believe that the gospel will yet accomplish its work in saving the race.

E. A. STEDMAN.

ENSENADA, Baja California, Mexico, November 3.

Editors Herald: I arrived here on the 3d of September from San Diego, California, where I had been laboring as a missionary since the beginning of the year. Being the only missionary the church has at present in the United States of Mexico, there is but little danger that the HERALD readers will be overrun by letters from the Mexican field, so I may venture to send them a few lines.

The territory of Lower California, which includes all of the Peninsula, is actually the land of the "Far Southwest," and ought, on account of its geographical position, to belong to the United States of America. Somebody here assures me, and in all seriousness, too, that efforts are now being made in the city of Mexico to bring about such a transfer. So far as I am concerned, my very best wishes are for the success of the efforts.

Ensenada de Todos Santos (Bosom or Bight of all Saints) is the first Mexican port after leaving San Diego, California. It is a town of about one thousand souls, including quite a percentage of foreigners of many nationalities. It is the capital of the Northern District of this peninsular territory, and as such is the seat of all the courts, government mining agency, military post, custom-house, of the governor of the Northern District, etc.

The Romish church is jealously guarding the dominion she holds over all those which really or at least by appearance belong to her, and I have been repeatedly assured that all efforts which have from time to time been made by a member of one or the other of the Protestant sects among the natives here have been impeded and frustrated by truly fanatical ways and means. In spite of all this, I trust that under the guidance and aid of the Holy Spirit I shall be able to impress some individual souls here and in the surrounding country with the divine light and truth to such an extent that they will not only awake from their dangerous indifference but will arise and will, by beginning to walk in the opposite direction, prove that they thenceforth wish to please God and no longer self, the world, and the Devil.

Let us make strenuous efforts at all times to live so that we may always have his Spirit to be with us.

Yours for gospel light and truth,

A. B. PURFURST.

LOS ANGELES, California, November 6.

Editors Herald: I have received several other replies to my "Circular letter to ministers."

Reverend C. C. Pierce, pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church, wrote me:

"My Dear Williams: I have received and read your tract and the accompanying letter. It is only natural and right and fair that you should desire to set people right regarding the true position and claims of the religious organization to which you belong, and I for one propose to listen as I do to what any man has to say in justification of his position. You will permit me to say, however, and I do this in all love and good fellowship, I am at a loss to know how a man with as much good sense as I believe you possess can espouse and hold to a religion based upon what is evident to me the absurd proposition that an angel delivered a book to Joseph Smith or anybody else, and aside from this strange belief I fail to see what you Latter Day-Saints stand for which you could not a great deal better accomplish by becoming members of the historic church of Christ.

"Very sincerely yours,
"C. C. PIERCE."

A very good letter, coming from a minister. I shall follow it up. Reverend Pierce and I have spoken more than once from the same rostrum.

In an interview with the Reverend Mr. Meeney, rector of the Episcopal Church, he said: "Mr. Williams, you are sound on your authority position, only we have the authority. Though the church has at times gone into many errors, we have never forfeited the priesthood. During the Dark Ages the church retained the priesthood, though transgressors. The Catholic Church has a valid priesthood, though they hold it to-day in transgression or error. I can not understand how an intelligent man like you can hold to the Mormon faith. Do you really believe Joseph Smith found those plates from which the Book of Mormon is claimed to have been translated?"

I also received a note from Bishop Johnson, of the Episcopal Church, and one from Reverend McAfee, of the Presbyterian Church, of Phoenix, Arizona.

Reverend Yager of the Christian Church at Hollywood has offered to allow me the use of his church, at some future date to be agreed upon by us, in order for me to present an affirmative declaration of our faith.

I believe it possible to force consideration of our claims. I expect to send a copy of the tract, "Latter Day Saints, Who are they?" to every school-teacher in this part of the country; also to lawyers, doctors, attorneys, and all public men.

Bro. William Leeka, wife, and daughter, of Thurman, Iowa, are located here for the winter; also Sr. Hougas and daughter Blanche, with her children. Brn. Daniel and T. A. Hougas are expected later. Sr. Forscutt is among the late arrivals. Bro. John Johnson, of Kansas City, came in last Monday. And so they commence to arrive at this climatic Mecca. "Gathering" to the land of sunshine. Notwithstanding our eye is on Missouri, we welcome these Saints to our western shores. Bro. Luff is with us, but intends starting eastward in the course of a few days.

I recently took a trip into Central California in connection with Bro. Foss. Went there to adjust some church matters. Met Bro. Carmichael. The Santa Marie Branch is practically disorganized, but I see the possibility of a good work being done providing the church places a missionary in that field who can concentrate all his efforts there. It is the only thing which will save the work from going into permanent decay.

Yours in the faith,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

LOUISVILLE, Kentucky, November 9.

Editors Herald: The HERALD is a welcome visitor in our home. We could not get along without it. My husband and I have been greatly blessed since engaging in this glorious latter-day work. We know it is the work of the Lord.

Your sister,
MRS. MAMIE CRABTREE.

NECEDAH, Wisconsin, November 10.

Editors Herald: It is indeed gratifying both to the missionary and the Saints to see the visible and tangible fruits of our labor. At our October conference, which was held here in the gospel tent, seven were baptized. A week ago yesterday we baptized three and again yesterday three more were buried in the sparkling waters of the Wisconsin River, making thirteen in all, thus doubling the number of the Searles Prairie Branch in the last six weeks.

I am in one respect, or in this case at least, like the Apostle Paul: I assist in sowing the seed and let the younger boys do the watering (baptizing), and the Lord gives the increase. Thus we see the good work goes on.

The authorities advise my son Jerome and I to remain and look after the missionary work here for a time, so we have tried to do all we could in that line of work, as well as to encourage the Saints in their local work; and as satisfactory results of our labors as before stated, Jerome baptized six. We will probably go to other localities in a day or two.

There is one thing especially worthy of notice in regard to the progress of the work here in the Searles Prairie Branch. They have a good, live, working local Religio, the only one in the State that is in good running order. They also have a fine, lively, interesting Sunday-school. These, no doubt, have a great influence for good in this community. Yesterday I was much pleased to hear a resolution pass unanimously that these two societies here (Religio and Sunday-school) send two and a half dollars for the benefit of Graceland College. I said in my heart, "Pretty well done for the Saints who dwell among the red brush of Wisconsin."

My experience in the church is that where there are active Religios and Sunday-schools you will find the same feature in the branch.

I find that the gospel work is not moving along in Wisconsin of late years as it did some years ago, but I believe that as a rule, those who are coming in now are good, earnest workers in the gospel. The enemy is raging and closing schoolhouses against us; but this only draws the line of distinction the more closely between truth and error, and has a tendency to bring out the honest-hearted ones. As the poet has said in regard to the enemy, "Tis the strength of his despairing." It is only necessary that the soldiers in the "army of the Lord" should stand more firmly, and be united to meet the attack that no doubt will be made.

May we all have learned much by the experiences of the bygone days and learn to be more faithful and diligent, is the prayer of your brother,
ELI M. WILDERMUTH.

MADISON, Indiana, November 9.

Editors Herald: We think the Southern Indiana District is progressing slowly. Some are being added while many others are believing. Some new places are being opened and we hope for good results. We have been favored by Bro. H. C. Smith giving us a short but much welcomed visit. He preached us some excellent sermons.

Bro. T. A. Hougas gave us a call during our district conference, giving us much good instructions on Sunday-school work. Also Bro. Willard T. Smith, having been appointed to this district, located for the time being in Louisville, Kentucky, by special invitation, assisted us in a ten-day meeting at home branch. He preached some good sermons and baptized three.

We have battled along this conference year as best we could amidst the ups and downs, meeting some encouragement and a whole lot of disadvantages.

My intents have been and are to fight the fight, so that I can read my title clear to mansions that are being prepared for those who have followed the Master. May this be the lot of many, is the desire of the writer.

We have been at home for a couple of weeks arranging home affairs for the winter.

While we have been using the motor force, we have been obliged to have as company things which, the writer has heard it said, are worth five dollars each, but we would rather pay the five than to have them; namely, boils. Have had four on one wrist and three upon my neck. They made me work under a disadvantage in daytime, and at night-time caused wakeful hours.

We expect to assume missionary work again this week.

We have labored the past summer with Brn. Jenkins, M. R. Scott, Jr., and Boswell; found them all very pleasant colaborsers and their every desires to advance the work. Of a truth we are much pleased with our colaborsers.

We hope for a lively and beneficial campaign this winter; will use our earnest endeavors to that end. Quite a number of places are awaiting our arrival.
M. C. MARSHALL.

ACTON, Ontario, November 11.

Editors Herald: I attended the London District conventions and conference at St. Marys on October 16 to 20. A good spiritual time was enjoyed; and when the parting "good-bye's" were said, we began to realize what our religion means to us. This "communion with Saints" gives us a foretaste of what an "inheritance in Zion" will bring, though I sometimes think that if there are no partings in "Zion" we will not appreciate our association; for in our present condition we do not seem to realize the greatness of our privileges until we have to separate.

Then, too, I sometimes shudder when I think of what we have to attain to in order to be worthy of "an inheritance." On this point God has said: "Behold, I, the Lord, will give unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., power that he shall be enabled to discern by the Spirit those who shall go up unto the land of Zion."—Doctrine and Covenants 63: 11. Again he says: "Respecting the members of the church; they that are appointed by the Holy Spirit to go up unto Zion, and they who are privileged to go up unto Zion."—Doctrine and Covenants 72: 5. He further sets forth the conditions upon which such appointment is made, in the following, from Doctrine and Covenants 64: 7:

"Behold, the Lord requireth the heart (or life) and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land."

From the above quotations we can see that it is the judgment of the "Holy Spirit," which is to discern those who shall go up unto Zion; and that judgment will be swayed only by our willingness to be obedient. And if we are found wanting, Ananias and Sapphira like (Acts 5: 5, 6, 10), we shall be cast out; or, in the words of the Lord, "cut off out of the land of Zion."

Here is what makes me shudder: When I look back over my life's history, pick out all the good acts, or deeds, that I can recall, and place them in the above balance, methinks I see them outweighed by the stupendous demand that is made upon us; then, out of justice, we must put the imperfections or bad deeds on the side of the balance with the "demand," and as this is done, up goes the "good deeds" side, and courage almost flies, until the Spirit of truth comes to our aid and paints a more encouraging picture, showing that a constant effort is the only remedy in which we may hope for relief, showing that if we falter it only sends the "good deeds" side of the scale higher. And thus we receive impetus to strive the more diligently to "continue unto the end," that we might be saved.

Leaving St. Marys on October 22, I soon arrived in the city of Guelph, where I expected to take stage in the afternoon for Armstrongs Mills. After leaving the dinner-table at the hotel, I was accosted by a young man, who said: "Is not your name Bennett?" Of course I replied in the affirmative; and suffice it to say, I had sat next to a Latter Day Saint at the table and he was the son of the man I was to "look up" at Armstrongs Mills, and he was in town with his buggy. So instead of riding in the stage I rode with Bro. Thring, who did not forget that hotel keepers do not keep Latter Day Saint missionaries free of charge. We arrived early in the evening and found the family very hospitable and ready to make "ye missionary" feel at home.

Next evening this "young man," Bro. Wesely Thring, hitched up and we went to see about a hall in which to tell the angel's message. The night was quite dark, but after scrambling over fences and through barn-yards and door-yards (there were gates on the premises, but we could not find them), we succeeded in interviewing the manager of the hall, and after some explanation of the difference between us and the Brighamites, gained favor enough to get the hall at "as low a price" as "would clear expenses." This Bro. Thring had offered to pay. So we returned "home," some four miles, only to be disappointed next day by the receipt of a notice from the "manager" stating that he had "thought the matter over, about letting" me "have the hall, and had concluded not to let me have it." So all our tumbling over fences and groping in the darkness to find the door was to no apparent purpose. I apprehend he sought the advice of the beloved "pastor," and of course a "close out" was inevitable.

We then tried to secure a school, some two miles distant, but were foiled again. Presbyterian fathers said, "No! I won't give my consent."

One more point of vantage seemed clear, so we tried it, and finally got a school, where we preached the first night to eight or ten; but the bugbear "Mormon" began to do its work, and on the second night we were ousted again. We then tried to find a hall in the city (Guelph), some seven miles distant, but none was available at reasonable prices, so we had to say "good-bye."

We arrived here the 6th instant, secured a hall, billed the town, and opened up a series of meetings on the 9th instant. Held forth twice to fair audiences. The hall was occupied, by previous arrangement, on the 10th, so we had to hold over, but will open fire again to-night if all is well. Some think our views are reasonable and seem willing to investigate, while others object. Still others remain silent and do not express themselves.

I expect to be joined soon by Elder Frederick Gregory, with whom I am appointed to labor for the winter.

I pray God will open the hearts of the people to receive the angel's message in this place, and for the speedy redemption of Zion.

WALTER L. BENNETT.

RHINE, Kansas, November 10.

Editors Herald: We have been greatly blessed of late in having three of God's noble servants to call upon us and to administer the bread of life. Bro. Fred Ward and Bro. Taubly held forth at the Western Star Schoolhouse, two miles north of Goodland. We think considerable good was done.

Bro. Ward is our Bishop's agent, and preached an excellent sermon on the law of tithing which will accomplish much.

Bro. J. C. Vaughn was anxious to push out in new fields, so we hitched the ponies to our prairie-schooner and started for Kanorado, sixteen miles west of here, on the Colorado line. The next day we announced meeting for October 27, to continue till November 2. The meetings proved a success, as many friends were made to the cause. Some came in four miles from the country every night. At the close of meetings several of the young people agreed among themselves to contribute to the temporal needs of our brother when he passed the hat; but they were surprised, for no hat was passed. That, too, was a great testimony to the truthfulness of what had been said, as Bro. Vaughn had told them before that he was not preaching for money. So at the close these young men came forward to bid our brother good-bye and each would slip the money in his hand and say: "You have done me lots of good. I do not want something for nothing."

People can not but notice the difference between the Latter Day Saint ministers and ministers of the popular denominations, as the Saints ask for the Spirit of God and then they know their meetings will be successful to a certain extent at least.

One of the ministers of the popular churches who was holding meetings north of here said it took three things to make a meeting a success: "Grace, grit, and greenbacks. God Almighty will furnish the grace, I will furnish the grit, and you furnish the greenbacks, and we will run this thing right." But it was not this way with Bro. Vaughn; he only asked a hearing and the Spirit of God.

My prayer is that God will send more such men into the vineyard. We need more good, sober-minded, and industrious men in the field.

ED FENDER.

TABERVILLE, Missouri, October 10.

Editors Herald: There are five or six families of Saints within a radius of two and one half miles of this place who do not take the HERALD and some of them do not even take the Ensign. Why, I can not understand. My mother takes the Ensign, I take the HERALD, and my little boy gets the Hope, so I get to read all of them, and they are a feast for me every week. That one article in the HERALD, "Who was Joseph Smith," is worth twice the price of the paper for one year, could its worth be estimated in dollars and cents. So, believing that I could not get along in this great work without the church papers, and thinking other Saints would be something like myself in regard to this matter, when I received that little blank with the request to secure a new subscriber I started out and went to every one of those who do not take the HERALD, and asked them if they would not sign for it one year; and, as per request, if they could not subscribe for a year, to take it six months. I am sure if they would only take it six months, at the expiration of that time they would be ready to continue taking it.

I know of one family of Saints who, I am sorry to say, have not a church book or church paper in their home; but instead, they have many novels, magazines, agricultural and political newspapers. And when I asked them why they did not take the HERALD or Ensign, or both of them (for they are amply able, financially), they answered that they could not "afford to take them, they cost too much." But, said I, "your house is full of other literature. Could you not leave out, or stop taking some of those other papers, and take the money you are paying out for them, and send it to the HERALD Office and receive in return a good spiritual paper? a paper that is devoted to the interests and welfare of the Saints, the spreading of the gospel, and the building up of the kingdom of God in these last days?"

The brother then said he had for some time intended to take the HERALD but was not able to do so just now. He said that in his business, farming, he was obliged or compelled to take an agricultural paper. Bro. James Moler, our worthy district president, gave them some timely advice in regard to taking the church publications; but whether they will heed it or not, time will tell.

Our branch at this place has on its record about thirty-five members; but some have moved away, and others of the branch live ten miles and some fifteen miles away, so we are in a scattered condition; but our ever faithful branch president, Bro. A. I. Roberts, and his noble family meet with us on the fourth Sunday, which is our regular meeting day. This fall we were favored with a visit from our district president, who gave us some good gospel sermons, and promised to return in the near future. He was well liked by all who heard him.

Since he was here, the Holiness, or the Church of God, people have held a meeting, and now the Christians (Campbellites) are throwing slurs and trying to twist and tear down the doctrine of Jesus Christ as found in the New Testament. They, the Christians, sent down to Oklahoma to get a man to overthrow the doctrine of Christ as taught by his true servants.

Bro. Moler preached only five nights on account of bad weather. Two or three of their members became interested and attended regularly. I suppose they held a little council among themselves and decided that something must be done, and ever since he (Mr. John Harold, of Cordell, Oklahoma), has been here he has been proclaiming, at the top of his voice, "False apostles! false prophets! No Holy Ghost, and no gifts and blessings in the church now; all done away!"

He has also stated publicly that he was ready to meet any of the Latter Day Saint preachers in discussion. He also held up the Inspired Translation and made sport and fun of it, also of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. He will receive for his services here for the last two weeks, forty or fifty dollars, pretty fat pay for assailing the doctrine of Christ as taught and practiced by the Reorganization. Never since I have been in the church, which is more than twelve years, have I heard the faith, doctrine, and practice of the church assailed as it has been by this man; but after all this, I am stronger in the faith once delivered to the Saints.

I have attended every one of his sermons, and have taken a few notes, thinking they might be of some benefit if the discussion came off. They did not like it because I took my notebook and pencil, and one of the members got up after preaching last Sunday night a week ago, and said that some of the Latter Day Saints were there with paper and pencil, for no good; but I have taken them every night.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and the ultimate triumph of the truth, I remain,

Your sister,

LIZZIE BOCH.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Kentucky, November 13.

Editors Herald: Perhaps your many readers would like to know about the work in the hills of Kentucky. I left the city November 6, for the frontier; arrived here the same day an entire stranger in a strange land, and alone (yet not alone). I went to the authorities and tried to get the court-house, and gave them my card showing who I was and what I represented. They held a council and decided I was a Utah "Mormon;" but after some time I was enabled to convince them I was not.

Then they said court set in a few days, but I could have the house the night of the 7th, for only one night. I had no money to pay my board till then and I knew no one so I thought I would best take to the woods where people are more sociable, so I started east. I soon got in to ride with some people who said they were Christians and I told them I was a minister of the gospel, and they said they needed preaching in their neighborhood and that I could get the schoolhouse. We arrived at their home in due time and I started to hunt the school-board, and I was successful and gave out meeting for the next night; had about twenty-five out to hear, and was blessed in presenting the message. My subject was "Faith and Works." The next night I began on the "Mission of Christ, and Final Destiny of Man," which I spoke on for five nights. Crowd increased till the seats and benches were filled, and a number standing, and also some on the outside listening through the open windows.

I have spoken seven times and new ones are coming in every night. I have plenty of friends to care for me and I surely have been blessed in telling the story. I have to hear me, members of the Catholic, Baptist, Methodist, Christian, Advent, and Presbyterian Churches. The people say they never heard anything so plain; and they surely are interested for they begin to gather at the meeting-place at half-past five. A Christian man takes charge of the singing and opens the meetings for me.

This is a poor part of Kentucky, and the people are not blessed with much of this world's goods, but I feel welcome among them. Crops were very poor here, and fruit a failure.

I believe God has sheep in these hills of Hardin County. I am about twelve miles from the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln.

I do not know how long I will stay here. I am here to stay till I think best to go elsewhere. The way is now opened and people of other school districts are asking me to come there. Some people are coming four miles to hear.

Bro. Metcalf is busy in the city, W. J. Smith is also there at present, but will soon leave us for Indiana.

The people here are kind-hearted, but many are wedded to their idol, tobacco. The weather is very nice and warm, and we still have to fight flies as screens are not fashionable here. There are two crops that are quite sure here, flies and persimmons.

We are now trying to picture the true church as it was in Christ's time or in the days of the apostles. Am using charts.

J. W. ADAMS.

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, November 13.

Editors Herald: The Herald, Autumn Leaves, and Hope are welcome visitors. In fact, they are about the only preachers we have, and we very much enjoy reading them. O how we do long to be where there is a branch of the church so we can go to church and Sunday-school on Sunday and enjoy the communion of Saints and learn the word of God more fully.

Will the Bishop of Independence, Missouri, kindly send me his address, also the Bishop of Springfield, Missouri, or if there is not a bishop at Springfield, the presiding elder, as I wish to write to them and if I come to Missouri, would like to call on them. I ever pray for the welfare of Zion.

Your sister,

FRANCES HEATON.

TROY, Illinois, November 13.

Editors Herald: Some years ago the writer and daughter, Mrs. Mary McKenna, were influenced at a revival meeting to unite with the Baptist Church. We were not near any branch of the Saints, and so now we both realize wherein we are wrong, and wish to acknowledge the same. For we know and believe the Latter Day Saints to be the true church, and desire to become reinstated in the church, having been Latter Day Saints before we united with the Baptist Church. We hope to be forgiven and to become children of God indeed.

MRS. MARY J. HOUSTON.

P. S.—I am the wife of James Houston.

MOUND VALLEY, Kansas, November 13.

Editors Herald: Since coming to the Spring River District I have preached the word in Indian Territory, Kansas, and Missouri, and I have been much blessed. This is a ripe field, ten times more places to preach than we can fill. Wednesday, October 29, I attended a quiet wedding at the home of Bro. M. S. Frick, of Joplin, when his daughter Nellie and our genial young Bro. Walter Chrestensen were made one for life. I read a scriptural lesson and made a few remarks, after which Elder Chrestensen, father of the bridegroom, spoke the mystic words that completed the union of two worthy young Saints. I had not seen Bro. and Sr. Chrestensen for thirteen years, therefore it was a joyous occasion to me; and the marked presence of the Holy Spirit made us all feel that the Father in heaven would richly bless Bro. Walter and Sr. Nellie amidst all the meandering scenes of life, if faithful to their covenants.

October 30 I went to Pittsburg, Kansas, where I found Bro. F. C. Keck presenting the word to large, attentive audiences, in the Swedish Lutheran church. Pittsburg is a prosperous little city of ten thousand souls, and we have thirty-one members there now, with good material to organize. Pleasant View Branch has a fine church house five miles south of Pittsburg, and a goodly membership of prosperous farmers. I preached once in Pittsburg, and once at Pleasant View, and then in company with Bro. Keck came here to defend the latter-day work in a ten-night debate with Elder Roberts (Campbellite). Three months ago Bro. Keck preached the word here, in the band stand on the public square, with telling effect. The Lord showed him that he would receive a challenge, which took place the next day, as indicated in the spiritual dream. The matter was turned over to Bro. I. N. White, and after arrangements were made, I was requested to come and do the debating. At Pittsburg the Lord showed us that we would have a lot of filth to meet. Never in my life have I seen a professed minister for Christ throw more dirt than this so-called evangelist. I have been much blessed to meet and answer the false charges, and am ably assisted by Bro. Keck. Two more nights will finish the debate.

I believe the Lord has some sheep about here to gather into the fold.

Very wet, muddy weather now.

Bro. Keck will labor in these regions after debate, and I return home to make ready to meet Reverend Hicks, Baptist, at Baldknob, Arkansas, on two church propositions. I desire to be remembered in the prayers of the faithful.

PIEDMONT, Missouri, November 8.

Editors Herald: It has been quite a long time since I have written for your pages. No doubt, many of our elders will be surprised to learn we have left Pennsylvania, and came to Missouri, but nevertheless we are here. We all like it, and intend to make it our home in the future.

There are only three Saints besides myself, but trust there will be more before long. We have succeeded in getting Elders Spurlock and Thomas here to preach to the people. Prejudice does not seem to run as high here as some other places, but there is quite enough. We got the Christian church for five nights, and had good crowds out and quite a number seemed interested. Then the Christian people closed their doors on us; but, thanks be to God, we got enough truth before the people that I do not believe they will be satisfied until they know more of this true gospel. We hope there may be some way opened up for the elders by next summer.

I have never regretted the step I have taken in this latter-day work, but I rejoice to think I ever embraced it, for I know it is true, and is of God. My desire is to grow better each day, to grow more in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior, and so to live that others may see by my works that this work is true. I pray that this good work may go on until all the honest in heart will be gathered into the church. Our lives and our prayers with God's help will be the only means of building up our church, so let us all be faithful, that we may be true helpers in this work.

EVA HARTRUP.

JASPER, Tennessee, November 21.

Editors Herald: I have long been a reader of the HERALD, and have often desired to write. I enjoy reading the letters, and hence thought some items from here might be interesting to others.

There are no Saints near here, except a small branch six miles from here. I have been a member of the church for about twelve years, being baptized when a child, by Bro. Hackett. I have never regretted the step.

Bro. C. L. Snow has been holding meetings here, and I think some good will be done. He has baptized four, and more are ready.

I am glad some good has been done here; for when we first came, a little over a year ago, there was much prejudice against the church; but this prejudice is dying out, and I hope and trust the Lord will open the eyes of the people and show them the right way.

Some here are investigating the doctrine, being dissatisfied with their present spiritual condition.

I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may be faithful. May the Lord bless the Saints everywhere, is my prayer.

Your sister,

MISS IONE HANCOCK.

Facts About Man.

The average weight of an adult man is 140 pounds 6 ounces.

The average weight of a skeleton is about 14 pounds.

Number of bones, 240.

The skeleton measures one inch less than the height of the living man.

The average weight of the brain of a man is 3½ pounds; of a woman, 2 pounds 11 ounces.

The brain of a man exceeds twice that of any other animal.

The average height of an Englishman is 5 feet 9 inches; of a Frenchman, 5 feet 4 inches; and of a Belgian, 5 feet 6½ inches.

The average weight of an Englishman is 150 pounds; of a Frenchman 135 pounds; and of a Belgian, 140 pounds.

The average number of teeth is 32.

A man breathes about 20 times a minute or 1,200 times an hour.

A man breathes about 18 pints of air in a minute or upward of 7 hogsheads in a day.

A man gives off 4.08 per cent. carbonic gas of the air he respire; respire 10,666 cubic feet of carbonic acid gas in 24 hours; consumes 10,667 cubic feet of oxygen in 24 hours, equal to 125 cubic inches of common air.

A man annually contributes to vegetation 124 pounds of carbon.

The average of the pulse in infancy is 120 per minute, in manhood, 80; at 60 years, 60. The pulse of females is more frequent than that of males.

"Opening the Gates" is the title of a story by Sr. Walker, the first number of which will appear in the December number of the Autumn Leaves. It is in two parts, and is both interesting and instructive. The same number will contain an entertaining little story by Vida E. Smith.

New Press—Money Wanted.

The new press has arrived for the Herald Office. We are in need of means to pay for this at once, and keep up our regular work. Will the Saints please take notice, and all who are in arrears on subscription, or accounts, please forward at once, and oblige.

Also, by reason of the Herald Office's extended loan to purchase the Ensign Office some time ago, it is compelled to carry an indebtedness for that office. To relieve the Herald Office, and aid the Ensign Office, also, we wish to borrow from Saints and friends, $4,000. Who can contribute a loan for the good of the publication interests, for one year, or two, either in small sums or large? You can not aid the work better. Any one who wishes to make a loan that is entirely safe, and who will get the money when due, please communicate with Herald Publishing House, Lamoni, Iowa, and oblige.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent.

In and for the District of Minnesota: The Saints and friends of the Minnesota District will please take notice that on the resignation of Bro. F. D. Omans, Bishop's agent, in and for the district of Minnesota, for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Bro. W. C. Griffin, of Audubon, Minnesota, was duly appointed agent for said territory, and that he is duly authorized to act in behalf of the Bishopric of said Reorganized Church, in and for said district of Minnesota.

Saints and friends in said Minnesota district will therefore confer with Bro. W. C. Griffin in aiding by offerings and tithes as the law of Christ directs the work of the gospel, in and for said district.

The Bishopric hereby extends thanks to Bro. F. D. Omans for the faithful discharge of the duties of said office in the past.

Very respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, November 10, 1902.

Conference Notices.

District conference convenes in Oklahoma Mission, December 5, at the Seiling Branch, Seiling, Dewey County, Oklahoma. Clerks of branches see to the formulating of reports correctly and see that they are on hand at proper time. S. S. Smith, district clerk.

Married.

McPHERSON—HARP.—At twelve o'clock noon, October 12, 1902, Bro. G. E. McPherson and Sr. M. J. Harp were united in the bonds of matrimony, the bride being the widow of Elder M. K. Harp. They will remain at the home of the bride. Marriage ceremony conducted by Elder W. S. McPherson.

Died.

SCOTT.—At his home near Borden, Indiana, Elder James M. Scott, on November 4. He was born March 15, 1851, in the same house from which he was buried, in Clark County, Indiana. Was baptized into Christ on July 16, 1872, by W. W. Blair; ordained a deacon December 8 of the same year. On June 1 of the following year he was ordained a priest, and then to the office of an elder on December 1, 1873. July 27, 1896, he was ordained as a special witness in the Second Quorum of Seventy. Ever since he first heard the gospel he had been an ardent advocate of the principles of the faith, and about fifteen years had been actively engaged in ministerial work under General Conference appointment. Last spring he was appointed to labor in Tennessee, but was detained at home by reason of sickness in his family until in June, when he left for his mission-field, where he contracted the affliction which brought him to his death: typhoid fever and spinal meningitis being the immediate cause of his demise. He was married July 30, 1871, to Miss Althea E. Fordyce, and to them were born nine children, three of whom, James, Clara, and Lizzie, had preceded him across the black sea of death. His wife and youngest child, Freddie, are both lying in a critical condition with typhoid fever. Funeral sermon was preached by Elder W. J. Smith, assisted by Elders J. W. Adams and J. W. Metcalf.

SMITH.—Albert William, son of Wm. R. and Clara B. Smith, born April 25, 1901, was taken with spinal meningitis on July 28, about noon, and died following day at 7.10 a. m. Funeral sermon at 9.30, July 30, by Elder M. H. Forscutt, after which the body of the innocent one was interred in Wyuka Cemetery.

SMALL.—Godfrey, November 12, 1902. Born May 27, 1827, and baptized May 28, 1872, by A. J. Cowden. Was faithful unto death.

ANDERSON.—Elmer Burton, youngest son of Bro. Myron and Sr. Olive Anderson, of Bemiji, Minnesota, on Monday, October 27, 1902, aged 10 years, 11 months, 17 days. Baptized September 26, 1901. Death was caused by blood-poisoning resulting from a fragment of gun-cartridge shell penetrating the body accidentally on October 24.

Addresses.

Address of Elder A. B. Phillips: 1004 J Street, Sacramento, California.

Peter Anderson, Wilsesgade Nr. 2, II Christiania, Norway.

"The Rich Young Man" is the title of a continued story, the first number of which will appear in the December Autumn Leaves. It is designed to bring out some of the teachings of the church in an interesting manner, and, incidentally, deals somewhat with life in Southern California. The California Saints should read it to make sure that they are not misrepresented.

Sand Dunes of the Atlantic Coast.

Washington, D. C., November 14, 1902.—For several years the sand dunes of the Atlantic Coast have been made a subject of study by the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, and a number of papers have been issued in regard to sand-binding grasses. During the past summer a study has been made by the Bureau of Forestry to determine what trees and shrubs are most useful in reclaiming the shifting dunes. Considerable damage has been done by dunes, especially in Virginia and North Carolina, and large dunes in several places along the coast are threatening life-saving stations, residences, and club houses.

Dunes are formed by the drifting inland of sand washed up on the shore by high tides. The direction of the prevailing wind determines the course of dunes. They advance with the wind, or, if the wind changes its direction, as in New Jersey, they retreat and are blown back into the sea.

Dunes which are advancing on valuable property may be diverted from their course by building on top of them fences placed at an angle to the direction of the prevailing wind. Further drifting of the dunes may be prevented by planting on them beach grass, waxberry, or wax myrtle, which hold the sand together, and the permanent retention of the land can be best accomplished by obtaining as soon as possible a dense stand of forest trees, such as pine and oak.

Last June, Professor T. H. Macbride, professor of botany at the State University of Iowa, delivered the address on the occasion of the dedication of the new Science Hall at the University of South Dakota. This address has just been issued in pamphlet form. Professor Macbride chose for his subject "The Gifts of Science." He discussed what science had done for the world, and what it is doing. He held that the investment which the world has made in chemical laboratories, and in chemists, has been more remunerative in dollars and cents than any one of us can possibly realize. Every art and every industry in any vogue among men will at some point, if not at all points, greatly acknowledge their debt to the recent science of the world. The art of the dyer, the art of the weaver, the art of the metallurgist, that of the toiler in wood or stone, all are indebted to science. No one can estimate the service rendered the world through our knowledge of electricity. Rich and poor alike share in its benediction. Yet this is in its infancy only. The contributions of modern science to human thinking have been not only immense in this, but in all other lines of intellectual effort they have been absolutely revolutionary. Through our more perfect knowledge of philosophy and botany great benefits have come to the world. There are yet other advances for the future, and every advance has infinity for its own. "Around every circle another can be drawn; there is no end in nature, but every end is a beginning; there is always another dawn risen on each midnight."

ADMINISTERING TO THE SICK.

"Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick."—James 5: 14, 15.

One of the most comforting things in the religion of Latter Day Saints is the ordinance of administering to the sick; and yet it has often been the source of some of the severest trials known to some people. Not the ordinance itself so much as the unwise conduct of those administering. There have been many instances where the elder, prompted by the influence of the Spirit, has prophesied of the recovery of the sick one, and events have proven the truthfulness of the prophecy. In many instances, too, those administering have been warned by the Spirit's influence that the sick one was appointed unto death, and events have proved the correctness of the warning. Indeed, very often, and we might say generally, the elders administering, one or more, have decided impressions one way or the other. And here has arisen the difficulty. There having been so many instances where the elders have had correct impressions, they are very often, if not generally, asked by interested ones as to "how they feel" about the sick one's condition and chances.

It is the general verdict among the elders that it is a difficult thing to "interpret the Spirit" in administrations. Often the greatest degree of the Spirit is felt in administering to those who, as subsequent events prove, are appointed unto death. In many instances this manifestation of the presence of the Spirit has been taken as an omen that the sick one would recover and the interested ones so told by the elder. Of course the death of the afflicted one in such a case can not but be a shock to the faith of friends and loved ones of the departed one.

Again, after an elder is called upon to administer in cases which are conditioned so as to arouse a great degree of sympathy and personal concern within the heart of the elder, causing him to misread, by reason of his prejudice or bias, the promptings of the Spirit, and prompt him to say things which the indications of the Spirit should have led him not to say. The presence of great sympathy and pity often militates against the instillation of the right kind of faith necessary to bring the gift of healing. The elder, in order to be in proper condition to read aright the leadings of the Spirit, must be largely passive, unbiassed by personal sympathy or previous suggestions by others.

Undue sympathy and misinterpretation of the Spirit's promptings have been the source of many false predictions, and these false predictions have been the source of great trials to the faith of many who have had loved ones taken from them by the sure, cold hand of the grim reaper. So many such cases have developed that the Lord saw fit to rebuke the elders thus: "Prophesying over them that are sick in administering to them has been a fruitful source of trouble among my people. They must observe that this they are not required to do except there be a direct manifestation of the Spirit which may direct it. Pray over the sick, anoint them with oil, as commanded in the law, and leave them in my hands, that the Spirit may deal with them according to my wisdom. Many spiritual manifestations have been had. Some of these have been false, and under the operation of the law which I gave many, many years ago, those who make these false presentations are not to be feared among my people. They are not justified in permitting their human sympathies to overcome that which has been written in my Scriptures: The spirit of the prophets is subject to the prophets."—Doctrine and Covenants 125: 15.

We stated before that the ordinance of laying on hands was one of the greatest of comforts to Latter Day Saints. And should it not be? It is indeed comforting to think God has prepared a way in which we may come to him in absolute assurance of a blessing for our sick ones. Not necessarily that they shall always recover; for it must needs be that sooner or later each must pay blood homage to the subtle harvester.

But though the sick one be appointed unto death, we have the blessed assurance, "And if they die, they die unto me." Comforting thought! We have noted that often the greatest degree of the Spirit is felt at the bedside of one appointed unto death. And why not? Blessed in the sight of God is the death of his Saints, for then they come home to him, freed from the bondage and limitations of the flesh. Far more blessed to "die unto the Lord" than to live unto a possible falling away from grace.

There is no more positive assurance or proof of the value or genuineness of the religious idea than the fact that to Latter Day Saints death loses its sting, and that they can actually find cause for rejoicing in the death of loved ones and friends. Bitter though it be to part with them, yet sweet is the thought that they have died unto the Lord, and are with the blood-washed, happy throng in the paradise of rest. Why should not the Spirit be felt more at the bedside of one soon to take its spirit-flight unto God whom it knew before imprisoned and manacled by the bonds of clay?

We have seen loved ones pass away from this life, yet when, by reason of their belief and the ordinance of laying on of hands, we could feel that their death was "unto the Lord," in the dregs of the bitter cup we found a sweetness which removed the sting and changed our doleful wail of sadness into a song which mingled the sorrow of parting with the joy of assurance of eternal life. Blessed hope! Blessed ordinance! And with our loved ones going one by one to join the choir invisible, less and less grows the pang of parting, more and more grows our assurance, and the longing to be at rest, until if we abide ever in this blessed faith, when the summons of the sure reaper come to us, we shall greet him with a smile of joy. And if we can look forward, by reason of our faith, with joy at our summons, then why should not the pangs of departing from dying friends be mollified by joy that their cares are o'er?

Saints, it is a blessed privilege to place our sick with God!

VICTORY (?) IN DEBATE.

It has often been said that in religious debates both sides generally claim a decisive victory; and we believe that is largely true, as in a majority of instances the papers representing both sides of the discussion express satisfaction as to the outcome of the debate, and generally "claim a decisive victory for the truth." Owing to this fact we have sometimes been led to wonder if there was enough good coming from these debates to justify them being held. While it is true that each disputant and his supporters generally claim a decisive victory, and feel satisfied as to the results, the people probably the most benefited are the ones who, on going to the discussion, have no preconceived ideas or prejudices, and hence are able to judge fairly upon the merits of the matter presented in the discussion. Then the best criterion would be as to which of the contestants gained the most converts. This would be placing it as a matter of statistics, which would probably be difficult to get in all cases.

We have received a copy of the Gospel Messenger, published at Elgin, Illinois, from the Brethren Publishing House. In the issue of November 8, on page 720, is a letter from one O. J. Beaver, written from Nora Springs, Iowa, October 27, in which he speaks of the debate held at Mallard, Iowa, between Bro. C. J. Hunt, and Elder George A. Shamberger, who represented the Brethren faith. After stating the causes which led up to the debate and the two propositions discussed, the writer says:

The debate was conducted in a Christian spirit by Bro. Shamberger, and we are glad to note that the cause did not suffer in his hands. One of the most startling things that came to our ears was when Elder Hunt arose before the audience in the affirmative and held in his hands three books—(1) The Bible, (2) Book of Mormon, (3) Doctrine and Covenants of the Mormon Church, placing them on an equality as inspired books written by men of God, placing the Book of Mormon superior to the Bible in its plainness of teaching, and further claiming that the Bible is only a historical book. But Bro. Shamberger was equal to the occasion, and met them very nicely by the word of God and their own documents, and took away their support in such a clear-cut way that he was met with great applause by the audience. We can say with a certainty that Mr. Hunt did not meet one of the arguments with any degree of fairness, but bluff and burlesque were his weapons. When Bro. Shamberger defined the word Mormon it fell like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky upon our opponents. For the benefit of all our people we give the definition (“a hideous female specter”), and we are not surprised that the Mormons are shy of the word.

The Brethren at Mallard are much built up, and I think it will be a great help to the cause at that point, and those who attended went home stronger in the faith of Christ, and those of us who must meet the issue feel better equipped for the work. Once more we can say the Lord has triumphed gloriously. Blessed be his name. The discussion was held in the opera-house, and the people manifested their interest by a well-filled house each session. The sentiment was in favor of the truth as taught by the Brethren, and their appreciation was shown by a large purse. May God bless the efforts of our brother wherever he goes, was the prayer of all as we took the parting hand.

Praise the Lord for his goodness toward the children of men.

CHURCH FINANCES.

We give elsewhere in the HERALD, the views of Bro. Joseph Flory, on the subject of Church Finances. We have no objection to urge against every elder, or member presenting his views upon any subject within the range of human differences of opinion. It seems to us, however, that when men are put in charge of any special work in the church their rendition of the law, or rules of the church under which they are supposed to serve, should have the preference; and unless the liberties of the people are subverted, there should be general acquiescence in their conclusions.

In the article referred to the writer assumes the whole provisions in the rules governing the finances of the church to be couched in the law of consecration; but urges that the terms tithing and consecration are synonymous. If they are synonymous, “meaning the same thing,” then the strong insistence that those who have written of the finance law as tithing, or the law of tithing have been laboring under a mistake, is an error, for they have been substantially correct.

In order to make the point that consecration covers the whole law, whether “consecrations,” “tithing,” or “free-will offering,” the writer assumes that section 106 is in explanation of section 42, paragraphs 8 to 10. This we think to be an error for the following reasons:

1. In order to make it to appear the writer gives a definition of the word “residue” occurring in paragraph 10, quoting it as if from Webster’s Dictionary, that we do not find in the unabridged.

2. If it was intended to be an explanation of section 42, paragraphs 8 to 10, then it is more properly intended to explain what was meant by the term, “more than is necessary for their support,” than of the term, “consecration.”

3. More than that, the question involved in section 106 is “tithing,” and not “consecration.” It was tithing that was asked about in the question, and it was tithing in the answer. So that if section 106 has relation to section 42, paragraphs 8 to 10, it must be as an explanation as to tithing.

4. In section 42, paragraphs 8 to 10, there is nothing definite as to method, kind, or character of what is to be consecrated. “Thy properties” would signify, anything the disciple had that he might, could, or would spare; and it must be that the indefiniteness of it was the occasion of further inquiry in regard to it, which received the answer in section 106.

5. The purposes seem to have been alike, though differently worded, “purchasing lands,” “building houses of worship,” “building up of the New Jerusalem,” are almost identical with, “the building of mine house,” “laying the foundation of Zion,” “for the priesthood,” “debts of the presidency” (those incurred in the work required of them). This was the object of the “tithing” of the people.

8. Section 42 was given in February, 1831. In September of the same year, a revelation was received, evidently intended to fix the period during which tithing should continue. The language is: “Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people.” This was seven years before the giving of section 106, and the latter was in reply to the question as to how much was required as a tithing.

9. It is evident then that the surplus was a part of the rule of tithing, and that if section 106 was explanatory it would be in reference to the “more than was needful” part of section 42, paragraphs 8 to 10.

10. There is no more inconsistency in calling consecrations free-will offerings, as coming under the general head of the law of tithing, than there is in treating of tithing, free-will offerings, and consecrations as all being under the law of consecration, if the term consecration means tithing, and tithing means consecration because all moneys and properties donated, or set apart for church uses are the result of consecration. It is as logical to call them sacrifices, or donations for the same reasons.

11. There is no more difficulty in harmonizing the various revelations touching the finances of the church upon the hypothesis that all parts of the system come under the one general head of tithing, than there is to group them under the head of consecration, if the two terms mean the same thing.

It may be conceded that every contribution of either moneys or properties is a voluntary gift, donation, or free-will offering, as the church is not empowered either by the spiritual law given to govern the church, or the laws of the land under which the church is established and organized to compel the giving of goods or moneys. It is to us, however, more in harmony to adjust each department under the head of tithing for these reasons:

(a) That the statement that the period of time called "to-day" in section 64, paragraph 5 names that principle as being the one by which the "people" of God were to be tithed.

(b) That before a debt is collectible it must become a definite and specified sum. In no other term is there even an approximate specification of how much is required. In consecration, free-will offering, residue, there is the element of indefiniteness, leaving the sums or amount at the will, understanding, and faithfulness or devotion and determination of the person giving.

(c) There is a line of instruction connected with the administration of the law of tithing, including surplus, by which an understanding between the one desiring to make an appropriation of his lands, goods, wares, merchandise, stock, or moneys, and the Bishopric, under which the first payment may be ascertained, after which the tenth, or tithe will apply. If this agreement is established, then, and not till then can it be said that a debt is created. If it is not established, then as before, the matter of giving—both as to amount and method remains with the one who may choose to give; and he may make it a consecration; i. e., an amount to be used for a specific object stated by himself; or a free-will offering put into the treasury without restriction as to purpose, which the Bishop may apply to any general purpose requiring the use of means.

But why should we continue a profitless controversy over the name under which the Bishop must undertake and carry on his work of looking after the finances of the church?

Is it not better to leave each department at liberty to carry on its work according to the law and the light, wisdom, and direction of the Spirit to which as officers of their calling they are entitled? We certainly think so.

A REALLY brave man will not hesitate to do right though it may possibly put him in the attitude of having been in the wrong. Such a man can afford, even, to permit those who seek to oppose him by unfair means to think him to be weak, rather than to demean himself by retaliating in a similar way.

EARTHQUAKES.

There have been very serious seismic disturbances in various places of late. The following is taken from the Chicago Tribune for November 18, 1902. It is remarkable for Utah:

Salt Lake, Utah, November 17.—An earthquake shook the state of Utah shortly after noon to-day, doing damage all over the State. The shocks were comparatively light in Salt Lake, but in the southern part of the State buildings were ruined and other serious damage done.

In St. George, a place of 3,000 population in the southwestern part of the State, nine distinct shocks were felt, beginning at thirteen minutes to one and lasting until half past one. The school building was shaken so violently that the ceilings were shattered. The falling plaster caused a panic and the children rushed from the building, the teachers losing all control.

Several children were hurt in the crush on the stairs, and one girl was carried out unconscious. Houses were shaken so badly that dishes were broken and pictures swung violently on the walls. Chimneys were demolished and several brick buildings were cracked. Clouds of dust rose from the mountains, which could be seen to move. Rocks rolled down the hills, adding to the damage.

MORMON TOWER RUINED.

The tower of the Mormon temple at St. George oscillated ten inches at its top, and the spire of the tabernacle was shaken out of perpendicular, so that it may have to be taken down. The streets were filled with panic-stricken people all afternoon.

Reports from Santa Clara, near St. George, say that not a chimney was left standing.

The shocks seemed to travel from the southwest toward the northeast. In Pine Valley part of a large brick store building collapsed, while a brick dwelling was torn apart to such an extent that it is unsafe for occupation. A spring near the center of town which always furnished a steady supply of clear, cold water spouted up like a geyser. First it rose only a dozen feet in the air. Then came another shock, and a hissing, steaming column of water rose to a height of fully one hundred feet. After the shocks subsided the flow remained strong, although there was no more spouting.

SHOCKS AT OTHER POINTS.

At Cedar City, farther north, there was another panic, but nobody was injured. The same situation existed in Parowan. In Beaver County, where extensive copper, silver, gold, and lead mines are situated, there was confusion in a number of mines. The miners underground felt the shocks, and in several places loose rock began to fall. In Salt Lake the shocks were felt on the upper floors of the high buildings. In the office of the United States weather bureau on the top floor of the Dooly Block, the clock was stopped by the shock.

STROMBOLI AGAIN ACTIVE.

Rome, November 17.—A fresh eruption of the volcano Stromboli took place yesterday evening, accompanied by a terrific explosion and a great flow of lava. It was a magnificent spectacle, visible from all the northern parts of Sicily, the flames rising from the volcano illuminating the surrounding sea.

The situation of the few inhabitants of the island of Stromboli is precarious. They are frightened especially by the washing ashore of great quantities of dead fish, which have been killed apparently by a submarine disturbance.

A number of yachts from Naples and other places have visited the waters surrounding the island, to allow those on board to view the eruption.

HAWAIIAN VOLCANO VIOLENT.

Honolulu, November 11, via San Francisco, California, November 17.—A wireless message received here this morning from the island of Hawaii states that the volcano Kilauea has broken out in the most violent eruption for the last twenty years. Kilauea has shown mild intermittent activity since the outbreak of St. Pierre.

DAMAGE IN GUATEMALA.

Panama, Colombia, November 17.—Passengers from Central America who arrived here yesterday report the complete destruction of the territory surrounding the volcano of Santa Maria, Province of Quezaltenango, Guatemala, in consequence of the recent eruption. The adjacent villages, the rich coffee plantations, with over three hundred thousand dollars' worth of coffee stored in bags, and hundreds of lives were lost.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE HERALD.

Editors Herald: Before I became a member of the church my interest in its publications began, and to this time there has been no abatement, and in public and private I have sought to persuade the membership to subscribe for the HERALD, Ensign, Autumn Leaves, and the Hope; and also to have the books issued by the office in their homes.

I am always glad to help in this work, and pleased to know that some of the elders have been successful in getting subscribers.

I will tell you some of the experiences through which we pass in this kind of work, so you may know of some of the difficulties there are to contend with: Bro. A has been a member of the church for many years. Has raised a family, and all are in the church. He has never been a subscriber for any of the publications and has neither a Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, nor any other book in his home. I asked him to subscribe for the HERALD. His answer was that he had no money.

Bro. B has a small family, has been under the influence of the church all his life, and when asked to subscribe for the HERALD said he could not spare the money, but enough was spent every year for tobacco to pay for all the church papers.

Bro. C is a Sunday-school and Religio worker, and active in church work; but can not spare the money for church papers.

I thought Sr. D surely could take the Autumn Leaves because of being in possession of talent for church, Sunday-school, and Religio work, and also the money to pay for them; but her answer was, "I have no time to read them."

Sr. E, after putting me off for several times, finally concluded she could not take it at present.

The above are samples of what we meet in trying to help the sale of church publications, and with it comes a tinge of sadness; because in nearly every instance where excuses are made, enough money, and some to spare, is wasted on tobacco, fine clothing, expensive head-dress, theater-going, and sharing in all the frivolities of a sinful and froward generation.

We should be sorry indeed if the foregoing exhibit of an elder's experience in seeking to secure subscribers for the church publications, and purchasers for its books were true of other places than the one of which he writes. But we are acquainted with the conditions of a number of places where Saints are the dwellers, and occupying quite successfully, and in a number of these many who do not take the papers, nor have the books of the church, are in rather hard lines so far as money may be concerned. Their harvests come but once a year, are sometimes good but are often poor, and are precarious at all times. They do not use tobacco, do not use either tea, or coffee, are cleanly but not extravagantly dressed, their clothing often being coarse and of cheap material, so far as every-day wear is concerned; their Sunday wear is better but by no means costly. They do not attend theaters, shows, or spend money for sight-seeing or mere pleasure. Still in the houses of many of such poor people we have found the HERALD, the Ensign, the Glad Tidings, or the Autumn Leaves; in some instances all of them, and the Holy Scriptures, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Church History. Truth compels us to admit, however, that in some homes of Saints whom we know to be amply able to have them we have found none of the church works; the result of mere thoughtlessness on the part of the provider for the family.

There should be a copy of the HERALD taken by every family in the church; which would mean one for every five members. This would give the HERALD about eight thousand subscribers, or over.

We believe that every elder in the field, every president of district, or branch, every Sunday-school superintendent and Religio presiding officer, and every secretary of branch or district, and every Bishop's agent should earnestly urge the Saints to take the church papers.

If Saints are found who are really unable to take the HERALD, it should be sent to them anyway, upon the idea that they need it and what it contains to help them into better conditions of belief and knowledge. There should be no fear upon the part of any solicitor that Saints would claim inability to pay, unless such was really the fact; though it may be hard to believe that a man who drinks liquors or uses tobacco to an amount yearly more than sufficient to carry the expense of all the church papers, and the standard books of the church, is really too poor to take them and pay for them.

For instance; ten cents a day for drinks, beer, ale, wine, or whisky, tobacco in any form, makes $36.50 per year; enough to carry subscription for all the church papers, all the standard works of the church, including the history, and have enough over for a fairly good suit of clothes, including hat and shoes. Five cents a day is $18.25 per year, enough to carry the subscriptions and books referred to above and enough over to furnish the wife a new hat and pair of good shoes for Sunday wear. Two and one half cents a day is $9.12½ per year, enough to carry all the church papers and one of the best magazines in the United States.

Now, Saints, if you do not believe the above calculations, take your pencils and try them.

It is a shame to be ignorant when there is opportunity to be well-informed. Subscribe for HERALD, Ensign, Autumn Leaves, Hope, Glad Tidings, all of them if you can; if not, begin with the HERALD, as it is the acknowledged organ of the church, $1.50 per year.

THE lessons taught by adversity are more lasting than those learned in prosperity, for this reason: Men when prosperous or wealthy learn only of those things they choose to study; while the things taught by adversity are the things which men are compelled to learn, and memory clings to them most tenaciously. Besides this prosperity has many ways in which forgetfulness may be sought and obtained, but adversity offers only endurance as a remedy.

The sentence "Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked," is suggestive. Poverty offers no opportunity for putting on of flesh and becoming fat; but the ways of prosperity are full of devices to tempt the appetite with that which is adverse to healthy existence and men grow fat, and intolerant at the same time.

The man who being in adversity maintains a cheerful mien and avoids envy and bitterness of spirit towards others whom he sees in prosperity's ways, has learned a lesson of helpfulness that will take him by the doors of temptation, into which the prosperous man will not hesitate to enter.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Rosa Watson remits five dollars to Graceland, by Bro. R. M. Elvin, and to her note adds: "Since writing my letter I was looking over the HERALD and saw that D. C. White had been preaching in Deerlodge, then from there to Helena. I would like for any of the ministry passing from Deerlodge to Helena, to stop off at Elliston, Montana, on the Northern Pacific Railroad about twenty-nine miles from Helena and thirty miles from Deerlodge. They could stop with E. V. Graybeal; his wife and I are Latter Day Saints." Elders in that field please notice.

In a letter dated at Somerville, Victoria, New South Wales, Bro. J. W. Wight states: "We are glad to report that indications are favorable for a good work. Bro. Wells is in Brisbane, Queensland, and prospects are brightening there. Bro. J. H. N. Jones opened the work in Adelaide, South Australia, and baptized three, one of whom has since returned to the Utah church. The brethren in New Zealand report strong opposition from professors of religion, but a fine interest, with prospects for an ingathering in the near future. Bro. Barmore has baptized eleven and is proving to be an effective worker. Bro. Haworth has opened a mission in Richmond, one of the largest suburbs of Melbourne, and the branch has removed to that suburb and meets in Masonic Hall, Swan Street. Bro. Butterworth is improving in health. I am free from rheumatism, and besides other work done, held a debate on the sleep of the soul, the night of September 10, before more than five hundred, in St. Marys, New South Wales, with a Mr. Bell, Christadelphian, and an eight-night debate with a Mr. Blair, Disciple, October 7 to 17 inclusive, in Richmond, Victoria, I affirming signs following first four nights; Mr. Blair affirming right to preach from a New Testament call alone, the last four nights. . . . We have five names for baptism, and look for several others." Nineteen baptisms reported, all of which is "good news from a far country."

Elder Ammon White writes from Tunnelhill, Illinois, under date of November 17: "Yesterday seven more were baptized, making twenty-two in the last three weeks. Left all rejoicing and more ready for the kingdom."

Bro. T. H. Moore, writing from Providence, Rhode Island, November 19, and remitting for the HERALD, says: "I am thankful that I am able to renew you. I could not get along very well without reading your pages; they are so instructing. When I read how God blesses his servants in preaching his word, and about many coming into the kingdom, it makes my heart glad and I thank God that he blesses his servants with power of the gospel. Again, in reading, I find that some of my brethren are not so much blessed. I read how they go to strange places as a stranger in a strange land where there are no Saints, and they can get no place to preach in, and men's hearts are full of wrath against them. Then my feelings go up to God in prayer for his servants that he will bless them with friends who will take them home and administer to their wants, and that God will subdue the powers of darkness."

W. D. Lynch, writing from St. Thomas, Ontario, November 17, and remitting for the HERALD, says: "I send you my subscription to the HERALD for another year. I can not do without the church paper. It is a godsend, and is very dear to me, for I love to read it that I may learn how all our brethren and sisters are in all parts of the earth. I pray that they may be faithful to the end and ask all Saints to remember me in their prayers that if it be God's will I might have my hearing restored. By God's help I am living this gospel the best I know how and am doing all I can to let my light so shine that others may see our good works by lending and giving my church papers to outsiders, and by telling the good old story. Some are beginning to wake up and some are so far in the dark that they can not see. I pray that our heavenly Father will open their eyes that they may see and their ears that they may hear and understand."

CHURCH FINANCES.

That God should institute a government or kingdom upon the earth in which finances were to have a prominent place in its successful administration, and not give a rule and system for its regulation, would be to suppose that he was negligent in that respect. That God has set up a kingdom on the earth in this dispensation is claimed by those who believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. That God has given to his people instruction to govern the finances of the church will be admitted by all. That there have been many different ideas and views as to the meaning and application of the law is evidenced by the fact that a great diversity of opinions has been expressed in the past through the church papers. That there must be a better understanding of the law, before we as a church can practically apply it, seems to need no argument. That there is or can be more than one true and correct interpretation of it also seems to be certain. To think otherwise would be to admit that God is the author of confusion. To say that there is inharmony between the various revelations given on the subject would be to charge God with imperfection and inconsistency.

The claim has been made that there have been two or even more laws or parts of a law given for the guidance of the church in financial matters; namely, the law of consecrations, the law of tithing, and the law of free-will offerings.

The object of this writing is to show why I believe there is but one law, and that upon that proposition only can there be harmony found to exist in the revelations. If there be two or more laws, then there should be definite lines to show where the one ends and the other begins, or where they are applicable and where they are not. But in all the theories presented by the many writers upon that subject, which have come under my observation, none have as yet shown satisfactorily to me the lines of distinction between the several laws claimed to exist in relation to the matter.

Webster defines consecration (in the sense in which it is applicable to the subject under consideration) to mean "to set apart, dedicate, or devote to the service of God." I understand there is but one lawful demand for financial contributions applicable to the members of the church. Call it the law of consecration and it means tithing. The giving of tithes is a consecration, a setting apart, dedicating, or devoting to the service of God, for church uses, according to the requirements of the law of consecration. If you choose to call it the law of tithing and pay its demands under that name, it is a consecration just the same. But it [the law] does not include all consecrations that may be made. A free-will offering is also a consecration, just as much so as if it were given according to the requirements of the law. As yet we have found no law, no written statute in Doctrine and Covenants, that governs free-will offering. That book teaches that "men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good, they shall in nowise lose their reward."—Doctrine and Covenants 58: 6.

Here we are taught the general principle of doing good of our own free will. But every man is a law unto himself as to when and where and how much or how little he will give as a free-will offering. There is a statute or written law found in Doctrine and Covenants (call it consecration or tithing, whichever you choose) which does specify how much we must pay to satisfy its demands; viz., surplus first (if we have any surplus), as a beginning of tithing, and one tenth of our interest annually thereafter.

The methods by which we may determine what surplus means are clearly pointed out in the church books. Every man's rights are to be duly considered and respected.

Thus we find only two original sources from which means may come into the church treasury. One is according to the requirements of written law, the law of consecration, or the law of tithing if you choose to so call it. The other is as each one may choose to give, as seemeth him good. The one is a legal debt or claim, the other is a free-will offering. Yet all are consecrations, they having been given, set apart, or devoted to God, or for church purposes. In using the word consecrate the context must determine in what sense it is used, whether it is complying with the requirements of the law or whether it is a gift.

We think now that when we use the terms "the law of consecration" or "the law of tithing" it will be understood they are synonymous, meaning the same thing. We think a mistake has been made by claiming that there are two or more laws or even two or more parts of one law under which church funds may be legally required. Such division has been the cause of much confusion and misunderstanding.

The writer has for years claimed that section 106, Doctrine and Covenants, is only an explanation of the law in some of its parts as given in section 42, paragraphs 8 to 10. In the one place the giving of property is called consecration, in the other it is called tithing, both terms meaning the same thing. If we are wrong in this we await for some one to show where the line is to be drawn.

The question now naturally arises, Can the various revelations be harmonized upon this theory? We think so.

The statement of God, "Let those commandments which I have given concerning Zion and her law, be executed and fulfilled, after her redemption" (D. C. 102:10), we understand applies directly to the full execution of the law of consecration, and includes within the scope of its meaning the giving of inheritances to the Saints in Zion. As proof of our claim we quote from Joseph Smith's letter to W. W. Phelps: "It is contrary to the will and commandment of God that those who receive not their inheritance by consecration, agreeably to his law, which he has given that he may tithe his people to prepare them against the day of vengeance and burning, should have their names enrolled with the people of God."—Church History, vol. 1, p. 259. To Bishop Partridge he wrote: "The fact is this: a man is bound by the law of the church to consecrate to the bishop before he can be considered a legal heir to the kingdom of Zion; and this, too, without constraint; and unless he does this he can not be acknowledged before the Lord, on the church book."—Church History, vol. 1, p. 300. From these quotations and their context we gather the idea that consecration and tithing, being linked together as they are in the Phelps letter, were by Joseph Smith considered as being one and the same law, and that only by obedience to its requirements could we receive an inheritance in Zion. And as stated in the letter to Bishop Partridge, by obedience to the law of consecration we become legal heirs to the kingdom of Zion, or as we understand it, have a lawful right to an inheritance in Zion.

Until Zion is redeemed sufficiently, so that the Bishop is prepared to give inheritances to the Saints, the execution and fulfillment of the law will not in its full sense or purpose be carried out. In the scattered condition of the church we can only approximately carry out the spirit or intent of the law in collecting the necessary funds or means to carry on the missionary work, caring for the poor, and for purchasing lands with a view to redeeming Zion and prepare for the complete fulfillment of the law, the ultimate end of which is to establish the Saints upon an equitable basis upon their inheritances in Zion and to make Zion eventually "independent above all other creatures beneath the celestial world." (D. C. 77:3.) This law must be complied with by all who go to Zion, else they will not be worthy to abide in Zion. By it the land of Zion will be sanctified and made most holy. And unless Zion is built up according to this law God will not receive her unto himself. When this law is fully honored then Zion will be like unto the people of Enoch, whom the "Lord called Zion because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness, and there was no poor among them." (D. C. 36:2.) Then we shall see the curse removed from the land of Zion (38:4), and the saints can sing the song of Zion (D. C. 83:17):

"The Lord hath brought again Zion:
The Lord hath redeemed his people Israel."

The first giving of the law is found in Doctrine and Covenants 42:8-10. In process of time there arose a difference of opinion as to the meaning of the law. (See Bro. John Hawley's letter in HERALD for February 6, 1886, pages 85, 86.) In an editorial in HERALD for September 12, 1891, page 584, we find the following language: "The time came in the history of the people when controversy arose concerning how and what they should pay into the treasury, and on bended knees the petition was made, 'How much, O, Lord?' To this the Lord answered, 'I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people.'"

We think the evidence is conclusive that section 106 was given as an explanation of section 42, paragraphs 8-10, and is not another or a new law as some have claimed.

Now let us keep in mind the explanation already given as to the meaning of the terms "consecration" and "tithing," as used respectively in section 42, paragraphs 8-10, and section 106. Section 48, paragraph 8, says, "consecrate of thy properties," etc., but does not say how much. The explanation as given in section 106 says all of the surplus properties is required to be put into the hands of the Bishop, set apart, dedicated, or devoted to the service of God, which, according to Webster, is consecration. We now have harmony as well as an explicit statement as to how much our first consecration must be. We also claim a harmony between Doctrine and Covenants 42:10, and 106:1. The former says: "And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not."

The latter says: "And after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually." Remember that in placing himself under the law of consecration the individual is then a debtor to all the requirements of the law which requires that after the first consecration of section 42, paragraph 8 (which is the same as the surplus of section 106, paragraph 1) has been made, he shall pay, according to section 106, paragraph 1, one tenth of his interest annually, which is the standing law for ever in Zion and her stakes. Webster defines "residue" as being "that which remains due of a debt or account." Section 42, paragraph 10 says, "If there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not." Notice, it says "if" there be properties more than is needful for their support "which is a residue," or remains due of a debt or account, due to the church according to the law, it shall be consecrated to the Bishop. The language used leaves a clear inference that there may be properties in the hands of the individual more than is needed for his support, which is not a residue, no part of a debt or account due the church according to the law which only requires one tenth of the annual interest after the first consecration of the surplus has been made.

To illustrate clearly our idea, let us suppose that Bro. A has consecrated his surplus according to the law and has received his inheritance. He then goes to work as "steward" over "his own property" (42: 9), and at the end of each year after having paid all of his legitimate expenses (support of himself and family included) he finds he has gained one hundred dollars as his annual interest or increase. How much of that one hundred dollars is a residue, part of his annual debt or account due the church according to section 106, paragraph 1, which requires the one tenth of the annual interest? Certainly not all of the one hundred dollars, but only ten of them. Thus leaving the nine tenths as the individual's own property to use as wisdom may direct. The law having no claim on it, it is not a residue, no part of a debt or account due the church under the specific explanation given in section 106, paragraph 1; thus identifying the residue of section 42, paragraph 10 with the one tenth of section 106, paragraph 1. We can not see that such an explanation does any violence to the language used in section 42, paragraph 10, and it will certainly harmonize the two revelations with each other, and in harmony with the facts in history as to why section 106 was given, when conflicting opinions were entertained by those in the church at the time the question was asked to know how much was required as a tithing.

The two principal revelations relating to the law for governing the Saints in their duties in giving for church purposes having now been harmonized and proven to be only two revelations relating to one law, and not two laws, as some have claimed, we will now notice some other points that have generally been applied to the general membership, and as so applied have been used as arguments in favor of the idea that there is a law to be found in Doctrine and Covenants which will require every member of the church to give all of his increase into the church treasury to become the common property of the whole church, and thus claim that there is such a thing as an "all things in common" doctrine taught, and that we will not have the right to retain any of the increase of our stewardship as our own property; thus coming in conflict with the teachings that are most emphatically taught in section 106, that one tenth of the annual increase in all that the law of tithing will ever require after the first consecration of the surplus has been made. That there was no such doctrine taught by Joseph Smith in the early rise of the church, as an all things in common theory, such as that all the properties of the whole church is to be held in common in the sense of a common stock community, can be clearly proven from church history. (See Church History, volume 1, pages 169, 593; also "Lecture on Church History," by Heman C. Smith, in HERALD for November 20, 1901.)

We do, however, find that there is a doctrine taught in Doctrine and Covenants that some persons are to give all of the increase of their stewardships into the church treasury, to become the common property of the whole church. We will quote the revelations alluded to later on.

Doctrine and Covenants 42:9 speaks of stewards over "their own property," and section 42, paragraph 14 teaches the rights of members to property as their own. And section 51, paragraph 1 teaches that in the appointing to each man his portion according to the law the Bishop was required to give them a "writing," also called a "deed," which would secure to them their portion—inheritance, as we understand it to mean. "And thus all things shall be made sure according to the laws of the land."

In this we certainly have the idea taught that property rights will exist, and that they must be respected as well as be secured by the law of the land. Then there can be no such thing as all things in common in the sense that there are no individual property rights. We must then put some other construction or make some other application of the passages referred to and which we will now quote:

"And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundred-fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God."—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4.

"And again, a commandment I give unto you concerning your stewardship which I have appointed unto you; behold, all these properties are mine, or else your faith is vain, and ye are found hypocrites, and the covenants which ye have made unto me are broken: and if the properties are mine then ye are stewards, otherwise ye are no stewards. But verily I say unto you, I have appointed unto you to be stewards over mine house, even stewards indeed."—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 10.

These two quotations are found in the revelations given in reference to what is generally called the "Order of Enoch," including sections 77, 81, 93, 101. By a careful examination of the matter we have found that these revelations in many things do not apply to the general membership, but to a certain class of officials who were to be organized into an order under bonds and covenants which if broken by transgression were to be visited with the severest of penalties, even the direct judgments of God. My reason for making this claim is that the revelations for governing the Order of Enoch were addressed directly to the high priesthood (77:1); and that those in the Order of Enoch who proved unfaithful were to lose their office as well as standing in the church (77:3); and all those named, under fictitious names, as being commanded to be organized into this order were without exception (so far as I have been able to find their true names) members of either the first presidency, the high council, or the bishopric in the first organization of the church. The object and purpose of the organization was to "manage the affairs of the poor, and all things pertaining to the bishopric both in Zion and in the land of Shinehah (Kirtland, Ohio). (81:4.) Evidently, then, their stewardships was to the handling of church property which had been consecrated to the Bishop according to the law of tithing; and consequently the Lord could say, as above quoted, "Behold all these properties are mine," and that they were only stewards, but stewards appointed by him over his house (the storehouse of the Lord), even stewards indeed, in every sense of the term. Webster says a steward is one who manages the domestic concerns of great families. A fiscal agent of certain bodies. In this case it is the family of the Saints, the body of Christ. And hence as stewards are not the owners of the property in their charge, they have no right to claim the increase or profit that may accrue in the management of their several stewardships, just as we are told in section 101, paragraph 12: "And let not any man among you say that it is his own, for it shall not be called his, nor any part of it." But they are doubtless entitled to a just compensation for all their labors in the management of their several stewardships. Their stewardships may consist of "houses or lands," or "cattle," or "all things save it be the holy and sacred writings." (101:12.) The term "all things" gives an unlimited field to go in and occupy for the general good of the whole church. And this seems to be the primary object of the establishment of the Order of Enoch. And by and through its operation the church may become "independent above all other creatures beneath the celestial world." (77:3.) Then all that is now being done by organized capital, by trusts, combines, and syndicates, to develop the resources of earth, sea, and air, will be done by the Order of Enoch for the benefit of all instead of largely for enriching the few, as is now being done. And thus through God's perfect law all will be blessed by the cooperation of all. "Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God." "But all things must come to pass in their time; wherefore be not weary in well-doing, for ye are laying the foundation of a great work. And out of small things proceedeth that which is great."—Doctrine and Covenants 64:4.

By rightly dividing the word of God we have the key by which we can find a perfect harmony between all the revelations given, and see the beauty, grandeur, and perfection of the law of God by which his church is to be governed in Zion and all of her stakes.

While some may not agree with me in all of the foregoing claims in regard to the financial law of the church, the writer does not court controversy for the sake of contending over differences of opinions; yet he is not at all averse to criticism or an exchange of thought on the subjects presented in this communication by others who may have ideas not in accord with those presented. We believe and fully indorse the sentiments expressed in an editorial in HERALD for August 14, 1901, page 656, which says: "There are, and always have been, differences of opinion among the brethren concerning many questions, and we believe that the HERALD is a medium through which these differences should be discussed, so that by a general exchange of thought we might come nearer to a unity."

Again we quote from an editorial in HERALD for November 6, 1901, page 894: "The HERALD is the property of the church. The real estate, buildings, presses, types, and all other property attached to the printing plant located at Lamoni, are all the property of the Saints as a body. The poorest and the weakest, as well as the richest and the strongest, have an equal interest in the HERALD. . . . Besides this the HERALD is the printed method employed as an aid to bring about a unity of understanding among the Saints, laity as well as ministry, by a proper exchange of ideas, a proper discussion of topics about which there may be variety of opinions."

Again we quote: "It is time for our people to learn to judge all matter strictly upon its merits or demerits, without partiality and without favoritism or palliatism. . . . May the day come when every man, without respect to name or station, and every measure, and act, and utterance, shall be judged simply and purely upon their merits and their merits alone—without fear, without partiality, without favoritism, but in love and with strict regard to truth and right, come from whom or whence they may. It is not who says a thing that should give it the sanction of acceptance at our hands, but what is said. Whether the subject matter be true or false, correct or incorrect, should be the object of our investigations and influence our conclusions."—HERALD, vol. 47, p. 195.

Yours for truth and equal rights,

THE WORKINGS OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Solomon in Ecclesiastes says: "The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done, and there is no new thing under the sun." This declaration has in it much encouragement for the devout Christian who believes that God lives and rules in the world and that the Holy Spirit continues his work in the hearts of men. Worldliness and indifference so abound in this day that there seems to be little interest in the things which make for the salvation of men and the upbuilding of the kingdom of Christ. Discouraging as the situation appears to be, it is not nearly so bad as it has been in times past. The historians tell us that England was in its worst condition, morally and spiritually, about the time the evangelical movement under the Wesleys began; yet, while this condition prevailed, the Holy Spirit had begun to move upon the hearts of many, not only in England but in other parts of the world.

In Germany, some years before Wesley's conversion, there had been converted a humble Moravian peasant named Christian David. His boyhood had been spent in tending sheep. Later he learned the trade of a carpenter and afterward enlisted as a soldier. He was so devout a Romanist that he crawled upon his knees before images and performed penances, invoking departed saints to save him. Up to the age of twenty years he had never even seen a Bible, but from that time it was almost the only book he read. By it he was convinced of the errors of Romanism and joined the Lutherans. He experienced in his own soul that which Luther made the chief doctrine of the Reformation—justification by faith—and at the age of twenty-seven began to preach to his countrymen. His sermons were simple, but powerful and fruitful in leading many to Christ. David was the founder of the Moravian Church, which, in proportion to its numbers, has been the greatest missionary church since the days of the apostles. David's zeal and plainness of speech made his preaching the topic of conversation in houses, streets, roads, and markets throughout Moravia and the whole country became interested. The people assembled at each other's houses to sing and pray and read the Bible. Shepherds sang to their flocks and children left their play to engage in prayer. This poor shepherd and mechanic, called the "bush preacher," led parties of missionaries to Greenland, Denmark, England, and Holland, and preached before the king. One of his followers, Peter Bohler, was the instrument in leading Wesley into the experience of faith.

Nine years before Wesley "felt his heart strangely warmed" and experienced the joy of saving faith, Jonathan Edwards began preaching in America the old doctrine of justification by faith alone. Under his preaching, scores and hundreds of people were convinced of sin and earnestly sought the salvation of their souls, until in many places every house was a house of prayer and Christ was the theme of general conversation. The entire colony came under the influence of this wonderful revival.

About the time of Wesley's conversion Howel Harris, a young Welshman, was brought under conviction, and, to his great joy, was given the witness through faith in Christ that his sins had been forgiven and that he was a child of God. He at once began to tell of the salvation he had himself experienced. At first he visited from house to house in his native parish and in neighboring parishes. The people flocked together and before he was conscious of what he was doing he began to preach to them, and thus, at the age of twenty-two years, became the first Methodist lay-preacher, for he afterward joined Wesley. Great numbers were converted and these Harris formed into small societies. His work greatly displeased the magistrates and clergy, and he was finally ejected from the school of which he was teacher; but such persecution, instead of silencing him, caused him to give himself entirely to the work of an evangelist. He preached from three to six sermons every day to crowded congregations, and such was the impression that sports and public diversions of all kinds became unfashionable and religion was the theme of general conversation. He received some assistance from ministers, one of whom, Reverend Joseph Griffith Jones, instituted a system of movable free schools. Some of the teachers of these schools became Methodist preachers and were both itinerant instructors and the first itinerant Methodist ministers.

The evangelistic movement under the Wesleys really began with that baptism of power which came upon Wesley and his associates who met together in a watch-night service held at the close of the year 1738, which movement spread over England and reached to the uttermost parts of the earth.

About two years later Reverend James Robe, a minister in Scotland, began to preach upon the doctrine of regeneration, and a "glorious revival of the work of God occurred" at Cambuslang and Kilsyth, Scotland. In 1741 sixteen children began to hold prayer-meetings in Kirkintilloch and the religious interest became general. On one day more than thirty persons were awakened under the preaching of Mr. Robe, and in a short time hundreds were converted in the country round about. Drunkenness, profanity, and flagrant sins of all kinds were abandoned, family worship set up and meetings for prayer established, and the people flocked to the house of God. Young and old found their chief interest in religion.

In all this movement in Moravia under David, in America under Edwards, in Wales under Harris, in England under Wesley, in Scotland under Robe—the chief theme of preaching was justification by faith. If such results followed the proclamation of that message in that day, may it not be that this doctrine is the message most needed in this day? We believe it is, and that if faithfully preached it will bear the same fruit in the conviction of the sinful and the salvation of the penitent.

“The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be.” There are many indications that the Holy Spirit is now working upon the hearts of men as he did in the early part of the eighteenth century. May we speedily see the same manifestations of his power in a world-wide revival. There must be, however, the coöperation of those who are the messengers of God to proclaim his word. These will be found among scholars and ministers like Wesley and Edwards, and humble peasants and laymen like David and Harris.—Nothwestern Christian Advocate, August 20.

PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY OF RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

Professor William James, of Harvard, “the great American psychologist,” as the London Spectator calls him, has published a book of five hundred pages on “The Varieties of Religious Experience.” The volume consists of his twenty Gifford Lectures on Natural Religion, delivered at Edinburgh in 1901-1902. These lectures treat neither of theology nor ecclesiasticism, but exclusively with the personal and psychological side of religion—“the feelings, acts, and experiences of individual men in their solitude, so far as they apprehend themselves to stand in relation to whatever they may consider the divine.” In Professor James’s own words, he has “loaded the lectures with concrete examples” of religious experience, and has chosen these from “among the extremer expressions of religious temperament.” It is next to impossible, therefore, to summarize the book satisfactorily, or do much more than state some of his conclusions.

The chapter which the London Spectator regards as the most interesting chapter of the book and the key-note to the whole is the one on religious conversion. Professor James’s conclusions in this chapter are thus epitomized by The Spectator in a two-column review (July 12):

“The contradictions within and without us—the struggle between our two natures and the conflicting facts of the world—cause, he believes, the mental distress in which so many thinking men live or have lived at some period of their lives. Conversion he takes to mean some sort of unification of these conflicting elements—a reconciliation not arising from reason but from insight. Exactly what creed is adopted by such converts is not a point which interests Mr. James; the fact which is for him of so much significance is simply this, that those who experienced this reconciliation ‘did find something welling up in their inner consciousness by which their extreme sadness could be overcome.’ That those who have been in the ‘mystical state’ of conversion find it absolutely authoritative and convincing is, Mr. James considers, reasonable enough. They have no reasonable ground, however, for demanding that those outside this state should accept their revelations uncritically; but the fact of the commonness of their experience does establish a presumption that the visible world is part of a more spiritual universe from which it draws its chief significance, and that ‘the conscious person is continuous with a wider self through which saving experiences may come.’ The usual effect of such experience, whether it be sudden or gradual, is the ‘sense of the presence of a higher and friendly Power,’ ‘the disappearance of all fear from one’s life, the quite indescribable and inexplicable feeling of an inner serenity.’ . . .

“But how does this triumph of the subconscious self come about? There is, according to Mr. James, ‘documentary evidence’ that it comes in various ways—suddenly, as if by miracle; gradually, as if by nature. It comes at all periods of life to persons of all opinions. One of the commonest forerunners of this triumph is a sense of utter weariness, of incapacity to carry on the struggle any longer, a ceasing to care. ‘Our emotional brain-centers strike work, and we relapse into temporary apathy. So long as the egoistic worry of the sick soul guards the door the expansive confidence of the soul of faith gains no entrance; but let the former faint away, even for a moment, and the latter can profit by the opportunity.’ Such a crisis may occur to individuals or to communities.”

Professor James’s own philosophical conclusions as to immorality, Christianity, etc., are suggested rather than stated in the final lecture and in a post-script. As to the reality of what we call the divine, he says:

“Name it the mystical region, or the supernatural region, whichever you choose. So far as our ideal impulses originate in this region (and most of them do originate in it, for we find them possessing it in a way for which we can not articulately account), we belong to it in a more intimate sense than that in which we belong to the visible world, for we belong in the most intimate sense wherever our ideals belong. Yet the unseen region in question is not merely ideal, for it produces effects in this world. When we commune with it, work is actually done upon our finite personality, for we are turned into new men, and consequences in the way of conduct follow in the natural world upon our regenerative change. But that which produces effects within another reality must be termed a reality itself, so I feel as if we had no philosophic excuses for calling the unseen or mystical world unreal.

"God is the natural appellation, for us Christians at least, for the supreme reality, so I will call this higher part of the universe by the name of God. We and God have business with each other; and in opening ourselves to his influence our deepest destiny is fulfilled. The universe, at those parts of it which our personal being constitutes, takes a turn genuinely for the worse or for the better in proportion as each one of us fulfills or evades God's demands. As far as this goes I probably have you with me, for I only translate into schematic language what I may call the instinctive belief of mankind: God is real because he produces real effects."

And again on the same subject:

"I believe the pragmatic way of taking religion to be the deeper way. It gives it body as well as soul, it makes it claim, as everything real must claim, some characteristic realm of fact as its very own. What the more characteristically divine facts are, apart from the actual inflow of energy in the faith-state and the prayer-state, I know not, but the over-belief on which I am ready to make my personal venture is that they exist. The whole drift of my education goes to persuade me that the world of our present consciousness is only one out of many worlds of consciousness that exist, and that those other worlds must contain experiences which have a meaning for our life also; and that although in the main their experiences and those of this world keep discrete, yet the two become continuous at certain points, and higher energies filter in. By being faithful in my poor measure to this over-belief, I seem to myself to keep more sane and true. I can, of course, put myself into the sectarian scientist's attitude, and imagine vividly that the world of sensations and of scientific laws and objects may be all. But whenever I do this, I hear that inward monitor of which W. K. Clifford once wrote, whispering the word 'bosh!' Humbug is humbug, even though it bear the scientific name, and the total expression of human experience, as I view it objectively, invincibly urges me beyond the narrow 'scientific' bounds. Assuredly, the real world is of a different temperament—more intricately built than physical science allows. So my objective and my subjective conscience both hold me to the over-belief which I express. Who knows whether the faithfulness of individuals here below to their own poor over-beliefs may not actually help God in turn to be more effectively faithful to his own greater tasks?"

Professor James professes his inability to accept either popular Christianity or scholastic theism. He classes himself among the "supernaturalists of the piecemeal or crasser type." He is ignorant, he says, of Buddhism; but as he apprehends the Buddhistic doctrine of Karma he agrees in principle with it. On the subject of immortality he says:

"Religion, in fact, for the great majority of our own race means immortality, and nothing else. God is the producer of immortality; and whoever has doubts of immortality is written down as an atheist without further trial. I have said nothing in my lectures about immortality or the belief therein, for to me it seems a secondary point. If our ideals are only cared for in 'eternity,' I do not see why we might not be willing to resign their care to other hands than ours. Yet I sympathize with the urgent impulse to be present ourselves, and in the conflict of impulses, both of them so vague yet both of them noble, I know not how to decide. It seems to me that it is eminently a case for facts to testify. Facts, I think, are yet lacking to prove 'spirit-return,' though I have the highest respect for the patient labors of Messrs. Myers, Hodgson, and Hyslop, and am somewhat impressed by their favorable conclusions. I consequently leave the matter open."

Commenting upon Professor James's conclusions The Congregationalist (July 12) speaks as follows:

"There is nothing in the conclusions of this book which contradicts the great central teachings of Christianity—its thought of God's present fatherhood, the Holy Spirit's race-wide teaching, and the opportunities which open to faith and obedience. On the other hand, it clears away by its inductive study and statement in terms of psychology many difficulties of thought. It stands on the threshold of an open door and points to the space within with an assurance that is not empty. And in the space within the Christian finds himself face to face with the Father whom he knows through Christ."—The Literary Digest, for August 9.

MEATS: COMPOSITION AND DIGESTIBILITY.

"Yea, flesh also, of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter or of cold or of famine."—Doctrine and Covenants 86: 2.

According to the instruction here given we are now in the season when it is intended in the wisdom of the Lord that we should use meat, not to excess, but in moderation, or sparingly; and it is fitting at this time that we should make a study of meats, that we may be prepared to make intelligent use of them. The quotations following are from Government Bulletin No. 34:

"The food of man can not be healthful and adequate unless it supplies the proper amount of the different nutritive ingredients, or nutrients. . . .

"It is natural to divide foods into two classes: animal food and vegetable food. Not only is this division simple and convenient, as pointing out the two great sources of man's food, but the classification is a true one, for the difference between animal and vegetable food is very striking in appearance, composition, and value in the economy of life. It is true that many of the chemical compounds which enter into the composition of these two classes of food are either alike or quite similar; but in general the vegetable foods contain large amounts of carbohydrates—such as sugar, starch, woody fiber, etc.—while the animal foods, and meat in particular, contain only small amounts of these carbohydrates. As regards the fats and nitrogenous matters or 'protein,' the case is reversed; for vegetable foods have comparatively little of these two classes of nutrients, while meats have relatively very large amounts.

"The value of meats as a food, therefore, depends on the presence of two classes of nutrients, protein and fat. The protein is essential for the construction and maintenance of the body. Both protein and fat yield muscular power and maintain the temperature. It is possible to combine the fat of animal foods with the protein so as to meet the requirements of the body without waste, but the vegetable foods contain nutrients more especially adapted for the production of energy.

"Another difference between animal and vegetable foods is in their digestibility. The compounds contained in the animal foods are, of course, very much like those of our bodies, and therefore need but little change before they are ready for use. The vegetable compounds, on the other hand, require much greater changes before they can be assimilated. They are less readily and less completely digested than the animal foods. . . .

"Meat consists of the muscular tissue, or lean, and the varying quantities of fat which are found in the different parts, as between and within membranes and tendons. Besides the fat ordinarily visible there is always present more or less of fat in particles too small to be readily distinguished from the lean which surrounds it. . . .

"All muscular tissue is made up of prism-shaped bundles, which can be divided into smaller and smaller bundles, until finally the muscle-fibers or tubes are reached. These irregular tubes are so small that they are invisible to the unaided eye. . . .

"These muscle-fibers or tubes are held together in bundles by means of connective tissue, and the invisible fat is stored between and inside the different fibers and bundles of fibers. Each of the bundles of muscle-fibers, seen when a piece of meat is 'cut across the grain,' as in a round steak, is made up of hundreds of the muscle-tubes. The envelope or wall of each tube is a very delicate, elastic membrane, composed of nitrogenous material. The walls themselves are quite permanent, but their contents are continually undergoing change and renewal. . . .

"Meats contain large and varying amounts of water. . . . The greater the amount of fat in a given cut the less the amount of water. . . .

"Fat is a valuable constituent of food. It is used in the body to form fatty tissue, and is consumed as fuel, thus serving to maintain the animal temperature and to yield energy in the form of muscular and other power. It is the most concentrated form in which the fuel constituents of food are found. Its fuel value is two and one fourth times that of protein or the carbohydrates. . . .

"There are a great many kinds of nitrogenous compounds in flesh, but the total nitrogenous substance is quite generally designated as protein. These compounds containing nitrogen may be arranged in the following three groups or classes:

"Protein: Albuminoids, as albumen (white of eggs); casein (curd) of milk; myosin, the basis of muscle (lean meat); gluten of wheat, etc. Gelatinoids, as collagen of tendons; ossein of bones; which yield gelatin or glue, etc. Nitrogenous extractives. Meats and fish contain very small quantities of so-called extractives. They are the chief ingredients of beef tea and meat extract.

"The nitrogenous compounds of meat are made up chiefly of albuminoids and gelatinoids, the albuminoids being the most valuable. . . . Different views have been held as to the value of gelatin as food, but it is now understood that when combined with albuminoids and extractives it has a very considerable nutritive value, and serves to economize the albuminoids. The nitrogenous extractives are so called because of the ease with which they are dissolved out (extracted) by water. . . .

"The lean of meat has about twenty per cent of protein, or, weight for weight, about five times as much as milk. . . . While protein is the most important and valuable ingredient of food, lean flesh is, nevertheless, a one-sided diet, and to make a well-balanced ration for man the addition of foods containing carbon, such as fat, starches, sugar, etc., is necessary. . . .

"Flesh contains less than one per cent of carbohydrates and that is chiefly in the form of glycogen, or muscle-sugar, the most considerable quantities of it being found in the liver.

"Meats also contain more or less mineral matters (ash) which have value as food. The most important of these are the phosphates of potash, lime, and magnesia. These are used chiefly in the formation of bone.

"Whether meats are tough or tender depends upon two things: the character of the walls of the muscle-tubes and the character of the connective tissues which bind the tubes and muscles together. In young and well-nourished animals the tube-walls are thin and delicate, and the connective tissue is small in amount. As the animals grow older or are made to work (this is particularly true in the case of poorly nourished animals) and the walls of the muscle-tubes and the connective tissues become thick and hard.

"After slaughtering, meats undergo marked changes in texture. These changes can be grouped under three classes or stages: In the first stage, when the meat is just slaughtered, the flesh is soft, juicy, and quite tender. In the next stage the flesh stiffens and the meat becomes hard and tough. This condition continues until the third stage, when the first changes of decomposition set in. In hot climates the meat is commonly eaten in either the first or second stage. In cold climates it is seldom eaten before the second stage, and generally, in order to lessen the toughness, it is allowed to enter the third stage, when it becomes soft and tender, and acquires added flavor. The formation is due in part to the formation of lactic acid, which acts upon the connective tissue. The same effect may be produced, though more rapidly by macerating the meat with weak vinegar. Meat is sometimes made tender by cutting the flesh into thin slices and pounding it across the cut ends until the fibers are broken. . . .

"The flavor of meat depends largely upon the kinds and amounts of 'nitrogenous extractives which the tubes contain.' . . .

"Facts ascertained by experiment seem to indicate that flesh of all kinds either cooked or raw is quite completely digested by a healthy man. . . . Roasted flesh seems to be rather more completely digested than either raw or boiled meat, but raw meat is more easily digested than cooked (boiled or roasted). . . . Nearly all the protein and about ninety-five per cent of the fats are digested by the average person." . . .

The danger from parasites exposes the eater of raw meat to great risks.

"Fat meats, as beef and mutton, are much less quickly passed out of the stomach than roast chicken and veal, which are tender and contain almost no fat. Gastric digestion in the case of fat pork is especially difficult."

Practical Sunday-School Methods.

Childhood is the springtime of life. It is then that careful preparation must be made for the future. The wise gardener will watch carefully lest the little weeds, by not being uprooted, will entwine their tendrils around the slender plants and so endanger them. So in the Sunday-school, those whose work it is to give instruction should watch for anything that might lead to evil, and employ means to check such tendencies before they have taken root deeply and become a part of the child's nature. They should also strive by every means within their power to instill into the receptive hearts of the children such truths as will cause the love of God to grow and blossom in their hearts before they have come under the influences of sin and temptation.

To accomplish these purposes, let us consider some methods or helps which may be of practical use in the Sunday-school work which is carried on throughout our land. Some to which attention may be called are drawn from our own experience in Sunday-school work, while others have been drawn from the experience of others.

First, as prerequisites to actual work in the classroom, teachers and officers must have the

LOVE OF SOULS AT HEART.

Let the children feel that you have an interest in their welfare. If a teacher does not love her pupils she can not hope or expect to win their love; and if she does not do this she can not center their attention upon the lesson. Then to present the lesson successfully let us not think that love alone will insure effective teaching, but a careful preparation of the lesson, coupled with earnest prayer for divine assistance, and honest, conscientious effort to make our daily lives such as our teachings would have them be.

During the study of the lesson

CLASSES SHOULD BE PLACED AS FAR APART AS POSSIBLE.

The very small pupils should be placed in a class arranged for their especial benefit. The lessons outlined in the Study Hour and sent out from the HERALD Office are much more suitable for young pupils than those found in the Primary Quarterly. Many schools have pupils too young to understand the lessons outlined in the Primary Quarterly. In teaching small children, they should be approached from their own level. The more closely anything lies to our personal experience, and the nearer it is to the level of our ordinary understanding, the more easily do we become interested in it, and the better starting-point it is from which to start a line of thought. The Study Hour supplies this need, in that it leads us to a knowledge of God and his work by treating of objects with which the children are familiar. Every school in which there are children who have never attended the public school should have a class of this kind.

THE INTRODUCTION OF MAP-WORK

as a part of each lesson is of practical value. A great many children who attend Sunday-school receive a knowledge of the general facts concerning the lesson, but when questioned as to the location of places connected with the lesson they are at a loss to tell. This should not be. But a map of the world should be placed side by side with a map of the holy land, so that children may understand just what part of the world the holy land occupies. Places connected with the lesson should be pointed out. The use of the blackboard in connecting and bringing out leading points in the lesson is also of practical value. This may be made more effective by using a blackboard so constructed that either side may be turned toward the school. On one side may be kept some thought or picture calling to mind or illustrating the principal thought of each lesson in the quarter, these to be used in review of previous lessons, thus keeping the important facts of each lesson fresh in the minds of the children during the entire quarter. The other side of the board may be used for summarizing facts brought out in each lesson and may be erased from Sunday to Sunday. That which is to be kept on the opposite side should be arranged with special care as to coloring and wording.

TEACHERS' MEETINGS

constitute a by no means unimportant factor in work which may be of practical benefit to the Sunday-school. When teachers and superintendent meet together in a spirit of humility, earnestness, and prayer to study the lesson outlined for the following Sunday the result can not but be productive of good. By an exchange of ideas and discussion of questions the understanding of each will be broadened and each will be more competent to do the work assigned him.

Having mentioned some of the methods which may be used in conducting Sunday-school work, we hope the methods presented may result in good, or be in some way helpful to those who are engaged in the great work of educating the children.

Instructions for Primary and Intermediate Teachers.

I am glad to say I love the Sunday-school work and welcome any interchange of thought that may tend towards its advancement. The lessons I have learned from the study of God's word in the Sunday-school has been of priceless worth to me.

To my mind the first important step for a teacher in any grade is the preparation, which begins with a willingness to do. The next important step is humility, seeking the divine guidance of our heavenly Father that we may be clothed with those Christian graces as found in 2 Peter 1: Faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness and brotherly kindness, that those of our class may have confidence in our Christian life and are worthy of the sacred position we occupy. The second preparatory step is the careful study of the lesson previous to the Sabbath day. And the third, to make a diligent effort to set the example to be there every Sunday on time and with a cheerful heart to welcome those of the class.

We begin the lesson by noticing, first the subject of the lesson, where found in the Bible, then the golden text which contains the central thought of the lesson, and proceed to the study of the lesson. We use the Bible and Quarterly in the class, turning to chapter and verse referred to, having each one read the answer to the question in the Bible when called upon, and illustrating by some picture of life we are acquainted with when necessary.

It has been my lot for several years to have charge of an intermediate class of boys from thirteen to eighteen years of age, which I think is the most delicate class in the Sunday-school to handle and keep them interested in the Sunday-school. There are so many allurements of evil thrown in their pathway to draw away their minds from the study of God's word at that age, and I fain would shrink from the responsibility when I think of the necessary requirements of such a teacher. One of the principal features is to gain their confidence and make them feel at home in the class. In this I have tried to

MAKE A SPECIAL EFFORT.

I have had fairly good success in keeping their attention. But occasionally we have a Sunday when their minds seem to be occupied with something so foreign to the lesson that it seems impossible to get their attention on the lesson. Then the teacher is at a loss to know how to proceed and she closes the lesson with a sad heart, feeling that the hour was almost a blank so far as anything having been gained from the lesson. And this calls for patience and perseverance.

IF ALL ARE PRESENT

I try to show my appreciation. If any are absent I let them know they were missed. If called upon to chastise I find it is necessary to use wisdom and love that none shall be offended.

I have urged the study of the lesson at home. But most of them are farmers' boys and all have to work through the week and excuse themselves. Therefore we use the Bible in the class at time of reciting the lesson. I realize that we teachers who do not have the privilege of attending the Sunday-school conventions lose a great many bright ideas that would help us in our work. If any one could offer any suggestion that would assist me in my class work it would be heartily received. I am not much acquainted with the primary department of the Sunday-school work, as my mind has been occupied with the intermediate, therefore I leave it for others better informed, ever praying for the success of the Sunday-school.

DENISON, Iowa, November 17.

Editors Herald: We moved from Woodbine to Denison a year ago, and it was a move I regretted very much because of the church privileges which are so very good at Woodbine. In Denison we have no church, but there are five families here who seem quite zealous in the work, and we meet from house to house on Sunday afternoons and have meetings. I am glad to tell you that we have experienced that peaceful influence of the Spirit which has made our hearts to rejoice in the work. While deprived of the church privileges, we are thankful to meet from house to house in peace. It is not all smooth sailing; we can feel that prejudice which has always been manifested towards God's people.

Sunday, November 16, the Baptist minister gave the Mormons (as he called them) a rub. He said Joseph Smith was an illiterate boy and taught a fiendish doctrine and claimed divine origin, and he could not see why so many people would follow such polluted doctrine, and that the way they must crush this stronghold was by love, and the source of the Spirit.

I am glad to see the people getting stirred up. It is only a strong proof of the truthfulness of the work and that Joseph Smith was the one that God saw fit to call as an instrument in his hands to establish the gospel in its purity. I have not received as great a testimony as some, but I am satisfied that God is at the head, and the more these noted divines try to fight the work the brighter it will grow. The Saints should rejoice, for when we see these things coming to pass we may know our redemption draweth nigh. And if the Saints will only live faithful to their covenant, and let their daily walk and conversation be clean, they can be an influence for good no matter if they are deprived of church privileges.

I do not wish to boast, but since I came in the church I have tried to live right and do all I could to help the work along. While there are some things in a business way that I could not help, I feel satisfied they will be made right if I live faithful.

I ever pray for the welfare of the church.

Editors Herald: Perhaps a few lines from these parts will be of interest to your readers. More than once, when perusing your interesting columns I have felt a little sting of conscience in the thought that I was contributing nothing, while absorbing so much from others. But the trouble has been to find enough that would be of real interest. It seems to me, people care very little about how many times I have preached, where I have eaten, or how good a time I have had, or how very kind everybody has been to me; but the most important thing is, What have you done, or what has been the result of your doing? It is natural for us all to like to make a good showing, and when we can not do that, we sometimes think it best to say nothing, and give the successful ones all the more space.

Though I have very little to boast of during the last year, I have found plenty to keep me busy, and I trust that my efforts have not been all in vain. Having been placed in charge of the district, I have centered my efforts mostly in trying to strengthen the branches and get them in working order, as well as encouraging the membership. It has always seemed to me unwise to neglect the branches while trying to make converts. Spiritual homes are needed for those who are brought into the church, and if they only have a dead branch with which they can unite, there is little hope they will live very long; better never to give them life, if they are to be left to die after receiving it.

We have ten branches in this district. I have been trying to average about a week at a time in each branch; visiting each consecutively. Where the interest is good, we sometimes have to remain more than a week; where it is otherwise, a day or two will sometimes suffice. By constant effort it requires from two to three months to make the rounds, which some think is too long between visits, especially as so many of the branches are very limited in local officers. The great need in this district, and this district is not alone in this respect, is active local officers. Where we have these, the branches are alive and the work is spreading. But where these are lacking, there is little spirituality manifested, and the work retarded. It seems to me a great mistake, therefore, when a live and successful worker appears in a branch, to persuade him to take the missionary field. The fact is, we need local workers, more than we do missionaries. Some to-day who are almost failures as missionaries, if left where they could have labored locally, would have been a great help to the church, instead of a burden. If this includes the writer, he is willing to accept it, and will willingly change positions when so directed.

It is very gratifying to witness the progress of the work in Chicago. Bro. Bond seems to be the right man in the right place. Conditions were anything but encouraging upon his entering upon the work there, and it is very likely he asked himself more than once, where he was at. But he was not very long in taking his bearings, and now he seems to have grasped the true situation, and he and the noble local force who are working with him, are beginning to make the work tell. One very encouraging feature about Bro. Bond's work is, he does not shun the unpleasant part; but where that is necessary he goes for it. We hope time, strength, support, and wisdom will be given him, that he may succeed in accomplishing the great work intrusted to him.

At Mission, one of the oldest branches in the Reorganization, they have a beautiful church and good substantial members. I am pleased to say they are reviving, having reestablished their regular Sunday services and their weekly prayer-meeting.

Plano has had a hard struggle for years, and in some respects has gone backward rather than forward. Though there are some noble Saints there, their great need is local workers. We visited them twice and tried to do them good, but fear our efforts were not very successful. A combination of circumstances have brought about present conditions, and the Devil was not slow to take advantage. All we can do is to labor and hope.

Sandwich Branch I found as good as disorganized. Here, too, is a lack of local workers. When one man has to do it all, it is only natural for him to get discouraged, sometimes; and then the few Saints will meet and find no one to lead them; at other times he will be on hand, but none others. But this branch is being revived, I am pleased to say. The most encouraging feature is a live Sunday-school, a thing that the majority of the members thought was an impossibility. The school is in charge of Sr. Morton, formerly of Burlington, who is doing a good work for the young. Our meetings there were well attended by the members, and a few outsiders at nearly all our meetings.

At Ladd, a little mining town, we found the branch pretty badly demoralized. Some had moved away, and some had brought the work into disrepute by evil doing. We found two active officers left, Brn. Izatt and Lamb, and a few noble Saints. Enough to start the work again. This was done and regular meetings established. While the work moves slowly here, I believe progress is being made, and we hope to have a good report from Ladd yet.

We found a noble band of Saints at Wilmington. Nearly all new to us, as they had mostly become members since my former mission here. They, too, need local officers; but the few they have are doing nobly, and God is blessing them.

I am now holding a series of meetings in DeKalb. Fairly good interest, but the wet weather interferes with the attendance. The Saints turn out well, and when it is fine, we have a good attendance of outsiders. It seems strange that a good interest is so often spoiled by rain. I sometimes wonder if the Devil has not some control over the elements. This branch has had a hard struggle for existence. For a time after it was organized it prospered, and the outlook was fine; but finally the enemy made an attack upon it, some of the members gave way, and he gained an entrance. It has been a long battle to overcome him. However, the branch still lives, and I think was never doing better than now under the leadership of Bro. John Cooper, president (son of Bro. F. M. Cooper), and Bro. James Page, priest (grandson of Bro. John E. Page of the first organization). These are both bright, active young men. Their whole souls are in the work, and God is blessing them, and the work as well. When this branch was being organized, a brother who was then active, assisting in its organization, had a dream in which he saw himself and the president of the district building a house. He was impressed with the solidity of the foundation, and the strength of the timbers that were being placed in the building.

It indicated at the time that the branch would not be easily destroyed. Events since then have proven this to have been correct. It looked at times as though the branch must go down, but in spite of all the opposing forces, the building remained, and we trust will continue to stand. Doctor C. D. Carter was the active head in starting the work here. In the onslaught of the enemy, he was wounded. He still remains inactive, but his faith is still firm in the truth of the work, so he assures me, and we all hope he will yet see his way clear to take up his work again. He and his family have attended our meetings, and appeared to enjoy them.

At Piper City, a branch in the country, the work still survives. While they do not get much preaching, they have a good Sunday-school, in which a good work is being done. They have lately started a Religio. We trust they will succeed in this also. Last spring we thought this district was highly favored with missionaries, but Bro. A. J. Keek dropping out, Bro. Wildermuth and his son laboring in Wisconsin, Bro. Southwick having charge of the branch in East Delavan, Wisconsin, the force is hardly large enough to be in danger of getting in each other's way, or to cause the missionary in charge much trouble. I had a pleasant visit with Bro. and Sr. Keek, while at Plano. He is assisting in the work locally.

I am feeling well in the work, and hope to be worthy to stand.

Editors Herald: I am still striving to do what I can for the work. Am moving along slowly. I have been alone for five weeks while my colaborer assisted Bro. F. M. Slover in the late discussion at Bellair, Illinois. He was also at the reunion at Zenia, and from there went home for a while. I am looking daily for his return.

I have recently witnessed some miraculous manifestations of God's power in my administrations. Two special cases I will mention: Sr. Seeger, of Beardstown, and a Sr. Jones, of Taylorville, whose bedside I was called to by telephone, was, from all human appearances, near unto death; but by our fasting and prayer for three days and nights, and after the thirteenth administration was healed. She lifted her voice in song and praise, in which some five or six joined with her. I left for Beardstown next morning, leaving all rejoicing in the Lord for what he had done.

At Beardstown I received special request to meet Bro. M. T. Curry at Rushville, to hold a series of meetings six or seven miles west of there. While there I had the pleasure of meeting a few scattered Saints. They had been cold, careless, and wild to a degree, but during the time of my stay I was blessed in encouraging the downcast and strengthening the weak, and all promised to lay hold on the work anew. I held in all twenty-four meetings. Baptized and confirmed six, administered to the sick eleven times; one was not a member of the church when she made the request for administration, but was baptized next day, and we all felt to thank God that she was healed of her deafness. I also blessed two babies, one of them being only two days old. The parents were not members of the church, but the father demanded baptism the following day. The mother expects to be baptized upon my return. One of the peculiar experiences was that one of the men who spoke of being baptized on Sunday did not come, so I supposed he had given it up; but for a good reason he could not be present. When he heard I was going to leave on Monday morning, he sent a brother to have me come back and baptize him. Bro. M. T. Curry and seven or eight of us went, and after some talk at the home of Bro. Will Anway's, we went to the near-by creek. The moon was shining brightly. It was fifteen minutes after ten. After baptizing him we returned to the house, prepared for the confirmation, and after attending to this part of the work returned to our place of rest at the midnight hour.

On Monday morning Bro. Curry, wife, and writer started for Beardstown, some twenty-five miles distant. I arrived at the home of our Sr. Mintun. Many of the Lamoni folks will remember her, and also her daughter, Sr. Messich, who live here in the bottom of the great Mississippi near this little town of New Canton.

It has been a little discouraging for me lately on account of the rain, so can not tell anything of what can be done here. I am expecting to meet my colaborer, Bro. R. T. Walters, at Pittsfield, soon, to hold a series of meetings there.

May the good work move on.

Earnestly for the triumph of truth,

T. J. BELL.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Kentucky, November 17.

Editors Herald: I feel to jot you a few lines in reference to our labor in these parts of the vineyard. Bro. J. W. Adams and the writer are holding forth at Bishop's Schoolhouse, three and one half miles from town, a place where I held three meetings last June. Bro. Adams came to this place on the seventh and began the meetings, and I joined him on the fifteenth. There is as good interest here as I ever saw anywhere. Many have been outspoken and say that it is the best preaching they ever heard. Think we will do some baptizing before we leave.

We have been challenged to debate by a Disciple preacher. As soon as he will sign propositions and get an indorsement from the church he represents we will accommodate him. The people are very anxious for the debate.

There was a negro mobbed in town Saturday night and hanged in the court-house yard. He had killed a white man.

It is raining here this morning. I hope that it will break away soon so our meetings can progress. I think we have a chance for another schoolhouse a few miles away, and we will have two meetings going at the same time.

Editors Herald: More than two months have come and gone since arrival in Australia, but the time has been so fully occupied that it has seemed to go quickly by.

At Wallsend we found a nice church building, an exact pattern of the one at Sydney, while at Hamilton the building is smaller but neat. We met some of the familiar faces of days ago, while others were absent by either death or removal, and a number of new ones. Of the latter we were glad to note the love and intelligence that beamed from their faces. In fact these are both the products of a true gospel obedience and observance. One pleasing feature all along the journey thus far is to learn that so large a percentage is still faithful. We tried the open air work on the old familiar spot in Wallsend where so many efforts were made in previous years, but with much less success in attracting interest. In the church we were more successful. The city seems to be largely given over to gambling and horse-racing with numerous other sports. As Brn. Haworth, Gregory, and Lewis, veterans, with others of younger years, stood by in the open air service, our thoughts went back to an occasion when preaching here, a woman passing by had said we could not lay hands on her. As she closed a short tirade the Spirit settled in power as a mantle and using the speaker as an instrument effectually answered all that had been said. It was a strange scene and will serve for all time as a reminder of God's goodness and mercy in time of need. These are but the stepping stones to that bliss for which we labor.

We returned to Sydney in time to see Bro. Barmore baptize eight, and assist in the confirmation. The next day but one we hied away to St. Marys to discuss the sleep of the soul with one of the ablest exponents of the Christadelphian faith in Australia. The interest was so intense that a hall with a seating capacity of five hundred could not accommodate all. We made friends and hope to see them in the future. We returned to and stayed in Sydney some two weeks, occupying the chapel on Sundays and on the street one night each week. The Saints were in evidence both by their presence and singing on the street, and helped materially, while they and nonmembers filled the chapel Sunday nights. This with Religio, weekly prayer-meeting, and a Bible reading, our time was well occupied. Having preached on the streets and in halls and visited privately and finally organized a branch with some twenty-three, several of whom we had individually baptized, and now to return and find a membership of nearly one hundred with a building of their own just about paid for and to be dedicated at the coming conference, it made the heart rejoice. To individualize either as to workers or members unless all were named would be unjust. Suffice it that musicians and singers had allied with the unpopular sect and are to-day using their talents to the glory of God, while the names of the faithful laborers are as household words.

Leaving by steamship for Melbourne, Srs. Kidd and Boggs and Brn. Smith and Henricks accompanied us to and awaited at the wharf until the moorings had been loosed and we were fairly on our way in midstream, the waving handkerchief just distinguishable in the gloaming. We had supper as we passed down the bay and at nine o'clock in the evening retired for the night, having the commodious cabin all to self. How these kindly visits to the wharf serve to bring good cheer! We remember even now what a source of comfort it was at the pier in 'Frisco as we saw the smiling faces of the San Francisco and Oakland Saints augmented by those of Brn. Luff and Hilliard as we were getting ready to "push off," and when the "Cast off!" finally came, those same faces were suffused in tears. Then the home visit of neighbors and the final start for the depot, where one put five dollars into the hand as a practical token, all are pleasant pictures on memory's page. The departure at 'Frisco was in the gloaming, to finally settle into a heavy fog, necessitating the blowing of the fog-horn. Bro. Luff proved a "beloved physician" indeed, his prescribing proving a boon to the rheumatic sufferer.

Now again from Sydney's wharf we are pushing out into the gloaming, and as the bag deposited in the cabin by the thoughtful Sr. Kidd is examined and found to contain apples and bananas, our sympathy is touched. We munch freely, knowing well their laxative qualities; remembering the while with gratitude the thoughtfulness of the giver. From a refreshing sleep we awaken to find smooth sailing and a race on. The next day another race and smooth sea to come off conquerer over all competitors, and we land in Melbourne none the worse for the trip, but rather refreshed.

Here the Victorian conference convenes with the opportunity to renew the acquaintances of yore and form new ones. Gray hairs, with changed features in some instances, remind us that time has intervened since last we met. We learn that memory has not played the truant as much as we had feared. With the new faces we are favorably impressed and the hearty hand clasp of all gives evidence of gospel birth. We learn the secret of song enthusiasm before noted when we see the professor and are at once favorably impressed with both his ability and humility.

One thing noticed and commendable in the Australian Saints, they always kneel in prayer. Bro. Editor, I have felt that in America we are drifting toward a sort of cold formality along this line. Am I wrong?

Here we had an eight-night debate; I affirming Mark 16: 17, 18, my opponent affirming no call to the the ministry outside the New Testament. Result: An angry people on one side becoming very obstreperous the closing night, a happy people on the other with five names already handed in for baptism, with one hundred per cent increase in attendance at our hall.

I am now at the home of Bro. Butterworth who is much improved in health. Expect to visit relatives and other Saints for ten days and then to Melbourne to continue work there till holidays.

In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

Editors Herald: Being a constant reader of the HERALD I have felt it my duty to contribute a few lines to it. I love to read the different articles, and especially the letters from the ministry and laity. By reading the letters from different ones we can see the growth of the church in numbers, as well as the spiritual advancement being made by the faithful ones. I love this grand latter-day work, and am striving the best I can to advance the cause of Christ, both by example and precept.

Last year by the help of the Lord I was enabled to baptize twelve into the kingdom, and this year I have brought eleven into the fold thus far, and as I have each year raised my number, I still desire to continue to enlarge the number of the fold; yet I realize we can never place an estimate upon the good we do simply by the number we bring into the church. To me this work becomes more dear each year, as I by a careful observance can see the advancement the church is making.

I was permitted to attend the General Conference last spring, and made the acquaintance of many of the Saints. Many may think I have forgotten them, as I promised to write to several, but I have been very busy this summer and felt the need of preparing myself for a still greater work in the future, which the Lord revealed to me while I was at the General Conference. Feeling and realizing that my work will be in foreign fields in the future, I have begun to prepare myself for the same by taking up a course in the International Correspondence School, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, in the study of French. I am being taught to read, write, and speak the French language correctly, and I would say to any one desiring to study either French, German, or Spanish, that the method is very thorough and complete. Any of the ministry who wish to fit themselves for greater usefulness by taking up the study of some language will receive a prompt reply to any letters they may write to me regarding the same.

Having been appointed by the district authorities to labor in Northern Indiana this winter, my personal address, until further notice, will be Knox, Indiana. Any Saints living in Northern Indiana knowing of places where good openings can be made will please write to me at the above address, as I desire to break up new fields and leave the old, well-worked ones for those who are aged and those who do not like the jolts and jars and experiences one receives in breaking up the new ground.

In opening up the work in a new place (and by the way, it was in Northern Michigan District, at Grant, Newaygo County) I ran up against a Goliath of the First-day Adventists, who did much to persuade his followers against us, as he was about to lose his grip with some of his members, and thereby lose their purse strings, for they were liberal. This Goliath had very much to say about old Joe Smith and the ghost stories of Moroni's spook coming to Joe Smith and telling him a lot of trash, upon which our whole structure as to organization was based. This Goliath also said that our doctrine was of the Devil and that it had its origin with the Catholic Church; whereupon I took out of my pocket a tract of six pages, written by one of their elders, C. M. Keach, and published by their association at Mendota, Illinois.

In this pamphlet were many quotations of Scripture upon different subjects which we as a church believe in and indorse, and replying to the Goliath I said: "This tract of yours sets forth our doctrine as far as it goes, so if our doctrine is all of the Devil, certainly a great deal of yours must be of the Devil, too; for it is the same as ours so far as this pamphlet is concerned." His members tried to press him into a debate with me and at last he said he would debate with me for one night. I told him all he wanted to do was to unload his dirt and filth and then clear out, leaving me to clean up the prejudice after he was gone; so there was no debate.

I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may have wisdom and be enabled to do a work which will stand in eternity.

Your brother and colaborer,

CHAS. E. IRWIN.

Editors Herald: The following newspaper clipping evidences the fact that some Chinamen have as tender hearts as civilized Gentiles, and that the Lord made no mistake when directing this church to publish tracts in the Chinese language:

"The press says that it was only a worthless Chinese laundryman, named Tong Jack, living in Cambridge, Maryland. He set up his laundry in a building next to Mr. James A. McAllister's house. Mr. McAllister did not like it, but he recognized his neighbor's rights, and when the boys teased and annoyed the Chinaman Mr. McAllister drove them away and stopped their interference with his peaceable business. Tong Jack had prospered in his humble business. When Mr. McAllister was taken sick Tong Jack constantly sent flowers and delicacies to him, and when he died the poor man's grief was intense. He hired thirty carriages for the funeral that all might ride, and himself walked behind the hearse to the grave, all clad in mourning white. And some people think that the Chinese have no gratitude and are hardly human."

Editors Herald: I desire to write a few lines about my trip to Germany and of what I saw in my travels while there. I was in Hamburg and other places and found that as far as religion was concerned it was free to all as long as a person lived in harmony with the laws of the government. I think the brethren who were sent to Germany had good desires, but it is possible they did not arrive at the right place, for I believe the Lutherans have little regard for the word of God. I have two brothers there who belong to the Lutherans, and I have been a member of that church myself.

There are four Baptist and Methodist churches in Hamburg. They are very well posted in God's word, and among this people would be a good chance for our elders to preach the gospel.

The Brighamite elders have a good foothold in Germany. They have sixty-two branches. They do not preach polygamy. I asked them what church they belonged to, and they said the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I asked them if they did not have another name and they said they were Josephites. I also asked them if they believed in polygamy. They said, No. They were very careful that their members did not hear the conversation. They spoke in English and I in German. These Brighamites are afraid of no one, except elders of the Reorganized Church.

Editors Herald: As I write this evening I feel more and more impressed to press forward unto the mark of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus, and run with patience the race that is set before us. Feeling that we needed the help of God through his servants, three of my family being afflicted with an affliction that the doctors were not able to reach, I called upon the Saints of Philadelphia to send us aid, and they sent Bro. La Rue to administer to my sick. We asked them also to remember us in their prayers, and they united in special prayer for our benefit and, like the disciples of old, the Lord heard their prayers. Bro. La Rue arrived here at dark, and being fatigued from his journey, retired early. The next day he baptized one and in the evening the few Saints that are here were united together and he confirmed the one he baptized, blessed three children, and administered to the sick. He also spoke to us and left a deep impression upon all in our isolated condition. He departed the next day leaving us with cheerful thoughts and with a determination to press onward to win the prize for which we are working.

Ever praying for the advancement of the "marvelous work and a wonder," I remain,

Your brother in gospel bonds,

M. O. MATTHEWS.

TOLAR, Texas, November 18.

Editors Herald: I have been holding services every night since the 7th, except when rained out, to a full house at a school-house four miles south of the above-named place; but owing to an urgent invitation of the Firm Foundation Campbellites (?) to come to Tolar and occupy their church, I closed my meetings last night and will avail myself of this kind offer. I learn from a reliable source that they have a "lion" with a hollow tooth squatted for me over there, and of course I do not want to disappoint them if I can help it.

The people as a rule are very friendly throughout this section of country, and so far have given me a splendid hearing and the kindest of treatment. I do not know of any Saints in Hood County.

My home address for the present is 1315 St. Louis Avenue, Ft. Worth, Texas. Would be pleased to hear from any who desire preaching, but remember, kind Saints, that I can not go very far if I have to walk.

Yours in the conflict,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

SAVANNA, Illinois, November 22.

Editors Herald: As one of the missionaries in the Kewanee District, will send a few lines so it may be seen we are working and doing what we can to build up the church in these parts. The outlook is not altogether dark, but not as bright as I would like to see. It is a large field and few men to work it. There are a great many good and live Saints in the mission, and some are sleeping. This is true of other districts as well. One of the needs I see before us is good men who have the calling and gift to work with the Saints: needful to those coming up to the high standard of life the gospel demands. I believe when the Saints come to such a spiritual condition that they can forgive each other's faults, and work in love for the spreading of the news of salvation to those in darkness, God will give greater success to the missionary arm of the church. In the building of material houses there are men who lay the stones, others that put the building together, and others that do the finishing work. So it is in the kingdom of God. I do not take pleasure in preaching the gospel to condemn men, but want to feel that my mission is to preach to try and save. Let all of us work that our mission in life will be pleasing to the Master.

We have been hindered by the continued rain this last summer, especially in tent work, but much good was done in new places. The Saints have done splendidly in helping the tent work with their money. God will without doubt reward them.

Saints of this district are as good to look after the needs of the traveling elders as it has been my lot to meet. While I think there is a great work to be done in this mission in time, it does not depend all on the missionaries—all must work. Moving away and internal troubles have run the district down from what it was years ago. This is being overcome by degrees. Many of the branches are not able to look after their own needs from lack of proper officers, as the law holds needful for success. Two are virtually disorganized on account of no membership. We have church buildings at each of them. I refer to the old Sapperville and Dahinda Branches. I would think it a good plan to sell the buildings and let the proceeds go to some other place in the district or to help out on the college. Think it over, Saints, so something can be said on the matter at our next district conference.

The Kewanee and Millersburg Branches are strong, live ones and doing well.

Rock Island Saints are pushing things as hard as can be expected; quite a talk among them of trying to get a building of their own; it is needed. Bro. Evan A. Davis and S. F. Cushman have done good work there. Bro. F. A. Russell was prevented from staying and working in the Tri-cities, as was our plan, on account of sickness in his family. He would have done a good work if he could have stayed; he is well liked by all.

Bro. O. H. Bailey is doing well in and around Canton. The Saints there appreciate his work.

Peoria Saints are a band of good, live workers. While the writer was with them of late Sr. B. F. Ordway gave the branch a new organ as a present. It was needed and appreciated. They wish a missionary to stay in the city through the winter, in order that the work may get on a better footing. Will try and see that they have one; Bro. E. A. Davis is there now.

Bro. J. S. Patterson is working as best he can, looking after his district charge and doing missionary work, too. He does splendidly for a man of his age.

I am preaching at this place in a new church built by Sr. E. Sartwell's husband, who is not a member of the church. The Saints were crowded out of a hall they were using; it looked dark for a time. Mr. Sartwell bought a lot and had a church built that cost seven hundred dollars. Bro. Norton Grayless, a priest, is preaching every Sunday and looking after the Sunday-school work. If faithful he will be of great use to the church. There is no branch here. The brethren sent to this mission are doing all they can for the gospel. All enjoy good liberty in preaching. We have done considerable street preaching this year.

Your brother in the faith,

J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

PATTERSON, Missouri, November 21.

Editors Herald: We are in Wayne County, Missouri. We secured the use of the Christian church in Piedmont (or the Saints there did for us) and preached five times, and as the people there were not used to hearing such doctrine they compelled us to quit. Thus we were put out of the synagogue. Though we went to the Methodist meeting more than once while in Piedmont and got somewhat acquainted with the M. E. editor, after we left town the following came out in the paper: "The two Mormon elders who have been preaching in town have left for greener pastures." We believe they have been "greener," at least we have a fine meeting at the Wood Schoolhouse, preaching eleven times. Much prejudice was removed. After we closed on Friday night a Christian minister preached Saturday night and abused us so that the people got up and left the room while he was yet preaching. A woman by the name of Lulu Thornburgh of Patterson, Missouri, became much interested in our meetings. She can not walk a step or feed herself. She is bright and very well read. She has not walked in years. I give her name and address that the sisters may write her and send her papers.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

WALKER, Indian Territory, November 20.

Editors Herald: In company with Bro. Aylor, we are preaching and talking the gospel daily. Ten baptisms of late and many good people near the kingdom. Indian Territory is a rich field for our work now, but much better for summer work, as we can use arbors all through this timber country, and get good crowds. We had three Indians out to hear us.

Our debate at Alva, Woods County, Oklahoma, was postponed indefinitely by postal card from Arthur T. Edwards after he had challenged us to meet Elder Popplewell. They were to furnish church and congregation. I accepted and the reverend gentleman coolly backed down.

The man who attacked Bro. Crawley at Taloga, Oklahoma, got drunk, so that settled his career; and Nichol of Texas failed to come to time, but promises to meet us December 12.

The conflict rages, but we are cheerful and happy in the Master's service. Bro. Aylor and I have just returned from Roff and Dolberg where we met some Brighamites and got them turned to the path that leads to life, and I think we will get them all ere long. They are so much interested in our work that some of them promised to go to the Wilburton conference. They are anxious to meet Bro. Joseph, as we learn he is likely to be there.

By letter from Bro. T. N. Berry I learn he is doing some preaching at and near Ripley, Oklahoma. I am glad to see the local force at work.

We have been hindered some in our work by rainy weather. Prospects for our work are brighter in this mission I think than ever before.

I hope the brethren of the missionary force will remember and report to me at Redmoon, Oklahoma, January 1, my permanent and mission address.

Yours in the true work,

HUBERT CASE.

SAN BERNARDINO, California, November 20.

Editors Herald: We have just had a pleasant visit from our missionary in charge, Bro. Joseph Luff. He preached two very able sermons for us on the 9th, and the following week Bro. Luff and I visited the members of the branch. During the week Sr. Ada Matthews, of Colton, a town three miles south of this place, secured from the Brethren or Dunkards a hall occupied by them at that place, so Bro. Luff was advertised to speak at this place at eleven o'clock in the forenoon and seven o'clock in the evening and in Colton at half past two in the afternoon, Sunday, November 16. Although his health was very poor, yet, through the assistance given him by God's Holy Spirit, he was enabled to fill all three appointments that day in his usual pleasant and forcible manner. He was met by a crowded house at Colton and a fair crowd at this place.

He started for his home in Independence, Missouri, last Monday night. We earnestly pray that God will bless him in body and mind and return him to this mission field.

The work is not moving ahead as fast as we would like to see it in this part of the field. This condition of affairs is not because the missionaries have not labored hard to awaken an interest, but it is because the people as a rule are turning away from the way of truth and are seeking for wealth and pleasure. We are expecting Bro. Williams here next week, and I will assist him all I can to awaken an interest in some of the neighboring towns.

Yours in the faith,

G. H. WIXOM.

Convention Minutes.

Chatham.—Convention convened at Ridgetown, October 10, 1902. Sr. Jessie A. Hackett, district superintendent, in charge, assisted by Sr. Bristol and Bro. J. W. Badder, assistant superintendents; Mary A. Green secretary. The usual opening exercises were held. Visitors were invited to take part. Ten schools reported. We have some very active workers but we need more. Train a child to love and fear God, and during youth, manhood, and old age it will not neglect sacred obligations. The evening was devoted to entertainment. The children rendered some very appreciative selections. Adjourned to meet at call of district superintendent.

Southern Missouri.—Association met October 10, in the Ava chapel, at 10 a. m. D. W. Thomas, the superintendent, being absent, the assembly was called to order by A. M. Baker. A preliminary organization was effected, after which district officers were elected as follows: James T. Davis superintendent, A. M. Baker, secretary and treasurer. The convention held three business sessions. The secretary was authorized to correspond with general superintendent and if possible get him to attend our next convention which convenes at Springfield, December 25 and 26. Each school in the district is requested to send 25 cents to every quarterly convention. The Springfield school was requested to make preparations for an entertainment on Christmas night. The Ava and Beaver schools were the principal ones in rendering the excellent program on Friday night, October 10. An enjoyable time was had.

Pastoral.

To my Brethren of the Patriarchal or Evangelical Order; Greeting: In the prosecution of the labors of our calling it seems to me there is much need of our meeting to counsel together, and learn just where we are, and what our special duties are.

It has for some time been impressed upon my mind, that a few lines were due from me in the HERALD, upon the subject of the new duties imposed upon us by our call and ordination to the office of patriarch.

I have put it off from time to time hoping I might obtain a better understanding of the matter, before I essayed to advise or counsel my brethren; but the duty seems to press upon me, and to be obedient to the Spirit which prompts me I am now writing. The revelation, section 125, clearly defines many of the most important duties of a patriarch or evangelist, but there are conditions arising out of the execution of these duties, which are not provided for so clearly. And as it has pleased our heavenly Father to impose upon me the duties of presiding in the evangelical order, I hereby request my brethren of that order to study well the conditions surrounding them in the effort to perform the work thus placed upon them by their new calling.

The first duties assigned us in the instructions given to us make us revivalists; in a general sense we were this before, but it appears that our new calling imposes this duty upon us in a special sense. I look round me, and ask myself what is there developing in the work that calls for this special line of service? And I am confronted with the growing multiplicity of reunions all over the world, and to me, it is obviously a provision to meet a demand, and relieve the missionaries from being called away from their fields to attend. Being men of long experience in the church, and spiritually-minded men, from whom the burden of routine work and controversy in the judicial affairs of the church have been taken, they are or ought to be, preëminently qualified to act as revivalists at our reunions. Hence we should be prepared at all times to answer such calls. (See paragraph 4, section 125.)

I have failed yet to find any provision in the law for a quorum of patriarchs, or evangelists; for this reason we have need of counseling together to learn what our status is, whether we are to be a quorum or an order in the priesthood. Already questions of jurisdiction have arisen, and have been referred to me, and I feel a little delicate about rendering a decision until we have canvassed the matter together.

Sometimes our feelings are very tender, and we become very jealous of our rights; at other times we are willing, nay, anxious to prefer our brethren in honor, in our labors; but when one of us has been appointed a special field, or stake, or a large branch, or a district, what right has one so appointed to officiate outside of such field, stake, branch, or district?

Again the law clearly specifies the right or authority to ordain "evangelical ministers" vested in the apostles. Query, Do not the patriarchs or evangelists also hold the authority to ordain officers of their own order?

Please notice, while I believe they have, is it not better to refrain from such ordinations, leaving them in the hands of the Twelve where the law now places them until we can authoritatively settle it?

Now I think I have mentioned reasons sufficient to justify our coming together at the next General Conference, in order to counsel together and be thoroughly equipped for the important arm of the work we have in charge.

The simple duty of giving blessings to the children of the covenant, while it is a very important and comforting service, is by no means the only duty which is incumbent upon us as evangelists. To be a father to the church, and give counsel and advice to individuals who may seek for such, indicates the necessity for wisdom, love, and good judgment; and that is no small matter of itself.

The matter of record is another subject for consideration. I find it absolutely necessary to keep a record of all blessings given, in order to replace in case a blessing should be lost; consequently a substantial record book should be kept by each one giving blessings, that they may be had as a matter of future reference in the archives of the church.

Finally, dear brethren, make note of anything in your experiences of a nature to aid in our councils when we come together, that our way may be made so plain that no mistake can be made.

I am so often asked, What does it cost to get a blessing? that I will answer it here, although I have answered it through the HERALD before. There is no charge made for blessings. It is true there is considerable expense attached to the work, but the matter of remuneration does not enter into consideration; if the person desires to aid in the expenses, and is able, it rests with him entirely; the blessing will be given just the same.

And now as to the importance of our calling, we hold the keys of the patriarchal blessing upon the heads of all people of God, who have made covenant with him by sacrifice, "that whomsoever we bless, shall be blessed, and whomsoever we curse shall be cursed; that whatsoever we bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever we shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Oh, the awful responsibility which rests upon us; it makes me tremble to think of it, even that God has placed upon us the authority to seal upon the children of the covenant the "Holy Spirit of promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall, notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon you."

Now you see your calling, brethren. It will require a godly life to enable us to be qualified to fill it acceptably in the sight of God our heavenly Father. Hence let us be diligent, and live pure and holy lives, that when our work is done here in this life, we may be entitled to the welcome and plaudit from our Lord and Savior: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, come thou and enter into my joy."

ALEXANDER HALE SMITH, Presiding Patriarch.

Died.

GREEN.—James, at his home, Willowcreek, Montana, of heart-failure, November 1, 1902. He was born May 1, 1830, near Warwickshire, England; became identified with the latter-day work under the ministrations of the first elders who went to England; came to the United States in 1843; was married at Mount Pisgah, Iowa, July 27, 1851, to Margaret Wellwood; to them were born eight children, all of whom survive him except one. With his wife he crossed the plains in 1852 and settled at Provo, Utah; not indorsing the heresies of Brighamism he came to Montana in 1864; settling at Willowcreek, he was closely identified with the interests of Gallatin County, and was one of its prominent citizens; his wife died on January 18, 1869. He united with the Reorganized Church March 2, 1869; was respected by every one and known for his honesty and integrity. The funeral services were held in the Methodist church near his home, in charge of Elder Gomer Reese, assisted by Elder D. C. White, in the presence of a host of friends.

JENSEN.—Sr. Bertha A. Jensen was born near Fremont, Nebraska, April 1, 1881, and died at Hennessey, Oklahoma, November 12, 1902. She was the oldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. James P. Ogard, and was married to Mr. James P. Jensen near Nickerson, Nebraska, August 10, 1901. She was baptized into Christ by Bro. James Caffall when a child and has been a consistent member of the church ever since. She fell asleep in Jesus with a hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral services were conducted at the Seventh-day Advent church at Fremont to a large and attentive audience. Sr. Jensen was much loved by all who knew her.

McCLAIN.—James McClaine was born January 12, 1835, at Andrey, Scotland. Died at Fairfield, Utah, October 31, 1902, leaving a wife and seven grown daughters to mourn, but not as those without hope. He had been an invalid for a good many years. The missionaries have always found his home to be a pleasant, welcome place. Funeral services were held in the schoolhouse. Sermon by F. L. Sawley.

NO REFUGE EXCEPT UNDER THE LAW.

UNITED STATES REFUSES TO GRANT LANDS TO MEMBERS OF THE COMMUNITY NOW IN CANADA.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—The Christian community of the Universal Brotherhood at Crowstand, Assinaboia, Canada, sought a home in this country, but has been officially notified that the community can not settle on government domain.

The letter was referred to the interior department. Assistant Commissioner Richards, who replied, wrote in part:

"You have discovered that although in Canada there is religious freedom, still it is not what you were in search of: that you yield obedience only to the commands of the Spirit of God in your hearts, and can not submit to any human laws or become the subjects of any sovereign. You therefore ask that you may be given refuge where you may live by the labor of your hands, and where you 'shall not be forced to obey human ordinances or be asked to become subjects of any one except the good God.' You state that you use no meat or milk, but only vegetables and fruit; that you have no domestic animals, and all your work is done by your own labor.

"The public lands of the United States are disposed of only to citizens of the United States or to those who have declared their intention to become such citizens."

The foregoing is simply an emphasis placed on the fact that over in the Dominion of Canada, under English laws, not even a band as devout as the Universal Brotherhood can find a lodgment and countenance, and immunity from the duties of citizenship, and the payment of a just proportion of the running expenses of government. And when these members of the Universal Brotherhood, finding that notwithstanding the well-known liberty of religious conscience under the British Dominion, sought an asylum where they might worship and carry on their religious views untrammelled by law, or interference from municipal rule and police regulations, they were disappointed; and now when they seek to secure from the United States government a pledge for just such privilege of exemption from obligation to law and citizenship, they are well answered by Assistant Commissioner Richards.

The right to absolute liberty to obey only the dictates of one's own will and wish exists nowhere under the domain and rule of civilization. Such liberty can only exist in a state of absolute and undisturbed barbarism, where every man does only what his whim, wish, necessity (if there is such a thing in such a state of existence), or power of aggression and defiance may enable him to accomplish.

In every attempt at aggregation, or gathering together for mutual purposes, from the simple autocracy obtained and kept by personal supremacy and force, to the highest and best of representative democracy, there is a giving up of the individual, personal liberty of action to the will of the autocrat, or the rule of the majority for the good of all.

There can be no reservation to the individual integral portions of the body politic in any form of government, such as this body of believers called the Universal Brotherhood request, or demand; permission of existence, privilege, and protection from interference from other citizens under the law, and immunity from subjection to civil rule and the operation of the laws upon the enforcement of which they depend for the exercise of the privileges they seek.

Governments are instituted for the benefit of the governed. There can be no liberty, in the true significance of the word, unless that liberty is guaranteed and conserved by law, properly understood, recognized, accepted, and observed by those affected thereby. No matter how beneficial the law, it can be productive of no good to those who ignore, or disregard it.

The laws of the Dominion of Canada are but the reflex of the rules for human government that have grown into use from public necessity and the safeguarding of the liberties of citizenship. The exercise of the worshiping instinct, or created sentiment in man, is provided for in such enactments as will permit a proper respect for Deity and regard for his commands as found in his word and known as revealed religion. And, while these rules are so framed as to secure the right of conscience to the individual, the rights of the citizens and the safety of the state are at the same time preserved.

The laws of the United States are, if possible, more liberal in regard to the exercise of the right of conscience than those of the Dominion; for there is a sort of tacit consent to the idea that Episcopalianism is the church of the state; no such thing as a state church can be under the laws of the States.

It is fortunate for the Saints that in the restoration of the gospel in this land, by revelation, by the same channel of information and direction they are informed that the laws of the States and the constitution under which those laws have been enacted, are the result of inspiration; God having raised up wise men for the purpose. We can then see how wise it is that neither in Canada nor in the United States can there be permitted to exist a brotherhood of religionists that shall be at liberty to disregard the rules of government, avoid the disabilities of citizenship, and claim the protection of the state while so doing under the plea for liberty of worship. How infinitely wise it is for both the church and the state that God hath commanded, "He that keepeth the laws of God, hath no need to break the laws of the land."

THE WORD OF WISDOM.

If there is anything mysterious and hard to understand in the terms of the Word of Wisdom, as given in section 86, Doctrine and Covenants, commonly known as the "Word of Wisdom," it was surely a mistake to state as it is, "adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all Saints."

That it was not intended to be made a bone of contention among the Saints is clear as it is distinctly stated, "To be sent greeting, not by commandment or constraint, but by revelation and the Word of Wisdom," and to be sent to the churches as such.

Tea and coffee are not named in the word, but they are included in the sentence, "Hot drinks are not for the body or belly."

The Lord has supplemented the Word of Wisdom by directing the "men of God, who bear the vessels of the Lord," to "avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form."

This was directed in order that the precepts of those who preach should receive the support of their practice as an example.

The keeping the Word of Wisdom has not been made a test of fellowship by the church; and indeed, it may not be. Abstinence from the use of tobacco and strong drink has been made a necessary qualification for appointment to the mission field, by the quorum having that duty to perform, and we believe this to be right.

Those who keep the word will be blessed in so doing. Our advice is, Let those who observe the word do so without ostentation of sanctity or sacrifice, and without attempting to annoy and distress their associates, privately nagging, or publicly denouncing them; and, let those who do not choose to conform to its requirements take the consequences and be contented to go without the benefits that might accrue to them from its observance.

The elder who is constantly nagging his associates, or the Saints where he may be sojourning, of their shortcomings because he abstains from tea, coffee, or hot drinks of other sorts; and who may in some other regards fail in keeping the word, or fail in regard to commands found in the law is hurting his influence for good among them who are within and without the church. Let those who teach the word, teach it as it is.

For a man to say, I do not understand the Word of Wisdom, is to confess that he is weaker than "the weakest of all Saints." This none of us ought to do.

Our views were published in the HERALD for April 2, current volume. Please read.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Under date of November 25, J. W. Adams wrote from Louisville, Kentucky: "Just closed a series of eighteen meetings. Standing room was at a premium last night. A notice was put on the door and the door locked, but we went in and preached, and God was with us."

O. J. Hawn, under date of November 21, wrote from Blaine, Michigan: "I am holding meetings in Blaine. Baptized four on the 16th. Good interest. Elders Elethorp and Hasket have been lecturing against us, and I have replied. I expect to baptize more to-morrow. This is a new opening, and we are making many friends. I am feeling well in the work."

 EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We have received numbers 1 and 2 of the fifth volume of Sanhedens Banner, now being published at Porsgrund, Norway, Peter Anderson and Peter Muceus editors. The first number appeared on November 1, the second on November 15. We judge by that it is intended for the Banner to appear semi-monthly. We certainly wish Sanhedens Banner success, and trust the Scandinavian Saints, both in this country and Europe, will sustain the paper well.

Bro. H. C. Smith reports one hundred thirty-six baptisms in his field for quarter ending October 31. A number have failed to report to him.

On December 2 the Epworth League, of Bennington Heights, will give an entertainment at the L. D. S. church in Independence, Missouri. The affair will be under the auspices of the Independence Religio.

I. N. Roberts reports that he has baptized seventy-one this summer, and has opened several new places.

J. W. Wight and C. A. Butterworth report nineteen baptisms by General Conference appointees in the Australian Mission for the second quarter of conference year. Bro. Butterworth's health is improving, and they are planning a trip through New South Wales to "revive the isolated ones" and "set in order" some matters that need adjusting. Bro. Wight is free from rheumatism, and has been very active. He has held two debates. Prospects in the mission are bright.

Ammon White recently baptized seven at Tunnelhill, Illinois, and organized a Religio of forty-five members. Great interest exists there. We learn this through I. N. White. The latter says the workers in his mission write encouragingly and are blessed of God.

Joseph Smith left Lamoni this morning, bound for Wilburton, Indian Territory, to attend the conference at that place. He no doubt will be gladly welcomed by the Saints of that part of the country. If nothing happens to prevent he expects to be present, before returning home, at the dedication of the chapel at Stewartville, Missouri.

Joseph G. Smith, a son of A. H. Smith, also an employee of the HERALD Office, was married at Wilber, Nebraska, November 27, to Miss Nellie Daudelin. He will bring his bride to Lamoni, where they will make their home. We extend congratulations.

Our new press is in place and at work, and our pressman is happy. The press is a Whitlock, two revolution, and is a very fine machine. It was purchased from the American Type Foundry Company, and was installed by Mr. James Piggott, who has been with the company for many years. Under his careful hands the press was erected and put in operation, and everything started off without a hitch. On Monday the first form was placed on its bed and run off in the course of the afternoon. The work is about as near perfect as one can expect from anything from human hands, and those to whom the work of selecting the new press was consigned are to be congratulated on their good selection. Now that the new press is in and working, we trust that our friends will not cease their efforts in securing new subscribers, but that the business manager will be given every assistance possible to pay for the new machine as soon as practicable. If our patrons could see the good work this press will do, and see the ease with which it turns work off, and could also realize how badly it was needed in our pressroom, we feel sure that they would hasten to do all they could to help our business manager pay for it without delay. Hurry in those new subscriptions.

We have received a letter from John H. Tibbels, located at Tonganoxie, Kansas, stating that he is acting as delivery agent for the Kansas City Times and Star, asking us to notify the tract distributing committee that he will devote one afternoon of each week distributing such Latter Day Saint literature as the brethren will supply him with. He also says he will make a weekly report of the number of houses visited for that purpose. He is an elder, but is so situated at the present that he can not preach or hold meetings, and hence is glad to help in this way if thought advisable. We trust those interested in tract distributing will communicate with the brother.

"Fireside Talks With Our Girls" is published in limp cloth only, now. Price thirty cents.

The December number of Autumn Leaves is quite late, owing to the changes in our pressroom. It will be mailed this week.

Sr. Anna Giles, of Myrtle Point, Oregon, shows her desire to see the Lord's work advance by sending us three yearly subscriptions. Surely such zeal will receive an ample reward.

"WHAT SHALL I DO WITH JESUS?"

SERMON BY ELDER R. C. EVANS, AT INDEPENDENCE,
MISSOURI, SEPTEMBER 28, 1902.

Reported by Belle Robinson James.

I am pleased to be with you upon this occasion. I really thought I could be one of the audience to-night, having read in the Ensign that Bro. Lambert was to address you this morning and Bro. Smith this evening; and I thought what a splendid, happy Sunday I would have. But they have taken advantage of me and I will do the best I can.

I desire to draw your attention to the twenty-seventh chapter of the gospel as recorded by Saint Matthew, and a part of the twenty-second verse, where you will read what is, perhaps, the most important question ever propounded to man: "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?"

There is something grand about this text, from the fact that it is a question that not only Pilate was worried about, but it is something that has come to our hearts individually, and to-night the most burning question of all that you should propound is the one before us, "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?"

This individual comes before us in such a way as to demand our attention. Other men have come into the world and have acted their parts in the great drama of humanity to such an extent that the world has concluded that it could hardly get along without them, and that when they would die there would be a veritable wreck of matter and a crash of worlds. Napoleon was thought to be the greatest man of his time. He dictated to all Europe and was great in his sphere, but he manifested weaknesses that surround his name with disgrace. His love of power, his ambition, his unholy thirst for fame and influence, inspired him to chase from his heart the one woman that ever loved him. Other men have become great in their spheres, but their great weaknesses have been made apparent and the world has had to turn away with a sad sigh, and confess it will not do to follow them wheresoever they go.

But this man Jesus came to the world under the most unfavorable circumstances and conditions. And I am glad he did; because his early history snatches from us the power to make excuses for our frailties under the thought that the environments of birth and early education were against us. No one started out under more unfavorable conditions, from a human standpoint, than did this baby Jesus: born in a stable, cradled in a manger, the shadows of suspicion as a pall of gloom hanging over the Hebrew girl-mother who gave him to the world.

So far as poverty was concerned, no one was poorer than she, none under more unfavorable conditions than he. There was no room for Jesus in the inn and there is no room for him yet in those places; but I love to think of him, notwithstanding the unfavorable conditions that environed him in early life—I say I love to think of Jesus as a baby. It teaches me the wonderful lesson that I, though weak, may become strong; that I, though ignorant, may become wise; that I, though a child of earth, may become an heir of God and an inheritor of all that is within the power of Divinity to bestow.

I think of the little child as he lay pillowed on his pallet of straw: the world did not welcome him, but angel choirs sang his praises. I see the magi from the East approach, guided by the unerring hand of God. As they gaze upon the little form they scarcely thought of the wonderful possibilities that were resident there. Those little hands so chubby and helpless, by obedience to law, were one day to touch the eyes of the blind and they to see; the ears of the deaf and they to hear. Those little feet now unable to bear the miniature form were yet to walk on the wild, white-crested water as men walk the solid earth.

I look at that Hebrew girl-mother as she went to the priest in the temple of her God to present her child according to the law. I imagine I hear the old priest interrogate the trembling girl-mother as to the name of her babe, and I hear the sweet voice, trembling with emotion, as she breathed forth the name that angels ever since have chanted: "His name is Jesus." Little did the old priest think as he signed that name upon the records of the temple that he was signing the death-warrant to the Jewish economy. Little did he think that at that name "every knee should bow and every tongue confess;" but it was to be so. Oh, there is much to learn that is beautiful and grand about the babyhood of Jesus, our hope.

I pass by the babyhood of poverty and suspicion, and present him to you to-night as a boy, a real, live boy. My purpose in viewing the humanity of Jesus Christ is that I might bring him closer to us, or rather, that we might be brought closer to him. Some in their great love and zeal to glorify this greatest of men, have placed him so high that humanity can not reach him. It is my purpose to view the human side of Jesus; and so present him to the boys and girls of this audience, that they might become interested in this greatest of all men; he who stands in the ranks of humanity without a shadow, the unique figure of the universe, the hero of every struggle, the divine exemplification of what humanity can be. If I can get this thought before you I shall have answered the design of this little talk. If I can show you in the Christ-life the wonderful possibilities of humanity, then I shall be satisfied.

We heard this morning of the greatness, the grandeur, and the strength of the law as given in the records by an unchangeable God to a vascillating people. To-night it shall be my pleasure to show you that humanity has kept that law inviolate, and therefore prove that humanity can keep it.

Jesus Christ, as a boy, does not appear very prominently in the record before us. Yet there is enough to give us a good idea of his character when a child. We read in the very chapter from which I have selected my text that when twelve years of age his mother and reputed father journeyed to Jerusalem to worship, as was the custom of those people. After attending the religious services, the time came to repair to their distant home, and they started on their journey and traveled three days, when suddenly they noticed that the child was missing. The mother's heart beat fast with anxiety for her boy, and they made a thorough search and finally journeyed backward and found him in the temple, surrounded by the lawyers and doctors of the law. The record says that he was hearing and answering and asking questions. He made interrogation honorable.

Many people come into the church to-day and boast that they were ignorant and that God had chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wise, but they mistake if they think that God designed that the foolish were always to remain foolish. The man that has been connected with the church of Christ for a number of years, and still boasts of his ignorance and foolishness, is a living reflection upon the law, whether he means to be or not. He virtually advertises that which is untrue to the world in that they glean from his life and conduct that the law he talks so much about is weak in that it has made no improvement in him.

Now, however weak we may be when we have obeyed the gospel or began to obey it, the strength of that law, the beauty and grandeur and value of it, should be seen in the development of our character; that is the way to be witnesses in defense of the law. A great many of us remain ignorant because we are too modest to confess our ignorance and ask questions, that we might learn. Jesus here gives the boys and girls of this audience an example that is worthy of imitation. If you do not know, ask, seek, search. The promise still shines undimmed, "Ask, and you shall receive; seek, and you shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

It is commonly understood from this short sketch of his boyhood life that the mother or some of the brethren rebuked him for leaving, or for causing this great suspense. And he, turning, said: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" That sentence contains the biography of Jesus, the Christ. What a wonderful boy he must have been at twelve years of age, to have such a lofty and holy aspiration, to be about his Father's business. Ah! that boy had attended Sunday-school, if he was the only scholar. Mary watched over his youthful days. Doubtless she, as the record says, remembered the things the angel had told her concerning this child before he was born, and the record does say that she pondered these things in her heart. She molded the character of this boy, directing him in the sunny way. It was her duty to keep him there.

How is it with mothers and fathers of this day? We have imbibed a wrong idea, we have been laboring under a false education in that we have thought, "Oh, well, you can not put old heads on young shoulders, and the boys and girls must sow their wild oats." This is absolutely false. To-day we see in the faltering step and decrepid frame and weak intellect the wrecks of men and women, wrecked on this rock. Wild oats produce a harvest of shame and disgrace; sin, a physical, mental, spiritual death. It is untrue that the young should sow wild oats. The record has it right when Paul makes the statement, "Be not deceived, God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Oh, how true this is! What an exemplification of its truth do we find on the right hand and upon the left. Let us get rid of this idea, mothers and fathers, and like Mary, start school at home. "Train up your child in the way he should go, before the evil days come, and the years of sorrow and gloom draw nigh."

This boy was taught to love God. Some think that this is kind of a home-made idea, and boys and girls that stay close by mother and father and the Sunday-school and church are regarded as being a little green, you know—"tied to mother's apron-strings," and such. But oh, isn't it lovely to be green, if that is being green? Isn't it sweet to be pure and good? How much has any boy or girl lost in life by making up his mind never to keep a secret from mother, never to say or do that which he would refuse to say or do before and in the hearing of his mother? That may be considered childish. There are thousands to-day in life who wish they had heard this talk and had acted upon it in the dead years of the past, and to-night, like one who hath written wisely and well, they could say, "O God, turn back thy universe and give me yesterday," and their prayer is in vain. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Then it is our first duty in following this Christ to take an example from his childhood and be about our Father's business early in life.

Jesus was a very observant child. Everything around him was noticed and examined by him, and I believe that was one of the grand secrets of his life. In boyhood days you could find him down among the agriculturists, and twenty years afterward he could say, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a sower that went forth to sow, and some seed fell by the wayside and some on good ground, and some among thorns." You would see him again with the fishermen. Years afterward he could say, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a net cast into the sea, and it gathers good and bad," etc. Anon you see him up with the shepherds in the fields, and years afterward he could say, "I am the good shepherd. My sheep hear my voice and they follow me, but a stranger will they not follow."

Ah! friends, his whole life was made up, his whole sermons were made up, of life and its experiences. That is why the common people heard him gladly. He adapted himself to the conditions that surrounded him. That is what made him a successful teacher. That is what called forth the statement, "He teaches as one having authority, and not as the scribes."

Oh, he was a wonderful boy. But I pass to a closing thought about that boyhood part of his life. It is said that soon after that visit to the temple Joseph, his reputed father, died, leaving Jesus to care for a widowed mother, and he helped chase the grim wolf of poverty from a widowed mother's door by hard work in the carpenter shop. There is little better can be said of him than that he was good to his mother. And this affection for his mother continued with him, and the last thing he did upon the cross was to make provision for that widowed mother. Never forget that, boys, as you strive to fashion your life and character according to the Master's. He was good to his mother and provided for her. You may become the president of the United States, you may become great in the annals of history, and your name may be sung in praises through the land, but they will never say anything better of you than that you were true and good and kind to your mother. They never can. The man that is good to his mother will be good to every other boy's mother, and he will be a strong, good character, and men and women who are worthy the name will love him, and his life-work will challenge their admiration.

Now I pass by Jesus as a boy and present him to you as a man, a real man, a real, true, human being, and am going to give you some evidences of his humanity. The religious world in their love for him have exalted him so high that they have discouraged humanity in trying to pattern after him. For instance, they have said that he was in such rapport with God that his will—well, he had no will, it was entirely swallowed up in the will of his Father. That he never had any temptations, that he never was tried; he was too good to be affected by the trials and temptations and human weaknesses of life. Why, he actually was willing to die, he wanted to die, he was so good. That talk may sound nice, but it lacks one essential to make it palatable, and that is truth. Why, if that were true, it would strip him of every virtue; you would deprive him of all principle and honor and rob him of all that was sweet in his life. If he were not tempted, what credit is due him for having succeeded? If he never had a mind to sin, but was merely a machine that would run when divinity put the belt on, what great honor is due him for having succeeded in life? If he wanted to die, where were the sacrifices? They just spared him the trouble of committing suicide if he wanted to die.

It will be my purpose to show you to-night that he was a man, clothed upon with humanity's weaknesses and temptations and trials; and when you see him breasting the storm of temptation and overcoming, then there is planted within your heart the hope that when you have the billows surging against you, you, too, can breast them successfully and overcome, because you are following a man who proved that it was possible to overcome. Is not that a picture worthy of your consideration?

We present you Jesus as a man, a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. When he arrived at manhood's years, about thirty years of age, he came to visit his cousin, John. I fancy I could see him approach the mossy banks of the River Jordan, and request baptism at the hands of his cousin. "Suffer it to be so now, John," said he, "for thus it behooveth us to fulfill all righteousness." Here was our example. Here was our guide, here was our pattern, and the man who thinks he is good enough to go through life without submitting to this commandment of the Eternal, puts himself up above Christ. Christ saw the necessity of obeying the law. It is said, "Though a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered: and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all those that obey him." Not that he always was perfect; but being made perfect by obedience to law, he became the author of this great system that we heard of this morning, and proved the strength of his system by working it out, as a human being, to the wondering gaze of the world.

After his baptism we read that he went into the wilderness to fast and pray. Why did he do that? He knew that there was an almighty work lying before him, and it required an almighty power to perform that work; and so he had to prepare for it. And that is true of every man. I know a boy who received a letter not long since from an admirer, and the letter ran something like this: "Surely you have been surrounded by a wilderness of roses," referring to the success of the young man. The young man looked at the letter and when he replied, he said, "My brother, if roses bloom around me, search carefully and you will find 'neath every blooming rose a cruel thorn." Those who succeed in this religious arena win success through trial. With blistering feet they have walked the thorny path of duty. They have gone to the wilderness and there they have fasted with their Lord. In the closet they have oft-times bowed when weighed down with earth's trials, and the Master has kept his word, "He that seeth in secret will reward thee openly." No man ever received something for nothing. Men who have, have purchased what they possess if they have it honestly, and in religious life they can not have it unless they have it honestly.

Let us follow this man Jesus to the wilderness of fasting. It is so easy for us to turn to the records and see that Jesus fasted forty days, and we pass it over. But I ask you, my friends, to go down into that lonely wilderness and watch the struggles of this great man. You know how hungry you get when you have had nothing to eat for a day. Double it, if you will. How do you feel? Make it a week. Make it two of them, three, four of them; make it forty days. I read a history that illustrates the thought; whether the occurrence really transpired or not I am not supposed to know. But it is said that John followed Jesus into the wilderness, and there he found him resting on the side of a fallen tree. He gazed upon his form, the friend of his youth, and what a picture met his view! Pale, wan, haggard, thin, his emaciated face channeled with tears of sorrow as he had plead with God for help to strengthen him for the fray, to prepare him for the struggle of life. Think of what Jesus endured during that forty days of fasting! It shows us what God required of a human Jesus. There lay one of the secrets of the wonderful success that has made him the unique figure of the world. But you will find it many times during the remainder of his career in human form, that whenever some great event transpired, such as the selection of the twelve apostles, he spent the night before that selection was made, the record says, on the lonely mountain alone in prayer. Ah! friends, the man who would become powerful must be pure. You can tell it in his voice, you can tell it in his eye, you can tell it in his walk, you can tell it in every movement of his life.

There are men who from scientific standpoints claim to know good and bad men, and the record teaches that that science is true. Everybody can become good-looking by being a Christian. I do not say "pretty," I say good-looking, and they can become good-looking. The very organs that are developed by bad words and deeds and thoughts may be dwindled down while the organs that are shriveled and small may be developed by a change of life, and men can be changed in every appearance by a godly life. And you know the promise is, "Beloved, it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he doth appear we shall be like Him." Now the way to become like him is to think as he thought, for our thoughts are revealed in many ways, to speak like he spake, to act like he acted, and then we shall become like him, not only in word, thought, and deed, but we shall look like him, we shall be like him when he shall appear.

After this great trial of fasting and prayer, he came out to the world, but had he entirely overcome? No. I want to show you some evidences of his humanity in the great life of his ministry. You remember that he had selected the twelve apostles, that he traveled with them; and finally, after a long, dusty, tiresome, weary journey through Samaria, he came to the noted spot, Jacob's Well. You remember the conditions that confronted him there. No doubt he was weary and hungry, and tired and faint. God was not weary, hungry, tired, nor faint, but Jesus was, and he virtually said to these disciples, "Brethren, you are stronger than I physically. I can go no farther until I get something to eat. You go into the town and bring me a lunch that I may have strength to go forward." These are not the words used in that chapter; but these are, which convey the same idea, "Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well," while the brethren went into the town to buy meat.

And do you remember, that while weary and hungry there, one lone woman came to draw water from the well and the Master saw an opportunity for accomplishing good? Here is the lesson I would impart to the ministry. Sometimes I have heard—very, very seldom, but I have heard it—that some of our elders grow discouraged when there are small audiences. Here is a pattern for you, brethren; one woman, and one of shady reputation at that. Jesus knew she needed help, and he was advertised as the "help of the helpless." He preached her such a grand sermon. I do not know all he did say, but he said so much that it wrought upon the woman to such a degree that she went down-town and said, "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" Now your little quiet talk may perhaps superficially appear as though nothing had been accomplished for good; but you do not know. "Some word dropped in the heart's deep well, the good, the joy, that it may bring, eternity alone can tell." Never lose an opportunity, my brethren, for sowing the seeds of truth. They will blossom and bloom and grow and give fruitage perhaps when you are sleeping in the silence of the tomb.

Again, Jesus was working hard all day, and it was hard for him to withdraw from the great audience that hung upon his every word. He made an arrangement to go on a boat to cross the sea, but was so sleepy that he feel asleep upon the deck. A great storm arose upon the sea and they suddenly remembered the tall, blue-eyed, light-haired stranger that got on at the last landing. They wanted help, and so they searched for him, and in a very unceremonious way they woke him and said, "Awake, carest thou not that we perish?" And the tired, weary, sleeping Jesus stood up and gazed upon the wild, white-crested foaming waves. He heard the creaking of the boat, and saw that it was midnight on the waters and a storm was on the deep, and death seemed to stare them in the face. But he was so calm! He had no repenting to do, like most of us upon an occasion of that kind. He had been good, he had been pure, he had been doing all things that were pleasing to his Father, and he could come before God with mighty faith. You know sometimes our faith is dinamed by reason of our bad conduct; but he was good, and he could come before God relying upon the promises that God had made, which are as true as himself: and how beautifully we see him approach the rail of the boat and say, "Peace, be still." Suddenly there was a great calm. Man dared not to speak to his fellow, but the moments dragged by, everything was as though they were working in God's white calm. But one, roused to the sense of the beauty and the grandeur and the strength that surrounded Jesus, said, "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the waves obey him?"

Wonderful man, because he was a good man; powerful man, because he was a pure man; successful in his ministrations, because he was walking in the sunny way guided by the commandments of his Father. That is what made him great, that is what made him wise.

Let me draw your attention to the thought of his will. He was cold, he was hungry, he was sleepy, he was weary. Did he want to die? Go with me to Gethsemane. He started out with the twelve, but as he was weary and sad, and a great sorrow was upon him, he thought he would just take three of them with him into the sacred inclosure, and there pour out his soul unto God. But, oh! the sorrow was intense. There came an epoch in his life that even the three could not be with him. He wanted to be alone with his God. Has there come to your life times such as that, when no human ear was worthy to hear the plaintive cry that was made only for the ears of the Lord God of Sabaoth? It was so in his case; and so to the three favored ones he said, "You stay here while I go yonder to pray." They tell us that he was so willing to die. Why, he was not as old in earth-life as I am to-day! Why should he want to die? He was in the bloom of manhood, the strength of manhood—why did he want to die? He did not want to die, and so we find him going down into the damp grass of the garden of Gethsemane, and hear him cry, "Oh God, if it is possible, let this cup pass." He virtually said to the Lord, "I was born in poverty, I lived in that station, I have lived a life of deprivation and of sorrow, I have drunk from the cup of want, I have been cold and homeless and have figured as an outcast in the world, and now wilt thou press to my lips the last dregs of the cup of infamy and shame?" He went back to the three and found them asleep. Has this not been your case? What a flimsy and broken reed humanity is! When you need them most you find them estranged from you. How vascellating, how fickle we are! And so the men were found sound asleep in that awful hour. He went back and prayed the same thing again, pleading for his life. He went the second time and again found the three asleep. So he returned to the garden once more to plead for his life. And then! Oh, that hour of weakness! The stammering tongue of humanity can not describe it, but the story comes so beautifully to us, an angel came and strengthened him. What the consequences would have been had not that angel arrived at that moment, only God in heaven knows. He strengthened him. And friends, have you ever been just there? When we have performed our duty, when we have done the best we could, when we have moved every force within us to the accomplishment of the will of God, we have the right to expect divine assistance. God would refuse to be God did he refuse to trembling, trusting, humanity assistance in the time of sorest need. And so we, too, in our Gethsemane, may look for and see the angel. Is it not promised that the angels encamp around about the righteous and deliver them? Are we not assured that the angels are ministering spirits sent forth to minister unto those who are heirs of salvation? I believe that right there, in the garden of Gethsemane was Christ's greateat victory won. They point me to Calvary. In some degree it fades before Gethsemane. Gethsemane was the place of his struggle. Gethsemane the place of his trial. Gethsemane the place of his victory. I believe with all my heart that I can join with the poet in saying:

"Gethsemane, can I forget,
Or there thine anguish see,
Thine agony and bloody sweat,
And not remember Thee?"

"Remember Thee and all thy pains
And all Thy love for me?
Yea, while a breath, a pulse remains,
Will I remember thee."

Friends, we, too, have our garden of Gethsemane. But, hark! The tramp of heavy feet is heard, the mob pursues the stainless Christ. He whose life was as pure as a lily and as holy as a child's prayer is now rudely hurried on to the judgment hall. We see him suffer there. All manner of indignities are put upon him, but he is calm and serene. He knows his mission now, and he is pursuing it with the dignity of a god. We see him traveling up the rugged hill of Calvary, carrying his cross. He faints beneath the load and a stranger comes and helps to bear the burden. Ah, friends, have you a Calvary in your life? You must have carried the cross. He who refuses to carry the cross forfeits his claim to wearing the crown.

We see him reach Golgotha's peak. The dull thuds are heard, as the soldiers drive nails into his sacred hands and feet. We see the crown of thorns upon his brow,—that crown of cruelty, an emblem of the crown he will wear when God and his people shall take part in the holy coronation when he is crowned King of kings. But again the weaknesses of humanity crowd in upon him, and the suffering of Christ has wrung from his lips the saddest words that ever fell from mortal tongue, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Would God forsake a God? Nonsense. Jesus was there acting his part in the drama of humanity. He was there, clothed upon with humanity's weaknesses and doubts and gloom, as a human being. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Was he forsaken, friends? Ah, no, he was not forsaken; he was only tried. Have you never been in Calvary? If not, you must go there, you must have your Gethsemane, you must have your Golgotha, you must have your Calvary ere you reach heaven and home. Was he forsaken? No. Will you be forsaken? No. You may be tried, but the record is true as versified:

"The soul that on Jesus still leans for repose,
I will not, I can not desert to his foes."

No, he would cease to be God if he did.

"That soul, 'though all hell should endeavor to shake, I'll never, no never, no never, forsake."

Jesus Christ now, after the last great trial, receives the Spirit again; and now, under the Spirit, how easy it is to bear trials. You know that. Now that the light has come again, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do. Into thy hands I commend my Spirit."

Some may think that I do not believe in the divinity of Christ, because I have occupied the hour in viewing his humanity. I do believe that he was in the beginning with God, that all things were made by him, and for him, and without him was not anything made that was made. He was the Alpha and Omega, the "beginning and the end," "the first and the last." And I would have you know that in the great economy of God, when he sent his only begotten Son into the world, he prepared for him a body, and it is said that "in his humiliation his judgment was taken away." When he left the heavens of glory to come to Bethlehem's barn he came a baby. "In his humiliation his judgment was taken away," and so it is written of him truly, "He took not upon himself the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham, and became like his brethren in all things." This was done that he might show the wonderful possibilities of humanity. That is the thought. He came to act out life as we have to meet it, as you and I have to experience it; and so it is said, he was tempted and tried like as we are. Why, though he was the Son of God, God would not permit himself to act in the priesthood until he was called like other men, and so it was said, "He suffered himself not to be made a priest, but he that said unto him, Thou art my beloved Son said also, Thou art a priest after the order of Melchisedec, called of God, an High Priest." If Jesus would not take this honor to himself save he were called of God, men should not raise their hand to steady the ark.

May God help us, dear brothers and sisters, to view

Christ in his human career. It will be a comfort and strength to us in the great struggles of life; and if kept in view, you will not have anything harder to bear than he. If he overcame, he has also promised that you may overcome, and the great thought: "He that overcometh shall be my son and shall inherit all things," and so we shall be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ.

May the infinite God help us to exemplify the Christ-life in our daily walk, and thus advertise to the world that the "gospel is the power of God unto salvation," that it is saving us, that it is developing within us the Christ, the hope of glory. May God bless you to this end, is my prayer. Amen.

One Woman's Struggle.

Some experiences of life, though so truly awful, are so awfully true that they can bear repetition, and human nature is so prone to forget that the retelling of them is necessary if the sufferers are to be relieved. We have all heard much about the injustice done to the poor sewing-woman, and the sweat-shop that keeps her wages low has been openly condemned, but even now few consider how much suffering, temptation, and ill-requited toil go to make the garments purchased at bargain prices. If we did consider, we should consider it a crime to encourage such a system of extortion, and gladly pay the prices which would insure a living wage to the poor women who make them.

I give the experience of one woman in her own words. She had seen better days, but in reduced circumstances, untrained as she was to enter the ranks of bread-winners, she did what she could find to do. She says: "Being filled with the spirit of Yankee independence inherited from New England ancestry, I could not rest content to be entirely dependent. So, taking up one of the New York dailies, I turned to the column headed 'Help Wanted—Females.' Seeing an advertisement for workers on children's dresses I started for the manufacturer's address. I walked on and on (to save car-fares) until at last, footsore and weary, I reached my destination. Entering a doorway where women were issuing forth with parcels, I passed through a room filled with men who stared impudently at the women as they passed. In the work-room up-stairs I was met by a young woman with the blandest of smiles, who showed me different styles of children's dresses. Out of this lot I selected one, for which she said they paid three dollars a dozen. It seemed a very small price, but I thought it would do for a beginning. I was given paper and string with which to wrap the dozen which I agreed to take home. As it was a physical impossibility for me to walk home, I took a car. I began my work with great zeal. I so organized my light house-keeping as to make it as light as possible, and gave most of my time to my dress-making, working early and late, often till midnight. At the end of the week I triumphantly carried my parcel, much increased in bulk, to the manufacturer's. The agreeable young woman who had given me the work was nowhere to be seen, but in her place was a grim female of most unprepossessing appearance. After making me wait her pleasure for a long time, she came to me and curtly informed me that it was not pay-day. When pay-day arrived, I was on the spot bright and early. Edging my way through a room crowded with women, most of whom were poorly clad and half-starved-looking creatures, I waited my turn for an interview with the 'overlookers.' At last it came, and I was informed that the price paid for making such dresses was forty cents instead of three dollars a dozen! Too shocked and dazed to reply, I received my forty cents, and, feeling for my purse, found it had been stolen. Out of my forty cents I paid five cents for a ride home, where I sat down in dumb amazement and dismay to 'think on these things.' How could the good God permit such criminal injustice to be organized and carried on in this enlightened age and community!

"Next day, with faith in my fellow-beings reviving in my breast, I again looked over the advertisements. This time I found that a manufacturer of infants' dresses wanted feather-stitching done. This was one of my accomplishments, and I applied for the work. I was told that it was not given out, but that I must come every day and work from eight in the morning until half-past five in the evening. I was somewhat appalled at the prospect of stemming the tide of humanity that surged over the Brooklyn Bridge at those hours, but determined to try, since it was the only thing that offered. I started at seven o'clock the next morning for my long walk, taking my luncheon with me. With cheerful alacrity I took the seat assigned me among the group of feather-stitchers in one of the little stalls set apart for them. A sharp-featured, sharp-voiced Jewess, with diamonds on her fingers and in her ears, gave me my work. The 'power' was turned on, the hum of voices ceased, and the buzz of machinery began. After a trying morning, with endless fault-finding by the Jewess, twelve o'clock came and we were allowed half an hour for luncheon. Then began a scramble for places at a long table covered with white oilcloth. A ruder, coarser set of girls than those who gathered around it I never met. Still, I have no cause to complain of their treatment of me. Being civil to them, I received civility in return, except from the Jewess, who seemed to make it a point to treat me with marked discourtesy. She made me feel that she did not want me there. But I took no apparent notice of her insulting manner, and did not resent any of her endless but undeserved criticisms of my work. After two weeks of work there I received five and one half dollars and my dismissal, on the plea that the work had given out. As I passed out with the crowd into the elevator I observed that the prettiest and most refined-looking of the girls had been detained by the proprietor to help him at his desk. One of her comrades, a plain but kind-hearted girl, was looking at her with a face full of anxiety, but the poor child dared not notice her. What it meant to her to be thus honored by this brutal man her more experienced comrade knew too well, I suppose.

"Again I tried the advertisements for workers. This time it was a shoe factory. Slipper vamps and bows for shoes were given out to be embroidered and made up. It seemed a light, pretty sort of work to do. So I once more joined a throng of half-starved, wretched-looking women who stood eagerly looking for work and awaiting an opportunity to interview the forewoman, a sharp, hard, dark-eyed little woman, gaunt and round-shouldered from a life of hard work. At last my turn came. Without looking me in the face, she showed me, with a perfunctory, indifferent air, the different varieties of bows. Selecting a style for me to try, she informed me that they paid sixty cents for twelve dozen of this style. I was duly instructed by another woman how to do the work satisfactorily. She then gave me the materials to carry home, and I was liberated. I worked early and late, always till midnight, sometimes later, a friend often assisting me by running the ribbon through the buckles ready for use. It was impossible for me to finish twelve dozen in much less than a week. Consequently, after deducting my car-fares, I had left fifty cents for a week of hard work.

"A little later I was told of a place in New York where I could obtain steady employment in making infants' dresses, and that my work would be sent to me and called for. Once more I applied for work. I engaged to make a dozen little dresses, for which they said they paid sixty cents. The materials were sent to me, and my sewing-machine buzzed early and late. At the expiration of the week the dresses were called for. When I went for my money, the inspector told me that I took too much pains and basted too much. After deducting the price of the cotton, which I was expected to furnish, and my fares to engage the work and to receive my pay, I had just thirty-five cents left for my week's work—about three cents each for the dresses.

"Again I tried a factory, this time for the making of underwear for women and children. They offered the munificent sum of two cents a garment, twenty-five cents a dozen, for the making. They had no work at present, but would take my name and address and let me know when they had some. I declined to trouble them to do so, and went to my home in disgust and despair."

This pathetic story, which is only one of a multitude, makes its own special appeal to the women who rush after the cheapest ready-made garments. It appeals also to all women and all men, in all grades of social life; for all may do something to make these conditions impossible.—H. W. B., in Outlook of November 22, 1902.

SOME years ago when the subject of dressing plainly was being discussed in the Home Column we remember to have expressed the opinion that it was because of just such unholly oppression as this that the Lord had commanded his Saints "Let all your garments be plain and their beauty the beauty of the workmanship of your own hands." Can any woman who has a heart purchase for herself or children and wear with complacency garments made at such a cost?—ED.

THE following letter from Bro. and Sr. Muceus, who are now laboring in Norway, was not intended for the public eye, but we believe that all will be very glad to learn what they are doing, so we take the liberty to give the contents of the letter to the readers of the "Department." May the Lord bless them abundantly in their labors in that far-off land.—ED.

PORSGRUND, Norway, October 29.

Dear Brother Hougas: We were indeed pleased to receive your letter explaining everything; and a few days after we received the package of Quarterlies.

Now we have begun our Sunday-school work in earnest, using the lessons given in the Quarterly. Of course all that we use from them must be translated. We are grateful to you for your generosity, shown in sending us so many more than ordered, but, as we can only make use of a limited number, we think best that you retain a portion of them for use elsewhere.

Our school at present consists of two classes: senior and primary. Bro. Muceus has charge of the former and I the latter. The classes are not crowded to overflowing yet, but they are on the increase. The primary began with three or four and now numbers thirteen, which number we hope may not grow less but rather continue to increase steadily until we can organize an intermediate. I find the work interesting, and also trying, owing to my unfamiliarity with the language. However, with help from Bro. Muceus I shall translate the lesson story and then copy it on separate sheets for each one by means of our "manifold." Most of the children making up the primary class are children of nonbelievers in our faith. We hope for good to be accomplished, and perhaps by interesting the children we can also reach the parents.

We are pleased to learn of the onward movement of "the work" in all lines, and hope that much good may be accomplished for the cause this year.

May God bless you in your work, that you may be a source of cheer, comfort, and encouragement to his people and the honest in heart wherever they may be found. We heartily join in wishing you a God-speed in all your labor of love.

In gospel bonds,

A Good Superintendent; A Good Teacher.

A superintendent should be a true Latter Day Saint. One who is prayerful and loves the gospel and would work for the best interest of the Sunday-school work. He should also be a person with great wisdom, and a Bible student that he may be spiritually educated, that those under his instruction may be taught the principles of the gospel and that it may aid them on to perfection. The superintendent should be punctual in everything. Always be on time and teach the scholars the same; also have well-prepared lessons and be able to answer any question pertaining to the lesson. He should not only on Sunday but his every-day life should be worthy of imitation. If the school has an inactive and neglectful leader it will not flourish as it would if he were active. Therefore let every superintendent strive to fill his position, that at last it may be said, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Teachers should be members active in the work and be an example to those whom they teach, that scholars may learn to love them; then it will not be so hard to get them interested. A teacher should also

HAVE GOOD LESSONS:

One who gives new ideas; a Bible reader; a good humble Latter Day Saint; one that is interested and wishes to do good and assist others on to salvation. Last but not least, teacher as well as all others should be prayerful. Wishing success to all,

MARY DICE.

A Waste of Time.

It is even worse than a waste of time for a teacher to allow her pupils to spend any part of the lesson hour in argument. There will often be found in classes of young people from fifteen to eighteen years of age young men and young girls who labor under the delusion that it is proof of special erudition on their part to question some statement made in the lesson, and they try to draw the teacher as well as the other pupils into arguing the matter.

This "I-know-it-all" period of youth is a trying period for even the wisest and most patient teacher to deal with. It requires tact and wisdom to direct the thought of the all-wise boy or girl into the right channels, and away from the folly of argument about things that no man will know until he sees as God sees and knows as God knows. It is a waste of time to spend the lesson hour in arguing about the certain truths of God. It is not because of real doubt based on study and thought, and a desire for information, that the argument is launched. It is often for no higher or better purpose than to affect a knowledge of things of which one is really lamentably ignorant. If many men and women knew as much at seventy-five as they think they know when they are fifteen, the wisdom of the world would be much increased. The teacher must pray for patience and wisdom with which to deal with the "I-know-it-all" boys and girls.

It is a waste of time to try to teach the lesson in a purely "entertaining" way. The "entertaining" teacher is often one whose pupils never become Christians. The real spiritually-minded teacher will be able to teach the sweet and simple truths of the lesson in a way that will hold the attention of the pupils and make lasting impressions on their minds.

It is a waste of time to bring into the lesson anything that has no bearing on it. The writer once heard a teacher say: "I always talk to my boys for five or ten minutes about something having no connection at all with the lesson, and gradually work them around to the lesson."

I have seen this method of "working boys around to the lesson," and I can not recommend the plan to teachers who wish to secure the best results. It is a waste of time to spend half of the lesson hour talking to boys about their week-day games and sports in order to show that you are in sympathy with them in these pleasures.

It is a waste of time to teach boys and girls a rule or rules of life you do not pretend to live up to yourself. If the teacher goes to the theater, he can not hope to teach the pupils of his class that they should not go. The writer once heard a Sunday-school teacher say, "Yes, I go to the theater once in a while, but I teach my Sunday-school boys that they should not go, because they are still too young to discriminate between the good and the bad in the drama. I do not approve of boys and girls going to the theater."

It is a waste of time for a man like this to try to teach a Sunday-school class; and it is a waste of very precious time to give him boys and girls to teach.

It is a waste of time to accept the duties of a teacher if you know that you can not discharge those duties regularly and faithfully. The teacher who comes to his or to her class "occasionally," will not have even occasional conversions among the members. The pupils of such a teacher are apt to emulate his example and put in an appearance only occasionally themselves.

It is a waste of your own time and, worse still, the time of others, for you to engage in teaching in the Sunday-school if your whole heart and soul are not in the work, and if you have not the most earnest desire to win souls for the Master. Lacking this desire, you can not hope to be a successful Sunday-school teacher.—The New Century Teachers' Monthly, Chicago.

BLAIR, Nebraska, November 22.

Editors Herald: I am at present engaged in missionary work in Northern Nebraska District, having been transferred from the Texas Mission to this district because of sickness. I left my field in Texas on September 17, and was confined at my home until November 7. I wish to say to those whom I was associated with and who might be interested in my whereabouts that I have regained my former health and again tip the scales at my usual weight; viz., two hundred pounds.

I was sorry to be compelled to leave my former mission, but it seemed decreed. I found many warm-hearted Saints there and Saints whom I learned to love.

Since coming to my present field it has been very stormy and muddy, which has militated materially against the work. But I am determined to try to overcome some of the loss that has accrued by reason of my continued sickness.

The members of the branch at this place, like a great many other branches, are badly scattered and some of them are in the condition that John saw: they are neither "cold nor hot." It seems a pity that Saints all over this world will permit the evil one to get the advantage of them and beat them out of a celestial reward. Saints ought not to please his satanic Majesty in this way; life is too short to brood over real troubles, much less imaginary ones.

This branch is presided over by a zealous young man by the name of Lytle, a grandson of old Bro. Hugh Lytle; and if the members will do as he advises they will not go far astray. I will stay here over Sunday, the 23d, and then go to Omaha and meet with Bro. Butterworth, and then elsewhere.

In conclusion I want to return my sincere thanks to those who so kindly cared for me in my sickness while in the South. Prominently among those I will mention Bro. and Sr. Hugh Sands of Dallas, Texas, and Uncle George Montague and his companion, of Wilburton, Indian Territory; also numerous others, among whom are those who donated so liberally at the reunion at Dow City. It is a pleasure to live in the world surrounded by such friends; what will it be in heaven?

I will be pleased to hear from isolated Saints in the district in regard to chances for preaching in their neighborhood; address me at Dow City, Iowa.

Yours in the work,

ROMANAN WIGHT.

LARRABEE, Iowa, November 24.

Editors Herald: The present year is growing gray and will soon have lived her allotted days. What has been the progress of the church during the year? Answer comes through the church papers from many lands, "Prejudice is giving way, baptisms are more frequent, and prospects brighter than ever before in the history of the Reorganization." Also in our own beloved country we welcome the great favors bestowed and can truly sing,

"The Lord is remembering Zion
And bringing her comforts once more."

Unbidden tears, yet welcome, have often dimmed our eyes while reading the experiences of the brethren; some meeting with success, while others equally as energetic have not been so successful, still others faced mobs, suffered privations and sickness in order to present their God-given gospel to a dying world. The Lord, who is the very embodiment of goodness, will reward every true soldier of his.

Since the debate at Mallard I assisted Bro. J. M. Baker in meetings near Marathon, making our stay at the pleasant homes of Brn. Manly and Fred Hartshorn. November 4 I took train for Hartley, going in the interest of church work, and was given the assurance by the Holy Spirit that the cause of Christ would be advanced through my efforts. Bro. Harris Cook, formerly of Plano, stepped on the train at Webb, en route to Spencer to serve as a juryman; and as I had two hours to spend in Spencer before going on to Hartley I accompanied him to the home of his daughter, Sr. (Mrs.) Inez Kinnie, where we talked on gospel topics and I took orders for church publications.

Bro. Joseph Sheldon met me at Hartley and we were soon at his home five miles north of town, where I conducted a series of meetings in a well-seated and lighted schoolhouse. Of those who promised to continue to investigate our claims was a wealthy local M. E. preacher at whose home I spent a full half-day talking gospel. He bought a Book of Mormon.

While waiting train at Sheldon en route to Larrabee I distributed tracts in the depot and was soon in conversation with a man of considerable literary ability. The subject of the Book of Mormon was introduced, and I hung up my chart containing Book of Mormon and other ancient characters, also the lecture-size map made and for sale by Bro. Weston, and after a good sermon's-length talk, he assured me that he would buy several of our church books. The writer enjoyed the hour, although the audience was small.

Bro. F. M. Sheldon, living four miles north of Larrabee, wished me to tell the gospel story to his neighbors, which I am trying to do.

The latter part of September I was blessed with a dream which was strongly impressed upon my mind. In the dream I met a Utah Mormon elder and we were soon in sharp controversy on the great differences of the two churches, he advocating polygamy and its kindred evils, while I opposed it, using the many proofs against his positions from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. With much boldness he continued to argue the questions, until I quoted the blessed promise of the Lord recorded in the eleventh chapter of the Second Book of Nephi, which tells of the coming forth of that part of the Book of Mormon plates the seals of which part were not then disturbed, for the divine instruction was "Touch not the things which are sealed, for I will bring them forth in mine own due time: for I will show unto the children of men, that I am able to do mine own work. Wherefore, when thou hast read the words which I have commanded thee, [which is the present volume of the Book of Mormon as we now have it.—C. J. H.] and obtained the witnesses which I have promised unto thee, then shalt thou seal up the book again, and hide it up unto me, that I may preserve the words which thou hast not read, until I shall see fit in mine own wisdom, to reveal all things unto the children of men. For behold, I am God; and I am a God of miracles; and will show unto the world that I am the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever; and I work not among the children of men save it be according to their faith."

After presenting the above I said the presidency of the Utah church receives no more divine instruction by revelation or angelic ministration than the Protestant or Catholic Churches: that the Lord continues to give heavenly manifestations to the presidency of the Reorganization, and when in the wisdom of God the time has fully come for the glorious messenger to present that part of the sacred record for translation and publication, that the prophet of this church, who ever he may be, will be the servant the Lord will employ to do that work, and from its holy pages also would the teachings of the Utah church be condemned. Then would that church, and the world, including our Hedrickite friends, soon know which organization was receiving sanction of the Almighty. Presently I saw the Utah man grow pale, his eyes lost their brightness, his countenance fell, he was a pitiful sight to look upon.

When I awoke I was enveloped in the Spirit, and my heart went out to God in praise and prayer trusting that I might live to see and read the balance of the book when translated, and that those who are being deceived by the Brighamite leaders might be truly converted from their evils and made one with us.

I believe the Religio society is doing a great work in preparing the church for the time of the coming forth of that sacred treasure of knowledge.

To the Saints of the Galland's Grove District: Permit me to call your attention to the divine instruction to pay your tithes and offerings. Address me at Deloit, Iowa.

With praise and thanksgiving to God for the restoration of the everlasting gospel, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

C. J. HUNT.

BOONE, Iowa, November 25.

Editors Herald: Please request any of the scattered Saints in Hamilton, Hardin, Grundy, Wright, Franklin, and Butler Counties, of the Des Moines District mission, or in any of the six counties north to north line of Iowa, to write to Bro. H. A. McCoy, Eagle Grove, Iowa, their desires for ministerial labor. He and Elder M. M. Turpen will occupy in those counties for several weeks, nothing preventing,

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

NANTYGLO, Wales, November 8.

Editors Herald: A few words from Eastern Wales would possibly be acceptable. I can not say like the brethren whose letters give such good news over there, that so many are baptized and others near the kingdom. I have labored a good deal in company with Bro. John Davis; at Brynmawr we delivered thirty sermons, and at Blaina about twenty-six on the street. Other places have had the attention of the missionaries in Wales, such as Dinas, Tonypany, Penygraig, and Pontlottyn. We meet opposition: Bro. Davis had a debate on a wagon at Brynmawr; the other man could not fill in his time. He was going to debate for two weeks, but Bro. Davis quieted him in two hours. He always gets opposition at every place, but it does good and draws the people. Thus you see the means we have to employ to reach the people. Halls are high to rent, and where we have them but few come in; all we can do is preach as Jesus said on the highways and byways. We distribute tracts, thus obeying the injunction, "search diligently and spare not," yet no results, so far as baptisms go, have added joy to our labors. Only solid, continuous effort will convince me that God has no people to gather into his kingdom from Wales. The Spirit has been with us in our labors, indicating that in due time we shall reap souls for our hire. We hope to effect permanent openings at new places; one near Lydney, one at Llanhilleth, and near New Tredegar. Three houses have been opened in said places for preaching. Some of the brethren and sisters have dreams and visions, relative to the future of the work, which, by proper effort on the part of all, will be realized. Because God, who has been powerful in promise by dreams, visions, and through his Spirit, is also powerful enough to fulfill.

But, dear brethren and sisters in Wales, England, Scotland, and other lands, the mount of vision is not yet won! Do not forget your obligations to God's law. Sacrifice, tithe, free-will offerings, and all the good promptings of the Spirit are factors to produce what we are all looking for—the redemption of Zion. We need many laborers in the harvest-field, but we have to consult about the wherewith to keep their families. As when Jesus was among men so it is now: the harvest is great but the laborers are few; and I expect it will ever be.

I learn that Bro. Trapp will take up missionary work; he is a willing worker.

We hear the many absurd stories of old date oft repeated, and some new ones. I was asked if my grandfather died of a broken hip owing to not fetching a doctor. I said he had four, and lived eight years after. "Oh, well," the man said, "I was told that." Then he asked what would I do if I broke my arm. Answer: "Get the doctor to set it and ask the Lord to heal it."

If there was no doctor, said I, I would do the best I could and ask the Lord to help me, because I helped myself. The man (a Christian) wanted to bet on the Sabbath evening that it would never mend. The people shouted shame on him, and said he was not fit to talk to. When these tales come up, I tell them some I have heard, saying the others had better have company; the folks laugh.

Pray for us in our arduous duty to God and men.

THOMAS JONES.

PROVO, Utah, November 19.

Editors Herald: Bro. G. H. Hilliard, on his way home to Independence from the West, stopped off in Provo and preached four splendid sermons, and on November 9, with others, assisted in dedicating the Saints' chapel here. Bro. Hilliard preached the sermon and Elder W. S. Pender offered the dedicatory prayer. The building is of brick, nicely and neatly finished; all paid for and the branch out of debt. It is located on Second West and Fourth South Street, two blocks north and two west of the Rio Grande depot, hence making it easy to be found by any of the ministry passing through. The writer, and at present pastor, lives the first door east of the church and will be glad to have the missionaries call and preach at any time; a hearty welcome will be extended by members of the branch. As is usually the case, much credit is due the Saints at this place for the sacrifice made and efforts put forth to erect and pay for the church. The missionaries, especially Elder David Wight, will long be remembered for soliciting and doing much of the work on the building. Also Sr. Flo Phillips, one of the committee, whose efforts and sacrifice are commendable indeed.

We have in Provo a good, lively Sunday-school, Wednesday night prayer-meeting, and a live Religio which meets every Friday night. Preaching every Sunday at half past eleven in the forenoon and half past seven in the evening. We, as others of the ministry have expressed themselves, consider the work in Provo to be in a good growing condition.

Editors Herald: We have a branch here numbering fifty Saints. The most of them are laboring to hold up the banner of King Immanuel, while a few seem to be fulfilling the parable of the five foolish virgins. I find it requires a constant labor, "all his precepts to obey." I desire to magnify my calling.

Saints, let us observe the Word of Wisdom, and the words which say, "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." My prayer is for the welfare of Zion.

Your brother,

F. PYERS.

NORWALK, Connecticut, November 19.

Editors Herald: The Broad River Branch is not asleep. We are striving to keep the Lord's work moving, but are not gaining in membership very fast. We have a few faithful ones yet. We were rejoiced to have Bro. Joseph Squires, from Brooklyn, with us last Sunday. He gave us a good sermon.

I believe it is well not to be napping when we are liable to be taken by surprise. Some time the Master is liable to come unexpectedly and not find things just right.

I have taken the HERALD and Ensign for a number of years, and read them with interest. I find much encouraging news in them. I received a supplement to SAINTS' HERALD some little time ago, calling for new subscribers to help pay for the book-press. I have not as yet found one, but I will give the price of a subscription just the same. I am anxious to see the Lord's work advance.

Your brother in the faith,

JUDSON CABLE.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas, November 24.

Editors Herald: We have just been having a feast of good things from Brn. Madden and Beebe. They made a great improvement in our branch, and there is room for more improvement, therefore we ask any of the ministry who may pass this way to stop with us and break the bread of life to us that we may grow in grace and have a better understanding of the gospel and the things which our heavenly Father has said we shall do to obtain eternal life.

THOMAS H. BARRETT.

WHEELING, West Virginia, November 24.

Editors Herald: As your paper comes to us filled with the news of the church work throughout the world, it brings much that cheers and comforts those who have made a covenant with God. It is also at times the medium through which intelligence of a sad character is transmitted. This is necessary since it is not within our power to prevent those things occurring which bring us sadness in this life. And as the Captain of our salvation was made perfect through the things which he suffered, so should we strive to make spiritual development by the unpleasant as well as the pleasant experiences which come to us.

On November 14, Sr. Maggie V. Ebeling, wife of Joseph E. Ebeling, of Wheeling, passed away. She was born April 10, 1877, and was baptized October 22, 1893. Many of the elders will remember the generous hospitality they shared at the home of Bro. and Sr. Ebeling. The writer delivered the discourse at the chapel, being assisted in the services by Elders O. L. Martin and J. F. McDowell.

Thus one by one earthly ties are broken, and those which bind us to the great beyond are strengthened. How comforting the words of Paul, "That ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope."

O. J. TARY.

LYNCH, Nebraska, November 20.

Editors Herald: Owing to troubles over which I have no control, I ceased my labors in Pottawattamie District and have been rambling over the Sioux Reservation; but as no opportunity offered to preach, I have been taking observation of conditions as they present themselves to me. In every new country there is an unsettled and very restless condition of society, and men seem to have no time to listen to the gospel, but this country is well supplied with men representing almost every class of modern theology. Chief among them, the new Quaker church seems to be in the lead in the matter of accessions, but the Free Methodist is a close second in the race. I know but little of their doctrine, but judging from their preaching they bear the ear-marks of the old creeds. They make no appeal to reason or man's better judgment, but to the emotional nature, reciting death-bed scenes.

There are but few Saints on the reservation. Bro. Levi Gamet wrote me of a few who lived near Butte City and Spencer; but I have not been able to see them, for I am not able to travel across the prairie in cold weather. Bro. Gamet very kindly gave me permission to labor as opportunity offered.

I was much impressed with the article in HERALD in regard to going out two and two; I indorse the suggestion for many reasons. First, because it is taught in Doctrine and Covenants; second, because experience proves it to be the best plan, especially in new places.

What I need here is a good supply of tracts for distribution this winter while I can not travel, but I am too poor to buy them, and if any of the Saints can send me some I will be thankful. I hope Bro. Gamet will be able to come over in the spring, and look over the ground with me. No one can tell how lonely it is to be where we have no branch; not a Saint to speak with. How I have longed to be with the Saints in the old chapel again, and enjoy their communion.

I am passing through the sorest trial of my life and I ask my brethren to pray God for me that he will rule all things for good. I love this latter-day work; it is my chief delight, and I pray God I may yet be able to do something for the cause I love so well.

For the present my address is Lynch, Nebraska, though I am visiting friends.

J. S. STRAIN.

ELLENBURG, Washington, November 16.

Editors Herald: I do not have many privileges of attending Latter Day Saints church. In the church papers we find most all the spiritual food we have. Last year the elders of this field did not stop here, so we had no preaching. But we expect to hold some meetings this winter if the Lord is willing. My brother spoke a few times when he came West, and since then quite a number have inquired when he will return. I think some are interested.

I attended the dedication at Roslyn, and was very much blessed. I felt that the Spirit was with us. My brother preached the dedicatory sermon, and he surely was blessed. Bro. Luff offered the prayer: few who were present will ever forget it. I never will.

We have a very spiritual branch at Roslyn. I belong, but as I live thirty-five miles away, I do not meet very often with them; but my heart is often with them.

Bro. Powell and my brother, N. V. Sheldon, have been laboring together.

As I grow older, I feel more the need of living closer to God and am trying to serve him better. It does my soul good to read the letters in the HERALD, and I ask an interest in the prayers of all that I may be faithful and set an example before my family that will be worthy of following.

W. T. SHELDON.

WALKERVILLE, Ontario, Canada, Nov., 24.

Editors Herald: The good work is still progressing in Walkerville and Windsor. I hold four meetings each week, and visit on the vacant evenings and through the day. I find visiting to be a great help in bringing the restored gospel before some of the people. We expect to baptize quite a few in the near future. Some have given their names.

In connection with the preaching, we have a gathering of children and adults. Three Sundays ago we had thirty-two present, Sunday, November 16, we had thirty-one, and spoke of a collection to get books for the Sunday-school when organized; and Sunday, 23, we had forty-two present, forty-one cents collection. This in a private house. I expect to send soon for the three grades of the Quarterly, and for hymnals and Hope, and other supplies.

I am well and enjoying the spirit of my calling. I visit Detroit at times, and have preached for them four times since my coming to Walkerville. The branch there under the supervision of N. Leddy is advancing spiritually.

R. B. HOWLETT.

WEBB CITY, Missouri, November 25.

Editors Herald: I am happy to say there is another branch added to the Spring River District, the Miami Branch, Indian Territory. Having consulted missionaries in charge as well as district conference, we met some time ago to consider the advisability of organizing; and finding everything favorable, we met on Saturday, the 22d instant, as previously appointed, to effect the organization. Many of the friends of the members met with us, with three of the general ministry, Brn. J. T. Riley, Noah Karahoo, and W. E. Haden. We organized with eighteen members; Steven Brigg, presiding elder; J. B. Warren, presiding priest; John Giberth, presiding teacher; Z. W. Rouche, secretary. We had a fine time, without a dissenting vote, and the prospects are that the Saints and the work here will be cared for, and that many will be added to their number. We need to give similar attention to the Saints at Chelsea, Indian Territory. They are without officers and organization. Also at other points in the district. Organization is the God-appointed way to care for the Saints, and without it they are like sheep scattered on the mountains.

The Saints at Webb City are just now putting forth commendable efforts to finish their church building, one of the best in the district. They have the plastering done, and what we need now is the "finishing" and the "seating."

J. T. DAVIS.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, November 21.

Dear Herald: I returned Saturday from a trip to the Dry Frio and Sabinal Station in Uvalde County, where I have quite a number of relatives, old friends, and acquaintances. I preached twice at my uncle's house, on the Dry Frio. Congregations not very large, but quite attentive. Preached six times at Aldyne Schoolhouse, on the Dry Frio, to fair and very attentive congregations. No additions to the church. I preached in Con Can Schoolhouse, and had quite an experience with a Mr. Sanderlin, who after I quoted the commission as recorded in Mark said that the apostles were unbelievers at that time. I read the scripture and showed that they were not unbelievers in Christ, but that they believed not them that had seen "him after he was risen." A Mr. Lambert accused me of not reading correctly.

I preached at the home of Cousin John Davenport, near the Sabinal Creek; also at Sabinal Station once, in the church of what is called the Digressives, one wing of the Christian Church. I was very kindly treated on this trip, everywhere I went.

Bro. John Harp has gone out to the Medina. Bro. Charley Harp preached night before last at the residence of Bro. G. L. Gifford, corner of Mitchell and South Flores Streets. The Saints have a church building in course of construction at the end of the South Flores Street car line. Bro. Charley Harp, G. L. Gifford, John Gifford, George Kuykendall, and an old gentleman that I did not know were workmen on the building Wednesday, which was showing up quite well.

W. H. DAVENPORT.

FULTON, RICHMOND, Virginia, November 24.

Editors Herald: A few notes from this section may be of interest to the Saints, as we are all interested in the cause of truth everywhere.

Elder Davis came here several weeks ago, and stayed three weeks; and although we rented a hall and circulated notices and invited neighbors and acquaintances, we met with no success. Once no one but the elders went to the hall. The second time only my daughter and myself. Elder Davis preached a good sermon though, so we heard him once. The next time no one but myself and the elders (Doctor Starke being present each time). I told them it was evident we would have no larger crowd than we could make room for in my home, so Bro. Davis gave out an appointment for the next Sunday afternoon, and three ladies and one gentleman came. Bro. Davis gave us a plain gospel sermon and the ladies afterwards expressed themselves to me as being well pleased. One lady called once to talk with Bro. Davis, and at his second appointment she was the only one who came. This lady used to be very bitter, but she calls me her friend now, and seems to love to talk of these things. She told me that she told her pastor of meeting Elder Davis and of hearing him preach, and he remarked he would like to see him and have a talk with him. I met him once and he asked me to explain the doctrines of our church, and the difference between us and the Latter Day Saints of Utah, which I did as best I could. He thanked me for the information, and said he had often wished to know. Afterwards I met him on the street, and gave him a roll of tracts, that I had rolled up, not knowing to whom I should give them, but feeling they would be needed. He thanked me and said he would read them.

Elder Davis was much disappointed at not hearing from New Hope, as he wrote a letter to Bro. Coffman. I heard through a letter to Doctor Starke, that they replied, but their letter was returned, marked "unknown." So this explains what seemed strange as to their not writing. They were anxious that he should come, as there are some ready for baptism, and an infant to be blessed. It seems the gospel seed is growing out there, if not here; but we know the first stages of growth are out of sight, and it may be among the few who have heard the word here even now the germinating process is begun.

While Elder Davis was here, although he meddled with no one, yet it seemed his very presence stirred Satan up. One young man, an exemplary young man, a believer in the gospel as taught by Mr. Daugherty, seemed stirred by some power to make an attack on me. He beckoned to me one Sunday morning, while Bro. Davis was here after Mr. Daugherty's morning sermon as we were standing in the aisle. I went to him and shook hands, when he said there was something on his mind he felt he must speak of to me. It had worried him a long time, that was that he felt that he must tell me he could not feel to accept my testimonies. Though I came among them and claimed a faith similar to theirs (so our faith is similar to theirs wherever theirs accords with God's word), yet as long as I held to certain things he could not accept my testimony and he wondered why I came among them, etc. I told him I was aware all the time that he held that feeling toward me, thanked him for his candor, and said I was sure he felt so because of his ignorance of our true position, that he confounded our faith with the Mormonism as taught in Utah. He replied: "I don't know anything about the Mormonism of Utah, nor any other kind of Mormons; neither do I care to investigate. I don't want to look into the deep things of Satan."

"No," I replied, "You are like the Baptist minister I heard of in this city who said in a sermon that he was willing to learn if God had anything more for him to learn, if he had to learn from the lips of a darkie. A few days after an old colored man called on him, saying he had a message from the Lord for him. But the Baptist minister replied: 'Maybe so, but it would take a direct revelation from God to make me hear it.' And so whether the man had a message or not, the minister was tested."

"But," says this young man, "there are so many claiming to have messages from the Lord."

"Yes, and we are told to 'prove all things, and to hold fast that which is good.'"

In the talk he admitted that he did not know just what an apostle was, but supposed he was a preacher. Well, the inspiration came to me that I must write to him, as he lives in a far part of the city. I wrote him a letter, as kindly worded as it could be, and yet be consistent with the truths I put in it. [The letter follows this one.—ED.]

The next Sunday this young man preached, as Bro. Daugherty was away. I went and heard him in the morning. He is just entering the ministry and they are rejoicing much, for he is an able exponent of the Scripture, and seems to have much of the Spirit with him. It so chanced that I did not go that night. The next Sunday Bro. Daugherty preached on reward and punishment, and it surprised me to hear him; it was so in accord with our teaching, and so out of harmony with his own past teachings. And he spoke of their own mistakes in judging those outside of their own little flock, and said he feared lest his people had been guilty of wounding those of other faiths or those of weak faith by their expression of judgment, and by their disputations. When he closed he said if any of them had been guilty of so judging others, along these lines of difference in faiths, etc., he advised them not only to quit it, but to go at once and confess it to the one so judged, remembering themselves lest they be tempted and misjudged.

In the afternoon I went to call on a friend, and this young man came to see me. He came back the second time; and not finding me at home, he came the third time while I was at supper.

"I called," he says, "because I felt I ought to apologize to you for some things I said to you that Sunday morning. Especially do I want to apologize for what I said concerning the 'deep things of Satan.' I ought not to have said that, as I feel that I do not know enough about it to warrant me in using such an expression. And I do not know as I ought to have said what I did about 'Mormonism.'"

Of course I accepted his apology, and told him I felt sure if he would look into it, that he would feel that he ought to apologize for more than that. "Well, maybe I would. If the time comes that I can see it that way I will do so, but I felt I must tell you of this, and there is another thing I said in my sermon Sunday night that I must apologize to you for, although you were not there to hear it. I do not know whether I had you in my mind or not when I made the remarks I did, but I think I must have; for every time I think of it, you come up before me, and I felt that I must come and tell you what I said, and apologize for saying it."

Then he told me how he had been warning them of false teachers and prophets, saying that some had even approached him "and tried to spread their insidious slime over me. If you were in my mind or not when I said it I do not know, but I felt I must apologize to you for it."

"Did I ever attempt to teach you?"

"No, only you contended for your faith, your particular 'ism.'"

"Well," I said, "I want to ask a favor of you. If ever you find anything unclean, impure, or not in accord with the Scriptures in my life, teachings, or in the faith of our church, I want you to come to me as a friend and show me my error."

"Thank you."

"And I stand in that attitude not only to you, but to all the world. I will be as ready to give it up as I was to accept it, when I am shown it is wrong." Now, I knew nothing of his having used such an expression. Truly every mouth that speaks against Zion shall be condemned; their own conscience condemning them if they have any of the Spirit of God at all.

I asked him if he received my letter. "Yes, and I was sorry you sent it. It was a waste of time for you to write it, and for me to read it, and it annoyed me very much."

"I did not write with any desire to annoy you, but I felt it was right that I should say to you just what I did."

"But you wrote to defend yourself."

"No, not myself; I do not care about myself."

"No, but to defend your particular church, when there is to be no particular church. All Christians, no matter of what faith, constitute the church."

"But we are told to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints; and as I was sure that faith was ours I felt the command was for me to obey, too." Then he told me he was about starting out on a preaching tour. "I don't know whether you know it or not, I have told only one or two, but I have given up my position [in some railroad office] and expect to give my life to the ministry."

How my heart ached! If he only could see the truth he would be such a power. He was receiving a salary of one hundred ten dollars per month, and such was his charity to all who needed help that sometimes he had not even his car fare. And he wore clothes too shabby for respectability. Now he gives all up, and has gone as did the disciples of old "without purse or scrip," not knowing what will befall him.

"Brother," I said, "you are the only people that I ever feel like I can say, 'God be with you;' but I do say it to you. You teach so much truth, and it is truth that is yet to save the world; and I do pray God may guide you and I into all truth."

And so we parted. I do feel that the truths they present to the world are undermining all its man-made creeds and isms, and if accepted the person accepting is that much nearer holding the truths of the gospel of the kingdom as Christ taught it. If the question of authority could once be seen by them, they would be in a wretched state indeed unless they could submit to the humiliating position of confessing that the despised Latter Day Saints were right, Mormonism or no Mormonism. Bro. Daugherty said to-day that no body of Christians had all truth, and it was their duty to recognize the truth and to accept it in all denominations. I am glad to see his charity so increase. He is going back on much of his former teachings on these lines.

I have opened a little Sunday-school in my home; had five in attendance to-day (the first day), beside my own. Not many of my own will attend. Two of them were scholars I had while holding in the hall. As long as I live here there will be room for preaching in my house whenever an elder can come.

I can not give Richmond up yet. I believe there are some here who will yet accept the gospel. Bro. Davis, I hope, will not feel too discouraged, but if he can come back again he may find more to do. I was so poorly while he was here, but I feel much better now. Bro. Davis administered to me, and although I was not instantly healed, yet I have been improving until I can do my work with comparative ease. I have a night school of young men and boys, who work days, and wish to improve their evening hours in study.

Prejudice kept many from sending who first promised. Some one said it was only a bait to get them in so I could teach them "Mormonism." Poor souls. "How they do imagine vain things." Now, dear ones, will you send me about twelve copies of the Primary Quarterly for July, August, and September, as those are what I have. I can only have one class unless I get some assistance; and as they are all young, or if not young are very poor readers, that grade suits them best. If any one can send me some Sunday-school cards, I will be very glad to get them.

Ever praying and trying to work for Zion's weal, I am,

Your sister in bonds;

604 State Street.

A. R. CORSON.

MR. T. D.;

Dear Brother: Although you count me not a sister, I can not but feel that it was of the Lord, though not by the Lord, that you were led to speak to me, and I wonder if you were a mouth-piece for your church, or only spoke for yourself. Of course, while you did not offend me, that is to make me angry by what you said, as I had always felt that you held that feeling, yet it did grieve me; and I could not help weeping to think one who claims to love Christ and his kingdom could so doubt the testimony of another who makes the same claim for no reason except that she believes a little more concerning the kingdom.

I believe there are a few things God would be pleased to have me say to you, and I say them in love, and should they seem harsh, the "love of Christ and his truth" constraineth me, and I pray the prayer for you that Elisha prayed for his servant: "Lord, I pray thee open his eyes that he may see." "And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw." For well I know that only the Lord can open the blind eyes. But when the blindness is willful, as is the case with people who "do not care to investigate," the Lord will assuredly leave them in that condition.

You say, "I do not care to investigate." You prefer the darkness of ignorance concerning us and our claims to be the true church, not dreaming that you are thus disobeying God's plain command, as well as breaking the golden rule.

You desire that others should investigate your claims to a superiority, yet condemn me, saying "you claim a superiority over us, you would lord it over other churches," etc. Now in the name of candor and justice, is that a crime in me, that you indulge in, with regard to other churches?

Have you a right to condemn without an investigation? "Is it lawful to scourge" a person who claims to be a Christian as well as yourself, and that "uncondemned?" Or, if you have already condemned me, by what authority, and on what grounds? And if you have the right to condemn, can you do so without investigation?

"It seemeth to me unreasonable" to thus banish, as it were, a person, and not withal, "to signify the crimes laid to his charge." What are my crimes?

"I confess unto thee that after the way which you call heresy [or Mormonism] I worship the God" of the Bible, if not "of my fathers;" the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the unchangeable One, the Father of our Lord and Savior. What right have you to stigmatize my faith as heresy without an investigation?

Hear the word of the Lord! "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak."—James. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear."—Jesus. "Despise not prophesyings; prove all things."—Paul. "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him."—Proverbs. "Doth our law judge any man before it heareth him, and know what he doeth?"—Nicodemus concerning Christ. "Ye shall not respect persons in judgment, but ye shall hear the small as well as the great."—Moses. Yet you do respect persons. "I can not accept your testimony." No, neither would the Pharisees of old accept the testimony of Christ and his apostles. Did that make their testimony any the less true? My doctrine is not mine alone, nor the doctrine of the church alone to which I belong. For it is the doctrine of Him who called us. And if ye would do his will you would know of the doctrine whether it be of God, or whether we speak of ourselves.

Now I ask you again to point out the errors in my faith, or in my life. It can not help me any for you to make a wholesale condemnation of me and of my church (not mine but Christ's), unless you point out the flaws and remedies.

Do you really think I can find anything better than Jesus, Paul, and Peter taught? If I believe any differently than the Scriptures teach, tell me wherein is the difference?

Not willing to investigate! Lacking in the nobility that characterized the Bereans, "who searched the Scriptures daily whether these things were so." You condemn me and us for Mormonism. What is Mormonism? If that thing taught and practiced by Brigham Young and his deluded followers is "Mormonism," the word does not apply to us at all; but if the truth taught by Jesus, Paul, and all the rest in the New Testament, and as it was committed to the earth again in this eleventh-hour dispensation, and was taught by Joseph Smith and the Latter Day Saints before corruption crept in, then I plead guilty, and am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ and his humble followers.

Our church was the first to send missionaries to "Mormons" of Utah. They are our bitterest enemies to this day, for they know full well that we know how they departed from the faith, and that they have "privily" brought in "damnable heresies," denying the Lord that bought them which they do in their Adam-god doctrine. We know too that many "followed their pernicious ways," just as Peter said they would; and we also know that those who are evilly spoken of on their account are said to be in "the way of truth." No other church is spoken evilly of on the account of another body of wrong-doers. Others, and especially the "Mormons," are spoken evilly of on account of their own wrong-doings or teachings, but we are spoken evilly of, and that falsely, on account of the people pictured in the second chapter of 2 Peter. Read it carefully. Notice, they had known the right way and had departed from it. Notice the 3d verse and also 10th, 12th, 14th, 18th, 19th verses, yes, they do promise liberty and are themselves servants of corruption.

But this is the cross that awaits the true follower of Christ to-day. This is the crucible in which to test the truth and sincerity of his love for Christ. And must we think that only dross is put into the crucible?

You admitted that maybe you did not know just what an apostle was. That a preacher was not necessarily an apostle is evident from Paul's words. (See 2 Timothy 1:11.) He says he is "appointed a preacher, and an apostle and a teacher to the Gentiles." Again in 1 Timothy 27: "Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle," etc. Two different callings. Romans first chapter, first verse, "called to be an apostle;" fifth verse, "By whom we have received grace and apostleship." He says he received the apostleship. He was made a minister according to the "gift of the grace of God." This "gift" includes preaching, but a preacher is not an apostle without the "gift of apostleship." The apostleship being an office to which belonged certain powers and prerogatives; one of these was that the "signs of an apostle might be wrought among you in all patience, in signs and wonders and mighty deeds." An apostle "not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ and God the Father," etc. Peter was an elder and an apostle. (See 1 Peter 1:1.) He begins the epistle thus: "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ;" and in fifth chapter he says, "who am also an elder."

We read of signs and wonders being wrought by the apostles, never by the lay members, unless it may have been the gift of tongues and prophecy.

Now this may offend you; I can not help it. I write with no desire to offend; but it is my duty to contend, if need be, for the "truth once delivered to the Saints." And I trust the time will come soon when "Ye shall know that we are not reprobates." I must live and strive, not to be approved of men, but to be approved of God, and do that which I know is honest, and true, and right "though we be as reprobates."

You can do nothing against the truth. God is with us, and we know it, and the same signs follow his apostles now. The gift of healings, of tongues, interpretations of tongues, of prophecy, of wisdom, and of knowledge, and of discerning of spirits is with us. We know this, and we know it is not another gospel than Paul preached. Therefore we do not come under the anathema. And we do rejoice when we hear others preaching the same truths so far as they go, although we well know too many are like the young man whom Jesus loved when he looked upon him, and saw that he was "not far from the kingdom." And we do hope that such may be brought in. It is so sad to think many are at the door and will not enter, mistaking the boundary line for the kingdom itself.

I am sorry if my presence at your meetings disturbs you, or any others. But let me ask, Does it seem Christlike to make my cross any heavier than must needs be? Consider thyself if thou wert alone in a strange city and chose to worship with a people whose faith was the nearest like yours, how would you feel to be told, "I can not accept your testimony," because you do not believe in all points as we do," and "I don't see what you came among us for"? Do you think those people could ever do you any good? I do not believe you prayed over that matter.

How true are Christ's words! "He that receiveth you [to his disciples] receiveth me," and adversely, when you reject his disciples you reject Christ. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

Oh! why persecutest thou Christ in me? What evil have I done? Will such doings lead to the "unity of the faith"?

How will you receive this? If in the spirit in which it is sent, it will do you good. If in the spirit of prejudice, "which is the thief of justice," it will make you harder and bitterer. I leave it with Him who is my judge. But bitterness, harshness, unjust criticisms, and evil surmisings are not the fruit of the Spirit I have received which you doubt, according to your words to me, as being the Holy Spirit. By my fruits ye may judge me. That is righteous judgment. If I do not bring forth the fruits, "love" joy, peace, long-suffering," etc., then I stand condemned. May God guide us all.

In gospel bonds,

A. R. CORSON.

P. S.—The time is at hand when "the meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel. For the terrible one is brought to naught, and the scorner is consumed, and all that watch for iniquity are cut off: that make a man [or woman either] an offender for a word, [what word, 'Mormonism?'] and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of naught." Just a bugbear of their own imaginations; but I am glad to know the promise nevertheless is sure, that "they that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine."

"The word of the Lord was made a reproach unto me and a derision daily. Then I said: I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing and I could not stay. For I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side. Report, say they, and we will report it. All my familiars watched for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him, and we shall take our revenge on him. But the Lord is with me as a mighty terrible one: therefore my persecutors shall stumble, and they shall not prevail: they shall be greatly ashamed; for they shall not prosper: their everlasting confusion shall not be forgotten." Unto the Lord who seest the reins and the heart I have opened my cause.

LEXINGTON, Tennessee, November 25.

Editors Herald: After our reunion at Fulton closed, Bro. Cook, my colaborer, and I went to Bell, Kentucky, and preached three times to good crowds; but as we could get no house, we decided it was too cool to hold meetings in the grove, so we very reluctantly closed our meetings, as the interest was increasing. We then decided to labor separately a while, and try to open up some new places, Bro. Cook to work in Kentucky while I went to Tennessee.

Sr. Ames of Elbridge, Tennessee, who attended our reunion, requested me to come to Elbridge and preach some, so I sent an appointment ahead for Saturday night. I arrived there about noon on Saturday to learn that Sr. Ames had been refused the use of the church building. So we decided to preach in the new mill, which had not yet been supplied with machinery. We arranged seats in the upper story, which made a splendid meeting-place. None of our elders had been in this part of the country. Nearly all belonged to the Methodists.

We met at the mill at the appointed hour, about fifty persons being present. I had been speaking about ten minutes when a gang of men or boys ran by yelling and whooping like Indians. About ten or twelve got up and went down-stairs. Pretty soon they began to shower the house with brickbats and stones, etc. This was repeated three times. The people moved away from the windows, but no stones entered the house, so no one was hurt. I announced meeting again for the next evening, not being disposed to be run. Just before I reached Sr. Ames' house some one threw a brickbat at me. It passed just in front of my face. It was very dark and Sr. Ames was about four feet ahead of me, carrying a lantern. We attended the Methodist meeting next day. They announced meeting for that evening, so I arose and called in my appointment and announced for three o'clock that afternoon. About fifteen were present, and all but five or six left before I quit. So I gave it up, and took the Savior's advice to "flee unto another place."

I went to Gratio, about eighteen miles west of Obion Station, in company with Mr. Harman, of Obion Station, who returned home the same day. I was left among strangers again, but did not feel alone as the Lord was with me. I obtained the use of a schoolhouse, and that evening a good crowd came out,—none that I had ever seen before. Had good liberty and attention. I preached three nights, made many friends, and promised to return again soon. I think good can be done if the work is followed up.

I arrived home the 7th to learn that Bro. Cook had gone south. I went to High Hill Branch and preached twice. Home again the 16th, and found Brn. W. R. Smith and S. H. Fields holding meetings at my house every night. That night Bud Fields, Elder Fields' brother, demanded baptism, which was attended to next morning. So the little band of Saints at Fulton keeps increasing. Others are near the kingdom. One sister is waiting to get the consent of her husband, who is a bitter enemy. Three years ago the work began at Fulton with three members amidst strong persecution. Soon three or four more were added; then we began having prayer-meetings, which have been kept up every since. Twenty-two have been brought in in that neighborhood since, and others are near.

Saints, if we will unite our prayers and live our religion we will make our influence felt. We should never be discouraged because we are few in number.

I came to this place last Thursday to find that Bro. Cook had gone twenty-three miles farther south. I stopped with Bro. Richard Rush, and preached at his house two nights to small audiences. Bro. Richard's family and his father's family are the only Saints near here.

Saturday evening we went over to Elder Henderson Scott's, who lives six miles west of here, to see if we could get an opening. Bro. Scott thought it unwise to try at present, as people were so busy gathering crops.

We returned, and rain has hindered our going to Lexington. Will start to-morrow if weather permits, hoping to find Bro. Cook.

I can see the wisdom of the Lord in sending the elders two and two. We have some calls in new places. Do not know yet how we will arrange. Expect to labor in this part of the country until about Christmas. Bro. Cook is a good companion to travel with; being older in the work as well as years, he has been a great help to me, giving me good advice in my official duty as district president. I hope we shall be able to do a good winter's work.

Editors Herald: I have been thinking for some time of writing to let you know that I am in the faith as it was delivered to the Saints; as it was in the early days. And I am glad to say I am a Latter Day Saint and an Israelite by adoption. There are ten of us in the family, and four belong to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Saints, I kindly ask an interest in your prayers, the first Sunday in December.

Your brother in Christ Jesus,

Editors Herald: Perhaps a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard would not be amiss.

I left home twenty days ago for a preaching tour through the northern part of our district. I was invited to preach at a place two miles over the Territory line in Arkansas. I preached three times in the Boston Mountains with good liberty. But it rained all the time I was there, so took my grip in hand and walked twenty-two miles through mud and rain; creeks running full; had to wade to my knees through water to get to this place. Commenced meetings next night after arriving in Blaine. House crowded; people coming through mud and rain to hear me preach the restored gospel. Sunday morning I had four ministers to hear me, Sunday night three ministers out to hear me tell the gospel story. Quite an interest taken in this place. One minister came to me and said he was well pleased with what he heard. I left five persuaded we had the truth, and will, I believe, obey the gospel soon, if they are looked after. Plenty openings for preachings in this part. None of our elders ever was here that I know of. My work is entirely in new places, opening up the work.

Your brother in Christ,

PETER ADAMSON.

BLACKFOOT, Idaho, November 27.

Editors Herald: My labors since September 15 have been in vicinity of Idaho Falls and this place. Have baptized two, and by order of Dingle Branch ordained Bro. Jasper Jennings priest. We have had bitter opposition, but some have been enlightened in spite of the efforts to keep them blinded. Of course the willing followers are made to believe we are deceivers of the worst kind; but even they are often forced to admit that their elders resort to lying and deception to try to make a point against us. I have been nobly sustained by Brn. James and Jasper Jennings of Idaho Falls and the Saints of this vicinity in my labors. Srs. Larsen and Shoemaker planned a surprise meeting which brought the Saints nearer together and left the missionary better equipped for the cold weather. We have aroused investigation in several places and hope ere long to see some obey.

Bro. James Jennings, of Idaho Falls, has been appointed Bishop's agent, and in connection with Bro. H. R. Evans, of Malad City, will receive and receipt for all tithes and offerings paid in to them, and we trust they will be able to make a good report of receipts January 1.

S. D. CONDIT.

OMAHA, Nebraska, November 28.

Dear Herald: As the letters of the Saints have been so interesting and enjoyable to me, thought I would relate one of my own experiences.

When my eldest daughter, Mary, was about fifteen years old, we were living about five miles from Stewartville, Missouri, and attended a conference held at Bro. Emanuel Binstead's home. My daughter had taken cold about three months before, and had not spoken a word aloud during all that time. She kept growing worse while at the conference, until she was so ill she could not hold her head up. One evening the friends said she had the death rattle in her throat. The Saints were holding a prayer-meeting down-stairs. My daughter took hold of my hand, and I asked her if she wished to be administered to. Before this time she had never asked to be administered to. I told her if she wanted the elders to administer to her to press my hand, which she did. I went down-stairs, told my husband that our daughter was very ill, and to ask some of the elders to administer to her. T. J. Franklin and D. H. Bays came up with him. My husband administered the oil and gave her some in the name of the Lord Jesus, which she swallowed. This was the first time she had swallowed anything in twenty-four hours. Bro. Franklin, anointed her with oil and Bro. Bays was mouthpiece in the administration. After the administration the spirit of prophecy was manifested to the effect that she would bear her testimony before the meeting was over, in her own natural voice. The brethren returned down-stairs to the meeting, and she lay there asleep as I supposed, for about five minutes. All at once she roused up and said, "Mother, I am healed, am I not?"

I said, "Of course you are. What makes you think that you are not healed when you can speak out loud as well as you ever did?"

She said, "I thought I was awake, and I saw two little devils at my side, and they said that I was not healed. Give me my clothes, mother," she said, "I am going down to the meeting." She went down and bore as grand a testimony of her healing as I ever heard. As soon as she sat down Bro. Bays arose and said he thanked God for this he had seen, as he knew now that this work was the "power of God unto salvation." He bore a strong testimony of the healing and other testimonies regarding the latter-day work. There were about twenty-five or thirty Saints, many of whom are now living, and can testify to the above. Sr. Franklin, of Independence, was there and spoke in tongues, and it was a night of great rejoicing.

My daughter is living in Missouri, and is the widow of John Bozarth, a brother of William Bozarth. She is still strong in the work and glad to testify to the goodness of God. When I think of Bro. Bays' strong testimony regarding the latter-day work, it grieves my heart to think that now he is using his influence in opposing the grand and glorious gospel. If Bro. Bays has ever been honest in this work I feel towards him, as I feel towards some others, who are standing out in like manner, that he will, like the "prodigal son," come home when the "husks are all gone."

Yours in faith,

MRS. MARY E. BLODGETT DALTON.

SWEDEBURG, Nebraska, November 29.

Editors Herald: You will see we are still absent from the appointed field of labor as yet. If present indications be true we hope to soon return, however, as my wife seems to be feeling considerably better, for which we are truly thankful. Since coming here we have tried to utilize some of the time in gospel work, but with little success. Too much religion of the "shut out" kind to admit of any other.

There is a family near here that belongs to the Utah church, and of course we wanted to be friendly, so we made a call at their home a short time ago, when we found a couple of their elders there, by the name Rasmussen and Hougaard, both apparently new men in the field, though the latter said he had been at work for seventeen months. I asked him what quorum of seventy he belonged to, and he said he could not remember. I thought that very peculiar. Previous to this visit I had had a chat with Mr. Bergstrom, their member here, asking him several questions which he said he could not answer, but that he would get some one from Omaha that could. So I naturally supposed when I saw these men that I would get the answer. But it was the same old story over again, known to all who have ever met those people. Mr. Hougaard seems to think that the Utah church is fast gaining favor in the eyes of the educated public, but in what particular he did not mention, only the inference seemed to me to be that he thought the people were beginning to see that polygamy would be a good thing for the country. If anybody has the remotest idea that polygamy is really a dead issue, as intimated in the recent editorial of the Deseret News, a short conversation with one of their elders will surely convince him to the contrary. The elder referred to admitted that it is the teaching of the church that a man can not obtain the highest degree of glory unless he practices plural marriage. Reasoning from that I urged that his exaltation depended upon whether or not women would accept the doctrine. And my wife suggested further that it really depended upon his first wife giving her consent for him to marry another. Were it not for the fact that I am inclined to believe that people can be induced to believe most anything, I would ask, How can it be that any will believe it? For my part, I think one of the best things with which to meet those people on the polygamy question is the book of "Ready References," usually carried by their elders, and also had by some of the members at large. These men backed squarely out against the references contained therein.

One interesting feature of our conversation was in reference to the late article by the president of the Utah church, in reply to the article by Bro. Joseph, published in the late copy of the Arena. In the article of President Smith of Utah, he, in attempting to fasten polygamy upon the martyred Joseph, gives the names of several men and women who are indorsed by him as "honest and truthful." Imagine our surprise when on investigation we find that several of these very people perjured themselves in the Temple Lot suit. Mr. Smith surely is acquainted with those facts and it does seem that he would have made a better plea had he omitted those names, at least. The only reason that we can see for including them is that his article was for publication in a magazine the readers of which would be unacquainted with the facts.

We were well pleased with the editorial in our late HERALD, in reply to the polygamy question. I have been anxiously waiting for those men to show themselves again and I will give them some interesting reading. The more I come in contact with the representatives of that organization, the more manifest becomes their errors. When they tell me that one must become so very good morally before he can practice polygamy, and at the same time refer to passages in the Scriptures which they say gives the practice divine command and sanction, these passages at the same time making it obligatory upon man to commit adultery, it becomes manifest what they consider "high" morally! Ignorance as to teachings of the church in Utah in early days seems to be at a premium with the minister. And while seemingly very good, yet we can not see but what they represent a class of people mentioned in Holy Writ, "promising salvation to others they, themselves, are working out their own damnation."

May God hasten the day when all those who pretend to accept the restored gospel may do so in fact. We endeavored to be courteous to our friends, but gave them to understand that so long as they went before the world with the statement that they represented the true Latter Day Saints, they, themselves, were continually challenging our representatives, and must not complain when we take up the issue with them. To our knowledge these men were in this community about ten days and they did not see fit to favor us with a visit, though urged to do so. They pretended to court investigation and enjoy interviews, but they evidently preferred such when none of their members were present.

If wife continues to improve we expect to start for Grinnell soon, and eventually to return to our field of labor. Have not made any plans yet, for we are beginning to learn that a good way to do is to do just as fast as we are able, according to our strength and conditions. May God bless all those who have covenanted to serve him.

In gospel bonds,

F. A. RUSSELL.

Editors Herald: Sometime ago I wrote a short sketch of Oran Center Branch. I will attempt to write a short sketch of our Sunday-school. In looking up the record we find no minutes of the organization of the Sunday-school at this place. The first session is dated Oran Center, January 5, 1896. The members of the then Grove Hill Branch were called to meet at the Oran Center Schoolhouse for the purpose of organizing a Sunday-school. Sr. Libbie Sutton met with us and organized us. She chose the name "Star of Bethlehem Sunday-school," which we accepted. The following officers were elected: H. D. Miller, superintendent; J. S. Hodges, assistant; A. L. Miller, secretary; C. S. Shippy, treasurer; Amos Dewald, janitor. Thus having a full line of officers, we chose Mertie Dewald teacher for class No. 1, Lillie Dewald teacher for class No. 2, C. S. Shippy, teacher for class No. 3.

The quarterly report for March 29, 1896, shows an attendance of 274, average 21. We have no minutes of a change of officers only as the secretary signs her name "K. B. Shippy" for the second quarter, ending June 28, 1896, when the attendance was 228.

The "Star of Bethlehem" disappeared with only one to protest against disorganizing. The majority prevailed. After considerable talking of some of the members we made another effort to organize again. This time we organized under the name of Oran Center Sunday-school. The first session was held in Oran Center Schoolhouse, July 7, 1901. By an effort on the part of a few we succeeded in living through two quarters and finally gave up in despair the last Sunday in December, 1901. But I am not entirely discouraged yet. I hope next year we will organize again with better success. I believe there are some to oppose us even in the church. But if God be for us we will be more than those who oppose us. I can not see how it is that there can be so many Saints against having Sunday-school, when their children are growing up in vice and comparative ignorance concerning the Latter Day Saint work. They learn the principles of the doctrine of Christ and some are even baptized; but it is like learning the alphabet and thinking they know all that is necessary. What will the day of judgment reveal? What wails of bitter anguish will burst from the lips of those who oppose the work of God, also those who are silent when they should "lift the gospel banner from the dust and prepare for Zion's war!" The dark clouds of persecution are beginning to rise. Methinks I can hear the rumblings of thunder in the distance, not very far off, either. Who will be prepared? Who?

Your brother in the faith,

Conference Minutes.

Nodaway.—Conference convened October 18, with Ross Grove Branch; E. S. Fannon, district president, in chair; W. B. Torrance secretary. Ministry reporting: Elders J. D. Stead baptized 2, R. K. Ross, F. J. Curtis, R. Lorensen, E. S. Fannon, J. T. Ford, and J. S. Snively; Priests W. T. Ross and W. B. Torrance. E. S. Fannon reported as district historian. Branch reports: Sweet Home 47, loss 4; Ross Grove 49; Platte 100, loss 1; Bedison 57. Committee appointed at last reunion to sense the feeling of the Saints in regard to holding another reunion next year reported favorably. Committee continued. Reunion financial committee reported a total of $12.50 on hand. It was ordered that the unused money left in the hands of the reunion committee, be turned over to the district president to be used for the next reunion or as the district may direct. E. S. Fannon was elected district president, W. B. Torrance secretary. Good Literature superintendent reported having distributed 225 pieces literature. Committee to audit Bishop's agent's books reported same correct. Committee was appointed to examine district statistics. It reported some errors, and district secretary was ordered to make possible corrections. Preaching was done by J. D. Stead and E. S. Fannon. Sunday evening conference adjourned to meet with Bedison Branch in February.

Notice to Missionaries in Southern Fields.

Missionaries in Texas will please make all reports directly to me, as Bro. R. Wight has been transferred to Iowa field on account of ill health. I wish to have a full report from all for the first of the year. Seven men failed last quarter to make report. Next report is due January 1. Also want statement as to the future at that time. Give size of family allowance needed and preference of field if any. Missionaries in Oklahoma and Indian Territory report to Hubert Case, Redmoon, Oklahoma; Arkansas and Louisiana, to W. S. Macrae, Joplin, Missouri, as heretofore; Texas men directly to me at Lock Box 132, Independence, Missouri.

H. O. SMITH.

PICKERING, Louisiana, November 27, 1902.

Missionary Released.

For reasons assigned by himself and at his request, Bro. E. A. Goodwin, of Michigan, who was at the last April conference assigned to the mission in Canada, has been released from his appointment for the rest of the conference year. Bro. Goodwin is recommended to local officers should his services be required as a local laborer.

Notice of Amendment.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION AND ASSOCIATION OF GRACELAND COLLEGE.

Proposed to amend Article 8 by striking out the words "for the ensuing year" after the phrase, "The selection of professors and teachers," so that the article would read:

"The Board of Trustees shall annually, as soon after the election of new members as practicable, consistent with the best interests of the college work, meet at the principal place of business noted herein, and shall perform the duties and work devolving upon such officers as herein set forth; namely—The selection of professors and teachers; providing for janitor; arranging or adopting a course of study for said institution; and performing any and all other duties required for the good of the same, not enjoined upon the Board of Trustees herein."

Action upon this amendment will be had at the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees, February 10, 1903, at the usual place of meeting.

Signed,

DANIEL ANDERSON, Chairman,
I. W. ALLENDER, Secretary,
Board of Trustees.

Conference Notices.

Idaho District conference will be held in Malad City, December 20, 21, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Elders W. H. Kelley and W. S. Pender and the Idaho missionary force are expected in attendance. All official members of the church residing in Idaho and Utah north of the Brigham City parallel are expected to report. Let us know, brethren, what you are doing toward magnifying your calling. Report to S. D. Condit, Logan, Utah, or W. L. John, Malad City, Idaho.

Died.

WELDON—Celestia, wife of Bro. Elmer Weldon, sister of Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser; was born April 11, 1870, at Liberty, San Joaquin County, California; died at San Jose November 17, 1902. Sr. Weldon manifested extraordinary wisdom in directing and superintending Sunday-school affairs; a faithful and consistent Christian, a true and loving wife. Her passing away was very sad: She left a little baby one month and two days old. May heavenly comfort come to the husband and the many who mourn her departure. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Funeral services were conducted from the home of Sr. Morris, her sister, by J. B. Carmichael.

FREDRICKSON.—At his home near Thurman, Iowa, Lucious Dickison Fredrickson; was born in Hancock County, Ohio, February 16, 1840; died November 17, 1902. Removed to Fremont in 1855. Enlisted in the United States army in Second Iowa Cavalry, Company K, October 9, 1863; mustered out October, 1865. Baptized August 24, 1888, by Joseph Luff; married December 28, 1865, to Miss Cassa Ritchie; two sons, one daughter, two brothers, and many friends left to mourn. He was an active member of the church. Greatly respected by all who knew him as an honorable man and worthy member of the church. Funeral sermon at his home by Elder Henry Kemp. His remains were laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery of Sidney, Iowa.

GOFF.—Laura L. Goff, at her home in Indian River, Maine, November 15, 1902, aged 60 years, 5 months, 18 days. She was baptized September 13, 1898, by Elder T. C. Kelley, and remained faithful to her covenant. Funeral services at her late home, conducted by Elder C. H. Rich.

HANSON.—Christena Hanson, wife of James Hanson, at Eldorado Springs, Missouri, November 13, 1902, aged 51 years, 5 months, 21 days, leaving husband and one daughter to mourn. She had been afflicted three years with cancer. Was baptized in 1889 by Elder John Moore. Was a faithful wife, a loving mother, a good neighbor, an energetic Saint. Funeral sermon by G. W. Beebe, assisted by T. R. White, at Coalhill Cemetery.

It is difficult even to guess at the age of the ancient live-oaks, says Country Life in America, Christmas Annual, but some of them must number centuries and the oldest and greatest of them all is a monarch of the forest, with its outer branches sweeping the ground in a circle one hundred and twenty feet across, with limbs as great as ordinary trunks of trees and bearing a garden of aerial ferns and air-plants upon their bark. This venerable tree is supposed to be the largest live-oak in Florida. Enormous grape-vine trunks rise sinuously from the ground and lose themselves amid the quarter-acre of foliage that crowns this tree; the saplings that once gave them support have disappeared long years ago, their only record being the angles and curves of grape-vine stem to which they lent their transient aid in climbing skyward.

The Arena for December completes the twenty-eighth volume of the well-known review of progressive thought. It opens with a discussion, suggested by the recent coal strike, of "Private Property and Public Rights," by Edwin Maxey, LL.D. and Editor McLean announces a symposium on the same subject for the January issue. "One Aspect of Continental Expansion" is considered by Jacob W. Richardson, A.B., LL.B. "The Anglo-Saxon and the African" is the title of an article by one of the most enlightened negroes in America—Professor Kelly Miller, of Howard University. Colonel William Hemsstreet presents the "Theory and Practice of the New Primary Law," and Robert Tyson describes "Proportional Representation." Herbert N. Casson discusses "The Trade-Unionist and the Monopoliist." In addition to an interview with Edwin Markham on "The Poet as a Teacher," and a humorous story of domestic interest by Eleanor H. Porter, there are articles by the Reverend Hiram Vrooman, on "The Coöperative Association of America;" Elliott Flower, on "The Irrigationist's Point of View," and Annie L. Diggs, on "The Garden City Movement."

Country Life in America for December is a large Christmas Annual with a beautiful cover and a hundred superb illustrations, and colored supplements besides. The spirit of jollity of the season pervades the bulky number of winter sports, unusual house parties, Christmas homes and many things of winter at her best. Rudyard Kipling contributes the poem, "Pan in Vermont," deifying the man who, in winter, brings the seeds of phlox and hollyhocks into the snowbound country where Kipling once lived. Eleanor Hoyt has written a story of another one of the "misdemeanors" of her adorable Nancy. Preëminent, however, is the profusion of elaborate pictures and the articles that have to do with hockey, skeeving and tobogganing, snowshoeing, ice yachting on country lakes, fishing through the ice, and even the homely sports of skating, skate-sailing and the pursuits that carry one into the deep woods. Among other important articles, with beautiful illustrations, "The Winter Fireside" deals with open fireplaces and vital problems for the "Country Home-Making" series; "A Florida House at Christmas Time" is suggestive of holiday ideals, and "The Sierra Club in Camp" details the delightful plan of Californians who seek the wildness of snowcapped mountains one month of every summer; while "The Skimmer of the Seas" is a familiar story, illustrated, of the peculiar habits of a waterfowl that has bewildered naturalists since Audubon; and James S. Metcalfe writes of a plan of sending city slum children to a "fresh air" farm. Altogether, the elaborate make-up bespeaks the grand success of this new sort of magazine, the growing love of real sport in America, and the movement of the New World back to the garden and outdoor life of the Old.

The two most striking articles of the well-varied contents of The World's Work for December are President Eliot's—of Harvard—article on "The Needs of American Public Education" and Frank W. Vanderlip's Conservative Note of Warning on the financial situation. The illustrated features of The World's Work this month include a handsome series of reproductions of George Grey Barnard's sculpture printed in a brown-toned ink, accompanying an article about the sculptor and his work by Alexander Blair Thaw. Other interesting illustrated articles are Forrest Crissey's story of the development of The Traveling Post-office, a complete description by Chalmers Roberts, of the work on the famous Nile Dam, and the inner history of the growth of Mormon Coöperation by Glen Miller. Portraits of John B. McDonald and Clement A. Griseom are accompanied by appreciative interpretations of the work these men have done, by Raymond Stevens and Lawrence Perry. Interviews with prominent employers in regard to profit sharing and Christmas gifts to employees are reported by Fullerton Waldo. Mr. Frederick A. Job, the chairman of the Illinois State Board of Arbitration tells of an interesting and successful experiment it has made in arbitrating labor troubles. Minna C. Smith tells about the new profession—production engineering. There is a striking article by the late Frank Norris concerning Our Neglected Epic—the Epic of the West. Albert Bigelow Paine, Joel Chandler Harris, Henry D. Sedgwick, Jr., and Sara Beaumont Kennedy write of their personal preferences among recent books. The financial article on The Bonds of American Corporations, The March of Events and Among the World's Workers are as complete and interesting as usual.

Natural Resources of Arkansas.

Until within the last few years the world at large has known very little of the undeveloped resources of Arkansas. It has been known for many years that there was an abundance of timber of various kinds in the State, and in the past few years her mineral wealth has been discovered in the north central part, which is beginning to attract capitalists from all parts of the United States and Europe.

I came to this State as a missionary in 1895, and have spent about four years of the time since in active mission work. The balance of the time has been devoted to a careful study of the natural resources of the State, prospecting for zinc and lead in the north part of the State, so famously known as the "New Zinc Field" of Northern Arkansas.

It is a fact, well established in the mind of every one who has come and made the field a study, that the mineral exists in Baxter, Marion, and Sharp Counties in great quantities, and the quality of the lead and zinc ores is unsurpassed in any country. It is a fact well known that a lump of zinc from a mine in this field took the premium at the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893. Besides the mineral already mentioned, there is iron, building stone of excellent quality, and marble here in abundance. The principal colors of the marble are black, gray, and chocolate. I know of one mountain that has a face of this fine gray and chocolate marble twenty-five feet thick.

Lack of transportation has kept the capitalists out of this rich field in the past, but the tide is rapidly changing in the last year, as the Missouri Pacific Railway is constructing a railroad up the White River from Batesville, Arkansas, to Carthage, Missouri, which, when completed, will give this field transportation to the smelters in the natural gas fields at Iola, Kansas. This fact is bringing the capitalists from the North, East, and West, and the result is that rich zinc and lead mines are being opened. Concentrating plants are being built here and there all over the district. Other railroad companies are making preliminary surveys into this mineral belt, and all the available mineral lands are being bought up; and the writer believes, that in the near future this zinc field will be as densely populated with mining camps as the Joplin-Galena District is to-day.

After spending a year and a half prospecting, I decided to organize and incorporate a joint-stock company; and as I did not care to mention the matter to any of the brethren until I had thoroughly satisfied myself that it would be a success, I therefore interested good, honest business men, who were already familiar with the field, and I incorporated the White River Mining and Development Company, of Mountain Home, Arkansas, with a capital stock of six hundred thousand dollars. I continued the prospecting and kept adding to the company's holdings, until it now owns over four thousand acres of mineral lands, with two mines, developed ready for the concentrating plants. The money is already provided to put in the first mill. One hundred thousand dollars of the treasury stock is yet to be sold, and the proceeds of the sales can only be used for development purposes. The company has several other fine prospects opened, some of which show lead and zinc from the grass roots.

The company is reliable and is incorporated on a broad basis, its books are opened for inspection by the stock-holders at any time, as the brethren hold controlling interests. I feel perfectly safe in recommending its stock as a safe investment, one that is sure to bring good returns for the money invested.

In order to give the reader an idea of the value of our proposition, I will submit a few facts and figures, based on one zinc mine. The working capacity of one hundred-ton mill, for a year:

While the facts are that we can produce "jack" for at least one third less than they can at Joplin, yet I shall figure that it will cost us fifteen dollars per ton to produce our "jack." A one hundred ton mill will, if run at its full capacity, produce from the grade of ore that we have, fifteen tons of "jack" per day, which will amount to ninety tons per week; ninety tons of "jack" per week at forty dollars per ton (present price) equals three thousand six hundred dollars per week gross. Cost of producing ninety tons of "jack," one thousand three hundred fifty dollars, which leaves a profit of two thousand two hundred fifty dollars per week, net to the shareholders. Now count fifty weeks for a year's run and you have the enormous sum of one hundred twelve thousand five hundred dollars clear profit, which makes a dividend on the entire stock of the company of eighteen and three fourths per cent. These figures are based on a full year's run without any stop, and is figured at top prices. Now to be sure and not get the estimate too high, I propose to divide by two, which I am sure is perfectly safe, and still we have over nine per cent dividend on the entire stock, at its par value from the operating of one mill. The second will make the earnings double, the third treble, and so on as the stock is sold. All of the net earnings of the mines and mills belong to the shareholders, which will be distributed pro rata among them from time to time.

This company offers free transportation to investors, on certain conditions, from any part of the United States to Mountain Home and return.

The brethren who are shareholders living in the state of Iowa took advantage of this offer and sent a committee of three men down here, consisting of Brn. I. McCord, of Defiance, George Juergens, of Gidden, and W. A. Carroll, of Auburn, Iowa, with instructions to make a close inspection and report. After spending two days inspecting the company's mine and prospects, also their books, they submitted the following report:

"To those interested in the White River Mining and Development Co., Ltd., and those who may wish to become interested in said company: We as a committee of stockholders, selected by the stockholders of said company from Iowa, submit our report, as follows: We have spent two weeks inspecting the properties of the said company located in Sharp, Marion, and Baxter Counties, Arkansas. We first inspected their property in Sharp County, and find zinc ore showing in many places. With a little more development this property will be ready for a mill. We then went to their property in Marion County, where the company owns forty acres, known as the Bull Mountain property on White River. On this land there is a carbonate ledge about five hundred yards in length. Above this ledge there is a lead ledge of considerable extent. The property is now ready for a mill, but will wait for the completion of the railroad which is now under construction, and being pushed as rapidly as means can push it. When completed this road will pass within five miles of this property. We next visited their property in Baxter County, known as the Bald Dave Mountain property. We found many outcroppings of "jack" and carbonate, with lead showing in many places. This will prove to be a very valuable property. We visited the officers of the company of Mountain Home, examined their books and papers, found them all O. K. We found the affairs of the company being managed on a basis of economy. We found the two first blocks of stock sold and this money provided for the erection of a concentrating plant. We recommend the erection of machinery, and the prosecution of the development on the Pine Creek, Sharp County, property. We recommend that when the machinery is installed properly on Pine Creek property, that suitable machinery be erected on Bull Mountain, Marion County, property."

The idea of cooperation is prevalent in the minds of the people everywhere, and other people are cooperating, thereby building strong financial concerns, both in manufacturing and mining. Why not our people do likewise?

If any of the readers of this article wish any further information concerning the natural resources of the State, or the progress of the company, they will write me and I will be pleased to furnish the desired information.

JOSEPH WARD, Secretary.

JOSEPH F. SMITH ON THE POLYGAMY QUESTION.

In the Chicago Tribune for December 2 there appeared the report of an interview had with President Joseph F. Smith, at Salt Lake City, Utah, in which the reporter asked some questions concerning the status of polygamy in Utah, and as to whether or not it was being practiced, and whether there were any polygamous marriages being performed now. According to the statements of Joseph F. Smith, the only ones living in polygamy to-day are those who were married before the law against polygamy was passed; and these, he said, are so rapidly passing away that there will soon be none left. In reply as to whether the church performs plural marriage ceremonies, or permits them, President Smith is said to have replied:

"Certainly not. The church does not perform or sanction or authorize marriage in any form that is contrary to the laws of the land. The assertion that prominent Mormons practice polygamy is evidently made to mislead the public. When the prohibition of polygamy was proclaimed by the president of the Mormon church there were many persons who had contracted plural marriages, and that relation has been continued in many instances, because the men in that position determined not to abandon their families. This is erroneously construed as practicing polygamy and creates the impression that polygamous marriages are still permitted in and by the church.

"It was ascertained by a careful census in 1890, when President Woodruff issued his manifesto against further polygamous marriages, there were 2,451 such families belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the United States. In May, 1902, a complete and thorough inquiry showed that the original number in 1890 had been reduced to 897, the great majority of whom were of advanced age, and many of them have since departed from this life. It is evident that, with no additions to this total, but a rapid and continual decrease, the number of polygamous families will soon be reduced to zero."

President Smith was then asked to define the position occupied in the church by Reed Smoot, his office having been compared to that of a cardinal or archbishop in other churches. In reply he said:

"The two positions are not parallel. An apostle or elder or bishop in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is usually engaged in some secular vocation or laboring in some capacity for his daily bread. He is ordained to the office in the priesthood which he holds, so that he may act in that calling when required. He gives his services gratuitously to the church. As a rule, men holding positions in the priesthood are engaged in secular callings and are men of affairs.

"Reed Smoot is a banker, the manager of the largest manufacturing institution in this State, and is interested greatly in mining operations and other temporal pursuits. He is recognized as a capable and enterprising citizen, and his position in the church need not interfere in any way with his services to the State or nation in any political office to which he may be elected. It is not true that he has been put forward by the church as a candidate for public office. Mormon church officials have served in Congress for years and no objection has been offered on that account."

We have given the foregoing thinking it may be useful to our elders.

A FORGERY.

Bro. W. S. Pender wrote us from Provo, Utah, June 27, 1902:

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH;

My Dear Brother: Herein I inclose you copy of a letter published in the New York Sun of December 9, 1845, signed "Emma Smith." Also copy of a letter of Elder J. G. McQuarrie, of the Mormon church, to Elder B. H. Roberts, verifying the publication of the letter, giving date of publication in the Sun, etc.

I am indebted to the courtesy of Elder B. H. Roberts for copies of these letters.

While the purported letter of your mother to the New York Sun may not be of much importance, even if written as claimed, in the contention between the Mormon people and us, yet, having been recently discovered by Elder Roberts in a book written against Mormonism by one Thomas Gregg, Roberts now makes as much out of it as he can. It thus becomes one of the many little matters which come up in the controversy in this mission and demands, of course, an answer by us. At first I thought to learn if you had any personal knowledge in regard to the writing of the letter referred to by your mother. But if you think of sufficient importance, you might answer through the columns of the HERALD, for the benefit of others interested.

"BROOKLYN, New York, July 16, 1901.

"ELDER B. H. ROBERTS,

"Salt Lake City, Utah;

"Dear Brother: As per your recent request we went to the New York Sun office, and after some little hunting found the article, a copy of which you sent us. The article appears in the issue of December 9, 1845, and is, with few errors, the same as you sent us. I return the type-written article with the differences noted by pencil mark.

"Above the article this appears: "The Mormons: Important letter from Mrs. Smith, widow of Mormon Prophet. The following interesting letter from Mrs. Smith, widow of the late General Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet, came to us yesterday by private conveyance from Nauvoo. It will be read with great interest, and gives probably the most correct though brief view of affairs as at present exist among that unhappy people.' After the article appears another comment stating that the letter was shown General Bennett, he then being in New York, and he pronounced it correct. A few issues before this letter was a letter from Mr. Bennett which appeared very favorable to the Mormons. I trust that this will be satisfactory.

"We are very pleased to note the interest you take in our labors here in the East, for we also feel encouraged. Our prospects are quite favorable at present, and the newspaper talk helps us on as a spirit of fairness with some of the papers seems to prevail. With kindest regards for the brethren at home, I am,

"Your brother,

"J. G. MCQUARRIE, Per J. E. Baird."

"THE MORMONS.

"IMPORTANT LETTER FROM MRS. SMITH, WIDOW OF MORMON PROPHET.

"The following interesting letter from Mrs. Smith, widow of the late General Joseph Smith, the Mormon Prophet, came to us yesterday by private conveyance from Nauvoo. It will be read with great interest, and gives probably the most correct though brief view of affairs as at present exist among that unhappy people:

"NAUVOO, (Ill.), Nov. 20, 1845.

"To the Editor of the New York Sun;

"Sir: I hope to be excused for addressing, for the first time in my life, a letter to the editor of a newspaper, and this I have been induced to do, from seeing the letter of General Arlington Bennett, published in the newspaper, urging the Mormon people to remove to the Pacific Ocean, and advocating the cause of the tyrants, who have seized on the government of the Mormon church. This church, such as it is, was formed by my lamented husband who was martyred for its sake, and whether true or false, has laid down his life for its belief!

"I am left here, Sir, with a family of children to attend to, without any means of giving them an education for there is not a school in the city; nor is it intended there shall be any here, or at any other place, where the men who now govern this infatuated, simple-minded people, have sway. I have not the least objection that these petty tyrants remove to California, or any other remote place, out of the world if they wish; for they will never be of any service to the Mormons, or the human family, no matter where they go. Their object is to keep the people over whom they rule in the greatest ignorance, and most abject religious bondage. If these poor, confiding creatures remove with them, they will die in the wilderness. The laws of the United States are quite good enough for me and my children, and my settled intention is to remain where I am, take care of my property, and if I can not educate my children here, send them to New York or New England for that purpose. Many of the Mormons will, no doubt, remove in the spring, and many more will remain here; and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to have a mixed society in Nauvoo, as in other cities, and have all exclusive religious distinction abolished.

"I must now say that I never for a moment believed in what my husband called his apparitions and revelations, as I thought him laboring under a diseased mind; yet, they may all be true, as a prophet is seldom without credence or honor, excepting in his own family or country; but as my conviction is to the contrary, I shall educate my children in a different faith, and teach them to obey and reverence the laws and institutions of their country. Shall I not, Sir, be protected in these resolutions against the annoyance of the men I now oppose, for they will no doubt seek my life?

"What object General Arlington Bennett has in advocating the cause of these petty tyrants, I am not able to understand, for he assured me, when at my house, that he had not the smallest intention of connecting himself in any manner with them, much less of removing with them to the Pacific Ocean. But this is a strange world; and I would not be surprised if they had offered to anoint and crown him king or emperor in the West! As I have something more to say, I will take the liberty to write you another letter.

“With great respect,
“I am, Sir, your humble servant,
“(Signed) EMMA SMITH.”

The foregoing letter taken from the Sun is a forgery, pure and simple. At the time Mr. Thomas Gregg, of Warsaw, Illinois, was arranging for, writing, and compiling the matter for his work, “The Prophet of Palmyra,” we corresponded with him in regard to this letter, and sent him a copy of Sr. Emma Smith’s letter denouncing the letter as a forgery, sent to the Sun for insertion, and published in the Times and Seasons, the then official journal of the church at Nauvoo, and requesting him not to publish the forged letter. He preferred, however, to publish the lie rather than the truth. The denial of the Prophet’s wife we give below:

NAUVOO, December 30, 1845.

To the Editor of the New York Sun;

Sir: I wish to inform you, and the public through your paper, that the letter published Tuesday morning, December 9, is a forgery, the whole of it, and I hope that this notice will put a stop to all such communications.

EMMA SMITH.

—Times and Seasons for January 15, 1846.

This Thomas Gregg was one of the most uncompromising anti-Mormons in Hancock County, Illinois, and took an active part in favoring and carrying out the unlawful measures taken by the mob to drive out and destroy the church from the State. We regret that because he, an anti-Mormon, preferred to accept a forged letter purporting to have been written by the Prophet Joseph’s wife and his widow (made so by the cruel acts of such men as he), any Mormon or Latter Day Saint of any shade of belief in the teachings of the Prophet, should be found who will republish said forgery and believe it against the specific statement made by the Elect Lady that that letter and “the whole of it” “is a forgery.”

Of this Elect Lady, President John Taylor, while acting as the editor of the Times and Seasons, and which he was doing at the time this denial of the authenticity of that letter was made, wrote and published as follows:

Suppose we say a word concerning the “prophet’s wife,” Mrs. Emma Smith; she honored her husband while living, and she will never knowingly dishonor his good name while his martyred blood mingles with mother earth! Mrs. Smith is an honorable woman, and if we are not deceived, is as far from the corrupt insinuations in this ninety-ninth exposé of Mormonism, as a fixed star is from a gambler’s lamp at midnight. The very idea that so valuable and beloved a lady could be coaxed into a fame of disgrace like the above, is as cruel and bloody as the assassination of her husband at Carthage. There is no honor or shame in this generation; or, after they had murdered an affectionate husband, and left his wife and a large family of small children to mourn his loss, and struggle against the woes of life, they would give the family a chance to drink once without the wormwood and gall!

The fact is, the story must have been put in circulation to injure the Latter Day Saints; and as Mrs. Smith was one of them, to destroy, or murder her reputation, and create division in the church.—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, pp. 776, 777, Jan. 15, 1845.

The subsequent action of the Prophet’s widow substantiates her denial of being the author of the letter of December 9, 1845. She stayed at Nauvoo, never at any time denying or repudiating her faith in the doctrines taught by her husband into the belief of which she had been baptized in her husband’s lifetime. She united with the Reorganized Church at the time her son Joseph did, and from that time until her death continued in fellowship with those who had been members with herself in the church before the Martyrs were killed; always avowing her belief in her husband as having under the direction of the Lord established the church. She held charge of the manuscripts of the Holy Scriptures intrusted to her by her husband, Joseph Smith, yielding them only to his son when the time came for their publication. She was named as an elect lady by the revelation of Christ; and did nothing during her life to invalidate her right to the title, having kept the faith unto death. As her son, knowing her faith and her integrity, we prefer to believe her, and the estimate made of her by President John Taylor, than to believe the statement of one so publicly notorious an enemy to the family and the faith as Thomas Gregg is known to us to have been. Emma Smith did not in the lifetime of her husband, the Prophet, dishonor him, nor her profession of faith; neither did she after his death.

That this letter, published in the New York Sun, December 9, 1845, over the name of Emma Smith, was forged and the publication of it secured with the purpose of injuring the widow of the Prophet, and her family, there is no doubt in the minds of her sons, and probably was none in the minds of her friends at the time.

It was known at the time that “Sr. Emma” had some strong convictions concerning some men and the things they were credited with saying and doing. Her opinions regarding some of the policies that seemed to be prevalent were known, and her influence was feared. Her husband’s last advice to her was to the effect that if fatal harm came to him she was to remain in her home, or if she could not do that in safety, to go east where she could live in peace.

That the wife of the Prophet had some enemies in the ranks of the church, is certain. And that some of these were unscrupulous enough to resort to such a means as the forging of that letter her sons, also, believe. Nor is it beyond possibility that some anti-Mormon knowing the dissatisfaction of “Sr. Emma,” thought it an opportunity to compromise her with the enemies of the church at Nauvoo, and thus widen any breach of confidence between her and the leaders that may have existed. But, no matter by whom the forgery was executed, it was a dastardly act. “Sr. Emma” was widowed by the act of malicious murderers. Those who should have been friends proved to be otherwise. She was made the object of suspicion and a hateful espionage put upon her household. Those who by reason of personal regard were her friends were subjected to surveillance and abuse and insult. From the knowledge of such a condition of things, it would have been easy for some one opposed to the church, including "Sr. Emma," to have forged such a letter in order to still further prejudice those whose policies she dissented from against her; just as those whose doctrines and practices she witnessed against, now seek to prejudice the minds of their followers against her by the republication of that letter. If they know that this denial of hers had been made they are dealing unfairly and unkindly with the reputation of a woman whose life was full of sacrifice and toil, and whose honesty and devotion to purity of intention, truth, and the principles of right were never questioned before the dogma of plural marriage covered the church as with a cloud of spiritual darkness, nor by any whose lives were not deeply compromised with the doctrines and practices which she opposed and denounced. The estimate of the character of "Sr. Emma" by John Taylor, made and published at the time this petty persecution of the wife of the Prophet was going on, was correct. She honored her husband while he was living, she did not disgrace nor dishonor his memory after his death.

The New York Sun states that the letter reached the editor's hands "by private conveyance." This is in itself suspicious. Who was this private "conveyance?" What moral right had the Sun to publish a letter of such character, without naming the responsible person through whose agency it was placed in the editor's hands? It was a forgery committed with an evil intent.

THE HERALD TEACHES FROM BIBLE, SAYS THE FARMER'S CALL.

Recently we reproduced in our columns an editorial from the Farmer's Call. The Call in its issue for December 4 reproduces our comments on the editorial, accompanied by the following:

Of the commendations of our editorials, none that we have noticed during the past twelve months has given us more satisfaction than the words of praise in a recent number of THE SAINTS' HERALD, published at Lamoni, Iowa. It is the official paper of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. The editor is Joseph Smith. Some of our readers may not know that the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints is that part of what is commonly known as the Mormon church which does not believe in polygamy. It claims, and we think proves, that polygamy was not any part of the original doctrine of the Latter Day Saints, and that Joseph Smith never taught it. What the SAINTS' HERALD does teach in its columns is founded primarily on the orthodox Bible and is proved by frequent quotations from that Bible as evidence.

Saturday night, December 13, L. E. Follansbee will lecture in the brick church here. This lecture will be given under the auspices of the Lamoni Religio Society. It is the first of a lecture course to be given this winter.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Under date of November 28 Bro. Henry Sparling wrote from Fuson, Missouri: "We had a glorious victory here. Sold eleven copies of the Voice of Warning, one Book of Mormon. Go from here to Eldridge to commence another debate. The Baptist people helped us nicely in our expenses. We have no Saints here, but some are waiting an opportunity."

Frank Thomas, of Standish, Michigan, sends a dollar for himself and one for his wife, to apply on the college debt. In remitting he writes: "The reason I have not sent before is that I did not think the Saints needed a college, and I did not think the Lord required us to send in money for it. But I have changed my mind, the change being caused by a dream. I dreamed that an elder and I were sitting in a room in a large building in the city, and a young man, not a member of the church, came in and gave the elder ten dollars and said: 'The college debt ought to be paid.' He then went out. Then I thought I put my hand in my pocket and gave the elder one dollar, the last dollar I had. Strange to say, when I had the dream I had only one dollar to my name, and ever since then I have been convinced that I ought to send in one dollar, and one for my wife also. I think every Saint should."

Under date of December 6 W. E. La Rue wrote from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania: "Bro. Sheehy is to be here to-day. Perhaps will hold a two-week series of meetings. Some baptisms to-morrow."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We have received from J. Fischer and Brother, music publishers at 7 and 11 Bible House, New York City, a copy of "All Hail the Night! All Hail the Morn!" a song with violin obligato, ad libitum. It is a very pretty piece of music, well adapted for use at Christmas-tide. It is written for soprano or tenor in D, alto or baritone in B flat, and is one of John Wiegand's compositions. It is within the compass of the ordinary voice, and has appropriate accompaniment for piano or organ.

Graceland College authorities have arranged a course of lectures, the first one to be given January 13. The first lecturer will be Professor A. G. Smith, of the University of Iowa, on the subject, "The Laws of Chance." It is to be hoped the Graceland people will be given hearty support.

Thomas B. Reed, former Speaker of the House of Representatives, died in Washington, District of Columbia, early in the morning of December 7.

Elder W. R. Smith reports having been to Davis Chapel, Kentucky, where they were fired into last summer, and had baptized two and left others interested. People are feeling better as they learn more of our work.

BRANCH MEMBERSHIP.

There seems to be some misunderstanding on this subject, and without proper care on our part it is very liable to produce division and confusion. On April 14, 1898, the following resolutions were adopted:

"No. 455. The scattering members not enrolled upon branch records be instructed to unite with branches most convenient to their places of residence.

"No. 456. That members changing their residences from branches where enrolled, be instructed to unite with branches most convenient to places where they reside."—General Conference Resolutions, page 123.

I think it is easily seen that the foregoing resolutions apply, first, to those who have no membership in any branch; and, second, to those who have membership in branches, but who, when changing their places of residence, neglect to unite with the branches to which they are most convenient. That is, when members leave one branch (in the sense of moving away from it) as their home, and locate more conveniently to another branch, as the place for their new home, the resolution applies. It will be seen, too, that these resolutions do not require such members to unite with the "nearest" branches to their places of residence, but those "most convenient." Missionaries who are located, because of their appointments, in towns and branches for periods of one, two, or three years, may or may not unite with the branches where they are laboring. The same is true of all persons who may temporarily locate away from their own branches for the purposes of business, labor, the practice of their professions, etc. With all such it is a matter of propriety and choice, but not of obligation.

Further: It is clear, I think, that a branch always has the right of jurisdiction over its own members; and this right does not depend upon their presence at home, or their absence abroad. It is also clear that members are always amenable to the branches to which they belong. If these two statements are not true, how much (or how little) does branch organization and government mean? Just as I understand one of the leading purposes of quorum organization to be that each quorum may exercise a righteous watchcare over the ministerial conduct of all its members, so one of the leading purposes of branch organization is that the branch should have jurisdiction over the moral and spiritual conduct of all who have been received by vote or baptism, as members; unless, by the same authority that received them, they have been granted letters of removal, or expelled for cause. True, it may sometimes become necessary to labor with and try a member who is absent from his branch. The safety of the work, and a laudable attempt to save the individual who is transgressing, renders such a cause necessary. But in all such cases, as I see it, as soon as labor begins, the branch to which the member belongs should be notified, and if it becomes necessary to have a church trial, its knowledge and consent should be had, if practicable. If, however, the character of the transgression and the time required for correspondence, would render such a cause unsafe, the trial may proceed without the consent of the branch to which the transgressor belongs, a report of the findings of the court, with such additional description of the case as may be necessary, being transmitted to his branch as soon as practicable, where final action is to be had by affixing the penalty, whether it be expulsion or something milder.

Branch officers should continue to watch over its absent members, so far as practicable; and absent members should consider themselves amenable to their own branches, respect them, and report to them from time to time. There is entirely too much neglect along these lines.

I do not contend for branch sovereignty, but for branch rights. It was my good pleasure to take the positions set forth in this article, whenever occasion required, for the twenty-nine years of which I was a member of the Quorum of Twelve. I have taken them in branches and districts, at home and abroad, where I had proper jurisdiction, and they have never been appealed from or seriously questioned, to my knowledge. Still, I am willing to admit that I may be wrong; but I will have to see something different from what I have yet seen before I can be convinced that I am wrong.

If when a member goes five hundred miles away from his own branch to where there is another branch, the right of jurisdiction is lost where his name is enrolled, then if he should only go ten or twenty miles, to where there is another branch, the effect would be the same. It may be said that no one contends that the branch where the member is enrolled loses its jurisdiction. The answer is plain. If that member can be picked up, tried, and put out of the church, without the knowledge or consent of his branch, then, clearly, the jurisdiction of the branch is totally destroyed.

Dealing with a transgressing member by a branch to which he does not belong, is made necessary by reason of an exigency. Now exigencies can neither create nor destroy legal rights. For this reason, the rights of the branch to which he belongs should be recognized all the way through. This course will bring peace, good will, and unity.

I have not written to strike at anybody; God forbid! but because I felt that something more should be said on this important subject.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Joyce.

The nurses did not notice anything unusual about Joyce Gardiner when she was brought to the hospital. She was "an interesting case," to be sure; a pathetic case, some of them said.

But when one's daily life is passed among hundreds of pathetic cases, only the rarest and purest sympathy can preserve a particular interest in individuals. Miss Claggett, assigned to the special care of Joyce, simply noticed that she did not like to talk, and gave up the attempt to interest her.

Joyce lay on her bed day after day, looking out with wide, clear eyes to the world which had pushed aside the pitiful wreck of her young life. The hospital, as she saw it, was not at all like the hospital which she had imagined.

When they had told her what was to be done with her, after the skill of the physicians near her home had failed, she had made for herself a picture of a long room with white walls and rows of white beds; a room where one might hear groans of pain or restless sighing.

But this room where she lay was small and bright; with softly tinted walls and rich rugs upon the floor. A beautiful Madonna hung just above the table, where Joyce could see it without turning her head. She lay and looked at it silently.

There was no sound of suffering to mar the silence. If this world held anybody besides Miss Claggett and the doctor and the Other Doctor, who came once or twice a week, Joyce was none the wiser.

"Isn't this a pretty room?" Miss Claggett asked one day, trying to call some expression of human interest from the small, grave creature, who bore pain so patiently, but had no words for joy. "It was fitted up by a guild of girls in St. Mark's Church—girls just about your age. They send flowers every week, and come to see—"

"Don't!" said Joyce, suddenly. "I know. They are girls who can do things. I could, once. Nobody wants me now. I don't want to hear about them." She would not look at the flowers which Miss Claggett brought in that afternoon.

Joyce had no "own people" coming to see her in visiting hours. The stern and silent uncle, who had given her the only home she knew, lived in a country town hundreds of miles from this great city. Joyce did not write to him. But she kept a little book under her pillow, after she began to use her arms a little, and in this book she wrote letters to God.

It was just as well, perhaps, that Miss Claggett and the doctor, respecting the girl's helpless loneliness, never glanced within the covers of that little red book. Such a sad, pitiful story of wrecked ambitions and thwarted plans for making life sweeter to some one! Such indignant yearnings of a heart eager for the joy of ministering, but shut apart now to a long future of being ministered unto!

"Wouldn't you like to be a nurse?" Miss Claggett asked one day, brushing out the long, soft hair across the pillow, and gathering it into a braid. She had no idea that Joyce would answer, but being human, she grew tired sometimes of the endless silence in the room, and tried to break it by a little conversation. "Wouldn't you like to wear a white cap and a striped gown, and take care of sick girls?"

Joyce did not answer—in words. She gave a sudden little gasping sob, and then the poor slender hands went up before her face and the thin shoulders shook with violent weeping. All of which, with the cause thereof, Miss Claggett duly reported to the Other Doctor, who came that morning.

"Ah, yes, yes, I see!" he said, looking back from the corridor to the door of Joyce's room. He did not have any daughters of his own, but that did not keep him from preserving a personal interest in all the "pathetic cases" that came under his care.

"I think I shall change the treatment a trifle, Miss Claggett," he said; and he stopped by the door for another five minutes, explaining his plan.

When Joyce opened her eyes from a doze that afternoon she saw a red-haired boy sitting in a wheel-chair beside her bed. He greeted her glance with a wide and propitiatory smile, which brought to her white face another smile in answer. The sight of him was like a fresh sea-breeze in the close air of her room.

"How do you do?" she said at once, with the frank air of comradeship which had always made all children like to be with her. "Where did you come from, and who are you?"

"John Rafferty; Children's Ward—up-stairs here, you know," her caller explained. "They let me wheel around and see folks. It's more fun than staying up yonder with the kids."

"I should think so," said Joyce. "But is there really a Children's Ward in this place? How many of you are there?"

"Sixteen. Five babies. Tom Black's going home day after to-morrow."

"Boys in a hospital!" mused Joyce. "Boys tied up in wheel-chairs!"

"Oh, the chair's a picnic!" John answered. "A heap better than lying with weights on your feet, or in casts. Mine was took off two weeks ago. No'm, it didn't hurt, specially, but I hate to keep still. Some of 'em up there walks on crutches; I can after a while."

"What do you do to amuse yourselves?" asked Joyce.

"There's books in the bookcase, but I don't much care about them. Mostly I like to make things for the little fellows. Tops, you know, and pinwheels; but I can't get any more paper, and I darsn't ask the new nurse for her scissors."

"There is some paper in the drawer of that table," said Joyce, "and a pair of scissors. I wish you would make me a pinwheel, John, and—tell me some more about the boys."

When Miss Claggett came back she discovered Joyce blowing a gorgeous rose and lavender pinwheel, manufactured from her choicest stationery.

She laughed, actually, when Miss Claggett remonstrated, and begged John Rafferty to come again and bring another boy with him. Three days later, when the Other Doctor came again, he smiled at Miss Claggett in a triumphant fashion, and told Joyce that she might sit up in bed for fifteen minutes that afternoon.

Joyce's room was seldom left without callers any day thereafter. The boys from the Children's Ward, who were able to be about, found it a delightful variation in the monotony of their life to take a trip down in the elevator and chat with the young lady in Number 8, who made them so free to the fruit on her table and the pins and paper in the drawer. Sometimes a little girl came, too, shyly; but Joyce liked the boys better.

"Sing to me!" demanded Baby Willie, the brown-faced, woolly-headed darling of the Children's Ward, snuggling up against her pillow one day, and beating a tattoo on the white spread with the one foot which he could use. "Sing about Boy Blue."

Joyce drew in her breath with a little gasp. She sing? That belonged to the beautiful life she had lost for ever.

"'Little Boy Blue, come blow you' horn!" began Willie, suggestively. She cuddled him up with a laugh, and sang—sang until Miss Claggett came to the door to see what visitor might be there, and till the doctor, passing through the outer corridor, paused and marveled. He came in presently and sent the children away.

"Miss Joyce," he said, standing at the foot of her bed, "we have been mistaken about you."

Joyce laughed at him, but the tears were in her eyes. It was good to make somebody glad with her voice again!

"We thought we had a patient here. I have discovered an assistant. Miss Joyce, will you allow yourself to be lifted to a stretcher to-morrow and carried up to the Margaret Ward? There is a woman there, a musician, who is starving her soul for what you can give her."

"I?" said Joyce. "Doctor, you are not in earnest?" She stretched out her hands to him as he passed. "You don't mean that I can help?"

There were people in the hospital the next day who found their eyes suddenly dimmed when the slender little figure was carried into the Margaret Ward; but when that clear voice rose softly, tender with long suffering and sweet with the infinite hope of angelic ministry, more than one white face was lifted and turned toward the singer as toward a messenger from another world. Joyce had heard her voice praised in other days. Her master, with all the pride he had felt in its fine possibilities, would scarcely have known it now.

They did not let her sing very long, but what she heard before they took her from the room was enough to fill the world with new sunlight. She kissed the Other Doctor's hands before he left her that night.

"You have made me willing to live," she said. "You have given me something to live for. What does it matter whether I can ever walk or not? Somebody will carry me. I can help. There is something for me."

Strength came back to her more and more with each day of hope and helpfulness. They learned to watch for her face in every ward of the great hospital, and in the chapel, where people said her singing did more than prayer or preaching to bring heaven near to the hearts that needed it so sorely. She did not always sing. The boys of the children's ward found her an unflinching source of amusement and comfort.

After a time the stretcher was exchanged for a wheel-chair, in which she made her own way about the wards, chatting and laughing with patients and attendants. She learned of more than one way in which her life could be of service to other lives. The wealth which had seemed such a mockery when she found herself cut off from the future of her dreams began to be a key by which she might unlock the doors of beautiful possibilities for others.

Miss Claggett found her one evening sitting before the grate fire in her room. She would go away from the hospital in a few days, but it would never be safe for her to leave the Other Doctor's care, and so a home had been found for her in the city, not too far away from the work she loved.

Her crutches were close at hand. They would be lifelong companions; so much she knew, but she was not thinking about that. The little red book, which used to lie under her pillow, was in her hand, and upon the fire smoldered a handful of leaves, covered with writing in a weak, uncertain hand.

"What are you burning, my dear?" asked Miss Claggett, bustling about cheerily. The old silence between these two had been broken long ago, although Miss Claggett still carried the greater part of their conversations.

"Old letters," said Joyce, rousing herself with a little smile. She had been thinking of the days in which those strange, sad letters were written.

"They are all properly attended to—answered and everything?" asked precise Miss Claggett.

"They are all answered," said Joyce.—The Youth's Companion.

Prayer Union.

Bro. Omer G. Lytle, of Independence, Missouri, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union that he may be healed of a great affliction, and says, "I have been suffering for the past eight years; I have great faith in the Prayer Union, for I have been helped a great deal at times through its prayers."

Sr. Electa Dondall, of Elvaston, Illinois, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union and all the Saints that she may be healed of heart trouble if it is God's will, if not that she may be resigned that his will be done. She requested prayers last spring, and thinks she received benefit, and sincerely desires them again.

The Work of District Officers.

The work of the district officers is of such a character that no instructions can be given to exactly suit in all cases. Each officer must be able to size up the situation in his own district to a great degree. He must be able to handle the people of his particular district in a way to enlist their support and to encourage and interest them in the work. And to do this he must use some tact that it is impossible to describe.

A few suggestions may be given that will be of benefit in a general way. Adapt such parts of them as may seem advisable to you.

Keep the people feeling well and encouraged. There is nothing so productive of good in all church work as to keep the people cheerful and happy in their work. Encouragement is a great tonic. An ever-present and ever-pleasant smile on the face of one in charge of work is an inspiration that can not well be measured. So keep your workers in good spirits, hopeful and encouraged, and you have gained a point.

When you are to have a convention, begin in time and get the work divided among several all over the district as far as practicable. Many a person has been interested in the work by simply giving him some individual work to do. Have him write a short paper, give a short discussion following another paper, make a short talk, sing a solo or in a quartet, or any other part that he can do. Many will think they can not, when they can do fairly well. Do not take "no" for an answer when it is at all advisable to do otherwise. Urge strongly but kindly and encouragingly that they undertake to do the work. Enlist both old and young. All should take part in the work. The missionary, too.

Study what the district or school that you are working with needs most, and then try to supply that need. If they have poor order or discipline in the school, help them to get that part improved. If they have poor teaching, help them to get their teachers in better shape for teaching. And so it is in any part, improve it as best you can.

Make haste slowly, sometimes. It is often the case that well-meaning people are very slow to take hold of anything new. Your plan may be the best and just what they need, yet they for some reason will not adopt it. Just work patiently and carefully and persistently, and by and by they will quietly fall in line. If you try to force anything upon them, you will very probably meet with discouragement. It must be done slowly and must be worked for persistently. Get one little change at a time adopted and you have done well. If they will take more, as many will do, give them more. But in any case it is better to have one thing rightly established than many things but partially or poorly introduced.

I have found that much can be done by making personal visits. I usually go to distant schools so as to be with the regular session of the school and also with the teachers and officers at another meeting. You might call it a teachers' meeting for want of a better name. It should be a meeting for the improvement of the school, and handle such subjects or work as seems most needed by those present. And in all your work with them, encourage as well as to instruct them. This done, you have done well.

Often you may reach them by letter and help them much in that way. But of course, that is slow and not so satisfactory, usually. But it is far, far ahead of no work at all. And there are certain conditions under which it is even preferable to a personal visit. Keep the people awake to the needs of the work in some way.

BOOKS TO STUDY.

It is a very commendable desire upon the part of all new officers to fit themselves for the work at hand. They naturally look around for some book that will give them a guide to their work. And while there are many books that are in their places very instructive, I know of no one or even several works that will completely cover the ground for you. Each one will contain much that you can adapt to your needs or from which you may develop something useful. They are full of hints and suggestions. They point out how one has succeeded under certain circumstances, but for you to succeed might require entirely different treatment, the circumstances being different. To tell one how to go at the Sunday-school work to make a complete success of it, if he had no knowledge of it at all, would be about like making a mechanic out of yourself by reading a book. A carpenter may get many useful hints from a book, but he will never be a mechanic till he has had the necessary practice. He must handle with his own hands the compass, the hammer, and the saw before he becomes proficient in their use. The painter might read all that has ever been written about color, light, and shade, but until he has learned to wield the brush with his own hand he can never merit the title of artist. And so it is with our Sunday-school work. We may read books, articles, and suggestions, and from them get a fund of knowledge that is valuable to us; but until we have done the work with our own hands, until we have thought with our own minds, until we have impregnated with our own personality that which we intend to convey to others we will not make the success that we may much desire to make in our work. We must work and study and pray, and pray and study and work. However, there is a wonderful amount to be gained by studying good books and periodicals, and we suggest the following as profitable to read:

"Teaching and Teachers," by H. Clay Trumbull. A work on teaching and other work in the Sunday-school. Every teacher and officer should study it. $1.00 post paid, at HERALD Office.

"A Model Superintendent," Trumbull. Gives the life-work of a very devoted and earnest superintendent. Shows what can be done if we will. $1.00, Sunday School Times, Philadelphia.

"The Sunday-school Teacher," Hamil. One of the best all-round books for the teacher that I know of. And while it is for the teacher particularly, it is full of good points for the officers, too. You can not afford to do without it. Fifty cents. Methodist Book Concern, Chicago, St. Louis, or Cincinnati; or the International Evangel, St. Louis.

"The Teacher, the Child, and the Book," Schauffler. A book written in simplicity and plainness. It gets down to the practical. Adapted to the needs of any grade teacher, and also well worthy the attention of officers. $1.00, W. A. Wilde & Co., Boston or Chicago.

"Revised Normal Outlines," Hurlbut. For a systematic study of the Bible and of the Sunday-school, this work has few equals. It is concise, plain, and practical. This is adapted to the needs of all Sunday-school people. Forty cents. Methodist Book Concern, Chicago, Cincinnati, or St. Louis.

I would get first, "The Sunday-school Teacher," by Hamil. Next, "The Model Superintendent," by Trumbull. When you get these studied, you will be able to decide from the brief description above what you need next.

In some future issue we will give a "Sunday-school worker's library," but are not prepared to do so at present.

Sunday-School Publications.

Sunday School Times, Philadelphia, a weekly devoted exclusively to Sunday-school work. Contains full expository notes upon the international lesson, many helpful hints to officers, teachers, and Christian workers in general. The leading weekly. $1.00 per year single. Seventy-five cents in clubs of five or more, to one or separate addresses. Free samples.

The International Evangel, St. Louis, the only paper devoted exclusively to the international Sunday-school movement. Monthly. Has full expository notes on the international lessons, and many useful hints for all Sunday-school workers. The leader in its line. Fifty cents per year, single, or forty cents in clubs of five or more to one address. Free samples.

The Twentieth Century Teachers' Monthly, David C. Cook Publishing Company, Chicago, is, as its name indicates, a new paper in its line. Gives full expository notes upon the international lessons, and many other items of interest to Sunday-school workers in general. Sixty cents per year. Very good.

Several others of equally good merit in many respects, but the ones given above will meet the demands of our readers in general better than any others we know of. While there are none of them the value they would be if we used the international lessons, they are, nevertheless, well worth the money many times over, and the time required to peruse them. If you are a reader of the international publications you have not failed to find many helpful thoughts from time to time in them. No one can be a fully equipped, "up to date" worker and not read some one or more of them. Which one I would take first would be so hard to tell that I would dislike to do without either of them. The whole lot costs but two dollars and ten cents per year, and where can you make an investment that will produce more returns for your school or district than will that? I know of districts which provide their officers with some one or more papers where the officers do not feel able to supply them themselves. But secure one at least.

Do you read the department regularly? Do you contribute to it? You ought to do both. How can you expect to keep in full touch with the work in our association and not read what is being done?

Let us hear from you.

Letter Department.

COLLINGWOOD, Victoria, Australia, October 20.

Editors Herald: Please send us for the year 1903 one dozen copies of Senior Grade of Quarterly, one dozen Intermediate, and one half dozen Primary. The foregoing are for the use of Zion's Endeavor Sunday-school, organized by Elder W. J. Haworth, of New South Wales, who is at present doing missionary work in Victoria, and Priest W. Mackie, of the Melbourne Central Branch, and other earnest workers for Christ who live in Richmond, Victoria. The Sunday-school was started two months ago by Brn. Haworth and Mackie in connection with a mission they were conducting in the Masonic Hall, Swan Street, Richmond. The number at starting was twenty-three; present number thirty-four, with every prospect of a further increase in numbers, thanks to the energy displayed by some of the sisters in getting mothers to allow their children to attend and distribute tracts, etc. The officers are confident that much good will result from the efforts made among the children who, on the whole, are very attentive.

Bro. J. W. Wight is with us just now. His presence and voice are being greatly appreciated. He is generally loved by all. The Melbourne Central Branch has made the Masonic Hall its headquarters now. So, with the Sunday-school in the morning and services in the afternoon and evening, we are able to spend a very peaceful and happy Sunday together.

God's work is being well carried on here, thanks to the efforts of Bro. Wight and others mentioned. Last week I had the pleasure of welcoming one of my sisters a member of the kingdom, after being for two years the only member of our family who had accepted the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

Many persons seem undecided in Richmond, and our hope and prayer to the Father is that he will bless the seed sown in the minds of the old and young, and that he will give the increase.

G. W. MILLARD,

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, England, November 21.

Editors Herald: My last communication to your valuable paper was sent from Llanelly, South Wales, some time in the fore part of September last. My next stop was at Aberaman. Bro. Evan Lewis is president of the branch. I found the branch much improved since my last visit there. All the Saints, with the exception of a few, were endeavoring to do their duty by the work. My physical wants were kindly provided for by Bro. Lewis' family and others.

The district conference held at Nantyglo, on the 20th and 21st of September, passed off pleasantly. Bishop Taylor, Meredith and wife, and many others in Wales, were in attendance. Bro. John Davis, William Lewis, Thomas Jones, of the ministry, were also present. Altogether the conference was a profitable one and a considerable amount of good was done. Wales is a hard mission in which to prosecute the work of the Lord, by reason of the bigotry and prejudices of the people that the missionaries have to meet. However, we are gaining ground slowly, but it requires considerable amount of patience on the part of the ministry to be courageous and of a cheerful heart at all times, in view of the trying circumstances under which they are called to labor. These brethren can not boast of numbers baptized, nevertheless they work hard to get the gospel before the people by preaching on the streets, tracting, and house visiting. It is consoling to them to know "that He that planteth and watereth are one," and that both will be equally rewarded by the Lord "in the sweet by and by."

My next call was at Stafford, and was kindly cared for at the home of Bro. John Dyche and family. I truly enjoyed my visit there. The brethren hired a public hall in the heart of the city for me to occupy on Sunday. The morning service was fairly attended, and at night the hall was full, and the speaker enjoyed excellent liberty, and the audience was attentive and apparently interested. Other meetings were held at the house of Bro. Dyche. Bro. Eccleston, of the missionary force, and Bro. Meredith ably assisted in the services. I preached one sermon in the house of Bro. George Batey, Stockport, to an interested audience, on my way to Manchester. Interest is good here and we have a number of members there now and expect to organize them into a branch in the near future. Bro. Batey and wife have set a good example and have worked faithfully to get the people of that city interested in the gospel and have succeeded by the help of others; namely, Brn. Henry Greenwood, Mather, Armstrong, and others of the local ministry, to get quite a number into the church. They have also hired a commodious hall in the center of the town, so the prospects for the work in that city are bright.

The quarterly conference of Manchester District, which was held on the 4th and 5th of October, was well attended by the brethren, and an enjoyable time was had. Brn. Henry Greenwood and George Batey were continued in the presidency of the district. Both are well qualified for the important position. This district is well supplied with local laborers. I am glad to report that they are actively engaged in working for the Master. Quite an interest has been worked up in Warrington through the efforts of Bro. Schofield and others of the local forces. Several have been baptized of late and we contemplate organizing a branch there before long.

The five branches in Manchester are in a very fair condition spiritually. Some are being added to their number occasionally by baptism.

We learn from late advices that the aged companion of Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sr., is quite ill, having been confined to the bed for some days. We sincerely trust that our heavenly Father will spare her life for many years to come. She has been a kind mother and a faithful Saint. The ministry who have made their home at the house of Bro. Dewsnup in the years past can testify to the kindness of this dear sister. We pray God to hasten her recovery.

I attended the discussion that was held at Wigan in one of the public halls by Bro. J. W. Rushton and a Christadelphian minister. It continued over two nights. It was the same old question, the "Immortality of the soul." Bro. John was more than a match for his opponent. He made an able and an eloquent defense. I truly felt proud of him, and felt grateful in my heart to our heavenly Father that he was raising up such able ministers to defend his truths.

I held seven or eight meetings with the Wigan Saints and felt blessed in my labors, notwithstanding that I was suffering from a very severe cold which settled in my head and chest and stuck to me closer than a brother for over a month. I am feeling quite well at present. This wet, changeable climate is very treacherous to those who are accustomed to a dry atmosphere, hence it is that we have to watch continually to keep from getting colds. Bro. James Spargo and family made me welcome at their home and did all in their power to help me get rid of my cold.

I spent about eleven days with the two branches in Leeds, and was kindly treated by the Saints and officers of both branches, and enjoyed my labors among them. I made my home with Bro. Fred Issott and wife, who showed me every kindness. Sr. Issott is the only sister of Bro. Rushton.

The prospects for the work in this city are very favorable, and we have some excellent talent among the brethren there. I spent a few days at Sheffield. This branch is not in as flourishing condition as we would like to see it. Nevertheless a special effort is being put forth there with a view to revive the work, and some few of the outsiders are becoming interested. Our energetic young brother, W. H. Greenwood, is directing things there at present. He and his wife looked after my welfare while in the city. Was in Clay Cross over two Sundays, and held meetings in their neat little chapel every night but two. The officers and Saints rallied to my support. I was pleased with the interest that so many of the little folks are taking in the work. We have a number of brethren here who are capable of doing a grand work for the Lord. I was domiciled at the home of Bro. and Sr. Naylor, and I shall not forget their kindness to me, also the kindness of Bro. W. and Sr. Holmes and others.

I attended the funeral of Bro. Jell, who died on the morning of the day I arrived in Sheffield. Bro. Jell was well known to the traveling ministry, who with his excellent wife kept a home for the missionaries for years. Both have gone to their eternal home "to rest from their earthly labors." These two old people were Saints, indeed. Peace be to their ashes.

I arrived here on Tuesday. Baptized two last night, and we hope to see a branch of the church in this city ere many months pass away. Bro. Henry Broadway and family reside here. He has created some interest among his neighbors and has a good influence with them. I find him firm in the faith and willing to help push on the work of the Lord.

I go to Scotland from here next week. Wishing all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, I remain,

Your brother in bonds,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

SHIMSTON, West Virginia, December 1.

Editors Herald: I have long intended to write to the HERALD. I belong to the church, and have belonged to it for a long time. I am glad that I started. My husband does not belong, but I hope he will some day. He is a very good man, only he has a few bad habits, and I hope he will overcome them. I want the Saints to pray for him, that God may give him the Spirit to do better, and that he may become a man of God in deed and in truth.

We have no church here, and we see the elders here very seldom. I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may be faithful. May the Lord bless the Saints everywhere, is my prayer.

MRS. LOTTIE HUSTEAD.

LAMONI, Iowa, November 27.

Editors Herald: It may be of interest to some to learn of Utah affairs, and as this is included in our mission-field this year we write.

We were in Salt Lake City, October 4 to 7, the time of holding the semiannual Mormon conference, so-called. This being the dominant church in that State and the headquarters of those holding that peculiar faith, an interest naturally centers in all of its movements. The writer, in company with Bro. A. M. Chase, improved the opportunity afforded to view things in a casual way, and attended a number of sessions of the conference, remaining a few weeks thereafter in the city. We mingled with the people on the streets, on the conference grounds, and listened to the talks in conference sessions. The weather was perfect all the time, and a large concourse of people were in attendance. The large tabernacle was taxed to its utmost seating capacity, and at times an overflow-meeting was held in Assembly Hall. In general appearance the people will compare favorably with congregations of like size, elsewhere. They were well-dressed, clean and tidy in appearance, orderly and well-behaved. Everything took on the appearance of prosperity and wealth. There was no dram-drinking or tobacco-chewing or smoking to be seen anywhere. Many of the ladies were arrayed in silks and other adornings to match, and the men were dressed correspondingly well. The men were of good physique and the women comely and all the way from good looking to pretty. So after all, the Utah people look and appear very much like other people, with the advantage in their favor in some particulars, as stated. In point of type, a large percentage of the people show to be of foreign extraction, Scandinavian, English, Welsh, Scotch, with a sprinkling from many other nationalities.

The work of the conference so far as seen by the public, consisted largely of verbal reports from elders who had been on missions and returned, and those of the settlements and stakes in Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, and Arizona, together with short talks by prominent officials. According to these reports, prosperity is attending their efforts in a temporal sense in all quarters. The glowing and impressive accounts were effective. President Smith exclaimed: "Zion flourishes. All is well in Zion. Zion prospereth," etc. A peculiar feature noted in the way of doing business was that when the reports and talks on certain topics were ended, the leading officers were sustained and the conference was ready to adjourn. There was no discussing of questions publicly at all. Some things said by the speakers were of some considerable significance as showing the trend of things. President Joseph F. Smith presented the new and revised edition of the Pearl of Great Price for adoption, and "The book as revised was unanimously accepted by the conference, as a standard work of reference for the church."

Elder Ben E. Rich spoke of the "terrible crime that is charged against William Hooper Young in New York," and in his remarks denied that the people of Utah believed in blood-atonement differently from Christian societies in general. That they believe in the atonement blood of Christ as constituting their belief in blood-atonement. We would like to give his exact words, but lost our excerpt. But this is but the statement of one person; here is the statement of another and a greater than Elder Rich: "There are sins which men commit for which they can not receive forgiveness in this world, or in that which is to come, and if they had their eyes open to see their true condition, they would be perfectly willing to have their blood spilt upon the ground, that the smoke thereof might ascend to heaven as an offering for their sins; and the smoking insense would atone for their sins, whereas if such is not the case, they will stick to them in the spirit world. And furthermore I know that there are transgressors, who, if they knew themselves, and the only condition upon which they can obtain forgiveness, would beg of their brethren to shed their blood, that the smoke thereof might ascend to God as an offering to appease the wrath that is kindled against them, and that the law might have its course. I will say further I have had men come to me and offer their lives to atone for their sins."—President Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 53; "Blood Atonement," by Charles W. Penrose, p. 17.

Again: "The wickedness and ignorance of the nations forbid this principle being in full force, but the time will come when the law of God will be in full force."—President B. Young, in Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 220; Blood Atonement by C. W. Penrose, p. 33.

While these things occupy space in the church literature, and are unrepudiated, people are justified in receiving with a grain of salt the statements of any one person, at an effort at negating them. We sympathize with Elder Rich, however, in his endeavor to find a way out of the difficulty confronting them, but it needs more than the bare statement in public of a single person in order to set this impressively and convincingly before the public.

President Anthon H. Lund said: "Men had ridiculed the elders for believing that Adam was a god. We are not ashamed of that doctrine. Jesus said in speaking to the Jews in relation to Abraham that they were gods unto whom the word of God comes. But though we look upon Adam as a god, we worship the God that Adam worshiped in the garden of Eden."

This is a move in the right direction, but President Anthon Lund, like Elder Rich, is handicapped to begin with. A greater than President Anthon Lund has said of Adam: "He is our father and our god, and the only god with whom we have to do."—Brigham Young in Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 50.

Whose views will obtain? Both can not, for they are in conflict. If it is the true object of worship that is sought, then President Lund is right. He seems to occupy a similar position to Martin Luther when he discovered time-honored errors in the Roman Catholic Church. They were vicious enough, but there was a line of God-appointed popes and pages of infallible utterances confronting him that had to be overcome. It was more important to deify the absurdities of the past than to reform and get right; so Luther had to set out alone and fight the whole hierarchy. Will President Lund have to take a similar course? Just now is needed an influential, courageous, and brave man who will cut with a stroke the ecclesiastical gordian knots in Utah and set the people right. It is enough that the word of God be received as infallible utterances, without the people being compelled to receive the opinions, views, and notions of mere men as being divinely inspired. When the opinions of men appear, who have neither the word of God or common sense to support them, they should be sent adrift, no matter who they come from. The idea that it must be held that some ideal characters were infallibly inspired or the cause of Christ will suffer in the earth is a miserable mistake. When found to be wrong, the thing to do is to revise: that is the part of wisdom. Presbyterians are wise enough to try to relieve themselves of some of their errors and they are to be commended for their efforts. The word of God is the standard, not the sayings and views of men, however prominent. Like an incubus, the doctrine of blood-atonement and the worship of Adam as god, to say nothing of other matters, have settled upon the Utah people for a number of decades; they have brought them no comfort at home or desirable fame abroad; even the Gentiles mock. Go on Elders Rich and Lund, revise. Never mind so-called infallible utterances. The Roman Catholics fooled the world long enough with those. When the light was turned on the deception stood out in bold relief. Get right, should be the motto, then "sing with gladness for Jacob and shout among the chief of the nations." All people of proper heart, of whatever name, will be pleased to encourage even Utah in proper ways, see her throw off the shackles that bind her and relieve herself of the obnoxious dogmas that render her odious to the proper Christian sentiment of the age. In her estimation, she may be too mighty to reform, too infallible to change. Such was Rome, such were the Jews. If this is to be repeated, then the efforts of President Lund and Elder Rich will fall without effect. We will be glad if the good leaven is working; but as long as people prefer to be infallible rather than right there is but little prospect of changes.

Among Christians, however, repentance and reform are always in order, even if it is hard to acknowledge and confess; better than the scourge.

Apostle A. O. Woodruff brought out the sensational. Among other things he said: "This country has become too good for us. We have but little voice in the government of our city; we have but little voice in the affairs of men in this, our headquarters. While the Latter Day Saints have built the railroads, and while they furnish about eighty per cent of the local traffic of these roads, there is not one man in a hundred in the employ of these large companies who is a Latter Day Saint. . . . Brigham Young settled with the Saints in this valley because he thought it an undesirable place, which would not excite the cupidity, enmity, and selfishness of the enemies of the Saints. But we are now almost uprooted right in the headquarters of the Latter Day Saints, here in Salt Lake City, because this country has become too good for us. It is worth too much for us, and as a result we have sold out to those who are not of our faith, and therefore we have but little voice in the government of our city; we have but little voice in the affairs of men in this our headquarters," etc. This represents the trend of things.

The work of the Saints of the Reorganization is moving slowly in Utah. There are some staunch supporters of the faith, but what an odds in point of numbers against them. It is only a question of time, however, when they will see the right prevail, and startling things are ahead.

The latter part of October we thought it the part of wisdom to return to Lamoni, Iowa, for a season. Have been confirmed in that opinion since coming here. We hope to return West shortly. My mission address is Box 181, Salt Lake City, Utah. While the conflict goes on there is a hopeful side to most things; and the right is sure to win in the final accounts.

Hopefully,
WM. H. KELLEY.

SENIOR, Texas, November 24.

Editors Herald: I have felt for some time like writing to the HERALD, but didn't know whether anything I could say would benefit any one or not.

Bro. John Harp has just closed a most successful series of meetings, held in the Prairie Summit Schoolhouse. He preached eight sermons, and notwithstanding it rained every day, and the nights were so dark it was difficult to see how to drive, the house was full every night. The people gathered for Sunday-school Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, and the superintendent asked Bro. Harp to speak instead of having Sunday-school. Every one seems to be interested, and we feel greatly encouraged. We think Bro. Harp is the right preacher for this country.

There are only three members besides myself in this neighborhood, my sister and brother-in-law (Bro. and Sr. Edwards) and Sr. Ruth Curry; but we feel it will not be long before there will be several other Latter Day Saints at Senior.

I am only here temporarily. My home is in San Antonio, but I expect to be here all winter.

We expect Brn. John and Charles Harp back here about the 10th or 11th of December. Every one seems anxious for Bro. Harp's return.

There seems to be a better feeling in general among the people of this community than ever before. I feel to rejoice that it is so.

They are building the church in San Antonio, for which I feel thankful. We have needed one very much for such a long time.

Earnestly trusting to be remembered in the prayers of all the Saints, I am,
Your sister,

JOSIE DELL GIFFORD.

DELTA, Colorado, November 29.

Editors Herald: I am still in the field battling for the truth. Last Sunday I closed a series of thirteen meetings at a new point near Delta, and withdrew my appointment there for Sunday evening, to be present at a meeting held by two Mormon elders that evening ten miles south of there. Report came to me that they had announced that they would show that evening that the Reorganization was not the true church. I wanted to see how they would do it, so was present; but they said nothing about the Reorganization. They spoke of the establishment of the church in 1830, and of the baptism for the dead. In speaking on the latter subject, they spoke of the necessity of such a work being done for the heathen. At the close of their meeting I asked if they understood that baptism for the dead was needed in the case of those who "die without law;" and they replied that it was. I replied that their teaching was not in harmony with the Book of Mormon. They asked for proof. I told them I did not have my book with me, but gave them the proof next evening in the language of Mormon to Moroni, book of Moroni 8: 3, where he says: "All little children are alive in Christ, and also all they that are without the law. For the power of redemption cometh on all they that have no law; wherefore, he that is not condemned, or he that is under no condemnation, can not repent; and unto such baptism availeth nothing. But it is mockery before God, denying the mercies of Christ, and the power of his holy Spirit, and putting trust in dead works."

I told them what I had heard in regard to their announcement. They denied making such announcement, but said that if I wished to address the people I could do so after the close of their meeting. I said that if they did not wish to use the house next evening, and there were no objections, I would speak on the differences between the churches, and if they felt like it they could show wherein they thought me in error.

The next evening I spoke of the provisions in the Doctrine and Covenants for Joseph to appoint his successor, and the law of lineage, and the evidences that Joseph appointed his son as his successor, and of God's call of the son, given to himself, to take his father's place. The only response they made to this was that they did not understand why the son did not step forward and take his father's place in the church sooner, if he knew that he had been thus appointed, and why he treated Briggs and others so coldly who came to get him to take the lead of the Reorganization. One of the elders, in his reply, said that when he was sent out they told him he must bear testimony that the work was true and that Joseph was a prophet. I said that I did not need any one to tell me what to testify. I had a testimony for myself of the truthfulness of the work, and that was the reason that Joseph was slow to act. He wanted a testimony for himself as to which of the factions was right, and where he should go to take his appointed place. And that I was thankful to know the Lord gave him a testimony, and told him to "join the Reorganized Church."

I said in my remarks that I considered it my duty to defend the good name of the Prophet against the charges that had been made against him, wherein he had been charged with teaching and practicing polygamy. A man in the audience asked if polygamy had not been practiced in Nauvoo. I said I would answer that the next evening.

The next evening the two elders accompanied me to the schoolhouse door, but objected to hearing me in public. However, they requested a private interview on the subject, which we had the next evening.

In my argument that evening and to the elders the next evening, I showed how the church had been forbidden to violate the laws of the Lord, and that polygamy was a violation, and how the law given to the church in the Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon forbids polygamy, and that there was no law given rescinding said laws before July 12, 1843, the date claimed for said revelation. Then I showed that twelve promiment elders and twenty leading women in the church signed certificates, which were published in the Times and Seasons for October 1, 1842, to the effect that they knew of "no other rule or system of marriage than the one published" in Book of Doctrine and Covenants which provided for but one wife. I also showed how Joseph and Hyrum gave notice to the world in Times and Seasons, February 1, 1844, that Hiram Brown had been expelled for "teaching polygamy, and other false and corrupt doctrines." And also how Hyrum gave notice to the Saints "living on China Creek," March 15, 1844, that wherein the church at Nauvoo had been charged with teaching "that a man holding a certain priesthood may have as many wives as he pleases," that "there is no such doctrine taught here, neither is there any such thing practiced here." And that "any one," "teaching privately or publicly any such doctrine, is culpable, and will stand a chance to be brought before the High Council, and lose his license and membership also." (See tract, "Was Joseph a Polygamist.")

From these evidences, I showed that the practice was denied by the Presidency to have been taught or practiced in the church up to within about four months of their deaths. If their statements were true, then the polygamous revelation could not have been in existence at that time. While on the other hand, if the revelation be true, then these men were the basest of liars and hypocrites, which I could not admit.

Besides this, the "Historical Record," of the Utah church, volume 6, page 232, claims that Zina D. Huntington was "sealed to the Prophet, October 27, 1841." This was about a year and nine months before the revelation was claimed to have been given. And "representative women of Deseret" claims this to be a marriage according to "a divine revelation," and "after the order of the new and everlasting covenant," which is the polygamous revelation. Married nearly one and three fourths years before the revelation is claimed to be given, and professedly, by said revelation. Wondrous strange!

I also showed how Emily D. Partridge Young's testimony was equally faulty, she being married, according to her testimony in the "Temple Lot Suit," "under the revelation on plural marriage," either two or four months before said revelation was given.

The two instances cited by President Joseph F. Smith, in his article in reply to the one of our Joseph in the Arena, are equally faulty.

While he says others give similar testimony, he only cites two cases of plural marriages. One is where Joseph marries to one Clayton a woman named Moon, and the other is where Clayton marries to Joseph a certain wife. The dates given for both antedate the purported revelation.

I argued if these parties went into polygamy at the dates they claimed, before the revelation is even claimed to have been given, that there was no law of God or of man warranting such union, the marriages were no more than mock marriages, and the parties were guilty of the most shame-faced adultery, with no cloak to hide their crime.

I told them it was the duty of the representatives of this latter-day work to defend Joseph's character, and also the church he established, against such base attacks; and as such statements had gone before the world, we had to go before the world to refute them.

I invited them to come and take part in another meeting later, and lead in a statement of their views on the marriage relation after death, and also their views on progression after death.

They were feeling a little piqued at some things I had said and talked them over for a while, but made no reply to my main arguments. They were rather reluctant to promise to do so; but finally said that they would do so if they found time to prepare. I suppose they never found time, as they were not at the meeting, though in the neighborhood.

I next go north of Delta to try another new place.

J. M. STUBBART.

DORA, Oregon, November 27.

Dear Herald: I for one think we ought to tell what we are doing or trying to do for the work. I love this great latter-day work, and want to see it roll on and gather every honest person in. Two more added to our little band this summer, Bro. Mayse and Bro. Devault, both heads of families.

I did not get to attend the Bandon reunion, but it was not because I did not want to go.

We have had some good preaching this summer. Brn. Hilliard, Allen, and Goodwin stopped with us on their way to Bandon. Bro. Hilliard preached three times, the other two once each. And again on their way back Brn. Luff and Hilliard spoke once each. All who have heard these brethren know what a treat we got. May God bless and keep them. Come again, brethren. Bro. Crumley has done some good preaching for us, too. I wish I could attend church once a month, anyway. I live in hopes. I will close by wishing our dear President many happy birthdays. Oh Lord, spare him to us a long, long time yet. I wish I could meet him. Hoping and praying for the welfare of Zion, and trusting that I will be found worthy to enter therein,

Your sister,

ROXANNA MINARD.

LYDIA, Texas, November 26.

Editors Herald: I have not seen any letters from this part of the Lord's vineyard, and I see so many cheering letters from other parts, I just want to say a few words. To-morrow is Thanksgiving and I wish to tell how thankful I am that I have lived to hear the true gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. How thankful I am that I accepted the same. The Latter Day Saints ought to be the most thankful people in the world; they have more to be thankful for.

Saints, let us live worthy of the name we bear. We have many trials and persecutions; but what a grand and glorious promise if we hold out faithful to the end.

I ever pray that God will bless and help each individual who is earnestly striving to do his will.

Your sister,

MRS. N. J. JENKINS.

CARSON CITY, Nevada, November 13.

Editors Herald: I have so often intended to write, especially when I read those good letters so full of love and so much encouragement to us lonely Saints. I think I must write and tell of some of the good things the Lord has done for me. You have heard of my being healed of those cancers a year ago at Oakland, California, under the hands of Brn. Blair and Keeler. When I left Lovelock I thought all hope of being administered to was gone, though I had a great desire to be. I prepared to undergo a severe surgical operation, as four physicians said that must be done. After we went to see the first physician, and he told my husband and I what he thought about it, I had a strange dream, one I could not understand at all at the time. But I see it all plainly now, as it has all happened. Grandma Stauls, my husband's mother, was sleeping with me at the time. The dream worried me so much that it awoke grandma as well as myself. So I told her my dream, and as I finished it, there stood Doctor Asher, the physician we had talked with and had told us he thought there must be an operation performed. I said, "There stands Doctor Asher." She asked me if I saw the knife, but I did not see any knife in my dream. In the dream I saw two men that I had never seen before; one had on a long coat, and around his waist was a cord which he carried. It looked to me like a long willow. He said he must use it on me, and he followed me everywhere and bothered me so much. And he would say he must use these on me. The other one seemed like a fighting man, and could handle any of my folks, yet they seemed like the same person. And it seemed as though my own folks, husband, brother, sister, and all, thought it was for my own good to have them persecute me so. I could stand it no longer. I saw the head man (as he seemed to be) coming down the street, and my husband and brother were across the street, and motioned for me to avoid meeting him; but instead, I walked up to him and asked why he was persecuting me so. I said: "Is it on account of the place?" (I meant our ranch.) He said, "You wanted it." I told him, yes, but he could have it. "Well," said he, "you wanted it, now get your fill." Then he pointed to my husband and said: "Is he religious?"

"No; he makes no pretensions; at least he does not belong to any church."

He just said, "Hum," and walked off, and that was the last I saw of them.

Now in a week or so here came two cancer physicians. They both said that both breasts would have to be taken off, but that they used some kind of needle and medicine that killed the cancer, after which the cancer would dry up and fall out in about twenty days. My husband was very anxious, as he believed they could cure me. Not being a member of the church, although he is a Latter Day Saint at heart, he did not have the faith to trust it all to the Lord. So it seemed I must give in. I wrote to our dear Sr. Gault, of Reno, that it "seemed our plans were all frustrated again," as we had planned before and they failed. She wrote not to be discouraged, but if it should be so it was for the best. "The Lord works in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." So I gave my consent, and all arrangements were made to commence the operation next day; when these physicians got a letter stating that it was against the law for California physicians to practice in Nevada without a diploma. So there is where Doctor Asher showed so plainly in my dream; as that letter was attributed to him.

Then we had to go to Truckey, California, just over the line. I told my husband that if I could just be administered to, I would be healed and not have to suffer so. I had never given up hope. So that gave me a chance of escape. With my two little girls I went on to Reno, and my husband and little boy came with the team, as we had sold our place in Lovelock. Sr. Gault met us at the train, and before she took us out home she took me to one of the leading physicians in Reno, and he said that an operation was necessary at once.

O, I felt so miserably bad and downhearted. The next day or so after I got there I was out in the yard pleading with God to save me from the surgeons, for I knew the Lord would help me if I did as he tells us to do. When I went in the house, I told our dear sister just how I felt, and if I went on to Truckey I would never live to come away. And to die and leave a good husband and three little ones was not pleasant to think about. Then the thought came to Sr. Gault that she could get away from home for a couple of days or so. So she told me that if I wanted to, we would leave for Oakland the evening of the 3d of July and be back by the time my husband arrived in Reno, as he was to meet me there and we were to go together on to Truckey.

How happy I was; that awful load was off my heart. We went down to the home of her brother-in-law, Bro. Ferris. He and his family were so kind to me. God will bless them. Of course you have heard the rest. After I came back to Reno I had such a bilious spell and soreness in the pit of my stomach. I took the oil I had brought home with me. After the third time a hard substance, a growth of some kind, came up. None of us suspected that there was anything wrong with my stomach. So it shows how good the Lord is to us if we will only trust in him. He was also with myself and little boy when we were down with typhoid fever. He heard our prayers and a brother came over from Carson and administered to us.

Now, dear brothers and sisters, remember me in your prayers, that I may keep my health and strength for the next three months and that this dead cancer in my left breast will not cause me any trouble. I tell my husband the Lord is with me, as he has been, and I know this is the Lord and he will not forsake me.

I also ask for the prayers of all for my husband, that he will obey before it is too late; and for Grandpa and Grandma Stauls. Grandpa is eighty and Grandma is nearly seventy-seven years old. They are getting feeble, but as strong in the faith as in younger days. They love the true gospel.

Thanking you for your kind letters and praying the Lord will help us to keep faithful to the end,

Yours in the gospel,

MRS. J. S. STAULS.

LEHI, Indian Territory, November 24.

Editors Herald: I want you and your readers to know that we, C. M. Fulks and family, are still in the land and among the living, doing the best they can, we think, under the circumstances, as poor, weak, foolish, afflicted, unfortunate Saints. Our greatest comfort is in reading the ever-faithful HERALD, Ensign, and Leaves, and we are watching to be ready for the fourth volume of the Church History. How do some of the Saints live without the church publications. An old elder said to me, "If the HERALD and a twenty-dollar gold piece lay there, which would you pick up first?" "Well," said I, "If it were the last, I would take the HERALD." Poor man! never had anything but a hymn book, and knew nothing of the contents of the standard books; and when I would read a good piece, he would soon be asleep. But my nephew would come with his fiddle, and all would be awake for hours; good people, too. One reason we get so hungry, or I, is we have been isolated for years, and I can not hear well, so stay at home the most of the time.

Well, the brethren and friends at Coalgate, five miles north, have built a good little house and it has created quite an attraction. Bro. Simmons has labored hard, preached lots, and arranged to locate there,—arranged for a lot of timber to build.

The brethren manifest a willingness to come and preach some in Lehi; but it has been rain, rain, and mud, and no sidewalks. I have made inquiry, and we can get the Seventh-day Advents' church-building. I sent a note by my little girl to the person in charge of the M. E. building, and he came to see me. He said that the people thought we were all one with the church in Utah. Yes, I replied, and that is one of the reasons for our waiting for an opening here, for but few of us knew anything save that which we have learned, and we want to teach the people.

I and my family attended meetings some at Coalgate, but owing to the rainy weather and the cost of going, thirty-five cents each, and as I am so dull of hearing, the preaching did me little good. O, if the good Lord would be pleased to heal me I would be with them if I had to walk.

We have just learned that our worthy president has promised to attend the Wilburton conference at Wilburton, Indian Territory. I am sure it will be a treat to see and hear him again.

C. M. FULKS.

FAIRBANK, Iowa, November 30.

Editors Herald: On account of matters at home, I had to leave my field for a month, but I hope I shall soon be able to enter the field again. I desired to sell out my little property here and move my family into town; but the crops have been so poor for the last two years in these parts that there is not much exchange of property here. One thing is sure, a missionary has no time to look after farm property, and it is simply impossible to hire a man who will look after the affairs about the farm with profit to the proprietor. I am so anxious once more to be free from such obligations as place a double burden upon my shoulders. I believe, however, that the experience I have passed through along financial lines has taught me a very good lesson, and that is, that a preacher, if he gives his time to the ministry altogether, has no time to dabble in business affairs. But by my locating here this branch has been kept alive, and recently

Bro. Robert Smith, of Waterloo, was ordained a priest, and is now holding meetings in Waterloo every two weeks. I am sure the Saints of Waterloo will appreciate the effort of Bro. Smith, who is a man of godly zeal, and will do a good work there in time.

On Thanksgiving the Saints of this branch gave me a very happy surprise indeed. After the forenoon service at our place of meeting, Bro. Smith arose and stated that they had a present to give me; and with a few well chosen remarks in behalf of the Oran Center Branch he presented me with a beautiful fur overcoat, and ten dollars in money, in all thirty-two dollars. Indeed I felt that it was a day of thanksgiving to me, and that my tongue could not utter words sufficiently adequate to express my feelings of gratitude to the Saints for their kindness. May God bless them indeed, is my prayer. Among the names of those contributing to my present was that of my mother, of Fulton, Iowa. The rest were of Oran Center Branch. Well, when I put on my new coat I felt somewhat as I did when I was a little fellow and put on my first pair of boots,—very happy. When I think of the manifold kindnesses of the Saints to me, I often wonder if I really have proven worthy of so great favors. May the Lord reward all these dear Saints, is my prayer. I hope to be in my field, the Galland's Grove District, soon.

I ever pray for the final triumph of the cause of Christ.

Editors Herald: In Romans we find words like these: "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" This is a sacred thought. Can we afford to let trouble or poverty or distress separate us from the love of Christ?

Few people understand the full meaning of Christian. What is a Christian? To my mind it is one who worships in spirit and in truth. In other words, we must worship Christ aright. Then we must have patience, long-suffering, and endurance. Only belief in Christ will not save us; we may believe a thing and then be wrong. Christ says if we do the will of the Father we shall know of the doctrine; therefore belief will not save us,—we must know. Then comes the personal belief which is a positive knowledge that Christ dwells within. Then we can know we are related to God,—the relation that binds the mortality of man to the immortal of God. Therefore we must follow in faith and holiness. Following means to obey, and we must obey to be a true follower of Christ. It is easier to command than to obey; so let each of us strive harder to obey. And let us strive still harder to attain a greater degree of righteousness.

HURON TYLER.

CROSSTIMBERS, Missouri, December 1.

Editors Herald: I have preached thirty sermons and organized two Sunday-schools since March 16, and superintended same until September 21, with good success, when a minister of the Christian Church whispered in the ears of some of the leading officers of the schools that it was a bad policy to attend school under my supervision, that I would surely lead them off, and that I was a "Mormon," and cautioned every one to keep away, and so they did. So there is no preaching nor school here now, and I think I will rest until spring, with the exception of visiting the houses of those men and giving them the Book of Mormon to read, also the "Presidency and Priesthood," also the HERALD.

The hotel-keeper, William Graves, says I can preach from his porch or veranda any time. So I thought I would send for a few of the low-priced edition of Book of Mormon so that I could put one in the Graves Hotel, and one in the Williams Hotel, for public reading, giving them all the benefit of that wicked book and its teachings before I begin to preach to them there.

I live five miles a little north of east of Crosstimbers, on the Crosstimbers and Climax Springs Road, at a place called Roney.

If any of the elders should come this way let them ask for "Preacher Williams," of the Rock House, and there will be no misfinding me or my family. I am going to do all the good I can, although I am left alone here, as far as preaching is concerned; and the best preaching I can do is to live honestly and uprightly before all men, making my life correspond with my teachings.

Editors Herald: The following is a copy of a letter which I wrote to J. D. McClure one month ago to-day. No answer yet.

"MR. J. D. McCLURE,

Albany, Missouri.

"Dear Sir: I saw an account of your anti-Mormon meeting held at Omaha, Nebraska, October 20 and 21, in which you stated that the first Latter Day Saint preacher you ever heard was in Southwestern Iowa, and that he was a saloon-keeper in a little town called Egypt, and another good elder told him that he had better stop that, and he said he would when he made enough to keep him. Now will you be so kind as to answer this letter to me and give me the name of the saloon-keeper preacher, and also the name of the other good elder who told him he had better stop that. I have lived within five miles of Egypt since the year 1855, and if there ever was a Latter Day Saint that kept a saloon at that place I fail to remember who he was or when it was.

"Please answer this and give me their names, and oblige.

"Yours very respectfully,

"C. L. EPPERSON."

MANITOULIN ISLAND, Ontario, November 28.

Editors Herald: Having been appointed to the Manitoulin Island and North Shore Mission field, my field address will be Manitowaning Post-office, Ontario, instead of Colpay's Bay. Had a rough trip, but landed safe. Find some noble Saints here. Please put Elder on my letters. Two others here same name.

JOHN SHIELDS.

ALDRIDGE, Montana, November 27.

Dear Herald: This is Thanksgiving, and before my children get here to spend the day with us I pen these lines to inform all whom it may concern that I am still in the faith and active in the Lord's work.

This is a mining camp, six thousand feet above sea level. It contains about eight hundred inhabitants. Some Welsh, English, Scotch, Irish, Italians, Dutch, and Austrians; Austrians are in the majority.

There is one Catholic church here holding service once a month. I have proved to the people that it is possible for a man to live above his environments. I have been their Sunday-school superintendent for four years, and have preached for them every Sunday that I would not be away, and have preached twenty-three funeral sermons in that time. Other ministers have been here trying to poison the minds of the people against me because of my faith; but God is with me. There are some who are investigating this work.

I preached at hall last Sunday at about noon, and went with Mr. Clark and wife to dinner, and they kept me busy explaining our faith. Mrs. Clark has been president of the Christian Endeavor in the M. E. Church for many years. Mr. Clark never made any religious profession, neither was he religiously inclined until he saw the influence my presence had with the miners and driver in the mines. He told me that he was with some other men at the bottom of the plane, waiting for cars, and the driver and some of the miners were using very bad language; but when they heard me coming down the plane the bad language ceased until I had gone beyond hearing. Now, said he to himself, there is something in that man's religion or he could not have such influence over these wicked people. He became desirous to hear me preach, and with his wife came to the hall. His wife was told that I was a Mormon, and after she heard me she told them that whatever I was I preached Bible doctrine, and that my life was consistent with my preaching. I gave them tracts.

His mother and sister-in-law came to visit them while I was there, and they invited me to call on them. I left at half-past five in the afternoon for Aldridge, five miles up the mountain. I got there in time to give a short talk to the Christian Endeavors, and preached to a good house at half-past seven. Got home at half-past nine, very tired but well pleased with my day's work.

Bro. D. C. White called on me November 13, preached to us five good sermons, and administered to my son Edward's sick baby; and, thank God, it was healed. He also blessed the same, and the little son of my daughter, Mrs. Hurworth, was blessed Sunday evening. Preaching service before a goodly audience. Bro. White made it very plain why he blessed the little ones and did not sprinkle them; we prefer the example given by our Lord rather than the tradition of men. I was greatly blessed and edified with the instructions imparted to me by Bro. White. May God bless him and all God's missionaries and Saints. I pray that the time will speedily come when God's people will meet in Zion. Praising the Lord.

Notes of Travel.

Editors Herald: On the morning of the 4th day of October, pursuant to arrangements with my cousin, William A. Kelley, of Creel Springs, Illinois, I was gratified after an absence of many years to visit the old home of my father, cut out of the dense forests of Southern Illinois sixty-five years ago. The hewn log-house erected by his own hands, and in which, fifty-eight years ago, I trust as a quiet babe, I passed the first period of earth-life, still stands in a good state of preservation on the old place, and is certainly a monument to the fact that the pioneer settler, Richard Yancey Kelley, did intelligently and well what he undertook in his lifetime. Further evidence of this is furnished in the view now readily presented to the visitor, as the great forests have been obliterated, and the farm which he located and chopped out of the forests is recognized as the best to be seen in miles of travel.

Upon this visit an instance was verified showing the remarkable accuracy of the memory of early impressions upon the young. When but five years of age, in the early spring sugar-making time, I went to the camp with others for a day of work and sweets; but before returning, a storm arose and our ride was through a heavy rain and in pitch darkness, varied only by the lightning's flash. And this ride, the direction of travel, and the turn to reach shelter in the deep mists, have ever since been pictured upon my memory. When riding past the place upon this occasion with my uncle, Leander Homer Kelley, who knew the premises then and since, a test was made of the accuracy of the memory of the occurrence; and without hesitation I was able to point out the direction of the camp, the road traveled, the turn to the house, and the distances. How true it is that we should all strive to have the earliest impressions upon the young, the purest, the brightest, and the best.

A little distance from the old home stands the chapel of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, supported by a good working branch, under the presidency of Elder William A. Kelley, a brother of T. C. Kelley, of note in the missionary field. Their brothers, Hiram R., John, and Frank, school-teachers and farmers, also take an active interest in the general and branch work; as also Richard Smith, father of the missionaries Isaac M. and W. R. Smith; and Elisha Webb, Frank and Daniel Webb, Peter G. McMahan, priest of the branch, Bro. Casey, and a long list of brothers and sisters, aged and in youth, of honest and intelligent faces, who are to be seen in their places in the church. We held three services, and at the conclusion I stated to the president of the branch that he should hold a series of meetings; that there were twenty-five young people who ought to unite with the church. Since this time I have noticed the reports from our live Brn. I. N. and Ammon White showing that they had been there a couple of weeks and had baptized twenty-two. But where are the three? In connection with the work here it will not be amiss to refer to the history of planting the gospel in this part of Illinois.

A little more than sixty years ago, in the time of the Martyrs, a couple of elders came into the neighborhood and obtained permission to preach in the schoolhouse. The stories of slander and misrepresentation had preceeded them, however, and the prejudice ran high against the "sect that was everywhere spoken against." My father, a pioneer, and in the language of another pioneer "a leader in the neighborhood," thought at first he would not go and hear the "delusion." But when the time came he changed his mind and went to the schoolhouse; stood by the door, however, instead of going inside. When the preacher arose and began to talk he went in and took a seat, and according to his own statement afterwards, when he saw the preacher, he was convinced that he was an honest man, and then concluded to hear him through. At the close of the meeting he walked up to the preachers, shook hands with them, and invited them home with him, saying, "You have preached just what I believe; it is Bible." They continued, and a branch was raised up, and many members were gained to the cause during the first organization of the church, the greater part afterward indorsing the work of the Reorganization. And from this planting there has been furnished to the active work of the Reorganization, one apostle, three seventies, presiding bishop, bishop's agent, and a large number of elders and lesser officers in the church, besides the many good, staunch members who have patiently awaited the time of the kingdom of Israel. Surely the Lord was directing in the work of the church before the rejection in 1844, and here as elsewhere, made preparation to meet the evil results of the innovations, introduced by the various schisms and fragments growing out of the stricken church in the removal of its president and patriarch.

October 6, at four o'clock in the afternoon, I met with a kindly greeting from the Saints of Tennessee and Kentucky, assembled upon Tennessee soil near Fulton, Kentucky, in reunion. Just as I reached camp, in company with a friend, Mr. George W. McClain, of Fulton, he received word that a married daughter who had been sick for some time was expected to live but a few hours, and that the physicians had advised that the family be given notice of the conditions. Already all the members of the family, except the father, had gone to the sick room, a few miles away. Sadness, of course, had spread over the camp. The father started in haste to his daughters' side, and was informed upon his arrival that there was little or no hope of her recovery. The son-in-law, up to this time, had been very much opposed to the Latter Day Saints, and had forbidden them coming into the house; but in his extremity he said that if any of the family wished to send for the elders, they might do so. He, with his parents and the sick wife, were members of the Baptist Church. Bro. J. R. McClain, a brother of the sick lady, went hurriedly for the elders, and Brn. I. N. Roberts and W. R. Smith left the evening meeting and answered the call. When they entered the sick room they met the family gathered and two physicians watching and waiting at the bedside. Bro. Roberts approached one of the physicians and asked if they had any objections to prayer being offered and administration according to the Bible direction. The physicians said, "Certainly not; we have done all that we can do in the case." The brethren then offered prayer. The physicians and the husband and his father and mother failed to bow with the preachers, however. They then administered by anointing, and the imposition of hands with prayer; as they took their hands from the lady's head she opened her eyes and said to Bro. Roberts, "I am so glad you came; I feel much better." She continued to improve; and a few days later parties told me that the good old lady who was present at the administration and did not kneel during prayer, referring to the sick person, said, "She would have got well anyway." So our Baptist friends have a prophetess among them.

The reunion continued increasing in interest to the close on the 13th day of October. Elder I. N. Roberts, in charge, made a good faithful leader. He never asks others to do what he is not willing to undertake himself if necessary, and he gives excellent help in a camp. With the writer there were ten helpers of the ministry: Br. C. L. Snow, J. R. McClain, D. W. Cook, Bishop's agent, E. P. Cook, M. L. Sowrey, W. R. Smith, J. H. Adair, S. H. Fields, and another young man whose name I do not recall. Doctor Benbow came a number of miles to see and take part, as also a good gathering of others. Seven baptisms during the session, among the number my genial host, George W. McClain, a typical Tennessean; a big-hearted man with a kind, good wife and two exemplary sons, Brn. J. R. and William McClain, and about a half dozen lovely daughters, married and single,—faithful Saints.

This is my first attendance upon a general meeting of the Saints in the South, and I was much pleased with very many things in their work. May the Lord tear away the dark veil of prejudice falling so heavily over the eyes of so many of our Southern neighbors, that the Christ-light may shine in upon them in its fullness.

The 14th and 15th of the month I visited my great aunt, Mrs. Samuel Winfrey, Nashville, Tennessee, together with her daughters, Mrs. Whitfield Rice, and Miss Mary Winfrey, with many other relatives that want of space prohibits my naming in a sketch like this. It has been thirty-two years since my meeting with them before. Aunt, now approaching ninety years of age. Mrs. Rice when last I saw her was a young girl of sixteen, now a widow with an interesting family; one son, Joseph W., on the police force of the city, and another, David W., a linotype operator on the Nashville Daily News. After all, thirty years counts many great changes in the affairs of the world, and in every hour one may note the wisdom of so occupying the time, as we battle with the ills of life, that we shall carry with us the full assurance that we have walked according to the commandments of the Master in our warfare here, as it is only from him we shall want commendation when it is over.

During this visit I had hoped to meet again my mother's sister, Mrs. Mary S. Welsh, but the trip had to be deferred too long to the conveniences of my work for the cause of truth. She had passed over on the other side, to render the account which all must make to the just and upright "Judge of all the earth" who hath said that he will "render to every man according to his deeds." But we trust him now, and we may fully trust him upon the other side to do right by all. The relatives informed me that my aunt in the last years of her life often expressed her great desire to see me again before her death, but the opportunity could not be brought about.

Upon the offer of my cousin to show me all the workings and advantages of a linotype machine in its place among compositors, I visited the News building and passed an interesting and profitable time in the publication interests. There were in the office six linotype machines in full operation, and I judge in nearly perfect condition. One machine takes the place of about six types and costs about thirty-five hundred dollars. The machine moulds the type, set it in place, present in solid lines ready for making up, and when used distributes by melting up again and setting into new matter. Wonderful invention, in this age of wonders!

Having said a hurried good-bye to my Nashville friends, all of whom I found to be very kindly interested in my good, as well as their own, and a good, warm-hearted, hospitable people, I continued my journey and work, and on the 18th of October met in conference with the Saints of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana District, in the church at Clear Lake. A large number of the friends of former years were in attendance there, and I noticed that although the heads of many were silvered over, the light and intelligence in their faces clearly showed that the religious cause they espoused so many years ago had been such as to lead them in the way of liberty and the Christ-life, instead of darkness and fear; and was compelled to say, Lord, whatever the world may have witnessed against us in its madness, thy promises have fully proven true. Thirty years ago W. H. Kelley and the writer first preached the message of the restoration of the gospel, in this vicinity. Then not a believer within miles of travel; but since, hundreds have accepted and borne witness of the truth and goodness of God; and still they are obeying. At the close of the conference I had the pleasure of baptizing two intelligent young ladies, Srs. Myrtle and Pearl Teeters, in the beautiful waters of the lake. The conference was a pleasant one. Asa S. Cochran, missionary at Grand Rapids, Michigan, presided in wisdom and good nature, and he was well assisted in the conference work by W. E. Peak, George A. Smith, Samuel Stroh, Bishop's agent, E. A. Blakeslee of the Bishopric, G. D. Washburn, Francis Granger, and a large number of local workers. The meetings, entertainment of visitors, kindly associations of brethren and friends were all enjoyable, and it is hoped the work accomplished such that the Master may bless. At the close of the conference I felt gratified in a spiritual presentation to the purport that in this gospel field there were yet many, large and small, to be gathered into the gospel net. So long as we know that the Lord takes cognizance of the work, and directs in its progress, we are content to toil on, regardless of what men may say in derision of its truth.

Proceeding on my way eastward, on the 23d of October I reached Cleveland, Ohio, and finding that I was in time to take in a part of the great missionary convention of the Methodist Church then in session in the city, I resolved to do so. So much was being said in the papers about what the Omaha Convention of the Christian or Campbellite order was going to do against the Latter Day Saints I thought it but a duty to look over our Methodist friends and see if they, too, had so far forgotten the doctrine of the "golden rule," as to undertake to prescribe the kind of religion they would have other people accept, as well as themselves. At the great convention hall I took a seat in a good position to see and hear on the main floor, and upon looking around found myself in the midst of the Ohio delegation. Those near gave me a welcome nod and I kept the place. To my left in the gallery I soon noticed the Iowa delegation was made prominent by the merry applause given to one of the speakers giving credit to what he termed "the Iowa idea," in making up its missionary fund, showing that Iowa was in advance in what was termed "the sub-convention plan" leading all the rest. Of course the Hawkeyes would applaud. It was said there were three thousand delegates in attendance, and fourteen bishops. Of the latter I could recognize upon the rostrum Bishops Andrews, Warren, Foss, Hartzell, and Taylor. It was truly a great gathering and might well be claimed, as it was, to be the most notable ecclesiastical gathering that had ever taken place on the Continent. To my great admiration I failed to hear or see a single reflective thing against the Latter Day Saints, or anybody else, who did not have equal privilege with the members of the body of defending himself. This showed some of the Christ-spirit that all men ought to be forward to commend, and I take pleasure in doing so. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

The Saints will be interested in reading the views of this great convention upon missionary work, as we have the past few years been pushing hard this part of the work of the Reorganization, both at home and in foreign countries. Dr. H. C. Stuntz, superintendent of the missionary work of the Methodist society in Hawaii and the Philippines, addressing the convention, said:

"It is impossible to get anything like an adequate conception of our relations to the Philippine Islands. God has swung this country out between the two great continents. He has located us here not to no purpose, with Africa to our east and Asia to our west and the half-civilized populations north and south of us.

"We are the consummate product of the best of nations of Europe. We are an amalgamation of the best the world has produced. We are just beginning to come to our great future. We are the only modern nation with a sea-front toward Asia. We have given us Hawaii, Guam, and other islands as steps to the great areas and heathenism of Asia.

"A great menace—Russia—is now threatening us in that field. The Siberian Railroad is the greatest single stratagem the world has ever seen, and by this piece of statesmanship Russia obtained eight million of square miles of Eastern China. But a wonderful move stopped these seizures. Dewey's victory unfurled the American flag in the face of Russia, added an archipelago to our possessions, defied Russia, and has checked the intolerant and unreligious advance of the 'Bear.'

"The same army that drank too much of the beer that made Milwaukee infamous, that same army has stopped the intolerable progress of Russia, and has won states for Christendom. That is what will go down in history, not the flaws, for in its battles for Christ this country had to use just men.

"Our government is establishing righteousness by the army, school-teachers, and the police bench as much as is the missionaries. When you come to think of what the old friar was, with his immortality, Cæsarism, and vices, you will be thankful that our pure young people are going there.

"The Spanish language is history, and English becomes the official language of the Philippine Islands on January 1, 1907."

Bishop C. C. McCabe, representing the Latin-American countries, spoke as follows:

"I am glad my theme recognizes that the door is open. It was a long time closed. The door was closed with all these Latin people for three hundred eighty years. Spain, Portugal, France, Italy, Mexico, South America, and Cuba have for years been carrying the priests on their backs. Through the open door come gleams of light. In Mexico we have five hundred twenty-eight congregations, splendid schools, and a printing-press. The Women's Foreign Missionary Society has large schools in Mexico.

"It is a great thing to go to South America. I was amazed at its vastness. You can see many a gleam of light coming from the work of Doctor Wood in Ecuador, in forming training schools. Brother Pond here, and others have contributed to my fund of grace and for the extension of the work in the South American states.

"In Peru eight of the leading members of the Congress have signed their names to a bill to have the section of the constitution there, referring to a state religion, abrogated. At Valparaiso we have a flourishing church. From there into the Argentine Republic across the Andes, is one of the greatest countries of the Continent. I wish we had one thousand Methodist missionaries to send there to take care of the big population that is promised for that country.

"The spirit of intolerance and persecution toward Protestantism by the Roman Catholic officials is passing away. There are many in our church who do not believe in the work among the Roman Catholic countries. The people there worship images, sanctified by the Pope, and immorality reigns supreme on their fast-days.

"We owe a great debt to the Latin-American countries. Oh, let us have the Bible all through South America, and you will see the regeneration of those countries. I never felt more confident in my life that we will have a glorious victory than I do to-day."

Bishop D. H. Moore represented the field of Eastern Asia, having for his topic, "The Open Door in Eastern Asia:"

"The three empires of Japan, Korea, and China constitute the division known as Eastern Asia. Originally these people must have been the same, and there is written history showing a common ancestry, so these three may be considered as one.

"The impact of Western commerce made a breach in the walls of the exclusiveness of China, and two Chinese inventions—gun-powder and the printing-press—have revolutionized the world. It was due to the war between Japan and China that the walls of Chinese conservatism and exclusiveness were battered down. It was the United States of America, through Commodore Perry, that opened Japan, and Japan, the newest of world powers, that has opened the doors of China.

"Trade and science joined with religion have marched unflinching and converging to give the world the immensity of China. The emblem of Constantine made anew blazed in the sky over the armies of the powers as they came from all directions in this last great crusade for the religious and civic liberty of the world. That union burst asunder the last door of China, and the Flowery Kingdom, by imperial edict, is now free and safe for the advance of the missionaries of Christianity. All outbreaks heard of now are simply guerrilla warfare soon to be put down, for they are outlaws.

"China is open to us for our evangelistic work everywhere. Even now ministers and native pastors are going up and down. I do not wish to have you think that China has been transformed into having a love for Christian nations, but China has come to realize that the past is for ever passed, and she seeks to copy the outward form of this Western civilization in order that she may grow. China will grow beyond our power if we do not watch, for in giving them the Western learning for which they ask it will become a weapon which they will wield against what we hold dear.

"Down below all of the superstition of China and the idolatry of Confucianism there is a substratum of moral teaching which is a beautiful foundation for Christianity. The noblest form of Christianity is to be wrought from the Chinese. The noblest mightiest people of the earth are standing there waiting for you to strike off their manacles with the dynamic force of the gospel and give them the light of Christianity."

J. C. Hartzell, Bishop of Africa, next addressed the convention:

"Africa is the last continent to be opened to the gospel, and her peoples are the last section of the human family to receive the word of Christ. And how quickly it has all been done! Only yesterday that continent was veiled in mystery. Little peeps were secured in for a few miles on the edges for years. That continent is the oldest, according to geology.

"It was only in our day that it was possible to overcome the physical conditions and penetrate the interior. To-day the railroad and modern exploration, backed by science and money, are laying open the country. Every tie laid in the railroads is equal to a human life. In no other age would it have been possible to overcome the disease and other obstacles and accomplish the results now obtained. The Boer surrender removed the last impediment to the open door in Africa—an opening to a vast territory, larger than you can appreciate.

"The whites in Africa are a mere handful. The destiny of Africa for a century and a half is placed in the hands of less than a million white people. Back of these are their governments, and chief of these England. British rule extends over a great extent of Africa. France controls a fringe on the northern coast, and grand old Germany also has possessions here. The division of Africa among the powers means that there will be no more wars in Africa—but an open door to all classes of men and all Christian religions,

"Eastern Africa is to be to overcrowded India what America was to Europe, and millions of Indians are no living or flocking there, so that all that obtains in India is true of this part of Africa.

"The most interesting thing in Africa is the native himself. When not contaminated by white men he is honest and virtuous. Every day that I see them I respect the blacks more.

"What does the Christian church answer to this open door call in Africa? Some great work has been accomplished. The Christian church has not touched Africa; it has not taken Africa seriously to heart. The only thing that seems to lag in Africa is the Christian church. Commerce has already entered the field in a thorough fashion.

"As your bishop I have been in Africa six years, and what have I done? I have opened the centers. We have a moral obligation to that little republic of Liberia, which God will never let us throw aside. We sit and trifle with one of the noblest openings ever offered missionary effort.

"The Roman Catholic Jesuitism of to-day is an organized conspiracy against the civil religious liberty of the world, but I make a clear distinction between that church as a church and as a political power.

"Six years ago in this town I was sent to this work. I have gone and done the best I could. I pray you as you love Africa and the church, give me the men and the means. Africa, for thee I live and plead, and if it be God's will, for thee I die."

Bishop J. M. Thoburn, of India, represented that country, besides that part belonging to China, to contain three hundred fifty millions of people, or about five times as many inhabitants as there are in the United States. Among other things he said that from the viewpoint of modern progress it is the key to all the rest of Asia, and India is also the mother of religion. In its origin the Brahmin religion was a purely missionary one, he declared, and the teachings of Buddha are also missionary. In some parts the inhabitants of this country have a religion nearer like Christianity than any other heathen religion, and great progress has been possible with these people who already have the base for Christian religious teachings. He spoke of the strange ways in which God leads, and how inspiration had often guided the footsteps of missionaries in India. Then he said in part:

"The still small voice in hearts prompts us to go forward. There is no going back. You say we need not have gone to those distant fields, but the beckoning hand leads on. I am more concerned with the evangelistic events of the present day than with the question of whether or not the Bible stories are to be taken literally. I have been led on step by step, and we have seen the work expanding, until now we are on the outposts of the western boundaries of India, and down to the equatorial latitudes.

"I was asked when I came here if it was true that there are one hundred thousand people waiting for baptism, and I reply that that is no exaggeration, and that if we could only have more means we would multiply the number many fold. I believe I will live to see the day when there will be one million Christian converts in India, and if the churches could only join together there would be ten million converts there in ten years."

As believers in the angelic message which provides that the "everlasting gospel" shall be preached "to every nation, kindreds, and tongues, and people," the Saints will doubtless become close and interested critics of the statements of these men just from the fields of labor. Our missionary forces are already working in the islands of the Pacific, and in Australia, New Zealand, and many of the countries of Europe; but the vast regions of Asia, Africa, and the Central and South American countries are as yet nearly untouched. The instructions of the Spirit to the Saints during the conference of 1901, at Independence, Missouri, was to extend the field of missionary labor: "It is the duty of the church to provide tracts in the Scandinavian, German, Chinese, Japanese, and Portuguese languages, and others, as the missions may require." According to the reports of this missionary host of the Methodist Church, coming only eighteen months later, the revelation was in keeping with the demands of the hour, and the Saints should be wide awake to their privileges. During the time of the convention there were raised three hundred thousand dollars for missionary purposes. Truly a magnificent effort.

At Kirtland, Ohio, October 25, I found Bro. L. R. Devore looking after Temple interests and fully enthusiastic in his work. The Temple register showed a total of eleven hundred sixteen visitors for the season, and these had left contributions and purchases of books, tracts, and pictures, amounting to one hundred fifty-one dollars and fifty-two cents. Bro. Devore makes a good watchman at the Temple, and felt satisfied that he was doing much more good than he could possibly do in traveling and preaching. The missionary in charge, U. W. Greene, was away from home doing missionary labor in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. I passed one night with Bro. Joel Allen, father of our missionary, D. L. Allen. Bro. Allen is helping on the gospel work and feels that he is rewarded in so doing. The family of Bro. G. T. Griffiths, missionary to Great Britain, was well and getting along nicely, as also the family of Evangelist J. H. Lake, laboring in Canada. Bro. and Sr. John Gillispie of the old-time Saints, looked well in their home, and seemed fully interested in the work. I had a pleasant home while in Kirtland at Sr. C. M. Kelley's. The Bishop's agent, Eben Miller, was absent during Sunday services, and Bro. L. W. Torrence directed in the meetings. James E. Kelley had appointments in Cleveland, so I did not hear him speak. On Tuesday evening, held meeting at the residence of Bro. W. C. George, Cleveland, assisted by James E. Kelley and Bro. George. Was glad to see the interest and energy manifested on the part of the young people in Cleveland.

While at the big convention before referred to, I had thought perhaps that I was the only Latter Day Saint present; but in talking with the Srs. Warnock, after the meeting, I found that two at least were in attendance. I am glad that we may expect now, to find a good representation of the Saints in almost every important gathering. Many more of the Saints whom we met showed an interest in the truth, but I shall not try to point out the work of each one in this short sketch.

After arranging with James E. Kelley to look after certain work of repairs in Kirtland, I next made the little village of Greenwood, New York, and found a pleasant home with our new missionaries there, J. B. Lentz and wife. I found both Bro. and Sr. Lentz good, quiet workers, and doing good. On the second day the missionary in charge, F. M. Sheehy, came in, and we sketched through the town and over the great hills surrounding it, in the daytime, and held meetings at night. On the Sabbath dedicated the new church building, Bro. Sheehy preaching the sermon. The brethren have a good, well-arranged church, comfortably seated, with gallery, natural gas for lighting and heating, at a cost of about eleven hundred dollars, all paid for; and yet there have been but very few Saints to do this work. Their efforts are indeed creditable. Bro. Frank J. Updyke, W. M. Blair, E. Updyke, and Srs. F. Knight, S. Deremer, and R. Atkins, with a number of others, and friends, are helpful in this work. At the urgent request of Bro. Sheehy, a short visit was made to Oswego County, New York, where Bro. George A. and Jay S. Whitehead reside. The latter had been quite sick, but was rallying. Urgent work in the office at home prevented a longer stay in the dominion of our genial laborer, Bro. F. M. Sheehy, and we left him looking lonely enough, notwithstanding the exciting election in progress, November 4, in Mexico, New York.

Hypocrites pray cream and live skimmed milk.—Chicago News.

McCORDO, Michigan, December 3.

Editors Herald: Soon after district conference in October, by request of missionary of this district I went to Hicksville, Ohio, to administer to a sick child of Bro. and Sr. John Allshouse, and remained a few days, then came home and arranged for winter. The fore part of November I joined Bro. Samuel Stroh, at Hillsdale, Michigan, and we went to Lansing, Michigan, where we met with the Saints of Lansing in meetings until the next Wednesday, thence to Williamston and visited the Saints there and called them together on Sunday and held sacrament meeting and talked to them on the needs of being diligent in the Master's work; after which we administered to Bro. William Cooper, who has suffered for a long time, also on Monday again. On Tuesday we went to Webberville; had meetings in afternoon and evening, also sacrament meeting.

At Lansing we found the Saints rejoicing over the safe return of Bro. Fish to their meetings again; he is needed there. Brn. Buckley and Dexter are all alive to the ministerial duties, and very zealous.

At Williamston Brn. St. Johns and Kutt and their families are sound in the faith; also Sr. Benstead.

At Webberville Bro. and Sr. Hart and Sr. Frasier, with other Saints, are holding meetings Wednesday and Sundays. From there we went to Dimondale. Bro. George McClintic expressed himself as sound in the faith, affirming the doctrine is the truth. We called on Srs. White and Frisby, also Bro. and Sr. Spofford. All seemed strong in the faith.

From there we came to Iowa, and met with Bro. and Sr. Lavey, also Bro. and Sr. Gray; all excellent Saints and as firm as a rock in the gospel.

From there on to Belding, where we found appointments awaiting us. Bro. W. D. Ellis escorted us to the home of Bro. O. J. Wheeler, one of the old standbys of the work in former days at Dimondale and Lansing. There has been gathered around him about twenty or twenty-five good Saints, who seem to be earnestly engaged in doing good. We were there one week and held two services on Thanksgiving at the home of Bro. Wheeler.

From Belding we came here to this place. Are holding meetings every evening. There are some splendid Saints here, there are mothers and fathers in Israel, and a class of middle-aged brothers and sisters,—excellent workers. The young Saints, too, are remembering their Creator. And such singers! All enter into the singing in the spirit of the work.

May God bless all his Saints, especially make bare his power in removing prejudice and persecution from his Saints.

We go from here to Grand Rapids, then to Sparta, Alpine, and Englishville, if the Lord wills; then home for holidays with loved ones. Am feeling well in the work.

AUBURN, Iowa, December 5.

Editors Herald: I have always had calls for more than I possibly could fill in the way of preaching and other church work, but it never piled up on me as it has of late. I am trying to do the best I can to reach all, but I see this conference year is going to be too short to do this, and new demands are being made nearly every day.

My health was never better, but my wife's health is poor. I fear every day I will be compelled to go home on account of this, but I trust God will see to this and that through his loving kindness she may be healed.

Bro. Crippen and I reached this place December 1,—a beautiful day,—but next morning it was raining and Bro. W. A. Carroll and the writer were called to go by team to Sack City, a distance of about twenty miles, to administer to Sr. Howard, who has passed her eighty-fifth birthday. She was very sick; have not heard of the results up to this time. It was night when we got back, and in a fine wet snow-storm. Everything now is covered with snow, reminding us that winter is here and that another conference year is nearly gone. And the question comes, What, O what will the harvest be? We can not boast of many baptisms in this district the past two years, but some fine openings have been made, and I believe that if the proper labor can be done in the future there will in some places be ingatherings.

There have been some changes in the missionary force in our district by mutual consent of all concerned. Bro. Crippen has been added to our force, and Bro. Jones has been taken away. I wish Bro. Crippen could have been sent to us and Bro. Jones allowed to remain, for our field is a large one, and there is plenty for all to do and more, too. But I do not complain, for I fear there are places not so well provided as we are.

I have decided that between now and close of conference year I will visit each branch in our district, and hold a series of meetings, though I find it hard to leave the missionary work outside of branches. But I have long viewed things as Bro. Pitt expressed himself in a late HERALD, and especially as touching local laborers; and when he said if the church would be better for him to labor as a local, he was ready, I could not but say, "Here is another." It has been one of my struggles to be able to decide just where I can serve the church and the Lord to the best advantage; and if at any time it is thought I can do more good as a local, there will be no offense taken upon my part. I, too, realize the thing that is most needed to-day in this church is humble, faithful, and loving local laborers. I read in Doctrine and Covenants that except a man is full of love and charity he can not assist in bringing forth this latter-day work; and if there is a place in this church that all the work must be done in loving kindness, it is in the branches and by the shepherds of the various flocks.

The Saints at Coalville have their new church nearly ready for dedication. While Bro. Crippen and I were there holding meetings we gave them a little lift in way of doing some painting. Bro. J. W. Wight, though many miles away, will not forget this branch; neither will others who have done missionary work there. The Coalville Saints are just as large-hearted as ever, and they still realize that a missionary can not travel without means. So far as this world's goods are concerned, they are poor; but they are rich in faith. If all Saints were like them in this respect the missionary would seldom have to call on the Bishop or his agents for help in this direction. I hope no one will be offended at this. I only make mention of this because as a whole I fear we are not up to the standard; neither do I want to be understood to convey the idea that no others are helping in this way.

I believe as a rule we are advancing in gospel work in our district. It is the local work that is suffering most. Perhaps I am more to blame for this than any one else, as I have been president of the district for nearly two years, and have done very little work in the branches. In some of them I have not held a meeting, and only in a very few have I held a series of meetings. I have been busy at other work. However, I believe it to be cruel to execute the law and expel members unless they first, in loving kindness, have been taught the law and what is expected of them, by those whose duty it is to so teach and explain. I believe the teachers of every branch have the right to know that this has been done before they attempt to execute the law. And surely if this is given and adopted by the church to govern the church, no one can do this particular work like the men whose duty it is to do it; namely, the elder and priest. If this is right, there is so much responsibility resting upon these officers that I do not understand how they can neglect to visit the membership of their respective branches.

I am still in the conflict and praying for the advancement of the glorious cause.

J. M. BAKER.

GLENWOOD, Iowa, December 3.

Editors Herald: In HERALD number forty-eight, an elder gave his views why so many Saints did not take church papers, etc. I for one do not approve of such letters when the elder does not sign his name. Is it because he wants to remain unknown to his readers? If the same brother would do something real good, he would sign his name in full, so all could know who he was.

In to-day's HERALD I see an article on hot drinks. Elders who have eaten and slept in my house, have drunk very hot water. I have contended that the word of the Lord says "hot drinks." I think it covers the ground of hot water as well as tea, coffee, or strong drinks. Pepper, ginger, and spices you may drink cold, but they are hot to the stomach, and so are injurious to the body; and what is an injury to the body is a sin to the one that commits it.

Hoping this may have space with other kickers, I will still remain,

Your brother,

A. NEWWRITER.

FLORESVILLE, Texas, December 3.

Editors Herald: Bro. John Harp and I have just returned from a trip about twenty-five miles north of here. Bro. Harp preached three times at the Beaumont schoolhouse. Had good crowds in spite of the bad, rainy weather. He cheered up the scattered ones, and made friends to the cause. He expects to return there in about one month and preach there and other places in the northern part of the county. I think he will baptize some when he returns. I think Bro. Harp is doing a good work and sets good examples for all to follow.

There are only three of us here, and prejudice runs high; but there are a few interested. We take the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves, and the "Gospel Banner" series; we lend our papers all out to others to read. Many thanks to the Herald Publishing House for the bundle of old HERALDS sent us. They were eagerly read and distributed. The church papers are food to our souls, especially to those who are isolated. May the time soon come when God's children can all gather to Zion.

We are trying to do all the good we can for the cause. I find it an easy matter to defend this gospel when in contact with those of other views.

We have had two very bad years for crops, but we have had lots of rain lately and prospects are brighter for another year. May we all be more able to help the cause financially.

We shall try to attend our next quarterly conference at San Antonio, and look forth with gladness to the time.

Dear Saints, pray for us that we may be faithful and instrumental in doing some good for the cause we love so well.

Your brother,

EDWARD JACKSON.

LAGUNA, New Mexico, December 3.

Editors Herald: Having been transferred from my first appointment at Zuni, as field matron, to this place, I venture to write something about these Pueblo Indians, as I have had a chance to get more or less acquainted with Indians of some of the different Pueblos.

There are seven different Pueblos, or villages, on the Laguna Reservation. The lagunas are considered the most advanced of any of the Pueblo Indians; and they are the most civilized of any Indians I have ever seen who are not counted among the civilized nations. They are of lighter complexion than most Indians. The men and most of their children dress like Americans, but most of the women still cling to their Indian dress; but their costumes far surpass those worn by most other Indian women, and when neat and clean are rather attractive.

The Pueblos are self-supporting, not being furnished anything by the government except their schools, their government officials, and their medicines. Their children while in school are provided with clothing.

I am told that on the Laguna Reservation there are over two hundred returned students who have been away attending school in different localities. Most of them, I believe, to Carlyle, Pennsylvania. There are about one thousand five hundred inhabitants on this reservation; they all know how to work and are very industrious, working in summer from long before sun up until way late at night. The ground here is very poor, and requires irrigation to raise anything at all.

The Laguna Pueblo is situated on solid rock, so that in its immediate neighborhood nothing can be raised. There are some low places where sand has blown in to considerable depth, usually along or near the banks of the San Jose River, where a few peach orchards have been planted; but they require a good deal of irrigation, especially in summer, when the drouth comes on.

One might wonder how these people make a living. If they were not very industrious they could not. One way their women and children make money is in making pottery. There is in the hills a soft slate-like stone which they dig. By soaking it in water it becomes soft; then through a process of mixing, molding, and drying it becomes hard. It is then painted first white, then rubbed with a smooth stone until it shines. It is then painted either in drawings, or flowers as they fancy, with different colored paints, and is then burnt for several hours, and is then ready for sale. Their paints are all made from stone which is found in the hills.

About train time one can see women and children flocking to the train. Laguna being situated on one of the principal lines of the Santa Fe Road, largely traveled by tourists, they find ready sale for their wares at good prices.

They also have ranches out of the Pueblo, probably from six to thirty miles or more, where they raise cattle, sheep, horses, and burros. They also raise some grain; but it requires so much labor that it is raised in small quantities only, just enough for their own use. There is a grist-mill here, but many prefer to grind their own grain, so that one visiting their homes can see them grinding their wheat or corn between rocks, as was done in Bible times. And they make very nice flour. Then, too, in this way none of it is wasted.

They card their own wool and spin by hand, weave women's dresses, also spin their own stocking-yarn. But most of their wool they sell, and from this and the sale of their stock comes most of their living except what they raise. Some of them, however, are now moving to neighboring towns, to Gallup, Albuquerque, or where they can find employment.

The climate here is healthful. Laguna has an altitude of six thousand feet above sea level. It is not so warm in summer as one would suppose at this latitude. The winters are cold, but not severe. The air is fresh and usually dry. I believe the loveliest sunsets I have ever seen anywhere I have witnessed here in New Mexico. At times the whole horizon seems to assume a beautiful violet hue, and glass lying on the ground for some length of time will turn a dark violet if left long enough.

The first government Pueblo school was established here in Laguna in 1871, by Colonel Walter G. Marmon, who, after serving in the Civil War, came out West with the Captain Darling Survey Company, and, having passed through Laguna, returned to this place after his engagement with the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad was closed. He also organized the first Pueblo Indian company of militia, and later was appointed Colonel of the First New Mexico Volunteer Militia. About two years later his brother, R. G. Marmon, and also Major Pratt, came to this place, and still later two of his cousins, the Messrs. Gunn. Four of these men married Indian women, and still live here, except Colonel Marmon, who died about three years ago.

The influence that these men have exerted over these people can readily be seen and felt by any one who happens to be sojourning in or even passing through this place. Colonel Mar-mon, I am told, rigidly enforced the laws of education, compelling parents to send their children to school, and was one of the leading forces in establishing law and order. And his works and the life he spent here, the influence for good to these people still live, and one can not but wish that more such men would wield their influence for good among the Indians. Although persuasion does a great deal in its place, yet I believe education has been advanced to a greater degree by compulsion than persuasion among all educated races, and I believe it would be also among these people.

When I go through the village visiting them at their homes, their friendly ways are so impressive I would gladly sit and visit with them could they but speak our language. They are cleanly, can cook very well, and one feels at ease to be with them.

I think that many white people who have had the advantages of education could learn profitable lessons from these people if they would see how comfortable they make themselves in their primitive way of living. Their tables are well supplied. Their houses are adobe, but well built and spacious, and the new houses are being built with large windows and doors, like Americans; and they seem to enjoy life by making use of what God has given them and doing the best they can with what they have.

There are no strikes among them, and their difficulties are settled by their own officers, who, as nearly as I can learn, usually deal justly by all.

SARAH A. DAKE.

Elemich, baptized 2; D. Parish, Joshua Carlile, J. J. Christiansen, L. G. Wood; Priests S. Harding, J. P. Christensen, A. C. Riley, T. Scott, J. C. Lapworth, S. C. Foote, C. C. Larson, C. D. Oglevie, A. S. Davis; Teachers J. A. Hansen, P. W. Frederickson, John Adams; 27 reporting, 283 sermons, 6 baptisms, 7 marriages, 19 children blessed. Bishop's agent J. P. Carlile reported balance on hand last report $99.77; received $541.00; total $640.77; paid to ministry $578.10; poor $55; on tent expense $12; total $645.10. Due agent $4.33. Report approved. Committee on purchase of tent reported: Received $106.36; paid out $137.05; due committee $30.69. Report received and committee continued. A motion to discontinue sending blanks to ministry for reports having failed of adoption, it was moved that the district secretary be authorized to obtain necessary supplies for the priesthood reports. Adopted. The conference having been asked if it is lawful to hold entertainments in the churches for financial gain, the following was adopted: Resolved that the Pottawattamie District conference consider it incompatible with the sacredness of a house of worship, dedicated to the service of God, to devote its use to any entertainment held for gain. The expenses of secretary were met by collection, $3.23, leaving a balance in favor of the district of $1.60. J. P. Carlile was sustained Bishop's agent. Conference adjourned to meet at Council Bluffs, 10 o'clock a. m., Saturday, February 28, 1903.

Western Maine.—Conference opened by singing and prayer. S. O. Foss was chosen president of conference, with J. W. Ames assistant; Eugene Brann clerk, with Margre Closson assistant; J. W. Ames chorister, Agnes Cunningham organist, Henry Carter janitor and usher. Branches reporting: Little Deer Isle 59, Bray's Mountain 41, Pleasant Home 18, gain 2, Stonington 96. Bishop's agent's report: Received, $135.70; paid out, $118.50; balance due church, $17.20. Audited and found correct. Present district officers sustained. Next conference to convene at Stonington sometime in May. S. O. Foss to be sent to General Conference as delegate. Report of the findings of the elder's court was read. Voted to accept report and that S. G. Cunningham be expelled from the church. Preaching by S. O. Foss, J. W. Ames, and Eugene Brann.

Pastoral.

To the Saints of Southern Missouri District: As the year is drawing to a close, and our kind and loving Father has blessed you in this part with an abundance of everything, I trust you will remember how the Saints came to your relief last year. Now that you have plenty, I would like to see the name of every Saint on the tithing list. Let the Bishop see that you fully appreciate the needed help sent you by sending in a tithe of what God has blessed you with.

I shall not be able to visit you before the year closes, as Bro. Baker and I have just closed one debate, and start another one December 5 at Eldridge. I shall be kept busy until the close of the year, so those having tithes or offerings send to home address, Route 2, Springfield, Missouri.

HENRY SPARLING.

Joint Clergy Certificates, 1903.

The Central, Western, Southwestern, and Trans-Continental Passenger Associations—the Associations that issue Joint Clergy Certificates—have been furnished with up-to-date lists of general officers and general missionaries of the church entitled to said certificates, to facilitate prompt issue of credentials for the new year. Such lists are furnished regularly, immediately after appointments are made by the General Conference, and on or about December 1, annually.

Other passenger associations do not issue clergy certificates, but they may be obtained from some—though not all—of the local roads, on application to General Passenger Agents.

All local ministers entitled to clergy certificates are referred to their general missionaries in charge for indorsement, as heretofore, in harmony with established rule.

R. S. SALYARDS, Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, December 2, 1902.

Bishop's Agent's Notices.

To the Saints of the Nodaway District: As the time is nearing when the Bishop's agents are to send reports, I ask the Nodaway Saints not to forget their duties as Saints of God. Brethren, let us examine ourselves and see if we are in the faith that was once given to the Saints of the most high God. How often we hear the Saints pray, "Lord, help us to live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." Are we trying to do this? Are we trying to bend our will to do his will? Are we willing to say, Father, thy will be done, not ours?

Brethren, have you been blessed with bountiful crops this year? Freely we have received, so let us freely give. This instruction was given to the servants of God by the Master. Now do you not believe that the Lord expects us as members of his church to give freely that portion which belongs to him? Can not we all give one tenth of what we have to the Lord, then one tenth of our interest or surplus annually? Brethren, if we will do this I feel assured that when we are in need of help from the Lord spiritually, and when we are afflicted, we can ask the Lord in more assurance and in more faith than when we neglect our duties.

My report will be sent in the first of January, 1903. Do not wait now till the last day of December to send in your tithes and offering. I can not report anything after December 31. Let us see if we can not have double the amount of names this year that we had last year. If you can not give one hundred dollars, give less, as the Lord has prospered you. If it is only five cents it will be reported. Let us do our part, then the Lord is bound to do his.

R. K. ROSS, Bishop's Agent.

MOUND CITY, Missouri, December 4.

Notices.

In a conference held by Brn. R. Baldwin, D. M. Strachan, V. M. Goodrich, and O. B. Thomas, subsequent to the notice in the HERALD of November 12, concerning the silence of Bro. Baldwin states that he has not, and never had, anything against Bro. Strachan, neither had preferred charges against him, hence does not regard himself the grieved party, notwithstanding, according to the documents in the hands of the committee who raised the silence, their decision could not have been rendered otherwise.

Died.

SCOTT.—Samuel M. Scott was born February 12, 1877, died November 29, 1902, aged 25 years, 9 months, and 17 days. Baptized 1891, ordained priest in 1896. He leaves a wife, 4 little children, a widowed mother, 2 brothers, 3 sisters, and many relatives and friends. His father, who was a seventy, died twenty-five days before. Funeral in charge of W. J. Smith and J. W. Adams.

BATTEN.—Sr. Mary Batten died at her home in Whatcheer, Iowa, November 10, 1902. She endured her sufferings with great patience for ten weeks. Her faith in the divinity of the latter-day work was unwavering to the last. She was born in Hanley, England; age 75 years, 9 months, 7 days. She united with the Reorganized Church in 1861. Her advice to her children was to be faithful in the work of the Lord.

The Nickel Plate Road

will afford its patrons an opportunity to take advantage of low rates for Christmas and New Year holidays, by selling tickets at a fare and a third for the round trip to all points on their line, December 24, 25, 31, 1902, and January 1, 1903. Return limit including January 2, 1903. Through service to New York City, Boston and other eastern points. Chicago passenger station, Harrison Street and Fifth Avenue. For further information, address John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams Street, Chicago.

Teachers and parents who are looking for some entertainment to interest the children at holiday-time will welcome the December Woman's Home Companion with Haryot Holt Dey's Christmas cantata, "The Four Santa Clauses."

The Electrical Review is a weekly journal devoted to the interests of the electrical sciences. Some idea of the scope of the magazine may be gathered by noting the contents for the issue of November 29, the last to our desk: Editorial: "Institute Meeting," "Mistreatment of Measuring Instruments," "Progress in Machine Shop Methods," "Water-Power Developments in South Africa." Articles: "One Hundred and Seventieth Meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers," "The Storage Battery as a Factor in Speed Control," by H. B. Cohn; "A Series-Parallel System of Speed Control," by George W. Fowler; "Electrically Operated Coal Hoist, Having Variable Speed Control," by P. O. Keilholtz; "Multiple Unit, Voltage Speed Control for Trunk Line Service," by H. W. Leonard; "Steam Pipe Covering and its Relation to Station Economy," by H. G. Scott; "The Universal Exposition of St. Louis, 1904," by W. E. Goldsborough; "Wireless Telephony, by the Collins System," by A. Frederick Collins; "The Designing of Telephone Apparatus," by W. A. Taylor; "The Mechnich System of Magnetic Concentration," "Digest of Electrical Patents;" "Review of Current Engineering and Scientific Literature;" "Industrial Section;" a digest of new designs of apparatus and tools; "Current Electrical News."

Our excellent exchange, the Critic, has fairly outdone itself in the Christmas number. From its first cover page, printed in three-color work, to its last, it is interesting. It abounds in fine illustrations, many printed in tints, and the articles cover a wide range. Christian Brinton tells of the life of Giovanni Segantini, many of the artist's pictures being reproduced. "Some Recent Literary Biography" is an article by W. H. Johnson, and Helen Zimmern tells somewhat of Auguste Rodin Loquitur, the famous sculptor. A poem, "The City," is followed by "Mrs. Fiske's Mary of Magadala," by Reverend P. S. Grant. The late Frank Norris' article on the "Responsibilities of the Novelist" holds much of interest. "A Fallacy about Landscape Artists," by Jeannette B. Perry, is followed by "Three Songs," (a poem) by Maurice Maeterlinck, a translation from the French, by Mary J. Serrano. "German Lithographs of To-day," is a richly illustrated article, and is followed by "Note on the Literary Element in Beardsley's Art," by A. E. Gallatin. "A Recent Interview with Tolstoy," by Theodore Bentzon, a condensed translation from the French by Carolyn Shipman, gives an interesting new picture of this great man in his home life, and also tells somewhat of Madame Tolstoy. J. Ranken Towse's article, "Duse and the Degenerate D'Annunzio" precedes the "Book-buyer's Guide," which closes the number. Lovers of books and literature can not but appreciate the Critic.

Our Rural Population.

The last census gives the number of farms in the United States as 5,739,657; the number of people over ten years of age engaged in agriculture was 10,381,765, or thirty-six per cent of all engaged in gainful occupations. The people living in cities of 4,000 or over number, roundly, 28,500,000, or thirty-seven per cent of the total. Those classed as semi-urban—those living in towns and villages having less than 4,000 people—number 8,250,000, or eleven per cent, and the remaining people were classed as rural, comprising 39,500,000, or fifty-two per cent. Probably a portion of this rural population is made up of non-farmers. This is especially true in New England.—From the Chautauquan for December.

Reduced Rate for Christmas and New Year Holidays.

The Nickel Plate Road will sell tickets December 24, 25, and 31, 1902, and January 1, 1903, at rate of a fare and a third for the round trip, to any point located in Central Passenger Association territory, good returning to and including January 2, 1903. Pullman service on all trains. Individual Club Meals, ranging in price from 35 cents to $1.00, served in dining-cars. Address John Y. Calahan, General Agent, 113 Adams Street, Chicago, for particulars. Chicago city ticket office, 111 Adams Street; depot, Harrison Street and Fifth Avenue. 47-6t 65

There are two articles in the December Review of Reviews on the movement for the consolidation of country schools. Superintendent Nelson, of Kansas, describes the plan and its merits, while the experience of school officers in many States in attempting the centralization of rural schools and the transportation of pupils at public expense is summarized by William B. Shaw. It is shown that much progress has been made—especially in the Middle West and the South. Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard writes in the same magazine on an Alabama negro school of more than local interest—a noteworthy effort at self-help.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

The following little item appeared in the Mirror, a paper published at Tonganoxie, Kansas, in its issue for December 4: "J. H. Tibbels is the new Star carrier and he is a good one. Mr. Tibbels bears the distinction of being the only Mormon in Tonganoxie. He belongs to the nonpolygamous branch of the church of the Latter Day Saints and affiliates with the Independence, Missouri, congregation."

Joseph Smith returned from his southern trip on Monday evening. He reports having had a very pleasant time among his brethren at Wilburton and at Stewartsville, as well as at other places he visited on his trip.

A typically American paper is the Scientific American. It does not get out very many special editions, but when it does they are usually of an extremely interesting character. We are in receipt of the issue for December 13, which is a special number, being devoted to "Transportation on Land and Sea." It is a magnificent edition, and from cover to cover is full of interest. It depicts by word and picture modern means of transportation, and by way of comparison has histories and pictures of primitive means as well. We always welcome the American to our desk, and especially its splendid special numbers.

One characteristic of the animal, man, which he does not share with others of the animal creation, is that of the religious or worshiping faculty. In the exercise of this faculty, the honest, conscientious, and enlightened devotee finds his best comfort and highest enjoyment.

There is a great variety of religious professions, an almost infinity of faiths, but at the heart of them all they are of much the same nature so far as real religion goes. This is so much the case that with the common man in society it has passed into a proverb: "It does not matter what a man's religion is so he is earnest and honest in his beliefs."

Now, it so happens that men are not the victims of dishonest beliefs. They may believe in certain things that are not honest, but their belief in them is all honest enough. Some men, however, are very honest in their beliefs, but are not very much in earnest, neither in the theories nor the practices involved in these theories. A belief can not in itself be dishonest. The thing believed in may be false, but the believer in it may be innocent of dishonest intention in the belief.

Some who use the proverb referred to sometimes add to the statement, "So long as he does right."

This seems to catch the unwary thinker as a proper ending of the idea: "No matter what a man's religion, if he is only honest and does right."

The last sentence carries the idea that a man may hold any sort of belief, as a religion, and do right.

This is an error, evident as soon as it is examined. The world's history is replete with instances in which the fact is clearly presented that men did at the dictates of their religious fervor things which judged by the standards of the countries and times in which they lived were right; but which under later standards are wrong. Those men did not and could not do right, notwithstanding they were earnest and honest in their beliefs. Their religion, or the inciting cause to their action, was wrong. They could not do right for the reason that their religion incited them to wrong deeds.

It has sometimes been said of the Saints that the people were better than their religion. What was meant by this was that the religion of the Saints was bad; but the natural qualities of goodness in the people resulted in their doing right, contrary to the principles of their faith.

This, if true, disputes the axiom that the religion does not matter if its devotees are honest and do right. For, if the Saints do right, why should there be such strenuous exertions made to destroy their faith, if the axiom be true?

We are not disposed to admit that the Saints do right because their innate honesty is superior to and dominates their religion; but believe that in their profession of faith is found the secret of their doing right. They do right as a class, first, because their religion requires it; and second, because the spirit and the letter of their faith teaches them what is right.

Right-doing is the result of right thinking. Right religion suggests, teaches, and insists upon right thoughts. Hence, for a man to do right it is necessary for him to have right religion. It is therefore a necessary consequence that any kind of religion will not do, no matter how honest a man may be in his devotion to such chosen religion.

AS TO SPACE IN THE HERALD.

Not long ago the business manager of the HERALD received from a brother in Denver a letter in which he remitted for the HERALD and ordered it stopped because the editors had refused to publish something which he sent in. The business manager replied to him that he had better reconsider, as he must remember that there was a large membership and that all could not always find space in the HERALD. In reply thereto the brother wrote: "I can not reconsider at the present time. If our membership is fifty thousand, the HERALD could be made about four pages larger to accommodate a few of its members. If the HERALD is the official paper of the church, the church members should not have to wait seven months for a letter or a few words to be published, and I am not the only one that is not satisfied. There are others to follow, away out West at a place called Denver."

We have received a number of letters conveying a similar sentiment, and have been led to wonder if the church members as a rule take the position that the editors should give space to everything which is sent to them. Do our readers believe that it is the duty of the editors to publish everything that is sent to them by the members of the church, or do they grant editors the right to exercise their editorial judgment as to what shall appear and what shall not? We have come to the conclusion that there are many in the church who do believe that the editors should give space to everything which is sent in, without regard as to whether there is any merit in the matter submitted or not. What a mess that would make of things! Soon the HERALD would have to be the size of some of our Sunday newspapers to hold all the matter which would be sent in.

We often receive writings an examination of which fails to reveal any motive in writing other than that the writers thought they would like to see their names in print under something they had written. Surely it will be conceded that writers should at least have something to present when they write. Our readers surely can not realize what a lot of matter that we can not use is presented to us by those who think that because the HERALD is the official organ of the church it should publish all that is sent to it.

If we would undertake to publish everything which is sent to us there would be no need to have editors. All that would be necessary would be to mark everything as it came in, have some copy preparers go over it, and publish everything in its turn. In about six months we would have the pleasure of seeing letters and articles printed which would bear dates considerably previous to the date of publication. In two or three years we would still be reading letters written in 1902 or 1903.

It would appear from the letter that there is in Denver, as well as other places, those who are dissatisfied because the editors have seen fit to withhold some things from publication sent to them. However, it is a source of considerable surprise to us that members should deem it necessary to stop their papers because their letters or articles have not been printed. We surely regret if there are Saints of this disposition, but we are inclined to believe that the brother penned those lines when he was more or less angry and therefore does not fairly represent the Saints.

We are always glad to receive letters and articles from church members and others, but all must concede that to be worthy of space in the HERALD, or in any paper, there must be merit in the article presented and it must contain something which will be of interest to the readers. And herein lies one function of an editor, namely, to examine everything which comes in, reject that which he deems unworthy, or not of sufficient interest to justify its insertion, and accept those of merit and interest; and if in the exercise of this function the editor's blue pencil falls pretty heavily upon the manuscripts of some of our brethren, they should not become angry or discouraged, but should submit to the judgment of the editor as graciously as possible and try again. The editors are placed in charge of this work by the Board of Publication, and hence by the church, for the Board is sustained by the church, and it is to be presumed that their work as editors is done in the interest of the church as a whole. Hence it is unjust to accuse them of having other than the best interest of the work at heart. Having the good of the cause in mind always, it is scarcely right or just for the members to become angry at the editors and censure them when according to their editorial judgment some articles should be sent to the waste-basket or returned.

Let the reader place himself in the editor's position for a time, and look at these things through our eyes, and it is probable that they will see things differently than heretofore.

The price of the HERALD to subscribers is already small enough for the cost of its production. Were four pages added to it for the purpose of accommodating the writers at Denver, whose letters or articles may not have been published, the price would need to be increased to meet the added expense; and this would fall on all who take it, and some now think the subscription too high and decline to take it for that reason.

Again: The pages of the HERALD, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Ensign are always full, no blank pages being left in. To have put in what has been complained of our leaving out would have been to have left out some that we have put in; so that our error has not been in leaving out, but in selecting what has gone in, if we have erred.

Persons having complaints to make concerning the actions of the editors with regard to matters for publication should address those complaints to the editors and not to the business manager, unless it is designed by those making the complaints to bring the matter before the Board of Publication, and then the complaints should be addressed to the president of the Board of Publication or to the secretary of that body.

DECREASE OF HAWAIIAN POPULATION.

An article of great interest to us is one which appeared in the November number of the American Journal of Sociology entitled, "An Inquiry into the Causes of the Decrease of the Hawaiian People," by W. B. Elkin, of Cornell University. The writer succinctly traces the astonishing decrease of the native population of the "Paradise of the Pacific," and shows the causes. According to Mr. Elkin, the estimate made by Captain Cook and Mr. King of the Hawaiian population in 1778-79 was four hundred thousand. The missionaries who first went to the islands in 1820 three years later estimated the population at one hundred forty-two thousand. Then there was a continual decrease until in 1896 the native and part native inhabitants numbered a little over thirty-nine thousand. The estimate for 1900 (the official figures not yet being available) is thirty-eight thousand.

Mr. Elkin then tells how civilization found the Hawaiians a healthy, mild, and generous people, whose inter-tribal wars, because of their crude weapons and their natural pacific dispositions, were not very bloody affairs. But civilized (?) weapons and methods of war changed these conflicts into bloody and great life-destroying battles.

Worse than this, however, was the fact that civilization brought its diseases, and pestilence found its way into the peaceful islands, and dread diseases claimed its victims by the hundreds. Vice brought its pestilences too; and venereal diseases, unknown on the healthful islands before the white man set his foot there, rapidly spread among the natives until even the children became sufferers from the consequences of vice. Contagious diseases were even purposely and maliciously introduced by avaricious traders, "to sweep [the inhabitants] away and let white men occupy the soil."

Mr. Elkin recounts instances of where vice and its consequent sufferings and diseases were forcibly brought into the islands by representatives of such nations as the United States, England, France, and others, which make one blush with shame to read. They are travesties on the work of so-called civilization.

But Mr. Elkin is hopeful that the bottom of the decline has been reached, and that conditions are such that the Hawaiians will increase instead of decrease. He thinks the transition from the old conditions to the new has been largely effected, hence the destructiveness of the changes has in a great measure been checked. The diseases of civilization are dying out, and on the whole the natives brought into better condition by the process of civilizing forces.

It is to be hoped that it is as Mr. Elkin concludes, that this "brave and affectionate people, the most kindly and generous in the world," as he styles them, are surrounded by such conditions now as to guarantee their preservation and increase, and that the country with which they are now affiliated, will assist them, "in due time, to take their legitimate place among the able and progressive races of the earth, and to contribute a distinctive and valuable element to American civilization."

FORTS AT PUERTO CABELLO BOMBARDED.

Serious trouble has occurred in Venezuela. Germany and England made demands for the payment of some overdue accounts. Altercations followed until Venezuela was given an ultimatum. President Castro refused to comply, with the result that on December 14 the German and English war vessels bombarded the forts guarding Puerto Cabello, the western part of Venezuela. Forty-five minutes shelling by the vessels completely demolished the ancient wooden fortresses.

The disruption of peace relations between the two European and the South American republic has caused considerable concern in this country as well as in the European countries. The situation is really serious. The United States had been assured by the English and German governments that only a "peaceful blockade" would be instituted to collect the debt by seizure of a custom-house. But already several Venezuelan vessels have been sunk by the English and German fleets and the forts at Puerto Cabello reduced. The right to collect national debts is universally recognized, but it is thought this country will not consent to the English and German nations resorting to other means than the "peaceful blockade." The bombarding of the forts at Puerto Cabello has made the matter very serious indeed.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

J. S. Roth wrote from Grinnell, Iowa, December 11: "I am still on the sick-list. I am improving some, but very slowly. But I hope to be able to get to work by the first of January."

Under date of December 10, F. A. Smith wrote from Mondamin, Iowa: "We organized a branch at Pisgah on last Saturday, with thirty-six members. Joseph Lane was chosen president, Charles Vredenburg, priest, and Hubert H. Oviat, deacon. The last-named was baptized when the church was dedicated. We had a very pleasant time. Brn. Charles Derry and H. N. Hansen were present with us and assisted in the service."

Bro. G. J. Waller in making his report from Hawaii Territory says that he has presided over the Honolulu Branch continually, and says: "I have also acted as superintendent of the Honolulu Branch Sunday-school, and taught a class of Japanese and Hawaiians near my home at Waikiki on Sunday afternoons. The starting of this class about two years ago, which then consisted of only three Japanese children, and which now numbers twenty-five, had in view the introduction of the work amongst the Japanese people, of whom there are many here. In our Sunday-school the Gospel Quarterly, issued by the church, is used. I have also each Sunday evening presided over the meeting of the Zion's Religio-Literary Society which was organized after my return from San Francisco early in the year. The study of the Book of Mormon is taken up at these meetings, in connection with which we are now using the Religio Quarterly. I have baptized nine people, three in April and six in June."

Bro. Abner Lloyd recently wrote: "The HERALD becomes more attractive and precious as it advances in age. The good news from all parts of the missionary field is read with anxiety each week. How any one can keep posted in the progress of this great work without the aid of the HERALD is a problem in my mind. It should be read in the families of all the Saints for the much-needed information to meet the opposition brought against the latter-day work by the enemy of our souls. Let us all make a strenuous effort to increase the HERALD subscription list."

Sr. Irena Jubb wrote from Brant, Michigan,

December 8: "It is six years this winter since I heard a sermon by a Latter Day Saint. Bro. H. Dickhout, of Canada, was here in September, but he did not have time to preach, but baptized my three youngest children. His visit did me much good spiritually. I am striving to do my best, without murmuring. How I would enjoy being among the Saints at Lamoni if but just for one Sunday. I ask an interest in the prayers of all the Saints. I have been sick for over four years, without much prospects of ever being well again. But I desire to be faithful."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In HERALD for November 26, in an editorial on "Church Finance," we spoke of the definition of the word "residue" as given by Joseph Flory in his article in same HERALD. We had failed to find the definition as given by Bro. Flory in our edition of Webster, known as the "International." Bro. Flory wrote us under date of December 6 that he quoted the definition as he found it in a dictionary published in 1866 by J. B. Lippincott and Company, an edition of Webster which had been "revised and enlarged by Chauncy A. Goodrich." Bro. Flory says he holds that the definition he gave is good, or was in 1866, long after the word "residue" had been used in the Doctrine and Covenants to which he applied it.

Sr. Susan White, Melrose, Montana, remits for HERALD, and says she has taken it for very many years, and does not feel as though she could do without it.

In a letter to Sr. Anna C. Smith, dated from Dallas, Texas, Station A, December 6, care of Doctor Briggs, Bro. L. L. Wight wrote that he had undergone an operation for removal of cataract, and is being well cared for, and in hopes of speedy recovery.

Sr. Ross, of Gilroy, California, manifests her zeal for the cause by sending in four HERALD subscriptions. California seems to have just wakened on the press question.

Bro. A. B. Phillips reports having baptized two more in Chico, California. He sends in five new HERALD subscribers to help pay for the new press.

The lecture given here last Saturday night by Reverend L. E. Follansbee, under the auspices of the Religio, was not so well attended as was anticipated, though the lecture was well worthy the effort and price to go. Reverend Follansbee also occupied the pulpit at the Brick Church Sunday morning, delivering an interesting sermon on the text, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."—Romans 12:1.

Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, wife of the great soldier, died on the evening of December 14, at her home in Washington, District of Columbia.

Original Articles.

"SAM."

In a paper read before the Ministers' Union, at San Jose, California, June 16, 1892, Reverend I. H. Hazel said: "The name Sam, one of Lehi's sons, is a complete give away. The abbreviated name Sam was coined by the Yankees, and did not exist in the time claimed for Lehi."

I believe others have made this same criticism before.

The following is interesting in this connection, especially as it is Egyptian, in which Lehi was versed, the plates of Laban being written in that language:

"The oldest record of human history is the statement that ten kings reigned at Abydos in upper Egypt during three hundred fifty years before Mena, who founded the united kingdom of the whole land, and is counted as the first king of the first dynasty. Even of these earliest kings we now have four of the tombs and the objects which belonged to them, nearly five thousand years before Christ, and their names are given as Ka, Zeser, Narmer, and Sam. Of two of these kings monuments were found three years ago at Hierakonpolis, in upper Egypt; but it is only now that we can appreciate their historical position."—Harper's Monthly, October, 1901.

"Sam" then is Egyptian rather than Yankee. The article is an illustrated one and gives excellent views of jewelry of gold and precious stones. It is a valuable article to Book of Mormon students.

At work,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

RESURRECTION.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

This is the question put by Paul to those who opposed that doctrine in the days when this record was made, and observation leads us to believe that so far as concerns a general belief in that which the Bible clearly teaches; to wit, a literal resurrection from the dead, the conditions are little if any changed.

Men are as prone now as then to view things from their individual standpoints and measure the works of God by their human powers and limit them accordingly, forgetful of the fact that in so doing they place a limit, upon their own expectations and deprive themselves, theoretically at least, of the realizations of their individual hopes.

There are some lessons that it seems are difficult for man to learn, though he has had ages of experience; time enough, one would think, to teach a creature not less obtuse than man; and that is that whatsoever God does he does it his way, and not in the way human philosophy may devise, and often has devised.

Not only do the revelations of God teach man, but there exists within him an inborn testimony that has been with him from the morn of creation to the present time which tells him,

"It is not all of life to live,
Or the whole of death to die," but that he has an unsatisfied something within that yearns for other and better conditions than are to be found in this life.

When we stop for a moment and let reason assert itself and we begin to ask ourselves what it is that gives zest and real pleasure to the few fleeting joys we have in this life, we very soon conclude it is their reality; it is because we come in contact and touch with real and tangible things that that affords us real pleasure. Should not this teach us that this is God's way? And if it is his way in this world and this life, then why should it not be his way in the other and better life?

We read in the word that the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead was vigorously opposed in the days of Christ, and the sect called the Sadducees came to the Savior with some questions involving this, to their minds, impossible accomplishment. But did the Savior encourage their belief? No. On the other hand he in unmistakable terms gave them to understand there would be a resurrection from the dead.

What is meant by the term "resurrection"? Alexander Cruden, in his "Bible Concordance" in which he also defines terms, says: "It is a reviving of the body." And in this we believe Mr. Cruden is in perfect accord with the Bible, and that it also teaches a reviving of the body; and if we will permit, we are of the opinion reason may assist us in reaching the same conclusion both as to the will of God to do and his power to perform it.

"The divine law is the rule of duty to the entire man and not to the spirit alone, and that law is obeyed or disobeyed by the spirit and body in conjunction, the spirit in man designs, the body executes. Our senses are the open ports through which the law enters which we obey, or else the temptation enters which prompts us to disobey. The body acts as it is acted upon, and thus we yield our members as instruments to righteousness or unrighteousness as the case may be; hence it follows that to answer ends of justice in the judgment there must be a resurrection that the rewards or punishments of God may be justly meted out to the spirits and bodies reunited in the resurrection to receive that which in their unity they have earned."

Again, for further proof that death is necessary to a resurrection, if the definition of the term resurrection, "a reviving of the body," be correct, then it goes without argument a body could not be revived till it had died; and this fact alone is sufficient to destroy that old theological fabric that resurrection is only continued spiritual existence, for there is but one death mentioned in the Scriptures after the resurrection, and that is the second death, and beyond that there is no promise. Hence without death there could be no resurrection; and as only the body dies, resurrection must mean the reviving, a return to life of that body which has died. Reason and Scripture agree, and neither will admit of any other definition of the term.

Human philosophy has been, is now, and perhaps while time lasts will be, disposed to question God's method's and powers. In the days when Paul was trying to teach men to have faith in God and his power to fulfill his promises, when he referred to the resurrection he said, possibly recounting some past experience: "But some men will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" And the world-wise ones of to-day are putting the same questions, not in the same words, perhaps, but the sentiment is the same, and the scientist is asking the Bible believer how can there be a resurrection of that body which has passed through the change incident to death and decay, and has moldered away and returned to the elements of earth? Or of that body that has been buried at sea and become food for fishes and those fish that eat the body have in turn become food for other fish, and so the body has been diffused through other bodies? Or again, of that other body that has been cremated and burned and so effectually destroyed that only a handful of ashes remain? How will it be possible for God to resurrect or revive that body? Well, if the Bible believer of to-day should return the same answer as did Paul, he would be called a fanatic, unkind, or unchristian. Nevertheless, we believe he would be within the confines of both reason and Scripture. Paul said: "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be; but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body."

Now let us examine carefully that statement and discover, if we may, just what the apostle means. "That which thou sowest is not quickened [made alive], except it die." This is so plain that it needs no explanation; it must first die before it can be made alive again. But how alive? and what is it that lives? Let us see. "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be." Then it must be another, a new body. And why does the apostle here throw in the illustration? "But bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or some other grain." Evidently it is not to convey the idea as some would have it that there is any chance about it that wheat may bear some other kind of grain. We will give Paul credit for having better sense than that. But if by chance a man sowed wheat, wheat would produce wheat, or any other kind of grain would produce its kind; because "it hath pleased God to give to every seed his own body;" his own kind; because it is the unerring, unfailing law of God that kind produces kind. And as we see this grand truth so often and unmistakably demonstrated day after day and year after year in our earth-life, that the body or seed that falls into the earth is quickened, lives, and there comes forth a faithful reproduction of the body which died, we believe we see that which clearly defines and explains that which the apostle understood and taught in this particular instance.

Nor was the apostle the first or only one to set forth this truth. He was in perfect harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ who before this had said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." Thus we have indisputable scriptural evidence that death is necessary to a resurrection, and that God will give a body as it pleases him, and to every seed (each individual) his own body.

This should be sufficient, so far as scriptural evidence is necessary, but let us associate Scripture with our reason and continue the investigation of this interesting subject. We read in the account of the creation: "And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

Bible authority also informs us that as the body came from the dust so shall it return again to the element from whence it came. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." And this last condition is just what the objector affirms and then asks how can it be again reassembled in the form as it once was. And simply because in his poor, limited, human conceptions he can not reason it out to his individual satisfaction, he is inclined to doubt its possibility and thus limit the powers of God to bring them within the realm of his understanding. And yet that man sees that taking place all around him which he neither understands nor can explain. Why does he not deny these things as well?

Let us ask that man a question: Is it unreasonable to believe that the same power which once assembled that which once constituted that body that has returned to the earth, can again reassemble the same elements to reproduce another body in the similitude of the first one? Has a single particle of that body been lost, or do they still exist?

Colonel R. G. Ingersol, when asked by an Inter-Ocean reporter why he was an agnostic, said in his published answer in substance as follows: "I can conceive of taking the boulder and breaking it into fragments and those fragments into still smaller pieces, and those pieces reduced to dust, and that dust ground to an impalpable powder and scattered to the four winds of heaven so there remains no visible trace of the one-time boulder; but I can not conceive of an utter annihilation or destruction,—the boulder still exists.”

Matter coexistent with God is indestructable. Man can not destroy it. The tree growing in the forest is cut down and used for fuel, but not one atom of it is destroyed. By the burning it only passes through a chemical process which dissolves the elements of which it is formed and they return from whence they came. That which the roots brought from the earth remains in the ash-pan; that which leaves and branches gathered from the atmosphere has returned in vapor and smoke. Nothing has been lost, the tree still exists, only in a different form, just the same as Mr. Ingersol's boulder exists in the powder.

And this process of dissolution and reassembling has been going on in the great laboratory of God for ages, and nothing has been lost. The same elements of vegetable life are found in the same species to-day as they have always been and always will be. The oak is as much an oak to-day as it was, one, two, or six thousand years ago.

We do not wonder, then, that Jesus and Paul used these simple yet forceful illustrations to support the doctrine of the resurrection from the dead, or that the Savior said, “Not a hair of your head shall be lost.”

We will notice one more argument made by the objector, one that the writer once came in contact with, made by an old lady who said she did not want to be resurrected with her old body. She said: “I do not want it again after I have worn it out.” And as we looked on her bent and withered form we did not blame her for the expression. But here, as well as elsewhere, perhaps, humanity has failed to comprehend all the Bible teaches on this subject. Again we go to the account of creation and learn that when the Lord had finished his work, “He pronounced it good, and very good.” We believe that when the Lord said it was good, it was just as good as an all-wise, almighty God could make it; in fact, perfect.

Who and what marred its perfection? Who was responsible for death and disease, and all this long catalogue of consequent evils which man has been subject to for ages? The word tells us it was the Devil. God is not the author of death, but of life. It was the mission of Christ that “men might have life and have it the more abundantly.” And Paul tells us that it is the mission of Jesus to destroy all enemies, “and the last one to be destroyed is death.” Also that he will destroy “him that hath power over death, which is the devil.”

Science demonstrates the fact that to destroy or remove a cause is to destroy the effect or result. To remove death then, is to remove the cause. To remove the cause is to remove the Devil. To remove him is to remove his effects,—is to remove sin, to remove sickness, and waste, and decay, and deformity, and all the ills that flesh is heir to. And when this is done, what would be the result? Just what is declared by Job who says: “Then shall a man return to the days of his youth, and his flesh shall be fresher than that of a child.” So when we told the old lady of these things she, no doubt remembering the days of her youth and beauty, said she would be satisfied with that kind of a resurrection. But the word warrants a belief in even better conditions than this, for it tells us we shall be as our resurrected Savior with his glorious body. Then let us not try in our human weakness to spiritualize away or reason out the realities from that most precious of gospel principles, the resurrection from the dead.

“A VISIT TO THE MORMONS.”

From the Westminster Review for October, 1861, American Edition.

“‘A Visit to the Mormons.’ A Journey to the Great Salt Lake City; by Jules Remy and Julius Breechley, M. A.; with a sketch of the history, religion, and customs of the Mormons, and an introduction on the religious movement in the United States. By Jules Remy; two volumes, royal eight octavo, with ten steel engravings and a map. London, 1861.

“These sumptuous volumes, though containing the narrative of the travels, adventures, and investigation of two gentlemen—the one English, the other French—are due entirely to the pen of the latter.”

[After the above profuse headlines and other lines commendatory of that part alluding to Joseph Smith's character, this appears: “We abridge Mr. Remy's summing up of the character of this very remarkable impostor.” The abridged report follows.—R. E.]

“There is not a vice with which his enemies do not load his name; there is not a virtue with which his friends do not adorn his memory. But whatever may have been his failings, he was gentle, humane, and conciliatory; he readily pardoned wrongs against himself, either in his public or private capacity. He had a peculiar fondness for children; he constantly associated with them, mingled in their sports, and consoled them in their little troubles.

“Amid his family he overflowed with kindness and love, both as a father and a husband. In his daily relations with his followers the man constantly effaced the prophet, without thereby compromising his ascendancy.

“He was tried thirty-nine times by all kinds of courts on various charges—the greater part hostile to him; but he was never once convicted. This fact is an eloquent answer to the calumnies against him, and does as much honor to the administration of justice in the United States as to him,

"As to his capacities as administrator and organizer, there is no room; it stands out prominently throughout his whole life; and this it is, perhaps, combined with his power of influencing mankind, which is the most distinguished feature in the career of the founder of Mormonism.

"True, Smith was an impostor; but when the mask was raised he was still a man at heart, and it is not often we can say as much of all those who have misled mankind."

The above being published in 1861, the seventeenth year after the Seer's death, and in so prominent a journal, when Utah Mormonism had so darkened the horizon, and the Reorganization was in its infancy, makes it unique as well as valuable.

AN EXPERIENCE WITH TOBACCO.

Editors Herald: In the HERALD recently I noticed the tobacco question was up again. Whenever I see that subject mentioned, it always brings to my mind what I have suffered on account of using tobacco. In confessing my weakness along that line I do not expect much sympathy, especially from those who never used tobacco. I do not see that they can sympathize very much, for a man who never used tobacco does not know what effects it has on a man. They may to some extent, but not in the true sense.

My father used tobacco, and it was natural for me to use it. I liked it. Some have passed, probably, through what I have been made to suffer on account of using the weed. Let us be kind towards each other, and when we see those who drink tea and coffee, and smoke tobacco, let us pray for them; hold them up daily in our prayers, and not abuse them as I have heard some of our elders do. When I hear an elder talk about tobacco and abuse those who use it, I put it down that he never used the weed, or he would not abuse his brother. Let us have charity for one another. We are not all constituted alike. Every man who uses tobacco wishes that he had never tasted it.

And now for my experience with tobacco. It is a sad tale. I wish all young men who are starting on their journey in life, would read what I encountered on that road. Take warning, young man, from one who has been made to suffer on account of indulging in those things that God said was not good for man. I am a cripple. My right limb is three-fourths of an inch shorter than the other, on account of the pains that I had in my sciatic nerve. I am now left deformed, and shall remain so until the change will straighten me.

In the fall of 1875, Bro. Joseph R. Lambert and I were going from Boonesboro down to the coal mines, a distance of about three miles, to a schoolhouse where Bro. Lambert was going to speak. He noticed that my walk showed lameness and asked me what the matter was. I told him I had pains in my right hip. He noticed that I was smoking, which I did all the way down. He calmly said to me: "Brother, you throw that pipe away, and you will get rid of those pains." It was hard for me to part with the pipe, but Bro. Lambert's words had their effect on me, so I made up my mind the next day to quit. It was about the middle of the week. The following Sunday meeting was held in my house, and I at that time was free from pain, and I so stated it in that meeting.

The following spring, 1876, I moved to Lucas, Iowa, and went to work in the mines, and my partner smoked his pipe; and I liked it also. I still wanted to smoke, and I wondered if those pains would come back. Dare I venture on that road again? I wanted very much to smoke, and I did not know what to do, seeing almost every miner smoking. At last I made up my mind that those pains would not come back again, so I went to smoking, and it was not long until the pains came back. How I suffered! I was convinced that the tobacco was the cause of my suffering, but I lacked strength to give the pipe up. I smoked, and suffered for years.

In the spring of 1878 I moved to Stewartsville, still smoking and suffering. In the fall of 1878 I moved to Kansas, and stayed there until 1880, about Christmas, then I moved to Bevier, Missouri, still smoking. The year 1884 I was forced to quit work, and was idle about four months, getting no relief, still smoking. At last the doctor gave me some strong medicine. It made me look as though I would not live long. A message was sent to my brother, William, who is now on a mission in Wales, who lived in Stewartsville, to come at once if he wanted to see me alive. The first train brought him. I did not ask him to pray for me or administer to me. I had not the conscience at that time to ask God to bless me. However, I got some better inside of two weeks, and I went to Stewartsville for a change.

On my way to my brother's home I got into a coach which was filled with Knights of Pythias. I noticed that they were all happy. I thought the seats were all taken, so walked down the aisle, and at last found a vacant one, except that there was a coat in it, so I sat down, thinking to give up the seat when the men or man came. At last I noticed a man coming up the aisle dressed in K. P. uniform. He stopped in front of me, and I excused myself, and started to get up, but he told me to sit down. Half the seat was all he claimed, so we sat together and talked. After a while he asked me to hand him his "pistol" which was in his coat-pocket. I refused to comply until he told me that it was a bottle of whisky, then I reached behind me, as I sat on his coat, and got his "pistol," as he called it. He drank and then offered it to me; I declined, stating that I was taking medicine, and that I was feeling very sick. He turned half way round and looked me square in the eyes, then he commenced to tell what was the matter with me. I must confess that he told how I felt, and where my pains were.

We were nearing Cameron Junction. He was going to Kansas City, and I was going to Stewartsville. I made up my mind at once that he was the doctor who could bring me relief, and I presented myself to him, asking him to do something for me, as I believed at that time he could. I also stated that I had a family and had been idle then over three months. At last he asked me some questions and how long I had been taking medicine. I told him all, and he told me that no medicine would do me good; and as we were about to part he said: "There is but one thing that will reach your case——" (I had told him all about my habits), and then and there I was surprised, and how disappointed I was, when he told me that I must quit smoking and chewing, and also quit drinking tea and coffee, and if I drank beer and whisky I must quit them all, or I would be a dead man in a short time. As he was about to leave he said: "Young man, I will tell you that nine cases out of ten, such as fevers, aches, and pains come from that source. If men would only give up drinking beer, whisky, tea, and coffee, and using tobacco there would be doctors looking for work.

I went to my brother, William, but I never said one word about my experience on the road and what the doctor said. I knew William would only be too glad for me to tell, then he would have a text, and he would keep it up at every meeting. I was blind, sneaking away by myself to smoke, and brother was inviting the Saints to his house to hold prayer-meetings for me. Bro. J. T. Kinnaman, Bro. Temme Hinderks, Bro. Terry, and others had meetings for three nights. I got no relief, but grew worse. Finally the Lord spoke to me through William. The words I do not remember, but the substance of it was, that if I would obey his laws and keep his commandments, he would bless me. Next day or so I went home, worse than when I went to Stewartsville.

On my way home, I made up my mind to try once more to serve the Lord aright. I quit everything that was displeasing to God, and in three weeks I was free from all pain, and went to work.

About one year later, 1885, I went to Kansas City to live, and I thought every man I saw on the streets was smoking a cigar. I thought probably it was the pipe that made me sick, so I would try a mild cigar, and I went back again, like the sow to her mire, or the dog to his vomit, sick as ever. For eighteen months I was not able to do a boy's work. I weighed only one hundred twenty-eight pounds, and on Christmas, 1887, I quit smoking and chewing; quit tea and coffee, and all that was displeasing to God, and for five summers now I have not eaten meat, and I feel good. No pains, slightly disfigured, but I weigh one hundred sixty-five pounds.

I never again will touch the tobacco and pipe, tea or coffee, or strong drink. It is a curse on earth. O that the young would listen to my tale, hence I give this as my testimony that it is not good for man, as the Lord has told his people. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

There's No Place Like Home.

"Where are you going to-night?" said the minister's wife to him, as he picked up his hat and started for the door.

It was Monday and the minister had been away all the forenoon and afternoon—the first part of the day at the minister's meeting down-town and the last part of it answering letters in his study at the church.

"I have a meeting with the foreign missionary committee to-night," said the minister, as he put his hand on the door-knob.

His wife looked up rather appealingly; his two younger children were playing together on the floor.

"I hope," she said, "that you will be able to stay at home to-morrow night."

"I do not know," said the minister, in a hesitating tone, as he opened the door; "I think I am down for an address at the good citizen's league to-morrow night."

He opened the door and started to go out, when one of the children came running towards him crying, "Papa, won't you stay with us? We've got a new game. We call it 'Chasing the tiger.'"

"My son," said the minister, with a slight smile, as he stooped to kiss the child, "I have engaged in chasing the tiger myself, in the shape of dishonest politics. That is the reason why I must go out to-morrow night."

"But Wednesday night, John, you surely can be with us," said his wife, as the children came running back to her.

"I am afraid, Mary," said the minister, even more reluctantly than before, "that I shall be obliged to attend the temperance rally that night."

When Friday night came, after supper, the minister rather guiltily stole toward the hat-rack and took down his overcoat. As he was preparing to put it on, his wife came out of the sitting-room, with two of the children clinging to her.

"Now, John," she said, in a decided tone, which she sometimes used in emergencies, "surely you are not going out again; you have been out every night this week. You owe at least one night in the week to your family."

"I know that, Mary," the minister said with a great sigh, still continuing to get into his overcoat. "But I have a duty to-night that I must perform. You know our local association meets at the North church on the other side of the river. I have not been to one session yet and my brethren will think it very strange, seeing the association is held almost in the same town, if I am not present. Besides, I have been put down on the program for an address on 'How to reach the masses,' and I must go."

"It seems to me," said the minister's wife, speaking as nearly like a worldly-minded person as a minister's wife ever allows herself to speak, "that some one ought to write a paper on 'How to spend one night a week at home.'"

"That is true," said the minister, feebly, without attempting to argue about the matter, "but I do not see how I can possibly avoid going out to-night. I am a public man and I must do the duties of a public man."

The minister's wife turned and without saying a word went back into the other room. The two children followed her, looking back at their father with wondering eyes, but without any attempt to change his mind, and the minister, looking at them longingly, very slowly opened the door and went out again.

The next day was Saturday and after supper in the evening the minister looked rather anxiously at his wife and said, as if he were prepared for almost anything after saying it:

"Mary, I am very sorry, but I think I shall be obliged to go out a few minutes this evening. There is a very important meeting of the trustees to which they have asked me to come and counsel with them concerning the church finances, which are in a very bad way."

"Very well," she said, "if you must you must, I suppose, but next week I hope you will be able to save at least one or two evenings for our own family life."

"Oh, I hope so," said the minister, and yet he did not say it with very much courage; in fact, he was thinking of his calendar of engagements, which he had posted up for several weeks ahead, of all sorts of meetings in public life or in connection with his own church.

When Monday morning came the minister's wife confronted him before he started out for his usual Monday morning meeting with the ministers down-town.

"Now, John," she said, "let's plan this week for a quiet time at home. There is that new book that you bought a week ago and promised to read aloud to me, and the children need your care. It is lonesome here for me in the evening."

"Well, Mary," said the minister, as he sat down and, as if in desperation, took out his note-book, "let me look over my engagements for the week."

There was silence in the room for a minute and then the minister said: "To-night I have put down a meeting of the social settlement workers; I ought to go to that. I do not see how I can be absent and give any proper excuse. The social settlement work is very important; it is a monthly meeting and I failed to attend the last one owing to absence from the city."

"Well," said his wife, reluctantly, "I suppose you ought to go to that."

"Then, to-morrow night," said the minister, with great hesitation, "I see I have put down on the calendar a very important caucus meeting. I have always preached from the pulpit the duty of good citizens attending the primaries and there is a great fight just now over the nomination of the right man for county attorney. If I don't go down to that meeting I will be charged with inconsistency."

"Well," said his wife, without making any reply, "next night you can surely plan to be with us?"

The minister turned over a page in his memorandum-book and said, very slowly: "I ought to go and see that family of Robinson's over on Clay Street. You know they lost two of their children last week and I can never see the father in the home in the daytime, owing to his work. They are in great trouble and a call upon the whole family just now might be the means of bringing them into the church and saving them."

"I don't object to that," said the minister's wife, softly, as she thought of her own little children. "I think that is good business to call you out of an evening. But then the next night is prayer-meeting night; of course you can not stay at home from that."

"I might get one of the deacons to lead it," said the minister, reluctantly.

"No, John," said the wife cheerfully, "I will not ask you to do so. But, surely, Friday and Saturday you can spend at home?"

The minister was silent some time, looking down the page of dates on the memorandum-sheet, and finally he mustered up courage enough to look up and say to his wife: "I am down on the program of the convention on church federation for Friday night; my name is printed in the advanced program. Of course I have always preached on the necessity of the union of the churches and I have spent a great deal of time in preparing this address."

"But couldn't you send it to be read by some one?" asked the minister's wife, eagerly. "Surely you do not need to go yourself."

"No, I do not need to go myself," said the minister, "but still one doesn't like to have other people read his addresses to the public."

"You mean," said the minister's wife, almost angrily, "that you think more of appearing in public and reading an address like that than you do of staying with your own family?"

"No, no," said the minister, hurriedly, "I don't mean that."

"Well—well—but then there is Saturday left. Surely we can have that to ourselves?"

There was a longer pause than usual before the minister answered. He was looking at the last date of the week. Finally he said, very reluctantly: "I have put down that evening for a meeting with the Christian Endeavor Society for some very important business connected with the organization. It is just beginning to revive again. If I am absent from the meeting I believe it will be very bad for it. The young people depend upon me to lead them in the work which has just begun."

There was a long silence in the room before the minister's wife uttered a word, and then she said, somewhat sarcastically: "John, when you married me didn't you promise to be more faithful to me than to any one else in the world?"

"I am a public man," said the minister, feebly, "and must perform the duties of a public man."

"And yet," said the minister's wife, speaking with some spirit, "you said in your sermon last Sabbath that the home-life in America is being wiped out by this age of organization into which we were born. Don't you think it is your duty, as well as that of other people in the parish, to do what you can to preserve the old home? Do you think the public has any larger claim on your time and strength than your own home?"

"No, I do not think it has," replied the minister, in a low voice. "But what shall I do about my engagements? They all seem to be absolutely necessary."

"Then," said the minister's wife, rising, "let's get a new motto made and put it up on the wall, and let it read like this:

"There's no place like home any more."

The minister did not reply to this, but, instead of going down to the minister's meeting that morning, he went into his church-study and shut the door, and after he had sat down at his desk he thought the matter all over. Finally he lifted his head and said out loud: "She's right about it. The new motto would be very appropriate to hang on our walls:

"There's no place like home any more."

Then he took down his calendar for the next month and ran red ink through three nights in the week for every week of the month, crossing out certain engagements which he had made ahead; and after doing this he seemed very much relieved.

When he went home that evening he said to his wife the first thing after entering the house: "I have decided to order one of those mottoes that you spoke of this morning, only we will not put the last words on it. It would better read like this:

"There's no place like home when you stay in it."

I am going to dedicate two and, if possible, three nights of every week to home-life." And the minister's wife did not seem able to say much, but she kissed him as he picked up one of the children and then sat down on the floor to play, saying: "Here for a part of the time at least, is my first duty."—Charles H. Sheldon, in The Congregationalist.

Sunday-School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills County, Iowa.

Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to Editors HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa.

[A CAREFUL study of the following paper will reveal the workings of a practical and earnest district superintendent. So many wonder what they can do. Study this paper and see what can be done and what is being done to further the Sunday-school of the district.—ED.]

To the Sunday-school Workers of the Des Moines District; Greeting: Once more you have the privilege of assembling in the capacity of a Sunday-school convention, and such other services as may be connected with it, for the purpose of consultation, meditation, and action upon different features of importance pertaining to the Sunday-school work; to become more fully acquainted with each other's methods of carrying on the different divisions of the work; to become more closely united, and thus enabled to stand as one united body and put forth united efforts for the advancement of this grand department of God's work.

I desire to impress upon your minds indelibly, so to speak, the object of your assembling; to cause each of you to feel that you are a part of the body, and that the body must have your help and support or else it is not a united body and will not be able to make united efforts, and unless we do work unitedly and harmoniously as one body God can not work with us, and hence the work can not prosper and result in the good that God designs.

Enter into the work of this convention with these thoughts fresh in mind, attend each and every session and become a part of it, giving to your brothers and sisters the benefit of your experience and the light God has given you, and also glean all the pure gems from the thoughts that are there expressed, and use them to the glory of God and the good of his work when you return to your local duties.

Although all things in connection with our work are not as bright as we might wish to see, we have cause to be well pleased with the work accomplished thus far in the term. When we consider that this is but the second convention held since taking up our normal and institute work for the benefit of the officers and teachers (and by benefiting them we benefit the pupils also), we would be pessimistic indeed, did we not think our efforts along this line were resulting in good. It is true that but few replies were received at our last convention from those to whom normal work was sent, but as it was our first effort we were not at all discouraged or disappointed, but cheerfully made the second effort, and the response that has been made this time is surely gratifying. The answers received from many of our officers and teachers plainly show, to the writer at least, that they are working more unitedly, that more consultation is being had, and that they are making careful study of their work and seeking to find wherein they can improve it. This you may note for yourselves as the questions and answers are read and discussed. Take them up question by question, read all the different answers to each, note what each has to say; what each is doing to improve; what they consider the most important duties; what use the superintendents are making of their assistants; what the secretaries are doing, etc., and you will surely receive much help, encouragement, and strength, and be better prepared to resume your duties when you return home.

Although I have had to go over most of these reports hurriedly in order to get them to the convention, I have gained a better idea of the conditions of the schools thus reporting than I have ever had before. After convention and reunion are over I expect to make a careful study of them and then correspond with those reporting, taking up with them the questions on which I think they may need information or suggestions, and thus, if possible, make the normal work still more helpful to them. These questions, and other similar ones, can also be used with much profit in teachers' meetings, which every school should have where at all possible.

Taking all into consideration, I am highly pleased with the work that is being done and believe that the officers and teachers of the district are taking greater interest and striving harder to build up their schools, and that the work of the district is in better condition than ever before.

It has so happened that I, the one you chose to conduct the work of the district, have not been able, for several reasons, to visit the schools, or attend the conventions as much as you may think I should, or as much as I, myself, would like, but I trust my absence will not discourage you, cause you to lose interest, or make us divided in our efforts for good, and as a leader I believe it is as well, or better, to outline work and get others to work as to do the work myself, and if I succeed in getting others interested and active in the Sunday-school work I shall feel repaid. As superintendent I need your hearty support and prayers, and O I pray that I may receive this from you. I regret that I am not able to be with you. None know better than I why I am not. Do not blame me, but on the other hand remember that I am in a condition in which I need your prayers for strength; your loyal cooperation and help.

May the Father of all bless you in this assemblage, strengthen you, help you, and guide you continually, until you have obtained that crown laid up for the faithful ones, is my prayer.

Your colaborer,

Editors Herald: "I believe that in the adoption of the philosophy of the religion of Jesus Christ as a practical creed for the conduct of business lies the easiest and speediest solution of those industrial difficulties which are exciting the minds of men to-day."—Carroll D. Wright.

November 22 I visited the "Equality" Colony for the first time, on matters pertaining to school affairs, it being an adjoining district to the one in which I am teaching. One of the members told me that their bottom-land was, with the exception of some in Japan, the richest in the world.

This colony is purely socialistic, and the majority of the men with whom I talked were out and out infidels. At one time it numbered about three hundred fifty members; to-day about eighty. You see they are of many minds instead of "one," hence can not agree. I told them the kind of socialism I believed in was to be consummated in Zion. I argued with a leading infidel and told him about the Reorganization, and immediately one of the party took my hand and said: "I know of your people; they are in Independence, Missouri." I told him yes, and he said: "I have been there; they are fine people."

I told them socialism was like an apparently sound nut; the shell looks all right at first, but there is no meat—true Christianity—in it.

I praise God to-night that I have found the truth as I believe it, and pray that he will use me in the vineyard according to his will. I feel that we must be up and doing before it is night.

I was greatly disappointed this summer that I could not see Brn. Luff and Hilliard or even Bro. Ward. I stayed in Seattle seven weeks, but had to leave on the morning of the same day Bro. Ward returned. Such is fate, sometimes. But I had the pleasure of meeting Brn. Roberts, Powell, and Sheldon, and hearing them preach.

We are on the "Chuckanut cut-off" of the Great Northern Railway, which is a new road, and as soon as done (inside of thirty days) we will be on the railroad between Seattle and Vancouver. Come, Bro. Roberts or Powell, or any one, and preach. Our latch-string is out and we have shown our colors.

On Thanksgiving we invited a neighbor and his family with their boarder, a Congregational minister who preaches here right after Sunday-school, to spend the day with us. I handed him the "Holy Scriptures" during the visit, asking him to interpret a passage. As I handed him the book he asked me which version it was. I told him. Well, to sum up our "debate": He said the "King James'" was not a reliable version; that he did not know anything about Joseph Smith and did not want to; wouldn't read any of our books or hear an elder of the Latter Day Saints preach, because they could not teach or edify him; that baptism was an outward sign of inward grace, and that he could not understand the book of Revelation, although he has studied theology with leading professors of orthodoxy, and believed that as it was a vision there was nothing real in it, etc. Such a belief of the Bible is worse than that of an infidel.

On reading the HERALD which came to-day I fully agree that there is no real victory in a debate. If a person is of an inquiring mind he will accept the truth when it is presented to him.

I have organized a "union" Sunday-school here, and use the "International Lesson;" but the only Latter Day Saint meetings we have are at our family altar. Still I feel thankful to our heavenly Father for his loving goodness to me, and ask the prayers of Saints that I may remain faithful, believing that the religion of Jesus Christ is the panacea of human ills when practiced according to the precepts accepted in the latter-day work.

P. S.—There is a good chance here for elders to open up the work.

RIVERSIDE, Iowa, December 5.

Editors Herald: I went home about September 1 to secure a home for my family for the winter. I succeeded in getting a home and moved them into it, and on September 23, I returned to my mission, reaching Ida Grove the 25th, and commenced a series of meetings in the same schoolhouse where they locked us out with a log-chain, and were going to give me a new coat made of tar and feathers. Elder J. R. Sutton joined me about the first of October. They tried to freeze us out this time, but did not quite succeed. We were cared for by Mr. and Mrs. McShane, cousins of mine. They sustained a loss of several hundred dollars by doing so; and while they are not yet in the church they do not mourn their loss, which consists of both money and friends, believing that God's hand is in this work and that they will not be losers in the final settlement of all things.

We then went three or four miles northwest of this place and held meetings in a schoolhouse. There we were royally entertained by Mr. Slater and his wife. They are First-day Adventists, but not of the narrow caliber that characterizes so many professed Christians.

We left Ida County with, as we believe, the work permanently established.

We then went to Auburn. About October 20 Bro. Sutton was called home. I then went to Lakeview, a nice little town located on the banks of Wall Lake. Bro. Bush recently moved there. We went out on Monday afternoon and secured the Congregational church building, gave out our appointments to commence the next evening, and went home rejoicing, with high hopes. But the next morning before breakfast our hopes vanished when one of the trustees came and informed us we could not have the church, as they did not know what denomination we belonged to, and as we could not get a hall, Bro. Bush gave out meetings at his house, but without much hope. But in this we were agreeably surprised after the first few meetings, for in spite of the most disagreeable condition of the weather we got a fine hearing, with unusual interest. And after three weeks preaching we left a number near the kingdom. None of them knew anything of this latter-day work before. This is a new opening of much promise.

I am now occupying the Riverside M. E. church building, eleven miles north of Auburn, with good prospects before us. This is another new opening, and if this and Lakeview, about thirteen miles west of Auburn, can be made permanent openings, they can be looked after by the branch in Auburn. I am stopping with Bro. Bean, who is making a great sacrifice in trying to establish the work here. He is a teacher in the Auburn Branch.

Yours in the conflict,

W. H. KEPHART.

WALKERVILLE, Ontario, December 8.

Editors Herald: I do not wish to appear too frequently before your readers, yet I have thought that we ought to see a little more news from the Canadian field. In nearly every HERALD the letter department is filled with most interesting news from the elders of the American side. The HERALD contains much spiritual food, and I trust we on this side will ever try not only to obtain subscribers, but to write up interesting developments in the Lord's work in this part of the great vineyard of God. I am still trying, along with my many other duties, to advocate the interests of the publication department.

On Sunday, December 7, I arose early, and soon started on a three-mile walk, calling upon four families and talking upon the good things of the Lord. At thirty minutes past noon a few Saints gathered at the home of Bro. Richard Bennett, of Walkerville, where we held meeting on behalf of one that was to be baptized. We felt it good to be a Saint of latter days. After the service we went to the Detroit River and the writer baptized Lorne Jones, the oldest son of Bro. and Sr. F. Jones, of Walkerville. It was a peaceful occasion. Afterwards I took a two-mile walk, and made ready the table of the Lord at Bro. and Sr. F. Jones'. At half past two quite a pleasant gathering was had, with prayer and testimony and the sacrament of the Lord. It was a spiritual time. The brother baptized was confirmed by the writer and L. Annott, of Walkerville, late of Glencoe, Ontario. After this session we opened Sunday-school; and as there is no organization I was asked to take charge. After teaching the children, taught the grown-up folks. We had thirty-one in attendance, thirty cents collection, and good interest. But we need a larger place to hold meetings.

At half past seven met again for preaching, when I talked from Ephesians 4:4. Before closing we were called upon to administer to the sick, who I find this morning is a little better.

This ended the work of that day; and while resting I felt that something had been done for the upbuilding of the cause.

VERDELLA, Missouri, December 5.

Dear Saints: The Kansas City Journal of Saturday, November 29, brought us the first sad intelligence of the shocking accident that ended the earthly career of Bro. and Sr. Souders, our Latter Day Saint neighbors fifteen or sixteen miles distant; yet bound together by that blessed "tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." What should we do! Funeral probably now over. Knowing by experience that even the knowledge of the presence of Saints is untold comfort to one in sorrow, though multitudes of other dear friends throng about us, Doctor Miller and I arose Sunday morning and started on our sad journey to the bereft ones, yet wondering why we should go such a distance, not having been notified. But "the still small voice" constantly urged, "It is as you would wish to be done by."

Going out of our way to view the "fatal spot," we fortunately came upon the funeral, unexpectedly to us. And how glad we were, as no other Saints had yet been to comfort them in their sorrow. Upon greeting us they exclaimed, "O what a comfort you are!"

They had sent for Bro. O. P. Sutherland, of Webb City, but through misunderstanding of appointed time of funeral, he, in company with Bro. and Sr. J. T. Davis, came on wrong train, too late to take charge of funeral, but witnessed the burial unknown to the family until it was over. It was a great relief to learn the disappointment was not through lack of interest or sympathy for the bereaved. Bro. and Sr. Rogers, of Irwin, were also found to be present at the cemetery.

Bro. and Sr. Souders were buried side by side in one grave, after running the race of life together, not even parted in death, a privilege not many realize. Peace to their departed spirits, and peace to the mourning ones. They had almost served their years of three-score-and-ten, and in doing good. Aside from deeds of kindness and charity, they spared no pains in trying to spread the glad gospel news that had so illuminated their lives. Tracts and "Voice of Warning" were bought by the hundred and distributed; halls rented, and schoolhouses procured for the ministry, Brn. I. N. White and the Davises and many others occupying. But it is evident, here as elsewhere, that darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the minds of the people. Yet good seed was sown and we have heard friends say it was the grandest thing they ever heard.

Sr. Zada had but recently been solicited, and obtained, by correspondence, as a home class member of the Religio. So dear brother and sister Religians, remember her and her brothers in your petitions around the throne of grace.

Your sister,

MRS. E. F. MILLER.

RHODES, Iowa, December 7.

Dear Herald Readers: The greater part of October I spent at my home seeking to accomplish three objects: To prepare material for the proposed debate with D. H. Bays, and consequently better prepare myself for the general opposition that seems to be growing, one of which features has crystalized into a general organization within the ranks of that people calling themselves the Disciples of Christ, who have hitherto opposed the idea of the necessity of a general organization within their ranks for the purpose of building up of the kingdom of God, but have now consented to the necessity of a general organization to destroy "Mormonism." At the head of the new organization is a "thoroughly competent board," a visible head. Whether this will be the basis of concluding that to destroy "Mormonism" the invisible head has failed them, and a visible head composed of a "thoroughly competent board" is now substituted, I am not qualified to state; but since these people have always contended against two heads, one visible and one invisible, it somehow looks that they had concluded that the invisible head which they have hitherto claimed was their only head had proven himself incompetent to meet this particular issue that has, according to the statement of the General Secretary of the Anti-Mormon Association, been in progress since the organization of the work of the Saints, begun in 1830.

The other objects of my sojourn at home were to seek relief from a nervous condition that because of too close application to ministerial work had become somewhat distressing, and to assist family to prepare for the winter.

While at home I occupied every opportunity to cheer the Saints, encourage the Sunday-school and Religio interests, and to minister the word. Assisted to give comfort to the bereaved ones at the decease of Father John Dow, of Six-mile Grove, which occurred on December 7.

After ministering to the Saints at Woodbine, in the forenoon of the 9th ultimo, as a substitute for Bro. James Donaldson, I took train for Boone, where I occupied at the church building of the German Reformers in the evening and continued meetings till Tuesday the 11th.

The 12th found me on my way to Dallas Center, this time to water the seed previously sown. On my way I called at Sr. Nellie Martin's, finding her daughter, Ruth, very sick, to whom I, assisted by Bro. C. L. Carstensen, administered, and ere I left the fever was gone, and she rejoiced in the relief given.

When I arrived at Dallas Center I found Sr. Christy quite sick, but by continuing to seek the Lord she was relieved and continued to grow better.

On Sunday morning while assisting with the housework Bro. Christy met with a painful accident when he scalded his right hand very badly with burning grease which exploded. To God we looked for relief and it was largely granted; but this accident associated with Sr. Christy's illness prevented them viewing the baptism of Bro. Samuel Reiste, who has for months been a close and prayerful student of God's word and work. So on Sunday afternoon, the 16th, a lonely scene on the banks of the river was witnessed when Bro. Reiste was born of the water. After baptism we returned to the home of Bro. Christy, where confirmation, sacrament, and social service was held, and the power of God was present, giving joy and comfort to all present. From a late letter from Bro. Reiste I excerpt the following item of interest: "I am still dwelling on the mount of transfiguration, as it seems to me. I am far happier than ever I expected to be in this life." While opposition to the work done at Dallas Center made Reverend Gurley miserable, yet an honest investigation and acceptance of the work has made Bro. Reiste so happy. How much better it would have been if Reverend Gurley had sought the happiness the gospel promises to all.

Returned to Boone the 18th, and began meetings in the church building of the German Reformers that evening, continuing till the 4th instant, which resulted in the encouragement of the Saints and creating a deep interest in the souls of a few—less than eight. Organized a Religio local on the 1st, which as a home class has wrought much good.

Becoming wearied with delays caused by trying to arrange for the proposed discussion with D. H. Bays, by correspondence, I concluded I would go to see him personally, and notified him of my coming by letter, which letter he received, so said his wife. I came to Rhodes the 5th, and Bro. W. C. Nirk and I went down on the morning train to Collins, and who should we see making for the train as we got off but Mr. Bays, with grip in hand. I accosted him, saying I had come to see him. He replied that he had a phone call to come to Des Moines, and on he hastened. I called to see his wife, who informed me that he was not sure when he would return, but that he had left word should I come to say to me that he would notify me when he returned, and I could come again. We thought that we had been treated coolly, but we afterwards learned that he had resigned his charge at Collins, and we concluded as the phone message came from De Soto, a little town southwest of Des Moines, that he had a call to preach a trial sermon, and it was so urgent that all else must be made to wait. So we wait.

However, we went to see the trustees and called at Mr. William Thompson's to learn who were the trustees, at the suggestion of Mrs. Bays, and found upon inquiry that he would not give his consent to have the church used for debate, and had not been consulted about its use, neither had he been consulted in regard to me occupying it to preach in, although Bays had twice published in the Baxter New Era that I could have the use of his pulpit at Collins to preach in upon the subject of the Book of Mormon and the items of faith peculiar to "Mormonism" to my heart's content. We further found that nothing had been said to the Christian Church about indorsements, so far as known to this trustee, and he thought he would have known had anything been said about it. I now expect to occupy near here till the arrangements for discussion are completed, or it is decided best to have none. Everything is complete for discussion except time and place and number of sessions, and I learned yesterday to my satisfaction that no special effort had been made by Bays or his friends to secure a place for the discussion, which from his letters I inferred he had done. He got quite irritated because I referred to the "anti-Mormon" movement, and called the reference made to it in SAINTS' HERALD "slush," but he did not seem to recognize that from other sources, from a "Christian" source, had the same information come.

Truly no weapon formed against God's work or his servants, if they keep humble and are faithful, will succeed.

I will be with the Saints here to-day, enjoying the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Thomas Hughes, and on Tuesday journey to Mingo, where I will seek an opportunity to tell of this marvelous work and a wonder. This is a new opening, but through the influence and efforts of Bro. W. C. Earheart and family the opening is made.

By the Christian Evangelist of November 13 I note that the "National anti-Mormon League" has selected the Helper, a "ten cent a year monthly" published by R. B. Neal, of Grayson, Kentucky, as their "official organ," and the paper says: "Those who want to be posted on the anti-Mormon crusade should send in their dimes to the Helper." So Kentucky is to be the ganglion of information, and the means through which the spirit of "anti" shall be shown. Well, Kentucky has been good fighting ground, and this is not the first disgraceful conflict that waged there.

This opposition is spreading the good seed as the destructive wind scatters the seed from the ripened stock, and God will show forth how he can make the wrath of man to praise him.

With a desire to be humble, and patient, and with bright hope in the receipt of the promised crown to those who endure unto the end, I am,

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

KEOKUK, Iowa, December 8.

Dear Herald: Perhaps I have not discharged my whole duty, by reason of neglecting to contribute to your letter department more frequently. The fact is, occupying so much space in urging the interest of Graceland College upon the attention of the Saints, I hesitated to write either letters or articles for your valuable pages, and have been somewhat disappointed, as I had expected the local Saints to have written you of the work done in their vicinity, and still remain of the opinion that they should do so, for we bashful missionaries have a dislike to the blowing of our own horn of praise, and usually it is only the good news that is reported. I will skip the events of more than a year and a half, and although there came to my observation many things that produced profound thought, and deep consideration, and extensive research and investigation, I will forego the pleasure of giving your readers the result of my conclusion upon several topics, lest such publication might prove the occasion of disturbing the peacefulness of some, for there is a degree of truthfulness in, "Where ignorance is bless, 'tis folly to be wise." I confess that to me ignorance of some things that have transpired would be a real pleasure.

October 1 I left home for active mission work; after prolonged and tiresome labor in behalf of the college, HERALD Office, reunions, and other work that falls to the lot of a willing worker in the cause of humanity as outlined in the gospel.

Spent two nights and one day with Bro. A. Giesch, 829 North Central Avenue, Burlington, they passing under the rod of sore affliction, as the only son fell into a vat of scalding water at the basket factory; and it is nothing less than a miracle that he survives through all the suffering.

Attending conference at Rock Creek, Illinois, was a wet, muddy experience; nevertheless I continued for three weeks, with a congregation from two to a hundred, and from statement of the local Saints there was a revival of interest both of members and outsiders. From my viewpoint, an active missionary could fully occupy all his time to a good advantage in Hancock County. From a human view, the greatest misfortune that ever befell the church was when the Saints lost their property rights in Hancock County.

My next place of operation was Montrose, a little Iowa town immediately across the Mississippi River from the old headquarters of the church, Nauvoo.

For three weeks I held the fort, and fired the living flame of truth, the restored gospel, and not without some evidence of success. Two desired baptism, but were hindered. Some heard the truth with close attention, while Saints confessed a helpfulness in a better understanding of the gospel restored. The average attendance was about forty-six.

Spent a day at Fort Madison, to officiate, that two might become one—such is the prevailing custom among all peoples.

A severe cold that threatened pneumonia enforced a lay-up for repairs. I still suffer.

It was during last month that there came to me one of the saddest days of all my life—when it dawned upon me that I was practically alone and homeless in the world. I have not language to express the feeling, but think that I can now more keenly appreciate the words of the Master: "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." How strangely are we made witnesses to the truthfulness of the statements of the Christ! And although the passing of the event may be a bitter experience, the aftermath may prove to be a sweet assurance and a bulwark of defense.

Spent some days at Argyle assisting Bro. James McKiernan. To me the effort was not satisfactory. Stormy weather, and the farmers quite busy, might have been the responsible factors in our disappointment; at least we shall so credit until another opportunity shall fully demonstrate it.

Went to Farmington; conditions not favorable; came here, only to find sickness and a cold wave occupying the attention of the people.

Herewith I return thanks for kindness bestowed upon me by the Saints wherever I have ministered the word of the gospel.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 7.

Editors Herald: I take deep interest in the HERALD and from it I often obtain food for thought, and, I trust, growth in gospel lines. I have had my bitter-sweet experience in life, and many have been the hours of sorrow in which I have had to unlearn, in order to learn that God's ways are not my ways, and his thoughts not my thoughts.

The word sacrifice speaks forth the foundation of real happiness, not to the one who is called upon to lay the foundation; but the results bring the chance of building a godly character. The gospel foundation as laid by Christ makes it binding on the one who follows him in obedience to his law and commandments, thus building upon the foundation he laid. These foundation-stones are the pioneer work of sacrifice, suffering, denial, hardship, as chosen vessels of God, carrying the true principles of truth and righteousness, observing all those things that he by sacrifice commanded men thus sent to teach all nations. Not only to teach, but by the power of his Spirit to live for him only who alone can make Zion prosper. The sacrifice of to-day will bring the joy of the morrow. We measure homelife by its surroundings and the companionship of wife and children; but its foundation of happiness was laid by loving, unselfish sacrifice. Zion will be built by the sacrifice of fathers, mothers, sons, and daughters; not in the sense of getting gain, or building a home in Zion, but by pureness of heart and godly desires; laying at any cost the foundation walls that others may enter into our labor of love toward God and mankind. It cost the Son of Man his life to lay the sure foundation of our hope in the resurrection; and if by his Spirit men have had revelations of his will as to the path marked out for them to follow, they still must strive to enter into the relationship of obedience, that all may be fulfilled. This will cost all that a man may have; all that he may hold dear. It can have no other place than that of crucifixion; dead to the world, but alive to the establishment of righteousness and Zion still going on to the perfecting of Saints, making the house clean, not laying the foundation of dead works again, but establishing our hearts by holy lives, overcoming, standing or falling to our own Master.

Alone in Washington, but strong in desire to make just restitution to all men as well as to see Zion restored and Christ reign on earth, my wife and I hold meetings and are not willingly neglecting our obligations.

A. M. MERRILL.

GOOD HOPE P. O.

OKLAUNION, Texas, December 1.

Editors Herald: We came here about three years ago. We found a small branch of Saints, the larger number of them being young. Seeing the good a Sunday-school would do, we organized one, and we have spent many profitable sessions in the same. At present we feel the loss of our worthy superintendent, E. Hawley, he with his family having moved to Holden, Missouri. Also the teacher of our branch and his family have moved from us. His help and counsel we also miss. The little branch is still striving, and the good Master is still blessing us, for we have "all the way along," and especially of late, enjoyed some very spiritual prayer-meetings. The young Saints take an active part, manifesting great interest in the work.

I have presided over the branch the greater part of the time since here. We have preaching every Sabbath. It is hard for so small a number "and so scattered" to keep up the work, and especially so with the financial pressure we are under caused by the almost entire failure of our last two crops from drought. But we look forward with hope again, as our crops at present look fine for next year. Of course we can not tell what the harvest will be. But though the temporal harvest may fail, we hope to so live and sow deeds of kindness in this life that we may reap a golden harvest in the next life. My hope is that I may be able to do something to help advance this latter-day work.

G. W. WILCOX.

NINA, Ohio, December 9.

Editors Herald: We are now on the shores of Lake Erie. November 22 we made a call at Cleveland, and occupied very pleasantly on Sunday at the Saints' hall both morning and evening. A fine spirit prevailed, and one could feel that the good Saints of the city were battling along right lines for the progress of the truth. Tuesday evening we met in cottage service at the residence of our esteemed Bro. and Sr. George, 69 Auburndale Avenue. We again addressed a nice company and felt the spirit of hope and cheer.

Sunday, November 30, found us at Kirtland, where we endeavored to present some features of the latter-day work that would be encouraging to the the people who attended. We addressed a goodly audience in the "grand old temple," morning and evening. Patriarch Lake's beaming face, with that of his companion, was seen illuminating the audience, and we were glad to grasp his hand.

We must not omit to state that on November 28 a surprised surprise was perpetrated on Sr. George, Cleveland, it being the forty-third anniversary of her natal date. Just forty people were present and the time passed pleasantly and all too hurriedly. Short talks by the writer, O. B. Thomas, J. B. Watson, Eben Miller, Elder Schmidt, and others, with social chat, vocal and instrumental music, coupled with light refreshments, made the moments flit by in sylph-like form. Sr. George is to be congratulated. The respect and honor of a fine body of Saints and friends were bestowed upon her, and the company could not refrain from specifying among the good deeds of her life, the laudable one of furnishing homes for God's latter-day ministry.

The Saints in Cleveland have a building fund, and I am informed that a bazaar conducted by them a few weeks since netted them fifty dollars and augmented the fund to hundreds. Good. Cleveland, a city of four hundred and sixty five-thousand people, and the great latter-day work opened in one mission only, and no church building. May success crown their efforts.

Tuesday, December 2, found me at Oakharbor where, the same evening and the one following, we addressed a cottage service at the pleasant and hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. J. W. Moxon. Those who attended said they were pleased.

Thursday, December 4, we were conveyed to Nina, seven miles northeast of Oakharbor, where we began the same evening a series of discourses. Have continued nightly, and twice Sundays up to date. Fine interest and large audiences are attending the services. Last evening, at the close of meeting, a gentleman stepped into the hall, and handed me the following "phone" message:

"LACARNE, Ohio, December 8.

"Elder Scott: The United Brethren people desire a public debate with your people on subjects considered essential and nonessential. Debate to take place not earlier than January 1, 1903. Details satisfactory to both parties to be arranged later. Please answer.

REVEREND MISSIMORE."

Whew! I hastily jotted the following: "Challenge accepted, and we await with pleasure preliminary arrangements, propositions, place, and rules governing."

All seem to think it will be a certainty. I leave it in Bro. U. W. Greene's hands to consummate.

Satan is aroused, his kingdom shaken, his subjects moved.

The Saints have decided, with assistance of friends, to give the Sunday-school a Christmas-tree and entertainment at this place. Committees were chosen yesterday for the various classes of work, and are moving along.

This region bids fair for the establishment of the gospel work permanently if only the wisdom of God can be invoked. I suppose the debate will have various effects here; but while truth may occasionally lose a battle it can never lose a war.

Still battling, we are hopefully yours,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

Florida, Santa Rosa County, November 27.

Editors Herald: The following event is fresh in the minds of many of the Saints and others who were eye witnesses to the circumstances:

In August, 1876, a destructive and malignant disease visited Powell's Point and immediate vicinity, and in the short space of three weeks twenty-seven deaths were the result, only two of the Saints being victims, and one of them had denied the faith after taking sick.

Certain circumstances preceding the visitation of sickness are well worth relating. Elders L. F. West and E. Powell had been conducting meetings at this place and vicinity for some time, and some had begun to rage and others to imagine vain things and persecute the Saints, some throwing rotten eggs, others raising disturbance by offering the preacher a drink from a bottle of whisky during services, while the elder was in the stand, etc. On a certain night while Elder L. F. West was preaching, and eggs were being used very freely, he sat down and remained quiet a few moments, then rising up spoke under the influence of the Spirit to them: "If you do not cease your meanness you will die in your sins and without mercy." This occurred in the early part of 1876, and in July Bro. E. Powell was at Swift, Alabama, holding a series of meetings with Bro. John Givens; and one night, while the meetings were yet going on and three days appointments ahead, Bro. Powell had a dream. "I dreamed," says Elder Powell, "that Bro. Ben Powell and I were in my fish-boat at Bay Point, near the lumber beds, when I heard a roaring noise, as of a severe storm, in the direction of Powell's Point. Turning my eyes in that direction, the distance being about one mile to Powell's Point, in a northeasterly direction, I saw tree-tops, house-tops, and debris generally moved by a severe storm, all being carried through the air and seeming to rise from Powell's Point, mingled with volumes of dense black smoke, until all the Point and vicinity became unwrapped and hidden from view, when the cries of men and women came from the dense mass of moving clouds of smoke and debris. At this time there was a line drawn upon the surface of the bay from north to south, and on the east side of this line, next to Powell's Point, the water was lashed into foam, the waves surging and leaping in the direction of Powell's Point, breaking upon the shore with tremendous force, making a noise like thunder, while the side nearest Bay Point, where we were in the boat, remained tranquil and calm.

"My brother Ben said to me: 'Let us get under the lumber beds.' I said, 'all right, but not a hair of your head shall be hurt.' We drew our boat under the edge of the lumber beds, and watched the scene until the cloud had vanished and the noise had ceased. Looking toward Powell's Point, where my home was, I saw the Point swept clean and devastated. I awoke, but being very sleepy, I again fell asleep, when my wife seemed to appear to me, and we at once began talking of the storm and its results, when she said: 'I think nearly all are destroyed, but our house is safe.' She left me, and a personage, whom I seemed to realize was a messenger from God, appeared to me and said: 'Go home immediately and prepare yourself and family for the impending destruction, and call the people together, and I will put it in their hearts to meet you that they may hear their impending doom.'

"I arose early next morning and told Bro. Givens that I must go home, and prepare my family and warn my neighbors against a destructive storm that God had made known to me he was going to send on them, for up to this time my impression was that it was to be a terrible wind-storm.

"Bro. Manning was present, and said: 'Take my horse and buggy and carry Bro. Powell as far as you can in one day,' and he seemed impressed by the Spirit as he spoke. Bro. Givins took me in the buggy and brought me nearly forty miles, near what is now Beulah, Florida, and we stayed all night at the home of Bro. Silcox, where a few Saints and friends were hastily gathered, and we held a preaching service. I arrived at my home on the next evening, coming by Pensacola, and on the next morning, Saturday, I sent out an invitation to all the people in the neighborhood to come into church on Sunday, as I had an important message for them. Nearly every one turned out, and I delivered the message as given to me. I told them that I was going to prepare for my family, and for them to look out for themselves, for God was going to send trouble upon this neighborhood for the rejection of the gospel.

"A man in the congregation, a neighbor, by the name of Bryant, said to some who were present, that if I ever repeated such language in his presence again he would "mash" my mouth.

"On the following morning I, with two of my neighbors, began digging a cellar to my house, ten feet square and eight feet deep, lining it with deals three by nine, so as to have a secure retreat against the stone, as I supposed, when on the fifth day I was given to know by the Spirit that the trouble was not coming that way, and I stopped the work.

"The cellar was not completed, but the excavation remains to-day. There was yet one day of this week to elapse before Sunday's appointment, which was given out the Sunday before. Strange to say the neighborhood turned out en masse again when Sunday arrived, and I repeated the message again to them, adding: 'My friends, farewell. Some of you behold my face now for the last time in this life, for God has made known unto me that you will be visited with a severe scourge, and that many of you will die without mercy, without hope, and without help, because you have rejected the gospel.' I dismissed, bidding them farewell. Being warm and somewhat tired, I repaired to my home near by, and lying down to rest, fell asleep.

"Soon after falling asleep (it was night now, and the moon was shining) my wife heard the front gate open, and looking out saw Mrs. Burner coming in with an axe in her hand. My wife, knowing that this woman had threatened to kill me, met her at the door-steps and stopped her from entering, screaming to me to arise from my couch on which I had fallen asleep on the gallery. This woman raved and cursed me, and breathed out threatenings against me.

"On the following morning, Monday, her oldest daughter of eighteen summers was taken with a severe fever, which was pronounced by visiting physicians to be a strange, unknown fever, and in a few days her son, aged about twenty years, took the same malady, and both were early victims of the disease, Mrs. B. being spared to live a life of sorrow and destitution, she having been to the poorhouse since then, and is still living in abject poverty. The man Bryant, who threatened to 'mash' my mouth, had a family of six children and a nice wife. The malady visiting them, one after another was taken off, my wife and I doing dressing and preparing of the bodies for burial (burying seventeen of the victims in the hours of night almost by myself, I filling the graves) until his entire family was gone. When the youngest child died, he took it in his arms and ran out into the woods, acting like a mad man.

"There was another prominent figure in the persecutions, a man by the name of Alexander Howell, who had been the chief agitator and ringleader in the throwing of eggs and other disturbances.

"This man and his family were visited with the scourge, and all died except one child. When all had died but himself and two children, he and his baby child were carried to a neighbor's house near by to be waited upon. The neighbors were seized with the sickness, and he had to be carried back to his house. On the way back to his house, as I was helping to carry him, holding his head in my hands, he looked up to me pleadingly, and said: 'Uncle Ned, pray for me.' I said to him: 'It is too late now.' He said: 'My Lord, have mercy upon me.' I returned to the house where the child was, and found it dead. I then returned to the house where we had left him a few moments before, and I found him dead on the floor where he had jumped off the bed on his hands and knees in the agony of death. This reminded me of the prophetic words: 'You shall die without mercy, without help, and alone.' The only surviving child of this family was a son who was away from home. He is now a grown man.

"Bro. Wm. Hall doubted the message and said he believed I lied. When I heard of it I remarked, that I would not give a snap of my finger for his life. In three days he was a corpse. A Mrs. Hawkins made the remark that she was glad that the sickness had come to kill out the Mormons. Though living across Ward's Basin, about two miles away, she also fell a victim and was buried by a Latter Day Saint, her immediate family and friends having deserted her from fear. The authorities stationed a sentinel above and below the infected locality, marking the limits by a yellow flag, and sent two men nurses from Milton. These nurses stayed one day and night and left us. A Sr. West had been assisting me and my family to wait on the sick, but her husband had caused her quit to and come home, across the bay, for fear of her taking the disease. When the nurses left us I went across to see if I could get Sr. West to return, but was met by the resolute objections of Bro. Jack West, her husband. For a few moments I felt disappointed, but the Spirit of God rested upon me as I was standing in the boat, and I said to her: 'I will promise you in the name of the Lord, before God and man, that if you will go with me and assist in waiting on the sick, that not one hair of your head shall be hurt.' She said: 'With this promise I will go.' She went and stayed throughout the sickness, rendering all the aid she could, and came out unharmed, and is living to-day.

"A Mr. Helms came to me and asked me to call the people together and pray God to stop the plague. I told him I could not, and that I was willing for God's will to be done, even though I should go down in the conflict. He then asked me what he must do. I told him to flee and make his escape; but I said to him: 'You will not do so without the loss of one.' He fled out two miles and wife and I carried their bedding to them; but one grown son, a young man, died.

"My brother, Elijah Powell, who heard me advise Mr. Helms to leave, asked, 'What shall I do?' I told him to remain where he was, and if he would be obedient to the gospel he would be spared, and his family; but if he did not remain obedient and humble that the judgments of God would overtake him. Since then he has been disobedient, and has suffered the loss of one eye, and three children, one a grown man, and two sons-in-law, all after being spared through the plague.

"The severity of the disease may be imagined when I state that a quilt which had been on the bed where a man had died, was spread on a fence at the back of the house, and falling off among the vines of a potato-patch, so infected the potato-vines that for several feet from the quilt the vines died as if bitten by frost. Also, large oaks that were standing in the yard, also other trees, died as if smitten by lightning.

"Bro. James Faulk, now living in Mississippi, who was living ten miles away, came to visit us every other night, having to run the blockade, so to speak, and was a great comfort to us. He and I would devote a short time to secret prayer each visit, and found much consolation in going to God in time of such dire trouble."

Bro. L. F. West will recognize each incident mentioned in this narrative, as well as many other Saints and non-members. The missionaries who have been South are familiar with much that has been related by hearing it discussed around the fireside while on their mission here.

Hoping this historical sketch will be of some benefit in strengthening the Saints and possibly converting some who may read, it is respectfully submitted, the narrative being recited by Elder Powell himself.

Editors Herald: It is years since I penned a few lines for our valuable paper. I think the HERALD ahead of any paper for defending the true position of the church—and especially the way in which it can show up the false statements in the Deseret News. If the statement of Brigham Young is worth anything, the prophet's wife and children were not the only ones that did not know anything about polygamy until it was preached by Orson Pratt.

In a discourse delivered by Brigham Young in Salt Lake City, May 8, 1853, in part he said: "Bro. Orson Pratt was in Washington when he wrote last March; he is probably now in England. He has published a paper called the Seer, seven numbers of which have appeared before the public. He also hired a hall in that city when he first arrived there in December last. Many came to hear him at first, but they kept dropping off, until there were so few that he gave it up, but he continues publishing. There is influence enough there among the priests and the members of Congress to keep the people away from hearing Orson Pratt. They are all well persuaded that if they contend with him he will break up their churches. Ignorant as they are in other matters, they know enough to guard against that. The paper has a good effect. He says, 'A great many who have apostatized say, had they seen the revelation on celestial marriage years ago, they would never have left the church. They believed "Mormonism," but supposed there was no such revelation in existence.'"—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 109.

How strange it was for a man like Brigham Young to follow the plans of the "gentiles," as he calls them. Orson Pratt would break up their churches, if they would contend with him.

Only a few years from that time he was telling the people how Orson Pratt would break up their churches, he is telling the people to "beware of the sons of the prophet, Joseph Smith, or they will break up this church, or lead the people to destruction." He was afraid of two young men, without the experience or learning of the cunning priests of the nation. Yes, Brigham and all the leaders of the Utah church were afraid of these two young men. In referring to this man Brigham Young, H. C. Kimball, in discourse delivered at Salt Lake City, October 7, 1852, said:

"We want you to go where you are sent, for you can not get your endowments until you have proved yourselves—that is what we intend; it is the mind of Bro. Brigham, the president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the prophet of God, who holds the keys of life and salvation pertaining to you, and me, and all the world—not a soul is excepted, neither man, woman, nor child; they all belong to him; for he is the prophet, he is our priest, our governor, even the governor of the state of Deseret."—Journal of Discourses, vol 1, p. 296.

How grand it is to read the letters in the HERALD from these men of God who are working and suffering much to bring souls to Christ. Yet there are others who have been called to the same holy calling, whose names we do not see in the HERALD.

Editors Herald: Will you please state to the readers of the HERALD that the Saints are contemplating building a church at this place and we ask the Saints and friends to help us. Just a little from a great many will help a great deal. I will receipt for every dollar received. I am one of five committeemen and I will make my report January 3, 1903.

GEORGE M. RHONEMUS.

MINGO, Iowa, December 11.

Editors Herald: Yesterday W. C. Earhart and I went to Collins to see D. H. Bays, and then completed arrangements for the long-anticipated discussion between him and me upon the following propositions: 1. Is the Book of Mormon a gross fraud? 2. Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God? 3. Is the Church of Christ (Disciples of Christ) identical in doctrine, organization, and ordinances with the church of God as it was left completed by the apostles of Christ? 4. Is the church incorporated under the name "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," the church of Jesus Christ in fact, and in harmony in doctrine, organization, and ordinance with the church established by Jesus Christ in New Testament times?

The first two propositions will be discussed at Clyde, and the last two at Collins, discussion to begin January 4, and occupy twelve night-sessions of two hours each.

The arrangements made were the best that could be done considering everything, and I feel that by the sustaining grace of God, the cause of righteousness so maligned through Bays' lectures in the past will be sustained as God's work, and some of the hideous garments with which Bays clothed it in the minds of some will be removed, and the work stand in these parts with all her beauteous garments on.

His resignation as pastor of the congregation at Collins takes place January 1, and he says he is now looking for a new location, and proffers the use of his church to me wherever he may go; and if it is within my mission, and so that I can consistently with my work, I shall surely occupy.

Began services here last night in the Christian church building, to continue till Saturday night, and possibly longer. There was an attentive audience present last night, and some interest shown.

When I requested indorsements yesterday from Bays he handed me the Helper, the official organ of the anti-Mormon Association, saying that was a late indorsement. Truly that which he once loved he now hates, and he delights in showing his hatred. What a confession this anti-Mormon Association is! Could they make successful their efforts to oppose the faith of the Saints without it, there would have been no necessity for it; and is it possible that the Christian Church should not be builded up satisfactorily without this organization founded upon destructive principles? It is surprising that such a confession would have been made by men who claim so much wisdom.

In hopes of final victory of truth over error, and the ability to endure faithful, I am,

Your fellow helper in the gospel,

Editors Herald: Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., and self arrived at Derby, Berry County, Indiana, November 10. Found the schoolhouse where the Saints had occupied for years unobtainable, trustee having filed suit in county court, asking an injunction against Latter Day Saints. He objected to allowing them the use of any schoolhouse in his township.

We obtained use of Universalist church building near Derby and held eight meetings, to large and interested audiences. We think much good was done.

Bro. M. R. Scott left us on the 1st, on account of his wife's illness. Bro. David Baggerly, president of the Hope Branch, near Derby, brought me to this place by buggy. We commenced meetings here the 4th, and despite the stormy weather we are having a crowded house, and seemingly interested listeners. This is the place where Bro. Porter recently baptized twenty-seven. We are here to consider the advisability of organizing a branch under direction of authorities. We conclude time not opportune for organizing. We find some good people here, and some not doing as they should. We have been most hospitably entertained and cared for by Bro. Yahnd and wife, Bro. Maman and wife, Bro. Lampkins and wife, Bro. Bernardi, and others. These will not soon be forgotten by the writer. We leave to-morrow for the eastern part of the State. People here seem very anxious to learn, and willing also. We hope to have the blessings of God in our work.

Dear Saints and Friends: I desire to write of God's love to me and his Saints, and give my testimony to his wonderful goodness in restoring me to health and strength, after my neighbors and friends had given up hopes of my recovery.

Four years ago I was taken sick with what the physicians called peritonitis, which became so severe that I neither ate nor slept, and it was thought I could not live. The physicians told my husband that I would have to be taken to the asylum, and that he had better give me up. My husband said he felt that he could not give me up, and be left alone with the family of children to raise. And if there ever was a prayer arose from a stricken heart it arose from his, that the Lord would spare my life and restore me to health and strength and to my family. The blessed Master heard that prayer, and saved my life.

I was tormented in body and mind. I had not thought to send for the elders; but one evening about nine o'clock I asked that they have Bro. W. C. Nirk come and administer to me. When he administered to me the disease was rebuked, and from that very hour I commenced to mend. I rested all night, only when they awakened me for fear I would sleep too soundly.

One of my neighbors stayed with me that night, and when the physician went home he told his wife I could not live until morning. When he came in the morning he told my husband that he had hopes for me now. And as my health returned, my mind was restored.

I have great reasons to rejoice in this work; and again I have great reason to mourn for my many weaknesses which so often appear.

At the time D. H. Bays made his attack on the work here and was replied to by J. W. Wight, when the subject of the "gifts of the gospel" was under discussion, the Spirit seemed to say that I should arise and tell of God's goodness to me in restoring my health. But I desisted, while the Spirit seemed as a fire shut up in my bones and the light shining forth that taught me many things that I can not write that were for me to say at that time; still I kept my seat. And again I felt as though commanded to arise; but still I quenched the Spirit, and for fear of reproach I kept my seat until the time had passed, and then the Spirit seemed to say to me, "If thou art ashamed to own me before this sinful and adulterous generation, I will be ashamed to own thee before my Father's face."

Dear Saints, what sad hours it brings to us when we fear the reproach of this world and do not the will of our heavenly Father until we bring displeasure upon us. Let us be more faithful in keeping all the commandments, not fearing the world or what they may say. But rather fear Him who is able to raise us from the dead and restore us to his heavenly kingdom, or cast us into outward darkness where we will suffer the wrath of his great judgment.

Your sister,

JENNIE M. PYLE.

SURRY, Maine, December 5.

Editors Herald: I enjoy very much reading the HERALD, and am much encouraged when I see a word from any whom I have ever known or met. I believe we should make a greater effort to enlarge the subscription list of the HERALD, because of the good the HERALD brings to the readers.

Recently I went to Massachusetts, and did not get the HERALD for some time. Finally a copy was sent me which at the time I was not expecting. The night before I received it, in a dream I saw it coming. From the dream I gathered the idea that the HERALD is a modern means of conveying light, and that God recognizes it, and has a hand in it for truth.

In the HERALD I then received, attention was called to the fact that sometime before there had been a supplement to the HERALD sent to each subscriber, asking that each make an effort to double its subscription, giving reasons for so doing, adding that some had sent in two names as new subscribers, and many had sent in the one, yet many had not then succeeded at all. Well, I have that supplement before me now, it having reached me a few days ago. But I have no intentions of considering it as an old matter and not entitled to notice. I have been on the lookout, and have the promise from one family of Saints to take the HERALD, and think I can get a few more names of Saints, and possibly a friend or two. However, considering it as I do—a great favor conferred upon any whom I may be able to persuade to take the HERALD—I intend to make an untiring effort for new subscribers.

I left Massachusetts November 15 where I have been working at the stone trade, en route to district conference of Western Maine, held with the West Surry Branch, in schoolhouse at West Ellsworth, Maine. I arrived there Sunday, the 16th, shortly after prayer and testimony-meeting had begun, the schoolhouse being my first stopping-place. I was somewhat surprised to learn that there was not one of the brethren from either Great or Little Deer Island. Not even our district president was there. I have heard since that some of them, including our worthy brother, the district president, started, but they met with disappointment. I think we shall have to persuade them to start a day or two sooner the next time, so they may be able to avoid all delays.

The conference was a success in many respects. Only J. N. Ames and S. O. Foss of the elders, were present. The brethren who went to the steamboat wharf with their teams to meet the Deer Island Saints were disappointed, and I think dissatisfied to return all alone. The sisters also gave voice to a little murmuring, because their tables were not furnished with the number of "guests" that they expected. Altogether there was somewhat of a larger gathering than at the last conference held at Lamoine. The word preached was good and instructive, which, it seems, must be to the general good of all present,—who have desires for good.

I ever pray for the advancement of our beloved cause.

FRANK M. CARTER.

CENTER, Arkansas, December 10.

Editors Herald: On Thursday night, the 20th, while en route to Cave Schoolhouse, I lodged with Mr. Butts. About four o'clock in the morning I seemed to be awake and on the point of going to the door. I seemed to swing my feet out and sat on the edge of the bed. I had to shuffle the cats from under my feet. As I started for the door, behold, my legs were covered to my knees with little cats. I waddled to the porch and my back and shoulders were also loaded. They were all dirty, black cats, ill-favored, scrawny, blear-eyed, sickly, drooling cats. I tried in vain to shake them off without dirtying my hands; but I had to pick them off one by one and send them whirling from the high porch.

I arose and walked to the porch, in fact, feeling that something unpleasant awaited me.

I commenced preaching Saturday night. On Sunday night one Elder H. Hulett arose and asked some very appropriate questions in a friendly manner. I at once recognized the soft fur of one of the smoothest cats rubbing against my cheek. This night I dreamed of seeing a man seated in a stooping posture looking through an opening in a large, black, dish-shaped hood that he held over his face at others who were regarding him with much interest. A voice said to me, He is practicing the black art. I saw that after he gazed steadfastly at them for a time they were under his power, and saw things through his eyes. When I essayed to expose his nefarious work he became enraged. He arose, advanced, fixed his glittering eyes upon me, and in a threatening attitude made a vehement, boisterous address. His large stature, dark complexion, bloated face, white, projecting teeth and wicked eyes made him a frightful object. I regarded him as a formidable foe. My wife stood at my left hand, and I marveled to see her watch him without a tremor when he advanced so near. I waved him back, he retreated from the motion of my hand.

Here occurred a break in the drama. The next play was concise and vivid. I had the floor and was enjoying wonderful liberty. He had voluntarily stretched himself at full length on a bench near the wall.

Monday and Tuesday nights it rained. Wednesday and Thursday nights Elder Hulett followed my sermons with a hard attack; insinuated that I was a lying hypocrite; was mad because I called him brother; crossed himself several times. Each night I dispelled the cats and dismissed.

On Saturday night he came with a few ruffians with bad intent; but the presence of two or three whom they feared doubtless prevented mob violence. Elder Hulett followed me with a boisterous onslaught; used very little reason. His threatening attitude, vicious nods, wickedly glittering eyes, and impudent sarcasm reminded me vividly of my dream. God had shown me the gentleman that was inspiring my opponent. When he quit I sang No. 1116, "The Pure Testimony," and dismissed.

At eleven on Sunday I preached a long discourse on the Book of Mormon, with splendid liberty. Elder Hulett and his posse were not to be seen. On my way home I thought of my dream again; he had retired.

Monday night I commenced preaching at Bettis Schoolhouse, four miles from Cave, across Big Creek. On Tuesday night Elder Hulett bobbed up like a cork out of water, and poured in a gruesome mixture of objections. I saw at once that I was powerless to maintain order. I was alone; he had the advantage of me. I discerned that the mob spirit was present. A few roughs were present whose actions I did not like. I took a firm stand for truth, but with a few clever turns I ingratiated myself and was safe. Meeting was broken up without order.

Wednesday night found me at my post, but not alone. I sternly refused to admit of any questions; but after dismissing we all sat down and listened to Elder Hulett's tirade. I then related the vision of black cats, much to the amusement of the crowd. I declared my intention to skin every dirty little cat he could produce, and gave them an illustration of how easy a task it was. This raised a roar of laughter. Mr. Hulett was enraged. He called me an imported foreigner; a low-down, dirty, stinking liar; a little, mean, lop-eared hound pup; a sheep-killing, mangy, dirty dog, etc., etc.; and strange as it may seem to well-raised people, no other argument could have weighed half so much with some who were present; nothing else could have so thoroughly convinced them that he was right. The Campbellites have held this fort for years, and they fear that we will break their ranks. Elders Spurlock, Ward, and Macrae have each baptized some of their best members, and others are fully convinced. "Babylon trembles for fear of her loss."

This state of things continued till Saturday night, when I was challenged to debate the issues with them. I accepted the challenge and submitted church propositions the next day, but after first agreeing to them, they wanted to strike out the main points in their proposition. I refused to do this and they left the house loudly blowing their horn.

Elder Wigs tried his hand at the wheel after my sermon Sunday evening, but failed to throw me from my course. So they have left me in possession of the field.

I was apprized in a recent dream that there is still dirtier work ahead. I know not of its character, only that it failed to adhere to my feet when by necessity I trod in human filth.

Bro. Nuckles stays closely by me. One of the refractory individuals was overheard recently to say: "That man's eyes give it away; he won't sorter do to monkey with." Our stirrup-straps were cut in two save a few shreds, Monday night. I was riding a young, foolish mule; but neither of us got a fall. Regardless of the strictness and severity of the law against carrying concealed weapons, there has been a volley of six or more shots fired on two different nights by a crowd of roughs on their way from meeting. To-night I called on some of them to stop their loud whispering. They went out and retreated a safe distance from the house, when another volley was fired.

God is for us, and verily he is more than all who can be against us.

Respectfully,

D. R. BALDWIN.

LOS ANGELES, California, December 8.

Editors Herald: Even and anon I received letters of inquiry relative to California, its climate, the cost of living, the advisability of poor people coming, etc.

My advice to all Latter Day Saints is to heed the injunction to "gather together unto the places which I have appointed," taking care not to "gather in haste nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you," and "Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church, guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me."

To those who, on account of sickness or inability to endure the rigor of the winter months in the East, I would say, the climate here is ideal for most people. Some prefer the variations of seasons in the East. Every man must demonstrate this for himself. No man can come here for a few weeks and decide. It takes months to become acclimated. I am assured that ninety-nine per cent of the people who come here and remain a year would prefer this climate to a variable one. The tremendous Eastern tourist travel every winter evidences either superior climatic conditions here or it reflects on Eastern intelligence. Of the two, as compared with the Eastern weather I would much prefer our summer. No mosquitoes; no sweltering nights.

As to the cost of living, I consider that one can live in Missouri or Iowa for nearly half what he can here. This morning I was comparing prices of commodities with Bro. Crick, of Independence, and many things cost double here.

Rent is more than double. I am now paying fourteen dollars for a small four-room house, with an additional expense for water. The house is unplastered; a regular "boarded up and down" California house.

Fuel, though one does not use as much as in Iowa, cost three times what it does there, thus practically averaging up the season's expense.

Butter is now selling for forty cents a pound, with good indications for fifty cent butter before the New Year. Eggs are forty-five cents per dozen. Potatoes one dollar per bushel, although they sell by the pound. Apples from four to six cents per pound. Milk, one quart a day per month, two dollars and fifty cents; gasoline, one dollar and twenty-five cents; coal-oil, one dollar; meat, best steak, twenty-five and thirty cents per pound; other steaks, fifteen to eighteen cents; boiling meat, twelve and one half to fifteen cents a pound. Other things in proportion. Dry-goods and clothing are some higher; about the cost of transportation across the continent.

With these facts before them every man can decide for himself. I will not advise. Things are moving along slowly here, as in all of California. There seems to be a prearranged and systematic attack being made upon the church of late. I notice a new departure with a great many, an effort to invalidate the work on its own statements. This we welcome. The Homiletic Review for December contains an article from the pen of Edmund B. Fairfield, D. D. LL. D., on "The Early History of Joseph Smith." The Presbyterian Assembly Herald for October contains three articles; one from D. J. McMillan, D. D., entitled, "Conversion of a Mormon Priest;" another from Mrs. Darwin R. James, entitled, "While men slept;" and another by Sheldon Jackson, D. D., on "Home Missions—Mormonism." A certain "Lamoni Call" is sending out attacks upon the church from Bountiful, Utah, which is worthy of notice. "The Social Purity League, of New York" representing the leading evangelical churches, has a series of six tracts against "Mormonism," which they are systematically distributing over all the country. The recent articles from the pens of the respective Joseph Smiths at the head of the two churches published in most of the leading dailies of the country is possibly responsible for some of this new agitation. Let it go on; we have nothing to lose and the whole world to gain.

Yours in the faith of Christ,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

Crookes, SHEFFIELD, England, November 28.

Editors Herald: I have oftentimes thought of writing a few lines for your valuable columns, but have refrained for many reasons. But now matters are altogether different, I suppose, as one among many appointed to stand for and labor in the interests of the work of God, I may be expected at times to say a word or two, or at least to let you know what and how we are doing here in the Sheffield District.

Since coming into the mission field I have experienced the goodness and mercy of God in many ways. In preaching I have been much blessed with light and liberty. God be praised. We have done our best to get the work before the people. We go from door to door with the written word, bearing our testimony of the truth and power of the restored gospel which, we tell the people outside, and our own people inside, is God's power to save both sinners and saints throughout time and in eternity. We have not made progress, numerically speaking, but I am persuaded that most of the Saints feel the better for the labor thus expended.

The needs of the work in this district are great, and I believe that before any permanent progress can be made it will be necessary to purge and prune our own vine. I firmly believe that before we can expect to grow spiritually, we must clear away everything that would hinder that true spiritual growth desired. The first step in this course of spiritual development is to get a pure people. The Apostle John says that every man that hath in him the hope of seeing Christ as he is, will purify himself, even as he, Christ, is pure. (1 John 3: 3.) Again the same apostle in the first chapter and twelfth verse of his gospel says, that to as many as receive him, Christ, to them gave he power to become sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. Therefore, in order to attain to this high standard of excellence, we must receive power. Jesus said: If ye love me, keep my commandments; and I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. For what length of time will this Comforter be with us? Just so long as we keep the commandments. If we are faithful all the time then we have the Comforter all the time, for the promise is that it shall abide with us for ever. Then why not be pure? This Comforter is the spirit of truth. It will lead (not force), guide (not compel) in the way of truth. Then with this great power we can become pure, and thus we attain that perfection as taught by the Savior. (Matthew 5: 8, 48.)

The second step toward this development is perfect branch organization, and we want to see to it. Four things are necessary to perfect organization, and we as a church will never make the progress desired until the second step is attained. In the first place, we want a good, sound man as president; we want a man who is firm, yet kind; we want the best man; we want the man that can lead; we want a man who will respect himself and the work he represents. In the second place, we want another sound man to act as priest of the branch. We want a prayerful man, a thoughtful man, a man beloved by all who know him, to visit the Saints, to pray with them, to teach them to pray. The Saints must be visited, for herein lies the life and soul of this great latter-day work. Let the priest neglect this duty and it is good-bye to the spiritual growth of that branch. In the third place, we want another sound man, a wise man, a man that is able to teach; to act as teacher; a man that can counsel and give advice not only to the Saints but to the branch; to the president, to the priest, if needs be; and in this way we shall respect every man in the office-work to which God has called him.

The fourth place, another sound man is wanted, a diligent man, a clean man, a prompt man, an orderly man, a man of trust, to act as deacon, not only to keep in order the house of God, but many who profess to be known as the people of God; a man to keep the door, to invite the stranger in, and extend a hearty welcome to all who shall come to hear the gospel.

We notice that none but sound men are either needed or wanted for this great work. O that the Lord may hasten the day when we shall be able to find all these sound men, this pure people, that perfect branch organization, that the perfect law may be perfectly administered. Then shall the church make rapid progress, then shall the power of God be felt, and the Saints shall no longer ask, Where are the gifts and blessings of the gospel?

We are still hopeful in this part of the Lord's vineyard. We have a very nice little chapel in Clay Cross, and I am of the opinion that great strides could be made in the work here if all would work together to that end. The Saints in Clay Cross are doing well in many respects, and we hope that by the time next spring comes round we shall be ready to stand boldly for the truth.

his sons, Simon, John, George H., and William, together with Brn. Naylor, cousins, and Taylor, form a strong force against the opposing element. May the blessing of God follow them.

Here in Sheffield we have very few Saints. Trouble has followed this branch for years now; but we are living in hope that ere long we shall be in the line of progress, numerically as well as spiritually. Brn. Austin, Platts, Roberts, and G. H. Arber have been the main stay here. Many things have hindered in the past. We are striving to remove them and to encourage those who bear the name of Saints to be Saints.

Will Bro. Longden, of Eddyville, Iowa, if he sees this letter, let me have a line to know how his friends view the work as presented to them. I expect to visit his mother at Barnsley, in the near future. Still hopeful,

W. H. GREENWOOD.

13 Blakeney Road.

TAWAS CITY, Michigan, December 13.

Editors Herald: We had Brn. J. A. Grant and Berve with us for a few days. We were encouraged to go on in this glorious gospel which was delivered to the Saints. There is great joy in serving God and preparing to meet him. I rejoice in the gospel of Jesus Christ, which makes us free if we serve him and obey his commandments.

I am glad when I receive the HERALD and read it; it makes me rejoice to read how the glorious work is rolling on. My prayers go out to God that all the world will obey the gospel of Jesus Christ and be saved. I want to do all I can to help roll on the work and represent it to those who have not enlisted in the gospel. I want to be found doing all I can for him.

I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may be found faithful on to the end. My prayers are for all the Saints and also for the world.

JOHN BELLINGER.

Dice, vice-president; C. P. Faul and A. Leaverton, secretaries. Charles P. Faul was sustained Bishop's agent; B. J. Dice, treasurer. President of district was authorized to appoint a speaker for Edgerton Junction Branch, once a month. Preaching by J. Burlington, A. White, and B. J. Dice. Prayer and testimony meeting in charge of Brn. R. Archibald and C. W. Ethridge. Adjourned to meet with the St. Joseph Branch on third Saturday and Sunday in February.

Notice to Branch Officers.

Again there seems a necessity to remind some district officials of the non-arrival of branch reports received at their conferences during the year now closing. Where diligent efforts are being made to have errors corrected time should be taken for correspondence with branch officials, when reports are found to be wrong in number or there are deficiencies or errors in items. But even such reports should not be kept too long from the General Recorder. Though a zealous district clerk can effect more at conference time and afterwards in getting these corrections than we can, yet when they have done all they can we will gladly help in correcting the remainder.

Since last March over twenty conferences have been held from which no branch reports have yet come. We need them, that they may be recorded and correspondence over them be begun before the winter conferences send their reports. The delinquents are as follows:

The Montana reports for the March and October sessions have not come to hand.

Idaho for June and September have not arrived.

Northeastern Texas and Choctaw District reports to the August conference are yet missing.

September reports are due from Eastern Maine, Independence, New York, Southern Nebraska, and Oregon Districts.

Also October reports from Chatham District, Canada, and from Central California, Southeastern Illinois, Little Sioux, Massachusetts, Eastern Michigan, Northern Michigan, Far West, and Clinton Districts.

Only two districts are lacking on November reports, namely, Indiana Southern, and Northwestern Kansas, the latter expected any day.

The following districts have given notice of December sessions, namely, Eastern Maine, Oklahoma, and Northeastern Texas and Choctaw on the 6th, Eastern Iowa and Spring River the 13th, St. Louis and Southern Missouri the 27th, and Mobile and Southern Nebraska adjourned to meet in December, time not yet stated.

There are several branches not in districts that should be reported this winter, with full corrections, some in Arkansas, others in Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington, and it may be some of the Oregon branches. Several in Utah have not reported for years. Likewise Scranton Branch, Pennsylvania, reports to no conferences.

Of foreign districts and missions we state as follows:

Sydney District, Australia, reported to December, 1901, and Victoria District to September, 1901. Also in January, 1902, Bro. Kaler sent copy of Brisbane Branch, Queensland, Australia.

Honolulu Branch, Hawaiian Islands, reported for 1901 by Bro. Waller.

The revised reports of the Society Island branches not yet arrived but hoped for. Nearly seven years since the last was made, one brought over by Bro. Devore.

The districts in England, London, Birmingham, Manchester, and Sheffield reported for 1901, also Eastern Wales. Western Wales has not been corrected for years, but Llanelly Branch has been reported by Sr. Eleanor Treharne, and full corrections are expected from her.

Bro. Peter Muceus has reported baptisms by himself in Norway and something about the Aalborg Branch, Denmark.

District clerks should have a tabular form in their records, and on such pages keep account of what his branches report at all conferences. Then when new reports come in the district clerk can refer to the table and find how each branch stood the last time it made a report, and, if the new one does not agree with the last balance, inquiry can be made on the spot. If it can not there be corrected then a written statement of all differences and deficiencies should be sent to the branch clerk for investigation and correction.

Experience has proven that it is better not to return reports to the branches, for sometimes they do not come back; thus we lose what good there is on them, besides not gaining the information we seek. Even if it takes more time a correspondence about the errors and missing items in detail is much the best way. It takes patience and perseverance, often a rewriting or repeated appeals in order to bring the necessary facts to make all records agree and to be correct in the agreement, so many errors being made in copying birth and baptism dates and places, and by whom baptized, confirmed, and ordained.

Some reports may arrive before this goes to press, but it is a statement of facts up to December 10, 1902.

Respectfully presented for consideration and action.

H. A. STEBBINS, General Church Recorder.

Bishop's Agents' Notices.

To the Saints of Oregon District; Greeting: Having been appointed Bishop's Agent for Oregon District, I desire to notify you that I have appointed Bro. D. E. Stitt, of Bandon Branch, and Sherman B. Hartshorn as agent in the Condon Branch. These brethren will receipt for tithings or offerings. Those who are scattered over the State will be receipted promptly by sending their tithings or offerings to my address. I desire to be prompt in receipting you for your offerings and I desire those who work with me to be. If at any time you should not receive your receipts, notify me promptly. May we all realize our duties in this great work and work together for the advancement of the cause we love. Remember the Lord has said, Surely this is a day of sacrifice and of tithing of my people; and though we may not have much to give, the little offerings from all will assist in sustaining the work in Oregon. At present my receipts are not sufficient to defray the expenses, and we have only one family to provide allowances for. I am quite sure if we all paid our tithing we would not have to ask the Bishop for assistance to meet our expenses. I hope we will perform our known duties.

H. THOMAS CHAPMAN.

HOOD RIVER, Oregon.

Seventh Quorum of Elders.

Will all the brethren concerned please remember, as per resolution of last mission conference, that reports for the year 1902 (from January 1 to December 31) are due after the last-named date, and should be then in the hands of the secretary, S. F. Mather, 15 February Street, C. on M., Manchester, so as to enable him to tabulate, etc., and report to General Conference, 1903. Kindly respond as early as possible.

Notices.

All persons coming to the convention to be held at Wabash, Ontario, will be met at the following trains at Thamesville, on December 27: Wabash from the east, 12.47 p. m.; Wabash from the west, 12.45 p. m.; Grand Trunk from the east, 12.21 p. m.; C. P. R. from the east, 12.48 p. m. At Dresden, will meet the L. E. and D. R., both morning trains. Your brethren, C. W. Badder, W. L. Ross, Committee.

The Cleveland, Ohio, Branch of Latter Day Saints has changed its meeting place to Abel's Hall, 2089 Superior Street. V. D. Schaar, Secretary.

Correction.

In HERALD for December 10, article, "Branch Membership," first column, bottom line, also second column, line seven, read course instead of "cause," as printed. J. R. Lambert.

Conference Notices.

Conference of Southern Nebraska District will meet with the Nebraska City Branch, Sunday and Monday, January 11 and 12, 1903. We hope to see a full representation present. Come all who can. J. W. Waldsmith, District President.

The Central Illinois District conference and Sunday-school convention will hold sessions at Taylorville, Illinois, January 3 and 4, 1903. M. R. Shoemaker, District President.

Convention Notices.

The Chatham District Sunday-school association will meet with the Wabash Saints on December 27 and 28, sessions beginning at two p. m., Saturday. The lesson for Sunday, the 28th, will be a review of the last Quarterly. A program is being prepared, and a pleasant and profitable time is anticipated. Those interested are cordially invited to attend. We wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Jessie A. Hackett, superintendent, Mary M. Green, secretary.

Married.

HEINY—PARK.—At the Hotel Victoria, Des Moines, Iowa, in the presence of a few friends, December 8, 1902, Mr. Charles H. Heiny to Sr. Maude M. Park, both of Runnells, Iowa. Teacher G. W. Johnson offered prayer, and Elder F. E. Cochran officiated in the ceremony. Mr. Heiny is an enterprising business man, and Sr. Park is one of Zion's fair daughters, alive to church interests. Their wedded life begins with bright prospects. May love, joy, and peace crown their union.

Died.

JARRAD.—Didymus B. Jarrad died December 10, 1902, at his home in Independence, Missouri. He was born March 25, 1833; married to Elizabeth Frazee, April 19, 1855, in Chickasaw County, Iowa. He first heard the angel's message in Clay County, Nebraska, and was baptized June 24, 1892. He and wife moved to Independence about two years ago. After a pilgrimage together of forty-seven years, he stepped behind the veil to greet their children who had previously passed on. Funeral at the residence, December 12, in charge of Elder George H. Hulmes; sermon by A. H. Parsons.

GELL.—Thomas Gell was born November 13, 1827, at Belper, Derbyshire, England; baptized August 4, 1891, at Manchester, England, by Joseph Dewsnup, Sr. Bro. Gell was in his seventy-fifth year. We are happy in the thought that he was ready. We believe that he lived the life and died the death of a saint; therefore we are assured that he is at rest. He leaves a son and daughter to mourn his loss. Sermon by W. H. Greenwood. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; they rest from their labor and their works do follow them.

BENJAMINE.—Sr. Rose Ann Benjamin died at Panama, Iowa, December 8, 1902, of cancer of the stomach. She was 67 years, 2 months, and 4 days old, and had been a faithful member of the church for about twenty-one years, having been baptized by Bro. J. H. Lake. She died in hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral conducted by W. D. Bullard at Panama, December 10.

The Record of the Year.

As the end of the year draws nigh we may congratulate ourselves that it will leave the world in much better plight than it found it. When it begun there was war in South Africa and there were troublesome hostilities in the Philippines. Now peace is broken, if broken at all, only by the unrest in Venezuela and Colombia and in Hayti that follows their revolutions and in Africa where the "Mad Mullah" has attacked the British. And not only is the world at peace, but the great nations are more securely linked together, perhaps, than they ever were before. New forces for peace are at work—especially two of the strongest possible world influences: an organized and closely-knit commerce, which none can afford to disturb for fear of a lasting loss of trade, and in particular the overwhelming commercial power of the United States, which would gain a still surer lead by the suspension of industrial activity in any important country. The little periodical adjustment of power and of privilege that the nations used to make by special treaties were crude and weak guarantees of peace in comparison with the compelling power of modern commerce and all that it implies. The most recent wars were really only frontier wars.

Men without historical knowledge easily believe that their own era is a new era in the world. But men with historical knowledge now see international conditions that are radically different and radically better for peace than any of the battered centuries behind us knew. The unfettering of the dominant race of men by free institutions to free opportunity on the most fruitful continent and the industrial rise of the Republic, fortifying its political power, have put all nations in a new relation to one another and in a new relation to civilization. This revolutionary fact has become plainer this year than it ever was before. Its far-reaching significance we do not yet see; but it looks like a great force that will work for the steadying of governments and for the sane direction of endeavor for centuries to come. For it is the natural result of a great law of human development and not an advantage won by the strength of armies or by the skill of diplomatists or by any other power that may change with a change of rulers and of generations. The industrial man becomes stronger, the political man weaker; and economic force is beginning to rule the world as military force once ruled it.—From The World's Work.

The Ownership of Children.

It is only in late years that lecturers and writers have taken it upon themselves to counsel fathers and mothers upon the proper bringing up of their children, and it may be said, incidentally, that since the world began generations have developed into healthy manhood and womanhood without such advice. It is very difficult to advise beneficially on such a subject. Methods that are applicable in the training of one child are not always applicable to his brother. The subject will not admit of universal or even general statements. However, in one point, at least, we do agree with Mrs. Birney, the writer of a paper in the January Delineator entitled Childhood, that "the erroneous sense of proprietorship with which parents are wont to regard their children is a source of many mistakes in their management." If the points of view of privileged guardianship would supersede that of ownership, the little ones, in many cases, would be happier.

There is ample justification for the claim made by The Chicago Record-Herald that its readers enjoy every day in the week, Sundays included, a news service that is without parallel in range and completeness. In addition to the independent news facilities of The Record-Herald, that paper receives the complete news service of the New York Herald and the Associated Press, and when it is considered that its news columns are supplemented by all the special features so popular with its thousands of readers, it will be seen that The Record-Herald holds a unique place among the great newspapers of the United States.

Japan's Rapid's Growth.

Japan has astonished the world by her marvelous strides to an acknowledged position among the first powers of the earth. Her development during the last half century is, in some respects, more remarkable than that of the United States. Fifty years ago, when Commodore Perry rapped somewhat roughly at her gates, she was, in material progress, governmental administration, and educational development, little beyond where she stood a thousand years before. Now her snug little realm is traversed with railways and spotted with manifold industries, her political system compares favorably with the monarchies of Europe, and her colleges and schools are graduating hosts of young men fitted for every position of responsibility. Her foreign commerce has expanded in thirty years from $30,000,000 to $300,000,000 per annum. This is an increase of 1,000 per cent per annum, a record unrivaled by any other country in the same time or under similar conditions. Starting with no merchant marine, she now has her cargo and passenger steamers running to all parts of the globe in successful competition with the fleets of the older and richer nations. With no modern war vessels twenty years ago, she now has a navy ranking next to our own in effectiveness. With an army a few decades past that was barbaric in equipment, she possesses to-day a trained armed force that, in comparison to her area and population, is second to none.—From "New Japan: The Schoolmaster of Asia," Review of Reviews for December.

The forty-eighth annual session of the Iowa State Teachers' Association will be held in Des Moines, Iowa, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, December 31, and January 1 and 2. At the first general session, which will be held on Wednesday evening, Superintendent Nathan C. Shaeffer, of Pennsylvania, will deliver an address, "Grades of Thinking and Thinking in the Grades." On Thursday morning, Orville T. Bright of Chicago, Illinois, will lecture on "Our Duty to the Country Schools." At four on Thursday afternoon will be held a memorial service for Doctor Beardshear, late president of Iowa Agriculture College at Ames. Thursday evening will be devoted to a lecture by Lorado Taft, "How Statues are Made."

The Iowa men on this program represent more new talent than has been true of any program in recent years. It is hoped that the teachers of Iowa will generally see fit to take advantage of the opportunities of hearing this excellent program.

The Chautauquan for December contains two strong contributions to the discussion of Rural Problems. Graham Taylor presents a forceful study of "The Civic Function of the Country Church." Kenyon L. Butterfield, instructor in Rural Sociology in the University of Michigan, writes of "The Federation of Rural Social Forces." The Round Table for the month contains a variety of reports on phases of our Rural Problem, and presents outlines and programs for the intelligent discussion of these topics.

A survey of "The Art Teachings of the Arts and Crafts Movement" is the third of a series of papers reviewing the development and significance of the current revival of the Arts and Crafts. The author is Rho Fisk Zueblin.

A paper dealing with the masculine side of The Home Problem of to-day is contributed by Caroline L. Hunt, under the title of "More Life for Man."

Five true stories of Heroic Living constitute a special feature of this issue. The prize story for the month is entitled "Two Sisters."

Winter Birds and the Fall Homes of Insects are the particular subjects of the Nature Study furnished by Alice G. McCloskey, of the Cornell Bureau of Nature Study.

An historical sketch of "The Rise of the Russian Nation" and a travel paper on "The Crimea and the Caucasus" are two of the most helpful and interesting contributions to current literature about Russia. The second paper is a part of The Chautauquan's "Reading Journey Through Russia," and it is written by George Frederick Wright.

Comporting with the spirit of the season, The Chautauquan has a special Christmas cover, and contains an article on "The Magi and Their Quest," by Gabrielle Marie Jacobs, illustrated with reproductions of famous paintings of "The Adoration of the Magi."

Every day the same old question, What shall we eat for breakfast, for luncheon, for dinner? assails with monotonous regularity the patient housewife who seeks to provide good living for the family in agreeable variety at a moderate cost. There is a daily department in The Chicago Record-Herald which is intended to answer this question satisfactorily every day in the year. It is entitled, "Meals for a Day," and provides menus for three meals every day, with the necessary recipes. These menus and recipes are carefully selected by The Record-Herald's household editor, and cash prizes are awarded to the best that are received. Housewives everywhere are invited to participate in the competition. For full particulars see the "Meals for a Day" department in The Chicago Record-Herald.

Take heed how you build. That which you are doing, the work which you are performing, you do not leave behind you because you forget it. Every stroke, every single element abides, and there is nothing that grows so fast as character.—Henry Ward Beecher.

The December Woman's Home Companion is full of good fiction. Besides the very interesting serial, "The Flight of Fennella," there are six short stories, "The Prodigal's Christmas," "A Brother to Toodles," "A Congressional Episode," "A Game of Love," "Stans and the Kobold" and "Gentleman Jack." A feature of especial interest is the "Christmas Cantata," a little play especially intended for presentation by children. In "The Strange Origin of Familiar Toys" Stewart Culin tells how some of the most ordinary playthings have a history that goes back thousands of years. The departments are devoted to matter of seasonable interest—the making of Christmas presents, the holiday book reviews and excellent cooking and fashion articles.

We are pleased to offer to any boy or girl who will secure for us eight new subscriptions for THE KANSAS CITY WEEKLY JOURNAL at the rate of 25 cents each, making a total of $2.00, and will send the money to us together with the names, we will mail to his or her address, charges prepaid, a BEAUTIFUL FOUNTAIN PEN. This pen is guaranteed to give good satisfaction if properly handled. Rubber handle and gold-pointed. It is first-class in every respect. What is the use of having a bottle of ink when you can have this pen in your pocket, all filled with ink and ready for writing? This pen is a great present for the boy or girl, and if you will get out and make a little effort on Saturday, you can secure a list in a short time and earn this beautiful pen. Now is the time to make a trial as our proposition will only hold good for sixty days from December 1. Send money by post-office order or draft, and address all communications to The Kansas City Weekly Journal, Kansas City, Missouri. Send for sample copies of the Weekly for canvassing. 51-3t

BAPTISMS IN BRANCHES.

It is understood to be the duty and the custom for the elders who baptize persons to give to those whom they baptize certificates of baptism, which, when presented to any branch of the church entitles them to be received by said branch and have their names enrolled on the branch record of names. It is usual for the officer giving such certificate to instruct the holder of the certificate to present the same to the branch nearest or most convenient for them to attend, and join it.

It is also a rule that any officer of the church not a member of the branch requested to baptize in a branch of the church, should inform the presiding officer of the branch in charge at the time of said request, and ask such officer's consent for him to officiate, and such baptism should be performed by consent and with the knowledge of the branch officer, or officers.

If the persons so baptized are residents of or in the vicinity of the branch their baptism should be officially taken notice of, and their names recorded on the branch record. If the branch has an ironclad rule that all persons received into the branch fellowship must be by vote of the branch, then, the officers of the branch should see to it that the names of such baptized persons should be duly presented to the branch business or prayer-meeting at the earliest opportunity so that they may be received into fellowship and their names recorded. Missionaries should not baptize within the jurisdiction of a branch without the knowledge and consent of the officers of said branch; and in case these officers have objections to such persons as present themselves being baptized, the missionaries should decline to baptize them.

Branches have the right to make such rules respecting the reception of persons into branch fellowship as they may deem best; but we believe that such rules should provide that all persons baptized by the officers of the branch, or other church officers by the consent and knowledge of the branch officers, should be considered to be members of the branch without a vote being taken to so receive them. This is the case with the Lamoni Branch. All persons baptized by its officers, or with their knowledge and consent, are bona fide members of the branch without the formality of a vote. This is a beneficial rule and saves much difficulty at times. No person within the branch other than its officers, presumes to baptize in its precincts without notifying the officers and securing their consent. The branch officers provide for time and place and take charge and make all necessary arrangements for baptisms and confirmations, when baptisms are requested. A person going from one branch to another and being baptized there, should at once take his certificate of baptism and present it at the first opportunity to the branch to be received, and his name recorded. Of course, branches having a rule requiring members to be received by vote, may reject an applicant for branch fellowship, but this ought not to be done, except upon good and sufficient reasons to be stated at the time the rejection occurs. The fact that a person was away from home when baptized by a missionary, or an elder, ought not to be a sufficient reason to reject his name when he applies to a branch for reception into fellowship; unless it can be shown that he went from home to be baptized because of the existence of proper objections to baptism in the branch which he went from.

THE EDITOR AT THE WILBURTON CONFERENCE.

The editor was privileged to attend the conference of the Indian Territory District, held at Wilburton, December 5, 6, and 7. By arrangement Bro. Ellis Short accompanied the Editor, and proved to be a most excellent traveling companion. Having an acquaintance with the route and the country adjacent to it, he was able to point out the places of interest, and by anecdotes and reminiscences of localities gave zest to the journey.

We traversed the Kansas City and Southern Road to Howe, thence forty miles west to Wilburton, where we arrived Saturday, the 6th, in time for the morning session; Bro. A. Z. Rudd, district president in charge, assisted by Bro. E. A. Erwin.

Quite to his surprise the Editor here met quite a number whom he knew. Among these were H. O. Smith, missionary in charge; George Montague, Hubert Case, William Aylor, Henson, Phillips, of the field force; Peter Adamson, senior and junior, Doctor Dalby; Hudson Harder and sons Hiram, David, William, and Asa; Youmans, A. Z. Rudd, Perkins, A. L. Newton, and E. D. Bailey, of Bishop Short's staff, and a whole lot of others, too many to remember, and of whose names we failed to make note.

We spoke three times, Saturday evening, Sunday night, and Monday night, having excellent audiences at each service.

Bishop Short spoke Sunday morning and held a general question and conversation meeting Monday morning, to good results, we believe.

Returning by the way of Kansas City and Independence, Missouri, we spent Wednesday and Thursday at the latter place, and by the way of St. Joseph, Missouri, reached Stewartsville, Missouri,

Saturday morning, December 13, to be present at the dedication of the Saints' chapel in that place.

DEDICATION AT STEWARTSVILLE.

This dedication occurs some years after the building was erected, the delay arising by reason of a defect in the title to the land and a misunderstanding in regard to some subscriptions. These difficulties were finally disposed of, and Sunday, December 14, set for the service.

At eleven o'clock Sunday forenoon the Saints gathered at the church in fair number; but a storm which began on Friday night and continued all day Saturday and Saturday night, kept many from attending.

It had been arranged by Bro. Andrew Saint Lewis, president of the branch, that the following program should be observed; but owing to the absence of Bro. Hinderks, on account of the storm, Bro. Joshua Armstrong was selected to deliver the dedicatory prayer. Otherwise the program was carried out, C. P. Faul being in charge:

Song No. 769, Harp; prayer, Elder C. P. Faul; song, Harp, No. 767; sermon, President Joseph Smith; congregation standing, dedicatory prayer, Elder Joshua Armstrong; song, doxology; announcement preaching at seven o'clock by President Smith; benediction, C. P. Faul.

We enjoyed the visit to Stewartsville, meeting and greeting many whom we have met there in times past, including Bro. A. W. Head, who is one of our old-time associates at Nauvoo, in the days of the Olive Branch, and before. We left them feeling that it was good to meet in the fight and part in the faith.

CHANGE IN GRACELAND FACULTY.

Professor C. O. Taylor, who has filled the position of Acting President of Graceland College the past term, has resigned the position to accept the chair of psychology in the Chicago Normal School. He left Lamoni on Friday, at the close of the fall term, and will begin his work in Chicago the first of the year. We are loath to see Mr. Taylor leave Graceland, as he has proven himself an efficient educator and an estimable young man. He has our very best wishes for success in his new position, and we feel sure the Chicago Normal School will find him a worthy accession to its faculty.

Mr. Taylor's position in Graceland will be filled by Professor Barber, of Detroit, who comes to us highly recommended as an educator. Without doubt he will be able to carry on without a hitch the work left by Mr. Taylor. We welcome Mr. Barber. The faculty and students on the first Tuesday in January will hold a reception in honor of Mr. Barber and the new students who will schedule then for the winter term. The reception will be held in the chapel at the college.

"ESKIMO OF SAME RACE AS INDIANS."

In the Chicago American for December 14 there appeared an article dated from New York City, entitled "Eskimo of Same Race as Indians." From this article we excerpt the following:

After spending two years in East Arctic Siberia, making a study of the strange tribes that inhabit its bleak shores, Professor Waldemar Jochelson has returned to New York and made a report to the American Museum of Natural History that is considered one of the most important ever filed with the Department of Anthropology or that of any similar institution.

Morris K. Jesup conceived in 1896 the idea that the question could be settled whether the American Indian was of Asiatic origin or not—whether he came to this part of the hemisphere from across Bering Strait, or landed on these shores from some other part of the earth. To him it seemed that primitive man could not have passed from one continent to another except by way of the narrow strip of water away up in the Arctic region. He gave five thousand dollars to the American Museum of Natural History for the purpose of causing to be made a study of the mysterious East Arctic Siberian tribes, with this point chiefly in view.

What was known as the Jesup North Pacific Expedition was fitted out. Professor Jochelson and Professor Bogoras, both Russians, and associated with the Russian Academy of Sciences, were engaged by the Museum to undertake the task.

They have brought back with them conclusive proof, so they assert, that the American Indian and the Asiatic Eskimo are close kin, and that both originally came from China.

The evidence that these conclusions are correct consists of one thousand five hundred specimens and exhibits taken from among the native tribes of the remote Siberian coast. Professor Jochelson and Bogoras have among their specimens a piece of Japanese iron over two hundred years old found in the far Northland, and many weapons and legends which prove that the Arctic Siberian and the American Indian were one and the same centuries ago. All of this is taken to prove that there was what these explorers call a "Round Pacific Race"—meaning that the inhabitants of China, Japan, Arctic Siberia and North and South America were originally all one and the same race.

Professor Jochelson can not speak English, but a full story of the experiences of the expedition was told by Professor Bogoras.

"In the division of the work," he said, "I took the tribes further north, while the interior was gone over by Professor Jochelson. I went straightway to the most northern part of Asiatic Russia—away out near Bering Strait. This brought me among the Chukchi tribe. They are reindeer-breeders. For three years I wandered with the band, and became one of them. I found that these people undoubtedly belong to the same stock as the American Indian.

"Whether the Indian crossed over to that country or whether the Arctic people crossed over to this continent, I can not say, but I am quite sure that we have, by our investigations, brought out sufficient proof to establish for ever to the civilized world that there was one round Pacific race of the same stock as the Chinese and Japanese.

"I found the words of the Chukchi tribe are the same in many instances as the words used by the American Indians for conveying the same thought. I have compiled a dictionary of the language of Arctic tribes of about twenty thousand words, and while I was there I learned to speak their language. Professor Jochelson was all this time in the interior studying the life and customs of the Yookaghirs, the Koryaks, and the Yakats. We both went about our work in about the same way. We studied the languages spoken by the different tribes. We picked up relics and specimens of weapons and got the legends and traditions of the various peoples with whom we went to live.

"We had cameras with us and took pictures everywhere we went, and we took with us American phonographs, and had the natives speak into them, thus being able to get records of their voices, giving language and accent, which can be used in furthering our comparative study of the American Indian. It was very amusing to see the Eskimo talk in the phonograph, and afterward listen to his own words. They thought it was a live creature imitating them.

"Another interesting exhibit we have for the Museum is a board with prayers painted on it. The Chukchi tribe, savage and wild as it is, has a religion all its own. It worships some deity and its method of prayer is to paint in blood on a board a picture of what it wants and hold the board high in the air. In this we can trace the American Indian's former way of praying."

The exhibits of the explorers have arrived in New York, and will be placed on public view at the Museum of Natural History.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Has the president of a district, or missionary in charge, the power to disorganize a branch without its consent or request?

Yes; if an exigency occurs making it wise, or necessary to prevent injury to the work in the locality of the branch, or in case of serious disturbance or confusion in the branch. Such disorganization is, however, subject to an inquiry by district or General Conference.

Has the president of the church, who is also president of the standing High Council, the right to decide what cases shall come before the High Council? If so, where is the law governing such case?

Yes. "Resolved, That the president, or presidents of the seat of the First Presidency of the church, shall have power to determine whether any such case, as may be appealed, is justly entitled to a rehearing, after examining the appeal and the evidences and statements accompanying it."—D. C. 99:14.

In electing branch officers, after the election of a presiding elder, is it in harmony with law and order to designate the lesser officers (priest, teacher, and deacon) as presiding officers?

Yes, especially if there are other priests, teachers, and deacons in the branch. The priest, teacher, and deacon are in their offices presiding officers whenever occasion requires them to so act. See Book of Rules, pages 139, 140.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Elvin wrote from Farmington, Iowa, December 17: "Having fine meetings here, but weather has been most unfavorable."

J. M. Stubbart wrote from Delta, Colorado, December 15: "I started in near Eckert last week with prospects for a good work; but snow and stormy weather prevented many attending; and finally it got so bad that no one came but me. A protracted meeting started yesterday in Eckert. This shuts me out here at present. I will go to-day to Cedaredge to try for an opening. The prospects for good to the work in these parts so far have been discouraging."

I. N. Roberts wrote from Bay Minette, Alabama, December 19: "Things are lively here; have good meetings, good turnout, and interest fine. I am showing the differences between us and the Utah faction. It is doing much good. One lady gave her name for baptism last Sunday. Conference passed off pleasantly to all. Weather is a little cooler now, which helps us out much. My health is good, plenty to eat, a good place to rest at night, and plenty of work to do."

J. F. Mintun wrote from Baxter, Iowa, December 12: "Closed meetings at Mingo last night, in the Christian church building. Had a good attendance of apparently appreciative listeners. I briefly showed the foundation of Brighamism, and the origin of polygamy, and attempted to make clear the wide difference between the faiths of the true Latter Day Saints and that institution.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By way of correction J. F. Mintun wrote from Mingo, Iowa, 15th instant, stating his debate with D. H. Bays begins the 5th instead of the 4th, as appeared in Bro. Mintun's letter last week.

We have received from W. M. Spurrier, copies of the Mexican Herald, published in the English language, at the City of Mexico, Republic of Mexico, for December 5, 7, and Sunday, December 9. This paper has the news up to date, and except some advertisements is all in the English language, showing that Mexico is being rapidly Americanized. Thanks to Mr. Spurrier.

On December 15 the shore end of the cable was laid at San Francisco, and the Silverton at once began its trip to Honolulu, paying out the cable. If nothing goes wrong the Silverton will soon have San Francisco and Honolulu in instant communication; and so far as rapidity of getting news is concerned, our island possessions will be as though part of the mainland. Success to the work of the Silverton!

We regret to learn in conversation with Elder J. D. McClure, of the Christian Church, that the Central Christian College, which has been running at Albany, Missouri, has suspended for want of financial support. Elder McClure informed us that he had labored as one of the trustees of the college for nine years, had done much work for it, and spent considerable money in striving to keep it going, and, as he added, "it is a failure after all."

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp has removed into the city of Independence, Missouri, and what labor he will be able to perform for the remainder of the conference year will be done in the Missouri field.

The Lamoni Stake Presidency has established an office in the building known as the "Herald Office Cottage." Many persons wish to consult these officers, and the establishment of this office-room is a good move. The Saints now know where to find these officers. More and better office room is needed by several of the church officers in Lamoni, and we trust the time is not far distant when we shall have roomy and comfortable office-rooms for all the church officers.

Bro. Henry Sparling wrote from Eldredge, Missouri, December 14, stating that his debate with Reverend J. M. Martin, of the Christian Church, was over. The usual church propositions were discussed, each affirming four days. Mr. Martin had delivered some lectures against "Mormonism" just previous to the debate, hence Bro. Sparling began the debate somewhat handicapped. Bro. Sparling feels he was blessed by the Spirit, and that friends were made to the cause.

We have received a clipping from the Canadian, published at Parry Sound, Ontario, taken from the issue of December 4. It is an article by Bro. S. W. Tomlinson, written in defense of our work.

The Sunday-school Quarterly for the first quarter of 1903 has been mailed. If you failed to receive yours it is evident that your subscription has expired. The Religio Quarterly will be mailed on Saturday.

The close of the year finds financial matters in this country in a strained condition. A reaction is imminent, though it is hoped a panic may be avoided.

The ceremonies at the recent completion of the great dam on the Nile opened the great reservoir at Assouan; and if it works as has been anticipated and planned, it will be the introduction of a new era for historic Egypt. The Nile, which has gone on yearly rampages, will hereafter be controlled by means of the great dam and reservoir, and the superfluous water held in reserve and gradually let out in the dry season. It is estimated that the productiveness of the valley of the Nile will be doubled by the new water-system. The reservoir above the dam is one hundred forty-four miles long, capable of holding in reserve one billion tons of water.

Sr. Roxanna Minard, of Dora, Oregon, recently wrote of her efforts to secure new subscribers, stating she had not been so successful as she would like. She says she found Saints using tobacco who claimed they could not afford to take the church papers. Of her appreciation of the HERALD she said: "You do not know how anxiously I look for my paper. I am just as glad to get it as to see some dear friend. Pray that I may be faithful to the end."

The trouble between Venezuela and England and Germany will be settled by arbitration. President Roosevelt has been asked to act as arbitrator; but as we go to press we have not learned whether he will accept or refuse.

An earthquake recently occurred at Andijan, in Russian Turkestan, and it is estimated that two thousand five hundred lives were lost.

According to advices from St. Petersburg, thousands of people in Finland are facing starvation, due to crop failures.

THE GREAT RESTITUTION.—NO. 1.

BY COLUMBUS SCOTT.

“And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.”—Acts 3:20, 21.

Amidst the rapid rush of the great world of to-day in its stupendous achievements, in the realms of science, commerce, and its unparalleled material developments, who or how many stop and become considerate enough to inquire, Is the Lord taking note of the doings of man? Is he recognized as being interested in man's welfare? Is he directing in the redemption of the race from sin and death? How? Where? By what means? Man, stop, inquire! He is “Great in counsel, and mighty in work: for thine eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men, to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.”—Jeremiah 32:19. According to this statement God is weighing man's designs, is measuring his works, in order that all may reap as they sow. He has a purpose in man's existence and achievement, both in this world and that to come. This is apparent from his purpose as declared by all the prophets relating to “the restitution of all things spoken of by” them.

Restitution is defined, to restore to a former state. And to restore is to replace; to return; as a person or thing, to a former place. To illustrate, we read: “Now therefore restore the man his wife.”—Genesis 20:7. “Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.”—Matthew 12:13.

The word restore or restoration may sometimes be used as relating to the opening stages of the Lord's work, as the work of John the Baptist for instance (Matthew 17:10-13), while the word restitution usually carries with it the carrying on of the work to its completion.

The restitution spoken of by the Apostle Peter must be an infinitely important one, since, as he affirms, all the holy prophets since the world began have been inspired to look into, and many, we may add, have written of this wonderful subject. This restitution includes much and many things; hence, “times of restitution.”

Heaven is to retain our Savior “until those times of restitution.” He, then, is to come, evidently, the second time, without sin, unto salvation, during those times of restitution.

The fact that God moves and directs in the great work determines the nature and character of the work as being divine, and the further fact that Jesus comes during the times of its accomplishment, determines the period of its commencement.

As the heavens retain Jesus “until the times of restitution,” it is plain the work has its beginning before his second coming. And this as plainly implies that Jehovah will reveal himself to man, some men, somewhere, in order that the work may have its beginning and progress.

Our Father loves man whom he has created, and has often wrought among men for their good, has often made bare his holy arm, in making himself known, and giving authority and information, that he might do the work designed; but man has as often strayed away from the path pointed out, and hence the darkness, confusion, and uncertainty resulting. As witness the times before and at the flood, and those in and after the times of Abraham, and since the times of Jesus Christ and the apostles.

He has on several occasions revealed his law, and bestowed divine authority on men for its administration, that his kingdom might be established, his truth maintained, and man's salvation from sin and death secured; but men have as often “transgressed the law, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant.” (Isaiah 24:5.) As often has come “a falling away” from the Lord's way. (2 Thessalonians 2:3.) Of that which has come to pass since Paul's day, in the church of Christ, he prophesied: “Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come [Jesus' second coming], except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?”—2 Thessalonians 2:3-5.

This prophetic statement of Paul being true, we may be sure that when the power here called the “man of sin” exalted “himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped,” and invaded the temple of God, it overturned the order and set aside the law of God, rebelled against and denied his authority; displaced the church entirely. That such is the case the Dark Ages attest. That such a work has been done, protestantism in general, with its many and varied religious forms of worship, declares. All now admit that the church, with its form, spiritual power, and ministerial authority does not now exist as it did in New Testament days. Many go so far as to teach that it ought not to so exist, that it was not designed that it should so exist now. It ought not to be forgotten that this was just what the man of sin thought about the matter, and hence he set about changing the order of God's kingdom, remodeling the form of worship and setting aside the Lord's way.

In contradistinction to this conclusion, please remember that God, who changes not (Malachi 3:6; James 1: 17), and who is no respecter of persons, in establishing his government, and its authority, when once he reveals his law, designs it to remain in force till his purposes therein are accomplished and he abrogates. And to plead a change before he orders it, is to plead the cause of "the man of sin."

Under the law of Christ as governing during the apostolic age, the right of individual freedom to weigh, investigate, judge, and conclude in that which related to religious faith, was guaranteed to all members of the church. As thus stated: "Yea, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?"—Luke 12:57. "I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say."—1 Corinthians 10: 15. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thessalonians 5: 21. "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32. Thus all were free to exercise the right of individual judgment; nay, it was the duty of all to exercise this right. But during the reign of the "man of sin," the right to question that which was established as the standard of religious belief was denied the citizens of his realm. Men were even denied the right to believe as they chose about science, as witness the following:

Pope Gregory, in encyclical, August 15, 1832, said: "The Holy Church so requites, let us sacrifice our own opinions, our knowledge, our intelligence, the splendid dreams of our imaginations and sublime attainments of human understanding."

The Latem Council, A. D. 1215, decreed: "We excommunicate and anathematize every heresy that exalts itself against the holy orthodox and Catholic faith, condemning all heretics, by whatever name they may be known; for though their faces differ, they are held together by their toils. Such as are condemned are to be delivered over to the existing secular powers to receive due punishment. If laymen, their goods must be confiscated. If priests, they shall be degraded from their respective orders, and their property applied to the church in which they officiate," etc. Not only was the power to judge those who dared to differ in opinion from the "holy orthodox and Catholic faith" exercised, but power was assumed by the "Holy Inquisition" to condemn, sentence, and see that civil powers executed the penalties decreed. But this is not all; for when Galileo demonstrated scientifically, the earth's rotary motion, it was by pontifical authority decreed: "In the name, and by the authority of Jesus Christ, the plenitude of which resides in his vicar, the pope, we declare," says Pope Urbain XIII, "that the teaching that the earth is not the center of the world, and that it moves with a diurnal motion, is absurd, philosophically false and erroneous in faith." To this Galileo subscribed, June 22, 1638, saying: "I abjure, curse, and detest the error and heresy of the motion of the earth around the sun."

A further result of this decree, two astronomers of Rome, Lesueur and Jacquier, wrote: "Newton assumes, in his third book, the hypothesis of the earth moving around the sun. The proposition of that author could not be explained, except through the same hypothesis; we have, therefore, been forced to act a character not our own. But we declare our entire submission to the decrees of the supreme Pontiff of Rome against the motion of the earth."—Newton's Principia, vol. 3, p. 450.

Further testimony on this point is here unnecessary. The history of this assumption of power to deny the individual right of private judgment touching religious and other matters by man, under penalty, dates as far back at least as the days of Justinian, A. D. 537-540.

God's standard, and man's, by which to determine truth from error, differ; as His authority bestowed on man to minister, and serve and aid their fellows, differs from man's assumption to decide for, dictate to, condemn and punish his fellow man.

The origin and character of the standards, and the authority respectively, are determined and known, the divine from the human, by their widely differing operations and their results. The divine teaches, persuades, develops morally, leads away from sin and dictation, to liberty in the truth. The human enslaves, dictates, coercively rules, and brings bondage. The former breaks the fetters of sin, darkness, and superstition; the latter forges them on man. Wherever and whenever the latter hold sway, the former can not operate. Hence the "kingdom of heaven" does not exist there. Its law and administrative authority exist not there. The human standard binds the agency—moral agency—of men; the divine encourages and coöperates with man's agency in the truth.

Says Jesus: "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." Or force, carnal force, be used; but not so the kingdom of heaven. (John 18:36.)

Man's salvation from sin, and the development of his character, his transition into the likeness of the divine, is God's glory, and his design. Man's failure to attain to this, is for man to "come short of the glory of God." But this can only be done by the divine law, and the operation on him of the divine Spirit, and then only as it becomes man's desire and pleasure to conform to the requirements of the one, and anxiously yield to the transforming, purifying, and ennobling influences of the other. God's word and the Holy Spirit act conjointly in the conversion, regeneration and development, and salvation of man.

"I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope."—Psalms 130: 5. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart:

the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."—Psalms 19: 7-9.

Jesus Christ was made the revelator of this perfect law of God to man, also the exemplar and exponent of it. This was his mission so completely that it is said of him: "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, . . . full of grace and truth."—John 1: 14. Jesus is the "Leader" and "Commander" of the children of men. He is preëminently the mediator of the "everlasting covenant" between God and man (Isaiah 55:4); and the head of the church. He magnifies the law, and makes it honorable. (Isaiah 42:21.) He is the only Savior and Redeemer known to man. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4: 12.

Man's service to God is first individual, then collective; and that collective service is acceptable only when there is unity and concert of purpose. All must enter the "strait gate," and "the narrow way," abiding in the "one faith," obeying the perfect law, being in possession of the "one Spirit," believing in the "one Lord," being members of the "one body" (church), and worshipers of the "one God." (Matthew 7: 13, 14; John 17: 20; Ephesians 4: 1-6.)

The one body or church as organized in apostolic days, with its apostles and prophets, evangelists, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, its "helps and governments," all endowed with the Holy Ghost, that made it alive and effectual, was the expression of God's will. It was God's organic act, and the visible expression of his will, as the universe of created things was the expression of his will. It was the visible expression of the divine constitution. A practicable application of the organic law, and the divine means to an end, the end being the redemption of man from sin and death, his glorification in immortality and eternal life.

What! The gospel as anciently proclaimed, and the church as then established, God's means of saving man? If not, what was? This being true, what can or has taken its place as God's means of saving mankind? Are you sure any other means can be substituted for those God-given means to save the race; and can we be assured that such substituted means would do the work? God, who knows the end from the beginning, ordained a perfect plan of salvation from the beginning. No necessity or reason for changing it. No reason could be assigned for trying to improve upon God's plan. What human mind could improve upon, or substitute for it? The finite improve upon the works and designs of the infinite? Ah, asks the reader, where on earth is that ancient plan of salvation existing and in operation?

These are just the questions we desire should be propounded. They are all important at this stage of the subject. And just here we suggest that a survey of the religious world be taken, with the purpose of aiding in the answers to these interrogatories. For more than three hundred years have Catholicity and Protestantism been debating these same questions of church organization, ministerial authority, and the operation of the Holy Spirit. But in the investigation an appeal has been made mostly to the opinions of learned men, and to the creeds—human standards—and by these they have failed to settle these questions. On the contrary, divisions and uncertainty have increased, until now further investigation is being discouraged, with the result that these all-important questions remain unanswered and unsettled, hence the darkness and numerous divisions that distract and confuse.

But let us remember this fact (and its importance can not be overestimated): God has had nothing to say on the subject for over eighteen hundred years! This is the longest period in the history of the race that he has not been heard from on this all-important question of man's eternal salvation, his means to that great end. The history of his dealings with man shows that he has always been pleased to converse with man when man's service was pleasing to him; but when men assumed to direct independently of his intervention he has ever let man proceed till he found himself in a condition of helplessness, and when his aid was sought in faith he has ever been found of man, when man was willing to accept the terms proposed. He invites the children of men to "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near."—Isaiah 55: 6. At the same time instructing us, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts; neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord." "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways than your ways." (Verse 9.) Now as to the way of salvation, taking the religious world as it exists to-day, its ways are to differ and divide; God's way is one, a straight and narrow way, his way is to unify, as we have before seen. Man by his wisdom seems to be getting farther away from the one way; continually.

When Israel, a nation of slaves on coming out of Egypt, found themselves unable to appreciate the gospel, and therefore unable to receive it in faith, God did not change the gospel in order to adapt it to their then condition (Hebrew 4: 2, Galatians 3: 19), but instituted a law designed to develop and lead them up to where they could appreciate the gospel, to lead them up to Christ. "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith."—Galatians 3: 24.

God's only means of salvation is the gospel,—as to salvation full and complete, both as relates to this life and that to come, the gospel is ample, all that is needed. No human creed or confession of faith is necessary. They are in the way, are a hindrance to it, ever have been, they distract and divide men. They produce and ever have produced division and confusion, and therefore hinder the legitimate and legal conversion of the world.

To those who anciently obeyed the gospel, Paul wrote: "For in him [Christ] dwelleth all the fullness of the godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him which is the head of all principality and power."—Colossians 2:9, 10. "That ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God."—Colossians 4:12.

The gospel "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," says Paul in Romans 1:16, 17. And he knew of but one gospel. It was revealed to him by Jesus Christ. And angels, or apostles, or men not apostles are under the divine displeasure should they attempt to preach any other. (Galatians 1:6-9, 11, 12.)

The gospel is known by other titles in the Scriptures. It is known as the "everlasting covenant." (Psalms 105; Isaiah 24:5; 55:3.) To all mankind God says: "Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." It is called "the gospel of Christ" (Romans 1:16); "the gospel of Jesus Christ" (Mark 1:1); "the gospel of God" (Romans 1:1); "the gospel of his Son" (verse 9); "the glorious gospel of Christ" (2 Corinthians 4:4); and it is entitled "the everlasting gospel" (Revelation 14:6). The gospel of Christ being the law of the kingdom of God on earth, it is called, as Jesus preached it, "the gospel of the kingdom" (Matthew 4:23; 9:35); and "this gospel of the kingdom" (Matthew 24:14). And twice, the word "gospel" and the phrase "kingdom of God" are used interchangeably, for to preach one is to necessarily preach the other. (See Luke 4:18-43; Acts 8:12; Acts 20:25.)

The church established through the preaching of the kingdom, is the kingdom of God or of heaven, as existing among men on earth, for the gospel consists of God's word, the divine authority to administer the word, and includes the Holy Ghost, that causes the church to live, that inspires and enlightens its officers and members. So we read: "For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power."—1 Corinthians 4:20. "For our gospel came not to you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sakes."—1 Thessalonians 1:5. Four elements the gospel consists of: "Word," "power" or authority, "Holy Ghost," and "much assurance." Should any one of these four elements be lacking, the gospel ceases to be operative, as the universe with one of its leading component elements gone would cease to operate and would dissolve.

The "much assurance" of the gospel is the effect of the operation of the Holy Ghost, in light, wisdom, and knowledge given to the ministry and membership of the church. The Holy Ghost being the Comforter that guides into truth and shows them things to come, that gives to them the things of God, and bears witness to the truth. (John 14:15-17; verse 26; 15:26, 27; 16:13, 14.)

"Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God."—1 Corinthians 2:12.

The word of the gospel is "the word of the truth of the gospel" (Colossians 1:5). The truth relating to God the Father, his character, and his attributes, about his Son or Savior, our High Priest and Mediator, and that which relates to the commandments and promises of the "law of life," of "Christ," (Galatians 6:2); and that which reveals man's duties to God, and his fellow man. "The power" or authority of the gospel is that vested in Christ's ministry, by virtue of which they officiate in the proclamation of the gospel to the nations, administer its ordinances to man, and build up the kingdom of God.

The order of the church, as developed through the operation of the gospel, with its classes or grades of the ministry, is thus set forth in the word. Jesus, who is the head of all principality and power, said: "And upon this rock I will build my church." "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." (Matthew 16:18; 28:18.) This being true, no one on earth can move forward to administer in the things that relate to the building up of his church, and to man's eternal salvation, without receiving authority from him who has authority, "all authority" "in heaven and in earth."

In harmony with the truth as he declared, when he began to build his church, it is written, "And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach."—Mark 3:13, 14.

"Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."—John 2:21.

And yet later he said to them: "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."—Matthew 28:18, 19. If, therefore, those called to be apostles could not go and do this divine work without thus being divinely authorized, how can those not apostles presume to act in the divine ministry without a divine call?

Even the Apostle Paul could not answer this query save by asking, "How shall they preach except they be sent?"—Romans 10: 15.

Paul describes the divine building thus: "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that, miracles; then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Corinthians 12: 27, 28.

"And he [Christ] gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." What for? "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." How long did God design such ministry to exist? "Till we all come into the unity [not divisions] of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." For what other purposes are such ministry as this designed of God? "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." (Ephesians 4: 11-16.) Elders, bishops, and deacons. (Colossians 1: 1; Titus 1: 5.

This description of the church of Christ by the Apostle Paul, discloses the design of God touching the church as being that it should be; a unity, one, not only in faith, doctrine, and purpose, but in organization also. To be the one body of Christ, the house, the great spiritual temple, making increase unto the edifying or building of itself up in love in Christ. Being represented elsewhere as the bride elect of Christ. "For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the Savior of the body."—Ephesians 5: 23.

The church thus formed is God's means of preserving his people from the wiles of cunning, crafty impostors and deceivers, from the winds of false doctrines and destructive divisions. This being true, the inquiry becomes pertinent, Why has not the church as described by Christ and the apostles of old remained in the world down through the last eighteen hundred years? Why did it cease to exist and so many differing churches come upon the earth in its stead? Why did the true church not come on down the ages till now by succession? Has it not so done? It is plain, since the organizing of the church as described by Paul was but the visible expression of God's will in the matter—is the organic act under the divine constitution, that it ought to be here.

To these inquiries we reply: There occurred the great apostasy, "the falling away" from the gospel faith, as foretold by Paul. (2 Thessalonians 2: 3, 4.) False teachers arose, some right in the church, taught perverse doctrines, and did not spare the flock of God. (Acts 20: 28-30.) Many of the church gave way to "seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." (1 Timothy 4: 1-3.) Pride invaded the church. They would not endure sound doctrine. They "heaped to themselves teachers," chose their own preachers instead of letting Christ choose for them, and these false teachers turned "their ears away from the truth," and turned them to fables. (2 Timothy 3: 1-4.) Doctrines of devils, perverse doctrines, and fables gained the ascendancy over the doctrine of Christ, and the church went off into darkness, became disorganized, or went into "the wilderness." (See Revelation 12: 1-12.) False doctrines wrought such changes in church matters that the true doctrine and organization of the church was gradually displaced by the false. This work continued till the church of God no longer existed as an organized body. The reign of the "man of sin" was long and grievous. Many religious ideas of the heathen were adopted and intermingled with the doctrines of the false teachers of those dark days of the world. The predictions of our Savior were fulfilled: "From the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force," "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." (Matthew 11: 12; 24: 12.)

These are a few of the many reasons assigned in the prophetic word and subsequent history why the church of the New Testament has not come down by succession. But are we without hope? Will the church as described in the Bible exist on earth no more till Jesus comes in glory? How will the bride of Christ get ready to receive him at his coming? We are told by him to "Watch, therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." (Matthew 24: 42.) But how are we to know when his coming is near, that we may be found on our watchtower and not be deceived? Truly our subject increases in interest as we proceed.

How shall we know? By the great latter-day work of God, in the Great Restitution.

It is through the gospel of Christ that God reveals himself to man, and by it they are brought to an understanding of his purposes concerning themselves and their salvation.

He "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us: for in him we live, and move, and have our being."—Acts 17: 26-28.

But the question now is, Will mankind seek and feel after the Lord? Are they inclined to find him? Ah, this is to be tested. He has made provision for this in his economy. At each of his dispensations in the past a few have sought, felt after, and found him to their eternal well being. A few honest ones prior to the flood sought and found the Lord, and walked in the way of gospel righteousness. Holy men, revelators, and prophets were among them. God communed with them. They walked in righteousness before him, and attained unto eternal life. (Matthew 23:35; Hebrews 11:4, 5, 7.) They knew of the great salvation through the Christ, of his first and second advents, and of the final judgment of man. (See Jude 14; Revelation 5:9.) Such was the case also in the days of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They held communion with God, and published the gospel of eternal salvation to the nations, being anointed of God to do the work. (John 8:56; Galatians 3:8; Psalms 105:13-15.)

In the introduction of the Christian dispensation, the heavens were opened. Angels, prophets, and apostles were sent, the gospel proclaimed, the kingdom of God established, in the "net" or "tender" "blade" form, and for a season the good work was maintained. A great work was accomplished. But the "Dark Ages" came; gradually the true gospel light went out; men departed from God, taught perverse doctrines, doctrines of devils, and heathen dogmas usurped the place of the truth, until the kingdom of Christ disappeared from among men. Divine authority took its flight to its native heavens again. (Revelation 12:5.)

Judging the present and future by the past, of God's dealings with man, we are led to conclude that he will open the work of the Great Restitution by committing again to man a dispensation of the everlasting gospel. Man, to obey, understand, and act in harmony with God, must understand God's will. This is necessarily true, and hence is the place for the work of God to commence.

John the Revelator, who foresaw the apostasy, and the church so far depart from God and the truth, as to cease to live in the light of the gospel, and consent to receive her doctrinal nourishment "from the face of the serpent" (Revelation 12:14), and that, too, for a period of twelve hundred and sixty years, saw, also, the time come when God restored the gospel, and thus the test applied as to whether men would seek him, as he designed. And so, just a short time before the harvest of the earth, "in the end of this world" (see Matthew 13:40), that the church may be organized again according to the pattern as set forth in the New Testament, and declared: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."—Revelation 14:6, 7.

This is a wonderful statement. It portrays a grand work; a work of God in which all the nations of the earth are, or ought to be, and finally will be, concerned. The angels of God have always taken a deep interest in the great work of human salvation. They are God's ministers (Psalms 103:21), and "are sent forth to minister for those who shall be heirs of salvation." Some have tried to veil this prophecy of the Revelator and take it from the realm of literality, by assuming that this angel was not a reality, but is a symbol; but they are not united among themselves as to what he symbolizes. Some say the angel symbolizes a class of men, proclaiming the near approach of Christ in glory. But those pretended angel-men said Christ was to come in A. D. 1844. Christ did not come in glory then. Their message was false. It is now claimed that instead of Christ's coming in glory being the event to transpire in 1844, he went into the most holy place in the tabernacle in heaven at that date, and has been cleansing the sanctuary. They thereby admit their first mistake. This latter idea is a mistake; for Christ, "by his own blood he entered once into the holy place," "now to appear in the presence of God for us." (Hebrews 9:12, 24.) Can there be any more holy place than "in the presence of God" in heaven itself? Christ was there when Paul wrote.

So both these positions are untrue. John's angel symbolizes neither of these messages. John's angel brought the everlasting gospel. That same gospel was preached in John's day; but neither of those positions were connected with it.

Some assert that the angel symbolizes the great Reformation of the sixteenth century; but this would have the restoration begin before the "time, times and a half a time," of John (Revelation 12:14) is ended. And the church is to remain in the desolate, disorganized condition during that length of time. So far as man's ability to reorganize the church without God interposing, it has been demonstrated to be an impossibility, by the many built up, yet not one is like that described in the Bible. The wisdom and power were essential to build and carry on the church in the first instance, and when because of the apostasy his power was withdrawn from it, it went to fragments, to Babylon, to darkness. And nothing short of the power of God can restore and rebuild it. And this is the best of all reasons why he sent his angel with the everlasting gospel, the gospel not "in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."—1 Thessalonians 1:5. By the power men are authorized to build as in ancient days; by the Holy Ghost they are directed when to begin the work, and how to build. That angels should visit the servants of God in the last days demonstrates the truth, "Jesus Christ the same, yesterday, to-day, and for ever," in his dealings with man. (Hebrews 13:8.)

Jesus, after foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem and the dissolution of the Jewish nation, and the captivity of the Jews, wept over them, informing them that they should see him no more till he should come in glory. The disciples, noting the strange prediction, afterward approached him privately and inquired, "Saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"—Matthew 24:3. A threefold interrogation, the last one being of special interest here,—that relating to "the end of the world." The Savior proceeds to answer the last question first, giving in outline the leading events of special importance to transpire along the ages down to his second advent, the coming of false Christs and false prophets and their deceptions (see verses 4, 5); the overturning and desolation of the nations by war; the famines, pestilences, and earthquakes; likewise the great persecutions to come on the people of God (verses 6 to 9). And then the apostasy is predicted, with the reign of iniquity, that Paul said had already begun to work in his day, and that was to develop the reign of the "man of sin," that was to desolate the church (2 Thessalonians 2:3), "because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold" (Matthew 24:12). Jesus then foretells the wonderful work of God to be wrought in the world just before the end comes, thus: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come."—Verse 14.

After thus leading the mind down to the end of the world, thus answering the disciples' last question first, he then turns their attention to their first, that relating to the destruction of Jerusalem, and portrays at some length the tribulations that have come upon the Jews during the last eighteen hundred years.

It is evident that this proclamation of the gospel predicted by the Savior is identical with that foretold by the Revelator. The work to be done is the same. This gospel is to be declared—"preached"—to all nations as a witness. The statement is, "Having the everlasting gospel to preach to every nation, and to every tongue, and to every kindred." Both Jesus and John refer to the same time; just before the end of the world, or, at the downfall of Mystery Babylon, or the harvest of the earth. (Revelation 14:14-16.) What a wondrous day that will be! No day has ever been like it. The inhabitants of the earth in all their history have never witnessed any event like it. The end of the world! The tares of the earth reaped, or the wicked destroyed; earthly governments dissolved; the stars fall from heaven; the sun be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, eclipsed by the glory of God attending the event. The trump of God will sound, the righteous dead come forth in the glorious resurrection, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord.

We should not marvel, then, in view of these great events, that God will give the world an unmistakable notice and warning that they may prepare themselves for the results. They, in the light of the gospel of the kingdom, to decide their own fate or good fortune, their own salvation or condemnation, so that when the day of their trial and judgment comes, they may not complain, saying, "We had but the religious theories of men presented to us." Just here the question will arise in the mind of the reader: What becomes of all those living during the time intervening the taking away the gospel by the great "falling away," the apostasy, and before the restoration of the gospel?

This same question might have been asked of Noah. (See Genesis 5:24; 6:1, 2; Matthew 24:38, 39; Hebrews 11:7; 2 Peter 2:5.) Also of Abraham, when the gospel was restored in his day (see Genesis 17:17-19; Psalms 105:5-15; Romans 4:12, 13; Galatians 3:8; Hebrews 11:9, 10), and by which he was enabled to look away beyond this life to the land of eternal promise, and see the holy city with its glorified inhabitants.

This interrogatory could have been propounded to Moses, when he was suffering "the reproach of Christ," by proclaiming his gospel. (Hebrew 11:24-27; 4:2.)

The like question could have been asked of our Savior, when saying to the people, "I am come a light into the world."

But the question properly put, is, What became of those who rejected the greater light when sent of God? What are to be the results with those of us who reject the gospel as restored in fulfillment of the words of Jesus and the prophets, to warn and save us now? Can it be rejected with impunity? Can we be justified by passing it by unheeded? Answer!

Our Savior took occasion to instruct the disciples concerning the verity and character of the restitution of all things, and of the time of its introduction, when coming down from the mount of transfiguration, where with Peter, James, and John, he had showed to them in vision, the glory of his second coming, and the power to attend the immortal state. Peter, in referring to this vision in after times, said: "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. . . . And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount."—2 Peter 1:16, 18.

Jesus coming in glory without sin, unto salvation, is a glorious reality to be. The three disciples had seen this glorious coming. They thought on the matter while descending from the mount, and seeing represented with it the work of restoration to precede the coming and prepare the way for the glorious event, as they had heard the Pharisees teach, "And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things."—Matthew 17:10, 11. "Elias must first come." That is, before Jesus comes.

Here is the positive evidence that the restitution is to be opened up before the Savior comes, and that in his own words. No two ways of interpreting this. Elias is a prophet, and more (Matthew 11:9), he is the restorer, and the preparer of the way for the coming of the Messiah in glory. Malachi speaks of Elias thus: "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts. But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth. . . . And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts. For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed."—Malachi 3:1, 2, 5, 6.

The sudden coming to judgment spoken of here can not refer to the Lord's first coming, for at that time he entered not into judgment with mankind. (See Luke 12:14.) "Man, who made me a judge or divider over you." Again: "And if any man hear my words and believe not, I judge him not; for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world."—John 12:47. But Malachi must be referring to the second coming of the Christ. Otherwise a plain, unanswerable contradiction occurs between the Prophet and his Lord.

BREAD AND TRACTS.

There are persons who make light of the idea of giving tracts to the poor; they prefer to give them soup, or clothing, or "something that will do them good"—though those who give the tracts probably give much more soup and clothing than those who do not.

It is true that to a hungry man, soup is likely to be much more agreeable than a tract. There are persons whose poverty is chronic, and who, as long as they live, will want help from some one.

When we give a man a dinner, he eats it, and it is gone; and to-morrow he is just as hungry as ever he was. But if we can give him a tract, or perhaps speak a kind word, which will lead him to a life of sobriety, industry, and holiness, he will soon become self-supporting, and will need assistance no longer.

Hence the tract, which costs a penny, and the instruction which may be given in an hour, may be worth more to a poor man than wagon loads of bread or large amounts of money bestowed in alms. It is therefore the truest philanthropy, as well as the truest economy, to administer largely to men's spiritual as well as to their temporal necessities. When we strike at vice and sin we strike at the root of poverty and disgrace.

"It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone." So let us see to it that we feed the spiritually hungry with the "bread of life," that will satisfy their longings and give them eternal peace. The Saints should make an abundant use of the church literature, that will tell the gospel story in the quiet hours of the home. Seed thus sown will presently yield an abundant harvest. Lend a hand to those who are struggling bravely to cultivate their minds for Christian usefulness.

There are people who have to work every Sunday, and are not permitted to attend church, who might be induced to subscribe for the church papers or at least read some of our tracts or books.

WORK WHILE IT IS DAY.

It is the design of the Lord that we should "work out our salvation" (Philippians 2:12), and he has appointed unto us this probationary state in which to work. The Master has said, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."—John 9:4. If Christ must work while it is day, surely we, his children, must also work while it is day, since he has said, "The night cometh when no man can work."

For believers in the Book of Mormon, the following will be in evidence: "For behold, this life is the time for men to prepare to meet God: yea, behold, the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors. . . . For after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness, wherein there can be no labor performed."—Alma 16:30, small edition.

We can understand by this what Christ meant by the day and night referred to. Paul also agrees with this thought when he says, "Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."—2 Corinthians 6:2. He evidently meant this life. Christ refers to the work of salvation, and Paul says there is an accepted time, the day of salvation. This corresponds to the day of life spoken of above. The night spoken of in which no man can work, surely is the night of sleep or death, from the fact that the Scriptures often refer to this period as a time of sleep; and Paul has said, "They that sleep sleep in the night."—1 Thessalonians 5:7. Paul again in speaking of Christ's resurrection says he became "the first fruits of them that slept."—1 Corinthians 15:20.

Daniel in speaking of the resurrection says, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."—Daniel 12:2. This sleep includes both righteous and wicked; and while it may be argued that it refers to the bodies in their graves, it also includes their spirits; for Paul while speaking of Jesus dying and rising again, said, "Even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."—1 Thessalonians 4:14.

These, while they were asleep in Jesus, are not in their graves, but are to come with him in his glory. These were not, as some think, unconscious, and hence could do no labor, but perhaps were the souls of martyrs that John saw under the altar, who "cried with a loud voice," etc. (Revelation 6:9, 10.)

Some may think that the writer does not believe in the gospel being preached to the spirits in prison. Yes; but he does not believe that they will there be able to work out their salvation in the kingdom of God, but that they may repent of their disobedience and be judged according to men of equal merits in the flesh. (See 1 Peter 3:19, 20; 4:6.) "For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive a reward of the deeds done in the body; things according to what he hath done, whether good or bad."—2 Corinthians 5:10, I. T. The judgment will accord to the actions of life in the body or flesh, not out of it, for after this life we have no evidence of deeds being done; but rather, in that state no man can work.

The question may be asked, Why, then, did Christ go to preach to the spirits in prison? The answer is that they may be freed from the consequences of a broken law. We are told that they were disobedient in the days of Noah, and, perhaps, to their number have been added the disobedient of all ages, who have known the gospel and disregarded its mandates. From this disability of a broken law, it is necessary that they should be relieved to place them on an equality with others who never knew the gospel.

We have no evidence, known to the writer, that the gospel ever was or ever will be preached to others than the disobedient. Those who die without law, we are told, shall be saved by the mercies of Christ, and have the same claim on his mercies as little children. "For behold that all little children are alive in Christ, and also all they that are without the law. For the power of redemption cometh on all they that have no law; wherefore, he that is not condemned, or he that is under no condemnation, can not repent; and unto such baptism availeth nothing. But it is mockery before God, denying the mercies of Christ, and the power of his Holy Spirit, and putting trust in dead works. . . . Repentance is unto them that are under condemnation, and under the curse of a broken law. And the first fruits of repentance is baptism."—Moroni 8:3.

So we see that those who die without law have no more need to repent of any fracture of the gospel law than the infant. Baptism for the dead, even, can no more apply to their case than for the infant. They are saved without the gospel law by the mercies of Christ. "Where no law is, there is no transgression" (Romans 4:15), and the Gentiles having not the law, are a law unto themselves (Romans 2:14), and hence can not be held as transgressors of, or disobedient, to the gospel law. Those who have known and disobeyed the gospel, must have an opportunity to repent and receive remission of sins before they can stand on equal footing and receive equal rewards with men in the flesh of equal moral standing, who never had the gospel presented to them and hence were not disobedient to its behests. They may repent in the spirit life, for that is a mental act and not a deed or work necessary to be done in the body.

Baptism for the dead may apply here for the remission of sins, but it will not save them in the kingdom or celestial glory of God, as we will see later. Some may ask, Why not say they are to be judged according to those who obey the gospel in the flesh? The simple reason is, they have not passed through the trials of life necessary to prepare them for that high calling. Christ said, "He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me."—Matthew 10:38. And Paul has said we are "joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, the two may be also glorified together."—Romans 8:17. And again, "We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God."—Acts 14:22.

Those who had the gospel preached to them in prison, did not obey the gospel in the flesh, so did not take up their cross and follow Christ, and did not suffer with him, nor did they pass through much tribulation for Christ's sake, through which Paul says they must pass in order to enter into the kingdom. Latter-day revelation shows us where they belong. In the vision, Doctrine and Covenants 76:6, we are told who shall be judged worthy to come forth in the terrestrial degree of glory spoken of in 1 Corinthians 15:40, 41. The vision says, "Behold, these are they who die without law; and also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited, and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it."

Here we have the destiny of two distinct classes pointed out. Those who die without law, and those who receive not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards receive it; or who receive the gospel as taught by Christ in the prison. These two classes, constituting the honorable men of the earth, are only to be awarded the second degree of glory, though part of them have received the gospel, but not in the flesh. This degree of glory also includes some who received the gospel in the flesh, but were not valiant in the testimony of Jesus.

While this degree of glory is composed of the honorable men of the earth there are exceptions. The most honorable ones of earth are to be found in the church of the firstborn, heirs of celestial glory. And God, being just in every possible sense, will grant celestial glory also to those honorable ones who never had an opportunity to embrace the gospel in this life, but would have gladly done so had they had the opportunity. The following revelation given at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple is in evidence: "Thus came the voice of the Lord unto me, saying: 'All who have died without a knowledge of this gospel, who would have received it if they had been permitted to tarry, shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom of God; also all that shall die henceforth without a knowledge of it, who would have received it with all their hearts, shall be heirs of that kingdom, for I, the Lord, will judge all men according to their works, according to the desire of their hearts.'

"And I also beheld that all children who die before they arrive at the years of accountability, are saved in the celestial kingdom of heaven."—Millennial Star, volume 15, page 620; also Church History, volume 2, page 16.

In this we find no exception to the rule that God has given, of judging all men according to the deeds done in the body. He judges them according to their works, according to the desires of their hearts while they inhabited their tabernacle of clay." These, most likely, are the Gentiles Paul speaks of when he says, "When the Gentiles which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves: which show the works of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or else excusing one another."—Romans 2: 14, 15.

While they have not the outward law of the gospel, that they might obey, such as baptism and the laying on of hands, etc., they have the law written in their hearts, which says, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."—Matthew 7: 12. The Scripture, when it says "Where no law is, there is no transgression" (Romans 4: 15), does not imply that all who die without law will be saved in celestial glory, nor even in terrestrial glory. Neither does the vision, when it speaks of those who die without law coming forth in terrestrial glory, imply that none who die without law will receive their portion in the third degree of glory, that Paul compares to the stars. (See 1 Corinthians 15: 41.)

We have already noted that the celestial and terrestrial glories embrace the honorable men of earth, so we may expect a place of rewards for those who are not honorable, yet have done some good deeds, such as receiving a prophet in the name of a prophet, or receiving a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, or whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward. (Matthew 10: 41, 42.) God has prepared for such a glory, that Paul compares to the stars; and says, "for one star differs from another star in glory," so these differ in their glory according to their deeds.

The vision tells us again who shall receive their part in this glory. "These are they who receive not the gospel of Christ, neither the testimony of Jesus." And again, "These are they who are liars, and sorcerers, and adulterers, and whoremongers, and whosoever loves and makes a lie; these are they who suffer the wrath of God on the earth; these are they who suffer the vengeance of eternal fire; these are they who are cast down to hell and suffer the wrath of Almighty God until the fullness of times."—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 7.

The same also states "that they were as innumerable as the stars in the firmament of heaven, or as the sand upon the seashore."

So we see there are a great many who attain to this condition, and while we are told that those in prison for disobedience, who do not receive the gospel there, will be of that number, we may safely conclude that some who die without law will be there; for the liar, sorcerer, adulterer, etc, may be found in among them as well as among the disobedient. Besides Paul has said, "Tribulation and anguish [cometh], upon every soul of man that doeth evil; of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile: but glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first and also the Gentile. For there is no respect of persons with God. For as many as have sinned without law shall perish without law; and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law."—Romans 2: 9-12.

The heathen being without law, "Are a law unto themselves" (Romans 2: 14), and will be rewarded or punished by that which is a law unto them. All people have some law requiring obedience for the betterment of man, and punishing the disobedient, and God will cause tribulation and anguish, or glory, honor, and peace, to come to all as they honor or disregard their laws: Their conscience also being witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or excusing them. Those who would have embraced the gospel shall receive celestial glory, other honorable ones will receive terrestrial glory, and those who sin without law, shall perish without law, and have to take a terrestrial glory.

We have observed that those who attain to the third degree of glory, receive not the gospel, neither the testimony of Jesus, neither the prophets, neither the everlasting covenant. Some of them, no doubt, were of the disobedient who had the gospel preached to them by Christ, but disregarded it. Hence they do not receive their glory through the gospel, but are depending wholly upon the mercies of Christ, as we have learned that some heathens and all infants receive salvation. These, above referred to, are heirs of salvation, but not in the kingdom of God. Paul says Christ "is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe."—1 Timothy 4:10. These do not receive of the special salvation.

These, though saved in a sense, will be shut out from the presence of the Lord, and "where God and Christ dwell they can not come, worlds without end."—Doctrine and Covenants 76:7. They are there simply through mercy and there they must remain, worlds without end. They have passed from this world without works to commend them, and the night has come when no man can work. The question is asked, Why, then, are they ministered to by those of the terrestrial glory and by angels? They are to be governed and cheered and comforted, no doubt, in that state, and those who do so will minister to them. While they are to receive the Holy Spirit, to some extent, through these administrations, they can not receive of his fullness in the eternal world (Ibid.), and they can not come to where he dwells, worlds without end; so the ministrations will have but a limited effect.

The above evidence goes to show that the glory of those who receive terrestrial glory is unalterable, and obtained through conditions of earth life, and as God is no respecter of persons, it is quite reasonable to believe that the same will be true of those who attain to terrestrial glory. Otherwise how shall the saints have dominion in that everlasting kingdom under the whole heavens (Daniel 7:27), and have authority over ten cities and five cities, etc. (Luke 19:17-19), if those of the terrestrial world are soon going to step out into the celestial glory? Again the objector asks, If there be no chance for advancement from one glory to another in the future state, "why shall all the families of the earth come up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts?" (Zechariah 14:17.)

It is true this is to take place after Judah and Jerusalem have fought their last battles, and after the great plagues have worked their destruction of the wicked, and every one's hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor. (Verses 12-16.) These families are the righteous that shall be left after all the wicked shall be destroyed and there is "an entire separation of the righteous and wicked."—Doctrine and Covenants 63:13. These being righteous, we may expect them to go up to Jerusalem to worship. We have reasons, however, to believe that they will not always continue so, for Egypt and other nations that do not go up to worship, are threatened with no rain (verses 18, 19). Isaiah says "the sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed" (Isaiah 65:20), and is speaking of the time when there will be no weeping heard, nor the voice of crying (verse 19).

These scriptures go to prove that earth life is not ended with all when Christ comes to reign as "King of kings and Lord of lords," but some will still be subject to earth conditions, such as famine, punishment, condemnation, and death, for he says in verse 20 "the child shall die a hundred years old." All do not change to immortality then, but must wait till their allotted time comes and then receive their change. "Nevertheless it is appointed to him to die at the age of man; wherefore children shall grow up until they become old, old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye."—Doctrine and Covenants 63:13. This explains Isaiah's statement while speaking of that time of peace in which he says, "There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die a hundred years old, but the sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed."—Isaiah 65:18, 20.

The change will come to each individual, not when Christ comes, but when he gets to be a hundred years old. If mortality ceased at the coming of Christ, the beginning of this reign of peace, there would be no children to die a hundred years old. Immortal beings surely can not die. Then some will live in mortality during the millennium and build houses, plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them and beget children, for verse 23 says, "They are the blessed of the Lord and their offspring with them." These children will do likewise, and die a hundred years old.

These are the nations and families that are to come up to Jerusalem to worship, and their posterity will continue until the millennium is ended and the little season is passed, and will be the nations that will be in the four quarters of the earth, which Satan will gather upon the breadth of the earth, and compass the camp of the saints about, which shall be destroyed by fire from heaven. Then mortality will end, and not till then. (See Revelation 20:9.) Until that time the day of salvation, the day of this life is open to man, and he will be required to serve God; but the sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed. Then we should all work while it is day, and by our works make our glory what we would desire it to be. Do not let us wait till the next stage of life to perform our work. It must be performed here or we will suffer loss.

Let us not be of the "many which shall say, Eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die: and it shall be well with us. And there shall also be many which shall say, Eat, drink, and be merry; nevertheless, fear God, he will justify in committing a little sin: yea, lie a little, take the advantage of one because of his words, dig a pit for thy neighbor; there is no harm in this. And do all these things, for to-morrow we die; and if it so be that we are guilty, God will beat us with a few stripes, and at last we shall be saved in the kingdom of God."—Book of Mormon, Nephi 12: 1.

I wish there were no Latter Day Saints among the many who speak and act thus. It is true we are weak and liable to err, but let us remember God will call on us to give an account for every idle word and failure of duty. We will be judged according to the deeds done in the body. Let us act wisely.

Flower Missions.

While doing up my work to-day I have been thinking a great deal of some of the customs in vogue among the churches (more common among some churches than our own, I presume). I was thinking more especially of the flower missions and committees whose work is to carry flowers to the sick. God forbid that I should say anything to discourage or condemn any good thing; but I ask, Is this a good thing? For instance, you are sick, bed-fast, and somewhat restless and nervous from the unusual confinement. Two girls, of what is called the "upper ten," come to see you and bring flowers. You are pleased at the prospect of a little chat to relieve the monotony of the afternoon, but their first actions and words are calculated to impress upon you the fact of their condescension. One's looks are directed by the eyes of the other to your soiled counterpane which, on account of lack of means and insufficient household help, is not kept as clean as you would like. Sidelong glances are taken at your poor furniture on which the varnish is only too scant. You lie in a wretched silence trying to think of something to talk about which will interest them, all the while feeling that you have not a thing in common between you. After a quarter of an hour of boredom on both sides, the visitors take their departure, carefully holding aside their silk skirts that they may not become contaminated, and as they pass out you catch their amused giggle and undertone remarks which gives you only too plain an idea of what they think of it all. They go back to their societies and report so many visits made, so much good work done for the Lord. But is it? Let us go back to the sick-room. You lie there with a tumult of thoughts charging through your brain; bitter thoughts that you are ashamed to even confess, trying to reconcile it all and not to care. But you in your weak and nervous conditions can not put it from you, and when your patient, hard-working husband comes home at night, coming into your room with muddy overshoes on (but he didn't think) and asks you why you are so still, you put your head against his dirty coat and sob out all your troubles, while he wrathfully vows that should they come again the door shall not be opened to them.

Now, sisters, brothers, tell me what good has been done by these young ladies whom you know by experience would not recognize you on the street if you met them among their own associates the next day? Would not the red-faced washerwoman's half-wilted geranium be more prized than the roses these young and thoughtless girls brought? You know there is nothing in the heart of the washerwoman but kindly feeling for you and you appreciate her accordingly.

Flowers are God's sweetest gift to mankind and should be emblems of good will and love, but let them be carried by those who come to you with good will and love in their hearts; then will God be praised for his blessings and gratitude and thankfulness will be spontaneous.

VIOLET.

We appreciate the above letter and recognize the picture, but surely all young girls who carry flowers are not like these. We would be glad to hear from some one else on this subject to see the other side of the picture—and the Home Column also would be glad to hear again from "Violet" upon other matters of interest to the sisters.—Ed.

PAPEETE, November 14.

I wish to acknowledge the receipt of two rolls of Gospel Quarterlies and the October number of the Religio Quarterly—a little gem—and thank the donor for them, and for kind remembrance also. The Gospel Quarterlies for this present year are far in advance of our schools, but we will keep them for future use.

I am honestly proud of our magazine, Autumn Leaves. I think the October number is just about perfect. I say October number because in that all the type is plain and soothing to the eyesight. I am glad, too, that plain, ordinary type, like a plain well-made dress, never goes out of fashion, though there may be many new-fangled things in fashion.

All is peaceful here at the islands, and we are well and thankful.

E. BURTON.

LASALLE, Illinois, November 24.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column: I have been thinking I would write to the HERALD. I enjoy reading it and the articles in the Column. I, like a good many others, am one of the isolated ones. And, to make it worse still, my husband has no use for my faith. It is seldom I can get him to read anything in my church papers. Prayer, and the verses found in proverbs: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not unto thine own understanding; in all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths;" also in the 37th psalm, "Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed," are a source of great comfort to me. It seems at times as if I could not endure my trials, but I know there are others worse off than I. Lately a new trial has been added. I hope, trust, and pray that it may be removed as the months and years go by. My heavenly Father knows what it is, nevertheless I ask the sisters to pray that it may be taken from my path.

I enjoy dear Sr. Snow's writings, and O how I wish she could go to the Saints' Home to live. I only wish I had an abundance of means. I would try and do some good with it, not hoard it up as some rich people do. Dear sisters, let us pray for Sr. Snow, that if it be God's will she may go to the Home to live and enjoy her life.

Am glad to know there are some who will subscribe for our papers. It seems as if I could not do without them. The last few years I have been enabled to earn my own money for them, as my husband didn't like that I should use his, but don't know how it will be in the future, but trust that I may be enabled some way to get them.

Sisters, those of you who have the blessed privilege of attending our services, don't neglect one Sabbath, one meeting, unless sickness prevents. Think of those of us who would gladly go if we could.

To the young sisters, and brothers too, I want to say, be firm in the faith always. Never let anything entice you from the path of right and duty. Make it a point to read night and morning in God's holy word, not neglecting to pray. And, dear young sisters, have nothing whatever to do with a young man who drinks. I know whereof I speak, for I have drinking to contend with.

Will some of the Saints living in Ladd, Illinois, call on me?

Sunday-School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.
Henderson, Mills County, Iowa.

Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to Editors HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa.

MANY persons use illustrations of some kind. Some of them are good. They accomplish the object sought. Many are so-called good but are not good. They are nice to hear, but are not good illustrations, because they draw the mind away from the point sought to be taught instead of fastening the mind and attention upon it. Others are not good because irrelevant to the point at issue. The same may be said of objects or pictures. Note carefully what is said about illustrations in the following paper.—ED.

Value of Objects in Sunday-School Work.

One visiting a kindergarten or primary room in a public school will notice that the teacher uses objects or pictures to illustrate nearly everything she wishes to teach the pupil. Any one can learn by the concrete method easier than by the abstract.

In order to teach a primary class successfully and impress the truth on the pupils' minds we must teach it to them as children and not as if they were adults.

Froebel says, "We should not forget that instruction should start from the pupil's own life and proceed from it like a bud or sprout. The remedy for our evils lies in commanding child-nature by obeying child-nature. We should teach a subject to a child through his natural point of contact with life, his concrete sense experiences, his activities, his appreciations, his affections.

CHILDREN LOVE

the grass carpet, the cool breezes, the shade, the leafy trees, the flowers, and all out doors. Let us take advantage of that love to teach them that all of these things are theirs to enjoy—gifts from God our heavenly Father. Starting with through experience, and is personally interested in, the subject is thenceforth to be progressively developed. If this development of new truth be really a legitimate unfolding, a "natural development of his own interests, it is his own, it is really a part of himself."

If a child is taught to observe and eagerly watch the manifestations and changes of every season, the sprouting of the tender germs, the little birds in their nests, the bees in their hives, the ripening fruits, yes, the whole household of nature, he will reap more benefit from this than any amount of schooling or books or anything else can give him.

Take some object or picture, something the child is interested in or comes in contact with; we can develop ideas and thoughts around this object and then apply it to the spiritual truth that we wish to impress on the minds of the children.

We know by our own personal experience that if we can see anything for ourselves, if the natural eye can help the imagination, we can understand more about it in five minutes observation than any one can explain to us in as many hours if we have not seen it.

If it is not convenient for the teacher to show the object, they might a picture of the object or objects they would like to use. The teacher, by making a study of objects surrounding the children, can make them "interesting and beautiful" to them, full of suggestion and part of the golden chain that links the world to God. In picture work, a teacher must love nature in order to enter into loving appreciation of nature. A teacher should never make a story or illustration more prominent than the truth they wish to illustrate. An illustration must grow as naturally out of the subject as a flower out of a plant.

Pictures help us to see more clearly, feel more heartily, and act upon more faithfully the truth which is not or can not be immediately present to our senses.

Thus we see that objects and pictures help us to get the one main point, and they also teach us the law of unity. And even when we reflect that Christ used the flowers, the wheat-fields, the trees, or something with which his listeners were familiar, to illustrate his great truths of the kingdom, and he was to be our example in all things; and although some great men of later days, have made psychology and child-study a part of their life's research, we still hold that Christ knew best how to teach.

We think a great if not the greatest object lesson, though, to the primary children, is the daily godly walks of the parents, the teacher, and all those around him.

Should We Seek Divine Aid in Our Sunday-School, and of What Value is it to Us as Sunday-School Workers?

"A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven."—John 3: 27.

We are commanded: "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened to you, ask and it shall be given."

In this part of God's word we learn that in order to receive of his blessings, we should seek his aid. It is also written: "If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God who giveth freely and upbraideth not." We learn that the saints of former days sought earnestly to gain divine aid by every righteous effort. How extremely careful was Moses to secure strict obedience by his people (the children of Israel) to all divine commands, that thereby they might obtain divine favor. How careful those were who had these matters in charge, to see that the burnt offerings were presented in that way the Lord had directed, in order that they might meet divine approval, showing that to be a favor highly necessary in their travels through the wilderness and to make a successful pass within the promised land. Then, after strict divine commands, the great lawgiver promised to meet with and to commune with them.

Jesus said: "If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works; that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me and I in him."—John 10: 37, 38. From this language of our blessed Master we gain the understanding that if even Jesus, the Son of God, did not do the works of divinity, we need not believe his statements. Again we hear his precious words: "I do always the things which please my Father." We infer from this statement that our Master realized this great need of doing those things that would entitle him to the blessing of divine aid, as he had taken our infirmities and needed a greater portion of divine strength than he was endowed with at that time.

We pass farther along towards the close of his life and behold him in the garden of Gethsemane in earnest prayer, soliciting and pleading unto the Father for divine aid that he might rightly perform the great and imperative duty soon to be accomplished by him. Then, as it was so essential for former-day saints to do those works that would entitle them to that help which divinity alone could afford, we can see at once it is indeed requisite that Latter Day Saints perform those works which will entitle them also to divine favor. And as it was necessary for the Savior to incur by obedience the pleasure of his Father by thus seeking divine aid, it certainly is needful for us, who are heirs with him, also to seek the same aid from his Father and ours.

We read from the good book, "The things of God are understood by the Spirit of God." In order to understand the Scriptures, and instruct the minds of the pupils of the Sunday-school in the same, we should seek and procure divine aid. So also in laboring in any department of the Sunday-school; and as the word states "none is good but God," we should earnestly seek God and do those things which will please him, that we may receive his help in performing any part of the Sunday-school work assigned to us.

Now, that we may establish the fact that divine aid is of great value to us as Sunday-school workers, we quote from James 3: 17: "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." You will readily see that when in possession of this wisdom we can accomplish much good and will indeed be workers together for good in this auxiliary to the church, the Sunday-school work. Its value, therefore, is very great, not to be estimated in this life, but will reach into the pages of eternity. It will certainly be of great value to us as Sunday-school workers to lead the young mind, as well as those who are older, into that channel of wisdom and truth that, should they continue therein, will lead them unto eternal life.

Editors Herald: I am on my way home to spend Christmas and partake of Christmas festivities with those I love. Elder Mortimer, my companion in labor, whom I left at Seaforth, will return to his home in London next week. It is our first association together and I am safe in saying that we can labor agreeably. He is a sort of animated encyclopedia and is a tireless talker at the hearth of winter's comfort here in Northern Canada.

I love my brethren all. I deeply appreciate their prosperity and at the honest hands of love's devotion I do delight to see old Zion roll on.

Sunday evening (night before last) I attended Church of England service in Mitchell. Had preached myself and conducted prayer service in the afternoon, at which there was a very perceptible portion of the Spirit to lift the drooping heads of those surrounded by discouragements, but who from hearts of cheerful willingness ministered their hospitality and substance to us needy pilgrims for the Master. In fact it was the first services of that denomination I ever attended. I could have gone before, but I never did. I had heard the others and this time I went out of curiosity. The short sermon followed a lot of stereotyped or mechanical liturgy, but nevertheless long enough to tell quite a few things that were not true. By the way let me say that Voltaire would characterize the liturgical part of the worship as a "frolic."

On the following day, yesterday, I addressed the minister a letter, as below, which of course he has not yet had time to answer:

"REVEREND HOWARD, Mitchell, Ontario;

"Dear Brother: I had the pleasure of attending your service last night, and of listening to your short but interesting sermon on the 'advent of Christ.' In the course of your remarks you adverted to repeat a portion of the Apostle's Creed in which the word 'hell' occurred,—that Christ descended into hell. I noticed you complained of the translation, of the rendering.

Yet your remarks would leave an inquiring mind unsatisfied since you did not explain what the original of 'hell' was or how it should have been rendered. You asserted also that Christ never descended into the hell of the punished. Now, while I am entirely willing to accord you all the honesty that I claim for myself, I could wish to call in question the truth of the latter statement even to troubling you if possible for some additional light upon the subject, as I am sure you would lose or miss no opportunity to place others in possession of truths, precious truths, that are easily available to you. I would ask you now if 'hell' is improperly rendered as such in Acts 2: 31 where it is said that Christ's soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption? Why could not Christ go to the hell of the punished sinners? If you ask what business he would have there I would refer you to 1 Peter 3, where it is said that after being put to death he went and 'preached to the spirits in prison.' Who were the spirits, and does not prison here bear a corresponding relation to hell of Acts 2? The latter says his soul went to hell; the former says he went to prison and while there preached to the spirits who had lived way back in the antediluvian world. Do you not think this possible? And furthermore, if you should wonder for what purpose he would preach to the people in hell, I would refer you to 1 Peter 4: 6, where in evident continuation of the subject he says that the gospel was 'preached to them that are dead that they might be judged according to men in the flesh,' etc. This may have occurred to you before, and it may not. I know this, that there are many commentators who bear out what as you will observe the text suggests to my mind. Anyway, I would be glad to hear from you on the subject, and if you would appreciate a friendly conversation with me I can assure you that you will be gratified at my earliest opportunity.

"Respectfully and lovingly,

"ALVIN KNISLEY."

So goes the work in Canada. I have been successful also in getting a long controversial article in one of the county papers. It is a reply to a published attack upon us, and I certainly think it will draw the sectarian fire—Methodist at least—for that is my purpose in publishing it.

I write this in Stratford, where I have remained over night en route, and where I find some sisters who are worthy of honorable mention by reason of the efforts they are putting forth to get the truth before the people. They purchase the sermon pamphlets in large numbers and on certain days they go from house to house, leaving copies wherever the people will receive and promise to read them. They call again in a week or two and get them, and if interest warrants, leave them one of another variety. Prominent among these lady workers is Sr. MacGregor, formerly Maggie Campbell. She is a modern Emma Smith, a Frances Willard to the church in London District. Soon be train time.

Christmas Gift.

There is not a doubt in my mind but what hundreds and perhaps thousands of the Saints for the want of opportunity to cooperate with some Sunday-school or local Religio did not have the privilege and satisfaction of uniting their mites with others on "Graceland Rally Day."

Several parties have written me excusing themselves on account of the smallness of the amount that they were permitted to contribute, and in each case the explanation seemed to be a reasonable one.

Neither man nor God would expect from mortals more than the results of our best efforts. But what shall be said of those who through indifference, disinterestedness, selfishness, or prejudice did not do anything for this church institution when they were kindly invited to aid? What shall their reward be?

While I was reading the Chicago Record-Herald of this date,

December 17, I saw the account of the liberal "Christmas Gift" of John D. Rockefeller, to Chicago University, the munificent sum of $1,226,000.00, and I was constrained to exclaim: Where is God's Rockefeller?

If some liberal soul had sent us for Graceland equal to that of Mr. Rockefeller's with the three left hand figures omitted, I would throw my old hat up, and hurrah for Graceland, and with the aid of printer's ink let that hurrah go to earth's remotest bound.

The donations made to Chicago University since 1889, that is, during the past twelve years, has been $18,207,316. And from the deep recesses of my heart I thank God for such evidence of a love and high regard for the education of the youth of our loved America.

As this will reach many of the HERALD readers on or about Christmas-tide, I very respectfully ask that with all your giving to loved ones, and friends, please do not forget Graceland.

Millions of dollars will be wasted, and worse than wasted. But let me assure you that every sacrifice in behalf of Graceland will be a shining gem in your unfading crown.

Mr. Editor; Dear Sir: I suppose I ought to let you know the books have arrived all right and in good shape. I am so glad to have them. Am so thankful to God that I could get them, and to you for sending them. I have read the Doctrine and Covenants through, and a good bit of the Book of Mormon, and I like them so much, and am praying the dear Lord to give me his Holy Spirit in my soul that I may be able to understand what I read.

I am a poor, lonely soul, staying at home here caring for a dear, old, sick mother, who has been in bed for the past five years. I get so hungry at times for some gospel preaching! You do not wonder at that, I know. I have the Ensign; it makes regular weekly visits; and now these books; it is a little better. When I am able I intend to get the Church History, too.

Thanks very much for the tracts. The Swedish ones I have tried to distribute; but as for the Danish, it is hard for us to get any to read them; so if I knew the address of any missionaries there I would send the Danish ones to Denmark.

I would ask to be remembered in your prayers. I am longing for a chance to be baptized. Lord help me thereunto.

Yours,

MRS. HANNAH LAWRENCE.

Editors Herald: I wish to say for the Book of Mormon Quarterly that it is just grand. I find it a great help to me in studying my lesson. I suggest that those who take the Quarterly keep the numbers and when they have accumulated quite a number have them bound. They will be handy for references. How is this suggestion, brethren? I believe it a good one. The Autumn Leaves is a splendid magazine and should be in every home among the young people of the church.

Editors Herald: I notice in the HERALD dated December 3, in W. T. Sheldon's letter there is a statement that N. V. Sheldon preached the dedicatory sermon. That is a mistake, as G. H. Hilliard preached the dedicatory sermon, and Joseph Luff offered the prayer. I do not want credit for some other man's work, so please correct the mistake.

Editors Herald: I thought perhaps a word from this little spot in this big world of ours would be of interest. Here there once roamed the wild beast of the forest, and also the savage. But now a change has come. Those who call themselves Americans have settled on this vast domain of ours, and have beaten back the red man until he has no more wild meat to eat, no more deer, no more bear, no more happy hunting ground for poor "Ingin." Alas, the red man is soon to be driven to the last leap, and there make the fatal jump. But thanks be to Almighty God, a few of the red men have accepted the gospel in this nation, and are striving to live worthy of the name we bear. Wife and I accepted this gospel some years ago, and have not regretted the step taken, but are striving to live as true Latter Day Saints. I once was a Missionary Baptist; but I thank God I made the change, because I know this work is true. Pray for us, dear Saints, that the time will soon come when God will work mightily among this people, and gather out the honest in heart. Ever praying for this cause, I am,

Your brother in Christ.

W. B. HILLEN.

ANAHEIM, California, December 9.

Brethren and Sisters: It is with much pleasure that I add my testimony to the gospel of Christ. It does my hungry soul good to feast on the grand testimonies of my brothers and sisters that appear in the HERALD from time to time. It seems rather selfish to feast on the good testimonies of others and not add mine; although it may be ever so poor, it may do some one good. Well, I can, say as all true Latter Day Saints can, that I know this work is of God, and that he is at the head, leading and guiding his children. It has been a number of years since I embraced this work, and I have never had any doubt of it being of God. I have a great desire to be doing something to help on this work. Whenever I can get any one to read our books or papers, I am after them. Sometimes I do not think it does one bit of good, but then the thought comes to me, "Cast thy bread upon the waters," and so I go on trying to get any one I can to read the good works. I am trying to live the life of a Christian the best I know how, and it grieves me to see Latter Day Saints going to dances, and to places of worldly pleasures, and having people pointing their fingers at them and saying, "Look at the Saints going to such places." We are supposed to be the light of the world, the salt of the earth; if so, it behooves us to look out how we walk and do in this day of enlightenment. I am sure if Christ should come in an hour that we think not, he would not go to the dance-room to find his children; at least I would not like to be there. I am so thankful that when I received the Holy Spirit of God it took all such desires out of my heart; and my earnest prayer is that the dear Lord will help us all to overcome the world of sin, and live so as to be ready to meet him in the clouds when he comes to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords.

Your sister in Christ,

M. C. HANNAH.

PERCILLA, Texas, December 13.

Editors Herald: I have preached four times here, with very good turnouts and interest. Some one threw stones or something on and against the schoolhouse at Percilla where we were preaching. They broke one window, frightened some of the little folks, but did no other harm. I have an appointment at same place for next Sunday.

Most of the people in this little village are Methodists and Presbyterians. One gentleman is trying to arrange a debate between us and a Campbellite preacher, to be held about next February.

There are some good Saints in this section. Bro. Bryan has charge of this branch.

There are some in this section near the kingdom. We intend to hold the district conference here the last of next February, and hope to have a profitable time then. We have some good friends outside of the church in this section, who treat us nicely; among them are Mr. Bud Hughes and family, Mr. H. P. Jones and family, and others.

I intend to wend my way homeward after next Sunday. I want to be at home before Christmas. We have had lots of rain and cool weather for the last six weeks, so we have not been able to do much preaching.

The HERALD seems to be getting better. I enjoy the splendid sermons and letters. I am in the conflict until the battle is over.

E. W. NUNLEY.

SAN BERNARDINO, California, December 12.

Editors Herald: I commenced a series of meetings here last Sunday; spoke twice on Sunday, again on Monday night. On Tuesday night Bro. T. W. Williams spoke to us, and on Wednesday he married a couple and returned to Los Angeles to prepare for a discussion with a Christian Scientist. I spoke again on Wednesday and Thursday nights. To-day Bro. William Gibson baptized a lady at the Urbita Spring. We confirmed her at Bro. Gibson's house, and blessed her child. No meeting to-night on account of a rain-storm. The tall hills, over eleven thousand feet above the sea level, are white with snow; but rain in the valley, as the oranges are ripening for the market.

Saturday night I spoke to the few that came to hear. The good Spirit was present.

I was assisted in the meetings by Brn. Jones, Gibson, and Wixom, and by the sweet singer of Israel.

On Sunday I spoke three times; all seemed to rejoice.

I return home on Monday to see my family, as my wife has been sick in bed for several days. The climate does not agree with her, but the rest of us are very much better. The children have gained in weight steadily since they came here.

J. C. FOSS.

XENIA, Illinois, December 15.

Editors Herald: Reading Bro. E. L. Kelley's letter in HERALD of last week, I see he was looking for the other three at Tunnelhill, Illinois. I learn by letter that two more of the twenty-five have since been baptized, thus making but one more to come, and I think they are sure of the other lost sheep soon, as plenty material ready. One more was baptized by Bro. J. W. Paxton while we were in Akin, Illinois. A splendid revival at Springerton, Illinois.

Yours,

AMMON WHITE.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colorado, December 11.

Editors Herald: The HERALD is one of the church papers I would not care to be without.

We are having fine weather now for this time of the year; no snow to speak of, and not very cold. The coldest weather we have had this fall was zero, about a week ago. The Saints here are all well and getting along nicely, myself included, but a great deal sidetracked, it seems to me sometimes. The Lord seems to do all he can in the way of blessing me. But on the other hand, if I would use more judgment in speculations, etc., I would come out a great deal better. In the first place, if I would be more strict in the way of paying tithing, I think I would receive far greater blessings of the Lord. But I often find myself so selfish,—more attached to worldly things than the duties toward God and his church, of which I profess to be a member. As it is the latter part of the year, I will turn over a new leaf. Will get an account book and all I receive in temporal blessings, one tenth will be laid aside for tithing. At the end of each month will send it to the nearest Bishop's agent, and see if this plan will not work better with me than it has this year, for I am no better off now financially than I was the beginning of the year, and working all the time, and have not helped the church and the ministry very much either. That is what selfishness does. At the close of next year, if the Lord is willing, will write again to the HERALD and tell my experience of how the Lord deals with one who is more faithful and obedient.

Your brother in the truth,

A. L. HARTLEY.

RIVERTON, Iowa, December 16.

Editors Herald: I am here at present trying to hold a few meetings; but the stormy weather hinders some. However, we are not discouraged. We had a fair turnout yesterday, notwithstanding it was snowing all day. The few Saints here love the work, and they seek to do their duty, storm or no storm.

Bro. Charles Fry is holding forth in the Cooper Schoolhouse this week, three miles from here. We were both at Hamburg last week. He and others were trying to straighten up things a little. That branch has had a hard struggle to live, but there are some of the best of Saints in the branch, who are still striving to do their very best to keep the camp-fire blazing; and O the trying scenes they have passed through for the good of the work. Certainly they are earning a great reward. O Lord, give them grace and patience to endure to the end, that they may receive the crown of life.

Bro. Madison is still striving his best to get the gospel before the people in new places.

We want to do the best we can. I have been blessed, indeed, in preaching the gospel and in my evangelical work, far beyond my expectations. Never at any time in the many years of my labors in the ministry have I felt better or enjoyed as much of the Holy Spirit as in this present year. In visiting the scattered Saints and branches, teaching and instructing them in their duties, God has stood by me in a remarkable manner, and blessed me in body and mind, and I hope to live until I have completed my work acceptably to my Father in heaven and meet with all the faithful in the happy beyond.

May God speed the work is and shall be my earnest prayer.

In bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

PARRY SOUND, Ontario, December 13.

Dear Editor: Permit me to give a brief account of my experiences since last writing from Lindsay, Ontario, October 4.

The Miss Oliver I spoke of then, who was baptized on the 1st, was so deaf that she could not hear a public speaker except she sat close by him; then she could not catch all he would say. Her father told me that she was compelled to leave school on account of her hearing. Before we entered the water I prayed earnestly that the angel of God would trouble the waters as in days of old, and that the sister would be healed. And also at her confirmation we implored in her behalf; and thanks to the Giver of all good, her hearing was restored.

Her parents live out in Maripossa Township, eight miles from Lindsay. So on the 17th I went there and secured the schoolhouse, known as Providence School. Held services on the 19th, afternoon and evening. Had a splendid turnout. But the school building was closed, and a heated discussion took place, which lasted for nearly two hours, with a Methodist and a leader of the Christian Church. What one could not think of the other would; but the work did not suffer. After the contentions ceased, a good lady came forward, shook my hand, and said: "God bless you, brother; continue to hold up the work." The result was that she opened up her house for meetings, so we continued in her house, and on the 26th baptized Mrs. Oliver, stepmother of the girl before mentioned.

On the 27th I preached at the home of the good lady, Mrs. Wellington; on the 28th at Mr. James Willcott's, at Glendine, two miles east of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington's, on the 30th and 31st occupied at Mr. Jesse Perrin's, Lindsay. November 1 went to Cameron; 2d, conducted services there and ordained Bro. John Bates, a very worthy brother, to the office of teacher.

The 4th I returned to Lindsay, held forth at Mr. Jesse Perrin's until the 6th, then to Mr. Wellington's, in Maripossa. Held forth that same night there, then tried for the Christian church-building at Little Britton; after traveling some fifteen miles I was refused. I then secured the hall; and this same Christian that I had the discussion with in the schoolhouse furnished the wood, I furnished oil and acted as deacon. Continued there for five services. The hall was so cold I had to give it up.

On the 11th I held forth at Mr. Willcott's, at Glendine. Sold four copies of Book of Mormon. Mrs. Willcott, convinced, desired baptism, promised to come to Lindsay on the 17th to be baptized. On the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 16th I held forth at Lindsay. On the 17th Mrs. Wellington and Mrs. Willcott came to Lindsay, only to tell me that Mr. Willcott, husband, had been prejudiced by our enemies, and had forbidden her to obey; that if she did she need never enter his door again. Poor soul, she cried like a child. She said: "These long years, elder, I have been searching for light, and failed to be satisfied with any that I have ever found. Now I feel God is calling me to obey this work; and if it were not for my dear little children I would follow God, let the results be what they may."

Will the readers of the HERALD remember this poor soul at the altar of prayer, that God will open up the way for her, and also lead her husband to the light?

I held meeting the night of the 17th at Jesse Perrin's, and appointed Bro. John and Jesse Perrin to lead prayer services until I return there. Mr. Jesse Perrin and wife promised to obey in the near future. They are fine people, and will be of service to the work. There are others there interested, and we are hopeful for the work in that town after a long, tedious fight. We look for good results.

The meeting being over, we spent a short time in friendly visiting. When the time came to say good-bye, "God be with you till we meet again" was sung, and many hearts were full as they said good-bye, and many bade us good cheer.

On the 18th came here, and was made welcome by Bro. and Sr. McKenney, formerly of Grand Valley. The following day I went to Deppo Harbor, and that night preached in the house of Mrs. Joseph Church. Returned here the following day, and after a good deal of running we secured the Union Hall and began services. Then the cry of "Mormons" was raised, and I was compelled to go into print to explain our position. My article was printed in the Canadian, of this place, issue of December 4.

GRINNELL, Iowa, December 19.

Editors Herald: About November 1, I was taken with neuralgia and grip, so I had to leave the field and come home; and am still not able to get out. I desire the prayers of the Prayer Union that I may be healed and soon be able to be about my Father's business again. I have been helped heretofore in answer to the prayers of the Union, so I know they are in favor with God; therefore I desire that they intercede for me at the throne of grace.

In gospel bonds,

J. S. ROTH.

DURHAM, California, December 11.

Editors Herald: I wish to write a few lines for the most interesting paper I ever read—THE SAINTS' HERALD. It is food to all lovers of truth. I am passing through a fiery trial at present, but the Lord is with me in my troubles, and I feel that all will come out right. My desire is to live the life of a Saint, and to preach the work of the Lord the remainder of my days; but it seems that the evil one is trying to overcome me. But I shall be found battling against the evil as long as I live. I have been trying to do a work for the Master for some years, but I never have understood so much about the workings of good and evil as I have within the last year. When we think we are going to heaven without meeting Satan somewhere on the road, we are simply mistaken. True it is that it is a straight and narrow way, but the evil will step in and devour us if we do not use the weapons that the Lord has given us.

Bro. Phillips has done much good here of late. We hope to see him again; he is a comfort to the people when he is with them, and always leaves many friends behind. We are sorry that he is going back East, but the Lord knows best; we hope for good in all things.

Your brother,

B. W. PACK.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska, December 19.

Editors Herald: Pardon me for troubling your columns, but the flimsy objections of would-be critics whose ignorance in opposing the Book of Mormon is so flagrant, impels me to ask the favor of a few lines, in reply to their objections to names and phrases in that book.

First. Names. "Nephi" is found in 1 Esdras 5:21, and the time in which Esdras uses this name is about the same time as that in which Nephi was led out of Judea to avoid the captivity the ungodly suffered.

On page 32 of "Lost Israel Found," the daughter of King Zedekiah, who married Eochard, was named Pephi—the first letter only differing, as is the case in many instances in our own precious Bible.

"Sam." On page 235 of Hurst's edition of "Uarda," we have an account of the sacred "Sam-bark" of the house of Seti, and a note at the bottom of the page states that "The sacred vessel of the God is so called in a picture still extant at Qurnah. In Esdras, book 1, chapter 5, verse 28, the prophet names Sami, and incidentally Labana,—a termination of Laban; for, as is "i" a termination of Sam, so is "a" of Laban. And (as shown by Bro. Etzenhouser) as seen by reference to Harper's Monthly of October, 1901, of the tombs of four of the kings of Egypt, one of the four was named "Sam," the others Ka, Zeser, and Namer. And as evidence of the correctness of Bro. Etzenhouser's conclusion, the fact that one of the kings of Egypt was named Sam is further confirmed by the added fact that the royal bark was named "Sami," or Sam's.

"Mormon." What a bugbear was made about this by some of the enemies of Joseph and pretended scholars of oriental lore, when they declared that "the name had no real existence outside of the Book of Mormon itself!" And how they seemed to think they had almost crushed "Mormonism" with a word when they wrote that "in his ignorance, Joe Smith had accidentally chosen a word that exposed his whole scheme by selecting Mormon, which had its root in 'Mormo,' a frightful object, a bugbear." And an opponent of my early days added, after quoting this, that Mormon's son being called Moroni, "was but a play upon the name of his father." But, long before Mr. Smith was born, there was published "The Ulster County Gazette," and in the copy of that which I own, there is an account of the great General Berthier's conquests in Europe, and in naming his aids he gives to one the name of General Mormon. The paper is in mourning because it contains the account of our beloved Washington's death. What the nationality of the name primarily was, I do not know, but this I do know, namely, that I have twice met men bearing the name of "Mormon" as their surname. One of these was a brother of our own precious faith, residing in California. If the brother is still living, and reads this, or if any one that reads this knows him, please write or ask him to write to me.

"Moroni." In "Daniel Deronda," page 305, the author uses the name "Moroni" as the name of a celebrated painter.

"Mulek," with the vowel change of e into u, making it Muluk, has been objected to because the name does not appear in the Bible as that of one of the sons of King Zedekiah. As, however, we again refer to Egyptology, and in Eber's Uarda, page 270, we read of "Biban el Muluk" as the place where the tomb of Setil is found. While here we find Muluk as the name of an Egyptian place. We turn to "The Nestorians or Lost Tribes," and on page 227, find the name of Muluk or Mulek given as "The appellation which designated the royal head of the nation of Israel," the very qualification of the Book of Mormon Mulek.

And thus, Messrs. Editors, we might continue the investigation had I the time and you the space, but we have not, so whether for the HERALD or for the waste basket, I close this brief review of anti-Mormon folly and falsehood, in hope that some abler and more acceptable pen will more fully expose the exposes of our learned illiterates, who seem to be striving to fulfill the angel's prediction to Joseph, that his name should be known for good or for evil throughout the world.

Yours in the love of truth,

MARK H. FORSCUTT.

Church Recorder to the Ministry.

Requests to the ministry heretofore published have brought us reports of many baptized who are not enrolled in branches, some general and local laborers being quite prompt in reporting names and items. But occasionally an inquiry comes for a certificate of membership so that some person may be received into a branch, with only the item that he or she was baptized by such a one about such a year or time, and then we find that no such person is on record here, not having been reported.

So again we mention to all of the ministry that blanks will be sent on which they may report names and items of these "scattering" ones, if a card is sent requesting such; or reports may be made on ordinary paper, just as the brethren may choose, but blanks preferred. Then these names will be placed on record to the credit of the State where they are baptized, or where they have their home, as the case may be when they are reported. If the brethren will kindly attend to this it will oblige not only ourselves in the work we have to do, but also will oblige all concerned and the cause in general. Go over your past entries and see whom you have baptized that were not enrolled in branches and send copy in full. Those in branches we do not want, as branch clerks report them.

Respectfully yours,

H. A. STEBBINS, Recorder.

LAMONI, Iowa, December 17, 1902.

Church Recorder to District Clerks.

In last week's notice we overlooked the fact that the Ohio District September branch reports have not yet reached us. Will the officers please send them soon. Also the Idaho District holds a conference December 20, and we desire its reports soon, as well as those for June and September from that district.

Those having charge of reports after the January, February, and March conferences, whether the regular presidents and clerks, or temporary ones, will also confer a favor by forwarding branch reports as early as possible after they make such minutes or copies as is their custom in their records, so that an extra press of work near to General Conference may be avoided.

When branch reports have no changes we would like sent us the two folds of the eight, namely the one with statistical numbers and one next to it, the cut being near the line between "Where ordained" and "By whom ordained." We wish them to file with other reports for future reference. One thickness of paper is rather thin to find easily in a package.

H. A. STEBBINS, Recorder.

LAMONI, Iowa, December 18.

New Publications.

The Pronouncing Vocabulary of the Book of Mormon is ready for mailing. It should be had by all who are interested in the Book of Mormon. No. 236, paper, 10 cents each; per dozen $1.00. We are now prepared to fill your orders for the "Report of the Committee on American Archæology." It includes the original and their latest reports, and should be in the hands of all Book of Mormon students. No. 136, paper, 30 cents; No. 137, cloth, 50 cents. We have about one hundred Minister's Diaries for 1903. It includes special blanks for recording number of sermons preached, baptisms, confirmations, blessings, marriages, cash account, etc., etc. Price in leather binding 50 cents.

Correction.

In notice found at the bottom of the second column of page 1213, of HERALD for December 12, two words and a comma are omitted. The notice should read, "concerning the silence of Bro. Strachan, Bro. Baldwin states," etc.

Notice to Teachers.

A rule of General Conference requires that all applications for enrollment shall be sent to the Church Secretary: a mistake was made, therefore, by the undersigned in asking that applications for enrollment be sent to him-direct. I therefore request that those who sent applications to me will renew them, and on the regular blanks provided therefor, and forward to the Church Secretary, Bro. R. S. Salyards, at Lamoni, Iowa.

Will all members of the Fourth Quorum of Teachers please send me their addresses, to No. 228 Hancock Street, Peoria, Illinois.
B. F. ORDWAY, president.

Convention Notices.

Southern Nebraska District Sunday-school Association will convene at Nebraska City, Nebraska, January 9 and 10. Please send in all reports in time, and come yourself, bringing a good spirit with you. William Self, superintendent.

Married.

WHATMORE—EVANS.—Mr. John Whatmore and Miss Nora Evans were united in holy matrimony at the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. Edward and Jenett Evans, at Lucas, Iowa, December 2, 1902, John R. Evans officiating. A large number of relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony and wish the young people prosperity and happiness through life. A large number of presents were given them. May their life be pleasant to them and useful in doing good.

Died.

SHORT.—"Grandma" Short, of Independence, Missouri, died on Tuesday, December 16, at the home of her son, Bishop Ellis Short. She had been steadily failing for some time past and her demise was not unexpected. She was born at Vincennes, Indiana, November 3, 1812, and was the daughter of Charles and Margaret Pope, her father being a cousin to James K. Polk. She was baptized at Joplin, Missouri, by W. W. Blair, he having been directed in vision to go there to baptize some one unknown to him. Sr. Short was the mother of five sons and a daughter, two sons only surviving her,—Charles F., and Ellis. Though her demise was expected, her large number of friends will grieve. Funeral services on December 18; sermon being preached by F. C. Warnky, as per her request.

TANNER.—At Bevier, Missouri, December 3, 1902, after a brief illness, Bro. Thomas Tanner, aged 25 years and 2 months. Was a bright and worthy church worker and a firm believer in Christ and his gospel. At his death was president of Bevier Religio, and superintendent of the Northeastern Missouri Sunday-school association. A young wife and babe, two aged parents, two brothers, and three sisters mourn his death. He called his wife and relatives to his bedside and bade all farewell, then fell asleep in Christ. Funeral at the church, December 7, by I. N. White.

CARSTENSEN.—At Holden, Missouri, November 30, 1902, Elder C. Carstensen. He was born in Moen, Denmark, September 16, 1851; baptized August 12, 1878. Was president of the Crescent Branch, Iowa, for seventeen years. Moved to Missouri with his family in 1901, to near Stewartville; to Holden in 1902. Leaves a family of wife, seven girls and one son. He was held in high esteem by all who knew him. Sermon by D. R. Chambers, of Council Bluffs, Iowa; funeral in charge of Charles P. Paul.

SOUDERS.—William Souders and wife were killed near Lamar, Missouri, on Thanksgiving. On attempting to drive across a railroad, their buggy was struck by a train, their horse killed, and buggy demolished. Bro. Souders was born in Hendrick County, Indiana, in 1832; moved with his parents to Outagamie County, Wisconsin, in 1843. Sr. Souders (nee Kent) was born in St. Lawrence County, New York, in 1838; in 1847 moved with her parents to Voree, Wisconsin. Becoming disgusted with Strangism they moved to Outagamie County, where William Souders and Sophrona Kent were married in 1857. They were baptized by Elder J. M. Wait; moved to Lamar, Missouri, in 1887. To them were born two sons and one daughter: Alfred, of Texas County, (married); T. E. and Zada, who still remain at home. All are zealous members of the Reorganized Church, and are generous in assisting its advancement. Funeral sermon by Reverend G. H. Cosper, of Lamar, of the M. E. Church, at their home. He paid high tribute of praise to deceased and family, religiously and morally. In prayer and benediction the pastor said: "With the music of earth we consign these bodies to the ground, and with the music of heaven the saints will receive their souls among the redeemed." The following is extracted from the Lamar Leader, of December 4: "Thursday evening Lamar was shocked by the announcement that Mr. and Mrs. William Souders had been killed by the afternoon passenger train over the Frisco. Mr. and Mrs. Souders and son and daughter, Zada and F. E. Souders, had been spending Thanksgiving with Robert Law. Thus unexpectedly the career of two of our most esteemed citizens was brought to a close. What a sad ending, and what a glad Thanksgiving turned to grief. Aside from cuts on the head and a broken femur bone sustained by Mrs. Souders, both seemed as natural as life, and appeared to be sleeping. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of the entire community in their great sorrow."

GILL.—Lucinda E. Gill died at Wheeling, West Virginia, November 26, 1902. Was born at St. Clairsville, Ohio, February 18, 1868; baptized December 1, 1895, at Benwood, West Virginia, by W. H. Garrett. She was firm in the faith, and left a testimony that will abide in the hearts of those who knew her best. She leaves a husband and three children. She was laid away with great respect in the Peninsula at Wheeling. Funeral services November 28, in charge of Elder James Craig.

The romantic story of the four Nez Perce-Flathead Indians that made the journey to St. Louis in 1831-2 in search of the "White Man's Book of Heaven" has received new illumination from the pen of Eva Emery Dye, in "The Conquest, the True Story of Lewis and Clark," just published by A. C. McClurg & Co., of Chicago. Mrs. Dye shows conclusively that these are the same Indians that Lewis and Clark met in their overland journey in 1804-6. The facts have been gleaned from Governor Clark's own letter-books, from the life of William Walker, who first published the incidents to the world, and from the traditions of the Nez Percés themselves. An Indian boy who rode with the Indian envoy when they started for St. Louis lived to be known as "Billy Williams, the historian of his tribe." Billy died in 1895 on the Nez Perce reservation. Miss Kate C. McBeth, the noted missionary among the Nez Percés, knew Billy well and kept a record of his statements that has enabled Mrs. Dye to supply the missing links of this important event. As a result of this visit to St. Louis, missionaries were sent to Oregon. First, the Methodists sent Jason Lee, whose mission resulted in the present Willamette University of Oregon. Next, the Presbyterians sent Doctor Whitman, whose mission later resulted in Whitman College. Later, the Catholics sent Father De Smet, at whose mission Christianity was first taught in the present Montana. This Macedonian call is one of the most remarkable in American annals and the events leading up to it are fully set forth in "The Conquest."

A Notable Contribution to the Subject of Transportation.

We have before us another of those special editions of the Scientific American. It is embellished with the usual colored cover, which in the present case represents very graphically the two great branches of the subject treated, namely, transportation by land and by sea. The articles are comprehensive, and there is practically no feature of the subject, broad as it is, that is not covered; and some of the articles are very thoroughly exhaustive. There are one or two features of special novelty, notably a graphic description of a ride taken by the editor of the paper on the locomotive of the Twentieth Century Limited, in which the vivid impressions gathered from the front end of a crack modern express train are realistically portrayed. Under the section devoted to Marine Transportation the full statistics of our shipping, deep-sea, lake, and river, are given, with photographs of some of the latest, finest American-built passenger steamers and detailed descriptions of the same. The fastest of the new transatlantic passenger steamers, the "Kaiser Wilhelm," is also illustrated, while we notice a handsome full-page drawing of the two great freighters building at New London for the transpacific trade.

Under the head of Locomotive Statistics, there is a full-page drawing, showing very graphically the magnitude of our railroad system, the comparison being made with the Great Pyramid of Egypt. There is also a richly illustrated History of the American Locomotive, and also an article on the Modern Block Signal System, which gives a concise and clear account of this important phase of railroad operation, the various systems being illustrated by half-tone and line engravings. The present state of the art of Electric Traction, with particular reference to the application of alternating current, is treated in various articles, in which are included the celebrated Berlin-Zossen trials and other modern experimental work.

Those interested in physics will find an article of interest at present running through the Open Court, published at Chicago. In the November and December numbers there has appeared two numbers of a paper by Doctor Ernst Mach, a "Sketch of the History of Thermometry." Open Court is a magazine occupying a unique field, and reflects much of the personality of its editor, Doctor Paul Carus.

Sunset, a magazine published monthly by the Southern Pacific Company, is a splendid specimen of the publishing art. Its well-written and varied articles are illustrated by clear and beautiful half-tones. One would never guess from its contents that the magazine is published by a Railway Company, for its articles are such as might appear in any magazine. Devoted as it is to the "border," it abounds in descriptions of our bountiful and beautiful West. It is a journal of which any publishing company might be proud, and its continual improvement shows it is backed by lots of energy and push.

The American Journal of Sociology, published bimonthly by the University of Chicago Press, is a magazine which can not fail to interest students of man as a social factor. The November number of the Journal contains the following: "The North Sleswic Question," by Louis Warming; "The Social Will," by Alfred H. Lloyd; "The Evolution of Conscience as a Phase of Sociology," by Walter L. Sheldon; "Work and Play in Adjustment of the Social Environment," by M. V. O'Shea; "An Inquiry into the Causes of the Decrease of the Hawaiian People," by W. B. Elkin.

A Daisy Target Gun for the Boy.

The lad who desires some fun can get a target gun from THE KANSAS CITY JOURNAL as a present.

The name of this gun is "THE DAISY," and it is well named. This gun is thirty inches in length from the end of the barrel to the end of the stock. The barrel and breach are finished in nickel. The stock is made of walnut. In fact, the gun is a beauty throughout. This gun breaks in the center and will shoot a bullet or target as straight as a bee-line. Here is a gun that the boy can have fun with.

Our proposition: Any boy who will get EIGHT new subscriptions for THE KANSAS CITY WEEKLY JOURNAL at 25 cents each, making a total of $2.00, and will send us a list of the names together with the money, we will ship to his address by mail or express, charges prepaid, this handsome target gun. Send money by post-office order or draft.

Boys, here is the chance to get the fun of your life. Rustle a little and get this gun as our proposition only holds good for sixty days, from December 1.

"WATCHMEN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

This issue of the HERALD will close its forty-ninth volume. Publication day is also the closing day of the year. The record, whether for good or ill, is made up. What can we say of the year in its passing?

That the year 1902 has been of historical value to the church is very clear. In it some of the most important events to the church have occurred. The chief quorums of the church have been strengthened, and a work done by divine direction in Australia and Hawaii, by the visits of Bro. A. H. Smith, which without such direction could not have been done.

The church has been placed in the forefront of controversy by a train of circumstances over which the eldership could have had no control, but which to some extent have resulted from a sort of combine among a lot of misguided religionists unfortunately surnamed Christians, but who have undertaken to traverse outside the Christian's province and role, all for the sake of doing the church injury. It is an unholy alliance, and as such must surely come to an ignoble end.

There has been a very special activity on the part of the combined ministry of some of the denominational churches to meet the encroachments of "Mormonism," as these undue wise men are pleased to call the faith of those who believe in the gospel as the angel message gave it to the Seer of Palmyra, and to overcome and get rid of the "Mormon menace" to Christianity. This has put the eldership of the church upon the special defensive work, for the assailing forces take no pains to draw any line of demarcation between the "Mormon" church in Utah and the Reorganized Church, but class the two together as being both dangerous. Indeed, in many places the Reorganized Church is considered the more to be dreaded as it is ostensibly (as they say) opposed to the dogma of polygamy, while they would believe and practice it if the laws would permit them to do so.

Of course such statements made in certain localities where our elders are at work call out opposition, and the elders are necessarily put on the defensive. And it is very creditable to the ministry at large, that as a rule they are quite well prepared to take part in such defensive warfare. This has been conceded by the men most actively engaged in organizing the association which proposes to "fight the Mormons," who state that the elders are "well prepared to look after their side of the case."

We are anxious that the elders do not unnecessarily assume the aggressive and lose sight of the kindly courtesy which should always characterize the true Christian "defender of the faith."

Reports from the missionaries in the field, and from many of the local brethren, indicate that there has been an unusual attendance of the Spirit manifested in the preaching of the word; and in most places a better interest and greater desire to hear have followed the preachers.

This we believe was foreshown in prophecy during the closing days of the April session of conference, and it is encouraging to all to know that the pre-saged good has not been withheld from the message bearers. May it be continued is the prayer of all; and it will be if we are "diligent in business and fervent in spirit."

A number of the noble have been taken from the ranks during the year. Brn. Jonas W. Chatburn, John A. Robinson, Morris T. Short, Thomas Daley, David L. Harris, C. R. Duncan, J. M. Scott, went down in the field of human conflict, putting off the weapons of their warfare in the rest of death for the body and comfort and peace for the spirit. Others will take places in the ranks, but none will replace them. Each was a hero in his sphere and each is entitled to stand alone in his place and lot to enjoy unchallenged and undisturbed the honors faithful service entitles him to receive from Him who hath reward in his hand for those who serve aright.

The Christmas-tide is upon us. The holiday season has been full of peace, and to many, of enjoyment. The song of the angel's "Peace on earth: good will to men!" has not as yet been fully realized; though the Spirit which by its ministrations enables the Saint to say, "Jesus is the Christ;" and to cry "Abba Father;" also permits us to put aside for the time the unfortunate and irksome side of affairs and enjoy the good that may be offered to our hands, and to bear in patience the ills we can not be freed from.

"He who looks back, while striking a furrow in plowing, will make a crooked place in the furrow he is trying to make straight," has long since passed into a proverb among farmers. However, the plowman may look back across his field when he has reached the end of his furrow, and if it is practicable for him to amend the crooked place in the furrow in making the one to be next to it, it is his privilege to do it; and he will try, if he has the love for neat and harmonious work in his makeup. So, having reached the end of the year, we may all pause for a brief space of time and contemplate the route over which we have come, the work we have done, the success we have achieved, the good we have gained; and at the same time we may make note of the crooked places in the course we have pursued, the work we thought to do and did not, the work we undertook to do and did not accomplish, the failures we have made, the wrongs we have done, and the evil that has been with us. We can then, with chastened spirit, or with joyful heart begin the new year and engage in the life, labors, cares, and anxieties; endure the hardships, and enjoy the good, beautiful, and exalting things of the incoming year with renewed courage and increased vigor.

What does the outgoing year take with it? Regrets, remorse? Let us hope not. Good wishes for our coworkers, good will to all? Let us be sure of this. What will the new year bring to us? Who can tell? Disappointed hopes and ungratified ambitions? Let us see to it that our hopes are guided by wisdom, our ambitions regulated by what is both lawful and expedient. Then when the end of another year is reached, we will have made progress towards what the Master has set before us for our attainment thereto.

To the ministry, the closing year with its record of departures from labor among those in the field whose sojourn in the work has been cut short by sickness and death, should be a reminder that with them, too, time is whitening the locks, age weakening the powers of mind and body, and thus warning them that soon "the night cometh, when no man can work:" the tasks set by the Master must all be finished by them. And as there is no recall of the year now passing, so there will be none for the year now coming in. As the errors, wrongs, deeds properly done, works faithfully accomplished of the year closed have been, once for all, placed on record to be taken into account at the judgment day, when every man shall be called to answer for the deeds done in the body, it behooves every one that the year 1903 shall be one of better occupancy in the new year than the last one has been.

The closing year has shown a strong effort being made to arrange for the Graceland College affairs. We have watched this effort with some degree of pleasure and a grain of apprehension; pleasure that so many can see and have acknowledged the wisdom and the necessity of getting the institution on a safe basis; apprehension that the end sought will be deferred by an unnecessary opposition.

It seems to us a strange thing that when a work is ordered and performed in good faith that the work should be repudiated because an error of judgment in the method of doing the work was made by those to whom it was intrusted. The error does not relieve the church from responsibility, though it may, and does perhaps, weaken confidence in the sagacity and business ability of those selected to do the work.

It is clear that notwithstanding the fact that the books are not replete with instructions as to the details concerning the financial affairs of the church, there has been enough "written" to warrant the conclusion that such a thing as a business system involving the receiving and disbursing of moneys, goods, wares, and merchandise, should exist in the work to be done by the church. And, in the absence of a long and detailed statement of particular directions and instructions in regard to the methods of carrying on such affairs, it must necessarily be left to the acumen and business ability of those called to the charge of such work. We notice, therefore, with strong hopes for a final and complete understanding on the part of all in regard to the administration of the financial concerns of the church. It surely ought not to be a matter of surprise that while the Lord should, in the restoration of the gospel, remember to give some general data upon which controversies in regard to the marriage relation, the Sabbath or rest day, the ordination to the various offices in the church, the administration of baptism, the Lord's supper, the laying on of hands for healing, and a number of other things, without any elaborate enlargement or details, he should have given a general rule of provision for the establishing of and a continuing of the financial concerns in a similar way. May the progress of the last year be increased during 1903.

"The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets," seems to have been verified in the fact that the spirits of the patriarchs have been subject to the patriarchs during the past year. Testimonies offered from time to time warrant the conclusion that those chosen to this office have been attended by the Spirit in their ministrations.

We greet the readers of the HERALD with the cheering greeting: "All Hail to Immanuel;" a "Merry Christmas-tide and a Happy New Year."

HONOR JOSEPH SMITH, BUT WORSHIP ONLY GOD.

Joseph Smith, Jr., the prophet, was born December 23, 1805. Had he lived until the 23d of the month just closed, he would have been ninety-seven, a ripe old age indeed. But there are men now living who began life the same year.

It is now fifty-eight years since he paid the penalty of being a messenger sent of God for the reestablishment of the gospel economy. The world could not receive the message he and his comrade bore, so some of them slew him and his brother and companion in labor, to get rid of him and the doctrines he bore testimony to. But the cruel measure did not result as designed. The doctrines still survive, and his posterity is still pleading the cause of injured innocence.

What a wonderful record of events has been made since those two men fell asleep in death while yet in the possession and enjoyment of full powers of manhood, physical and mental! What a pace the world has been going in all the realms of human endeavor! How like fairy stories some of the actual achievements of science, research, and invention appear.

Nor has the church been left undisturbed by the shifting current of human events. Much of grave import for good and ill has transpired. Many have wandered away from safe paths, and many have laid down the weapons of the earthly warfare and have passed over the shadowy border into the land beyond. Few who were cotemporary workers with Joseph and Hyrum Smith are left. The youngest son of the Prophet Joseph is now an elderly man, nearing the three score mark, gray and bald. So that boys who were verging upon manhood in the prophet's time are, if still living, reaching close to the three score and ten allotted to man.

We honor the integrity of the men who fell at Carthage, revere their memory, but worship God only, in keeping with the command, "Him only shalt thou worship." How often will it be needful for the Saints to deny the charge, "They worship Joseph Smith"?

PRIESTHOOD OF AUTHORITY NECESSARY.

One of the elders in the Godbeite movement, in Salt Lake City, Utah, in a conversation with one of the Josephite brethren, remarked: "We had thought a priesthood of love would have been sufficient; but we have learned that a priesthood of authority as well as a priesthood of love is necessary."

We are of the opinion that had there not been a need for an authoritative administration in the gospel economy, the Son of Man, the royally accredited agent of the Divinity, would not have been sent on the errand of redeeming the race of man. The fact that he was sent and was willing to come is significant that in order that the work of redemption might be done, and well done, it was essential that the authority of the Father should be represented; and who so well prepared to do this as the Son of whom it had been written, "Thou art for ever a priest after the order of Melchisedec;" "I have anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellow"? Only such a messenger could say to his chosen and ordained ministry: "As my Father hath sent me, so send I you." "Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained." They were sent to preach. They were also sent to baptize.

To preach is to perform a persuasive and a convincing work; to baptize is to perform an authoritative act; an act to be performed in an authoritative manner, by one representing the right and power of the only One who can give "life eternal."

Men who are called to preach should be able to say, "I have been called not only to preach but also to baptize for the remission of sin." It is a grave mistake for men to say, "If we have power to preach, we also have power to baptize." "If we have a right to preach, we also have the right to induct other men into the church by baptism."

THE following seems to be a fairly good statement in regard to the wealth and poverty of the United States:

It is undoubtedly true that there is less poverty in the United States, in proportion to population, than in any other country, but it is doubtful if there are as many men of vast wealth in proportion to population. With eighty million population the proportion of paupers is less, in an enormous degree, than in any other civilized nation. But when the eighty million population is divided by the number of holders of vast accumulations of wealth it is certain that the ratio will also be found to be vastly less than a like ratio in nearly any nation of Europe.

It is the almost universal presence of the well-to-do in America which not only makes us rank as the wealthiest people on earth, but makes it possible for a few men, by the exercise of uncommon abilities in financial matters, to accumulate vast wealth. The entire absence of the law of primogeniture in the United States renders it certain that these vast accumulations will ultimately be divided and cease to be a menace to universal well-being. Mr. Bryce well says, "The political arrangements of the United States have happily averted any danger of a general oppression of the poor by other classes."—Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

By clipping from the San Antonio Daily Express of December 17, we notice that Reverend T. C. Iliff has been lecturing in San Antonio, Texas, on "The Menace of Mormonism." This is the same Reverend Iliff who some time ago lectured in Oakland, California, on the same subject. Bro. E. N. McRay sends us the clipping in letter dated December 20, and states that after the lecture, which was about two hours long, Bro. John Harp arose and stated that we had been misrepresented, and asked that he be allowed to speak, but he was abruptly told that the world was wide enough for him to speak somewhere else, and was ordered to sit down. Bro. McRay adds: "It makes my heart sick to see and hear Joseph Smith falsely accused; but it only makes me more firm and determined to fight for the grand and glorious cause that we are all engaged in. If I were a man of the world, I have no doubt but that such lectures as that would cause me to despise the very name of Latter Day Saints; but thank the Lord, I can bear my testimony to the world that I know the work is true and that Joseph Smith was sent of God. We are building a small church house here, and hope to have it finished soon so that we may have a permanent place to meet, though there are but few Saints in the San Antonio Branch. I know that if we will all do our part as true Latter Day Saints, we shall finish the house and come out victor over all such as the Reverend T. C. Iliff, as the Lord always feels after his own."

Under date of December 21, Sr. James Christenson wrote from La Conner, Washington: "The HERALD and Ensign are companions that are mine, away out here in the far West. The few Saints in and about La Conner are all well; and although we do not have much preaching, we did enjoy a two-week series of sermons preached to us by Brn. David Powell and N. V. Sheldon in the early part of last fall. It did us all a great deal of good. They and other elders who are laboring in our district will always find a welcome whenever they can come. May God bless all who leave their homes and loved ones to labor in the Master's vineyard."

Charles E. Culver, of Chicago, recently wrote: "The man who neglects to read the official publications of the church is like the man who neglects to partake of food from his own table. The latter will grow poor and hungry, and is liable to succumb to starvation; the former shows weakness in the faith and is liable to die spiritually from want of spiritual food,—the 'bread of life.'"

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

John H. Tibbels, Tonganoxie, Kansas, requests that the brethren of the branches nearest Tonganoxie write him. He desires to receive some literature to distribute. He states that he has distributed two packages of the Gospel Echo, which has been courteously received.

Bro. G. J. Waller, Honolulu, Hawaiian Territory, under date of December 18, writes that his daughter Ruth, who has been sick for some time, is slowly recovering. We are sure the Saints who know Bro. Waller and family will be glad to know that Ruth is on the road to recovery.

A new publication, devoted to the interests of the latter-day work, has been launched in the journalistic sea at Philadelphia. It is called the Saints' Advocate, and is edited by W. E. La Rue. According to the paper, it is published in the "interests of the Saints' church at Howard and Ontario Streets." The number we have received is volume 1, number 1, which bears date of December, 1902. It is the "Christmas edition."

Samuel Twombly reports from the Northwestern Kansas District eight baptisms of late, five being heads of families. The work seems to be moving forward in that field.

Bro. James Christensen of St. Louis, Missouri, who for several years has been in the employ of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, has received notice of promotion. On January 1 he will become traffic claim agent, with headquarters at Dallas, Texas. We are glad to see our worthy young brethren succeed.

In the January number of the Autumn Leaves Sr. Thorburn tells of her trip to Scotland, and Peter Anderson writes of his trip to Scandinavia.

THE GREAT RESTITUTION.—NO. 2.

BY COLUMBUS SCOTT.

A prophet and more than a prophet is authorized, then, to prepare the Lord's second coming, and that too by the restoring of the gospel as the first and leading event, that it may be proclaimed "as a witness to all nations." God deals in certainties. He deceives no one. He works among men with reference to their eternal ends.

The rising up of a hundred or a thousand so-called reformers with as many differing religious messages or systems of religion, and interpreting the Bible in as many differing ways is not calculated to produce unity or bring certainty. It brings doubts, divisions, and uncertainties, as at present exhibited in the world. It but adds to the mystery and confusion of the great Babylon, as portrayed by John. A house divided against itself falls, and with the fall comes disappointment, failure, and woe.

The gospel is everlasting, it is eternally one. It is a certainty, teaching ever but one way,—“the strait and narrow way.” In view, then, of the divided and religiously distracted condition of the world, need we be surprised that God has interposed and introduced measures to clear away the religious darkness prevailing? Why wonder that he has again introduced his measures, brought about order, and again established his house (church) in order that his knowledge may bring certainty, and peace, and truth to man? Should not our Father in heaven do this now for his children? Strange if he would not! As the gospel ever has been his means of accomplishing this, how else would we expect him to introduce the great restitution than by authorizing a dispensation of the everlasting gospel? This is his way.

Has such a work as the great restitution been introduced? Has the Master deigned to interpose in the behalf of helpless man again in order that he may have certainty in his effort to obtain eternal salvation? He has done so in the past. Man needs light, help, and mercy. Needs the guiding hand of God in the darkness and uncertainty now so heavily felt. Shall it be denied him? Man's inability to cope with the situation religiously has been made more and more apparent for the last fifteen hundred years by the uncertainty and failure of his efforts. The blind efforts of the last four hundred years, especially the religious upheavals, remind one of the mad rushing of the storm-driven sea waves, and of their ineffectual lashing of the rocks, or the wave-tossed ship, and its going down, with rudder or compass, and the wild despair of the perishing human cargo. It is the blind leading the blind.

But in the yearning of the human heart for mercy, light, strength, and certainty, there is hope, "For the Lord shall rise up as in mount Perazim, he shall be wroth as in the valley of Gibeon, that he may do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act. Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord God of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth."—Isaiah 28:21, 22.

Connected with and just prior to this consumption determined upon the whole earth, God was to do a "strange act," his "strange work." Many look upon it as a "strange work" that God should send a heavenly messenger in these latter days, bringing back to men the authority of the apostleship, and the prophetic, the authority to proclaim the gospel and administer its holy word and ordinances, and the keys by which the church and kingdom of God may be restored, and the way thus prepared for the second coming of our Lord, the consumption on the whole earth, and the introduction of the glorious reign of Christ on earth.

It is frequently said that Elias, the restorer, foretold by our Savior to come before he does (Matthew 17:10-13), is John the Baptist and his work of nineteen hundred years ago. We have no disposition to deny that Elias is John the Baptist, but he did not then do the work predicted there; for when Jesus said, "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things," John had come and done his work of that dispensation and was dead, buried, and resting from his labors. John's death did not deprive him of the keys of authority he held by which he took precedence, or went before, and opened up the work he was destined to do. John's work was not done, then, at the close of his first mission. He yet had a labor to perform, was continued in his office, a messenger of God to officiate at a later period of the world's history. Whether he was empowered to do the work, in the spirit state, like Moses on the mount of transfiguration, or like the prophet angel that appeared to John the revelator (Matthew 17:3; Luke 9:32; Revelation 22:8, 9), or whether he was resurrected at Christ's resurrection, amidst the multitude of captives ascending with him, is immaterial to us. The restoration, the part he was to do in that work, is the all-important matter of interest to us here.

The great mistake made by all who have been looking for the second advent of our Lord soon, and that wherein they have been led astray, is that they have overlooked the prophecies and promises, and their fulfillment in the restoration of the gospel and its proclamation as a witness to all nations, the restoration of Israel to their own land, Palestine, and the building up of Zion preparatory to the Lord's coming to reign in glory.

It is designed that the nations shall have the opportunity to hear, and receive or reject the law by which they are to be judged at the last day. And the law is made binding and is of force when administered by authority.

In the hands of those not authorized the law is not of force. (See Acts 19: 6, 13-16.)

But the strength and demonstration of prophecy is made manifest by its fulfillment. The gospel has now been restored for more than seventy years. Many thousands have heard and received it, have covenanted with the Lord by their obedience, and have realized the fulfillment of its promises as they relate to this life.

The angel's message has been sent. Men have been authorized to declare it and administer its ordinances with the Holy Ghost and much assurance attending. Many have believed, repented, and been baptized into Christ for the remission of their sins (Mark 1: 1-3; Acts 2: 38, 39), "having obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered unto them," were "then made free from sin" (Romans 6: 18; Acts 22: 16), have become the servants of righteousness.

They have embraced the doctrine of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost (Acts 8: 14-18; 9: 17; 19: 1-6; Hebrews 6: 1, 2; 1 Timothy 4: 14-16), and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and spiritual gifts (Acts 2: 39; 19: 5, 6; 1 Corinthians 12: 1-12), and have been restored. Thus demonstrating the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ, as declared by himself and his ministry anciently.

The principal human instrumentality used by God in the ushering in of the restitution was a young man by the name of Joseph Smith, who lived at the time in the western part of the state of New York, near Palmyra, Wayne County. His parents moved to that locality from the town of Sharon, Windsor County, Vermont, when he was but ten years old, he having been born December 23, 1805.

Some six years after their removal to New York, there was an unusual religious excitement caused by the holding of a protracted revival by the Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, and other religionists of the community. Some of his family, brothers and sisters, united with the Presbyterians, according to his narrative. When the time arrived to divide the converts, contentions of a serious and bitter character arose over the matter that brought to the minds of some serious considerations as to which of the contending parties was right. Mr. Smith, who was quite young, was seriously wrought on as to who was right and which of the churches he should unite with, but was unable at the time to determine this question. He was greatly concerned about the salvation of his soul, and while seriously considering the subject, and seeking the aid of the word of God, came to the statement found in the first chapter and fifth verse of the letter of Saint James, which reads, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." This young man felt that if ever any one needed wisdom he did. He took God at his word, and after weighing this all-important matter for a time concluded to take the counsel of the Lord. And after listening to the conflicting arguments of the different ministers engaged in the work of trying to convince the converts to their respective beliefs, and being unable to decide the matter, concluded that he must either remain in darkness and uncertainty, a most sad and deplorable condition to live and die in, or ask light of God, as the Apostle James directs. This is a strange thing for a person to do in modern times, though to Bible believers it ought not to be; but it is because it is such an unusual thing to do. And none, not even ministers, have done so, or taught others to do so, with the most distant expectation of receiving anything from God. Mankind had wandered so far from the Almighty during the last eighteen hundred years that even some of the ministry would upbraid those who sought unto the Lord for light and direction, and such was the experience of the young man, Joseph Smith. Joseph says he had not attempted to pray till this time. This was about 1822-1823.

Joseph's feelings were so intense regarding the subject of his soul's salvation, that he determined to seek unto God for an understanding of his condition, and what he should do to be saved. Carrying out this determination, he says:

After I had retired into the place where I had previously designed to go, having looked around me and finding myself alone, I kneeled down and began to offer up the desires of my heart to God. I had scarcely done so when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, and had such astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so that I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time as if I were doomed to sudden destruction. But exerting all my powers to call upon God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me, and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction (not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world who had such a marvelous power as I had never before felt in my being), just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun; which descended gradually until it fell upon me. It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me I saw two personages (whose brightness and glory defy all description) standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said (pointing to the other), "This is my beloved Son, hear him."

My object in going to inquire of the Lord was to know which of all the sects was right, that I might know which to join. No sooner therefore did I get possession of myself, so as to be able to speak, than I asked the personages who stood above me in the light, which of all the sects was right (for at this time it had never entered my heart that all were wrong), and which I should join. I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong, and the personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt; "they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me; they teach for doctrine the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof." He again forbade me to join with any of them; and many other things did he say unto me which I can not write at this time. (See History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, volume 1, pages 9, 10.)

Being possessed of but little religious experience he related the vision to a minister of the neighborhood and soon a strong opposition was excited, and much persecution was aroused against him and his friends. But all the opposition and persecution that could be brought against him could not change the fact that he had seen and experienced the vision. Like Paul, he knew he had seen the personages and heard their words. He further says, "I had now got my mind satisfied so far as the sectarian world was concerned, that it was not my duty to join with any of them, but continue as I was until further directed; I had found the testimony of James to be true, that a man who lacked wisdom might ask of God, and obtain and not be upbraided."—Ibid., page 11.

Mr. Smith further relates:

During the space of time which intervened between the time I had the vision, and the year eighteen hundred twenty-three, having been forbidden to join any of the religious sects of the day, and being of very tender years, and persecuted by those who ought to have been my friends, and to have treated me kindly, and if they supposed me to be deluded to have endeavored in a proper and affectionate manner to have reclaimed me, I was left to all kinds of temptations, and mingling with all kinds of society, I frequently fell into many foolish errors and displayed the weakness of youth and the corruption of human nature, which I am sorry to say led me into divers temptations, to the gratification of many appetites offensive in the sight of God. In consequence of these things I often felt condemned for my weakness and imperfections; when on the evening of the above-mentioned twenty-first of September, after I had retired to my bed for the night, I betook myself to prayer and supplication to Almighty God for forgiveness of all my sins and follies, and also for a manifestation to me, that I might know of my state and standing before him; for I had full confidence in obtaining a divine manifestation, as I had previously had one.

While I was thus in the act of calling upon God I discovered a light appearing in the room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noon-day, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked, and his arms also a little above the wrist. So also were his feet naked, as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open so that I could see into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid, but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Nephi. That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil, among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all peoples.—Church History, pages 11, 12, 13.

By reading these historical sketches so far as quoted, it will be seen that this young man was plainly informed that God had a work for him to do. The scope that the work when once inaugurated should attain to is indicated to be heralded to all nations. Its exact character and nature, so far as we have quoted, is not clearly outlined. But as the occasion of the young man seeking for light was regarding what he should do to be saved, and the standing religious societies were sustaining before the Lord, we would strongly infer that the work for him to do, and the way his name was to be held by the nations "for good and evil," would be of a religious nature. And so the angel further informed him, and cited his attention to some of the prophetic promises that foretell the great and divine work of the restitution of all things spoken of, including events to be accomplished prior to the coming of Christ in glory.

Pursuing the narrative further, we learn that the foregoing vision was repeated twice in the night of above date, every particular being thus indelibly impressed on the young seer's mind.

He was informed that the Western Continent was anciently inhabited by a nation founded by a colony emigrating from the Tower of Babel, that flourished for a time and was succeeded by some of the decedents of Joseph of Egypt. See Genesis 48: 5-20; 49: 22-26; Deuteronomy 33: 13-17, where Joseph's decedents are promised a landed estate far exceeding in area that given to the twelve tribes of Israel and extending to the "utmost bound of the everlasting hills." Also that a record of these peoples was to be brought to light through his instrumentality, that this record contained the fullness of the gospel as delivered to these ancient inhabitants by the Savior. This glorious personage cited his attention to a number of the Bible prophecies relating to the work of God to be accomplished in these days, including the restitution treated of here.

His attention was directed by the angel of God to the third and fourth chapters of Malachi, also Isaiah, chapter eleven, and to Acts, chapter three, verses twenty-three and twenty-four, stating that the prophet referred to by Peter was Christ, but that the time for all those who would not hear him to be cut off, had not yet arrived. He quoted to him also the twenty-eighth to the last verses of Joel, chapter two, which were soon to be fulfilled. (Church History, pages 13, 14.)

During the following seven years the young seer, being possessed of the record above referred to, along with the usual avocations of life common in a pioneer country such as Western New York was at that period, engaged in translating said record; gaining in experience, light from time to time was received, gradually developing the truth that the times were just at hand for the restoration of the divine authority, essential to the servants of the Lord in every dispensation of the gospel, that the gospel might be preached in all the world, for a witness to all nations, the church established by authority according to the divine pattern, and that soon God would remember his ancient covenant people, Israel, to restore their ancient inheritance, Palestine, to its former fertility, thus preparing the way for their restoration to their own land.

A young school-teacher, Oliver Cowdery by name, having, as he claimed, by divine direction joined Joseph Smith in translating the record called the Book of Mormon, acted as scribe, and while engaged thus, one day in the month of May, 1829, they repaired to a secluded place in a near-by grove to engage in a season of prayer to the Father of all. Joseph relates that:

While we were thus employed, praying, and calling upon the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us, saying unto us, "Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion, for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness." He said this Aaronic priesthood had not the power of laying on of hands, for the gift of the Holy Ghost, but that this should be conferred on us hereafter; and he commanded us to go and be baptized, and gave us directions that I should baptize Oliver Cowdery, and afterwards that he should baptize me.

Accordingly we went and were baptized; I baptized him first and afterwards he baptized me, after which I laid my hands upon his head and ordained him to the Aaronic priesthood, and afterwards he laid his hands on me and ordained me to the same priesthood, for so we were commanded.

The messenger who visited us on this occasion, and conferred this priesthood upon us, said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist, in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedec, which priesthood he said should in due time be conferred on us—and that I should be called the first elder, and he the second. It was on the fifteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, that we were baptized and ordained under the hands of the messenger.—Church History, volume 1, pages 34, 35, 36.

Oliver Cowdery says of this wonderful event:

The Lord, who is rich in mercy, and ever willing to answer the consistent prayer of the humble, after we had called upon him in a fervent manner, aside from the abodes of men, condescended to manifest to us his will. On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the veil was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message, and the keys of the gospel of repentance! What joy! What wonder! What amazement! While the world was racked and distracted—while millions were groping as the blind for the wall, and while all men were resting upon uncertainty, as a general mass, our eyes beheld—our ears heard. As in the "blaze of day;" yes, more—above the glitter of the May sunbeam, which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature! Then his voice, though mild, pierced to the center, and his words, "I am thy fellow servant," dispelled every fear. We listened—we gazed—we admired! 'Twas the voice of the angel from glory—'twas a message from the Most High! and as we heard we rejoiced, while his love enkindled upon our souls, and we were rapt in the vision of the Almighty! Where was room for doubt? Nowhere: uncertainty had fled, doubt had sunk, no more to rise, while fiction and deception had fled for ever.

But, dear brother, think, further think for a moment, what joy filled our hearts and with what surprise we must have bowed (for who would not have bowed the knee for such a blessing?), when we received under his hand the holy priesthood, as he said, "Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer this priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness."—Church History, volume 1, pages 37, 38.

What is this set forth in the transactions here narrated but the beginning of the fulfillment of the prophecies of Malachi, and the Savior, "Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things"? (Malachi 3: 1-6; Matthew 17: 11.)

The history of Christendom since A. D. 1822, when the angel appeared to Joseph Smith, is a history of the revision of creeds, of renouncing of doctrines before held essential to salvation. It would be a long chapter to describe the doctrines thus repudiated by themselves, all of which goes to prove beyond dispute the uncertainty of human religious dogmas as to truth, and the inability of man unaided, undirected by the inspiration and revelation of God, to set forth the gospel of Jesus Christ, and establish the church or kingdom of God.

Without the light of revelation Joseph Smith could not have moved out as he did adapting his religious work to a complete harmony with that foreshadowed in the prophetic word, as to the nature of the work, restorative in character, and at the time indicated in that word. The work brings out in bold relief the doctrine of Jesus Christ as preached by apostles of old as moved by the Holy Ghost. It sets forth the Christ as the only Savior. Faith in him, his word, as essential, the keys of divine authority by which the laws of salvation may be administered, repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. These principles are eternally true, as the Bible is true.

But like the servant of God, Joseph Smith would not presume to administer in any of these holy ordinances of the gospel, till authorized by the divine command, "for so we were commanded." Certainty must attend God's work. The truth only must constitute that work. The infinitely wise and unchangeable God must not ordain and reveal an imperfect, changeable plan of salvation.

God did not omit to place his Son, the Christ, in his proper position in the work of the restitution,—that position is at the head. So in Joseph's first vision Jesus is thus honored, the words of his Father, "This is my beloved Son, hear him," warrant this observation. Adding to these the words of the messenger sent from heaven to ordain him, "Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron," confirms the truth that the Christ is acknowledged to be the "leader and commander" in the great latter-day work ushered in through Joseph Smith and others called to the work with him.

Jesus of Nazareth is the central prophetic sun in the celestial heavens around which Abraham, Enoch, Moses, John, and Joseph and all other prophetic stars radiate. These have all acknowledged him to be the source of their light and their authority to administer and build.

The character of their teachings and work demonstrates this to be true. Each of these were prominent in the respective dispensations of their time. Joseph comes last, as he is given the preference by Jesus Christ in the purposed, determined "dispensation of the fullness of times" predicted by Saint Paul (Ephesians 1:9, 10); times in which all that has been so far revealed is to be consummated. It was a "purpose" of God, a "pleasure," also a "mystery of his will," that was yet future in Paul's day; God is to introduce divine measures to "gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth, even in him." Surely all earth's children ought to be interested in that part of the work now being done on earth.

This work of restitution involves the work foreseen and predicted by John the Revelator. Speaking of the preparation of the church just before the coming of Christ to reign in glory, preparing for that great and glorious event, he says: "And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints." Again: "And his wife hath made herself ready." This shows a special work to be done, a special gospel work, a rehabilitation of the church, the bride elect of Christ, preparatory to meeting the bridegroom at the marriage supper. The terms used by John are most significant.

The "grant" is a special privilege conferred at the time indicated. The time is just before the reign commences. The "fine linen" which the church is to put on is "the righteousness of saints," and the righteousness is that revealed of God, and that is found in the gospel. (Romans 1:16, 17.) And the grant, right, privilege conferred could be nothing short of the restoration of the gospel, consisting of authority given of God, the word of God, the Holy Ghost, and much assurance. (See 1 Thessalonians 1:5.)

The purpose I have in this effort would be unfinished were I to omit the reference to the promise made by the angel to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, when ordaining them, namely; that if faithful they should receive the Melchisedec priesthood, that authority by which the spiritual blessings of the gospel, the authority to lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and by virtue of which the church of God may be established, and built up. After making this matter a subject of continued prayer for a season, Joseph relates that they, to their "unspeakable satisfaction," were made to "realize the truth of the Savior's promise, 'Ask, and ye shall receive, seek, and you shall find, knock, and it shall be opened unto you;' for we had not long been engaged in solemn and fervent prayer when the word of the Lord came unto us in the chamber [of Father Whitmer's house], commanding us that I should ordain Oliver Cowdery to be an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ, and that he also should ordain me to the same office, and then to ordain others as it should be made known unto us, from time to time: we were, however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such times as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been and should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers, or not."—Church History, vol. 1, pp. 60, 61.

The statement of Oliver Cowdery to the foregoing is: "I was present with Joseph when the higher or Melchisedec priesthood was conferred by the holy angel from on high. This priesthood was then conferred on each other, by the will and commandment of God."—Church History, vol. 1, p. 64.

The deferring of this ordination till the members of the coming church might be consulted, by direction of the Lord, is a privilege or principle, always granted to the Lord's people, in relation to his work, that they may have the opportunity to accept or reject. Before the covenant at Sinai was ratified, the Lord sent to have the consent of Israel. (Exodus 24:3.) When David was to become king of Israel, the people were first consulted. (1 Chronicles 11:1-3.) When King David was to bring the Ark of the Covenant to its place, the people were consulted. "And all the congregation said that they would do so." (1 Chronicles 13:1-4.) When a successor to Judas, who fell from the apostleship, was to be chosen, the Saints were consulted regarding it, and their decision regarded. (Acts 1:26.) It is peculiar that Joseph, if not divinely directed, should be able to move in such perfect harmony with Bible precedent, at each developing stage of the great work. But why should it be otherwise? It is the foundation and introductory stages of the great restitution! It is the initial of the purpose of God respecting his great restoration.

Is it objected that the Melchisedec priesthood should be restored? Had the work failed in this feature of its development, a Bible objection could have been consistently urged against it. Christ is a priest of the Melchisedec order; he is the high priest of our profession. (Hebrews 3:1; 7:17.) He is the apostle. The authority he gave to the ancient apostles and elders was Melchisedec priesthood authority. This priesthood was the authority of the ancient church. (1 Peter 2:3, 9.)

Isaiah, describing the mission of Christ, and especially referring to the times of restitution, says of Christ's ministers: "But ye shall be named the Priests of the Lord: men shall call you the Ministers of our Lord."—Isaiah 61:6. This was to be after the Dark Ages, or as Isaiah says, it is at the time that "they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations [of the church, or of the cities of Judah?], and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations." We care not to which the reader applies this language; for the restoration includes the cities and land and the children of Israel. Both Isaiah and Micah associate the work of the restoration of the church and Israel as being accomplished at the same time. (Isaiah 2:1-5; Micah 4:1, 2.)

Ezekiel prophesied of Israel's apostasy anciently: "But the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients."—Ezekiel 7:26. But David says of the development of the kingdom of God under Christ: "Let thy priests be clothed with righteousness;" and, "I will abundantly bless her provision: I will satisfy her poor with bread. I will also clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shall shout aloud for joy." Psalms 132:9, 15, 16.

How would the Church of Jesus Christ without an authorized priesthood ministry, be the antitype of the Israelitish "kingdom of priests"? The gospel profession is a priestly profession. (Hebrews 31:1.) Admit that the great Head of the church is a high priest, and every minister to whom he gives authority is a priestly minister. By priestly authority is every person entering the church baptized into the priestly profession, and confirmed therein by the laying on of hands.

Paul speaks of the day when Israel, that rejected the gospel in his day, shall be "grafted" into Christ, the new covenant (1 Romans 11:25-27); and Jeremiah, speaking of the same time and events, says: "And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the Lord."—Jeremiah 31:14.

The church contemplated in the prophecies relating to the great restitution, and authorized by the authority restored through the angel of God, and vested by his ordination, in Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, began to take organic form April 6, A. D. 1830. It has developed into that completed organic form authorized by the pattern and law. It sets forth Jesus Christ as the only Savior of man, as the major premise of its faith. Obedience to his doctrine (John 7:17; Hebrews 6:1, 2; 2 John 9:11) is the test of loyalty to God and the means of release from sin, and of acceptance with the Father and the Son. The seal of our heirship to all that is promised, is the gift of the Holy Ghost. The form of the restored church, that hereinbefore is set forth, with that incidental to the work of restitution.

For more than seventy years have these claims been presented to the candid consideration of men, for seventy years have they withstood the opposition and criticism of the wise and religiously strong, and they shine out with a divine lustre more brilliant than ever before. The signs of the times join with the prophetic word to confirm and sustain and develop the great work. The unwelcome stay of Israel among Gentile nations, their increasing desire to regain and be restored to the beloved Palestine, as instanced by the rapid growth of Zionism, the restlessness of the nations, their continued and universal preparations for war, together with the unparalleled strides of scientific developments, the increase of knowledge among men as never before (see Jeremiah 31:3-14; 32:37-44; 25:32, 33; Joel 3:8-17; Daniel 12:4), also the increase of wickedness (Daniel 12:10; Revelation 18:5), all join in testimony with the proclamation of the gospel restored that the great restitution is on and onward to the great consummation, the end of the world, the incoming of the age of universal peace.

THE COOKING OF MEATS.

"Meat is rarely eaten raw by civilized people. For the most part it is either roasted, stewed, fried, or boiled. Among the chief objects of cooking are the loosening and softening of the tissues, which facilitates digestion by exposing them more fully to the action of the digestive juices.

"Another important object is to kill parasites, and thus render harmless organisms that might otherwise expose the eater to great risks. Minor, but by no means unimportant, objects are the coagulation of the albumen and blood so as to render the meat more acceptable to the sight, and the development and improvement of the natural flavor. . . .

"Cooking certainly can not add to the amount of nutritive material in the meat; and it may, as we shall see, remove considerable quantities of the nutrients.

"If it is desired to heat the meat enough to kill parasites or bacteria in the inner portions of the cut, the piece must be exposed to the action of heat for a long time. Ordinary methods of cooking are seldom sufficient. . . . Large cans of meat are more liable to have bad spots than small cans because the heat in them is not sufficient to destroy the bacteria or other organisms that cause the meat to decompose.

"If meat is placed in cold water, part of the organic salts, the soluble albumen and the extractives or flavoring matters, will be dissolved out. At the same time small portions of lactic acid are formed, which act upon the meat and change some of the insoluble matters into materials which may also be dissolved out. . . . If the water is heated gradually, more and more of the soluble materials are dissolved. At a temperature of about one hundred thirty-four degrees Fahrenheit the soluble albumen will begin to coagulate, and at one hundred sixty degrees Fahrenheit the dissolved albumen will rise as a brownish scum to the top and the liquid will become clear. Upon heating still higher, the connective tissues begin to be changed into gelatin and are partly dissolved out while the insoluble albuminoids are coagulated. The longer the action of the hot water continues, the tougher and more tasteless the meat becomes, but the better the broth. Treated in this way flesh may lose over forty per cent by weight. The loss is principally water, but from five to eight per cent may be made up of the soluble albumen, gelatin, mineral matters, organic acids, muscle, sugar, and flavoring materials. Part of the melted fat also goes into the broth.

"It would be a great mistake to assume that the nearly tasteless mass of fibers which is left undissolved by the water has no nutritive value. This tasteless material has been found to be as easily and completely digested as the same weight of ordinary roast. It contains nearly all the protein of the meat, and, if it is properly combined with vegetables, salt, and flavoring materials, makes an agreeable as well as nutritive food.

"If a piece of meat is plunged into boiling water or very hot fat, the albumen on the entire surface of the meat is quickly coagulated and the enveloping crust thus formed resists the dissolving action of water and prevents the escape of the juices and flavoring matter. Thus cooked, the meat retains most of its flavoring matters and has the desired meaty taste. The resulting broth will be correspondingly poor.

"The foregoing statements will be of much help in the rational cooking of meats in water. The treatment depends largely upon what it is desired to do. It is impossible to make a rich broth and have a juicy, highly-flavored piece of meat at the same time. If the meat alone is to be used, the cooking in water should be as follows: Plunge the cut at once into a generous supply of boiling water and keep the water at the boiling point, or as near boiling as possible, for ten minutes, in order to coagulate the albumen and seal the pores of the meat; the coating thus formed will prevent the solvent action of the water and the escape of the soluble albumen and pieces from the inner portion of the meat. But if the action of the boiling water should be continued, the whole interior of the meat would, in time, be brought near the temperature of boiling water, and all the albumen would be coagulated and rendered hard. Instead of keeping the water at the boiling point (two hundred twelve degrees Fahrenheit), therefore, the temperature should be allowed to fall to about one hundred eighty degrees Fahrenheit, when the meat could be thoroughly cooked without becoming hard. A longer time will be required for cooking meat in this way, but the albumen will not be firmly coagulated, and the flesh will be tender and juicy instead of tough and dry as will be the case when the water is kept boiling during the entire time of cooking."

The foregoing is taken from "Farmers' Bulletin No. 34." We find a modifying statement in No. 8 of the "Rumford Kitchen Leaflets." It is as follows:

"In all methods of cooking meats, as indeed all forms of proteid food, whether by boiling, roasting, or broiling, the proteid or albuminous matter undergoes more or less complete coagulation. This, however, is essential in any process of cooking by which a rich and appetizing flavor is to be developed, and if not accomplished at too high a temperature offers no obstacle to easy digestibility; indeed, as has already been stated, owing to the conversion of the collagen of the surrounding connective tissue into gelatin, digestibility may even be increased."

Resuming Bulletin No. 34, we quote:

"In boiling sections of delicate fish as salmon, cod, or halibut, the plunging into boiling water is objectionable because the motion of the boiling water tends to break the fish into small pieces. Fish should be put into water that is on the point of boiling. The water should be kept at this temperature for a few minutes and then allowed to fall to one hundred eighty degrees, as in the case of meats.

"If both the broth and the meat are to be used, the process should be quite different from that outlined for boiling meat. Stewing is in this country a much undervalued method of cooking. This is probably due partly to the fact that stewing is generally very improperly done, and partly to the general aversion which Americans, consciously or unconsciously, have to 'made dishes' of any kind. This aversion probably has its origin in a false notion which spurns economy or any attempt at economy in diet.

"In stewing, the meat should be cut into small pieces so as to present relatively as large a surface as possible, and instead of being quickly plunged into hot water, should be put into cold water in order that much of the juices and flavoring materials may be dissolved. The temperature should then be slowly raised until it reaches one hundred eighty degrees Fahrenheit, where it should be kept for some hours. Treated in this way the broth will be rich and the meat still tender and juicy.

"If the water is made much hotter than one hundred eighty degrees Fahrenheit the meat will be dry and fibrous. It is true that if a high temperature is maintained long enough the connective tissues will be changed to gelatin and partly dissolved away, and the meat will apparently be so tender that if touched with a fork it will fall to pieces. It will be discovered, however, that no matter how easily the fibers come apart, they offer considerable resistance to mastication. The albumen and fibrin have become thoroughly coagulated, and while the fibers have separated from each other, the prolonged boiling has only made them drier and firmer.

"The quantities of the ingredients in a meat broth may be illustrated by a German experiment. One pound of beef and seven ounces of veal bones gave about a pint of strong broth or soup, which contained by weight: water, ninety-five and two tenths per cent; protein, one and two tenths per cent; fat, one and five tenths per cent; extractives, one and five tenths per cent; mineral matters, three tenths per cent.

"Very palatable broths can be made by using more water and adding savory herbs. Broths thus made have, of course, a greater amount of water, frequently as much as ninety-eight per cent, or even more, and the nutrients are correspondingly reduced in amount. It would appear from the analyses given above that the amount of solids in broth is generally small. Consequently their strong taste and stimulating effect upon the nervous system must be ascribed to the meat bases (flavoring matters) and to the salts of potash which they contain. Besides meat bases, soups contain more or less gelatin, varying directly with the quantity of bones used in the preparation.

"The term meat extract is commonly applied to a large number of preparations of very different character. They may be conveniently divided into three classes: First, true meat extracts; second, meat juices obtained by pressure and preserved, compounds which contain dried pulverized meat, and similar preparations; and, third, albumose or peptose preparations, commonly called predigested foods.

"The true meat extract, if pure, contains little else besides the flavoring matters of the meat from which it is prepared, together with such mineral salts as may be dissolved out. It should contain no gelatin or fat, and can not, from the way in which it is made, contain any albumen. It is, therefore, not a food at all, but a stimulant, and should be classed with tea, coffee, and other allied substances. It should not be administered to the sick except by competent medical advice. Its strong meaty taste is deceptive, and the person depending on it alone for food would certainly die of starvation. Such meat extracts are often found useful in the kitchen for flavoring soups, sauces, etc. Broth and beef tea as prepared ordinarily in the household contain more or less protein, gelatin, and fat, and therefore are foods as well as stimulants. . . . The preserved meat juice and similar preparations contain more or less protein, and therefore have some value as food.

"The third class of preparations is comparatively new. The better ones are really what they claim to be, predigested foods.

"The principal difference between roasting and boiling is in the medium by which the meat is cooked. In boiling, the flesh to be cooked is surrounded by boiling water; in roasting by hot air. In both cases, if properly conducted, the fibers of the meat are cooked in their own juices.

"When the meat alone is to be eaten, either roasting, boiling, or frying in deep fat is, when properly done, a more rational method than boiling, for the juices are very largely saved. The shrinkage in a roast of meat during cooking is chiefly due to a loss of water. At the same time small amounts of carbon and nitrogen are driven off and a little acid is produced which dissolves some of the constituents of the meat. The fat undergoes a partial decomposition into fatty acids and glycerine, and a little of it is volatilized.

"It is interesting and at the same time important to remember that the smaller the cut to be roasted the hotter should be the fire. An intensely hot fire coagulates the exterior and prevents the drying up of the meat juices. This method would not, however, be applicable to large cuts, because meats are poor conductors of heat, and a large piece of meat exposed to this intense heat would become burned and changed to charcoal on the exterior long before the heat could penetrate to the interior. Hence the rule: The smaller the cut to be roasted, the higher the temperature to which it should be exposed.

"The broiling of a steak or a chop is done on exactly this principle. An intense heat should be applied to thoroughly coagulate the albumen and stop the pores, and thus prevent the escape of the juices. A steak exposed to an intense heat for ten minutes is thoroughly cocked and yet has that rare, juicy appearance, which is so desirable."

Prayer Union.

I request the prayers of the Saints that I may be healed of a lump under my arm; also pray for my husband that he may be healed of deafness. Sr. Katie Gutzman, Adin, California.

Sr. A. Twaddle, of Carson City, Nevada, requests the earnest prayers of the Saints in behalf of her little boy Ralph, who has recently undergone an operation for appendicitis and is now threatened with Bright's disease. Under date of December 20 she wrote that he had been in bed for ten weeks and she was earnestly hoping and trusting that God would grant her prayer.

Letter Department.

BULLRUN, West Virginia, December 18.

Editors Herald: There is no branch nearer than Fayette City, about sixty-five miles distant. There are only four or five Saints up here, some of them living ten miles away; but I hope there will be lots of work to do here when the Lord sees fit. This is a poor field for labor at the present time, there being but the one church and schoolhouse near, and the church members are very prejudiced, so much so that they said no Latter Day Saint should hold meetings in their church.

Brn. Moxon and Rush were to see us some years ago, and did some excellent preaching; baptized one. I received a letter from Bro. D. L. Allen, of Wheeling, West Virginia, inquiring of me concerning the chances of holding a series of meetings in this part of the field. The chances are very poor at the present time, as the schools are holding sessions; but nevertheless I would like to see Bro. Allen come and see us, so I just answer the brother's letter through the HERALD, as I hope he is a HERALD reader. May God add his blessing, is my prayer.

THOMAS DOWNS.

PITTSBURG, Kansas, December 19.

Editors Herald: John T. Davis, of Webb City, Missouri, came and preached in our chapel Monday night, November 31. He intended to occupy Tuesday night also, but the rain prevented.

I am well pleased with the start that I have made. I was baptized September 14, 1902, by Jasper Richards. I have never regretted the step, but rejoice, for I know this work is true, and is of God. My desire is to grow better each day, to grow more in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior, and so to live that others may see by my works that this work is true. I pray that this good work may go on until all the honest in heart will be gathered into the church. Our lives and our prayers with God's help will be the only means of building up our church; so let us all be faithful, that we may be true helpers in this work. I am the only one of our family who belongs to the church, but I hope more of them may study and learn that they are in the wrong path.

Your sister,

ANNA BROWN.

MANCHESTER, England, December 12.

Editors Herald: At latest advices our beloved Brn. Griffiths and Rushton were well; also the rest of the missionary staff; but our Bro. Rushton's little one, a sweet little child of three years, has been in the hospital with scarlet fever. The wife of Joseph Dewsnup, Sr., has been lying ill for several weeks past and in a critical condition. She is an old-time Saint, and was baptized into the Reorganization with my own mother when the work was first established in Manchester. We hope she may be spared to us.

The only Religio over here still flourishes in East Manchester, presided over by Elder Weate. Sr. Kelley will be interested in this.

Your coworker,

SPRINGFIELD, Missouri, December 22.

Editors Herald: The work here is on the move. The Saints are all at peace with each other.

We witnessed the baptism of another noble young man by the name of Sellers. This makes the third since Bro. White was here. Bro. Ward, the young man baptized while Bro. White was here, is taking right hold of the work, and promises to make an all-round worker. There are others very much interested and will no doubt soon join the kingdom. Yours,

LOS ANGELES, California, December 19.

Editors Herald: Last Sunday evening I addressed a magnificent audience at Brent's Hall in this city. The occasion was a discussion between an attorney and an ardent Christian Scientist by the name of Townsend and myself, the subject being, Is Christian Science a fact or a farce? I had the closing speech. It was clearly evident that the audience comprehended the impregnability of our position and the untenability of the other man's. Christian Science will neither bear Christian criticism nor scientific analysis. We took advantage of the opportunity and Bro. R. T. Cooper handed out a large number of our little tract, "The Latter Day Saints, who are they?" Some good will follow. It is a good way to advertise our work, anyway. Will give you a synopsis of our argument later.

I went to San Bernardino on the 10th to officiate at the wedding of Sr. Lillian Peake and Mr. E. Cubbon. Sr. Peake is a granddaughter of Sr. Poole, an old-time member of the church. While there I preached in the church once, as Bro. Foss was holding a protracted effort.

Bro. William Crick, of Independence, worshiped with us yesterday.

Bro. B. F. Durfee, late of Oregon, is sojourning in our city. He expects to winter here. Sr. Durfee is with him.

I went out the other evening to hear General William Booth, of Salvation Army fame. I was pleased with his discourse and left with a kindlier feeling towards this institution than I have ever had before. Until we as a church have so far progressed that we can take up the work of the slums carried on so extensively by them it were better that we refrained from too severe criticism. Regardless of their ignorance of the gospel in its entirety they are doing a noble work among the poor outcasts,—the drunkards and the unfortunate girls many of whom are more sinned against than sinning.

He stated that the organization was only thirty-seven years old, and yet they are operating in forty-nine countries, using thirty-one different languages. They have seven thousand four hundred five societies and fifteen thousand six hundred seventy commissioned officers. They have sixty-one different periodicals and twenty-seven different War Cries; six hundred fifteen social institutions, and they shelter every night seventeen thousand unfortunates. They have one hundred forty rescue homes and have rescued five thousand eight hundred fifty women during the last year, four thousand nine hundred of whom were fallen. They have sixteen "homes for ex-criminals," and have sheltered and provided for fourteen thousand ex-criminals; they are caring now for fifteen hundred ex-criminals. This surely is a good showing. God haste the day when we as a church can take up this kind of work as well as what we are now engaged in.

We have had several excellent rains recently, and the hills are taking on their annual covering of green. The mountains are covered with snow. May the peace and love of God abide with all of God's children at this Christmas-tide.

Your brother in the faith,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

2802 South Grand Avenue.

DOW CITY, Iowa, December 27.

Editors Herald: As the year is drawing to a close the mind is crowded with the recollection of things that have occurred, both pleasant and unpleasant, profit and loss, trials, disappointments, success, joys, and sorrows which are peculiar to all. But when the heart is burdened, it is good to be alone with God, though we need the help and encouragement of each other.

"Ev'ry day hath toil and trouble,
Ev'ry heart hath care;
Meekly bear thine own full measure,
And thy brother's share.
Fear not, shrink not, though the burden
Heavy to thee prove;
God shall fill thy mouth with gladness,
And thy heart with love."

But one learns by experience that it is much easier to say than to do, much easier to teach the way of perfection than it is to make one's self perfect. However, we still thank God for the gift of his Son and the plan of redemption, including the restoration of the gospel in these last days.

If we had but reached that condition in the divine life that would enable us to "see as we are seen" and "know as we are known" our happiness and joy would be much increased. What a joyous time it will be when we are in possession of the perfect love of Christ and are "filled with all the fullness of God." But now "we walk by faith, and not by sight." For this reason we are sometimes in trouble, fear, and doubt. Looks and acts and words are often misunderstood, and we are placed in a wrong light before our fellow creatures. This is one reason why charity, which thinks no evil and by words and deeds of kindness prevents a multitude of sins, should be sought after and prized by each and all. Did we but possess this Christian grace as fully as we should, how much happier we all might be! Our hope is one and our work is to seek and find and save that which is lost and bring it safely back from the haunts of sin and place it safely at the feet of Jesus, no matter what position one may hold in the church. Possession gives one an opportunity to do good, but does not make the individual better unless every opportunity afforded is wisely and properly used to the honor and glory of God and the salvation of souls. Each member of the church should be so thoroughly a Christian that he will say and do only that which is right.

The church needs such missionaries and officers that can not be tempted from the path of virtue and right. Ministers should be so blessed of God and assisted by his Holy Spirit in all their work and administrations that no one will believe an evil report against them. Some may think this standard too high, but when it is understood that God has promised to teach them from on high and that they are collaborators with him in preparing a people to meet the coming Lord, I think that all will concede that it is right and such a condition of things much to be desired. The true servant of Christ can not and will not waste his time or means or take any undue advantage of a living soul. He is in the battle for life so long as he feels that God is at the helm. Such a soldier can not rest at ease while the battle rages, but will persevere until the battle is over and the victory won.

There is nothing in the work of Christ to discourage, for it is the means ordained of God through which we receive our supply of spiritual meat and drink which enables us to become more fully partakers of the divine nature.

One of the encouragements met which we are pleased to note is found in a nice and much-needed article of furniture sent to the writer and family as a token of the love and good will of the Omaha Branch. They will please receive our heartfelt thanks for the same, as the gift represents to us much more than its real value in money.

Patriarch E. C. Briggs made the Omaha Saints a visit, which was enjoyed by many. Bro. Fredrick A. Smith's visit and labor was much enjoyed, and he is held in high esteem by the Omaha people.

Christmas forenoon was spent at home with dear ones, and the dinner provided by the housewife made one think of the old home on the farm and the bounties that supplied the table.

Christmas evening the writer and a good number of relatives and friends met at the home of Bro. and Sr. R. M. Butterworth, at Charter Oak, Iowa, and witnessed the marriage of their eldest daughter, Grace, to Bro. Bert Fry, eldest son of Bro. and Sr. Ammon Fry, of Bigler's Grove, Iowa. Those who know the young couple and their parents wish them much joy, with all the good things in time and eternity that a loving Father in his goodness has provided for his sons and daughters.

Wishing the HERALD and its readers, with all Saints everywhere, a happy and prosperous New Year, I subscribe myself,

Your brother in Christ,

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

FULTON, Iowa, December 26.

Editors Herald: Our conference held here December 13 and 14 passed off very pleasantly. A good peaceful spirit prevailed all through. The Saints went home cheerful and happy.

But one thing seems strange: The reports showed no gain; rather, loss. What is the matter? Our elders have labored steadily since coming into the district last spring.

One time our branch was called the banner branch of Eastern Iowa District; but now only a very few on Sundays gather together. Removals to other places and removal by death has been the cause. Others are so situated they can not attend. Other branches in the district are equally so situated at this time. Financially the district is doing fairly well; some do nobly, while others do nothing at all.

I entertained two Utah elders some time ago. They were young men, one being only twenty years old; his name was Banks, the other's name was Jensen. They told the people they were the Utah elders. They still say they believe that polygamy is of God.

They say they will build the Independence temple. They seem very earnest and zealous. I told them they were compelled to pay their tithing, but they said not; yet at the supper table they said they were compelled to keep the Word of Wisdom and the law of tithing. They were going to make a house to house canvass of Jackson County, Iowa, and they leave a tract at every house where it will be received. When they left they said that I had given my testimony that our church was the true church, and they said their church is the true church.

When I first obeyed the gospel in the year 1888 there was given me a vision. There were three men contending for the leadership of the church, each one desiring to lead. Then a modest-looking woman approached and said so plainly, "Joseph shall lead the church." Then in a few days I received a pamphlet of the Whitmerites. That vision still clings to me. Joseph shall lead my church.

There are many obstacles come along our pathway. May we live so that we can surmount them, and serve our kind Father with our whole heart and mind, that the plaudid may be, "Good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

JOHN HEIDE.

ANGUS, Iowa, December 23.

Dear Readers of the Herald: I wonder if there is one of us who can look back upon the year that is so near its close and feel satisfied with its results. Have we done anything in the past year to promote the happiness of any one? Have we helped to lift the burden from the shoulders of some weary one? Have we gently chided the erring one, and tried to lead them in the way of truth, virtue, and happiness? Have we spoken words of comfort and cheer to the sorrowing one? Have we set a good example before those with whom we are associated and let them see by our every-day walk that we practice what we profess? Have we been, or tried to be, peace-makers?

I have tried to do all, and yet I feel I have done but little. But the God we love and trust knows all, and to him we look and in him we hope and not in poor weak humanity.

We all began the year that is near its close like a child begins with a new "copy-book." Its clean pages lay before us ready to be marred or beautified by our pens. Our resolutions were good could we have put them into practice. And as we look forward to the future we feel timid—feel we have a greater responsibility resting upon us than heretofore. How shall we meet it? And now another new year is about to dawn upon us—a fair, untried future. Soon we shall live it and put our impressions upon it, and with hearts filled with good resolutions, and I hope they may be faithfully kept.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us not mar the future by speaking cruel words to our friends, nor by idle jests at their expense. But let us try to do all we can to make them happy. Let us profit by our past mistakes and let us try to make our failures the stepping-stones to a new determination. We all know the influence of a kind word or a generous act. Then let us not speak words we know will wound. Sometime we will have to part with these. Then let us do nothing to reproach ourselves with.

Your sister,

PAULINE.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado, December 21.

Editors Herald: There is nothing especially encouraging to write concerning the Saints and the church at this place. Brn. Curtis and Morgan who reside here are both out in the field, laboring for the gospel. Bro. W. C. Duncan ably presides over the branch, and A. B. Hanson has charge of the Sunday-school and Zion's Religio, which are both giving satisfaction. Bro. Hanson is certainly in the right place when in charge of a class studying the Book of Mormon.

It is quite dull here this winter and good jobs are few and hard to find; although there are none of the Saints that have no employment that I know of.

Doesn't it seem strange that in a world as rich as ours in natural resources the greater part of its population are dependent upon others to give them employment? Why is it thus? There is but one answer: we are producing for profit instead of use. Will it be so in Zion? What we need now is to put every able-bodied Saint in a position to earn his living and more if he can. It is a bad move for the Saints to crowd into the cities in order to support themselves if it can possibly be avoided. I find that a poor man with a family of children that locates in the city is just where Satan has his agents operating the most successfully. The most potent reason for this is from the fact that owing to his financial condition he is forced to find rates in rent in common with his ability to pay.

I hope to be able to turn my face toward the land of the Saints before long. My advice to Saints without money, and that in sufficient amount to take a stand in this murderous age of competition, is for not too many to come to Colorado Springs. If a poor man with a family can find a place on a farm where he can make a living for his little ones, there is the best place on earth for him.

Editors Herald: I have taken the HERALD since January 1, 1875, and it is always a welcome visitor at our house.

On November 23, by invitation of the W. C. T. U., R. C. Evans delivered two lectures on temperance; one in the Baptist church in the afternoon and the other in the opera-house in the evening, the latter lecture being the one that he came especially to deliver. The Baptist, Methodist, and Universalist ministers were all on the platform, but the Presbyterian minister told the president of the W. C. T. U. that he knew Elder Evans and he would not go on the platform with him and would try and influence his congregation not to go and hear him. But I guess he did not have much influence over his congregation, as a large number of his best members were present and every seat in the house was occupied, and quite a number could not get seats.

Bro. Evans also preached a sermon in the Saints' church here Sunday forenoon, and again on Monday evening, the 24th. The Saints were glad that he came, and were only sorry that he could not stay longer. Come again, Bro. R. C.

The Cedar Springs Saints are building a church house, which they expect to dedicate the first Sunday in January, 1903.

In the faith,

RICHARD COBURN.

PORTLAND, Oregon, December 15.

Dear Herald Readers: It seems to me I miss the companionship of Saints as never before when away from them. Have not seen one here except Bro. Allen, of Holden, Missouri, for fifteen minutes at the depot, as he was passing through. Have attended Presbyterian, Methodist, Darkie Mission, and Volunteers. Most of them much alike. "Only just believe, and you are saved. That's all you have to do." Their testimonies, at Darkie Mission (though most who go are white people) are mainly, "I am washed and saved and sanctified; hallelujah!" Some of their antics are very laughable. And yet, I believe it far better for them to love God, lacking in knowledge as they are, than in their old life of swearing, drinking, etc.; and is it not right to take part in their testimony meetings?

I have been to Volunteers twice. I talked, believing I was led by the Spirit to do so. Am sure it was well received. Yesterday the captain came to me and asked me to talk. Think they have confidence in me, and if I can bring more truth before them, little by little, is it not well that I do so? I pray much for wisdom. I surely must be here for a purpose.

Yesterday morning I attended the Methodist class meeting. Responded when called on, then heard the preaching and listened to Scripture tortured out of its real meaning until it pained me: stayed to Sunday-school, then home. After dinner, I went to Volunteers' meeting till after night. They have a zeal for God, and I enjoy some of it; but get tired of so much repetition. There was much confusion at the door part of the time. Some drunk men were boisterous. Captain went out and brought some in. One, too drunk to know what he was doing, was led to the mourner's bench.

Oh, these dens of iniquity are so thick here!

Have attended a public W. C. T. U. lecture, and shall attend their afternoon meetings, and expect to find congenial associates among them. My horizon broadens, and I believe God is leading me step by step, into work that I trust may redound to his glory. The hastening time is on us. Not only rumors of wars, but war itself is stealthily creeping from sea to sea, and from continent to continent. The nations do not see or understand that they are helping God with his work, and sealing their own destruction. But so it is. We are surely living in the last days, and are told to watch the signs of his coming. These commotions in the air, sea, and on the earth, the great destruction among the people, which is worse this year than before, are all telling us the time is fast approaching when "the earth will be emptied, and few men left." When we see how quickly volcanoes and earthquakes sweep away tens of thousands, it is just giving us a sample of what God's work will be in the future. Then how important, as God gives instruction from time to time, that the words be heeded and acted on. We are always anxious for new revelations; but as Saints are we carrying out those already given?

When our heavenly Father gives us a commandment, telling us to do certain things, can we reasonably expect him to voice himself to us again, until we carry out what has been already given? We are always ready for God to do what we think is his part; but are we ready to do ours? It seems to me this is a serious question, and one our Father requires answered by us. Let us be careful that those who for lack of knowledge come far short of following out the principles of the gospel, but strive to live holy, blameless lives according to their understanding of it, come not in ahead of us, because of our superior knowledge, and because we "knew our duty, but did it not."

I hope for rest in the paradise of God, and a home on the renewed earth, with all the ransomed, and Christ as our leader and captain.

In bonds,

M. J. PHIPPS.

Will the brethren to whom I wrote for historic information in August, 1900, and who have not yet replied, kindly receive the intimation that the local historian of the above-named field still lives and is prepared to receive the information he then applied for. If the circular letter then forwarded has been lost or destroyed he will gladly forward a similar copy upon application. Please do not consider him impatient.

Notices.

To the Members of the Northeastern Illinois District: Greeting: Your attention is hereby called to the following resolutions adopted at our last conference:

"Be it resolved, That hereafter all elders and presiding officers of branches be required to report to the district conferences. Failure to comply with this rule for three consecutive conferences, without sufficient cause, shall subject them to a call for a surrender of their licenses, by the district authorities."

"Resolved, That the rules of representation be amended by inserting in article five, between the words 'six' and 'members,' the word 'resident.'"

According to this rule branches will only be allowed representatives according to the number of resident members. Please remember this when appointing delegates to district conferences. It is clearly the duty of members of the church to become members of the branch where they reside. A number of the members of this district have neglected this duty. We earnestly urge all such to neglect this duty no longer, but see that your names are recorded where they belong, before the next district conference, in order that our records may be in proper shape before the next General Conference. Officers of the branches, kindly assist in this work.

We hope to have a report from every elder in the district at next conference. State in brief what you are doing. If doing nothing, say so, and give the reasons. Perhaps we may be able to help you. All local elders and priests who are not laboring in branches are under district authority and should appreciate their office enough to report to the body of which they are members. Priests, teachers, and deacons laboring in branches, report to the president of the branch, who will recognize your labor in his report to the district, as provided for in the blank reports furnished all presidents of branches.

The district should know who its workers are; also those who are not workers. Branch secretaries are therefore requested to give a list of the officers in their branch to the branch president, from which list he is to name those active, as provided for in his blank report.

Our next district conference will convene at Plano, February 14, 1903, at 10 a. m. Officers of branches are requested to see that delegates are appointed at least ten days previous to the date of convening of conference in order that credentials may be forwarded to the district secretary one week before conference in order that the credential committee will not have to consume the time of conference in making out its report.

We hope there will be as general an attendance of the members as practicable, as it is likely important business will be presented. Come, all who can, and bring the good Spirit with you.

In gospel bonds,

F. G. PITT, District President.

3515 Rhodes Avenue, CHICAGO, Illinois, December 23.

Appointment of Bishop's Agent for Northern Idaho.

Saints and friends of the Idaho District please take notice that upon recommendation of the district conference of Idaho for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Bro. James Jennings, of Idaho Falls, has been duly appointed Bishop's agent for the northern part of the district, and will act in connection with Bro. H. R. Evans, of Malta, Idaho, as Bishop's agent for the Idaho District. It is hoped that this will place before those who wish to serve the Master's work in any way, conveniences of direct communication with the Bishop's office and better opportunities to the Saints to perform their work. Bro. Jennings is authorized to receive and receipt for tithes and offerings in behalf of said Reorganized Church, also to expend the same for proper uses of the church and for the benefit of the poor according to the rules and regulations of said church, and make due report of all transactions annually or from time to time as may be required.

Trusting that all in said district may be earnestly engaged in the performance of every duty enjoined through the Master's word, and remember his injunction, "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least, is also unjust in much."

In behalf of the Bishopric,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, December 21.

Bishops' Notices.

To the Saints of the Massachusetts District, Greeting: A few days only remain of what we must call the old year and ere this is read by you the new year will have opened to us. How swiftly the years are passing away! How strange it seems to call the year of 1902, the old year; when we have just got accustomed to head our correspondence with those figures. Surely, "we spend our years as a tale that is told." The year 1903 will seem to pass even more quickly than the one just past. What of it? How does this thought effect us in our gospel work? Are we trying in our work for the Master to keep pace with time? Are the needs of the hour pressing upon our hearts so that we are trying to "live up to the Master's call?" Will the work of the past year merit the Master's signature of indorsement and approval? Has the Spirit of Christ, which is the spirit of love, unselfishness, and of sacrifice, predominated in our lives, so that the Master is pleased with the motive power, set in operation through a fervent desire to respond to the urgent call to duty which has rung through the church this year as never before by those whom God has called to watch over the interests of his work?

In a few days my yearly report goes to Bishop E. L. Kelley. This report will show what the district is doing financially to help sustain and carry forward the work of God upon the earth. There are many Saints who on reading this report will fail to find their names there. There are those who say they love this glorious latter-day work; but what other evidence have we that they love it, when they never respond to the call to support it? There are those who with trembling limbs and quivering voice, have in their testimony regretted how feeble their efforts and how little they have done for the Master, but who will see what those littles, put aside every week or month as the case may be, have amounted to in the aggregate. And as they look back and remember how they have sacrificed for Christ's sake and his work, to put this amount into his treasury, they will have joy in their work, and feel a comfort and peace steal over them which will more than compensate for the sacrifice made; and thus prove the truth of the words of the Master, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Perplexities and trials are upon us; the times are hard and we "discern the signs of the times" in this the hour of God's judgment. While we are among the ungodly we will have to suffer to some extent with them. We are already suffering with cold through lack of fuel, through man's inhumanity and selfishness, and the end is not yet. The call to the church through the Bishopric one year ago presents to us God's method to obviate the sufferings and perplexities among his people. "Gather my people together unto me, those who have made a covenant unto me by sacrifice." Who are God's people? "Those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Among the most practical evidences in our life of our sainthood is that we are paying our tithing, that we are not robbing God; that we hear the call to sacrifice for the redemption of Zion, and heartily respond to it; that there may be a Zion to gather to. While Zion is the pure in heart, Jackson County and the adjoining counties are also Zion, for our God has so spoken, and also said Zion shall not be removed out of her place. The principle of unselfishness must be crushed out of us (willingly of course) or the work of preparation for this estate can not be accomplished. The Zion work is of an individual character, for it is the pure in heart that are to remain in Zion and will be able to abide its laws.

Then, Saints of Massachusetts, let the principle of sacrifice and of love to this great work be more fully demonstrated by sending or handing to me your tithes, offerings, and consecrations. Let the new year not only suggest better things, but a prompt response to duty's call. The list of names should be doubled. Why not do it? I hope to have in every branch a real live brother as solicitor for tithes, offerings, etc.; one who has demonstrated his love for this part of the work by example; one who will urge upon the Saints the needs of the hour, in wisdom, so that there is no opportunity of forgetting duty along these lines.

To those whole-hearted Saints who have faithfully supported me in my work for the past eighteen years as collector, Bishop's agent, and bishop, I heartily thank you and appreciate your goodness of heart. May the Master abundantly bless you. And may those who have not given this important subject the consideration and help they should, awake to the needs of the hour; and may every day as it dawns upon us come as a new day and every day have for us as great significance as the new year has had in the past, as we have been traditioned many of us to look upon the new year as a new leaf in our life's history. May we now look upon each day as new opportunities for work for the Master. Saints, "line up" in this department of our work.

Very sincerely yours in the Master's cause,

RICHARD BULLARD.

The Gospel Literature Bureau.

If you want gospel literature to read during the long winter evenings, or to distribute among your friends, or if you know of any isolated ones who are not able to subscribe to the church papers or to attend regular branch services; or if you have literature to donate to the Bureau, write the superintendent of the Bureau in your district, if in a district; if not, write me. The mission of the Bureau is to receive and distribute good reading matter. Help it by supplying us with literature and names.

J. R. EPPERSON, General Superintendent.
1723 Walker Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

Married.

LIGGETT—BECKSTED.—At the bride's home near Hamburg, Iowa, December 10, 1902, Mr. Charles Liggett, of McCook, Nebraska, to Sr. Leora Becksted, of Hamburg, Iowa; Elder Henry Kemp officiating. Mr. Liggett is a young man of good reputation, highly respected by all who know him. Sr. Leora is one of our very best girls; strong in the faith and active in the Sunday-school. Greatly beloved by all who know her. Long may they live to enjoy the sweets of life, and the happiness that shall come to them through righteousness, is the wish of their friends. Many presents were presented and a joyous time spent at the wedding.

Died.

HUTCHINS.—Joseph A. Hutchins was born June 6, 1844, in Canada West; was baptized November 19, 1862. He was faithful until his death, which occurred December 1, 1902, at Meadow Grove, Nebraska. Sermon by Bro. Robert Oehring.

DESPAIN.—Mary C. Despain died at Galesburg, Illinois, December 19, 1902. She leaves a husband and four children,—one son and three daughters,—five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. She united with the church in the early sixties, and remained strong in the faith till her death, which occurred at the age of 70 years, 9 months, 15 days. The funeral services, December 21, by Elder John S. Patterson. Text, Psalms 116: 15: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

GRAY.—Sr. Sarah Ann, beloved wife of Robert S. Gray, died at her home in Lucas, Iowa, Monday, December 7, 1902, aged 62 years. For some time past the deceased had been ill, and she realized the end was near, and said she was ready to go. She was a faithful church member, and a loving wife and mother. Her testimony of the gospel message in these last days was that the Lord had established his church for the salvation of men, and admonished all to be faithful.

YORKE.—Sr. Isabelle May Yorke died December 12, 1902, aged 22 years and seven months. She was a native of Waverly, Nova Scotia; was baptized January 16, 1898, at Providence, Rhode Island, by Bro. George Smith; was married to Charles Yorke at Providence by Bro. Smith on March 2, 1899; was a faithful Saint and loving daughter; leaves one little son, Earle, and sorrowing brothers and sisters, and a dear mother and husband. Funeral at her mother's home; sermon by Bro. R. Bullard.

ELSTON.—William R. Elston was born February 14, 1837; died October 29, 1902, at Houston, Texas. He was baptized February 27, 1876, by Z. S. Martin.

BURTON.—Sarah Ann Burton died at Bennett, Nebraska, December 10, 1902, aged 76 years, 7 months, 6 days. She was born May 5, 1825; married to J. N. Burton in 1861. Five children were born to them, two daughters surviving their mother. She was baptized in 1863, and remained a faithful member until death. She was a loving mother, a good neighbor, and an energetic Saint. Funeral sermon by William Self in the Methodist church building at Bennett, Nebraska.

A Daisy Target Gun for the Boy.

The lad who desires some fun can get a target gun from THE KANSAS CITY JOURNAL as a present.

The name of this gun is "THE DAISY," and it is well named. This gun is thirty inches in length from the end of the barrel to the end of the stock. The barrel and breach are finished in nickel. The stock is made of walnut. In fact, the gun is a beauty throughout. This gun breaks in the center and will shoot a bullet or target as straight as a bee-line. Here is a gun that the boy can have fun with.

Our proposition: Any boy who will get EIGHT new subscriptions for THE KANSAS CITY WEEKLY JOURNAL at 25 cents each, making a total of $2.00, and will send us a list of the names together with the money, we will ship to his address by mail or express, charges prepaid, this handsome target gun. Send money by post-office order or draft.

Boys, here is the chance to get the fun of your life. Rustle a little and get this gun as our proposition only holds good for sixty days, from December 1.

Address all communications to The Kansas City Journal, Kansas City Missouri.

Send for sample copies of the Weekly for canvassing.

The New Year's Problems.

We start the new year with the same group of domestic problems with which we started the old year. In our foreign relations and in the tasks presented by our island wards we have made headway, to the steady upbuilding of our national character and of our influence in the world. The year just gone was noteworthy for the ending of wars, for the subsidence of national jealousies, and for the increasing prosperity and strength of the Republic. But our familiar home problems are with us yet—the trusts, labor unions, the tariff, the currency, municipal administration, and race-feeling in politics.

These involve tasks that can not be done by sheer energy, however well directed. Such problems are in fact symptoms of defects that yet exist in our national character. In a perfectly developed public opinion they would dissolve as fog dissolves in sunlight; and we move toward their solution as we move toward the building up of the character and the intelligence of the people. They are important matters of economic, fiscal, and political education.

There are many problems of a different and more difficult sort. Such were the tasks of the Civil War and of the Reconstruction period. Such were the tasks presented at first by the Philippine Islands. These were structural. In doing them we were making new experiments with republican government itself. We were putting it to new tests. But even the trusts, and surely labor unions and the tariff and the currency and city government, involve no such fundamental activities. Grave and stubborn as these are, they are problems rather of regulation, of administration, of social growth, of education. For the solution of them we need long tuition. We shall bungle through many experiments; we shall have many a year of discussion. There is, in fact, no such thing as a solution of them. We shall simply grow toward their settlement; and as we grow they will naturally and gradually eliminate themselves.—From The World's Work.

The January "Arena."

The twenty-ninth volume of the Arena begins with the January number. It opens with a characteristic feature—a symposium on a topic of vital public interest. The contributors are Professor Frank Parsons, the Honorable George Fred Williams, Eltweed Pomeroy, M. A., Bolton Hall, and Ernest H. Crosby, who discuss from different standpoints "The Great Coal Strike and Its Lessons." "The Preacher as a Leader of Men" is considered by the Reverend Otto L. Dreys. "Fundamental Fraternal Movements of the Present" is the title of Editor Flower's concluding paper on "The Divine Quest." Rebecca J. Taylor has a timely article on "The Disposition of the Philippine Islands." In "A Unique Labor Experiment," Leopold Katscher, of Budapest, describes the great Zeiss institution at Jena. "Labor and the Trusts" is a suggestive paper by E. S. Wicklin, and "Primary Election Reform" is discussed by Edward Insley. "A Profession that Grew Respectable" is the title of an interesting story by Albert R. Carman. Editor Flower's departments of "Topics of the Times" and "Books of the Day" are instructive and entertaining, as usual. Editor McLean announces some splendid features for the February number of this progressive magazine.

The rapid advancement made by a new department of our postal service is well brought out in an illustrated article on "The Rural Free Delivery Service," contributed to the Review of Reviews for January by Day Allen Willey. It will be news to many that it is now seriously proposed ultimately to establish a free delivery of mail to every farmhouse in the United States.

Herbert W. Bowen, the American who has become within a month a figure of international prominence through his relation to the Venezuelan incident, is the subject of an intimate character sketch in the Review of Reviews for January.
